White House seems more confused than ever about FBI files

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days of congressional hearings shed little light on the origin of what has become known as The List — the document used by the White House to improperly ask for and obtain 407 FBI files on former employees.

Senate testimony by a Secret Service official Thursday failed to resolve the mystery of the FBI background files, which has become politically explosive because most of the former White House employees worked for the Reagan and Bush administrations.

Richard Miller, assistant director for protective operations at the Secret Service, said that agency keeps its list of White House passholders up to date and has no idea how the file fiasco occurred.

"I have no idea where that list came from," Miller told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The White House also expressed puzzlement, with press secretary Mike McCurry saying of Miller's testimony, "Frankly, that has left us even more confused."

The Clinton administration had embraced an explanation that Army detailee Anthony Marceca was relying on an outdated Secret Service list when he made his request to the FBI. But Miller said the agency updates at least monthly its computerized list of 24,000 names, which clearly indicates which people still have access to the White House and which no longer do.

The lists Marceca said he relied on have not turned up.

Marceca was brought to the White House by former security chief Craig Livingstone, who was put on paid administrative leave this week because of the controversy over the files.

According to a police report provided to The Associated Press, Livingstone was investigated two years ago for threatening to "beat in" a neighbor's face in a dispute over a barking dog.

Adding to the White House's discomfort, Miller's statements came a day after a former White House security office employee, Nancy Gemmell, testified before a House committee that she never left behind any list of old presidential employees for her successors in the Clinton administration.

FBI general counsel Howard Shapiro, who investigated the matter and concluded last week that the background summaries were wrongly sent to the White House, testified Thursday that the FBI also was unaware of the list's origin.

Calling the episode an "egregious" invasion of privacy by the White House, Shapiro said the

Crop's in the ground, waiting for rain

Wednesday was the final day to certify crops for insurance purposes and now farmers are faced with the decision of what to do with a crop that is described as spotty, at best.

Parts of Scurry County have received adequate moisture to get the young cotton up, but underground moisture is the main concern right now, according to Joe Hefner of the Farm Service Agency and County Extension Agent Terry Millican.

"Some of the cotton looks real good right now," said Hefner. "But the problem will be when the plant's tap root hits dry, underground soil."

Hefner said farmers have to wait seven days after the final planting date to release their crop for insurance purposes.

"There will be a lot of head-scratching between now and the 27th in trying to decide what to do with this cotton crop," said Hefner.

If the farmer decides to plow up his cotton, then going back with another crop is certainly an option, added Hefner.

Hefner said the FSA must be notified if a crop is to be plowed up.

Millican said he thought most farmers are "fairly optimistic" about the cotton prospects even with the lack of moisture.

"I think they went ahead and planted just like we had the necessary moisture," said Millican.

"You have to remember this about West Texas," Hefner pitched in. "It can promise less and give more than just about any place in the world.

"A lot can happen between now and harvest."

Millican said if everyone planted the acreage they had, upwards of 63,000 acres would be in cotton this year.

Millican also said that the boll-weevil count is the lowest of all the counties in the Rolling Plains bollweevil eradication program.

"I guess that's the bright side of the cotton crop so far."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: After a $110 million school bond issue was turned down by Midland voters, there's a new school controversy brewing — this one over lunch.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram reports that students at the city's two high schools may rediscover the traditional school lunchroom.

School trustees are considering closing campuses at both high schools during the lunch hour.

A similar proposal in Snyder was rejected a few years ago.

Burle Pettit, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, spoke to Snyder Rotarians recently.

Someone in the audience asked him how the newspaper came by its name since Lubbock isn't located in the mountains.

Pettit countered that Lubbock is sitting on top of a flat mountain — the Caprock. He said legend has it that the paper got its name when a citizen dropped into the office prior to the first printing and asked, "Can we expect an avalanche of news?"

Pettit, who was appointed by Gov. George Bush to the board of regents of the University of North Texas, says the newspaper's name has come in handy.

"When looking over the applications of prospective employees, if they can't spell "avalanche," we don't hire 'em."

Zip Gun Bomber may be at it again

NEW YORK (AP) — A booby-trapped package that exploded in a real estate agent's hands may have been the work of the Zip Gun Bomber, who has struck three other times since 1982, the Daily News reported today.

Postal Inspector Ed Steed said there was speculation about a link among the attacks, but that police had no motive.

The victim, Richard Basile, 77, of Brooklyn, was unharmed Thursday when he opened a small package about the size of a videocassette. It sent two .22-caliber rounds crashing through his kitchen window.

"If he had opened it in another direction, he would have had two bullets in the belly," mail carrier Ken Barris, who delivered the package, told the News.

Test results from the bomb were expected to be ready as soon as today, Steed said.

The design of the device was similar to those in three past attacks, including one that killed a woman in May 1982, the News said. The so-called Zip Gun Bomber last struck in June 1995, injuring a pregnant teen-ager in Queens.

The News said investigators have been unable to link the bomb victims but think there could be a single perpetrator because the attacks are so unusual.

Postal Inspector Bart Varvara said the device Thursday seemed similar to the one that blew up in Queens last year. In previous cases, loaded, telescoping gun barrels have been hidden inside hollowed-out books or videocassettes.

Police said that the mail bomber may have struck again now out of jealousy over two highly publicized arrests of suspects in the Zodiac serial killings and in a series of beatings — one fatal — of women in and near New York City.

After 17 years, man freed for crimes he didn't commit

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A man wrongly convicted of killing his unborn baby and bludgeoning his wife nearly to death 17 years ago wept as a judge apologized for the mistake and freed him from prison.

Kevin Lee Green, imprisoned since 1980, was declared innocent Thursday as authorities prepared to charge a convicted rapist with the killing of Green's daughter as well as five other unsolved slayings.

