CLEVELAND — Convicts who jump bail before sentencing or who violate parole or probation can legally collect welfare benefits while lying low. Under current welfare law, the government can't do a thing about it. Federal welfare statutes do not exclude fugitives from public assistance. Privacy laws limit the exchange of information between police, who have hundreds of thousands of fugitive warrants on file./3D

Jury deadlocks

LOS ANGELES — Jurors deliberating a murder charge against Erik Menendez reported Monday they were hopelessly deadlocked, but the judge ordered them to reconsider. "We are deadlocked. Positions have essentially not changed after three weeks of discussion and debate," the jury said in a note to Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg./7A

Greatest chants

MADRID, Spain — A group of Benedictine monks have rocketed to the top of the pop charts with some genuine olden oldies — Gregorian chants. No, they haven't yet turned out a music video spot for MTV, but the celibate celebrities are feeling the media squeeze. "You have to understand, we are monks, not rock stars," said one reluctant monk at the 11th-century monastery in northern Spain. Compiled from previous recordings by the monks of Santo Domingo de Silos, "The Best of Gregorian Chants" compact disc has earned one platinum and two gold discs with 230,000 copies sold since it hit record stores two weeks before Christmas./3A

Midland, Odessa councils pave transportation expansion routes

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Transportation — both air and ground — was the major topic of discussion at a Midland/Odessa joint City Council meeting Monday.

Discussion on highway transporation focused primarily on the efforts to bring the expansion of Interstate 27 through the Midland/Odessa area and the increased importance the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) has brought to that goal.

Calling the effort to expand I-27 through the area "the greatest example of concrete cooperation between Midland and Odessa," Odessa Mayor Loraine Perryman said improved transportation through the two cities was vital to the economic growth of the area.

"We may not see the money for this project in our lifetime," she said. "But, unless we open the door now and convince lawmakers to run the corridor through this area, we will not see a highway go through here when the money is finally allocated. This is long-range planning that is vital."

Cult trial jury picks begin; security tight

■ Judge: Branch Davidians' self-defense an 'iffy issue.'

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — U.S. District Judge Walter Smith individually questioned potential jurors Monday about firearms possession and religion as he launched the trial of 11 Branch Davidians accused in the killing of four federal agents.

By the end of the day, 32 jurors had been interviewed. Eight were excused for a variety of reasons, leaving 24 in the remaining pool. Jury selection continues today.

■ ACLU, NRA accuse federal agents of abuse/3B

Smith, discarding his black judge's robe to keep from "intimidating" the panel, asked 80 prospective jurors as a group whether they knew any of the more than 150 potential witnesses in the case.

The judge later asked prospective jurors one by one about their family and jobs, whether they ever have served on a jury, and if they or their family members own or use firearms. He also sprinkled in questions about home schooling, which Smith said went on inside the religious group's compound.

Potential jurors repeatedly said they believe in the right to freedom of religious worship and that the issue would not interfere with their ability to serve.

"It's a free country. If you want to worship, go right ahead," one male jury panelist said.

Several potential jurors said they don't believe anyone besides police officers should possess handguns, but said they could put their personal feelings aside.

City's $25,000 grant to bring Vietnam memorial into reality

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A $25,000 check to be presented by the city today to the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial committee should put the memorial on track for completion by July or August.

"We have raised to date a total of $278,000 and with the city funds that will put us at $303,000," said John Philbeck, president of the memorial committee.

Last February, the City Council approved a $25,000 challenge grant contingent on the memorial committee raising at least $265,000 by July 4 of this year.

"They have met their obligation so they are eligible for that $25,000," said Rick Menchaca, assistant city manager.

The council is scheduled to present a check to Philbeck on behalf to the memorial committee

Ukraine to scrap nuclear arms as NATO reaches out to East

By Julia Malone
N.Y. Times News Service

BRUSSELS — Starting his European tour with a major foreign policy accomplishment, President Clinton announced Monday that the Ukraine has agreed to scrap all its nuclear weapons, including 175 missiles now aimed at the United States.

The long-sought accord is a "historic breakthrough that enhances the security" of all nations, said the president, who is attending a summit meeting here with 15 other leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Clinton called the announcement one of "two giant steps toward greater security for the United States, for Europe and the world."

The other was the NATO summit's unanimous decision to endorse his blueprint for integrating former Soviet-bloc nations

County settles on pay, refinances debts, assigns inmate work

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County will save taxpayers' money on refinanced county debts by securing lower interest rates and will save additional funds by assigning the landscaping of Fairview Cemetery and Culver Youth Home to "working inmates" in the county jail.

But more taxpayers' money than the Commissioners' Court wanted to spend is going toward overtime pay for two sheriff's deputies.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday authorized the refinancing of $2.9 million remaining on bonds, which had been issued to finance construction of the Midland Central Detention Center or jail, renovation of the Midland County Courthouse, and renovation-expansion of the Midland County Public Library.

The original debt totaled $7.6 million, including $3.8 million in the 1988 series bonds, $1.8 million in the 1989 series bonds, and $2 million in the 1990 series bonds.

The debt-service savings to be realized over the life of the bonds would be $92,478, according to Commissioner Guy McCrary.

The savings is in the reduced interest rate to 4.45 percent from 7.373 percent.

"We have been monitoring financial markets for some time," McCrary said, "and after consulting with our financial adviser and bond counsel, we concluded that the timing was appropriate for this transaction," McCrary said.

The indebtedness is to be paid off by 2005.

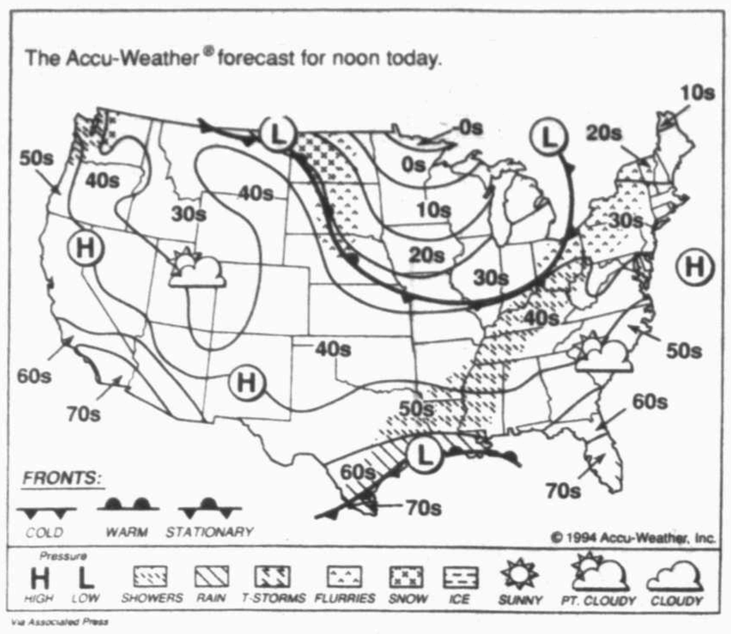

"You guys must be living right," said Jerry Robinson, Midland County's financial adviser on debt-related matters and senior vice president of NationsBanc Capital Markets Inc. in Dallas.

"The interest rates during the first part of last week had actually commenced to rise a little bit instead of going down," Robinson said.

However, after McCrary's telephone call to Robinson last Wednesday to check on the status of interest rates,

Look for high-in-50s repeat

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 50s and north winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be sunny with a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 30, Monday's high reached 66 compared to the record high for that date of 75 set in 1935. The record low was minus eight in 1962.

STATE

Despite partly cloudy to cloudy skies across most of Texas, temperatures remained mild for most of Monday. A few showers persisted along the upper coast and into southeast Texas but accumulations were light and West Texas saw sunny skies.

A trough of surface low pressure extending near Wichita Falls provided a distinctive boundary across the state with clear skies and drier air.

Temperatures ranged from the upper 50s to the 60s. Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene reported the highest North Texas temperature with 67 degrees.

In the northwest, skies will be mostly sunny today. Central Texas will see mostly cloudy skies with showers and a few thunderstorms ending by morning. Highs will be near 50 northeast to 60 south. Mostly clear and cooler today. Lows will be in the 30s.

A cold front will continue southward across the South Plains and will reach South Texas early this morning. Skies will be partly cloudy with a chance of rain. Highs today will be in the 60s in the north and 70s in the far south.

Today's forecast will be mostly sunny for West Texas. Highs mainly will be in the 50s Mountains to the lower 70s along the Rio Grande. Lows in the mountains will hover around 20 while the lows along the Rio Grande will be in the 30s.

NATION

Rain and snow fell over the upper Mississippi Valley on Monday, and another new winter storm pushed into the Pacific Northwest. Temperatures in northern New England fell past 30 below zero.

Moist air flowed from the western Gulf of Mexico coast into the upper Mississippi Valley. An upper-level disturbance moving eastward across the Plains collided with that moisture to produce a mixture of precipitation across the upper half of the Mississippi Valley.

Light to moderate snow fell across sections of Iowa and Minnesota into Wisconsin and northern Illinois, with accumulations on the order of 1 to 3 inches, the National Weather Service said.

A mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain, changing to mostly rain, was reported across Missouri and central Illinois. Thunder and lightning were observed with rain and sleet in the area of Kansas City, Mo.

A separate weather system was moving out of the southern Rockies, and rain and a few thunderstorms were expected during the night across parts of the southern Plains. Up to an inch of snow was possible by this morning from parts of eastern Texas into southwestern Arkansas, the weather service said.

Behind that weather system, a new storm was moving into the Pacific Northwest, spreading rain and snow inland. A snow advisory was in effect overnight across parts of the Washington Cascades, where up to 10 inches was possible by this morning, the weather service said.

Gusty northerly wind pushed more arctic air southward into the northern Plains. Afternoon temperatures fell below zero across northwestern North Dakota, and readings in the single digits and teens were common elsewhere across the Dakotas, eastern Montana and western Minnesota.

Highs also were only in the single digits in northern New England.

The coldest air Monday morning was across upstate New York and Vermont, where low temperatures fell past 20 and 30 below zero.

That cold settled across the region in the wake of last week's snowstorm that battered much of the Northwest. The storm dumped up to 30 inches of snow on parts of West Virginia, where about 10,000 customers were still without electricity Monday, utilities said.

A state of emergency remained in effect Monday in West Virginia, allowing utility crews to ignore federal safety limits on their work hours. Some schools opened Monday for the first time in a week.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COUNTY: Commissioners secure lower rates

(From 1A)

"the heavens parted, and interest rates started dropping," Robinson said.

"We were able to get the bonds sold last Thursday at a very favorable rate," he said.

The commissioners, in a unanimous vote, adopted the lower interest rates.

In another realm, the county and the taxpayers will be faring well when the county's "working inmates" take care of landscaping, mowing and trimming at the county's 1885-founded Fairview Cemetery and at Culver Youth Home.

"We can save the taxpayers a good deal of money," Goulet said. By turning the work over to supervised inmates rather than to contracted commercial landscapers, Goulet said the county would save about $40,000 a year, two-thirds of the $60,575 budgeted for landscaping work at the cemetery and the youth home.

Goulet said that new state legislation has been passed to allow inmates to work in non-profit areas.

"You cannot use it (inmate labor) in business, but you can use inmate labor for county work."

Goulet said he had talked with Sheriff Gary Painter, "and he assures me that inmate labor is available.

"The only stipulation the sheriff gave me was that the inmates have proper supervision," Goulet said. "Proper supervision will be no problem."

Working inmates take care of the property around the jail — the Midland Central Detention Center, Goulet said.

Goulet said some of the inmates want to work.

Painter said his deputies would need to provide training for the in-place cemetery staffers on "supervising inmates and give them an idea of what to watch out for, and how to properly handle the inmates.

Already, working inmates are assigned out-of-jail duties, including washing county vehicles and cleaning county barns.

The sheriff said he wished the county had more areas to assign inmates to work. "And I wish I had the manpower available to take work crews out."

In a pay matter, the Commissioners' Court reviewed an overtime pay dispute from last year and honored $3,393 in overtime pay to deputy sheriffs Terry Lowe and Rory McKinney.

"Overtime in excess of compensatory time has to be paid," County Auditor Jim Ross told the Commissioners' Court. "In my opinion, the payroll officer (County Treasurer Carol Baker) has no choice but to pay them."

Ross said "it is clear that the sheriff schedules overtime every day."

"We'll be feuding again," said Commissioner Louisa Valencia.

Lowe, who is salaried at $26,500 annually as a Crime Stoppers sergeant, was awarded $2,523.29 on 197.75 overtime hours beyond his 480-compensatory hours.

McKinney, a $26,600-a-year narcotics sergeant, was granted $869.72 for working in 42.7 overtime hours.

The "time-and-a-half" overtime pay comes to more than $12 per hour.

McCrary said the problem surrounding the pay is not whether Lower or McKinney worked overtime but the "gross misunderstanding" of what is authorized overtime.

In the case of public-safety officers, overtime means time worked beyond 171 hours in any 28-day period, according to a 1991 Midland County Policy on Overtime.

In that policy, "permissible overtime" comes within the realm of "exceptional circumstances."

"Except in the case of extreme emergency, the elected official or department head shall apply to the Commissioners' Court for overtime authorization prior to permitting any covered employee to engage in overtime employment," the policy states.

The Commissioners' Court will have the "sole discretion" in authorizing any overtime pay.

Painter said his deputies work under circumstances "you can't plan on." He cited investigation.

"How you can say 'No, I'm sorry. I can't take time out to work your case until I get permission from the county judge or the commissioners,'" said Painter. "We are public servants. All I know is we are going to enforce the law, and we are going to do our job. And if the judge or the commissioners want to keep us from enforcing the law, then that's up to them."

PAVE: Transportation becomes major topic

(From 1A)

Congress appropriated $2,900,000 for a study on the expansion of I-27, which connects Lubbock and Amarillo, about a year and a half ago. The government wanted to expand the highway as a major north/south interstate.

The Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTA), which met with area city and business leaders last week to discuss how to bring the expansion to the Midland/Odessa area, is proposing a route that would run from Lubbock to Lamesa, then to a halfway point on Highway 191. The highway then would head south through Crane and McCamey and intersect with Interstate 10.

The proposal is up against two others, one that runs through Big Spring and San Angelo to intersect with I-10 at Junction, and another that runs through Snyder to intersect with I-20 at Roscoe.

A study on the best route for expansion is expected to be finished by August.

Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth, a member of MOTA, said the Midland/Odessa area has made a case for its proposed expansion route not on current traffic counts, but on the predicted economic trade through the area because of NAFTA.

The fact that the Midland/Odessa area has an international airport and a rail system help, he said, because it meets the requirement by the government that the expansion be intermodal.

"We must make legislators see that we are a very logical trade corridor than would be much less expensive than taking goods through the Metroplex," he said. "The basic route will be determined quickly, through the study. It is definately an uphill battle for us. But, it is vital to get this expansion through the area for the livelihood of its resident and its economic growth."

Ms. Perryman reported that trade discussions and trips to and from Chihuahua City in Mexico had gone well and that relationships were being established to set up strong trade with the Mexican city.

Both Ms. Perryman and Faircloth spoke on the cities' dissatisfaction with the service American Eagle had provided since its jet service was discontinued at Midland International Airport last year.

"All planes are full, but they are always late," Ms. Perryman said. "Residents aren't happy with the service they are getting."

Faircloth said city officials from both cities had been in contact with American about the concerns, but nothing had come of it.

"It's a little hard to get them to do anything when they had full planes in and out of here," he said. "And, we also have to realize the serious finanical problems that airline is facing right now. They are problems that Continental overcame in past years. We are doing all we can. We obviously can't bring in Delta or someone and have four majors airlines. Continental and Southwest are serving us excellently. We just have to see what happens."

GRANT: Memorial project to become reality

at their regular meeting this morning.

As a result, the memorial project — conceived in July 1989 — will become a reality this year.

"It (raising the money) took us a little longer than what we thought, but we feel good that we got it done considering the economic environment," Philbeck said.

The memorial committee soon will solicit bids for construction "provided all the pledges that have been made are received," Philbeck said.

A groundbreaking ceremony probably will be held in March with construction beginning in April.

"It's really kind of hard to believe that we're to the point where we're starting to plan for the dedication ceremony," he said.

The memorial — to be located on Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force at Midland International Airport — will consist of a Texas-shaped piece of sunset-red granite inscribed with the names of 203 veterans from West Texas who were killed or missing in action. The site also will include a 40-foot granite Lone Star inset in the ground and a masonry wall set behind the memorial.

A memorial walkway will include three different-sized bricks that people can have inscribed for $100 to $300.

The memorial will enable veterans to deal with their emotions, and everyone who can't visit the memorial wall in Washington, D.C., to do so here, Philbeck said.

For information about purchasing an inscribed brick, call John Philbeck at 682-0461, or write to the memorial committee at P.O. Box 2178, Midland 79702.

NATO: Ukraine agrees to scrap nuclear arms

into the alliance.

Clinton heads today for Prague to present leaders with his "Partnership for Peace," which offers cooperation and joint military planning to all Central and Eastern European countries without making them full alliance members.

Beyond the twin successes of Clinton's first presidential trip to Europe, the NATO members were still struggling over whether the alliance should use military power to quell the continuing violence in Bosnia.

The allies were expected to approv a communique today renewing NATO's threat to use air strikes against Bosnia's Serbs if they continue to shell Sarajevo and block United Nations relief convoys.

However, Clinton warned his allies in a closed session that if NATO renews its military threat, "We have to mean it. . . . If the situation does not improve, the alliance must be prepared to act."

