Explosions kill 82 near 2 U.S. embassies in Africa

■ Eight Americans among dead as bomb blasts rock embassies in Tanzania, Kenya. More than 1,700 injured, officials say.

By Karin Davies
Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Twin terror bombings at U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania crumpled buildings and blew apart buses Friday, trapping people under piles of concrete and twisted steel that rescuers cleared with backhoes, torches and their bare hands. At least 82 were killed and more than 1,700 injured, officials said.

The blasts occurred 450 miles from each other but just minutes apart, turning busy streets in the two African capitals into bloody zones of terror.

"This appears to have been a very well-coordinated, very well-planned attack — clearly not the work of amateurs," National Security Council spokesman P.J. Crowley said in Washington. No one immediately claimed responsibility.

At least eight Americans, including a child, were among the dead in Kenya, and five Americans were missing, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Bill Barr. One American who had been listed as missing was found at a hospital.

The blast in Nairobi occurred at about 10:35 a.m. (3:35 a.m. EDT), toppling a crowded building toward the embassy and a street packed with cars, trucks and buses. At least 75 people were killed and 1,643 wounded there, Red Cross and ambulance officials said.

Almost simultaneously, an explosion in the parking lot of the U.S. Embassy in the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam destroyed nearly two-thirds of building. At least seven people were killed and 72 hurt, officials said.

As light broke Saturday rescue crews pressed on, working in four-hour shifts. But with dozens of people missing, the death toll was expected to rise. Security officials stretched out coils of barbed wire to keep spectators at bay.

Officials were unable to determine which bombing occurred first, but car bombs were believed to have caused both blasts, Kenyan and Tanzanian officials said. In Nairobi, the explosion left a large blackened crater in a parking lot behind the embassy.

China flooding

Soldiers move a huge boulder into position to add to the collapsing Chengfang levee in Jiujiang in China's Jiangxi Province on Friday. A crisis was precipitated by a surge of floodwaters that headed down river toward the Jingjiang dikes Friday. Officials fear the flood tide — the river's fourth this year — could cause sodden levees weakened by weeks of rain and floods to collapse. Already embankments protecting Jiujiang, on the Yangtze, burst open, releasing a torrent that flooded parts of the city, Xinhua, the state run news agency said. Disaster workers sunk three boats to plug the 130-foot-wide breach and attempted to build a second emergency dike, it said.

Embassies built prior to tougher building codes

By Steve Lash
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The two U.S. embassies bombed by terrorists in eastern Africa on Friday were constructed before the federal government initiated a strict building code to protect its foreign ambassadors from such explosions, a senior State Department official said.

But even the stricter construction standards might not have protected embassy personnel from what appears to have been highly organized terrorists with large quantities of explosives, said Thomas Pickering, undersecretary of state for political affairs.

Teams of U.S. investigators are scouring debris from the massive midmorning bombings of the embassies in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, which were built before the 1986 Diplomatic Security Act called for new embassies to be better fortified to withstand an explosion.

"Bomb-proof is a relative term," Pickering said. "Tell me what size bomb, and I'll tell you what the proof is.... Obviously a bigger bomb makes a bigger problem, and smaller bombs are less of a problem."

Knight-Ridder Newspapers, quoting U.S. intelligence sources, reported that the blast in Tanzania was caused by a car bomb. The source said the Kenya bomb,

Deaths of motorcycle riders without helmets on rise since law passed

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Matthew Amstutz, a Midland motorcyclist who sustained serious head injuries Thursday in an accident, died Friday morning at a local hospital, police officials said.

Amstutz, 23, was struck by a van driven by Presidio resident Luis Guerrero Lara, 46, at 2500 Cotton Flat Road. Lara has been arrested and charged with criminally negligent homicide, a state-jail felony.

Amstutz was not wearing a helmet when the accident occurred, according to police reports.

In 1997, state legislators approved Senate Bill 99, which allowed motorcyclists not to wear helmets if they were at least 21, had successfully completed a motorcycle safety course and were covered by a health insurance plan providing them with at least $10,000 in medical benefits.

Amstutz did not have a helmet exemption sticker on his vehicle, Midland police said.

In 1989, Texas lawmakers passed legislation requiring everyone to wear protective headgear while operating or riding on a motorcycle. Studies conducted by proponents of SB 99 alleged that motorcycle fatality rates were unaffected by that legislation.

Proponents claimed that passing Senate Bill 99 would remove the helmet law for adults and would also allow authorities to cite minors who operated or rode a motorcycle without protective headgear.

Ever since the law passed, there has been an increase in the number of people who have died in motorcycle accidents and were not wearing helmets, said Taffy Crumley, a statistical technician with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

In 1996, before the law was in effect, nine motorcyclists who weren't wearing helmets died on Texas roadways. Last year, at least 30 non-helmet users died, Ms. Crumley said.

The same trend was reported for people who were injured in accidents and were not wearing their helmets, she said.

In 1996, 263 people not wearing helmets who were involved in motorcycle accidents sustained injuries, in comparison to the 529 injured in 1997.

Some might assume that the increase in deaths is the result of the increasing

Weathered Big Spring auditorium to be repaired

By Johnnye Montgomery

BIG SPRING — Big Spring's municipal auditorium, grande dame among municipal buildings, wears its age proudly. The woman for whom the building was named, Dorothy D. Garrett, died Thursday at the age of 82.

It was at the Dorothy Garrett Municipal Auditorium that the crowds gathered to see prima ballerina Maria Tallchief come across the stage like an angel in flight, and to hear and see and applaud such luminaries as Charles Laughton, Celeste Holm, and Wayne Newton. Opera singer Robert Merrill was followed by Hank Williams Jr. and Elvis Presley.

The Big Spring Symphony holds its concerts in the same orchestra pit that once held the orchestras of Mantovani and Arthur Fiedler, Bob Crosby and recently, in a boisterous contrast, the Christian rock group Skillet, whose members marched out of the pit and into the audience.

In the early days the auditorium — which was named for Mrs. Garrett in 1988 — doubled as a movie house. Although movies are no longer shown, there are other entertainments peculiarly suited to the auditorium's theatrical accommodations. Each year a traveling stage group comes through to perform for children and teen-agers. Earlier this year, the crowds came to hear John Clayton's three-day lecture series, "Does God Exist?"

Big Spring Parks and Recreation Director Becky Crane said one of the most popular shows at the Garrett Auditorium recently was the beauty-less contest staged by some of the bravest men of Big Spring. They donned evening dresses and paraded their talents to a packed house of friends and business associates, to raise money for the building of the Big Spring's Kid Zone recreational facility at Comanche Park.

"Jimmy Dorland, owner of Spanky's Coffee Shop, did a spectacular belly dance," Ms. Crane said. "I know none of his friends will ever forget it."

Kabila heads out of Congo's capital

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — President Laurent Kabila gambled and left his troubled capital in the hands of his military Friday, searching for support from African leaders to battle a rebellion that appears to be sweeping into Congo's jungle interior.

Just days after renegade troops waged gun battles in two army barracks in Kinshasa, Kabila headed to his former rebel base of Lubumbashi, 900 miles southeast of Kinshasa, where he was to meet with a visiting South African delegation.

Within hours of his departure, Kabila's troops looted shops and harassed ethnic Tutsis in Kinshasa amid suspicions that Tutsis are behind the military push for the president's ouster.

"In the army, the soldiers are very unhappy," said a senior police commander with the city's intelligence branch. The officer, who was patrolling the streets to stop the looting, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The capital was tense with troops deployed at key government and commercial buildings and checkpoints set up to search all traffic entering and leaving the city.

In Geneva, the United Nations human rights agency condemned the attacks on Tutsi neighborhoods and urged Kabila to provide better security in the city.

"I am aware that there have been reports of looting and burning of shops targeting certain segments of the population in Kinshasa," said United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Mary Robinson.

The apparent revenge attacks on Tutsis reflect a growing instability in Kinshasa and elsewhere in Congo. The United States and several European countries have warned their citizens to avoid traveling to the country.