"You're about to wake up after a 16-year nightmare," Superior Court Judge Robert Fitzgerald told Green during a brief hearing. "I want to congratulate you on the end result, and the court, on behalf of society, apologizes to you for your incarceration. I wish you have a good and happy remainder of your life."

Sources told The Orange County Register that the reversal of Green's conviction and the new arrest came after the other man confessed, and his statement was backed up by DNA technology not available when Green's pregnant wife was attacked.

Law enforcement authorities refused to give details of the case.

Green, 37, a former Marine corporal, was convicted and sentenced to 15 years to life in prison on the testimony of his wife. She initially did not remember the attack but said her memory suddenly returned as she read a baby magazine.

Dianna D'Aiello, who is deaf in one ear and has a speech impediment as a result of the attack, testified her husband severely beat her because she refused sex, triggering premature labor and the birth of the stillborn child.

"It's hard for me to believe all this. ... Somebody else hurt me, here I've ... 17 years ... believing it was Kevin. It's just hard to handle," she told the Register on Thursday.

Green insisted he had gone out to get a cheeseburger and came home to see a man leaving in a van.

Authorities now believe the attacker was Gerald Parker, 41, who owned a van at the time. He is suspected in the "bedroom basher" serial killings in central Orange County in 1978 and 1979.

Report says...

INS officials misled task force

MIAMI (AP) — Immigration officials deceived a congressional task force by transferring or releasing dozens of illegal aliens, some with criminal histories, from a detention center to conceal overcrowding, a Justice Department report says.

The senior Immigration and Naturalization Service managers also tried to present a "kinder, gentler" image by telling agents to put away their guns, and posted more personnel at an airport inspection area to create the perception of a more efficient operation, the report said.

"The report ... raises serious concerns about actions taken by a number of INS officials," INS Commissioner Doris Meissner said in a news release Thursday.

To make matters worse, top managers at the INS' district office in Miami and Burlington, Vt., obstructed the inquiry, lied to investigators, and destroyed incriminating electronic-mail messages.

As a result, four senior field managers were reassigned to nonsupervisory duties and a management review team was sent to the Miami office. The Justice Department will decide on appropriate disciplinary action and was asked to determine if any officials would face criminal prosecution.

The investigation was begun after INS employees complained about the June 10, 1995, visit to the Krome Detention Center and Miami International Airport by the seven-member Congressional Task Force on Immigration Reform.

A total of 103 illegal aliens were moved out of the overcrowded detention center.

Higher levels of ozone increase hospital visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of people, particularly those with respiratory ailments, are being hospitalized because high ozone levels and summer heat make it too hard to breathe, the American Lung Association said.

The study, conducted by the Harvard School of Public Health, found that exposure to ground-level ozone, or smog, was tied to up to 15,000 hospital admissions and 50,000 respiratory-related emergency room visits in 13 cities with high ozone levels.

"Although considerable progress has been made in reducing ozone concentrations, it is still a pervasive public health problem," John Spengler, director of the Environmental Science and Engineering Program at Harvard, said Thursday.

Exposure to ozone can cause a variety of short-term health problems, including coughing and shortness of breath; ozone is particularly harmful to people with pre-existing respiratory conditions like asthma, bronchitis and emphysema.

In addition, the researchers said, ozone can be particularly harmful to the underdeveloped breathing systems of children, who most typically wind up suffering from increased bouts of asthma.

The ALA study found, on average, up to 10 percent of hospital admissions for asthma during the ozone season were attributable to elevated ozone level. Roughly 4.8 million American children suffer from asthma.

Ozone, the main ingredient in smog, is formed when volatile organic compounds and nitrogen oxide from motor vehicles and other sources fester together on hot, humid days.

The researchers examined hospital records for 1993 and 1994, depending on availability in cities which often have ozone levels above the Environmental Protection Agency's healthful standard of 0.12 parts per million.

The cities included Baltimore, Dallas, Detroit, Hartford, Conn., Houston, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New Haven, Conn., New York, Philadelphia, San Diego, St. Louis, and the nation's capital.

Scientists map twister's insides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like a scene from "Twister," daring Oklahoma scientists raced across the prairies searching for a cyclone they could dissect with a mobile radar system that already for the first time has charted the anatomy of a tornado.

A supercell thunderstorm in northern Nebraska looked ripe to spin off a twister on Thursday and a team led by Joshua Wurman left the University of Oklahoma in Norman and sped north through the day.

"So far, no luck," Wurman said by portable telephone from near Lindsay, Neb. He was riding in a truck hauling a sophisticated Doppler radar unit that can probe into a tornado like an X-ray examining a patient.

The radar earlier mapped a tornado, layer by layer, giving science the first ever intimate look inside a raging twister. A report of that study is published today in the journal Science.

Wurman hoped to do it again Thursday, but, unlike Hollywood-type scientists in the hit movie "Twister," real-life tornado hunters seldom catch their prey.

"We're successful about 10 percent of the time," said Wurman. "Most of the time they (tornados) just don't happen. The odds are against us."

He said his team, armed with radar, can increase the odds by searching through the night. The Doppler doesn't need light to gather data.

The tornado studies by Wurman and his team already have excited other meteorologists who long have sought to understand the inner workings of a twister.

"We've never had such data before," said Louis Wicker, a Texas A&M assistant professor of meteorology. Wurman's study, he said, "is an exciting and important step forward understanding how these storms work."

Eventually, he said, such research may help give earlier and more accurate warnings about tornados.

The Oklahoma team, so far, has captured close-up data on six full-scale tornados. Usually they stay at least a mile away from a cyclone, said Wurman, but once a twister passed within 3,250 feet.

Wurman said the storms have different personalities, sizes and strengths.

One storm they measured had maximum winds of 185 mph on the inner wall of the funnel that snaked down to Earth. Another had constant internal changes with varying patterns of wind motion. Others churn steadily across the prairie, unchanging for miles, he said.

