Navigation District To Work Out Leases With Shrimpers

By Eddie Bradley

At their regular monthly meeting last Tuesday, March 4, the Navigation District board members instructed attorney S. Reese Rozzell to get together with Allen Lee, attorney for the Seafood Producers Association (SPA), try to work out problems that group finds with the new lease agreements, and report back to the board by April 1.

J.C. Harlan, representing the SPA, had told the members that he had no intentions of handicapping them in the legal pursuit of their duties and suggested the meeting between the lawyers.

There was quite a bit of discussion between the commissioners and the audience regarding whether or not the boat slip occupants should go ahead and sign the new leases.

The legal opinion of Rozzell seemed to be that they should.

In other action, the board officially recognized the Aransas County Recreational Planning Association, Inc., as a committee to assist the Navigation District with the improvement of recreational areas. Currently, this committee is made up of Anita Dingenary, Felicia Ratajki, Charles A. Augustine, William L. Newman, Burt Mills, Ray Longino and Hillis Dominguez.

The board also passed a

Hearing Set On Plan To Limit Hospitals

By Pat Blair

A plan that could mean no new hospital beds in a nine-county area — including Aransas, San Patricio and Nueces — will be presented to the public in a meeting March 19 in Corpus Christi.

The plan, to be unveiled in a public meeting starting at 7 p.m. at the Greenwood Center, 4040 Greenwood Road, would set a five-year moratorium — through 1984 — on new hospital beds for the area.

The moratorium is proposed by the South Texas Health Systems Agency and would apply to all hospitals in the counties of Aransas, San Patricio, Nueces, Bee, Kenedy, Kleberg, Live Oak, McMullen and Refugio.

There are no hospitals in Aransas County at this time. Rockport's Enterprise Medical Clinic provides emergency and non-bed patient care only.

The moratorium, if adopted, could leave Aransas County without any chance of getting a hospital before 1985.

The proposed moratorium could also seriously hamper a proposed consolidation-expansion program being considered by Lyman-Roberts and Aransas Hospitals in Aransas Pass.

The moratorium is part of a proposed five-year Health Systems Plan that the South Texas Health Systems Agency board of directors is

Company Granted Approval For Cable

By Beverly Wilken

The Commissioners Court approved an application made by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company to lay underground cable in the Fulton area.

After the application was approved, the discussion turned to alleged violations by the Rockport cable television company, in laying underground cables without contract or permission from the county.

County Attorney James Anderson said the telephone company has a right under law to lay underground cable. They have a contract to do what is necessary to provide service to their customers.

The Cable Company, has no such contract, he said. They had contract at one time, he added, but it was violated.

County Judge John Wendell agreed, saying that the violations made the contract void.

The Commissioners agreed that if the cable company cuts any county roads in future without obtaining permission, Anderson was authorized to take action against the company.

Precinct 1-1A Commissioner, Erie Eller made a motion that the Commissioners Court meet the second Monday and the last Wednesday of each month, instead of the second Monday and each Wednesday in the first, third, and fourth weeks of the month.

The motion was unanimously approved. The court meets at 9 a.m. in the Aransas County Courthouse.

Aransas Pass Man Killed In Rockport

March 6, under $50,000 bond following the incident that occurred about 9:40 p.m. at a Rockport residence.

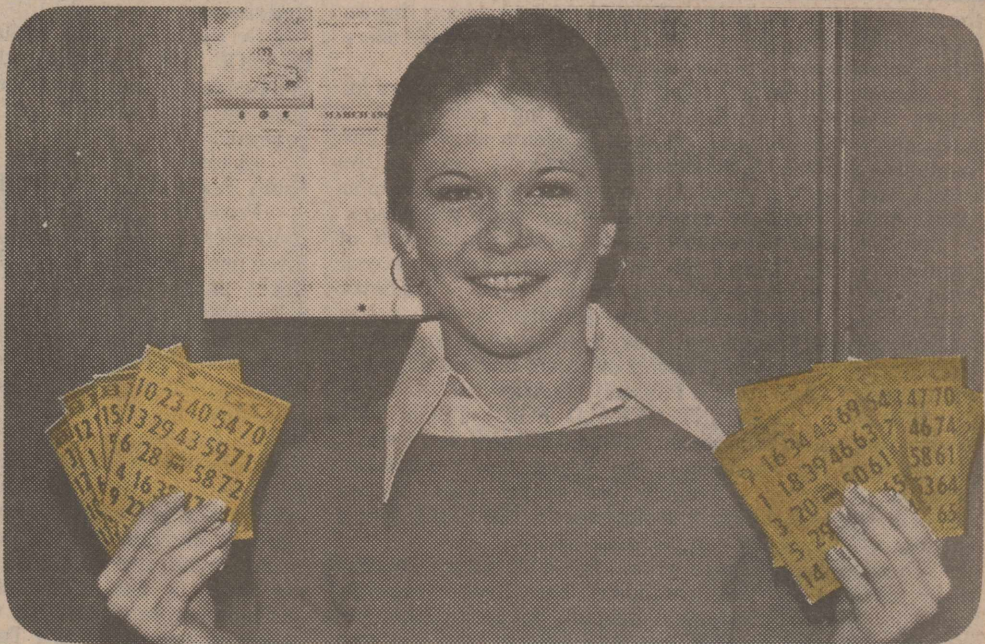

Moreno was stabbed in the upper arm and abdomen, said Rockport Police Detective Jim Hill who was called to investigate the slaying.

Hill said "most of the city police officers" as well as Rockport paramedics responded to the call of a reported stabbing at 501 Concho Street here.

Paramedics treated Moreno but failed in their efforts to save his life.

Esquivel was arrested Thursday morning by Police Officer Martin DeLeon.

Fulton City Council Race Draws Seven Candidates

Seven candidates, six of them incumbents, are running for all six places on the Fulton City Council in the upcoming April 5 city elections.

Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline is running unopposed for re-election.

Candidates for the remaining five council seats are incumbents Dominga Benavidez, Pat Loflin, Katherine McLeister, James S. Metzger and Ray H. Patterson, and challenger Antoinette J. Lamont.

The five candidates receiving the most number of votes will be elected to the council seats.

After incorporation a year ago, Fulton elected its first city council which — under State law — could only serve for one year.

Members of the council elected April 5, following election, will draw for one- or two-year terms. Beginning in 1981, all council members and the mayor will be elected for two-year terms.

Absentee voting in the Fulton city elections will begin March 17 and continue through April 1.

Candidates will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, March 10, to draw for the position in which their names will appear on the election ballot.

New Game Starts

A new Newspaper Bingo game starts with today's Pilot.

Cards for this week will be yellow and Bingo bugs will be in today's and the coming March 12 midweek Pilot.

Details on how to play the game, and names of the 20 participating merchants, are on the full-page Bingo ad in today's Pilot.

As of 5 p.m. Thursday, March 6, there were four Bingo winners for the week of March 2 - 7.

Winners, and the location where they picked up their cards, are Fran Woodall, Fisher's Hairmasters; Linda Baros, Monroe's Carpet; Bill Bardwil Sr., Tackle Town; and Jim Mease, A Winter Texan from Iowa, Palm Harbor Marina.

5 Seek 3 Posts On Rockport City Council

Five candidates are vying for three positions on Rockport's city council in the April 5 city elections.

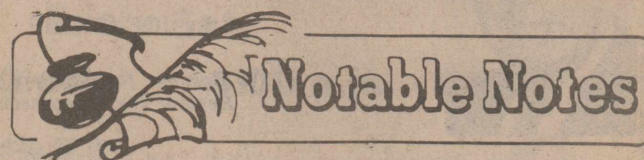

Filing for city office closed at 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 5.

Candidates and the posts for which they are filed are: Walter S. Falk Jr. running unopposed in his bid for re-election as Rockport's mayor.

Incumbent Dan Ward and challenger Peter Lazidis are vying for the chance to represent Ward 1 on the council, and Ward 2 incumbent J. Martin (Jerry) Shaw is being challenged by Henry

Notable Notes

Methodist Speaker

David Harle, Director of Christian Education at the First United Methodist Church in Hopkinsville, Kentucky, recently completed a two-week work project in Haiti. He will be telling about Haiti and about the project this Sunday, March 9, in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church. The time is from 5-7 p.m., a supper of finger foods will be provided, and the public is cordially invited.

