Leaders rework NATO

Soviets get nuclear warning

■ Westerners organize a council to open talks with East Europeans.

Associated Press

ROME — NATO leaders approved Friday a dramatic overhaul of the 42-year-old alliance, giving old foes in Eastern Europe a new forum and cementing — with some carping from France — their ties to the United States.

"We demonstrated that NATO does not require a Soviet enemy to hold it together," President Bush said at the triumphant end of a two-day landmark summit.

While offering friendship, the leaders also made clear the Kremlin should keep strong control over its nuclear arsenal and guard against the spread of powerful arms to rebellious republics.

In a final statement, they urged Moscow to "ensure the safe, responsible and reliable control of (nuclear) weapons under a single authority."

The allies called on the Soviet Union and its republics to let their citizens decide their own future and turn their backward economy into a free-market system.

Adding a sour note to the summit, French President Francois Mitterrand refused to sign the Soviet document. He protested the military alliance had no busi-

Bush hits domestic critics

ROME (AP) — President Bush, after lending his hand to the successful transformation of NATO, fired back at domestic critics on Friday by asserting he would not curb his foreign travels.

"I'd say to the isolationists in the United States, look at your history. Don't pull back into some Fortress America."

In fact, Bush said he would reschedule a trip to the Far East that he had scrubbed this week after polls showed Americans were critical of the proportion of time he was devoting to foreign policy compared to the nation's economic problems.

"I am not going to neglect that part of my

Johnson jumps on challenge

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson, an inspiring basketball champion, bravely set out Friday to face a real-life challenge — confronting his own mortality and educating a nation on the dangers of AIDS.

The day after the Los Angeles Lakers superstar made the stunning announcement that he had tested HIV-positive, he already was making headway in his new endeavors, friends and experts said.

Johnson, who said he's simply closing one chapter of his life and moving onto another, appeared on Arsenio Hall's television talk show and began his personal campaign to promote safe sex. The audience gave him a two-minute standing ovation.

He confirmed that he was exposed to the virus through heterosexual sex. He didn't elaborate.

Johnson repeatedly spoke about the dangers of unprotected sexual intercourse, and he urged people to use condoms. "Please put your thinking caps on and put your cap on down there," he said, gesturing below his belt.

He also disclosed that he offered to leave his new wife but that she adamantly refused.

The shock waves from Johnson's announcement Thursday continued rippling from inner cities to Washington to Wall Street, where a leading condom maker's stock surged.

FERC Chairman Martin Allday told Permian Basin oilmen Friday that new rules could improve pipeline efficiency.

FERC chief sees need for fairness

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Martin Allday, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, told Permian Basin oilmen Friday that competition and fairness were needed in natural gas transportation to keep the industry from facing needless risks.

"Markets are dynamic," Allday told oilmen attending the annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "You cannot avoid risk and you cannot regulate stability, but it is the job of FERC to make the regulatory world as predictable as possible."

Allday, a former Midland attorney, said provisions in the Mega-NOPR, an acronym for a large package of rules contained in a notice of proposed rule making, would take care of many of the regulatory problems in the transportation of natural gas and make it more competitive.

The new rules would require pipelines, in a process known as "unbundling," to give producers transporting gas through its system, the same charges and breaks given its own marketing affiliates.

"All our goals point in the same direction — to let producers and other gas sellers, and the millions who use natural gas, buy and sell in an open market where full and fair competition reigns."

He said people in the industry were willing to compete on a level playing field.

Most of the independent oil associations, including PBPA and the Independent Petroleum Association of Oil holds power, author says

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Oil, which has played a major role in world history, will continue to be significant economic force throughout the next century, according to Dr. Daniel Yergin, a prominent energy writer.

The author of the best-selling book, "The Prize: The Epic Quest for Oil, Money and Power," said the book was "an eye-opener."

Yergin

"So much of history has revolved around oil, including World War II and the recent Gulf crisis," Yergin said.

Yergin was guest speaker Friday night at the Permian Basin Petroleum Association banquet which honored Midland oilman Carlton Beal as its Top Hand for distinguished service to the oil industry.

Yergin said he wrote The Prize to tie oil to the 20th century. To date the book has sold more than 180,000 copies in hardback and has gone into a paperback edition with 70,000 copies.

He said most people in the U.S. are not aware of what goes on in the oilpatch or the oil industry, adding that John D. Rockefeller has cast a long shadow across the industry.

The former Harvard professor explained that Americans have deep-seated, negative preconceptions about the oil industry, noting that their basic experience with the industry is at the gas pump.

Kelleher claims partnership with oil

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

"We're partners," Southwest Airline chairman, president and chief executive officer Herb Kelleher told a room full of oilmen Friday. "We burn 400 million gallons of aviation fuel a year. We know who discovers the oil and gas. You do, and we want you to find more."

Kelleher

And, he added, Southwest supported price deregulation as early as the Ford Administration.

"We're the most energy-dependent airline in terms of traffic," he said. "We derive much of our traffic from the nation's energy centers."

Kelleher was keynote speaker at the general membership luncheon of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's annual meeting, themed, "Innovation '92"

He noted that the airline he helped found in 1971 was a prime example of innovation, saying it "was innovative in its concept, its implementation and the number of lawsuits it was able to withstand in a three-year period," referring to the number of suits filed by

Hutchison lauds bond propostion

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Texas State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison praised Texas voters for passing Proposition 8 in Tuesday's constitutional election.

The amendment ensured that future ballot propositions calling for the issuance of state-backed bonds clearly state the amount of the issue, the purpose for which the money will be used and the method and source of repayments, something that has not been required before.

Hutchison

Ms. Hutchison speculated that the student loan issue — which had failed in an August election — passed this time because voters knew what the cost was, what the money was for and how it would be repaid.

"(The amendment) is part of my debt management plan," she told a press conference Friday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. "(The decision) puts Texas in the forefront of states in the management of debt."

KELLEHER: Airline chief finds links with oil

(From 1A)

Braniff, Continental and Trans-Texas filed to keep the would-be airline on the ground.

He offered three faces of innovation, beginning with doing things differently, such as the airline's 10-minute turnaround, low and two-tier fares, automated ticket machines and unassigned seating. "At the time (we began) people believed the only people who flew were those who could charge the fare to someone else. We said there were people who would rather fly 45 minutes than drive six hours, if the flight didn't cost as much as their car."

A second face of innovation, Kelleher said, is doing the same thing but differently.

He cited as an example Southwest's restricted fares. He said he didn't want to implement restricted fares, "but we had to to compete with the other airlines." So, he added, the company made the fares the lowest cost possible, easily available and made restricted fare seats available on all flights.

Also, the company implemented a frequent flier program that is transferable and where the notices are automatically mailed to the customer.

And, finally, he said, the third face of innovation is "Innovation by Inertia." He explained that, when the airline industry was deregulated, "People kept telling us we'd have to change how we operated, but we made an active decision not to change our operating strategy and remember our market niche as a low-cost short-haul carrier."

He said Southwest "does strategic planning and constantly investigate and reinvestigate what we're doing and where we think we should be."

The carrier entered the Midland/Odessa market in 1977 with four daily flights to Dallas and currently carries eight out of every 10 passengers into and out of Midland International Airport.

The carrier currently offers 111 weekly flights departing the Permian Basin and over 14,000 seats are available every week. The total economic impact of Southwest's service to Midland is estimated at more than $33 million annually, he said.

Kelleher summed up his airline's success by noting that his employees tried to offer more for less, not less for more. "Everyone was looking for better service, and that sells anywhere."

HUTCHISON: Lottery concerns state treasurer

(From 1A)

She also said she supported the $1.1 billion prison bond proposal and expressed concern about the passage of a state lottery. "We'll be tracking revenues from the lottery," she stated. "I'm concerned about the lottery, and I'm concerned about the lottery being a way to finance state government."

Ms. Hutchison agreed with assessments that Tuesday's election results were a signal from voters that, "People are worried about the economy. A lot of people are out of jobs. There have been tough, tough times in Texas, (but) we're bottoming out and beginning to recover. But the recovery is fragile and we must be attuned to the economy. There can be no new taxes at the state and local level, and we need relief at the federal level."

Before her press conference, Ms. Hutchison spoke at a breakfast kicking off the annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

She told the gathering that "Texas is in a position to distance ourselves from the rest of the nation. We're a strong state and have a history of strong but efficient, good government." She observed the problems of Connecticut, which this year passed a state income tax and had 1 percent of its population on the steps of the capital in protest, and of the New Jersey Legislature, many of whom were turned out over tax issues, and of New York, "which is borrowing it's way out of debt."

"Texas is in a position to keep from doing that," she said, "but we are at a crossroads." She cited a recent Wall Street Journal article that compared two states led by Republican governors working with Democratic legislatures: California, whose governor was elected promising no new taxes but has backtracked and recently accepted a budget with $7 billion in new taxes, and Massachusets, whose governor also promised no new taxes but kept his word and cut 7,000 from the state payroll and accepted a budget $7.6 billion below what it would have been with regular cost-of-living increases.

"Guess which state has a mass exodus of businesses?" she asked. "And where are all the businesses going that are coming from California? Not to Texas — to states with good regulations and low taxes. I want Texas to be in the position of being the state getting the businesses fleeing highly taxed, regulated states. We can if we take the right road. Do we have the guts to do it?"

Ms. Hutchison suggested two courses of action that the state should take "to go into the 21st Century strong and healthy."

The first was to begin appealing federal court decisions, such as the prison and school financing decisions. By appealing to the Fifth Circuit on the prison issue and having the 95 percent cap lifted on prison population, she estimated the state could save $1 billion over 20 years.

"We have to be willing to stand up to federal courts and the federal government who are putting the onus on Texas to pay for mandates and not providing funds to pay for them."

The second step is to elect people "who understand what new taxes and business regulations do to strangle the growth and development of businesses."

ALLDAY: FERC chief stresses competitiveness

(From 1A)

America, have signed on to the proposed new rules. The Natural Gas Supply Association, which represents major gas producers, has also backed many of the factors of Mega-NOPR.

However, Texas Railroad Commission chairman Lena Guerrero has gone on record as being opposed to the unbundling portion of the new regulations. In a letter released October 17, Ms. Guerrero said parts of the rule would make natural gas a less reliable fuel and subject local distribution companies to unreliable and erratic gas price spikes during the cold winter months.

"I disagree with her," said Allday, when asked about Ms. Guerrero's position. "I would hope someone would talk to her."

Allday said Mega-NOPR was not designed to bash pipelines, but to gain full advantage of the U.S. pipeline system. He said the natural gas industry consisted of three parts — producers, pipelines and distributors — and that each one was essential to the nation.

Said Allday: "Some have suggested we are trying to drive the pipelines out of the business of buying and selling gas. That is not true. That would mean throwing away the expertise pipelines have built in the business. We are not in the business of throwing something so valuable away. Pipelines can still sell gas, they will just transfer title closer to the wellhead. Unbundling will only stop pipelines from giving an edge to their own sales."

Allday also noted that new construction rules proposed in Mega-NOPR would make it easier to build pipelines and create new markets. "We have certified 7,000 miles of pipe in the past two years, that can be built when the companies want to."

He added: "Producers need to sell their gas into markets when they develop, not years later." He said he was startled when he went to FERC and learned that not a single application was in the works to build a pipeline from Texas to the Northeast to tap that market.

He said new construction rules would encourage competition, so that many companies could compete to build pipelines. The longtime oil and gas attorney also noted that excessive permitting by numerous state, regional and local environmental and government groups continued to delay pipeline construction.

He said one-stop shopping at FERC was needed for permitting pipelines, but that would have to be from Congress. New rules, however, would give agencies limited time to answer FERC pipeline proposals.

He acknowledged that northern Mexico could become a viable market for U.S. natural gas and said such action would require DOE approval.

BAYLOR: Baptists to meet

(From 1A)

Baptist brawl between denominational conservatives and moderates. The confrontation will come to a head at the convention's annual meeting Monday and Tuesday.

"I think everyone is going to be shocked (by the turnout)," said the Rev. John Morgan, a leading conservative and pastor of Houston's Sagemont Baptist Church. "I know people who are going who had no intention of attending (until the Baylor issue erupted), and they are taking their full slate of messengers (delegates)."

Convention officials already have prepared overflow seating sites, complete with closed-circuit TV, in case the number of delegates exceeds the 10,500-seat capacity of Baylor's Ferrell Center.

The Baylor dispute, which revolves around the university's bid for autonomy, is not likely to end on the convention floor. Several conservative pastors are threatening to stop their financial contributions to Baylor if the proposal is adopted.

The turmoil dates to Sept. 21, 1990, when trustees of Baylor voted to amend its charter to create a self-perpetuating board of regents to govern the university. The surprise action was tantamount to a declaration of independence from the convention. The convention previously had named the 48 regents.

Baylor President Herbert Reynolds argued that the charter amendment was necessary to prevent a "fundamentalist takeover" of the school. He is a scathing critic of Baptist conservatives who advocate a more literal interpretation of Scripture than moderates and are more supportive of right-wing political and social causes.

The charter amendment precipitated an uproar at last year's state Baptist meeting in Houston. Delegates voted to continue talks with Baylor, but froze $6 million in annual state convention contributions to the school.

The ensuing talks hammered out a compromise allowing the convention to name 25 percent of the 24 Baylor regents. In exchange, the convention would continue to fund the school but would lower its contribution from $6 million to $4 million. Despite threats from conservatives to legally challenge Baylor's action, neither side seems eager to go to court to determine who has the right to run Baylor — the school itself or the state convention.

Despite approval from the state convention's executive committee, the proposal has angered conservatives and divided loyalties among moderates who support Baylor. Conservatives, organizationally weak in Texas, are rallying to defeat the proposal. They want to give the school an ultimatum: allow the convention to name Baylor's board or leave the denominational umbrella.

"The position of a lot of Texas Baptists is that if Baylor is not accountable to us, then we should sever our relationship," Morgan said. "We need to either bring Baylor back into the family or let her go her way."

Go her way is exactly what Baylor will do if the agreement is rejected, said Mike Bishop, university vice president for public relations.

"If the agreement fails, there will be no formal relationship between Baylor University and the Texas Baptist convention," he said. "It will be like a divorce and there is no substitute agreement."

Baylor claims to want to continue its relationship with Texas Baptists and, despite the new arrangement, still sees itself as an asset to them. Bishop said Baylor has more Baptist students than all other Texas Baptist colleges combined, and the greatest number of ministerial students. The pervasive presence and influence of Baylor alumni in Texas Baptist churches, schools and agencies may give moderates an organizational edge when the state meeting opens.

But conservatives, sensing an opportunity to bolster their minority status in Texas, have launched an all-out effort to derail the proposal and possibly win critical state convention offices.

YERGIN: Author sees many challenges ahead

(From 1A)

"The oil industry is judged by the people, like no other industry," he noted.

Aside from its image problems, Yergin says other challenges facing the industry are the environment, energy prices, declining production, the migration of major oil companies overseas and alternative fuels.

Compressed natural gas (CNG) will play a role in the transportation market, said Yergin, but he added the most growth in natural gas markets will come from electric generation. "We are not as pessimistic about natural gas as most people," he noted.

Beal

Yergin, who heads the Cambridge Research Institute, said his firm is now doing research to determine what the role of solar energy and electric vehicles will be. "The battle between electric and gasoline vehicles was fought 80 years ago and gasoline won, but I think we could see a replay of that battle in the next two years," he predicted.

About environmental concerns, he noted the environmental movement had gained tremendous force in the last few years, and that the oil industry now sees it as possibly its biggest challenge.

"Environmental values now spread across the entire social spectrum," Yergin said, adding that regulations may not be excessive, but they might be fragmented among many jurisdictions, bringing compliance problems to the industry. He said, too, that it might be necessary to re-think some regulations further down the road.

OPEC quotas will become less important in setting oil prices, but there will be no pressure to bring oil down to the $10 and $12 level during the next decade.

He doesn't think the Soviet Union will impact oil prices in the near term, but he said if the situation stabilizes and U.S. companies are able to write viable and legal contracts, the Soviet Union could become the next major focus for the U.S. oil industry.

"Who knows," Yergin said, "the next great oil entrepreneur may come out of the Soviet Union."

Asked who the most interesting individuals ever in the oil industry were, he listed Marcus Samuel, founder of Shell Oil Co., and Armand Hammer, founder of Occidental Petroleum.

During the PBPA President's Banquet, Midland oilman Carlton Beal was saluted as Top Hand.

Born in Los Angeles and educated at Stanford University, Beal moved to Midland in the early 1950s to work as a petroleum engineer. He is a pioneer in the oil business, having worked with his father on steam rigs from 1928 to 1937.

One of the Permian Basin's most successful oilmen, he formed Beal Trobaugh and Associates (BTA) in the mid-50s and today employs more than 80 individuals in offices in Midland and Denver.

Beal, who earned a master's degree in petroleum engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1937, is also the author of several significant oilfield papers, including The Viscosity of Air, Water, Natural Gas, Crude Oil and its Associated Gases at Oilfield Temperatures and Pressures.

An avid sportsman and polo player, Beal is also a major contributor to community enhancement.

NATO: Treaty organization changes approach ness giving economic instructions — "like a preaching monk" — to Moscow.

"NATO has no evangelical mission," he told reporters. "France does not want the alliance to become a theological institution."

His criticism was a sharp reminder of the difficulties the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization has in trying to find a mission in the post-Cold War era. The alliance was formed in 1949 to guard against Soviet expansionist policies.

In remodeling their alliance, the leaders acknowledged the Soviet Union no longer poses the threat of a surprise military attack on its Western neighbors.

But they cautioned that new risks, such as the political upheavals in Eastern Europe, required a strong defense.

"A monolithic, powerful Soviet Union is no longer the enemy," Bush said. "The enemy is uncertainty. The enemy is unpredictability."

To guard against the unknown, the allies agreed to pare their military forces, reshape the remaining troops into smaller, more mobile units and sharply reduce their nuclear weapons.

They agreed to set up a North Atlantic Cooperation Council, offering the Soviet Union and eight nations in Eastern Europe an unprecedented chance to air their views.

They invited the foreign ministers from those countries to a Dec. 20 session with their counterparts at NATO to map out the council's future.

BUSH: President answers critics responsibility as President because of some carping," Bush said at a news conference at Villa Taverna, the residence of U.S. ambassador Peter Secchia.

With gathering emotion, Bush lashed out at his critics, even reaching back to appeals by some leading Democrats at the height of the Persian Gulf crisis that he pursue a diplomatic rather than a military solution to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait.

"We would still be sitting there, fat, dumb and happy, with Saddam Hussein maybe in Saudi Arabia," Bush said.

"You are not going to see me stay put as much, or not put as much," Bush stammered at one point.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt repeated Friday that Democrats see national economic strength as a prerequisite for an outwardly directed foreign policy.

"We should not measure the success of our foreign policy by how many alliances we maintain, how many treaties we sign or how many negotiations we moderate," Gephardt said. "We should measure the success of our foreign policy in terms of how it adds to our strength and prosperity."

Bush wound up a two-day summit meeting with the 15 other leaders of NATO countries obviously pleased with the way the Western alliance is handling the transition from the Cold War to "uncertainty."

Cub Scouts plan Pushmobile race

Staff Report

Hundreds of local youth will be racing through the Chap Center parking lot from 1-5 p.m. today as part of the annual Cub Scout Pushmobile Derby.

Each car has four teams of two Cubs that relay down the course, with one boy riding and another pushing. On the return trip, the boys swap positions. Cars are built by the scouts and their parents.

The race is a double elimination contest, with division winners based on grades (2nd, 3rd, 4th & 5th) with an overall championship heat.

The public is invited to watch the event and visit with local Cub Scout Packs. Membership for boys grades 1-5 is open year-round. For more information, contact the Scout Service Center at 570-7601 or go by 1101 West Texas.

POMPON: Wanda Holloway to stand trial again

(From 1A)

Mrs. Holloway, 37, was convicted Sept. 3 of trying to hire a hitman to kill Verna Heath, whose daughter was competing with Mrs. Holloway's daughter for a spot on the high school cheerleading squad. She was sentenced to 15 years in prison and fined $10,000.

"We go back to square one," said Mike Anderson, the Harris County assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case.

"I expect it to be pretty much the way it was the first time," Anderson said. "Some other witnesses have come forward to us and we have their testimony if we ever need it."