When the tornadoes touch ground, they quickly suck up tons of debris, often holding it a half mile aloft, said Wurman.

One storm his team studied sent a pickup truck sailing for more than 600 feet before leaving it, destroyed, in a field.

"It was pretzeled," Wurman said. "You couldn't even tell what type it was."

A Dimmitt, Texas, storm peeled away more than 130 feet of asphalt paving from a highway and dropped it 650 feet away.

The eye of a tornado may be up to 600 feet across, according to the team's radar measurements. A wall of wind moving at 150 mph rotates about the eye, giving a powerful one-two punch to any car, building or tree it crosses, said Wurman.

"The winds will be 70 meters per second (156.5 mph) going one way and 70 meters per second going the other way, so you get a wind shear force of more than 300 miles per hour," he said.

The Doppler radar is able to take very precise measurements of motion in the center, edge, top and bottom of the tornado.

Hundreds made sick; strawberries at fault?

HOUSTON (AP) — California strawberries are almost certainly the source of a rare parasite that has sickened scores of people in the city, state health officials said.

Since late April, illnesses have been attributed to the microbe, called cyclospora, in Texas and at least eight other states. Nearly 70 people also have been stricken in Toronto.

While health officials in other states are not yet citing a specific cause, epidemiologists at the Texas Department of Health have focused on strawberries for 55 confirmed and 96 suspected cases of cyclospora-related illness in Houston.

"We believe the statistical probability is very, very high that the cluster of outbreaks in Houston was strawberry-related," department spokeswoman Lynn Denton said Thursday.

The Centers for Disease Control and the Food and Drug Administration said they were studying the apparent outbreak but were not yet ready to draw conclusions.

"Until we get out and examine the situation very carefully ... get definitive laboratory science that tells us what we're dealing with, we don't want to speculate," said Bob Howard, a CDC spokesman.

No deaths have been reported from the parasite, which can be treated with antibiotics. Cyclospora can cause extreme watery diarrhea, stomach cramps, nausea, vomiting and fatigue lasting several weeks.

Because cyclospora is a relatively new phenomenon in the United States — the first U.S. outbreak was not until 1990 — little is known about it.

In studying the Houston cases, epidemiologists found that everyone who became ill had eaten strawberries, Ms. Denton said. California strawberries are being blamed because that state produces most of the strawberries consumed at this time of year, she said.

California Strawberry Commission spokeswoman Teresa Thorne said the group would today begin convening a panel of scientific experts to study the problem.

Texas GOP headed for abortion showdown

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas Republicans appeared headed for a showdown over abortion on the heels of Bob Dole's request for a "declaration of tolerance" on the emotional issue.

In what is just the latest sign of Republican Party strife, the mere mention of presumptive presidential nominee Dole and Texas Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison drew boos at an anti-abortion rally.

The state GOP also moved Thursday to toughen its platform on abortion.

"Unfortunately, Bob Dole has been diminished as a candidate," said Vicki Gaulding, a delegate from southeast Texas. "If people want to be pro-choice, they might want to be in the Democratic Party. We can't afford to dilute the voice we have at this point."

"I am not ready to wear a Bob Dole sticker," said Jack Sugrue, a convention delegate from the Dallas area.

Hutchison hopes to become an at-large delegate to the GOP National Convention.

But Bill Price, who heads Texans United for Life, led a rally of nearly 1,000 people and encouraged the defeat of any delegate slate that included Mrs. Hutchison, who supports abortion rights with some restrictions.

"You must understand that you, the pro-life delegates, hold the power to stop Senator Hutchison and deal a serious blow to the national campaign against our pro-life plank," Price told the cheering crowd.

"This is bigger than Texas. The whole nation is watching. Our vote to block Senator Hutchison will influence not only the platform battle but also Senator Dole's decision regarding a running mate," Price said.

The majority of delegates in at least four states — Texas, Kansas, Alabama and South Carolina — have signed pledges to vote to retain the abortion ban and to reject Dole's choice of running mate if he or she is pro-choice.

Texas will send 123 delegates to the GOP National Convention, the second largest delegation behind California.

Officials in Hutchison's office declined to comment, although she is scheduled to speak to the convention today.

Dole's record speaks for itself, said Dole campaign aide Brian Berry.

"The senator has said the national platform is going to be a pro-life platform, and there's no question where the senator stands on the question of life for the unborn," Berry said. "He has simply communicated the message that there are other views we should tolerate and listen to.

"We will let Texans write what they want in their platform. If we started getting involved in 50 state party platforms, we'd have no time to campaign and discuss why Bill Clinton ought to be defeated," Berry said.

The Texas GOP platform committee on Thursday voted to recommend removing language about saving a woman's endangered life as the only exception to abortion.

"The message in Texas is there won't be any tolerance in our plank," said James Wright, a delegate from League City and member of the platform committee.

The vote didn't sit well with Texas GOP Chairman Tom Pauken, who said he would continue to support a woman's right to abortion when her life is at stake.

Expert profiles grave robber

Unmarried white male loner with uncontrollable fantasies

DALLAS (AP) — The person who stole the body of an 20-year-old woman from a suburban Dallas grave 18 months ago is probably an unmarried white male loner who is unable to maintain relationships with women, a retired FBI behavioral sciences specialist is guessing.

He says the person probably is also disorganized or intelligent — or both.

The profile of the possible suspect in the case of Melinda Ann Lee was drawn up by Clinton R. Van Zandt, who helped in the hunt for the elusive Unabomber and was a negotiator during the Branch Davidian standoff near Waco.

Miss Lee's body was removed from a freshly dug grave at Restland Memorial Park in Richardson the night of Dec. 12, 1994. Her nude body was found three days later beside a road near Interstate 20 in southeast Dallas.