At a later news conference, Clinton said only that the United States "would consider having air strikes" if Sarajevo is subject to "undue and continued shelling."

However, he added that there were still many "other things" to deal with, including the U.N., before deciding to send bombers.

After Ukraine agreed to scrap its nuclear arsenal of about 1,800 warheads, Clinton hastily rearranged his trip to include a stopover Wednesday night in Kiev, where he will pick up President Leonid Kravchuk and bring him along on Air Force One to Moscow.

There on Friday, Clinton, Kravchuk and Russian President Boris Yeltsin are scheduled to sign the three-way agreement that calls for removing all of Ukraine's nuclear weaponry. Other than Russia, which is keeping its strategic arsenal, Ukraine was the last holdout among the former Soviet republics on controlling nuclear weapons.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher called the agreement "one of the most important nonproliferation steps that have been taken in years."

The president appeared to be heading for a smooth meeting with central European leaders in Prague on Wednesday, once expected to be his toughest diplomatic test.

The Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland and Hungary had sought to join NATO.

TRIAL: Judge questions potential jurors

(From 1A)

"I suspect there will be evidence that there were a lot of firearms involved," Smith said.

Outside the presence of the jury, Smith also hinted at the legal argument to come over self-defense.

"I've said all I'm going to say about self-defense," Smith told attorneys. "I think it's a very iffy thing at best. I don't want to waste time putting it in their minds."

The case pits the prosecution's evidence of artillery, tape recordings and law enforcement testimony against defense claims of excessive government force.

The 11 followers of doomsday prophet David Koresh are accused of conspiring to murder federal agents in a raid on the religious group's compound near Waco Feb. 28, 1993.

Four agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were killed and 16 wounded in a shootout when about 100 ATF officers raided the compound. Six Branch Davidians are believed to have died in the gun battle.

Koresh, the self-styled "Lamb of God," then led about 100 Branch Davidians in a 51-day armed standoff that ended in a raging fire as FBI agents pumped tear-gas into the compound. Koresh and at least 80 others died in the blaze, at least 13 by gunshots.

The 11 Branch Davidians defendants — 10 men and one woman — were well-dressed and neatly groomed Monday as they sat mostly attentively with their attorneys around two large tables and listened to the judge ask questions. Each stood and smiled or nodded briefly as their attorneys introduced them.

During the one-on-one questioning, Smith cleared the courtroom of most members of the public and the press, leaving 10 empty rows of seats despite the scores of reporters and members of the public who wanted to be admitted.

Testimony is expected to begin mid-week. The trial was moved to San Antonio because of extensive news coverage in Waco.

As Monday's trial commenced, the U.S. Marshals Service clamped down tightly on courthouse security.

Relatives of the defendants, interested citizens and news reporters swirled around the federal courthouse, hoping to get a glimpse of the court proceedings.

Outside, protesters gathered.

One man carried a placard that read: "Is Your Church ATF Approved?"

An organization known as The Fully Informed Jury Association of Texas broadcast its message on a loud speaker and erected a sign stating, "Restore the Bill of Rights With Fully Informed Jurors."

Others protested against the FBI tactics in the case.

Among the witnesses defense attorneys might call to the stand is former FBI director William Sessions, said defense lawyer Rocket Rosen, who represents Branch Davidians Kevin Whitecliff and Livingston Fagan.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Johnston read a list of more than 150 potential prosecution witnesses, including Branch Davidian Kathryn Schroeder, who originally was charged in the killings and is expected to testify against the 11 defendants. Also listed were a number of former members of the religious group.

In mid-December, Smith mailed questionnaires to 300 prospective jurors. Of the 269 returned, Smith weeded the jury pool down to 80 people who were told to report for duty Monday. The judge plans to choose a 12-person jury plus six alternates.

Smith has ordered that the identities of jurors be kept secret.

He told the jury panel that he wanted an anonymous jury because of the Mexican Mafia organized crime trial also taking place at the San Antonio courthouse this month.

"I don't want you to be concerned somebody might confuse you with the other jury," Smith said.

Yeltsin's supporters threaten to prosecute extreme nationalists

■ parliament emerges as bitter battleground; Clinton to arrive Wednesday.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — With President Clinton's visit only two days away, Russia's first post-Soviet Parliament was emerging as a bitter battleground of supporters and foes of Boris Yeltsin.

On the eve of today's opening session of the parliament, the Russian president's supporters threatened to prosecute ultranationalists and blamed Communists for the deaths of millions of people.

The statements had all the markings of a pre-emptive strike. Yeltsin's allies are outnumbered by his foes in the new legislature, and the president's opponents are expected to waste no time in attacking his pro-Western reforms.

Clinton arrives Wednesday in a display of support for Yelstin and his reform program. The U.S. president also is expected to meet with other political leaders.

But he has no plans to visit Parliament or meet with Yeltsin's most vociferous critics, including Vladimir Zhirinovzky, who has called Clinton "a coward" who should stay out of Russia.

Yeltsin gained some political ground at home Monday with Clinton's announcement in Brussels of a pact that will rid the Ukraine of its 1,800 nuclear warheads.

Yeltsin's opponents had accused him of being too soft on former Soviet republics — including the Ukraine — that they see as threats to Russian security and national interests.

The new parliament, which is intended to mark a new chapter in Russia's young democracy, is already deeply divided, with extreme nationalists and Communists determined to undo Yeltsin's reforms. Yeltsin dismissed the previous parliament, setting off a violent backlash by conservatives.

Russia's Choice, the main bloc supporting Yeltsin, said it would try to make parliament members face criminal responsibility for statements that incite hatred or violence.

The threat was aimed at Zhirinovsky, whose Liberal Democratic Party won 23 percent of the vote in last month's election by promising to expand Russia's borders and expel dark-skinned traders from southern former Soviet republics.

Yegor Gaidar, economics minister and Russia's Choice chairman, said some of Zhirinovsky's statements could be punishable by up to eight years in jail for sowing the seeds of war.

Zhirinovsky fired back, telling his party's 64 parliament members that his party would not accept a strong president and a weak legislature.

Yeltsin's new constitution, which was adopted by referendum Dec. 12, reduced parliament's powers and strengthened the president's. But the president does not have the right to dissolve parliament for at least a year.

Russia's Choice will have the largest faction in the 450-member lower house with 94 seats, but Zhirinovsky's faction will be second and the Communists a close third with 50 seats.

Mexican revolt spreads; police step up patrols

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police intensified patrols and visitors had to register upon entering and leaving public buildings Monday, but the capital rejected district requests to send the army to guard against spreading rebel violence.

In a major Cabinet shuffle to deal with the uprising that first erupted in Chiapas state, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari replaced his embattled interior minister, Patrocinio Gonzalez Garrido.

Salinas said he acted so that the Indian peasant uprising in Chiapas "doesn't lead to more confrontations."

Gonzalez, a former governor of Chiapas, earlier denied reports of guerrilla activity in his state and drew fire for allegedly allowing rights violations while governor.

Chiapas was generally quiet Monday.

But bombings in the capital and elsewhere and rebel threats of a wide war prompted officials in Mexico City to tighten security in government and other public buildings and in banks.

More police were assigned to streets, subways and other crowded gathering places in the city, said Griselda Garcia, a spokeswoman for the prosecutor's office.

The independent Excelsior news service said 80,000 police were on alert in Mexico City and the adjacent State of Mexico.

Bombs have exploded in recent days in Mexico City, in the resort city of Acapulco, at power lines in rural areas, and at the Mexican consulate and a Mexican restaurant in Guatemala City, Guatemala.

The bombings apparently are tied to the uprising by the Zapatista National Liberation Army that began New Year's Day in Chiapas, one of Mexico's poorest states. One woman was hurt in the explosions.

Press-shy monks lead pop charts with 'oldie' chants

By Ciaran Giles
Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — A group of Benedictine monks have rocketed to the top of the pop charts with some genuine golden oldies — Gregorian chants.

No, they haven't yet turned out a music video spot for MTV, but the celibate celebrities are feeling the media squeeze.

"You have to understand, we are monks, not rock stars," said one reluctant monk at the 11th-century monastery in northern Spain.

Compiled from previous recordings by the monks of Santo Domingo de Silos, "The Best of Gregorian Chants" compact disc has earned one platinum and two gold discs with 230,000 copies sold since it hit record stores two weeks before Christmas.

In Spain, it takes 50,000 discs to hit gold and 100,000 for platinum.

The double compact disc sells for the equivalent of $21 and features 38 selections. Some date back 1,300 years.

It has astounded music pundits.

"You're telling me it was a surprise," said Jose Fernandez of Madrid Rock, one of the Spanish capital's top music stores. "The monks have always had relatively good sales in classical music terms. But this time they struck gold."

From their quiet corner of the world, the monks are attempting to duck the cameras and reporters pressing for interviews.

"I am very sorry but no one can talk about the recording," said a monk who answered the telephone at the monastery, which for centuries has served as a rest stop for pilgrims on their way to the shrine at Santiago de Compostela on Spain's northwestern tip.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will have fantastic luck in finding partners who share your outlook. A new business venture or job claims the lion's share of your time in early spring. Creativity brings huge financial returns. A grand vacation may be possible this summer. Contracts will be signed in August. Long-term investments are favored in the fall. Welcome a pay raise but go after even bigger career goals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country singer Naomi Judd, basketball player Darryl Dawkins, saxophonist Clarence Clemons, early feminist Alice Paul.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A poorly-timed financial or romantic venture could land you in hot water. Follow a conservative course of action. You are delighted by an influential person's comments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A close relationship provides the intimacy you enjoy. Could marriage be in the cards? Let a friend take the lead in organizing a social event. Everything will go fine if you limit spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Consult a partner about ways to cut expenses. Paying low wages to good workers could lead them to seek employment elsewhere. Protect your staff. Questions that need not be asked need not be answered.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for research and note-taking. Choose your agenda and your pleasures carefully. Keeping any promises you make to a child will mollify family members.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Practical matters dominate this morning. Expect professional activities to be hectic but productive. Once you are given more authority at work, you will be able to figure out some shortcuts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Once a financial situation improves, your other goals will be easier to reach. Landing a new account or honor will impress those at the top. Curb an urge to be overly modest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel is best postponed. Although a loan may not be forthcoming, do-gooders want your help. Do what you can to give aid without jeopardizing your financial security.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Double-check your work for errors. Careless mistakes could give someone the wrong impression. A special soiree may be featured tonight. Resist an impulse to spend money on an item you cannot afford.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Important decisions loom. Pick someone's brain, then hold out for a better deal. Avoid discussing controversial subjects. Although your mind is in high gear, your body needs rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be a straight shooter but sidestep office confrontations when you can. Reserve some time for study or light reading. Ignoring a young person's behavior will only lead to more trouble. Be fair but firm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be careful not to lose your patience or step on a co-worker's toes. An alliance will last only as long as everyone's needs are met. Trust your intuition when handling a family matter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romance could be challenging. Happily, you are right on the money where a banking or insurance matter is concerned. Higher-ups are eager to promote team players.

Opening lead: Five of ♢

Many players love to quote bridge maxims, since they are cute and quite often correct. But if you follow them slavishly instead of using those little gray cells, you are headed for many expensive errors.

South's hand is borderline for a jump to game once hearts have been raised. We would have preferred a game try. Had that been two spades, North would have rejected; three diamonds, however, would have received a gleeful acceptance.

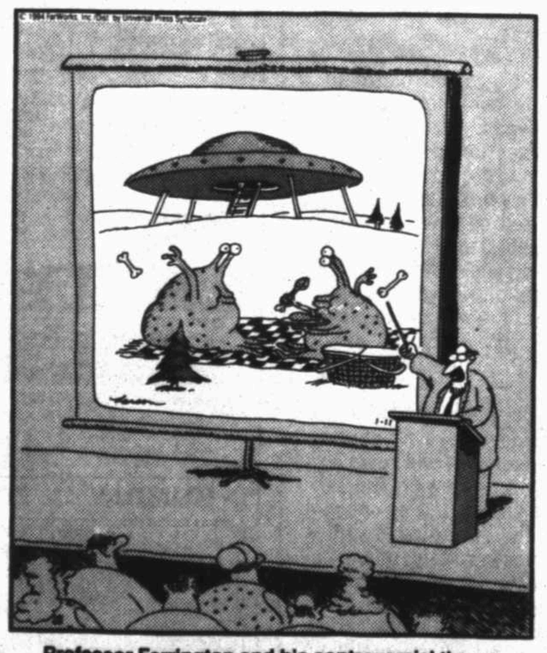

West led a low diamond, taken by dummy's king. Declarer drew trumps in two rounds, ending in hand, and led a club. West followed low and the jack lost to the king. Declarer ducked the spade shift, but won the continuation. Another club lost to the ace and, since the communication between the defenders' hands was severed, declarer was able to win the diamond return, ruff a diamond and discard a spade on the queen of clubs.

The result looks normal enough, but in the cold light of day it is obvious the defenders could have won the day had West ignored the adage: "Second hand low."

When declarer first led a low club toward dummy's holding, West should have shot up with the ace and shifted to the king of spades. No matter what declarer does East will be able to win the second club and cash whatever spade tricks are still there for the taking. Violating a hoary adage will net the defenders two tricks in each black suit for down one.

California's Jerry Brown to join ranks of radio talk show hosts

OAKLAND, Calif. — Move over, Rush Limbaugh. Jerry Brown is joining the ranks of radio talk show hosts.

The former California governor and presidential candidate has bought a warehouse where he will have a studio for a syndicated daily show. He estimates it will need about a year of renovation, so he is negotiating for a temporary studio elsewhere in Oakland to launch his show on Jan. 31.

Former California governor to have syndicated daily show.

The two-hour show, intended as an alternative to conservative Limbaugh, will be carried by the Talk America Radio Network, based in Marlboro, Mass.

The network said it expects about 50 stations throughout the nation to pick up Brown's show.

RICHMOND, Va. — The fireworks of a Janet Jackson concert have shot down one of the Virginia governor-elect's three inaugural balls.

Inaugural officials canceled a Saturday night bash at the Richmond Coliseum because they feared they would not have enough time to set up after Ms. Jackson's concert Friday night.

The pop singer's world touring show includes 14 flame projectors, 60 gold twinkling waterfalls, 24 silver airburst effects and eight fireballs.

"There is no guarantee that the Coliseum would be ready by 8 p.m.," Melissa Herring, spokeswoman for the Gov.-elect George Allen's Commonwealth Inaugural Committee, said Sunday.

Ms. Herring said the cancellation will wind up saving the committee money because of overtime and decorating expenses that will be avoided.

LOS ANGELES — Looking for a house with famous name appeal? The home of reputed Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss is for sale.

The 3,500-square-foot Santa Monica Mountains home near Beverly Hills, once owned by actor Michael Douglas, has been listed for $1.8 million, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

The house has three bedrooms and a view extending from downtown Los Angeles to the Pacific Ocean.

Fleiss, 27, was indicted last fall on pandering and narcotics charges alleging she ran a call girl ring catering to prominent Hollywood figures.

The home has been owned since July 1992 by her father, Dr. Paul Fleiss.

NEW YORK — Alec Baldwin is an anchor and source of great comfort to actress Kim Basinger.

"We've lived through one thing on top of another," Basinger says in the February issue of Redbook magazine. "But it's educated us, matured us. Falling in love is one thing. Being in love and being supportive is a whole other bag. We've come through with some scars, but a thread was sewn through all our ups and downs that's now unbreakable."

Basinger, 40, and Baldwin, 35, were married last August following a four-year courtship.

They have faced negative publicity including reputations as prima donnas, and a jury verdict that ordered her to pay $8.1 million in a breach of contract lawsuit.

"Hearsay snowballs into lies," she said. 'I chose not to confront the lies. But that's all in the past now. The truth will emerge."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Jon Brennan is looking to springboard from MTV's "The Real World" into a real career.

The country-music-singing Christian has enlisted the same manager as Wynonna Judd in his quest for a recording contract.

Manager Ken Stilts is shopping a five-song tape to Music Row recording executives, the Nashville Banner reported Monday.

"The Real World" selects young people to live together for a time in front of cameras. Brennan, 19, was part of the cast that was filmed last year in Los Angeles. Those episodes are currently in reruns on MTV.

"You can't buy the publicity it got for me," he said.

"But it was probably the most miserable time of my life," he added.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Actress Louise Fletcher used action to remember her deaf parents.

Miss Fletcher helped break ground for a new building for St. Johns's Church for the Deaf, the deaf congregation that her Episcopalian parents founded in Birmingham more than 60 years ago.

Miss Fletcher said her father, who lost his hearing at age 4, loved to use his speaking skills to help other deaf people.

"He loved to take people to the doctor and communicate for them," she said Saturday.

The actress' mother was deaf from birth.

Hutchison's trial should be held soon

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, reindicted on charges alleging that she used state funds, state employees and state computers for political and personal purposes while state treasurer in 1991 and 1992 and then had Treasury computer records altered to hide her activities, should be brought to trial quickly. A speedy trial in this instance would benefit both Sen. Hutchison and the people of Texas.

The battle of words between Sen. Hutchison's office and Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's office that has marked much of the history of this case up to this point has only detracted from the gravity of the charges against the senator and the need for the people of Texas to learn the validity of those allegations.

Of course, Visiting Judge John Onion Jr. threw out four of five charges against the senator Dec. 28th, saying they were too vague to allow for a defense. He gave Earle's office 10 days to attempt to fix the charges, which resulted in Hutchison's re-indictment on four counts.