Young Life Meeting

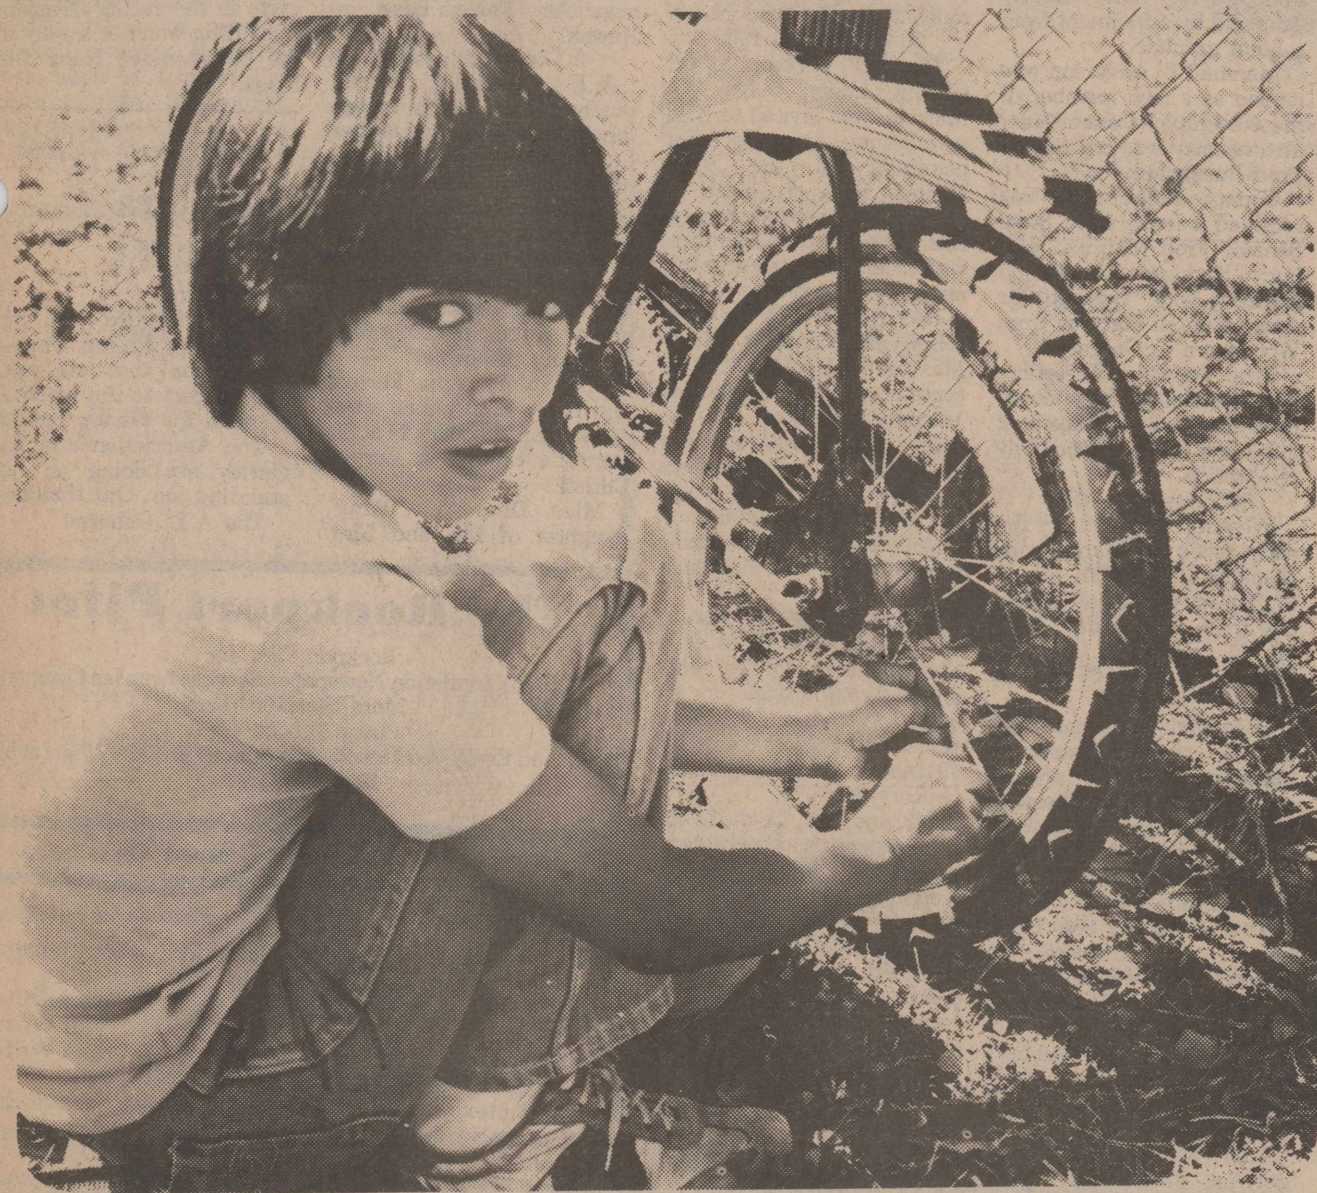

Young Life will meet Monday, March 10, in the Women's Club Building at 7:30 p.m. This Monday, a film on summer camp will be shown. Anyone interested is urged to attend. The group will meet each Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Republicans Meet

The Republicans of Aransas County will meet on March 20, at 10 a.m. at the home of Miss Betty Whitney, #76 Curlew, Key Allegro. Guest speaker will be Mr. Tom L. Bridges, District Attorney for the 36th Judicial District. Members and guests are invited to meet Mr. Bridges and learn of the duties of his office and staff.

Advisory Council To Meet

The Rockport District Parents Advisory Council is scheduled to meet on Tuesday, March 11, at 2:30 p.m. in room 21 of the Rockport Elementary School. Anyone interested in attending the meeting is urged to do so.

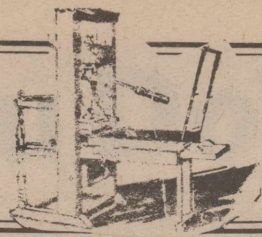

LITE-A-BIKE

VFW Stewart-Wendell Post #3904 Auxiliary is serving as sponsor of the Lite-A-Bike Campaign in the elementary schools. Programs have been presented at Fulton, Live Oak and Rockport. On Tuesday, March 4, Police Chief James Craigmile and Officer Joaquin Martinez showed a film on bicycle safety, featuring comedian Bill Cosby, to the third, fourth and fifth grades of Rockport Elementary. The Auxiliary then gave out strips of reflective tape and drawings to show where the tape should be placed on the bicycles. Here, Joaquin Martinez III is putting some of the tape on his bike after school.

Speaking Out

What are some ways you would suggest for the United States to combat inflation?

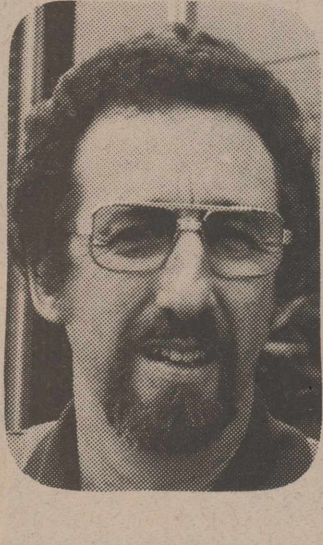

All of us should spend less money. That includes government and everybody.

Dee Brummett,
former resident

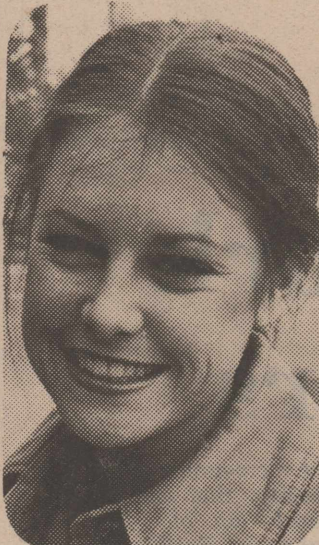

Stop overseas spending, spend more at home. This would leave more money to invest in our own economy.

Karen Ratliff,
Magnolia Street

I think through some personal discipline of the spender: minimal borrowing, discarding credit cards and discriminatory, or careful, shopping.

Rev. John Bradshaw,
Shores Lane

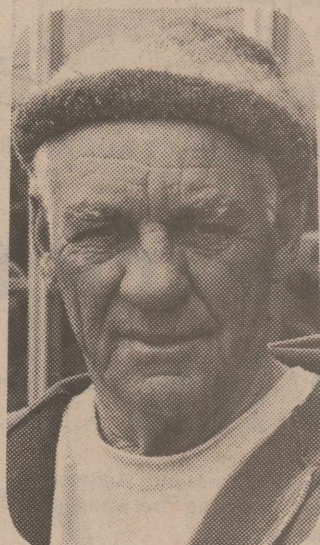

The President should put a price control on gasoline. It has skyrocketed in the last year.

Robin Offe,
Market Street

The best thing we could do is look for an alternate source of energy. I think the price of imported oil is the prime source of inflation.

Bill Mercer,
former resident

Everybody should spend less money. Take away a bunch of credit cards and it would help a lot.

Roy Hunsakor,
Anchor Motel

If I had an idea, I'd have given it to Carter a long time ago.

Everett Brown,
Catalina Drive

Cut down on construction of things we really don't need, like the Highway 35 bypass or buildings that aren't really necessary. These cause taxes to go up, which in turn causes inflation.

Connie McWilliams,
Winding Way

Austin At Wharf

I HAVE, IN MY TIME, SEEN A GOODLY PORTION OF this country and much of the rest of the world. And by the same token I have been acquainted and consorted with men and women of almost every degree, and yet — I feel obliged to acknowledge that I may well be one of the most naive men alive, or else an innocent possessed of something less than childish perception.

You see, I have never met a vandal. I cannot conceive of any of the many men and women whom I know and respect being guilty of littering the roadside with bottles and cans, marring walls, breaking windows, destroying plumbing in public restrooms. The list is endless and evidence is everywhere that vandals do exist and the extent of their crimes must stand as proof that their numbers are legion.