Miss Lee, a 20-year-old Texas Tech student, had been critically injured in a traffic accident at Lubbock in October 1994. She was in a coma and died in a Lubbock hospital 54 days after the accident, never regaining consciousness.

Restland is paying Van Zandt's consulting fee, and sheriff's investigators say they hope someone will put a name and face with his description of the grave robber and call in the tip that will lead to an arrest.

A reward, which once was $11,000, now has risen to $50,000.

"It is the largest reward anyone in this department has ever been involved in," sheriff's Chief Deputy Danny Chandler said. "This case is not going away. We will solve this case. We want to look into the eyes of whoever stole Melinda Lee."

Van Zandt said Thursday that his science is inexact and that he knows of no similar case that would provide him with characteristics typical of a body snatcher.

After scrutinizing the evidence, Van Zandt concluded that one man, probably acting alone, specifically targeted Miss Lee's grave. Van Zandt said whoever stole her body from the grave probably knew her and harbored frustrated sexual feelings for her.

Man will sell all to defend wife

DALLAS (AP) — The husband of a woman accused of stabbing their two young sons to death lashed out at authorities for arresting his wife and placing his youngest son in foster care.

"We went from a family of five to one," Darin Routier told The Dallas Morning News in his first public comments since his wife's arrest Tuesday. "With her being in jail and my boys now gone, my life is gone."

Routier, 28, said he would sell everything he owned to defend his 26-year-old wife, Darlie, against charges she fatally stabbed the couple's sons, 6-year-old Devon and 5-year-old Damon Routier.

"Now it's the state against the Routiers," he said. "Our whole world has been flipped upside down."

Meanwhile, police said they found a diary in the family's suburban home in which Mrs. Routier, expressed a need, a month before the June 6 slayings, to be forgiven for what she was about to do, the newspaper reported in today's editions.

Two people familiar with the diary said the woman expressed suicidal thoughts in another entry, written several months after her youngest son, 8-month-old Drake, was born.

Routier was sleeping upstairs with Drake when Devon and Damon were stabbed to death. Mrs. Routier also was stabbed, and blamed an intruder for the slayings. Police later determined her wounds were self-inflicted and that the intruder never existed.

State officials placed Drake into foster care on Wednesday, a move a state spokeswoman called routine. A hearing was scheduled July 3.

Mrs. Routier remained jailed on two counts of murder.

Poll shows 52% of Texans back abortion rights

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fifty-two percent of Texans support abortion rights, but most likely voters in the state say a candidate's stand on abortion wouldn't sway their vote, according to a new poll.

The Texas Poll, published today, found that 37 percent of Texans identify themselves with the anti-abortion view. Eleven percent had no opinion.

The poll, conducted by the Office of Survey Research of the University of Texas for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc., included 1,000 Texans interviewed by telephone June 3-13. The error margin was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Nineteen percent of respondents said abortion should be legal under any circumstances, while 62 percent favor legal abortion under some circumstances. Sixteen percent said the procedure should always be illegal.

Of 786 likely voters questioned, 64 percent said they would not choose a political candidate on the issue of abortion alone. Another 31 percent said they would select a candidate for that reason. Five percent said they didn't know.

Most Republicans responding to the survey also said abortion was not a deciding issue for them.

Absence Makes Wife's Heart Grow Suspicious of Husband

DEAR ABBY: I am a sailor in the U.S. Navy, stationed in Sasebo, Japan. After serving 11 years of active duty and visiting several different countries as a single sailor, I finally tied the knot with a beautiful Filipino woman I met in Manila. She had been a high school teacher. I love her dearly. She was (and still is) everything I could possibly want in a wife.

Being in the Navy requires me to go out to sea quite often, which puts a hardship on our marriage because of the long separations. We're handling the situation pretty well, and we make up for lost time when I get home.

My problem is my wife. Being from the Philippines, she knows the reputations of sailors in foreign ports. American sailors bring American dollars ashore, and most of them are looking for entertaining ways to spend them. (Most foreign ports have "ladies for hire.") However, I do not, and would never in a million years, cheat on my wife, especially with a lady who just wanted my money.

When I must go to foreign ports, my wife drives me crazy with her suspicions. I have tried my best to convince her that I'm not like the American sailors who have a "sweetheart" in every port.

Abby, can you please advise me on how to put my wife's suspicions to rest?

SASEBO SAILOR

DEAR SAILOR: If your wife doesn't trust you out of her sight even though you have done nothing to justify her suspicions, your marriage is too fragile to endure.

Arrange for her to see the base chaplain for counseling. She needs to fill her time with activities that she will find rewarding. Since she is a qualified high school teacher, if she's not currently working, perhaps she could do some substitute teaching during your absence.

Keep her busy, or she'll drive you dizzy!

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I wrote you about losing my brother. You answered my letter and also enclosed a poem called, "Do Not Stand at My Grave and Weep."

I was so moved by that poem, I shared it with my nephew and niece knowing that it would help to heal their grief over the loss of their parents.

Abby, I'm asking you to print it again to help others in the same situation.

DAVID F. GIBONEY, PHOENIX

DEAR DAVID: "Do Not Stand at My Grave and Weep" is one of the most frequently requested poems I have ever printed. I regret that I have never been able to locate the author. Although many people have claimed to have written it, I have never been able to confirm any of the claims. Read on:

"Do not stand at my grave and weep,
"I am not there, I do not sleep.
"I am a thousand winds that blow;
"I am the diamond glints on the snow.
"I am the sunlight on ripened grain;
"I am the gentle autumn's rain.
"When you awaken in the morning's hush,
"I am the swift uplifting rush
"Of quiet birds in circled flight.
"I am the soft star that shines at night.
"Do not stand at my grave and cry.
"I am not there; I did not die."

Drug tests: for the record

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In your otherwise excellent column about testing for drugs in the workplace, you made an error by implying that poppy seeds in the diet will lead to a false positive test. Since many narcotics are derived from the opium poppy, harmless poppy seeds may give a positive — not a false — reading.