If there is a substantial case to be made against Hutchison, the people of Texas need to know it and quickly. On the other hand, if the case is politically motivated — as has been charged by Republicans — then Sen. Hutchison's name needs to be cleared in order that she can conduct her campaign for re-election free of this cloud.

Fortunately, Visiting Judge John Onion Jr., who said he will move the trial out of Austin, also has indicated that he thinks it's time to put the chatter away and get to the trial. "We need to get down to it," said Onion recently while ruling that the senator will face trial on four felony ethics charges. "The case continues to be tried in the newspapers."

Getting to the trial quickly will settle this matter once and for all. Let Earle make his best case and let Sen. Hutchison's attorneys defend her to the best of their abilities. If there's a reason to convict the senator or not, the people of Texas deserve to know it as soon as possible. The 1994 election is already under way.

ANOTHER VIEW

Duel Mexicos threaten Salinas' textbook reform

There is another, older Mexico beneath the free-market, modernizing society being fashioned by President Carlos Salinas de Gortari — a Mexico of subsistence agriculture, native peoples and Emiliano Zapata, the land-to-the-peasants hero of the 1910-to-1917 Mexican Revolution.

That other Mexico is epitomized by Chiapas, the poor southern state near the Guatemalan border where armed Indian guerrillas invoking Zapata took over four towns Jan. 1 and where clashes between Mexico's army and the rebels have left scores of Indians dead. Initial reports are sketchy, but most guerrilla fatalities appear to have been inflicted while the rebels were retreating.

The Chiapas uprising was timed to coincide with the formal start of the North American Free Trade Agreement. Like other peasants toiling on the fringes of Mexico's capitalist economy, many Indians living in the jungles of Chiapas feel left out of the economic gains of recent years and fear the free-market, free-trade future that NAFTA symbolizes. What economists hail as rational use of resources looks to them like yet another assault on the traditional way of life they prize.

Mexico is a huge country, and the rebels represent only a small slice of the most radically disaffected peasants and leftists. The clashes in Chiapas do not seem to herald any wider national insurrection. But this embarrassing revolt of the forgotten challenges the Salinas administration on two sensitive issues — accountability in the use of military and police force, and compassion for Mexicans more interested in holding onto a traditional way of life than in fast-track capitalist development.

It is in Mexico's northern border states, close to the United States, that free-market development and continental integration have proceeded furthest. Southern states like Chiapas represent the opposite extreme. As lush as the north is arid, the south has for centuries been an arena of violent conflict between largely landless Indians and the farmer and rancher descendants of Cortes' conquistadors.

The slogans of 1910, particularly those of Zapata, who rallied the landless peasants of the south, still resonate here. Yet it is the legacy of 1910 — nationalism, protectionism and legal restrictions on large landholdings — that Salinas has spent his presidency dismantling.

Salinas' textbook economic reforms should make it easier for Mexico to compete for the capital it needs to develop. Over time, that could significantly lift living standards in all regions of Mexico for people of all ethnic backgrounds.

But this Mexican revolution is being imposed from above. Too many Mexican citizens remain alienated from local governments that owe more to patronage than to a habitually tainted electoral process, and fearful of corrupt and violent police and military officials. If Mexico is to take its place among the democracies of North America, the gap between economics and politics — and between the two Mexicos — urgently needs to be bridged.

Radiation tests resurrect technophobia

Wait — the Democrats radiated people in the 1940s, and today's Democrats are outraged? Isn't something amiss there? That nice Mr. Truman, so recently canonized in the best-selling biography by David McCullough, wouldn't do something like conduct low-level radiation tests on American citizens without first allowing the American Civil Liberties Union to notify them of their constitutional rights.

Murchison

Well, would he? Seems that way. The radiation tests about which we read so much today started under Truman and continued under Dwight Eisenhower, a Republican (therefore a logical suspect) but also under John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, a back-to-back pair of Democrats. If we're going to be outraged, why not in the bipartisan sense?

Forget context, along with bipartisanship. A White House up to its ears in Whitewater, anxious over Troopergate, can't wait to change the subject. Result: instant outrage, suggestions for federal compensation to the "victims," censorious remarks about the last two presidents — Republicans as it happens — who did nothing to remedy the outrages.

It's a little early for the political silly season, you might think. But the radiation matter goes beyond politics. We're back to that fine old liberal pastime, technology-bashing.

You might think technology-bashing to be a conservative pastime — all those troglodytes taking out their aristocratic frustrations on Soulless Machines that undermine the quality of life. In fact, technophobia is more common by far on the left. Conservatives are far less afraid of machines than are liberals.

Who has successfully blocked expansion of the American nuclear industry? Liberals. Who raised the hue and cry against asbestos and Alar, the pesticide? Liberals. Who prefers microbes to dams and bicycles to automobiles? Liberals. Whose perpetual answer to perceived technological menaces is more government regulation? Guess.

The radiation scare is going true to form. Nuclear energy is the culprit. Say no more, especially if what you have in mind to say deviates signally from the party line. The party line on what we should call the Truman Radiation is that it's undermined health and happiness. How do we know? Because it must have. It's nuclear.

Washington-based Accuracy in Media notes that, when the Truman Radiation story broke, NBC's "Nightly News" excised from its story information that would have put the radiation dosages in context. MIT's radiation program director told NBC that radioactive iron and calcium given to a small group of boys from 1946-51 exposed them to fewer millirems than two chest X-rays would have produced. Somehow, this got left out of the report. As did the gentleman's explanation of why the tests were conducted — namely, to see if the boys were absorbing enough iron and calcium. (They were.) Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary calls the tests "secret." Hooey! erupts the MIT man. Results were peer-reviewed and published.

AIM says the MIT scientist also related to NBC "the relative casualness with which scientists and the public alike accepted radiation during the 1940s. Many shoe stores, he noted, had X-ray machines so that persons could check the fit of shoes before buying them.

A related question: If the tests were so bad, where's the proof of harm? None so far has emerged, but no one should bet against the technophobes' scaring a few juries into awarding millions of dollars to the newest class of American Victim — a category that steadily expands. In fact, I'm starting to wonder when I'll get my cut. Could President Clinton set up federal inquiry into the pernicious, soul-destroying effects of Roy Rogers cap pistols, c. 1950? I'd be obliged.

CHARLEY REESE

Do agents have license to kill innocents?

What happened to Randy Weaver can happen to anybody in the United States — and what happened to Randy Weaver is terrible.

Weaver is a man who had no criminal record. He had served his country honorably as a Green Beret. Somewhat eccentric, he moved his wife and children to a cabin in Idaho and lived there, growing his own food, doing some subsistence hunting and doing odd jobs.

Reese

Then along came the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, those wonderful people who gave us the Waco massacre.

Now, Weaver wasn't engaged in any criminal activity, nor did he have any illegal firearms. But the federal agents wanted him to become an informant and to infiltrate a radical group. Weaver refused.

The feds sent one of their paid stooges to befriend Weaver and to ask him to shorten the barrels of two shotguns. Weaver did so, making the barrels maybe a quarter of an inch shorter than the law allows.

So Weaver was arrested and again asked to become an informant. Again he refused. He was released and a trial date was set on the firearms charge. Then the situation got very strange indeed.

Federal agents, spending more than $1 million in taxpayers' funds, placed Weaver and his cabin under round-the-clock surveillance for six months. Why? They never said. They never observed him doing anything illegal as far as the public record shows. He just continued with his normal life.

Then this stupid federal farce took a tragic turn. Weaver's 14-year-old son and a friend were out in the woods near the cabin. Their dog ranging ahead began to bark at a hidden federal agent. The agent shot the dog. The kid, not surprisingly, whipped off a shot in the direction of the masked man who had just killed his dog and then fled toward the cabin.

The child was shot in the back by federal agents and killed. Weaver's friend then apparently returned fire and killed the federal agent and was wounded by another.

Now, of course, began the massive siege a la Waco, complete with daily propaganda to paint Weaver as some kind of dangerous desperado.

Let's pause at this moment and reiterate that this whole tragic sequence of events was initiated entirely by the federal government, which decided to entrap an innocent man with no criminal record in order to force him to become an informant. Weaver wasn't dangerous. He wasn't a desperado. He wasn't engaged in any criminal activity. He was living peacefully with his family until the federal government intruded into his life.

During the siege, Mrs. Weaver came to the door of the cabin from which no one was firing. She was holding her baby in her arms. An FBI sniper shot her in the face, killing her instantly.

The next morning, as she lay dead in front of her surviving children, agents taunted the Weavers by shouting over their bullhorns, "We're having pancakes for breakfast. What are you having, Mrs. Weaver?"

No doubt the agents would have preferred a Waco-type ending, but retired Green Beret Bo Gritz intervened and got Weaver to surrender with the promise that Gerry Spence would defend him.

Spence, a famous trial lawyer, did defend Weaver, but the federal case was worthless. The FBI was caught with tampered evidence and with lying. The judge was furious with the federal agents and the prosecutor. Spence didn't have to present a single witness on behalf of the defense.

The jury acquitted Weaver of all charges, except failing to appear in court, and also acquitted his friend.

But what about the federal agents? What about their crimes? Do federal agents have a license to kill fleeing children and unarmed mothers? Can the federal agents just decide to entrap any innocent person to force them into becoming an informant?

Remember, as Spence said, this can happen to you.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Orbison's 'Pretty Woman' tugs memories

So there was this girl. I was 14 and in love with her. I sat behind her in one of my classes. She used to wear those pretty sundresses, and I'd just stare at her back.

I had known her since the sixth grade. She was gangly and awkward back then. She seemed to list a bit to starboard when she walked, and I used to think her mother dressed her funny.

Grizzard

But she changed. It was an incredible metamorphosis, I remember thinking. Well, maybe I didn't know the term "metamorphosis" back then, but one day she seemed put together without much thought, and the next, every part of her went nicely with the others.

Somebody had gotten to her before I made my own move, though. He was bigger than me. He was a better athlete.

He was already shaving every day, and I was still a twice-a-week man. He had a friend who had a driver's license, and he could take the girl on double-dates to the drive-in.

I had no access to wheels that my mother didn't drive, and there is no shame like having your mother drive you and your date to the theater and then pick you up afterward.

I had all but abandoned hope, but then I heard Roy Orbison sing that song, "Oh, Pretty Woman."

It was about a guy who saw a lady and fell for her.

But he had no chance. "Pretty woman, walk on by . . ."

I know how you feel, friend.

"But what's this I see . . .," he sang on. "Is she walkin' back to me?" I might have given up if Roy Orbison hadn't sung that song.

Roy Orbison certainly was no day at the beach to look at — and I wasn't either — but in the song, the pretty woman chose him.

I hung in there.

There was a church function one Saturday night, and the girl was there without her boyfriend.

I'm still not certain how it all came to pass, but we wound up on a hay wagon together. (There used to be things called "hayrides" back in another century. It was pretty exciting stuff in those days.)

I'm not sure if I kissed her first or if she kissed me. But I won't forget that kiss, ever.

Ten years later we said goodbye, but it had been a fine 10 years, full of more good times than bad, and if we hadn't rushed things, it might have lasted.

When the radio station I listen to began playing Roy Orbison songs after he died the other day, I heard "Pretty Woman" again and again, and each time, some old feelings came around. I even went back over some old regrets.

To leave something like music that stirs an emotion or makes a memory certainly isn't immortality, but it's about as close as we can come.

Roy Orbison was 52. That's not nearly as old as it used to be.

Sexual mutilation trial opens in Virginia

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — For John Bobbitt, it was the same courthouse, the same excruciating tale. But this time, he told it for the other side.

In a circuslike atmosphere captured on live television, Bobbitt described to a jury of seven women and five men Monday how his wife, Lorena, cut off his penis.

He gave virtually the same testimony in November, when he was tried and acquitted for marital sexual assault. But the second trial drew nearly four times as many reporters as the first.

Vendors hawked T-shirts saying "Revenge — How Sweet It Is" and "Cut Me a Break," while two disc jockeys from Norfolk, Va. — about 200 miles away — gave out Slice soda and wieners to the crowd.

The first witness to take the stand, Bobbitt testified he "felt a couple of jerks" before the attack. He said he felt dizzy, then sought help. With his hands pressing against his groin, he said he woke up a house guest for help.

"I didn't know how to explain it to him," Bobbitt said. "It was kind of embarrassing."

Mrs. Bobbitt is charged with malicious wounding for cutting off Bobbitt's penis after he came home from a night of drinking June 23. If convicted, she could be sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Mrs. Bobbitt's lawyers have argued she was driven to the act by an "irresistible impulse" caused by years of abuse, including forced sex the night of the mutilation.

In her opening statement, defense attorney Lisa Kemler said Bobbitt "took away any control his wife had over herself" after he raped her that night.

Kemler, who described the Bobbitts' relationship as a "reign of terror," said sexual, physical and verbal abuse had begun in the first month of their four-year marriage.

Bobbitt, who is seeking a divorce, contends his wife attacked him because she was angry over his plans to leave her.

In November, he was acquitted in the same courthouse in Prince William County on a charge of marital sexual assault.

The jury hearing the case against Mrs. Bobbitt was empaneled before Judge Herman A. Whisenant Jr. after three hours of questions from Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Ebert and defense lawyer Blair Howard.

Ebert asked whether the prospective jurors would be able to put aside the jokes they may have heard about the highly publicized case.

"We've all heard those, I guess, but putting that aside do you recognize that this is a serious criminal matter?" Ebert said. All said they did.

The trial was expected to last three days.

Kemler told the jury that for Mrs. Bobbitt, it was "more than she could endure" when her husband raped her "knowing his friend was right outside the door."

"It was his penis from which she could not escape," the lawyer said. "It had caused her the most pain and the most fear. You will come to one conclusion: A life is more valuable than a penis."

But Ebert said Mrs. Bobbitt had approached her husband "in an amorous way" when he came to bed that night.

"You folks will have to judge ... as to whether or not what this woman did to her husband is justified or excusable," Ebert said.

Bobbitt testified he didn't remember having sex with his wife that night. "I remember I wanted to, but I was too exhausted," Bobbitt said.

Under cross-examination, Bobbitt also denied ever forcing his wife to have sex. "I never did," Bobbitt said.

While Bobbitt's trial drew about 50 reporters, Mrs. Bobbitt's trial attracted several hundred reporters and technicians.

TV satellite trucks choked off the narrow street leading to the courthouse in this historic Civil War town near Washington.

Jurors report deadlock in Menendez murder trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors deliberating a murder charge against Erik Menendez reported Monday they were hopelessly deadlocked, but the judge ordered them to reconsider.

"We are deadlocked. Positions have essentially not changed after three weeks of discussion and debate," the jury said in a note to Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg.

The foreman added: "I see no hope for reaching a decision on any of the counts."

Weisberg told the jurors, who were in their 16th day of deliberations, to resume and see if they could break the impasse.

Less than an hour later, the juries for Erik and his brother, Lyle, left the courthouse for the day. Erik's jury did not communicate any further with the judge.

Erik, 23, and Lyle, who turned 26 on Monday, are charged with murder in the Aug. 20, 1989, shotgun slayings of their parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez, in their Beverly Hills mansion.

Erik's attorney, Leslie Abramson, vehemently objected to the judge's instruction. She said lawyers had not been told what Weisberg planned to tell the jury and were denied the opportunity to argue the matter on the record.

"This is outrageous. He knows those kinds of instructions are very controversial," Abramson told reporters outside the courtroom. "This is the most high-handed, obnoxious judge I've ever tried a case before. The Judicial Council should take a look at him. And you can print that."

District Attorney Gil Garcetti hinted that he might try the case again if no verdicts are reached. But he said it was too early to make that decision.

"It's not over," he said. "(But) I'd rather have a hung jury than a manslaughter verdict."

Pets, children often make liars of us all

By Erma Bombeck

If you hate crowds, don't even think of going into one of those super-sized pet stores devoted to animals and their needs.

To begin with, they are pet-friendly places where you run into barking dogs, purring cats, and unknown creatures in boxes with holes in the lids.

Bombeck

Owners wander up and down plain-looking aisles like indulgent grandmothers, holding up a doggie bomber jacket in front of their pet and asking, "What do you think, Max?" Or they jiggle a box of crackers at their cat, inquiring, "Are you out of TV snacks, Flossie?"

Actually, there's a lot to like about animal owners. They are people who consider their pets as family members. Many are real pet aficionados. They read their pet's horoscope out loud to them, take them to a pet psychiatrist when they're moody and call them by their politically correct name, "companion animals."

I own a bird. I am somewhere between the guy who feeds his dog cold leftover pizza and the woman who crochets earmuffs for her hamster.

I rarely get in and out of one of these stores without having several conversations with people. I think that's because we share something most people don't have — a need to clean up after something.

The dialogue usually goes something like this. They eyeball my cart with two 50-pound bags of birdseed and observe, "Oh, you have a bird?" (good question)

"Yes." (good answer)

"What's his name?"

"Barney. He's a parrot."

"Does he talk?"

"He doesn't do anything but eat and . . . "

"I have several birds. When I play a tape of Clint Black, they line-dance."

Now I am intimidated and feel the need to top that story. "Barney can wave goodbye with his foot."

They retaliate with, "My birds soften their food by dipping it in their water bowl."

"Barney makes a sandwich out of peanuts and bananas."

We are like proud mothers with a brag book, and the first liar doesn't stand a chance.

In reality, Barney goes to the bathroom on my desk, takes a bath after I've just replaced his paper and chews his ladder in half. He has yet to laugh at one column I've read out loud to him. He's skating on thin ice.