Again I must ask, face the question, am I so naive? Are those jolly chaps who make such fine sailing mates, people who appreciate the beauty of a sunset, delight in discussing a good book, become enthralled by a great concert; are there those among them who are quasi-schizophrenics, Dr. Jekylls and Mr. Hydes? I am not an overly sensitive type, yet I dare not allow myself to dwell upon such a possibility.

Often as not vandalism is attributed to youth, a premise which I reject. This does not mean I think young people are innocent. Certainly not, but who knows to what extent? If all the empty beer cans strewn along the highway were thrown by teenagers it would be virtually impossible to ever see a sober youngster. So perish the thought.

At hand is an article titled "Students Offer Answers for School Violence, Vandalism." Reporting results of a questionnaire a Portland, Oregon educator attributes the vandalism problem to a desire for "kicks", anger at the school, and a lack of pride. One must wonder how a similar questionnaire would be answered by the adult population.

At this point there must be the desire on the part of someone to ask: "Didn't you ever raise any hell when you were a kid?" Ha, I can remember the time when — but never mind. Some of the pranks of my salad days were pretty colorful, but never once can I recall being party to vicious, vindictive destruction of property or an act that would fall in the category listed by the Portland educator.

FORMER PRESIDENT GERALD FORD TOOK THE words right out of my mouth. "Ronald Reagan can't win." Win that is the Presidency, the Republican nomination, perhaps. A Carter - Reagan race would make Lyndon Johnson's defeat of Barry Goldwater in 1968 look like a Goldwater triumph by comparison.

Those are hard lines to write. I feel a bit brave in writing them because if any candidate has dyed-in-the-wool partisans, that man is Ronald Reagan. So dyed-in-the-wool are they that they'd rather lose with Reagan than win with any other candidate.

And that could happen, and it will happen unless the GOP pulls itself together. And who knows this better than Jimmy Carter? Or to go a step further, the only man Reagan might, and I say "might" beat, is Teddy Kennedy. And that would be a horse race, one I'd rather not even imagine.

But why can't, why won't Reagan ever become President? His age is only a minor factor. The real reason is that his ideas and principles, no matter how "good old-fashioned American" they may be, belong to a past that will never return.

There is at present, thank heaven, a conservative trend abroad in the land, but not of the hard line sort expounded by Reagan. Accordingly I suspect that while most of us past 50 (but by no means overwhelmingly) would prefer Reagan over the vacillating incumbent, the pendulum would swing decisively in the other direction in the ranks of those of lesser years.

IN ALL OF THIS THERE IS A STRANGE BIT OF irony. Well-meaning Jimmy Carter is by no stretch of the imagination a man of presidential caliber. Of his only opponent within the Demo ranks, the less said the better. Suffice that the Democratic Party offers the country something that is about as close to nothing as can be conceivable.

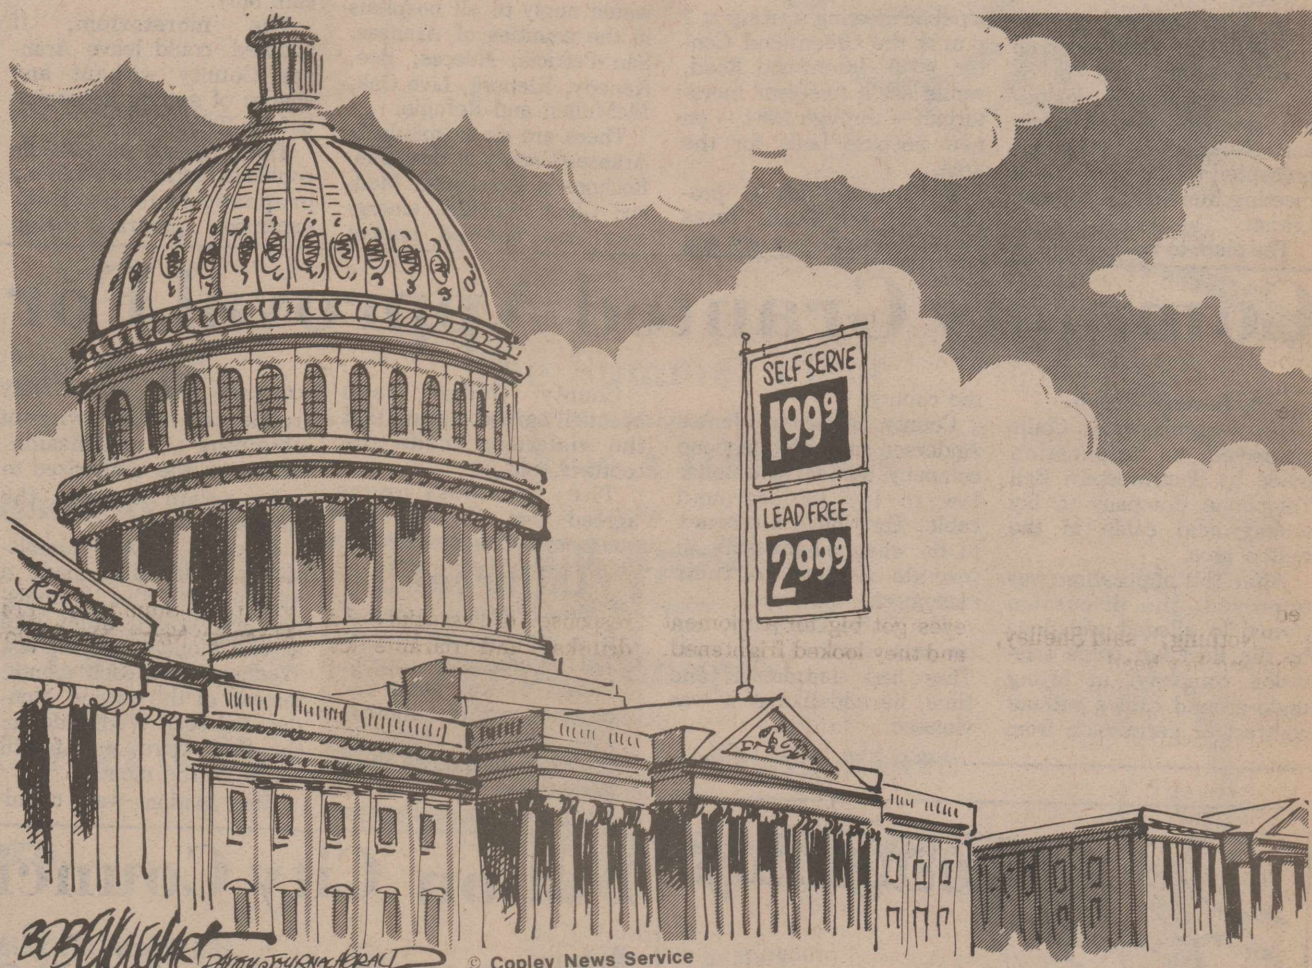

On the other hand, while preferences for candidates in the GOP differs amongst the party faithful, Demos and independents, most with whom I talk admit that they could at least be comfortable if not inspired by any of the GOP potentials.

At least that is the way things appears to me to be in South Texas. I can't speak for the rest of the country.

Presently I find it a bit of a pity that none of the GOP contenders seem able to inspire the people, grab their pulses if you like. That's rather an old-fashioned sentiment, I admit. Yet I believe that is the very thing the nation needs, acknowledging the while that inspirational people are not always blessed with the best of minds and judgement.

Remember, if you're among the few old enough to remember, William Jennings Bryan, a blithering idiot if ever there was one, inspired a lot of people. I only know from the history I've read.

So who's my choice? George Bush, by long odds. He has the best mind, the best qualifications, the man most likely able to lead and establish rapport with the Congress. More, Bush can and does inspire. I don't believe any man or woman could spend five minutes in his company without being convinced of that. Convinced, not persuaded. And then, perhaps not important, but George is like me and so many others among us, a new Texan. — ahah

"Low Down"

FROM THE
Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

Representative Tim Lee Carter (Ky.)...Today I am pleased to introduce the (Arthritis Research and Training Amendment of 1980.) I am especially pleased that my good friend (Rep.) Phil Gramm of Texas is joining me in introducing this measure...

"Arthritis is one of the Nation's greatest health problems, one which afflicts 31.6 million people or 15 percent of the American population..."

"Recognizing the magnitude and scope of the problem, the Congress unanimously voted to enact the National Arthritis Act (P.L. 93-640) signed by President Ford in January, 1975."

"The legislation I am introducing today will extend the authority for the multi-purpose arthritis centers for three more years beyond current law's 1980 expiration date. My bill would authorize $15 million for fiscal year 1981. $18 million for 1982, and $20 million for 1983.

"Arthritis can strike any age, although the chances increase dramatically with age. Forty-one percent of persons 65 years of age or older have arthritis..."

"Juvenile rheumatoid arthritis (JRA) can cause severe crippling in children, retard their growth, cause serious emotional and social problems, and, in some cases, lead to serious kidney disease, blindness or death."

An estimated 250,000 children under 18 years of age are afflicted with arthritis. It is now clear that JRA is only one of several forms of arthritis in children and adolescents..."

"The cause or causes of most types of arthritis are as yet unknown. By the same token, there is no cure."