Therefore, a person undergoing drug tests should completely abstain from eating rolls with poppy seeds — or risk being denoted a drug-user. As a medical review officer for several large companies, I can assure you that I have heard every excuse for a positive drug test, pondered every question and chased down every answer!

DEAR DOCTOR: You are, of course, correct and I appreciate your calling attention to the issue. The statement I made was misleading; as you pointed out, I meant the word "falsely" to apply to the applicant's drug use, not to the test itself.

I am also grateful for the information you sent, indicating that the "gold-standard" test for marijuana (gas chromatography/mass spectrometry) is not influenced by over-the-counter medication, such as ibuprofen.

This urine test is very specific and will detect the presence of THC (the active metabolite in marijuana) for up to three days after a person smokes a single marijuana cigarette and (up to a month in a chronic user). Passive inhalation of marijuana smoke or ingestion of the leaves will not cause a positive test.

Thank you for writing.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 57-year-old female who has just ended my menopause cycle, but I'm still worried to death about becoming pregnant. Can you put me at ease on this subject?

DEAR READER: Most women do not enter menopause suddenly. They may not menstruate for several months — and then have a period, indicating that ovulation took place.

Therefore, it's impossible to predict whether a menopausal woman may experience infrequent and unexpected ovulation that could lead to a pregnancy. For this reason, it's important for such women to use birth control.

The rule of thumb is: Once a woman has failed to menstruate for a year, she is considered infertile. But she or her partner should use birth control until she has not had a natural period for 12 consecutive months.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Menopause." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Olympic track trials continue

ATLANTA (AP) — Gwen Torrence and Michael Johnson, winners in their previous races, are converging on the same distance, while decathlete Dan O'Brien is returning to an old challenge.

Torrence, who won the women's 100 meters, and Johnson, who took the men's 400, begin work today in the 200, where both have flourished before. And O'Brien, deprived of an Olympic trip four years ago, goes after one in the grueling 10-event decathlon.

Atlanta's brand new Olympic track did not yield any world records in the first week of the trials, and Torrence doesn't expect that to change in the women's 200, were the mark of 21.34 seconds belongs to Florence Griffith Joyner.

"I can't imagine me running that fast," said Torrence, whose personal best for the distance is 21.72 and who won the gold in that event at Barcelona.

Johnson is concentrating on his private challenge — an unprecedented 200-400 Olympic double.

XXVI COUNTDOWN TO ATLANTA

III Olympiad 1904, St. Louis

Originally scheduled for Chicago, the Games were moved to St. Louis and held in conjunction with the centennial celebration of the Louisiana Purchase.

The program included more sports than in Paris, but with only 11 nations sending athletes, the first Olympics to be staged in the United States had a decidedly All-American flavor. Over 500 of the 681 competitors were Americans. Little wonder the home team won 80 percent of the medals.

The rout was nearly total in track and field where the U.S., led by triple-winners Ray Ewry, Archie Hahn, Jim Lightbody and Harry Hillman, took 23 of 25 gold medals and swept 20 events.

The marathon, which was run over dusty roads in brutally hot weather, was the most bizarre event of the Games. Thomas Hicks of the U.S. won, but only after his handlers fed him painkillers during the race.

An imposter nearly stole the victory when Fred Lorz, who dropped out after nine miles, was seen trotting back to the finish line to retrieve his clothes. Amused that officials thought he had won the race, Lorz played along until he was found out shortly after the medal ceremony.

Banned for life by the AAU, Lorz was reinstated a year later and won the 1905 Boston Marathon.

The Americans won a total of 244 medals (78 gold, 84 silver, 82 bronze). The next closest team was Germany with 12 (four gold, four silver, four bronze).

Three Americans won six medals each. Anton Heida took home five gold and a silver in gymnasties while George Eyser won three gold, two silver and a bronze, also in gymnastics.

The third American was cyclist Burton Downing with two gold, three silver and a bronze.

Lida Howell became the first American woman to win a gold medal. Howell took first twice in archery. Teammates Emma Cooke and Jessie Pollack helped the U.S. women's archery team sweep the event. Cooke won two silver and Pollack two bronze.

American athletes set seven Olympic records, three world records and tied a world record.

Baltimore take one-run win

BALTIMORE (AP) — There are two reasons why the Baltimore Orioles are poised to make a run at the first-place New York Yankees in the AL East.

First of all, the starting pitching is beginning to come around. Secondly, Baltimore has only three games left against the Texas Rangers.

David Wells pitched 7 1-3 gritty innings to earn his first victory in a month as the Orioles beat Texas 3-2 Thursday. It was only their second win in 10 games against the Rangers this season — both by one run.

The season series concludes next week with a three-game series in Texas. After that, the Orioles won't see the Rangers for the remainder of the regular season.

"There's always going to be some teams during the season that you struggle against, and Texas has been one of them for us," said center fielder Brady Anderson, who hit his 25th homer of the season and made a key defensive play.

Anderson, who tied Cleveland's Albert Belle for the major-league home run lead, played a key role in the victory. But Orioles manager Davey Johnson was much more impressed with Wells' performance.

"The biggest thing was a good outing by David Wells," Johnson said. "He looks to be his feisty old self. He fought when I asked him for the ball — I guess everything is back to normal."

Wells had not allowed fewer than four runs in each of his previous five starts since May 20. He gave up six hits, struck out four and did not walk a batter.

DEA wants 'date rape' drug in same category with herion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration says the illegal sedative Rohypnol, nicknamed the "date rape" drug, should be put in the same category as heroin, cocaine and LSD in the next three months.

The agency recommended that the drug, connected to more than 2,400 criminal investigations nationwide, be declared a Schedule 1 drug to increase penalties for Rohypnol trafficking, smuggling and misuse, DEA spokesman Jim McGivney said.