DEAR ABBY

Nurse: HIV-positive means AIDS, Stage I

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I saw a letter in your column from a woman who described herself as the wife of an HIV-positive bisexual. Her letter illustrated the problem our government has created by referring to AIDS as two different diseases: "HIV-positive" and "AIDS." No wonder the poor public is confused!

Van Buren

HIV-positive is nothing other than AIDS, Stage I. The U.S. Army recognizes this, and calls it what it is. When will our government and public health people do the same?

Is it any wonder that the poor woman didn't seem to have a clue that she should be tested? My book group (which is made up of all college-educated women) recently had a heated argument over whether an HIV-positive person would get AIDS, and they were not alone in their ignorance. A rather uneducated gay man said to me, "No, I don't have AIDS; I'm just HIV-positive." (He's now dead. So is his lover.)

Abby, could you please help our government understand that common people do not understand that this is the only disease where people are being misled by a political smoke screen of terms, and that they could die from this confusion?

HIV-positive is AIDS, Stage I. Please take the opportunity to educate these misled people. — BEV MC CULLOUGH, R.N.

DEAR BEV: I directed your comments to the president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, Dr. Mervyn Silverman. He said:

"Unfortunately, AIDS was identified and named before the causative agent, HIV, was discovered.

"Had the reverse occurred, we would have termed someone infected as asymptomatic (without symptoms) HIV, and the person diagnosed with AIDS as symptomatic HIV (with symptoms).

"Although we have reason to believe that most individuals with HIV infection will eventually progress to AIDS, we cannot state categorically that EVERYONE will."

DEAR ABBY: You were right to advise "Kathy's Old-Fashioned Mom" to back off from telling her 23-year-old daughter how to live her life. It's not easy to keep quiet, after having told your children when to get up, when to go to bed, what to eat, and to clean up their room every day for 17 years.

When my son and his girlfriend started living together, I didn't ask them why they didn't get married, because if they did, and it didn't work out, they would blame me.

When I go to their place, I never say a word about his hair, which is down to his shoulders, or the tattoos on his chest and arms, or the earring he wears — and I never mention that their house looks like the city dump. Sometimes I have to bite my tongue, but I figure it's their life and their business. I am just grateful that my son doesn't drink, smoke or take drugs, and he supports himself. Sign me . . . NON-INTERFERING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Congratulations. You could qualify for the Mother of the Year Award.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Sign language strives for political correctness

By Jennifer Senior
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Perhaps as recently as two or three years ago, a deaf person would sign the word "Japanese" simply by twisting the little finger next to the eye.

But today, many of the more than 200,000 people who use the American Sign Language avoid using this sign because it makes a graphic reference to a stereotypical physical feature, slanted eyes.

Instead, many deaf people are making the sign for "Japanese" by pressing the thumb and index fingers of both hands together and then pulling them apart, carving the silhouette of Japan into the air.

"When I was growing up, I didn't give that sign a thought," said 65-year-old Dorothy Casterline, a deaf woman of Japanese descent who lives in Laurel, Md. "But now that we are becoming aware of cultural differences, people have feelings about it."

The signs that are changing, like the spoken words that are dropping out of polite usage, are often terms for various ethnic groups. In American Sign Language, which sometimes has its roots in easily recognizable gestures, signs are often deemed offensive because they are visually provocative.

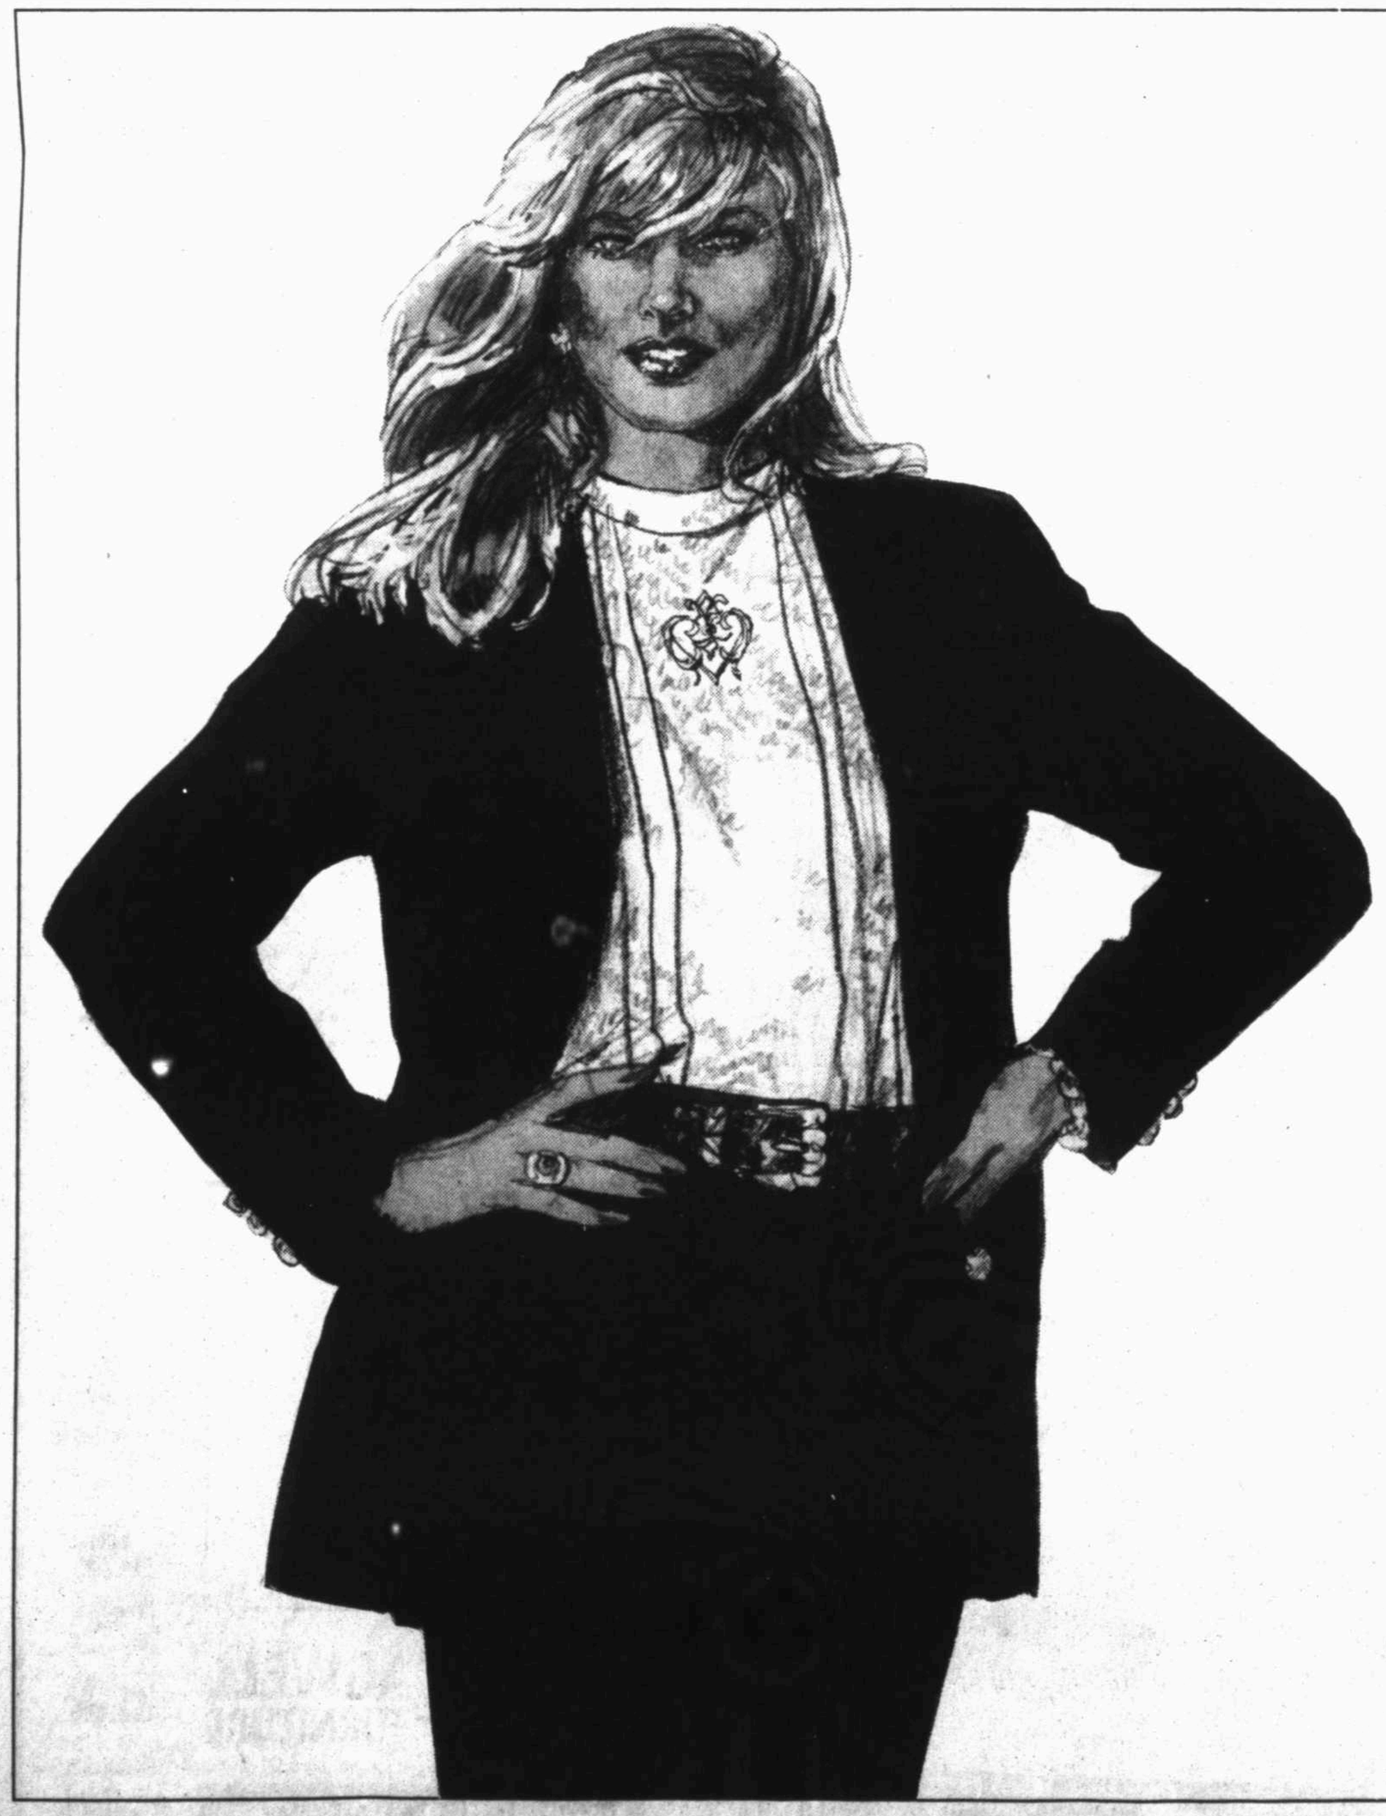

The signs for "Chinese," and "Korean," which are made by forming the letters "C" and "K" around the eye, are changing. There is an emerging term for "African-American." One of the current signs for "homosexual" was unacceptable 10 years ago. And one of the signs for "stingy," which is derived from the sign for "Jewish" (rubbing on an imaginary beard), has recently stimulated discussions among deaf Jews around the country, though no new sign has actually shown up in its stead. This particular sign for "stingy" adds a clenched or tight fist to the imaginary beard.

"Political correctness has definitely crept into the deaf world," said Professor Yerker Andersson, a sociologist here at Gallaudet University, the world's only liberal arts college for the deaf. "Though I don't always care to use that label, because some people use it negatively. When I say 'political correctness,' I mean 'increased sensitivity.'"

For many deaf people the new signs are not only indications of sensitivity to those who are slighted by stereotypes, but they reflect their own desire for recognition as a distinct group that deserves the same sort of deference being extended to ethnic, religious and racial minorities.

"In American Sign Language, politically incorrect terms are often a visual representation of the ugly metaphors we have about people," said Professor Elissa Newport, a psychologist at the University of Rochester who specializes in how people learn signed languages. "It's sort of an added twist."

Free parenting talk

"Developing Parent Power," a talk on parenting skills, will be presented by Robert Burns, Ed.D., 7-9 p.m. Jan. 20 at Midland High School.

Burns is a professor of education at the University of LaVerne, Calif., and an educational consultant for various California school districts.

"Parenting is a joy, but it is difficult," Burns said. "Raising children is the most complex and challenging task you will attempt in your lifetime . . . Why do so many parents feel lost and helpless as they try to raise children to be responsible, independent and knowledgeable?"

Burns will offer insights into parenting, establishing discipline guidelines and skills to teach children responsibility and good behavior.

He will speak in the MHS auditorium. The event is being offered free of charge and is open to the public.

Sponsors of the event include Parker Elementary School's Parent-Teacher Association, ARCO Oil and Gas, Bank One, Midland National Bank, the Midland Hilton, and Laura Ingram of State Farm Insurance.

Phone fraud trial gets under way

■ Defense lawyers deny prosecution's claim that telemarketers took money from seniors when prizes didn't even exist.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Testimony began Monday afternoon in the federal trial of three men and three women accused of operating a telemarketing scheme to defraud elderly citizens of thousands of dollars last summer.

Only three witnesses testified before court was dismissed after the witness coordinator inadvertently sent witnesses back to their hotel early, according to a court official.

Facing charges of conspiracy to commit mail fraud, money laundering and wire fraud are Norris Louis McGraw, the alleged ringleader of the scheme; Paula Sneed; Glenda Prudhome; Sharon Ann Polley; John Broussard and Patrick Johnson.

Leroy Marshall and Andrew Landry each entered guilty pleas to mail fraud and face up to five years in prison. They will be sentenced March 7.

The trial began after lunch with opening remarks from Assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Bonner and four of the six defense attorneys.

Mrs. Bonner said she would prove the defendants acted as telemarketers who called victims, or customers, notified them of a prize that they had won and then told the customer to send in a tax or handling fee. However, no prize would be sent, she said.

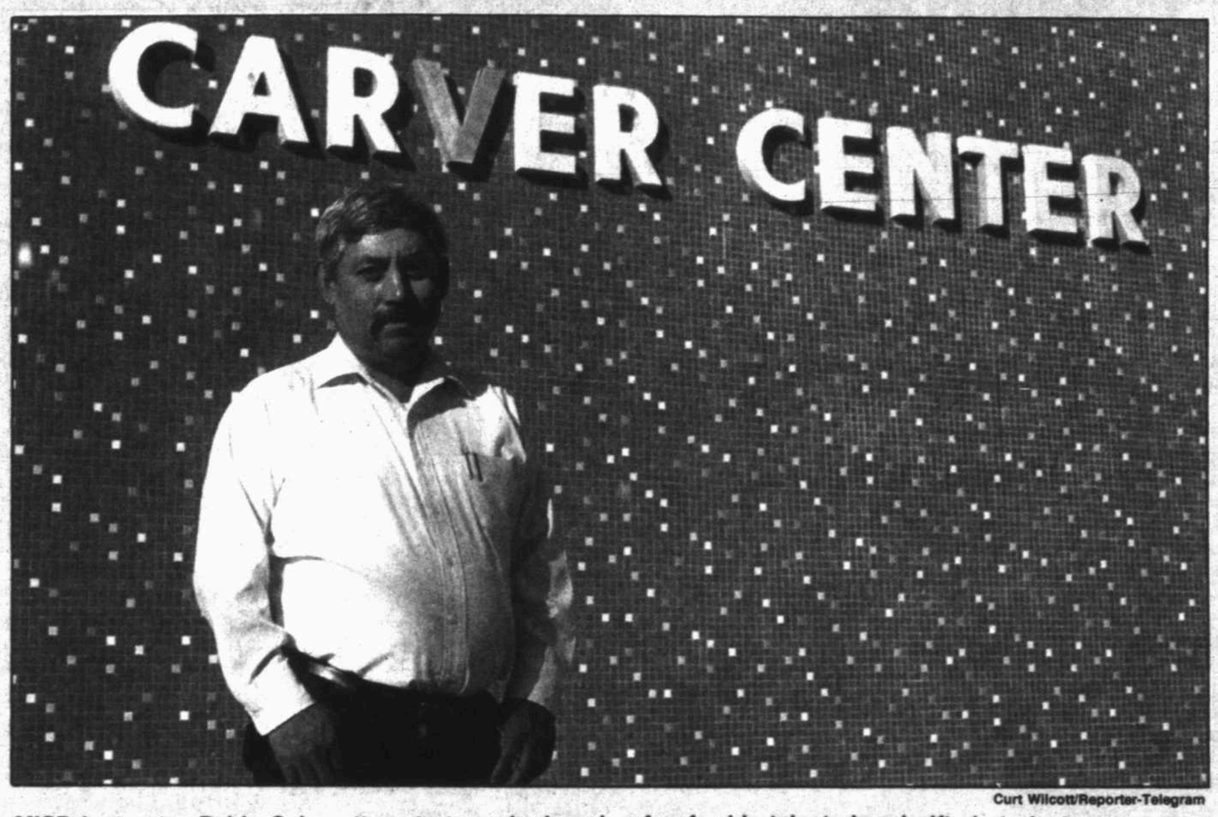

Mrs. Bonner told the jury the telemarketers knew the operation was bogus and no prizes would be awarded.