A popular rebel leader who last year was hailed as a hero, Kabila and his weakened 14-month-old regime have lost the support of many Congolese.

In Lubumbashi, the Congolese president met with South African diplomats, according to South Africa's public SABC television. Congo officials would not allow foreign journalists to witness the talks. South African officials declined to comment.

By Friday evening, Kabila had arrived in Victoria Falls, Zimbabwe, along with Rwandan President Pasteur Bizimungu, who hours before threatened his country will "hit back" if neighboring Congo attacked its forces.

Kabila has accused Tutsi-dominated Rwanda of invading Congo to create a "Tutsi empire" and has threatened to wage war with his eastern neighbor. But Rwanda has denied involvement in the uprising, saying Kabila's accusations were simply an effort to find a scapegoat for disenchantment with his government.

The rebel offensive is believed led by many of the same ethnic Tutsi fighters — known as Banyamulenge — and Rwandan soldiers, also Tutsis, who played a key role in Kabila's victory over longtime dictator Mobutu Sese Seko last year.

In the eastern region of Kivu, the rebels have been pushing into the interior from the Rwandan border, capturing several key towns. On the other side of the country, rebels appear to be marching inland toward Kinshasa from Kitona, a small village and military camp near the Atlantic coast.

The government earlier acknowledged the eastern city of Bukavu fell to the rebel Tutsi and Rwandan allies, and state radio on Friday said the key city of Kisangani was in government hands after two days of fighting.

But diplomats in Kinshasa said they had received reports of gunfire in and around Kisangani.

The rebellion that began late Sunday mirrors Kabila's own guerrilla war, which culminated in the ouster of longtime dictator Mobutu. Unlike last year, Kabila is on the defensive while the rebels swiftly advance through Congo's interior.

Although Kabila's allies this time have turned against him, many of his former foes — Mobutu's armed forces — appear to be backing the one-time rebel leader.

Mobutu's former army chief of staff, Gen. Eluki Monga Aundu, plans to issue an appeal to his troops to join the battle to keep Kabila in office, Aundu's spokesman, Jean-Claude Molimo, said in a telephone interview.

"The general will ask his men to take arms and fight the Rwandan invaders," Molimo said.

Disarmament before sanctions, Butler says; bosses may differ

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The chief U.N. weapons inspector insisted Friday that sanctions against Iraq won't end until the nation disarms completely — even though one of his bosses suggested progress alone may be enough.

Richard Butler said he understands the frustration and desperation of the Iraqis after eight years of debilitating trade sanctions. He said he backs Secretary-General Kofi Annan's initiative for a "comprehensive review" of the international community's relationship with Iraq.

But first the Iraqis must disarm, he told The Associated Press in his office at U.N. headquarters in New York.

"The key to getting out of sanctions is to yield the weapons, is disarmament ...but the withholding of the weapons from us, against the law, actually suggests that they have another interest, which is to retain some weapons capability," Butler said.

Butler's comments came a day after the 15-member Security Council — where he has faced criticism in the past — unanimously denounced an Iraqi decision freezing contacts with his inspectors as "totally unacceptable."

The current Security Council president, Danilo Turk, agreed that sanctions were firmly in place — for now. But he noted that the Council had eased sanctions in other cases, and could consider doing so in Iraq's case as well.

"If Butler reports in let's say a month or two, significant progress, I wouldn't exclude significant discussion on (alleviating sanctions)," said Turk, the Slovene delegate to the council.

The Security Council statement was, on the face of it, a show of unity rare in recent months — but it failed to name any consequences, which Turk suggested was the result of an erosion of support for the sanctions.

"Sanctions are not as fashionable as they were," he said. "In the membership, there is a lot of opposition to the idea of sanctions in general."

Iraq sought to put a positive spin on the dispute, with official newspapers focusing on Annan's comments recognizing Iraq's frustrations with economic sanctions.

Two Iraqi newspapers — the only ones printed Friday, the Muslim sabbath — did not even report the Security Council statement, instead focusing on Annan's calls on Thursday to "engage" the Iraqis more closely.

Al-Thawra and Al-Iraq said Iraq informed the Security Council about its "legal stand" and complained about the U.N. Special Commission's "tricks."

Two of the council's permanent members, France and Russia, have pending financial interests in Iraq and are anxious for an end to sanctions.

Talks with Iraq broke down Monday, when Butler refused to certify that Iraq has destroyed all of its weapons of mass destruction. Butler is the head of the U.N. Special Commission, which monitors chemical and biological weapons and long-range missiles.

On Thursday, Iraq told weapons inspectors that they cannot check new sites.

Iraq says that the inspectors' questions have become "trivial" and are a ploy to extend the sanctions, at the behest of the United States.

Butler said that was "thoroughly dishonest."

"We were verifying, those questions were our attempt to try and prove (Iraqi claims) true — actually we were trying to be helpful," the former Australian U.N. envoy said in his office, where he keeps a dismantled Iraqi scud missile guiding system on a mantle.

Iraq also banned surprise inspections by the U.N. agency that conducts nuclear inspections, the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency.

David Kyd, a spokesman for the IAEA, said Iraq's new restrictions will make it difficult if not impossible for nuclear experts to determine whether Baghdad has revived its secret program to build nuclear weapons, a U.N. spokesman said Friday.

China releases detained dissident

BEIJING (AP) — A man who challenged the Communist Party during President Clinton's visit was freed from prison Friday, dissidents in exile said.

Lin Hui was released from a detention center in the eastern city of Hangzhou, said Wang Bingzhang, spokesman of the U.S.-based Chinese Democracy and Justice Party.

Lin was one of at least a dozen people detained in China's most concerted crackdown on dissidents in years. All but one, Wang Youcai, have been released.

Police began the sweep on July 10, a week after Clinton wrapped up a nine-day tour of China during which he called for greater political and religious freedom.

The dissidents had used Clinton's visit to test China's tolerance and challenge the political monopoly of its Communist Party. On June 25, the start of President Clinton's nine-day China tour, they announced the formation of a pro-democracy party. On Thursday, the Hong Kong-based Information Center of Human Rights and Democratic Movement in China said nearly 100 democracy campaigners are planning a march through two cities next week.

Serbs say Kosovo offensive nearly over

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serb forces overran the former Albanian rebel headquarters in central Kosovo on Friday and appeared to have driven the secessionists from most of their remaining strongholds in the strategic region.

A top Serb police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the offensive in Kosovo — which has uprooted nearly 200,000 people and left hundreds dead — was "nearly over."

Remaining reports of fighting are only "final mopping-up operations" against ethnic Albanian militants and their remaining pockets of resistance, he said.

Serbs have made similar statements before but their gains in central Kosovo on Friday gave new weight to their words.

Not long after the official spoke, Serb forces entered Likovac, the village where U.S. envoy Christopher Hill met last week with Kosovo Liberation Army commanders. Under sniper fire, Serb troops moved from house to house, clearing out the last pockets of resistance in the village and setting fire to Albanian houses and haystacks.

Elsewhere in the region, KLA troops were fleeing advancing Serb forces. Serb sources said most of the fighting was centering on escape routes into Albania, where the rebels maintain sanctuaries.

In the Albanian capital Tirana, state television reported that 71 Kosovo Albanian refugees had crossed into Albania in the last 24 hours.

Kosovo Albanian leader Ibrahim Rugova accused Serbs of abusing hundreds of Albanians in prisons that have become "mass camps."

"We are demanding international protection and we would appreciate any international intervention to stop the Serb war machinery," Rugova told reporters in the provincial capital Pristina.

NATO has been considering military intervention in Kosovo, and a spokesman for the alliance said during Friday's meeting in Brussels, Belgium, that plans for possible intervention were nearly complete.

The plans essentially involve three options: a preventive deployment of troops along the borders of Kosovo in neighboring Albania and Macedonia; a graduated air campaign against targets in Yugoslavia; and a deployment of peacekeeping troops into Yugoslavia.