Godwin based his decision on evidence submitted in affidavits and brief arguments from prosecutors and defense attorneys Friday. There was no formal hearing.

No date has been set for the trial, said Sandra Jefferson, Godwin's court coordinator. He will set the date at a hearing scheduled to be held within 90 days, Anderson said.

Defense attorney Troy McKinney said the new trial could come as early as February.

CHANGE: Former basketball star prepares for new role

(From 1A)

Heightening the impact, some experts said, was the fact that Johnson was infected through heterosexual activity.

"Now people have to take it more seriously — have safe sex," said 12-year-old Shawanna Smith, a pupil at Intermediate School 147 in the New York's Bronx borough.

In Rome, President Bush felt compelled to defend his administration's stance on the disease, saying he'd didn't like "allegations that I don't care."

"If there's more I can do to empathize, to make clear what AIDS is and what it isn't, I want to go the extra mile," the president said, stressing that his administration has "increased funding dramatically" for AIDS research.

"I can't say I've done enough," the president said. "Of course I haven't."

Johnson's public acknowledgment was applauded by AIDS activists.

"He probably saved thousands of lives just in that one act," said Fred Allemann, an HIV outreach specialist with the Cascade AIDS Project in Portland, Ore.

Johnson's trademark smile and boyish enthusiasm made him an athlete whose fame transcended sports, someone adults and kids both could admire, and his vibrant personality makes him a beacon for AIDS awareness.

"I think sometimes we think, well, only gay people can get it, it's not going to happen to me," Johnson said Thursday as he announced his retirement at age 32. "And here I am saying that it can happen to anybody. Even me, Magic Johnson, it could happen to."

Apparently, a lot of others quickly realized it could happen to them, too.

Callers flooded AIDS hot lines around the country, including one at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. Between 5 p.m. and midnight Thursday, the CDC hot line — which normally gets about 3,000 telephone calls daily — received 40,000, said CDC spokesman Kent Taylor. He said most calls went unanswered in the crush, which continued Friday.

In Missouri, the volume of people coming in for AIDS tests doubled the morning after Johnson's announcement, said Don Cuvo, manager of the Metropolitan AIDS program for the St. Louis Health Department.

"These people never thought they were at risk, but if somebody like Magic is at risk, they figured they may be, too," Cuvo said. "I think Magic's announcement shocked a lot of people. The phones are ringing off the hook."

"We have found that it's not until you know somebody with AIDS or who is HIV-positive that your attitudes change," said Mark Senak, director of client service of AIDS Project Los Angeles.

Southwest will stay, chief says

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Athough Southwest Airlines opposes the new terminal project at Midland International Airport, the city's pursuit of the construction would not jeopardize the airline's continued service, Chairman Herb Kelleher said Friday.

Kelleher, chairman, president and chief executive officer, conducted a press conference before a luncheon address at the Permian Basin Petroleum Association meeting.

He said the airline has taken a position against the local project because the plan — construction of a $29 million, five-gate terminal — is unnecessary. The city has proposed funding the project with a $3 per ticket passenger facility charge (PFC) over a 20-year period.

"We're in favor of the PFC in general, but we don't think it's a good idea to spend it on things that are unnecessary or don't make a contribution to the local economy," he said. Kelleher said Southwest had supported Federal Aviation Administration creation of the PFC because it was a direct way for passengers to fund airport improvements.

"We said passengers had been sending their money to Washington, and it was being used to offset the federal budget, not build airports," he said. Southwest would support limited use of the facility charge where passenger numbers justified it, Kelleher said.

"I don't think the terminal project is justified," he said, citing figures showing the airline's boardings had dropped by 13.5 percent between 1982 and 1990. But during the same period, airline figures show a 65 percent increase in its service.

"When you were hurting, we were providing more service rather than cutting service," Kelleher said. "I think that's proof of our loyalty to the area." Southwest information says the airline carries about 75 percent of the local market share.

"Passenger demand should drive the facility. New facilities don't drive passenger demand," Kelleher said. "Many other airports have the idea that 'If you build it they will come,' sort of a 'Field of Dreams.'

"That's not true, I can tell you," he said.

Kelleher called the drop in enplanements a "long-term phenomenon," but said the airline's local service is not in jeopardy.

City officials have cited the Gulf War as a cause for a recent drop in enplanements. Citing lower passenger levels and wavering public opinion, those officials have decided to delay further action on the terminal project — now in the design stage — until the end of January.

City officials have said a new terminal is the best option because the current facility needs major repairs. A repair project would have to be funded largely by airport and city funds, but a new terminal could be paid for by the PFC and grants with minimal city investment, officials have said.

"With this new terminal and the new federal excise tax that's going into effect, tickets are going to be increased by 9.5 percent," Kelleher said. "We think it will further depress boardings."

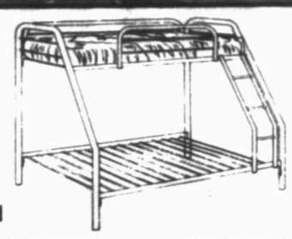

Kelleher said he plans to meet with city officials to discuss options for upgrading the airport, but Southwest is not likely to change its position on the construction proposal. A formal statement of the airline's opposition must be mailed with the city's application to implement the PFC, expected to be submitted to the FAA within a few months.

DEATHS

Darrell Wiles

A memorial service for Darrell L. "Larry" Wiles, 70, of Glenwood Springs, Colo., are set for 3:30 p.m. Sunday at Bellview Baptist Church, with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating.

Wiles

Wiles died Wednesday at his home.

He was born July 25, 1921, in Gem, Kan.

He was a 40-year resident of Midland and worked for Coca-Cola Bottling Co. for 30 years before his retirement in 1983, when he moved to Comanche.

He married Eleanor Hall in 1989.

He was a veteran of World War II and a member of the West Side Lions Club.

Survivors include three daughters, Linda Short of Midland, Bonnie Burch of Odessa and Laurie Robinson of Sydney; three stepdaughters, one sister, one brother, 16 grandchildren, four great-ghrandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Lucille Crawford

Services for Lucille B. Crawford of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. today at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa with Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Crawford died Wednesday at a local nursing home.

She was born Oct. 27, 1898, in Weatherford where she was raised. From 1936 to 1970 she resided in Phoenix. She then lived in other areas of Arizona and in Stephenville before coming to Midland on July 4, 1987.

Survivors include a daughter, Mary Osborne of Scottsdale, Ariz.; a sister, Ora Steward of Stephenville; a nephew, a niece, two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be sent to a favorite charity.

Billie Benson

Services for Billie Faye Benson, 65, of Midland will be 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Northridge Methodist Church in Lamesa with Rev. Paul Baskin officiating and Rev. Jesse Dea of Quanah assisting. Burial will be at Lamesa Memorial Park. Arrangements are with Branson Funeral Home.

Mrs. Benson died Friday at a Midland hospital.

She was born Sept. 10, 1926, in Sunset. She married Carl Benson on Feb. 13, 1943, in Patricia.

Mrs. Benson came to Dawson County in 1933 from Sunset and lived in Dawson County until two years ago.

She was a housewife and member of the Northridge Methodist Church in Lamesa.

She was preceded in death by a brother, Leonard Sheets in 1971.

Survivors include her husband, Carl Benson of Midland; two daughters, Charlene Mebane and Lana Hankins, both of Midland; a sister, Marie Stanfield of Ft. Worth; a brother, Harold Sheets of Seminole; and four grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to the American Diabetes Association.

Donald Love

Funeral services for Donald W. Love, 77, of Lamesa are set for 2 p.m. Monday at Love & Limon Funeral Home Chapel in Limon, Colo., with the Rev. Garen Reinking of Denver, Colo. officiating. Burial will follow at Flagler Cemetery in Flagler, Colo.

Love died Thursday at a Lamesa hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Jan. 26, 1914, in Casper, Wyo., and married Leola Heid on Aug. 1, 1942, in Goodland, Kan.

He had been a resident of Lamesa for 31 years and operated Love's Drive-In in Lamesa for 17 years.

Survivors include his wife; four sisters, Ruth Huggins of Longmont, Colo., Marylee Pckett of Denver, Colo., Betty Etter of Broken Bow, Okla., and Wilma Perry of Fort Collins, Colo.; and one brother, Gene Love of Orland, Calif.

Doris Stone

Services for Doris Louise Hardin Stone of Midland have been set for 9:30 a.m. Monday at the Fairmont Park Church of Christ with Ralph Gates officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. at the Castro Memorial Garden Cemetery in Dimmitt. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Friday at a local hospital.

Lee Swint

Services for Lee I. Swint of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Monday at Wesley United Methodist Church of Andrews. Interment will follow at Andrews County Cemetery. Local arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Swint died Thursday at a local nursing home.

Bob Ledeker

MT. PLEASANT — Services for Bob L. Ledeker, 70, of Mt. Pleasant will be 11 a.m. today at the Masonic Cemetery in Mt. Pleasant with Rev. Don Sides officiating.

Ledeker died Thursday at a Titus County hospital.

He was born on Aug. 14, 1921, in El Dorado, Kan., and was a U.S. Army veteran.

Ledeker was in oil field equipment sales with Well-Tech.

He was a member of St. Lukes United Methodist Church in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Louise Ledeker of Mt. Pleasant; a daughter, Susan Abernathy of Mt. Pleasant; two sisters, Betty White of Olney, Ill., and Irene Abernathy of Salem, Ill.; and two grandchildren.

Eric Unger

Eric Unger, 37, a former resident of Midland, died at his home in Austin after a brief illness.

Services are pending in Austin.

Born Oct. 29, 1954, he was a graduate of Midland High School. He attended the University of Texas and was engaged in the construction business in Austin.

Survivors include his parents, Meg and Earle Unger of Buena Vista, N.M.; one sister, Leslie Bennett of Clifton; two nieces; an aunt and an uncle.

The family requests that memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

U.S. trade group wants to sell Christmas trees in Japan

TOKYO (NYT) — Selling Christmas trees to the Japanese may seem a tad ambitious, if not downright foolish. After all, Christmas is not a Japanese tradition, and living quarters are notoriously cramped. But that's not stopping a U.S. trade organization and a Japanese importer from trying.

Although few Japanese celebrate Christmas in the way Westerners do, it would be hard to tell that from the wide range of Christmas decorations available in some Japanese stores and the ubiquitous Christmas sales held by retailers. Christmas in Japan is a purely commercial holiday that many retailers say seems to be catching on more every year.

This year the Western U.S. Agricultural Trade Association will export 800 Noble fir trees from Washington state, Oregon and Montana to Japan in a bid to hook Japanese consumers on the sight and smell of a live Christmas tree, as opposed to the plastic variety.

Marubeni Corp., a major Japanese trading house, said fir trees have been imported from the United States in the past, but only on a small scale of 50 to 100 trees. The company said the U.S. trade organization is looking to the Japanese market because there is little room for continued sales growth in the United States.

Marubeni said it has already received orders for the 800 Noble firs, even though many Japanese wholesalers and retailers told the company they are doubtful there is much of a market for them.

Many of the trees are being sold to companies that lease plants and small trees to hotels, restaurants and other businesses, said Yuri Sawa, a spokeswoman for Marubeni.

"Seeing the displays of live trees this year, we hope people will begin buying them for their homes next year, convinced that the fir trees are of better quality despite their slightly higher price compared with plastic trees," she said.

Marubeni hopes to import three to five times as many of the trees next year. They come in four different heights, ranging from 1 meter to 3 meters (3.3 feet to 9.9 feet). At least one wholesaler is selling the 1-meter trees for about 6,500 yen ($50) and 3-meter trees for 20,000 yen ($154).

Pamphlets advertising the American fir trees have been distributed by Marubeni to Japanese plant shops in an effort to drum up business among consumers.

Because most Japanese homes are considerably smaller than American ones, Marubeni hopes to develop miniature fir trees similar to bonsai trees with the U.S. trade association. But developing miniature fir trees that are well-shaped is expected to take years.

Ota Floriculture Auction Co., which bought 300 of the fir trees imported by Marubeni, said American fir trees are more popular than Japanese trees because they have a nicer shape. The company said all 300 of the trees were sold in two days.

"But it will be difficult to buy only imported fir trees since there are also the Japanese tree growers whose interests we need to consider," a company spokesman said.

Hibiya Kadan Co., a retailer of flowers and plants, has imported about 100 fir trees a year from Canada for the past four years. A company spokesman said that although a few more Japanese buy fir trees to display in their homes at Christmas each year, there has been no dramatic increase in the market.

He said one problem is that some Japanese are reluctant to buy live trees because of growing concern for conserving nature and protecting the environment.

"Most Japanese don't know that the trees were cultivated for the market, rather than those that grow naturally," he said.

Major Tokyo department stores began their Christmas sales campaigns earlier than normal this year.

'Multicultural' crayons included in small boxes

COLUMBIA, Md. (AP) — Students who want more realism in their coloring books can now buy a small set of "multicultural crayons," with colors to match skin complexions.

Six flesh-tone colors are included in new eight-crayon boxes introduced Thursday by Binney & Smith, which makes Crayola crayons. The other colors, black and white, can be used for shading.

The colors are already available in Crayola's box of 64 colors, but most schools don't buy the larger box. The decision to sell the small sets comes after some prodding from a school supply company, Chaselle Inc.

"In the words of one teacher, they were so tired of seeing Martin Luther King done in pure black with glowing red lips," said Bob Chaisson Jr., vice president of marketing for Columbia-based Chaselle.

The flesh-tone colors in the package are mahogany, peach, tan, sepia, burnt sienna and apricot. The "flesh" crayon was renamed "peach" in 1962 because it only applied to one of a multitude of skin colors.

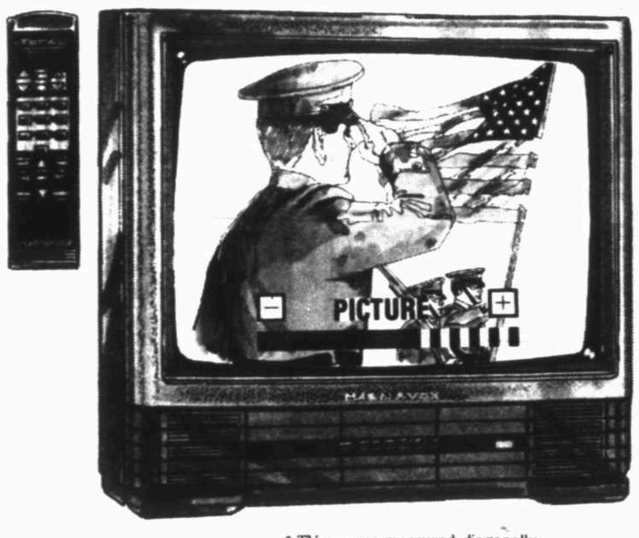

Binney & Smith introduced the "Skin Tones of the World" assortment at a conference of the National Association for the Education of Young Children in Denver.

The traditional eight colors were orange, green, red, yellow, black, brown, blue and purple.

Rebs snuff out Bobcats

Lee blows 21-0 lead, comes from behind for 29-22 win

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee defensive back Rod Strambler (24) puts pressure on San Angelo quarterback Shea Morenz during a key first half pass attempt on fourth down deep in Lee territory. The pass was incomplete.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Tell the Midland Lee Rebels and the San Angelo Bobcats that they have nothing to play for in the last meaningless regular season game of the year and you get one of the most exciting games of the year.

Still, Lee's remarkable big 21-point lead — to one-point deficit — to 29-22 victory — changed nothing. San Angelo is still headed for the Big School 5A playoffs against Lubbock Coronado at 8 p.m. next Friday in San Angelo while Lee will meet either Amarillo Tascosa or Amarillo Palo Duro next Saturday in the 5A Small School division bi-district game in Amarillo at Dick Bivens Stadium. Time is still to be determined, but it will be an noon game if it's against Palo Duro or a 2 p.m. game if it's against Tascosa.

Tascosa plays Lubbock Coronado at 6 p.m. today in Lubbock. If Tascosa loses, Lee will play Palo Duro, and if Tascosa wins, Lee will play Tascosa in a battle of Rebels.

But that's next week. Friday's game is worth savoring — even if it didn't mean anything but second place in the district. Lee takes the second place position with a 9-1 season mark and 5-1 district campaign while San Angelo is 7-2-1 and 4-2.

Lee vaulted to a 21-0 lead while holding the golden armed quarterback Shea Morenz to human passing numbers. Lee led 7-0 at the half on a 15-yard TD run by Sherman Dedrick and then scored the first two times it had the ball in the third period on a 28-yard run by Roy Robinson and a 17-yard run by Brett Sullivan after Henry Stewart's second interception of the night.

"I hadn't had an interception all year and I've really been trying to break that," Stewart said, "but getting two interceptions against Morenz is really something special. He can really throw the ball. We just played our best game of the season."

Morenz was down, but not out. He guided the Bobcats to three consecutive third period touchdowns to give San Angelo a 22-21 lead 18 seconds still left in the third period. He hit Damon Carroll for TD passes of 24 and three yards and came back with a 15-yard shovel pass to running back David Hamilton and passed to Charles Vogel for a two-point conversion and the lead.

Lee, which had dominated the game at the line of scrimmage, then used power offense to march 80 yards in 16 plays to take a 29-22 lead with 5:26 left in the game on Scott McLeod's one-yard run and a Jimmy Patton pass to Sullivan for two points.

Dedrick carried seven times in the drive and Sullivan six, mostly up the middle behind center K.C. Jones and guard Justin Firkins.

"K.C. and I tried to keep everyone up," noted Firkins. "We knew if we could take it down and score, the game was ours. The offense did it and we're going to go far in the playoffs."

Chaps open season with 105-99 win

■ Midland sees a 21 point lead erased thanks to the 36 points offered up by Murray State point guard Russell Ponds.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

The new-look Midland College Chaparrals donned fresh-from-the-factory florescent yellow togs and opened their 1991-92 basketball season with an impressive first half Friday night at the Chap Center, and held on to defeat Murray State (Okla.) College 105-99 despite losing a 21-point lead in the second half.

"It was two totally different games. In the first half we played with confidence and shot the ball pretty well. In the second half we played timid and were very hesitant," said first-year head coach Steve Green.

The game was the nightcap in the first day of the 14th Annual Chaparral Classic Tournament, with Howard College (2-0) beating 0-2 Angelina College of Lufkin in the opener, 108-103.

Tonight's games have Howard and Murray State playing at 6 p.m., with MC taking on Angelina at 8 p.m.

While the 1-0 Chaps showed signs of first-game jitters Friday, they also displayed flashes of the full-throttle game

Steers beat 'Stangs, spread

■ Having to win by 12 points to ensure themselves a spot in the Class 4A playoffs, the Big Spring Steers fall behind 12-0 before returning to win by the needed point margin.

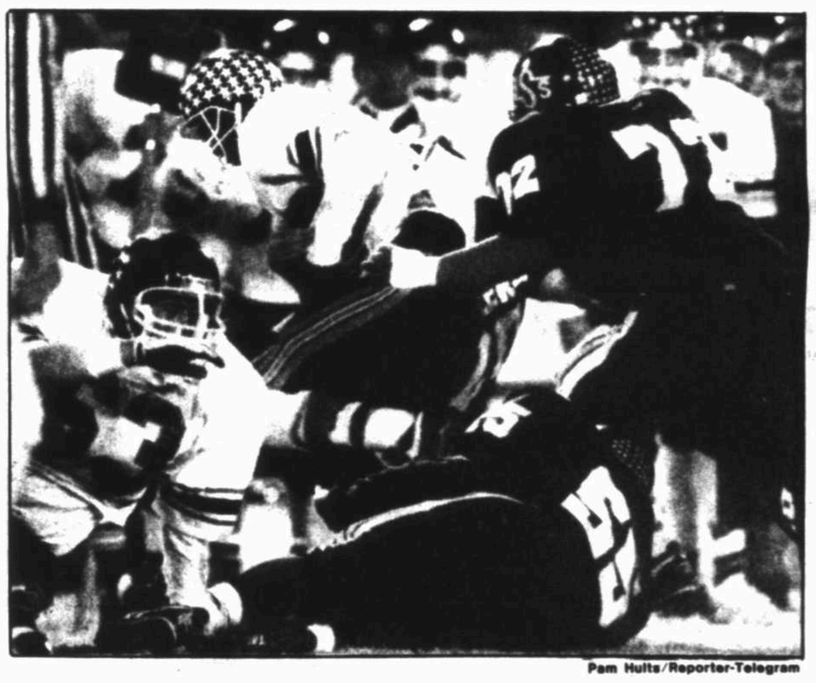

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Call it 2-0 or call it 28-14, but know that the Big Spring Steers turned mathematical playoff elimination into downright contention here Friday night with a second half of football that may well thwart Andrews' first postseason march since 1981.