The prosecutor tried to make the conspiracy charges as simple as possible, but the case started with 19 defendants, four companies and a number of victims.

Mrs. Bonner said the telemarketing scheme was an

■ Students appreciate veteran math-computer science teacher who believes love, respect help foster will to learn.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Treating kids with respect, love and understanding is a necessary first step before any real learning can begin, said veteran teacher Pablo Salas.

One has to understand not only problems particular to a specific age group, but the problems of a specific student as well, Salas said. Only with understanding and respect can any useful communication take place.

"You've got to wean that person to your side — you have to build a trust. Once you've done that, you can do almost anything with them," said Salas, who teaches mathematics and computer skills to gifted and talented fifth-grade students at the Carver school.

Salas is a favorite among students at the school. He has been teaching for 20 years, almost entirely in the Midland Independent School District.

Part of his success comes from his teaching philosophy, he said. He would rather spend time in the beginning to learn about a student and to let that student become comfortable. Teaching comes much more easily and quickly then, he said. "You have to give them room and time to build self-confidence and trust," Salas said.

Although he spends time joking and talking with his five

Violist Sally Chisholm returns to Texas for symphony & chorale performances

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

After being gone more than two years, former Thouvenel String Quartet violist Sally Chisholm finds herself in West Texas this week for performances as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

"I walked in the building (symphony rehearsal hall and office) and I didn't feel like I'd ever left," Ms. Chisholm said during an interview which included violist Igor Fedotov and Don Th. Jaeger, MOSC conductor. "It feels like home."

Ms. Chisholm, now a member of the Pro Arte String Quartet and a professor of viola at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, said she doesn't feel like a guest artist with the MOS. After all, she was principal violist with the orchestra and a member of the Thouvenel String Quartet for 14 years. So, when Jaeger invited her to play the rest of the program with the symphony, she accepted. However, she won't be occupying the viola section's first chair.

"He'll be first chair, and I'll be last chair," Ms. Chisholm said, looking at

GARY OTT

Brain slips into runny egg, speed demon zone

More rambling thoughts . . .

■ No matter how early a person goes to bed, it is always difficult to get up the next morning.

■ Despite all the sex scandals surrounding them, it is still difficult not to feel a sense of reverence when in the company of a priest.

Ott

■ This is the truth. A headline in Monday's newspaper read as follows, "Transsexual federal inmate claims prison rape violated rights." And you say there's nothing interesting to read in the newspaper. You've just got to look for it.

■ Sunday morning is the best time to take a long drive in the country.

■ No matter what your political views are, you can't help but miss a guy like Tip O'Neill. He was from the old school. He'd drink whiskey with you, exchange a few old stories and then go head-to-head with you over a controversial piece of legislation. When it was all over, he'd buy another round.

■ There's something to be said for people like that, in politics or out.

■ The worst thing about the Dallas Cowboys returning to championship form is having to listen to their fans gloat.

■ For the first time in my life I want to be filthy rich.

■ William Blake once said, "You never know what is enough unless you know what is more than enough."

■ In other words, you have to experience "excess" before you can appreciate "moderation."

■ One of life's most frustrating situations is to suddenly awake at 3 in the morning with a great idea and then forget it by the time you get up the next day.

■ No telling how many brillant observations have gone down the drain that way.

■ It is always amusing to watch old TV shows in which the characters use such words as "groovy," "far out" and "give peace a chance."

■ It embarrasses me to no end to realize I actually talked like that at one time.

■ Maybe it is a sign of the times, but you don't hear many young people say "yes sir" and "no sir" these days.

■ By the same token, I hate to have young people refer to me as Mr. Ott. That's my dad. I want to say. Just call me Gary.

■ Conservatives often face a delimma when it comes to the issue of crime and punishment. They want lengthy prison terms for convicted felons, but they don't want to spend the tax dollars it takes to build the prisons.

■ Don't you just hate it when speed demons come roaring up to a stop sign, slam on their brakes at the last possible second and cause you, and the other motorist, to suffer a not-so-mild heart attack?

■ I'm beginning to get gray hair and I can't decide if it makes me look distinguished or just old and tired.

■ Runny eggs and toast with grape jelly on it suddenly sounds very good to me.

■ The original Darrin Stevens was much better than his replacement on "Bewitched."

■ Ankles, when just the right size, can be very sexy on women.

■ It was Thomas Henry Huxley who said, "There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures early in life."

■ Of course, it is possible to overdo a good thing.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Ellis Chapel with Elder Antonio Olague of the Kingdom Hall Jehovah's Witnesses officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Espinosa died Monday at her home.

She was born May 6, 1899, in San Luis Potosi, Mexico where she was reared. She married Alberto Badillo, and the couple later moved to Guadalupe County in 1916. She spent most of her life in Seguin, Lubbock and Big Spring, before moving to Midland in 1985.

She had been a member of Jehovah's Witnesses for more than 40 years.

Survivors include five sons, Pedro L. Badillo of Midland, Ysidro Badillo of San Angelo, Francisco Badillo of Dos Palos, Calif., and Timoteo Badillo and Juan Badillo, both of Odessa; three daughters, Pilar Montez of Dallas, Angela Carrizales of Corpus Christi and Juanita B. Badillo of Midland; 41 grandchildren; 103 great-grandchildren; 66 great-great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Asa Grizzard

Graveside services for Asa Wayne Grizzard will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Grizzard

Grizzard died Saturday. He was born Oct. 5, 1971 in El Paso and had lived in Abilene, Shawnee, Oklahoma and Midland. He graduated from Lee High School in 1989. He was employed by Furrs Supermarket in Midland.

Survivors include his parents, Philip and Grace Smythe of Midland and Asa and Joan Grizzard of Shawnee, Okla.; two sisters, Madeline Garcia of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Evvie Mae Grizzard of Shawnee, Okla.; four stepsisters, Rhonda Shepard and Kathy Mathews, both of Shawnee, Okla., Lisa Mathews of Oklahoma City and Brandy Smythe of Salina, Kan.; his grandparents, Al and Marjorie Evans of Midland; seven aunts; seven uncles; and several nieces and nephews.

Mildred Ethridge

Mildred L. (Ike) Ethridge died Sunday at her residence.

No services are scheduled. Arrangements are under the direction of Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

She was born April 28, 1907, in Midland, where she lived all her life. She owned a cigar store in the Scharbauer Hotel for many years. She later became a Realtor.

Survivors include several nieces and nephews.

Gaylon Strickland

Services for Gaylon N. Strickland will be at 1 p.m. today at Cornerstone Fellowship Church with the Rev. Richard Spencer officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Strickland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers are Bobby Busbee, Michael Foster, Sean Salois, Brian Strickland, Thad Collins and Danny Poole.

Memorials may be made to Midland United Girl's Softball Association Financial Assistance Fund or to the charity of one's choice.

Geneva Pierce

Services for former Midlander Geneva Pierce are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Pierce died Sunday in Sierra Vista, Ariz.

Charles Featherston

Services for Charles T. "Charlie" Featherston of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Eli Borden of Greenwood Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be held later that day in Hobbs, N.M.. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Featherston

Featherston died Saturday at a Houston hospital.

He was born Sept. 5, 1926, in Western Grove, Ark. He was reared in Arkansas.

He enlisted in the U.S. Navy and served during World War II. Following his honorable discharge, he moved to Hobbs.

He married Imogene Clemens on April 10, 1948, in Hobbs. They lived in various cities throughout Texas. The Featherstons moved to Midland in 1969 where he worked for the Western Company. He also worked for Kuykendall Wire Line until his retirement. He was an avid golfer.

INSIGHT: Seminars target family, friends of mentally ill

(From 1B)

Pheil, family support specialist with Permian Basin MHMR.

Ms. Pheil said one topic will deal with "feelings people have in regard to having a mentally ill family member."

She said participants will also be able to experience "what it's like to be a mentally ill person with some role playing."

Another topic will be creating a low-stress atmosphere for mentally ill persons. "Stress exacerbates any problem that they have," Ms. Pheil said. "It's good to try to reduce stress in the home."

She said one session on communication skills will involve speaking about specifics and learning to listen.

An outpatient psychiatrist will also be available to conduct one session.

The organization is offering the workshops as a community outreach project.

Reservations are not required, but are preferred. Persons registering will receive information packets.

For more information, or to register, call Ms. Pheil at 570-3300.

PRIZE: Some suspects admit their role in phone scam

(From 1B)

efficient system which started in one office in Houston before expanding to two with each victim sending anything from $300 to $25,000 to the companies for non-existing prizes.

"You'll need three tools to decide this case: the law, evidence, which is testimony and documents, and your common sense . . . when people set out to swindle old people . . . they don't sit down and write a contract," Mrs. Bonner told the jury.

Each defense attorney had their own defense to Mrs. Bonner's opening remarks.

The alleged ringleader's attorney, Gerald Lopez, told the jury to beware because things are not always what they seem.

"Mr. Big is not McGraw," Lopez said. He claims others who have already exchanged guilty pleas for recommendations of lesser sentences are the organizers of the scheme. Lopez claims Yousef "Joe" David is the ringleader.

"I think the evidence will show McGraw and (George) Nyateng were taken in by Mr. David . . . he used them as unwilling dupes," Lopez said.

Alan Harris, representing Ms. Polley, told the jury to remember his client was not an organizer of the scheme, but just an employee. He said when she joined the telemarketing firm it was legitimate.

Jack Chappell, representing Ms. Sneed, also pointed out his client was simply an employee and being a telemarketer is not a crime.

"The FBI threw out a great big net and drug in a bunch of people," Chappell said.

David Greenhaw, representing Broussard, claims his client was a victim as much as the elderly people who sent in their money to the companies.

"It might be possible these people fell victim to the same thing . . . it started out as a legitimate business when my client went to work for it right before it went down," Greenhaw said.

Attorneys for the other two defendants did not make opening remarks.

Testimony started with Ansell Sims, one of the men who started one of the four telemarketing companies involved in the case.

Sims, 26, of Houston has already entered a guilty plea and is awaiting sentencing for his part in the scheme.

Sims testified he started Bemer Enterprises, which was a legitimate telemarketing firm which sold cleaning products and offered chances for prizes to its customers.

He said later McGraw set up Century Premier Associates (CPA) as a bogus company which claimed to offer prizes but never intended to follow through with delivery of any.

Sims said McGraw set CPA up to make "quick money" to fund another telemarketing operation which would be legitimate. All of the telemarketing was done from Houston to elderly citizens across the country.

The staff would represent themselves as calling from CPA or Bemer and tell the victim he or she had won a cash prize of $10,000 or $37,000, but the victim must first pay taxes or a handling charge, Sims said.

The victim would be instructed to mail a check or money order, made out to CPA, to an address in Houston or Midland. Some of the checks were sent by Federal Express, United Parcel Service or other express companies. He said David would pick up the checks in Midland, deposit them in a bank here and then transfer the money to one of several sources in Houston, in which the telemarketers would then be paid their commissions.

Sims did a demonstration for the jury of how the typical sales pitch was made pressuring the victim to act within 24 hours so they would lose their chance at receiving the money.

Sims said McGraw was the man who ran the CPA office and testified the other five defendants worked as telemarketers making 20-25 percent commission from their sales. He said he made anywhere from nothing to $1,000 in a week's time.

Sims also admitted he perjured himself in September when he lied to a federal grand jury about his participation in the scheme.

But, Sim said he has no reason to lie now because his actions are out in the open.

"I knew CPA was bogus from the start . . . Norris McGraw told me," Sims said.

Patricia Bennett, who has already pleaded guilty to the charges, testified about her participation for three weeks as a telemarketer for CPA.

She said she also knew the customers she called would receive no prize. She said Ms. Polley knew also and spoke to her about sometimes feeling remorse for what she was doing.

Ms. Bennett testified all the telemarketers used false names, which she said is an accepted practice among legitimate telemarketers as well. She said McGraw was the manager for the telemarketing office and she believed David was the apparent boss.

She also called Broussard a "hard-hitter" explaining he made the largest amount of sales. She testified to seeing the defendants making calls to potential customers and said McGraw instructed her on what to say to clients.

The only other witness to testify included a bank employee testifying to bank records of checking accounts for CPA.

CPA's bank records were found last summer when the scheme was discovered.

The indictment indicated the scheme occurred from April 26 to July 17.

On July 30, FBI special agents in Houston executed search warrants at the telemarketing companies and seized phone records which were traced to the CPA victims' homes and the dates of the calls coincided with dates checks were sent to the companies.

Other records seized identified telemarketers using false names, the indictment stated.

Testimony will continue this morning. U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said he expects the case to conclude Wednesday evening.

ARTS: Musicians take time out to discuss style, composers

(From 1B)

Fedotov, who has taken her place in both ensembles.

"He comes to all of the rehearsals," Jaeger chimed in. "She didn't."

The three musicians laughed.

"It's nice to meet my replacement and find he has such a wonderful heart and is such a wonderful musician — so Midland's still in good hands," said Ms. Chisholm, who will be joined by Fedotov in performing the "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B-Flat" by J.S. Bach at today's 8 p.m. concert at Lee High School Auditorium and again at 8 p.m. Thursday at Bonham Junior High School.

"You often find this piece on CD samplers of most popular works," Ms. Chisholm said. "Any time you hear it performed you leave the auditorium in a good mood. It's joyous music."

The two violists, who have not performed together before, will play the piece for an audience with no more than three rehearsals behind them. Yet, both are confident the concerts will go well.

"You play through it and then by the end of the first movement, both people have changed a little," Ms. Chisholm said as Fedotov nodded his head in agreement. "To have a unity, you have to play a few times, and then all of a sudden, you can't imagine having done it any other way than how you are doing it right now. So, you become like one person."

"I agree 100 percent with Sally," Fedotov said. "It's very difficult to play the first movement. When we did it, I became very, very comfortable. I like the timbre, I like the voice of her viola. And it's a very interesting piece. I hope everyone will like it."

"It's a lot of imitation," Jaeger said of the 'Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B-Flat.' "One does something, the other one does it the same. For example, you start talking and I try to do the same thing as fast as you do, with the same rhythm and color.

"It's the years of experience with both of them that allows that to happen in truly the best sense," Jaeger said, referring to Fedotov and Ms. Chisholm's playing together. "Bach would be pleased."

"Bach loved the viola," Ms. Chisholm said. She smiled then added, "He played the viola, like all great composers. Except Brahms."

They all chuckled.

Jaeger spoke first, saying, "I think it's interesting that one of the things about music that sets it apart from most human endeavors is you can take two people that come completely from different parts of the world, and in a matter of moments there is absolute, total and complete communication doing positive things.

"Even if Igor didn't speak a word of English, it wouldn't matter in this endeavor. So, it truly is an international language. And so the moral of that story is we should pay more attention to this kind of human endeavor these days than some that seem to get a lot more attention."

The other piece Ms. Chisholm will be playing is Hugo Wolf's "Italian Serenade." She describes it as "dessert — a gracious, sparkling, charming work originally written for a quartet."

Also featured during the concerts, which are co-sponsored by Dr. and Mrs. Michael Miller, Dr. and Mrs. Roberto Spencer, Drs. Terry and Elvira Burns and Dr. and Mrs. Bart Mayron, will be "Il Guarney Overture" by Gomes and Symphony No. 6 in B-minor, Op. 74 "Pathetique" by Tchaikowsky.

Tickets may be purchased at the symphony office, 563-0921, or at the performance.

An original member of the Thouvenel String Quartet, Ms. Chisholm said she finds her life in Madison, Wis., "very eventful with many different aspects of the job that I have to balance, and brilliant students who are also nice people."

From one of her students, freshman Christina Winrich, she expects great things.

"I tell her she's going to make me famous," Ms. Chisholm said.

The quartet which Ms. Chisholm is a member of is already famous. The Pro Arte String Quartet, which has an 80-year history behind it, was formed by the Queen of Belgium in 1912.

The quartet has been informed that the new queen and king of Belgium will be visiting the quartet next year, Ms. Chisholm said. "I think they're coming to check on us, find out how we are doing."

In addition to her performances with the quartet, Ms. Chisholm is a member of a Minneapolis-based chamber music group and finds herself going to Europe frequently.

"So, I'm a gold card member of American Airlines now," said the violist who is married to violinist Eugene Purdue, another founding member of the Thouvenel String Quartet. Purdue is teaching in Chicago and privately in Madison. This summer he will be performing in Switzerland, along with Ms. Chisholm, and participating in various festivals in the United States.

Yet, Ms. Chisholm misses West Texas.

"I miss the people in Midland and Odessa. Scenery is not a big thing for me one way or the other. It never was. But I find that people I even only knew one year in Midland I know more deeply than people I've known for three years in Madison. And that says a lot about this part of the country. So anyone that wants to move up there, I'll find them a place because we need them."

PHILOSOPHY: 'I love going to work,' Salas says

classes at Carver, he believes his teaching style assists student's learning as well as self-esteem. "I feel that it's working pretty good for me — I love going to work," Salas said.

Because of this enhanced relationship with his students, Salas is often called on to help with students' personal lives. "Some people think kids are carefree, but they do have a lot of worries," he said. Sometimes an unruly child needs more understanding than correction, he added.

Regarding teaching techniques, Salas prefers a fast-paced, somewhat loud and lively class where students are free to "bounce ideas off each other," he said. Salas often jokes around to prime his students for such cooperative learning sessions. "You've got to be creative — get these kids to think," he said.

In writing curriculum for his classes, Salas often takes high school material and reworks it for teaching at his students' level. A sign at the front of his class proclaims, "All things are difficult before they are easy."