"The framework for a broad-based well-coordinated effort to fight arthritis has been set in place and its activities are well underway. Nevertheless, there is a great deal more to learn, and a great deal more to be done. We are now at a critical juncture and we cannot afford to lose the momentum already gained..."

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT
Controlling arthritis is a can-do project.

For example, the incidence of certain types of polio was reduced in 1955 by the introduction of Salk vaccine administered by "injection."

Further progress was made when an "oral" vaccine was licensed in the United States in 1962. Polio was being controlled.

Someday a simple oral vaccine may be developed to control arthritis. It will be accomplished by dedicated medical people and undoubtedly some Federal grants.

Rockport's paramedics continued to receive more calls than projected during the week beginning February 25.

Paramedics received 24 calls, four more than the 20 anticipated for the week.

Ambulances traveled a total of 683 miles, and average response time was seven minutes, 16 seconds.

Five of the calls were in response to heart attack, and in four of those calls, the victim was taken to a hospital.

Four calls were as the result of auto accidents and four were in response to reported falls.

EMS Report

Bev's Beat

"Oh...yes! Fun. Love it. Fun. Yes," I said between my smiling lips and clenched teeth.

"Bev, are you nervous?" asked Jim.

"Oh no! Heavens no!" I giggled as they pried my hands from the sides of the boat. "Fun. Love it. Fun."

"Oh, good!" said Jim. "The wind's picking up."

"Great! Now we can have some REAL fun."

"That wind's not out of the west, is it? Because I've heard that if the wind comes out of the west..."

"No, Bev. The wind is not out of the west," assured Shelley, giving the guys that "Who-invited-her-look."

"Now, everybody," began Jim, "when I say lower your heads, you lower them—quick! And I'll swing the boom around. I'll tell you when to come back up. Got it?"

I watched Shelley and Jimmy and they were nodding, so I nodded, too.

"Okay...get ready," warned Jim. "Okay...DUCK!"

SPLASH!

"Uh...Bev," said Jim. "Well, you said you'd tell us when to lower our heads and then you yelled, 'DUCK,' and I saw the ducks over on the bank over there and I thought you were just pointing them out and...I'm so embarrassed," I cried.

"As well you should be!" said Jimmy. "Now come on, honey. It's okay. Get back in the boat."

Back in the boat, smiling and making an honest effort to enjoy myself, I spied this big black thing with a gigantic sharp fin on its back.

"I...I...I..."

"What is it now, Beverly? Did you see a shark or something?" teased Shelley.

"I...I...I...There's a...a...sh...SHARK!" I screamed. "Shark! Shark! Shark!"

"Right. And look, he's having tea with the Loch Ness monster," snapped Jim.

About that time something bumped the sailboat. Something at least the length of the boat! Their eyes got big for a moment and they looked frightened. Then they laughed. No, it was more like a roar.

Roaring laughter. They laughed so hard that tears ran down their cheeks.

"Well, I'm so glad to see that we're all under control in the face of death," I screamed vehemently.

"Next you're going to ask him to join us for lunch. In fact, we'll probably BE his lunch!"

As they broke into the theme from "Jaws," I stared incredulously.

"I can't believe you people! I can't believe you! DO SOMETHING!" I begged desperately.

"Oh, Bev," laughed Jim. "You really had us going there for a second! Pretending that little dolphin was a shark!"

"Yeah," giggled Shelley. "That was fun!"

"Dolphin...?" I said numbly.

"I'll admit, I was worried for a minute too," added

Jimmy, slapping his knee. "Dolphin...?" I repeated numbly.

Monday morning at work, I sat quietly at my desk and went straight to work while the other girls gathered around the coffee pot talking about their weekends.

"Hey, Bev! What did you do this weekend?" asked one of my co-workers.

"Oh, nothing," I said without looking up from my work.

"Well, you must have done SOMETHING," said another.

"Uh, no. Nothing," I assured them.

"But you're sunburned! Did you go to the beach?" they persisted.

I took a deep breath.

"We went sailing and Jim said he'd said to lean over and he said DUCK and I fell overboard looking at the ducks and then the wind was so rough, but it wasn't from the west, and I tried to have a good time and smile and a shark came up beside us and then bumped us, only it wasn't a shark, it was a dolphin, and I didn't get to take my beach ball and we didn't really have a secret compartment with fishing gear and water skis tucked away, and then...HEY! Where are you going? I thought you wanted to hear about my weekend..."

"Well, we did," snipped one co-worker, "but who wants to hear you bragging about going 'sailing'?"

April 1, 1980, is the rendition deadline for the City of Rockport, and Johnson urged citizens to render their property and apply for exemptions or productivity values for which they may qualify before that date.

In order to be eligible for exemptions all veterans with service-connected disability and citizens age 65 or older must fill out an exemption form before April 1, 1980.

When we unloaded at the depot, I had to run to catch the last bus to the base. Climbing aboard, I felt very hot and flushed.

I took a seat near the back and, since there were just a couple of other passengers, thought it would be a good time to examine my stomach. Pulling the shirt up to my chin, I immediately saw the splatter of little bumps all over my chest and tummy.

The itching and burning

was getting worse and it seemed certain that my body was running a fever. I trailed my hand across my stomach again, feeling the bumps; suddenly I noticed that the other passengers were looking back at me, so I dropped my shirt and coolly looked out the window.

At the base I went straight to the dispensary where my own diagnosis was confirmed --chicken pox. Can you imagine? A 24-year-old man with a childhood disease.

That night they sent me to Wilford Hall Hospital, the same one the Shah stayed in recently. Although we were both in isolation, it is doubtful we had the same room.

I had, of course, called home. Linda thought it was hilarious! It is a constant amazement to me how wives can find such continuing joy in the pain and anguish of their husbands.

Well anyhow, the next eight days made up the most irritating, boring, itchy, calamine-smelling period I ever went through. At the end of that time, my body was covered with little black scabs from head to toe.

The scabs didn't bother me that much, and I was no longer infectious, but I resembled some ghoulish creature from a grade B horror movie.

My CO gave me several days off, but I wanted to go home rather than lie around the barracks. What to do? I sure couldn't go out in public looking like that.

It was then that one of the medical techs hit upon a brilliant idea. I called home and told Linda to meet me at the bus station, then put on my dress blue uniform.

The technicians got a big roll of gauze out and wrapped every part of me that wasn't covered. I could have been Audie Murphy for all anyone knew.

The hospital doors opened and out walked a soldier in his bright blue uniform, covered with bandages. I felt awfully foolish, but tried to carry myself with dignity.

On both buses, people offered me seats, but I politely waited my turn. During the entire trip, no one asked me what had happened--and I wouldn't have either had I been them.

At last the bus neared the Gregory stop and there "Jellyroll" was, parked by the coke machine. When Linda saw me I thought she was going to have a heart attack.

I hugged her and quickly whispered what was going on. She laughed then and peeked under the bandages as the Grayhound slowly pulled away.

So you see kids, they also serve who only stand and itch.

Tips On Saving Dollars

Herman C. Johnson, tax assessor-collector for the City of Rockport, has announced the availability of a new 12-page pamphlet which may help local residents save on their property taxes.

Johnson said the pamphlet explains how the property tax system in Texas operates and highlights possible tax savings available to citizens.

The publication was developed by the State Property Tax Board in accordance with Senate Bill 621, passed by the Texas Legislature in 1979.

Information in the pamphlet is applicable to property taxes collected by all levels of local government, including counties, cities and school districts.

Johnson noted that while cities may not offer a general homestead exemption, such as is available from school districts and counties, the City of Rockport does offer locally-adopted exemptions for citizens age 65 or older.

He pointed out that disabled veterans also are eligible for exemptions.

Owners of agricultural land also have the option of having such property taxed at its productive rather than market value.

In order to be eligible for exemptions all veterans with service-connected disability and citizens age 65 or older must fill out an exemption form before April 1, 1980.

When we unloaded at the depot, I had to run to catch the last bus to the base. Climbing aboard, I felt very hot and flushed.

I took a seat near the back and, since there were just a couple of other passengers, thought it would be a good time to examine my stomach. Pulling the shirt up to my chin, I immediately saw the splatter of little bumps all over my chest and tummy.

The itching and burning

was getting worse and it seemed certain that my body was running a fever. I trailed my hand across my stomach again, feeling the bumps; suddenly I noticed that the other passengers were looking back at me, so I dropped my shirt and coolly looked out the window.

At the base I went straight to the dispensary where my own diagnosis was confirmed --chicken pox. Can you imagine? A 24-year-old man with a childhood disease.

That night they sent me to Wilford Hall Hospital, the same one the Shah stayed in recently. Although we were both in isolation, it is doubtful we had the same room.

I had, of course, called home. Linda thought it was hilarious! It is a constant amazement to me how wives can find such continuing joy in the pain and anguish of their husbands.

Well anyhow, the next eight days made up the most irritating, boring, itchy, calamine-smelling period I ever went through. At the end of that time, my body was covered with little black scabs from head to toe.

The scabs didn't bother me that much, and I was no longer infectious, but I resembled some ghoulish creature from a grade B horror movie.

My CO gave me several days off, but I wanted to go home rather than lie around the barracks. What to do? I sure couldn't go out in public looking like that.

The technicians got a big roll of gauze out and wrapped every part of me that wasn't covered. I could have been Audie Murphy for all anyone knew.