But with the KLA clearly on the run, it appeared likely that fighting could die simply because the Serbs have gained the upper hand.

Rugova's aides said he spoke Friday with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and that she expressed support for his "peaceful policy" in resolving the crisis.

Rugova declared Friday a day of mourning for hundreds killed by fighting in the current Serbian offensive. About 2,500 Albanian women held a brief candlelight vigil in Pristina in solidarity with those affected by the fighting.

The U.N. refugee agency estimates roughly 200,000 people have fled to Kosovo's woods and hills, and many of them lack food, water and other essentials. Officials worry that searing summer temperatures and a lack of hygiene could lead to disease.

In Washington, the Pentagon announced that hundreds of U.S. Marines are to participate in NATO military exercises in neighboring Albania and Macedonia in the coming months, starting with a one-week maneuver that begins in Albania on Aug.17.

Kosovo is a province in southern Serbia, where ethnic Albanians, who demand independence, represent 90 percent of the population. Serbia and the smaller republic of Montenegro make up what is left of Yugoslavia.

Shift by logging company elates anti-logging protesters

NANAIMO, British Columbia (AP) — The environmental activists are back five years after hundreds were jailed in a crusade to block logging of pristine forests. But this time, they are celebrating.

Veterans of the 1993 Clayoquot Sound protest — Canada's biggest act of civil disobedience — are holding a reunion this weekend that coincides with dramatic changes in British Columbia's forest industry.

MacMillan Bloedel, the logging company targeted during the 1993 protest, announced in June that it would phase out all clear-cutting in British Columbia in the next five years.

For environmentalists, it was a stunning victory. Greenpeace activists drank champagne toasts to MacMillan Bloedel's chief executive, Tom Stephens, an American hired last year to reverse a sharp drop in profits.

"There's no doubt this marks a big shift in forestry in British Columbia," said Valerie Langer, a key organizer of the 1993 protests and the weekend reunion. "This is MacMillan Bloedel breaking from what we call the clear-cutting cartel. It woke up to the fact that the markets were demanding something different."

Among those attending the reunion is Robert F. Kennedy Jr., an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council. He made repeated visits to the 1993 Clayoquot protest, where more than 800 people were arrested.

"It's really a profound victory," he said. "We can look back and say 'What did we accomplish?' and pat ourselves on the back. We really did something historic."

Before the protests, he said, logging policy was set by a few corporate executives.

"We helped democratize the process," Kennedy said. "Now you've got everybody involved — environmentalists, Indians, workers, companies. Everybody's talking about the sustainable use of this land."

There also has been a change of attitude at MacMillan Bloedel, said Glen Dunsworth, a biodiversity expert at the company's office in Nanaimo.

"You tend to demonize your adversaries," he said. "But in fact, there's a lot of common ground between us."

MacMillan Bloedel's five-year plan calls for varying the number of trees on different types of logging sites.

In the mountainous woodlands around Nanaimo, some recently-logged tracts had just a few trees left for an effect that was slightly more attractive than traditional clear-cutting. But on other tracts, loggers left up to 15 percent of the trees.

Esthetics is one of several priorities under the new program, which also considers economics, wildlife preservation and post-logging reforestation. Longstanding beliefs that clear-cutting is safer than selective cutting also have placed importance on worker safety.

Tom Holmes, general manager of MacMillan Bloedel woodlands around Nanaimo, said the biggest challenge will come in rugged areas of old-growth forest, where the company has pledged to leave at least two-thirds of the trees.

The company also plans to double its use of heli-logging, eliminating the need for cutting roads into the site. Crews on foot cut down trees, then helicopters lift away loads of up to 28,000 pounds.

Only in rugged old-growth areas does MacMillan Bloedel anticipate higher costs under the new plan. Even then, the company expects to profit because many of its overseas customers are insisting on wood logged in an eco-friendly fashion.

MacMillan Bloedel hopes the shift will give it an edge over rival companies, and environmentalists hope the company's rivals will emulate the plan.

Most companies may be willing to allow an independent review of their logging practices so that timber exports can be certified as ecologically responsible.

Holmes said he initially felt the company's shift was a misguided capitulation to the environmentalists.

"I thought it was a foolish exercise at first," he said. "But I can show you now, from the business side, it's the right thing to do."

Opposition leader's party refuses invitation

The military, which has ruled Myanmar since 1962, has portrayed Suu Kyi as selfish and stubborn for insisting that no meeting with her party can be held without her.

YANGON, Myanmar (AP) — Opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi's party refused an invitation Friday to meet a leader of Myanmar's military regime because she was barred from attending, the party said.

The invitation came after Suu Kyi, winner of the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize, demanded that the government remove security personnel posted at her home — a new challenge to the military's authority ahead of the 10-year anniversary Saturday of bloody anti-government protests.

Suu Kyi's National League for Democracy said the party had turned down an invitation to meet Saturday with deputy home minister, Brig. Gen. Myint Maung.

The invitation to NLD Chairman Aung Shwe said Suu Kyi and the party's two vice chairmen were prohibited from attending the meeting, the NLD said in a statement.

Government officials met Aung Shwe last year but have refused to see Suu Kyi, the party's secretary general and an international symbol of the pro-democracy movement in Myanmar, also known as Burma.

The military, which has ruled Myanmar since 1962, has portrayed Suu Kyi as selfish and stubborn for insisting that no meeting with her party can be held without her. The party accuses the government of trying to divide the party.

Suu Kyi's request for the dismissal of the security detail at her home represents the deepest deterioration in her relations with the government since she was released from six years of house arrest in July 1995. She still remains largely confined to her home.

The detail remained in place Friday, but party members said upon leaving Suu Kyi's compound that the personnel were preparing to vacate their posts.

A government spokesman said in a press release that authorities were "happy to comply and discussions are now under way."

The detail follows her when she attempts to leave her home, and has at times stopped her.

In the most recent incident, party leaders said authorities dragged her back home against her will after a six-day standoff.

Saturday marks the 10th anniversary of nationwide antigovernment protests in which soldiers shot dead more than 3,000 demonstrators.

The anniversary comes ahead of an Aug. 21 deadline set by Suu Kyi for the ruling State Peace and Development Council to allow the parliament elected in 1990 to finally convene.

BLASTS: Rescue crews lacked tools common in West

(From 1A)

Bodies hung out of windows in a charred bus in the Kenyan capital. Shattered cars were left smoldering on the street amid the debris. Police helicopters hovered overhead.

"It is horrific to hear moaning, sighs and whimpers from under the rubble when we can do so little to reach victims quickly," Red Cross spokeswoman Nina Galbe said as night fell. "The longer they're trapped, the less their chances for survival."

Beneath klieg lights, rescuers in both capitals used pick axes, shovels and ropes to carefully clear away rubble. After a painstaking hourlong mission, they pulled one person from the wreckage in Nairobi. Three people were crying for help from inside a debris-filled elevator shaft, and two others were wedged between concrete slabs. Sparks flew from welders' blow torches as they cut through twisted metal.

The rescue crews lacked trained dogs and infrared cameras commonly used in such searches in Western countries.

In Washington, President Clinton condemned the attacks and said the United States would bring the terrorists to justice "no matter what or how long it takes."

The United States rushed medical supplies and investigators to both Tanzania and Kenya. Governments throughout the world condemned the bombings and offered their assistance.

The twin bombings were the first major international terror attacks against the United States since a June 25, 1996, truck bomb exploded outside the Khobar Towers housing complex near Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, killing 19 Americans and injuring more than 500 Americans and Saudis.

There were no Americans believed killed in the Friday bombing in Dar es Salaam.

The explosion in Kenya toppled the four-story Ufundi Cooperative building toward the embassy, which also was badly damaged by the blast. The Cooperative Bank House, which houses government and private offices, also was damaged.

The blast shattered windows as far as 10 blocks away and sent a billowing cloud of black smoke into the sky. Several people aboard two passing buses were killed by shrapnel, witnesses said. Bloodied clothing and papers littered the streets.

Rescuers crawled over a mountain of twisted and broken concrete and metal trying to reach trapped victims.

