Officials tackle welfare

Options include food-stamp tax, immigrant-aid cut

■ Money from cuts could fund work, job-training programs, administration says.

By Jason DeParle
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The administration is considering a plan to finance President Clinton's welfare proposal by taxing food stamps, welfare benefits and housing assistance and by cutting aid to legal immigrants who are elderly and indigent.

While no decisions have been made, those are among the options being considered by senior officials at the White House, Treasury Department and Department of Health and Human Services, confidential documents and interviews with officials show. The money from the cuts would be used to expand work and job training programs.

Critics liken the size of the cuts being considered to those pushed through by President Reagan. The difficult options illustrate the administration's difficulty as it simultaneously pursues ambitious welfare and health-care proposals while seeking to reduce the deficit.

One risk is that cuts will hurt the very people the welfare plan seeks to help: the poor and near-poor. That was the fear of the administration official who disclosed the options, calling them "unconscionable."

A second risk is that the potential reductions, which are already being denounced on Capitol Hill, could alienate some Democrats whose help Clinton needs to pass his health-care bill.

Melissa Skolfield, an administration spokeswoman, declined to discuss any specific options, calling the discussions "very preliminary."

But she argued that the pain of any cuts would be more than offset by the benefits of the welfare program, which is intended to help poor women — its

Klan robes, Hitler

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A white supremacist wants permission to wear a Ku Klux Klan robe and be called "Hi Hitler" at his murder trial. Donald Leroy Evans is accused of strangling Ira Jean Smith, a Fort Lauderdale prostitute, in 1985. In motions filed Friday, Evans asked to be allowed to wear the KKK robe, and for his name to be changed on all court documents to "the honorable and respected name of Hi Hitler." According to courthouse employees, Evans thought Adolf Hitler's followers said "Hi Hitler" rather than "Heil Hitler."

Jailer kills American

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — An American awaiting trial on drug charges was shot to death while attempting a jailbreak here, authorities said Saturday. They identified him as Scott Wood, but said his hometown was not immediately available. U.S. officials could not immediately be reached. Guillermo Arroyo, warden at San Sebastian prison, said Wood and a Canadian, Claude Forget, used an irritating gas to blind the guards while they tried to flee Friday night, but an alarm was sounded. He said Wood was shot in the chest and died in surgery. Forget was recaptured uninjured. Wood and Forget were arrested last Feb. 18 at Puerto Golfito on the Pacific coast when three tons of marijuana were found on their boat.

Users seem to approve new library

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The neon lights proclaim "Hot Stuff" in jazzy letters and colors.

Above the hot-stuff glitter of the young-adult reading corner is a rotunda as bright as a halo. It highlights a two-tier staircase as if it were a platform for a stellar Hollywood song-and-dance production.

But the staircase only leads to more halls of adventure — mostly ink on paper — books, books, and more stacks of books.

Within the walls is the enlivened atmosphere of a traditionally staid setting — a library.

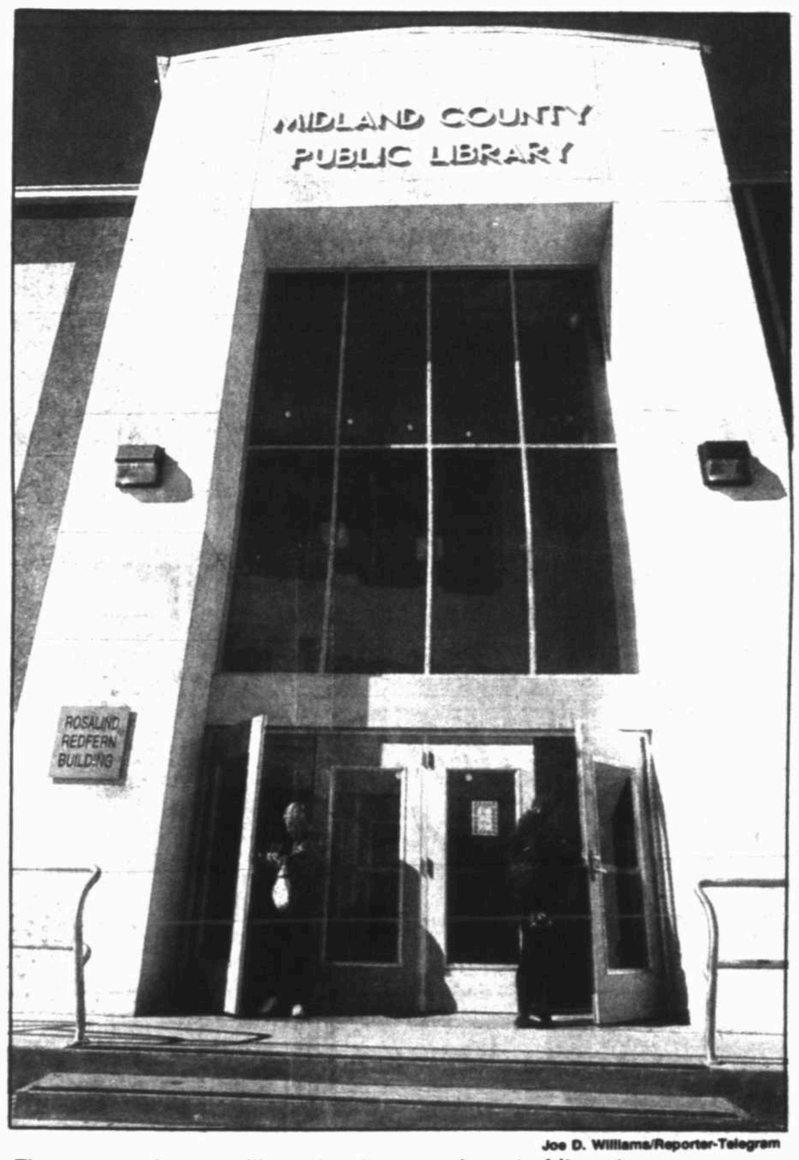

But no dancing, no music, and no high-decibel chatter are permitted, though the rules occasionally are broken.

The only music that you likely will hear is that from a "contraband radio," noted librarian Jana Lee.

The setting is the expanded and renovated Midland County Public Library, which is twice its former breadth, many times more colorful and artful, has about the same $1.15 million budget as before, carries just about the same book count — more than 200,000 — and offers traditional services from answering reference questions to checking out books, tapes, videos, and art prints.

NATO beefs up arsenal for Bosnia

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Perhaps with a look over their shoulders at Somalia, NATO and U.N. commanders facing possible combat in Bosnia want some of the allies' most potent weaponry to improve their firepower.

"If you ever find a commander who says he has everything he needs, you should get a new commander," said Adm. Michael Boorda, the four-star U.S. admiral in charge of the NATO air strike operation.

Officials said the admiral ordered 26 strike aircraft added to his air armada for possible missions over Sarajevo. That puts his force at 146 fighters, gunships and bombers, including America's most sophisticated strike jet, the F-15 Eagle.

The Eagle — eight of them are being added to the Bosnia force — is outfitted with advanced detection gear to lock on to targets and its range is improved for long-distance bombing runs.

There will be 35 support aircraft, including air-to-air refueling KC-135s and EC-130 airborne battlefield command-and-control platforms, said military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The move to improve the allied military posture recalls last year's request to bolster the armored force in Somalia — a plea from the U.S. commander on the ground which then-Defense Secre-

Dentist to offer free care to needy youth this month

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Eleven-year-old Brandy Snell suffered from a toothache recently. So she told the school nurse, who in turn told a counselor, who told her husband — a dentist.

The timing was right for Brandy, who didn't have immediate access to a dentist. Midland dentist Philip Warlick recently committed to a program that will provide needy children with free dental services this month.

Although the program — sponsored by Oxyfresh USA, which makes dental, personal and pet hygiene products — is set for the week of Feb. 21-25, Warlick hasn't been so picky about the exact dates.

"We always try to do something during dental health month . . . and this sounded like a good idea," he said.

Warlick said he plans to find — through his wife, Jan — other youngsters like Brandy who need immediate dental attention.

Italian nun is one of 'The Soccer Gang'

■ Sister Paola provides game commentary on TV.

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press Writer

ROME — If soccer can be called a religion in Italy, then Sister Paola is fast becoming one of its patron saints.

Nearly every Sunday after Mass, the Franciscan nun delivers a sermon of sorts on nationwide television. The subject: her beloved Lazio soccer club.

"I prayed to our Mother Mary about this match," she said before one Lazio game this fall.

"Bravo! Bravo! Fantastic!" she shouted into the microphone after a Lazio player headed in a goal. Her rosary remained securely tucked in a pocket of her black and white habit.

Sister Paola is the latest addition to "Quelli Che Il Calcio," loosely translated as "The Soccer Gang." It is one of the dozens of soccer shows on Italian television.

When Lazio plays visiting opponents at Rome's Olympic Stadium, Sister Paola provides commentary from the stands. Other Sundays, she's at the show's Milan studio along with supporters of other Italian League clubs.

"Sister Paola? Sister Paola? Tell us, what are you thinking?" cried the show's host, Fabio Fazio, just after Lazio lost 2-0 to Parma in December.

She only could clamp her hands to her plump cheeks and moan.

"I pray for everyone," she said.

Explosion destroys contraband fuel center

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — An explosion destroyed Haiti's center for contraband gasoline and diesel fuel Saturday night, gutting a stretch of warehouses, stores, a hotel, and two loaded fuel trucks.

The cause of the blast was unknown. Firefighters worked to contain the blaze, and police on the scene reported no casualties.

The explosion along the Rue de Cesar in downtown Port-au-Prince, near the city's Roman Catholic cathedral, could be seen throughout the Haitian capital. Tens of thousands of gallons of contraband fuel were stored in the warehouses in 55-gallon drums, eight-gallon plastic containers and one-gallon jugs.

People on the scene said the two fuel trucks had come from the neighboring Dominican Republic, which has violated international sanctions against Haiti in the past.

The loss will intensify the already severe fuel shortage in Haiti, which is under a U.N. fuel embargo. The embargo was placed on Haiti in October to pressure Haiti's military leaders, who overthrew elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991, to step down.

The army has stockpiled gas in underground depots around the capital, but the fuel on the Rue de Cesar was the main source of contraband sales to most Haitians.

At least 12 two-story buildings along the block were gutted, including the warehouses, stores and at least one hotel. Army firefighters worked late Saturday to control the fire, and radio stations broadcast appeals to citizens to bring water, which is scarce.

"An enormous ball of fire shot up in the sky," said Danish documentary filmmaker Jurgen Lieff, who saw it from the hillside Pacot residential area.

Several other explosions followed the initial blast. Hundreds of Haitians gathered near the disaster scene ran away in fear that other stocks of black-market fuel stored nearby would also explode.

Louis-Jodel Chamblin, a leader of a pro-army political movement, and several strong opponents of the international embargo on Haiti, were among those watching the fire.

"Get away from here! It's your fault!" one embargo opponent shouted to a foreign reporter.

Also at the scene were members of the U.N. civilian observer mission to Haiti and the Haitian Red Cross. The onlookers stood in muddy streets with the fire providing the only light. The area is under a black-out because of power shortages.

Authorities said no casualties were reported in the densely populated area.

The fire took place on the eve of Carnival festivities in Haiti.

Security issues delay peace talks, rebels say

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — One month into a cease-fire, security concerns are delaying talks to end Mexico's peasant uprising, rebels said Saturday.

In a communique published by the daily newspaper Tiempo, rebel spokesman Subcommandante Marcos said talks were being held up because delegates did not have details on security issues.

Talks to end the uprising that began Jan. 1 in Chiapas state were initially expected to start by Feb. 5, but government peace commisioner Manuel Camacho Solis said Wednesday that no date or place had been set.

The general overseeing troops in Chiapas warned that if a negotiated peace is not reached, the army is prepared to act with force.

"It would be really sad if we had to take care of this with arms, because we really don't want that," the Monterrey daily newspaper El Norte on Saturday quoted Gen. Miguel Angel Godinez Bravo as saying.

More than 100 people were killed in early January when government troops were sent to the south to quash the uprising, which was aimed at winning better treatment for Mexico's poor Indian minority.

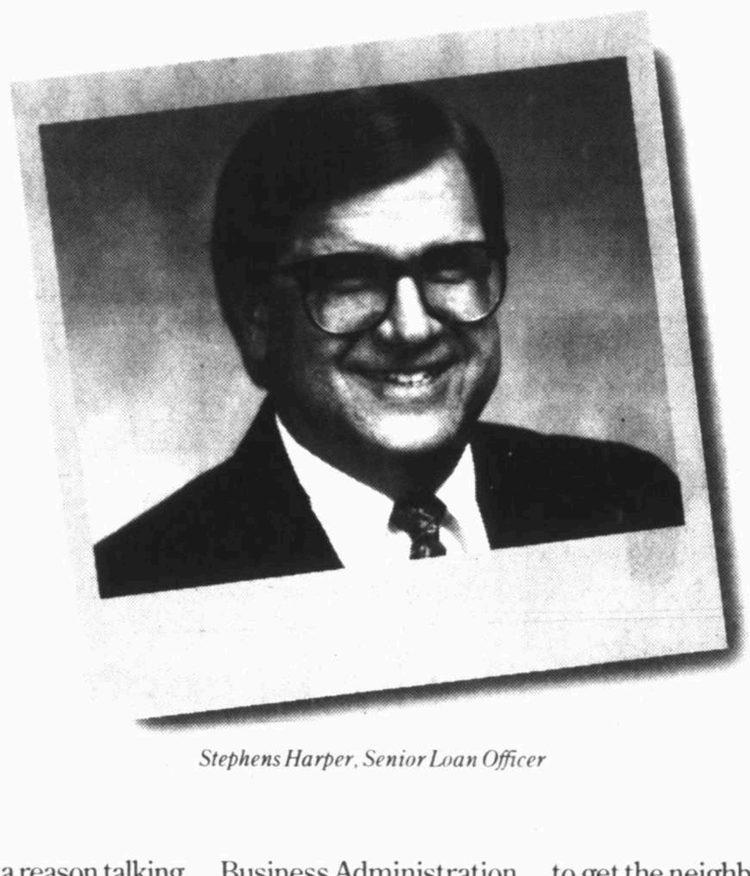

A cease-fire has been in effect since Jan. 12, but troops continue to patrol the regions near rebel-held territory and both sides have expressed distrust of one another.

The delay in talks was not the fault of either the rebels or the government peace commissioner, Marcos wrote in the message dated Feb. 8 and delivered to Tiempo on Friday night.

The communique, apparently delayed by poor transportation, did not specify the security concerns. But Marcos has said in the past that he is worried about Mexican security forces bothering rebels and triggering clashes.

■ Policewoman hurts daughter, kills self

SIRACUSA, Sicily — A police officer committed suicide with a gunshot to her temple Saturday, mistakenly believing she had killed her daughter with the same pistol.

The girl, however, was only injured when the gun strapped to officer Natalia Gennaro's belt accidentally went off. Moments later, a grieving Gennaro turned the gun on herself.

Her daughter, Federica, was hit in the lungs by the bullet and was taken to the intensive care unit of a hospital in Siracusa on Sicily's eastern coast. Gennaro, 36, was a vice-inspector with the city's police force.

She had a "great sense of duty," said Mariella Primiceri, manager of the office of public aid of the Siracusa police force.

■ Officials hold Palestinians in killing

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanese security authorities say they have arrested four Palestinians in connection with the assassination of a Jordanian diplomat in Beirut last month.

Lebanese authorities identified only one of the four arrested in the killing of Naeb Imran Maaytah, the first secretary of the Jordanian Embassy in Beirut, who was shot to death by a lone gunman as he left his home on Jan. 29.

They also said Friday that the suspected killer was Yousef Mahmoud Shaaban, who was believed to be a member of the Fatah Revolutionary Council.

■ Iraq denies senator's 'gulf syndrome'

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraq has denied a U.S. senator's suggestion that biological agents shipped to Iraq with Reagan Administration approval could have caused the mysterious ailments afflicting hundreds of U.S. veterans.

"The U.S. administration has for some time been engaged in a drive to mislead the American public and come up with fantastic explanations to ward off legal and criminal responsibility," an unidentified Baghdad government spokesman told the official Iraqi News Agency.

"The disease was caused by intensive use by American forces of uranium-coated projectiles mounted on tanks and anti-tank aircraft," the agency, monitored in Cyprus, quoted the official as saying late Friday.

Among the Pentagon's theories is that contamination from depleted-uranium artillery shells could have caused the so-called "Gulf Syndrome." Symptoms include chest pains, general weakness, skin diseases, muscle pains and nausea.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said Wednesday that the United States exported dangerous bacteria, such as E. Coli, to Iraq between 1985 and 1989.

"I am deeply troubled that the United States permitted the sale of deadly biological agents to a country with a known biological warfare program," said Riegle.

The Pentagon says it has failed to find any concrete evidence that American troops in the Gulf were exposed to biological or chemical toxins.

Zulu nationalist party boycotts South African election

By Tom Cohen
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party decided Saturday to boycott the nation's first all-race election, joining pro-apartheid whites in a move that could undermine the watershed vote.

But political leaders said there still was time to overcome disputes and get all groups to participate in the April 26-28 election.

None of the groups in the opposition Freedom Alliance had registered for the election by the midnight Saturday deadline, although President F.W. de Klerk has said Parliament could extend the deadline.

A boycott by the alliance — which includes Inkatha and right-wing whites seeking an independent white state — would likely escalate political violence that killed more than 3,000 blacks last year.

The violence — much of it stemming from a power struggle between Inkatha and the African National Congress — is considered the greatest threat to free and fair voting.

In resolutions passed Saturday, Inkatha's central committee called for supporters to boycott the election and to oppose it "in any and every way which is permissible by law."

It also said Inkatha would work with other alliance members to get the government and ANC to abandon the election.

But Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi said he would ask the Organization of African Unity, the Commonwealth and the United Nations to mediate stalled talks. He said Inkatha could enter the campaign later if an agreement was reached.

A white church leader said last week he also was seeking international mediation after the Afrikaner Volksfront, an umbrella group of pro-apartheid whites, decided to boycott the election.

De Klerk is scheduled to meet Monday with Buthelezi's nephew, Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini, while the ANC has scheduled talks later in the week with leaders of the Bophuthatswana black homeland, another alliance member.

The Freedom Alliance represents less than 20 percent of the population, but claims any election without it would fail to speak for the entire country.

Alliance members say they fear the ANC will win the election and impose a communist dictatorship that will trample minority rights.

Police: Thieves take painting, 'The Scream', from museum

OSLO, Norway (AP) — "The Scream," Edvard Munch's terrifying painting that was a harbinger of modern art, was stolen Saturday from the National Art Museum by thieves who used a ladder to climb in through a window.

"It's like someone stole the 'Mona Lisa,'" said Oslo University art professor Trygve Nergaard. He feared Munch's painting, on fragile paper, could be damaged.

The alarm was set off at 6:30 a.m. Police arrived within minutes, but by then the thieves were gone. They left behind the 10-foot ladder and the wire cutters used to cut the wire that attached the painting to the wall.

"The theft took 50 seconds," said Knut Berg, the museum director. "The alarm was set off and the thieves were registered by a security camera."

Munch painted "The Scream" in 1893 as part of his "The Frieze of Life" series, in which sickness, death, anxiety and love are central themes.

The 1893 painting, executed in garish colors and sinuous, powerful brushstrokes, shows a figure on a bridge, screaming for no discernible reason, as two shadowy figures stand in the background.

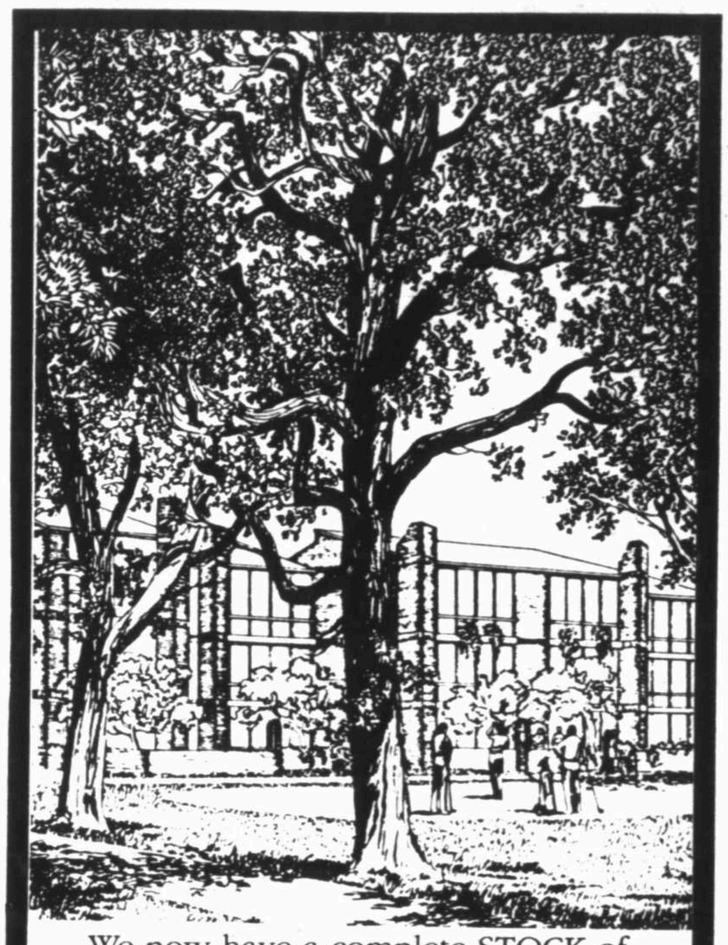

The technique and the portrayal of personal, nameless horror exerted a strong influence on the Expressionists of the the early 20th century. The image is one of the art world's most recognizable and has been widely used on T-shirts and other joke items.

Charity walkers become first to cross channel

By Lionel Gougelot
Associated Press Writer

CALAIS, France — A band of hardy Britons became the first people since the Ice Age to walk from France to England, trekking through the undersea Channel Tunnel in a charity walk Saturday.

Led by two-time Olympic gold medallist Daley Thompson, the 118 walkers set out during a freezing morning mist for the crossing to the English tunnel terminal at Folkestone.

"I have never suffered from claustrophobia but I do feel a bit apprehensive about being under ground for so long," said Kriss Akabusi, Olympic bronze medalist in the 400-meter hurdles in 1992.

All 118 walkers emerged 12½ hours later in chilly Folkestone, complaining of blisters and exhausted.

Richard Branson, the head of the Virgin Atlantic Airlines, and Sir Alistair Morton, the Channel Tunnel chief, presented them with medals.

The walkers hoped to raise $2.9 million for charities from sponsors. They said they sang songs, danced jigs, played games to cheer their way through the tunnel. Fireworks and hot drinks greeted them at the end.

The walk is a rare piece of good publicity for the ambitious but troubled Channel Tunnel project, which has been plagued by financial overruns and repeated delays in starting train service.

The 31-mile hike was through the service tunnel, the smallest of the three passages linking the two countries.

A British postman carried the first under-channel letter, from the head of the French postal service to his British counterpart.

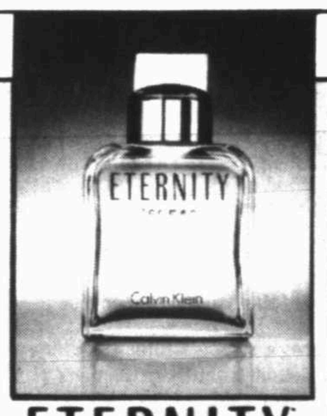

Though a few adventurous intruders have been arrested trying to walk through the tunnel, the charity trek, dubbed "Le Walk," is the first time that an organized group has made the journey on foot. Eurotunnel, the tunnel operator, expects it to be the last.

Today's high to hit mid-50s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny conditions with a high in the mid-50s and winds becoming southeast 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is expected to be fair with a low 25-30.

Monday is to be partly cloudy with a high in the low to mid-60s, the NWS said.

Yesterday's high was 54, compared to the record high of 86, set in 1962. The record low for today's date is 13, set in 1963.

STATE

Several minor fronts splattered varying conditions across the state Saturday, with temperatures ranging from the 30s to the 60s.

Much of North Texas was caught under an eastward-bound cold front that left behind cool and much dry conditions as it passed through the region.

The eastern quarter of the area had some low-level moisture with some fog over the extreme northeast. Mid- to upper-level clouds were noted over the central and west.

Overall, temperatures were in the 50s and low 60s, with similar high readings expected through the early part of the week. Overnight lows were to be just below freezing in some parts of the region.

A cold front that swept through most of West Texas on Saturday reached the lower part of the Big Bend by mid-afternoon.

Sun peeked from behind scattered high clouds, making for partly sunny to mostly sunny skies in the rest of the region, with temperatures in the 40s and 50s.

The forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies across West Texas overnight through Monday. Overnight lows in the teens and 20s should give way to highs in the 50s and 60s through Monday.

A front slithered across South Texas, blowing winds to the north at 10 mph to 20 mph and dropping the temperatures to the 50s.

Partly cloudy skies covered most of the area and clouds blanketed the coastal plains and the eastern part of the region.

Temperatures ranged from the 70s central, 60s east and 80s deep south.

NATION

A weakening weather system spread light snow across the Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley on Saturday while a stronger storm system approached the Pacific Northwest.

The storm that produced more than 2 feet of snow in the mountains of Utah on Friday weakened as it raced out of the central Rockies onto the central Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.

Snow fell ahead of the system with accumulations including 3 inches at Rockford, Ill.; 2.7 inches at Dubuque, Iowa; and 2 inches at Madison, Wis.

The system was headed for the storm-weary Northeast and winter storm watches were in effect through Sunday night across parts of New Hampshire and Maine, the National Weather Service said. Winter weather advisories were issued for parts of western Pennsylvania, northern New Jersey and southeastern New York state.

Satellite images showed a strong storm system centered over the eastern Pacific and heading for the Pacific Northwest.

Winter storm watches were in effect through today across the mountains of Washington and Oregon, with 1 to 2 feet of snow possible at some locations. Wind was expected to blow at sustained speeds of 20 mph to 40 mph, with gusts to 65 mph.

In sharp contrast to the cold weather in the northern states, temperatures were quite warm across central and southern Florida with highs in the mid-80s.

Melbourne, Fla., tied its record for the date at 85 and Miami reached a record 86.

Elsewhere, a strong winter storm system over the northeastern Gulf of Alaska pounded southern sections of Alaska with heavy snow, strong wind and bitter cold.

Five inches of snow fell early Saturday in Juneau, bringing totals of 17 to 21 inches since late Thursday. Winds gusted to 84 mph at Valdez.

An upper-level weather system moving across the Hawaiian Islands produced a few showers and thunderstorms, with heavy rain across eastern sections of Hawaii Island around Hilo, the weather service said.

Associated Press contributed to this report.

SKATE: Harding, committee reach agreement

(From 1A)

"I finally get to prove to the world I can win a gold medal," Ms. Harding said later, climbing into her truck outside the apartment where she has been staying.

The agreement calls for Ms. Harding to drop her $25 million lawsuit and for the USOC to let her join in the Olympics without a disciplinary hearing.

"Tonya Harding will skate in the 1994 Olympics," Clackamas County Circuit Judge Patrick D. Gilroy said in his order after attorneys for the two sides met in his chambers for seven hours Saturday.

Frustrated American athletes and Olympic officials had put pressure on the USOC to resolve the dispute, which was threatening to overshadow everything else at the Olympics.

Moments after the settlement in Oregon, USOC officials held a news conference in Lillehammer. Asked whether the USOC had backed down, USOC spokesman Mike Moran said "that would be inaccurate."

He said the agreement was "very much a combination of the right thing to do, plus the time left, and the distractions to the athletes."

Gilroy had urged the two sides Friday to come to an agreement rather than fight it out in court.

Gilroy's order said that the USOC disciplinary hearing Ms. Harding was to have faced later this week had been canceled and her lawsuit "is concluded." The USOC had called the hearing to decide whether Ms. Harding's actions surrounding the attack on Ms. Kerrigan warranted her removal from the team.

The judge said the case "involved difficult legal issues and well-warranted concerns on both sides.

"The USOC has the right and obligation to oversee and discipline certain conduct of its Olympic athletes," Gilroy said.

"Tonya Harding has the right to a fair and impartial hearing regarding claimed ethical violations and the right to prepare adequately . . .

"Time is on the side of neither party," the judge said. "The games, in fact, began this morning."

The USOC said it was still "appalled" by the attack on Ms. Kerrigan, "which was not only an attack on the athlete but an assault on the basic ideals of the Olympic movement and sportsmanship. The attack was designed to cripple her, alter the competition, and could have ended her career. We remain concerned about this incident.

"For the moment, the matter is stilled, and we turn all of our energies and resources to our Olympic team."

Ms. Harding also released a statement expressing her regrets for any inconvenience.

"Tonya simply wants to skate in the Olympics and be treated fairly. She appreciates the United States Olympic committee working with her to resolve this matter," it said.

"It's time to put this matter behind all of us and focus on the Olympic Games," said the statement, which added that Ms. Harding and her attorneys hope "they do not have to grant interviews, hold press conferences or make additional public statements on this resolution, and would appreciate the press' cooperation in not seeking such further information."

Four people, including Ms. Harding's ex-husband and bodyguard, have confessed to roles in a plot to injure Ms. Kerrigan. Ms. Harding denied knowing about it in advance but said she learned about it later and failed to tell authorities immediately.

She still faces a criminal investigation in Oregon and a disciplinary review by the U.S. Figure Skating Association.

The furor over the case has diverted attention from the games all week in Lillehammer. On Saturday, a news conference by Ms. Kerrigan attracted 1,500 reporters from around the world and very nearly upstaged the opening ceremony.

NEW: Patrons appear to like library's spaciousness

tween the old library" of the 1950s and the new library of the 1990s is more than the computerized terminals for looking up the library's holdings and more than the antiquated index cards awaiting their throw-out date. It is more than an automated book-checkout system and surrealistic wall art, such as juxtaposed Indian tepees and oilfield pump-jacks, and three-tier horizontal artwork in teal, tomato-soup red, and gold.

The new library is spacious as if it were linking up to the broad outdoors of West Texas.

"It is light, bright, and spacious," said Constance "Connie" Roe, assistant county librarian. "It used to be really dark," especially the old part, she said.

The library was expanded under a $3 million joint project of the Friends of the Library — a volunteer group that supports the library and literacy — and the Midland County Commissioners' Court — which sets library policies and budgets. The new library was dedicated in October.

"It is pretty spacious and light," Mrs. Roe said. "If it is too crowded, people don't want to be bothered with it. It is too confusing."

The library's light-hearted atmosphere makes for more pleasant patrons and staffers.

"It think they (patrons) are happier," Mrs. Roe said. "If they have a complaint, they lodge it more agreeably."

A common complaint is not about the library itself but about the lack of convenient parking.

But other complaints occasionally do filter in.

"I am the one they call if the computers lock up," said technical-services librarian Carole Townsley. "But I haven't had a call since we fixed them last time."

More people than before are using the library — 15,000 to 17,000 patron-visits a month. And the yearly book checkout rate about equals the library book volume.

"I think students are using the library more frequently for academic reasons than for social reasons," Mrs. Roe said.

But there are problems, such as the "new ecological toilets" that don't flush properly; children "stomping and jumping" on the staircase, and the library's efficient acoustical system, which carries sound, especially when people "chat a little loud," Mrs. Roe said.

"I guess it (the acoustics) is because of the spaciousness."

Like the librarians, the patrons "love the staircase" and the library's ample space, noted reference librarian J'Nevelyn White. "They are impressed."

NATO: Allies try to improve military position in Bosnia

tary Les Aspin did not act on.

Though many inside and outside the Pentagon contend additional tanks and transports might not have prevented the deaths of 18 soldiers and wounding of 75 others in an Oct. 3 street battle in Somalia, Aspin's decision brought congressional calls for his ouster.

Aspin has pointed to that decision as the one he most regretted during his rocky one-year tenure at the Pentagon.

In what could be the first combat action in their history, the 16 NATO allies have issued an ultimatum that the Serbs withdraw heavy weapons and mortars from around Sarajevo within 10 days or face allied air strikes.

Defense Secretary William Perry signed off on the order giving approval to move the U.S. aircraft Friday afternoon, Pentagon sources said.

The allies are making moves as well. President Clinton said Saturday in Arkansas he had a 20-minute telephone conversation with British Prime Minister John Majors and "I think we're all together."

A French aircraft carrier, the Foch, is steaming toward the Adriatic Sea from Toulon. The British aircraft carrier HMS Ark Royal, is heading for the same location.

Already in the Adriatic is the U.S. aircraft carrier Saratoga, its decks bristling with F-A-18 fighter-bombers, F-14 fighters, and A-6E attack jets, as well as an array of search-and-rescue helicopters. It has been joined by two missile cruisers, one an Aegis craft, capable of over-the-horizon intelligence gathering.

On the ground, the U.N. commander, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, is looking to back up his U.N. Protection Force with additional radar, counter-mortar systems and counter-artillery radars, Boorda said.

The systems track projectiles that have been lobbed into the air, enabling troops to find the attacking forces.

"He would like them, and I certainly support that," the admiral said in an interview with CNN at his headquarters in Naples, Italy.

"I have enough to do the mission I have been directed to do, but there are certainly other things that I would like to have," Boorda said.

A senior NATO officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said any such ground systems would most probably come from NATO nations other than the United States since Clinton has barred the use of American ground troops in Bosnia.

In the coming days, the Turks and Dutch will contribute to the bolstered air forces.

The F-15Es will depart from their base at Lakenheath in England.

The other aircraft: two U.S. Air Force AC-130 gunships; four F-16s from the Netherlands; eight F-16 fighters from Turkey; and four Jaguar attack aircraft from Britain.

SISTER: Franciscan nun prays for Lazio soccer club

(From 1A)

"But we are human. My heart is with Lazio."

Since live broadcast of most Italian League games is banned, soccer shows keep fans abreast with updates from correspondents at the stadiums and comments from guests watching the matches on special closed-circuit monitors.

So Sister Paola is no small celebrity. She gets fan letters at the TV station, she's cheered in the often rowdy "northern curve" section of the Olympic Stadium, and people beg her for autographs.

The soccer sister was "discovered" at the stadium, where she has season tickets. A commentator on the soccer show asked her whether she would consider going on the air. She checked with her superiors. No problem.

"It's something vital for the people — almost spiritual. On Sunday, they can go to the stadium and forget their problems," she said at the hillside convent where she teaches children and plays soccer with them after school.

She especially loves to watch players triumph over injuries and superior opponents. "Sometimes a good game is worth 1,000 sermons," she is fond of saying.

Other than Sister Paola, 45, who grew up as Rita D'Auria, the soccer show provides typical Italian TV fare — suggestive ribbing between rival fans, an occasional sing-a-long and always, always a supply of beautiful women.

On a recent Sunday, the host was distracted by a young woman dressed only in a rhinestone-studded vest and tight, white jeans with soccer ball patterns printed on the buttocks.

The camera zoomed in on Sister Paola. She rolled her eyes and shook her head.

CARE: City dentist to check teeth of needy children

(From 1A)

"My wife is working on that now. I assume we'll see (roughly) between five and 10" children, Warlick said.

The program won't provide complete dental care, but will remedy cases such as a common toothaches, he said.

"We'll definitely be doing an exam and seeing to their immediate needs," Warlick said. "If we can help them now, maybe they can help themselves later."

Warlick said he would like more needy youngsters to get dental attention than just the ones he will be able to see.

"We're limited with the number (I can see) but if I can get more dentists to help out we can do more," he said.

Warlick recently sent out letters seeking other dentists to take part in the program.

The program, in its first year, was the idea of Corinne Ventullo, a Massachusetts mother and wife of a dentist.

In addition to dentists, the program encourages doctors, nurses and other medical personnel to provide free help to needy youngsters during the last full work week of February.

"This may be the first time they see a dentist," Warlick said of some of the youngsters he will see.

As for Brandy, her teeth shouldn't be bothering her anytime soon.

Warlick removed the infected baby tooth that caused the pain and attended to some teeth that required fillings.

Warlick completed the needed work on Friday — his day off.

Attorney general: Ex-chief kills official, himself

WALPOLE, N.H. (AP) — The former police chief shot to death the selectman who forced him to resign last week, then drove to Vermont and killed himself Saturday.

Carl Baird shot Selectman Roger Santaw several times in the chest inside Town Hall, said Attorney General Jeffrey Howard.

Baird then drove 35 miles west to Danby, Vt., and killed himself outside his car with a single gunshot to the head, Howard said.

Baird, 41, had held the part-time post of police chief for less than two years, supervising three other part-time officers in this southwestern New Hampshire.

His resignation Thursday apparently was prompted by a feud with Santaw, but it was not immediately known what the feud was about.

Santaw, 51, was the chairman of the three-member town Board of Selectmen in this town of 3,200.

Assistant Attorney General Michael Ramsdell said there was no sign of struggle in the building, and that no one else was inside at the time.

Two girls were standing outside the two-story Town Hall when the shooting occurred. Nine-year-old Heather Murray said she heard a shot and looked in the window.

"There were two guys inside," she said. "One was standing. The other one was laying on the ground."

The man standing was holding a gun, she said. "He was pointing it right at the guy on the ground."

Santaw had eaten breakfast Saturday morning at Murray's restaurant, across the street from Town Hall.

"We're all devastated," said waitress Pam Adams, "They have had so much terrible grief with their children, it's unbelievable this could happen to them."

Santaw's daughter was killed in a car accident about four years ago on the way to high school. His son, Roger Santaw Jr., was convicted last year of rape and sentenced to 18 to 36 years in prison.

Serbs halt weapon surrender; peace talks end with no progress

By Samir Krilic
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Government and Serb fighters who had just begun surrendering their big guns to the United Nations stopped Saturday, but whether it was only a hitch in the 2-day-old truce or a more dangerous sign remained to be seen.

The day was full of ominous developments.

■ Despite U.S. and Russian pressure on the warring sides, peace talks in Geneva broke up with no progress reported, raising further doubts about the viability of the Sarajevo cease-fire.

■ The U.S. State Department ordered the families of American diplomats and government employees to leave Yugoslavia immediately, embassy officials in Belgrade said.

The decision was precipitated by NATO's ultimatum to Bosnian Serbs to withdraw their heavy weapons from Sarajevo by midnight Feb. 20 or face air strikes. Many in Serb-dominated Yugoslavia support the Bosnian Serbs, and the U.S. government apparently is worried about a backlash against Americans if the air strikes are carried out.

■ Bosnian Serb TV showed film Saturday night of camouflage-clad fighters aiming shoulder-held ground-to-air missiles at imaginary NATO planes.

Displays of bluffing and brinkmanship have characterized war and peace in the Balkans, and it was unclear whether Saturday's developments meant the latest of numerous cease-fires was in danger of collapse.

The Serbs, while chafing at the NATO ultimatum, agreed as part of Wednesday's cease-fire to pull back their heavy weapons and put them under U.N. supervision. The order also applied to Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

After handing over several mortars and other big guns at Sarajevo-area barracks Friday, neither side turned in any weapons on Saturday, said Maj. Jose Labandeira, a U.N. spokesman.

The Bosnian army turned over five guns Friday but decided to keep the rest for now, saying the Serbs had 10 times as many but had turned in only 13.

"They have many more weapons than we do, so they must hand in many more," said Gen. Jovan Divjak, the deputy Bosnian army commander.

Divjak charged the Serbs had withdrawn their big guns from the 12-mile zone around Sarajevo, but were hiding some or taking them to other battle fronts.

Sarajevo was unusually peaceful, although a tank shell that landed near downtown Saturday afternoon injured two people.

French peacekeepers have camped out at six flashpoints of the Sarajevo fighting since Thursday, and Friday night was the quietest in months.

The French soldiers began working to restore electricity to the city, a repair job that would take at least 10 days if peace holds.

"Once all the lights are on, life will be transformed," said Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the new U.N. commander in Bosnia.

In the meantime, Sarajevans who wanted to watch the opening of the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer had to hook up portable TVs to car batteries or watch at the few places that had electricity. The 1984 Winter Games were held in Sarajevo.

"I feel terrible when I remember all the beauty during the Sarajevo Olympic games," said Ismet Kaminlija, an army captain who watched the ceremony from a hospital bed, where he was recovering from a machine gun wound.

Rose's peacekeepers were thin on the ground — about 30 at each cease-fire line — but 150 Malaysian reinforcements arrived in Sarajevo, while others set up at Serb positions in the mountains.

On Mount Trebevic, southeast of the capital, French Lt. Lionel Paillot and his infantrymen moved into a burned-out restaurant.

Milenko Blagojevic, a Serb machine gunner nearby, said he didn't think NATO would bomb his position. If it does, he said, "The people here will kill those French with axes and knives."

But Rose said the U.N. troops were there to stay.

"The troops who have been put on the ground between the warring elements will not go back," he said. If fired on, "they will fire back. But that won't happen because people want peace and they are not threatened by us."

Saturday marked the one-week anniversary of the mortar shell explosion at Markale market that killed 68 people, injured 142 and led NATO to issue its ultimatum.

Nevzeta Karacic, a Muslim woman in her early 50s, sat shivering in prayer on a metal chair in a corner of the freezing, empty market, gripping prayer beads and her Koran.

One of the victims was her cousin, "but I'm praying for all those poor people," she said.

In northwestern Bosnia, Serbs and Bosnian army troops battled on the Grabez plateau near Bihac, according to U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Aikman.

Bosnian government radio said Serb fighters fired on mosques in the towns of Cazin, Bihac and Ostrozac, and that a number of civilians were killed. The report couldn't be confirmed.

Croats fired 69 shells into the Muslim sector of Mostar, in the south, Friday night, said Aikman.

About 200,000 people have been killed or reported missing since the war began in April 1992 when Bosnia left the Serb-dominated Yugoslav federation.

Emperor Akihito visits, honors dead at Iwo Jima

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press Writer

IWO JIMA, Japan — Clothed in black, Emperor Akihito offered bouquets of chrysanthemums and ladles of water to slake the thirst of thousands of U.S. and Japanese soldiers who died here in one of World War II's bloodiest battles.

With a silent bow before a weather-beaten stone memorial, Akihito became Japan's first emperor Saturday to visit Iwo Jima, a desolate volcanic crag.

In the month-long battle that helped seal Japan's surrender, 20,000 Japanese soldiers and 7,000 U.S. Marines died.

"It gives deep sadness to think of the soldiers who gave their heart and soul for their countries," he said. "Our nation was built upon their sacrifice."

Akihito and Empress Michiko picked past reminders of the battle that began Feb. 19 and ended in infamy March 26, 1945: rusty helmets, pillboxes, bullets sticking out from the dark sand.

Nearly untouched was the 11-mile tunnel dug by the Japanese where thousands were buried alive trying to outlast American bombs. Japan surrendered to the Allies five months after the battle.

In 1969, the United States returned the island, 745 miles southeast of Tokyo, to Japan.

Today, its only inhabitants are soldiers operating a naval air station at the foot of Mount Suribachi, which Marines fought their way up to plant the U.S. flag in what became one of the most lasting symbols of the Pacific war.

Since assuming the throne in 1989, Akihito has tried to heal the wounds of World War II by traveling to battlefields of enemy countries that his father, the late Emperor Hirohito, never visited after the war.

Akihito, who was still a child when the war ended, has journeyed to Southeast Asia, China and Okinawa, a southern Japanese island that was ravaged by a three-month ground invasion.

The capture of Iwo Jima was crucial to the United States, which used the island as a base for B-29 escort missions for bombing runs against Japan's main island to block sea lanes.

Along with the 27,000 killed, 18,000 Americans were injured and 1,000 Japanese taken prisoner. The bodies of more than 19,000 soldiers were never found.

"This whole island is like a grave yard," said Kiyoshi Endo, one of four former islanders flown in for Saturday's memorial.

U.S. threatens trade sanctions while Japan considers appealing to GATT

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With the possibility of a trade war looming, the Clinton administration weighed possible sanctions to force open Japanese markets, and Japan hinted it would fight any such moves by taking the United States before an international trade body.

Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa said Saturday he was looking forward to going back to the bargaining table as soon as both sides had a chance to "cool their head."

But following the failed summit between President Clinton and Hosokawa on Friday, U.S. officials said they have no interest in resuming negotiations unless Japan changes its stance in the talks.

Instead, the U.S. side is considering what other steps it might take against Japan to reduce its $60 billion trade imbalance.

"We just have to examine what our next step should be, and we'll be turning to that next week," Clinton said Saturday during a photo session.

Asked about the potential of U.S. retaliatory trade sanctions, Hosokawa cautioned of a possible confrontation before the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the Geneva-based international organization that governs world trade.

"I very much hope that the United States will refrain from resorting to unilateral actions that would be contravention of the GATT," he told a news conference.

Hosokawa did not say whether Japan might retaliate with trade sanctions of its own, but any U.S. moves conceivably could spark a trade war between the world's two largest economies.

U.S. officials, while declining to specify when they would act, said they are considering a list of options — generally understood to mean punitive trade sanctions. They indicated it was all but inevitable that some measures would be imposed against Japan.

"The status quo is unacceptable," said one senior official who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

U.S. action will "be prompt, it's going to be careful, it's going to be responsible and it's going to be effective."

A convenient target might be a case involving a dispute over access by Motorola to the cellular phone market in Japan.

With Tuesday the deadline for a decision, the administration could declare Japan has not lived up to its agreement to open its market to Motorola and retaliate with higher tariffs on Japanese telecommunications products.

U.S. officials would say only that they would have a decision by Tuesday.

Among many other options available to the administration, according to U.S. officials and outside experts are:

■ Reviving by presidential order a lapsed congressional mandate that required the United States to identify countries engaging in unfair trade practices and target them for possible retaliation. Some members of Congress are pushing for this and say the White House has led them to believe Clinton will do it.

■ Suing the Japanese under antitrust laws, based on the common Japanese practice of multilayered companies with subsidiaries that could be seen as collusive.

■ Limiting the U.S. import of Japanese products.

■ Acceding to requests by U.S. automakers that Japanese vans and minivans be reclassified as trucks and thus subject to a 10-fold tariff increase. The vans now are classified as cars, with a much lower tariff.

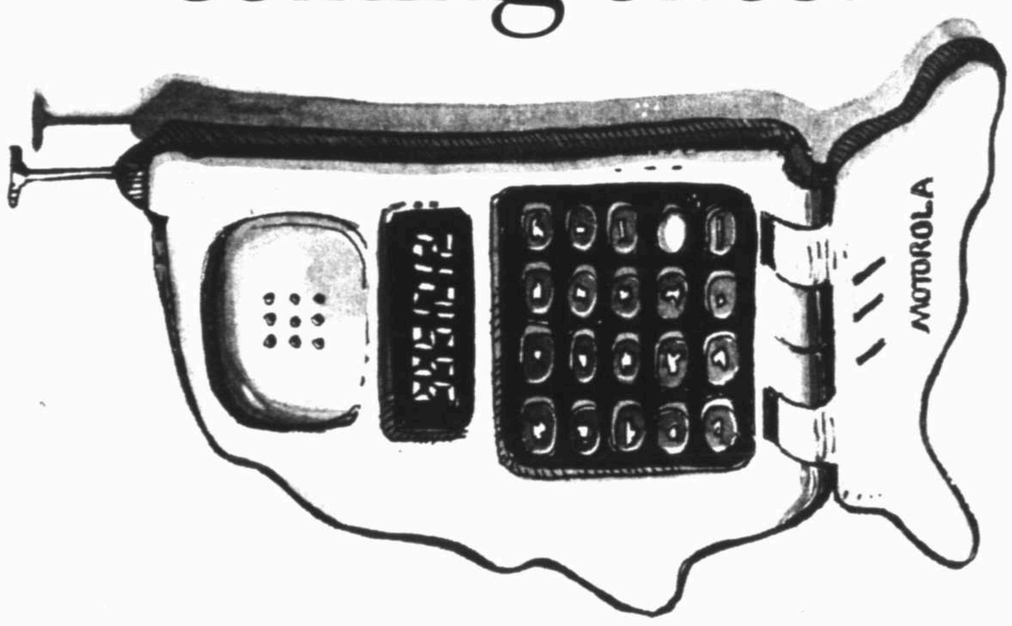

Despite the threats of strong action, Hosokawa said Saturday after a social breakfast with Clinton that he and the president share a view that the United States and Japan have matured to a relationship "between grownups" in which friends can disagree.

"And I don't think the failure of an agreement will lead immediately to sanctions," Hosokawa said.

But he gave no sign that Tokyo would compromise on the key stumbling block that prevented him and Clinton from reaching agreement Friday — disagreement over establishing so-called objective criteria to measure how much access foreign products are getting to Japanese markets.

Clinton signs aid package; quake victims to receive benefits today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signed an $8.6 billion earthquake relief package Saturday and promised that "the benefits will begin flowing tomorrow" to victims of the Los Angeles disaster.

Clinton approved the country's largest disaster aid package in an Oval Office signing ceremony just 26 days after the quake, which has been blamed for 61 deaths and $20 billion in property damage.

He said the size of the package and the speed with which it was approved "indicates the generosity of the American people when tragedy strikes."

"I'm glad to be signing it today, and I'm glad that the benefits will begin flowing tomorrow," he said.

The bill also contains money for a number of other things, bringing the total to $11 billion. Aside from earthquake aid, the largest single chunk was $1.2 billion for Pentagon operations in Bosnia, Somalia, Haiti and Iraq.

After the signing ceremony, Clinton was flying to Arkansas for two days of rest and reflection with family and friends. It was his first trip to Arkansas since the funeral of his mother, Virginia Kelley, a month ago.

The earthquake legislation won final congressional approval late Friday when Congress stayed in session despite a winter storm that coated the capital with ice and snow.

Clinton praised members of Congress for their quick action and "for recognizing that this is a national problem."

"What we now have to demonstrate is that we have the consistency of commitment to stay until this matter is put back together," he said.

He pledged the federal government would continue "working on the long-term repair work to make sure that the people of California do not believe that this is just short-term effort on our part."

In his weekly radio address, Clinton said the federal aid would "help our people recover from this tragedy and get on with the business of everyday life."

He also took note of the cold, snowy weather plaguing many others in the United States, urging Americans, "please, take care of yourselves and your neighbors when they need help."

Noting that Saturday was the 185th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday, Clinton added, "When we respond to others in need, we show that bad weather or earthquakes or floods can bring out, in the words of President Abraham Lincoln, the better angels of our nature."

Some things didn't make it to relief bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not every lawmaker was successful in attaching a favored provision to the earthquake relief bill.

The House Appropriations Committee meeting was only a few minutes old when Rep. Carrie Meek, D-Fla., rose to speak. She wanted an increase in the maximum allowable Small Business Administration disaster loan amount from $500,000 to $1.5 million — retroactive to August 1992, when Hurricane Andrew tore through her state.

Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, a senior member of the committee, said he would "reluctantly oppose" her proposal. He said there had been 43 disasters since Hurricane Andrew, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency would have to reopen each one. "They need the people for current disasters," he said.

Faced with certain defeat, Ms. Meek withdrew her proposal without a vote.

Rep. Jim Moran, D-Va., wanted help for Petersburg, Va., damaged last year by a tornado. FEMA has authorized assistance to individuals, but not for rebuilding city-owned property in Old Towne and Pocahontas Island, an area originally settled by free blacks before the Civil War and a link on the Underground Railroad.

Moran stressed that for the Petersburg area, the $3.35 million cost was comparable in scale to the damage suffered in Los Angeles, and asked that it be added to the bill. Unmoved, the committee refused even to agree to a roll call vote, and the provision was killed.

But the issue resurfaced two days later, when Rep. Robert Scott, a Democrat who represents the area, received assurances on the House floor that if the administration authorized a broader disaster declaration, there would be money available.

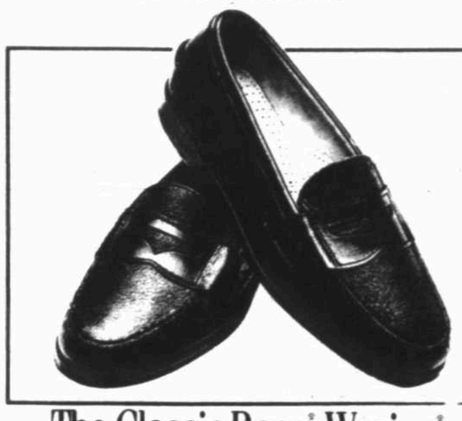

In an interview, Scott said he doubted any funds would result: "The purpose of it is just to keep it on the agenda and keep awareness up that Petersburg was hurt as badly as Los Angeles."

U.S. plans to keep diplomats in Somalia despite Pentagon warnings

By George Gedda
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Once U.S. forces complete their withdrawal from Somalia on March 31, the Clinton administration plans to maintain a 30-member diplomatic mission there despite warnings from some Pentagon officials that their safety cannot be assured.

Some 50 security guards will protect the 30 members of the U.S. Liaison Office, officials said. All told, the official U.S. presence in Somalia will number under 100.

A Marine survey team concluded after a recent tour of the country that violence is expected to escalate once the last of the U.S. troops depart.

But the State Department contended that the assessment was too alarmist and has decided to keep a diplomatic presence there to promote political reconciliation and to administer relief and reconstruction assistance.

Officials confirmed a Washington Post account that the officer responsible for protecting U.S. diplomatic posts warned a month ago that his security platoon's capability in Mogadishu "is not sufficient for continuing operations past March 31."

Security of U.S. personnel in Somalia has been a highly sensitive issue for the administration since last October when 18 U.S. troops died in a firefight in the Somali capital.

It was shortly after that incident that President Clinton, under pressure from Congress, set the March 31 withdrawal deadline. For an extended period in the Bush administration, security was so bad in Mogadishu that no American officials were stationed there.

According to officials, it would be politically difficult for the United States to withdraw all American officials on March 31. That would leave the impression that the country was no safer than when the troops were sent there in December 1992.

Officials said the Liaison Office, with a specially trained military security force, will continue to operate out of the U.N. headquarters compound, which is guarded by several thousand U.N. troops.

One official, asking not to be identified by name, said there is still scattered banditry and violence in Somalia. But he said several factors point toward growing peace in Somalia.

While violence has increased in parts of southern Somalia, he said Mogadishu has been more peaceful as a result of a cease-fire. In addition, rival clans are expected to move toward political reconciliation, he said. The development of a trained police force also will help.

To help the Somalis create more effective police and justice systems, the United States is contributing $45 million this year.

Sen. Helms expresses opposition to bombing Bosnia

By Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The United States should provide humanitarian aid to Bosnia but should not get involved in air strikes, Sen. Jesse Helms said Saturday.

"I think we ought to limit ourselves to compassionate aid. We ought to demand that the arms embargo be lifted and all of that sort of thing," said Helms, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee,

"But I don't want to get into any situation where an American serviceman is put at risk."

Helms, of North Carolina, said he did not agree with Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who favors the strikes.

"Bob needs to ask himself how it's going to come out if you start it," he said on CNN's "Evans & Novak."

Helms said he had yet to speak to anyone in the military who thought air strikes would work.

Asked if he agreed with President Clinton's decision to put troops on the ground if a peace agreement is reached in Bosnia, Helms scoffed.

"Does anybody think that a peace agreement is going to last more than 24 hours?"

Helms expressed concern, too, with Russia's role in Bosnia.

"I don't hear anybody talking about what Russia is doing in terms of supplying arms over there. This bothers me," he said. "They are certainly exacerbating it with what they're shipping into there."

He said he was concerned about stability in Russia, and believes any aid to the country should be loaned, not given.

"And they've got all sorts of natural resources that we need, starting with chrome and natural gas and oil and that sort of thing," Helms said.

Helms also said he still had reservations about Strobe Talbott, ambassador-at-large for Russia and Clinton's nominee for deputy secretary of state. He said he believes Talbott could well end up secretary of state before long.

"I hate to use the word "crony," but he roomed with the president. And I am told very credibly that he came up with the configuration for helping the president dodge the draft in Vietnam and that sort of thing," Helms said.

Helms was one of only two senators to vote against Talbott's nomination in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The full Senate has yet to vote.

$7.1 trillion in budget's fine print affects almost every American

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Tucked away in the back of the budget, there's a $7.1 trillion commitment in government credit and insurance that reaches almost every corner of American life.

And unless the guaranteed loans go bad or the insurance is revoked, it stays in the fine print.

Until the $215 billion savings and loan bailout, credit and insurance programs were all but invisible in federal budgets. That made them politically inviting, since Congress could vote to bestow benefits indirectly, without adding to the deficit.

The loans and insurance programs are for home buyers, students, farmers, veterans, retirees, small business. The constituencies are broad, the needs real, the aims worthy, the programs politically unassailable.