The hospital doors opened and out walked a soldier in his bright blue uniform, covered with bandages. I felt awfully foolish, but tried to carry myself with dignity.

On both buses, people offered me seats, but I politely waited my turn. During the entire trip, no one asked me what had happened--and I wouldn't have either had I been them.

At last the bus neared the

I hugged her and quickly whispered what was going on. She laughed then and peeked under the bandages as the Grayhound slowly pulled away.

Let Me Tell You A Story Of A Man Named Ed

By Eddie Bradley

Well gather 'round children, ol' Uncle Ed is going to tell you about how he was hospitalized while serving his country.

Yep, I was on active duty with the Air Force in San Antonio, but got to ride the bus home almost every weekend. My wife met me at the bus stop in Gregory on Friday evening and left me off again on Sunday night to catch the last run back.

On this particular weekend, we were celebrating my 24th birthday, so we drove to Corpus in "Jellyroll", the '54 Chevy, and had a great pizza at our favorite out-of-the-way spot.

As usual, I hated to climb on that Grayhound and make the trip back to San Antonio; but as it turned out, this trip was worse than most.

Well sir, it wasn't very far down the road before I got to feelin' kind of itchy, you know? It felt like little pin pricks were sticking me all over my chest and arms. The closer we got to the Alamo City, the worse I felt.

There seemed to be little bumps on my stomach, but I couldn't be sure in the darkness.

When we unloaded at the depot, I had to run to catch the last bus to the base. Climbing aboard, I felt very hot and flushed.

I took a seat near the back and, since there were just a couple of other passengers, thought it would be a good time to examine my stomach. Pulling the shirt up to my chin, I immediately saw the splatter of little bumps all over my chest and tummy.

What Castaways Do Best Is Help

By Pat Blair
"Keeping a record of what we do is not our prime interest. Our prime interest is helping people."
So says Dorothea Montgomery, bookkeeper for the Castaways, an organization that has been helping people in Aransas County for about a decade.
Started around 1970 as a "Weekly rummage sale" in the building now occupied by ABC Learning Center, the Castaways Thrift Shop is now in its fourth location -- and that one's getting crowded.
In those early years, says Dorothea, "if we sold $3 in merchandise, we thought that was a big day!"
This January, after looking at their books and paying expenses, the Castaways volunteers found they had $6,250 to allocate to the 12 agencies and organizations they help fund.

"We have been asked," says Dorothea, "why we don't give the money to individuals. But if you give the money to an individual, you've only helped that one. We never did go to individuals -- we go to the organizations that help the individuals."
There is an exception to this general rule. A family or individual in need of clothing can, with the aid of a note from a minister or welfare association, get clothing at no cost from the Castaways shop.
"They can get three outfits each," says Dorothea, adding, "all the ministers and all the welfare associations know that by writing a note, they can get this for any family or individual in need."

"We've helped victims of fires, people in jail, transients..."
As for the organizations that benefit from the Castaways sales, these include the Concern Center, Council on Aging, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Aransas County Medical Services, Inc., and all of the county's volunteer fire departments.
The list also includes the Search for Truth Mission, Toys for Tots, ABC Learning School, the Fulton Christian Academy, United Fund, Heart and Cancer associations and the Salvation Army.
Located at 1011 Concho, the Thrift Shop is staffed entirely by volunteer workers.
"We try to keep three at a time for two hours each," says volunteer Mary B. Burke. Workers come from each of the sponsoring churches -- Lutheran, Episcopal, United Methodist and Presbyterian.
"A lot of Winter Texans are volunteer workers," Dorothea adds.
In addition to providing the workers, the sponsoring churches also provide two members each for the Castaways' governing board.
"But of course all the churches in the community contribute," says Mary. Donations are accepted from anyone -- and just about anything will be accepted if it's in usable condition.

"We don't have facilities to store large items of furniture," says Dorothea. But small pieces of furniture -- even small stoves and refrigerators -- knickknacks, shoes, clothing will all be accepted.
"And we never have enough children's clothes," Dorothea adds.
The Castaways members are unanimous in praise of the support they've received from the community. "The community and the men have been behind us," says Dorothea who named such "unsung heroes" as Chester Johnson who rents the present building to the organization for "much less" than it's worth, she said.
She also named Eb Wininger who built shelves and tables for the organization, Ed Devoe who repairs electrical appliances donated to the Castaways and "Mr. Martinez who does our plumbing."
Items that aren't sold in the Castaways Thrift Shop are donated to missionaries to distribute to people in need, and "the (E.R.) Cantwells have been very instrumental in helping us get items to the mission fields."
With this kind of help, says Dorothea, the Castaways "have always been solvent," and they look forward to a future of continuing to do what they do best -- helping people.

You'll come to a trailer park on the right, and on the left -- on a little island in the middle of pavement -- a massive oak tree with a weathered white sign in front of it.
The sign proclaims, "Camp Site of General Zachary Taylor, 1846."
This is the Taylor Oak, one of Rockport's more famous landmarks.
Back in 1845, when annexation of Texas by the United States appeared certain, the U.S. War Department directed General Zachary Taylor to move by sea and land to some point on the Texas coast close to the Nueces River.

This was a precautionary measure, because an invasion of Texas by Mexican forces seemed likely.

Taylor, stationed at Fort Jessup at the time, left New Orleans on July 22, 1845, and headed down the Texas coast, arriving at St.

Joseph's Island on July 29. After scouting the area, two companies, one led by then-Captain Ulysses S. Grant, were sent to Corpus Christi.

The major portion of Taylor's troops continued across Aransas Bay to Live Oak Peninsula, where they camped around the live oak tree -- under which General Taylor pitched his tent.

When the encampment broke up, Taylor moved his army to the Rio Grande, and this area's involvement with the Mexican War came to an end.

But the tree is still there, a reminder of Rockport's brush with the mainstream of Texas history.

Drug Raid Nets Methamphetamine

An early Friday morning search warrant raid on an Aransas County residence on FM 1069 between Aransas Pass and Rockport netted officers about $2,000 worth--street value--of methamphetamine, commonly called "crystal."

tamine and unlawfully carrying a pistol.

Assisting Hewes and Russell on the raid were members of the Aransas County Sheriff's Department, the Aransas County Sheriff's Reserve Unit, State Narcotics Officer, a member of the Corpus Christi Organized Crime Unit, a member of the San Patricio County Sheriff's Department and Constable Larry Wood from San Patricio County.

Officers led by Sheriff Bob Hewes and Detective James Russell of the Aransas Pass Police Department arrested Sheril Young, 32.
Young was charged with possession of methamphetamine.

Spotted seatrout, speckled trout, trout or speck are all names for the same fish, Cynoscion nebulosus. More time, effort and recreational dollars are expended in pursuit of this fish than for any other salt water fish in the state.

The number of pounds of spotted seatrout harvested from Texas water exceeds that of any other fish in the state.

State totals for commercial landings of spotted seatrout usually vary between one and two million pounds annually with annual sport catches between 0.5 and one million pounds.

The spotted seatrout can reach sexual maturity in one year, but most require two to three years before they begin to reproduce. Spawning normally starts when bay waters reach 21 degrees C (70 degrees F). Spawning occurs between April and October, but the peak generally occurs in May through July.

Spawning usually takes place at night in deeper waters located adjacent to grass flats or marshes. Females release from 100,000 to 1.5 million eggs into the water which are immediately fertilized by the male. The eggs then float into these nursery areas and hatch where the young remain until they reach "fingerling" size (4-6 inches).

The type of food eaten by specks changes as the fish grow older. Young fish, 1-5 inches long, feed on post-larval shrimp, copepods and very small crabs and fish.

Specks 5-8 inches long usually feed on shrimp and small crabs. Specks 8-14 inches long primarily feed on shrimp and small fish while those over 14 inches in length feed mainly on fish. A trout over 18 inches long almost exclusively feeds on fish, primarily mullet.

Specks have relatively slow growth rates when compared to growth rates of other important sport and commercial fishes found in this area.

While redfish and black drum reach 12 inches on their first and second birthday, respectively, specks normally require three years to reach the one-foot-long mark. Most specks that tip the scales at 3 pounds are 5-6 years old and most 5 pound fish are at least 8 years old.

Because males seldom live longer than 5 years most fish over 15 inches in length are females.

Many biologists believe that while heavy fishing pressure may reduce the average size of specks caught, due to their slow growth rate, it seldom significantly reduces their total numbers in the bay system.

Rather than heavy fishing pressure being blamed for fewer numbers of specks now in our bays, as compared to 15 to 20 years ago, the real culprit is probably loss of nursery areas due to increased dredging and filling activities in our marshes and grass flats.

Facts and figures tell how important this fish is to our state, but nothing save the feeling of one of these fighters on the end of a fishing line or the appeal of a platter of speck filets can tell why this fish is so important to the Texas coast.

Errors Spell Doom For Pirates

By Bob Crawford
Errors plagued the Rockport-Fulton Pirates in their opening games of 1980 as the team dropped a 16-8 game to Taft on Monday, and then lost another game on Tuesday night to Carroll's JV by the score of 14-8.

In Monday's opener, the Pirates were sailing along until errors opened the door for the Greyhounds, and Taft came up with some timely hits, including two home runs, and put the game out of reach.