"It is shocking. It is inhuman. I have never seen anything like this," said Gideon Mutiso of St. John Ambulance.

British Maj. Jim Bain said his team of 25 British troops was lending a hand. "It is a traumatic thing, even for trained soldiers," he said.

Gesturing at dazed and bloody survivors crumpled on sidewalks and in the road, witness Wilberforce Mariaria asked, "How can someone think of doing this kind of thing?"

Passersby helped rescuers, and ferried the injured to hospitals in cars. The hundreds of injured were being treated in four Nairobi hospitals.

In Dar es Salaam, five Tanzanians who worked at the embassy were among those killed, a State Department official said. Cranes were hurried to the site to tear apart wreckage in a desperate search for survivors.

Officials in the United States, Kenya and Tanzania refused to speculate on who was responsible.

"All we can say is if any of our people or embassies are being targeted, we are not going to tolerate it," Bill Richardson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told CNN.

The Islamic Jihad vowed last week to strike American interests because some of its members were arrested in Albania and handed over to Egypt, according to a report Thursday in Al-Hayat, a daily Arabic language newspaper published in London.

Several groups around the world use the name Islamic Jihad. This one is considered the successor to the groups that assassinated Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

A man was seen being taken into custody at the Nairobi bombing scene by Kenyan police. Witnesses said he was speaking Arabic, but police would not comment and his connection, if any, to the case was not clear.

Security was immediately tightened at other U.S. embassies around the world.

The U.S. ambassador to Kenya, Prudence Bushnell, was cut on the lip and helped from the Cooperative Bank House, where she had just given a news conference.

The newly confirmed ambassador to Tanzania, Charles Stith, had not yet arrived there.

Neither country has a history as a site of international terrorist attacks. Both embassies were considered low risk, perhaps making them more attractive targets.

Compared with other African countries, foreigners can enter and leave Kenya and Tanzania with relative ease, possibly making it easier for terrorists to carry out an attack.

CODES: State Department to tighten embassy security worldwide while yet not traced to a car, apparently was placed next to a parked gasoline tanker truck outside the embassy, boosting the explosion.

The Nairobi and Dar es Salaam facilities were built more than 17 years ago, before the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in 1983 led to a security review worldwide, heightened restrictions at U.S. embassies and enactment of the 1986 law. Metal detectors and concrete barriers are some of the more visible results of the tighter measures at many embassies.

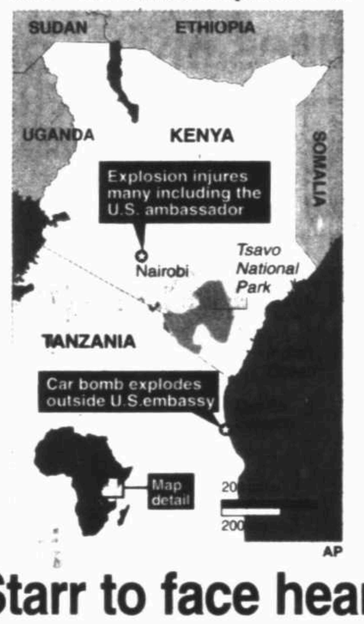
Dennis Williams, director of overseas diplomatic security for the State Department until retiring in 1995, told reporters Friday the older U.S. embassies still are most vulnerable since they're often located on busy city streets and lack reinforced walls.

For instance, the Kenyan and Tanzanian sites did not maintain the sizable vehicle setbacks routinely found at newer embassies in more risky areas of the world. The Nairobi embassy is at a busy downtown intersection.

The only protection from a bomb blast is "distance, not much else," Williams told reporters. "Even if our buildings are tremendously strong, they have to be far enough from a road."

The massive bombs used Friday were detonated outside the embassies but close enough to badly damage the buildings and many nearby automobiles.

British security expert Michael Yardley told The Associated Press that terrorists will seek out such weaknesses. "If you harden one target ... terrorism merely deserts to a softer target. That seems to be exactly what's happened here," he said. "It's almost impossible to protect yourself globally from this sort of attack."



Despite the explosions in Kenya and Tanzania, Pickering expressed confidence in the strict building code and security at the 260 U.S. embassies worldwide.

"We have a set of standards which we believe deals with most of the difficulties, if not all, that we could expect to face," he said.

'Even if our buildings are tremendously strong, they have to be far enough from a road.'
— Dennis Williams, director of overseas diplomatic security for the State Department

"And we have taken the whole series of steps ... putting our embassies on alert, cautioning Americans, issuing specific notices with respect to Kenya and Tanzania in the light of these events."

But Williams and others told reporters Friday that there has not been enough money spent since 1986 to upgrade a majority of U.S. embassies to the stricter standards.

The State Department, which receives about 30,000 threats of terrorist attacks annually, established a special task force immediately after the bombings Friday to tighten embassy security worldwide and to coordinate the delivery of medical supplies to the two facilities, where a total of 804 Americans are stationed. .

"We are always in a state of alert," Pickering said. "Terrorists tend to want to be unpredictable."

White House spokesman P.J. Crowley said Friday the two African embassies weren't on high alert before the blasts because there had been no warnings of a possible terrorist act.

Judge orders Starr to face hearing over leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Putting Kenneth Starr on the defensive at a critical time, a judge has ruled that "serious and repetitive" disclosures of secret grand jury evidence from his investigation warrant a hearing that could lead to penalties against prosecutors.

In court papers unsealed Friday, U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson said Starr's own comments to a magazine and statements he made to television cameras acknowledging one of her sealed rulings were evidence that he may have violated grand jury secrecy rules.

The judge also said evidence produced by President Clinton's lawyers, who first accused Starr of the leaks, was sufficient to suggest that others on the independent counsel's staff also may have disclosed information improperly.

Johnson noted Starr's aides in sworn affidavits "do not deny" they were the source of information for news articles. She said prosecutors "too narrowly" interpreted the requirement that they keep grand jury evidence and proceedings secret.

Her ruling orders Starr and his staff to appear at hearing in which they must rebut the leak allegations to the judge's satisfaction or face penalties ranging from civil contempt of court to referral to the Justice Department for possible criminal charges.

"The court finds that the serious and repetitive nature of disclosures to the media of (secret evidence) strongly militates in favor of conducting a show cause hearing," Johnson wrote. She said she was leaving open the possibility of referring the prosecutors for criminal charges.

Starr said in a statement Friday that his office didn't violate grand jury secrecy rules and "we welcome the opportunity to demonstrate that fact to the district court."

Downplaying the significance of Johnson's ruling, Starr said the threshold for ordering such a hearing is low because "the courts must presume that the media reports are entirely accurate."

REPAIR: Auditorium damaged by hail storm in 1995 including the city hall, jail and fire station, the auditorium was designed by architects Peters, Strange and Bradshaw, and was built by C.S. Lambie & Co. of Amarillo.

(From 1A)

Italianate in structure, with tiled roofing and high arches, it stands out against the surrounding architecture like an inner city cathedral, serene and elegant.

Yet the serene exterior hides serious interior damage that was the result of a 1995 hail storm.

Architect Phil Furqueron said the biggest part of the repair work is covered by the insurance settlement.

"About 40 percent of the (roof) tiles were broken in that hail storm, and we had to put on a new roof. Once that was done, we repaired the membrane roofing.

"But now that the building is back to a watertight condition, we're going to have to repair the water damage on the inside — take out the dead plaster and cracked, damaged plaster, and recoat the plaster finish in virtually the entire interior.

"The stage floor has buckled, and must be replaced, and we have to rework the lighting controls and components, replace the ruined lighting control board and put in a new sound system," Furqueron said.

Not all the work to be done will be covered by the insurance check.

The antiquated lighting will be replaced by a more efficient and effective integrated light and sound system that can be controlled from a booth located behind the balcony. There will be new stage curtains and stage lights.

Furqueron said that after the repairs major renovations will have to be done in the future.

"The last major renovation was done in 1988, when the building underwent mechanical and electrical updating and air conditioning was added, but structurally, it's in excellent condition," he said.