Big Spring, needing to beat District 3-4A rival Andrews by no fewer than 12 points to stay alive in the playoff chase, poured 20 points worth of electricity into the second-half scoreboard and captured a 14-point victory, 28-14 that keeps the Steers in the playoff hunt.

The Mustangs, knowing that even a loss of fewer than 12 points here would guarantee them at least a share of the 3-4A championship, instead dropped to 4-1 in league play and to the brink of playoff elimination.

Big Spring needs only to defeat Monahans in next Friday's season finale to join Sweetwater as a 3-4A playoff representative and co-champion.

Pam Hults/Reporter-Telegram

Big Spring defenders Joey Franco (72) and Jon Downey (55) move to track down Bryan Lepard of Andrews during the first half of Friday's District 3-4A showdown.

Sweetwater defeated Fort Stockton in its final regular season game Friday to finish at 5-1 in the loop.

"The next game is a playoff game for us. We start now," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler, whose Steers upped their league mark to 4-1. "It's sudden death for us and that's how we're going to approach it."

It was even worse than sudden death against Andrews. Big Spring entered the game with a trio-worst minus 21 rating in 3-4A's complicated 21-point playoff tie-breaker system that breaks three-way deadlocks. The deficit came in a massive 35-7 loss to Sweetwater.

JIMMY PATTERSON

America's spirit hurt with Magic's news

Grown men cried when they heard the news Thursday afternoon. And I promise you, as cynical a group as they are, many sports writers cried, too.

Patterson

It hardly seems fair, but we are forced today to accept a disturbing fact: It turns out that, after all, Earvin 'Magic' Johnson is a mere mortal. He is like you and he is like me, but for better than a decade, he has seemed like so much more.

Rightfully so, Magic is credited with making basketball the overwhelming success it is today. He was without question the most skilled guard that ever played the game. And in terms of showmanship, popularity and winning, he is without equal.

The past couple of days have been an emotional time for America. Emotional because we realize we'll never be able to again witness the poetry and grace Magic Johnson was on the court. Emotional for him because we realize the game he loves playing he will never play again. But above all, emotional because Magic Johnson is a very sick man.

You wouldn't know he is sick by looking at him. He was the picture of dignity and character during his press conference Thursday. He announced then that he had contracted the HIV virus with the same tone he would use to tell someone he had broken a toe. Even when he told us all he had the virus, he seemed so much mightier than the average person.

Grace under pressure. It was defined by Magic on the court and it will be redefined by him now that he takes on his new responsibilities as spokesman to help prevent the disease he now has.

The American spirit is broken today because of Magic's illness. How could someone so magestic, so seemingly perfect in every way, from his humbleness to his professionalism, to his perfection on the basketball court, be stricken with such a malady?

"I don't think there was anyone who turned on their TV set Thursday who didn't shed a tear for Magic Johnson, and for society," Midland College head basketball coach Steve Green said.

The AIDS virus hasn't taken away the adoration of the millions of kids who still look up to him. Nor does having the virus change Magic, the person.

"I had a lot of respect for him and I still do," said Wayne Wilson, a senior on the Midland Lee basketball team. "I sympathize with him because he has the disease, but I think it lets people know just how real the disease is if you happen to be sexually active."

Martin Lattibeaudiere, a junior guard at Lee, has had Magic's poster hanging in his bedroom for years. He is disappointed that Magic wasn't more cautious, but still respects him as both a player and a person.

"I held him in really high regard," Lattibeaudiere said. "I still respect him as a basketball player and as a person even after what he did. I personally think it was a bad thing that he brought upon himself.

"I think a lot of people will be more careful because he was such a high role model. A lot of people didn't think it could happen to someone that high. But it just shows you it just doesn't happen to people on the street or to gay people."

Magic's impact as a spokesman for the HIV virus has likely already been beneficial to thousands.

Utah Jazz center Mark Eaton put it perhaps better than anyone when he said "If God had to pick a spokesman, he couldn't have picked anyone better."

And as Magic's former coach Pat Riley, now the coach of the New York Knicks, said, "Magic's career as an NBA player may be over, but his career helping others is just beginning."

There is something special about Magic Johnson. Athletes today are held perhaps unfairly on the highest of pedestals. But as high as those pedestals are for our most beloved performers, Magic Johnson is on the pedestal just above all the others. Thursday the poise and calm he displayed showed us again why he is such a national treasure, and why the news was so hard for us all to take.

"When I first heard about it," Wilson said, "I said 'No, he just has pneumonia or something, not Magic. But then I saw it on TV. Even though he's a pro basketball player, you feel you really know him."

Stay well, Magic. Please.

Jimmy Patterson is assistant sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Columnists saddened by Magic's HIV virus

Associated Press

Excerpts from columns about Magic Johnson in Friday's newspapers:

On the first day of the end of his life, Earvin Johnson Jr. embraced a weeping city and said, "There, there."

The afflicted had become the comforter. Magic told us it would be all right. In his wonderfully ingenuous way, he talked of becoming "a spokesman for the HIV virus." He also said he would chase "my dream of owning an NBA team."

All his pursuits go faster now. Johnson, a basketball player no longer, is HIV-positive."

Mark Whicker
The Orange County Register

"You don't say goodbye to Magic Johnson. You say hello to Magic Johnson. Because he will say hello back. Because that is what makes him Magic Johnson. Because he has a hello for everybody.

"You don't have to avoid Magic Johnson. He is not contaminated. He is not a leper. He is still Magic Johnson, still your friend, so go ahead, be yourself, shake his hand, pat his back, have him hug your child.

"Go ahead and ask: 'How are you Magic?' Because he will say that he is fine. And then he will ask how you are. Because that, too, is what makes him Magic Johnson."

Mike Downey
The Los Angeles Times

AIDS came home to our neighborhood today. Mine and yours.

It pulled up a chair, sat down in our midst and began shaking hands, as if it belonged there, as if it wasn't wearing the dark hood and death mask of the grim reaper. As if — and this is the scary part — it was an old friend, come to pay its respects.

Jim Reeves
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

There is a line I read once about Rock Hudson's death from AIDS. I don't remember who wrote it, or where it was, but the line went like this: Now everybody knows somebody with AIDS.

And now everybody knows someone who has tested positive. And maybe that was the only positive yesterday. Maybe the fight against AIDS puts a champion, as much champion as there has ever been in American sport, at the point now.

Mike Lupica
New York Daily News

The first telephone call came around 4 p.m.

"Did you hear about Magic?" a friend asked.

"What about him?" I said.

"He has AIDS. He's going to retire ..."

I can't recall the rest of the conversation, as I was no longer paying attention. I felt the same stunned reaction that I remembered having 28 years before, when I was in a seventh-period math class, and word of John Kennedy's assassination spread throught the school like a bad dream.

Tony Kornheiser
The Washington Post

... In a sports age when prima donnas reign, Magic, who was to earn $3.1 million from the Lakers this season, is a human being. He restores sports fans' faith in athletics. ...

Kevin Blackistone
The Dallas Morning News

Johnson was incredible yesterday, his poise breathtaking, his humor poignant, his message clear.

You can run but you cannot hide from this deadly killer. No one is immune, regardless of race, creed, bankroll, crammed trophy case.

It is winnin' time, and we are lucky to have Magic Johnson on our side.

Stan Hochman
Philadelphia Daily News

The first reaction was to close your eyes and try to see its perfection one more time, to remember exactly how the smile looked before the light went out of it. Before Magic Johnson found out how much closer he is to the end than the beginning.

He was smiling bravely Thursday when he unburdened himself of that great and terrible secret of our times, and he was smiling again a few minutes later when someone asked him whether he was scared. It figured. But the confusion peeking out from behind the words he struggled to bring forth said otherwise.

Jim Litke
The Associated Press

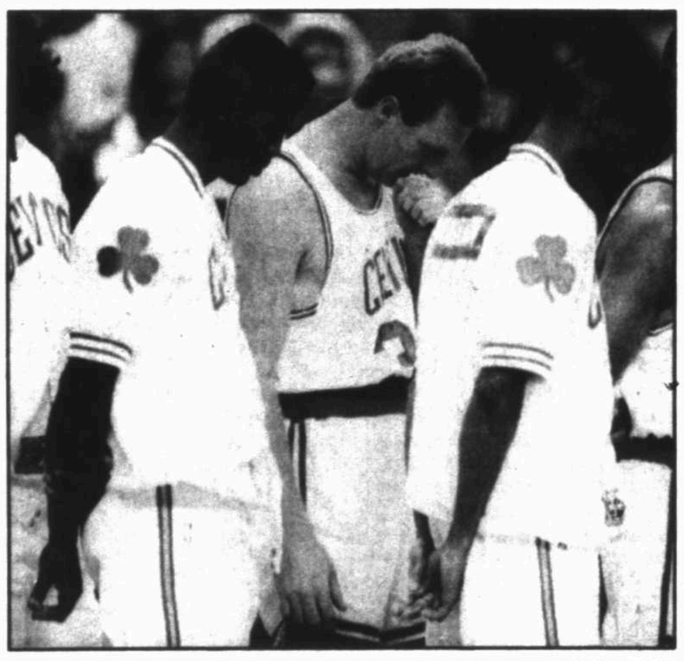

... Thursday's news was the most shocking and unsettling from the sports world in my lifetime. A friend called to say she'll never forget where she was when she heard about Kennedy and about Magic. That's how big Earvin Johnson is.

That's how important he now can become. ...

Skip Bayless
Dallas Times Herald

What Magic did for the rise of the NBA to prominence maybe he can do for the cure of AIDS. In his tragedy there could be light. As he said: "It can happen to anyone. It happened to me."

Denver Post

Magic 'could live 12 to 14 years'

AIDS activist, however, paints a grimmer picture

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson faced cameras and told the world he was infected by the AIDS virus. Now he confronts uncertainty.

The Los Angeles Lakers superstar "could live 12 or 14 years, God willing. If he were very unlucky, then ... five or six years," said Dr. Michael Gottlieb, the doctor who in 1981 wrote the first report on the disease now called AIDS.

"It's a tough road ahead for anybody with this virus," Gottlieb said Friday. "It's a holding action for Magic Johnson, and the world will be watching."

Johnson announced Thursday that he has become infected by the AIDS virus but hasn't yet developed any symptoms of the disease or started taking medications for it.

Infection with the AIDS virus is widely viewed as a death sentence, although some doctors contend it is becoming a manageable, chronic disease in which symptoms and ultimate death can be delayed for years as better drugs become available.

"That's malarkey. It's not a manageable disease now or in the foreseeable future," said writer Larry Kramer, the AIDS-infected founder of ACT-UP, the militant AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power.

"Magic Johnson is going to die and the 40 million people (worldwide) who are predicted to be infected by the year 2000 are going to die. This is a lethal, virulent, exceedingly messy disease," Kramer said Friday by phone from New York.

Gottlieb, who has treated scores of AIDS patients — including the late actor Rock Hudson — agreed AIDS isn't yet manageable, but expressed optimism that "if we can step up the pace of drug research, there may be something that will save Magic and other people with the virus."

People infected with the AIDS virus remain free of any symptoms for an average of seven years, and take an average of 10 or 11 years to develop full-fledged AIDS, Gottlieb said.

He said the time between infection and development of AIDS can be as long as 14 years or short as two or three years, although it was only one year for a patient who got a huge dose of the virus from a tainted blood transfusion.

Once a person develops full-fledged AIDS, death is likely within a few years, said Gottlieb, who made history on June 5, 1981, when the government published his report on the discovery of a mysterious new ailment he observed in five homosexual men.

Johnson "is likely to be healthy for a while," the physician said. "He's likely to face monitoring of his immune system with tests at intervals of three months."

When Johnson's critical immune system white blood cells — called helper T-cells — start being depleted by the AIDS virus, doctors likely will prescribe the antiviral drug AZT to slow the development of full-fledged AIDS.

As AIDS causes further damage to Johnson's immune system, his doctors probably will prescribe antibiotics in an attempt to prevent him from getting pneumocystis pneumonia and other "opportunistic infections" that ultimately kill AIDS patients.

Gottlieb said Johnson's positive psychological outlook might help him live longer, although science hasn't yet proven that mental attitude affects the course of AIDS.

Lakers have trouble keeping minds on game

Associated Press

PHOENIX — The Los Angeles Lakers played Friday night, but their hearts clearly weren't in it.

A day after Magic Johnson — their leader, their heart and their soul — announced he had tested positive for the AIDS virus and was retiring, the Lakers fell to the Phoenix Suns 113-85.

The Lakers, who fell behind for good in the opening two minutes, missed their first five shots, 14 of their first 16 and 18 of their first 24.

The Suns led 60-46 at halftime and the Lakers got no cloer than 14 points after that.

Jeff Hornacek led the Suns with 22 points, and Dan Majerle scored 17. Terry Teagle led the Lakers with 19 points and Byron Scott had 16.

The concentration just wasn't there for the Lakers, but who could blame them?

James Worthy, the Lakers' leading scorer, missed his first nine shots before finally scoring early in the second quarter.

Worthy was 1-for-14 before making his final two shots of the first half, and he finished with 14 points, hitting four of 22 shots. As a team, the Lakers were 18-for-53 while the Suns were 26-for-48.

It was 87-66 and the Lakers were 26-for-77 entering the final 12 minutes.

It was no contest. And that was no surprise.

Shortly before the game in a somber dressing room, several Lakers admitted that playing wasn't something they were eager to do.

"There's no other alternative," coach Mike Dunleavy said. "We'll come out and we'll play."

"We're playing because the schedule has us on the ticket," Worthy said. "Nobody wants to do it, but we we have to do it. It's not easy. You can't run away from it, though."

"You can face circumstances of the nature of one more loss and you're not champions," A.C. Green said. "This is a different kind of emotional thing, an even greater challenge for us as a team. But I think we can meet it. We can't run, we can't hide from it."

76ers 126, Warriors 116

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley had 31 points and 15 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers rallied in the fourth quarter to hand the Golden State Warriors their first defeat of the season.

Tim Hardaway matched his career high with 40 points as the Warriors fell short of winning their first four games on the road, a feat not accomplished by the team since the 1972-73 season. At 4-0, Golden State had been the last undefeated NBA team this season.

Hawks 100, Celtics 95

BOSTON — Dominique Wilkins scored 36 points, including an insurance basket with 30 seconds to play, as the Atlanta Hawks rallied for a victory over the Boston Celtics.

The Hawks fought back from 17 points down in the first quarter to trail 60-54 at the half and 80-74 after three periods.

Bulls 103, Mavericks 99

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 26 points and Scottie Pippen 23 as the Chicago Bulls defeated the Dallas Mavericks for the seventh straight time.

The Bulls took an 84-65 lead into the fourth quarter before Randy White led a 13-2 rally with eight consecutive points, closing the Mavericks to 86-78 midway through the period. But that was the closest they got.

Spurs 107, Cavaliers 101, OT

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson led San Antonio on an 8-0 run in overtime that lifted the Spurs past Cleveland.

The Spurs were trailing 99-97 in overtime, but Robinson hit a field goal and four free throws as San Antonio took a 105-99 lead, putting the game out of reach. Robinson led all scorers with 31 points.

Trail Blazers 121, Pacers 96

PORTLAND, Ore. — Terry Porter scored 20 points, all in the first half, and backup point guard Robert Pack ignited a third-quarter surge that lifted the Portland Trail Blazers over the Indiana Pacers.

Jordan says he'll join Magic in AIDS education

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan said Friday he will join his friend Magic Johnson in helping to educate Americans about AIDS.

"He said yesterday that he's going to be a spokesman for the HIV virus and try to tell kids that it can happen to anyone," Jordan said at an afternoon news conference. "And as a friend of his and a player in the NBA, I think I'm obligated as much as he is to do the same."

Softspoken and subdued, Jordan talked about the revelation that his friend and NBA rival had tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS. He said Johnson called him on his car phone to tell him the news.

"I'm almost driving off the road because I couldn't handle it as well as he could," the Chicago Bulls superstar said.

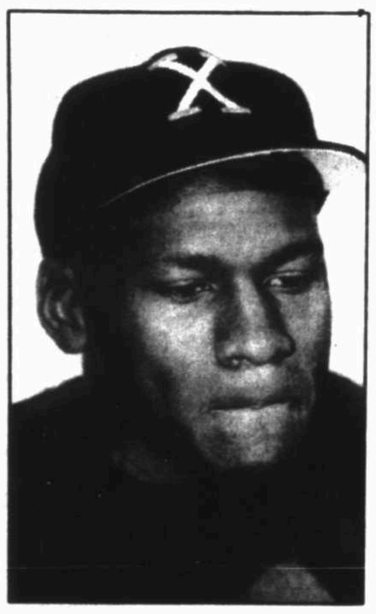

"I told him that I loved him and my family's with him and whatever we can do, we're willing to do that."

Johnson told Jordan the best thing he could do would be to help spread the message that AIDS can strike anyone, not just gay men or drug abusers.

"I think this is something that we all should step forward and try to utilize our position as role models to try to solve the problem or make the awareness of the problem even greater," Jordan said. "I think this is an alarm clock for a lot of people."

It was certainly a wake-up call for Jordan, who has been a friend of Magic's for years. The two played hard against each other in last season's NBA championships, and were scheduled to be teammates on the 1992 U.S. Olympic basketball team. Michael and Magic also kept in touch during the off season, helping each other with their charitable efforts.

"One thing that really bothered me about watching Magic retire yesterday was that he retired under these circumstances," Jordan said. "He didn't get the going away party that he deserved. That was sad."

Anderson signs but coach unhappy

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey coach Bill Fitch said Friday the Nets' owners paid too much and meddled more than needed to get Kenny Anderson signed to a contract that may have hurt the team more than it helped.

Fitch didn't hide his displeasure with the Nets ownership at a news conference that was supposed to welcome the No. 2 pick in the NBA draft to the team.

The flashy point guard from George Tech signed a five-year, $14.5 million contract in which all the money is guaranteed.

However, the deal left the Nets over the NBA salary cap and the owners ordered general manager Willis Reed to waive center Dave Feitl and second-year forward Jud Buechler to make room. That left the Nets with 11 players, one under the NBA limit.

Four other Nets — Tate George, Chris Dudley, Sam Bowie and the retired Roy Hinson — all had to agree to defer salary from this year to sometime in the future.

It left a lot of people unhappy, with Fitch venting his frustration to most.

"I stand on what I said, the system stinks," Fitch said. "It absolutely stinks that here we are after going through training camp what we have to give to get a great player like this in terms of a Jud Buecheler being gone and a Dave Feitl being gone."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Romance will be a dominant theme. Be careful not to risk a meaningful, lasting relationship over a temporary infatuation! Early in 1992, partnerships will produce better results and profits than in the past. Look forward to marked improvement in an employment situation by next spring. Your active mind leads you to continually seek newer and bigger challenges. Travel is favored in August. Keep costs down by planning ahead.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: folksinger Mary Travers, astronomer Carl Sagan, actor Lou Ferrigno, golfer Tom Weiskopf.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A large cast of characters may get into the act when it comes to deciding your weekend schedule. Skip a social event if it becomes too complicated or crowded. Find your own fun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get a glimpse into the future today. Make plans for an auspicious new beginning. Your outgoing personality wins you many admirers. Check someone's references before making a job offer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your special ties to a group or individual bring you new benefits now. Joint financial decisions are easy to make. Be on the lookout for bargains. Spend a cozy evening at home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Group gatherings enjoy highly favorable influences this weekend. Close marital and family ties provide warm, loving reassurance. Evening hours favor unusual entertainment. Examine your dreams for clues as to what you should do next.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could experience a true meeting of the minds when negotiating a joint business venture. Share your new ideas with others. A love for books draws you and a relative closer together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could run into someone from your past this weekend. Try not to get involved in family arguments. Spend your time and energy on projects that you truly believe in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A hope or dream receives special attention today. Matters concerning your privacy merit everyone's notice. Find a quiet place to relax with a good book.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A mystery is cleared up early today; its solution will please you. Your faith in someone is restored. Enjoy the peaceful atmosphere of an out-of-the-way place. Romance deepens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You and your loved ones receive special benefits now because of something you did long ago. Compromise with your mate over weekend social plans. More togetherness will lead to deeper rapport.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great weekend for romance, trips and social events. For a good time, get in touch with old friends. Devote special attention to your personal appearance if going out tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day for phoning or writing people in faraway places. An influential person may be hard to please. Be prepared for last-minute changes. Complete pending projects.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An older relative may need some advice. Concentrate on projects you can handle alone today, and look for ways to reduce household expenses. A good evening to relax and unwind at home.