Taking time to work through problems with his students is important to removing psychological barriers such as math anxiety. "When you have finally taken that last bit of block out of there, you can really watch these people bloom," Salas said.

To remove these mental blocks about math, Salas will have his student look up a word such as "line." After they read the many definitions of "line," he writes "3x3 = " on the board. "There's only one answer to that — it's always going to be nine. Nothing is as easy as math," he said.

Salas uses constant positive reinforcement in his classroom.

ACLU, NRA accuse federal agents of abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union and gun-rights advocates joined forces Monday to accuse federal agents of using deadly force without cause and conducting illegal or ill-advised searches.

Citing in particular last year's bloody raid on the Branch Davidian sect's complex in Waco, Texas, they urged President Clinton to name a national commission to review the policies and practices of all federal law enforcement agencies.

"This review is necessitated by widespread abuses of civil liberties and human rights committed by these agencies" and their failure to correct such practices, the groups said in a letter to Clinton.

Laura Murphy Lee, director of the ACLU's Washington office, decried the lack of citizen oversight over the estimated 79,000 officers in 53 separate federal agencies. Citizen involvement in state and local law enforcement departments has led to reforms, she said.

The federal Bureau of Indian Affairs does not even have an office for complaints, said Gene Guerrero, field director for the ACLU's local office.

"This call . . . underscores the fact that government potentially is the most powerful enemy of civil rights, of human liberty, of the people themselves," said John Snyder of the Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms.

"We all need to stand together in this as citizens," Snyder said when asked how the gun groups, normally viewed as conservative, wound up in a news conference with the ACLU, usually portrayed by its opponents as liberal.

Richard Gardiner of the National Rifle Association said his group's concern was mainly the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF), which monitors federal gun dealers and enforces federal gun controls.

ATF investigated the Branch Davidian cult led by David Koresh. ATF's raid on the cult's complex last February to execute a search warrant turned into a shootout that left four ATF agents and six cult members dead. The ensuing siege ended in an inferno set by cult members after the FBI poked holes in the walls and pumped in tear gas on April 19.

"Most egregious," said Gardiner, is that the ATF agent who signed the affidavit supporting the search warrant rejected Koresh's invitation through a gun dealer in July 1992 to "come out to the Mount Carmel center."

(Texas Academic Skills Program) exams," said Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

Cates said that more class openings are available now than in previous years, when students who had registered early but not paid fees were retained on the class rolls. "We have purged names of all students who have not paid their tuition and fees, so that more class slots aren't filled with ineligible students. We also will try to keep marginal classes open as long as possible before cancelling them," he said. "With only one day of registration this spring, compared with two days last fall, we should be able to take care of demands better."

Savings ideas for a child's college education

If your child is an above-average academic achiever, don't start packing his or her bags for college just yet. These days it takes more than good grades to get a degree.

If your child will begin attending a state university within the next four or five years, you'll pay roughly $43,000 for a four year education.

"Worse yet, college costs continue to climb," Van Pearcy explained. "If your child won't start college for another 15-years, you'll pay nearly $100,000 for a four-year education. And remember, these are the costs of state universities - - the price tag on a four-year education at a private school is even steeper."

Van Pearcy, local investment and retirement counselor with Edward D. Jones and Co., runs across many West Texans that have been misguided in their investment selection for college savings, and also finds that many parents wait too long to start planning/saving for their children's education fund.

While there's no way to completely eliminate the sting from saving for a child's education, Van recommends four prudent investments for making the saving process as painless as possible, including 2 types of zero-coupon bonds, mutual funds and certificates of deposit.

The first type of zeros, zero-coupon government bonds, are backed by the U.S. government (this is not your commonly known U.S. Savings Bond.) With this investment you set aside a smaller sum today. The money grows at a compounded rate to a much larger sum by the time your child finishes high school. The interest from zero-coupon government bonds is automatically reinvested, so your money grows more quickly than if you take possession of your earnings.

The other type of zero is zero-coupon municipal bonds. These bonds are backed by the city, state or local government that issues them or are guaranteed by an insurance company. zero-coupon municipal bonds will save you tax dollars. All zero-coupon municipal bonds are exempt from federal income taxes.

Van Pearcy, local investment representative with Edward D. Jones & Co., computes a projection for college costs so that he can help his clients design an education savings plan for their children.

Another type of investment that offers potential rising income and appreciation of principal is good, quality mutual funds with growth- and -income objectives. Because mutual funds represent pooled investment dollars of many investors, you gain the advantages of professional management and diversification. Many quality funds have excellent records of staying ahead of inflation and the costs associated with higher education.

The last tool available for saving for your child's education is certificates of deposit (CD). These familiar and very safe investments allow you to earn a little higher rate of interest than you can earn from a savings account. CD's are fixed-income investments that are available in both short-and long-term maturities. However, you may suffer a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Depending on you situation, any one or a combination of these investments can provide an opportunity for you to save for your child's college education. Pearcy recommends you be careful of different types of investment suggestions. Many of the so-called "bells & whistles" on other types of investments are not being told to prospective college savings investors.

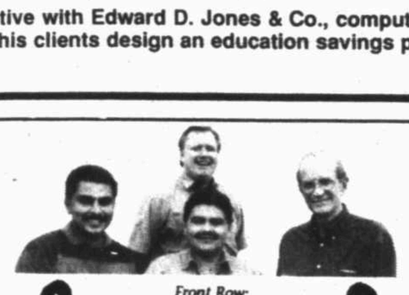

"We now have a new college projection system in place to help us with our clients. This program can produce a report listing projected college costs as well as the amount that would have to be invested today at various interest rates to help prepare for a child's future college expenses, Pearcy commented. "We have on-line access to costs at nearly 3,000 colleges and universities across the country. As a service to our clients, we print these for free so clients can take them home to discuss the different alternatives available to them."

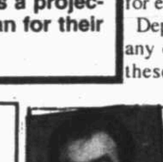

Van Pearcy's investment office with Edward D. Jones & Co. is located at 2020 West Cuthbert, across the street from the high school football stadium. Van was raised in Andrews, Texas and received his bachelors degree in economics and his MBA degree from the University of Notre Dame.

If you would to visit with Van about college savings ideas, retirement or other investments, you can make a no-obligation appointment by calling 683-1516. There is no fee for consultation.

Emmitt runs away with league MVP award

AP Laserphoto

Dallas' Emmitt Smith rushed for 1,486 yards and caught 57 passes to narrowly beat San Francisco's Steve Young in the MVP balloting.

■ Emmitt Smith becomes first Cowboy to win most valuable player honor.

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — Emmitt Smith missed two games and half of another. The Dallas Cowboys lost all three, proving why Smith is the most valuable player in the NFL.

The Cowboys running back, selected Monday as MVP in voting by 81 national media members, narrowly beat last year's winner, Steve Young of the San Francisco 49ers. Smith, the league's leading rusher for the third straight season, received 26 votes, while Young, the top passer in the NFL, had 21.

Smith is the first Cowboys player to win the award.

"It's a great honor because it means you've done what you're supposed to do and done it as well as anyone," said Smith, who has won three consecutive rushing titles. He ran for 1,486 yards this season, with nine touchdowns, and caught 57 passes, with one TD.

Only the third running back since 1980 to be named MVP, Smith held out through training camp and the first two games of the season, which Dallas lost to Washington and Buffalo. The Cowboys (12-4) also fell at Atlanta when Smith bruised a quadricep in his right leg.

"We're a different team with Emmitt, that's obvious," guard Nate Newton said. "He's our big-play guy, the one we rely on."

After Dallas' first two defeats, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones couldn't put together a $13.6 million contract fast enough. The players were mad at Jones, coach Jimmy Johnson was angry and the fans were incensed.

With Smith available for an entire game, the Cowboys were 12-1 this season.

"You could see the difference on the field from the first time we played the Redskins," Jones said.

In his four NFL seasons, Smith has rushed for 5,699 yards and 50 touchdowns. He also has caught 189 passes.

Smith was aided in pursuit of the rushing title by injuries to rivals Barry Sanders, Barry Foster and Thurman Thomas.

"If Barry (Sanders) was still healthy, there would have been no way I could catch him," Smith said. "I guess everything just balanced out."

Young passed for 4,023 yards and 29 touchdowns, leading the league with a 101.5 rating. He overcame a thumb injury that hampered him early in the season and, in one five-game midseason stretch, led the 49ers to 190 points.

Jerry Rice, selected Offensive Player of the Year last week, was third in the MVP balloting with 15 votes. He was followed by Denver quarterback John Elway with ABILENE — West Texas A&M forward Roy O'Neale and Abilene Christian forward-center Sandie Kyllo have been named the Lone Star Conference players of the week.

O'Neale, the second straight Buffalo to win the award, had a total of 40 points and 17 rebounds in a victory over Oklahoma Science and Arts and a loss to Southern Colorado.

Lee, MHS grab big wins

Rebel run puts away AHS

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

It's early in the District 4-5A basketball season, but defending champion Midland Lee made a major playoff statement at Chaparral Center Monday night with a 74-51 shellacking of Abilene High.

Lee, Abilene High, Abilene Cooper and Midland High are the four major teams in the league favored to make a playoff push this year. Only three can go. Lee moves to 3-1 in league play with the victory while AHS falls to 1-2.

"This was a big win in jockeying for playoff position," says Lee coach Jon House. "Cooper, Midland High and us are the only teams left in the league with less than two losses. Our goal was to get out of this week with a 4-1 record and we still have a chance to do that. We play at Odessa Permian Friday. I think we would be in really good shape at 4-1."

For a while at the Chap Monday, it looked like Lee might have to chew a few finger nails to edge out a win with 12 lead changes and six ties with the Eagles. But then came the run.

Lee erupted for an 11-0 run to end the first half to take a 39-29 lead at the half. Abilene High never recovered as the Rebs put the game away with an 18-7 advantage in the third period.

Sean Low had his average scoring night with 24 points to lead all scorers, but he had a personal high 14 rebounds.

"I just blocked out and tried to play hard all night," Low said of the rebounding effort. "This was the biggest win of the year for us."

Low had 12 points in each half, but Caesar Brannon and Michael Nunn split halves at being scoring heroes. Brannon had 12 of his 14 points in the first half and Nunn had 14 of his 20 points in the second half, scoring 12 in the third quarter alone. Nunn's third quarter tear, buried the Eagles.

"With Sean getting all the rebounds, I had to find something else to do," Nunn said. "I usually get more rebounds.

"Coach (House) said at the half that we needed to go out and put them away. If it was my shot, I took it. Everything just seemed to go in tonight."

Duo join 1,000-point club

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Since the 1992 season, the pair of Julie Chancellor and Amy Alcala have been almost inseparable — both on the court and off it.

Alcala

Monday night was no exeption as Chancellor broke the 1,000-point mark for her career with 3:09 left in the first quarter and Alcala followed Chancellor's lead, knocking down her 1,000th point with 3:29 left in the second quarter as the Midland High girls took a 68-42 District 4-5A girls basketball victory over Abilene Cooper in the MHS gym.

It's a special moment when a player hits that landmark number. For two players to do it in one season is, to say the least, unusual. But for teammates to break that barrier in the same game is something special indeed.

And it couldn't have happened to two closer friends.

"There is nobody I'd rather share it with than Amy," Chancellor said.

But before this career scoring business gets out of hand, there were more important things at hand Monday night — like winning another district basketball game.

Chancellor

Midland continued to do what it does best — cause turnovers — and that was ultimately what did in the Lady Cougars, who coughed it up 29 times to just 17 for the Lady Bulldogs.

The Midland bench also did a number on the Cooper team, which suited up only nine

Chaparrals roll by Plainsmen; No. 1 OC next

Staff Report

BORGER — Midland College went into Borger with a game against No. 1-ranked Odessa College lingering just ahead, but the Chaps made sure not to overlook Frank Phillips, building a 40-3 lead in the first half on its way to a 133-87 win in the conference opener for both teasm.

Midland improves to 18-0 on the year and will face Odessa College Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

Seven Chaparrals scored in double figures, led by Earl Tyson with 21 points, including four three-pointers in the first half as Midland built a 73-25 halftime lead.

Frank Phillip, now 3-11 on the year, actually outscored Midland 62-60 in the second half as Midland played the bench.

Sophomore forward Steve Walston, who was ailing with shin splints prior to Midland's game with Bacone College on Saturday, did not play. Sophomore guard Luis Cambraia suffered a leg injury during the frist half of the game and did not return. His status is uncertian for Thursday's game.

The Chaps led 40-3 with 8:35 to play in the first half after a Tyson jumper. Tyson scored 11 points in the first seven minutes of the game, including three three-pointers. Midland led 52-8 after Tellas Lampley's three-pointer with 6:38 to play. Cambraia, 6-4, sophomore from Sao Paulo, Brazil, was injured during first half.

The Chaps dominated the boards, outrebounding FPC 60-19 for the game.

Midland narrowly missed the school record for most points in a game set earlier this year when Midland defeated Cisco 136-80 at Chap Center on Nov. 8.

No. 6 Cooper halts Bulldogs, 71-59

Staff Report

ABILENE — Andrae Patterson scored a game high 25 points and No. 6 state-ranked Abilene Cooper nailed 10 three-point shots to beat Midland High, 71-59, here Monday night at the Cooper gym in a battle of unbeaten District 4-5A squads.

Cooper is now a perfect 4-0 in 4-5A play and 17-4 for the season while MHS fell to 2-1 and 13-8. Still, the loss had little impact on MHS' playoff run since Midland Lee is the only other 4-5A team left with less than two losses.

Cooper's Chad Greeson hit five three-pointers, and that as much as Patterson, was a big reason for the MHS loss. Bulldog Donald Carter had 24 points and Jumon Hailey had 20 in the losing effort. John Marc Sanon came in with 12 points.

MHS led by as many as nine points in the first quarter, but saw Cooper go on a 26-14 run in the second period.

The Bulldogs will host 0-4 Odessa High at Chaparral Center Friday at 8 p.m. OHS fell to San Angelo, 82-72, in overtime Monday. San Angelo didn't win a district game last year.

MHS got a big game out of team leaders Carter and Hailey as needed, but it wasn't quite enough.

Only four Bulldogs scored in the game.

Oiler GM confronts Ryan on latest blunder

■ Oilers management calls Ryan in after Buddy tells a reporter that Kevin Gilbride should be "selling insurance."

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Buddy Ryan, called onto management carpet for the second time in a week, apologized Monday for his latest outburst against offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride.

"I am through discussing anything or anyone related to the Oilers except those things which pertain to my specific responsibilities as defensive coordinator," Ryan said in a statement.

General Manager Mike Holovak met with the defensive coordinator Monday, a day after Ryan's latest blast against Gilbride.

"He's not going to run over me the way he runs over some people," Ryan told the newspaper. "He's a wimp. He's got no business coaching in the pros."

Ryan, who had punched Gilbride on national television a few days earlier, added that the offensive coordinator "should be selling insurance." The comments to an Inquirer reporter came a day after Ryan was called into owner Bud Adams' office for the sideline slugging.

Ryan has said he thought his interview with the Inquirer was not for publication.

"I regret my comments that appeared in yesterday's' (Sunday) Philadelphia Inquirer," Ryan said. "Any remarks that were made were spoken off the record to a friend of mine who is a sports writer for that publication.

"I am sincerely sorry that it was made public and I regret any embarrassment that it has caused the Houston Oilers."

Coach Jack Pardee said Ryan's comments were unintentional.

"Buddy didn't want that to come out," Pardee said. "It wasn't supposed to come out but it did. He's very concerned about it. This doesn't help him out as well as the team.

"In the heat of battle you have to keep your wits. Cool heads must prevail."

Ryan's fight with Gilbride was replayed numerous times during and after the Jan. 2 game against the New York Jets.

The incident came with 37 seconds left in the first half, when Gilbride called two passes. The second pass was fumbled and recovered by the Jets, setting up a missed field goal.

"I guarantee you won't see him making calls like that again," Ryan said in the Inquirer story. "It's a third-down offense, not a pro offense."

Adams said he was surprised by

Lee girls drop one to Abilene

ABILENE — Midland Lee's girls basketball team let one slip away here Monday night as Abilene High overcame a 13-point third deficit to nip the Lady Rebels 47-42.

And with the loss, Lee may have lost any chance at making a playoff push after suffering its fifth consecutive district loss. With the win Abilene High improves to 10-9 overall and 3-2 in league play. Lee drops to 7-12 overall.

"The kids are saying, 'we've won the game but we've been outscored,'" said Lee coach Elise Kail, "and that was the case tonight. The kids are coming back together are getting back on track.

"In the fourth quarter we went back to some of our bad habits and it cost us."

Lee led 40-25 with 3:45 left in the third period, but scored only two points in the last 11:43 of play.

Abilene won the game at the free throw line, connecting on 11 free throw compared to just four for Lee.

Lee center Krissy Woodard led the Lady Rebels with 13 points.

Claire Wright hit a three-pointer with five seconds remaining to lift the Lee junior varsity to a 42-41 win over Abilene. Wright led Lee with 14 points.

In sophomore action, Abilene defeated Lee 39-11.

MHS boys win soccer opener

LUBBOCK — The Midland High boys soccer team opened the 1994 season with a 4-1 win over Lubbock Monterey here Monday.

Goals were scored by Kailey Miller, Tyler Kuerger, David Farias and Jesse Dominguez.

Midland will travel to Austin to participate in the Warrior Classic Saturday and Sunday.