So the government has become the largest underwriter of financial risk in the United States. Directly or indirectly, the government assists more than 35 percent of private domestic borrowing.

In a change prompted by the S&L bailout, the administration and Congress are now required to take account of credit and insurance programs, with a budget and appropriations to cover direct costs, and with projections to provide an early alert to potential liabilities.

The new budget is the fourth to do so; it shows savings and loan and bank insurance moving down the risk list, while federal pension guarantees have moved up.

■ News analysis

There's also an estimate of potential future costs from losses in the credit and insurance programs, but such estimates cannot be precise since the costs are driven by disasters that can't be foreseen and economic circumstances that can change.

So the cost estimate is a range: $180 billion to $300 billion.

With the economy stronger and banking business improving, the potential cost of insuring deposits is down. But falling interest rates and inadequate funding by businesses have increased the future costs of insuring pension benefits by $15 billion.

The administration is pushing a reform bill to reduce that risk.

The gap between guaranteed pensions and the funds available to pay them in business with underfunded plans has been increasing, to $53 billion in the latest accounting. That's due in part to declining interest rates, which reduced pension fund earnings, and company payments that fall short of promised pension benefits.

The Clinton bill would stiffen funding requirements, force employers to begin catching up with their commitments, and strengthen the hand of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. to monitor that process.

The corporation, backed by the government should it run short of funds, guarantees benefits up to about $2,600 a month for retirees whose pension plans fail. It is financed by premiums collected from employers, but the administration says it is underpriced.

According to the budget, the situation could become comparable to the savings and loan crisis.

That's a warning, not an answer. But forewarned, the government can act before a problem becomes a costly bailout. That's the point of the annual accounting of what once were hidden liabilities.

"... Lack of timely information often transfers the cost of a program away from current beneficiaries to later generations of taxpayers," the Clinton budget says.

After four-year strike, miners in Kentucky lose their jobs

By ALLEN G. BREED
Associated Press Writer

ROBINSON CREEK, Ky. — For 4¼ years, a small group of picketing coal miners stood vigil in a rickety plywood shack, watching while others hauled away the coal they thought they would dig until they retired.

Last week, members of United Mine Workers Local 1812 gathered to tear down the two-room, dirt-floored shack at the mouth of Rob Fork Hollow near the Kentucky-Virginia border.

The shack was no longer needed. Their union and several companies agreed on a settlement in the sometimes violent walkout, a spin-off of the epic 1989 Pittston coal strike that left the picketing miners without jobs.

"It's like tearing your fort down," said Lonnie Tackett, the local's financial secretary. "We know we lost the battle."

To Freddie Bowling, dismantling the shack symbolized a tearing down of his faith in the union.

"We were out there four years supporting a union that we loved," said Bowling, president of Local 1812. "We felt they owed us a job and four years' back pay, and that's not what they gave us. ...

"It was a settlement made in the best behalf of the union, not the men," he said.

The UMW and the companies that mine or mined in the hollow signed an agreement to settle a lawsuit stemming from the dispute. The $2.4 million settlement, filed Jan. 3 in U.S. District Court at Pikeville, gives some compensation to the men for lost wages and benefits.

But the union also dropped any claim to representation in the hollow and other nearby operations run by the defendant companies.

"As these situations go, the settlement that the judge approved was the most reasonable possible," said UMW spokesman Jim Grossfeld in Washington.

Local 1812 was called out on Oct. 2, 1989, as part of the selective strike against the Pittston Coal Group. The walkout idled 1,700 miners in Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia before it ended in February 1990.

Mine 29 Mining and Processing Inc., a contractor mining in Rob Fork Hollow, was allegedly supplying coal to Pittston and was targeted for pickets. But 11 days after the walkout began, Mine 29 filed bankruptcy and locked out the 52 union members.

Other contractors later reopened the mine but didn't hire back the strikers. The union filed a federal lawsuit in March 1990, claiming violation of a successorship clause of the labor contract signed by the mine's former owner, BethEnergy Mines Inc.

The Rob Fork settlement came about the same time the union ended a seven-month strike against the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, which represents the nation's largest coal companies. That contract guarantees union members more jobs at the non-union mines owned by BCOA members who signed the national contract.

Bowling wants to know why his strike didn't end that way.

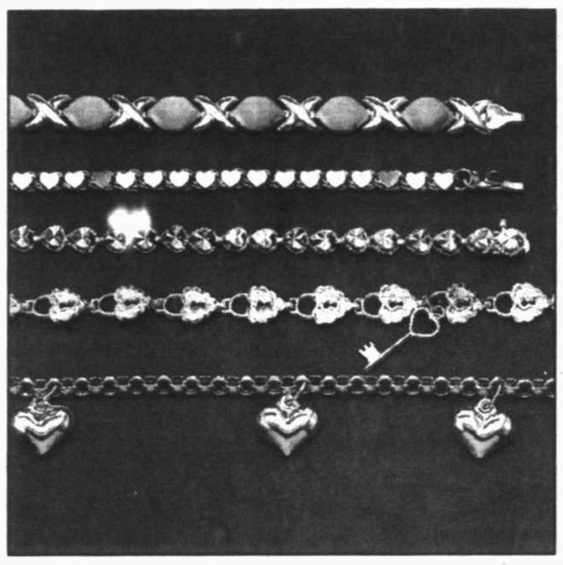

Of the 52 men who started the Rob Fork strike, only 29 were still pulling picket duty when the settlement was announced, Bowling said. Some retired and others took different jobs, he said.

A $225 weekly union strike benefit was barely more than most of the men had made in a single shift. Still, many held on to keep the valuable union health card.

But Bowling said the strike benefits were cut off Jan. 28, and medical benefits will cease at the end of this month.

"They left us out in the cold," Bowling said. "It's kind of hard to find a new job at 49 years old and 20-something years in the mines."

■ Hal Smith, Otis of Mayberry, dies at 77

LOS ANGELES — Hal Smith, who played Mayberry's lovable town drunk on "The Andy Griffith Show," has died. He was 77.

Smith died Jan. 28 at his Santa Monica home, said Don Pitts, the veteran performer's longtime agent.

Smith played the affable inebriate Otis Campbell on "The Andy Griffith Show," which ran from 1960 to 1968 on CBS. The show is seen around the world in syndication.

He also was a featured guest on ABC's "Pat Paulsen's Half a Comedy Hour" in 1970.

Smith supplied the voice of cartoon characters and hawked products in hundreds of commercials, Pitts said. He took over as the voice of Winnie the Pooh after Sterling Holloway, Winnie's original voice, died in 1992.

Smith came to films and television after singing with big bands in the 1930s. He worked as a staff announcer on Los Angeles radio station KFI in the 1940s, then launched an acting career.

Survivors include his son, Terry, and a brother.

■ Students declare victory after protest

AMHERST, Mass. — Students who occupied a University of Massachusetts building declared victory Saturday after administrators agreed to join their fight against a predicted increase in tuition.

"We just wanted to get the chancellor behind us, and now he is," said David Nunez, president of the Student Government Association.

Tuition and fees at UMass-Amherst have soared 167 percent since 1988. Massachusetts residents living on campus pay $9,364 in tuition and fees. Out-of-state undergraduates pay $15,710.

Several dozen students ended their 14-hour occupation of the admissions building early Saturday when Chancellor David K. Scott agreed to oppose any increase in tuition and fees, as long as the state raises the university's budget allocation 3 percent to cover inflation.

"I always supported (the students') arguments that they had been shouldering too big a financial burden from the huge budget cuts of the last five years," Scott said in a statement. "However, the discussions helped to reinforce their situation more graphically."

The Legislature has until July 1 to make the final decision about appropriations for UMass.

If there is no additional appropriation from the Legislature, Scott said he would work to limit the tuition increase to 3 percent.

■ U.S. coins contain Russian nickel

PHILADELPHIA — A business venture with the U.S. Mint is adding yet another footnote to the passing of the Cold War.

A metals recycler turned to a Russian processing plant to recycle scrap metal containing nickel, and the refined nickel is going into the five-cent coins in your pocket.

Sovereign Recycling International Inc. of Bettendorf, Iowa, sold 40 tons of recycled nickel to the U.S. Mint in November for nearly $167,000, Mint spokeswoman Brenda Gatling said Thursday.

It was the first time the Mint has purchased nickel recycled in Russia, the company said.

Nickels, despite their name, are three-fourths copper and only 25 percent nickel. During fiscal 1993, the U.S. Mint used 2,108 tons of nickel and 10,108 tons of copper for coins.

Cold War-era U.S. laws bar the import of Russian nickel into the United States, but the metal that went through the Severonickel refinery in Murmansk was certified as originating in the United States, Gatling said.

Debate over arming citizens rages in Colorado

By Steven K. Paulson
Associated Press Writer

DENVER — Colorado, once home of such gun-toting legends as Butch Cassidy, the Sundance Kid and Doc Holliday, is caught in crossfire over proposals to let law-abiding citizens carry concealed firearms.

Opinions are strong.

"This is not the Wild West where you walk down the street and you have your gun and I have mine and the quickest man wins," said state Sen. Regis Groff.

The debate has become so bitter that a legislator started wearing a bulletproof vest. And gun-law supporters have started warning their members they can't educate legislators if they keep threatening them in late-night phone calls.

"You just make them more sure that they want you disarmed," the Firearms Coalition of Colorado advised.

Four bills pending before the Legislature would allow anyone who qualifies to carry a gun. A fifth bill was killed by the Senate.

Fourteen states have laws allowing non-felons to obtain licenses to carry concealed weapons, and Vermont simply has no law prohibiting the carrying of weapons. Some of the more liberal laws are on the books in Montana, Washington, Oregon, West Virginia, Georgia and Florida. Fifteen states prohibit it.

The remainder, including Colorado, require applicants to show a specific need for a permit.

Colorado allows a law-abiding resident to get a permit to carry a gun, but police chiefs and sheriffs have refused to issue them to all but a few, citing fear of lawsuits.

That's not fair, said supporters of proposals to loosen restrictions.

■ More nation news/12C

"I don't believe citizens should have to worry about being caught by police with a firearm," or being unarmed while facing a criminal, said Jeff Lloyd, a member of the National Rifle Association and a supporter of one of the bills.

Denise Griffin, an analyst for the National Conference of State Legislatures, said she gets about 40 calls a year from legislators who want to know how to liberalize gun laws. But she said she gets 400 calls a year on how to make gun controls stronger, and most of those calls involve tougher juvenile gun laws.

Gov. Roy Romer said most residents don't want to return to the days when everyone in Colorado was allowed to carry a gun.

"I think some people deserve this kind of permit, and they need to have a way to get it," he said. "But I don't want a society where everybody has to carry a weapon. I do not want us to become an armed camp."

State Rep. Ken Chlouber, sponsor of one of the bills, said opponents are trying to impose urban standards on rural constituents.

"The bad guys have got the guns. Let's give the good guys the same opportunity," he said.

State Rep. Diana DeGette, whose proposal to raise the legal age of buying a gun to 21 was killed in the House, said the trend nationwide is toward gun control.

"I think the gun lobby is beginning to realize that, and they're becoming desperate," she said.

Car-crazy Californians learn to love mass-transit system

By Jeff Meyer
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Take the train or a bus to work in car-crazy Southern California? Unthinkable.

Not any more.

Mass transit, once a detestable option, is growing on commuters in post-quake L.A. as a great way to beat the rush-hour blues.

"This has been the best thing that ever happened to me," said city sanitation worker Mike Pletz, boarding a Metrolink train in suburban Santa Clarita for the 55-minute trip downtown.

Pletz, who drove to work alone every day before the deadly Jan. 17 earthquake, said he has no plans to jump back in his car when quake-crippled freeways reopen later this year.

"No way. My wife says my nerves are less frayed when I come home," he said. "I love this."

The earthquake has been a boon to Metrolink. Ridership on its Santa Clarita line jumped from 950 a day to 22,000 daily soon after the quake. It has dropped to about 9,000, where officials expect it to stay, said Metrolink spokesman Richard Stanger.

"So many people now know about Metrolink and many people have tried Metrolink, so from a marketing point of view it's been a tremendous benefit and it also demonstrates what commuter rail is capable of doing," Stanger said.

There are more City Metropolitan Transportation Authority buses running and they're fuller than ever, totaling about 1.2 million passenger boardings a day last week, MTA spokesman Bill Heard.

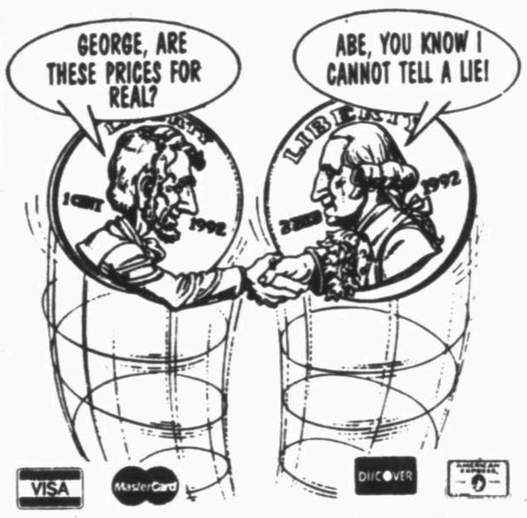

Trading the personal car for mass transportaion hasn't been easy for some.

Computer analyst Duane Sawyer has been riding Metrolink south through the San Fernando Valley to Glendale, where he has to switch to a commuter van to finish the trip to his San Gabriel Valley office about 20 miles farther.

"It's good we have this alternative, but it's about doubled my commuting time," Sawyer said. "I'm going back to driving at the end of the month."

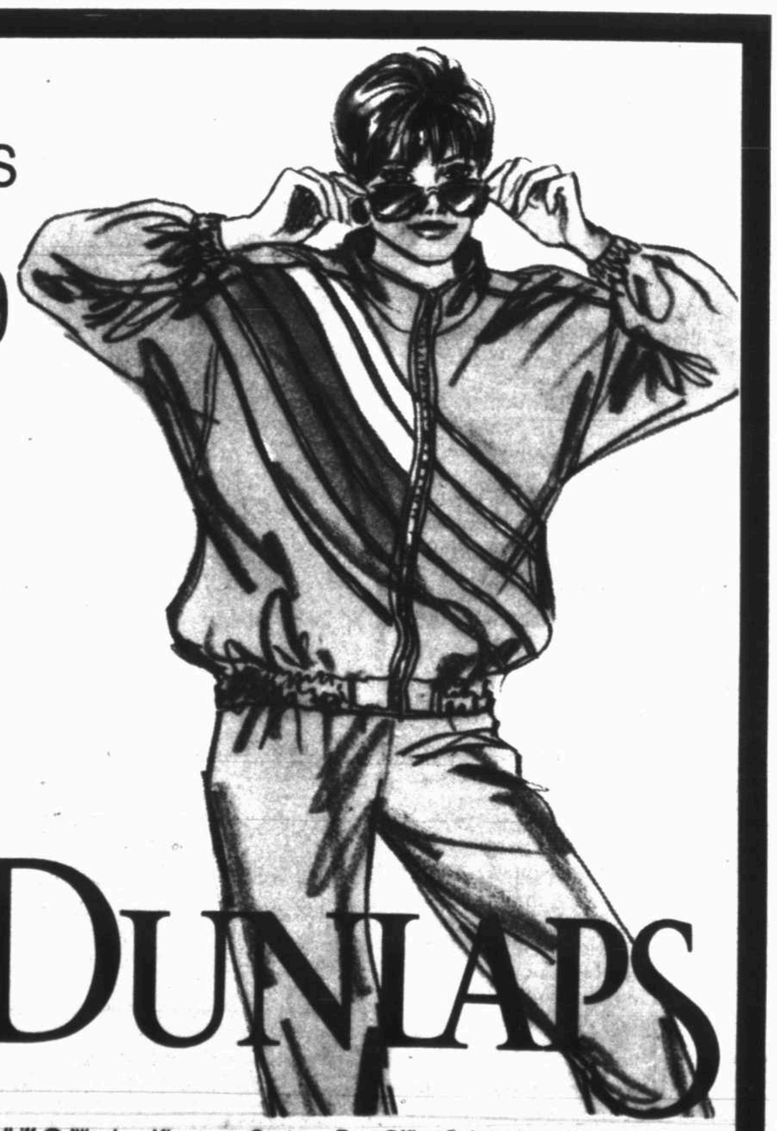

Adding car pool lanes on detours around damaged area has helped those willing to share the ride. Motorists driving alone could take 1½ hours or more to get through one area where car poolers last week waited just four minutes.

Texas students link with Russians

By Christine Dorsey
Associated Press

TOM BEAN — Tom Bean Elementary School may be considered by some just a small, rural school in the middle of Grayson County.

But to the children and teachers at a school in St. Petersburg, Russia, the school is their link to modern education.

Several months ago, the elementary school collected books, teaching materials and medical supplies to send to St. Petersburg Public School 370, a K-12 school for approximately 300 at-risk students.

School officials got the idea from Luella resident Larry Lyons, who has been doing missionary work in St. Petersburg for the last two years. Lyons presented a slide show to the local community illustrating the desperate conditions in the hospitals and schools in the Russian city.

Now, Tom Bean Elementary is going a step further. The school is setting up a "sister school" program with School 370, and is sending two teachers on a 10-day sabbatical in May to observe and teach at its new sister school.

Principal Patty Madison said the school's faculty voted to fund the program with a $30,000 "Successful School" award it received from the Texas Education Agency recently.

"Everyone voted yes, that they wanted to have a sister school and an exchange teacher program (with School 370)," Madison said.

Madison said the teachers will videotape their visit to School 370 and also do some teaching in the English classes there.

"This is the greatest learning experience that we'll ever have," Madison said. "The kids are just so eager to learn about Russia."

Last week, Tom Bean received a visit from Pastor Igor Nikitin — "Pastor Nikki" to his friends. Nikitin, who runs the Union of Christians Church in St. Petersburg, has been coordinating charity efforts with Lyons to provide donated medical and educational supplies to Hospital 10 and School 370, two state-run facilities in dire need of supplies.

Lyons is a Point Man, one of a group of veterans who travels to other countries preaching and providing emotional support to other veterans. Lyons met Nikitin while on a mission in St. Petersburg.

Since then, the two men have worked aggressively to provide aid to hospitals and schools in the St. Petersburg area.

Nikitin said before he left for the U.S., the director of School 370 had asked him to try to set up a sister school program with an American school.

"I told her to pray, and our prayers have been answered," he said.

A totally grassroots effort, the program gets no financial support from large foundations or grants. Lyons' support has come through Point Man Ministries and local donations, with the exception of an agreement he worked out with British Airways to allow him to ship freight for free.

Nikitin, Lyons and his wife, Karen; Madison; and two teachers met recently to discuss plans to send the teachers to Russia to offer educational support to school 370.

Second grade teacher Kim Jerger and fourth grade teacher Veda Norwood were selected by the school's site-based decision-making team to represent Tom Bean on the trip.

"I'm just really excited about it," Jerger said. A Denison native, Jerger said this will be her first trip outside of the United States.

Jerger said she and Norwood plan to develop activities to show the Russian teachers.

"We want to show them different ideas they can use to improve their English classes," she said.

Also, the teachers said, they plan to take along letters and pictures from their students, as well as colorful classroom decorations.

During the meeting, Nikitin told the group about his church, a nondenominational Christian organization.

Nikitin said he experimented with several churches when, in 1986, he met an English- speaking man who introduced him to Christianity.

"At first, I thought he was with the CIA," Nikitin said. "I was scared because back then you could be put in jail for just talking with foreigners."

He said from there, he began meeting secretly with friends to translate into Russian a Bible the man had given him.

"We had to meet underground," Nikitin said. Until 1991, the communist-controlled Soviet Union outlawed all but the Russian Orthodox Church, he said.

The group would take food to gatherings to make them look like parties rather than worship.

Nikitin said at the time his mother was a strict communist and director of one of the country's nuclear plants. He said, had she known he was forming a church, she would've been forced to turn him in to the KGB and he would've been sent to jail.

"She's a different person now," he said. After the Soviet Union was disbanded, his mother joined his church and now is an integral part of its operation.

After spending two years studying theology at the Bible Training Institute in Tulsa, Okla., from 1990 to 1992, Nikitin has been busy keeping his growing congregation intact while providing outreach programs to hospitals and churches.

Madison said the school hopes to raise money to enable some Russian teachers from School 370 to visit Tom Bean.

West Texas professor finds sideline in mapping

By Jerry Daniel Reed
Associated Press

ABILENE — A McMurry University history faculty member has mapped himself out a whole new sideline: illustrating maps.

Dr. Donald Frazier, visiting assistant professor since last fall, draws maps for reference books and other scholarly works, including his own writings. He got his start about three years ago when he found himself in uncharted territory near completion of his journey toward his doctorate.

To reach trail's end, he needed maps to illustrate his doctoral dissertation about the old Confederacy's grandiose designs on the Southwest and Mexico, but none could he see on the horizon.

He could hardly afford to hire outside professional help on his pay as a graduate assistant at Texas Christian University.

"They were going to charge me about $300 to $400 a pop," he recalls with disbelief. His total tab could have hit $3,600.

Fortunately, the dark-haired, compact Frazier is a self-starting kind of guy. He looked around until he found map-making software compatible with his Mac, and set to work in a spare room lent by a dentist friend. He needed space to spread out, he says.

"No kidding, I was listening to dental drills down the hall, doing these maps," he recalls with a chuckle.

The rest is history — or geography.

Completing the work that enabled him to claim his Ph.D. from TCU, Frazier was delighted to learn that his mapping days were far from over. Other academic types came knocking with requests to illustrate their works with maps.

Glad to oblige, he'd always say. Now that the outside professional help was his to sell rather than buy, he found money no objection.

His biggest job to date grew from a contact from Simon & Schuster, publisher of the Encyclopedia of the Confederacy, offering an assignment to write several articles for the comprehensive reference work on that defining American tragedy.

"When they contacted me to do articles, I said, 'Sure, but wait: there's more. I can also do maps,' " he says with a sly grin.

Frazier wound up contracted to write his 13 articles, and to illustrate 64 maps in the volume.

Not content, though, with mapping just one war, Frazier signed on to do two more: for encyclopedic works on World War I (15 maps) and World War II (32 maps), both due release by Garland Publishing Co. later this year.

And just to make sure he's not left with too much time on his hands, he's contracted to do 10 maps for a biography of Col. J.R. Bruchmueller, a German officer credited with the development of modern artillery tactics in World War I.

He's also been busy on the writing and editing front, having just completed a teacher's manual and resource guide for a best-selling history textbook, Houghton-Mifflin's "A People and a Nation."

The ebullient professor has several other projects sketched out as far into the future as 1996.

His doctoral dissertation is in the final negotiation stages for publication next year by the Texas A&M University Press under the title "Blood and Treasure: Texas Soldiers and Confederate Imperialists in the American Southwest." The same year, yet another encyclopedia he's helping edit — "The Disputed Border: An Encyclopedia of the Mexican-American Conflict" — is due off the press.

If Frazier's mapping has a militarist cast, it's by no accident. Military history is his speciality.

"As a military historian and having written on military topics, (I know) maps are absolutely vital. You have to have maps, or nothing makes sense."

Cartography is also a much-neglected area in history textbooks, Frazier maintains.

Textbook publishers might throw in a few maps, but typically relegate them to secondary importance, he says. And then students grow up unable to locate the United States on a map, he laments.

"What I tell everybody is that geography drives history. Just a mountain's being in the way creates a geographical problem.

"There's a gap in the mountains that leads to Kentucky, rather than, say Alabama. And Daniel Boone went to Kentucky, and not Alabama."

Frazier's own Cumberland Gap seems to be Interstate 20. Born in Big Spring, he grew up in Arlington, attended college there (the University of Texas at Arlington) and graduate school at TCU in Fort Worth, and now teaches at McMurry in Abilene — all I-20 towns.

"There must be something about this particular latitude that agrees with me," he jokes.

And there's a couple of things about map-making that agree with him: the fun and the profit.

"It helped take the edge off some of those student loans, that's for sure," he says with a wide smile.

PLAN: Clinton considers more 'painful' cuts

main recipients — find jobs.

"The plan is going to provide new investments in child care, education and training for poor women who were simply written off by previous administrations," she said.

The cuts being considered are in addition to the $30 billion in proposed reductions included in the 1995 budget, which was released last week. One administration official said the search for money had become "brutally hard" since "painful cuts have already been made."

The difficult choices are being shaped both by law and politics. The 1990 budget law requires the government to pay for any new spending increases with offsetting taxes or program reductions.

And since welfare — mainly the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program — is considered an "entitlement program," the cuts have to come from similar programs whose benefits go automatically to everyone meeting the criteria.

The largest entitlement program is Social Security, but officials consider it too politically risky to cut. The growth of the next two largest, Medicare and Medicaid, is being restrained to finance changes in the health-care system.

That means that most of the remaining targets are entitlement programs for the poor, primarily welfare, food stamps and disability programs.

"Everything that's left is virtually a mortal wound," the official said.

One of Clinton's principal promises in the 1992 presidential campaign was to "end welfare as we know it," and he has vowed to send Congress a bill this spring.

Clinton has pledged to expand training programs for people on welfare, but then require those still unemployed after two years to join a work program.

There are now a record 5 million families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the main federal welfare program.

The number of people who would hit the two-year limit is a matter of sharp dispute, with the administration's own estimates ranging from 500,000 to more than 2.3 million.

The hunt for money is crucial. If the administration fails to find sufficient revenue, it could be forced to scale back its plan. Administration officials have said in the past that the welfare plan would cost about $7 billion a year when fully implemented.

The options under consideration have multiplied in recent weeks, as officials prepare to send Clinton a list by March. Officials are considering cuts in an emergency cash aid program used to prevent evictions and utility cutoffs and to provide shelter for the homeless.

The $300 million program is growing rapidly and federal officials suspect that states are using it to finance services they once provided themselves.

Administration officials are also considering a plan that would make it harder for drug addicts and alcoholics to receive disability payments through the Supplemental Security Income program by claiming their addiction as a disability.

As another way of raising money, the Treasury Department is scouring a $16 billion annual tax credit program for low-income families, looking for signs of fraud or abuse. The issue is considered politically sensitive since the program is one of Clinton's favorites and the administration recently gave it a large increase last year.

The search for viable options is sufficiently difficult that officials at the Department of Health and Human Services proposed cutting $1.2 billion a year from an obscure provision of Social Security, which provides increased payments to retired fathers who have young children.

They were overruled by senior officials, including Donna E. Shalala, the department's secretary, who feared the move would antagonize the powerful lobby for retired people.

Ms. Skolfield, the administration spokeswoman, emphasized that "no decisions have been made." But reports of the financing options are already drawing fire from administration allies on Capitol Hill.

They argue that the cuts could increase the number of poor Americans, since the money gained would be used largely to pay for the administrative costs of the welfare plan, like the overhead in the work and training programs.

"You're taking money away from poor people to hire social workers," said Rep. Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif., a senior member of the Ways and Means Committee. "It's foolish for them to even consider these alternatives. It's just damn stupid."

"I've already heard some liberal members say they will not support health-care reform," if the financing plan for welfare change is considered too severe, he said.

But the potential cuts got a warmer reception from Sen. Hank Brown of Colorado, a co-sponsor of a Republican welfare plan. "I'm encouraged that they're looking for ways to pay for it," he said.

The financing debate began in earnest at a late January meeting in the White House.

Officials from the Department of Health and Human Services, led by David T. Ellwood, an assistant secretary, presented a list of six possible options, estimated to save $6.5 billion to $9.3 billion a year.

Among the proposals presented by Ellwood that seem likely to remain on a final administration list are the cuts in benefits to immigrants. But the proposal is likely to arouse bitter opposition from the Hispanic caucus in the House of Representatives, which unsuccessfully fought an earlier round of reductions last year.

The debate focuses on the Supplemental Security Income program, which provides cash payments of $434 a month to elderly or disabled people who are indigent. It also provides them with Medicaid.

Currently, most immigrants must wait five years before they can apply for the benefits. The administration proposal would save $1.8 billion a year by barring immigrants from the program until they become citizens.

The issue only involves legal immigrants; illegal immigrants are already barred from applying.

The proposal to tax such payments, as well as welfare, food stamps and housing assistance may face a tougher fight, both inside the administration and on Capitol Hill. The human services department's paper estimated the taxes, described as "recapture" provisions, could save the government $1.5 billion to $4 billion a year.

Some officials argue that taxing the benefits would make the system more fair by treating all incomes alike.

New York — and penguins — muddle through storm

By Douglas Martin
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Maybe a dozen storms was enough. Maybe there will be more. Who knows? Maybe it will snow on the Fourth of July.

But one thing is clear. In ways big and small, this winter has changed lives, livelihoods and the way the world muddles through. It is fascinating, or at least diverting, to see how people — and penguins — have so far gotten by.

Penguins first. At the New York Aquarium in Coney Island, the penguins have been eating nearly twice as much fish — 2½ pounds a day, compared with the usual 1¼ to 1½ — to generate enough energy to stay warm without depleting their precious fat resources.

But for the keepers, an extra pound of herring doesn't quite do the trick. Louis Garibaldi, the aquarium's director, said some have been surviving by gamely pretending they are on a specimen-collecting trip to Antarctica.

The thing to own this winter, clearly, is a salt mine. Akzo Salt Inc. supplies much of the Northeast's rock salt from its Manhattan-size mine at Retsof, N.Y., 30 miles south of Rochester.

"We are treating this as a war against winter," said Katherine Bolton, a company spokeswoman, noting that executives meet three times a day in — where else? — their war room.

Before winter even began, they had built stockpiles that Ms. Bolton characterized as "the Alps of salt." Since then, she says, Akzo has stepped up mining to unprecedented levels and hired "an armada" of ships to carry salt from a Caribbean salt reef, inhabited by pink flamingoes, that the company owns.

"No matter how hard we try to keep up, guess what happens?" she asked. "It snows again."

All this salt adds up. New York City's Sanitation Department calculates it has used 270,000 tons this winter, equivalent to 5.4 million of the standard kitchen-shelf containers in which salt is sold in supermarkets.

For some, this seemingly loathsome winter has been a blessing. Barbara Corcoran, a real-estate broker, offers the usual services plus two galleries where customers can look at videos of properties while sitting on plush sofas. Calls from people who want to go out and look at apartments have dropped by half, while attendance at the Corcoran Group's two galleries in Manhattan has doubled.

"It's all because you can come inside and stay warm and look through 100 apartments in an hour without getting your feet wet," Ms. Corcoran said.

Among the other businesses that have prospered are those selling home-decorating items. It seems the deeper cabin fever sets in, the more eager people are to alter their too-familiar surroundings.

Richards Interior Design said sales of slipcovers, furniture samples off the floor and curtains made from fabric already in stock have been up 25 percent. "People are sick of staring at the same four walls," said the store's owner, Richard Harary.

Eating habits have also been affected. Restaurants report that customers are much more apt to order a bowl of soup than a cup, while those offering Chinese fare say hot-and-sour soup has raced ahead of won ton and egg drop.

At the Old Homestead restaurant, orders of French Bordeaux, a hearty red wine, have more than tripled. People there are also asking that their pies and other desserts be heated.

The cold weather has ground some businesses to a halt, with most hot-dog and pretzel vendors taking a few days off at nobody's expense but their own.

At Gershow Recycling Corp. in Medford, N.Y., scrap collectors stopped bringing in abandoned refrigerators and cars because many were frozen to the ground. And a nifty machine that can shred a bus into fist-sized pieces in 30 or 40 seconds has been incapacitated because steel becomes too brittle in extreme cold.

Auto insurance claims are also up as rear-end collisions become one of the region's biggest spectator and participant sports. At Tri-State Consumer Insurance Co. in Jericho, N.Y., claims are up by a third, largely as a result of cars skidding while trying to stop.

Penny Hart, the president of the company, said claims would be even greater if people were not so afraid that filing for them would result in higher premiums, a fear she said was often unjustified.

She cited a woman who balked at reporting that her windshield was shattered by a chunk of ice falling from a bridge, a completely justifiable claim that would not result in a surcharge to her premiums. "Everybody's too afraid," she said.

The most odious byproduct of the bad weather is evident in hospital emergency rooms.

Brookdale Hospital in Brooklyn treated 36 broken ankles in January, six times the normal rate. New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center has treated "the largest numbers of falls on the street we've ever seen," said Alexander Kuehl, the director of the emergency room.

Dr. Ronald M. Krinick, the chief of orthopedic and sports medicine at New York Downtown Hospital, said he and two colleagues were often simultaneously operating on patients for entire nights, handling case after case. "As soon as we get one out, they bring somebody else in," he said.

Krinick said the injured have not been elderly people, many of whom have been staying inside. "What we're seeing is young people, healthy people, who are venturing out and really losing their footing," he said. Because of the force of the falls, fractures are very severe, often with broken bones jutting through flesh, he said.

Simply coping is the order of the day, as evidenced by the gravediggers at Potter's Field on Hart Island, who took off only four days through the winter's dozen storms.

The diggers, all city prisoners at nearby Rikers Island, make fires in steel drums to warm the frozen soil and themselves as they bury the indigent.

Transportation workers have some particularly novel ways of coping with the weather, exemplified by the way Metro-North employees filter ice crystals from the air intake valves on each of the four electric motors in each train. They use Irish linen.

Other materials have been tried, including metal, fiberglass and specially treated paper, but nothing has worked as well as Irish linen, the discovery of conductors who first tried using their own handkerchiefs as filters a half-century ago.

A Queens company now makes what railway workers call "snugglies" for $10 each. A piece of ice in an electric engine can easily do $8,000 in damage, said Dan Brucker, a Metro-North spokesman.

Bridge toll collectors have a tougher time dealing with the cold because they must constantly open their windows. Since they cannot wear gloves because they are always changing money, most use the sort of mineral heat packs that coaches and football players can be seen cuddling on the sidelines.

Louis Pignetti, a toll collector on the Triborough Bridge, jogs in place between cars, a practice that has spurred some concerned motorists to ask if he has to go to the bathroom.

But this winter's luckiest man has to be Harold Mollin, president of Worldwide Weather, a company with offices in Great Neck, N.Y., and London that insures against the effects of weather.

Always eager to broaden his business, Mollin approached New York City and other governmental entities throughout the Northeast last summer offering to insure against greater-than-normal snow-removal costs.

There were no takers. "I would have lost millions," the relieved insurance man said, adding that he expects business to pick up this year.

Gadhafi: Israel pressures U.S.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi berated President Clinton on Saturday for describing Libya as a threat to American national security and claimed Clinton is falling under Israeli pressure.

"The world laughs hysterically when listening to the American president's report to the Congress in which he describes Libya as an extraordinary threat to the United States of America," Gadhafi said in a statement distributed by the Libyan news agency JANA. The agency was monitored in Cairo.

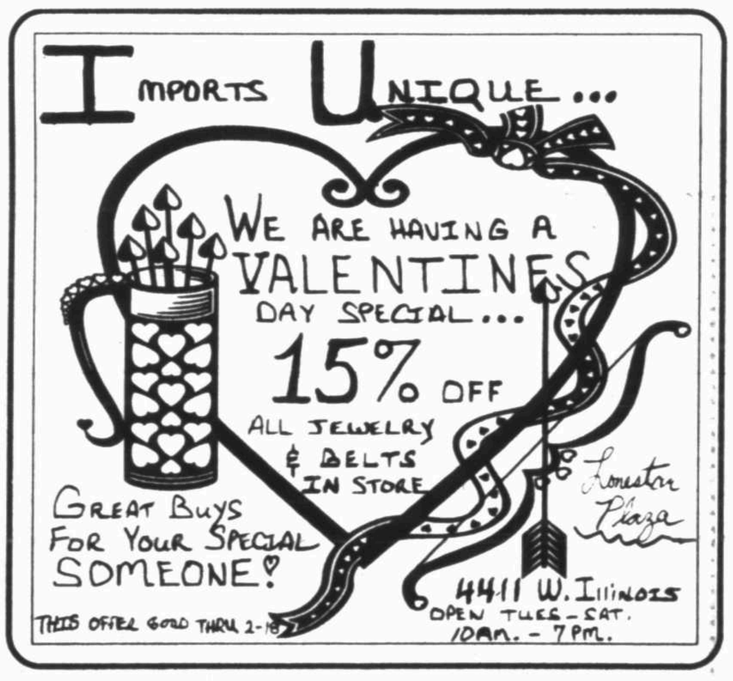

Libya blames the United States for U.N. sanctions imposed since April 1992 for Tripoli's refusal to hand over for trial two Libyans accused of complicity in the bombing of a Pan Am flight over Scotland in 1988 that killed 270 people.

In his annual report to Congress on U.S.-Libyan affairs, Clinton said Thursday that Washington still believes a worldwide embargo on Libyan oil is necessary "if Libya continues to defy the international community."

Gadhafi told JANA in a report monitored in Cairo that Clinton "is a victim himself of the imperialist aggressive circles."

He attributed Clinton's attitude to the possibility that "orders might have been issued from Tel Aviv to the White House to make such announcement."

Or, he said, "it might be a response to the telegram of condolences that I sent him after the death of his mother."

Stubborn guest makes common acts spectacular

NEW YORK — Beause of the snow, so much snow, the miracle of birth had to unfold on a couch in Teaneck, N.J.

Because of the snow, a 90-year-old, one-legged man in Port Chester, N.Y., couldn't get a hot meal. But in Manhattan, a delivery man with ice in his eyebrows and terror in his eyes made a suicidal-type run on an out-of-control bicycle with a $7 order of moo-shu pork.

Because of the snow, a man stood waiting for a truckload of roses that never showed, on the one weekend of the year when lovers can't be lovers without something red.

The snow drifted down like feathers and piled up thicker than feather beds in New York and much of the rest of the region Friday, smothering traffic, causing too many hardships to count and mocking the snow plows and shovelers who dared to challenge it.

People slipped on it and cried and shook their fists at it and cursed, but it just kept on coming.

But nowhere did it have quite the effect that it did in the home of Sonia Alonso, who, trapped by impassable roads, gave birth to a 7-pound baby boy with the help of a few friends and a 20-year-old medical technician who had never done such a thing before.

The cold has kept others who need to get out locked in.

For 16 years, Mario Grasso has unfailingly delivered hot meals to elderly people who cannot leave their homes. Friday, when a plump carpet of snow fell upon plump carpets from earlier snows, he too was trapped.

"I couldn't get out of the church parking lot," said Grasso, a 76-year-old retired New York City auditor who was trying to deliver 10 plates of hot lasagna from the Scarsdale Congregational Church. "The parking lot hadn't been plowed and the wheels were turning around in the same spot."

It has been that kind of winter for the elderly of the New York City region. Meals on Wheels programs have been canceled for as many as nine days in some communities, and local pharmacies have had to stop delivering prescription medicine to the homebound. Visits to hospitals for physical therapy have been postponed.

The occasional fresh-air stroll or shopping expedition with a walker has been forgone for fear that a slip on unseen ice could leave a permanently disabling broken bone.

Most painful for those who are shut in is that the human visits that brighten the flat routines of their days have become less frequent.

All those years of living have given the elderly the street smarts to put away provisions and extra medicine for a run of bad luck like this winter. But this run has been worse than most of them recall.

"This last week has been terrible," said Ansel Mason, 87, a retired security guard in Halesite, N.Y., who had to make do Friday with canned spaghetti instead of a delivered hot meal. "I've got enough canned goods to hold out for four or five days if I have to."

All through the snows of this winter, younger homebound adults have been suffering the restless anxiety known as cabin fever. But Raymond Daur, 90, a retired bank officer who lives alone in a house in Port Chester, N.Y., has not stepped outside since October, except for a four-day stay at his son's home during Christmas.

The reason he has been so pent up is that his prosthetic leg has been causing severe irritation and he has been wary of using it for more than a short period.

He counts on the the visit by the Meals on Wheels volunteer, not just for the hot food, but for the break in his routine.

That break didn't come Friday because the volunteers, most of whom are elderly themselves, were afraid to drive, though Patrick Bradley, chairman of the local Meals on Wheels program, did telephone to make sure Daur had reserves of food.

So Daur spent his day listening to classical music on the radio and doing crossword puzzles, and munching on a plate of pasta with tomato sauce that was delivered Thursday.

The elderly also put away extra medicine and other things they can't do without for this kind of emergency.

While many in the New York region spent Friday worrying about food, medicine and friends, Lee Merto was wondering where his roses were. More than 50,000 of them.

For Merto, the manager of a wholesale flower distributor on Manhattan's West Side, the timing of the storm could not have been worse, given that he was to have shipped Valentine's Day orders Friday to many of the 500 florists he supplies in the area.

Trouble was, with the region's three main airports closed and its highways treacherous, Merto had no way to receive the 14,400 roses that were being sent to him by air from California and the additional 40,000 that had been picked in South America but were stuck on a truck somewhere between New York and Miami.

"There's a lot of money that could be lost," said Merto, whose company, Atlantic Wholesale, at 46 W. 28th Street, counts the days leading up to Valentine's Day, Mother's Day and Easter as its busiest of the year.

"Our customers are counting on us to get the job done," he added.

To other business owners, the storm will be difficult to forget. Many hair salons, those that stayed open, found themselves with virtually no heads to cut or nails to polish. Department stores had few customers and even fewer employees.

For Zhang Fu Zhcen, even a little business was almost more than he could stand. He was half-frozen and weaving dangerously through sliding traffic on his bicycle, trying to make a food delivery in midtown.

"Bad" was all he said as he wobbled to a stop at the top of a long, gradual hill where even cars had a hard time maneuvering. He was still upright when he disappeared from sight.

Ms. Alonso, in labor, couldn't take a chance of the dangerous roads. She was snowbound in her Teaneck apartment when her labor started Friday morning. Shana Prystowsky, a medical technician, went to her.

She arrived at 10:35 a.m. to find several women walking Ms. Alonso around the living room, and had no time to do anything more than lay her down on the nearest sofa and let nature proceed.

Thirteen minutes later, at 10:48, Ms. Alonso, brought little Omar into the world

Substance Abuse.
Often It's Not The Only Problem.

Quite often substance abuse is a symptom of depression. And depression is a serious illness. Unfortunately, many people choose to 'treat' their depression themselves, often leading to:
- Excessive drinking
- Use of illegal substances, such as cocaine or marijuana
- Abuse of prescription drugs
- Overeating

If you or someone you know is experiencing any of these problems, call us 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Our experienced staff and innovative treatment programs can help over-come the obvious and not so obvious problems - the right way.

Hospital fights parents' wish to keep 'brain-dead' teen alive

MIAMI (NYT) — A Sarasota hospital that has been caring for a brain-dead teen-ager since early last month is seeking permission from the courts to disconnect her life-support system, despite opposition from the girl's parents.

The parents, Frederick and Sharon Hamilton, say the action is premature and want doctors at Sarasota Memorial Hospital to release their 13-year-old daughter, Teresa, to their custody.

Teresa, a severe diabetic, was admitted to the hospital on Jan. 7 and fell into a coma soon afterward.

"We are aghast at the fact that they want to call it quits," Hamilton said Friday in a telephone interview. "She must come home, and we have to work with her."

Hospital president Michael Covert said Friday night that he planned to ask the state attorney next week how to proceed with the case.

Medical workers familiar with the case say doctors determined that Teresa was legally dead after three brain scans showed no brain activity and a blood scan indicated no blood flow to the brain. But Mrs. Hamilton has asked the hospital to do everything to keep her daughter alive. The girl is being kept breathing by a ventilator.

"The hospital is asking the court for direction because of the conflict concerning Teresa Hamilton," said Mike Vizvary, a hospital spokesman, adding that the parents' wishes were in conflict with the hospital's policy.

But John Williams, a lawyer for the Hamiltons, said he feared that the hospital would seek to have a guardian appointed in the case, who would then be responsible for medical decisions about the girl. "The first question is should the parents be deprived of their guardianship rights," he said.

Further complicating the case, the Hamiltons' medical insurance has run out. The intensive care unit where Teresa is being treated costs about $3,240 a day, bringing the Hamiltons' five-week hospital bill to more than $116,000.

Vizvary said the court action had nothing to do with the family's lack of insurance.

Until now, most cases in which a court has been asked to make a determination of life or death have dealt with family members who wanted to stop efforts by a hospital or state to keep a relative on life support.

This case is attracting attention among specialists in medical ethics because it does not fit that pattern.

"If the child is still alive, this is an important case," said George Annas, director of the law, medicine and ethics program at Boston University of Medical and Public Health. "It's almost always the other way around. Hospitals never go to court trying to stop treatment on a child against the wishes of the parent."

In Florida, a person is considered dead "when there is irreversible cessation of the functioning of the entire brain," even though respiratory and circulatory functions are being maintained with the aid of machines. In such cases, there is no requirement for the hospital to ask permission of next of kin or a court to disconnect life support.

"The hospital has an obligation to take her off the ventilator," Annas said. "Now they are treating a corpse."

By doing so, he said, "you really do confuse the parents, because you lead the parents to believe that the child is still alive."

That is what appears to have happened in Teresa Hamilton's case. "They have claimed that she is brain dead, which is the clinical way of saying she's a goner," said Hamilton, an unemployed oil engineer originally from Scotland. "But they've pursued with her care."

In 1990, the Supreme Court ruled that treatment could be withheld if there was clear and compelling evidence of the patient's wishes. The decision came in the case of Nancy Cruzan, a young woman from Missouri who spent eight years in a coma while her parents fought to have her disconnected from life support, contending she had told them that was her desire.

Ms. Cruzan died in December 1990, six months after the Supreme Court ruling and 12 days after her parents won the right to remove the feeding tube that was keeping her alive.

Tourist group makes brave show at selling 'everybody's home town,' Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a day when the front page warned of cuts in bus service, when two more shooting victims died, and when the temperature hugged 16, the tourist industry made a brave show of selling Washington, D.C.

The wonder was that so many attended.

The show was for the congressional staff members who field calls daily from Americans eager to see the city that's been called "everybody's home town."

Some feel it's the worst parts of everybody's home town, especially politicians who would walk over their grandmothers' backs to get here and then tell the home folks that it's every bit as rotten as they thought.

As a countermeasure, the Chamber of Commerce and the city's delegate to Congress, Eleanor Holmes Norton, put on an "Ask me about Washington," fair. Free box lunches may have helped swell the crowd.

As people milled around from table to table gathering brochures, a reporter asked these staffers about the questions they get.

Question most asked: "Is it safe?"

Second most asked: "Is that really true?"

"I get so tired of hearing people talk about the crime," said Katie Hemmer, a representative of Old Town Trolleys. "I feel safe here. I get so angry with the press for harping on crime."

There was no hard sell at the two-hour fair, no speeches, no ceremony.

Shayne Gill, who handles tourist inquiries in the office of Rep. Spencer Bachus, R-Ala., a first termer, said he is often asked "where is a safe place to say?" and "what's affordable?" One prospective visitor even asked whether there were taxis to take from the Union Station to his hotel.

When constituents come to call, most congressional offices like to have a barrage of material available so the tourists will have a good time.

Sam LeBlanc works for a company that provides free maps to offices around town, paid for by advertisers.

"We're like any big city," he said, "no worse, no better."

Many potential tourists don't realize there is more to the city than the Lincoln Memorial, the Smithsonian museums and the White House.

"They don't think of this as a theater town, but we are; they don't think of this as a shopping town, but we are," said Nancy Riker of DC Accommodations, which has a toll-free number to provide information. "We let them know what the city has to offer," she said.

Most of the congressional staffers at the fair were fairly new to the city and enthusiastic tourists themselves.

"Everyone requests a White House tour and tours of Congress and the Capitol," said Hilary Hibbeln who works for Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho. Her office has 10 tickets a week to give away for White House visits.

Ken Morton, who works for Rep. Ronald Machtley, R-R.I., said one constituent wanted to meet President Clinton and Vice President Gore.

"I told them I would try my best," he said.

Can he arrange it? "You can try," he said diplomatically.

Flame jump-starts Games

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — A stand-in skier jump-started the Winter Games with a spectacular leap Saturday, bearing the Olympic flame out of the night sky and into the midst of an opening ceremony that celebrated Norway's folklore.

It was a welcome start to an Olympics that will cost $1 billion or more to stage and had been plagued by a series of bizarre occurrences, from murder to mystery, in recent months.

But it was not a ceremony cut off from the real world. IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch called on all sides in the conflict in Sarajevo to "stop the fighting. Stop the killing. Drop your guns." And security was tight against threats of protests from anti-abortion groups.

No problems were reported by police.

The snowy setting for the opening ceremonies could not have been more inviting for the 40,000 spectators, bundled up against 14-degree cold in the ski-jumping stadium at Lillehammer Olympic Park. Everyone was draped in white.

It was a stark contrast to the futuristic design and tepid slush of Albertville, France, two years ago. These are the first Winter Games sent off on their own, split from the every-four-year cycle of Olympic tradition, and their birth was as Nordic as salmon and skis.

"We want to present these Games in the Norwegian way," Gerhard Heiberg, president of the Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee, said.

Americans march in without Tonya, Nancy

By Paul Newberry

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Tonya wasn't there. Neither was Nancy. But their American teammates were, marching into a new chapter of Olympic history Saturday near the head of the line.

There were even a few Americans to cheer them on at the opening ceremony of the 17th Winter Games — including first lady Hillary Clinton.

"I went to Barcelona (for the 1992 Summer Games) and got addicted to this atmosphere," said Lincoln Cutting of Buffalo, N.Y., bundled up on the frigid day but having the time of his life. "We're at the center of the world."

The Norwegians refer to the United States as Amerikas, thus the 155-member team marched into the stadium third, a depar-

'Horns run all over Aggies

AUSTIN — Texas coach Tom Penders watched his players run all over Texas A&M Saturday en route to a half-game lead in the Southwest Conference, then said the Longhorns are "nowhere near gelling."

■ SWC Basketball

If that's the case, the league had better look out below.

Albert Burditt and B.J. Tyler each scored 15 points, leading an inside-outside attack that carried Texas past the Aggies 85-68 for its ninth straight victory.

Before a deafening, sellout crowd, the Longhorns (16-6, 8-1 SWC) erupted late in the first half, then put the game away with a flurry of 3-pointers and monster dunks fueled by Texas' pick-

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Really now, sweet Tonya innocent

So you think that Tonya Harding is guilty of conspiring to do bodily harm to one Nancy Kerrigan?

That really is a preposterous assumption. Poor Tonya never really had anything to do with the club whacking on Kerrigan.

Williamson

It's just a matter of simple detective work. And I'm at a total loss why the world wants Harding's hide skewed. Why can't the world see the truth like one so enlightened as me?

When you play detective, the first rule of thumb in finding a perpetrator of a heinous crime is to find out who would benefit most from the resulting act of violence.

Sure, Harding might benefit from such an attack on Kerrigan. She might bring home the gold in a Kerriganless Olympics. But there are no sure bets here. It's still a risky proposition to deal with.

But who can't lose with a slightly injured Kerrigan while sliding blame to Harding? Isn't the answer obvious? CBS planned the whole thing. There it is. Out in the open. Said and done.

They are now saying that the Kerrigan-Harding duel on ice will attract the largest TV audience in the history of sports. Shoot, it will knock live coverage of Desert Storm and Peter Arnett in Baghdad right off the map. The Super Bowl is a pauper compared to this.

This is the Harding-Kerrigan Olympics. Do you really believe that they won't let Harding skate? There's too much money to be made from outside sources. The world wants Harding to skate — guilty or not.

And CBS can't lose. It's the money maker of all time. CBS will even have Kerrigan and Harding on the ice together during practice. Do you think that happened accidently?

Feature it in the mind. Harding and Kerrigan passing each other on the ice during practice. CBS will give you every moment. And if Harding lands an advertising endorsement from the anti-car theft device "The Club," and carries it onto the ice with her, the world will take note in numbers never counted before. CBS is probably working on that deal for Harding as we talk.

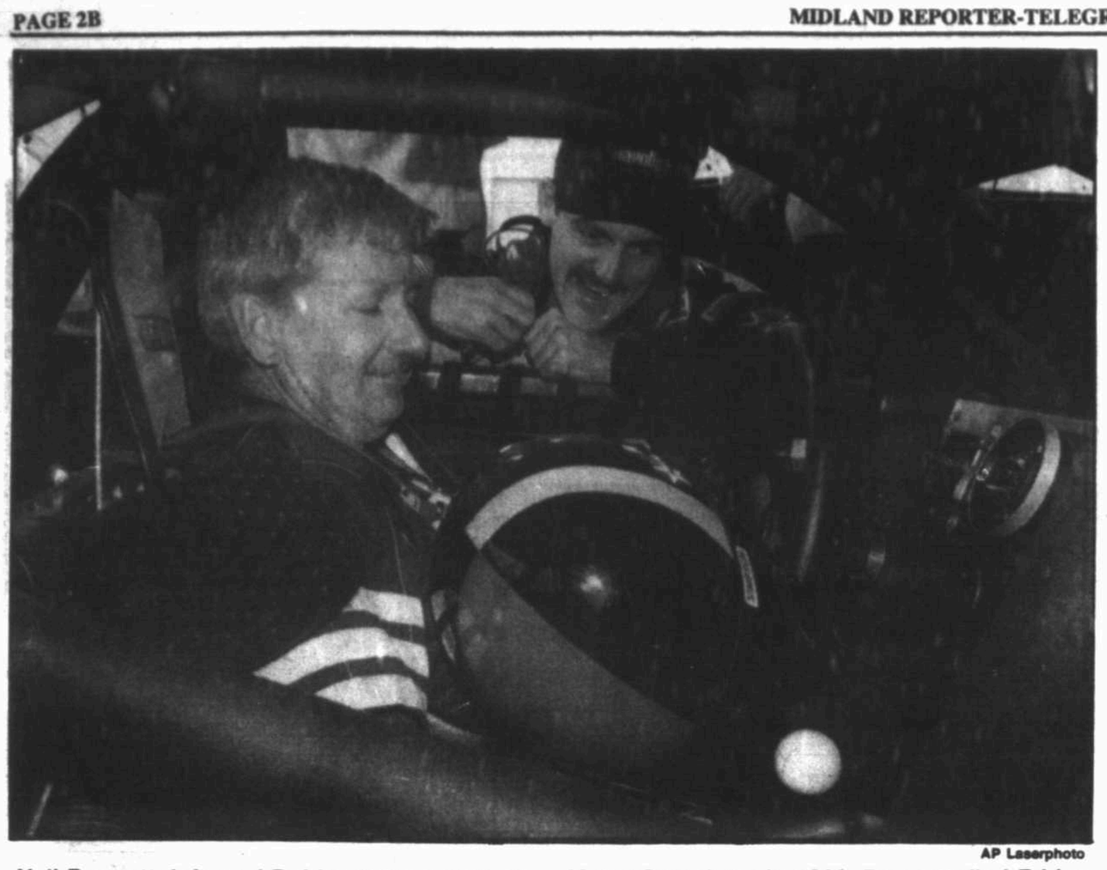

Can we talk? CBS was forced into producing this spectacle. It has not been a good year for the sports division at CBS. They lost baseball. Then they lost the NFL, John Madden and Pat Summerall. The nation won't forgive them as they begin searching for the nearest FOX outlet.

CBS doesn't even have Summerall for golf anymore. CBS is bankrupt in the world of sports — except for Harding vs. Kerrigan. CBS has to make the most of this opportunity. It's called saving face in a world hungry to see Good take on Evil. CBS knows our very nature. They spend tons of money to find what you like and dislike. They know this is the ticket. And you — and I — will watch — every minute.

But let's at least admit where all of this is coming from. CBS had to do it. CBS is the butler of this story. And we are buying the butler's story.

Just where is Columbo when you really need him? We know sweet Tonya never thought of this diabolical act.

Neil Bonnett, left, and Bobby Allison, both deceased, talk in the garage area at the Charlotte Motor Speedway in 1992. Bonnett died Friday during a practice run.

Racing family grieves briefly, then goes on

■ Neil Bonnett's death on the track reminded other race drivers that death is an occupational hazard.

By Mike Harris
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — For race drivers, death on the track is simply another obstacle to be avoided at high speed.

Neil Bonnett didn't spend a lot of time contemplating the danger of his chosen sport. He just wanted to race. In the end, his greatest love killed him.

His death Friday from massive head injuries received in a crash at Daytona International Speedway left the close-knit stock car community grieving once more.

But the pause for reflection on the loss of a friend by NASCAR drivers and teams was momentary. Qualifying for the Daytona 500 loomed Saturday, and Bonnett would have understood the need to get on with the business at hand.

"I can't tell you how much respect I had for Neil Bonnett," former teammate Darrell Waltrip said. "I feel so much sadness. But I can't give in to it now. I have to get my job done before I can grieve for Neil."

Jeff Gordon, just 22 and already a star, understands what is expected of him.