Robin Williams faces lawsuit over ex-lover's herpes claim

SAN FRANCISCO — The judge in a $6.2 million lawsuit against comedian Robin Williams is allowing a Los Angeles woman to go to trial on her claim that Williams gave her herpes in 1982.

San Francisco Superior Court Judge William Cahill denied Williams' request Thursday to dismiss the case filed against him five years ago by ex-lover Michelle Tish Carter, 28.

Williams' attorney, Philip Ryan, said Williams would appeal the decision.

"This places Williams in an awkward situation because he is such a public personality," Ryan said.

Carter claims she contracted the disease in late 1985, more than a year after she and Williams started dating. She said he told her he had caught the sexually transmitted disease in high school.

But Williams has countersued Carter for extortion and claims she took herpes tests in 1986 but they were negative.

Williams' lawsuit claims that when he tried to end the relationship later that year, she falsely claimed to be pregnant and threatened to tell the public unless he gave her $20,000 and a new car.

A trial has been scheduled for January 13.

CHICAGO — Proclaiming "I can sing," Woody Harrelson said he'll perform Saturday at a club with his 10-piece band.

"But I think it's understandable that there's skepticism in general about actors turned singers," said Harrelson, who portrays naive bartender Woody Boyd on the popular NBC show "Cheers."

"That's one reason I waited so long to go out on the road with my band. I was nervous about what people would say and think. Finally, I realized that the time was right for me to just forget all about that and do it," he said in an interview Thursday.

Harrelson, 30, and his band will appear at the China Club.

• • •

SALT LAKE CITY — Gov. Norm Bangerter hopes Burt Reynolds will portray him in a movie about a 1988 polygamist standoff.

A casting agent for NBC recently called the governor to ask if he would be interested in playing himself in the made-for-television movie.

Bangerter

"We had a chance to review that script and felt we would probably pass," said Bangerter spokeswoman Francine Giani. "He was recommending that Burt Reynolds play him."

Giani said that from the script, it appeared the movie will be a "pretty accurate" portrayal of a polygamist clan's 13-day standoff that began in Marion with the bombing of a Mormon meeting house and ended in a shootout that left a law officer killed.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lionel Richie says he never plagiarized other songwriters and copyright lawsuits have become part and parcel of the music industry.

"When you get a couple of hit records, someone's going to come along and file a suit," Richie testified Thursday in U.S. District Court. "It's pretty much predictable that something's going to surface."

Richie

The pop singer's testimony came in a suit filed by Tracey Singleton and Gene Thompson that claims parts of Richie's "Deep River Woman," "Stuck On You" and "Sela" were copied from two songs they cowrote.

They claim their taped compositions were given by the late Benny Ashburn to Richie when Richie was a member of the Commodores. Ashburn was the band manager.

Richie's lawyer, Alan Isaacman, asked Richie on the stand if he ever copied Singleton's or Thompson's work. Richie replied: "Absolutely not."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stores are dreaming up slogans to go with Imelda Marcos' shoes.

The former Philippine first lady said last month that she would auction off her collection of 1,200 pairs and the Philippine consul general in New York has been getting calls from people who want to bid on them.

"We figured if we could score some of Imelda's shoes, we could do a great TV ad," said Mark Jubelirer, vice president of Reyers, a Sharon, Pa., shoe store.

Jubelirer said he was kicking around ideas for a slogan like, "If you don't own as many shoes as Imelda does, you're doing something wrong."

Tambi Wycoco, information officer for the Philippines consulate in Manhattan, said he has received more than a dozen calls from people interested in bidding on the shoes.

The auction hasn't been scheduled.

Greenwood runs into hungry pack of Wolves

By Doug Stewart
MRT Correspondent

GREENWOOD — The Colorado City Wolves rode a powerful ground attack to a 25-7 victory over Greenwood in the final week of District 6-3A action Friday night.

Both teams had endured a season where they played solid football at times, but wound up on the wrong end of the scoreboard more often than not. The loss dropped the Rangers to last in the district at 1-4, 4-6 overall, with their only district win coming over top seed Reagan County. Colorado City improved to 1-3-1, 3-6-1.

Colorado City running backs Kevin Green and Chris Williams combined to pierce the Greenwood defense for 290 yards. Green blasted the Rangers for 186 yards on 26 carries as Williams chipped in for 104 yards, including runs of 48 and 30 on a five-play, 98-yard first quarter drive.

Greenwood put together several drives itself, often with assistance from the Colorado City defense that committed three personal fouls to keep Ranger drives alive. Colorado City was punished 10 times in all for a total of 100 yards.

The Rangers tallied 20 first downs and 262 yards in total offense, yet could penetrate the goal line just once. Accumulating big yardage on offense with little to show for it in the win column was the story for Greenwood Ranger football this year.

"Mentally it was a tough year for the kids," said Ranger head coach Bob Purser. "We beat Reagan County and had a chance to really be good this year, but we lost a couple tough games and we just couldn't recover."

Ranger fullback Joe Kilgore rushed for 71 yards on 16 carries and Eric Clutter contributed with 42 yards, but the ground game would belong to Green and Williams as they constantly benefited from huge holes provided by the Wolves' quick offensive line. Both Colorado City backs exhibited power and speed that made them all too difficult to tackle in the open field.

"We really wanted to move the ball on the ground and mix in the pass a little bit," commented Colorado City head coach Tom Ramsey.

When he did opt for the air his son, quarterback Kelly Ramsey, obliged to complete 5-of-8 passing for 95 yards and two TD's. His last effort was a 34-yard touchdown toss to Mark Monroe on a fourth down and two in the final quarter.

"Greenwood has a good football program and had the same up-and-down type year we did. We had to handle some adversity tonight and managed to come out on top," said the elder Ramsey.

In a season of adversity for the two teams, Colorado City faired better as they fumbled the ball on four seperate occasions but managed to recover their muff all four times. "We were able to execute on some big plays and the breaks went our way," added coach Ramsey.

Sherman Dedrick (25) races past San Angelo defender Richard Barron. Dedrick rushed for 119 yards and a touchdown for Midland Lee Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

LEE: Big victory to be forgotten quickly

(From 1B)

Lee quarterback Jimmy Patton said of the 80-yard winning drive, "After we started moving the ball, our attitude kept climbing. We knew we had to score and our line just dominated that series of plays," Patton said.

San Angelo coach Dan Gandy saw the Lee drive as part of why Lee is tough to beat.

"We have an explosive offense and felt we could come back after we were down by 21," Gandy said. "But the way you beat Lee is not to let them control the ball on you, and we didn't do a good job of not letting that happen. That got what they needed when they had to. They're a great team and I hope they meet Permian in the quarterfinals again. I really feel after this game that this district has three great teams."

For the first time this year, Lee put two players over the 100-yard mark. Dedrick, a junior, had 119 yards rushing while senior Sullivan had 122 yards.

Morenz had 244 passing yards while Lee rolled out 365 rushing yards to go with an awesome 25 ball control first downs.

Lee coach Earl Miller was thrilled with the outcome.

"The kids really played hard," Miller said. "I still believe that Morenz is a great quarterback and he showed it. However, we showed a new defense with a five-man front and rushed three or four people. I think we had him confused for awhile.

"But he came back and we're going to have to watch that if we're going to go very far in the playoffs. You get a team down like we did, you can't let them back up. It'll cost you. Still, we played a good game. We just need to forget it right now and start thinking about the playoffs. As soon as you figure out who we play, let me know? I don't think anyone can figure it out."

Coach, just show up Saturday in Amarillo. Someone will be there to play against you.

Permian finishes regular season 10-0

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Odessa Permian Panthers completed a perfect regular season with a 35-18 win over the Abilene Cooper Cougars, despite a shaky start in District 4-5A action here Friday.

Cooper, 4-6 and 2-4, burst to a 12-0 first quarter lead before Permian. 10-0 and 6-0, scored 35 unanswered points behind the running of Malcolm Hamilton and John Williams — and the passing of Stormy Case.

Hamilton ran for 111 yards and two touchdowns on 10 carries, while Williams ran for 108 yards and one score on only eight trips. Case completed eight of 15 passes for 167 yards, including TD passes to Hamilton and Kendrick Parrett that — combined with two Shane Wells extra points — gave the Panthers the lead in the second quarter.

Permian put the game away in the fourth quarter on Hamilton's 5-yard run and Williams' 33-yard burst.

Cooper added a meaningless touchdown on a 28-yard pass play from Deric Neal to Tony Tate. Starting Cooper quarterback Jason St. Pierre completed nine of 17 passes for 119 yards, but Permian held the hosts to 47 rushing yards on 35 tries.

Permian plays a District 3-5A representative in the bi-district playoffs next week.

Bronchos end year with winning mark

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Odessa High Bronchos clinched a winning record with a 26-19 win over the Abilene High Eagles in the season finale for both teams here Friday.

OHS finished with a 6-4 overall mark and 3-3 District 4-5A record in Bill Barron's first season as head coach. AHS ended at 1-8 and 1-5. The Eagles' only win was against winless Midland High.

Davorick Taylor rushed for two touchdowns and Brad Givens another while Cody Allison kicked two field goals.

Abilene had the game tied at 6-6 before the Bronchos 20 consecutive points for the victory.

OHS had 266 yards rushing and 91 passing while AHS had 194 rushing and 105 passing.

U.S. skater takes first place into finals

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) — World champion Kristi Yamaguchi of the United States was in first place going into today's final round of the Lalique Trophy figure skating competition.

Yamaguchi on Friday won the original portion, which started the women's competition. She performed her routine to the waltz "Blue Danube."

Midori Ito of Japan, the 1989 world champion, was second. She missed a difficult jump combination, putting her slightly behind Yamaguchi after the origianl portion, which counts for one-third of the total mark.

American Nancy Kerrigan was third. She finished third behind Yamaguchi and American champion Tonya Harding in the World Championships at Munich last March.

In the men's event, the Soviet Union's Viacheslav Zagorodniuk took the lead over three-time world men's champion Kurt Browning of Canada.

Browning showed the effects of a back problem as he faltered on two jump elements in the original program.

STEERS: Every game sudden death starting with Monahans

(From 1B)

Andrews, having downed Sweetwater 13-10, came in at plus 3. That's why a 12-point Big Spring win would have brought each team to minus 9 and given the Steers the head-to-head win.

And when the Mustangs used Eric Langehenning field goals of 31 and 37 yards and a 22-yard touchdown jaunt by Bo Haigood to burst out in front 12-0 in the second quarter, Big Spring suddenly needed to score 24 points just to stay in the playoff hunt.

So, with the kind of calm that comes from knowing how to win, the Steers put the next 28 digits on the board, gave Andrews a last-minute safety and walked away with what amounts to a 2-0 triumph.

"We knew we could score on them, we just had to get it together," said tailback Pat Chavarria, who put Big Spring back in the game with a one-yard TD run with less than a minute to play in the first half. The play capped a drive keyed by Gerald Cobos' 50-yard heave to Oscar Cervantes and brought the Steers to within 12-8.

Cobos led the Steer attack with a 10-of-17 passing performance that was good for 204 yards passing. All Chavarria did was score on the one-yard dive, a three-yard burst and six-yard flip from Cobos. He also passed for a critical two-point conversion, hitting Pat Martinez, and later was the one to haul the ball out of the end zone with 21 seconds left to give Andrews a two-point safety and ultimately the loss.

And still, one more Langehenning field goal on Andrews last possession and the Steers' would have come away with a one-point win which would have meant a loss.

"We were aware of that and we were trying to get it within the youngster's range," said Andrews coach W.T. Stapler, whose Mustangs took over for the final time at the Steers' 41-yard line and 14 seconds to play.

"But you can't take anything away from Big Spring because they did what they had to do. I may have made a mistake taking the wind in the third quarter. I usually like to take it in the fourth," he said.

Bearkats overcome turnovers in 30-9 win

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

GARDEN CITY — Garden City coach Sam Scott was not exactly a happy camper Friday night, despite his team winning 30-9 over the Roby Lions in a District 9-A contest.

Had the Lions had any snarl to their offense, and if they could've converted five other Garden City turnovers into points, the 8-1, 4-1, Bearkats would be in jeopardy of making the playoffs today.

After all, Roby entered the game with a 6-2 mark, having lost both games in loop play.

"If our defense doesn't show up to play, we would've been in deep trouble tonight," said Scott.

"In four years this is the first time that one of my teams has not been mentally prepared to play a football game," he added.

And boy, Scott was not kidding. The Bearkat offense, which usually piles up the points from the opening gun, failed to score in the first quarter for the first time this season.

It almost didn't score in the first half. On their first possession of the game, the Bearkats fumbled the ball at midfield. On their next possession, quarterback Shae Scott was intercepted at midfield.

Garden City was flatter than Highway 158 leading into town. Its third possession of the game, however, showed some promise. Beginning at their 16, the Bearkats drove 78 yards to the Roby six.

There the drive stalled thanks in part to a motion penalty. Then on fourth and goal, Scott found his brother Jim Bob Scott in the corner of the end zone, but the official ruled the catch out of bounds, and the Bearkats turned the ball over on downs.

While the offense was taking the night off, the defense couldn't afford to.

The defense held Roby to minus 17 yards of total offense. The Lions had minus 45 yards rushing. Their plus 28 yardage came through the air.

The Bearkats finally did score at 4:37 of the second period when Jody Bradford capped off a 33-yard drive with a six-yard touchdown run.

One possession later, Bradford scored his second TD of the game on a one-yard plunge to finish off a 49-yard scoring march with 1:42 left in the second quarter and a 14-0 lead.

But with eight seconds before the half, the Bearkats got the ball back on an interception at their own five. Instead of running out the clock, Garden City ran a play and fumbled the ball and Roby recovered it at the four.

Roby did not fool around. Placekicker Ralph Amador kicked a 17 yard field goal as the half ended.

The Bearkats seemed intent on self-destructing in the second half too. After scoring on touchdown passes of three and six yards respectively, the Bearkat offense fumbled twice and was picked off two times as well.

On one pickoff, Roby defensive lineman Joe Don Helm willed his 245 pound frame to go 65 yards for the Lions' lone touchdown.

For on this night, Garden City looked like the 106th-ranked team in the state instead of the No. 6 team in Class A.

Garden City, finishes the regular season at Sterling City next Friday.

Eldorado blanks Stanton Buffs

Staff Report

ELDORADO — The Eldorado Eagles used superior speed to end the Stanton Buffaloes' season on a sour note, 39-0, in the season finale for both District 5-2A teams here Friday.

For Stanton, the end came none too soon, as the Buffs finished 1-9 overall and 1-5 in district play. Eldorado will sit out the playoffs despite a 7-2-1 overall mark, because the Eagles lost to both Wall and Iraan during district play.

Eldorado's Reagan Bownds had two touchdown plays for more than 50 yards, including a 65-yard punt return in the first quarter that was all the Eagles needed to win.

Stanton drove to the Eldorado 1 in the third quarter, but the Buffs fumbled at that point and Eagle quarterback Cy Griffin subsequently ran 95-yard touchdown.

On the bright side for Stanton, tailbacks Jim Bob Kelly and Ricky Lucas combined for more than 170 yards. Kelly finished the season with 848 yards after running 20 times for 90 yards, while sophomore Lucas had 61 yards in 10 trips.

Tors struggle once again

Staff Report

SNYDER — The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes completed a winless District 2-4A season with a 33-7 loss to the playoff-bound Snyder Tigers here Friday.

The Tors, 2-6-2 and 0-6, scored first on Sparky Clark's 2-yard runm with 5:32 left in the first quarter. But Snyder, 7-3 and 4-1, tied the game on Mark King's 4-yard run late in the first quarter, and pulled ahead when Wayland Harrison plunged over from the two on the first play of the second quarter.

Snyder put the game away with three touchdowns in less than five minutes of the third quarter on runs by Harrison, Gilbert Orosco and Michael Fields. The Tigers face Pampa in bi-district playoff action next week.

Mustangs ride tall, 50-0

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Christian Mustangs again finished early in a 50-0 stomping of Abilene Christian High School in the regular season finale for both teams here Friday.

MCS, 9-1 and ranked No. 1 in the state Texas Association of Private and Parochial School six-man rankings, was never seriously challenged and the game ended midway through the third quarter on Kyle Jackson's 76-yard run.

Drew Akins scored two touchdowns for the Mustangs, while Andy Awtry threw two TD passes and ran for another score.

The Mustangs will find out their opening-round playoff opponent when the TAPPS Executive Board meets Sunday to determine playoff seedings.

Weary AD retires

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV, already in the market for a basketball coach, now needs an athletic director as well.

Interim AD Dennis Finfrock, saying he was weary of "the continued bombardment" from supporters of basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian, resigned Friday and withdrew from consideration for the permanent job.

Finfrock, who many Tarkanian supporters allege was part of a conspiracy to oust the coach, quit amid the latest furor caused by the secret videotaping of a conditioning class.

Monica, Martina advance

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Monica Seles and second-seeded Martina Navratilova appear headed for another showdown after both easily advanced to the semifinals of the Virginia Slims of California on Friday.

The 17-year-old Seles, who beat Navratilova in last year's final, sidelined Linda Harvey-Wild of Hawthorn Woods, Ill., 6-0, 6-2, in a 43-minute match featuring her unrelenting power from the baseline. By contrast, the 35-year-old Navratilova, a resident of Aspen, Colo., used a clever serve and impressive volleying to beat hard-hitting Mary Pierce of France 6-2, 6-2 in 57 minutes.

Also advancing to the semifinals were No. 3 seed Manuela Maleeva-Fragriere, who beat seventh-seeded Amy Frazier of Rochester Hills, Mich., 6-3, 6-2, and No. 6 Lori McNeil, who ended the upset ways of Stephanie Rehe of Oceanside, Calif., 7-6 (7-2), 6-2.

Navratilova, a four-time winner here, this year lost to Seles in the finals of the U.S. Open.

O'Neal accuses Duke of lying

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal on Friday accused David Duke of twisting a statement LSU's star basketball player reportedly made regarding Duke's candidacy for governor.

The disagreement started Thursday when WAFB-TV in Baton Rouge asked Duke about allegations that he would harm LSU's chances of recruiting black athletes if he is elected governor.

Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader, said on the television broadcast: "Shaquille O'Neal on the LSU basketball team said my being governor wouldn't affect the state at all. He said unless I was perhaps the coach."

According to LSU, O'Neal stated in a Nov. 2 issue of Tiger Rag magazine: "I'm not into politics. I looked at LSU as a school when I came here. Now if David Duke were the coach and trying to recruit me, I'd have told him to take a hike."

In a statement issued through the school on Friday, O'Neal said: "Webster's Dictionary defines a lie as 'to make an untrue statement with intent to deceive.' That's what happened. I resent it totally. People would do anything to get a vote. But I want the fans and the people in the community to know I'm no Uncle Tom."

Umpire trial begins in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A jury heard began deliberations Friday night in the trial of a Dallas man accused of aggravated robbery in which a major league umpire was shot.

Army Pvt. Kevin Bivins, who was stationed at Fort Hood in Killeen, admitted Thursday that he shot American League umpire Steve Palermo and former Southern Methodist University football player Terence Mann after Mann opened fire.

"I was prepared to fight," Bivins said, adding that he believed Mann pulled a gun from his pants.

Bivins is accused of taking part in a July purse-snatching in front of Campisi's Egyptian Restaurant in Dallas. Palermo, Mann and other people began chasing the suspects when they heard the cries for help.

Dykes jokingly questions sanity of grid pundits

Associated Press

SWC Roundup

Despite its 3-5 record, the oddsmakers give Texas Tech the nod to hand Arkansas its second straight Southwest Conference loss Saturday.

Red Raider coach Spike Dykes questioned their logic.

"That must have come from an insane asylum," Dykes said. "They're never right anyway, so I'm not going to worry about that."