The Health and Human Services Department will study the medical effects of the drug, and within the next few months could decide with the DEA to reclassify it.

"We have seen an increase in abuse potential and actual abuse," McGivney said. "Even if you don't discuss the sexual allegations, the drug can be very problematic."

Ten times more powerful than Valium, Rohypnol has been used to incapacitate unsuspecting people, leaving them with no memory of an assault or robbery. It also is used to extend or ease the effects of other drugs.

Rohypnol has been banned in the United States since March but is used legally in 64 countries prior to surgery and to treat insomnia.

Declaring Rohypnol a Schedule 1 drug, the highest level of control, would provide a minimum 10-year prison term for smuggling offenses and allow prosecutors to seek the same sentences that apply to sales and possession of heroin and cocaine.

The requirements for a Schedule 1 drug include potential for abuse, ease with which a person can become addicted, actual abuse, and whether the drug is accepted for a legitimate medical use, McGivney said.

Rohypnol meets many of those requirements, including having no accepted medical use in the United States, he said.

Now, the sedative is classified as a Schedule 4 drug, along with Valium. Under this classification, penalties for possession or smuggling of Rohypnol are so light that a person would have to carry more than four pounds of pills, McGivney said.

The drug — a small, white tablet known as "roofie" that has no taste or odor when dissolved in a drink — sells illegally for $1 to $5 per pill on the street.

In "roofie rape," victims who are slipped the drug become dizzy and disoriented and have trouble moving their arms and legs. Ultimately, they pass out and have little or no memory of what happens next.

Officials from Hoffman-LaRoche Inc., whose parent company manufactures and markets Rohypnol, said Thursday they were "absolutely appalled" by the use of the sedative in sexual attacks.

"We are strongly in favor of very strict penalties for any person who traffics, misuses and abuses Rohypnol," Vice President Carolyn Glynn said. "We do not think rescheduling is an appropriate action."

The Nutley, N.J.-based company, which is a U.S. affiliate of Roche Holding Limited of Basel, Switzerland, announced last week it is converting to a smaller dose pill that will not dissolve as easily in a drink to help prevent abuse.

Until March, individuals were allowed to bring a three-month "personal use" supply of Rohypnol into the United States. But after increasing reports of rape, the DEA, Customs Service and Food and Drug Administration banned the drug from the United States.

Before recommending reclassifying Rohypnol, the DEA documented more than 2,400 federal, state and local criminal investigations involving Rohypnol between 1993 and March 1996, McGivney said.

Already Rohypnol is classified as a Schedule 1 drug in Minnesota and Oklahoma, McGivney said. Florida and Texas are in the process of reclassifying the drug, he said.

Report cites secret experiments on POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans taken prisoner in the Korean War may have been used as "laboratory specimens" in drug tests run by Soviet and Czech doctors and then executed, according to a formerly secret U.S. government report.

The number of Americans involved was described as "up to several dozen." The report was not more precise about the victims except to say they were soldiers and pilots.

The drug experiments allegedly were done at a Czech-built hospital in North Korea during the 1950-53 war in which the former Soviet Union was a central backer of North Korea against South Korea and its U.S. and U.N. allies.

Thousands of U.S. servicemen are still unaccounted for from the war.

The report dated April 27, 1992, said Air Force Intelligence officials first learned of the alleged drug-testing program in September 1990 while questioning an unidentified U.S. source about Soviet techniques in interrogating POWs.

"During the Korean War a Soviet and Czech drug testing program utilized American and other United Nations POWs as laboratory specimens," the report said.

"At the conclusion of the testing program a number of American POWs were executed," it said. "The individuals were executed to preclude public exposure of the information."

Copies of the report were made public Thursday by Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., at a hearing that focused on other issues involving Korean War POWs and MIAs.

In a note attached to the report, Lt. Gen. James R. Clapper Jr., then director of the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency, wrote that his agency had extensively investigated the information provided by the unidentified source.

"Information uncovered by DIA indicates that up to 'several dozen' unwilling participants in this program may have been executed upon its conclusion in North Korea," Clapper wrote.

Third Kevorkian-aided suicide during a 10-day period of time

DETROIT (AP) — For the third time in 10 days, Dr. Jack Kevorkian assisted in a suicide, helping a 67-year-old Ohio woman with a painful neurological disease kill herself, his lawyer said today.

The death Thursday night was the 31st the retired pathologist has acknowledged attending since 1990 and came just two days after No. 30. Since he was acquitted of assisted suicide charges last month for the third time, Kevorkian has picked up the pace.

The body of Bette Lou Hamilton, 67, of Columbus, Ohio, was taken to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital late Thursday by a friend, lawyer Geoffrey Fieger said. Hamilton was a divorcee with no living relatives, The Oakland Press reported.

She had a progressive neurological disease called syringomyelia, said Fieger, who told The Detroit News that the woman died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Symptoms of the rare disease, which afflicted golfing legend Bobby Jones, include weakness and muscle atrophy, said Dr. Robert Aranosian, head of the hospital's emergency room. He called it a "progressive wasting disease where nerve tissue is slowly destroyed."

Fieger said it is one of the most painful diseases. But Aranosian said that depends on the patient. "I don't believe constant pain is one of the symptoms," Aranosian said.

Hamilton had been consulting with Kevorkian for seven months, Fieger said, adding that other doctors, whom he would not name, also attended the death.

Pontiac police were investigating, Lt. William Webster said. There was no answer at Kevorkian's home Thursday night.

Hamilton had undergone 10 operations and was being treated at the Pain Control Center at the Ohio State University Medical Center, Fieger told the Detroit Free Press.

"She said she felt like she was being put on ice and then put into a fire with a million ice picks plunged into her body," the newspaper quoted Fieger as saying.

The death was the third Kevorkian has attended since he was acquitted May 14 of assisted suicide charges for the third time in as many trials since 1994.