"A race driver has got to be tough," Gordon said. "He's got to get right back out there. Neil was doing what he loved. He understood the danger. It's what we get paid for.

"If I sat down and thought about it a lot, yeah, it might affect me."

In April, when 1992 Winston Cup champion Alan Kulwicki died in the crash of a private plane en route to a race weekend in Tennessee, there were tributes and tears. But the show went on.

In July, when emerging superstar Davey Allison, scion of a famous racing family, died of injuries from a helicopter crash, there were more heartfelt eulogies and more tears. But the green flag fell once more.

It's not that racers are cold. They love and care for their families and friends as much as any human beings. It's the nature of their business.

"If it's a rookie or a journeyman driver (injured or killed), you say, 'Well, he made a mistake,'" Kyle Petty explained. "But if it's a guy with 18 years of experience, like Neil, and you ate meals with him and traveled with him, it comes awfully close to home.

"You have to put your mind in another place. It's kind of crazy, really. You have to have total concentration when you're out on that racetrack. You have to put things like this totally aside for the time you're out there. You can't be thinking about what might happen or what happened to somebody else.

"The thing is, as a racer, you understand how Neil felt. We all love being out there in that race car. It's just something that sets you free. He just didn't want to walk away."

The 47-year-old Bonnett survived two bad wrecks earlier in his career — in 1987 and in 1990. The second one, at Darlington, S.C., cost him part of his memory and appeared to put an abrupt end to his driving career.

Bonnett turned to television, where he became a respected analyst, commentator and host. That appeared to be his future until his restless nature prevailed.

As his body healed, Bonnett's hunger for the competition got the best of him.

He quietly put hundreds of test miles on cars belonging to close friends Dale Earnhardt and Richard Childress, then ran Childress cars in two 1993 races.

In his first race back, last July at Talladega, Ala., Bonnett walked away from a spectacular crash.

Late last year, Bonnett came up with a deal to run six races in 1994 and six in 1995 for Florida car owner James Finch with engines supplied by Childress. Bonnett was excited. His wife was not.

In an interview with The Birmingham News, Joan Farmer, the wife of driver Red Farmer, said she spoke with Susan Bonnett two weeks ago about her husband's comeback.

"She said racing was no longer discussed in their house," said Farmer, a friend and neighbor of the Bonnetts in Hueytown, Ala. "She said she had practically gotten down on her hands and knees and begged Neil not to race again."

Farmer, like many in Hueytown's devastated racing community, had only begun recovering from the loss of Davey Allison and the injury to her husband — who was in the helicopter with Allison when it crashed at Talladega Superspeedway.

It was Bonnett who helped pull both from the wreckage. Ironically, they had flown in from Hueytown to watch his son, David, test a car.

That tragedy followed by a nearly a year the fatal crash of Davey's younger brother, Clifford. Four years earlier, the driving career of their father, Bobby, ended with a near-fatal wreck at Pocono International Raceway.

After 44 years of marriage to a race driver, Farmer said she still has no idea what makes them tick.

"I don't understand them and I never will," she said. "There's something in their system. They weren't born with it and — except for Davey and Clifford — they weren't born into it.

"It's an addiction. They live, breathe and sleep racing. They are all from the same mold. They love racing more than they love anything else. They love it more than they love their families and their wives."

"I'll never know what makes them get into those damned race cars."

Donnie Allison, Bobby's brother and a former driver who made an abortive comeback attempt after a serious head injury in a 1981 crash, said Bonnett knew exactly what he was doing.

"Neil made the decision to drive a race car again, not to please anybody else," Allison said. "He'd been in the race car a lot. Right now I can't put a finger on anything about that accident that had to do with his being ready to drive that race car. He was ready."

Bobby Allison, generally regarded as Bonnett's mentor and still involved as a team owner, said, "I don't even know how to put it into words. I just have to keep insisting to myself we don't have to like it, but we have to accept it.

"That's what he wanted to do. A lot of people in the country had misfortune yesterday that weren't doing what they wanted to do."

Ken Squier, a TV colleague and friend — it seems nearly everyone he met was Bonnett's friend — said, "He called (me) two or three times times because he liked the commentating and he didn't want to lose it (if he raced again). We didn't want to lose him either, and this was a real opportunity for him.

"I told him, 'We don't want anything to happen to you,'" Squier said. "He waved that off. He said, 'Don't even worry about that.' That wasn't even an issue with him. He just wanted to race again."

He and Childress, his car owner, issued a statment that said:

"We really don't know what to say. Yesterday we went on with the job we had in front of us because we were in shock. You don't feel anything when you're in shock. You're numb.

"But, after a night to think about it, you remember the racing and the hunting trips and fishing trips and the things that make people good friends. Then, when it's gone and you realize all you have left are those memories, it comes crashing down."

Jerry Punch, another TV colleague as well as a trauma specialist, was one of Bonnett's closest friends.

"There were a lot of people close to Neil who tried to persuade him one way or another," Punch said. "Those closest to him wanted him to make the decision that made him happiest.

Bonnett funeral set for Monday

HUEYTOWN, Ala. (AP) — The funeral for NASCAR driver Neil Bonnett, killed in a crash at Daytona Beach, Fla., will be Monday at Garywood Assembly of God.

The hometown service for Bonnett, who died Friday after crashing during practice at Daytona International Speedway, was set for 2 p.m. CST. Visitation was set for 6 p.m. Sunday at Browns-Service, West Chapel, and again at 10 a.m. Monday. Bonnett's widow, Susan, said flowers could be sent to the funeral home.

Arrangements for a memorial service at Daytona International Speedway were to be announced later.

The family said donations in Bonnett's name could be made to the following charities with which he was associated:

— The National Head Injury Foundation, 1776 Massachusetts Ave., Suite 100, Washington, D.C., 20036-1904.

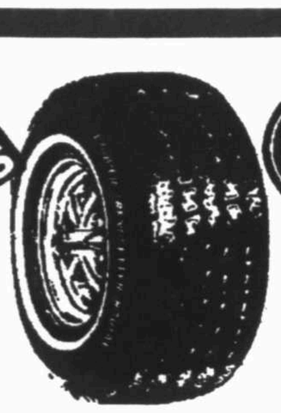

— Big Oak Ranch, Rt. 9, Box 567, Glencoe, Ala., 35905.

— Motor Racing Outreach, Smith Towers Suite 336, Harrisburg, N.C., 28075.

— Children's Hospital Of Birmingham, 1600 7th Ave., South, Birmingham, Ala., 35233.

Alpine skiers in 'sheep' seats

■ Norwegian sheep herds don't seem to mind the Olympic ski jumping venue that has invaded their pasture.

By Fred Bayles
Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — "BEEDA-BEEDA-BEEDA!" Anders Fretheim is calling his Famous Sheep in a high-pitched trill, oblivious to the puzzled skiers swinging by a few yards overhead.

"BEEDA-BEEDA-BEEDA!" he repeats with some affection. But sheep aren't having any. You can't really blame them. Their quiet, pastoral life at the base of Kvitfjell went south a long time ago.

First came the strangers with their construction equipment; then the ski lift towers, the lurid orange safety nets, and the giant clattering scoreboard in the field above their barn.

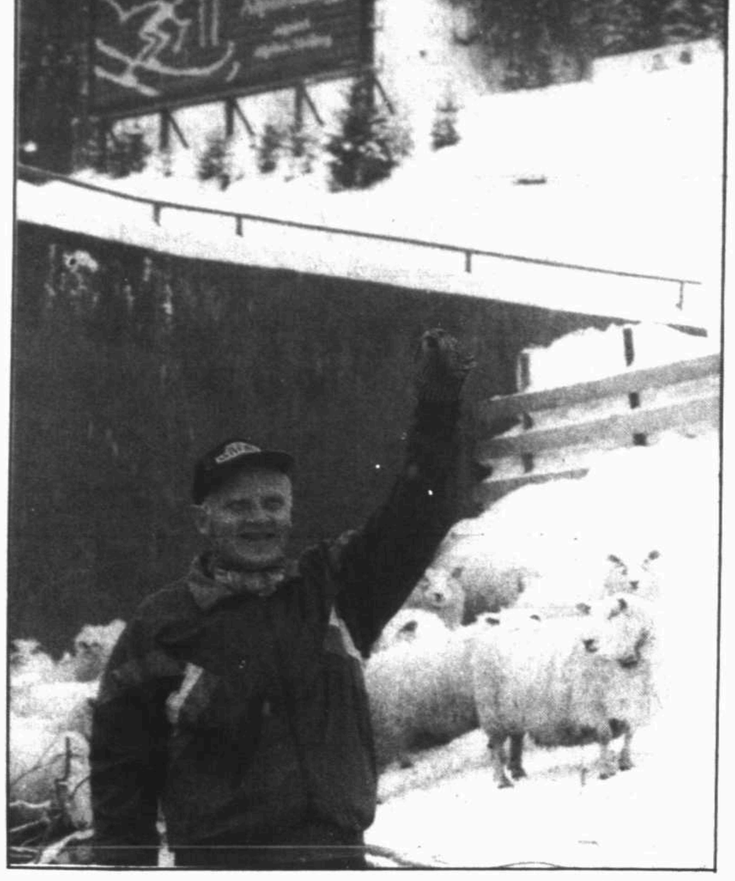

They may have adjusted to the notion of flying humans, but these new interlopers with camera and notebook are the last straw. The sheep scurry to the far corner of the pen.

"The ski don't bother them anymore, but they are very afraid of the pictures," Fretheim explains, then tries again to coax them nearer the fence.

"BEEDA-BEEDA-BEEDA!" he continues to croon as he poses for pictures with his flock.

Get used to it, sheep. Fame is the price you pay for living at the bottom of what will be the world's most important ski run for the next two weeks. And your master owns most of it.

The 3,035-meter run at Kvitfjell has already received high marks from an international band of skiers. When the men's downhill begins on Sunday, it will mark another achievement for designer Bernhard Russi, a victory for the tiny town of Ringebu and a source of entertainment for Fretheim and his sheep.

AP Laserphoto

Norwegian farmer Anders Fretheim stands with his sheep near the alpine course in Kvitfjell, Norway near Lillehammer.

"In the beginning, I protested," said Fretheim, a tall, spare, white- haired man with perpetually amused ice-blue eyes. "But I found many good people were working on it. Now I am glad. I like it."

A decade ago, Kvitfjell was nothing more than a mountain peak rising out of the Lake Mjosa valley. When Lillehammer won the Winter Games in 1988, Hafjell, an aging ski resort some 20 miles to the south, was considered the logical choice for Alpine skiing.

But others questioned that wisdom. One was Russi, a gold medalist and course designer whose work on Olympic runs at Calgary and Albertville received equal amounts of praise and criticism.

Russi was brought to the valley in 1985 with the idea of improving Hafjell. But he was unimpressed with the slow, shallow run. "Is that all you have to show me?" he asked.

Local boosters took him to Ringebu and the Kvitfjell peak. Russi saw possibilities: a steady drop with natural turns and jumps to challenge the technical skills of the best. There would be sections to massage into shape, but most of the run was already there.

"We found a mountain that had everything you needed for a modern downhill," he said.

Russi also found something else.

"I never had such a great enthusiasm behind a project of mine," he said.

For the people of Ringebu, an Olympic ski run was a way out of a slow economic chokehold gripping the region. Mayor Erik Winther, a retired mountain policeman, committed to the project, which began in 1989.

A section of the run bears his name. Wintherhogget — Winther's cut — is one of the more demanding parts.

Key to the project was Fretheim and the land that had been in his family since 1872. He owned 80 percent of the slope. He raised hay and corn in Gudbrandsdalen, the valley needed for the spectator's amphitheater, media headquarters and venue operations.

His first concern was for his family's home, originally built in 1908 and refurbished in 1979. But Olympic officials assured him his farm and home would stand.

The farmer signed on, leasing the slope for 40 years.

For Russi, the notion of sheep sharing his creation affirms his original instincts.

"It is a good sign that the people who were here before the course was built are still here afterward," he said. "It shows the best downhill is the one you don't have to build."

Russia, Finland set up early meeting with wins

■ Hockey Roundup

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Is Russia finally on the ropes? Is Finland ready for another upset? The answer comes Monday when the two teams meet in an early showdown that could turn the Olympic hockey tournament upside down.

"We've got the Russians coming. You just want to beat them so bad," Finland's Janne Ojanen said Saturday.

His first-period goal gave the seventh-seeded Finns a 2-0 lead as they beat the third-seeded Czech Republic 3-1 in the first competition of the Winter Games.

Playing in Gjovik, 28 miles to the south, top-seeded Russia then spent much of the game fending off the attacks of lightly regarded Norway before scoring twice in the last eight minutes for a 5-1 win. It had put 11th-seeded Norway in an early hole by scoring two goals in the first 3:27.

"We were lucky. Our first two goals were easy," Russian assistant coach Igor Dmitriev said. "But even after scoring those two goals, our players were not so sure because it was their first game and they were nervous."

The Soviet Union won seven gold medals in its nine Olympics, including 1984 and 1988. The Unified Team continued that tradition after the nation's breakup by winning in 1992. Now Russia is playing as an independent republic for the first time.

And, for the first time in the history of those teams, the current squad has no Olympic veterans.

"They don't seem to be as sharp as before," said Norway goalie Robert Schistad. "They don't seem to be the machine they were in the '70s, that's for sure."

Wrapping up the first day of 1994 Olympic competition, Germany got third-period goals from Wolfgang Kummer, Benoit Doucet and Thomas Brandel to rally for a 4-3 victory over Austria. The goals by Kummer and Doucet came 22 seconds apart.

The United States, winner of the two gold medals the Soviets missed, begins play Sunday night against France. U.S. coach Tim Taylor announced Saturday that Mike Dunham would start in goal but that backup Garth Snow would play later in the tournament. In Sunday's other games, Sweden, a gold-medal favorite, meets Slovakia and Italy faces Canada.

The top four teams in each six-team group advance to the quarterfinals.

Finland took 24 shots and went ahead 2-0 on first-period goals by Timo Jutila and Ojanen against Petr Briza, the premier goalie of the 1992 Games. After Kamil Kastek scored for the Czechs late in the period, Sami Kapanen connected in the second for Finland.

Norway, playing before a tame home crowd, failed to capitalize on numerous power plays and allowed two shorthanded goals. Just 23 seconds into the game, Ravil Gusmanov scored. Sergei Berezine scored at 3:27 with a Russian in the penalty box.

The crowd, which rang cowbells and occasionally broke into "the wave," helped, said Norway coach Bengt Ohlson, but the two early goals and the power-play problems were critical.

CLINTON: First family makes appearance at Games

ture from their usual appearance near the end of the procession of nations.

The Americans, the largest team at the Games, were sandwiched between two of the smallest — American Samoa and Andorra. Keeping with tradition, Olympic founder Greece was the first nation to enter the stadium.

The experience was thrilling for nordic combined skier Todd Lodwick, a first-time Olympian and one of the youngest members of the team at age 17.

"I saw the '92 Olympics on (television), and it was just incredible. From that point on, I wanted to be in the opening ceremonies. Now that it's a reality, it's just a great experience," he said before marching into the Lysgardsbakkene Ski Jumping Arena, where 40,000 people and a worldwide TV audience watched.

Cross-country skier John Aalberg was at Albertville two years ago, but this Olympics has special meaning to him. Born and raised in Norway, he moved to the United States in 1983 and became a citizen just prior to the '92 Olympics.

"At the opening ceremony in Albertville, my pulse rate ... was about as high as it is when I race," he said. "It's going to be close here."

Aalberg must have felt strange as he walked behind the Stars and Stripes into an arena where nearly everyone was waving Norway's red flag with blue cross. A light snow was falling and the mercury rose to only 14 degrees in the stadium, which overlooks Lillehammer.

"This is an emotional thing for me," he said. "I only hope I can be in control of those emotions."

Two other Olympians, figure skaters Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding, did not take part in the ceremony. Harding has not yet arrived from her hometown of Portland, Ore., where she has gone to court in an effort to save her spot on the Olympic team.

Kerrigan, the victim of an attack that has been linked to Harding, held a news conference hours before the opening ceremony, but did not take part because her coaches wanted her to stay off the right leg struck by an assailant last month.

Saturday morning, a delegation of U.S. athletes met for about an hour at the Olympic Village with Clinton, who headed an official U.S. delegation including former Olympians Florence Griffith Joyner and Tom McMillen.

"We gave her a team jacket," said Donna Weinbrecht, a 1992 gold medalist in freestyle skiing. "She was very approachable, very motherly."

Asked what the first lady told the group of about 50 athletes, Weinbrecht said: "Just that she was going to be our biggest cheerleader."

The American team, decked out in navy blue outfits with red-and-white trim, circled the stadium in rather bedraggled fashion, waving their cowboys hats, snapping pictures and exchanging high fives.

In the stands, a handful of U.S. flags waved as the Americans circled the stadium and took their seats near the Olympic flame.

Two years after Barcelona, Cutting brought along brother Paul for these Games. They showed up at the opening ceremony without tickets.

"I put my finger in the air and said, 'I'll trade anything I have,'" said Lincoln, his hat nearly covered with Olympic pins. "About the only thing I wouldn't trade was my long underwear."

Finally, a stranger walked up and gave them two tickets for free.

GAMES: Sunshine finally visits Lillehammer

(From 1B)

They sure have, for a start.

The sun shone for the first time in a week, and snowflakes floated as 400 local children formed the Olympic rings from five perfect circles at the foot of the jumps. And as the sun set across Lake Mjosa and arctic chill closed in, the stadium came alive with the wonders of winter, Norwegian style.

Two skydivers passed overhead, holding a giant flag, and on the ground actress Liv Ullmann and explorer Thor Heyerdahl introduced the crowd and millions of viewers worldwide to their "family" — six kids from Lillehammer who helped welcome the world to their hometown.

Reindeer pulled sleighs and Nils Aslak Valkepaa sang a joik, a haunting story-song of the Sami people from Lappland. Telemark skiers sprang from the snowbanks to deliver violins and other instruments to musicians, who played the traditional "Devil's Dance."

Dancers, folk singers and Norwegian horses — the Fjording of the northern fjords and Dolahest of the southern valleys — preceded the entrance of Norway's King Harald V and Queen Sonja. The royal couple sat with Hillary Rodham Clinton, America's first lady, and daughter Chelsea, who arrived Friday night for a brief Olympic stay.

Drum dances, folk tunes and, finally, the athletes — some 2,000 of them from a record 66 nations — paraded into the stadium. Greece, the birthplace of the Olympics, came first, and the United States was third, based on alphabetizing in Norwegian.

Cammy Myler, a luge racer from Lake Placid, N.Y., carried the American flag at the front of the U.S. team, clad in long blue down coats and grey cowboy hats. The 200-strong U.S. contingent did not include the two protagonists from what has become the dark shadow of these Games — figure skaters Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding.

Kerrigan, who arrived Wednesday, skipped the ceremonies to protect her right knee, injured in an attack last month, from the cold. Harding, under investigation for her possible part in the attack, is still in the United States.

The Norwegian team closed the parade, getting a standing ovation as cross-country skier Bjorn Daehle carried the red flag with the blue-and-white cross into the arena.

Samaranch noted that Norway was "the home of skiing" and harked back 10 years to Sarajevo, then an Olympic host and now a bombed-out wreck of the city caught in ethnic strife. The IOC has tried to install an "Olympic truce" during the Games, but instead has been answered by some of the most intense shelling of the two-year-old war.

"Please stop fighting. Please stop killing. Drop your guns, please," Samaranch said in an emotional speech. He led the crowd in a moment of silence for the war's victims.

King Harald then declared the Games open.

For 98 years, a torch has been carried into a stadium to ignite the Olympic flame that burns brightly while the youth of the world compete for gold and glory. Never has it arrived in such a way as this.

Atop the 120-kilometer hill, Gruben took the torch, a gracefully bent 5-foot piece of wood, tipped with silver and carrying the fire lighted by the sun in Ancient Olympia, Greece, last month.

Gruben, a last-minute replacement when the original jumper was injured in a practice fall this week, roared down the big hill and soared through the air, the flame held high in his right hand.

As he landed on the flat of the stadium, the crowd cheered, and Grubem handed the torch to Cathrine Nottingnes, a 19-year-old cross-country skier and guide who is almost blind. Nottingnes, who will participate in the Paralympics for handicapped athletes next month, in turned took the torch to Norway's Crown Prince Haakon, who shares his name with one of the Games' human mascots, Haakon and Kristin.

Haakon, the prince, touched the torch to the top of a tall cauldron, and the Olympic flame burst to life.

Vegard Ulvang, a Norwegian icon for his cross-country gold medals and globe-spanning bravery, took the Olympic oath for the athletes. Ulvang had criticized Samaranch and the IOC this week as being backward and undemocratic, but he stood proudly as he recited the pledge to compete "in the true spirit of sportsmanship, for the glory of sport and the honor of our teams."

The two-hour ceremonies wound up with a visit from vetters — trolls and their cousins, the inhabitants of the "underworld" of Norwegian legend.

Enough with the Harding hype already. The Games had begun.

Even before the flame arrived, there was an upset.

Finland, behind the goalkeeping of Jarmo Myllys, beat the Czech Republic 3-1 in the first action of the Games.

Big men grab center of attention in midseason classic

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Only twice in NBA history have centers finished 1-2 in the NBA scoring race. This season, the top four scorers in the league are centers, a quantum switch from just a year ago when Michael Jordan still held sway.

■ TV: NBA All-Star Game, 5 p.m., KTPX (Channel 9).

Shaquille O'Neal, David Robinson, Hakeem Olajuwon and Patrick Ewing are the NBA's top point producers at the All-Star break. They and are probably its biggest names, too, now that Charles Barkley's back and knee injuries have turned the spotlight away from him.

Just a year ago, when Jordan was the leader for the seventh straight season and three of the top five scorers were forwards, O'Neal finished eighth, Robinson ninth, Olajuwon fourth and Ewing sixth.

"With Michael out, it kind of opened things up for us," Robinson said. "But with all the emphasis on defense, the game has slowed down and teams are taking the time to get the ball inside. The centers who are mobile are getting opportunities to score."

Obviously, only two centers can start in Sunday's All-Star game at the Target Center, and Olajuwon and O'Neal got the nod in fan voting.

Publicly, Robinson and Ewing are indifferent to their reserve status, but the days before the All-Star game show they are not about to accept second place to anyone.

Last Sunday against Orlando, Ewing outscored O'Neal 32-22 in an easy New York victory, a game in which the glares between them gave proof to the icy nature of their relationship.

"He feels he's the man now and I feel he's not the man yet," Ewing, 31, said of O'Neal, 21.

Olajuwon got plenty of early season publicity with Houston starting 15-0 and some brilliant performances, including a 37-12 manhandling of Ewing.

Olajuwon is still the most well-rounded center statistically — third in scoring, second in blocked shots, fifth in rebounding and tops among centers in steals — but Robinson has been terrorizing the opposition lately.

On Tuesday, Robinson threatened to become the third player in history with a quadruple-double when he had 31 points, 14 rebounds, 10 assists and seven blocks in San Antonio's victory over Washington. Robinson, who fell two blocks short of a quadruple-double on Jan. 11, leads the NBA with four triple-doubles, a stat that used to be dominated by versatile guards like Magic Johnson.

Robinson's game is thriving next to Dennis Rodman, the league's top rebounder. Rodman claims many of the rebounds that Robinson used to grab, but his presence helps Robinson in other ways.

"Having Dennis here has really helped me," said Robinson, 28, who is second in the NBA in scoring and third in blocked shots, but just 15th in rebounding. "This is the first time since I've been here that I really feel this team is using me the way I'm capable of being used offensively. They're running the offense through me and letting me do what I do best."

With Rodman available to rebound, Robinson is able to roam the perimeter and use his quickness, which is remarkable for a man 7-foot-1.

"When I face up to the basket, it really gives me an advantage over most of the centers," Robinson said. "It's just a matter of mixing in the jumpers and the drives."

While the mobility and versatility of Olajuwon and Robinson dominate the West, the power of O'Neal and Ewing is typical of Eastern Conference basketball, despite the soaring presence of Chicago's Scottie Pippen and Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins.

O'Neal, especially, relies on the power game, as if he is determined to bring down a couple more backboards this season. Even Ewing isn't strong enough to handle O'Neal, who is first in scoring and field-goal percentage, fourth in rebounding and sixth in blocked shots.

"Pat knows the deal," O'Neal said after Sunday's loss. "Pat plays me one-on-one the whole game, and we'll see what happens."

As an outside shooter, however, O'Neal isn't even in the same book, much less on the same page, as Ewing, who increasingly is relying on his outside shooting skills, which most people had no idea existed when he came out of Georgetown.

"Right now, Patrick has the outside game Shaquille doesn't have," Orlando coach Brian Hill conceded. "They're both outstanding players, and I'm sure Patrick feels slighted about Shaq starting the All-Star game. Patrick has a lot of pride."

NBA players ponder free market system

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The NBA Players Association on Saturday drew the battle lines for labor negotations with the league later this year, targeting the salary cap, the college draft and restrictive free agency for destruction.

"We need to restore balance between the ones who own the teams and the players who generate the revenues," union head Charles Grantham said. "How long should the players be held responsible for protecting owners from themselves? It's time to have a free-market system."

Grantham said the union's approach will be twofold: "To give them a fair share of the ever-increasing economic pie and get them the same freedoms as you and I have — to make a free choice about where you work."

Grantham stressed the union won't attempt to claim the players aren't well paid: The average NBA salary is about $1.5 million. But he said salary isn't the only factor.

"Location, where you want your children to go to school and the system a team plays all are important," Grantham said.

The collective bargaining agreement between NBA owners and players expires at the end of this season, and Grantham said he hopes to begin negotiations in March.

Grantham said the situation that existed in 1983, when the current salary cap and revenue-sharing system started, had changed.

"In 1983, the situation faced by the NBA and the players was unique," he said. "The league had a poor public image, four teams were about to go out of business, TV ratings were poor — the NBA was not fantastic. Today, franchises are worth $125 million instead of $10 million to $12 million. Salaries have risen from $300,000 to $1.5 million, but that growth and the overall economic growth is not in balance."

Grantham said the players will never win the public relations battle because the average fan only hears about salaries, not the owners' profit.

"And we have an uphill battle in showing the public it's not only the money, it's the freedom," Grantham said.

Grantham also announced the election of new player officers.

Buck Williams of Portland is the new president, Charles Smith of New York is first vice president and Danny Manning of the Los Angeles Clippers the secretary-treasurer.

Webber leads rookies

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The NBA put its future on display Saturday night, showcasing 16 of its best rookies in an exhibition game that was more often sloppy than spectacular.

■ Rookies Game

Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway, the third pick in last year's draft, scored 22 points on 8-of-9 shooting in a losing cause as his team, the Sensations, fell to top pick Chris Webber and the Phenoms 74-68. Hardaway was selected Most Valuable Player.

Webber, who went to Golden State from Orlando in a draft-day trade, led the winners with 18 points and 10 rebounds. He finished the game with a stunning 360-degree spin and slam dunk.

"I'm lucky, because Chris is a good player," Hardaway said as he accepted his award at midcourt. "I just came to have fun. I come to play every night."

Toni Kukoc, a 1990 pick who signed with Chicago this year after three seasons in Europe, backed Webber with 14 points. Detroit's Lindsey Hunter, the heir apparent to Isiah Thomas, added 11.

Rookie jitters were evident from the start, as alley-oop passes sailed too high, behind-the-back passes missed their targets and dunks banged off the rim.

The rookie game replaced the old-timers game during the NBA's All-Star weekend.

Rider, Price highlight All-Star Saturday

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mark Price wowed the crowd with his shooting accuracy, Isaiah Rider stunned it with a sleight-of-hand dunk and Anfernee Hardaway impressed it in a losing cause Saturday night.

Price won the NBA's 3-point shooting contest with a record 24 points in the final round against Dana Barros, giving the Cleveland sharpshooter his second consecutive long-distance championship.

Rider, the local favorite as a member of the Minnesota Timberwolves, became the fourth rookie to win the NBA slam dunk contest. He was awarded 49 points with his winning dunk in the finals, in which he roared in from the baseline, twirled the ball under his knee, and slammed it through.

"That's the East Bay Funk Dunk," the Oakland, Calif., native said.

Hardaway was the sensation of the first NBA rookie All-Star game, although his team, the Sensations, was defeated 74-68 by the Phenoms in a game full of rookie mistakes — 17 turnovers by each team in a 30-minute game.

Price had the third-best total in the first round of the 3-point contest, but he warmed up in the four-man semifinals, leading with 21 points.

Rider's spectacular effort on the first of his two alloted dunks in the finals put the pressure on the other two finalists, Shawn Kemp and Robert Pack.

Because only the best of two dunks counted in the finals, they had to try something amazing in their last attempts, and both Kemp and Pack missed, clinching the title for Rider, who predicted on draft day last June that he would win the event this year.

Rookies who won the dunk event previously were Spud Webb in 1986, Dee Brown in 1991 and Harold Miner last year.

TEXAS: 'Horns take half-game lead in league pocket pressing and trapping defense.

The Longhorns led by as many as 29 in the second half and kept A&M from getting any closer than 14 in the final four minutes.

"We played well," Penders said. "But we have a long way to go."

Tyler was similarly unsatisfied. "I don't think a statement has been made until we win the ring," he said.

The Aggies (14-6, 7-1) overcame an early 10-point deficit and pulled within 36-30 with 3:28 left in the first half behind the steady scoring of Joe Wilbert, who led the Aggies with 30 points.

But Tony Watson, Terrence Rencher and Tyler all hit 3-pointers in a decisive run before the half. Rencher had nine points in a 12-3 burst that gave Texas a 48-33 halftime lead.

"Texas wore us down and got some spurts that really hurt us," A&M coach Tony Barone said. "We couldn't slow them down. It's simple, they have a very good, pressure-oriented defense.

"The noise level was phenomenal. It was intimidating," he added.

Barone, whose team beat Texas 85-84 in College Station in the league opener Jan. 12, said the Aggies weren't distraught over the loss.

"If you would have asked me before the season if I would have been happy with a split with Texas, I would have kissed you and said, 'Yes,'" Barone said.

Texas continued its bombing in the second half as Roderick Anderson and Tommy Penders, the coach's son, sank shots from behind the arc.

The long-range shots sucked the tiring Aggies' defense outside, making room for some rim-hanging jams by Burditt and Tremaine Wingfield.

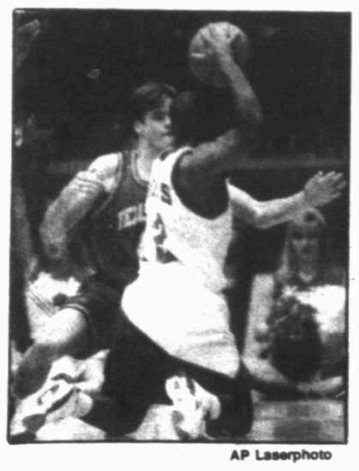

"You could see them lagging and getting tired and then we started making some easy baskets," Anderson said.

As the pummeling continued, the Longhorns began smiling on their dunks and whispering in the ears of their opponents, adding fuel to one of college sports' most fiery rivalries.

Texas finished 9 of 23 from 3-point range and forced the Aggies into 21 turnovers with its full-court pressure.

Wilbert was the bright spot for the Aggies, hitting 10 of 14 field goals 10 of 17 free throws.

"I hope everybody doesn't get down on us and think we are out," Wilbert said. "We have lost before and we will be there at the end. I think the team will take this as a positive and work harder."

Houston snuffs out Tech rally

■ Houston reels off 16-6 run in final minutes to defeat Texas Tech.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Tim Moore had 23 points and eight rebounds Saturday afternoon and the Cougars withstood a second-half rally by Texas Tech for a 76-64 victory.

The Cougars (4-16, 2-7 Southwest Conference) led 38-26 at the half, but Tech (10-10, 5-4) opened the second half with a 17-2 run that put the Red Raiders ahead 43-40 with 15 minutes left.

Moore hit two free throws with 4:21 to play, giving the Cougars the lead for good at 60-58.

Willie Bird, who came off the bench to score nine points, then hit two more free throws for Houston, which closed the game on a 16-6 run.

The Cougars won for the second time in three games after suffering through a school-record 13-game losing streak.

Mark Davis led Tech with 14 points and eight rebounds. Lance Hughes was held to six points, more than 11 below his average.

The game was marred by an altercation between Tech's Jason Sasser and Houston's Jesse Drain.

With 29 seconds left, the two were struggling for a loose ball. Drain was on the ground, and Sasser began kicking him in the chest while referees tried separating them.

Sasser was ejected and, under NCAA rules, he'll be suspended from Wednesday night's game against Southern Methodist in Lubbock.

UTEP rips Cowboys

EL PASO (AP) — Antoine Gillespie scored 24 points and George Banks added 17 points and 11 rebounds, leading Texas-El Paso to a 73-54 victory over Wyoming Saturday night.

Theo Ratliff had 16 to lead Wyoming, which shot 33 percent for the game.

Bears rally from 13 back to win

WACO, Texas (AP) — Aundre Branch and Doug Brandt each scored 19 points and Baylor overcame a 13-point halftime deficit to defeat Texas Christian 82-75 on Saturday.

David Hamilton opened the second half with a pair of 3-pointers, beginning the Bears' comeback from a 46-33 halftime deficit.

The Horned Frogs (6-14, 3-6 Southwest Conference) still held a 65-55 lead with just more than 11 minutes to play when Baylor (14-7, 5-4) turned the game around.

Freshman Jerode Banks scored five points during a 13-0 run that put the Bears ahead 68-65.

TCU regained the lead and held it until Brandt hit two free throws with 2:42 to play.

Hamilton and Banks each had 12 points and 12 rebounds and Willie Sublett scored 13 points.

Byron Waits and Chris Foreman led the Horned Frogs with 18 points apiece. Eric Dailey had 13 points and 10 rebounds and Jentry Moore had 15 points.

Kurt Thomas, who entered the game leading the SWC in scoring with 21.8 points per game, was held to eight points.

Lady Raiders race past Cougs

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Connie Robinson scored 20 points and Michi Atkins added 16, leading No. 7 Texas Tech to an 86-59 victory over Houston on Saturday.

The Lady Raiders (19-3, 7-2 Southwest Conference) led 41-33 at halftime, then put the game away with second-half runs of 17-6 and 10-4.

Robinson and Atkins each grabbed eight rebounds, helping Tech to a 44-29 edge on the boards. Tabitha Truesdale had 12 points and Stephanie Scott added 10.

The Lady Cougars (8-11, 3-5) were led by 15 points from Antoinette Isaac. Michelle Harris had 13 and Pat Luckey added 12 points and seven rebounds.

SMU stuns Texas at buzzer, 74-73

AUSTIN (AP) — Andrea Guizec's layup with 2.8 seconds left Saturday gave Southern Methodist a 74-73 victory over Texas, ending the Lady Mustangs' 31-game losing streak to the Lady Longhorns.

Texas (15-6, 7-2 Southwest Conference) had a chance to avoid its first-ever loss to SMU (14-5, 5-4) when Angie Jo Ogletree went to the free throw line with 17 seconds left and UT ahead 73-72.

But she missed the front end of a one-and-one, and the Lady Mustangs got the rebound to set up Guizec's game-winning shot, which was only her second basket of the game.

Leslie Frazier led SMU with 18 points and Jennifer McLaughlin had 17.

Erica Routt and Amie Smith each had 20 points for Texas. Smith had 15 rebounds and Benita Pollard grabbed 12.

The Lady Longhorns entered this year with a 30-0 record against SMU, and they won the first meeting of the year on Jan. 15.

The closest previous meeting was an 83-81 Texas victory two seasons ago.

UT, the longtime SWC powerhouse, still has never lost to Rice and Texas Christian.

No. 25 Lady Aggies rally to beat Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M's Lisa Branch scored 15 points and Kelly Cerny added 12 as the 25th-ranked Lady Aggies came from behind to beat Rice 66-50 Saturday night.

Rice (10-11, 2-7 Southwest Conference) led 27-26 at the half, but Texas A&M (16-4, 8-1) opened up the second period with a 12-0 run.

The Owls struggled offensively after halftime, hitting just 30 percent of their field goals. The Lady Aggies shot 63 percent in the second period.

Brenda Conaway led Rice with 12 points and 10 rebounds. Lacey Quinn added 11 points, and Tammy McCallum had five steals.

Marianne Miller came off the bench to score 11 points and grab six rebounds for A&M.

Lowry's 32 leads Lady Bears to win

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian's Stephani Gray scored 22 points and had four steals but missed a desperation shot with two seconds left as Baylor held on Saturday for an 86-84 victory.

The Lady Bears (12-9, 3-6 Southwest Conference) led 42-38 at the half, but TCU (5-13, 1-8) got back into the game in the second half.

Mary Lowry led Baylor with 32 points and eight assists. Amber Seaton added 23 points and Halley Bradley had 18.

Donna Krueger scored 18 and had nine rebounds, and Amy Bumsted had 11 points and 12 rebounds for the Lady Frogs.

Heels blow 15-point lead, tumble from No. 1

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — For the sixth straight week, the No. 1 team lost when North Carolina blew a 15-point lead and fell to Georgia Tech 96-89 Saturday.

In the previous five weeks, Duke, UCLA, Kansas, North Carolina and Arkansas had lost as the top-ranked team.

Fred Vinson scored a season-high 26 points and James Forrest added 25 Saturday for Georgia Tech (13-9, 4-7 Atlantic Coast Conference). The Yellow Jackets made a team-record 15-of-29 3-pointers, including eight by Vinson, and won for only the fourth time in 12 games.

This was the third straight time that North Carolina (20-4, 8-3) had lost to Georgia Tech when it was ranked No. 1. The Tar Heels lost to the Yellow Jackets by 20 points a month ago in Atlanta and also in last March's ACC tournament title game.

Georgia Tech, which trailed by 15 in the first half, took the lead for good at 85-84 with 1:54 left on a leaner in the lane by Travis Best as the shot clock expired.

No. 3 Arkansas 99,
No. 20 Florida 87

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Scotty Thurman scored 24 points, Corliss Williamson 20 and Darnell Robinson a career-high 15 as No. 3 Arkansas beat No. 20 Florida in a matchup of the Southeastern Conference leaders.

The game was tied six times in the first half, but Florida (19-4, 9-2) never got even in the final 31 minutes. The Razorbacks (18-2, 8-2) were ahead 13 with 5:47 to play before Dan Cross hit a jumper and a 3-pointer to make it 90-84 with 1:38 left.

Cross scored 29 points and Martti Kuisma contributed 15 for the Gators.

Florida made 20 turnovers, including 13 in the second half. Both teams shot almost 56 percent from the field in the second half.

No. 14 Syracuse 93,
No. 4 Kentucky 85

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Adrian Autry scored 30 points and made a tiebreaking, three-point play with one minute left that sent No. 14 Syracuse past No. 4 Kentucky.

Syracuse (16-4) lost a 14-point lead in the second half, then broke away from an 83-83 tie behind Autry. The Orangemen made 8-of-9 foul shots in the final two minutes.

Kentucky (18-5) lost its second straight game. The Wildcats fell at home to No. 3 Arkansas on Wednesday.

Lawrence Moten and John Wallace added 18 apiece for the Orangemen, who rebounded from a road loss at Georgetown on Monday.

Tony Delk matched his career high with 27 points to lead the Wildcats. Andre Riddick added 15.

No. 5 Kansas 65,
Kansas State 56

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Steve Woodberry keyed a decisive six-minute stretch in the second half as No. 5 Kansas rallied past Kansas State.

■ Top 25 Roundup

It was Kansas' 22nd victory in the last 28 meetings with Kansas State, which beat the Jayhawks 68-64 in Lawrence last month.

Kansas State (14-8, 3-7 Big Eight) took a 41-40 lead on Belvis Noland's bucket with about 13 minutes left, but Woodberry's 3-pointer a moment later launched a 16-2 run by the Jayhawks (21-3, 7-2).

Greg Ostertag, Kansas' 7-foot-2 junior center, began working inside against the shorter Wildcats and hit two straight layups. Kansas State committed five turnovers and fell behind 56-43 on Sean Pearson's 3-pointer with 6:19 to play.

Ostertag finished with 16 points and 10 rebounds while Woodberry had 15 points. Askia Jones had 15 for Kansas State, Anthony Beane had 10 and Deryl Cunningham had 10 points and 12 rebounds.

No. 6 Connecticut 80,
Seton Hall 68

STORRS, Conn. — Donyell Marshall scored 26 points and Ray Allen added 18 as No. 6 Connecticut erased a seven-point halftime deficit to beat slumping Seton Hall.

Marshall converted two three-point plays early in the second half as the Big East-leading Huskies won their second straight this season over the Pirates, who have lost six of their last eight.

Donny Marshall added 15 points for Connecticut and Doron Sheffer scored 12.

Bryan Caver led the Pirates with 20 points. Karnishovas added 16 and Andre Brow 11.

No. 7 Louisville 77, Tulane 73

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Clifford Rozier scored 29 points, including 18 in the second half, as No. 7 Louisville survived a scare to beat Tulane and clinch a tie for the Metro Conference regular-season title.

Rozier made 12 of 14 shots, including his first 11, and grabbed eight rebounds as Louisville (20-2, 9-1) won its 10th straight.

Tulane (12-9, 3-5), which lost for the eighth time in 10 road games, nearly pulled off an upset in the final 90 seconds.

Two straight Louisville turnovers resulted in Carlin Hartman's layup and a tip-in on Kim Lewis' 3-point attempt. That pulled Tulane to 75-73 with 22.3 seconds to go.

Louisville, which escaped a late rally to beat Tulane 83-76 on Jan. 20, was able to work 13 seconds off the clock before DeJuan Wheat was fouled in the backcourt. But Wheat, a 79.5 percent free-throw shooter, made only one of two for a 76-73 lead.

Tulane hurried the ball down the court, but Pointer Williams threw the ball away in front of his own bench with 3.4 seconds to go.

No. 9 UCLA 76, Washington St. 66

LOS ANGELES — Tyus Edney had 20 points and seven assists, and brothers Ed and Charles O'Bannon added 13 points each as No. 9 UCLA overcame a sluggish start to beat Washington State.

Ed O'Bannon, who had a game-high 11 rebounds, scored all but two of his points in the second half. The Bruins took control by outscoring the Cougars 14-2 in a span of 6:11 early in the second half.

UCLA (17-2, 10-1 Pacific-10) trailed 20-10 before moving back into contention, and led 36-34 at halftime. The Bruins trailed 41-40 after WSU's David Vik made a three-point play with 17:30 left in the game. The 14-2 spurt followed, giving UCLA a 54-43 lead, and the Cougars weren't closer than six points after that.

No. 10 Purdue 74, Michigan St. 70

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Glenn Robinson scored 11 of his 23 points in the final 9 minutes, 10 seconds, leading 10th-ranked Purdue to a victory at Michigan State.

Michigan State (14-10, 5-7 Big Ten) led by as many as 15 late in the first half, but couldn't hold off the Boilermakers (20-3, 8-3) in the second half.

The victory was Purdue's 700th in the Big Ten, and also the 2,000th game in the history of the program.

Robinson led Purdue despite making just eight of 20 shots. Waddell added 16 for the Boilermakers, while Respert led all scorers with 24.

Brooks had 14 in the half, but scored just one point and missed all five shots in the second half.

No. 12 Indiana 93, Iowa 91

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Damon Bailey scored 33 points, and a basket by Todd Lindeman and a free throw by Sherron Wilkerson in the closing seconds lifted No. 12 Indiana over Iowa.

The Hoosiers (15-5, 8-3 Big Ten) lost an eight-point lead midway through the second half and fell behind 91-90 on a basket by Kenyon Murray with two minutes to go.

Winters led Iowa with 21 points, while Settles added 17. Evans, who also missed the Michigan game with a dislocated shoulder, backed Bailey with 17 points.

The victory was Indiana's 41st in a row at home, the longest current streak in the nation.

No. 15 Missouri 72,
Oklahoma St. 70

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Freshman Kelly Thames picked up a loose ball and scored over 7-foot Bryant Reeves with 2.1 seconds to go as No. 15 Missouri barely avoided a second-half collapse and remained unbeaten in the Big Eight with a victory over Oklahoma State.

Missouri is 18-2 overall and has a 9-0 conference record for the first time since 1922, when it was a member of the Missouri Valley. The Tigers have beaten 13 consecutive Big Eight opponents and stretched their home winning streak over Oklahoma State (16-7, 5-3) to 17 in a row.

Memphis St. 58,
No. 19 Alabama-Birmingham 53

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — David Vaughn scored 14 points, including two free throws with 12 seconds left, to lead Memphis State to a upset victory over No. 19 Alabama-Birmingham.

Cedric Henderson led Tiger scorers with 16 points and also grabbed nine rebounds.

No. 23 Minnesota 109,
No. 21 Wisconsin 78

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin coach Stu Jackson was right. Minnesota wasn't 37 points better than his Badgers. On Saturday, they were only 31 points better.

Voshon Lenard's 22 points led six Golden Gophers in double figures as No. 23 Minnesota routed the shorthanded and 21st-ranked Badgers, sweeping the season series against their bitter rival by a total of 68 points.

Randy Carter added 21 points for Minnesota, which raced to a 52-32 halftime lead on the strength of 13 Wisconsin turnovers and 10 steals in the first half alone.

Northwestern 79,
No. 24 Illinois 68

EVANSTON, Ill. — Ricky Byrdsong wasn't there and the Northwestern Wildcats didn't miss their coach one bit.

Kevin Rankin and Patrick Baldwin scored 21 points each, and the emotional Wildcats upset No. 24 Illinois 79-68 to end a nine-game losing streak.

Byrdsong took a leave of absence on Monday, two days after his bizarre behavior during a game at Minnesota when he wandered into the stands slapping hands with fans .

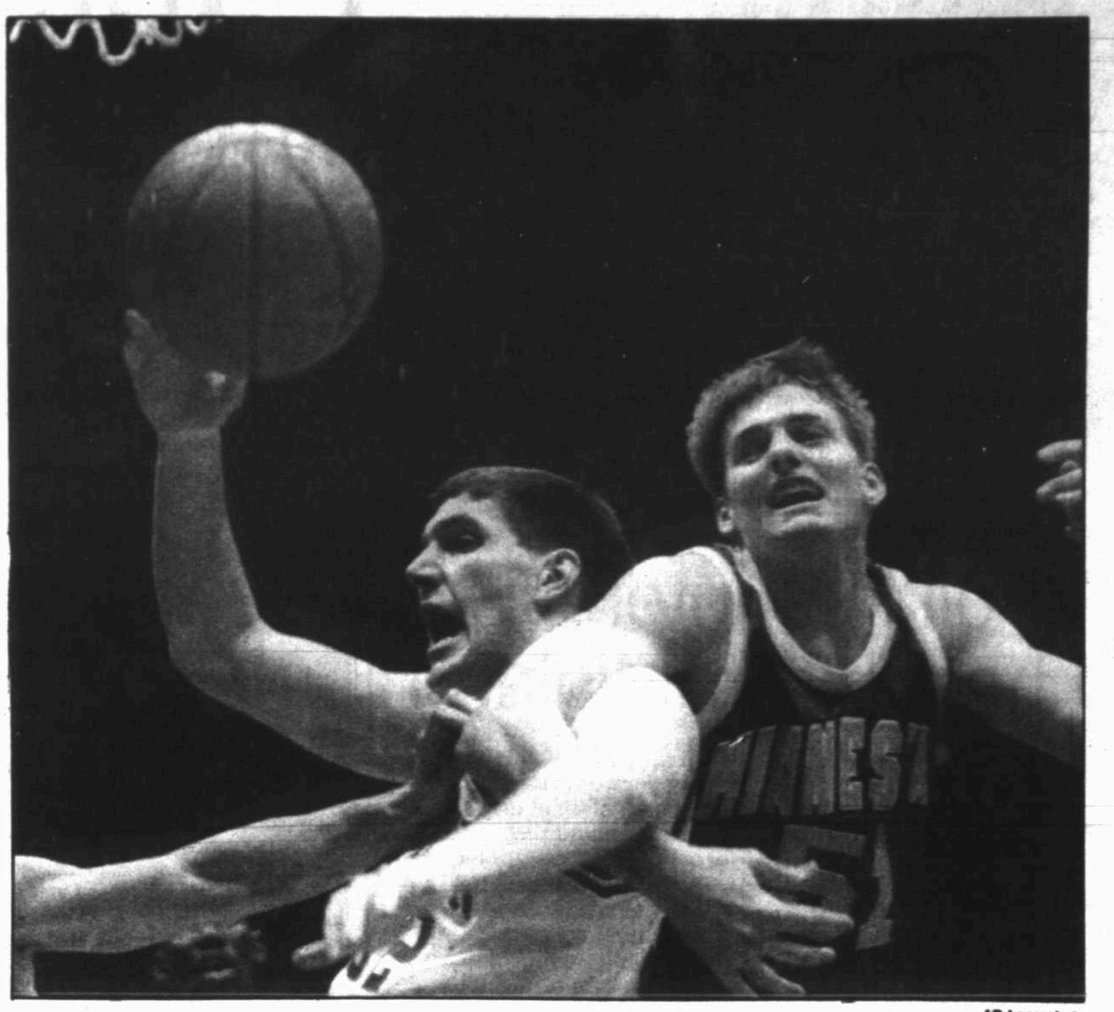

The victory marked the first time in a decade that Northwestern (now 10-9) has won at least 10 games in a season.

George Washington 93,
No. 25 Xavier, Ohio 92, 2 OT

CINCINNATI — Vaughn Jones drove the length of the court and scored on a layup with 0.8 seconds left in the second overtime, giving George Washington a win over No. 25 Xavier of Ohio.

Xavier (16-4) took a 92-91 lead on Jeff Massey's four-point play with seven seconds left.

George Washington won for just the second time in eight road games and gave Xavier it's second loss in its last three games.

Political interest healthy in Midland

Midland voters are fortunate in that they will get to choose between candidates for a number of local elective offices in the March 8 primary election. Those offices include Midland County judge, the judgeship of the county court at law No 2, and county commissioner of both precincts 2 and 4.

While individual voters will make their own determination of the qualifications of the various candidates for the offices — as they should — it speaks well of this community that four county level positions feature contested races this year. And this isn't the only occasion on which local voters have had such a choice; in fact, in recent years it has occurred time after time. Sure there are some local offices which draw only one candidate, but typically there are several contested races — and that is good.

For one matter, it has become obvious to many election analysts that political races create interest for voters and, generally, attract more voters to the polls during voting periods than does a lengthy slate of unopposed candidates.

For another, it focuses attention on problems that may exist in various departments of county government, and forces candidates and officeholders to really face those problems and offer concrete proposals for addressing them rather than merely letting the problem continue.

Yet another reason is that it makes the candidates function in a competitive situation which often gives prospective voters better insight into how they might function under the stress of political service. In effect, it can show the voters what the candidates are made of.

And while state and national offices are critical to the operation of our government and should get equal interest from the voters, there are none more important than local elective offices.

We're glad to see the kind of interest shown in local governmental offices. It's a healthy sign.

Stick-in-mud Greenspan spoils economic 'party'

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan gave the nation quite a shock last week when he said the time had come to raise interest rates.

Low interest rates have fed the economic recovery. With mortgage rates at their lowest in decades, many Americans refinanced their homes and pocketed the extra money. The money that low interest rates pumped into the economy helped push up consumer spending.

But as has been said many times, the role of the Federal Reserve is to take away the punch bowl before the party gets out of hand. It's a dour job, but someone has to do it. . . .

By raising interest rates, Greenspan hopes to moderate economic growth. Slower, more efficient economic growth means that the inevitable bust that follows the boom should be less painful. Going back to the punch bowl analogy, Greenspan is trying to make sure everyone has a good time at the party without suffering a hangover in the morning.

So when interest rates start climbing in the next few months, don't be worried. It's only our friendly, neighborhood stick-in-the-mud, Alan Greenspan, making sure we don't regret today's fun tomorrow.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Feb. 13, the 44th day of 1994. There are 321 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 13, 1935, a jury in Flemington, N.J., found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of first-degree murder in the kidnapping and death of the infant son of aviator Charles and Anne Lindbergh. Hauptmann was later executed.

On this date:

In 1542, the fifth wife of England's King Henry VIII, Catherine Howard, was executed for adultery.

In 1633, Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei arrived in Rome for trial before the Inquisition.

In 1635, the oldest public school in the United States, the Boston Public Latin School, was founded.

In 1914, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, known as ASCAP, was founded in New York.

In 1920, the League of Nations recognized the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland.

In 1945, during World War II, the Soviets captured Budapest, Hungary, from the Germans after a 50-day siege.

In 1945, Allied bombing raids began against the German city of Dresden.

In 1960, France exploded its first atomic bomb, in the Sahara Desert.

In 1980, opening ceremonies were held in Lake Placid, N.Y., for the 13th Winter Olympics.

In 1988, the 15th Winter Olympics opened in Calgary, Canada.

In 1990, the United States and its European allies forged agreement with the Soviet Union and East Germany during a conference in Ottawa on a two-stage formula to reunite Germany.

Ten years ago: Konstantin Chernenko was chosen to be general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee, succeeding the late Yuri Andropov. Debbie Armstrong won the first U.S. gold medal of the Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, in the women's giant slalom.

Five years ago: The judge in the Iran-Contra trial of Oliver North sent the jury home amid a continuing disagreement between the prosecution and defense over protecting classified materials.

Budget amendment goes down to wire

WASHINGTON — Twice in the last 18 months, Bill Clinton has dodged the thorny issue of the constitutional amendment to balance the budget. Both times, cold water was splashed on the idea before he could endorse one of the emptiest political gimmicks in recent times.

Anderson

First, in the midst of the presidential campaign, Clinton was sending strong hints that he might support a version of the politically popular amendment. But then the candidate got a phone call from the powerful chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a sworn enemy of the amendment.

Byrd's concern was that Clinton, like so many members of Congress, would arrive in Washington already locked in to supporting the amendment, oblivious to the evils of how it could encumber a president.

Last fall, Clinton's flirtation with the amendment flared again, according to White House sources. Budget Director Leon Panetta thought Clinton was being won over by pro-amendment advocates inside the administration. So Panetta phoned congressional allies asking them to lobby Clinton against the amendment. Late last year, Clinton finally wrote a letter rejecting the proposal.

The choice may have been awkward, but the amendment has lots of political allure. Basically, it's a free lunch for politicians who fancy themselves fiscal conservatives, but spend money like drunken sailors on port call. The 308-word-balanced-budget amendment has a truth-in-advertising problem, because it doesn't cut a dime of spending nor does it promise a balanced budget probable.

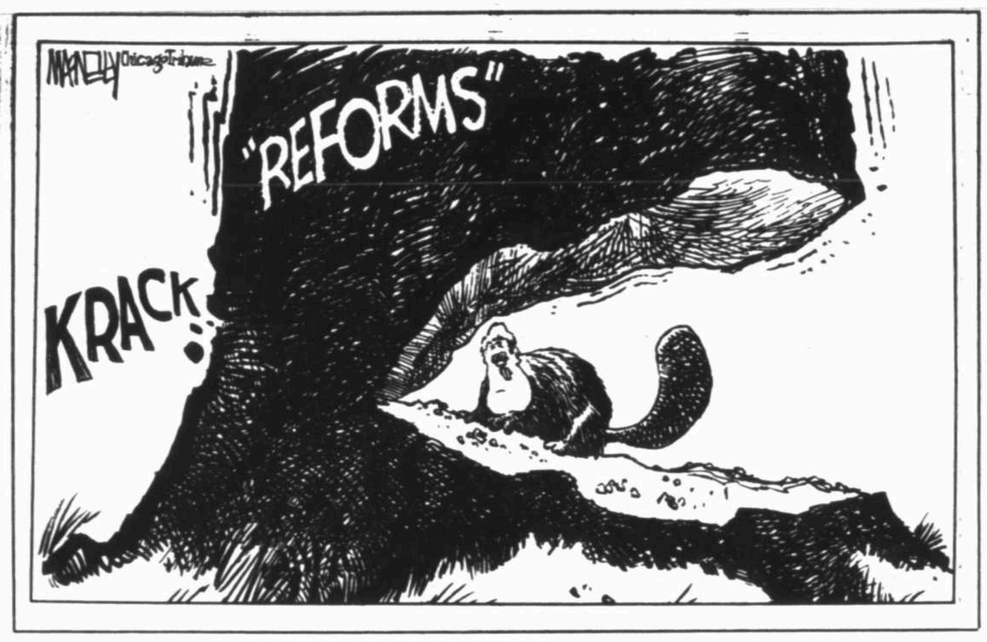

Under the amendment, it would take a three-fifths vote, instead of simple majority, of both houses to pass a deficit budget. Moreover, the formulation of balanced budgets would be based on notoriously unreliable estimates of future revenues and spending.