"The problem is going to be to make this building totally handicap-accessible."

Making room for wheelchairs in the first floor seating area is no problem, but there are other hurdles to clear, Furqueron said.

"The restrooms aren't even close. We can get people to the stage area by going to the exterior and building a ramp, but the biggest problem is that there is a three-story dressing area on the other side of the building that is only accessible now by stairway. We'll have to put in an elevator, and that will cost somewhere in the vicinity of $80,000."

Meanwhile, the show goes on for the Dorothy Garret Municipal Auditorium. With 1,412 seats in the auditorium, and a stage that accommodates every kind of entertainment from the classics to the arts of the future, Big Spring has a place for performers.

number of motorists and the increasing number of motorcycle users. However, figures prove otherwise.

In fact, there were 99 fewer motorcycle accidents reported in 1997 than in 1996, DPS records indicate.

DPS reports indicate that there was a backward trend in motorcycle deaths before the new law was passed. There was a 10.9 percent drop in motorcycle and passenger deaths between 1995 and 1996.

Clinton could face DNA testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to discover what makes each human unique, scientists unlocked a secret code that has convicted killers, identified the remains of the czar of Russia and may now threaten the president of the United States.

That code is DNA, a large molecule in human cells that includes the genetic information that makes each person who he is — tall or short, red-haired or blond, prone to early heart disease or to long life.

The chemicals that make up DNA — deoxyribonucleic acid — have so many possible combinations that, other than identical twins, no two people are the same. Thus, comparing samples of DNA allows scientists to say — with an accuracy often approaching greater than one in billions — if they came from the same person.

Now, President Clinton may be faced with such a test as part of the investigation into whether he had a sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky and then lied about it.

A stain on a dress owned by Ms. Lewinsky has been examined at the FBI laboratory to determine what the stain is and whether it contains DNA, a law enforcement source has said. If it does, officials may try to match it to DNA from Clinton, although the president has not been asked to provide a DNA sample.

A decade ago, attorneys often argued that DNA testing to compare samples was not valid. Such arguments are no longer common, though, because DNA testing has proven itself reliable.

Instead, attorneys often argue — as O.J. Simpson's did in his murder trial — that the sample used, of blood or hair or semen, has not been carefully guarded against contamination or tampering.

Whatever the stain is, technicians don't need much to conduct their tests.

"It can be a tiny speck," said Dr. Wayne W. Grody, director of the DNA Diagnostics Laboratory at the University of California, Los Angeles. "Theoretically you can do it with a single cell, but in practice we like to have a lot more."

DNA is made up of four chemicals, called bases, which are like teeth in a zipper and arranged in a spiral.

The chemicals, abbreviated A, T, C and G, are arranged in pairs. A and T bind together. C and G bind together. DNA is composed of billions of these bases, their combinations unique to each person.

To do a DNA test, scientists take the evidence they have collected — such as semen — extract the DNA and determine the sequence of bases making up that DNA.

Analyzing the entire DNA molecule isn't possible — it has three billion chemical pairs — so labs commonly test specific segments where bases repeat in patterns that vary from person to person.

Then they compare those DNA sequences to the DNA of the person in question. Typically, Grody said, the DNA sample from an individual would come from blood "because you get nice clean DNA out of that." Comparisons can also be made using DNA from hair or saliva.

A semen stain on a dress could be damaged by dry cleaning, or by contamination from saliva or something picked up while hanging in a closet, said James E. Starrs, a forensic science professor at George Washington University.

And if a man has had a vasectomy or, for some other reason doesn't produce sperm, that hurts the chance of obtaining enough DNA for testing. Seminal fluid alone does not contain DNA, unless it picks up stray cells from the lining of the ducts that carry the fluid. In such a case, the small amount of DNA would make a test much harder to do, Starrs said.

The first step in examining the dress would be to look at the stain under a special light to determine if it is semen, said Dr. Victor W. Weedn, a medical examiner for the Alabama Department of Forensic Science. Sperm do not live long outside the body, but the material would still be testable for DNA "probably for years," he said.

Next, lab technicians would study a scrap of the material under a microscope to see if sperm are present: if so, the material would be soaked in chemicals to extract the sperm. Then technicians would perform DNA tests on that sperm, Weedn said.

The result is one of two outcomes: If the DNA patterns do not match, the individual in question is not the source of the stain. If the samples do match, then scientists can provide a statistical likelihood that the stain came from a particular person.

Usually, tests seek seven or eight matches, though as many as 30 are tested in some cases. The more matches that occur, the stronger the evidence.

In the O.J. Simpson case, a blood stain from a sidewalk at the murder scene indicated a match to Simpson and to 1 of 180 million blacks in America, said Mark D. Stolorow, director of operations for Cellmark Diagnostics in Germantown, Md.

Advisers recommend approval of arthritis drug

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — The first new drug in over a decade for rheumatoid arthritis won the backing of government advisers Friday — with a warning that it must be taken very carefully by women who have not yet gone through menopause.

Arava, made by Hoechst Marion Roussel, does not cure crippling rheumatoid arthritis. But it appears to work as well as the gold-standard treatment, a cancer drug, at treating swollen, painful joints. And it appears to slow the progression of the debilitating disease.

"This drug does good things in joints," said Dr. Kenneth Brandt of Indiana University, before fellow advisers to the Food and Drug Administration recommended unanimously that Arava be approved for sale.

The FDA is not bound by its advisers' recommendations, but typically follows them.

Rheumatoid arthritis affects about 2 million Americans, the vast majority of them women.

It is not the kind of arthritis that plagues the elderly as their joints essentially wear out. Instead, rheumatoid arthritis is an autoimmune disease — the immune system goes awry and attacks patients' own cartilage. It typically strikes between ages 25 and 50.

The best treatment today is methotrexate, a cancer drug. But it causes troublesome side effects, and its effectiveness wanes over time, leaving patients with few options.

Arava, known chemically as leflunomide, is the first in a series of promising new treatments now approaching the market, after decades of no new alternatives. It works by blocking the overproduction of immune cells that are responsible for most of the arthritis's inflammation.

Hoechst studied 480 Americans with moderate disease. Some 41 percent of Arava patients saw their arthritis improve, compared with 19 percent of patients taking dummy pills. Methotrexate patients improved about the same as Arava patients.

Then Hoechst took X-rays of patients' hands and feet, studying bone erosion and cartilage disappearance to track the disease's progress. Arava patients did worsen. But in a year of study, placebo patients worsened four times more quickly than Arava patients. Methotrexate also slowed the disease's progression but not as much as Arava did.

Arava did cause side effects in more than one-fourth of all patients, including diarrhea and hair loss. But Arava did not seem as prone to causing the serious problems that methotrexate sometimes can, such as kidney failure, said Dr. Marc Hochberg of the University of Maryland, who monitored the study's safety. Methotrexate also works by blocking immune cells, but targets a different enzyme than Arava to do the job.

But Arava does have a significant problem: unlike most drugs that dissipate shortly after patients take the last dose, Arava can take at least six months to clear out of the body. Also, animal studies suggest it can cause numerous birth defects.

The FDA advisers said pregnant women should never take Arava and premenopausal women should use effective birth control to guard against becoming pregnant.

More troublesome was what to tell women who have already taken Arava and then decide they want to have a baby.

Hoechst has discovered that a longtime anti-cholesterol drug, called cholestyramine, can help flush Arava out of the body.

Flood: Search resumes for two missing boys

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Drenching rains of up to a foot that sent flood waters rushing over roads, buildings and railroad tracks eased on Friday, leaving emergency workers and property owners with a giant cleanup job.

Still missing were two boys, aged 12 and 14, who disappeared near a water-filled culvert in suburban Elm Grove on Thursday. Divers looked for them Friday but found no sign before suspending their search until the water in a nearby stream recedes.

No other serious injuries were reported from the deluge that left an Amtrak train stalled overnight just west of Milwaukee and caused some buildings to collapse 50 miles to the north in Sheboygan.