Arkansas (5-3, 4-1) suffered its first SWC loss 9-5 to Baylor a week ago and will challenge Tech (3-5, 2-3) in Lubbock with reserve quarterback Wade Hill, who is replacing injured Jason Allen.

The Raiders are favored by 4½ points.

In other games, the Rice Owls (3-5, 1-4) play at Southern Methodist (1-7, 0-6) and Texas (4-3, 3-1) plays at Houston (2-5, 1-4). Baylor (7-2, 4-2) has the week off.

Rice is a 9½-point favorite over Southern Methodist and Texas is a 2-point favorite against Houston.

Dykes worried about preparing for an unknown quarterback.

"I think you prepare for unknowns and you make mountains out of mole hills because you don't know what to expect," Dykes said. "It's like playing a team at the first of the season, you're playing in the dark."

Raider quarterback Robert Hall has replaced oft-injured Jamie Gill as the starter against the Hogs, but punter Mark Bounds continues to amaze Dykes.

"Mark is the durndest kicker I've ever seen," Dykes said. "I coached Russell Erxleben at Texas, but he isn't the punter Mark is."

Houston will try to get revenge for its only loss last season when it faces Texas in the Astrodome.

"Both of us hate each other," Houston safety Kenny Perry said. "We beat them three years in a row and that got to them. Then, they got us last year. There's definitely some animosity there."

Texas (4-3, 3-1) won last year's game 45-27 en route to the Cotton Bowl with a 10-1 record, while the Cougars (2-5, 1-3) also finished at 10-1 but could not play in a bowl game because it was on NCAA probation.

The Longhorns and Cougars have both struggled this season. Houston's run-and-shoot offense has been slowed by a lack of pass protection and the Longhorns have been unable to get an offense to match their defense.

"I think Houston is a much improved team," Texas coach David McWilliams said. "They spread you all over the field and another thing they've done is their running game with Tiandre Sanders.

"They are back to getting production out of their draw plays and their shovel pass, then faking those things and throwing off them."

Sanders has moved into the starting role after starter Ostell Miles was dismissed from the team for not attending class.

Texas quarterback Peter Gardere rallied the Longhorns in the second half last week to a victory over Texas Tech in another roller-coaster game for Texas.

"About the time you think maybe it's not going to happen, he gathers himself and takes us on 98-yard drive and from that point on played excellent," McWilliams said.

"When you get through with the game and look back at it, he's played well," he said.

Houston quarterback David Klingler needs one touchdown pass to become the SWC career leader with 76, surpassing former teammate Andre Ware, who has 75.

Rice, which started the season with hopes of posting its first winning season since 1963, must beat the Mustangs to keep those hopes alive. Rice is favored but Owls coach Fred Goldsmith disagrees.

"I think we should be the underdogs," Goldsmith said. "Our kids saw them soundly beat a Tulane team that we barely squeaked by and they saw the intensity they showed against Texas.

"Football players believe what they seen on film and they see this is a good football team."

CHAPS: MC, Angelina tip off tonight

(From 1B)

Green had hoped to install. MC dashed to a 60-41 half-time lead on the strength of Charles Sanders' three-point shooting.

Sanders was 4-of-5 from three-point range in the first half, as he and 6-9 Brazilian Ari Rodriques scored 12 points each in the first 20 minutes.

The second half, though, saw Murray guard Russell Ponds light up the scoreboard for 26 of his 36 points, pulling the Aggies (1-2) to within three points at 102-99 with 1:53 to go in the game.

MC staved off the flurry, however, by running down the clock when it got the ball. After Sanders missed a pair of free throws with 1:20 to play, it looked like Ponds might perform his magic again when he pulled up four feet left of the basket. The shot turned out to be one of his few second-half misses, though, and MC came down with the rebound to run the clock down to 33 seconds before calling a timeout.

Returning to the floor after the break, the Chaps fed the ball to Sanders — who had been held to five points in the second half. Sanders returned to his first-period form and hit the three-pointer that locked the game with :22 left.

"They had a great performance out of No. 32 (Ponds). Every time he got his head up to look at the basket it must have looked like the Gulf of Mexico to him. In the last four or five minutes we put Kelon Haynie on him.

"Kelon hasn't even practiced the past two days and I wasn't even sure if he'd play (because of a bruised thigh). But he's our best defensive guard, and that helped. I don't know how many points he (Ponds) scored down the stretch (four in the last five minutes), but it couldn't have been as many as before we put Kelon on him," Green said.

Sanders was MC's leading scorer with 20 points, and Rodriques scored 19. Chris McKinney came in with 16 for the Chaps, while Shawn Morris scored 12 and Morris Conley 11. Fabian Mina was a monster on the boards for MC, hauling down 14 of the Chaps' 44 rebounds, as MC doubled Murray's rebound total.

Starved boy ate from trash, says friend of parents

FORT WORTH (AP) — A teenager disciplined with chains and starvation once hid from his mother to eat burnt pancakes out of the garbage, a Fort Worth woman said Thursday.

Cynthia Tinney said she joked with the youngster's mother, Linda Hill, at the time, asking, "Don't you feed your kids?"

Mrs. Hill and her husband, Jay, have been charged with injury to a child. The White Settlement couple's 13-year-old son, Stephen, remains comatose in a Fort Worth hospital.

Police and doctors say 55-pound Stephen suffered cardiac arrest — and now a blood infection — brought on by at least six months' malnutrition. The couple is accused of chaining the teen-ager to a cabinet and depriving him of food as a punishment for hyperactivity.

Mrs. Tinney said that she didn't realize Stephen was starving on that visit to her house in 1989. Mrs. Tinney met the Hills at a Mormon church in Fort Worth.

The boy was not noticed eating the garbage-tossed pancakes until his younger brother Douglas pointed it out, she said. Douglas tugged at their mother and said, "Mom, he's doing it again."

Douglas, 12, has been placed in protective custody. A hearing next week will determine temporary custody for the brothers.

Mrs. Tinney said Thursday that the Hill boys always were polite but rigid when they visited her home. Mrs. Hill told her that Stephen had behavior problems and was "without conscious."

A caseworker with Child Protective Services called Mrs. Tinney after a neighbor of the Hills reported the mother screaming at her children. Mrs. Tinney defended her friend to the caseworker, she admitted.

"I did not tell her about the pancake incident because Linda had explained it to me, and I'd believed her," Mrs. Tinney said.

Mrs. Hill deceived her, she said.

Two Fort Worth teachers also claim to have reported the Hills to CPS several years ago when Douglas came to school with suspicious broken bones and bruises.

Department officials say they have no record of the teachers' concerns.

The brothers have not attended school since 1987, when Mrs. Hill began teaching them at home.

Police stepped into the case Sunday after Mrs. Hill called 911 to report that Stephen was having difficulty breathing. Paramedics found the bruised teen suffering a heart attack at the family's trailer home.

He was taken to Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center, where he remains on life support and in critical condition. Doctors report minimal brain activity.

Hill, a 42-year-old engineer at General Dynamics, and Mrs. Hill, a 37-year-old housewife, remain held on $100,000 bond each at Tarrant County Jail. Attorney Larry Moore was appointed Friday to represent them.

Mrs. Hill told police that she and her husband love Stephen. She has blamed his condition on society and poor parenting skills.

Bentsen predicts health care will be issue in campaign

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen predicted Friday voters will be considering the condition of the health care system when they cast ballots in next year's presidential election.

"I think one of the very major issues is going to be the question of the cost and the availability of health care to the people of this country," said Bentsen, D-Texas, who was in town to dedicate two buildings at the Texas Children's Hospital.

"We really have a health care crisis that's been developing."

Bentsen also criticized the Bush administration for not doing enough to ensure affordable health care.

"The administration has not addressed the health insurance problem and the availability and accessibility of health (care.) I think that has to be done now, I don't think that should be delayed until after the election," he said.

"I think the White House must step up to the responsibility and tell us what they would do in that regard," he said. "Hopefully, we can make it a bipartisan solution."

Bensten cosponsored legislation last month that included several proposals, including giving self-employed individuals a full and permanent tax deduction for health insurance premiums; expanding Medicare benefits to cover a number of preventive care services and prohibiting group health insurers from excluding new employees with pre-existing conditions for more than one six-month period.

During the Friday visit to the hospital in the Texas Medical Center, Bensten spoke at the dedication ceremony of the critical care and surgical building and the clinical care center. Later, he visited several young children in the hospital, including some with renal disease.

The two new buildings, which cover more than a million square feet, are part of the hospital's $149 million expansion project. With the completion of the project, the hospital is the largest free-standing pediatric hospital in the nation. There are more than 450 beds in the facility.

Bentsen said the hospital has treated more than a million children since it opened in 1954. In addition, more than 60 percent of the pediatricians in Texas have trained at there.

Although he said the United States has the best medicine in the world, there also are more than 30 million Americans without health insurance, including more than 7 million children.

"Those numbers translate into millions of Americans who just can't afford to get sick," he said, adding that many parents also are afraid to take their children to the hospital because they don't think they can afford it.

Last year, he noted, Texas Children's Hospital provided $47 million uncompensated care.

Water services difficult to extend to small rural subdivisions

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The approval of more colonia improvement funds has raised expectations that the water and sewage needs of those impoverished border communities finally will be met.

But while colonias in or near urban areas are relatively accessible to utility companies, smaller, rural subdivisions will be harder to serve, officials say.

Those communities are so far away from established water and sewer lines that often it won't be feasible to extend existing services, requiring special arrangements, said Frank Bejarano, program development and management director for Cameron County.

"Those are sort of unique cases that require unique solutions," he said.

The rural colonias with fewer residents would need their own sewage treatment plants, which would be very costly, Bejarano said. "The density is not sufficient enough to justify the expense of an individual treatment plant," he said.

'The density is not sufficient enough to justify the expense of an individual treatment plant.'

— Frank Bejarano

"We have to coordinate with various water and sewer providers," Bejarano said. "It's a matter of what those providers think they can serve. In many cases it is difficult to find an appropriate provider."

Often it's a question of several providers with an overlapping service area, said former county engineer Jack Brown, who has dealt with the colonia issue for years.

"In Cameron County there are some small areas where the question of who will provide the service is not clear," Brown said.

However, very few colonias will actually have problems hooking up with utilities and solutions are being sought for them, said Javier Parra, an executive committee member of the advocacy group Valley Interfaith.

"There are not that many," Parra said. "You're talking about less than 50 families (per colonia), small communities."

Cameron County has a higher concentration of those remote communities, although most of the colonias there usually have potable water. Colonias in Hidalgo County tend to be closer to towns and cities.

State attorney seeks school records for hospital investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — The state attorney general is seeking records of three Austin-area school districts after allegations that counselors were paid to refer students to private psychiatric hospitals, a newspaper reported Friday.

The Austin American-Statesman said the allegations represent the first Austin link to a psychiatric hospital investigation that has spread to six states.

In Texas, the attorney general and a special Senate committee are looking into allegations of some private psychiatric hospitals paying so-called "bounty hunters" to recruit patients, of holding patients against their will, and of bilking insurers and the state.

Authorities have been examining allegations that fees were paid to counselors in Grand Prairie, Arlington, San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley.

Gray McBride, a spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said civil investigative demands — similar to subpoenas — were delivered this week to the Austin, Round Rock and Pflugerville school districts, which have a combined total of almost 100,000 students.

The attorney general is seeking "documents on any activity having to do with the referral of students to psychiatric facilities," McBride said.

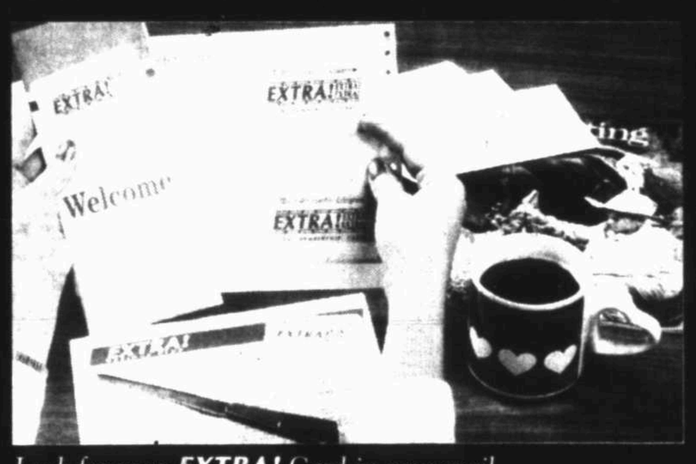

"We do have allegations involving school counselors, adult personnel who for compensation were referring students. We are investigating these allegations. We can't substantiate any of these allegations at this point. That's why we have asked for these records," McBride said.

"We're just gathering the material and cooperating with them," said Jim Hensley, Austin superintendent. He said he wasn't aware of any counselors receiving payments from psychiatric hospitals for referring students.

"I'm assuming they make those referrals, but not for a fee. I'm sure that violates our policies. It probably violates the law," he said.

Governor tells businesses to actively work for Texas

Gov. Ann Richards spoke at the luncheon for the Texas Research League 39th Annual Meeting Friday in Austin.

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards urged business leaders Friday to work with state government so Texas can take advantage of national and international economic opportunities.

"In the last few months, when we have tried to generate support of our efforts in Washington to do a number of truly important things ... it is very difficult to get the busy Texas business community to help do the work that needs to be done," Richards told a meeting of the Texas Research League.

The league, a non-profit educational corporation that analyzes Texas government, is supported by business contributions. Business leaders serve on its executive committee and board.

Richards cited such projects as protection of federal funding for the superconducting super collider.

'I am darned if I am going to stand by as governor of the state of Texas and watch us kid ourselves that we can continue to grow economically by cooking each other hamburgers and washing each other's hair.'

— Gov. Richards

"It's understandable that business people are concerned with daily work — keeping themselves afloat — or if they somehow feel that Washington is a hopeless case these days," she said.

"It's understandable, but it is unacceptable, because one of our most important tasks in the next few years is getting our fair share of the federal projects and the research grants that will help us become a national center for innovation, and will mean billions of dollars to the Texas economy," she said.

Attracting benefits of the "technological explosion" is particularly important because Texas must compete in an international marketplace, and it must do so with more than a service economy, she said.

"I am darned if I am going to stand by as governor of the state of Texas and watch us kid ourselves that we can continue to grow economically by cooking each other hamburgers and washing each other's hair," Richards said.

She also cited U.S. negotiations toward a free trade agreement with Mexico, saying Texas has an opportunity not only for increased trade but to focus the national government's attention on such needs as cleaning up border environmental problems.

"The business community in Texas must tell Washington that we have to have a treaty that is not only good foreign policy but good domestic policy as well," Richards said.

Time right for natural gas increase, Texas oilman says

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens said Friday his new mission is to convert as many as possible of the nation's 187 million motor vehicles from gasoline to natural gas.

"I've pitched a lot of things in my life, but natural gas as a transportation fuel is the easiest one yet," Pickens told an invitation-only Governor's Conference on Natural Gas.

The primary opposition will come from the major oil companies and the American Petroleum Institute with its massive lobbying budget, Pickens said.

He said he thinks one of the main reasons the nation has never adopted an energy policy is because "there are 40 nonproducing states and only 10 producing states." Those 40 states that have no petroleum production "are very suspicious of what we're up to" when such a program is advanced, he said.

Oklahoma Gov. David Walters, Kansas Gov. Joan Finney and the Texas Railroad Commission sponsored the conference, which was designed to discuss ways to promote compressed natural gas, or CNG, as the alternative motor vehicle fuel of the future.

Mrs. Finney told the conference that last month she had announced she had converted the governor's van and some Kansas state vehicles to CNG, following Oklahoma's lead.

"The race is on" to find the alternative fuel and natural gas would boost the economy of producing states, particularly in the rural areas, she said. She said that 40 percent of the people who work in the Kansas petroleum fields are in rural areas of the state.

Pickens, whose Mesa Limited Partnership recently announced it had purchased majority interest in a company that designs and produces natural gas engines, said other alternative fuels don't measure up to CNG.

"An electric car doesn't even deserve 30 seconds," Pickens said. "It's an interesting gadget and it's great for golf carts," but not for highway travel, Pickens said.

Methanol has problems, and ethanol "couldn't make it" even when it was subsidized, he said.

"Natural gas is clearly going to be the alternative fuel," Pickens said.

He warned that the United States once again is relying too heavily on imported oil, less than a year after the Persian Gulf war demonstrated how fragile that supply could be. More than half of the trade deficit goes to pay for imported oil, he said.

The United States must begin "substituting domestic energy for foreign oil," Pickens said.

While the U.S. has only 2.6 percent of the world's oil reserves, "we use 27 percent of the world's oil production," he said. At the same time, he said, we have roughly one-tenth of the world's natural gas reserves "and 92 percent of all the U.S. demand for natural gas is filled by American suppliers."

He said, however, he is concerned that natural gas is being depleted at a bargain price. He said that, based on the price of oil, natural gas should be bringing as much as $2.50 per thousand cubic feet. But Mesa received as little as $1 per thousand cubic feet this past summer, he said.

"Isn't it reasonable that Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana or Kansas producers receive as much for their energy as we pay Iraq, Kuwait, Iran or Saudi Arabia?" he asked.

Natural gas "is an American fuel, competing against a foreign fuel," Pickens said. "Natural gas is clean, not dirty" and its use "will reduce the trade deficit and create new jobs, especially in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Kansas."

While there were 15,000 oil spills in the U.S. in 1990, "natural gas won't cause an environmental disaster," Pickens said."

And, he said, "you can go twice as far on $10 worth of natural gas as you can on $10 worth of gasoline. I know. I've converted my own car to run on natural gas."

Pickens said that President Bush, who was in Texas on a fund-raising visit, came to his home and saw his natural gas car and the appliance used to fill it.

"I'm convinced the president walked away with a clear understanding of the benefits and convenience of this premium fuel," Pickens said.

Other speakers discussed programs in Canada that encouraged the conversion of motor vehicles to run on CNG and their companies' experiences in operating CNG vehicles.

Walters also discussed Oklahoma's program of offering 50 percent tax credits to anyone who converts a vehicle to run on CNG or adds a CNG fill station to a service station. The state also provides interest-free loans to counties and cities to convert their fleets to CNG, he said.

College president finalist withdraws; accuses trustees of racism

EL PASO (AP) — A finalist for the presidency of El Paso Community College told trustees he wants nothing to do with their school because their selection process has been racist and laced with hidden agendas.

"What they are doing is turning what should be a big-league institution into a bush-league joke," William J. Campion, president of Central Florida Community College, said Thursday.

Campion was the only white, non-Hispanic among the finalists. He said trustees of the El Paso college have a national reputation of being difficult to work with and he wondered why he was the only college president to make the list of finalists.

'I'd give my right arm to be there. But you've got to come under the right circumstances, not sell your soul.'

— William J. Campion

"A school the size and stature of El Paso Community College should have attracted CEOs (chief executive officers) throughout the country," he said.

El Paso Community College is a three-campus system, which has about 20,000 students.

Campion grew up in South El Paso. The two remaining finalists for the $100,000-a-year job are Hispanic. They are Leonardo de la Garza, executive vice president of Bee County College in South Texas, and Manuel G. Rivera, executive vice president of Milwaukee Area Technical College.

El Paso is about 70 percent Hispanic.

"I'd give my right arm to be there," Campion said. "But you've got to come under the right circumstances, not sell your soul."

Campion said it bothered him that two Hispanic trustees — Carlos Aguilar III and Gilbert Serna — did not visit his campus in Florida for reference checks. Four members of the board were scheduled to visit the campus.