Supporters from both sides of the political aisle have their own cynical agendas. Liberal supporters of the amendment believe it will strengthen their hand for higher taxes and deeper Pentagon cuts. Conservatives calculate that the brunt would be borne by cuts in social spending. The resulting stalemates would give gridlock a good name, as more and more political disputes would be settled by the courts. This week, the battle heads for a climax as Byrd kicks off three days of hearings designed to puncture the pro-amendment arguments. Byrd must stop Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who leads the pro-amendment forces, and his cohorts from getting two-thirds of the Senate vote. As it stands they may be only one or two votes shy. If it passes, it would then require approval by 38 states, which many think is a sure thing. The fact it's an election year makes it tougher for Byrd.

"It's a popular thing out there with people. All senators know the polls show an overwhelming support for the balanced budget," Byrd told us. "What the polls don't ask are the hard questions. Are you willing to have your taxes raised? Are you willing to have your Social Security payments reduced? Are you willing to have your Medicare cut?"

Byrd draws his arguments from reading the Founding Fathers, not the latest focus group reports. An amendment, he predicts, will lead to an imperial president who can extort concessions from senators on a range of issues through new powers of the purse.

Supporters try to breathe life into ERA

WASHINGTON — Were Madison alive he would die of embarrassment about what his state is considering doing to his Constitution.

Will

In Richmond and some other state capitals, women's groups are attempting to resuscitate the Equal Rights Amendment. A Virginia legislative committee has refused summarily to dismiss, with the derision it deserves, the pretense that the ERA is still alive and can be ratified. The committee will consider the matter next year. By then perhaps the legislators will have refreshed their memories regarding the ERA and constitutional values.

On March 22, 1972, Congress sent the ERA to the states to be ratified or rejected by March 22, 1979. As has been customary since the 18th Amendment, Congress stipulated a seven-year period of deliberation in order to ensure that ratification would reflect a "contemporaneous" consensus of three-fourths of the states. As one of the ERA's principal Senate supporters said in 1972, if 38 states did not ratify in seven years, "we must begin the entire process once again." ERA supporters in Congress have implicitly conceded that point by regularly reintroducing the ERA, which no longer commands sufficient support even to get out of Congress.

State legislatures responded to the ERA cavalierly, in several senses. Most of the 22 states that rushed to ratify in 1972 — 20 in three months — dispensed with hearings. Hawaii ratified it the day Congress passed it. Nebraska, hot to be second, did it improperly and had to do it again. Then states began to have second — actually, first — thoughts, and the ERA's surge stalled.

As the seven-year deadline neared, ERA supporters sought and got unequal treatment: Congress chivalrously extended the deadline to 1982, And, stacking the deck, Congress extended it only for states that had not ratified, in order to prevent any state from rescinding its ratification. This extension, which changed ratification rules after some states had rendered decisions, was declared unconstitutional by the only court to rule on it.

Seventeen years ago, in January 1977, four years and ten months after the ERA was sent to the states, Indiana became the last state to ratify it. Indiana was the 35th state, so ERA supporters say that if the ratification process can be declared to be continuing, they are just three votes from victory.

However, five states, including pell-mell Nebraska, rescinded their ratifications before the 1979 deadline passed. Surely states had a right to reconsider while the amendment was still a live issue.

The extremists trying to breathe life back into the ERA make two arguments, the first of which is weak and the second weaker still. The first is that a state's ratification of an amendment is a sacramental act, impervious to attempts to rescind it. The second is the 27th Amendment, which Madison wrote.

That amendment, limiting increases in the compensation of members of Congress, suddenly was brought back to life by the anti-Congress fever of 1992, when after 203 years, a 38th state ratified it. However, this episode does not vindicate today's ERA supporters because Madison's Congress did not attach a deadline to deliberations about Madison's amendment.

Today, nearly 22 years after Congress passed the ERA with a deliberation deadline, nearly 15 years after that deadline passed, and nearly 12 years after the extended deadline passed, ERA supporters want Congress to repeal the original deadline, rewriting the rules of the process a generation after it began. It is fitting that ERA supporters are contemptuous of constitutional process: their amendment radiates impatience with Democracy. The ERA says: "Equal rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." What would it do? No one knows.

Vogue of sea change makes it water-logged

'I've just come from a Management Meeting," said one of America's top corporate executives, urgency in her voice. "After the third time somebody used sea change, the publisher wanted to know, 'Where the hell does sea change come from, and how does it differ from any other change?' "

Safire

Was I ready for that! Despite my having set the world straight on this a few years back, the sea-change file was bulging: Norman Lear "criticized the press," a recent New York Times report noted, "for ignoring a sea change in attitudes." Rep. Charles Schumer, the omnipresent Brooklyn Democrat, said of a retailer's decision to halt gun sales, "When Wal-Mart, the family store of Middle America, does this, you know there's a sea change under way in the gun-selling business." Jacques Barzun, a member of Olbom — On Language's Board of Octogenarian Mentors — had already alerted me to the torrent of usages of this hoary term, suggesting it was time to brush up my Shakespeare.

"Full fathom five thy father lies," I began the quotation to my caller. "Of his bones are coral made: /Those are pearls that were his eyes: /Nothing of him that doth fade,/But doth suffer a sea-change/Into something rich and strange."

Ariel, the sprite, is singing of the supposed drowning of King Alonso in "The Tempest." Barzun adds, "A sea change is a miraculous, unexpected transformation, not just any change."

Members of the Gotcha! Gang will surely point out that the Bard erred in "Of his bones are coral made," preferring "is coral made"; immortal writers have to take this carping all the time. Others will note the Shakespearean hyphen — sea-change — that has been worn away by the tides of usage.

Four centuries ago, the phrase had freshness, but its recent vogue has made it waterlogged. If every slight shift, permutation or switcheroo is called a sea change, what's left to describe major changes? Give a thought to revolution or metamorphosis for a change.

We have slipped seamlessly into the analysis of vogue words. (Seams, madam? Nay, seamless used to mainly modify hose, but now the only seam to be worked is the narrow area between two zones in a football defense; this has left seamless to be used by a generation of writers who eschew smooth.)

Notice how everybody who used to talk about the politics of (whatever) is now profoundly discussing the culture of (whatever)?

When Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders blasted the sale of toy guns as contributing to the culture of violence, a columnist, Colin Campbell, exploded at the voguishness of it all, citing book titles from Lewis Mumford's 1938 "The Culture of Cities" — a usage then fresh and appropriate — to the recent "The Culture of Addiction" and "The Culture of Time and Space."

"They're not talking about the practical cultivation of organisms (the culture of oysters)," he wrote in The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, "or of real societies (the culture of ancient Egypt). The new cliche refers instead to subgroups, problems, values, jobs, notions and statistical abstractions as if they were species, tribes and nations. The implication is that they have their own rules, languages, etc."

I would argue (and if I would, then why don't I?) — OK, I argue that when a subgroup like English teachers or beauty parlor operators or the Mafia has an inside lingo, a set of agreed-upon moorings and a secret handshake, that can be defined as a culture. It describes, as Campbell notes, a closed system. But the phrase is getting abused by the culture of title-writers.

Government should limit involvement in our lives

There will be a Second Amendment support rally. Why?

Because none of the media, those Watchdogs of Liberty, have asked our federal government, "Where did you get the idea that you have the authority in a free society to mandate what kind or how many guns a free nonviolent person may own and possess, what they must teach or allow to be taught to their children, whether their denomination or religion is a "cult" or not, or what kind of health care they must have?"

In a free society, only when there is a threat to our borders or damage to an unwilling party or innocent child is there a crime and a need for government to become involved in our lives. In a free society, only after a jury has decided in court on (1) the justice of the law the defendant is charged under and (2) the facts as presented (should they decide to enforce the law) can anyone be guilty of anything. Recent actions by our government's agents attempting to serve warrants indicate a willingness to assume guilt before it is proven and to wave guns around before anyone acts violently towards them (which encourages people to think their lives are in danger and shoot back).

On Feb. 21, Presidents' Day, in front of the Midland County Courthouse at noon, there will be a Second Amendment support rally around the Statue of Liberty. If you are bothered by the assault on law-abiding citizens' gun ownership and the threat to our government's recognition of our unalienable right to own the tools necessary to defend ourselves and our neighbors, come and be seen and/or heard. Only you, the American citizen and patriot, the concerned cop, the other hard-working, unsung heroes of America, can save this country from going the way of all the others. Come hear the facts about gun ownership instead of the outright lies reported as truths without substantiation by the media.

The continued criminalization of various nonviolent groups of our society by our government is disturbing. It is time we stood up together to resist this trend. Members of the N.R.A., Libertarians, United We Stand'ers, Republicans and Democrats, freedom lovers of all walks of life in America are encouraged to appear. I hope to see you there.

U.N., allies fail to deal with disaster in Bosnia

This past Saturday (Feb. 5), 68 persons were killed and 200 injured following a mortar attack by the Bosnian Serbs on a marketplace in Sarajevo. The United Nations and the international community have shown incredible timidity, hesitancy, and equivocality in the face of the most brutal attack on Sarajevo since the war of agression by Serbia against Bosnia-Herzegovina began 22 months ago.

While the world has hidden behind humanitarian assistance, applied politically ineffective sanctions against Serbia and Montenegro and instituted an unjust arms embargo against all states of the former Yugoslavia, including Bosnia and Croatia, the U.N. and our allies have failed to deal with the root cause of this disaster. The farce being played out on the international stage as the world watches in horror will go down in history as the worst leadership failure since before World War II.

The United Nations and its allies will live to regret such cowardice as the aggression against Bosnia and Croatia expands to the entire Balkan region. Then, there will be no other option to hide behind.

Best cancer treatment, personnel are in Midland

I am compelled to comment on an article in the Jan. 14 Reporter-Telegram. Dr. Charles Le Maistre was in Midland to address a group of cancer survivors who had been treated at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston. Dr. Le Maistre is president of the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. In the article, Dr. Le Maistre is quoted as saying that our local oncologists "do as much as they can with the resources that are available to them."

My wife was diagnosed with cancer of the liver, lung and brain in September 1991.

Her initial treatment and further diagnosis were at the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston. She was both an out-patient and in-patient for these procedures for two weeks. Upon our return to Midland, she was a patient of Texas Oncology, Memorial Hospital and the Allison Cancer Center for the next 16 months. The doctors at Texas Oncology proved to be highly skilled, informed of the latest cancer treatment and truly gifted physicians. Memorial Hospital and the Allison Cancer Center had the latest/best machinery and equipment for cancer treatment. The nursing and ancillary personnel were thoroughly trained, exceptionally qualified and the most concerned, compassionate people I have encountered in my 27 years as a health-care professional.

I am convinced the best treatment for cancer is right here in Midland. We have the facilities, the equipment and the medical people to give the best care available. We are truly fortunate in this regard!

Daughters have right to same access as sons

This is in reply to a letter published in your Jan. 31 issue, titled "People should not force their rights on others."

It is incredulous, as we approach the 21st century, that any person can believe it is a man's right to attend a publicly funded university and not a woman's right. Ms. Shannon Faulkner's application for admission to the state supported Citadel was accepted. She met the university's academic standards and qualifications for enrollment. It was only when university admissions realized she was a woman, not a man, that her enrollment was denied. How blatantly discriminatory!

It is outrageous that any university, supported by state taxes, denies women the right to attend. Fifty percent of the work force tax base supporting that university are women. Why shouldn't their daughters and granddaughters be afforded the same access and opportunity as any male child? It is their right, and when that doesn't occur as a matter of policy, it is their right to seek relief through the court system.

Last Sunday's letter states that The Citadel should remain "the last bastion of a male-dominated society." No problem . . . quit relying on state funding. Change to a private university supported by private-sector funding.

Hypocrisy of station, some groups remains amazing

A fanatical right-wing movement calls KMID-TV because they have decided that "NYPD Blue" is inappropriate programming for my television, and poof, the program director censors the show.

Dismembered babies are graphically shown at all times during the day and night to promote a radical political candidate, but now the station's hands are tied and they are required by law to keep the ads on the air.

I have a choice to turn my television set off if I choose not to watch an anti-abortion commercial, but the hypocrisy of KMID-TV and the morality watchdogs continues to amaze me.

Thanks go to woman who helped accident victim

I would like to say thank you to the lady who stayed by my side when I was in a car accident, Jan. 26. It took place on Michigan Avenue and G Street. I never got her name. She called a few friends for me, letting them know what had happened. She stayed with me until the paramedics got there.

Like the new song by Alabama, "Angels Among Us," she is my guardian angel. And I am truly grateful to her.

Economic development's results prove minuscule

I was very surprised and disappointed to learn in Edna Walger's letter in your newspaper of Feb. 6 that Midland city tax money is indeed being used to fund Forward Midland, and in turn the Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance and other projects of "economic development." This is especially outrageous because many times in the past we have been assured that public funds have not been used for these pet projects of many civic leaders of our community. It appears to me that we have been deliberately misled or even lied to regarding the uses of our tax monies, and I sincerely thank Mrs. Walger for uncovering and reporting this hoax.

Public funds have been extorted from the city for years in the name of "economic development," the most popular buzz phrase used by our current politicians, office seekers, merchants, bankers, chambers of commerce, liberal do-gooders, and other self-serving individuals hoping to profit at the expense of the hard-working taxpayer. They all use this enchanting phrase frequently; they campaign with it, they have been known to create jobs at airports for it, and unfortunately they squander a great deal of our money on it! The results of all the "economic development" efforts in Midland have proved to be minuscule at best, with no real reason to hope for improvement in the future until real economic conditions improve throughout Texas and the United States.

Frankly, "economic development" and a resulting larger town are not necessarily good for everybody in a community. Sure, the merchants, bankers, land speculators and special-interest groups make a lot more money, but the general population is usually stuck with overburdened public facilities, congested roads and traffic conditions, the need for more police, firemen, city employees and officials, more crime, and generally a less desirable way of life. Guess who must pay an inordinate share of the increasing taxes? Yes, the small taxpayer!

Wouldn't it be reasonable to get the city out of the "economic development" business and let a group supported by merchants and special interests take care of it? Wouldn't it be nice to be able to vote for a local politician or office seeker who advocates ending all city financial support to our numerous chambers of commerce, overturning the usurious hotel-motel tax, eliminating all political pay-off jobs and contracts, leaving a perfectly good airport terminal alone, and reducing your taxes to the extent of all these unsavory items now or soon to be found in the city budget? Has anyone ever seen a government of any sort spend itself into prosperity with taxpayers' money? If so, please let me know!

No price can match value of teens' service, help

I am writing this letter in regard to the Teen Court in Midland.

In January 1991, my daughter and her family were transferred to Boston, leaving me in a quandary as to whom to ask for some help. At that same time, my husband had a serious illness. It was suggested to me by my friend, Connie Glover, that I call Mary Beck at Teen Court to seek their help. They needed to get their community service hours and I needed their assistance.

It was instant "teamwork!" These teens do reading, help with braille-labeling groceries, simple mending, record on tape the material I want to keep and best of all it is like having "substitute grandchildren." Each and every one of the ones assigned to me have been life savers in my time of desperation and I hope to continue having them "on my team." There could be no price placed on the value of the services they have rendered to me.

Actual deficit will be higher than one Clinton promised

The Feb. 8 headline proclaimed a tough no-frills budget from President Clinton, but was it correct?

First, it represents a modest 2.3 percent increase from the 1994 budget. But where does the government make its money? They produce zero income so all of its revenue must come from taxes, and the big winner in 1995 is cigarettes.

Second, the article did not tell of the $100 billion taken from Social Security to pay into the general budget, but have no fear — Social Security will receive a $100 billion IOU. And imagine this — an IOU does not count as part of the deficit. Gee, if an IOU works to erase deficits, why not just write a $289 billion IOU to the general budget and say the budget is balanced? I wonder if I can do that to Diners Club.

Third, the budget did not show the proposed health-care plan, which will add $76 billion to the deficit over five years or about $15 billion per year. These figures come from the Congressional Budget Office, which also recommends that it be included in the budget and not off budget (i.e., ignore the problem) as Clinton wanted. By being on budget this will also redefine Clinton's premiums to what they really are, new taxes. One last thought on health care: Clinton stated that it is designed to reduce the power of the big insurance companies and how does he propose to reduce the power of competing insurance companies? Give it all to the government?

In summary, the actual deficit will be $304 billion, not the $176 billion reported and guaranteed by Bill Clinton.

Assisted-suicide opponents should consider situation

Dr. Jack Kevorkian, the "suicide doctor," has been discussed by the press and the American people, criticized by some, praised by others, condemned and even jailed for his practice of helping terminally ill patients end their lives. About a month ago, Kevorkian even went on a hunger strike while he was in jail, becoming very frail — all to defend his conviction that doctor-assisted suicide of terminally-ill patients is legitimate.

Recently, Pastor Thomas Egglebeen of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Levonia, Mich., invited Dr. Kevorkian to speak at his church. Pastor Egglebeen pointed out that the belief of many Christians that suicide is a mortal sin is a fallacy borne of politics instead of theology. "There are six or seven incidents in Scripture where a suicide is reported, and it's treated kindly and tragically. In no way at all is the person condemned," remarked Pastor Egglebeen.

Between services, Kevorkian spoke of the right "not to suffer" and condemned the "tyrants" who passed Michigan's law banning assisted suicide. It's almost an insult to put this on the ballot. It's an insult to human reason. Why? Because that right is there," asserted Kevorkian, who has been present at the deaths of 20 people since 1990.

To those who are adamantly opposed to doctor-assisted suicides in cases of terminal illnesses, I ask, what would you want to do if you were terminally ill, the doctors could do no more for you, your body was racked with excruciating pain all over, to the extent that your life had become a living hell, and the cost of merely keeping you barely alive was bankrupting your family? Would you want to continue in those circumstances? I am not referring to every little thing that could happen to a person, but to illnesses that were hopeless. I think that most of us would answer a resounding "no" to this question. However, I think each of us should seriously ponder what we would do if we were faced with this situation.

Resident doesn't want taxes raised by Brooks

I live in the Greenwood school district, and I pay school tax to Greenwood school.

John Brooks has been on the Greenwood School Board for 20 years, and he has gotten our school taxes up as high as they will go without getting permission from the state to raise them more. So I don't want Brooks as county commissioner to raise my county taxes as high as they will go!

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

State senators' ugly smear of judge exposes judicial irony

Every now and then, an adversary in a debate will make such a witless and clumsy broadside that the truth of the opposing argument becomes astonishingly obvious.

In the debate about judicial selection in Texas, four state senators have — unintentionally and ironically — made a marvelously compelling case that the election of judges in raw, bare-knuckles, money-grubbing partisan slugfests compromises public confidence in the independence and integrity of our courts.

Democratic Sens. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin, Carl Parker of Port Arthur and Greg Luna of San Antonio have launched a snarling attack — with the help of other party loyalists — against Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, elected as a Democrat.

In a petulant letter to "Fellow Democrats," the four accuse Gonzalez of being "an embarrassment to the Democratic Party. His extremist views and alliance with the Republican activists on the Texas Supreme Court have had dire consequences for the people of Texas."

For most of three single-spaced pages, the vitriol spews out against Gonzalez's "alliance with Republican partisans to assist the Republican Party regardless of sound legal principles of Democratic loyalty."

I promise, that's what the letter really said: "sound legal principles of Democratic loyalty." Perhaps the implication is that Republican loyalty, or any other party loyalty, is not within sound legal principles and therefore arguably felonious. No one wants a felonious judge, right?

Among other ad hominems, the quartet railed against Gonzalez for his vote in a case that led to the redrawing of senatorial district lines and the subsequent defeat of four Democratic senators, including two Hispanics.

Alas, the reasoning behind the sound legal principles of Democratic loyalty comes into focus. As Mr. Rogers might say: Can you spell "smear," boys and girls? Sure.

Yet there is beautiful irony in this ugly affair. Three of the four senators in attack mode are Hispanic, and they are adamant about removing the only Hispanic judge with statewide jurisdiction — and an excellent judge in the bargain.

They are attacking him because of alleged "Republican" tendencies — the very grounds that led the U.S. Supreme Court to accept the evidence that Hispanics and other minorities in increasingly Republican Texas are less represented on courts because of party affiliation rather than patterns of racial prejudice.

In Tarrant County, interestingly enough, incumbent Hispanic Judge Pete Perez of the 372nd District Court and African-American Louis Sturns — himself a former trial judge, a former member of the Court of Criminal Appeals and now a candidate for the 371st District Court — are Republicans.

To meet the self-effacing, mild-mannered, decent and eminently respected Raul Gonzalez is to ask immediately what really caused the flecks of foam to gather at the mouths of the distinguished senators. To consider the subject of the letter is to ask: "What in the name of James Madison does party affiliation have to do with being a judge?"

Forcing judges to run on partisan ballots — and to raise the money for those campaigns from lawyers and others with a direct interest in the outcome of court rulings — assures that they be politicians first and foremost. Their independence, impartiality and integrity grow suspect in direct proportion to money donated by special interests.

The representative branch of government in which the irate senators toil is the familiar ground on which they commit partisan savagery against political opponents. Their constitutional role was designed to be embroiled in the rough-and-tumble of politics.

The judiciary, however, performs a different public function. It is a fundamentally different institution, essentially deliberative in its role of honing legal disputes against the whetstone of constitutional, statutory and common law. Judges should be above contending interests, beholden to no faction and representative of no party. They must be free to render rulings that, no matter how politically unpopular, sustain the primacy and equity of the law.

By their unfortunate smear, the senators in their letter practice just the kind of political intimidation that should not intrude upon the judicial process. Any judge driven by fear of political reprisal will soon refrain from being a judge and become, rather, a weathervane of political caprice.

Election of judges invites just such abuses, and for years I have advocated merit appointment of judges to help insulate the judiciary from the pernicious influences of the current system.

It's not an original idea, after all. No less a historic figure than Alexis de Tocqueville wrote in 1835 in his "Democracy in America": "I am aware of a hidden tendency in the United States leading the people to diminish judicial power; under most of the state constitutions the government can, at the request of both houses, remove a judge from office. Under some constitutions the "judges" are "elected" and subject to frequent re-election. I venture to predict that sooner or later these innovations will have dire results and that one day it will be seen that by diminishing the magistrates' independence, not judicial power only but the democratic republic itself has been attacked."

De Tocqueville published those words a year before the Alamo fell. The dire results have been happening for quite some time and show signs of growing even worse, but some — four state senators in particular — are less studious of history's lessons than others.

Couples rallies to lead L.A. Open

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Fred Couples made up six shots with a back-nine 31 and took a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the Los Angeles Open.

■ Golf Roundup

Corey Pavin held a 5-shot lead at the turn, but shot a 37 on the back nine and lost the lead to Couples.

Couples, runner-up to Greg Norman last week in a tournament in Thailand, shot a 3-under-par 68 and takes an 11-under-par 202 into Sunday's final round. Pavin had to make about a 20-foot par-saving putt on the final hole to salvage a 73 and finished 54 holes at 203.

"That putt meant a lot to me," Pavin said. "It gives me a little confidence going into tomorrow."

Peter Jacobsen, Jay Delsing and Craig Stadler were tied for third at 208.

Delsing shot a 69, while Stadler matched par with a 71. Jacobson closed with a 68, which included a 180-yard, 5-iron shot for a hole in one on the 14th hole.

The gap between Pavin and the third-place golfers was not lost on the leaders.

"It makes it easier," Couples said. "You know that either Corey or I are going to win, and that's exciting."

Pavin agreed.

"If Freddie and I go out and play well tomorrow, nobody is going to be able to catch us," Pavin said. "The golf tournament is in our hands. It could be a two-man race.

"I'll be worried about Freddie on the tee, and he'll be worried about me on the greens," Pavin added.

Both had reason to worry on Saturday.

On the 15th, Couples hit his approach behind a palm tree and Pavin hit his shot about 6 feet from the cup and picked up a birdie.

"I know Corey's going to make birdie and I'm looking at bogey and he's going to be three in front again," Couples said.

Couples, however, played a little pitch to about eight feet from the hole and made the putt for par.

"That was the whole round," Couples said. "I probably picked up three shots with one putt. If I don't make par there, maybe I don't make birdie on 16 and 17 and it's all different."

Given a lift by the par, Couples hit an 8-iron to within 15 feet of the hole and birdied the 16th, while Pavin 3-putted. That pulled them even.

Couples went in front on the par-5 17th, confirming Pavin's worries on the tee. Couples hit a driver and 3-wood green high on the uphill, 578-yard hole, chipped close and made the go-ahead birdie putt.

Fred Couples putts from the gallery to the green on the eighth hole of the Los Angeles Open Saturday.

Pavin stayed within reach with the critical, par-saving putt on the final hole.

"Two behind is a lot different from one behind," Pavin said.

The tournament, sponsored by Nissan, pays $180,000 to the winner.

Seniors Suncoast

LUTZ, Fla. — Past champion Mike Hill was disappointed when the Suncoast Classic moved from the site of his first Senior PGA Tour victory, but he might feel a bit differently after Saturday's performance.

Hill posted a second-round 64 for a two-day 9-under-par total of 133 at the Tournament Players Club of Tampa Bay. That gave him a two-stroke lead over first-day co-leader Orville Moody, who shot 69.

George Archer, the other first-round leader, and Raymond Floyd are three strokes back at 6-under, with Lee Trevino and Simon Hobday at 5-under in this tournament sponsored by GTE.

Zvereva drops Houston's McNeil in Chicago Slims

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Sixth seeded Natalia Zvereva, employing an assortment of passing shots, cruised by No. 7 Lori McNeil 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) Saturday to advance to the finals of the Virginia Slims of Chicago tournament.

On Sunday, Zvereva will meet the winner of Saturday night's match between No. 5 Magadalena Maleeva and 17-year-old Chanda Rubin.

Zvereva, also gunning for the Chicago doubles title with Gigi Fernandez, lost her service twice in the first set, breaking McNeil three times — including the ninth and final game.

In that ninth game, Zvereva took advantage of a double fault and three unforced errors.

McNeil and Zvereva traded service breaks in the ninth and 10th games, forcing a tiebreaker.

McNeil, trailing 4-3, lost three straight points and the match, driving two serves into the net and a ball over the end line off her serve.

Milan Indoor

MILAN, Italy — Fifth-seeded Boris Becker beat Haiti's Ronald Agenor 7-6 (8-6), 6-1 on Saturday to advance to the finals of the $800,000 Muratti Time indoor tennis tournament.

In the other semifinal, Petr Korda of the Czech Republic beat

■ Tennis Roundup

Spain's Sergi Bruguera 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Becker, who is defending champion and a three-time winner of the tournament, started slowly. Agenor broke him to open the match and took his German counterpart to a first-set tiebreaker.

Kroger-St. Jude International

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Brad Gilbert upset defending champion Jim Courier 6-4, 6-4 in the quarterfinals Saturday at the Kroger-St. Jude International.

The 32-year-old Gilbert, the second-oldest player ranked in the top 50, won the tournament in 1986 and 1989. He was set to play 11th-seeded Patrick McEnroe, a 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) winner over 14th-seeded Thomas Enqvist, in the late semifinals match.

The first semifinal Saturday night had unseeded Alex O'Brien, who ousted No. 13 seed Karsten Braasch 6-3, 6-3, playing No. 2 seed Todd Martin, a 6-1, 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-2) winner over eighth-seeded Paul Haarhuis.

Gilbert, 1-5 against top 10 opponents in 1993, played patiently in handing No. 3 Courier only his second match loss this year. He broke the tournament's top seed twice in the second set, first at 3-1 and then at 5-4.

Television deal could help join SWC, Big 8

■ Joint television contract could be the first step to linking the conferences, athletic directors say.

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest and Big Eight conferences are close to a five-year television contract with ABC that could lay the foundation for a merger between the leagues, athletic directors said Saturday.

The tentative deal, which would begin in 1996, was negotiated this week by a consultant hired by both conferences.

It comes in the wake of the Southeastern Conference breaking away from the College Football Association to sign a deal with CBS and it would start when the CFA's $300 million package with ABC and ESPN expires.

Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds said ABC offered between $57 million and $60 million and that a deal with ESPN could bump the package to $80 million.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that the leagues had tentatively agreed to an $80 million deal with ABC.

Having a joint television contract could be the first step toward linking the conferences, which are geographic neighbors, according to athletic directors for Texas and Oklahoma, two of the strongest schools in each conference.

"I think this is an example of a reason why we need to be working closely," Oklahoma athletic director Donnie Duncan said. "Whether that leads to a complete merger remains to be seen."

The conferences have been rumored to be working toward a merger or scheduling alliance since Arkansas left the SWC for the SEC in 1991. Dodds said there have been recent discussions.

"I think the conversations are more around, should there be a merger and what should it look like and I think later conversations would be about how many and who," Dodds said.

A merger could involve as many as all eight SWC schools or only half, Dodds said, declining to say which would make the cut.

Duncan said he expects something to happen soon with the television deal.

"I feel at this time next week we're going to have an agreement or there will have been something — a major plus or a major minus — that would keep that from happening," Duncan said.

Several other SWC athletic directors were more skeptical about what the television deal would mean.

"I don't see what it has to do with conference realignment," Texas Tech's Robert Bockrath said. "I don't think they are related in any way."

Texas A&M's Wally Groff said the proposed television deal "has nothing to do with a merger."

But Duncan and Dodds were the only league representatives on a conference call with commissioners Steve Hatchell of the SWC and Carl James of the Big Eight, the Morning News said.

Neither Hatchell nor James could be immediately reached for comment by The Associated Press. Spokesmen for ABC Sports also could not be reached. An ESPN spokesman said he couldn't comment.

The SWC athletic directors are scheduled to meet at Dallas on Sunday. Any deal must be ratified by presidents of all 16 schools, eight from each conference.

The SEC's $85 million, five-year deal with CBS includes men's basketball and women's sports. Dodds said those are things that will be discussed later in negotiations with ABC.

passing and an especially good feel for their partners' whereabouts on the field at all times. A late missed penalty shot by Ketter, who played in her first game back from a knee sprain, kept the score from being a little better reflection of the play.

But San Angelo (3-2 in district, 7-4 overall) took advantage of their scoring opportunities in the first half, getting two goals off three shots, and Midland stayed at the bottom of the District 5-5A standings at 0-5, 4-7 overall.

"Really I was encouraged by today after a tough loss like we had on Tuesday," Midland coach Scott Hodkinson said. "It would have been real easy for them to roll over and say, 'Here goes another loss.' We proved we're capable of playing with the good teams in the district. It's just a matter of playing with consistency."

Richardson started the year playing goal keeper and then moved to fullback. After Ketter went down against Odessa Permian Feb. 1, Richardson moved to midfield and scored two goals in Midland High's last game, a 3-2 loss to Odessa High Tuesday. The two Lady Bulldog sophomores have played on a club team together and they showed it Saturday. In the second half Richardson made the soccer equivalent to basketball's "no-look pass" to her midfield mate, rolling the ball behind her back to Ketter.

Ketter played well despite having her knee heavily taped and not being 100 percent, according to Hodkinson. Richardson seemed to make the ball do exactly what she wanted almost every time she touched it.

"They're very similar players," Hodkinson said. "They both dribble well, pass well and can shoot well. If we get both of them together (healthy) they can be a force."

Midland trailed San Angelo 4-0 halfway through the second half.

"I thought it was the best I've seen (us) play since our tournaments. It's our best district play so far," San Angelo coach Walter Gillelano said. "I thought Midland played well too. It wasn't that easy of a win."

The Bulldogs got their first score in the 74th minute on a Richardson free kick. Ketter's miss on the penalty shot was with only two minutes to go, so realistically it wouldn't have given Midland a chance at a win. But it was indicative of how they kept battling.

"We were concerned about giving momentum away (but) we weren't concerned about losing the game," Gillelano said.

Both teams lost players to penalties. Midland midfielder Sonya Lackey received her third yellow card of the season in the second half. She will miss the Bulldogs game Tuesday here against Abilene High. San Angelo fullback Marcie Cassell got a red card for interfering with Shauna Scarafile in the box on a Midland scoring chance. Both coaches say their players will be missed. San Angelo plays Permian next.

The Lady Bobcats first goal came on a counter attack when Rachel Reese got free down the sideline and led Tracie Gentry with a pass. Midland keeper Cathryn Vadala came out for the ball and missed it, leaving Gentry with an open goal. Gentry later assisted on a goal and San Angelo scored three minutes into the second half with an unassisted goal by Courtney Appleton. Gentry scored her team's last goal on a rebound off Vadala.

"The girls are upset, but when they go home and think about it they should be pretty pleased," Hodkinson said.

Bulldogs nip SA, stay atop 5-5A

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High Bulldogs scored two goals in a two-minute span early in the game and went on to beat San Angelo Central 3-2 in District 5-5A boys soccer. The win keeps MHS in first place in the league with a 5-0 record, 10-0 overall.

Ross Hunter opened the scoring for the Bulldogs in the 14th minute on an assist from Toby Walker. One minute later Midland took a 2-0 lead as Jesse Dominquez assisted Tyler Berry. San Angelo (3-2, 5-4) made it 2-1 at halftime.

The Bulldogs got a third goal on a penalty shot by Hunter after Emmanuel Sannon was fouled in the box. MHS' next game is at Odessa High Tuesday at 5:30 p.m.

Dilfer hopes to increase value at NFL combine

■ NFL news

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Trent Dilfer, college football's most efficient passer last season and a certain early first-round pick in this year's NFL draft, is thrilled at his first in-person look at his future colleagues.

"It's exciting. My biggest thrill is to see all the people I've watched on TV," said Dilfer, who gave up his senior season at Fresno State and is one of 300 players at the NFL scouting combine this weekend.

"At Fresno, we have those night games, so we watch football all day on Saturday and get to see all these guys play. It's neat to meet them and to see what they really look like under the pads, and meet some of the coaches and general managers and get a feel of what the NFL's like."

The 6-foot-5, 230-pound Dilfer hit 65 percent of his passes for 3,276 yards and led the nation with a 173.1 quarterback efficiency rating last season. He also threw an NCAA record 271 passes without an interception.

"I've improved so much, it's scary," said Dilfer, an option quarterback in high school who went to Fresno State because it was the only college that recruited him.

"There's a night-and-day difference, and I feel there can be the same jump once I get into the NFL. I have so much room to improve it's disgusting. If a team drafts me who has a good quarterback coach, somebody who's going to spend the time with me, I feel I can get twice as good as I am now."

Dilfer is one of 29 underclassmen who gave up their final season of college eligibility. Another quarterback expected to go high in the draft, Tennessee's Heath Shuler, also is attending the four-day meat market that ends on Monday.

Dilfer said he already has talked with coach Dave Shula and others from the Cincinnati Bengals, who have the first pick in the April 24-25 draft. The Bengals already have David Klingler, their first-round pick two years ago.

"I'm not going to predict what the Bengals are going to do," he said. "I was very happy meeting with Shula and Kenny Anderson and their personnel director. They said a lot of interesting things."

Dilfer, was voted the top offensive player in both the Western Athletic Conference and the Aloha Bowl, said he doesn't care who drafts him.

"I don't know enough about the NFL to have a favorite. I never had a favorite NFL team," he said. "I'm so thrilled to have this opportunity. Everything that's happened to me right now is kind of a dream. Wherever I go, I'd be more than happy to play."

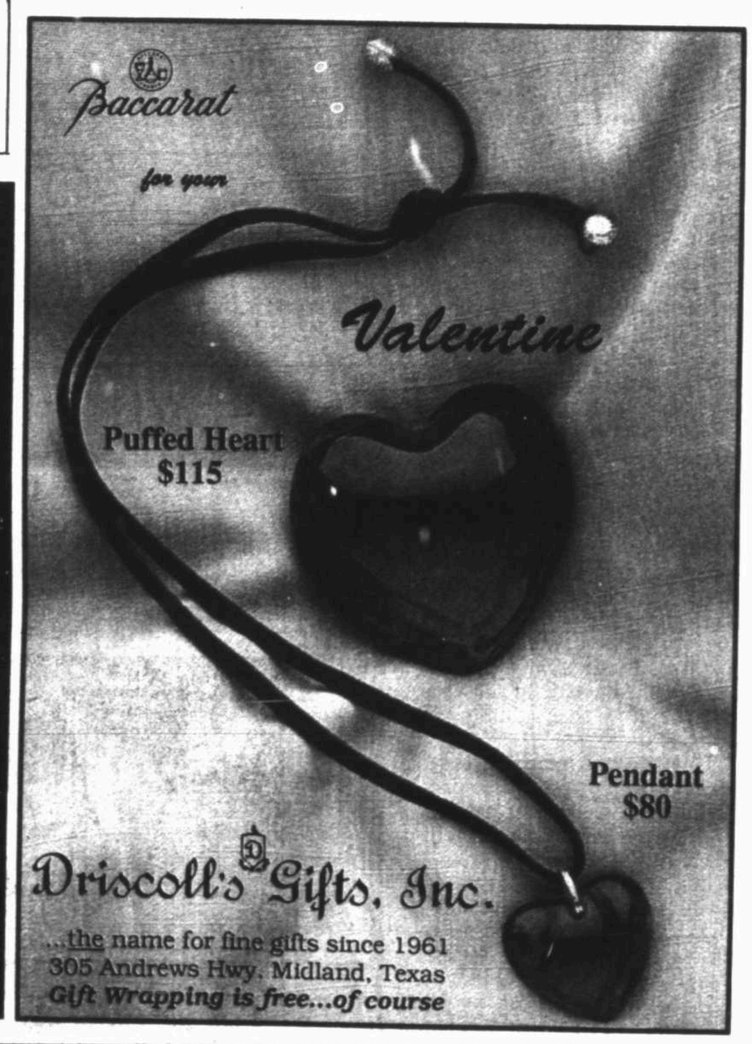

The intense scrutiny doesn't bother him.

Police pedal patrols to roll again

Bicycles go places that cars can't

■ Force solves manpower problems, puts seven officers on two-wheelers.

By Katherine Poteet

The Midland Police Department has re-established a weapon in its fight against crime. And, it's not a high-tech computer system, special police cars, new protective clothing or better guns.

It's the bicycle.

"It's really the way of the future," said Officer Richard Candelaria, team leader for the department's bike patrol. "It's effective in a lot of situations that a car cannot get into, like alleyways or stairs. It allows the officer more accessibility."

The bike patrol was originally started two years ago by Sgt. Ernie Wakefield, who approached Candelaria about heading up a group of officers.

"I was glad to do it," Candelaria said. "I had been on the force for 23 years and it was a change of pace."

The original group consisted of Candelaria, Wakefield, and officers John Champion and Billy Byrd, who rode mostly on the east side of town. However, the program was stopped about a year and a half later because of a manpower shortage in the rest of the department.

"This whole idea rests on how many officers we have at the department," said Officer Adolfo Baesa, who rides on the current team. "The bike patrol is on as long as we have the officers for it. We can't pull officers from cars if they are needed there."

Candelaria said the bike patrol was restarted on Oct. 1 and now has seven members: Candelaria, Baesa, Champion, and officers Ken Carter, Darren Clements, Pete Cordova and Alvin Navarrete.

The group will actually start on beat patrol on March 1, but has been to Neighborhood Watch programs and safety demonstrations.

It also had a special patrol at the malls and apartments on Loop 250 and Midkiff during December.

In addition, the officers train once a month and spent five days last week at a training seminar in Denton. The Midland officers rode with bike patrol officers in Denton — which has a 20-member bike team — and learned traffic laws and patrol procedures as they pertain to bicycles. The officers also learned to manuever their bikes not only on the road, but in alleyways, on stairways, through grass and other off-road territory.

The Midland group got another boost in the form of a monetary donation from the Midland Motel and Hotel Asso-

Local business leaders support Texas Scholars

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

While it will not solve all the problems of contemporary education, Midland business leaders and educators are teaming up to give Midland education a quick shot in the arm.

The program is called Texas Scholars and has been adopted in more than 100 school districts across the state since its inception in 1989, according to Jack Goodwyn, general co-chairman for the Greater Longview Organization of Business in Education.

About 20 local business volunteers spent last week giving 82 presentations — an integral part of the program — to eighth-grade students in the Midland Independent School District, said Linda Basham of Southwestern Bell. Ms Basham, along with Grant Billingsley of Wagner & Brown Ltd., is spearheading local Texas Scholars efforts.

Texas Scholars is designed to encourage and reward students for taking "on level" or advanced courses during their high-school education,

4 more companies decide to back bee for literacy

Four more corporate teams signed up this week for the annual Reporter-Telegram Corporate Spelling Bee for Literacy, bringing to nine the number of companies involved to date.

Bank One Midland, Exxon, Arco and Midland National Bank joined Texas Instruments, Penny Quick Printing, Texaco, Parker & Parsley and Midland College teams that have signed up for the spelling bee that benefits Need to Read, the city's United Way agency that combats adult illiteracy.

It has been announced that Murray and the Frenchmen will cater this year's luncheon for the March 4 event at Midland Center.

In addition to the participation of corporate teams of three spellers per team, members of the audience also can take part by paying $5 for a chance to spell five words. Those spelling all five correctly will receive door prizes.

All funds received from audience participation and tickets, priced at $10 each which includes lunch, go to Midland Need to Read, which matches more than 140 volunteers with an equal number of men and women seeking to improve their reading skills.

Those interested in more information about the event, or who wish to register, should call the Need to Read office on the Midland College campus, 685-4572.

GARY OTT

How many folks could handle self-employment?

On the surface it sounds so good.

"I'm self-employed. I answer to no one. I'm my own boss."

Ott

So take that, all you grouchy old bosses out there. Your unreasonable demands no longer mean a thing to me. So back off.

Or in the words of Johnny Paycheck: "Take this job and shove it."

Admit it, you've wanted to shout those words at the top of your lungs, haven't you. Of course, you have. We all have.

The idea of being self-employed can be awfully appealing. Go to work when you want. Quit when you're ready. Maybe take a two-hour lunch from time to time. No one breathing down your neck, demanding more for less.

It DOES sound good, doesn't it.

There's just one problem. When it's time to get paid, there's no one there to hand you a check. After all, you're the boss. If you don't like the size of your salary all you can do is complain to yourself.

It takes a special kind of person to be self-employed. He must be something of a gambler, a risk-taker. He must be able to sleep at night even though there are a thousand worries rushing through his brain. And, most importantly, he must possess the self-discipline to make things happen even when a deadline is not looming on the horizon.

Most of us can't do that.

We need the security of knowing that when all is said and done, the ultimate financial responsibility is someone else's. They are the ones who have to figure out revenue vs. expenses and still come out with enough money at the end of the month to pay the rest of us a legitimate salary.

In return, we agree to be at work on time, avoid taking two hour lunches when possible and let the boss breath down our neck from time to time.

All in all, not a bad deal. In exchange for a few hassles we get a paycheck.

Now, some of you might not be sure where you fit in. A part of you likes the idea of being self-employed, but the other part is not so sure you can pull it off. You're caught in the middle, not certain which direction you should ultimately go.

Well, you can relax. I've come to the rescue.

What follows is a test that should help you determine if you have the proper tools — not to mention guts — to be your own boss. If you answer "B" to three or more of the following questions then you most definitely should NOT be self-employed.

Ready? Good.

Here goes.

1. It is 6 a.m. and your alarm clock goes off. Your first thought is to hop out of bed and say, (A) "Gee, I feel great. I can hardly wait to get to the office." Or, (B) "I think I'll call in sick so I can stay home and watch cartoons?"

2. A longtime friend drops by your place of work and says, "Let's play some golf." At that point you say, (A) "No, my job demands I stay here and work. Maybe we can get together later." Or, (B), "Sounds great. I'll do this other stuff tomorrow."

3. When you meet a potential client your first reaction is to walk right up to him and say, (A) "I respect your work immensely, sir, and I'd consider it a real honor to do business with you." Or, (B) "Oh, yuk, you've got something hanging out of your nose."

4. A major decision that could impact your company's bottom line by hundreds of thousands of dollars must be made today. At the proper time, you say, (A) "I've studied all the details and I firmly believe the right choice is to go forward with our original plan." Or, (B) "Eenie-meenie-minee-mo."

DEATHS

Norinne Terry

Graveside services for former Midlander Norinne M. Terry were Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Oregon arrangements were under the direction of Anderson Funeral Home.

Mrs. Terry died Feb. 2 in a Hood River, Ore., hospital.

She was born Dec. 7, 1912, in Chicago, where she was reared and educated. After graduating from high school, she completed a course in business accounting. She was a teletype operator for 31 years in Chicago and Midland, until she retired in 1975.

She married John R. Terry in February 1958. He preceded her in death in 1969.

Mrs. Terry moved to Hood River in 1978.

She was a member of the Hood River Gardening Club, the 4-Leaf Clover Club and Asbury United Methodist Church.

Survivors include a cousin, George Longendorg of Visalia, Calif.

Sylvester Harrell

Services for Sylvester Harrell, 58, of Midland are pending with Baker-Jackson Funeral Home.

He died Friday at his home.

Lodema Kolm

Services for Lodema Rose Kolm have been set for 11 a.m. Monday at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. John Setzer officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Kolm died Friday at a local hospital.

She was born Feb. 12, 1908, in Watonga, Okla., where she graduated from high school. She attended Oklahoma College for Women and graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1930.

She married Paul H. Kolm on June 28, 1930, in Watonga. He preceded her in death in 1980.

The couple lived in Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Cuba.

They moved to Midland in 1943.

Mrs. Kolm was a member of the of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church. In the 1940s she served as secretary and later vice president in the women's work of the Northwest Texas Missionary District of the episcopal church before it became a diocese.

Mrs. Kolm was a founder of the women's auxiliary of Midland Memorial Hospital and she served as treasurer for the Midland Children's Diagnostic Clinic sponsored by the Children's Service League.

She was one of the founders in 1948 and the first president of Chapter BS of the PEO Sisterhood.

She is survived by a sister, Virjama Hamilton of Ames, Iowa.

Irene Rice

SEMINOLE — Services for Irene Rice, 86, of Seminole have been set for 1 p.m. Monday at First Baptist Church of Seminole with the Rev. Ernest Wall officiating. Burial will follow in Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring under the direction of Roger Pool Funeral Home of Seminole.

Mrs. Rice died Saturday at a Seminole hospital.

She was born Sept. 18, 1907, in Big Spring.

She married B.D. Rice on April 16, 1926, in Midland. He preceded her in death in 1985.

She moved to Seminole six years ago from Stanton. She had also been a longtime resident of Big Spring.

She was a homemaker and a member of First Baptist Church.

Survivors include four daughters, Betty Rice House of Fort Worth, Faye Weeg of Blue Springs, Mo., Jane Butts and Francys Cauble, both of Seminole; four brothers, Herschel Arnett of Orangevale, Calif., Fred Arnett of Durant, Okla., Garrett Arnett and Leon Arnett, both of Midland; three sisters, Joan Nichols of Odessa, Lillian Jones of Midland and Lucille Richters of Kaufman; 11 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

BIKES: Police to protect while pedaling

ciation that went toward the purchase of two bicycles and the Fraternal Order of Police donated a bicycle. The program now has four bicycles — two for each shift the officers are on.

"Due to the equipment we now have, we will only do bike patrol during the daylight hours," Candelaria said. "I will probably schedule two officers from 8 a.m.- 6 p.m. and then two officers maybe from 10 a.m.- 7 p.m."

While riding a bicycle may sound like an easy way to make a living, both Candelaria and Baesa stressed that good physical condition is necessary to be part of the team.

"In order to be on the team, you must have been at the department for two years, make at least 50 percent on the department's mandatory physical assessment, ride 15 miles on the bike in an hour and be in good all-around condition," Candelaria said. "That's not just riding a bike. That's tough work."

And, officers on bicycles have the same duties and responsibilities as officers in vehicles. They carry a gun, make arrests and perform just as any other officer would while on duty.

"People need to realize that just because we are on bikes doesn't mean we aren't going to pursue or make an arrest," Baesa said. "In some cases, it gives us an edge, like chasing someone down an alley. We have the right to pursue someone on foot. If they get in a car or get away, we then call backup."

Candelaria said motorists should also realize that not only officers, but citizens who are on bicycles, have all the rights of someone in a car.

"They can't be run off the road or bumped over," he said. "If they are signaling to turn at a stop light, you can't try to go around him. You have to treat him like any other motorist.

"I hope that with us being out there, it will not only increase our visibility with the public and knock down that barrier of the vehicle, but it will increase bicycle safety in general," he said.

"Residents will get to know us better and become more aware of bikes and be more at ease with them and give them the space they deserve."

Bike Patrol sponsors include the Motel and Hotel Association, Peyton's Bikes and the Fraternal Order of Police.

SCHOLARS: Business requires mathematics skill

(From 1C)

Goodwyn said.

The program is presented to eighth-graders when they are beginning to make decisions on what courses they will take in high school.

Goodwyn said that during a business and education summit in Longview, educators and business leaders identified a problem.

Many students, even straight-A students, were not opting for the higher-level mathematics, science and foreign-language courses offered at public schools.

Students were opting for lower-level courses, which satisfied graduation requirements and in which they could get good grades. This was keeping students out of the higher-level classes that most business leaders believe are important for future employees.

"The curriculum in our schools needed to be relevant and needed to be challenging," Goodwyn said.

In 1990, proponents of Texas Scholars went into public schools to explain the need for these higher-level courses. Using a budget-like format, the speakers showed students how much money would be needed for the future they had envisioned for themselves. What kind of car or house or vacations they had would be determined by what kind of job they secured.

"The students are very perceptive when you start talking about money," Goodwyn said.

The percentage of students in the Longview school district taking higher-level courses jumped from 22 percent to 32 percent that year and is now, four years later, almost twice the original figure, Goodwyn said.

The total student count in these upper-level courses went from 210 to 465 in those four years, said Mary Alice Schmitz of the Longview program. The district was forced to scramble to find class space and teachers for more of these upper-level courses, she said.

The Midland program is expected to be as successful, Ms. Basham said. "Feedback from teachers and administrators was wonderful," she said.

Those making presentations stressed that if these courses were completed, they would pass all state tests, be accepted to colleges and would be better able to get good jobs, she said.

Students wishing to be Texas Scholars must have four credits in English and math, three credits in science and two in a foreign language. All courses must be on level — no remedial courses — or higher.

Midland students who graduate as Texas Scholars will be honored during commencement and at an awards banquet.

Local employers will be given a list of Midland's Texas Scholars for preferential hiring, Ms. Basham said.

Further rewards and recognition for the efforts of successful Texas Scholars likely will be forthcoming, Ms. Basham said.

Local businesses and individuals providing speakers and other support for the program include BJC Video Reproductions, Mike Conaway, Dominey and Ethridge Inc., Laura Ingram State Farm Insurance, Cheryl Hotchkiss, Lydia Torres, Midland Junior Achievement, Junior League of Midland, Kent Oil, KWES-9, Marathon Oil, Midland Hilton, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Reporter-Telegram, Mobile Oil, Felipe Morales Insurance, Permian Basin Office Supply, Qualified Printers, Reynolds Brothers Reproduction, Jack Sherman Chevrolet, Southwestern Bell Telephone, State Oil Reports, Texas Commerce Bank, Texaco, Texas Instruments, Wagner & Brown Ltd.

Hutchison turns her attention to 6 GOP opponents

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison is turning her attention to her six little-known opponents in the Republican Party primary, now that she has won her battle in a Fort Worth courtroom.

In the Democratic Party primary, three major candidates and a supporter of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche seek the nomination to challenge Mrs. Hutchison.

If no candidate receives a majority on March 8, the top two finishers in each party primary would face off in runoffs on April 12. The party nominees advance to the November general election.

U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews, 50, of Houston; businessman Richard Fisher, 44, of Dallas; former state attorney general Jim Mattox, 50, of Austin, and LaRouche associate Evelyn Lantz, 44, of Houston, are seeking the Democratic nod.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, was elected June 5 in a landslide to the remaining term of Lloyd Bentsen, who was named Treasury secretary by President Clinton. Mrs. Hutchison is seeking re-election to a full, six-year term.

She faces right-wing challenges from James Currey, 62, of Dallas; Stephen Hopkins, 32, of Burnet; and Troy Mata, 29, of Dallas.

The GOP field is rounded out by Roger Henson, 45, of Garland, who said he is campaigning for government and political reform; Ernest Schmidt, 58, of New Braunfels, who supports Mrs. Hutchison but said he is serving as an "insurance" candidate in case she is convicted in her trial on ethics charges, and Tom Spink, 55, of Carrollton.

Five days after being elected the first woman senator from Texas, Mrs. Hutchison was under investigation by the Travis County district attorney's office for allegedly using her previous job as state treasurer for personal and political gain.

Her trial on felony and misdemeanor ethics charges started Feb. 7 and ended four days later when she was cleared of the charges after prosecutors lost a key ruling and refused to proceed.

In a stunning turn of events, prosecutors said they wouldn't continue because the judge refused to rule before the trial on whether evidence seized in a June raid of the state treasury could be used.

The jurors were instructed to find Hutchison innocent and the panel acquitted her less than an hour after they were sworn in.

Despite legal problems, Mrs. Hutchison says she has been an active senator representing the interests of Texas.

David Beckwith, her spokesman, describes her as a "solidly conservative Republican," but "less ideologically rigid than some senators."

Mrs. Hutchison said her goals are to reduce federal spending and unnecessary regulations and unfunded mandates.

It is her votes for one version of the Brady bill and support of legislation that would make obstructing access to abortion clinics a federal crime that has angered some Republican candidates.

Currey, an investor, said Mrs. Hutchison has cancelled out many votes by U.S. Sen Phil Gramm, R-Texas. And, he said, the potential of a conviction against her would hurt the election chances of other Republicans.

"I'm a traditional Texas conservative trying to minimize the role of the federal government in our lives," he said.

Henson, an engineer, said his major gripe is that Mrs. Hutchison part of the system, and that she supported the free trade agreement with Mexico. He said he would push for campaign finance reform, term limitations, a balanced budget amendment and allowing the president to veto line items in the federal budget.

"If we had true campaign reform we wouldn't have continuous infighting between the parties," he said.

Hopkins, a flooring wholesaler, has been taking his anti-abortion and pro-gun rights campaign to gun shows across the state. And, as in previous campaigns he's waged, plans to run graphic anti-abortion ads on television.

"I tell people that if I'm elected you will have someone who will kick butt and take names and not worry about the fallout," he said.

Mata, a minister, said he is anti-abortion, pro-business and critical of Mrs. Hutchison's vote for a version of the Brady bill.

Mata also said he is concerned about the recent rebellion in Chiapas, Mexico, which he said was conducted by outside insurgents. "This is at our back door and if we're not careful it will be in our living room," he said.

Schmidt, the president and chief executive of a boat manufacturing company, said he is running in case Mrs. Hutchison is convicted.

"I feel there should be another qualified candidate on the Republican ticket. I have no political background, but I feel I'm just as qualified on the basis of education and experience," he said.

Spink, an insurance salesman, opposes high monetary awards given by juries and wants to limit contingency fees that attorneys receive.

He refuses to comment on Mrs. Hutchison, saying he is running "to make a statement, so that my view is at least heard."

In the Democratic primary, Mattox leads the polls with high name recognition from a long political career, and his run for the gubernatorial nomination in 1990, which he lost to Ann Richards in a runoff.

Andrews and Fisher are hoping to be the one that gets into a runoff. Both of them portray themselves as the one that can defeat Mrs. Hutchison in the general election.

POLICE REPORTS

Sexual assault

A 38-year-old northwest Midland woman was sexually assaulted early Saturday morning, police said.

Police were called to a residence in the 4400 block of Norwood about 2 a.m., where they found a woman in a night shirt, shaken and holding a butcher knife for protection.

She had a minor injury to the bridge of her nose and was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, according to the report.

The only description of her assailant she was able to give police was that he was wearing a red ski mask, according to the report.

The suspect appeared to have gained entry into her residence through a sliding glass door off an atrium, according to the report.

The incident is under investigation.

Bond posted

A Midland man was released from jail Saturday after posting a $5,000 bond for assault with a deadly weapon, jail officials said.

Billy Ray McDavid, 48, was arrested at 1516 S. Jefferson for shooting Maury Collins, 23, in the leg about 11 p.m. Friday following a fight, according to a report.

McDavid was arrested and charged with aggravated assault, police said.

Collins was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, according to the report.

Car accident

A 27-year-old Midland woman remained in critical condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center late Saturday night from injuries she suffered Friday afternoon.

Orvetta Morris was injured after the car she was driving was struck by a pickup truck at the intersection of Highway 191 and Loop 250 Friday afternoon.

Marijuana arrest

CRANE — One man remained in Crane County Jail on a charge of delivery of marijuana and another was released after posting bond Saturday, officials said.