Gov. Tommy Thompson, who declared a state of emergency for flood-stricken counties, toured the Sheboygan area Friday, as officials started assessing the extent of damage.

Though the water was receding Friday, The Mill Place shopping center in Elm Grove was still swamped in about five feet of water as business owners returned to check the damage.

Amid the sound of pumps vacuuming brown water from the flooded parking lot, Kevin Benkowski donned a pair of chest-high waders to enter his store, Just Kidding, and film the wreckage for his insurance agent and his lawyer.

"It's a total loss," he said of the store, which sells children's clothing. "Everything's floating."

The shopping center is on the banks of Underwood Creek, which quickly overflowed Thursday as about eight inches of rain poured down. Water in Benkowski's store reached seven feet Thursday, and he and his wife had to be pulled out through windows by rescuers.

Employees of Reinders Inc., on the other side of the creek, were cleaning up debris that washed into the parking lot during the flood, but most company equipment wasn't affected because it's kept in buildings that were out of danger.

"The cleanup in a flood is a major task," said Richard Reinders, president of the golf-course equipment firm. "You can clean and clean, and you'll never get it done."

In Sheboygan, homeowners who were evacuated Thursday began returning to flooded basements and swamped yards.

Inspectors found structural damage in some homes, and those residents were not allowed to return Friday, said Deputy Police Chief David Kirk.

Police and private security officers were patrolling in the area of abandoned dwellings to prevent looting, Kirk said. Crews of state prison inmates were being brought in to help with the cleanup.

An Amtrak train that became stuck on waterlogged crossing in suburban Wauwatosa on Thursday was finally moved about 6:30 a.m. Friday. The Empire Builder's 350 passengers headed to the West Coast from Chicago were given alternative transportation Thursday, Amtrak spokesman John Stonik said.

Forecasters blamed the intense downpours on a slow-moving low pressure system that caused moisture-laden air to rise and produce the cloudbursts.

AP photo

Jason Moody and Ryan Posewitz, right, carry out belongings for a friend whose apartment was flooded out in Villas at Union Square Thursday in Sheboygan, Wis. The official rainfall estimate for the city was 10.7 inches for the 24-hour period ending at noon but at least one unofficial reading put it at just over 12 inches, with more possible wet weather in the forecast.

Families of switched babies planning weekend meeting

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — They've swapped baby pictures, endured the aggravations of public scrutiny and corresponded via attorneys.

Now the families involved in the saga of two newborns apparently switched at a Virginia hospital are planning to get together to discuss the ordeal.

The relatives of Callie Johnson and Rebecca Chittum will meet for the first time over the weekend, said Pete Robey, a lawyer for one of the families. The location and place will remain secret so their talk can be private, and the children won't be coming along, he said Friday.

The two blond, blue-eyed 3-year-old girls were apparently given to the wrong parents shortly after they were born at the University of Virginia Medical Center.

Callie went with Paula Johnson, a 30-year-old construction worker, and Rebecca went with Kevin Chittum and fiancee Whitney Rogers, who died in a car crash on July 4. The couple's grandparents, who are now caring for the child, were told of the switch a week ago.

Last month, DNA testing in Paula Johnson's paternity lawsuit revealed that the baby she took home from the hospital wasn't hers.

Travis Rogers, Whitney's brother, said family members are comforted by Ms. Johnson's recent statements that she doesn't want to take Rebecca away from the family she knows.

"I thank God that we've got somebody in this situation with us that's sensible," Rogers told The Roanoke Times.

Ms. Johnson and ex-boyfriend Carlton Conley, who separated a few months before Callie was born, insist they can reach a private agreement on custody and visitation rights with Rebecca's grandparents.

The Daily Progress of Charlottesville also reported Friday that a woman who witnessed the birth of Ms. Johnson's child, Callie Marie, said the child was banded with an identification bracelet within minutes of her birth on June 29, 1995.

Melissa Conley, the sister-in-law of Ms. Johnson's former boyfriend, said she saw the pink bracelet on Callie's wrist when she held her moments after she was born.

That account contrasts with one given by Ms. Johnson, who has said her child wasn't banded until about three hours after she was born.

Cynthia A. Johnson, attorney for Ms. Johnson, declined to comment on Ms. Conley's version of events in the birthing room.

Officials at the hospital believe Ms. Rogers left with the wrong child on July 2, and that Ms. Johnson left two days later with Ms. Rogers' child. An investigation being led by the university police with assistance from the Virginia State Police still has not determined how the baby switch took place.

E-mail program with a flaw has repair available

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A security flaw that could enable a hacker to ruin data or plant a virus on computers that run the popular Eudora e-mail program was repaired Friday by the software's manufacturer.

San Diego-based Qualcomm Inc. planned to make the repaired version available on its World Wide Web site by late Friday, two days after a Massachusetts company spotted the danger.

Qualcomm officials said in a statement that they were satisfied the problem no longer existed, but Matthew Parks, manager of the company's Eudora line, said no program is 100 percent safe.

"There are a lot of malicious people who are attempting to do this, whether it's the challenge to break something or if they have other intentions in mind," he said of software hackers.

Massachussetts-based Phar Lap Software, which uses the Eudora software, stumbled onto the vulnerability Wednesday, Parks said.

The problem was discovered about a week after flaws were revealed in two other popular e-mail programs, Microsoft's Outlook and Netscape's Mail program.

The Eudora problem was different, but "the potential for damage was the same," Parks said.

Explosion rocks propane plant

BATAVIA, Ohio (AP) — A series of explosions at a propane company shook businesses and homes Friday and seriously injured at least six people, authorities said.

Four workers ran out of the Auxier Gas Co. with their clothes burned and hair singed, said Batavia firefighter Jamie Sherzinger, who arrived moments after the blasts.

Six males, ranging in age from 17 to 52, were taken to University Hospital in Cincinnati. Their conditions ranged from fair to critical, but all were expected to live, said hospital spokeswoman Yolanda James.

"At first I thought it was a jet breaking the sound barrier," said Angela Sweet, who was working at a fast-food restaurant about a block away. "All you could see was a great big ball of black smoke."

The explosion in this village about 20 miles east of Cincinnati peeled away the aluminum walls of the company's main building where most of the propane tanks were stored.

Comets rip Shock

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Cynthia Cooper scored 23 of her 34 points in the second half Friday night to rally the Houston Comets to a 61-57 victory over the Detroit Shock.

Houston (24-2) trailed by 13 points at halftime, but rallied to win their fourth straight game. Detroit (13-12) lost for the third time in five games as the expansion team's slim playoff chances become even more remote.

Cooper's point total matched her own season high in the WNBA this season and was the highest against the Shock, topping the 30 scored by Lisa Leslie of Los Angeles two days earlier.

Cooper scored five points in the game's first seven minutes, then left the game with a bruised thigh. She missed just over six minutes, and Detroit went on a 12-2 run while she was out to take a 23-14 lead. Only three Comets scored in the first half as they were held to a season-low point total in falling behind 33-20.

Sheryl Swoopes, who missed all seven of her shots in the first half, started the second half with a jumper to key an 8-2 run.

Houston tied the game 47-47 with 10:27 left, and after four Shock points, Cooper scored seven straight points to put Houston ahead 54-51.

Detroit had a chance to regain the lead with three minutes left, but Rachael Sporn's baseline jumper bounced off the rim. Swoopes answered with a basket, just her second in 14 attempts, putting Houston up 58-55.

Brown's offensive rebound pulled Detroit within one point with 32 seconds left, but Cooper hit two free throws to make it 60-57.

Korie Hlede's off-balance 3-point attempt with two seconds left missed badly, and Yolanda Moore then made one of two free throws.

Johnson pulled

LOS ANGELES — Twentieth Television canceled Magic Johnson's late-night syndicated talk show, eight weeks after the former Los Angeles Lakers star debuted.

The last original episode of "The Magic Hour" was broadcast Thursday night, and reruns will be shown for the next four weeks, Twentieth Television said.