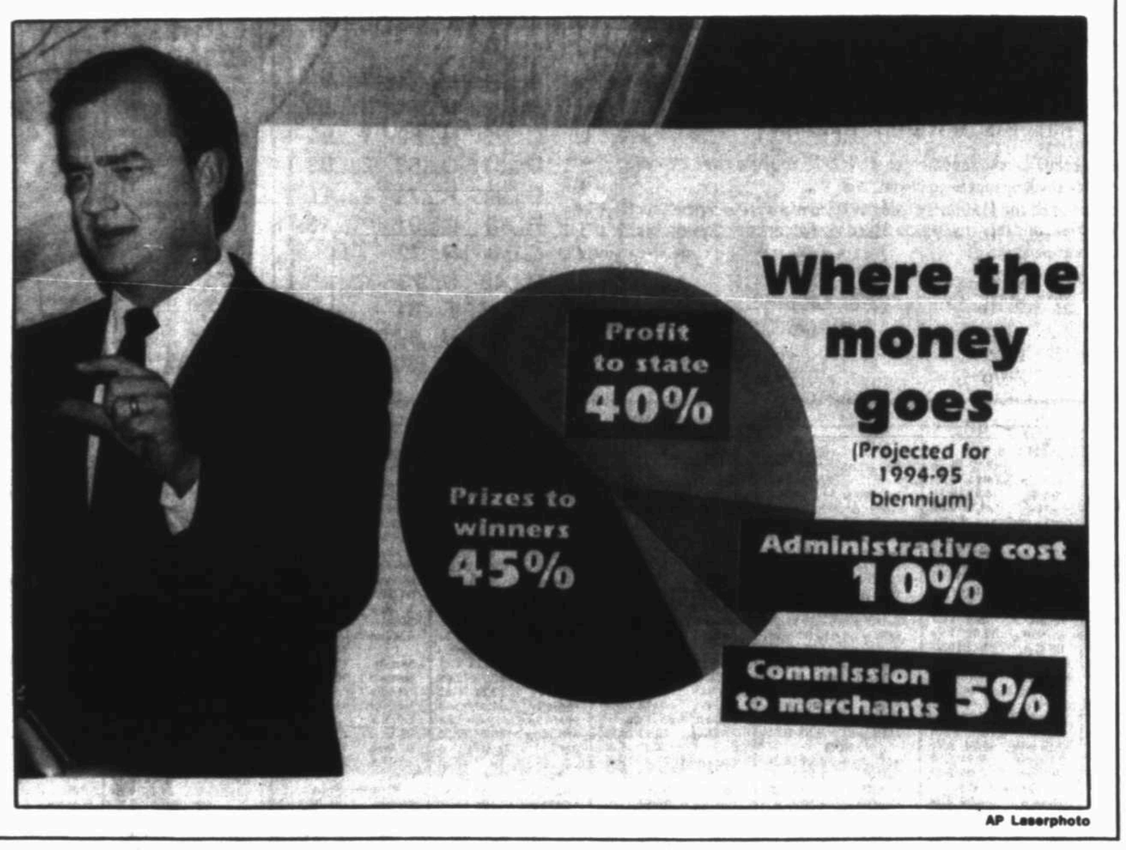

Serna and Aguilar denied that ethnicity influenced which reference check trips they made. Serna will visit the campuses of both other finalists and Aguilar plans to visit Rivera's college in Milwaukee.

Serna said a personal business conflict would have prevented him from checking Campion's references in Florida.

"He's a very qualified person," Serna said. "I wasn't going to judge him on his race."

Fishermen oppose oyster sales ruling

PORT LAVACA (AP) — The oyster harvest season in Calhoun County has been ruined by bad publicity about the condition of shellfish taken from local waters, officials claim.

Calhoun County Judge Howard Hartzog criticized news announcements that Texas bays would be closed to oystering following a ruling that polluted waters were not well marked.

Referring to "these garbage rumors that shut down the industry," Hartzog opened a meeting Thursday by saying: "Somebody is saying Calhoun County is putting out bad oysters."

About 75 oyster harvesters attended the meeting. Representatives from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the Texas Department of Health and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department also attended.

"It's time to do something," said state Rep. Todd Hunter, D-Corpus Christi. "This livelihood should not be shut down."

Calhoun County Court-at-Law Judge Mike Fricke handed down the ruling that cast doubt on the waters of Port Lavaca. The decision is being appealed.

County Commissioner Oscar Hahn accused the agencies on the panel of shutting down the million-dollar oyster industry and putting thousands of people out of work.

Wiley Morgan, president of the county Fishermen's Association, said customers who used to buy oysters, now hang up on harvesters when solicited over the phone.

The solution to the suffering industry is to prosecute each case and trace the origin of the bad oysters, said Calhoun County District Attorney Jack Whitlow.

Whitlow said regardless of the outcome regarding the appeal of Fricke's ruling, the laws will be enforced.

University suspends fraternity after finger biting incident

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston has suspended the registration of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon chapter after neighbors complained about the fraternity and a woman's fingertip was bitten off at one of the group's parties.

In a separate action, SAE's national headquarters has ordered the Houston chapter to "show cause" as to why its charter should not be revoked. The national board will rule on the charter after a Nov. 20 deadline.

The fraternity's neighbors claim the group's rowdy parties endanger the community with underage drinking, public intoxication, illegal parking and vandalism.

SAE chapter leaders have called the neighbors' charges half-truths, exaggerations and deliberate falsehoods.

A Harris County grand jury last month indicted Steve Ferro, the fraternity's president, on a charge of biting off student Carrin Huber's fingertip at a party in August.

The university said it has suspended the chapter's registration pending a hearing later this month. Among charges university officials plan to bring against the fraternity are that it has failed to provide a "safe and secure environment for guests" and has not lived up to the behavior standards of good neighbors."

Woman faces fine after rescuing puppies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — All Regina Holley wanted to do was find the mother of three starving, abandoned puppies.

What she got was a stray dog and a threat of up to $4,000 in fines for violating leash and immunization laws.

Officials at the San Antonio city pound charged Ms. Holley, a senior at Our Lady of the Lake University, $57 in impoundment fees before citing the violations for the stray dog.

"We wanted to keep the puppies, and we needed to get her out so she could feed them," Ms. Holley said.

Ms. Holley has been ordered to appear in Municipal Court on Dec. 2. She faces fines of $200 to $4,000 if convicted of the misdemeanor offenses.

Dr. William E. Lammers, superintendent of the Animal Control Division of the city Health Department, said he doubts the woman will get the maximum fine.

Ms. Holley said she was walking on campus when she heard a whimpering sound.

"I looked in the bushes near the fire escape and there they were: three tiny puppies with their eyes still closed. They couldn't even walk," she said.

Ms. Holley recruited another woman to help her search for their mother.

At the city pound they were told they would have to pay the $57 impoundment and vaccination fees, but they had only $15 between them.

A woman at the pound searching for her lost poodle gave them $50, Ms. Holley said. A college instructor donated $28 worth of food and supplies to help care for the dog and puppies.

"Aside from the bureaucracy, this whole thing has validated my faith in people," Holley told the San Antonio Express-News.

Guest speaker for the "Vision for Growth" conference will be Harold Ivan Smith, author of more than 20 books on divorce, marriage, singleness, parental relationships, leadership, depression and the family.

Featured singer will be Keith Longbotham, a native of Plainview and a graduate of Wayland Baptist University.

For more information call 1-505-392-1286 or 1-505-392-1295. Preferred registration deadline is Friday.

■ Windecker to speak

Ted Windecker will speak on "The Fusion of Religion and Science" 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Permian Church of Religious Science, 2311 Elizabeth Ave.

The talk is the second part of a three-part seminar which will focus on relating religious philosophy with scientific theory.

Windecker

"Modern scientific discoveries and theories have brought to light that there is a lot more similarities than differences between science and religion," Windecker said.

Windecker has academic degrees in aerospace engineering and was involved in the original stealth aircraft development. He owns a local computer business.

The presentation will last about one hour and will be followed by an optional discussion period. Windecker will recap the introduction of the first talk for persons who missed it.

The public is invited to attend and the seminar is being offered free of charge.

For more information on the seminar call 699-5088 or 684-4230.

Unitarian-Universalist Church of Midland will be presenting a program on Nov. 10 entitled "Changing Roles Between the Generations." This program will explore the stress in interpersonal relationships that takes place when parents grow older and children take on new responsibilities.

The program will be from 9:45 a.m. to 10:45 a.m. and participants will take part in the facilitated discussion groups that will seek solutions to hypothetical situations involving aging parents and their mature children. At 11 the Reverend Clare L. Petersberger will present a special sermon entitled "The Child is Father of the Man."

The Unitarian-Universalist Church is located at the corner of Midkiff and Neely. The public is invited to attend.

■ Church to end revival

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will conclude the weeklong "Home Town Revival" with special services this weekend. David Kirby, Minister of Music at Alamo Heights Baptist Church has been music leader for the week.

The church will host a fellowship luncheon after the morning service, Sunday. Pastor Lucian Rudd welcomes the public to attend any and all services of the church. Evening services are at 7 p.m. and the Sunday morning service is at 11 a.m. For further information, please call 683-1947 or 684-6544.

■ Church hosts group

First Baptist Church will host "His Children," a singing group sponsored by the Joe Whitten Ministries from Big Spring 6:30 p.m. Sunday evening.

Joe Whitten, the founder and executive director, is a native of Oklahoma, a graduate of West Texas University and Texas Tech University. He served as church choir director for over 30 years and as a college director for seven years. In 1983 he performed with the Century Men (100 ministers of music from across the United States) on tour of Communist China.

Religion flourishes in Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — "God is Love" was the stained-glass message in Cyrillic letters behind the pulpit. From the upper balconies of the Evangélical Christian-Baptist Church, on a sunny Sunday morning, the choir burst into song.

"We pray and thank you for the new religious freedom in the U.S.S.R.," an American preacher, one of several who has appeared at the church, declared to God before a congregation of thousands.

As communism crumbles and the Soviet Union falls apart economically, politically and socially, religion is flourishing. More and more people turn to it for security and support.

In addition to faiths with long historical roots in the country — Russian Orthodoxy, Islam and Judaism — beliefs from abroad are gaining followers.

The Mormon Church, which began sending missionaries last year, now claims hundreds of Soviet converts. The Seventh-day Adventist and Pentecostalist churches have more than 100,000 Soviet members each, according to Keston College in Britain, which monitors religion in the Soviet Union.

On Soviet television, the Rev. Robert Schuller and other Western preachers are common fare. The Rev. Billy Graham opened a conference in Moscow last summer that attracted more than 5,000 Baptists.

The Hare Krishna movement, which appeared in the Soviet Union in 1971, has established temples, spiritual learning centers and vegetarian cafes in cities across the nation. The Unification Church of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon holds seminars and lectures in Moscow.

"Many of these fringe groups could well establish a reasonably secure foothold even if the interest is a nine-day wonder," said Michael Rowe, a British specialist in evangelical churches and minority religions in the Soviet Union.

"It's likely they are going to have considerable success, simply because of the spiritual vacuum that has been created by communism and the fall of communism," he said in an interview.

Pauline Pace, 72, arrived several months ago as part of a Mormon missionary team. She said the church, which was given legal status in May, conducts at least four baptisms a week in Moscow.

Mormon missionaries do not proselytize door-to-door in the Soviet Union as they do elsewhere, she said. Instead, the faithful gather at a large rented theater in Moscow.

People in the Soviet Union "are definitely accepting," Mrs. Pace said. "It's like there's a void in their lives. Here you have people who, since 1917, communism has been their god. But now, with communism gone, they are searching for heroes, for role models. They are wonderful to teach."

Such enthusiasm is not universal. The Russian Orthodox Church, which also benefits from a sweeping spiritual revival after decades of enforced atheism, would rather see its rivals flourish elsewhere.

"Russia has always been a Russian Orthodox country, and there's a worry that we'll start to lose members," said the Rev. Jan Sviridov, head of the religious education and catechism department of the Moscow Patriarchate.

He said the church, which has an estimated 40 million to 60 million members, is proposing to teach religion in schools as a way of countering the influence of other faiths.

"As a member of the Russian Orthodox Church, I want to keep our members from leaving and joining another church," he said.

For many Soviet citizens in the world after communism, anything that smacks of the West is positive, be it Marlboro cigarettes, Levi's jeans, or religion.

Commission proposes resolution

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A proposed resolution to go before United Methodism's top legislative body neither condemns nor condones suicide but acknowledges that some people "may consider" it to hasten death.

Noting that health workers may be asked to assist persons in taking their lives, the proposal calls on churches to "provide preparation in dealing with these complex issues."

Questions of stewardship of "God's gift of life" are posed both for persons considering suicide as well as those who might be asked to assist them.

The 26-page proposed statement about death was drawn up by the church's 42-member Commission on Christian Unity and Interreligious Concerns for action by the church's quadrennial general conference next May in Louisville, Ky.

EC, Canada impose Yugoslav sanctions

ROME (AP) — The European Community and Canada imposed economic sanctions on Yugoslavia on Friday and called for a U.N. oil embargo to punish the aggressors in the 4-month-old civil war.

The measures, aimed primarily at Serbia, were the harshest taken by the international community to try to stop the fighting.

Serbia denounced the sanctions as a blow against innocent civilians.

President Bush, in Rome for a NATO summit, praised the EC's role in the efforts to defuse the Yugoslav crisis, and said Washington was considering imposing penalties of its own. The NATO alliance also welcomed the EC sanctions.

The EC foreign ministers, meeting in Rome, said their sanctions would be aimed only at the aggressors in the Yugoslav war. That appeared to refer to Serbia, which strongly influences the federal military that has attacked Croatia in conjunction with ethnic Serb militias.

The Serbs are resisting Croatia's declaration of independence from the six-republic Balkan country, saying that if it goes it must sacrifice territories where an estimated 600,000 ethnic Serbs live. But many of the Serbs live spread throughout the republic.

In Yugoslavia on Friday, tensions rose when the federal army warned Croatia that it has missiles aimed at targets in the republic. If the threat is carried out, it would represent a sharp escalation of the fighting.

Meanwhile, Belgrade television said the besieged Croatian border town of Vukovar had finally fallen to the army. But a spokesman for the Croatian Defense Ministry dismissed the report. The fall of Vukovar would be a severe strategic and psychological blow to Croatia.

Karlovac, southwest of Zagreb, came under heavy shelling from the army, officials said. The eastern stronghold of Osijek was under rocket attack and the Adriatic port of Sibenik was under fire most of the day, officials said.

Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek, chairman of the EC ministers' meeting, said the 12-nation bloc was deeply concerned that "fighting and indiscriminate bloodshed continued" despite a dozen cease-fires brokered by the community.

He said Yugoslavia would be dropped from a Western aid program to East European countries. A trade and economic cooperation agreement was suspended, preferential trade treatment withdrawn and curbs imposed on textile imports.

Serbia this week rejected the community's latest peace plan, which aims at turning Yugoslavia into a loose association of independent states.

The sanctions were imposed immediately, but analysts said they could take months to become effective. The EC has $20 billion worth of trade with Yugoslavia.

Van den Broek also said the community's three members on the U.N. Security Council — Britain, France and Belgium — would seek a U.N. oil embargo against Yugoslavia.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said Canada was canceling preferential tariffs for Yugoslavia. It will also require permits for the $45 million in goods it exports to Yugoslavia.

But Mulroney, in Rome for the NATO summit, pledged some $900,000 in humanitarian assistance.

The Canadian sanctions apply to all of Yugoslavia. But the EC ministers said they would compensate Yugoslav republics going along with the peace process.

The Yugoslav Foreign Ministry said the sanctions would hit "the blameless civilian population, which is already exposed to the sufferings of war."

Yugoslav Federal army soldiers take a rest Friday amid destroyed houses in downtown Vukovar, 100 miles northwest of Belgrade. The European Community suspended aid to Yugoslavia Friday and asked the United Nations Security Council to impose an oil embargo and other sanctions to force an end to the four-month old civil war.

Conservatives lose in Britain

LONDON (NYT) — Voters in Britain turned Conservatives out of office in two districts on Thursday, including a lopsided defeat in eastern Scotland that buoyed the hopes of rival political leaders there pressing for Scottish home rule.

The Conservative losses came in special elections convened to fill vacant seats in the House of Commons. In a third contest, the Labor Party easily held on to a traditionally pro-Labor district in central England.

With Prime Minister John Major required to call a nationwide election sometime before July, rival political leaders here said the results of Thursday's special elections demonstrated that supction results had little bearing on what would happen in the next national ballot, and instead described the races as local expressions of protest.

Although the Conservatives have controlled British politics for the last 12 years, they have now lost seven seats in special elections over the last 18 months.

In Scotland, the defeat of the Conservatives by a candidate for the Liberal Democrats was described by Scottish nationalists as a measure of growing frustration with the Conservative Party's traditional opposition to any dilution of London's authority over Scotland.

Yeltsin declares emergency rule in rebellious territory

MOSCOW (AP) — In a harsh step rarely tried even by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, Boris Yeltsin on Friday imposed emergency rule on a secessionist southern territory, making good on a promise to fight his republic's breakup.

The Russian Federation president banned rallies and strikes in the Chechen-Ingush territory, imposed a curfew, impounded all weapons and seized government control, Soviet media reported.

The emergency rule decree, which lasts a month starting Saturday, was the firmest action Yeltsin had taken since becoming Russian leader last year.

Yeltsin, former Communist Party boss of Moscow, has crusaded for greater republic self-rule but never countenanced demands for a similar breakup of his own republic, which stretches from the Polish border to Japan.

Yeltsin's decree accused the newly elected Chechen leader, Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, of "seeking to remove from power legitimate state organs by organizing mass disorders and using violence. . . .

"The elimination of unlawful actions is impossible without application of emergency measures."

Dudayev, a former Soviet air force officer who was elected president Oct. 27, has led the drive by dominant nationalist Chechens to break from Russia. He claims 5,000 soldiers and 62,000 volunteer fighters in the territory of 1.3 million people.

Cracks appear in Arab unity before second round of talks

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — More cracks have appeared in the united front forged by the Arabs for the Mideast peace talks, diplomats and other sources said Friday.

The disagreement concerns what must be accomplished before the talks enter their third stage, said Western diplomats and Palestinian sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

The third stage is to be a multilateral discussion of regional issues. The peace process' second stage — bilateral talks between Israel and the Arab parties — is in limbo in a dispute over where the talks should be held.

Israel and its Arab neighbors — Egypt, Syria, and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation — met for the first time at a Mideast peace conference last week in Madrid, Spain.

Even then Syria was at odds with the Jordanian and Palestinian delegations, which wanted to quickly start bilateral talks with Israel.

Syria insists that before the third stage of talks can begin, Israel must accept U.N. Security Council resolution 242, which calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories in exchange for Arab guarantees of its security. It also wants Israel to stop establishing Jewish settlements in the territories, and to recognize Palestinians' right to self-determination.

Israel refuses to cede the occupied lands or stop its settlements on them.

Jordan, however, has signaled its readiness to discuss regional problems.

"The bond should not be broken."

Baylor University and the Baptist General Convention of Texas have benefitted from a cooperative ministry since 1886, when Baylor, then 41 years old, helped form the Convention.

Baptist messengers will cast a crucial vote at this year's BGCT Annual Meeting Nov. 11 and 12 in Waco that will either affirm or destroy the long-standing BGCT/Baylor alliance.

A vote by Baptist messengers against the Affiliation Agreement will divorce Baylor from the BGCT and could significantly alter the political balance in the BGCT, to the detriment of all BGCT schools, hospitals, children's homes, homes for the aged and other ministries.

A weeping Vietnamese woman is dragged by security officers Friday during the removal of 59 Vietnamese from the Hei Ling Chau detention center in Hong Kong during their transfer to Kai Tak international airport before they will be returned to Vietnam. This is the first group to be repatriated under an agreement signed by Britain and Vietnam last month involving boat people denied asylum.

Hong Kong repatriates Vietnamese

HONG KONG (AP) — A group of 59 boat people, some kicking and screaming, were bundled aboard a transport jet Saturday by Hong Kong police in the first forcible repatriation of Vietnamese boat people in almost two years.

As many as ten officers at a time carried struggling men and women onto the back of the transport plane. Some of the men had no shirts or shoes on.

Shaking their fists and flailing arms and legs in desperation, five men were physically carried on the plane, wrapped in red woolen blankets. Force was required to get six other men and women aboard; some of the women were clutching their children as they were shoved onto the plane by unarmed police.

In all, 20 men, 16 women and 23 children under the age of 16 were put aboard the Hercules C-130 four-propeller plane for the flight to Hanoi.

They are the first batch of boat people forced home under an agreement signed Oct. 29 between Britain and Vietnam that could result in the forcible return of more than 50,000 of Hong Kong's Vietnamese determined to be economic migrants, not political refugees.

The Hong Kong government had said there would be "no question" of violence being used on the Vietnamese. The U.S. government, which opposes the forced return of the boat people, has told Britain it would not tolerate violence.

About 1.5 million Vietnamese have fled Vietnam since the south's fall to the Communist north in 1975. Some 200,000 have arrived in Hong Kong, and more than half have been resettled in the United States and other countries.