By the time the game was over, the Pirates had committed nine big errors. Under normal circumstances, eight runs should be enough to insure a victory, but two big innings for the Greyhounds dealt the Pirates a defeat. Rockport actually hit the ball well. Donald Nava hit the solo shot for the Pirates as he hit a round-tripper, and then added a double.

Mark Setterbo, who opened on the mound for the Pirates before giving way to a reliever, had two hits for the night, including a two RBI single.

Wayne Childers also drove home two runs with a hit. Dennis Hull, hitting as a Designated Hitter, led the Pirates with three hits.

Tuesday night the Pirates were deadlocked with Carroll's JV 3-3 going into the middle innings before errors spelled doom for them.

In the top of the fifth inning of the 3-3 game, Carroll got a runner on and a pitching change was made. Almost immediately the Pirates committed another error, and by the end of the Carroll time at bat, the Pirates were behind by three runs.

Those runs went unanswered, and then Carroll added five more tallies in the sixth, again with errors playing a major role in the scoring. By then the score was 11-3.

Rockport put five runs on the board in the last two innings, but Carroll countered that with three scored in the seventh. Mark McDonald opened on the mound for the Pirates before going out in the fifth when Bill Jennings came on to challenge the Tigers.

Setterbo was the only Pirate with two hits in the offensive department, although Donald Nava drove in three runs with a homer in the third. Setterbo picked up three RBI's with singles in the last two innings.

Obviously disappointed, Coach Skip Richardson said, "When you give up ten runs after two were out, then things just aren't going well for you. We hit the ball well in both games, but most of the shots all seemed to be at someone. We just have to tighten up our defense to stay in the game, if we are going to win consistently."

Who's on first? Pete, and he loves it

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

The dream is in the heart of every kid: to be between the lines fielding ground balls, flipping them nonchalantly to Tony Perez, engaging in badinage with Johnny Bench or Mike Schmidt.

That was what made playing third base so much fun for the eternal adolescent, Pete Rose, and that's precisely why he's so thrilled to be playing first base for the Philadelphia Phillies: he gets to handle the ball more than ever before and trade quips with the best in baseball.

When I got to interview Pete recently, the question was obvious: What's it like to play first base for the Phils? That's all Rose needed. Just turn on the tape recorder and sit back:

"First of all, for all those people who think (playing) first base is a cup of tea, well, I disagree with 'em. Now, I've played a lot of positions in baseball — second base, third base, all three outfield positions — and the one involving the most work is first base, and when I say that, I don't mean it's been hard.

"It's been fun, but something like that is better for me than going to a position where you just stand around. Going to first base will prolong my career more than going to left field."

He says that because he is more fan than player. ("Going into this year, I was the only guy living who saw every home run that Johnny Bench ever hit, or every hit Concepcion ever got, or Griffey or Driessen, because I was there ever since they came up.)

And Pete loves the game so much that just being able to chatter with base runners is a kick.

"The communication. That's the one thing I really dug when I went from left to third base. All those years in the outfield I missed that. At third base, every time there's an out you touch the ball — you give it back to the pitcher."

First base must be a dream.

"Like the other night. I didn't have a ground ball hit to me all night, but I touched the ball 15 times — 11 put-outs, one pop-up and three pickoff attempts."

What was your biggest adjustment?

"It's gonna be things you wouldn't realize. Like, the first thing they told me to do when I went to spring training, and it's something I told my kid not to, is to put my (index) finger out of the glove. You get a stone bruise if you don't."

"Now, the other hard things — and they weren't really hard, just time-consuming — was, like, (Larry) Bowa throws the ball differently to first than Schmidt does, and Schmidt's ball moves different than (Manny) Trillo's. ... As for the pitchers, (Steve) Carlton has one of the best moves to first, but it's different from (Warren) Brusstar, and Nino's (Espinosa) is different than all of 'em.

"So I had to get used to all of 'em, but I got a lot of help because (Manager Danny) Ozark was a first baseman, and Paul Owens (director of player personnel) was a first baseman, and everybody on the infield was great.

"Now, as far as bunt coverage, it hasn't given me a problem. I've made three out of three real good bunt plays. I turned two sacrifice bunts into force outs at third — one of 'em was on the third base side — and the Dodgers the other night sacrificed and I turned it into a double play going to second."

But, for all his hitting records, Rose has always been proudest of his defense: "You can ask anybody, ask my wife: I'd rather go 0-for-five and strike out four times than make an error. I really enjoy defense and I work hard at it. I thought — and I might be wrong — that I was a good third baseman, for being in the outfield all those years. Oh, I wasn't a Mike Schmidt at third, but I didn't embarrass myself down there.

"But going from third to first wasn't that hard. Like when I went from left to third, you take a guy 300 feet from home plate and put him in there 90 feet ... that's quite an adjustment."

He said he feels little difference being a Phil and not a Red: "It didn't feel strange being in this uniform, because I know most of the players.

"But, I'm still a Reds fan. I was born there. I'll never lose that."

FASTER RESPONSE TO EMERGENCIES

A new emergency telephone recently introduced by the Bell System—E911—is going to help get assistance faster than ever before to people who need it.

In typical 911 service, all calls are directed to one central dispatcher, who may not be physically located in a caller's municipality. In that case, the dispatcher must manually transfer the call for help to a caller's own municipality in order to notify the appropriate emergency agencies.

With E911, calls are automatically and immediately routed to a municipality's local emergency services dispatcher. This selective routing is done by computer controlled switching equipment which instantly recognizes where the call is coming from and which municipality should provide the emergency service.

In addition to this kind of call routing, the new E911 service can display a caller's phone number and street address on a TV-like screen positioned in front of the dispatcher, thus allowing the dispatcher to assist in emergencies even if the caller hangs up or is unable to talk.

The service eventually will be offered nationwide by Bell System and Independent phone Companies.

Red Auerbach going back to 'good kids'

Red Auerbach. Cigar-smoking, referee-baiting, fine-paying, tough-talking, you-either-love-him-or-you-hate-him Red Auerbach.

The now-dumpy man who came to the Boston Celtics in 1950 — or 13 world championships ago — as a coach and who is now their president. The balding man who has seen his once proud team — his beloved family — become the flotsam of the National Basketball Association. The 61-year-old man who must now try to put his cracked egg of a franchise back together again.

"I'll tell you this much," he said in an interview. "I'm going back to the good kids. I'm building with the right kind of people. It may take two years — it may take more than that — but I'm going to find only the good kind of people and build with them. They're still out there ... somewhere."

Coming off the worst year in Boston basketball history — 29-53 — it is imperative that Auerbach does precisely that. The Celtics, quite simply, have been a very bad club for two years now and they have been so with non-Auerbach type of players.

"Hey, what do you want from me?" Auerbach asked. "I was building a pretty nice team, but then they took Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert and Freeman Williams away from me and sent them to San Diego (in last summer's unprecedented-ed franchise swap) for three guys (Marvin Barnes, Nate Archibald and Billy Knight) who didn't do the job. We also had a couple of other jerks (among them, certainly, is Curtis Rowe) on the team, but they won't be with us next year.

Fishing Report

Sea Gun Marine—The fishing hasn't been so good this week. March and April start the good fishing at the marina. A lot depends on whether or not live bait is available.

Key Allegro Marina—There haven't been many fishermen out at the Marina this week. A few drum have been caught in Copano Bay.

Kleine's Redfish Camp—Lots of trout have been caught on sail lines, and some drum and flounder have been caught. The fishermen have been using mainly dead bait.

Causeway Pier—The trout should be coming in soon due to warmer water, but for now, drum is the big catch at the pier. Jim Webb of Refugio caught a 62 pound drum on crabs, and several other nice size drum have been reported.

Palm Harbor Main Marina—The fishing has been good at the marina, with many reds being caught. There have also been some trout and flounder. Most of the catches are made on artificials, and some on dead bait.

Dear Shirley, Is fasting all right for an overweight 10-year-old child? — Mrs. G.W. Dear Mrs. G.W., No. Children cannot tolerate fasting as well as adults. Try lower calorie foods instead.

Dear Shirley, I sometimes have a burning sensation after eating chocolate. Am I wrong, or is chocolate considered a food irritant? — Mrs. B.D.

Dear Mrs. B.D., Chocolate is not usually an irritating food, but it dramatically decreases the lower sphincter pressure of your esophagus (food tube), and this may allow some regurgitation of stomach juices.

proposal to adopt a resolution asking the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for assistance in working up plans and costs for the beach project.

They voted to approve payment to the consulting firm that is working up plans for the expansion of Fulton Harbor; the payment would include their work up to the point that the plans are submitted to the Corps of Engineers for approval. Hillis Dominguez was authorized to meet with this firm and make further explanations of what they specifically want done with the Fulton Harbor area. In other actions, the board approved termination of a Baroid sub-lease at Cove Harbor and approved some dragline work to clean out the bottom in front of the fuel docks on Jack Sanders' lease in that harbor.