A Sheriff's Department official said Ray Jurado, 45, of Imperial had posted bond and Panfilo Holguin Rodriquez, 49, of Fort Stockton remained in custody.

Both men were arrested and charged with delivery of 20 pounds of marijuana and violation of the Tax Stamp Act Friday, according to a police report. They were arrested after being stopped by investigators of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force west of McCamey.

The Sheriff's Department official said the amount of the bonds set for the men was not available Saturday night.

Saturday

Vandalism of a residence: Jesse Hinojos reported at 1:55 a.m. that vandalism had been done to windows of a residence at 1000 S. Marshall St.

Vandalism: James Price reported at 3:09 a.m. that vandalism had occurred at 2106 W. Michigan Ave.

Vandalism to a vehicle: Leroy McKee of 3001 N. Midland Drive, No. B3 reported at 8:52 a.m. that the back window of a green Geo had been broken out.

Burglary: Sonya McCarley of 2803 Delano Ave. reported at 5:03 p.m. that someone had broken into a storage building located in the alley betwen Delano and Mariana streets.

Officials question report on drugs

HARLINGEN (AP) — Some Rio Grande Valley officials are questioning the accuracy of a preliminary government report on drugs, which concluded that several deep South Texas counties have the lowest rates of illegal drug use in the state.

The agency gave most counties a "100" rating. But 18 counties in deep South Texas were given only a "1."

The agency uses the figures, based on a survey conducted in 1993, to decide how badly counties need drug-prevention funding.

Cult-trial prosecutors describe horrid deaths at compound

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A weapons display and emotional accounts of a bloody gun battle launched the prosecution's case. Horrid details of mass death at David Koresh's compound are finishing it off.

Government attorneys reached the final stretch of their murder-conspiracy case against 11 Branch Davidians as the fifth week of testimony ended Friday. Prosecutors will likely wrap up Monday or Tuesday.

"We'll be able to start our case," said defense attorney Douglas Tinker. "We're looking forward to it."

Prosecutor Ray Jahn promised early in the trial to prove doomsday prophet Koresh and his disciples conspired to kill federal agents in a violent "final exchange."

"David Koresh's theology was the theology of death," Jahn said.

Prosecution witnesses said about 400 weapons were found at the Davidian compound near Waco. Forty-eight weapons, including M-16 and AK-47 rifles, were identified as fully automatic.

More than 40 firearms dealers and gun shop workers have testified Koresh and his followers bought weapons in the months leading up to a Feb. 28, 1993, shootout with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The 11 Davidians are on trial for murdering four ATF agents. The defendants could face up to life in prison if convicted.

Attorney Mike DeGeurin contended the Davidians bought firearms legally as an investment, perhaps doubling their money on some items. DeGeurin represents Paul Fatta, a main gun buyer for the group.

ATF agents have testified they were fired upon as they exited two cattle trailers and attempted to serve search and arrest warrants at the Koresh compound.

A television photographer and newspaper reporter at the scene have testified they believe the first gunshots came from inside the compound.

Defense attorneys, claiming their clients acted in self-defense, tried to cast doubt on the government accounts. They noted a front door to the compound that could provide crucial evidence about the first shots is missing.

The lawyers also hammered away at the fact that raid organizers knew they had lost the element of surprise but went ahead anyway with the raid.

Kathryn Schroeder, 31, a former Branch Davidian who also was charged with murder, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge in exchange for testifying against her comrades.

The star prosecution witness described Koresh's apocalyptic sermons and his anticipated violent clash with the government.

"If you can't kill for God, you can't die for God," Ms. Schroeder quoted Koresh as saying.

Ms. Schroeder identified all the defendants as Koresh followers and said the eight who were inside the compound during the shootout had guns during the firefight or in the 51-day standoff that ensued.

But Ms. Schroeder told a defense lawyer she didn't take part in a conspiracy.

"Killing the agents was not something that I thought about," she said.

Livingston Fagan is the only defendant federal agents have identified in court as having shot at officers.

Last week's testimony turned to the final days and moments of the standoff and the grisly recovery of charred bodies. The compound went up in flames April 19 after FBI-driven tanks began battering the compound and lobbing in tear gas.

Seventy-nine people, including Koresh, died. Eighteen Davidians died from gunshots.

Some defense lawyers have worked to pull their clients away from the Davidian pack.

DeGeurin has noted repeatedly that Fatta was away at a gun show during the shootout. Also absent from that gun battle were defendants Woodrow Kendrick and Norman Allison, who were arrested in connection with a second shootout that day in which no agents were killed.

Allison's attorney, Tim Evans, pointed out Allison surrendered to authorities and that there is no evidence he fired a shot. Evans says Allison is not the Koresh devotee prosecutors have made him out to be.

Evans said other Davidians told Allison, " 'If you leave, the end of the world, you might miss it,' or something and he responded, 'Well, I'll watch it on TV.' "

Justice Department admits agents arrested wrong man

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials have admitted that they were mistaken when they arrested a former high-ranking NASA official on drug charges more than 18 months ago, and that the man they meant to arrest lived in a different county.

In documents filed in Galveston Friday, the Justice Department admitted that Edward Smith Barker was wrongfully arrested in the case that Barker said wrecked his retirement.

Barker, a 63-year-old former NASA security and protocol officer, wouldn't discuss the case with the Houston Chronicle. His Houston attorney, Joel Androphy, said Barker remains reclusive, depressed and embarrassed.

Barker was arrested July 29, 1992, at his Webster apartment. The man who should have been arrested was Edward Benton Barker, who lived in rural southwest Montgomery County and was wanted on four counts of delivering the drug Dilaudid to undercover agents.

The actual suspect's description differed greatly from Edward Smith Barker's, Androphy said.

In Friday's filings, the government conceded Barker's original claims that federal officers held him for 30 hours while ignoring major discrepancies between his name, residence and description and those of the Barker of Montgomery County.

The documents confirm that the marshals failed to take steps to make sure they had the right man.

"They knew where the real Ed Barker lived, they had his phone number and they had all the identifiers that would lead them to go to the right house and to the right person," said Androphy. "But they ignored it all."

The admissions pave the way for a March 28 trial in Galveston, after which U.S. District Judge Sam Kent will decide if Barker should receive any damages for the arrest.

Barker, Androphy and federal attorneys worked out details of those admissions since Barker filed a $10 million lawsuit last March. He sought damages from the government, federal marshals and drug agents whose mistakes caused him to be held 30 hours in the Harris County Jail.

As part of the deal, Barker dropped claims against deputy U.S. marshals Riki Rouse and Gerardo Payan of Houston; Emitt Highland, a Baton Rouge-based agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration; and Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics undercover officer Jerry Dettman.

Since only the individuals could have been assessed punitive damages, the deal means any award to Barker will be limited to actual damages, Androphy said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney General Paul Brown of Washington, D.C., who represented the government, couldn't be reached for comment.

Police focus on fraternity hazing at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police and the University of Texas dean of students are investigating allegations that pledges of a fraternity on the Austin campus were punched and hit with a beer bottle.

Officer Mentford Hesskew of the Austin Police Department said Friday he hoped to begin interviewing witnesses today or Monday about an alleged hazing incident last week involving the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Dan Moreland, SAE Alumni Commission chairman, said that in a meeting with fraternity members Wednesday night "there were some pretty forceful denials" that pledges were punched in the face and that at least one was struck with a beer bottle.

Active members of the fraternity have refused to comment.

Sharon Justice, UT's dean of students, said, "I'm still investigating, and I can't prove that one way or another."

Moreland, who has been designated the official spokesman for the fraternity, said, "I know there have been a lot of allegations raised. We're investigating the stuff to see if anything happened."

According to Austin Police Department reports, officer Bing Lowe was flagged down by Jay Masterson, a security guard for the fraternity, about a possible hazing incident shortly after 1:30 a.m. last Sunday.

Lowe said he didn't witness any hazing. Lowe declined to reveal what witnesses told him. No charges had been filed as of early Saturday.

Texas law prohibits actively participating, aiding or encouraging hazing. Failing to report hazing also is an offense.

"Texas National introduced us to hedging. Now it is an integral part of our business"
Robert M. Garst, Jr.
Phillip Robinson
Las Colinas Energy Corp.
Irving, Texas

Acquiring and enhancing the production of oil and gas properties has been the primary business of Robert Garst, Jr. and Phillip Robinson since they formed Las Colinas Energy in 1990. They had worked together for years, and both were experienced in the oil and gas business. But when they came to Texas National Bank to help finance their first major acquisition in 1991, their banker introduced them to hedging. Using options to hedge oil and gas prices gives Bob and Phillip a sense of security in spite of constant price changes in the market. "In 1991, hedging was somewhat exotic to us," says Phillip, "but now it is an integral part of every acquisition we make - and so is Texas National Bank." Whether you office in Dallas or Midland, if you're in the oil and gas business, you need a banker who knows oil and gas. You need Texas National Bank of Midland. Come see us.

Police detective: Daughter kills parents for insurance money

MANSFIELD (AP) — The daughter of a slain Mansfield couple was arrested Saturday and accused of plotting to kill her parents for insurance money.

"The motive is financial gain," Mansfield police Detective O. Janke said.

Jennifer Nicole Yesconis, arrested on a warrant for conspiracy to commit capital murder, was being held Saturday night in the Mansfield Law Enforcement Center in lieu of $500,000 bond. She is scheduled to be arraigned today, Janke said.

Her father, Bob Yesconis, 46, and her stepmother, Aletha, 48, were shot to death in their home Jan. 29.

Two men have already been arrested in connection with the slayings, including Ms. Yesconis' boyfriend.

Jeremiah Lee Wetmore, 18, and Michael Heath, 17, are being held in the Tarrant County Jail, Janke said. Officers said Wetmore and Ms. Yesconis, 20, lived together and Heath was a friend.

Two people identifying themselves as Ms. Yesconis' friends told police that she was involved in the murder, according to a five-page arrest warrant affidavit. One of them, Troy Newland, told police that Ms. Yesconis approached him asking if he would "knock off her father for part of her inheritance."

Janke said a $140,000 insurance policy had been taken out on Bob Yesconis.

"That's what we know, but we believe there's more (policies)," Janke said.

Also, according to the affidavit, Ms. Yesconis said she had prior knowledge of the murders. At one point, she told police that Wetmore killed her parents, using one of several guns she says were stolen from Wetmore's parents.

Heath said in a written statement that he had been involved in numerous discussions with Wetmore and Ms. Yesconis about killing the couple, according to the affidavit. Wetmore told authorities such discussions occurred "10 to 13 times."

Eric Porter of Arlington, who says he once lived with Ms. Yesconis and Wetmore, told police he heard a conversation during which Heath, Wetmore and Ms. Yesconis came up with plans to kill the couple, the affidavit says.

Among the ideas discussed were putting lethal gas in Robert Yesconis' gas tank and cutting his break lines.

Documents reveal much about Hutchison

By Linda Leavell
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A day after abandoning his case against U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, prosecutor Ronnie Earle released reams of documents he said show a "massive misuse of state employees" while she was Texas treasurer.

A preliminary review of the thousands of documents made public Saturday show that state workers wrote thank-you notes for Mrs. Hutchison's personal and political speaking engagements and for gifts she received. They tracked checks written as political contributions and kept Mrs. Hutchison's daily schedules both inside and outside of the Treasury office.

Prosecutors intended to use the documents to prove that Mrs. Hutchison ran a campaign operation from her state office and used employees for political and personal chores while state treasurer, from January 1991 to June 1993.

It is illegal for public officials to conduct non-state business on state time, including campaign business.

However, Earle refused to proceed Friday with the criminal ethics trial after the judge declined to rule on whether the documents could be used as evidence. The defense had contended they were illegally seized in a June 10 raid of the Treasury.

The Republican senator was aquitted.

Mrs. Hutchison said Friday she approved of releasing the documents for public scrutiny but sought to have them suppressed as evidence because "this shouldn't be decided in a courtroom."

Earle said Saturday he decided to release the documents because "the public has a right to see it. The public has a right to know."

"I think they will see a pattern of a massive misuse of state employees and state resources and then an equally massive effort to cover it up," Earle said.

In a telephone interview Saturday from her Dallas home, Mrs. Hutchison said she was "very glad that the documents are in the public domain, but for him to be whining that this shows a pattern of misconduct without my side of it is unusual for a prosecutor that has just totally failed in trying to prove a case."

"Frankly, I'd like him to just admit that he didn't have a case and stop trying to try it in a forum that is not the proper forum," she said.

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney, Dick DeGuerin, added: "Ronnie Earle is like a drowning man right now and he's desperately attempting to show there was anything done wrong, but he's just dead in the water."

DeGuerin said the actions depicted in the documents are "good politics" and legal.

"It's what we want of our public officeholders," he said.

Among the documents is a memorandum from Treasury employee Pat Berry to Mrs. Hutchison. Dated May 15, 1991, the memorandum proposes a "team of 'politically aware' people whose primary objective is to assist the treasurer and the executive staff."

Among the team's responsibilities was "coordination of all political activities: newsletters, events and lists."

A March 25, 1991, memo was from Mrs. Hutchison's administrative assistant, Stephanie Nooner, to Berry regarding the Republican National Committee's Eagle Reception.

"If Kay can't attend, I would recommend Ray Hutchison (her husband) go and make note of who was there. Interaction with this group will prove beneficial to our ongoing efforts — anyone who gives $15,000 a year needs to be on our list," the confidential memorandum states.

Among the evidence is a box of documents subpoenaed by prosecutors from David Criss, former deputy treasurer under Mrs. Hutchison. Criss and Mike Barron, another ex-Treasury employee, were indicted along with Mrs. Hutchison.

Among Criss' documents, which he took home after leaving the Treasury in 1992, are letters from Sylvia Nugent and Associates, a professional fund-raiser.

Mrs. Hutchison admitted in 1992 that a small amount of non-state work was done on the Treasury computer. But she said she hadn't known it was taking place and would take steps to ensure it didn't happen again. Criss apologized for performing some of the work and resigned.

"Most of the troubles of humanity are imaginary. All is well until the stroke falls and even the, nine times out of ten, it is less bad than anticipated. A wise man is a confirmed optimist..."
Andrew Carnegie

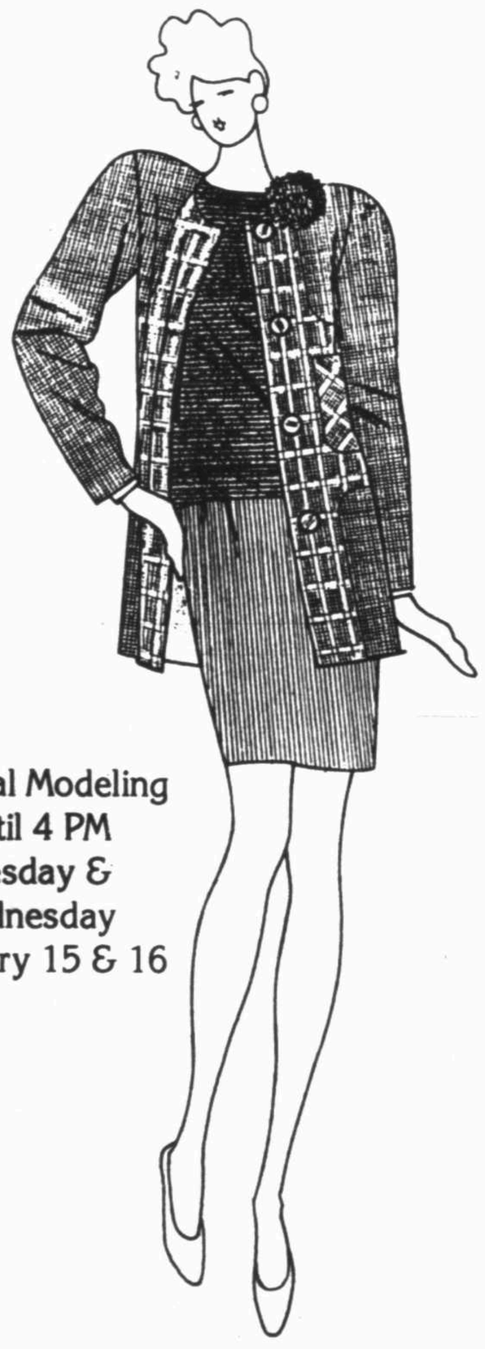

Some people's lives are filled with terrible troubles, most of which never happen. Perhaps the worst things in life are imaginary, for we have more time to worry about them.

We've never known anyone who actually kept a record, but it would be interesting to list the things we worry about and keep a score of how many of these resolved themselves harmlessly, except for the sleepless nights they caused. Let's all try to be more optimistic.

With us, there are no "minor details". Everything we do can be important to those we serve and therefore justifies our closest attention.

NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTION AND PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

TO: ALL PERSONS AND ENTITIES WHO NOW OWN OR WHO HAVE EVER OWNED A ROYALTY INTEREST AND/ OR AN OVERRIDING ROYALTY INTEREST SO AS TO BE ENTITLED TO SHARE IN PRODUCTION FROM THE 523 OIL AND/OR GAS WELLS DESCRIBED HEREINAFTER EXCLUDING ANY PERSON OR ENTITY WHO WAS A PARTY PLAINTIFF TO A LAWSUIT STYLED PARKER & 1994, PARSLEY PETROLEUM COMPANY, ET AL., V. DRESSER INDUSTRIES, INC., ET AL., BEING CAUSE NO. MO-89-CA-193 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS, MIDLAND/ ODESSA DIVISION, OR WHO WAS A PARTY PLAINTIFF TO A LAWSUIT STYLED PARKER & PARSLEY PETROLEUM COMPANY, ET AL., V. DRESSER INDUSTRIES, INC., ET AL., BEING CAUSE NO. 39,224 IN THE 238TH DISTRICT COURT OF MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS.

THE 523 WELLS WHICH ARE THE SUBJECT OF THE PENDING CLASS ACTION ARE SITUATED IN THE SPRABERRY TREND IN MIDLAND, MARTIN, REAGAN, UPTON, CRANE, LOVING, GLASSCOCK, AND ANDREWS COUNTIES, TEXAS, AND ARE OPERATED BY PARKER & PARSLEY PETROLEUM COMPANY. THEY ARE FULLY DESCRIBED IN EXHIBIT A TO THE PLAINTIFFS' FIRST AMENDED ORIGINAL PETITION FILED IN THE ABOVE ENTITLED LAWSUIT.

Your rights may be affected by the above entitled lawsuit (the "Class Action") and a proposed settlement of the Class Action. The six above named Plaintiffs are the designated Class Representatives (the "Class Representatives"). Class Counsel are Don Graf and Jim Hund of McCleskey, Harriger, Brazill & Graf, L.L.P., Vann Culp and Marc Skeen of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, Inc., and John L. Shepherd (the "Class Counsel"). The Class Representatives, Class Counsel, and all the Defendants have agreed to the proposed settlement; and the Class Representatives and Class Counsel recommend that all Class members accept the proposed settlement.

The Class Representatives allege that the Defendants and their predecessors, including BJ Titan Services Company, intentionally and knowingly engaged in a scheme of improperly treating and/or fracturing the 523 wells commencing in 1983, which conduct resulted in injury to all royalty and overriding royalty interests and owners entitled to share in production from the wells. The Class Representatives allege that the Defendants' conduct constituted fraud, gross negligence, and negligence and seek recovery of damages for the members of the Class for alleged loss of past and future production of oil and gas from the 523 wells and alleged reduction of fair market value of the royalty and overriding royalty interest in the 523 wells owned by members of the Class.

The Defendants deny the Class Representatives' allegations in all respects and deny that the Defendants have any liability whatsoever to any member of the Class.

On September 17, 1991, the Court determined that the lawsuit should be maintained as a class action on behalf of all present and former owners of royalty and/or overriding royalty interest in the 523 wells who were not parties plaintiff to either of the two Parker & Parsley Petroleum Company, et al., v Dresser Industries, Inc., et al., lawsuits identified above in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland/Odessa Division, and 238th District Court of Midland County, Texas. The Court has preliminarily approved a proposed settlement between the Class and the Defendants. If you are a member of the Class, you may be entitled to a portion of the Settlement Fund to be paid by the Defendants pursuant to the proposed settlement. Also, if you are a member of the Class,you have the right to exclude yourself from the Class or to object to the settlement. In any such event, you will be required to mail certain information to the Committee of Counsel not later than April 15, 1994.

Persons who have been identified as possible members of the class are being advised by mail of their rights with respect to the Class Action. This Notice is being published because some Class members may not receive the mailed notice either because they have not been identified as members of the Class or the mailing information is inaccurate. If you are (or believe you may be) a member of the Class but do not receive or have not received individual notice of your rights by mail by February 1, 1994, you should immediately notify the Committee of Counsel, P. O. Box No. 6823, Lubbock, Texas 79493, giving your name, telephone number, current address and social security number. You will then be mailed a more detailed explanation of the rights of Class members in the Class Action, including a detailed list of the 523 wells involved, and will be placed on the mailing list for any future notificaitons regarding this suit.

A hearing for final approval of the settlement is scheduled in the 238th Judicial District Court of Midland County, Texas, on June 30, 1994, at 9:00 a.m. If you have not received notice by mail, you should notify the Committee of Counsel immediately at the address shown above. If you are a member of the Class and do not file an election to be excluded from the Class postmarked no later then April 15, 1994, you will be bound by the final judgment entered in the Class Action regardless of whether the proposed settlement is finally approved. Likewise, if you wish to object to the settlement, you must notify the committee of Counsel by mail postmarked not later then April 15, 1994.

Midland College to bestow first ex-student awards

Staff Report

Carmen Edwards and Dave Perkins have been selected to receive the first Midland College Distinguished Ex-Student Awards during half-time of the Midland College-South Plains College game Monday at Chaparral Center.

The awards will be presented by the Ex-Students Association of Midland College. ESAMC president Gloria Griffith said Perkins, a local radio personality, and Ms. Edwards, an instructor at MC, were typical choices from among many possibilities.

"We wanted to honor former students who have contributed to the college and represent the college well in the community," Griffith said. "Mr. Perkins and Ms. Edwards could be considered as examples of the many Midland College students who have made significant contributions to their communities. Ms. Edwards has returned to MC as an instructor. Mr. Perkins is one of the best known radio personalities in the Permian Basin and promotes MC whenever possible."

Perkins is part owner of KCDQ-radio, a station that recently broke new ground in the business by going to a format that combines "Hot Country with Classic Rock." He is on the air doing the station's morning show Monday through Friday.

Perkins is a graduate of Houston Northbrook High School. He transferred to Midland College from the University of Houston in the fall of 1979. He also was a walk-on for the MC golf team. With the exception of three years he spent in Cleveland, Ohio, he has worked in radio in the Permian Basin since he was a student at MC.

Ms. Edwards, a nursing instructor, earned a bachelor's of science in nursing from West Texas State and her master's degree in nursing from the University of Texas-El Paso. She had attended Midland College before earning her associate degree in nursing from Odessa College. She has worked at Midland College since 1986.

She has done volunteer work with the American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society. Previously, she has served as ACS chairperson on the nurses' committee, public education, cancer prevention study and speaker's bureau.

Accomplished author to teach writing seminar

Staff Report

Nancy Robinson Masters, author and writing teacher from Abilene, returns to Midland College for another writing seminar on Feb. 26.

Her program runs from 9 a.m.- 4 p.m. in the Roadrunner Room, Student Center. Registration is required in advance. The fee is $25.

Her topic for the seminar is "More Writing For Children," a how-to class on writing material for the rapidly-growing markets of children's publications.

She will explain the various submarkets in children's publications and how to write for each of them. This class is a continuation of one which Ms. Masters presented last fall on writing for children's publications, but she emphasizes that attendance at the previous course isn't necessary and that new material is being presented for this session.

Persons interested should register in advance with the Continuing Education Office, located in the Administration Building, or by calling 685-4518.

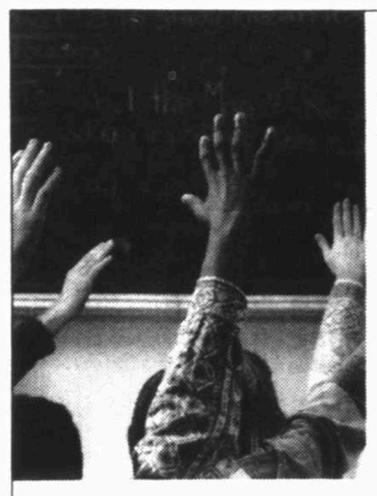

Ms. Masters has sold more than 3,000 articles and recently completed the first of 10 books for 7- to 11-year-old readers.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College's Monday basketball game promises thrills

by H.A. Tuck

Monday evening the basketball game is the featured attraction and rightly so with Midland College seeking to stay ahead of South Plains College. The Chaps pulled out a big win last Monday in Odessa, knocking off the OC Wranglers 78-70 just days after the Wranglers were named the nation's top team. When OC came to Midland last month, the Chaps were No. 3 and the Wranglers No. 6. That changed with OC's win.

Tuck

And immediately after the OC loss in January, the Chaps travelled to Levelland where they lost to South Plains, their second conference defeat. Now the Chaparrals have a chance to return the favor to South Plains, who have been tied with MC for second place the past two weeks.

To get into the spirit of the game, you should come out a little early and visit the Tailgate Party being sponsored by the MC Cheerleaders in the vicinity of the athletic dorms. All current and former students are invited to adjourn to the Student Center following the basketball game for a post-game dance sponsored by MCLASS (Midland College Latin American Student Society).

A final note about the game. You can watch an MC team which already has 20-plus wins and some great talent you'll be seeing and hearing about in years to come. Their final home game is Monday, Feb. 21, against New Mexico Junior College.

For the Chaps, however, they face a second test this week as they must make the long trip to Roswell for their third game of the season against the New Mexico Military Institute Broncos. They played NMMI at Odessa last fall in the conference pre-season classic and then played them against last month in Midland. MC won both games, but the Broncos are really tough at the small Cahoon Armory, especially when there are 900 screaming cadets and no friendly MC fans. You can listen to all the MC games on KCRS, 550 AM. Game time is 8 p.m. CST.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees begins at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, which is located in the Administration Building. Among the items on the agenda are re-appointments of administrators and some staff personnel for 1994-95, instructional division report, and call for election of three trustee positions later this spring.

Area employers have an opportunity to visit with Midland College students next month at the MC Job/Career Fair '94, which is scheduled for Thursday, March 3, from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Deadline for signing up for local firms and organizations is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 18. If you are seeking part-time or full-time employees or recruits, please call Job Placement Coordinator David Terry at 685-4501 or 685-4716 to reserve your spot in the fair.

Former MC tennis star Lucie Ludvigova won another championship last weekend. Now playing for the University of Texas at Austin, Ms. Ludvigova took the Rolex National Intercollegiate Indoor Championship crown last Sunday in Dallas. It was her third collegiate grand slam title. She played on the final MC women's team in 1991-92, which went out with a national championship. Only a freshman, she transferred to Grand Canyon University in Phoenix for the 1992-93 year. She won the NAIA title there before transferring to UT, where she is a junior. Her brother, Jan Ludvig, played seven years in the National Hockey League. Ms. Ludvigova has indicated she may turn professional at the end of this season. Ms. Ludvigova, who was top-seeded in the Rolex Indoor, defeated number two seed Angela Lettiere of Georgia 6-1 6-3 for the third time in as many collegiate grand slam events.

Report: Dallas to get NAFTA office

DALLAS (AP) — The Clinton administration has selected Dallas over a half-dozen U.S. cities as the site of a three-nation panel on labor issues related to NAFTA, The Dallas Morning News reported in Saturday's editions.

City officials say the panel, known as the labor secretariat, would position Dallas as hub of the North American Free Trade Agreement among the United States, Canada and Mexico. They say the secretariat would help attract business to the area and improve the city's image in the international marketplace.

The labor secretariat, created under last year's side agreement to NAFTA, will advise the three nations on enforcement of labor laws and monitor conditions in labor markets, including unemployment, wages and productivity.

"We haven't been notified officially that the NAFTA secretariat is going to be in Dallas, although it is looking quite good," Mayor Steve Bartlett said Friday. "We should know something next week."

"Inside NAFTA," a biweekly publication on international trade, first reported Dallas' selection, according to The Morning News. The newsletter quoted Joaquin Otero, deputy undersecretary at the Labor Department's Bureau of International Labor Affairs, as saying Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Labor Secretary Robert Reich had accepted Dallas' bid.

However, U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, cautioned that the decision was not finalized.

"I'm very optimistic, but we just don't know yet," he said. "If there were a firm decision, I think I would have heard."

According to "Inside NAFTA," Dallas won the labor agency because of financial inducements that include free downtown office space. Other factors included a strong business community, Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and the presence of both Mexican and Canadian consulates in the city.

Joe "Chip" Pitts, a lawyer at Baker & McKenzie who works with clients on NAFTA, said the labor secretariat would put Dallas ahead of other U.S. cities in the free-trade arena.

"It confirms the feeling that a lot of us have that Dallas is coming into its own as an international center, and this should further efforts to 'internationalize' Dallas," he said.

Besides the labor secretariat, the trade pact authorizes other administrative agencies, including an environmental secretariat and a secretariat on import surges. The locations of those agencies have not yet been determined.

A site also has yet to be selected for the overall secretariat.

The trade pact, which went into effect Jan. 1, aims to remove nearly all barriers to trade and investment among the United States, Mexico and Canada over the next 15 years.

Jury awards $3.2 million in damages

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal jury has awarded $3.2 million to more than a dozen residents of an apartment complex who accused a bank of turning down their loan because of discrimination.

The Forest Apartment residents, who wanted to make the complex a cooperative, had sought a $330,000 mortgage application from First Gibraltar Bank.

First Gibraltar, now First Madison FSB, declined despite guarantees and support from the city, the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Cooperative Bank.

The bank said the coop mortgage denial was just a business decision. But Gordon Simms, once the apartment manager, said it was blatant redlining — discrimination based on a neighborhood's racial makeup, which in this case was mostly black.

A federal jury agreed Friday with Simms, and the award included $2 million in punitive damages. First Gibraltar has promised to appeal.

"It's so stupid for this kind of thing to happen, and it's so unnecessary and it's so hard on the people and the neighborhood when this kind of thing happens," Simms said.

He came up with the idea in 1987 of creating a coop where tenants could own shares in the complex, partly to make the apartments a permanent home and partly to raise money for needed repairs.

State's two top courts attract field of 25 candidates in 1994

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Candidates talking tough on crime, those pledging campaign reform and several with familiar-sounding names all are featured in the primaries for the state's two top courts.

A total of 25 candidates — 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans — are running for three seats each on the Texas Supreme Court and on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The Supreme Court is the highest civil court in the state, while the Court of Criminal Appeals is the state's highest appeals court for criminal matters.

Members on both courts are elected to six-year terms.

Several candidates for the Court of Criminal Appeals races argue that the court has overturned criminal convictions on minor technicalities.

Those critics point to the court's decision to order a new trial for a man sentenced to death for fatally shooting Tracy Gee of Houston.

The court held 5-4 that his rights were violated because the trial judge allowed the names of potential jurors to be shuffled twice. The court said state law allows one random shuffle.

The split decision also separates two candidates vying for the position of presiding judge on the court. The incumbent Democrat, Mike McCormick, voted with the minority to uphold the death penalty. His surprise challenger, Democrat Charles Baird, who already is a member of the court, voted with the majority.

No GOP candidate is running for presiding judge.

In the Place 1 race, incumbent Democrat Charles Campbell faces no primary opposition. Two Houston attorneys, John Cossum and Steve Mansfield, are seeking the GOP nod.

The Place 2 race has attracted the largest field, with five candidates in the Democratic primary and three in the Republican race.

The incumbent, Judge Chuck Miller, decided not to seek re-election. Miller is facing allegations that he used state employees and equipment for personal and political purposes.

Miller has denied any wrongdoing. He said he decided against running for office because of personal reasons, but has complained that the allegations didn't surface until after he left the Democratic Party and joined the GOP.

Seeking the Republican nomination for his job are Sam Bayless, a former Dallas County prosecutor and former trial attorney for the U.S. Justice Department; Cathy Cochran Herasimchuk, a former Harris County assistant district attorney; and Sharon Keller, a former Dallas County assistant district attorney.

Five candidates vying for the Democratic nomination are Gene Kelly, Norman Lanford, Betty Marshall, Frances "Poppy" Northcutt and Bennie Ray.

Many political observers believe Kelly, a relative unknown, has done well in some races because his name reminds people of the famous dancer.

Lanford was a Republican when he served as a criminal district judge in Houston but switched parties after he lost a re-election race in 1992.

Ms. Marshall is co-chief of the appellate section of the Tarrant County district attorney's office. Her late husband, C. Chris Marshall, was killed in the 1992 shooting rampage at the Tarrant County courthouse.

Ms. Northcutt has been an advocate of women's causes and involved in civic and political organizations.

In the Texas Supreme Court races, the most spirited primary is in the Democratic race for Place 1, where incumbent Raul Gonzalez faces challenges from Rene Haas and Bill Yarborough.

Ms. Haas has criticized Gonzalez for taking contributions from attorneys with business before the court.

Gonzalez has said that Ms. Haas is being hypocritical because she has given money to other Supreme Court justice candidates in past races.

Bill Yarborough said he supports automatic removal of a judge from a case where an attorney in the case has contributed more than $100 to that judge's campaign.

Two candidates are vying for the Republican nomination in the Place 1 race, George Busch, and Oliver Kitzman.

Kitzman said if he becomes the GOP nominee he will not campaign if Gonzalez is the Democratic nominee because he respects Gonzalez. But, he said, he would run against Ms. Haas.

Busch said he expects some benefit from his name's similar sound to former president George Bush and George W. Bush, the president's eldest son and a candidate for governor this year.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

Loss of interest in favorite activities, hobbies, sports.

School problems - slipping grades, absenteeism.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.

Years later, Camp Parks radiation experiments provoke questions, fears

By Robert Dvorchak
Associated Press Writer

PLEASANTON, Calif. — Robert Giordano never thought of himself as an unwitting guinea pig or believed a daughter who died of severe birth defects was a Cold War casualty.

But now he wonders.

As a teen-ager, he was paid $1.25 an hour to tend sheep that were part of hundreds of radiation experiments at Camp Parks, an obscure military base 40 miles east of San Francisco in California's picturesque Livermore Valley.

Giordano's chores included burying the droopy-skinned, black-faced beasts who died of radiation. Their limbs would fall off in his bare hands as he pitched them into graves.

His work at this atomic ranch didn't concern him even when a daughter was born in 1983 without a trachea and with damaged internal organs. But renewed interest in radiation experiments has created a nagging unease.

"I would like to know if there's any possible connection to those experiments and what happened to my daughter. Nothing will bring that baby back. But it would be a little easier to put behind us if we knew for sure one way or another," said Giordano, 47.

"I knew they were testing the animals for radiation, but I was never given any warnings or special instructions," he added in a recent interview. "Shouldn't I have had some type of protective clothing or gloves or anything? How hazardous was it? Were they 100 percent sure we weren't wandering in the wrong area? Does being exposed to radiation cause birth defects?"

Giordano's questions, fears and doubts — despite assurances that they are unfounded — aren't the only ones with elusive answers.

Thousands of people and their relatives have been pondering the legacies of the nuclear age since December, when U.S. Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary asked the government to review all radiation experiments and to compensate those who were harmed.

One of these Cold War battlegrounds was Camp Parks, a 2,000-acre site where the Navy and the Office of Civil Defense conducted tests between 1959 to 1980 on how to survive a nuclear attack.

Hundreds of tests were done with fallout shelters, crops grown in irradiated soil, farm animals bombarded with radiation, and radioactive sand used to simulate fallout.

At the same time, people lived on or around the base. The Pleasanton School District operated a school seven blocks from where the radioactive sand was made. And the Job Corps — a federal program for disadvantaged kids — used buildings where experiments were done.

Although precautionary fences and warning signs were erected around "hot" areas, similar tests under modern day standards would be impossible because of the threat of exposure.

"They wouldn't be allowed to do that today. It would never be approved. Never. There would be more controls," said James L. Thomas, who served as a radiation safety officer at Camp Parks for seven years. "You'd have to be absolutely, 100 percent sure the radiation would be contained and enclosed and that no one could get into the area."

Thomas and those who conducted the tests say there are no health hazards, and inspectors said the base was clean in 1983. But to dispel fears, camp commander Lt. Col. Mark Nelson ordered a re-examination of the work. A report is due by the end of March.

"We'd all like to know if there really is a nuclear bogeyman out there," said Nelson, who served in the Persian Gulf War as a combat engineer with the Army's 82nd Airborne Division. "I'd like the image to go away we're some kind of time bomb."

The review is being done by the earth sciences consulting firm of Woodward-Clyde. And some of the report is being written by James Sartor — project manager on many of the Camp Parks radiation experiments.

"There's no danger in what we did," Sartor said. "There were no human guinea pigs involved in any of the experiments. Employees were never purposely part of the tests. We had a very rigid health physics program."

The tests were monitored independently by the Atomic Energy Commission, which in 1975 became the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"There was no problem. They took air samples and radiation surveys. There was no hanky-panky. Everything was above board. These were highly competent people," said Ray Fish, a retired safety officer with the AEC who monitored the tests. "People should have a whole lot of confidence in the end results and in their inspectors."

During an era when people were building backyard bomb shelters, a Camp Parks test involved a 100-person fallout shelter.

To determine its habitability, volunteers lived inside the bunker for up to 14 days — the time it would take fallout to dissipate. One test involved inmates from the nearby Santa Rita County Prison.

And on April 15, 1960, the bunker was rimmed with tons of burning scrap lumber to test its ability to withstand the heat of a bomb.

Robert Campbell, an adviser to the National Association of Atomic Survivors, claimed more than wood was involved, however. He said radioactive material — codenamed "Rolla" — was placed in the flaming piles to simulate a nuclear bomb, and volunteers were exposed to "hefty doses" of radiation.

Sartor, Fish and Col. Nelson flatly deny Campbell's allegations. Any documents that could prove or disprove Campbell's claim are under review by the Department of Energy and are unavailable for viewing.

"There exists no public documentation of it," Campbell admitted. But he added: "It shows what happens when the government or a group of people go amok with science."

Officials said the bunker was tested for its ability to shield against radiation, but no humans were inside at the time. Measurements were made by instruments.

L.A. quake victims continue desperate search for lost pets

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Since the Jan. 17 earthquake, 71-year-old Arlowyn Schapers has been combing the streets of the San Fernando Valley, looking in trash bins and under damaged houses for her gray kitten, Piper, who ran off in the chaos of the tremor.

Mrs. Schapers, a widow who lives alone, was close to tears when she returned to the West Valley Animal Shelter last week only to find that Piper was still lost.

Thousands of panicked dogs and cats, some ferrets and even a few horses disappeared after the earthquake and are still missing, despite a citywide effort to reunite lost pets with owners. Many were killed, but others simply ran off when fences collapsed and buildings were damaged.

City animal shelters like West Valley have been inundated with lost and sick pets that shelter officials say they are struggling to care for amid limited space and resources. Still, the officials have for now ruled out destroying these animals in the hope that they will be claimed or adopted.

Around the city and particularly in the San Fernando Valley, the epicenter of the Jan. 17 quake, distraught pet owners have posted signs and photographs of their animals.

"The biggest problem is that 90 percent of the animals do not have identification, and this has drastically slowed the city's efforts to reunite them with their proper owners," said Nancy A. Moriarty, a spokeswoman for the Los Angeles Department of Animal Regulation.

Because of poor communication among city animal workers after the quake, hundreds of lost animals were taken to shelters far away from their homes, Ms. Moriarty said, making it difficult for the owners to know where and how to find their lost pets.

City shelters were not equipped to handle the 100 or so pets that were found each day for a week after the quake. Some shelters are still crammed, with as many as six dogs sharing 4-by-6-foot cages in which colds and other ailments spread rapidly.

In hopes of clearing out the shelters, the city conducted a free citywide pet adoption day Saturday. The city is also being helped by the Humane Society and several volunteer organizations, which have provided free medical care and kennel space. National animal groups also sent workers from other regions to assist the shelters.

Despite officials' insistence that the lost animals are not being destroyed, many people who find pets are not bringing them to shelters.

MIDLAND CENTRAL APPRAISAL DISTRICT, Plaintiff and the above amounts reflect all taxes, penalties and interest due those taxing units.

Listed in the caption above are separate suits, now pending, in which Petitions have been filed to collect delinquent property taxes and to foreclose applicable liens. The listing for each suit sets out: (1) the suit number; (2) the Plaintiff Tax Unit; (3) the Defendants cited by publication and personally served; (4) the date the petition was filed; (5) the return date of this Citation; (6) the property description; and (7) the total amount of taxes, penalties and interest due the Plaintiff if payment is made during the month this Citation by Publication is dated.

IN THE NAME AND BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE STATE OF TEXAS, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN AS FOLLOWS:

TO:
All Defendants named above.

EACH SUIT IS FOR: (1) Delinquent property taxes owed to Plaintiffs on each property described above, the amounts also shown above which include penalties and interest due Plaintiffs up to the time of this Publication; each suit is also on file to establish and foreclose tax liens on each such property; and (2) All delinquent property taxes, penalties, interest and costs which may be proved by any taxing units.

COPIES OF PLEADINGS: Filed with the District Clerk (Rule 72, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure). A copy of the Petition with citation is not required (Rule 117a, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure).

ADDITIONAL NOTICE: No further notice or citation to you is required on claims of Plaintiffs and other taxing units, including additional taxes which may be shown to be delinquent up to the date of judgment. Parties to this suit must take notice of and answer to all claims and pleadings filed by other parties hereto.

This citation lists the Defendants in each separate suit whose names are known, the descriptions of the properties in each suit on which property taxes owed to Plaintiffs are delinquent, due and unpaid and the amounts of such delinquent taxes now due on each property, inclusive of penalty, interest and costs. When attached to any pleading in each suit, this citation is made a part of each such pleading for all pertinent purposes.

In addition to the Defendants listed by name above, whether the same be person, corporations, trustees, joint stock associations or other legal entities or juristic persons, there also are made Defendants in each suit with regard to each property where applicable:

Group 1. Any and all undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown person, proprietors, corporations, trustees, partnerships, joint stock associations and other legal entities or juristic persons owning all or any part of the properties described in this citation or having claiming any interest, legal or equitable, in and to all or any part of said properties, or liens thereon, including adverse claimants;

Group 2. Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown stockholders of all Defendant corporations;

Group 3. Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown members of all partnerships, joint stock associations and other legal entities which are Defendants;

Group 4. Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown spouses of all named individual Defendants and all individual Defendants designated in Groups 1 through 3; and Group 5. Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown successors in title (of whatsoever nature and by whatsoever means), heirs, assigns, devises and legal representatives of all named Defendants designated in Groups 1 through 4, whether or not such Defendants be deceased or under some legal disability.

For the purposes of citation, if and when the names of the foregoing designated Defendants, can be determined and made certain, each such Defendant may be cited by name when such information becomes available, together with a brief description of the capacity in which each name has been made certain.

Defendants, properties and taxes involved are listed separately for each suit in this citation under separate property numbers, the Defendants named under each property number being those who own the property described under that same property number of have or claim some interest, legal or equitable, in and to said property, or liens thereon, or interest in property comprising all or part of pooled and/or unitized tracts and mutations of such property. Taxes shown due under each property number are those delinquent on the property described under that same property number. All lot, block, survey and group numbers, etc., herein are inclusive of all numbers appearing. All property herein was located within or had a taxable situs within the county named above and also within the geographical boundaries of the Plaintiff tax unit at the times taxes were assessed. Where descriptions herein refer to Deed Records or other records, such references are to volumes and pages in the specified records of the County named in the caption hereof, and to such record referred to herein reference is made for all purposes.

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and defend each suit listed herein in which you are named as a Defendant on the first Monday after the expiration of forty-two (42) days after the date of issuance of this citation hereof, the 28th day of March, 1994, same being the 9th day of February, A.D., 1994 (which is the return day of such citation), before said honorable District Court in the courthouse of said county, then and there to show cause why judgment should not be rendered for such taxes, interest, penalties, attorney fees and costs, and condemning said property and ordering foreclosure of the constitutional and statutory tax liens thereon for taxes due the Plaintiffs and any other taxing units, together with all interest, penalties, attorney fees and costs allowed by law up to and including the day of judgment herein.

NOW YOU MAY PAY BY CHECK

A New Feature For Your Convenience

Now, when responding to a Voice Introductions personal ad you may choose to pay for your calling by check rather than calling our regular 900 number. Here is why paying by check might be right for you.

- If you have a rotary telephone you may purchase calling time by check, then use any touch-tone phone to call our system. You could call from a pay phone, your office or a friend's house to use the time you purchased.
- If you have blocked 900 calling on your phone, you may now pay by check and still maintain your 900 block.
- If you share your phone with another person, paying by check can help you maintain your privacy.
- When you pay by check you'll know ahead of time how much you are spending and can budget your purchases as you like.

When you make a check purchase you'll get the information you need to respond to ads by using a special toll-free number. The time you purchase will be available to you the following business day, because we will take your check over the phone. Calling packages of 10 or 20 minutes are available at $1.99 per minute. Just call our office at 1-800-836-0557 ext. 326 to find out more. Please have your check book handy when you call.

Designed To Be Perfect

Text by Kes Gilhome

Jim Leonard, the builder of over 200 homes in the Midland area, has come up with yet another gem in the shape of 2220 Bradford, in Polo Park. Based on a very popular floor plan, Jim has used his years of experience to add a number of unconventional elements to this lovely four bedroom house.

One of the most obvious of these elements is the double fireplace. Shared between the den and the formal living area, this is actually two gas-plumbed fireplaces in one. The interesting design element here, is the position of the fireplaces. In the family room, the brick fireplace is conventionally situated, but on the other side, in the formal living room, the fireplace is in the corner of the room.

This angled design is an example of the way Jim looks at building houses. His designs are very practical as well as elegant, (for example the double fireplace heats two rooms at once!)

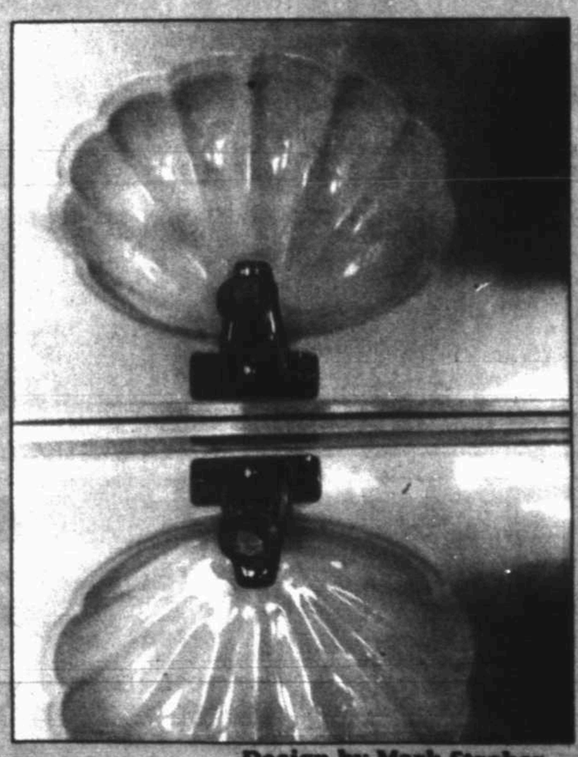

This new construction, valued at $148,900.00 is completely finished, and a family could move in almost immediately. The only thing left to do is for the new homeowner to choose wallpaper, door styles and other accessories.

There are many interesting touches to the home, such as the high ceilings, the plantation shutters on all of the front windows, and the rounded corners on all of the kitchen cabinets. All of these little details add up to produce a house of consummate character and style.

Mary Jo Drury of the Prudential Adobe Realtors will be showing this house to the public between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. this afternoon. To arrange a alterative viewing or to get more information about this house, the area it is set in and the Polo Park privileges that accompany it, call her at 683-9548.

Real Estate Facts - Write it down

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

In every real estate transaction, there is a written set of "instructions" called a "Contract of Sale" or "Purchase Agreemene." It is the document signed by both buyers and sellers, and contains details of their agreement.

The contract begins as a purchase "offer", and contains the terms of sale proposed by the buyers. This includes their "offered" price, the terms of payment, a closing date, the possession date, and other information. It may also spell out what personal property, if any, is to be included in the purchase price.

If accepted by the sellers, this document becomes a binding contract. If not, negotiations will continue between buyers and sellers until agreement is reached. At that point the acceptable written document becomes binding on both sets of parties.

The contract then becomes the basis for all further activities leading up to a final closing of the transaction. Attorneys, mortgage lenders, surveyors, title companies, and others involved all work to carry out the terms of that written document.

Because of the many details involved in a real estate sale, all agreements must be in writing to be enforceable. If they weren't the slightest disagreement between buyers and sellers could cause an impasse, possibly resulting in a "no sale."

It is very important that both buyers and sellers be sure their agreement reflects their intentions. The time for negotiation is before the contract is signed, not after.

If the sellers want to dig up their prize rose bush and take it with them, even that should be inc luded in the contract. When in doubt about whether an item is to be included in the sale, ask the real estate agent for a clarification, then include it to be sure.

Contracts and real estate go together. Then assure both sellers and buyers of a smooth closing, and a satisfying real estate transac tion./

The History of Organized Real Estate

Our State Association

Pat Orseth
President/Midland
Association of Realtors

The REALTOR ASSOCIATION is structured with a National Association, a state association, and a local association. The term "Three-Way Agreement" refers to the written agreement of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS with the State Association and the local Boards of that state. Basically, "It is an agreement in writing between the National Association and its Member Boards granting them the right to use the term REALTOR and REALTOR-ASSOCIATE within their territorial jurisdiction to individuals qualified for membership. In turn the Member Boards agree to accept the charge of properly granting the use of and properly regulating the use of the terms REALTOR and REALTOR-ASSOCIATE to subscribe to the Code of Ethics of the National Association; and to uphold and enforce the Code within the Board's jurisdiction. The local Boards also agree to maintain membership in good standing in the State Association of the state in which located."

The state association of Realtors closely integrates the work of local, state and national components. Some of the duties and responsibilities performed by the state association include:

*Coordinating statewide programs and activities among local associations.

* Serving as a liaison with the state licensing agency to promote effective real estate and licensing and regularoty activity.

* Sponsors anual leadership conferences to train new leadership.

* Provides continuing education for REALTORS through the REALTORS Institute leading to the GRI designation.

* Sponsors "REALTOR of the Year" program to select the state's outstanding REALTOR.

* Sponsors regional district or area meetings to provide a grass-roots liaison with local associations.

* Reviews the legal implications of state law and city or county ordinances as they relate to real estate.

*implements policy set forth by the National Association for the state association and its local associations, members of such associations, and individual members of state associations.

A state association provides specialized expertise to local associations and to the National Association when local or regional matters affect common purpoxe.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, February 13, 1994 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Snow blankets a cable tool rig at Petroleum Museum during recent snow storm.

Activity slows

Drilling activity in both the Permian Basin and the U.S. slowed during the first week of February, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count fell seven rigs to 95 for the week, below the year-ago count of 106.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin, with 15 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 10- rigs and Midland County with eight rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count fell 26 rigs to 752, but remains above the year-ago count of 720.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma showed the sharpest decline, 13 rigs, while the only state to report a gain was Kansas, one rig.

Southwest purchase

Southwest Royalties Inc., Midland, has finaled the acquisition of eleven producing oil and gas properties on four separate leases in the Guinn field of Lynn County, Texas.

Southwest said it acquired the properties from an undisclosed Fort Worth independent producer for $720,000.

The operated properties are expected to increase reserves by 156,000 barrels of oil per equivalent.

Oil prices show no market signs of warming, as snow coats a wellhead.

Oil prices

Rising U.S. crude supplies sent prices sharply lower at mid-week, with March contracts for West Texas Intermediate falling to $14.60 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Late in the week, prices eased to $14.56 a barrel. The posted price was lowered to $13 a barrel.

Natural gas prices got some support from cold weather in the Northeast, with March contracts closing at $2.37 per Mcf on the NYMEX.

Hart magazines

POTOMAC, Md. — Hart Publications Inc. President Jim deGraffenreid has announced that beginning with the February 1994 issue, the six regional editions of Oil and Gas World magazine will be combined and delivered nationally as Hart's Oil and Gas World.

Hart's regional editions of Oil and Gas World magazine provided coverage specific to the nation's six predominant energy regions — Northeast, Gulf Coast, Midcontinent, Southwest, Western and Pacific.

A regular feature of the new Hart's Oil and Gas World magazine will be a cover story featuring a prominent regional industry leader.

MAKING THE SALE

New Mexico focuses on new gas markets

■ A changing energy market has caused New Mexico to look at new marketing efforts for a top natural resource.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

When the New Mexico Conference on Energy's Economic Impact meets this week at the Robert O. Anderson Schools of Management in Albuquerque, one of the top topics will be new markets for New Mexico natural gas.

In the past gas marketing meant producers produced all they could and sold it to a pipeline for whatever price they would pay.

But open transportation, unbundling of rates, Canadian competition and fuel-on-fuel competition has changed all that It has created a new era and a new interest in gas marketing. The interest is especially keen in Southeast New Mexico, where a coordinated effort is being led by the Southeast New Mexico Industrial Development Corp. to establish a marketing plan for the area's number one natural resource — natural gas.

Joining the effort are producers, processors, associations, the state of New Mexico and local industrial development entities are intensely focused on the best way to develop and market the area's number one resource — natural gas. When the Oil & Gas conference convenes on February 24, officials of Mexico will be present to discuss the potential for gas sales to Mexico, a change in direction for gas leaving the state.

John Paul Pitts/ Reporter-Telegram

A CNG conference in Roswell was successful in markeing natural gas as transportation fuel.

All agree that changes must be made in gas marketing, and that it must take on a regional flare. Corporations have already taken the lead in adapting to new market conditions. That was seen when Phillips Natural Gas Co., one of the largest gas gathering, processing and marketing corporations in Southeast New Mexico, recently reorganized in order to become

THE OTHER CORNER

Coal seam gas brings state new dimension

■ Coal seam gas proves industry ingenuity, power of oil and gas incentives

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

It's not in the Permian Basin, but no discussion of New Mexico energy would be complete without mentioning coal seam gas.

Back in the late seventies, and even before, everyone knew that deep coal seams throughout New Mexico, contained both natural gas and water. But no one knew how much of either.

It was also known that methane gas molecules adsorbed on the surface of the coal seam would pop off when the water was pumped off.

But could enough water be pumped off to produce a commerical quantity of methane?

That was a question that haunted many oil companies in the San Juan Basin, including Amoco Production Co. "We were determined to learn if enough water could be pumped off to make coal seam gas commerical," remembers Wayne Peterson, Amoco Resource Manager for the San Juan Basin.

If it were possible to pump off enough water and "pop off" enough methane molecules, perhaps a new value could be ascribed to those seams of coal far too deep to mine — maybe it could even become a new source of natural gas.