Rick Jacobson, president of Twentieth Television, which produced and distributed the show, said nationwide networks were going to move the show to a later time slot, prompting the cancellation.

"Knowing that later in the schedule it was harder to get ratings, and ratings generate revenue, as much as the show was getting better, we had to make a difficult decision," Jacobson said.

Diablo lefty baffles Angels

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Over his last three starts, El Paso lefty Brian Passini has been one of the most dominant pitchers in the Texas League. He was on his game again Friday night at Christensen Stadium.

Passini pitched 7 2/3 innings in a 6-3 win over the Midland Angels, giving up two runs on a Danny Buxbaum mega-blast in the fourth inning.

"I pitched well enough to keep the team in the game," a modest Passini said. "I threw too many pitches over the middle of the plate."

And if that doesn't seem like a ringing review of his performance, you only have to consider his last two outings. Passini (5-3) flirted with no-hit performances his last two times out. He pitched 5 2/3 innings before losing a no-hitter against San Antonio is his last start and carried a no-hitter through seven innings against Tulsa on July 27.

Still, Passini doesn't think about the no-hit possibilities. Only Diablo fans are searching for one since El Paso hasn't had a no-hitter in 25 years of existence.

"That (pitching a no-hitter) doesn't even enter my mind out there," Passini said. "Something like that is basically luck anyway. My goal is to keep the streak going and see if we can move into position to make the series with Wichita count."

El Paso moved back into a second place tie with the Angels in the Texas League West with the win and the two teams meet again today at 7:11 p.m. to end this current series and homestand.

Gruden set to debut vs. Cowboys

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Last week, Chan Gailey made his debut as head coach for the Dallas Cowboys in Texas Stadium. This Saturday, it's Jon Gruden's coming out party for the Oakland Raiders.

Like Gailey, Gruden was an offensive coordinator for another team, the Philadelphia Eagles.

Gailey was offensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers. Dallas lost 20-19 to Seattle in his head coaching debut last week.

The Cowboys and Raiders warmed up for the 8 p.m. game with a scrimmage in El Paso Thursday night, which Dallas won 7-0 on a 15-yard scoring run by Chris Warren.

Gruden knows the heat will be on him from the start, even in exhibition games.

"I understand the expectations and commitment of this franchise," he said.

Al Davis said of Gruden, the NFL's youngest offensive coordinator at age 31, "I like Jon's passion, his resiliency."

Oakland had an excellent offense last year, and players like wide receiver Tim Brown, quarterback Jeff George, running back Napoleon Kaufman and tight end Rickey Dudley return.

George tied Mark Brunell of Jacksonville for the best quarterback rating in the NFC last year at 91.2. He hit 60 percent of his passes and threw 18 touchdown passes.

Oakland was last in the NFL in defense, however, allowing an average of 382 yards per game.

Gailey only played his starters a quarter against Seattle and was expected to do about the same against Oakland.

"We need to see our young players under fire," Gailey said.

Dallas likely will see its backup quarterback from last season, Wade Wilson, in the game against them. Wilson is listed third on the Oakland depth chart.

Also playing for Oakland against Dallas is former Cowboys No. 1 draft pick Russell Maryland.

On display for the Raiders will be their two first-round draft picks, cornerback Charles Woodson of Michigan and offensive lineman Mo Colllins, a 6-foot-4, 335-pounder from Florida.

Emmitt Smith, who suffered a slight arm injury last week, could see limited action against the Raiders, but wide receiver Tim Brown of Oakland wasn't expected to play. He was in Los Angeles with his wife, Sherice, who gave birth to a girl last week.

JOHNSON'S HOUSTON DEBUT

HOUSTON — The Big Unit made a big entrance in his home debut for the Astros.

Johnson thrilled a record crowd with a five-hitter for his 20th career shutout in his Astrodome debut, leading the Houston Astros to a 9-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Friday night.

"I know what rock stars feel like after walking out to the bullpen before the game," Johnson said. "I'm used to maybe 200 people watching me warm up in Seattle. When you've got 50,000 fans doing that when you first come out, that's exciting."

Johnson, 2-0 with Houston after going 9-10 with Seattle, helped attract 52,071 fans, the most ever for a regular-season game in the Astrodome.

He got thunderous cheers when he was introduced with the starting lineup. He was obtained July 31 and pitched seven innings against Pittsburgh last Sunday in his first NL game since 1989.

"I was overwhelmed by the attention I got," Johnson said. "Even when I'm not out there, fans should support this team because it's championship caliber. I've been on the AL West championship team with the Mariners, and this team has the same type of character. It's exciting to be a part of that."

Johnson didn't let the Phillies off the hook.

"I've faced him in three periods, when he was at Montreal, Seattle and now," Phillies outfielder Gregg Jefferies said. "At Montreal, he was just 'Here it comes.' He just threw pure gas. At Seattle he started to learn that slider.

"But this Randy Johnson is the best one I've seen. He's mastered the slider and his changeup is great too. And of course, he throws 95, 96, 97 all the time. He's become an unbelievable pitcher."

Jeff Bagwell homered twice to raise his season total to 25, hitting a three-run homer in the third and a solo shot in the sixth. It was Bagwell's third multihomer game this season, the 14th of his career.

"I was very surprised that he has tremendous control and I was very surprised at how fast he works," Bagwell said of Johnson. "He wants to get the ball and go to work. That's unusual for a strikeout pitcher. But it's a pleasure to work

Americans edge Italy, reach semis at World tourney

By Stephen Wade
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Greece — Rudy Tomjanovich couldn't recall the last time he'd jumped that high.

His great leap came with seven seconds left when Italy's Carlton Myers missed a 3-pointer from 28 feet, allowing the ragtag U.S. team to post an 80-77 victory Friday in the quarterfinals of the World Basketball Championship.

Tomjanovich — his team down by seven points with less than five minutes to play — leaped off the bench like he was ripping down a rebound, then dropped to his knees and punched the air with his fists, breaking a pair of eyeglasses in his exuberance.

"I thought I was rebounding," Tomjanovich said. "That's the highest I've jumped in a long time. I figure I could have dunked that one if I had a ball in my hand.

"I was into the game," he said, digging into a pocket to find his broken glasses. "I was surprised I was running around and jumping all over the place. But you have to love a bunch of hard-working guys."

Michael Hawkins led the Americans with 16 points, while Wendell Alexis had 14 and Kiwane Garris 11.

The Americans, leading by nine after only 3 1/2 minutes, trailed at halftime 41-38. They led again by six points with 10 minutes to play, then were taken apart by Myers as he scored from outside and slashed to the basket — scoring and drawing fouls — when the U.S. came out to guard him.

"A lot of teams get down like we were and it's like a dam breaking," Tomjanovich said. "But these guys stuck with it against a very tough opponent. They (Italy) probably deserved to win. There's something

Banned swimmer promises to fight tampering charge

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press Writer

DUBLIN, Ireland — Defiant and angry, banned Olympic champion Michelle Smith insisted she is innocent of tampering with a drug test and accused swimming authorities of conspiring to end her career.

"I'm not going to crawl under a stone and never be heard from again and not fight against this ban," she said Friday.

FINA, swimming's governing body, suspended the triple gold medalist for four years after determining she had spiked her urine sample with alcohol.

Smith, a hero in Ireland since her exploits at the 1996 Atlanta Olympics, plans to clear her name at an appeals hearing and sue the swimming federation.

When asked at a news conference why swimming authorities might pursue a vendetta against her, Smith gestured to her husband, Erik de Bruin.

"I'm married to this man," she said. "Some people think that's motive enough."

De Bruin was the Dutch champion discus thrower before testing positive for excessive testosterone. He was banned for four years, ending his career.

Smith said she would seek "significant damages against FINA for what can only be described as a blatant and mischievous attempt to ruin my swimming career and my international standing."

FINA officials were unavailable for comment on Smith's accusations or her plans to appeal.