A special meeting/workshop was called for Tuesday, March 11, at 6:30 p.m. The financial report of Jim Frazier, a semi-annual statement to show that there is enough income from the docks to pay off the existing revenue-bond balance of $31,000, was accepted. The district financial statement included cash on hand as of February 29, 1980 of $11,245.24 in the general account; $19,184-

19 in the revenue account; $10,980.82 in the escrow fund and $6,139.97 in the maintenance fund. Certificates of Deposit totaling $175,945.75. Bills for February totaling $12,397.72 were approved for payment. This included $9,549.95 for building materials for docks and cabanas, $515.54 for aerial photos and a master map and $243.77 for printed work orders and rental agreement.

scheduled to adopt in April. David Russell, assistant executive director of the agency, said if the board adopts the proposed moratorium in April, "we would not recommend favorably to the Texas Health Facilities Commission on any request from hospitals in these counties for expansion."

Hospitals in Texas are not allowed to add rooms for patients without a license from the state commission. In addition, Russell said, the agency would seek a voluntary moratorium from hospitals in four of these counties on facilities for which they have licenses but on which construction has not started. Ben Pate, administrator of Lyman-Roberts Hospital, is among those who plan to be at the March 19 hearing to protest the proposed moratorium.

The South Texas Health Systems Agency, Pate said, is lumping a number of counties — including Aransas and San Patricio — with Corpus Christi, and then claiming the entire area has too many hospital beds.

According to the agency's proposed Health Systems Plan, 1,929 beds have been licensed for the 12 hospitals in Aransas, Nueces, Refugio and San Patricio. Half of these hospitals are located in Corpus Christi.

Russell said the Health Systems Plan projects a need for 1,632 bed by 1984 — 297 fewer beds than are now provided. "I can't believe they're coming out with this stuff," Pate commented. He said

Lyman-Roberts and Aransas hospitals are both running 100 per cent occupancy "all the time."

"I've got a hospital full of people right now, and a woman in emergency who can't be transported to another hospital. I don't have a bed for her, and I face this situation every day," Pate said.

"You've got to have on hand about 20 per cent of bed capacity empty and available for emergency," he continued.

Neither of the hospitals in Aransas Pass have these extra beds. If an emergency occurred — such as a school bus wreck, Pate said — "we'd have to put people in the halls."

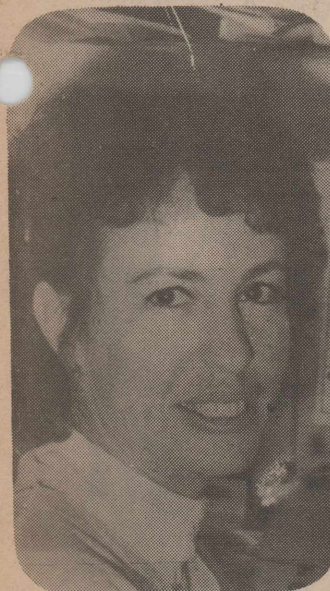

Pate said the South Texas Health Systems Agency had left an "out" for area hospitals:

Russell has been quoted as saying that data and population projections on which the proposed moratorium is based will be reviewed every year — and if new data indicates the plan should be changed, it will be.

Q. I have an abscessed tooth, and I'm taking antibiotics, pain killers, etc. Can I take my vitamins with the medication or will they mess each other up some way?

A. Please take your vitamins. They are more important now than ever, and they won't "mess up" your medication in any way. In fact, antibiotics are not able to render bacteria harmless unless vitamin C is adequately supplied.

Also, any drug can have possible toxic effects; this danger can be prevented by taking vitamin C, which often detoxifies any poisonous substance that has gained access to the body. It is recommended as a general rule that one take 500 mg. of vitamin C with each dose of any medicine.

You should know also that, if you're taking antibiotics, they can destroy valuable intestinal bacteria, thereby causing multiple B vitamin deficiencies and the attending symptoms (most common being painful mouth sores). When taking antibiotics, one should always eat natural yogurt (no sugar, preservatives, artificial color or flavor) or take acidophilus tablets to restore the growth of favorable bacteria.

Healthful Hints

Most Often-Asked Questions On Nutrition

Q. I bought some honey the other day that was supposed to be "natural," but something is wrong with it. I notice that at the bottom of the jar it's all thick and granulated. Should I take it back for a refund?

A. No! You should consider yourself fortunate. You did get some genuine natural honey. When honey granulates, it is a sure sign that it has not been overheated or overprocessed. All you have to do is set the jar of honey in a pan of hot water for however long it takes to liquefy again. (It will depend on how much and how thickly it is granulated.)

You can use the hottest water from your tap to start with and keep it at about that temperature by putting the pan on the lowest setting of your stove burner.

Until next week, Folks, stay happy and healthy! It's a beautiful world!

THE BASICS OF COMMON STOCK

Today, you probably hear more people talking about values and prices in the "market." However, the market they're talking about is located on Wall Street, not around the corner. The most popular investment in that market is common stock. Over 25 million people own common stock and many others own shares in mutual funds that invest in common stocks.

When you buy common stock, you really become a part-owner of a company. And as a part-owner, you, the stockholder, share in any growth or profits of that company—and also the risks. An investment in common stock grows when the value of the stock goes up. A stockholder may also earn income when the company makes a profit and distributes dividends. Of course, there's no guarantee that any particular rate of payment will be made. Or even that you'll make a profit when you sell your stock. Because the price of the stock can go up and down, you may lose money. But, over the years, stockholders as a whole have been handsomely rewarded.

Easily bought and sold on any business day, common stock is purchased through stockbrokers. When you buy and sell, there's a commission charge for their services. The amount you pay may depend upon the amount of business you're doing.

No set minimum amount is needed to start investing in common stock. But the beginning investor usually can't afford to spread the risk among many firms and industries. And if you buy or sell small quantities of stock, higher commissions may cut into your profits.

The same problem crops up if you want to add to your account in small amounts. Through common stock, you can become a shareholder in a few of thousands of companies. The choice could be confusing.

To cope with this, many people put their money in mutual funds that invest in the common stock of many firms in different industries so all their eggs aren't in one basket.

Roofs: What You Should Know

Are you aware of the following facts about roofs?

1. The best time to replace your roof is long before trouble starts. If you have a leak, you may already have extensive damage in the deck beneath the roof. When your roof is really in bad shape, it may be too late to think of cosmetic features like color, shadowlines and texture of the roofing material.

2. A 15-year-old house may need a new roof. Why? The average life of the shingles used for most homes is 15 years.

3. More than 85 percent of the homes in the U.S. have asphalt-shingle roofs. The remainder are covered with cedar, tile and other materials.

4. The best way to tell whether you need a new roof is to call in a professional roofer and let him look for these telltale signs: shingles with curled edges that are obviously dried out; shingles bare of protective granules; lots of granules in drains and gutters; rusted out or loose metal flashing in areas where roof and chimney, vents and other structures meet; dried out or missing caulking; loose nails and shingles; clogged drains.

5. Standard-weight shingles, which last about 15 years, protect against the elements at reasonable cost. For a longer-lasting roof, you might choose premium shingles, like GAF Timberline, that come in pleasing, natural earth-tone shades and interesting random patterns.

6. A good way to choose a roofing contractor is to look around the neighborhood for good-looking roofs and find out who did the job. Be sure to check his references and qualifications. Or check the Yellow Pages, under GAF, for a listing of reputable local roofing contractors.

Having this information at your disposal can save you years of grief—and many leaks—later on.

ATOMIC SPIES

WHAT IS THE QUALITY OF TRAINING GIVEN NUCLEAR UNIT OPERATORS?

ness of the training, and I think that since Three Mile Island, with the increased emphasis on training and on the operator himself, the nuclear industry is safe today and it's going to be safer tomorrow.

The nuclear industry spends more time and money than possibly any other industry in training the people who are going to run it. I'm fully confident that our operators can handle any emergency which might arise in a nuclear plant. The training they receive on the simulator will give them the competence and the training to handle any malfunction that might arise.

The length of TVA's training program, for instance, has been increased from 22 months to 26 months and the hot-license training program time has increased from a four-week program to a 13-week program.

It now takes a total of over three years of training to become a nuclear plant operator. The first 26 months is technical, classroom training. The next 14 months is time spent as an assistant operator.

A trainee spends 17 months of intensive classroom training covering college level math, chemistry, physics, plant systems and components, turbine systems and then nuclear technology and reactor theory.

Inflation Fighting Ideas

INSULATING YOUR INSURANCE

Inflation can hurt a family—and does not only by raising costs but also in other, unexpected but possibly disastrous ways. Insurance, for instance, a key part of many families' financial planning, is often purchased without taking into account the effects of inflation.

Fortunately, a new variable premium whole life insurance policy, whose premiums may fall as inflation rises, is now being marketed by Aetna Life and Casualty, the first major American insurer to offer such a product. This policy, the "Aeconomaster," is initially priced at a discount of about 10% below the company's traditional guaranteed cost whole life policy. If spiraling inflation drives interest rates higher—enabling the company to earn additional investment income—the policyholder may pay even less after the second year. "The initial discounted price is guaranteed for the first two years," says Aetna Vice President Kenneth P. Veit. "After that, the premium could be higher or lower, depending on factors such as inflation's effect on projected interest and expense rates, as well as mortality trends." While the premium can go up or down, a key "Aecon-master" feature is that a policyholder's premium can never rise above a guaranteed ceiling specified in the policy. The ceiling limit protects policyholders from paying a high premium if interest rates drop due to changing economic conditions, or if Aetna's experience is adversely affected in other ways. Although the company can't guarantee that its policyholders will receive premium discounts after the second year, inflation and rising interest rates show few signs of abating.