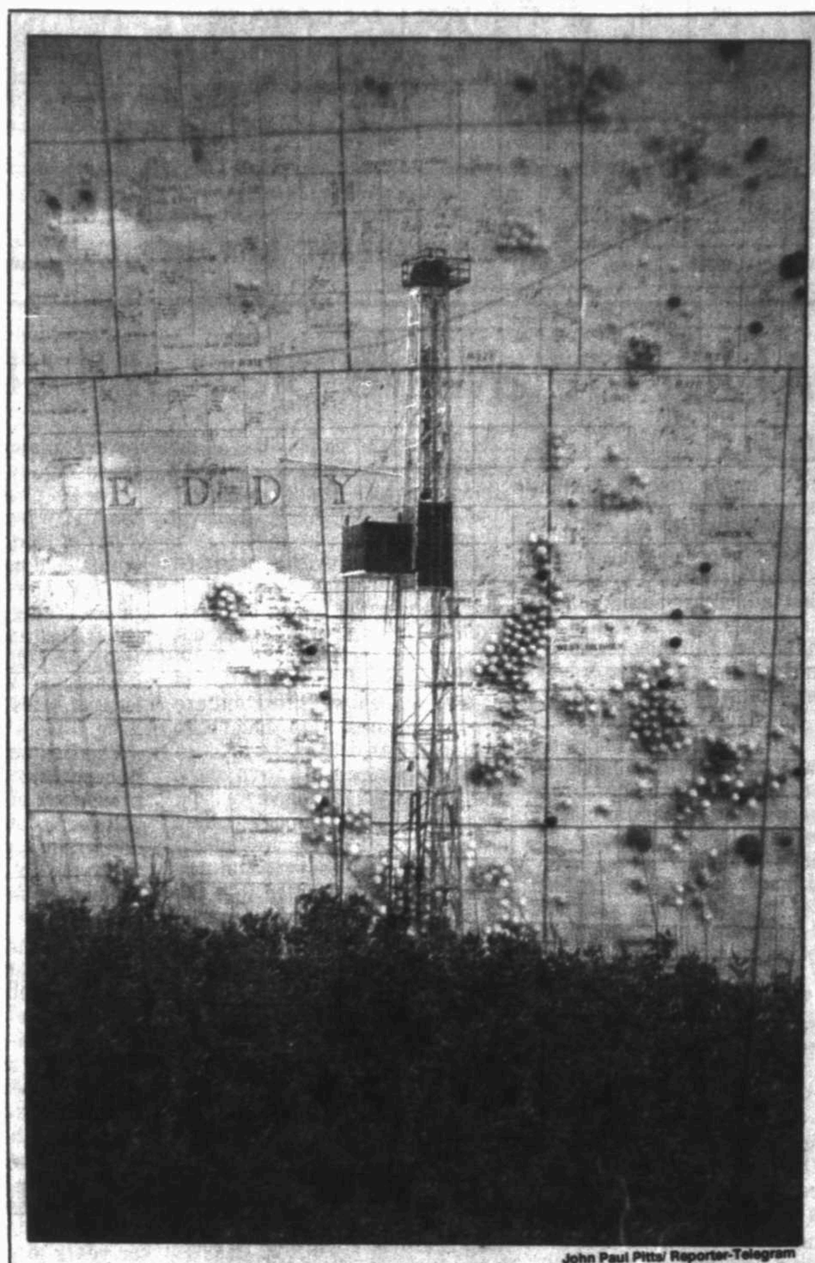

Coal seam gas now accounts for over 40 billion cubic feet of the state's 120 billion cubic feet of monthly production and one-third of the state's $2.03 billion in marketed gas in 1992.

New Mexico statistics

A lot of money could be spent drilling and pumping and hauling water from a coal seam well, but Amoco decided it was a risk worth taking, and launched its experiment in La Plata County, Colorado.

"We began pumping off water, and soon the water began to decline and the gas began to increase, and we thought we might have something big," said Peterson. At the time, however, no one dreamed how big coal seam production would eventually become —

Old fields yield surprising new harvest of oil and gas

■ Delaware sands open new potential for New Mexico oil and gas discoveries.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Arching like a giant half moon across parts of Eddy and Lea counties, the Delaware sands of Southeast New Mexico, a geological trend found at depths of up to 4,000 feet, has become one of the most prolific and profitable onshore ventures for the oil and gas industry in this decade.

SAND DELAWARE

Along with the Dagger Draw field near Carlsbad the trend is keeping rigs running in New Mexico providing badly needed revenues for oil companies, and adding thousands of jobs to the area economy and millions of barrels to New Mexico's economy.

Howard Callender, a toolpusher for Exter Drilling Co., noted that Delaware drilling had kept him and his crews working for almost two years. "It has been a blessing to many a working man in the Permian Basin."

Beach Snyder, president DA&S Well Service in Hobbs, said well service crews in Eddy and Lea counties had been working at near capacity for almost a year, and that Delaware completions have

Winners and losers in energy policy

Pitts

Trying to pick a clear winner in the complicated world oil market these days is about as easy as trying to pick six winning numbers in the Texas Lottery. Five correct numbers won't cut it. Almost right is totally wrong.

Take for example, the case of Russian oil production. If we help Russia, who has the world's largest oil reserves, develop its oil fields in hopes of turning it from a former hostile and communist nation into a friendly democracy, we could win. That's because, peaceful, democratic, free market nations, who have trade and not territorial or ideological expansion on the mind, do not generally pose a threat to other similar nations.

Russia is a teetering nation, and in the recent election we saw it teetering toward the warlike rantings of Vladimir Zhirinovsky, a despot and ultra nationalist, who has been branded as the new Hitler. Turning to such a leader could be fatal to world peace.

Even if we have to shell out several hundreds of million in direct aid and loans to help Russia rebuild its petroleum industry, it would be peanuts compared to what we would have to pay for defense against a broke and desperate nation looking for pride and economic salvation in all the wrong places — namely a return to communism or despotism.

As distasteful as it is to give U.S. taxpayer dollars to Russia, both Bush and Clinton agreed that it would cost far less to convert Russia to a friendly trading partners than it would to fight them on a future battlefield, and most Americans would probably agree.

Clinton rececently announced that he would ask Congress for $900 million in aid for Russia in fiscal 1995, on top of the $3 billion Congress has already approved for the free market transition of the countries. Much of it will go to build an oil industry that is in shambles.

In two recently announced deals, Snyder Oil Corp. of Fort Worth said it was receiving $138 million from the U.S. government's Overseas Private Investment Corp. to restart idle oil wells in the Perma region, 800 miles west of Moscow. The Perma region incidentally, is the region from which the Permian Basin derives its name.

At the same time, Dresser and Petro-Hunt of Dallas announced a $50 million U.S. government loan to begin development of two large fields in eastern Russia. This deal calls for the drilling of 1,180 wells and the construction of several large pipelines, and will result in the production of over 200,000 barrels per day.

If the ventures succeed Dresser, Petro-Hunt and Snyder will win. Russia who stands to collect $11 billion in royalties from the two eastern Russia fields will win. America who has succeeded in bringing the sweet taste of capitalism to desperate people and turning back the "red peril" will have won. It looks like a win-win situation for everyone.

On the otherhand, Russian oil could hopelessly flood the market, drive down oil prices, destroy our domestic oil industry, and impair national played a major role in keeping crews busy.

Several oilfield service companies have even opened branch yards and stores in Carlsbad to handle the increase activity in the area and get closer to the play.

For the City of Hobbs, the development of the Delaware sands, which intensified around 1991, could not have come at a better time. That was about the same time many major oil companies, such as Amoco, Texaco and Conoco were in the process of closing offices in Hobbs and moving personnel to Midland.

Had it not been for the increased activity and jobs created and saved by several very hot exploration plays such as the Delaware sands and the Dagger Draw area near Carlsbad, Hobbs businessmen say the blow to Hobbs economy could have been much worse.

Ask any oilman to name the top five exploration efforts in the U.S. today and it's almost certain that the Delaware Sand will be on the list. Along with New Mexico's other great search to find coal seam gas in the four-corners area.

"The Delaware sand play of Southeast New Mexico is currenly one of the most active and successful oil and gas areas in the country, because oil and gas operators have the potential to significantly increase reserves.

"Continued activity in the area will also substantially increase tax and royalty revenue to help fund New Mexico's public schools and provide increased support for local economies through additional jobs and stronger industry related business," said Jerry Payne, chairman of Santa Fe Energy Resources.

Santa Fe announced recently that it would continue its highly successful Delaware program throughout 1994, despite lower oil prices. Last year the play allowed Santa Fe to increase its net daily oil production by 1,700 barrels and its gas production by 3 million cubic feet.

Ted Collins, president of Collins & Ware, a Midland independent oil company who has drilled over 30 wells in the trend calls the Delaware sand "one of the hottest oil and gas plays in the nation."

Curt Anderson, chief geologist for Collins & Ware explains that the geological trend begins 10 miles west of Carlsbad and makes a half-moon arch through Eddy and Lea counties to the Texas border. He notes that since the play became "hot" two years ago, hundreds of wells have been successfully drilled and completed, and that the trend is only half developed.

No one company is officially credited with kicking off the play, but Pogo Producing Co., of Houston is credited with being one of the first to tap into the bountiful Delaware Sand five years ago.

If there is a single word that best describes the Delaware sand oil and gas trend of Southeast New Mexico, it would have to be serendipity, which says Webster's dictionary is "The aptitude for making good discoveries by accident...good fortune."

Serendipitous to the hilt, the New Mexico trend play has all the essential ingredients of a good oil and gas novel — prolific wells and unexplored horizons. However there is a twist.

The wildcatter twist here is that while the search for significant oil and gas reserves generally leads explorationist to move further out or drill deeper. But in the case of the Delaware it was a matter of drilling shallow wells in a mature producing area that had been drilled and re-drilled.

Oil companies had known about the Delaware sand for years, and when they drilled through it they would encounter "shows" of oil and gas, but the conventional wisdom of the day dictated that the thick sand formation which is several thousand feet thick in some places did not have the porosity needed to make commercial producing wells. As a result, drillers would "blow and go" through the Delaware on their way to deeper gas targets, says Jerry Cooper, division manager with Pogo.

However, in late 1988, Pogo an active driller of Morrow gas wells, decided to "come up hole" and take a closer look at a "show" of oil in the Delaware sand, after it unsuccessfully completed a deep Morrow sand well.

The well, Federal 13, No.1 became a Delaware success and possibly the opener of the play. Using new fracturing techniques, it completed for over 100 barrels of oil per day, and became the discovery well for the Livingston Ridge field, which became the inspiration for Delaware drilling.

"New geological concepts and new technology are responsible for this new harvest of oil," says Anderson of Collins & Ware. "The industry once considered the cut off for commercial porosity in an oil well at about 18 percent porosity. But, in the Delaware, we are completing wells with only 11-12 percent porosity. Thanks, to new techniques for fracturing the formation."

The offset wells were also a success and Yates Petroleum of Artesia, who had also had leases in the area, soon joined in drilling and developing the Livingston Ridge field.

With the encouragement of the Livingston Ridge discovery, the Houston oil company, with Texaco as a partner, began to cautiously move out from that location, drilling more wells. Now, since 1989 Pogo has drilled 154 successful wells, with 58 drilled in 1993 alone.

Success ratios have been high. Collins & Ware says it has drilled 20 wells without a single dry hole.

About the same time, other oil and gas operators hearing about Livingston Ridge, began to plug back wells in the Loving East field. They encountered similar successes and the word was out of the bag about the Delaware.

In 1991 as word about successful wells in the Delaware sand of Southeast New Mexico made its way through the industry grapevine, activity took off like a rocket, as other oil companies joined in to launch a leasing and drilling frenzy.

Strictly a play for independent oil companies, major oil companies have not yet jumped into the foray, although there is talk that several majors are looking at the prospect.

The list of independents active in the Delaware reads like a Who's Who of exploration companies with such notables as: Mitchell Energy, Meridian Oil & Gas, Santa Fe Energy Resources, Enron Oil & Gas, and Pogo Producing of Houston; Collins & Ware, and Merit Energy of Midland; Yates Petroleum of Artesia and Ray Westall of Loco Hills.

The Delaware wells will typically experience strong prolific flush production of 250-350 barrels and will settle down to 100 barrels per day within a year. An oil producer will typically get 30 percent of his production during this flush period.

Experts says it will be some time before the bloom has gone from the Delaware sand play. It will continue to be characterized by several more years of aggressive leasing and drilling before it levels out. After that Ted Collins, says there may be even more potential for the reservoir through waterflooding.

At any rate the Delaware sand of New Mexico is bound to be a major new asset to the area and the state for years to come.

PITTS: Sorting policy

security by putting us helplessly into the hands of foreign oil producers — including Russia. It could become a lose-lose situation financed by U.S. tax dollars.

The threat may not be immediate. Crude oil traders say it could be 10 years or more before enough wells are drilled and pipelines built to make Russia a major contributor to the world oil market.

But it could happen much sooner. In the twenties it was only a matter of months after the East Texas field and the Vera Cruz field of Mexico were discovered that oil flooded the market and drove oil prices to as low as 10 cents per barrel. At the time, water in Loving County, Texas was selling for $1 a barrel or ten times more than oil.

Oil analysts are hoping that growing demand created by revived economies in the new emerging democracies of the former Soviet bloc will take up some of the supply surplus. But if not, the vast oil reserves of Russia and friends, coupled with OPEC and friends and North Sea production could flood the planet with oil.

Oil producers who survived the crash of 1986, need no lecture about surplus crude oil in the world market. When the Saudis opened the valves in 1986, prices dropped in a matter of six months from $27 a barrel to under $10 a barrel. A new flood of oil, could drop prices to $12 or below, creating margins insufficient to profitably produce most U.S. wells.

Those thin margins could be made even thinner or non-existent by a continuation of harsh environmental legislation imposed by the Clinton administration. Recent statements made by Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary, however, give no indication that there will be relief anytime soon. If anything, the situation could get even worse. "Most Americans think you are a bunch of polluters," O'Leary told a group of Houston oilmen this week.

So, high operating costs caused by excessive regulation-legislation, coupled with low prices, caused by excessive world oil production could lead to the end of the oil industry as we know it.

To paraphrase. Then, for lack of a domestic energy industry. National security was sacrificed, and for lack of national security a nation was lost. Far fetched? Not in this day and time. Sadly, we could wake up one day and realize the above scenario was financed mostly by U.S. tax dollars.

COAL: Coal seam has big impact that it would be equivalent to discovering a major new producing province that would brings billions of dollars and thousands of jobs to an ailing oil and gas industry.

It would also become a major contributor to the economy of New Mexico.

"It took a lot of nerve and money to pump a river of water out of a formation just to see if it might yield commecial results," said Patrick Hegarty, a Farmington landman, who specializes in negotiating coal seam drilling ventures, "but those are the kind of risks oil companies take."

Hegarty noted that the industry has since learned that it sometimes takes two years of pumping to make a well commercial.

Following Amoco's initial test in the lates seventies that demonstrated commercial quanties of gas could be removed from coal seams. The oil company drilled two more wells in 1980 and completed both as successful gas wells, to verify its findings. But there was still not much interest in drilling wells that produced as much water as coal seam wells do. All the water, thousands of gallons daily, had to be pumped out and hauled away or reinjected into other formations, and that was expensive. The exploration play would wallowed in limbo for several years, and it would take an obscure tax incentive to rescue it.

In 1980 Congress passed the Windfall Profits Tax Act, designed to penalize oil companies who made too much money from decontrolled crude oil prices. The act was so onerous to the industry, and the negative impact so powerful, that little attention was given to a small package of benefits that provided drilling incentives for those exploring coal seam and other tight sand prospects.

It was not until 1984, when the incentives were entitled Section 29, and a research group from Boston and the Oil & Gas Journal reported on the results, incentives and economics of coal seam drilling that there was much interest. When that knowledge became wide spread, coal seam activity took off like wildfire.

"The coal seam play seemed to really kick off about 1986, and really heated up about 1989 or 1991," said Kent Beers, regional land manager for Meridian Oil Co., the largest player in coal seam exploration and development.

It was Meridian, with its large lease hold in New Mexico, that helped shift the center of activity from Colorado to New Mexico. It quickly became the leader in the play and was followed by a host of other independent oil companies.

Now less than a decade later, industry leaders estimate that more than 2,000 coal seam wells have been drilled in the San Juan Basin and most of them have been drilled in New Mexico.

To say that coal seam natural gas production has had an impact on New Mexico's economy would be like saying Elvis Presley was a well known popular singer. The impact coal seam natural gas has had on the state has been nothing short of revolutionary.

The geological treasure has increased New Mexico natural gas reserves by about one-third and become a major factor in New Mexico's economy."Coal seam gas is the one natural resource in the state that continues to increase at a rapid rate," said Bill LeMay, director of New Mexico Oil Conservation Division.

Now accounting for over 40 billion cubic feet of the state's 120 billion cubic feet of monthly production, members of New Mexico's oil and gas industry say coal seam development has been the same as the discovery of a third major producing basin within the state — one equal in production to conventional gas production in the San Juan Basin and Southeast New Mexico.

Translated to dollars, if one-third of the $2.03 billion of marketed gas in 1992 could have been attributed to coal seam production it would have amounted to over $670 million in wellhead revenues to the state's natural gas industry and would have resulted in approximately $57 million to the state in severance taxes.

"And that doesn't include federal royalties, half of which would go to the state," says LeMay.

If coal seam discoveries have brought new wealth to the state, they have also created a profound shift of reserves within the state. According to the natural gas marketing wing of New Mexico's Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources Department, over 82 percent of the state's natural gas reserves are now found in the San Juan Basin, with only 17.7 percent credited to he southeast counties of Eddy, Lea, Chaves and Roosevelt.

It has all spelled prosperity for the San Juan Basin which has become one of the busiest oil and gas producing areas in the nation. "It kept Farmington alive during some of the darkest days of the oilpatch," said Patrick Hegerty.

Hegarty recalls that during the biggest downturn in oil and gas history, the San Juan Basin actually had an increase in activity, as rig counts which had slumped below ten suddenly soared to over 60.

During the period from 1988 to 1991, when coal seam drilling was most active, the number of producing gas wells in the state jumped from approximately 16,000 to 20,000, and estimates are that most of that increase was due to coal seam wells.

Statewide, it is a windfall that has given New Mexico the highest production to reserve ration in the nation. Meaning that for every thousand cubic feet (mcf) of gas produced, the state has 20 (mcf) in the ground.

"It is like money in the bank," says Bill LeMay. "The coal seam reserves of the San Juan Basin are long life, and will be a factor in the state's economy for decades to come." LeMay and most energy experts predict that natural gas demand will increase by leaps and bounds in the coming decades and that coal seam gas will be a major player in meeting demand. He notes that Some of the developed resevoirs in the prime 'fairway' (heart) of the trend have a life of 40 years or more. Some will not produce nearly that long."

For all the good things one can say about coal seam gas, it is is still hit and miss, well by well proposition. While the fairway sometimes yield wells that produce 14 million cubic feet of gas per day feet daily, marginal reservoirs on the edge of the fairway can make as little as 30-40 thousand cubic feet. It costs upwards of $300,000 to drill a coal seam well and a top well will pay out in days, but a marginal well can take seven years or more to reach payout.

Though some of the marginal wells may not be commercial at today's gas prices, LeMay says they will be commercial at a future date when gas prices go higher. "We have found this gas and we know how to get it out when the price justifies it," he said.

All together, it looks good for coal seam development now and in the future.

The Section 29 tax credits which kicked off the play are gone, but somehow development has continued on its own, and there are always the rumors that the credits could come back with the right political effort. Also, some marginal reservoirs may become commercial sooner than expected if pilot recovery projects pan out.

Amoco says it is involved with two pilot projects to determine if enhanced oil recovery methods can be applied that would make coal seam reservoirs even more profitable. Amoco, which operates almost 200 coal seam wells in the San Juan Basin, declined to discuss details of the pilots, but revealed that one was a nitrogen injection project and the other was a carbon dioxide injection project.

If these pilot projects prove successful Amoco may have opened up a whole new recovery dimension to New Mexico's coal seam gas industry.

Mergers create Enterra Patco

By Ellen Hopkins

ENTERRA PATCO Oil Field Products is the new name of three companies that merged in late November '93.

Hopkins

Enterra Corp., from Canada, bought out PATCO and Guiedeco and has now formed the largest rental company in the world. International business is handled from the company's Houston location.

Chris Holcomb, NE District Manager for ENTERRA PATCO in Odessa, said this Permian Basin location will continue its mold-on rod manufacturing business. Holcomb said customers bring their sucker rods in and ENTERRA PATCO molds on guides that keep the rods from wearing holes in tubing. He said business has been very good this year. He also carries specific systems to eliminate paraffin problems.

Eliminating environmental spills is an active business for BIG D COMPANIES in Midland, which encompasses Big D Environmental, Big D Equipment Co. and Big D Lining Systems.

John Buster, manager of environmental services, said the company has a response unit loaded with all necessary cleanup equipment to quickly handle emergency response spills of gasoline, diesel fuel and crude oil. He said the response van is equipped with containment booms, sorbent booms, sorbent pads and skimmers which are used to restrict, soak up and eliminate the spill.

Big D Cos. also handles bioremediation of salt- or hydrocarbon-damaged soils. To prevent soil damage, Big D carries several types of liners which can be used for secondary containment purposes. For example, Buster said their clay liner is composed of a thin layer of bentonite inside geotextile material. The 1/4" thick liner can be buried under a wellsite and hydrated (which causes the bentonite to swell), and nothing will permeate it.

Other polyethylene liners are being used locally for brine storage ponds near underground storage areas or municipal landfills.

H & P SALES is now the exclusive manufacturing agent in Texas and New Mexico for Total Brake & Clutch, Inc. headquartered in Kansas.

Dan Powers, president of H & P, said the company's most innovative product is a newly designed retrofitted braking system for well servicing rigs. He said this design works with a rig's current breaking system, with very mmoderate adaption instead of requiring a change in the drawworks. The brake block material is anticipated to last up to three years, instead of the usual six to eight months.

Tesoro stockholders approve proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — Shareholders of Tesoro Petroleum Corp. approved several proposals that clear the way for the company's recapitalization plan.

The moves are aimed at giving more management flexibility to the San Antonio-based refining and exploration company, which has just recently seen improved results and stock prices after years of struggling.

"The approval of our recapitalization plan will be the cornerstone of a new, sound financial future for our company," said Michael Burke, president and chief executive officer.

Shareholders endorsed all of the company's proposals, including a stock reclassification plan, during Tesoro's annual meeting. The company now has three years to buy back stock held by a subsidiary of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. — equal to about 28 percent of Tesoro's voting securities — for around $52 million, Burke said.

In another element of the recapitalization, the company said Wednesday it would go forward with an exchange offer after about $44 million of its 12¼ percent subordinated debentures had been tendered for 13 percent exchange notes. Tesoro had been willing to exchange up to $54.5 million.

The company did not receive consent from enough debenture holders to adopt proposed amendments that, among other things, would have modified dividend restrictions.

At the meeting, Burke said the company is seeking financing for a new $25 million vacuum process unit Tesoro hopes to build at its Alaska refinery. It also plans to spend about $30 million to drill 25 more production wells at the Bob West Field in South Texas this year. In addition, Tesoro is talking to several companies about options in its Bolivian operations, Burke said.

Shareholders voted to eliminate Tesoro's "poison pill" that required holders of 80 percent of the company's stock to approve some transactions by those holding 10 percent or more.

In addition, stockholders approved an executive long-term incentive plan that Burke said was more flexible than the company's previous incentive stock options.

The shareholders also eliminated staggered board terms and approved four new board nominees: Charles Luce, John McKetta Jr., Stewart Nagler and Arthur Spitzer.

They, along with all Tesoro's other board members, were to resign their three-year terms and be re-elected to single-year terms at a board meeting immediately following the annual meeting.

RRC OKs horizontal wells

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission granted 54 permits for horizontal wells statewide in December, reflecting a slight decrease in activity from the previous month.

By comparison, 56 permits for the advanced technology wells were issued in November, 62 in October and 56 in September.

Altogether, the Railroad Commission granted 654 new permits for horizontal wells in 1993. In all, a grand total of 3,623 permits for horizontal wells have been issued in Texas since 1984.

There were four new horizontal permits issued to operators in the Pearsall (Austin Chalk) field in December, with Frio County adding two, raising its overall total to 698. Meanwhile, Zavala and La-Salle counties logged one new permit each, with their cumulative totals standing at 201 and 181 respectively.

By comparison, 32 permits were issued to those drilling horizontal wells in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) last month. Fayette County continues to lead the horizontal race there with 494, followed closely by Burleson County with 459, Lee County with 156 and Washington County with 64.

Overall, 1,279 horizontal permits have now been granted to operators in the Pearsall field, while the prolonged horizontal drilling rend in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) field accounted for a total of 1,205 permits through December 31.

Also, Brazos Couty added another six permits in December, raising its total to 366.

December was a busy month for horizontal completions as drilling was concluded on 65 of the advanced technology wells, raising to 2,946 the number of horizontal wells completed in Texas since 1984.

By the end of 1993, operators in 93 Texas counties had received Railroad Commission permits to drill horizontal wells.

Petroleum facts at a glance

API Facts at a glance for January, 1994.

- U.S. petroleum imports — crude and products — in December were 8,377,000 barrels per day; imports for the same month in 1992 were 7,838,000 barrels a day.
- Total imports in December as a percentage of total U.S. domestic petroleum deliveries were 47.1 percent; imports as a percentage the same month in 1992 were 43.5 percent.
- Persian Gulf petroleum represented 18 percent of total U.S. petroleum imports in October, 20.4 percent the same month in 1992.
- The average price for a barrel of OPEC crude was $12.15.
- Average refiner acquisition cost for a barrel of U.S. crude oil was $16.09.
- U.S. crude oil production in December was 6,903,000 barrels a day, of which 1,673,000 barrels a day was Alaskan; total U.S. production for the same month in 1992 was 7,103,000 barrels a day. U.S. natural gas liquids production in December was 1,740,000 barrels a day; for the same month in 1992 it was 1,744,000 barrels a day.
- U.S. natural gas marketed production was 52.8 billion cubic feet daily in October; marketed natural gas production in October 1992 was 51.9 Bcfd.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of motor gasoline in December were 7,696,000 barrels a day; deliveries of motor gasoline for December 1992 were 7,562,000 barrels a day.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of distillate fuel oil — home heating and diesel — in December were 3,376,000 barrels a day; deliveries of distillate the same month of 1992 were 3,316,000 barrels a day.

Report confirms RRC stance stripper wells help economy

AUSTIN — Low producing oil wells, often called stripper wells, are pumping billions of dollars into the Texas economy, Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said as a national report which verified her statements was released.

"The report released by the Interstate Oil and Gas Compat Commission confirms what we've been telling the Clinton administration," Nabers aid. "It is critical that we keep these wells pumping. These wells deliver almost $7 billion dollars of positive impact to the Texas economy each year and that translates into thousands of jobs."

Nabers, the voting Texas representative to the IOGCC, said the analysis supports her call to action to help independent oil producers.

"These efforts represent the ultimate in conservation, since future production is often lost when wells are abandoned," she said.

Texas stripper wells generate more than $2.4 billion in oil production, $110 million to the state's revenues in severance taxes and about $138 million sales tax collection. The state's 126,434 stripper wells account for 133 million barrels of production.

"The Texas Legislature and the Railroad Commission have taken a leadership role in putting laws in place to encourage operators of some 80,000 idle stripper wells to return them to production," Nabers said. "So far, more than 800 wells have been brought back to life. We estimate the value of these additional oil and gas at over $160 million a year. The federal government should get into the act as well. Texas is not the only state affected. And," she said "the continued operation of these wells impact this nation's energy future."

The report, "Marginal Oil: Fuel for Economic Growth," was prepared in December 1993 under the direction of the IOGCC by Coopers and Lybrand in Houston. It focuses on stripper or marginal wells — that produce less than 10 barrels of oil a day.

The report found that:

- Stripper well production was valued at $2.4 billion in 1992 and accounted for an impact of $6.9 billion on the Texas economy.
- In the U.S., stripper production was valued at $6.5 billion in 1992 and accounted for an impact of $9.9 billion on the U.S. economy.
- Texas studies show every dollar of oil and gas produced ripples through the economy 2.1 times.
- Stripper wells in Texas generated more than $110 million to state government through severance taxes, and $138 million in sales taxes.
- Texas has 126,434 stripper wells that produced 133 million barrels of oil and gas in1992.
- The Department of Energy estimates that idle stripper wells represent 2.6 billion barrels of crude.
- Stripper wells represent the ultimate in crude oil conservation, since once wells are abandoned, production is often lost forever.
- A stripper well is defined as a well producing less than 10 barrels of oil a day, and the average Texas tripper well produces 2.89 barrels per day.
- Programs to put idle wells back to work are tools for economic development — creating jobs and tax revenues.

The IOGCC, which is a government agency representing the governors of the nation's 29 oil-and-gas producing states, is a leading authority on oil-and-gas-producing issues.

API reports increase in completions

WASHINGTON — Despite a poor fourth quarter, due in part to depressed work crude oil prices, oil and natural gas drilling completions in the United States registered a slight increase in 1993, the American Petroleum Institute reported.

According to API's Quarterly Completion Report Fourth Quarter 1993, a total of 24,936 oil wells, gas wells and dry holes was completed in the U.S. last year. This was 4.2 percent more than the 23,931 oil wells, gas wells and dry holes completed a year ago.

Of the 1993 total, 8,274 were oil wells - a decline of 7.5 percent compared to 1992. Another 9,693 were gas wells - an increase of 16.3 percent compared to the previous year - and 6,969 were dry holes - 4.7 percent more than in 1993.

Fourth quarter 1993 figures show an across-the-board drilling decline of 14.8 percent compared to the previous year. During the quarter 13.6 percent fewer oil wells, 26.1 percent fewer gas wells and 5 percent more dry holes were completed than in the same three-month period of 1992, API said.

The amount of footage drilled rose in 1993 compared to the previous year. Last year footage drilled amounted to 138,775,000 feet. This was 9.4 percent more than 126,827,000 feet drilled in 1992.

While the overall completion count rose in 1993, the Institute reported, total exploratory completions feel 1.8 percent to 3,522. However, exploratory gas completions were up 30.9 percent compared to the previous year.

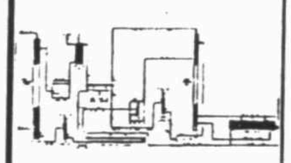

With regard to development wells, API reported an overall increase of 5.3 percent compared to 1992. While development oil well completions were down 7.1 percent, development gas well and dry hole completions rose 15.6 percent and 11 percent, respectively.

Zapata income sharply higher in quarter

HOUSTON — Zapata Corp. reported net income of $17.3 million for the first quarter of fiscal 1994, which ended December 31, 1993.

This compares to net income of $1 million for the first quarter of the previous year, Zapata Chairman and Chief Executive Officer R.C. Lassiter announced.

"The improvement in net income for the first quarter of 1994 compared with the previous year is attributable to a pretax gain of $33.8 million from the sale of 3.75 million shares of Zapata's Tidewater Inc. common stock," Lassiter said.

Zapata used most of the $77.8 million in proceeds from the sale to prepay 13 percent senior debt and strengthen the company's balance sheet. As a result, Zapata's debt totaled $74.5 million at the end of the quarter.

"Zapata's financial condition today is significantly improved from that of any time in recent history and the company is poised for future growth," Lassiter said. "Total debt of $74.5 million compares very favorably to stockholder's equity of $194.6 million. Zapata's investment in net property and equipment of $149.4 million has grown considerably from the $96.3 million of a year ago."

As a result of lower gas production volumes in the Gulf of Mexico, however, Zapata's operating income of $2.2 million for the first quarter of fiscal 1994 was below the $2.5 million reported for that of the year-earlier quarter. While other operating divisions, including newly-acquired Energy Industries, reported improved results, operating income from Zapata's oil and gas division fell from $3 million during the first quarter of fiscal 1993 to $200,000 for the first quarter of 1994.

"Production difficulties in the company's principal gas field, the Wisdom field, have been thoroughly analyzed and efforts to restore production will begin in February," the Zapata chairman said. "We had anticipated a December start-up, but the lack of workover rig availability delayed the project."

Zapata's first quarter financial statements include the results From Energy Industries, a major international supplier of natural gas compression equipment and services, which Zapata acquired in November. During the two-month period, Energy Industries contributed operating income of $1 million on revenues of $12.6 million..

As a result of the addition of gathering systems and processing facilities acquired during 1993, Zapata's natural gas gathering/processing subsidiary, Cimarron Gas Companies Inc., improved its operating results from the year-earlier period. Despite lower prices for natural gas liquids caused by falling oil prices, Cimarron had operating income for the 1994 first quarter of $600,000 on $43.5 million in revenues. The 1993 quarterly results included $200,000 of Cimarron's operating income on revenues of $50.7 milin.

Zapata's marine protein operations reported improved operating performance during the quarter based on increased sales volume of fish meal and fish oil. Divisional operating income totaled $1.8 million for the first quarter of 1994, versus operating income of $500,00 for the year-earlier quarter. Revenue for the first quarter of 1994 was $20.67 million compared with $13 million a year earlier.

Zapata Corp. is a Houston-based international company primarily involved in natural gas services.

Arkla name change proposed

HOUSTON (AP) — The board of Arkla Inc., the nation's third-largest natural gas distribution company, proposed changing the company's name to NorAm Energy Corp.

"While a name change in and of itself will not improve profits, reduce debt or increase shareholder value; it is symbolic to our commitment to cultural and operational changes that we are making at Arkla," said Milt Honea, chairman, chief executive and president.

The company's three distribution divisions, Entex, Minnegasco and Arkansas Louisiana Gas, will keep their existing names. But Arkla Energy Resources and Arkla Energy Marketing will operate under new names.

Pennzoil says earnings surge

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. announced that fourth-quarter earnings had surged to $92.4 million, compared with $1.8 million during the same period a year ago.

The company earned $2.01 per share in the three months ended Dec. 31, compared with 4 cents per share during the last quarter of 1992.

Revenue was $790 million, up 21 percent from $620 million a year ago.

For all of 1993, Pennzoil reported earnings of $141 million, or $3.36 per share, compared with $128.2 million, or $3.16 per share, during 1992. Revenues for the year jumped to $2.7 billion, compared with $2.3 billion in 1992.

"Pennzoil's financial and operating performance was enhanced significantly in 1993 through financial resturcturing and a focus upon our core business," said James Pate, the company's president and chief executive officer.

Pate said Pennzoil sold more than a third of its 800 oil and gas fields during the year, but those sold represented "less than 3 percent of the total value of Pennzoil's domestic oil and gas assets."

He said the Houston-based company also profited from higher natural gas prices.

British Petroleum sees earnings drop

CLEVELAND (AP) — British Petroleum said its fourth-quarter earnings of $82 million were down 75 percent from the same quarter in 1992, reflecting a special charge for restructuring its operations in Europe.

The London-based petroleum products company, which has its U.S. headquarters here, said revenues for the fourth quarter in 1993 decreased to $1.5 billion, compared with $1.8 billion for the same period in 1992.

For the year, BP reported earnings of $1.3 billion on revenues of $6.6 billion, up from a 1992 loss of $624 million on revenues of $6.2 billion.

Results were reported on a replacement cost basis, meaning they don't include losses on inventory. The results reflect extraordinary charges of $300 million for the restructuring of European petrochemical operations and $90 million for the closing of a refinery site at Hamburg, Germany.

The results were figured on the assumption that the exchange rate for 1993 was $1.50 per British pound.

Before the extraordinary items, fourth-quarter 1993 earnings per American Depository Receipt — the equivalent of 12 shares of BP on the London stock exchange — totaled $1.04, the company said. That compares with 74 cents per ADR for the last three months of 1992.

On the year, earnings per ADR before extraordinary items were $3.73, compared with $2.10 per ADR in 1992.

BP said it does not report earnings per ADR after exceptional items.

Company spokesman Ian Fowler said significant performance improvement was achieved through productivity gains and cost reductions in each business. He said cost-cutting was expected to continue.

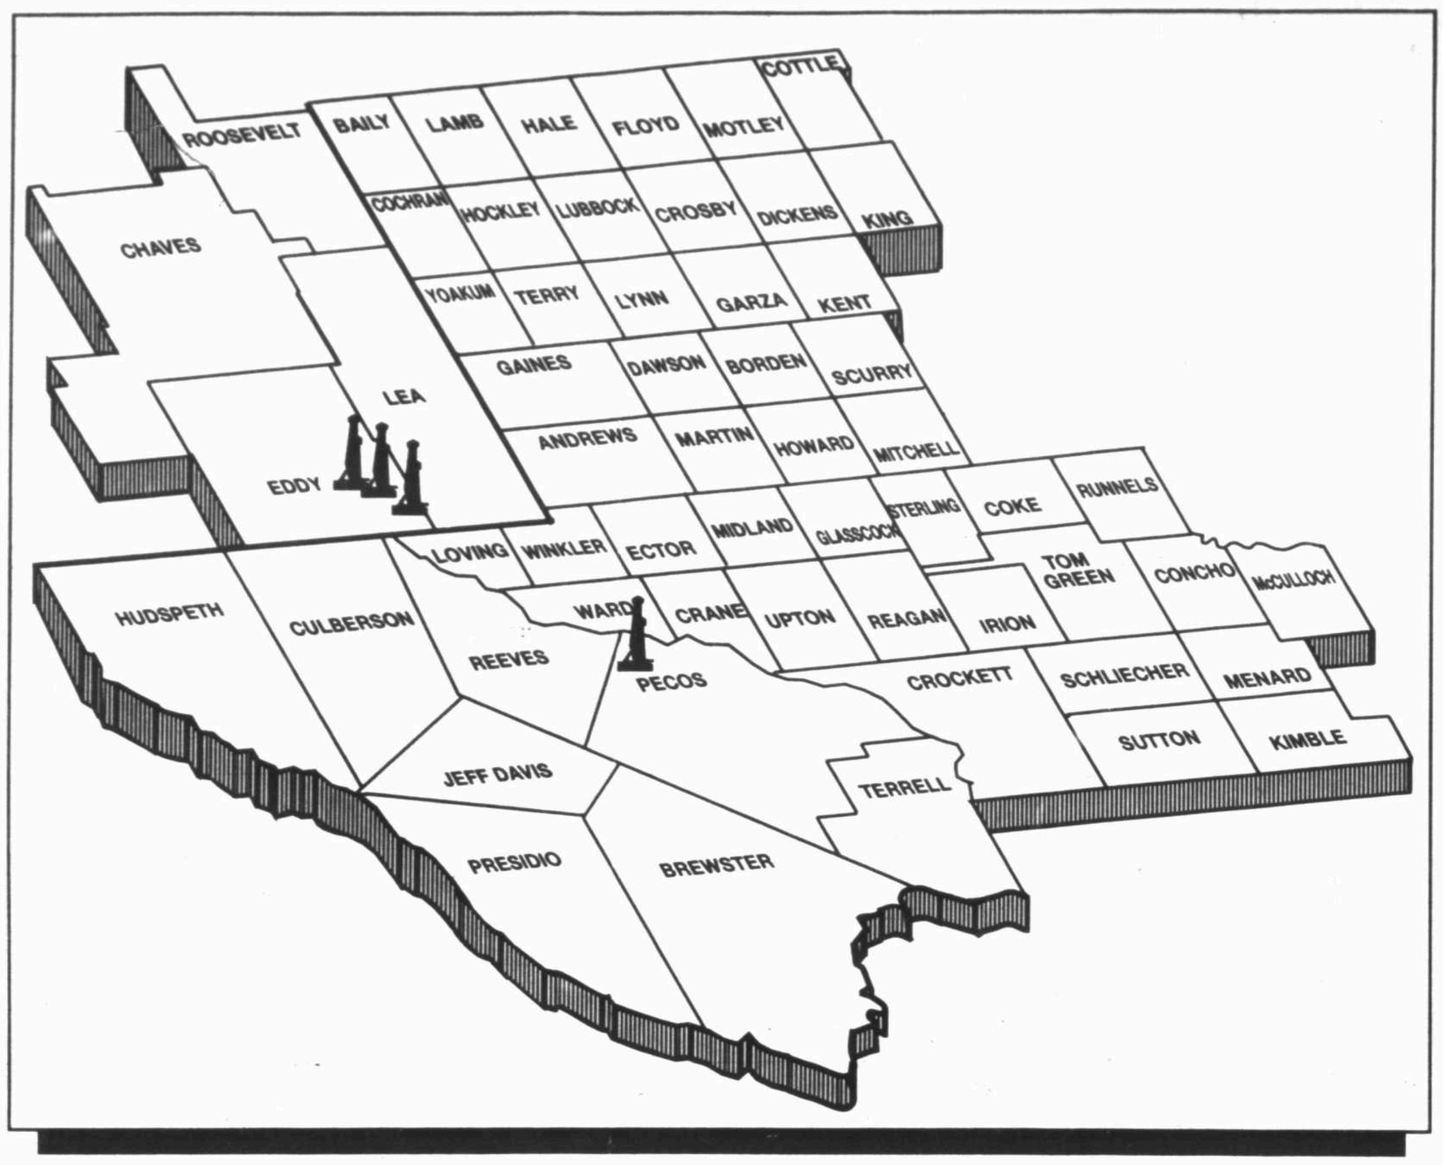

BP said it expects oil prices to remain weak in 1994, given adequate supply and the uncertain demand caused by slumping global economies.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Eddy County yields Delaware strike

Staff Report

A Delaware discovery has been recorded in Eddy County, N.M., 21 miles east of Loving.

MERIT ENERGY CORP. potentialed the No. 10 Sundance Federal to flow 215 barrels of 45.2 gravity crude, 365 Mcfd and 325 barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 315 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,845 to 8,005 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of acid and fractured with 270,000 lbs. sand.

The well was drilled to 8,160 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,101 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,410 ft., include the Delaware Limestone at 4,060 ft., Cherry Canyon at 5,175, Brushy Canyon at 6,325 and Bone Spring at 7,900 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 5, T24s, R31e.

Pecos discovery flows 70 barrels

MATADOR OPERATING CO. has completed an undesignated discovery in Pecos County, 29 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

On potential test, the No. 1 Beverly flowed 70 barrels of 35.4 gravity crude, 90 Mcfd and 300 barrels of water from perforations 5,186 to 5,216 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 17,000 gallons of gel and 55,440 lbs. 16/30 sand.

Permitted as a 5,390 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,405 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,317 ft.

The well topped the Rustler at 1,426 ft., Lamar at 4,660 and Bell Canyon at 4,685 ft. on ground elevation of 2,568 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 1,865 ft. from east lines of Section 8, Block C-3, PSL survey, Abst. 5065.

Energex potentials 40-barrel strike

ENERGEX INC. has potentialed an undesignated Delaware Sandstone strike in Eddy County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 1 Tecolote State pumped 40 barrels of 39.3 gravity crude, 40 Mcfd and 140 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 5,718 to 6,164 ft., which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 14,000 gallons of gel and 33,000 lbs. 16/30 sand.

The well was drilled to 6,285 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 3,324 ft., formation tops include the Permian Anhydrite at 250 ft., Permian Salt at 256, Castile at 1,303, Bell Canyon at 3,112, Cherry Canyon at 3,782, Brushy Canyon at 4,570, and Bone Spring at 6,225 ft.

Location is 2,673 ft. from north and 1,650 ft. from west lines of Section 2, T21s, R28e.

Undesignated find completed in Eddy

An undesignated Bone Spring discovery has been completed in Eddy County, N.M., 40 miles west of Jal.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. finaled the No. 36 James Ranch Unit to pump 50 barrels of 40 gravity crude, 74 Mcfd and 190 barrels of water from perforations 7,293 to 7,593 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,500 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Total depth was 7,820 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,818 ft.

"MEET OUR ELITE"

Julie O'Brien receives her "Elite" pin from Vickey Banks, Manager of Temporary Resources.

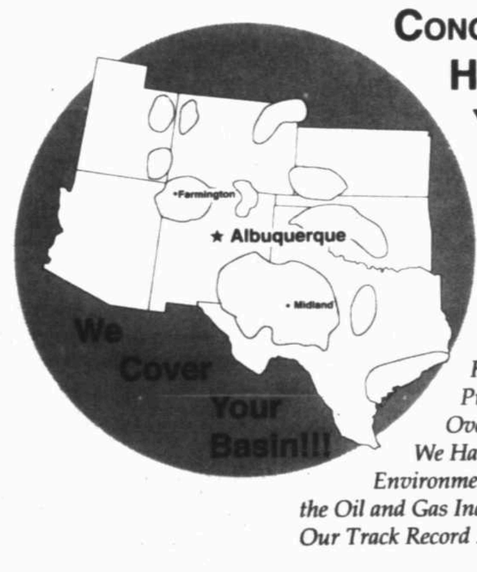

Congratulations to Julie O'Brien who has qualified as a Temporary Resources "Elite" by receiving superior ratings from numerous companies for which she has worked since coming to Temporary Resources five months ago. Julie has a Business degree from a Christian college in Southern California. She is very versatile and can handle any assignment from clerical to secretarial and administrative.

Julie enjoys working for Temporary Resources because it affords her the flexibility to work with the young people of the church where her husband is the youth minister. Julie states that she really enjoys meeting new people and doing a variety of work because it is "always something new and challenging!"

Call Temporary Resources and let a member of our "Elite" team meet all of your employment needs. We are the "POWER IN PERSONNEL!

Noble reports results of Gulf drilling

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates Inc. announced the results of the third well drilled on its Vermilion 362/371 property, located in the Gulf of Mexico.

The OCS-G No. 10687 well was drilled to a total depth of 13,600 feet and encountered 131 feet of potential oil and gas pay in five zones as determined from electric logs.

The well was tested at the rate of 5.8 million cubic feet of gas and 650 barrels of condensate per day through a 14/64 inch choke with 7,000 pounds flowing tubing pressure from one zone.

The fourth well on the lease is presently drilling, with a projected total depth of 12,100 feet. Construction of production facilities is expected to commence subsequent to the completion of the fourth well. Initial production from the field is projected for late 19914 or early 1995.

Samedan Oil Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Noble Affiliates Inc., is operator of the property and owns 45 percent working interest.

GAS: Natural gas marketing gaining new interest more flexible and better positioned in a new and competitive market.

Now renamed GPM Gas Corp. and an entirely separate unit of Phillips Petroleum Corp., GMP has become a highly aggressive player in recent months in the the acquisition and construction of new gathering and processing facilities in the Permian Basin area, and in upgrading its facilities.

One effort to attract new gas producers for its gathering and processing facilities last year resulted in GMP building the nation's largest automated gas monitoring system that allows GMP to remotely check pressures and volumes throughout the system and for producer-customers to monitor their gas sales on a daily basis.

Jack Taylor, manager of regulatory affairs for GPM, says FERC restructuring rules will be good for the company and will make marketing easier, because it will unbundle pipeline rates and make transportation a neutral factor in marketing considerations.

He noted that FERC Rule 636, should make pipeline access cheaper and more available.

With cumbersome regulations removed from the market and natural gas demand at a 20 year high, and still growing, it is little wonder that all entities in Southeast New Mexico have focused on natural gas marketing. But, while this natural gas producing region might be a little more intense and serious about marketing its gas, the focus on marketing is industry-wide.

A new more competitive course has been set for the industry and there are questions to be asked about how best to gain market share and not to lose it.

The Natural Gas Council comprised of a coalition of producers and industry associations has pledged to put together an aggressive marketing program which will increase natural gas demand by 2.5 trillion cubic feet by 1996

The state of Texas which sits atop 27.5 percent of the nation's natural gas reserves is putting together a coalition of agencies to promote it's rapidly emerging natural gas fuels industry.

Louisiana and Oklahoma also have natural gas marketing efforts, but nowhere is the competitive edge in natural gas marketing as intense as in New Mexico, where the state has maintained a fulltime natural gas marketing office since 1987.

"We have talked to officials in Oklahoma and Louisiana about starting a fullfledged natural gas marketing office in their state, but so far I don't think either of them have done so," said Ron Merrett, director of the marketing office.

He noted that marketing campaign must be working because the state had seen an increase in sales every year since the office was opened.

Merrett said the state did not take gas in kind, but all sales were strictly promotional. This involves publishing a monthly newsletter, an annual gas marketing conference in Santa Fe, keeping tabs on the regulagory affairs of California which is the state's top customer and assisting independent producers with a myrid of tasks all the way from finding leases to establishing pipeline contacts.

The office played a role in promoting and facilitating pipeline construction out of the San Juan Basin to move growing coal seam production.

"We also assist producers in getting signed on to pipeline bulletin boards, tariffs, and calculating netbacks to the wellhead," said Merrett, who noted that the entire marketing staff is composed of three people — a marketer, an attorney and an economist.

Neither has any state taken natural gas marketing to the grassroots level as in New Mexico.

The Lea County Industrial Development Commission has jumped into the marketing game with a campaign of its own to create new natural gas business in the area. And before its all over, marketing efforts may even involve some of the major cities of the area — Hobbs, Roswell, Artesia and Carlsbad in a chamber of commerce style promotion of natural gas, similar to Carlsbad's promotion of its famous caves.

The New Mexico Conference on Energy's Economic Impact will bring together representatives of New Mexico, Mexico and industry to discuss the impact of natural gas on New Mexico and how the state can open and serve new markets. The Lea County Industrial Development Commission would like to do the same thing for its part of the state, by identifying and pursuing new markets for natural gas in Southeast New Mexico.

Merrett praised the Lea County Industrial Development Commission for its marketing efforts. "We have to get our marketing act together at the federal, state and local level to make the media and state legislature aware of the role that oil and gas plays in this country." He said oil and gas producing areas everywhere ought to be more aggressive in promoting their major resources at the local level.

"We became aware of the need to become more aggressive in marketing natural gas in Southeast New Mexico about two years ago when we began to realign our marketing strategy," said Howard Lampe, former president of the Lea County Industrial Development Commission.

He said the Commission's aim was to focus on producers, gas processing operations, pipelines and possible manufacturing concerns and encourage them to do business in Southeast New Mexico.

"Natural gas is a growing market, and we a lot of opportunity on the New Mexico side of the Permian Basin for new investment and jobs. We think there will be increased exploration, field development, construction of pipelines and gas processing plants," Lampe said.

He also noted that chemcial, fertilizer, smelters and petrochemical operations, which use natural gas and natural gas liquids, would be targeted for relocation to Southeast New Mexico.

He said it didn't make sense to export the area's number one natural resource halfway across the country to be made into products elsewhere when they could make the products at home in New Mexico.

Lampe makes a point that has been made many times on the Texas side of the Permian Basin, where efforts have been considered at the University of Texas Center for Energy and Economic Diversification to use raw petroleum products, natural gas liquids and crude oil to manufacture finished products such as cosmetics, paints, varnishes, and plastics. To-date only the Rexene facility at Odessa which manufactures components for plastics and automobile tires is engaged in petrochemical manaufacturing.

"Manufacturing facilities require a skilled labor force, raw materials and transporatation to markets," said Merrett. "Southeast New Mexico can provide all three."

Transportation to major markets was once the main argument for locating manufacturing facilities and one reason why many were concentrated in major metropolitan areas, but with today's interstate system and air travel that argument does not bear the same weight it once did. Lea County residents point out that Southeast New Mexico is approximately in the middle of the U.S., making it easier to serve both coasts.

One large manufacturer that sees no transportation disadvantage to doing business in Southeast New Mexico is the TMC bus factory in Roswell, which manufactures metropolitian transit busses for shipment to all the U.S. and foreign markets.

In another transportation issue, marketing forces in Southeast New Mexico want to make sure its major natural resource is not locked in by pipeline grid lock. About 80 percent of the state's natural gas, including all its coal seam gas, still goes to California. But through new pipeline connects the Midwest has become a new and viable market and now Mexico is being eyed as a potential market.

New Mexico gas producers understand full well the need for multi transmission systems and diverse markets. Once upon a time all New Mexico gas flowed only one way — west to Southern California and Arizona markets along the way. But before that it flowed nowhere.

Natural gas was first discovered in Southeast New Mexico by the Flynn-Welch-Yates No.2, well which was drilled in 1923 near the towns of Dayton and Artesia. It was a gasser, and blew-in with a roar that could be heard two miles away.

Producing an estimated 2 million cubic feet per day, it blew for days but those who drilled it could only let it roar and blow and hope it finally would settle into an oil producer, because there was not place to sell the gas.

Martin Yates, the Artesia real estate developer who promoted the well has been rightly called the "father of the New Mexico gas industry." But in reality there was no New Mexico natural gas industry until June of 1929. That's when El Paso Natural Gas completed its 16 inch pipeline from El Paso to Jal, New Mexico, taking Southeast New Mexico natural gas first to El Paso and eventually on to California and cities in between.

By 1935 New Mexico production had not even reached a billion cubic feet feet per years, but from those humble beginnings New Mexico has become one of the largest natural gas resources in the nation, with estimated reserves in 1991 of 20 trillion cubic feet.

By 1995 reserves are projected to reach 28 trillion, with about one third of the state's annual production of 1.2 trillion cubic feet, coming from Southeast New Mexico.

Those behind the natural gas marketing efforts in Southeast New Mexico also feel that timing is critical to getting out the message about natural gas, because the natural gas industry is at the dawn of a new era in which it has near universal approval — from producers, consumers, government, environmentalists.

Since natural gas prices went south in 1982, each year since has been mistakenly hailed by prognosticators as as the year of turnaround — the year the over-supply bubble would bust and depressed prices disapprear.

But disappointing year after disappointing year came and turnaround did not. And each year the number in New Mexico that believed "the bubble would bust" became fewer and fewer.

Now, however, almost overnight the mood has shifted, and there is near unanimous consensus in the industry that turnaround has finally arrived.

Stronger natural gas prices, which have increased almost 100 percent over the past two years, have had something to do with the brighter outlook. But beyond that is a sequence of events that have put natural gas in the best position to grow in its entire history.

With environmental, economic and national security problems weighing heavily upon the nation, natural gas has suddenly become the fuel of choice in America with consumers, environmentalists, federal and state governments solidly behind it.

Both the Clinton and Bush administrations made natural gas a cornerstone of their energy policy, touting it as an abundant, economical, clean-burning, homegrown fuel that reduces air pollution, backs out foreign oil imports, reduced trade imbalances and the national deficit, strengthens national security and and creates U.S. jobs.

That mouthful of praise alone would be enough to make natural gas producers smile, but when one also considers that natural gas has market fundamentals — demand, consumption, supply, aggressive marketing and emerging markets all going for it — it is enough to create ear-to-ear grins.

"There is no doubt that natural gas is a growing market and Southeast New Mexico must get ready to serve that market," says Dan Girand contracts administrator for Heyco Inc. of Roswell and past president of Independent Petroleum Association New Mexico.

Girand said aggressive marketing was good for Southeast New Mexico: "It is foolish not to develop every market we can. Gas production is up in New Mexico and we need to take advantage of every opportunity. If we have a possible market niche, we need to encourage someone to look at it."

There is an urgency in the natural gas business to get on with getting ready to meet new marketing challenges, because there is indication that the supply overhang (bubble) is much smaller than thought as evisdenced by recent spikes in gas prices, say natural gas anyalysts.

In August of 1992, when Hurricane Andrew, damaged production platforms in the Gulf and caused disruption of only 5 percent of natural gas production, gas prices soared to their highest level since 1985, and many saw it as indication of balance in the market. Enron Chairman Ken Lay observed at the time that while the spikes may not be a sign of true balance in the market, they are a sign of approaching balance.

Driving fundamental balance is demand, which in turn is driven by consumption. Natural gas demand is expected to reach 20 trillion cubic feet in 1993, the highest since 1979, and 23 trillion by the end of the decade.

This, of course, is the result of consumption which has increased every year for the past five years, and 25 percent since 1987. The addition of 400,000 customers per year during this period had a significant part in this consumption, and so did the fact that most industrial users and utilities found gas cheaper to burn.

Electrical generation is another market niche being looked at by New Mexico gas marketing folks. "There is no reason Southeast New Mexico cannot be a major exporter of electrical power to Mexico," says Ron Merrett, director of gas marketing for New Mexico. "Northern Mexico and its maquiladora industry is growing at the rate of 5 percent per year and will double in size in less than 20 years. It is growth that will require electrical power and we can supply it."

But in addition to selling electricity to Northern Mexico, Merrett and others see great potential for selling natural gas to Mexico. El Paso Natural Gas already exports natural gas to Mexico to burn in its power plant at Salamayuca, Chihuahua south of El Paso.

Both Ms. Maria Eugenia Perez Castano, director general for hydrocarbon operations in Mexico, and Manuel Suarez-Mier, Mexico's trade representative during the Bush administration and a major player in the formation of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) will be on hand at the February 24, Oil and Gas Conference to discuss emerging opportunities in Mexico for New Mexico natural gas.

Another emerging market that holds promise for New Mexico natural gas is vehicle market. For the first time in history, gasoline has a viable competitor and that is compressed natural gas (CNG). Cheaper than gasoline, CNG is abundant, burns cleaner and decreases maintenance on internal combustion engines by 50 percent. The only two problems to be worked our are to increase the range of the vehicles and to lower conversion costs. Both are problems are being diligently addressed and when answered compressed natural gas or liquid natural gas as a transportation fuel should take off like wildfire.

Nearly all of the 8 million barrels daily of imported oil is used for transportation, meaning that every barrel of imported oil that can be displaced by U.S. natural gas will improve the trade balance and create jobs at home.

While CNG has had a slow time starting as a result of a lacking infrastructure, New Mexico is well on its way to building a first rate CNG infrastructure. The Gas Company of New Mexico now has CNG refueling stations throughout the state, making it possible to travel througout most of the state without having to fuel with gasoline.

Merrett says compressed natural gas as a vehicle fuel has great potential market for New Mexico, and that the state is a strong supporter of natural gas vehicles.