The body of Lona Jones, 58, a nurse from Chester, Va., was left late Tuesday at North Oakland Medical Center in Pontiac by her husband. Jones suffered from a malignant brain tumor, Kevorkian's lawyers said.

On June 11, the body of Ruth Neuman, 69, of Columbus, N.J., was taken to the same hospital by one of her children.

The organizer of the bridge side of my trip to Cairns was Helen Thompson. You might have seen her name without having it register. One of the best bridge books ever, full of wonderful but difficult deals, is "Bridge with the Blue Team" by Pietro Forquet. It was translated from the Italian by Helen.

She is also a good player, arguably the best in northern Queensland. She spotted the right line in this deal almost immediately. How would you plan the play in four hearts after West has led the spade king?

Helen, sitting South, actually rebid three no-trump, not four hearts. Well done! That contract has nine top tricks. And if the heart suit were a minor, we would all rebid three no-trump. But with a major we get nervous, especially holding only two spades. However, I forced her back to the four-heart ranch.

At first glance, it looks obvious to use your one dummy entry to take the club finesse. Here, though, that finesse fails and you lose four tricks: one spade, two diamonds and one club.

Helen realized that she had nine top tricks, and the hunt was on for number 10. At trick one, she saw that she had options. She could withhold dummy's ace and play either her three or her jack. What did West's lead indicate? Right! The spade king and queen. Harnessing the power of dummy's 10, Helen ducked the first trick in the dummy and unblocked the jack from her hand. Either now or later, depending on West's lead at trick two, she planned to finesse dummy's spade 10 for her 10th trick. She won two spades, seven hearts and one club.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial trends will work in your favor, but you should try to use this good fortune to satisfy extravagant whims.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A situation might arise today that could enable you to take advantage of someone, but to your credit, you will discard this idea.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not let a domineering individual force his or her ideas on you today. The plan of action you designed for yourself will be better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Enjoy yourself in social situations today, but don't try to mix business with pleasure. Make it all of one thing or all of the other.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will continue to have good luck in your financial affairs. However, you must make sure to do all you can to ensure monetary success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Early in the day you may discover that being too forceful with others is not productive. Fortunately, your good judgment will get you back on track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might not get everything you want in a commercial arrangement today, but don't toss in the towel right away. Everything will work out in the end.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Some extra domestic pressures are probable in the early part of the day, but if you maintain your sense of humor, you will brighten everyone's spirits.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you help someone today, throw in something extra. Good intentions count for a lot and will yield larger-than-usual rewards.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In most intangible areas of your life, you could have good luck today. You will not be as lucky with tangible things, so use caution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Good fortune will not desert you today if you let events run their course. Implementing changes impulsively could be counterproductive.

Facts About The BIBLE

THE LAND OF REPHIDIM!

REPHIDIM WAS A CAMPING GROUND OF THE ISRAELITES IN THE WILDERNESS. (EX.17:1) IT WAS LOCATED BETWEEN THE WILDERNESS OF SIN AND MOUNT SINAI. THERE WAS NO WATER OBTAINABLE UNTIL MOSES SMOTE A ROCK, FROM WHICH WATER FLOWED, BY DIVINE COMMAND! THE WATER TRAVELED DOWN THE BED OF A WADI TO THE CAMP OF THE ISRAELITES, SUPPLYING THEM ALL DURING THEIR STAY AT MOUNT SINAI. REPHIDIM ALSO WAS THE SCENE OF THE BATTLE WITH THE AMALEKITES AND THE FIRST TIME JOSHUA WAS PICKED BY MOSES TO LEAD THE ISRAELITES IN COMBAT! THE SITE OF THE BATTLE CANNOT BE EXACTLY DETERMINED, BUT PROBABLY IS LOCATED ON WADI REFAYID, WHICH IS NORTHWEST OF JEBEL MUSA AND, TO THIS DAY, STILL HAS A STREAM OF COLD WATER WHICH RUNS DOWN TO JOIN WADI REFAYID AND SUPPLIES AN OASIS AT THE FOOT OF JEBEL REFAYID.

...AND SLOWLY THE FLOW OF BATTLE SWINGS WITH THE ISRAELITES! STEP BY STEP, THE AMALEKITES ARE DRIVEN BACK BY THE SLASHING SWORD WORK OF JOSHUA AND HIS MEN, BACK AND BACK, UNTIL, NOW, THEY ARE FORCED UP THE HILLSIDE FROM WHENCE THEY HAD SO FIERCELY RUSHED!

British beef sales to resume

Britain, European Union agree to lift ban

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — London and its European partners agreed today on a plan to lift its ban on British beef sales and control mad cow disease, which has devastated Britain's beef industry and infuriated its neighbors.

In turn, Britain agreed to stop disrupting European Union business by blocking decisions that require unanimous approval.

"My prime minister has indicated that our policy of non-cooperation ceases as of now," British Foreign Secretary Malcolm Rifkind said at the EU summit meeting, where the accord was announced.

The European Union has banned British beef exports worldwide for nearly three months over fears that the deadly cattle ailment may cause a fatal human variant, Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

The scare drove Europeans away from all beef — ravaging Britain's $1 billion a year beef industry — and enraged European beef farmers, who blame the British for the outbreak that also has cut their sales.

In France, beef farmers set fire to tires, straw and effigies of British Prime Minister John Major overnight. Farmers used tractors to block roads today and prevented a British ferry from docking for several hours, in protests designed to pressure France to stand firm at the summit.

The farmers feared prematurely lifting the embargo would worsen consumer fears and further damage the market.

Under the deal, the EU would relax the beef ban in stages as Britain enforces new safeguards against the cattle disease, known formally as bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

The main steps would include gradually lifting the export ban on cattle embryos, beef from herds certified as healthy, beef from animals too young to contract the disease, and finally, meat from all cattle.