Taking stock of the effect of inflation on your insurance now may save you regrets later.

Grilled Cheese and Chili Sandwiches

4 slices white bread
Softened butter
6 ozs. sliced Monterey jack cheese
2 tbsps. diced canned green chilies

Spread bread with butter. Place cheese and chilies on two slices. Cover with second slice of bread. Spread both sides with butter. Slowly fry sandwiches in skillet five minutes on each side or until golden and cheese is melted. Cut into halves. Garnish with skewered ripe olives and cherry tomatoes. Makes two servings.

LITTLE-KNOWN FACTS ABOUT CEREALS

Breakfast cereals are almost always eaten with milk, and they are very rarely eaten as between-meal snacks, despite a popular myth to the contrary.

These conclusions come from a research report released by Cereal Institute, Inc. The Institute's report summarizes results of five major studies of the manner in which breakfast cereals are eaten, including one done under contract to the Federal Trade Commission.

The studies show collectively that ready-to-eat cereals are eaten with milk on the cereal about 90 percent of the time, and with milk either on the cereal or as a side beverage, about 95 percent of the time. Ready-to-eat cereals are eaten at meals about 95 percent of the time and as between-meal snacks about five percent of the time, the Institute's report shows.

Even on the rare occasions when breakfast cereals are eaten as between-meal snacks, they are usually eaten with milk, the consumption studies show. In fact, ready-to-eat cereals eaten without milk, whether regular or presweetened, make up less than one percent of all snacks eaten by children. According to Dr. Eugene B. Hayden, President of the Cereal Institute, "ready-to-eat breakfast cereals have been specifically developed to be eaten with milk. The nutrient fortification pattern common among cereals recognizes that these products are almost always served with milk and as part of a meal. Nutrients added to these cereals are deliberately chosen to complement the nutrients present in milk."

While they are designed to be eaten with milk, ready-to-eat cereals are highly nutritious foods in their own right. A typical ready-to-eat cereal is low in calories and fat and contains no cholesterol. It provides 25 percent of the U.S. RDA for at least seven nutrients before the addition of milk, but only four percent of the day's calories.

Even on rare occasions when breakfast cereals are eaten as between meal snacks, they are usually eaten with milk.

The report was released because many questions concerning ready-to-eat cereals, especially presweetened ones, proceed from the assumption that these foods are commonly consumed as between-meal snacks without milk. Thorough and professional research on the consumption pattern of cereals has now established that they are almost always eaten with milk and at meals.

Dental experts stress that it is how, when and how often sugar-containing foods are eaten, not just the presence of sugar, that determines their impact on dental health. Since cereals are almost always eaten at meals with milk, they would not be expected to increase the incidence of tooth decay. In fact, four human dental studies with children have demonstrated that consumption of breakfast cereals, whether regular or presweetened, does not increase the incidence of cavities.

CLIP 'N' COOK
Copley News Service

1 egg
1 cup buttermilk
2 tbsps. melted butter
1/2 cup mashed potatoes
cup finely grated raw potato
1/4 cup sifted flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda

Milk, butter and both kinds of potatoes in a bowl. Add eggs and add to liquid mixture, stirring only lightly. Batter will be lumpy. Pour into greased skillet, and bake as for pancakes. Cook 2 minutes. Top with beef, mustard and horseradish accompaniment.

"The Chinese Restaurant syndrome," as it has now been tagged, is an aftermath of symptoms experienced by some people after eating Chinese food.

It usually is characterized by episodes of burning tightness or numbness in the upper arms, neck, face or chest, lasting from one to four hours. Others have reported dizziness, headache, heart palpitations, weakness, nausea and vomiting soon after beginning a Chinese meal.

The unpleasant consequences are frightening to people experiencing them, because they also may be suggestive of more serious situations. Severe heart and circulatory problems sometimes produce similar symptoms, and the average person is not always able to distinguish the differences. All questionable episodes certainly should be treated medically, without delay.

Eat Yourself Slim

Although the characteristic group of symptoms, now expressed as the Chinese Restaurant syndrome, had been thought to be caused from a reaction to the large quantities of MSG — monosodium glutamate used in Chinese food preparation, the actual pathological mechanism has not been established. Why do some people react, and others do not?

What percentage of the public suffers adverse effects of such foods? Until 1976, the reactions of the Chinese Restaurant syndrome were considered to be a medical curiosity. A new study has since reported that some 25 percent of the population experienced the symptoms. It then posed the question of whether it actually was a food-associated public health problem. More recently, new surveys were developed by the Market Research Corporation of America. A two-part questionnaire was sent to its National Consumers Panel.

In the questionnaire survey attempting to equate the characteristic symptoms known as the Chinese Restaurant syndrome in the general adult population, 43 percent of 3,222 respondents associated unpleasant symptoms with specific foods and eating environments. However, only 1 to 2 percent reported the characteristic symptoms, and only 0.19 percent associated them with actual consumption of Chinese food.

New Vitamins To Be Introduced

The food and nutrition board of the National Academy of Science -- National Research Council, recently released figures from its updated Recommended Daily Allowances (RDAs).

Among the revisions are changes in recommended intakes of Vitamins C and E, iodine and protein. Through new research it is setting, for the first time, daily intakes for the three new vitamins (K, Biotin and Pantothenic Acid,) three Electrolytes and a slew of trace elements.

"The impact of all this," says Jean Stevens, director of Weight Watchers in Corpus Christi, "is incredibly exciting. It indicates only a small part of the upsurge in nutrition research. But it also complicates life for many of us in the weight control field."

The new material appearing with increasing frequency can be a two-edged sword. It can often make practical application more intricate for the average person and industry alike.

The diet field is a good example of this, because it is particularly complex. How does a weight reduction company develop its food program for nutritional soundness and keep it satisfactorily up to date?

Weight Watchers International, for instance (the largest weight control organization in the world) feels very strongly the necessity to maintain its reputation for the most sophisticated and scientifically sound diet available.

"The task of assessing the soundness of our food program is harder for us than it would be for a manufacturer of food products," explains Barbara Ecker, R.D., Supervisor of Nutrition Service, Weight Watchers Food Research Department, which houses a full complement of nutritionists and home economists on staff, and a battery of medical and nutritional advisors on call around the world.

Typically with any recognized changes in nutritional requirements, the giant reassessment job is begun by the staff putting together a large number of sample weekly menus covering a variety and combination of foods in minimum and maximum portion ranges for each of the food programs. The number of menus is large to correct for all the choices available on the Weight Watchers food program.

These weekly plans are then entered into a computer previously fed massive amounts of data on caloric content, nutritional content and measurements, prepared by Weight Watchers personnel. What the computer spits out is a precise, average daily nutrient intake (vitamins, minerals, electrolytes, protein, fats, carbohydrates and calories).

This goes back to the Weight Watchers nutrition staff where intakes are compared against recommended requirements, and judgements are made as to whether any change in any of the various programs are necessary. Should they be, intensive work is undertaken to produce the appropriate changes, adapt them to various countries, test and retest them and send them to editorial to be written. Then millions of old pieces of literature are pulled and replaced with revised editions in every country in which the change is applicable.

"Because in the end," Ms. Ecker says, "although all our work seems to boil down to getting the most nutrition for the least calories, the most important aspect of any diet plan, is that it be as practical as possible to follow. It must adapt itself to a program of lifetime eating habits. It has to meet cultural tastes or people will drop it long before it can be permanently effective. I guess that really tells us how alike we all are. It's part of the human condition that, no matter how sublime its final effect, if we don't like something, we won't use it."

SENIOR INSTRUCTOR

Walter Luce is shown receiving a Senior Instructor award for teaching 30 or more hours of water safety procedures during the past year. His duties included training of both the general public and Coast Guard Auxiliary members. Commodore Bill Prekker, left, made the presentation. Awards were presented in the Sea Gun's Neptune Hall at the Auxiliary Division VII meeting, which includes units from Waco to Port Isabel to Del Rio.

SILVER OAR AWARD

Commodore Bill Prekker, from Albuquerque, New Mexico, was on hand Saturday, March 1 to present the annual Silver Oar Award to George Moore of Holiday Beach. The occasion was the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Winter Conference that was held at the Sea Gun. Many dignitaries were in attendance, including Captain George Passmore of the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi, who is the active duty commander of the Corpus Christi Group. Mr. Moore, Commander of local Flotilla #79, received the award for his achievements during the past year.

Hoit Completes Financial Training

Carl D. Hoit, owner of Compass Printing Company in Rockport, has completed a two-week course at the Investors Diversified Services (IDS) Sales Training Center in Chaska, Minnesota.

Hoit, a resident of Fulton, is now an accredited IDS sales representative. His office is in the Compass Printing Building, 701 Liberty, Rockport.

The training school is designed to prepare new IDS sales representatives for careers in providing financial services for individuals and businesses.

Graduates of the school continue their training with seven weeks of field training and 42 weeks of advanced study.

IDS, based in Minneapolis, numbers nearly 3,000 representatives in its national sales force.

The financial services offered include shares of the Investors Group of mutual funds, fixed-return investments, and insurance products underwritten by an IDS subsidiary.