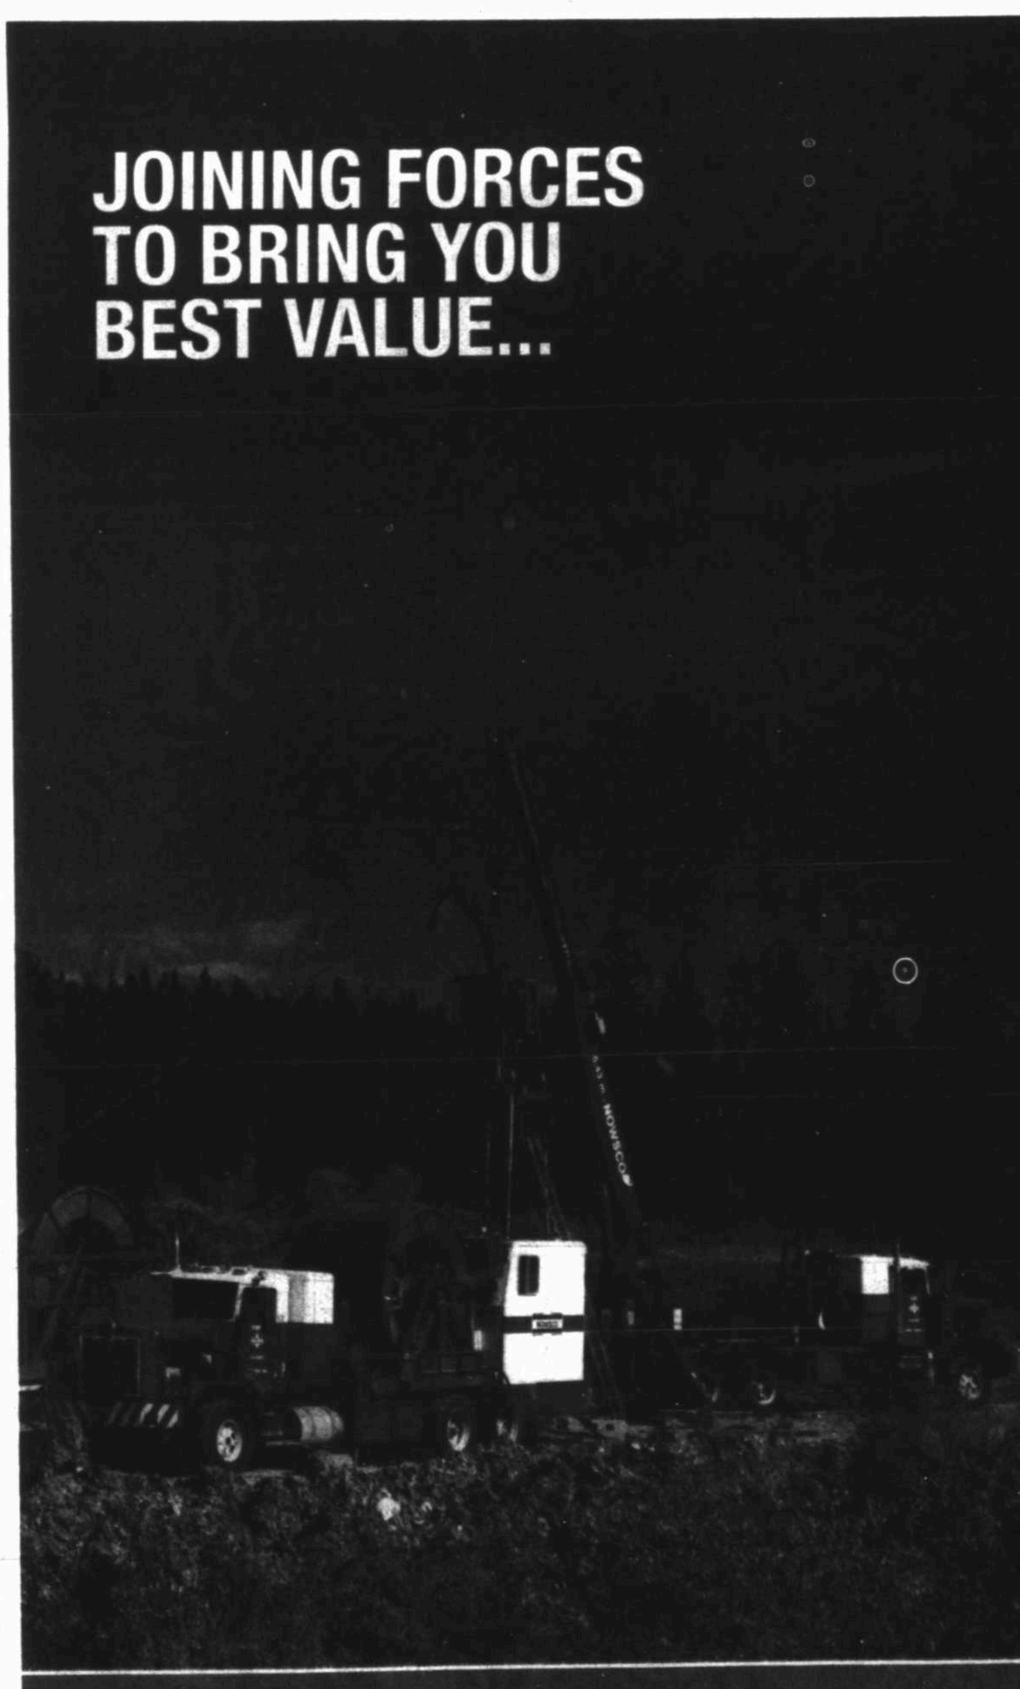

Abraxas completes Gulf well

SAN ANTONIO — Abraxas Petroleum Corp. has announced results from recent well activity on company-owned properties along the central Texas Gulf Coast.

The No. 77 Welder, of which Abraxas owns a 50 percent working interest and 33 percent net revenue interest, located in the Portilla field, San Patricio County, was dually completed in two new zones at approximately 8,000 ft. On a restricted basis, the well is flowing an average of 600 Mcf per day on a 12/64 inch choke, together with an average of 225 barrels of oil per day for the week ended February 4. The well encountered 21 total pay zones and was potentialed at 338 barrels of oil and 1,029 Mcf of gas per day. However, the two new zones were encountered during drilling. Previous reserve estimates did not include these new zones. Additional wells are planned to accelerate the field's behind pipe potential.

Development drilling continues on much of the company's newly acquired acreage.

JOINING FORCES TO BRING YOU BEST VALUE...

Nowsco has been operating in the USA since 1981 providing a complete range of well services to operators in Michigan, West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Today we're making a new commitment to producers in the heart of the US oil and gas industry through the acquisition of two quality business partners, Acid Engineering Inc. and NPACT.

ACID ENGINEERING

Acid Engineering Inc. has more than 27 years experience in the New Mexico, Texas and Lousiana regions. Operating from ten bases in the south eastern USA Acid Engineering is a proud supplier of technically advanced fracturing, cementing and acidizing service. Expansion into coiled tubing and nitrogen service lines will allow Acid Engineering to provide customers with complete well service technology.

NPACT

NPACT (Nitrogen Pumping and Coiled Tubing Inc.) has operated in the offshore Gulf Coast region for more than 12 years providing coiled tubing and non-stimulation pumping services to companies operating in the Texas, Lousiana, Mississippi and Alabama areas. The alliance with Nowsco will allow NPACT to provide enhanced coiled tubing technologies and stimulation pumping services.

Nowsco will be expanding the service lines of NPACT and Acid Engineering allowing each to provide customers with comprehensive well service technology. Our goal will be to provide "best value" service and technology to oil and gas producers across the USA..

IADC, SPE discuss industry changes

RICHARDSON — "Cautious optimism" are the current bywords of the drilling sector for the worldwide oil and gas industry.

The 1994 IADC/SPE Drilling Conference — set Feb. 15-18 at the Grand Kempinski Hotel in Dallas — will be the site of important discussion about the significant and ongoing change occurring to all segments of the industry, including an evolution that may result in favorable drilling prospects in 1994.

"There is no escaping the reality that the current operating environment is rife with uncertainty," said program chairman Charles K. Orr of Santa Fe Intl. Corp. "On the one hand, the increased market price of natural gas and the emergence of aggressive independent producing companies, have fueled optimistic forecasts for drilling activity during 1993 and on into 1994. On the other hand, low crude oil prices are creating an air of uncertainty that cannot be ignored."

Recognizing that near-term operating conditions remain unpredictable, conference co-sponsors — the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the International Association of Drilling Contractors — have structured a program that focuses on technology and techniques that make favorable impacts regardless of the operating climate.

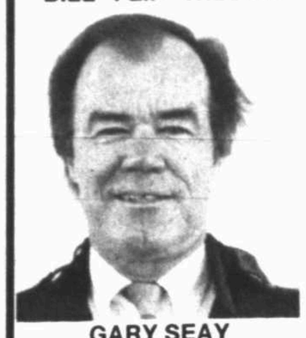

The 98-paper technical program and industry exhibition will examine economical operations and showcase leading-edge technology. An international audience of more than 1,000 petroleum professionals is expected to attend.

Special activities include a technical display, three luncheons, and the Wednesday afternoon (Feb. 16) Plenary Session on the "Impact of Drilling Operations on Well Life Cycle Cost Reduction." The Plenary Session features a cross-section of top executives from the drilling industry.

IADC represents the vast majority of the companies who own the world's offshore drilling and well-servicing fleet, as well as land drilling contractors.

MEETINGS

Lunchtime lecture planned at museum

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum will host a Brown Bag Lecture in the museum's auditorium Tuesday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Dan Porras, area manager for Shell Pipeline, will speak on "Carbon Dioxide: The Magic Additive."

West Texas oil production is dependent on secondary and tertiary recovery, and carbon dioxide is used in both areas. Porras will discuss what carbon dioxide is, where it comes from and how it works.

The lecture is open to the public at no charge.

Carbonate researcher to speak to SEPM

The Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be J.F. "Rick" Sarg, who will speak on "Carbonate Sequence Stratigraphy — Slope Angles, Parasequences and Karstification."

Sarg is an associate research advisor at Mobil Exploration Producing Technical Center.

Parasequences are genetically related, relatively conformable successions of beds and bedsets bounded above and below by surfaces across which there is a distinct facies break formed by water depth increase.

SIPES schedules installation banquet

The Midland chapter, Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists, will host its annual Ladies Night and Officer Installation Banquet Wednesday beginning with social hour at 6:30 p.m. The banquet will be held at the Midland Country Club.

Guest speaker will be Bill Heck, who will speak on "The Extra-Terrestrial Origin of Oil."

PBPA to host Railroad Commissioner

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers will be the guest speaker at Thursday's general membership luncheon of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. The luncheon will be held at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Cost is $15 per person and reservations can be made by calling 684-6345.

BEG researcher to visit well loggers

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Petroleum Club.

Guest speaker will be F. Jerry Lucia, senior research fellow with the Texas Bureau of Economic Geology in Austin. He will speak on "Geological Methods for Scaling Petrophysical Properties for Reservoir Modelling," a talk he co-authored with Fred Wang.

He will focus on the methods by which observable geologic features and rock fabrics and measurable petrophysical property data can be effectively "scaled up" for meaningful reservoir simulation work.

Cost is $11 for members, $13 for non-members. Reservations can be made by calling 694-9561.

Data integration topic for purchasers

The National Association of Purchasing Management, Permian Basin, will meet Tuesday at Big Daddy's Catfish, 3323 W. Wadley, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Jeff Stinson of Vinson Supply Co. will speak on "Electronic System Integration." He will explain the components of EDI and demonstrate how companies are using EDI to integrate their procurement, inventory and payables functions to achieve greater efficiency.

He has 19 years experience in data processing and is EDI coordinator for Vinson.

Cost is $10 per person and reservations can be made by calling 580-6100, 684-7441 or 332-8131.

Prospect Expo attracts 1,700 attendees

FORT WORTH — An overwhelming 1,700 oil and gas exploration and development professionals participated in the 1994 North American Prospect Expo held Feb. 2-3 in Houston. This event, created and presented by the American Association of Professional Landmen, doubled in size from its premier last year.

"I think this year's Expo has been a significant turn-around for the industry because it has the potential of being financially rewarding to many prospect generators," said Jack E. Deeter, executive vice president of the AAPL. "Through the Expo we can begin re-establishing a resource and reserve base for this country and lower the need for foreign oil. The involvement of the investment community such as Lehman Brothers, Morgan Stanley and MG Trade Finance is the key to reinvigorating the domestic energy industry in this country."

The exhibit hall was filled with 195 exhibit booths housed by both major and small independent companies in addition to sponsor booths housed by cooperating associations and financial institutions. The caliber of participants was impressive. Many top executives, including CEOs and EVPs of numerous companies, participated in the event.

A wide array of prospects were exhibited covering nine different regions: Northeast, Gulf Coast, West Coast, Mid-Continent, Rocky Mountains, Outer Continental Shelf, Texas and southeast New Mexico, Canada and others.

"There were first class prospects and they covered a gamut of areas geographically, which really impressed me," said Donald Drury of Herbert Minerals. "I participated as a viewer this year, and I'll probably be back next year as an exhibitor."

One particular exhibitor closed up his booth the first day, and when asked why, he simply stated he had already sold everything.

"I believe the Prospect Expo has created a new sense of enthusiasm and encouragement among energy professionals all around the country," said Marty Searcy, manager of land for Union Pacific Resources Co. in Fort Worth and chairman of the event. "The networking opportunity at the Expo is phenomenal."

A Capital Markets forum was held each morning of the event covering subjects such as "Private Equity Capital Available for Drilling Projects", "Drilling Joint Ventures with Large Independents", "Price Risk Management Strategies for Drilling Companies" and "Non-Conventional Sources for Drilling Capital."

Roundtable discussions with the financial community were also held on the first day of the Expo featuring top executives from the investment industry. Companies hosting the luncheon discussions included Bank One Texas; Charter National Bank; Christiania Bank; ENCAP Investments; Enron Finance Corp.; First Interstate Bank of Texas; Kidder Peabody & Co. Inc.; Natural Gas Partners; Tenneco Ventures; Houston Energy Trust Co. of the West and Union Bank.

In addition to AAPL, Expo sponsors and endorsers included Lehman Brothers, MG Trade Finance Corp., Morgan Stanley & Co.; Oil and Gas Investor magazine; the Independent Petroleum Association of America; the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; and the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Marathon reports Egyptian gas find

HOUSTON — Marathon Oil Co. has announced a natural gas discovery in Egypt's northern Nile Delta area, approximately 105 miles north of Cairo.

The El Qar'a Northwest No. 1 tested at combined daily flow rates of 36.2 million cubic feet of natural gas and 215 barrels of condensate from three zones. The tests were conducted from 11,254 to 11,275 ft., 11,812 to 11,835 ft. and 11,926 to 11,943 ft. on choke sizes varying from 3/4 to 1-1/2 inches.

The well was directionally drilled from an onshore surface location to an offshore subsurface reservoir target. The drill site is on the Abu Madi West development lease seven miles northwest of Marathon's joint-interest El Qar'a gas field. The El Qar'a gas field has existing infrastructure, including a gas plant, and produced an average of 133 Mmcfd of natural gas and 3,800 barrels per day of liquid hydrocarbons during 1993.

marathon and its partners hold 99,905 gross acres on their Abu Madi West development lease, including both onshore and offshore acreage.

Further testing and evaluation of the well are required to determine the extent of this reserve accumulation and its commerciality. Following the completion of this well, Marathon and its partners will utilize the rig to drill two additional exploratory wells this year. The next well will be drilled on the Khilala lease to the southeast of the No. 1 El Qar'a Northwest, and the third will be on the Abu Madi West development lease.

Marathon Petroleum Egypt Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Marathon Oil Co., has a 25 percent working interest in the discovery. Agip SpA's IEOC Co. Inc. has a 50 percent working interest and serves as operator.

The remaining 25 percent interest is held by Amoco Egypt Oil Co., a subsidiary of Amoco Production Co., the worldwide oil and gas exploration and production subsidiary of Amoco Corp.

Marathon Oil Co. is part of the Marathon Group of USX Corp.

RRC gas allowables represents increase

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commissioners James E. Nugent, Mary Scott Nabers and Barry Williamson forecast Texas oil production for February at 1,552,838 barrels per day, based on purchaser nominations, and set gas production allowables for prorated fields in the state to meet market demand of 144,352,476 Mcf.

For prorated gas fields, the February 1994 allowable represents an increase of 3,454,740 Mcf when compared to actual production of 140,897,736 Mcf in February 1993. In setting the February 1994 allowable, the commission used historical production figures from February 1993 and producer forecasts for February 1994 demand, then adjusted the figures to account for such factors as well capability, new wells in a field, etc.

Nugent, Nabers and Williamson also reviewed oil companies' February nominations to buy a total of 1,552,838 barrels of Texas oil per day. The nomination total, a decrease of 6,300 barrels daily when compared to January 1994 purchaser nominations, estimates Texas oil purchases in the coming month. February 1993 nominations totaled 1,705,674 barrels daily.

Nugent reported that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the U.S. averaged 8,740,000 barrels per day for the month of November 1993. This was an increase of 868,000 barrels per day from the same period a year ago.

U.S. Exploration execs sell shares

Terry L. Carrol and Ronald R. McGinnis, both executives at United States Exploration Inc., decreased their holdings in the Independence, Kan.-based oil and gas exploration company, according to separate filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Carrol, the company's president, decreased his stake by a fraction to 12.78 percent through the sale of 25,000 US common shares for $3 each on Jan. 12.

Company secretary Ronald R. McGinnis lowered his stake by a fraction to 12.79 percent by selling 25,000 common shares for $3 each on Jan. 12.

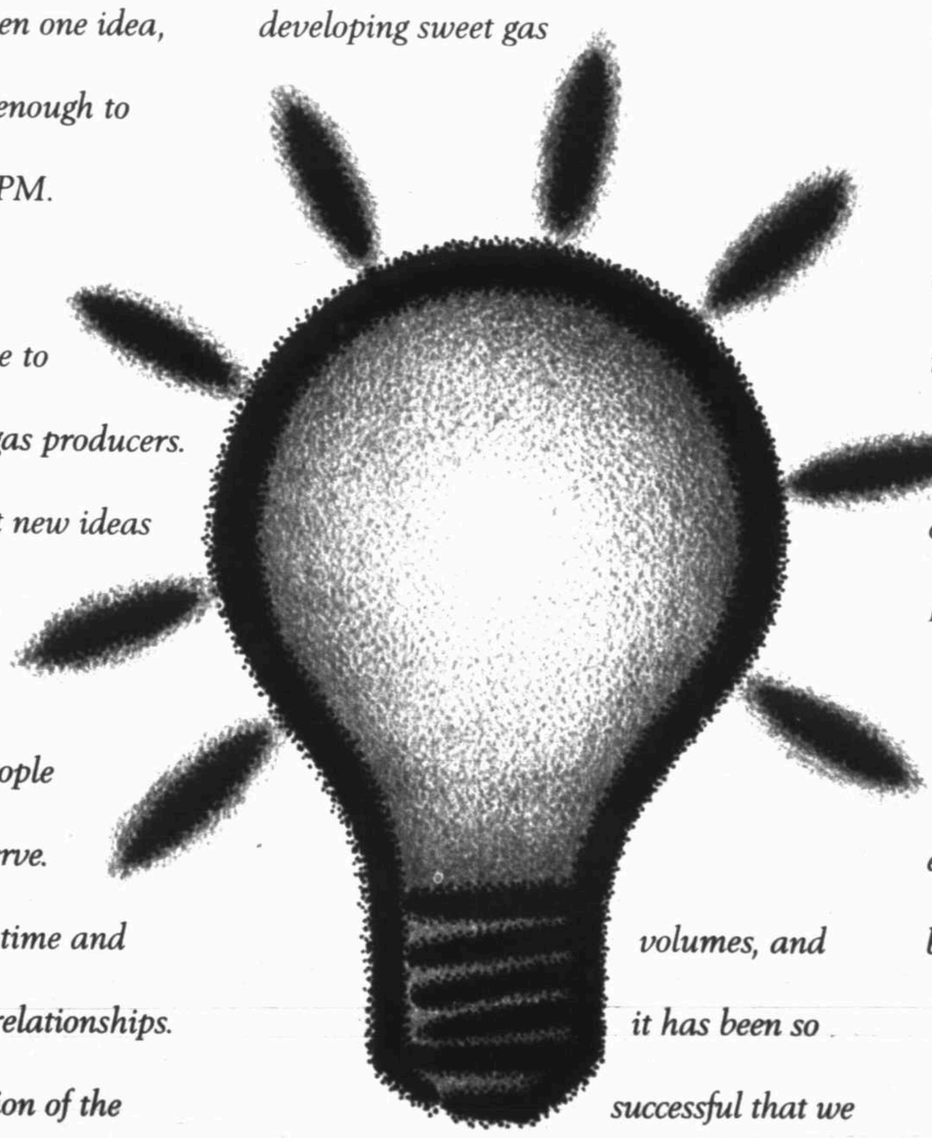

How many light bulbs does it take to change a company?

The answer is one. Even one idea, one request, one challenge is enough to start new developments at GPM.

That's because GPM is open to change and responsive to the diverse needs of natural gas producers.

We've incorporated bright new ideas into our company's organizational structure, such as decentralizing to move our people nearer to the producers they serve. That means more face-to-face time and closer, more effective working relationships.

Take the recent construction of the highly Btu efficient Zia Plant in southeastern New Mexico. It was built in response to developing sweet gas volumes, and it has been so successful that we are now expanding the processing capacity.

Or consider our response to the challenge of a sour well in a sweet system. Instead of turning the producer away, we worked with him to develop an off-site treatment program and then moved the treated gas to the GPM plant for processing.

And those are just a few examples of how GPM turns ideas into advantages. For us and for our producers.

If you'd like to know more, call Mike Fitzgibbons at 915-368-1059. You'll discover that while natural gas can't turn on light bulbs, light bulbs can turn on natural gas.

BRIEFS

Exxon affiliate joins Venezuelan venture

IRVING, Texas (AP) — An affiliate of Exxon Corp. has signed an agreement to form a joint-venture liquefied natural gas company in Venezuela, Exxon announced.

The new company, Sucre Gas, S.A., plans to investigate the technical and commercial viability of the project, including evaluating the development and marketing of natural gas from fields offshore the state of Sucre in northeast Venezuela.

"The formation of the joint venture is an important milestone in the development of this project," said Fritz R. Voigt, vice president for gas of Exxon Co., International. "Exxon is pleased to be a participant in this venture."

Joining the affiliate, Exxon Venezuela LNG Inc., in the agreement are Shell Gas Venezuela B.V., Mitsubishi Corp. and Lagoven, S.A., a Venezuelan oil company.

NKK delivers second double-hull tanker

HOUSTON — NKK has delivered its second double-hull very large crude carrier, built for Bergesen d.y. A/S of Norway.

Named the "Berge Stavanger," the tanker follows in the wake of the "Berge Sigval," which was delivered in March 1993. The tankers both include features that exceed requirements set by the International Maritime Organization's marine pollution prevention treaty mandating double-hulls.

The 300,000 DWT supertanker's double-hull extends along its sides and bottom to prevent oil spills in the event of an accident. In addition, the cargo oil tanks and ballast tanks are separately arranged to ensure maximum protection against leakage, and the tanks and piping systems are made of highly corrosion-resistant materials.

In addition to these pollution-control measures, the tanker is equipped with highly automated operation systems and energy-saving/safety devices. With a service speed of 16 knots, the vessel is also among the world's fastest tankers.

ICO Inc. acquires Canadian company

ICO Inc. a Houston-based company that services the oil industry, acquired a Canadian company, Shearer Supply Ltd., for about $2.5 million in cash and stock, according to a statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Shearer inspects and reconditions equipment for oil well pumping units. For the nine months ended Dec. 31, Shearer reported net income of $401,000 on revenues of $5.6 million, according to a statement filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

BridgeGas sells marketing operation

BridgeGas U.S.A. Inc., a subsidiary of Bridge Oil (U.S.A.) Inc., sold its gas-marketing operations to Teco Bridge Co., for $500,000 in cash and an agreement to receive from $3 million to $4 million of net profits interest in Teco Bridge.

According to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Teco Bridge, a subsidiary of Teco Pipeline Co., will purchase and market some of BridgeGas' production for up to five years.

Texaco signs production deal with China

Associated Press

Texaco Inc. has joined a production consortium that will search for oil in a 2.4-million-acre section of the Tarim Basin, a vast desert region in northwestern China.

The consortium's agreement with the China National Petroleum Co. represents Texaco's first oil exploration project in mainland China. The White Plains, N.Y.-based energy company already has extensive offshore leases.

Texaco's partners in the project are Agip Ltd., Elf Hydrocarbures Chine, Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. Ltd. and Japan Energy Corp. Each partner holds a 20 percent share.

China National Petroleum will own up to 51 percent of any resulting production from the block, one of five in the Tarim Basin opened to foreign petroleum companies last year.

Dresser Industries forms new unit

DALLAS (AP) — A new unit of Dresser Industries Inc., based in London, will coordinate efforts of the company's oilfield service operations, executives said.

The Dallas-based Dresser said its Engineered Drilling Services Division will work with clients and oilfield service companies to provide project planning and management for worldwide projects.

The company appointed John W. Kennedy as president and also announced promotion of James L. Bryan to senior vice president-operations for the oilfield services segment.

Dresser supplies products and services used in hydrocarbon energy-related activities.

Southern Union buys gas operations

Southern Union Co. of Austin, Texas, completed its previously announced purchase of certain natural gas distribution operations in Missouri from Western Resource Inc. of Topeka, Kan., for about $400 million.

Southern Union funded the purchase through a subscription rights offering of common stock and the sale of Senior notes due 2024.

The operations provide natural gas to approximately 460,000 customers in western and central Missouri.

Thermedics to buy Baker Hughes units

Thermedics Inc. of Waltham, Mass., plans to buy two subsidiaries of Houston-based Baker Hughes Inc. for $41 million.

The companies are Ramsey Technologies, which makes precision equipment used to weigh and inspect bulk materials and packaged goods, and Epsilon Industrial, a start-up that hopes to design products for the on-line measurement of moisture content in materials.

According to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, both businesses had combined sales of approximately $59 million in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30. The transaction is part of a larger agreement between Thermo Electon Corp. (parent company of Thermedics) and Baker Hughes Inc. that is subject to regulatory approval and other closing conditions.

Thermedics develops explosives and drug-detection devices and various biomedical products.

Investor group cuts Wainoco Oil stake

A group including Frank A. Benevento II, general partner of The Energy Recovery Fund L.P., cut its stake in Wainoco Oil Corp. of Houston by a fraction to 4.6 percent through the sale of about $19,375 of the company's stock.

Benevento sold 5,000 Wainoco common shares for $3.875 each on Jan. 1, according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Energy Recovery Fund is a Bethesda, Md.-based institutional money manager that invests in petroleum industries.

Maxus loses $30.7 million in quarter

DALLAS (AP) — Maxus Energy Corp. reported a fourth-quarter net loss of $30.7 million and a net loss for the year of $49.4 million.

Per share, the loss translates to 31 cents for the quarter and 68 cents for the year.

The fourth-quarter loss includes a non-cash charge of $9.5 million for environmental liabilities. In the same quarter last year, Maxus posted a profit of $125.3 million, thanks to a $143.9 million payment it received as settlement of a lawsuit over the acquisition of Natomas Co. in 1983.

Full year results included a $7.1 million extinguishment of debt and a $6.8 million gain from the settlement of another lawsuit related to the Natomas acquisition.

Maxus reported income of $74.2 million in 1992.

Maxus is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company with operations in more than a dozen countries.

DESTINATION: Romance

By Carolyn Fitz-Gerald

If I had to choose my favorite cities for romance, London and San Francisco would leave Paris far behind. Why? Perhaps it is the spirit of the two cities which seems to welcome visitors, and especially, couples in search of quiet, out-of-the-way places where they can be together without distractions.

London's Pelham Hotel in South Kensington, at Cromwell Place just down the road from Harrods department store, offers seclusion with all the modern conveniences.

To check into the Pelham is to blend the best of old and new. There are no tatty rugs and stale cigar smoke here. The antique three-seater conversation chair in the lobby is upholstered in navy and red check. Hanging above the drinks tray, a severe portrait of the owners' great-great aunt Eliza is softened with a circle of dried lavender and peonies. From the moment you enter the Pelham, fresh flowers abound. But they are not the usual. The Pelham favors trailing morning glories and lilies of the valley. Immediately, I know this a place with a mood.

Upstairs, expectations are confirmed. The bedroom is dominated by a giant canopied bed spread with a chintz eiderdown and heaped with pillows. A tiny footstool awaits to help me ascent into this opulence. A dressing table, a

The Halcyon hotel (top) in London is known as a favorite gathering place for movie stars. The entry courtyard of the Stouffer Stanford Court Hotel (middle right) in San Francisco was formerly a carriage turn-around, but now it is covered by a dramatic, Tiffany-style, stained glass dome. An antique Beaux Arts fountain bubbles in the courtyard's center. The bedroom of the Pelham hotel (bottom right) in London is dominated by this opulent canopied bed, complete with footstool. Dining at Cafe Majestic in the Majestic Hotel (bottom left) in San Francisco is a lesson in divine cuisine matched with a romantic setting. San Francisco's Tommy Toy's (inset) is an enchanting place which serves haute Chinese Chinoise food.

Symphony/chorale season opens

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

"It's a Red Hot Season," the theme for this year's Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale. is certainly true. Last weekend's Pops Concert at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center was a "sizzler." It provided an exciting and memorable evening of music featuring the works of two pairs of creative personalities.

McKnight-Harrison

The first half of the program paid tribute to Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II and included selections from the musicals, "The King and I," "Carousel," "South Pacific," "The Sound of Music" and "Oklahoma."

After intermission, George and Ira Gershwin's popular opera, "Porgy and Bess," was presented in concert, with soprano Beverly Hale of El Paso and Dr. Luther Stripling of Hurst as the guest artists. Laura Main, NewsWest 9's morning anchor, was the narrator for the opera.

Members of the audience were seated cabaret-style at large round tables. Sponsors' tables held flower arrangements and decanters of wine. All places were marked with miniature bottles of pepper sauce, signifying the "Red Hot Season" theme.

Among those seen in the filled convention hall were Edna and Mack Hibbitts, Jeanne and Bill Beach, Mary Lou and Mark Wilson, Mary Frances and David Griffiths, Peggy and Jack Lytle, Ruth and Joe Thompson and Margaret and John Rhea.

MEMBERS OF THE GREEN Tree Country Club Ladies Association are looking forward to hosting "Husbands' Night" on Feb. 25. Cocktails will be at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7 p.m. It promises to be an entertaining evening with storyteller, cowboy poet and chuckwagon cook Biscuits O'Bryan, aka the Rev. J. Monte Jones of Sonora, presenting the program.

Monte's career as a storyteller began at the Covered Wagon Dinner Theater in Sonora in 1987. Two years later, he performed at the first National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration in Lubbock. Now he shares his talent at various gatherings and conventions throughout Texas and beyond. He has published two books, "Biscuits O'Bryan's Book of Beans, Bread and Other Bull" and "More Bull from Biscuits."

Monte is a fifth generation Texan and third generation San Angeloan. Although raised in town, his family once owned the 96 Ranch south of Van Horn, where he enjoyed occasional ranch life. His grandmother, the late Lillie Montgomery, said Monte started telling stories when he was two years old "and some of the were even true."

Rector of St. John's Episcopal Church in Sonora and vicar at St. James Church in Fort McKavett, Monte writes, "I am always happy to be invited to perform in Midland. My folks are A.A. (Poosty) and Lorena Jones, and I also have a brother, Gus Jones, C.P.A., and sister, Carolyn Sutton, who live in Midland, so I always get in some visiting while there."

THE MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB'S Fiesta, its annual January fund-raiser, was enjoyed by over 100 members and guests. According to club president Dorothy Perkins, "We were very lucky. Our party on Jan. 29 preceded the bad weather by one day. Everyone got into the spirit of the occasion and had a good time."

The event began with a delicious Mexican dinner and continued with entertainment provided by Las Adelitas, a group of ladies who perform Mexican regional folk dances. They are directed by Yolanda Belazi.

The colorful decorations included a large wreath, covered with Mexican paper flowers and flanked by donkey pinatas on the stage, and paper flowers and candles on the dinner tables.

Among those seen in the crowd were June and Frank Cowden, Monta Jo and Ted Johnson, Hilda and Leslie Hinds, Verna Gill, Elinore Chase, Melanie and Perry Mathewes and ways and means chairman, Madge Wallis, with her husband, Porter.

THE SANTA RITA CLUB, volunteer organization of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, held its annual winter dinner recently at the Petroleum Club.

Approximately 135 members and guests were entertained by the Satin Strings from Odessa's Permian High School as they dined.

Among those enjoying the event were Ruth and Homer Fort, Pam and Bob Leibrock, Helen Pokky, Jean Jones, Dilly and Shorty Nance, Eleanor and Ken Terrell and Phyllis and Bob Stine.

Social chairmen Pat McMillan and Connie Naumann were in charge of arrangements. Ann Harges is president of the organization.

AFTER A WEDDING TRIP to Ocho Rios, Jamaica, D'Nard Arthur and his bride, the former Heidi Hewett, will be at home in Dallas, where both are employed. They were married Saturday evening in Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and honored at a reception afterwards at The Club at Mission Dorado.

Wedding week festivities began Friday with a bridesmaids luncheon hosted by the bride's sisters, Heather Hewett and Hollee (Mrs. Barry) Lofquist at the home of their parents, Donna and Don Hewett. That evening, the groom's parents, Beth and D'Nard Arthur of Lubbock, hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Petroleum Club.

On Saturday, a luncheon for out-of-town guests was held at the home of Carol Ann and Lynn Hunt. Also hosting were Judy and Deon Christensen and Kay and Paul Thorpe. Sally Stella provided refreshments for the bridal party at the church prior to the wedding.

Other pre-nuptial festivities in Midland included a miscellaneous shower at the home of Dee (Mrs. Paul) Morris and also hosted by Terry (Mrs. Ed) Atkin, Susie (Mrs. Gary) Burnett, Sherry (Mrs. Jerry) Hewett, Eleanor (Mrs. Mike) Morse and Linda (Mrs. Rodney) Satterwhite, and a 'Round the House Shower at La Bodega Restaurant hosted by the Christensens, the Hunts, Sallie and Don Kidwell, Sally and Bill Stella and the Thorpes.

Also, a kitchen shower was given at the home of Jan (Mrs. Andy) Reed, with Karon (Mrs. Fred) Brown, Camille Duchesne, Alice (Mrs. Roger) Freidline and Gail (Mrs. Pete) Rowland as co-hostesses.

Out-of-town parties included a miscellaneous shower in the groom's hometown of Lubbock and a lingerie shower and bachelorette party in Dallas hosted by former Midlanders Kippy (Mrs. Jim) Clapp and Kathleen (Mrs. William) Kelly-Hernandez.

Famous female spy was Dutch

LEEUWARDEN, Netherlands (AP) — Mata Hari, one of history's most notorious female spies, was born here as Gertrud Margarete Zelle in 1876.

After her marriage to a Dutch colonial officer, she began a stage career in Europe, posing as a Javanese temple dancer.

Appearing in Berlin in 1907, she was persuaded to become a German spy. During World War I, she lived in France and obtained secret military information from Allied officers.

Arrested by the French secret service in 1917, she was court-martialed and then executed by firing squad.

Prepare rose beds before planting

By Deborah A. Benge

Last week we took a look at America's favorite flower, the rose. We find that there are many types of flowers, a type for every taste. Almost every garden has at least one rose in it, and home gardeners buy more every year. If this is the year for you to purchase one or more roses, get your gardening ducks in a row before you plant.

Benge

Site or location

If you want healthy, productive roses, plant in full sun. At least five to six hours of direct sun will keep roses with more blooms, less disease and healthier growth. Early morning sun is excellent since it quickly dries moisture from the foliage and is preferable to our hot afternoon sun. Good drainage is essential for roses. If there is a problem relocate or plant in a raised bed.

Good air circulation is important to cut down on disease, but if the site is real windy, some windbreak protection would be helpful in preserving flower and foliage quality.

Soil

Roses can thrive in a wide variety of soils, although soil improvement should always be part of rose culture. Sandy soils require large amounts of organic material to help soil hold nutrients and water. A heavy soil will need amending to improve drainage and provide adequate oxygen. Four to six inches of compost, pine bark, peat moss or similar material should be worked into the top 12-15 inches of soil.

Roses prefer a slightly acid soil (pH 6.0-6.8) but our soils are alkaline (high in pH). Altering an alkaline pH is very difficult and temporary at best. Again, adding organic matter can help in lowering pH. Adding iron sulfate and ground sulfur in a 1:1 ration can help reduce iron cholrosis or a chelated iron, Fe 138, can be used with a difficult, persistent iron chlorosis problem.

Planting

Soil improvement is best done several months in advance to planting. This is especially good if putting in a rose bed. Raw organic matter has a chance to decompose and soil settle. At the time of soil improvement, nutrients can be added. What and how much fertilizer is best based on soil test results. If adding phosphrous, avoid using bone meal — super or triple phosphate would be better. Nitrogen is a nutrient that will more than likely be low and a slow release or organic nitrogen would be excellent forms at bed preparation.

Space plants based on their mature spread. Polyanthas can be planted at 18 to 24 inches, while Chinas, Bourbons, Teas, Hybrid Perpetuals, Hybrid Teas and Hybrid Musks are best at three to five foot spacing. Climbers and ramblers need eight to 10 feet although some vigorous vines like Banksias, Cherokee and certain others could be planted on a 15-foot spacing.

Bare root plants be set out as soon after receiving them as weather and time allow. If a delay of more than a few days is necessary, remove the plants from the shipping bag and "heel them in" by covering the roots and part of the top with moist loose soil.

Container grown plants may be set out at any time, but most rose growers avoid the hot summer months when survival rate goes down.

Prune tops back an inch or two to just above a live, healthy outward facing bud. Trim off shipping/handling damaged canes and roots to healthy tissue. Dig a hole large enough to accommodate the roots and fill with moist back fill soil. Firm soil well around the roots and water thoroughly to remove air pockets and settle the soil firmly around the roots. Plants should be planted at the approximate level they grew originally.

Fertilizers should not be applied until the first set of flowers begin to fade, for everblooming types, or in the case of once-blooming roses, eight to 10 weeks after planting. A tablespoon per plant of a complete fertilizer or nitrogen fertilizer may be applied every four to six weeks up until Sept. 1. After that, don't apply any more until next spring.

Fertility

Roses are heavy users of nutrients and require frequent light applications of fertilizer. Again, a soil test is the best way to determine nutrient needs.

The time-honored fertilizer has been well rotted or composted cow or horse manure. Since manures can have high salt contents, prior aging or composting is important for leaching salts.

Since nitrogen is the nutrient used in the largest quantities, light frequent applications will be necessary. This can be done with a slow release, organic or nitrogen only fertilizer.

Before you buy, be sure to select the site and prepare the bed so you can have truly enjoyable roses. Come by the Extension office for a copy of "Roses: How to Plant" and "Roses: Summer Care," publication numbers L-866 and L-878.

ROMANCE: Cities offer perfect setting desk and a trunk of dark wood which looks as if it has withstood many adventurous voyages completes the look.

Since St. Valentine's Day is near, I decide it is time to buy a remembrance for my husband. The Victoria and Albert museum is just across the way, and I go hoping to find an idea from these two, the most romantic of all couples. Their museum is all lace and silver and silk. Maybe not the lace, I think, but surely men still enjoy silk and silver. I keep them in mind as I head for Harrods, dodging some French-speaking children who have just emerged from the lycee.

Entering Harrods, I find that indeed there are many silk things for gentlemen, most of them extraordinarily expensive. The sales woman has an idea: "A silk handkerchief, perhaps?" I don't think so. Then she hits upon the perfect solution: "Silk stockings!" I am bewildered, envisioning ladies hosiery. "Sox," she says, immediately accommodating to my American English. I leave with an elegant pair of navy blue sox for only 25 American dollars. But I'm still thinking of silver.

I pass Christie's feeling that most anything they have will be beyond my budget. I hop a cab for Portebello Road. Here, there is romance in every stall, a beribboned deed describing property Henry Smithen bought for his bride, Elizabeth, in 1859, a pair of Victorian braces and a bud vase with lilies of the valley. All of these are appealing, but not quite right.

I VENTURE INTO the Body Shop, where I buy some lotion, then on the David Wainwright's establishment at 59 Talbot Road, where I want everything. Romance is always connected to adventure, and I learn that David rides camel-back far into the Thar Desert located in Western Rajasthan for his wares. I want the all: wooden bowls and carved chests, hanging lamps and amoires. I decide on a pair of spiraled wooden candlesticks. These are for me.

On the way back I stop at the Halcyon hotel bar whose literature says that the place is known to "inflame strong desires." The Halcyon is said by others to be a favorite gathering place for movie stars like William Hurt and Sigourney Weaver. I survey a Halcyon suite. It is a divine mixture of alabaster and rose. I like the look of the Halcyon which is essentially a town house in Holland Park, close to Kensington Palace.

I decide to stop by to see if I can catch a glance of Princess Dianna and the boys. There are visiting hours, but I don't go in. I respect Dianna's desire to be alone. There's nothing like a look at shattered romance to make you appreciate your own.

On the morning plane to San Francisco, I remember I didn't find a suitable piece of silver. I forget that mission as we fly over the bay and I am overwhelmed by the view of this peninsula city.

I CHECK INTO the Stanford Court that Leland Stanford built for his wife in 1876. It has seen many changes since then, but the carriage turnaround is still impressive and the view of the bay from my room is spellbinding. We have a room just above the cable cars. I have bought into the romance of the cable cars and find their clang-clang endearing rather than annoying.

My husband and I are to meet in the bar. I head down early and run immediately into romance, San Francisco style. An older gentleman is sipping brandy with an anticipatory air, I think. Suddenly, a white-haired, elegant lady, superbly attired in an orange suit arrives. He leaps up. They embrace. They kiss. "I'm free to marry now," she says. Is she widowed? Is she divorced? Have her children left for college? What event has made her free, I wonder as he orders champagne and they toast; I presume to their forthcoming nuptials.

After 40 years of marriage, our meeting is not nearly so dramatic. Still, we set off in search of romance and fine it at the Cafe Majestic in the Majestic Hotel, a five-story historic landmark in the Edwardian style. The cafe has won the Epicurean Rendezvous Award and the Most Romantic Restaurant Award. Both were well deserved.

The Majestic's cuisine is divine, thanks to Chef Marc Glassman. We have smoked breast of Muscovy duck with roasted apples and hazelnuts and jumbo scallops poached in soy and ginger bouillon with opal basil. The basil really is opal-colored.

WHILE GOOD food, peach walls with gray wainscoting, perfect piano music and a snowy tablecloth bedecked with roses should be enough romance, there is a love story here too.

Proprietor Tom Marshall's wife comes over and introduces herself. We comment on her piano selections of "Green Sleeves," some Rogers and Hammerstein and Tchaikovsky — love songs all. "Oh," she says,"'I play mostly love songs. I was a starving piano player and so happy to get this job. I was determined that nothing would interfere with it, least of all, involvement with the owner. But shortly after I took the job, I dreamed of Tom every night. Finally, after about six months I told him. 'I dream of you too,' he said."

Shortly after their joint confession, they were married. Mrs. Marshall says she plans to continue playing love songs for a very long time.

In search of more romance, we decide that exotic is always romantic, so the following night we choose to dine at Tommy Toy's. Tommy Toy's is an enchanting place which served haute Chinese Chinoise food, a mix of Chinese and French food.

We have the special signature dinner of seafood bisque in a fresh coconut with lobster and Peking duck amid an atmosphere replete with carved archways and powder paintings framed in sandalwood. Each table is lit with a porcelain bridal lamp, obviously a good omen for the romantically inclined.

THE NEXT DAY we take a Wok Wiz tour of Chinatown complete with a fortune cookie factory. The tour is delightful, but our fortunes are not at all romantic. After a cup of ginseng tea, we decide on a merry-go-round ride at Pier 39, my idea of romance since I was 3 years old, followed by lunch at the Neptune Cafe where we can see the shops traversing the bay. Even Alcatraz is romantic when it's shrouded in fog. Closer to shore, there is a bit of romance on the rocks by the pier. Only the elderly are left after the younger seals have paired off and departed. Still, the old gentlemen bark and cavort for the seasoned ladies who clap their approval.

That night we have dinner at the Inn at the Opera. It is quiet with down-filled banquettes, classical music and Belgian tapestries.

Originally built to give divas and other performers a convenient place to stay near the Opera House, it is definitely for lovers now after a $7 million restoration.

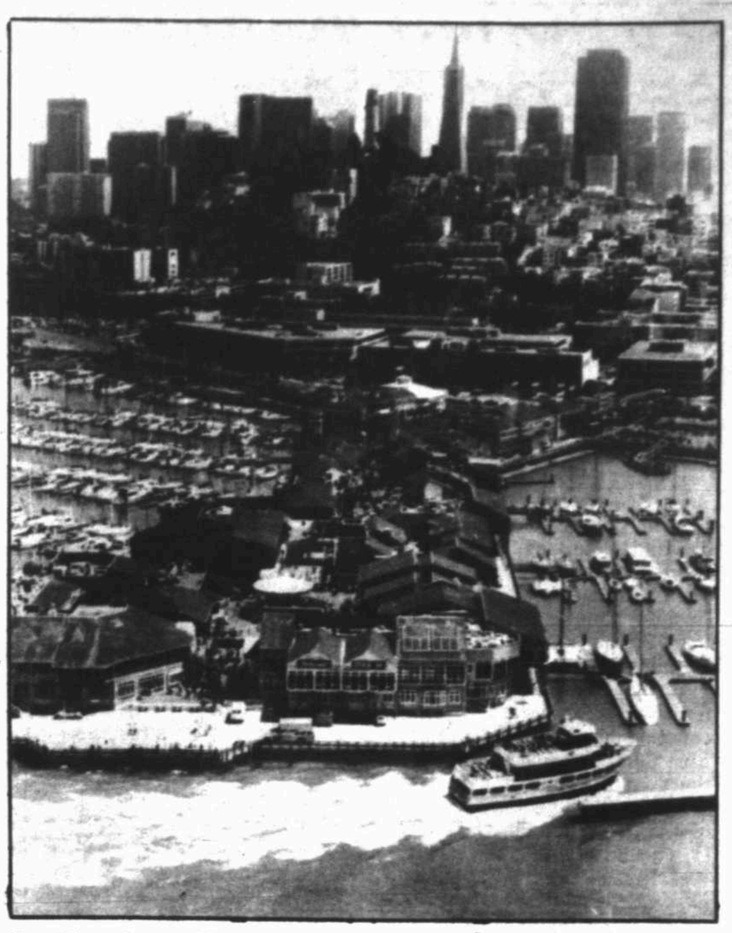

Afterward, we go to the nearby San Francisco Library and pick up literature on a walking tour. We choose to tour Nob Hill and I am glad I take a raincoat and an umbrella. The sites of the Stanford, Hopkins, Crocker and Huntington mansions are the cornerstones of Nob Hill, but I am more intrigued with the residences of Nancy Reagan's former astrologer, Pat Quigley, and 1155 Leavenworth, where author Dashiell Hammett carried on a lifelong romance with Lillian Hellman. Our guide is full of stories about the rich and famous, filled with romance and tragedy.

BUT IT'S Valentine's Day and I go in search of the silver I didn't find in London. I find just the right thing at Shreve and Company: a small silver perfume flask. Victorian silver. Made in England, of course. Some may think it a strange choice for a man but I find it just right for holding one tablespoon of Amaretto liqueur to lace his coffee. He likes the Amaretto. I like the story that comes with Amaretto about the beautiful widow of Saranno and the artist who immortalized her.

"I want the flask engraved," I say to the clerk. Without a flutter, he answers, "of course." Evidently engraving is de riguer at Shreve and Company. I instruct him about Victorian script to read you warm my heart.

On the way back to the Stanford Court I pass the Villa Florence on Union Square. I had always thought the hotel was named for the city in Italy since it boasts one of the best Italian restaurants in San Francisco. Some time ago I was corrected by one of the young staff members at Bill Kimpton's establishment. "No," he said. "It's more likely named for one of Mr. Kimpton's girlfriends." I think it must be the ultimate in romance to have a hotel named after you.

When I return to the Stanford Court, the silk sox and the English silver go over well. Forty red roses are waiting for me. I change my mind. I think that having a hotel namesake would be nice, but 40 red roses are the ultimate romantic gesture.

San Francisco's Pier 39 (foreground), constructed in 1978, is a 45-acre complex that has become one of California's largest visitor attractions. In the distance is downtown.

B&Bs: It's what's inside that counts

By Mary Forgione
N.Y. Times News Service

BAYWOOD PARK, Calif. — My heart sank as I parked in front of the modern gray building that looked more like a strip mall than an inn. I had driven 200 miles up the coast from Los Angeles expecting a cozy stay at the Baywood Inn Bed and Breakfast on south Morro Bay.

But the two-story building lacked distinction, the promised bay view was obscured by darkness, and no one was waiting in the lobby to greet me. Where was the doting b&b host to offer a glass of chardonnay?

I passed a few uncomfortable moments in the lobby until I noticed an intercom with a note indicating which button to press for service.

Someone cheerily appeared with a key to my room and, when I alluded to the wine and hors d'oeuvres mentioned in the brochure, equally cheerily told me I was too late. She handed me a printed form on which I was to indicate my preferences for the next day's continental breakfast, and steered me toward an outside stairwell that led to my second-story room.

In my mind, this inn violated some unwritten rules of what distinguishes a b&b from a hotel: The building lacked a homey ambience, and the 15 rooms and suites had motel-style private entrances. But no sooner had I turned the key and opened the door to my room than my spirits began to lift.

The spacious one-bedroom suite had a living room with a sleeper sofa and vaulted ceiling, a fireplace framed in blue-and-white tiles, an eating area with wooden table and chairs, two large windows for a view of the bay (it appeared the next morning at breakfast), and a queen-size bed piled high with a comforter and pillows.

This roomy suite, named Quimper (yes, all the rooms and suites have names) for the medieval town in Brittany, France, held a refreshing mix of modern comforts and country decor, the complete antithesis of b&bs with the cluttered Victorian look. And at $120 per night, it was a value compared to what I'd paid at older b&bs with more "character" and a bathroom down the hall. So I stopped pining for chatty hosts pushing home-baked shortbread and settled into the quiet comfort of this well-decorated suite.

In the morning light, I even forgave the gray facade with sea-green railings for looking like my dentist's office. It turns out the building was originally part of a retail-office complex that ran out of money during construction.

After sitting idle for many years, the building was bought by Pat and Alex Benson, who transformed it and opened the b&b inn four years ago. Rooms and suites on the lower level are $80-$100 per night; second-story suites start at $100 and run to $140 for a two-bedroom suite. A charge of $15 per night is added for each additional person more than two.

The inn sits on a quiet peninsula in Baywood Park, about four miles south of the town of Morro Bay and 12 miles from San Luis Obispo. Across the street is Baywood Pier, where a walking path leads around the peninsula.

But once ensconced in the suite, it was hard to find a good reason to go out. The living room and dining alcove make it perfect for a family stay, with kid- (and adult-) friendly amenities like a color television, microwave, basket of goodies (including microwave popcorn, raisins and other munchies), and a refrigerator stocked with soft drinks and juice.

The continental breakfast is simple but on the sweet side. It is delivered to your room from La Patisserie, a restaurant on the first floor of the inn. My requested coffee and apple juice appeared, but instead of croissants I got four bite-size quiches, a few pineapple wedges, and a too-sweet-to-eat Danish.

For those (like me) unfamiliar with the area, a guest information sheet in the room listed restaurants in Baywood Park (just a handful) and Morro Bay, and provided an excellent rundown of sites to see in this off-the-beaten-track town.

DEAR ABBY

Learn to be a sweetheart by following these rules

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Can you believe tomorrow will be St. Valentine's Day again — already? And what better time to revive my Ten Commandments of Love?

Yes, Dear Readers, I actually had the chutzpah to write my own Ten Commandments, but it wasn't as though I was stealing from strangers — one of my ancestors was privileged to have received them on Mount Sinai from the Lord himself — at least that's what the Good Book says.

Originally, I wrote two sets of commandments — one for men and one for women. Then, Mandy Stillman, a lawyer and early feminist from Milwaukee, wrote to demand equal rights for women, insisting that there be only one set of commandments.

She was right, of course. So how's this for a gender bender?

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF LOVE

■ Thou shalt put thy mate before thy mother, thy father, thy son and thy daughter, for thy mate is thy lifelong companion.

■ Abuse not thy body with excessive food, tobacco, drink, or any foreign substance that goeth into thy arm or up thy nose.

■ Do not forget that cleanliness is a virtue.

■ Permit neither thy business nor thy hobby to make thee a stranger to thy children, for the most precious gift a parent can give his or her family is TIME.

■ Make not a beggar of thy mate. Willingly share with him or her thy worldly goods.

■ Forget not to say, "I love you." For even though thy love may be constant, thy mate doth yearn to hear those cherished words.

■ Remember that the approval of thy mate is worth far more than the adoring glances of a hundred strangers, so cleave unto thy mate, and forsake all others.

■ Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it cometh the joys of old age (not to mention its resale value).

■ Forgive with grace, for who among us does not need to be forgiven?

■ Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will grow and bless you.

Tomorrow, be a sweetheart. Call someone you love and say, "I love you." (Make two or three calls; who says you can't love more than one person — in different ways, of course?)

Go through your closets and give all those clothes you've been saving until you lose 10 pounds to your favorite charity. Call someone who's lonely and say, "I'm thinking of you." Or better yet, say, "I'll be over tomorrow to take you to lunch ... or run some errands ... or give you a ride."

Visit a sick friend. Say a prayer. Donate some blood. Adopt a pet. Will your eyes, your kidneys and all your usable organs to someone who can use them after you're gone. Forgive an enemy. Hug your teen-ager. Write a fan letter. Listen to a bore. Pay your doctor. Tell your parents you think they're wonderful. Spay your dog. Neuter your cat. Quit smoking. Drive carefully. If you're walking, watch where you're going.

And don't wait until next year to be a sweetheart again. Love, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My brother "Al" is in his 80s, and while he is financially comfortable, he is far from rich.

Now his grandson has moved in with his wife and their two children (ages 18 months and 3 years old). The wife attends college full-time while the grandson stays home and takes care of the babies.

Al tells me that they pay no rent, but that they do the housework, the cooking and the yard work. They buy their own groceries with money earned from part-time jobs.

Al says that he was terribly lonesome after the death of his wife, and "the kids" have brought him the kind of happiness that money can't buy. He says they make him feel useful to be able to help out.

My sisters say that I should butt out, but I'm worried that "the kids" are imposing, and the hubbub of small children is bad for my brother.

Abby, why can't he see that they are just freeloaders? What do you think of this? — CONCERNED SISTER

DEAR SISTER: Your concern for your brother is commendable, but I vote with your sisters. What I see is a win-win situation. It looks like a fair exchange to me.

DEAR ABBY: I am hoping that you or one of your readers can help me. For the last three years, I have been wearing artificial fingernails. I get a manicure once a week, at which time my manicurist replaces them with a new set.

My own nails have developed a fungus that is very ugly. I have tried over-the-counter remedies, but none of them have worked. I know I should probably stop wearing artificial nails until this fungus clears up, but I work in an office, and can't possibly go to work with my hands looking this way — so these false fingernails are a must.

Also, I do not want to go to a dermatologist because I know I will be told to stop wearing them. Abby, there is no way I can leave my house with my fingernails exposed, unless I wear gloves.

Is there some form of internal antibiotic I can take to clear up this fungus? Please don't disclose my name or location. — ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Please see a dermatologist without further delay. I am amazed that a manicurist would continue to apply artificial fingernails on the hands of someone who is obviously struggling with a fungus problem.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time, you include in your column wonderful poems or tidbits that depict appreciation of our older citizens. I thought you might find the enclosed item from a newspaper in Wick, Scotland, enlightening. It has meant a great deal to me as I adjust to the sudden loss of my beloved mother last year. Although Mom had some benefits from being a 70-year-old senior, such as reduced rates at hotels and restaurants, I never viewed her as anything less than my active, youthful mother. — BONNIE STIMSON, SAN ANTONIO

DEAR BONNIE: Please accept my sympathy on the recent loss of your beloved mother. I, too, find the poem very touching, and well worth sharing.

ANOTHER BEATITUDE
by Elizabeth Clark

Blessed are they who understand my faltering step and shaking hand,
Blessed, who know my ears today
must strain to catch the things they say,
Blessed are they who seem to know my eyes are dim and my mind is slow,
Blessed are they who looked away,
I spilled my tea on the cloth that day!
Blessed are they who, with cheery smile, stopped to chat for a little while,
Blessed are they who know the way to bring back memories of yesterday,
Blessed are they who never say,
"You've told that story twice today!"
Blessed are they who make it known that I'm loved, respected and not alone,
And blessed are they who will ease the days of my journey home, in loving ways.