The British government must slaughter about 100,000 cattle born after 1988 that are deemed as high-risk.

Also, Britain must toughen sanitary measures on farms, feed mills and slaughterhouses and more closely monitor herds and individual cows to prevent tainted beef from entering the food chain.

The agreement also included another $250 million to compensate beef producers in the 15 EU countries, bringing the total to just over $1 billion.

Britain had retaliated against the export ban by vetoing 100 EU decisions that require unanimous approval, angering many of Britain's partners in the world's largest trading bloc.

Even before the agreement was announced, Major's opponents in Britain attacked the EU plan.

"There is humiliation in this deal. There is ignominy in this deal. In fact, it is not a deal at all," said Labor leader Tony Blair. "It is a rout."

With the agreement, the EU was expected to turn to economic issues, particularly Commission President Jacques Santer's plan to fight Europe's double-digit unemployment.

In France, police broke up a demonstration today at the Normandy port of Ouistreham, where farmers had prevented a British car ferry from docking.

Reform Party convention to be 'doubled'

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot's Reform Party has divided its convention, multiplying its chance for media attention and adding time for its members to vote for a presidential nominee.

Reform Party leaders, who split off from the traditional party system, will separate their convention schedule by about 2,400 miles and a week, saying that will give members time to cast and mail presidential nominee ballots.

Part One of the convention is scheduled to be in Long Beach, Calif., on Aug. 11, lasting just three hours and including speeches by candidates for the presidential nomination.

Part Two will come a week later on the evening of Aug. 18 in Valley Forge, Pa., where the party will announce the party's nominee.

The unusual segmented arrangement means the Reform convention will bracket the Aug. 12-15 Republican convention in San Diego, and precede the Aug. 26-29 Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Doctor says he has second thoughts

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Chicago doctor said he never suspected in 1983 that Tanya Reid had anything to do with her daughter's series of mysterious respiratory ailments that resulted in 10 trips to a hospital emergency room.

Now, pediatrician Shashikant Kudchadker testified Thursday, "I don't know."

Kudchadker was a witness for the prosecution at the murder trial of Ms. Reid, a 38-year-old former nurse who is being tried for the second time in connection with the death of 8-month-old Morgan Reid in February, 1984, when the family was living in the Texas Panhandle town of Hereford.

She was convicted at a Hereford trial in 1993 and sentenced to 62 years in prison. But a state appeals court overturned the verdict last year, citing the presiding judge's failure to consider a change of venue request out of Hereford.

The jury found she smothered her daughter, then shook the child into a lifeless coma.

The defense contends the child died naturally on Feb. 8, 1984, just as Ms. Reid has said ever since.

At the time of the conviction, she already was serving a 10-year sentence in Iowa for endangering the life of her 3-year-old son, Matthew, in 1988 while living in Des Moines. The case prompted Texas prosecutors to re-examine Morgan's death.

Kudchadker testified Thursday that he was the pediatrician for the baby girl and two other of Ms. Reid's children in 1983, when the family lived in Illinois.

Kudchadker recounted 10 respiratory incidents that resulted in Morgan being rushed to a Chicago emergency room. All of the attacks except one occurred between noon and 5 p.m. on weekdays between August and December of 1983, he said.

"I have no doubt she was alone with Morgan," he said. "We talked about it many, many times. Every time there was an episode, she gave CPR and the child came to."

Tests and apnea monitors were used to determine the cause of Morgan's attacks but doctors never found a medical culprit, Kudchaker said. Doctors also did not see any evidence of child abuse, and Ms. Reid always acted as a devoted, affectionate parent, he said.

"I never suspected then that she did anything to the child," Kudchadker said. "I don't know now."

Kudchadker said the Reid family returned to the Chicago area after Morgan's death and sought his medical care again when Ms. Reid gave birth to a son, Robert, in May 1985. Within his first 26 days, Robert began having apnea episodes similar to Morgan's, he said.

Files

FBI also "bears a profound responsibility for this, and we're not seeking to shirk that responsibility." He said the files have been kept for possible forensic examination — which could include fingerprint analyses.

In related developments Thursday:

—Republicans moved to reinitiate contempt proceedings against White House officials in a dispute over 2,000 pages of documents relating to the dismissal of officials from the White House travel office. Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., said he was sending a letter to the White House demanding most of the documents by next week. Should the White House decline, he said, he hoped legislation beginning contempt proceedings against White House aides could be brought to the House floor next Thursday.

The administration turned over 1,000 pages of documents last month, including material that led to the discovery of the FBI files request.

—Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, whose House Ways and Means Committee writes tax law, said he has asked the Government Reform and Oversight Committee to investigate whether the files included any private taxpayer information. "We have reason — good reason — to believe there is such information in at least one of those files," Archer said. It is illegal for any unauthorized person to look at tax files.

Jury convicts woman of hanging her own son

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman with a history of mental problems faces a possible death sentence for hanging her 3-year-old son with an electrical cord.

A jury took less than two hours Thursday night to convict Amanda Wallace of the 1993 murder of Joseph Wallace. A judge scheduled a July 15 hearing to determine whether Ms. Wallace, 30, should be sentenced to death or get life in prison.

"Today the state just pushed her aside again," said Ms. Wallace's lawyer, Jimmie Jones. "Is it fair to kill someone who we've said is insane all through their life?"

In October 1993, a task force said the juvenile justice system failed Joseph by allowing him to be taken from foster care and returned to his mother despite her lifelong history of violence, self-mutilation and confinement to mental hospitals. She was known to eat batteries and glass.

The law now dictates that a child's best interests come first in custody cases.

Early on April 19, 1993, Ms. Wallace placed the boy on a chair, tied an electrical cord around his neck, hung the cord from a door frame and waved to him, she and relatives told police. Joseph waved back just before she kicked the chair away.