MHS girls drop soccer opener

Despite a two-goal effort from Midland High's Jacque Ketter, Midland High dropped its season opener to Lubbock Monterey by a 6-3 count Tuesday at Dunnagen Park.

"We are improving and I am encouraged by the results," said coach Scott Hodkinson.

Ketter scored an unassisted goal in the thirteenth minute of the first half which gave MHS a 1-0 lead. After Monterey tied the game at 1, Ketter scored in the 30th minute, assisted Carey Emerson to give MHS a 2-1 lead.

Monterey tied the score at 2-2 before half and then scored four unanswered goals in the second half before Midland High's Amber Middleton scored in the 78th minute of the game.

MHS returns to action Saturday at 2 p.m. against Amarillo Caprock at the Midland High soccer field.

Lady 'Stangs whip Wink

Midland Christian rallied from a five-point first quarter deficit to storm past Wink 56-30 in girls basketball play Monday.

MCHS held Wink to one point in the second period while building a 31-8 halftime lead.

Tammy Hull led Midland Christian, now 10-7, with 17 points. Hendi Hutton and Amanda Miller scored 11 points each.

"We went the first half of the first quarter without scoring and then scored quickly," said Midland Christian coach Gordon Awtry.

MCHS hosts Stanton tonight at 6:30 p.m.

MCHS slips past Wink in boys play

Midland Christian, playing without two starters and the team's sixth man due to academic suspension, used pressure defense to defeat Wink 58-48 Monday night.

MCHS, now 9-7 overall, was without Chad Bayley, Lathan Houghton and Glen Bishop for the game, but received a big game from Kyle Jackson, who scored a game-high 20 points.

"We held onto the ball early and then got some baskets out of our transition game," said MCHS coach Byron Myers.

MCHS will host Stanton tonight at the MCHS gym.

Lee Frosh girls rip Nimitz, 50-28

The Lee Freshman Gray girls defeated Odessa Nimitz 50-28 Monday behind the 19 points by Jamie Rhoads and nine points by Adrianne Phillips. The Gray team is now 11-2 on the season.

Alamo Gray wins 7th garde title

Robert Belcher scored a game-high 22 points to lead Alamo Gray to a 52-41 win over Alamo Red in the Midland seventh grade boys city championship Saturday at Alamo Junior High.

J.P. Ratliff and Matt Winston scored nine points apiece for Gray.

Gray completed the year undefeated at 11-0 with the win while Alamo Red concluded its season 9-1.

In the consolation game, San Jacinto Green defeated Goddard Black 58-57.

Lee Maroon nips Midland Purple

Allison Bradshaw scored 10 points to lead Lee Maroon to a 34-30 win over Midland Purple in freshman girls basketball Tuesday.

Lee Maroon beats Midland Purple

John Norman had 23 points and Ricky Green 20 as Lee Freshman Maroon defeated cross town rival Midland Freshman Purple 73-58 Monday.

Antwan Alexander also had 14 points for Maroon, which climbed to 4-1 in conference play and 7-3 for the season.

Midland Gold nips Crockett

ODESSA — Midland Freshman Gold had three players in double figures to defeat Odessa Crockett 56-51 in boys freshman action Tuesday.

Gold, now 7-2 on the year, was led by John Stephenson with 14 points. Jerome Eldridge and Jeffery Keith scored 10 points apiece.

In girls play, Odessa Crockett beat Midland Gold 72-47.

Jessica Moss led Gold, now 6-3 overall, with 12 points while Shelley Ray added 11 points and Cristy Cornelius scored 10 points.

guard who came into the game averaging 26 points per outing, was held to 15 points by Lee, eight of which came in the fourth period when it was no contest. Wilson came into the game with 79 three-pointers. He hit only two of eight threes against Lee.

"They didn't have the threes that killed us," House said. "That was probably a big key in the game, but Abilene never really recovered from the run we had right before the half."

Lee is now tied for second place with Midland High at 3-1. Abilene Cooper, at 4-0, is the only unbeaten team left in the race after a 69-59 win over 2-1 MHS.

In an oddity, Lee's Joel Skaggs didn't score in the game, but hauled down seven rebounds. David Hughes had seven points and six rebounds. Abilene's Koby Watherford had 12 rebounds for the Eagles, but only four points. AHS' Ryan Curtis had 13 points.

In junior varsity action, Lee climbed to 3-1 with a 66-55 win over AHS and is now 7-12 for the year. Craig Sawyer led the way with 17 points and John Thomas had 16 while J.Russell had 10. Jeff Williams led Abilene with 14 points while Moses Hall and Charles Hankins each canned 13 points.

players to 12 Lady Bulldogs. Reserves Veronica Poage and Jamie Rand finished with 10 and eight points respectively.

Midland improved to 5-0 with the win and 21-3, setting up a key showdown between Odessa High — also unbeaten in district — Friday night at 6:15 p.m. at Chaparral Center. Odessa survived a talented San Angelo Central team 44-40 to improve to 5-0 and 22-3. Midland Lee (7-12, 0-5) continued to slide in the district race with a 47-42 loss to Abilene High.

And Alcala and Chancellor were both more concerned about the bigger picture.

"I had no idea (about the career mark)," Chancellor said. "Coach (Jim Raughton) has told us that if we go out and play our game, all the record-breaking will take care of itself."

Alcala added, "I'm really not concerned with records. All I want is for us to have a great season and for everybody to do good."

When all was said and done, senior Chancellor, who came into the game with 995 points for three seasons, led the Lady Bulldogs with 18 points and finished up with 1,113 points. Alcala, a junior who was halfway to 1,000 points last year with 555 total points, finished with 11 for the game and 1,003 for her second season.

Not only are Chancellor and Alcala teammates, but the two are best friends, making the night even more special. Chancellor took Alcala under her wing last year during the junior's first year on the varsity squad.

"That's what upperclassmen do," Chancellor said of her mentor role. "But it wasn't hard to become friends with Amy. She's such a good person and a great friend."

Raughton, who has been saying all season long that his team is a special group, said the double landmark was a special point in his career.

"I wish we could have done something more special. I wish we could give them a boat or a car," Raughton joked. "That's super for them to get that in one night and they really rely on one another. A lot of times you don't see that."

Since Alcala will have one more season, she will likely end up with the most points between the two. But it will be an exciting race until the end of the season to see which one finishes with the most career points. Alcala, who is averaging 17.6 points a game is a strong bet. Chancellor averages just 16 a clip but ahead by 10 points.

"It will probably be her," Chancellor said.

In the junior varsity game, Midland whalloped Cooper by a score of 71-37 to improve to 5-0 in district play. Laura Childress led the way with 19 points while Kendra Kendricks and Ogonna Merritt each finished with 17 for the Lady Bulldogs.

Cowboys sue 16 former players

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys on Monday sued 16 former players for breach of contract, saying the workers' compensation claims the players filed amounts to double payments.

If successful, the team could recover almost $900,000 paid by the team's insurance company, Cowboys attorney Darrell Adkerson said.

"The Cowboys are protecting their own interests because the players have been abusing the system and double dipping," Adkerson said. "In legalese, (the players) are getting double recovery when they're not legally allowed to do so. Nobody should receive double recovery for anything."

When injured, the players — including former stars Tony Hill, John Dutton, Michael Downs and Doug Cosbie — often missed several games or even a full season.

Still, they received their regular salaries from the team, Adkerson said.

But they violated a portion of the standard NFL contract by seeking extra money through workers compensation benefits, according to the lawsuit filed in state district court.

This is the second time the Cowboys have sought repayment from a former player. They won their case against Scott Ankrom last August, Adkerson said.

Magic casts spell over Rockets, 115-100

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal and Anfernee Hardaway scored 28 points apiece, and Orlando used a 13-0 fourth-quarter run to break open a close game and defeat Houston 115-100 Monday night.

■ NBA Roundup

Orlando outscored Houston 17-4 in the first eight minutes of the final period, and became just the fifth team in 30 games to shoot at least 50 percent against the Rockets, who lead the league in field-goal defense.

After averaging 14 points in two games against Hakeem Olajuwon last season, O'Neal held his own against the Houston center. He made 13 of 19 shots, grabbed seven rebounds and blocked one shot.

Olajuwon had 26 points, 11 rebounds and five blocks.

Hardaway was the difference, though. The Magic's 6-foot-7 guard used his size and quickness to shoot over and drive around Houston's smaller guards and slower forwards.

He had four points during the decisive run, first beating Robert Horry off the dribble for a layup and then posting up the 5-11 Scott Brooks for a jump shot and a 96-86 lead with seven minutes left.

With Vernon Maxwell sidelined for the second straight game because of an irregular heartbeat, the Rockets lacked the spark to come back after trailing 86-82 entering the fourth quarter.

Horry finished with 12 points for Houston, which shot 32 percent in the fourth quarter, and Sam Cassell contributed 14 in a reserve role. Nick Anderson, Donald Royal and Scott Skiles each had 16 points for Orlando, which shot 52 percent.

76ers 99, Celtics 94

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Hornacek had 31 points and 10 rebounds, and Philadelphia overcame a rally by slumping Boston in the final period for a victory.

Philadelphia's Clarence Weatherspoon added 20 points and 12 rebounds for his eighth straight and 16th double-double in the last 19 games.

The Celtics lost their third straight game and 11th in 13. Boston is now 13-21, its worst start after 34 games since it was 13-20 in 1978-79.

Kevin Gamble, benched in coach Chris Ford's shakeup of his starting lineup, led the Celtics with 26 points. Sherman Douglas and Robert Parish had 13 points apiece.

No. 3 Jayhawks grab conference opener

■ Top 25 Roundup

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Senior Steve Woodberry tied his career high with 26 points and sparked a run midway through the second half as third-ranked Kansas beat Oklahoma 94-84 Monday night in the Big Eight opener for both teams.

Kansas outrebounded Oklahoma 57-41 and has now beaten every team on the boards in its 12-game winning streak. The Sooners shot 42 percent, the first team to shoot better than 36 percent in the Kansas streak.

Greg Ostertag had a career-high 14 rebounds and scored 11 points for Kansas (16-1).

The loss wiped out a brilliant offensive performance by Jeff Webster for Oklahoma (8-4). Webster, who has been on a tear in five games since Christmas, scored 30 points.

Kansas scored the last nine points of the first half to take a 49-46 lead, and Patrick Richey hit a 3-pointer and another basket at the start of the second half to give the Jayhawks a 54-46 lead.

Oklahoma fought back to within 69-65, but the Jayhawks forced two turnovers and went back up 72-65. Richey deflected a pass intended for Ryan Minor and went the length of the floor for a dunk.

No. 2 Duke 89, Brown 71

DURHAM, N.C. — Cherokee Parks scored 25 points and Grant Hill had 19 as second-ranked Duke played another uninspiring game against an unheralded team, beating Brown.

Instead of the higher level of play that marked victories over Michigan, Iowa and Georgia Tech, the Blue Devils (10-0) played without enthusiasm in the first half. That allowed the Bears to make a fight out of a game in which they were expected to be whipped.

No. 14 Connecticut 75, No. 16 Syracuse 67

HARTFORD, Conn. — Donyell Marshall had 20 points, 11 rebounds and five blocked shots as Connecticut pulled away from Syracuse.

The Huskies (13-1) are 4-0 in the Big East for the first time. Syracuse (9-2, 2-2) lost in its first road game of the season.

Tarleton gets LSC approval

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tarleton State University was approved as a Division II member of the NCAA Monday, clearing the way for the school's acceptance into the Lone Star Conference.

The university was given NCAA II status by voters at the National Collegiate Athletic Association conference. Lone Star Conference presidents already had approved Tarleton's league membership pending the NCAA approval.

Conference members are Abilene Christian University, Angelo State University, University of Central Oklahoma, East Texas State University, Eastern New Mexico University, Texas A&M-Kingsville, Texas Woman's University and West Texas A&M University.

Prices sink

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures prices fell sharply Monday on indications the OPEC cartel would not meet soon, damaging hopes of lower production to boost sagging prices.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, light sweet crude for February delivery dropped 65 cents to settle at $14.67 per barrel.

Local crude buyers lowered their posted price 75 cents to $13 a barrel.

The sell-off was linked to a report in the Middle East Economic Survey that the prospects for an OPEC meeting were unlikely before the Islamic holy month of Ramadan begins in early February.

The publication also reported that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries produced an average of 24.8 million barrels daily in December, above its 24.52 million barrel ceiling.

"Last week the market had rallied in anticipation that there could be an OPEC meeting," said Andrew Lebow, senior broker and analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc. "I think the story dashed some of those hopes."

Natural gas for February delivery rose 0.1 cent to $2.157 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Desk, Derrick

Carol Reinert CPA of Morrison, Reinert & Co. will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Midland Desk and Derrick Club.

The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Reservations can be made by calling 682-5371.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most currencies Monday as investors decided the damage done by weak U.S. employment figures last week wasn't as bad as feared.

Gold prices dropped. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $385.00 a troy ounce, off $1.40 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar ended at 112.25 yen, up from 111.90 yen on Friday.

Dow surges

NEW YORK — Stocks rose broadly Monday, with the Dow Jones industrial average and other major market indicators setting record highs amid investor optimism about the economy.

The Dow rose 44.74 points to 3,865.51, eclipsing its previous record of 3,820.77 set on Friday. It was the blue-chip average's fourth consecutive record high.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Midwest houses stay most affordable

■ Jackson, Mich., recaptures top spot on builders' quarterly index.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Midwest remained the least expensive region in the nation to buy a house during the July-September period, with the Jackson, Mich. market reclaiming the "most affordable" title.

The National Association of Home Builders said Monday that Jackson, with a 94.8 score, recaptured the top spot in its Housing Affordability Index, a position it last held during the second quarter of 1992.

The index measures the ability of the typical family to purchase a home in its own market by comparing median family income with median home price. The median means half of the homes cost more and half cost less, or that half of the incomes were more and half less.

The South followed the Midwest as the most affordable region. The Northeast and West, particularly California, were least affordable.

"The Midwest market is a strong area of the nation for affordability," said Home Builders President J. Roger Glunt. "But with mortgage interest rates still so low, homes are more affordable today in just about every area of the country."

San Francisco remained at the bottom of the index, a ranking it has held since the Home Builders began compiling the listings in the first quarter of 1991. It had a score of just 17.5.

But the Home Builders said even the most expensive areas like San Francisco continued to show improved affordability as interest rates moved downward from 7.27 percent in the second quarter to 7.04 percent in the third.

The third-quarter index was based on 600,000 sales of new and existing homes in 188 metropolitan areas.

The Midwest placed 19 markets on the Top 25 list, which also included four areas in the Northeast and one each in the South and West.

The West had 19 of the 25 least affordable markets including 17 in California alone. The Northeast had five and the South one.

Besides Jackson in the Midwest, the most affordable markets by region were Nashua, N.H., in the Northeast; Brazoria, Texas, in the South, and Pueblo, Colo., in the West.

Stamford, Conn., in the Northeast; El Paso in the South, and Chicago in the Midwest joined the West's San Francisco as the least affordable markets in their regions.

Jackson jumped from fourth place on the most affordable list in the second quarter and replaced the Champaign-Urbana-Rantoul, Ill., area as No. 1.

The Home Builders said the median income in Jackson was $38,700 in the third quarter. According to the mortgage underwriting standards used for calculating the index, at the prevailing mortgage rate of 7.04 percent, a family could afford to purchase a home costing 3.5 times its annual income, or $135,450. In the Jackson area, 94.8 percent of the homes were priced at or below $135,450.

At the same time, the median income in San Francisco was $54,300 and the median price, $280,000, meaning the typical family could afford a home costing $190,050. Only 17.5 percent of the homes there were priced at or below $190,050.

Nationally, the median price in the July-September period rose to $110,000, from $109,000 during the prior three months, while the national household income remained unchanged at $39,700.

That meant the typical American family could afford to buy 65.1 percent of the homes offered for sale across the country, unchanged from the April-June quarter thanks to lower mortgage rates.

HealthTrust to buy EPIC for $1 billion

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — HealthTrust Inc. announced Monday a deal to buy EPIC Holdings, Inc., of Dallas for $1 billion and create a network of 115 hospitals in 21 states.

HealthTrust is the nation's seventh largest health care system, with 81 hospitals in 21 states and revenues of $2.4 billion in revenues in 1993.

EPIC, the second largest employee-owned company in the nation, had revenues last year of $1.02 billion.

The purchase of EPIC must be approved by stockholders before it is final. In addition, debt consent solicitations under which HealthTrust will take responsibility for some EPIC liabilities must be finalized.

Paramount battle passes another milepost, no end in sight

NEW YORK (AP) — QVC Network Inc. announced today that it would continue its 4-month-old battle against Viacom Inc. for control of Paramount Communications Inc.

QVC said it would extend its tender offer for Paramount until Jan. 21. The action followed Viacom's eleventh-hour decision late Friday to revise and extend its bid for Paramount.

Both QVC and Viacom's offers were to have expired early last Saturday.

The Paramount board, which has embraced the QVC bid, said it would consider the latest Viacom offer this week.

Viacom, the owner of MTV and other cable channels, is offering more cash than QVC. But securities analysts say the overall value of its cash and stock offer is below QVC's bid.

Viacom, controlled by billionaire Sumner Redstone, boosted the cash portion of its bid by 23.5 percent, offering $105 a share for 50.1 percent of Paramount's shares. It previously offered $85 a share.

QVC, a home shopping channel operator led by former Paramount movie division boss Barry Diller, is offering $92 a share for just over half of Paramount's shares.