Shop for bargains in beef

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

As a cost-conscious shopper, you can find a variety of economical cuts of beef at any meat counter. Bargain-priced cuts are less tender than expensive loin and rib cuts, but taste every bit as good after long, slow cooking. Good beef buys include cuts from the chuck (shoulder, blade or arm cuts). These roasts or steaks need to be cooked using moist heat, such as braising or stewing.

■ Arm Roast: An arm roast can save you kitchen time — as well as money — if you buy one large roast (5 to 6 pounds) and cut it into three sections for three meals.

■ Round Steak: The familiar round steak is lean and has little waste. A bonus is that a full-cut round steak can be divided into meat for several meals. This cut has three obvious sections that may be sold separately, but often at a higher price per pound than the whole round steak. It is usually worth your time and money to buy the whole round, if it's available, and separate the sections yourself.

Wedding & Engagement Announcements

Thank you for your interest in sharing your special day with the Midland Reporter-Telegram. We offer you the opportunity to celebrate in two ways.

The first option provides you with a complimentary listing about your engagement or wedding. Forms for complimentary announcements are available from our Lifestyle Department.

Our second option gives you the opportunity to publish a larger photo and provide more detailed information about your engagement or wedding announcement by purchasing space. There are a variety of sizes for you to choose from and information on how to order is available by calling us.

Ordering your special paid announcement is easy. Decide which size you wish to purchase (keep in mind that there are approximately 30 words per inch of space for your copy). Third, decide how much you want to spend. Finally, bring your completed write-up and your photo to the Midland Reporter-Telegram's advertising department. Your announcement will be edited to fit the space you request. Remember to bring payment or your charge card when placing your order.

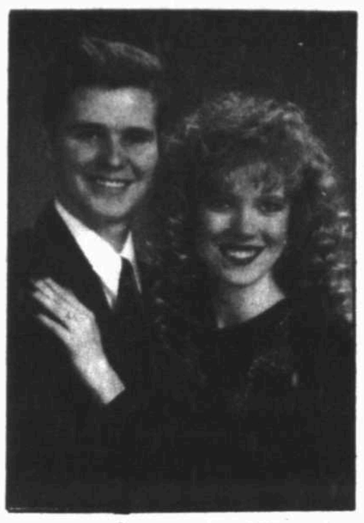

If you have any questions or would like more information on our engagement and wedding listings, please call Mary Hardin at (915) 687-8887 or the retail advertising department, (915) 682-5311.

Remember the old wedding customs — tossing the bouquet and the garter, joining hands to cut the cake, and jumping the broom? Jumping the broom?

That was a wedding tradition of African-American slaves before the Civil War. Couples would jump over brooms to symbolize the joining of two households.

Last year bridal consultant Greta Yarborough worked with a black couple who incorporated the tradition in their otherwise modern-day ceremony. It was the first time she had seen this done. The couple borrowed the idea from the draft of a book Yarborough had.

That draft is now the book "Jumping the Broom" by Harriette Cole (Holt & Co., $27.50). A guide to ethnic weddings, the book describes this custom and others as well as ways to celebrate ethnicity in the wedding ceremony.

Borrowing ideas from wedding books is as much a tradition as kissing the bride, and there is a bumper crop of books from which to borrow. There are huge coffeetable books with lush photography, slim volumes of bridal verse, guides to etiquette and practical handbooks for every aspect of a wedding.

"People pick out what they want by looking at the books," said Bobby Asarch, a bridal consultant since 1984. "People may see a picture of something done at a fancy New York wedding and try their own version."

Asarch said she is amazed publishers keep up with the latest wedding trends, since the industry has become so large. But she said the shelves full of books about weddings reflect the current boom.

"Weddings are fashionable again," Asarch said.

Yarborough said she thinks the books are proliferating because brides today are more mature and, as a consequence, more consumer-oriented. Many women come to her knowing what they want and exactly how they want to spend their money.

Wedding consultant Ellen Hall said wedding books are most beneficial for those who aren't using a consultant. She recommends a planner, which has lists and timetables.

One such book is "The Wedding Planner" by Martha Stewart (Clarkson Potter, $35). In its ring binder are section dividers for calendar, attire and flowers, ceremony, schedules and more. Stewart is noted for being the consummate planner.

Two other planners are "The Bride Guide — the Perfect Wedding Planner" by Dinah Griffin and Marla Schwartz (Barricade Books, $12.95), a practical planner with tips, calendar and lists; and "Bride's Wedding Planner" by the editors of Bride's magazine (Fawcett Columbia, $12), which includes everything from shower games to tips on buying gowns that disguise figure flaws.

When it comes to cost, frugal brides might turn to "Bridal Bargains — Secrets to Throwing a Fantastic Wedding on a Realistic Budget" by Denise and Alan Fields (Windsor Peak Press, $9.95). It offers tips on savings on wedding gowns, photographers, flowers and other bridal items. It also includes instructions on how to negotiate the best deal on reception sites.

Do-it-yourselfers bent on creating a ceremony that is theirs alone may appreciate the ideas in "I Do — A Guide to Creating Your Own Unique Wedding Ceremony" by Sydney Metrick (Celestial Arts, $11.95). The book includes information on the meaning of symbols in the ceremony, traditional vows and alternatives, and rituals from other cultures.

The ethnic wedding has not been overlooked. "The New Jewish Wedding" by Anita Diamant (Summit, $10) provides an alternative vision of the American Jewish wedding.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published for winners only, not runners-up. These annoucements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Romance blooms over fax

By Sylvia Rubin
N.Y. Times News Service

They met on the telephone, fell in love by fax — and hardly ever see each other. He lives in Seattle; she lives in Norway.

Talk about long-distance romances, which these days are spanning continents instead of coasts.

Dual-career couples made bicoastal marriages part of the culture in the '80s. But now, coaxed along by faxes, E-mail and, of course, the telephone, ultra-long-distance romances seem to be flourishing. Although no one knows the exact figures, as Americans travel more, both in the air and on the information superhighway, increasing numbers of romantic liaisons are breaking new boundaries.

Ultra-long-distance romances are "just the next step," said Paul Saffo, a director of the Institute for the Future,a think-tank in Menlo Park, Calif. It's only natural, he added, that lovers will find each other as the global network shrinks: "We are social animals. We need to socialize — and we don't need to be in the same spot to do so."

Having your lover at a great distance can be simultaneously romantic, frustrating, challenging and expensive, say couples, who very quickly become experts on airline fares and global phone discounts.

THERE ARE heart-thumping reunions in international airports, and the thrill of having a letter arrive after many weeks in the mail. Indeed, patience, optimism and a steady paycheck seem to be the key factors in keeping a romance alive over many thousands of miles: These love affairs are not for those without good credit ratings.

For some, the heat fizzles after a few meetings, while for others it sizzles for years.

The strongest couples manage to survive the distance and the cultural differences, as well as the negotiating about who ends up living where. These lovers fly merrily across the oceans every few months, look at their maxed-out credit cards and their astounding monthly phone bills — and still figure it's all worth it.

When Seattle resident Jay Stern's first telephone bill arrived after a month of calls to Norway, he was not surprised at the total: $700. That was before he discovered long-distance phone discounts.

"Let's put it this way," recalled Stern, who is president of Luxury Guides, a custom-tour firm. "You are not paying for dinners or the theater; you spend all your money on telecommunications."

Stern met his girlfriend, Anne-Grethe, who also works in the tour industry near Oslo, on a business phone call. Nine months later, after seeing her only twice in person, he admits their romance is serious.

THIS TURN of events could not have surprised him more. After a painful divorce, Stern, 62, was not looking for love when he first heard Anne-Grethe's voice.

"That was the last thing on my mind," he said. But he fell hard for her accent. "Lilting" is the adjective he uses most often when describing it.

Anne-Grethe, who is in her late 40s and did not want her last name used, sent him the first photo of herself by fax. And vice versa.

"The long distance absolutely enhances the romance for me," Stern said. "I find it challenging."

Perhaps because of the challenge, ultra-long-distance romances can escalate quicker than the old-fashioned kind, says one communications expert, who warns of getting too caught up in style over substance.

"You can get into this frenzy of communication; you can take more risks, play with styles, try on different personas," said Miriam Zimmerman, assistant professor of communication at the University of San Francisco. "However, it's not the kind of risk-taking that is the authentic disclosure that we have when we communicate face to face."

But is meeting through E-mail, for example, really so odd?

Not at all, argued Howard Reingold of Sausalito, editor of the Whole Earth Review and author of "The Virtual Community."

"Is it weird to communicate about shared interests, share some history and then meet after?" asked Reingold, who compares the information superhighway to a door that "you walk through, and you're in Australia or Tokyo."

SOMEWHERE BETWEEN face-to-face communication and the E-mail revolution, most ultra-long-distance couples still rely on the telephone — usually late at night.

In the case of Terri and Markus Zimmer, if it was 4 a.m. in Arizona and her phone rang or fax machine beeped, it had to be Markus calling from Germany. "I liked the fact that this was not conventional dating," said Terri, who added that, "I knew all along he was worth pursuing."

Six months after they met in Phoenix, where Markus had gone to visit friends, they were married.

Even without such a happy ending, telephone calls make for pleasant memories. "It was really nice to finish a good conversation and go to sleep with sweet dreams," said a Southern California woman who recently ended a yearlong romance with a man in Italy.

Moreover, there's another advantage to all that late-night dialing: It's one way to find out if someone is sleeping in his or her own bed. Here is where optimism becomes crucial — nearly all those interviewed said they just "knew" their other half was being faithful.

"If she's the right one for you," one man said confidently, "fidelity comes naturally."

"Down Memory Lane"

Show to feature vintage clothing

Staff Report

"Down Memory Lane," a showing of vintage clothing, will be presented at the Feb. 17 meeting of Midland Woman's Club in the clubhouse in Hogan Park. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with luncheon to follow at noon. Reservations and/or cancellations should be made by noon Wednesday.

Steve Porterfield, owner of The Cat's Meow, will present a program and showing of vintage clothing, with models displaying the clothes. Porterfield, who earned a bachelor of music education degree from Wayland Baptist University, is a member of the Symphony Chorale. He developed his expertise of vintage clothing by expanding his collection of antique dolls and their accessories.

Classes on needlework planned

Shortbread Hearts, Chocolate Shortbread Hearts and Jam-Filled Hearts are made from the same basic recipe. The Chocolate Shortbread Hearts are dusted with confectioners' sugar and drizzled with chocolate.

Valentine's Day sweeter with shortbread hearts

By Barbara Albright
Associated Press

When it comes to expressing your affections on Valentine's Day, there is nothing like a homemade gift from your kitchen. Rich, buttery shortbread lends itself to being cut into heart shapes.

The basic recipe that follows can be easily adapted to include flavors such as chocolate, almond and lemon. Two hearts can also be sandwiched with jams or buttercream.

Not only are Shortbread Hearts good by themselves, but they also make a perfect accompaniment with a dish of ice cream. For those who enjoy the delights of eating raw cookie dough, here's a recipe you can snack on without worry as it doesn't contain raw eggs.

Shortbread is a type of dough that contains very little liquid and a larger percentage of butter, resulting in a tender, yet slightly crisp baked cookie. The butter in the cookie coats the gluten structure of the flour, "shortening" it and creating a tender baked good. Shortbread actually benefits by having a couple of days to "age." Stored in an airtight container, these cookies freeze very well.

BASIC SHORTBREAD HEARTS

1½ cups (3 sticks) lightly salted butter, softened
1 cup confectioners' sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon salt
3 cups all-purpose flour
Additional confectioners' sugar for sprinkling on top of the cookies (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

In a large bowl using a hand-held electric mixer set on medium-high speed, beat together the butter and sugar for about 2 minutes, or until light and fluffy. Beat in the vanilla and salt.

Using a wooden spoon, one cup at a time, stir in the flour, just until it is mixed in.

Divide the dough in half. Place each half between two large sheets of waxed paper. Roll out each piece of dough until it is a scant ¼-inch thick. Replace the waxed paper if it rips or crinkles and leaves creases in the dough.

If the dough is too soft, refrigerate it for a few minutes. Transfer the dough on the waxed paper to an ungreased baking sheet. Remove the top sheet of the waxed paper. Place the baking sheet with the dough on the waxed paper in the freezer for 5 to 10 minutes, or until the dough is just firm enough so that the cut-out cookies can be transferred and the scraps easily removed.

Using cookie cutters or the point of a small, sharp knife, cut the dough into hearts or other shapes. With a metal spatula, carefully transfer the cookies to another baking sheet, leaving about 1 inch between cookies. Repeat the procedure with the remaining piece of dough. Gather the scraps together, reroll and repeat the procedure until all the dough is used.

Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 10 to 15 minutes on ungreased baking sheets, or just until the cookies are starting to brown lightly around the edges. (It's best to bake similarly sized cookies together so they bake at about the same rate.) Remove the baking sheet from the oven to a wire rack. Cool for 5 minutes. Using a metal spatula, transfer the cookies to racks and cool completely. Sprinkle the tops of the cookies with confectioners' sugar, if desired. Store the cookies in an airtight container for up to 1 month. Makes about 3 dozen cookies, depending on their sizes.

NOTE: If using unsalted butter, increase the amount of salt to ½ teaspoon.

VARIATIONS:

For Chocolate Shortbread: Beat in 2 ounces melted and cooled unsweetened chocolate after beating in the vanilla and salt. Continue as directed.

For Shortbread with Nuts: After stirring in the flour in either the basic or chocolate shortbread recipe, stir in 1 cup of finely chopped nuts such as walnuts, hazelnuts, pecans, almonds, macadamia nuts or pistachios. Continue as directed.

For Lemon Shortbread: Stir in 2 teaspoons grated lemon peel along with the vanilla and salt in the basic recipe. Continue as directed.

For Almond Shortbread: Stir in ½ to ¾ teaspoon almond extract along with the vanilla and salt in the basic recipe. Stir in 1 cup finely chopped blanched almonds after stirring in the flour.

For Jam-Filled Hearts: Using a 2½- to 3-inch heart-shaped cutter, cut out an even number of cookies. To create tops of the cookies, using a small, heart-shaped or round cutter, cut out and remove the centers of half of the cookies. Bake the cookies as directed. When the cookies are completely cooled, spread a thin layer of raspberry preserves over the tops of the bottom cookies. Place the cookie tops with centers cut out on top so the preserves peek through. If you'd like, sprinkle powdered sugar over the cookie tops before assembling these sandwich cookies.

For Chocolate-Drizzled Hearts: Place 1 ounce semisweet or bittersweet chocolate in the corner of a freezer-weight, zipper-style plastic bag. Seal the bag. Cook in a microwave oven on high (100 percent power) for 1 to 2 minutes, or until the chocolate is melted. Fold down the top of the bag and snip off a tiny piece of the corner, leaving an opening that is about ⅛ inch. Holding the top of the bag tightly, drizzle the chocolate over the cookies.

Celebrate with chocolate heart

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Had Saint Valentine been given the chance, I bet he would have favored this melt-in-your-mouth chocolate torte over a piece of chocolate candy. It's made with almost a pound of bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, and more than worth your time and effort to make. Bittersweet chocolate, also called dark chocolate in Europe, is usually darker and less sweet than semisweet. Look for these chocolates in the candy and baking aisles of your grocery store.

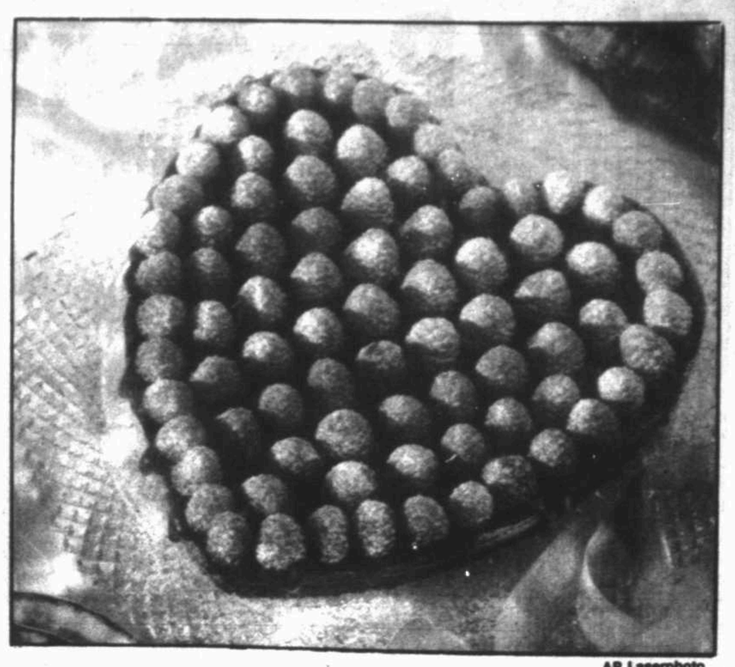

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE TORTE WITH RASPBERRIES

14 ounces bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, coarsely chopped, or one 16-ounce package semisweet chocolate pieces
½ cup butter
¼ cup milk
5 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sugar
¼ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup seedless red raspberry jam
1½ to 2 cups fresh red raspberries
Powdered sugar (optional)

Grease the bottom only of an 8-inch heart-shape cake pan with a removable bottom or an 8-inch round springform pan; set aside.

In a heavy medium saucepan combine chocolate, butter and milk. Cook and stir over low heat until chocolate is melted. Remove from heat; cool for 20 minutes.

In a medium mixer bowl beat eggs and vanilla with an electric mixer on low speed until combined. Add sugar and flour, beating on high speed for 10 minutes. Stir chocolate mixture into egg mixture. Pour into prepared pan; spread evenly.

AP Laserphoto

Bittersweet Chocolate Torte with Raspberries is made with nearly a pound of bittersweet or semisweet chocolate.

Bake in a 325-degree F oven for 30 minutes (if using a springform pan, bake for 35 minutes) or until torte is slightly puffed on the outer one-third of the top. (Because this torte is dense, you cannot use a traditional cake doneness test. The torte should be done after 30 minutes, even though the center will still appear underbaked.)

Cool the torte on a wire rack about 20 minutes. (While cooling, the torte may fall about ¼ inch in the center and may develop a brownielike, crusty surface on top. This is normal and will look fine when the torte is topped with the jam and fresh raspberries.) With a knife, carefully loosen the torte from the sides of the pan. Cool completely (about 2 to 3 hours more). Remove the sides of the pan. Wrap the torte in foil and chill overnight or for up to 2 days. To serve, bring the torte to room temperature.

In a small saucepan melt raspberry jam; cool. Spread jam atop torte. Cover jam layer with raspberries, stem side down. If desired, using a sifter, dust berries lightly with powdered sugar just before serving. To cut, use a knife that has been dipped in hot water. Makes 16 servings.

Chocolate is natural treat to share on Valentine's Day

By Carol Deegan
Associated Press

On Valentine's Day, thoughts naturally turn to chocolate.

From candies to croissants, cakes to coffee, chocolate is a favorite flavor. This obsession with cocoa has even added a new word to our lexicon about those who crave the brown stuff — chocoholics.

Creating a chocolate sensation for Valentine's Day doesn't necessarily require training as a pastry chef. For example, ganache, one of the best chocolate frostings, is made of only two ingredients — chocolate and cream — and is ready in minutes.

In "Chocolate: The Food of the Gods" (Chronicle Books, $14.95), Chantal Coady takes readers on a tour through chocolate history, lore, religious symbolism and medicinal uses — and caps it off with 18 recipes. Coady's recipes cover a broad range — from devil's food cake and mole pablano to marbled chocolate brioche and chocolate truffles.

"Chocolate Classics" by Barbara Grunes and Phyllis Magida (Contemporary Books, $9.95) contains 36 versatile chocolate recipes, including chocolate pots-de-creme, double chocolate sugar cookies, white chocolate pound cake with caramel sauce and Dutch flourless chocolate cake. The authors have also included instructions for hosting a chocolate tea.

Bits of chocolate history and lore are sprinkled throughout "Chocolate Classics," which also includes tips for buying, sifting and melting chocolate.

Too busy to bake? Linda West Eckhardt and Diana Collingwood Butts promise "Dessert in half the time: Use Your Food Processor and Microwave to Make Great Desserts in Less Time Than It Takes to Buy a Pint of Ice Cream" (Crown Publishers, $25).

ECKHARDT AND Butts have devoted a chapter on chocolate with recipes for quick chocolate drops, espresso-chocolate cake, dark chocolate fudgies and toad 'n a hole chocolate cake.

Similarly, "Classic Cakes and Other Great Cuisinart Desserts" by Carl Sontheimer and Cecily Brownstone (Hearst Books, $15) offers recipes for making old-fashioned desserts with a food processor. Sontheimer introduced the Cuisinart food processor to America in 1973. The cookbook includes recipes for chocolate cake, fudge cookies, chocolate mousse and brownies. With nutritional information.

Faye Levy's "Sensational Chocolate" (HP Books, $14.95) is bulging with chocolate recipes including cakes; pies and pastries; souffles, baked custards, puddings and crepes; mousses; ice creams and frozen desserts; truffles and candies; cookies, brownies and petits fours.

Among the recipes featured in Levy's book: dark chocolate mousse in meringue cups, brandied brownies, cafe au lait truffles and chocolate creme brulee with raspberries. Chocolate techniques, chocolate designs and writing, tempering chocolate, chocolate cutouts and other decorations are also included.

IF YOU'RE counting fat and calories, you can still enjoy chocolate on Valentine's Day. Dr. Marvin A. Wayne and Dr. Stephen R. Yarnall have written "The New Dr. Cookie Cookbook: Dessert Your Way to Health with More than 150 Delicious Low-Fat Cookies, Cakes, and Treats" (Quill, $14). Wayne and Yarnall are the founders of Dr. Cookie Inc., a mail-order company.

Chocolate recipes included in their cookbook: chocolate decadence cake with raspberry sauce, weighing in at 184 calories and 6 grams of fat per serving; fat-free cocoa meringues, at 40 calories per large meringue; and chocolate oatmeal cookies, 1.5 grams of fat and 50 calories per cookie.

"Love from the Heart of the Home" by Susan Branch (Little, Brown, $10.95), while not a cookbook, features romantic breakfast ideas, a dinner for two menu, all-chocolate menu and strawberry menu.

Branch has illustrated and hand-lettered this little book of recipes, quotes and homespun thoughts on love.

"Entertaining Appetizers to Desserts" ($7.99) from Wilton Enterprises contains 75 recipes and ideas for holidays from Valentine's Day to New Year's Eve. Wilton is also offering a fresh brochure, "Valentine Recipes and Ideas." (For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope to: Wilton Consumer Affairs Department, Valentine Recipes & Ideas, 2240 W. 75th St., Woodridge, Ill. 60517.)

Try skinny sweet with your sweetheart

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Celebrate Valentine's Day with this rich but low-fat chocolate pudding. This recipe is from "Skinny Cookies, Cakes & Sweets" by Sue Spitler (Surrey Books, $12.95).

RICH CHOCOLATE PUDDING
(Serves 4)

½ cup sugar
⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups 2-percent milk

Corporate funds spark questions from grand jury

Disaster strikes again in California

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Fires, heavy rains and mudslides have killed 10 people. Now, Southern California has a new disaster: mudslides.

Cars were buried, people were plucked from upper floor windows and homes were swamped as heavy mud smashed four of mud and debris from fire-scorched mountains. No injuries were reported.

On Tuesday, bulldozers and dump trucks plowed up to 3 feet of mud from Pacific Coast Highway at Big Rock Canyon, where at-

The U.S. Navy Band is to play classical, jazz and marching tunes at 7 p.m. Feb. 19 at Midland High School Auditorium.

U.S. Navy Band visits Texas

The U.S. Navy Band, the band former President Bush called "always impeccable, seemingly perfect," is to perform at 7 p.m. Feb. 19 at Midland High School auditorium.

"The hospitality has been wonderful, and the audiences have been great," Capt. William J. Phillips, director, said of the Texas tour.

"It's one of the best tours that I've been on with the band, and I've been on 12."

Established by an Act of Congress and signed into effect by President Calvin Coolidge on March 4, 1925, the U.S. Navy Band has played for 17 presidential inaugurations, presents honors at White House and Pentagon ceremonies for arriving dignitaries and performs memorial services at Arlington National Cemetery.

Often featured on national radio and network television, the Navy Band received international recognition for its recording of chief musician Mike Stein's "We Are With You" in support of Operation desert Storm.

"This band represents the finest in Navy professionalism," said Phillips, whose promotion to captain was the first such recognition of a music officer in Navy history.

"This is a wonderful group of people," Phillips said of the U.S. Navy Band, which he also directed from 1978 through 1984. "Jobs for very highly trained musicians are few and far between. A lot of good musicians generally wind up in other fields. This is an opportunity for them to practice their craft and serve their country simultaneously."

A native of North Carolina who has lived in Washington, D.C., for many years, Phillips said Texas friendliness reminds him of his childhood.

Midland museum displays semi-permanent exhibit

Answering questions about man-made objects that have been discovered in the West Texas soil is familiar ground for anthropologist Eunice Barkes.

"I've been in restaurants and people will come up to me and pull an arrowhead out of their pocket and show it to me," said Mrs. Barkes, former curator of archaeology at the Museum of the Southwest.

"The first thing they want to know is 'How old is it?' and then, 'What is it?' "

In the exhibit, "The Search for Ancient Plainsmen," at the Museum of the Southwest, Mrs. Barkes said she has attempted to explain how archaeologists can tell — among other things — "how old things are."

"That's why I've used Coke cans," Mrs. Barkes said. "I've tried in some of the exhibit to use modern things as well as prehistoric things."

The semi-permanent exhibit includes a text panel explaining the "law of superposition."

"We can tell that one thing is older than another by finding a potsherd, a piece of broken pottery, in one level or layer and another sherd or shard in a layer above. Usually the one that is on the bottom is older than the one on the top. This is known as the 'law of superposition.'

"But it's sort of floating in time. We don't know exactly when unless the potsherds have been dated at some other place."

She said archaeologists view artifacts of ancient cultures as clues to human behavior.

"Actually, we're behavioral scientists, and we are trying to figure out the behavior from studying the artifacts," said Mrs. Barkes, a former adjunct faculty member at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and a former member of the Museum of Science graduate facility at Texas Tech University.

Traditionally, archaeologists have studied ancient cultures both historical and prehistoric.

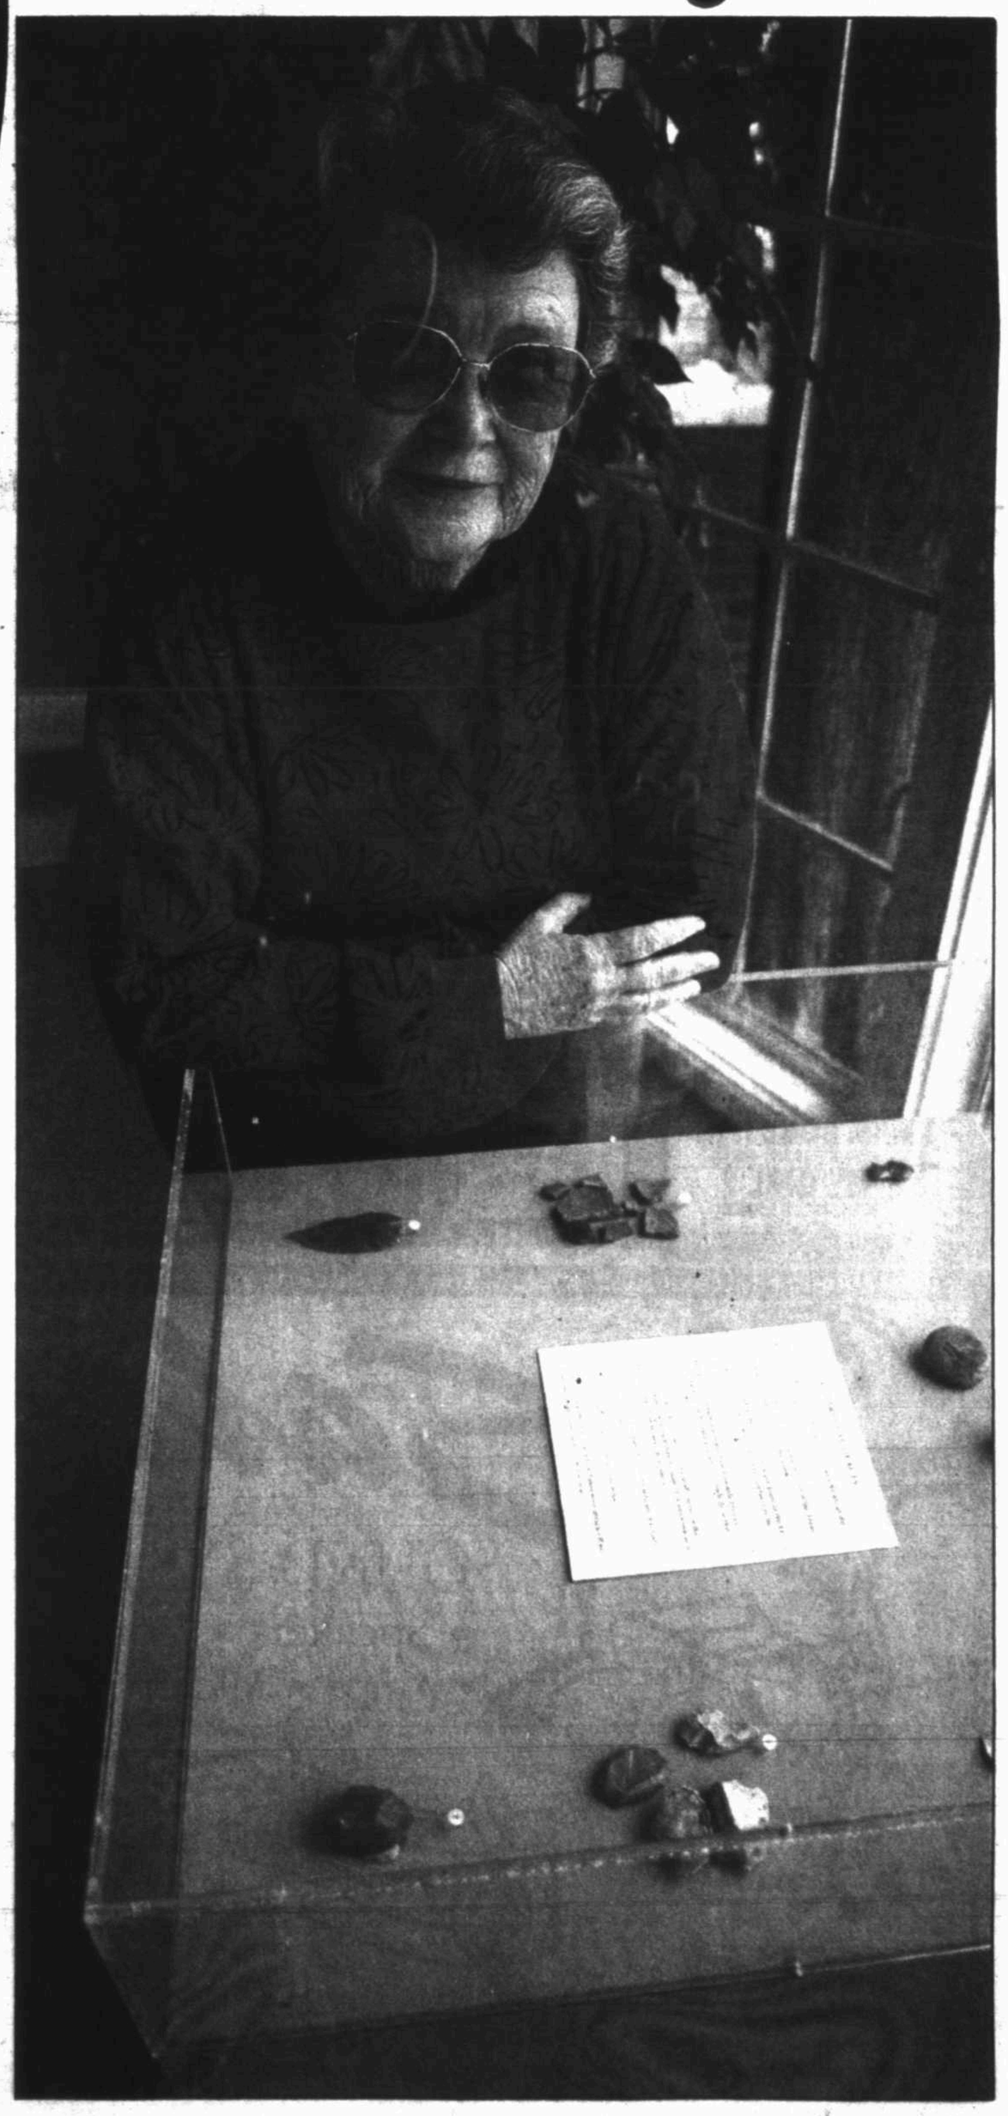

"It's easier with historic objects because you can at least have some written information about them," said Mrs. Barkes, whose own interests include pottery and the archaeology of West Texas and the American Southwest.

"It's much harder with prehistoric where there are no written records. What we are doing is writing the records."

Some archaeologists are studying modern peoples by examining their garbage, Mrs. Barkes said.

University of Arizona has made a career out of studying garbage, modern garbage. He finds out about the behavior of modern people by looking at the artifacts (anything made or altered by man) that he finds in the garbage dumps," Mrs. Barkes said.

She said that such archaeologists have discovered it is not disposable diapers that are filling up landfills, but rather telephone books and newspapers.

"There's not enough oxygen and not enough bacteria to make them disintegrate, and they just fill up the landfill," Mrs. Barkes said, referring to information she read in the book "Garbage."

In archaeology, the record of what's been found never changes, Mrs. Barkes said. What can and does change is how it is interpreted. As an example, Mrs. Barkes tells of an exciting time in her life when a small dig in Midland shed doubt on an assumption long held by archaeologists, historians and folklorists alike.

"When they cut High Sky through to Wadley, my husband actually found a cross section of a hearth where they had cut through the hearth and only part of it was left. It was on the city right-of-way, so I had to get an antiquities permit to excavate this hearth.

"I didn't find any projectile points or potsherds in the hearth, but I did find eight fairly large pieces of charred wood. I sent a sample up to a paleobotanist at Tech and she identified it as oak, but she couldn't key it out as to exactly what kind of oak."

Mrs. Barkes found this piece of information unusual enough to attempt to date the charred remains she had found.

"Since it was on city property, I thought maybe the city ought to pay for this because I couldn't take that much out of the grocery money," Mrs. Barkes said.

Her request to the City Council was for $100 to pay for a radiocarbon date.

"The members of the council asked me questions such as 'How did I know it wasn't a Boy Scout camp,' and my answer was I had found potsherds and projectile points scattered around the hearth, so I was pretty sure it wasn't a Boy Scout fire.

"It predated Boy Scouts," Mrs. Barkes said.

She said the potsherds and projectile points are part of the current exhibit at the Museum of the Southwest.

The City Council granted her the money, saying, "It was the smallest amount anybody had ever asked for," Mrs. Barkes said.

The radiocarbon date came back 1248 A.D.

"I still had some samples of wood so a professor at Texas A&M poked at them, and in addition to the oak, he found mesquite. I had always heard that the mesquite came up with the Spanish cattle. So here I had a radio carbon date on mesquite at 1248 A.D. and that is almost 300 years before the Spanish cattle came here."

Since Mrs. Barkes' discovery, archaeologists have found mesquite and identified it as having been at Lubbock Lake earlier than the Spanish cattle.

The story demonstrates how much information can be gained from a small dig, Mrs. Barkes said, noting that the hearth occupied not more than "one little square meter of earth."

Today, the dig is covered over with a driveway and the area is filled with houses, Mrs. Barkes said. Before the houses and apartments went up, archaeologists were able to establish that this area of earth was used as a gathering spot for mankind as far back as 1200 A.D.

"It's a good location and has been for thousands of years because there's water available and animals need water and people hunted animals and people need water, too.

"Out here in this desert, this semi-arid area, they probably did not stay very long at one location. I think they knew this area very well and had favorite spots and knew when it was time to go to a particular location."

The museum exhibit, which Mrs. Barkes curated and Bill Johnson helped assemble, includes only a small percentage of the items in the museum's archaeology collections.

"Students and volunteers cataloged almost 30,000 objects from the Bissell Collection alone, and this collection is really an asset. It's a research collection.

The semi-permanent archaeology exhibit, which falls under the museum's mission to preserve and educate in the areas of art, astronomy and archaeology, contains fewer than 100 objects.

"I didn't use all prehistoric artifacts in this exhibit. I used some fairly modern artifacts from the collection, such as baskets and a painting called 'The Buffalo Dancer,' so that we can see how archaeologists can't dig up a dance, but they can dig up the artifacts associated with the dance," Mrs. Barkes said.

She said she also chose a bronze statue of a hunter for the exhibit to show technology and how learning about modern hunters' methods of pursuing game can help archaeologists understand the hunters of the past.

"All history is modern history," said American poet Wallace Stevens. And, indeed, a relationship exists between the past, present and future that binds mankind.

MUSIC: U.S. Navy band to come to Midland

(From 1G)

"I'm overwhelmed with the friendliness. When people walk by you, they acknowledge you and say, 'Hello. How are you' . . . instead of looking at you as if you're weird."

Phillips, who has spent 36 years in the Navy, almost wound up enlisting in the U.S. Air Force instead.

"I was about to raise my hand and be sworn in," Phillips recalled. In those days, he said, all of the recruiting offices were housed in the basement of the U.S. Post Office. A friend of his happened to visit with the Navy recruiter, who mentioned that the Navy had a school of music.

"My friend mentioned that to me," said Phillips, who was 18 at the time. "My jaw dropped. I was looking to further my music education at that particular point, but I didn't have the money to go to college then or even consider it. So, almost immediately I turned right back around and talked with the Navy recruiter. And the rest is history."

That history includes serving as director of the Commander Cruiser-Destroyer Force Pacific Band, Commander in Chief Atlantic Fleet Band, the U.S. Naval Academy Band and a previous tour as Officer in Charge of the U.S. Navy Band as well as head of Navy Music at the Bureau of Naval Personnel and as commanding officer of the Armed Forces School of Music.

Phillips also serves as an ambassador of the U.S. Navy by lecturing and conducting musical organizations throughout the United States and Europe, including the internationally renowned Boston Pops Orchestra and the Military Orchestra of the Guard of Honor of Moscow.

Jobs as musicians are "highly sought after" with all of the service bands in Washington, Phillips said.

He said that all of the bands have "wonderful musicians" with a good percentage coming from Texas, which has a reputation of providing fine education for musicians.

"It's a very fine state for high school and college bands," Phillips said. "The musicians that come out of Texas are generally very good players. The state has very strong music educators."

During each performance, young people are invited to sit in and play with the band, Phillips said. After they play, Phillips invites the parents in the audience to stand.

Saturday's West Texas performance will bring one member of the U.S. Navy Band back to an area that he called home for nine years.

"I'm really happy about that," said First Class James P. Logan, a former clarinetist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony, the West Texas Winds and a music teacher in Odessa.

"It's always fun to play to an enthusiastic crowd, and I know we'll get that in Midland because I know what kind of country (it) is," said Logan, who began his musical studies on clarinet in 1975. "It'll be terrific. And I'm really looking forward to playing in the band in Midland."

This tour marks Logan's first with the U.S. Navy Band. Last year, the band toured New England. At that time, Logan was assigned to the Home Guard group, which stays behind to cover any performances or unexpected events.

"I like the fact that no two days are ever the same," Logan said of his experience thus far as a member of the U.S. Navy Band. "Some days there will be a rehearsal from 9 until 11 or 11:30 a.m., and sometimes there will be ceremonies to cover."

A 1983 graduate of Benton Community High School in Van Horne, Iowa, Logan attended the University of North Texas at Denton on a music scholarship, completing a bachelor's of music degree in 1988.

"I had friends that had played in the (Navy) band from North Texas," said Logan, who also was a member of the Disneyworld All-American College Orchestra.

"I talked with them about the band, and that's what pretty much led me in that direction."

He enlisted in the Navy in 1992, after auditioning in May of that year while he was living in Odessa.

"The timing was right. I was ready to audition at the time they had an opening and everything just fell into place."

Following completion of recruit training at Great Lakes, Ill., he was assigned to the Navy Band in November 1992.

"I like it a lot," Logan said. "It's been terrific. I'm enjoying Washington a great deal, living on Capitol Hill right in the midst of a lot of activity. I've always enjoyed politics and always had an interest in history. And Washington is, I think, the best city in the world for that."

The repertoire for the free concert in Midland, which is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram, will include selections ranging from Beethoven to Count Basie, Rachmaninoff to John Philip Sousa and Debussy to Tommy Dorsey.

"We're playing things for every taste," Logan said.

"It kind of goes with something that I was told years ago about being a successful musician, and that was, as a musician you need to have a great deal of versatility. I think that anyone attending the concert will notice that immediately by looking at the program and it will be confirmed by hearing the band."

Ticket holders are asked to be seated by 6:45 p.m. when the doors open to those who did not pick up free tickets.

When the U.S. Navy Band performed for an audience of 1,800-plus fans at Newport, R.I., The Newport Daily News said, "The band rivals the Boston Pops . . . The musicians showed they could let their hair down, even if it is regulation cut."

"That is exactly true," Logan said of the above comments from the Newport Daily News. "There are outstanding musicians in the band, and the music we play is a lot of fun. The crowds just have loved it. And there is certainly no hesitation in the musicians' minds to let what little hair we have hang down."

HOROSCOPE

UNDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be careful not to drop a project midway. Making radical changes could prove quite costly. April could bring a raise or promotion. Start a home beautification project that you can do on the weekends. Summer brings greater harmony within the family circle. Postpone extensive travel until September. Academic endeavors will lead to new security and serenity. Avoid going overboard when buying gifts next December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kim Novak, opera singer Eileen Farrell, singer Peter Tork (The Monkees), Iowa painter Grant Wood.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The truth may emerge around lunchtime, letting you know exactly where you stand. The unexpected may be the rule just now. Much of your happiness comes from family members' support. Reward their loyalty.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let a restless mood tempt you into making foolish promises or purchases. Get as many household chores done as possible. It is not too late to plan a special Valentine's Day!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When the going gets tough, the tough must make difficult decisions. Showing tenderness with your loved ones is essential. Play volleyball or basketball if an exercise class is not your style.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You cannot expect your plans to please everyone. Nip a confrontation in the bud by being conciliatory. Certain romantic illusions can be hazardous to your happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get the information you need to please a loved one, but avoid asking too many personal questions. Clarifying financial issues with your partner will lead to new understanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on pets, household chores and your dependents. Be more patient with a teen-ager's need for peer acceptance. An older person may make life easier for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Love is in bloom! A celebration takes on special significance. Devote more time to your children and other young people. A humanitarian gesture adds to your stature in the community.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A better day for creative ventures than financial affairs. Give your imagination free rein. Family matters require gentle handling. Spending some time with a young child teaches you how to play again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your social life accelerates. Be candid if you would prefer to spend more time alone with a new romantic interest. Avoid all forms of financial gambling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ward off a blue mood by being grateful for simple joys. Once you regain your perspective, a key partnership will improve. Be willing to do more listening, less talking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Guard against spending your money in frivolous ways. An older person is more influential than you realize. Focus on traveling and learning. A brief encounter could lead to romantic bliss.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Many eyes will be on you today. Member of opposite sex is smitten by your charm. You know just where to look for entertainment. A crisis draws you and a sibling closer together.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are cheerful, popular and willing to work long hours for a good cause. Although routine tasks can wear these Aquarians down, anything connected to the arts delights them. Their homes will reflect their strong interest in music, paintings and good literature. Modest to a fault, these Aquarians are shy about publicizing their accomplishments.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ◇

Here's an interesting test of your analytical powers. Follow the bidding and play of this deal, then pick out the errors and rank them in order of severity. Note that North's double was negative, for takeout rather than penalties.

North's jump to four hearts is a little aggressive. However, two aces and five-card trump support is no mean hand, so North does not deserve censure for that action. As for the West hand, we think it is either too strong or not strong enough for the Unusual No Trump convention; therefore, the two diamond overcall was equally appropriate.

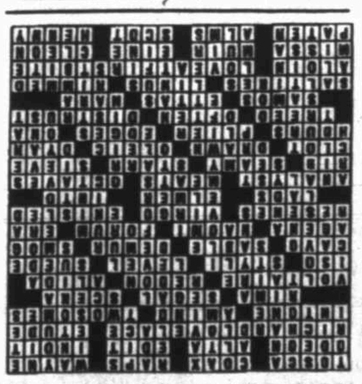

West led the king of diamonds and, in response to East's play of the nine, continued with ace of diamonds and another. East ruffed the table's jack with the jack of hearts and declarer overruffed. With the spades breaking badly, declarer eventually conceded a trump trick and a club for down one.

The first error, albeit a very subtle one, came at the first trick. Since East had a natural trump trick, there was no need to signal for a diamond continuation. East should have played the lower of the two diamonds to ask partner for a switch. Since the club shift would be automatic, the contract would, to all intents and purposes, have been down from the start.

The graver error came two tricks later and it was committed by the declarer. Instead of overruffing the third diamond, South should simply have discarded a club. This play, known as a loser on loser, would have guaranteed the contract. Declarer can win any return, draw trumps in two rounds and crossruff for the rest of the tricks.

Goldberg to try to fill Crystal's shoes

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — When veteran Oscar scriptwriter Hal Kanter sits down with Academy Awards host Whoopi Goldberg, he will have only one thing to say: "What would you like to do, my dear?"

Kanter, who has been writing the Oscar telecast for 25 years and is teaming up with veteran comedy writer Buz Kohan for the March 21 ceremony, said he is aware the comedian's material is frequently vulgar or profane, but doubts any rough language will surface during the show.

The academy announced Sunday that Goldberg would host the 66th annual awards, succeeding Billy Crystal, who had overseen the telecast the previous four years.

"I don't think any rough stuff will get on the Academy Awards," said Kanter, who has met Goldberg only once before. "Certainly I will not prepare any rough material. The woman is intelligent."

Kanter, whose TV writing credits include "The Carol Burnett Show," "Comic Relief" and the Grammy Awards, said the theme of this year's Oscar ceremony is the people behind the camera.

"We are going to honor people who don't appear in public who make movies — the cinematographer, the wardrobe people, prop men, and writers, particularly writers," said Kanter.

The Encino resident, whose theatrical films include "Road to Bali" and "Pocketful of Miracles," said problems usually occur during the Oscar telecast when presenters stray from the theme of the show and use the event as a political forum.

"I think it is deplorable and rude," he said.

Last year, Richard Gere called attention to political strife in Tibet. "I think it was uncalled for, and I am sorry he called for it," he said. "There is no way to prevent it. The show is live."

Not surprisingly, Kanter's favorite Oscar host is Bob Hope, who presided over the ceremony 16 times, including seven with a co-host.

"Hope is an absolute dream," he said. "He is a very good editor who knows what will work for him."

Another favorite is Johnny Carson, a five-time host who reportedly rejected an offer to preside over this year's show.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Guitarist to perform

The West Texas Jazz Society presents guitarist Bucky Pizzarelli at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

Pizzarelli's guitar has seven strings instead of six. He's been playing it for years on recordings, on television shows and during club dates with such jazz greats as the late Zoot Sims, the late Benny Goodman and fellow guitarist George Barnes.

Pizzarelli credits his interest in the seven-string guitar to George Van Eps because he loves Van Eps' distinctive style.

When he heard Van Eps play in New York City in 1968, "he just knocked me out," Pizzarelli said. "So the next day I bought a seven-string."

At the time, Pizzarelli was playing in the "Tonight" Show Band.

"When it was time to go on, I just carried it out and played it," Pizzarelli recalled.

Pizzarelli will be performing here with Neal Goets on drums and Mark Lowe on bass.

Admission to the Midland performance is free to WTJS members and $15 for non-members. Reserved seating is $10 for WTJS members and $25 for non-members. American Airlines is a sponsor for the event.

For reservations and information call 563-1701.

■ Performance planned

The Dallas Black Dance Theatre will perform at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

The program, a part of the Black Cultural Series, is sponsored by the Midland Negro Business and Professional Women.

The dance theater's repertoire includes "Flock," "Into the Labyrinth," "A Spiritual Suite" and "Homage to the Source: Africa."

The group will perform for sixth-graders in Midland Independent School District at 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Midland High School auditorium. The performance will include an explanation of the technical points of dance.

This project is funded partially by the Arts Assembly of Midland and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Performance admission is $15 in advance and $17 at the door. Tickets may be purchased from any NB&PW member. For more information call 684-4895, 682-5918 or 682-1945.

■ Concert scheduled

ODESSA — A piano concert by William Westney is set for 8 p.m. Friday in the Jack Rodgers Fine Arts auditorium at Odessa College.

Westney, winner of the Geneva International Competition, is professor and Browning Artist-in-Residence at Texas Tech University, where he has won several special awards for his innovative teaching approach.

His program will feature selected waltzes, culminating in an arrangement of the "Blue Danube Waltz" by Strauss. He also will perform Piano Sonata No. 4 by contemporary American composer Leo Ornstein, who is 102 years old.

The free concert is co-sponsored by the OC Music Department and the OC Student Activities Office.

St. Ann's Church will host a dramatic production by the acclaimed Covenant Players at 6 p.m. Feb. 27 in the church's activity center, Illinois Avenue at N Street.

"Rejoice n the Lord!" is the them for the evening. The focus will be on teens but all ages are invited. No admission will be charged.

The plays and skits presented by the Covenant Players are the creations of Charles Tanner, who founded Covenant Players in 1963 and still serves as director.

For more information call St. Ann's Youth Office, 682-7033.

■ Photo exhibit set

A wine-and-cheese reception from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday opens Odessa photographer Olivia Hill's exhibition at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St.

The majority of the photographs in the exhibition, titled "Portraits from the Earth," are black and white prints that feature still-life presentations of fruits and vegetables. Additional works include a group of "polacolor transfers" of people and places called "Impressions."

"I've always loved the shapes, the textures, the colors of food," Ms. Hill said.

"In markets and grocery stores I can't resist the plump, smooth, teardrop-shaped eggplants or the red, yellow, green and speckled apples or the unfolding layers of onions or those tight cloves of garlic that snuggle together to form a head.

"Piled on the counter until dinner time, I started thinking of them as people — proud pomegranates, stubborn artichokes, elegant asparagus, sexy grapes, shy bananas, pregnant pears."

Of her work in "Impressions" she said, "I love traveling but have always been dissatisfied when, home again, the photographs look like postcards. The color is great and that is just what the place looked like, but what a cliche.

"Then, I discovered polacolor transfers which take away some of the sharp edge of reality. The soft, often impressionistic method of reproduction helps me recall the mood of the person or place."

The show continues through April 7. For more information or hours call the gallery, 685-9944 or Pat Harris, president, 687-7104.

■ Artist to teach

Big Spring artist and instructor Via Whitten is teaching through May at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 Baldwin.

The class meets Wednesday afternoons. All media are being offered to beginners and advanced students.

Ms. Whitten, who has taught for 20 years, was recently honored with an unveiling of one of her paintings at the Heritage Museum, Big Spring, where she taught two years at Howard College. The unveiling, which included a limited edition of 500 prints, was sponsored by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

For more information or to enroll call Midland Christian Fellowship, 685-1981, or Ms. Whitten, 1-263-4245.

■ Music trip planned

Reservations are now being taken for a Rio Grande River music trip in Big Bend National Park in April.

Hosting the trip will be Joseph and Theresa Brunelle from Austin. The duo's local performamces include at the Museum of the Southwest and the Midland Hilton.

The three-day weekend river trip is sponsored by Far Flung Adventures of Terlingua, originators of the series of music river trips.

Cost of the trip is $395 a person. Departure from Terlingua and Lajitas will be the morning of April 29 with return planned for the afternoon of May 1. Accommodations in Terlingua, Lajitas, Marathon, Alpine and big Bend national Park are available for extended stays.

For more information call Far Flung Adventures, 1-800-359-4138.

■ Children make gifts

Children and their families may create a unique Valentine gift at the Museum of the Southwest's Family Program today from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Aurora Rios of Baker's Gifts will direct the "West Texas Valentines" project.

The cost is $1 a child. Participants may stay as long or as short a time as they wish. For more information call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

■ Exhibition closes

ODESSA — An exhibit of black-and-white photographic portraits by O. Rufus Lovett of Longview closes Thursday at the Options Gallery in Odessa College's Learning Resources Center.

Lovett, who is head of the photography department at Kilgore College, entitled his exhibit "Engaged Portraiture."

Hours are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

■ Paintings displayed

A showing of paintings by Lula Belle Klingler hanging in the lobby of Midland National Bank closes Tuesday.

Ms. Klingler is a member of Midland Art Association. She paints landscapes and still lifes and paints on china. She has signed and numbered prints.

■ Lessons planned

Ann Hallay will be teaching counterchange smocking, garment construction and silk ribbon embroidery Feb. 24-26 at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Ms. Hallay, who is from Phoenix, Ariz., is being brought to Midland by the Tumbleweed Chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America, the Arts Assembly of Midland and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

For more information call 683-7837 or 699-6932.

■ Live broadcast set

Gaetano Donizetti's "Le Fille du regiment" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House Saturday at 12:30 p.m. Central Time over the Texaco-Metropolitan International Radio Network.

It will be heard locally over radio station KCRS.

Kathleen Battle will sing the role of Marie, with Rosalind Elias as the Marquise of Berkenfield, Frank Lopardo as Tonio, bass Bruno Pratico in his Texaco-Metropolitan Opera broadcast debut as Sulpice and actress Bea Arthur, also in her Met broadcast debut, in the speaking role of the Duchess of Krakenthorp.

■ Group to perform

PECOS — Long John Hunter and The Walking Catfish are to perform from 7 to 11 p.m. Feb. 26 at the Reeves County Civic Center, Pecos.

Proceeds from the event go to the West of the Pecos Museum.

The performance is sponsored by the West of the Pecos Museum in observance of Black History Month.

■ Spring Show set

The Midland Arts Association Spring Show is set for the Museum of the Southwest Thursday through April 17 and at the Midland Woman's Club Thursday through March 28.

An opening reception is planned at the museum from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday. The public is invited.

Juror for the show is Tom Ryan, who lives here. Ryan is a member of the Cowboy Artists of America and the National Academy of Western Art.

For more information call Doris Spires, 682-8401, or Charlotte Seay, 694-0920.

■ Registration is due

AUSTIN — Registration for the eighth annual South by Southwest Music and Media Conference is due by Feb. 25 to secure the $250 rate.

The four-night festival, set for March 16-20 at the Austin Convention Center and the Hyatt Regency Hotel, features groups and solo artists of all musical styles, who play for talent scouts and enthusiastic audiences in more than 25 of Austin's live music venues.

D-JAX CORP.
Dynamometers & Pump-Off Controls
1608 S. Main

21 years ago, D-JAX was your Oil well's Best friend, and we still are. Somethings just get better with age but we have to keep working at it. A 21 year Tradition of excellence but we're still going to keep trying. A challenging future and a Dynamic Past. Looking for more challenges after meeting the challenge for 21 years. 21 years of honest effort has made D-JAX a leader. After 21 years everything has changed except our service. 21 Years is our Anniversary, but it's also your guarantee. Everyday we live up to our promises we made 21 years ago. 21 years in business and still thinking "YOUNG" and INNOVATIVE. We haven't survived 21 years in the Oil Patch because we were lucky. After 21 years we are still doing our best.

STEWARD CABLE, INC.
1921 Alta Vista
687-2553

Steward Cable began as a backyard operation when Linda Steward started accepting the overlow work from her former employer. The work load increased and the business grew tremendously. Linda's husband, Bill, resigned his position after twenty years with a seismograph company in order to devote his energy to the business. The company is celebrating it's 16th anniversary this year.

Steward Cable manufacturers custom wire, cabe and connectors and provides a repair, maintenance and new assembly service for cables, geophones, load cell cables and a variety of other products used in the seismic and production industry. The company also stocks supplies used in but not limited to the seismic industry.

Steward Cable has built a reputation for being service oriented and offering the highest level of quality workmanship in the industry.

What a Founding Father Thought about the Ownership of Firearms

Firearms stand next in importance to the Constitution itself. They are the American people's liberty teeth and Keystone under independence....From the hour the Pilgrims landed, to the present day, events, occurrences, and tendencies prove that to ensure peace, security, and happiness, the rifle and pistol are equally indispensible...The very atmosphere of firearms everywhere restrains evil interference - they deserve a place of honor with all that's good.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

Loss of interest in favorite activities, hobbies, sports.

School problems - slipping grades, absenteeism.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.