In 1989, Hong Kong herded 51 boat people onto a plane headed for Hanoi in the dead of night. An international outcry forced British colonial authorities to temporarily shelve the forced repatriation policy.

On Friday, scores of unarmed security personnel yanked, dragged and cajoled the 59 Vietnamese from the Hei Ling Chau detention center to an airplane hangar at Kai Tak international airport, where they spent the night.

At the airport, wooden cots were arranged in neat lines, and two television sets and video cassette recorders were made available for the boat people's final night in Hong Kong. One video was called "I Love Hong Kong."

Two female Correctional Services Department officers dragged one weeping woman onto a British Naval ferry that sailed the Vietnamese to the airport from Hei Ling Chau. Male officers also carried away three Vietnamese men who had grabbed onto a railing leading to the ferry.

Bulldozers speed mass burials in Philippines

ORMOC, Philippines (AP) — Officials gave up hope Friday of finding more survivors from this week's floods and said more than 5,000 people had probably perished. Survivors faced food shortages and the prospect of epidemics.

Fearing outbreaks of cholera and other intestinal diseases, workers used dump trucks and earth movers to speed mass burials of the victims of Tuesday's flooding, which occurred when Tropical Storm Thelma hit Leyte and Negros islands.

Roman Catholic priests offered prayers and sprinkled holy water as bulldozers covered graves during some of the mass burials at Ormoc's hillside cemetery.

But often bodies were simply dumped unceremoniously into open graves to prevent disease. The trucks then rushed back to makeshift morgues to pick up more.

A city health officer, Dr. Celso Adolfo, said it was difficult to make an accurate death count because many people were finding and burying relatives without notifying authorities.

According to the latest figures from the Office of Civil Defense, at least 3,444 people were killed on Leyte and Negros, including 3,009 in Ormoc, a port and agricultural center 350 miles southeast of Manila.

Another 2,080 people were listed as missing. Teams of navy divers were flown to Ormoc on Friday to search for bodies.

In Manila, Civil Defense Director Ernesto Rivera said there was almost no chance that any of the missing had survived. "Ormoc is isolated and there is no place for the missing to go and they are probably dead," he said.

In Cebu, 70 miles to the east, provincial Gov. Emiliano Osmena said he would send 300 nurses and doctors to Ormoc on Saturday to help with disease control. He said he was also sending water purification teams, and equipment to assist in burials.

President Corazon Aquino declared Leyte a disaster area and ordered emergency food and medicine to the island.

U.S. to sell 14 Patriot missiles to Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States plans to sell 14 more Patriot anti-missile batteries to Saudi Arabia to reinforce its defenses, Pentagon officials said Friday.

The $3.3 billion sale, if approved by Congress, as expected, would include more than 700 ground-to-air missiles to defend Saudi military bases, oil refineries and government offices against ballistic missiles like Iraq's Scuds.

Congress last fall approved the sale of six Patriot firing systems to Riyadh, which are scheduled for delivery in 1992 and 1993. That order coupled with the latest sale would bring the total number of Patriots in Saudi Arabia to 20 batteries, the number the U.S. Army deployed during the Persian Gulf war.

Saudi officials, sobered by the Scud attacks during the war, have made the purchase of additional Patriot batteries a top priority. In September, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Iraq still possessed "several hundred Scud missiles of the type used against Saudi Arabia during the gulf war."

U.N. inspectors are conducting searches in Iraq to identify and destroy any remaining Scuds.

The Bush administration shipped seven Patriot batteries to Saudi Arabia from American bases in Europe when tensions increased over U.N. inspections of Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons installations. Those systems have been sent temporarily and are not a part of the sale, the Pentagon has said.

Some members of Congress have objected to any arms sale to Middle East countries while negotiators try to forge a peace process, but lawmakers and Pentagon officials predicted relatively quick approval for the Patriot sale.

"There's no opposition out there to this," said an administration official.

The new order is a boon for the Patriot's manufacturer, Raytheon Corp. of Lexington, Mass., which attributed the layoff of 485 workers earlier this month to reduced military spending.

Firefighters discover 10 dead in Chicago home

CHICAGO (AP) — Firefighters on Friday discovered 10 bodies in a house, apparent victims of carbon-monoxide poisoning, an official said.

The family — a couple and their eight children ages 11-25 — died when a faulty furnace apparently circulated the deadly gas through their house, said John Bartgen, a Chicago fire battalion chief.

The victims were discovered by family friends who were worried they hadn't heard from the family in two days and broke into the home.

"We opened the windows and they were all dead," said one friend, Efrain Lopez, 19. "It didn't smell like gas."

Lopez said he entered through a rear basement window and saw one of the victims on the kitchen floor. He discovered the others scattered throughout the brick bungalow.

Firefighters called to the scene on the city's southwest side found the victims in their nightclothes, said fire department spokesman Mike Cosgrove.

Carbon monoxide readings in the house were 100 parts per million, well above normal, Cosgrove said.

Peter Munoz, spokesman for Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co., which supplied gas to the house, said: "Apparently a spot weld in a flue pipe gave way, leaving a three-inch gap (that) caused by-products of combustion, including carbon monoxide, to recirculate throughout the home."

Bartgen identified the parents as Jesus and Graciella Orejel. The children's names were not released.

Neighbors who crowded outside the bungalow Friday evening said the parents, their four daughters and four sons moved from Mexico into the house near Chicago's Midway Airport about 1½ years ago. They were last seen Wednesday, the neighbors said.

Peoples Gas, which serves much of the Chicago area, warned residents this week that carbon monoxide fumes can accumulate in buildings as a result of faulty heating equipment or blocked chimneys.

Carbon monoxide is a potentially deadly gas that is colorless, tasteless and odorless. The gas prevents hemoglobin, the oxygen-carrying substance in the blood, from supplying oxygen to the body.

Five Chicagoans died from carbon monoxide poisoning in a two-story building last February.

Survey finds insurance fraud acceptable to many people

CHICAGO (AP) — Many motorists think it's acceptable to pad auto insurance claims to make up for deductibles, results of a new survey suggest.

The survey conducted for the Insurance Research Council by the Roper Organization found 23 percent of respondents think it's permissible to pad for deductibles and that 20 percent approved of padding claims to recover premiums paid in years when no claims were made.

The survey was released this week with the council's annual report. The non-profit group in suburban Oak Brook studies public policy for the insurance industry.

"The results bother us a great deal," said Donald Segraves, executive director of the council. "We are trying to do things that would reduce the cost of insurance, which is going up faster than anybody wants it to, including the insurance companies."

But an expert in insurance crime was more sanguine, saying the survey reflects attitudes, nothing more.

"These are just people talking. They might not necessarily do it, but it is in their mind," Richard Baldwin, regional manager for the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute, said Thursday.

"Many feel they are perfectly justified in getting back all the premiums that they have been paying over the years," Baldwin said.

The institute is an insurance investigating firm in suburban Evergreen Park. It represents 440 insurance companies that provide 80 percent of the country's insurance coverage.

Attorney claims potential jurors closed-mouthed

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A defense attorney claimed Friday that potential jurors for William Kennedy Smith's rape trial have become closed-mouthed because of television coverage.

"I can see it, people are getting more and more guarded," attorney Roy Black said, arguing it was impossible to weed out biased jurors because they won't admit it.

Circuit Judge Mary Lupo refused Black's request that she dismiss prospective jurors who have been waiting this week to be questioned. And, for a fourth time, she denied a defense motion to bar cameras from the courtroom.

However, the judge began asking potential jurors if they would be reluctant to answer honestly in a televised proceeding. She also has been inviting potential jurors to discuss in private any topics they consider embarrassing.

Several jurors on Friday took that offer, and the judge ordered the television camera shut off and reporters and spectators to leave the courtroom temporarily.

Black made his motion after one prospective juror, who was excused, said he was reluctant to answer questions in front of a television camera. He said prospective jurors had been discussing this week's incident in which a 78-year-old woman claimed she was made to look foolish on television.

Ms. Lupo shielded identities Thursday after potential juror Florence Orbach, who was excused Wednesday, told the judge she was shocked that her bawdy comments about the Kennedy family were carried over national television.

Tritium has contaminated land around nuclear plants in 8 states

WASHINGTON — Failures in handling tritium, a radioactive gas used to fuel nuclear weapons, has spread traces of contamination on land and in water outside of nuclear weapons plants and laboratories in eight states, the Energy Department said Friday.

The department said that workers and citizens had been accidently exposed, but that the levels of tritium they absorbed were a fraction of the federal safety limit for radiation and were not considered harmful.

The authors of the report said tritium was found in wine made from grapes grown near the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif., and in milk in Georgia produced near the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant in South Carolina.

Trace levels of tritium were also found outside another installation in California and weapons plants and laboratories in Florida, New Mexico, Ohio, Tennessee and Texas. The report dealt with all government plants where tritium is handled except one.

A more pressing issue, the Energy Department said, was the value of the radioactive material being lost through improperly maintained equipment, haphazard procedures and operational errors.

Three years ago, after the government's capability to produce tritium for nuclear weapons collapsed, the Energy Department began a project costing more than $3 billion to repair nuclear reactors at the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant in South Carolina, the country's sole source of tritium.

The department said Friday that it was losing valuable supplies of tritium through routine releases, accidents, mishandling and other flaws in its program.

The findings were made in a report requested earlier this year by Energy Secretary James D. Watkins. The report was critical of federal officials and executives of the companies that operate nuclear weapons plants and laboratories for the Government.

Tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen, readily incorporates itself into water vapor.

Early winter leaves even hearty north frazzled

By John Dowling
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Record low temperatures. Snow measured in feet that is piled into waist-deep drifts by razor-edged, gusty wind. Ice-encrusted roads that look like lunar landscapes and feel as rough as cobblestones.

But it's still autumn, pre-Thanksgiving. The first day of winter is still six weeks away. Some of the corn hasn't even been picked. And deer hunting season is just starting today, for heaven's sake.

It's been enough to leave folks frazzled, frustrated and short-tempered — not the usual reaction in the mild-mannered Upper Midwest, where winter is usually taken in stride with skiing and ice-skating and even ice-fishing.

"We had a lot of real irate people wanting to know why the streets weren't absolutely perfect," said Mike Thoemke, a St. Paul snowplow driver. "Four to 6 inches of snow — we can handle that. But 28.4 inches, you know, that one there is a little difficult."

The blizzard, dubbed a "megastorm" by the National Weather Service, dumped more than a foot of snow a week ago in parts of North Dakota, more than 2 feet in the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, and 3 feet at Duluth.

So much snow has never fallen that early in the season since record-keeping started.

But that explanation wasn't enough in cities accustomed to quick snow cleanup.

After calls to St. Paul's complaint office jumped threefold, the mayor told residents to tear up tickets issued for parking on snow removal routes.

Minneapolis city officials received 5,000 calls a day complaining about blocked driveways and unplowed streets.

"We've had a few people with potty mouth who we've had to hang up on," said Kelly Shannon, spokeswoman for the Minnesota Transportation Department. "Everyone's frustrated, and they're calling us."

In Dickinson, N.D., one woman even threw a shovel at a passing snowplow.

"I couldn't believe how mean some of them were," said Mary Klym, a temporary secretary with the Dickinson street department. "They were furious."

More than roads were blocked by the snow. Some farmers will have to wait until spring to get into the fields to harvest the last of their crop — or lose it altogether. County extension agents in north-central Minnesota say up to 40 percent of the corn crop was still in the fields when the blizzard hit.

Wildlife experts say many of Minnesota's estimated 1 million whitetail deer may starve. Hunters are expected to kill fewer animals than usual during the fall hunting season.

Scholars find Messianic Christianity link in scrolls

NEW YORK (NYT) — In one of the first revelations since access to complete photographic copies of the Dead Sea Scrolls was opened to all, scholars on Thursday reported finding a fragment of a text mentioning the execution of a Messiah-like leader. They said the fragment lends support to theories that the writers of the scrolls could have been part of a Jewish religious movement that also gave rise to early Christianity.

An analysis of the text was said to indicate a strong connection between ideas contained in the ancient scrolls and those in Christian theology.

The scholars who translated the text said, however, that there was no evidence to conclude that the leader mentioned was Jesus. Other experts on the scrolls were even more cautious in their interpretations, saying they had not examined the text.

In announcing the discovery, Dr. Robert H. Eisenman, professor of Middle East religions at California State University, at Long Beach, said: "The text is of the most far-reaching significance because it shows that whatever group was responsible for these writings was operating in the same general scriptural and Messianic framework of early Christianity."

Eisenman said the text showed that the scroll writers had the idea of a Messiah who would suffer and die, which had been thought to be a concept that arose only with Christianity. The usual image of the Messiah in early Judaism had been of a glorious king who arrives triumphant.

Dr. Lawrence H. Schiffman, professor of Judaic studies at New York University, said in an interview: "It's a very, very important text."

Eisenman, Schiffman and many other biblical scholars have fought to see the scrolls, which were written between 200 B.C. and A.D. 50 and found in caves near the Dead Sea in the late 1940s and 1950s. Research on the documents had been tightly controlled by a small group of scholars, who were criticized for denying access to most other researchers and for taking so long to publish their work.

Many scholars complained that the controlling editors could have published this particular text at least 10 years ago. The Associated Press quoted Dr. Eugene Ulrich, a theologian at the University of Notre Dame who is one of the editors, as saying that the same text was discussed last March in a closed-door meeting of the official scroll scholars. He said it would be published soon.

"It's an interesting text," Ulrich said. "I doubt if one would call it explosive or revolutionary."

Dr. Norman Golb, professor of Jewish history at the University of Chicago, said: "It's too early to express any particular view of the significance of this text. But it shows that contrary to what some of the editors said, there are lots of surprises in the scrolls, and this is one of them."

AP Laserphoto

Fragments of the Dead Sea Scrolls are shown in this photograph. The fragment in the center mentions the execution of a Messiah-like leader. Scholars say that suggests the ancient Jews who wrote the scrolls shared what was thought to be the uniquely Christian concept of a Messiah who suffers and dies.

Dr. James Tabor, an associate professor of Christian origins and ancient Judaism at the University of North Carolina, at Charlotte, said: "What angers me is that we all could have been considering the meaning of this years ago."

Eisenman said he found the small fragment while working with microfilms of the Dead Sea Scrolls at the Huntington Library, in San Marino, Calif. In September, the library announced it would make its complete photographic record of the scrolls available to all scholars, thus breaking what had been called a monopoly by a select international team of editors.

Working with Dr. Michael Wise, a University of Chicago professor of Aramaic, the language of Jesus, Eisenman found that the five lines of text described a "leader of the community" being "put to death."

Man who prompts high court ruling says he won't quit

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — James Martin won't take no for an answer, even when the word comes direct from the U.S. Supreme Court.

When the court barred him this week from filing appeals without paying the required fees, he fired off half a dozen briefs to the justices explaining why they were wrong.

"The true problem is not in the filing fees. It's in the system. The court is not consistent in the cases it considers, even if the facts are the same," Martin said.

Martin has filed 45 appeals to the court during the past decade, part of a long-running dispute he has over his right to practice as an attorney. Fifteen of those appeals were in the last two years.

In their ruling, the justices barred Martin and Vladimir Zatko of Crescent City, Calif., from filing as paupers because the court said they have abused their privileges by filing frivolous appeals. Zatko has filed 73 Supreme Court appeals in 10 years, including 34 in the last two years.

The appeals indicate Zatko is a resident of a state hospital in California.

The high court was fed up over the sheer volume of appeals Martin and Zatko were filing for free. If they file again, they will have to pay a $300 fee and printing costs.

"We take the limited step of censuring two petitioners who are unique — not merely among those who seek to file (as paupers) but also among those who have paid the required filing fees — because they have repeatedly made totally frivolous demands on the court's limited resources," the Supreme Court said in its 6-2 ruling.

But other observers criticized the ruling for limiting access to the court.

"I think it would be interesting to note that rulings of this kind come alongside of other decisions for which the court is making it more difficult for certain kinds of classes of people to get into federal courts," said A.E. Dick Howard, a University of Virginia law professor.

"Clearly this is a court that has a mean-spirited core to it and there's not much that can be done until the composition of the court is changed," said Philip Gutis, a spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union.

Martin has passed but has not been admitted to the bar in several states and the District of Columbia. Although he can't practice law, he says he represents clients in an advisory capacity, charging $200 an hour or 25 percent of a settlement, whichever is greater.

He dresses the part of attorney, wearing a smart three-piece suit and tie with a stark white shirt. A short, unstylish haircut gives him a boyish look that belies his 38 years.

Martin, who works out of his home, refused to disclose his income or say why he considered himself qualified to file as a pauper.

His appeals involve a long-running dispute he has with Delaware Law School of Widener University, the state of New Jersey and the District of Columbia. Since his graduation in 1983, he has been battling over his right to practice law and recover damages for lost potential income.

Martin didn't disclose on his law school application that he had once been confined to a mental institution.

Tiger gives birth to artificially conceived cub

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The world's first artificially conceived Siberian tiger has been born to a 7½-year-old female at the Henry Doorly Zoo.

The cub's birth Tuesday is a significant development in the effort to help ensure the genetic diversity and health of not only captive tigers but also a dwindling number of wild tigers confined by shrinking habitats, said Lee Simmons, director of the zoo.

The birth culminated 14 years of work between the Omaha zoo and the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C. The Washington zoo developed and helped to perfect the artificial insemination technique used to fertilize the female tiger, Simmons said.

Zoo officials had not been able to get close enough to the new Siberian tiger to determine its sex, but said the cub and mother seem to be doing fine and were being left alone.

"The kit is acting and looking very strong and the mom is doing everything right," Simmons said.

The cub's father is a 9½-year-old Siberian, which romped outside in the snow Wednesday.

Two other big cats have been born elsewhere in the United States after artificial insemination — a cheetah at the Caldwell Zoo in Tyler, Texas, and a leopard at the Bronx Zoo in New York. Both died within 24 hours.

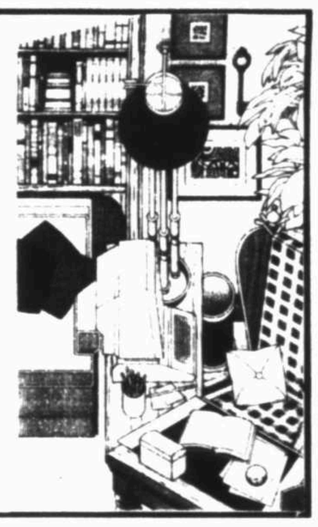

The Siberian cub is the second species at the Omaha zoo to be bred through artificial insemination.

Traffic jams German roads

BERLIN (AP) — Tourists beware: If you decide on an adventurous motor journey to see eastern Germany before it becomes like the rest of the country, the thing you might see most is traffic jams.

You could literally spend the night on the road without moving, as thousands did Sunday, when traffic came to an utter halt on the Berlin-Nuremberg autobahn and didn't clear until the next morning.

A hospital or worse could be on the itinerary. In the first seven months of 1991, the number of traffic fatalities in eastern Germany was 2,073, a 42 percent rise from the same period in 1990.

Highway safety is in alarming decline since East Germany merged with the west in October 1990 and the borders opened. The east's poor road system suddenly has a flood of travelers and trucks from both Eastern and Western Europe, mixing with drivers who will go 100 mph when the road is clear.

Many eastern Germans have bought cars, and now there's an ambitious effort to upgrade highways and city streets. The result is a steep decline in safety and too many vehicles creeping around an unending series of construction sites.

The monster jam Sunday occurred at a bottleneck where only two of the four lanes were in use. With heavy rain and extra-heavy holiday traffic, several accidents blocked movement, and it was bumper-to-bumper for 60 miles on the main route between Bavaria and eastern Germany.

"It was hell. My wife kept on complaining and our two kids cried until they were exhausted and fell asleep," Franz Krause of Berlin told the Berliner Morgenpost newspaper after spending a cold night in his car, like thousands of other stuck motorists.

Road improvements in many cases are years down the line. One big problem may not be solved before 1996, the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung said in a report on backups of trucks at Germany's borders with Poland and Czechoslovakia. Truckers there may wait 30 hours in line for customs clearance.

Relief may come in 1996, when a new expressway will link the southern state of Bavaria with Prague, the Czechoslovak capital.