But both companies are offering securities for the remaining Paramount stock, and analysts say the stock Viacom has offered in the second part of its deal is worth far less than what QVC has offered.

Analyst Ed Hatch of UBS Securities said Sunday the fight for Paramount is a long way from being decided. "There is more drama that is going to be carried out here," he said.

Reporter-Telegram announces Bakke as advertising chief

Sam E. Bakke has been named advertising director of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Charles Spence, publisher, has announced. The appointment is effective immediately.

Bakke

"Sam comes to this position with an extensive background in broadcasting. He has been a member of our advertising staff for the past three years, most recently as sales manager. INVESTORS' GUIDE

Banking system plans for natural disasters

By Bill Doyle

Q: How does the banking system work after a Florida hurricane or a Midwest flood? I ask because my monthly pension and Social Security benefits go to my bank account by direct deposit.

Doyle

A: The banking system has operated quite well after every natural disaster to date. There's no reason to think the system will collapse in the future.

I almost wrote "surprisingly well." But it really was no surprise. The banking system has procedures in place to handle such things.

Even though some bank buildings were damaged or outright destroyed in the two calamities you mention, business carried on, thanks to planning by banks and the Federal Reserve System.

John Milstead, spokesman for the Florida Bankers Association, notes that one automatic-teller machine continued to work during the worst of Hurricane Andrew, and all banks were operating within a week. Although many telephone lines were down, alternate electronic-communication systems continued operating.

There was no shortage of cash. The Federal Reserve sent currency to the stricken area in armored cars so that banks could accommodate depositors who wanted folding money and coins.

Your direct deposits were not hurt. That money reached your account on schedule. As a result, you were able to write checks, just as you always did.

Similar procedures were used in states hit by the Midwest flooding. Those areas also suffered devastation and serious inconvenience. The banking system bent, but did not break.

Q: During the last couple of years, my bank has started charging me fees for things it formerly did for free.

For example, I now must pay 35 cents for each check I write, even though I paid $12.60 for a box of checks. There is a fee for each traveler's check, a fee every time I use an ATM and a number of other charges, all of which add up. On my latest monthly statement, they totaled $22.65.

I am especially ticked off about this because my uncle uses the same bank and pays no such outlandish fees. He proved this by showing me his bank statement.

Any suggestions?

A: Your uncle probably has a different type of account. Many banks offer two or more kinds of checking accounts, with different fee schedules.

Drop in at the bank. Obtain literature explaining the available checking accounts and the charges on each type. It's possible you will find an account more to your liking. If you don't, you can always "vote with your feet" by moving your money to another bank.

I suspect your uncle's monthly statement showed no charges because he doesn't use the ATM or various other bank services, or perhaps he has a senior citizen account. Many banks reduce or eliminate certain fees for seniors, especially those who maintain large balances.

Q: Having relocated due to a job transfer, I started shopping around for a low-cost checking account. I found one suitable for me, except for one flaw.

The bank at which I think I would like to open the account does not return canceled checks with monthly statements. Did you ever hear of such a thing?

A: Certainly. That's called "truncating" checks. Many banks do that, and their numbers are increasing all the time.

However, most banks that truncate checks provide checkbooks containing original checks and carbon copies. When account holders make out a check, they give up the original and keep the carbon copy for their records.

OILERS: Coach's remarks amuse team

From 1C

Ryan's latest remarks.

"We thought we addressed all this," Adams said. "It seems like this never died off. The bottom line is that I don't think it's affected the players any. Hopefully, it won't affect the team."

Gilbride said Ryan's comments wouldn't affect his preparations for Sunday's playoff game against the Kansas City Chiefs.

"It's one more in a series that started when Buddy was first hired," Gilbride said. "I didn't see at the time what useful purpose any of this made.

"It does not contribute to the bonding or melding of any of this team and the development of anything positive. There is no feud. It's been a one-way attack and me just trying to defend what we do — what's best for our football team."

The players also said the squabbling wouldn't affect their preparations.

"We're all laughing about it, it's a joke," cornerback Cris Dishman said. "The coaches don't play the game. They can feud all they want to, it doesn't matter to us."

"It's the same thing that came out last week," said defensive end William Fuller. "In my opinion, there's no chance we'll be distracted. We have too many players who know how hard it was to get to this point."

Ryan, formerly head coach at Philadelphia, has made no secret that he's seeking a head coaching job and will ask about openings in Atlanta and Washington.

Pardee offered this advice: "You'd better be good at your profession. Other than that, you don't want to do things that bring along too much baggage with you."

Football association ponders 1-A playoff

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The College Football Association and the Big Ten-Pac 10 conferences, never the best of friends, could be headed for a nasty fight over a football playoff.

But many believe this may be the only way for an NCAA playoff to ever come into being.

The CFA, which takes in every major football school not in the Big Ten or Pac-10, is thinking about staging a national championship game of its own. Depending on what the 66 CFA schools decide at their meeting next June, there could be a CFA playoff plan on the agenda at next January's NCAA convention no matter what the NCAA decides to do.

Any playoff plan would need a majority vote of the 106 Division I-A schools. Would the Big Ten and Pac-10 try to stop their CFA brethren from having their own championship?

"I think we would oppose it," said Pac-10 executive director Tom Hansen. "On the grounds that once it got its nose under the tent, you don't know what would happen."

If the CFA plan had been in effect this past season, No. 2 Notre Dame and No. 1 Florida State could be staging their final showdown this week. Or, with a four-team CFA format, fans could be treated to a championship match between the winners of semifinal games pitting Florida State and Notre Dame and Nebraska and whoever.

And once the CFA got going with a successful playoff, wouldn't the Big Ten and Pac-10 be jealous? Wouldn't public and alumni pressure force the conferences to join the party?

"One might think so," said DeLoss Dodds, Texas athletic director.

Anybody shelling out big money for television rights to a CFA playoff game would be gambling that CFA schools would go into the bowl season hogging the top spots in the polls.

"Although the (CFA schools) have sort of dominated the No. 1-No. 2 games the last three or four years, if someone paid $20-30 million for a single game and found out the No. 1 or No. 2 team is in another group, it would be a tremendous financial risk," said Big Ten commissioner Jim Delany.

"There would also be some vulnerability for the Rose Bowl," he added.

Big Ten and Pac-10 presidents have reiterated their opposition to a playoff. But sentiment seems to be swinging toward a playoff among CFA schools.

Placed in an awkward spot is Paterno, who has long spoken favorably of a playoff. But now that the issue is coming to a boil, his school has joined the Big Ten.

NCAA delegates reject scholarship restoration

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Delegates at the NCAA convention rejected a proposal to restore the limit on men's basketball scholarships to 14, drawing bitter criticism Monday from black coaches and administrators.

The Black Coaches Association had indicated it would consider some sort of protest if its demands were not met.

"Personally, I find this offensive," said Dennis Coleman, general counsel for the BCA.

■ NCAA Convention

Coleman said black students had the most to gain from an estimated 330 scholarships that would have been saved by the proposal.

"We believe that those 330 scholarships are so critically important to our community," he said. "We are losing every day black men from our neighborhoods. Some of them, the only access that they are going to get, is these scholarships."

The BCA won an important victory on another vote when schools approved a resolution ordering a review of Proposal 16, which was passed at the 1992 convention and strengthens academic requirements for freshmen.

The resolution also makes possible a delay in the Aug. 1, 1995 effective date of Proposal 16 if suggested by the review.

Two years ago, NCAA Division I schools voted to cut back scholarships in all sports as part of a sweeping reform and a cost-cutting movement. Men's basketball scholarships were dropped from 15 to 13 while women's stayed at 15.

The NCAA Presidents Commission argued that restoring one basketball grant would trigger similar demands from other sports and signal a retreat from reforms.

The presidents said higher education faced unprecedented financial difficulties.

Lady Raiders jump one spot

Associated Press

Major changes occured in this week's Associated Press women's basketball poll today, after nine teams from the previous poll were upset by outsiders.

The top of the poll remained mostly the same, but in the lower half, four teams were gone, while four new teams entered, including three which made first-ever appearances in the 18-year history of the rankings.

Additional upsets within last week's rankings also created a few significant reshuffles.

No. 19 Florida International (10-1), No. 23 Boise State (10-2) and No. 25 Seton Hall (10-2) joined the poll for the first time ever, while No. 24 UNLV (8-2) made its first appearance of the season.

Georgia, George Washington, Maryland and Hawaii were the teams they replaced.

Tennessee (12-0), one of five unbeaten teams left in NCAA Division I, made it eight straight weeks at the top since the preseason vote, as the Lady Vols received 64 of 65 first-place votes and 1,624 points, from a nationwide panel of women's coaches.

Iowa (9-0) held second with the remaining first-place vote and 1,554 points, followed by Penn State (10-0), which held third with 1,486 points. The Lady Lions will meet the only unbeaten team outside the poll when they host Indiana Friday night, in a Big Ten contest.

North Carolina (11-0), the other unbeaten team, moved up a step to fourth, while defending NCAA champion Texas Tech (12-1) and Vanderbilt (11-2) each moved up one spot to fifth and sixth.

Fugitives qualify for welfare

By Rich Harris
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Convicts who jump bail before sentencing or who violate parole or probation can legally collect welfare benefits while lying low. Under current welfare law, the government can't do a thing about it.

Federal welfare statutes do not exclude fugitives from public assistance. Privacy laws limit the exchange of information between police, who have hundreds of thousands of fugitive warrants on file, and welfare agencies, which have no way to know which of their clients are fugitives.

"If you meet the eligibility requirements, then you're eligible for assistance," said Joe Silver, a lawyer with the Ohio Department of Human Services. "If your benefits are terminated or your application is denied, it has to be because you didn't meet the criteria."

In Cleveland, Cuyahoga County sheriff's deputies were surprised to learn that at least 91 of 330 fugitives rounded up in a six-month sting last year were receiving welfare. The suspects were getting an average of $300 a month in benefits, said Lt. Daniel Pukach.

The number of Cleveland fugitives on welfare may actually have been higher — deputies didn't begin tracking the number until the third month of the sting, Pukach said.

"The Department of Human Services had known where these people were living and was subsidizing their criminal activity at taxpayer expense," Pukach said.

Amid the rising clamor for national welfare reform, word of this legal loophole raises hackles.

"I think it's outrageous that we have a situation where ... taxpayers are supporting someone who is a fugitive from justice," said Rep. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., ranking Republican on the subcommittee that will consider President Clinton's expected welfare reform proposals this year.

"You can escape justice and the government will support you in doing so? And you have no fear of getting caught by getting access to government benefits? It's ridiculous."

No firm figures exist on the number of felons who are on the lam and on the dole. Silver says he's never seen a survey that tried to link the two.

"Because it's not an eligibility factor, it's not something that's really been looked at," Silver said.

But Pukach, a 22-year veteran of the sheriff's department, said "easily a third" of the fugitives he arrests have identity cards from the county welfare department.

"Just the other day we sent 80 cards over to the welfare department from people who had come through the jail," Pukach said.

The cards are turned over to the welfare department because it is illegal to receive welfare while jailed. Valid cards are returned to eligible recipients when they are released from jail or post bond.

But unless fugitives are caught — and officers say many never are — they can continue to collect benefits.

About 357,000 fugitive warrants, some of them dating back years, are on file at the National Crime Information Center, which gets its data from police jurisdictions around the country, said spokesman John Kundts.

Yet Cuyahoga County alone has almost 13,000 outstanding warrants, and deputies can pursue only a fraction of them.

"You have to prioritize who you can look for — the suspected murderer or the probation violator on a grand theft conviction," Pukach said. "A warrant is a warrant ... but there really comes a point where you have to prioritize."

Last year, Cuyahoga County deputies tried to make a dent in the backlog. They picked 4,000 files and sent letters to last known addresses, informing recipients they were eligible to collect part of a settlement the state had won in a consumer fraud class-action lawsuit. Claimants were told where to pick up their checks. Those who showed were nabbed.

Despite the sting's relative success, however, deputies were furious when county Human Services Director Joseph Garcia refused to allow them to match the warrants against welfare rolls. He said he had no choice: State and federal laws make much information about welfare recipients confidential.

The federal government has three primary welfare programs: Aid to Families with Dependent Children, designed to meet the needs of children in families where one or both parents are missing or unemployed; Medicaid, which provides basic health coverage for the poor; and food stamps, coupons that can be spent like cash for staple foods.

State programs, such as General Assistance and Disability Assistance in Ohio, pay benefits to people who have no income or cannot work because of health problems.

At the federal level, only AFDC rules permit any information exchange between law officers and welfare workers, said David Boomer, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services in Washington. Confidentiality laws for state programs vary.

But neither federal nor state regulations disqualify fugitives from receiving welfare. And states can't exclude fugitives on their own because they may not impose stricter eligibility criteria than the federal government's, Silver said.

Henry Freedman, director of the Center for Social Welfare Policy and Law in New York City, a nonprofit advocacy organization, said no one should be denied such basic needs as food, clothing and shelter — even if fleeing the law.

"These are things people need to survive," Freedman said. "By the same token, you wouldn't say emergency rooms should turn away people who are fugitives and in need of medical assistance."

Freedman acknowledges the problem but opposes adding language to welfare regulations to bar benefits to fugitives.

"Whenever you add more hurdles to receiving aid," Freedman said, "you keep many needy individuals and families from getting the aid they need."

But Dennis Martin, a retired police chief in Maple Grove, Mich., and incoming executive director of the National Association of Chiefs of Police, said any system that subsidizes crime is out of control.

"When you have a system where it's difficult for agencies like the police and social services to work together ... not only are criminals not paying the price for the crimes they've committed, but you're really hammering the taxpayer," Martin said.

"It appears that crime really does pay," he said.

'NYPD Blue' shows mixed results

By Lynn Elber
AP television writer

PASADENA, Calif. — "NYPD Blue" is the season's highest-rated new drama, but the controversial police drama is losing money for ABC, network executive Robert Iger said Monday.

"It's not bringing in the kind of dollars most shows with those kinds of numbers would get," Iger told the Television Critics Association.

The show, which includes nudity and rough language, has been called television's first R-rated program, and that seems to have scared off many advertisers.

"We've seen some signs of growing support among advertisers, particularly traditional television advertisers," but a dramatic improvement in ad revenues is unlikely until next season, said Iger, who is president of ABC Television Network Group.

In a wide-ranging discussion, Iger also touched on such issues as condom ads and the Fox network's winning bid for National Football League broadcast rights.

He said ABC would not accept condom ads although the network has joined other broadcasters in agreeing to show public service announcements advocating use of condoms.

"It's a standards issue. It's something we're a bit sensitive about in terms of advertisers," he said.

Iger said Fox's outbidding CBS for the NFL football rights "puts them on the map in a way they haven't been on the map as a more traditional network."

Football is a money-loser for the networks, a factor generally outweighed by the identity and viewership the networks gain, Iger said.

He declined to say whether ABC, which paid an estimated $900 million to retain its right to broadcast Monday Night Football games and playoff games, was pursuing CBS football analyst John Madden.

He did say ABC was confident it would keep newswoman Diane Sawyer despite speculation she is considering returning to her old network, CBS.

Sawyer is co-host of the news magazine "PrimeTime Live." Her contract, which expires in a few weeks, is being renegotiated.

"I don't believe we are in much jeopardy there," Iger said.

ABC programming chief Ted Harbert outlined upcoming series and specials, including a new drama, "My So-Called Wife," from "thirtysomething" creators Marshall Herskovitz and Edward Zwick.

The series explores the world of a 15-year-old high school student. An air date has not been set.

"The Critic," an animated half-hour comedy series by the producers of "The Simpsons," will debut at 8:30 p.m. EST Jan. 26. The series features the voice of actor-comedian Jon Lovitz as an acerbic film critic.

Other series announced but not yet scheduled included the comedy "Sister, Sister," starring Jackee Harry, Tim Reid and twins Tia and Tamera Mowry; "The Byrds of Paradise," a one-hour family drama from "NYPD Blue" creator Steven Bochco; and "These Friends of Mine," a comedy starring Ellen DeGeneres.

Specials include: "John Jakes' Heaven and Hell: North and South, Part III"; "Stephen King's The Stand," an eight-hour miniseries based on the novel about an apocalyptic battle between good and evil, starring Molly Ringwald and Gary Sinise; and Hallmark Hall of Fame's "A Place for Annie," starring Sissy Spacek in a reality-based movie about a pediatric nurse's attempt to adopt an abandoned HIV-positive newborn.

Woman gets proposal from cartoon

DENVER (AP) — Elizabeth Rosenblum thought she was going to see "Farewell My Concubine." Instead, she saw a cartoon of her boyfriend asking her to marry him.

Before the film began, two previews were shown, including one for an animation festival.

"All of sudden, I see this guy on the screen — animated," Rosenblum said.

Graphics artist Michael Trujillo produced the 1½ minute cartoon and asked the theater's manager for permission to show it Dec. 30. The manager agreed.

At one point, the cartoon Trujillo was wearing a wedding cake on his head. The character explained that he sometimes had trouble expressing his true feelings.

"Maybe we knew each other in a past life," the character said. "I've been thinking about making you my wife."

Trujillo, 27, said he was watching Rosenblum the whole time.

"I'm thinking, like, 'She just doesn't get it,' " he said. "All of a sudden, the laughing stopped. She stopped breathing. And I saw a tear rolling down her cheek."

Prodded by the crowd of about 200 people, a tearful Rosenblum, 25, gave Trujillo her answer: Yes.

The couple never did see "Farewell My Concubine" that night. They left before it started.