School board member offers youthful view

PUYALLUP, Wash. (AP) — At age 18, newly elected Puyallup School Board member Cathy McDonald feels she has some insight into public school education.

After all, she just finished hers.

McDonald, who graduated in June from Rogers High School, toppled two-term incumbent Anna Hopkins in Tuesday's elections.

"It's very scary," she admitted after winning the office. "I'm going into this a baby. I don't know anything yet."

Her goal is to bring students and the school district administration closer in the community, about 35 miles south of Seattle.

"When I was in high school, kids were always talking and hoping people would see our views. I was hoping I could be that voice and bridge that communication gap," she said.

McDonald's opponent, Hopkins, said McDonald benefited from "a lot of free press" before the election.

"When you're 18 and cute, people think of you kind of different than when you're 52 and have got experience," she said.

But Rogers High School civics teacher Rod Iverson said McDonald seems to have paid attention in school.

"One of the constant things we preach in civics is for people to get involved in government," he said. "I'm not naive enough to think that all will take it to heart, but she put it to use."

Sq-wormy situation

Wayne King, Australia's largest worm farmer, is covered with some of the worms he raises Wednesday in Adelaide, Australia. King, who exports the worms, says they make great pets because they don't need to be fed and they reproduce from the age of three months.

New food label rules will save lives, money, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials say the new food labeling rules they introduced Wednesday could save billions in medical expenses and protect thousands of people from heart disease and cancer.

But industry spokesmen said the changes are going to cost food manufacturers $2 billion in the first year, meaning consumers can expect higher prices for their products.

And some politicians, meanwhile, are expressing concern the regulations could be weakened under industry and White House pressure before they become final a year from now.

"Apart from stopping the use of tobacco and abuse of alcohol, the most important action Americans can take to improve their health and reduce their chance of contracting disease is to choose a proper diet," said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

He said 39,000 cases of cancer and heart disease could be prevented over the next 20 years if consumers use the new label information to stop overeating fat and cholesterol.

Sullivan said the government will start a label-reading education campaign next year so people will learn how to use the new information. They said that consumer groups and the National Food Processors Association also have committed to the cause.

The labels should make it easier for consumers to cut back on sodium if they suffer from hypertension; eat more calcium to protect against osteoporosis; limit calories to avoid obesity and eat more fiber for overall good health.

People with allergies will get more information about product ingredients so they can avoid certain foods.

For the first time, you'll be able to look at two different kinds of foods by different manufacturers and directly compare their nutritional value for the portions you intend to consume.

Food and Drug Administration Chairman David Kessler estimated that $100 billion would be saved in health care over 20 years if people start eating more healthfully. He said that economic benefit of people living longer and healthier lives has been estimated to between $3.6 billion and $21 billion.

The FDA's labeling proposals require strict adherence to specific definitions for these words: free, low, high, source of, reduced, light (or lite), less, more and fresh. New nutrition charts will be required and ingredient lists will have to provide more information.

The National Food Processors Association says the cost of changing food packages will be more than $2 billion in the first year alone.

"Think of the thousands of food products in a typical supermarket," said NFPA president John R. Cady. "They will all need to be relabeled within a six-month period."

Industry and consumer groups, who have been advising FDA for months, generally back the proposals but plan to use the 90-day comment period to seek some changes.

The Salt Institute, for example, says the FDA should restructure its proposal allowing sodium to be linked to hypertension to note that people on unsupervised low-sodium diets can run the risk of being calcium-deficient.

Police arrest family members for selling bug-infested dog food

MELVILLE, N.Y. (NYT) — Two members of a family that is already accused of illegally burying pets in mass graves at a pet cemetery were arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on new charges: that they sold adulterated, mislabeled, bug-infested dog food.

An untold number of dogs in Nassau County fell sick after eating the food, which was routinely sprayed with flea powder or insecticide when the bugs became too plentiful, said James M. Fox, assistant director in charge of the bureau's New York office, displaying some of the food at a news conference here.

The food, sold in the Strauss family's 10 Bow Wow Meow stores under the label Professional's Choice, was supposed to be a highly nutritious dog cereal, although it was really broken-up bits of old dog biscuits, Fox said. Employees put different labels on the bags, advertising some as food for puppies and others as a diet for older dogs or overweight dogs. In reality, Fox said, it was all "the same low-quality junk, with little nutritional value."

The food was sometimes left on the shelf too long, officials said. "After the bags of food sat around for a while, they would attract insects," said Fox, adding that when the FBI agents seized the food, they had to keep it in specially sealed containers so as not to infest their offices.

When the bugs became too troublesome, Fox said, Bow Wow Meow employees would dump out the dog food, spray it with insect killer, and sweep the insecticide-covered food bits, the dead bugs, and anything else on the floor back into the bags. If customers returned bug-infested packages, he said, store employees would spray on more insecticide, repackage the food, and sell it to someone else. In all, the Bow Wow Meow stores grossed about $250,000 a month, about 40 percent from the Professional's Choice line of food.

Federal agents began looking into the Bow Wow Meow operations when a number of customers and veterinarians, learning that members of the Strauss family also owned the Long Island Pet Cemetery, complained about Professional's Choice.

Several Bow Wow Meow employees came forward to cooperate, FBI officials said, telling how they were instructed to urge customers to buy Professional's Choice, even though the stores sold other types of dog food. A number of veterinarians told investigators that dogs they treated became ill with severe vomiting and diarrhea after eating the food.

Arrested in the case were Jerome Strauss, 47, of Bellmore, N.Y.; his son, Adam, 22, of Glen Cove; and Gary Evers, 52, of Franklin Square, an employee in the Bow Wow Meow business.

In the new case, the Strausses and Evers are being charged with mail fraud and violating the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

California plans costly bike lane

BENICIA, Calif. (NYT) — The state of California, which is said to be broke, is about to spend $25 million for a 10-foot-wide bicycle lane on the new Benicia-Martinez bridge.

It will be part of the second-shortest bridge in San Francisco Bay Area, only 1.2 miles long, soaring 135 feet over Suisun Bay.

The principal use of the bridge, of course, will be for cars and trucks, but equipped with a bike lane, it also will provide a link in a bike trail that will eventually ring San Francisco Bay — and a way to go from Contra Costa to Solano County without driving.

It will show California's commitment to alternative transportation, and then some. If figures supplied by the state Department of Transportation are correct, it will be the most expensive bike lane in the world.

This is not some frill added on by state engineers. The new bike lane is required by a 1989 state law.

As state Sen. Bill Lockyer, who wrote the law, explains it, the law requires the state transportation department, Caltrans, to design a bridge for something besides cars and trucks. Given a choice, he thinks, Caltrans would never design a bridge for anything but cars and more cars.

"Caltrans," he says, "is biased against pedestrians and bikes. It is not part of their culture."

Lockyer is a strong advocate of a pedestrian and bike trail circling the bay. He also thinks all the bridges should be accessible to pedestrians and bicycles. Right now, only the Golden Gate and the 1984 Dumbarton bridges have pedestrian walks and bike lanes.

Lockyer resents any suggestion that designing the new Benicia-Martinez bridge to include a bike lane would cost too much.

Village thanks motorists for weathering construction

NILES, Ill. (AP) — Village officials were so relieved to have a 21-month, traffic-jamming road project completed that they threw a rush-hour party Wednesday at a major crossroads to thank motorists for their patience.

"Everybody's overjoyed," said Jeff Arnold, a village trustee in the Chicago suburb who handed out cookies and other goodies to drivers of some of the 68,000 vehicles a day using the intersection.

"Two years of having our main drag cut in half — now, everybody's happy!" said Arnold, among a half dozen volunteers wearing sweatshirts adorned with the village name and the words "Bye Bye ... Construction!"

Niles, a community of about 30,000, was severely affected by the project, which rebuilt roadbeds and the underpass where six-lane Dempster Street intersects four-lane Milwaukee Avenue.

The intersection — at the heart of burgeoning commercial development in every direction — serves many northwest Chicago commuters, who endured long backups while traffic was narrowed to two lanes on each street.

Luba Borochin, 40, owner of The Hair Team salon near the intersection, said business was off at least 40 percent during the six months when workers rebuilt her side of Milwaukee Avenue.

"You can't imagine how happy we are," she said. But crews still have to finish installing parking lot entrances and turning lane traffic lights.

Mayor Nicholas B. Blase said the last loose ends of the $12 million project should be tied up within a week.

"We're happy it's over and glad that our people (motorists) are back," said Blase.

In an effort to commiserate with frustrated drivers, Blase had four large signs put up near the intersection in September saying, "They tell me the bridge on Dempster will be open 9-20-91. Wanna bet?" and bearing his name and title.

"Most people thought it was funny, but the contractor didn't think it was funny," he said.

The signs came down as a courtesy to Kenny Construction Co., but the project still went past its projected end date, Sept. 30, because of drainage and pumping problems.

Blase said handing out the food and items donated by local businesses Wednesday was a way of making sure "that people understand we care about them."

Lawmakers urge replacing dollar bill with coin

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Scrapping the familiar dollar bill and replacing it with a dollar coin could save the federal government $318 million a year or more over 30 years, sponsors of a currency and coin redesign bill said Wednesday.

Redesigning the "tails" side of familiar coins could realize smaller but substantial savings, said Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., before a House banking subcommittee.

Kolbe, who introduced the dollar coin measure, said an Illinois economist claims the government could save as much as $862 million a year by doing away with the dollar bill.

"I'm convinced that we will have a dollar coin," Kolbe told the panel. "The only questions is, how much time and money will we waste before we have one?"

A coin's durability, coupled with the reduced cost of processing and printing paper dollars, would save the Treasury money and would be more convenient for the spending public, Kolbe said.

Nearly half of the 8 billion paper bills produced by the Bureau of Printing and Engraving this year will have been dollar notes.

A dollar coin would last 30 years, while the average life of a paper dollar is only 17 months, Kolbe said.

Under other legislation introduced by House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, the "tails" sides of the nation's five coins — the penny, nickle, dime, quarter and Kennedy half-dollar — would be redesigned to reflect themes celebrating the bicentennial of the ratification of the Bill of Rights this year.

Themes would be chosen through open competition among artists and coin designers.

Sponsored in the Senate by Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the coin redesign bill has the enthusiastic support of the numismatic, or coin-collecting, community, and has been offered several times before in recent years.

Gonzalez, Cranston and other advocates of a facelift for the nation's coins claim it would generate about $200 million over four years.

Opponents of the measure, however, said an abrupt change in the U.S. coinage was unnecessary and impractical.

"There is no indication, other than by some in the coin-collecting community, that there is public dissatisfaction with our current coin designs," said Eugene Essner, deputy director of the U.S. Mint.

Rep. Douglas Barnard, D-Ga., a member of the subcommittee, said he feels there is no point in "upsetting the public" with a wholesale coin redesign.

Barnard also wondered whether a new dollar coin would turn out to be as unpopular as the ill-fated Susan B. Anthony dollar coin was.

Battles rage around Japan's war dead shrine

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press writer

TOKYO (AP) — All is calm as a priest in loose cotton robes sweeps the brown, autumn leaves scattered over the pebbled ground into neat piles. White doves cluck contentedly nearby.

But the serenity of the Yasukuni, or "Peaceful Country" shrine is deceptive. The monument to the nearly 2.5 million Japanese lost in wars waged over the past century is the focus of a political storm over the role it should play in today's society.

On one side are those, including conservative lawmakers, who would restore the honor the shrine gained during Japan's militaristic era, including state funding and official visits by the emperor and government ministers.

On the other are Christian, Buddhist and civic groups that see moves to improve Yasukuni's standing as a denial of Japan's wartime guilt and a threat to the constitution's separation of church and state.

"It's hysteria," said shrine priest Keigo Takenaka. Although no remains are kept here, he likened the shrine to the Arlington National Cemetery in the United States and other such memorials around the world.

"It is embarrassing that our prime minister can officially visit places like this in other countries, but not here," he said. "We worship those who have died in the service of our country. We do not worship war."

Greeting Yasukuni's 2 million visitors each year is a bronze statue of the founder of Japan's modern army. Beyond him, a museum displaying bullet-ridden uniforms and a "cherry blossom" aircraft used on suicide missions.

The shrine, made mostly of brown weather-beaten wood, was created in 1869 to honor the spirits of the 3,588 loyalists who died when imperial forces the year before overthrew centuries of feudal rule.

It was put under military authority, and quickly became a center of the ultra-nationalist brand of Shinto, Japan's native religion. The government used Shinto to mobilize the nation first for modernization, then for war.

The number of spirits enshrined at Yasukuni grew steadily as more Japanese died for the emperor — in the Sino-Japanese War of 1894-95, the 1904-05 Russo-Japanese War and World War II.

Takenaka said the Yasukuni pantheon now includes 2,466,109 spirits. The list grows longer each year, as the circumstances around more wartime deaths are confirmed, Takenaka said.

Critics say Yasukuni glorifies militarism because it allows only for the deification of those who served the war machine. They also assail the shrine's unrepentant stance regarding Japan's World War II responsibilities.

In 1978, Yasukuni priests quietly added to their list of gods Prime Minister Hideki Tojo and six other leaders hanged as war criminals by the Allies 30 years earlier.

"We don't see them as criminals, that was a one-sided decision the Allies made," said Takenaka. "We call them martyrs, and they meet our (deification) criteria."

Humans match wits with computer programs

By John Markoff
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — A group of human judges chosen to represent the Boston man-in-the-street engaged in a three-hour battle of wits with a handful of computer programs Friday.

The idea was to answer what many scientists and philosophers believe will become the central question of the information age: Can machines think?

It was hard to tell — harder than one might have, pardon the expression, thought.

The judges typed questions into computer terminals and tried to decide from the responses whether they were communicating with a man or a machine.

One program proved convincing enough to fool 5 of the 10 judges. Two other programs fooled some of the people for some of the time.

But the humans had, uh, second thoughts and realized that what they had thought were human thoughts were actually coming from diskettes, hard drives, monitors and electricity.

The tournament was the first attempt to run a Turing Test, the experiment first proposed by the British mathematician Alan M. Turing 41 years ago as a simple way of cutting through the philosophical debate about whether a machine could ever be built to mimic the human mind.

If a person communicating with such a machine could not tell whether it was a computer or human, Turing reasoned, the question would be resolved.

Throughout the afternoon, while the typed conversations between programs and judges flickered on large screens in an auditorium at the Boston Computer Museum, a group of scientists and philosophers grappled with the meaning of the event.

"If a computer were to pass an unrestricted Turing Test," said Daniel Dennett, a professor of cognitive studies at Tufts University, "it will raise a number of deep civil rights questions.

For example, it would be a crime to unplug such a machine because it would be a person in a legal sense. Turing should be thought of as a pioneer in machine rights."

And the conversations were intriguing.

First prize went to a commercial software program called PC Therapist III, which was designed to engage its questioner in a whimsical conversation about nothing in particular. The program was written by Joseph Weintraub, the president of Thinking Software, Inc., a small artificial intelligence software company in the Queens section of New York City.

At one point Weintraub's program suggested to a judge: "Perhaps you're not getting enough affection from your partner in the relationship."

"What are the key elements that are important in relationships in order to prevent conflict or problems?" the judge responded.

"I think you don't think I think," answered the terminal.

"What kind of a response to a question is that?" asked the judge. "Next question: Do you think romantic relationships are unrealistic, doomed from the start?"

Annual corporate bash becomes ghost of Christmas past

By David E. Kalish
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK (AP) — 'Tis the season to dream of corporate holiday bashes — of free drinks clinking and office dances.

Dream on.

Forced to hunker down against a bleak economy, scores of businesses are trimming the all-expense-paid annual soiree. Catered oak-floor affairs are succumbing to fetes around the office water cooler. Instead of sushi on china, it will be cheese chunks on plastic plates.

Some companies even are urging workers to do charity work on the day they used to party.

No business wants to be viewed as a party pooper. But of greater concern is a free-spending image amid rampant layoffs and lower earnings.

"If you ask stockholders to vote on parties, they'd vote 99 to 1 against them," said Howard J. Rubenstein, president of Howard Rubenstein Associates, a New York public relations firm.

Rubenstein is throwing a modest cocktail party at a hotel near its Manhattan headquarters for less than half the cost of last year's sit-down dinner at a fancy restaurant.

"Because of the economic recession, several firms chose to do no holiday event at all," said Adam Weiss, director of sales at the Bridgewaters in Manhattan's South Street Seaport, where many of Wall Street's biggest firms throw parties.

Last year, Nomura Securities International Inc. threw a Christmas bash at Bridgewaters replete with sushi, an open bar, and a live band that set co-workers in motion.

This year, Nomura is ditching the companywide party in favor of smaller departmental events. Spokesman P.J. Johnson said the reason was to give workers a greater say in decisions, though the switch may result in a "modest" savings.

The party trimming comes after stock-market scandals in Tokyo contributed to an earnings plunge at Nomura's Japan-based parent and other major Japanese brokerages.

For the second straight year, NBC, which is suffering from an industry slump in advertising revenues, is foregoing Yule parties for news and other divisions. Instead, it will throw a party for children and grandchildren of staffers.

Indeed, some staffers may relish the change.

J. Walter Thompson, like several other large New York advertising agencies, is asking employees to do charity work on the day when they used to attend parties.

This contrasts with Thompson's last bash in 1988 at the Museum of Natural History, when 500 staffers dined and danced under a life-size model of a blue whale, with only display cases of animals to illuminate the darkened space.

"It was a different time. Business was different. The economy was different," said Marty Rose, a senior vice president.

But that hasn't stopped hard-hit Silicon Valley businesses from looking ahead to more affluent times.

Advanced Micro Devices Inc. in Sunnyvale, Calif., spent $700,000 in 1984 to throw parties in Austin and San Francisco offices, wowing 8,000 workers with top-name bands like Chicago.

Then fierce Japanese competition rocked the semiconductor industry, leading to deep losses at AMD and others. For seven years, the company has not thrown a party, but profits this year on strengthening sales prompted it to send a memo to workers to expect a big one in 1992.

"This year has been a turnaround year for us, but not stellar," said spokesman John Greenagel. "A party like this is an incentive."

Fisher and Levy, a New York caterer of on-premise parties, says it is actually benefiting from a trend away from expensive outside halls.

Just to make sure, it's turning back the price clock.

Raw vegetable dip was slashed 55 cents per person from last year's $3.50. Filet mignon morsels with sherry mustard dip dropped $1 to $3.50 each person. Homemade donuts are 25 percent less at 45 cents apiece.

Maxwell's son takes over Daily News

NEW YORK (AP) — A son of the late British press magnate Robert Maxwell took control of the Daily News on Friday and assured employees the Maxwell empire was committed to bringing the tabloid back into the black.

Kevin Maxwell spent much of the day at the newspaper's Manhattan headquarters and assured union members, executives and bankers that his family was committed to keeping the 71-year-old paper alive.

Maxwell, 32, became chairman and publisher Wednesday, a day after his father died. The body of the 68-year-old businessman, who had been on a cruise aboard his luxury yacht, was found in the water off the Canary Islands.

"I'm very happy to be here. I would wish for any other circumstances to become publisher, but I am happy to be here," Maxwell said as he entered the newspaper's headquarters.

"The message to the employees was that the Daily News is here to stay . . . there is no sword of Damocles hanging over the News," he said later.

The same representatives of the paper's nine trade unions who met Maxwell Friday had negotiated new contracts with his father just eight months earlier when he took control of the paper from the Tribune Co., which paid him about $60 million to assume about $100 million in liabilities.

Robert Maxwell's takeover ended a bitter 5-month strike against the Tribune Co.

George McDonald, president of the Allied Printing Trades Council, told reporters that Kevin Maxwell "assured us the Daily News is here to stay and that his main interest is the opportunity to run a large daily newspaper, and they are committed to the News."

He said Maxwell said he hoped to put the Daily News in the black some time in 1992.

He quoted Maxwell as saying: "The Maxwell empire has some difficulties in some other financial holdings, but as far as the Daily News is concerned, that is a separate company. . . ."

Theodore Kheel, a labor negotiator who was in the meeting, said that while Maxwell didn't mention any numbers "he said reports about the (News') financial losses were grossly exaggerated."

Kheel said Maxwell told people at the meeting that the newspaper business was the heart of the Maxwell empire, and that while the family would be selling off other properties, they would not sell any of their newspaper properties.

"He is committed to do what his father did to make this the greatest paper in the city of New York," McDonald said.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