On Thursday, FINA ruled Smith was guilty of tampering with an out-of-competition urine test taken at her home in January. The panel said the sample con-

Broncos start exhibition season without star QB

Associated Press

Call the Denver Broncos' opening exhibition in St. Louis Saturday night a rehearsal for the future.

While the defending Super Bowl champions meet the St. Louis Rams, John Elway, who is expected to retire after the season, will be in Rochester, Minn.

His wife Janet underwent surgery Thursday for what is believed to be Crohn's Disease, a chronic disease of the intestinal tract.

So Bubby Brister will start at quarterback for the Broncos, with Brian Griese, who may be Elway's eventual replacement, ready to get his first action as a pro.

It's been a strange camp for the Broncos. Last week, on the way back from visiting his wife, Elway stopped at a motorcycle rally in Sturgis, S.D., in an attempt to coax left tackle Gary Zimmerman out of retirement for the second straight year. Chances are Zimmerman will be back, although coach Mike Shanahan isn't sure yet.

"There are a lot of details," Shanahan said. "There isn't even a contract yet."

This is the first full weekend of NFL exhibitions — the start of the season is only four weeks away.

On Thursday night, the New York Jets beat Philadelphia 29-15.

On Friday night, Detroit beat Arizona 13-10 on Jason Hanson's 38-yard field goal 2:50 into overtime. Hanson's 34-yarder with one second left in regulation forced overtime.

Also, Tennessee defeated Atlanta 31-16. George McCullough returned an interception for a touchdown, and James Ritchey and Ron Powlus, battling for a backup spot at quarterback, each threw a touchdown pass for the Oilers.

On Saturday, the Baltimore Ravens open their new stadium against the Chicago Bears.

■ NFL Exhibition Roundup

In other Saturday games, Buffalo is at Pittsburgh, Jacksonville at Carolina, Miami at Washington, Kansas City vs. Tampa Bay at Norman, Okla., Cincinnati at the New York Giants, New Orleans at Green Bay, Oakland at Dallas, Indianapolis at Seattle, and San Francisco at San Diego.

Minnesota is at New England Sunday.

Griese isn't the only rookie quarterback in the spotlight.

Peyton Manning, the No. 1 overall pick in the draft, will start for the Colts at Seattle, and Ryan Leaf, the No. 2 overall pick, will start for the Chargers at San Francisco.

"I didn't leave college early so I could sit on the bench for a year," Leaf said after his first practice as a starter. "This is what I wanted to do."

Manning stepped right in after a five-day holdout and shined in workouts against the Rams.

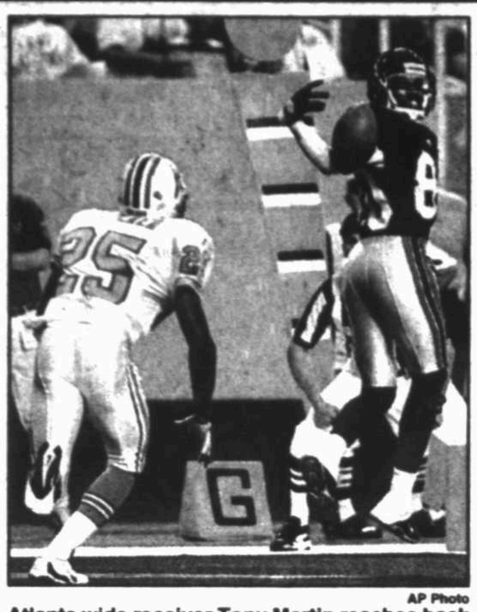
He said he's been told he will play the first half Saturday night.

"I don't know whether that will alter during the three games after that," he said. "Whatever time I'm in there, I'm going to try to make the best out of it."

Manning, whose only competitors are two inexperienced journeymen, Kelly Holcomb and Bill Musgrave, was chosen the starting quarterback for the Colts shortly after being drafted.

He'll be going against Tony Banks, a third-year starter whom coach Dick Vermeil hopes will become a solid NFL quarterback this year.

"I'd just like to see him show good command, good rhythm in the offense, good leadership and good percentage," Vermeil said. "I'd like to see him throw 60 percent or better complete and I'd like to see him throw about 70 percent complete on first downs."



AP Photo

Atlanta wide receiver Tony Martin reaches back for a pass but can't hang on during Tennessee's 31-16 exhibition win Friday in Atlanta. Tennessee defender Denard Walker looks on.

Two years after leaving Cleveland for Baltimore, the Ravens open their new $220 million stadium. A sellout crowd of 69,000, a rarity for an exhibition, is expected.

"We want to show the fans what we have. We want to play well right from the beginning and continue to do that," Ravens coach Ted Marchibroda said.

The Bengals-Giants game will be the first played on grass at Giants Stadium.

The grass, put over the artificial turf for the Major League Soccer season, will be removed for the regular season, when the Jets and Giants both use the facility. It could be used permanently if a way is found to keep it fresh with two pro teams, several college games and a number of rock concerts at the stadium.

McIver to miss 'Boys' game against Raiders

By Kevin Lyons
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

WICHITA FALLS — The strange details surrounding the dorm-room episode involving the Cowboys' Everett McIver might never be made public. But Michael Irvin, one of the players in this mystery, said yesterday that he and McIver should have no problems peacefully coexisting this season.

"There is no animosity between us," Irvin said. "Y'all cut that out, the rumors of us not getting along. Me and Everett are OK."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones concurred.

"There was nothing between Michael and Everett in the past and candidly, there is nothing between them today," Jones said. "They have a lot of respect for each other."

That might be the case. Yet whatever happened during the July 29 "horseplay" incident, in which McIver sustained a deep cut on his neck, has kept him from being in game shape. He is expected to miss tonight's preseason game against the Oakland Raiders at Texas Stadium, Jones said.

McIver ran laps with strength coach Joe Juraszek yesterday and left before the afternoon practice was over without comment.

"He has been given a clean bill of health," Jones said. "But we don't want to take any risks that might involve him pulling (a muscle), or him not being in shape. This has nothing to do with his cut."

McIver's absence will let coach Chan Gailey give Flozell Adams a long look at right guard. Adams has been the club's most impressive rookie this summer, and yesterday Gailey said Adams is already good enough to be a starter in this league at either guard or tackle.

But apparently, Adams' development will not cost McIver his job.

"The main thing is that Everett has played well enough, and he shouldn't be penalized because he has lost time," Jones said. "He is one of our smartest players. Of all our guys who might miss some time, he's probably one who could make it up better than anyone."

There are others, however, who are fighting for starting jobs tonight. Gailey will get a second look at the players in several training-camp battles. Ernie Mills and Billy Davis are the primary contenders for the No. 2 wide receiver spot. Omar Stoutmire, Kenny Wheaton, and George Teague are battling for the starting free safety job.

Gailey might also get his first look at cornerback Deion Sanders, who missed the last preseason game and the contact portion of Thursday's scrimmage with the Raiders because he was not fully recovered from off-season ankle surgery.

Most importantly, Gailey would like to build cohesiveness among his starters, who dominated the scrimmage against the Raiders.

"I'm pleased, but we've got a long way to go," Gailey said. "We need every bit of the remaining opportunities we have to practice."

Ex-lineman loses drug disability claim

By Bob Egelko
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Walt Sweeney, a former all-pro guard who claimed he became an addict because of drugs his teams gave him to keep him playing, was denied drug-related disability benefits Friday by a federal appeals court.

Sweeney had been granted $4,000 a month in retroactive benefits by a federal judge, who ruled that he had suffered a football-related disability since retiring in 1977. But the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals disagreed and reinstated a decision by the NFL retirement board providing greatly reduced benefits.

Noting that Sweeney worked in several occupations from 1977 to 1984, the court said the retirement board reasonably determined that he was not totally disabled during that period, "even though it is possible to draw different conclusions from this evidence."

Sweeney played for San Diego for a decade, then was traded to Washington, where he played three years before retiring with a knee injury.

In 1993, the NFL classified him as permanently disabled because of his knee and started paying him $1,500 a month. The league also said he was disabled because of drugs as of 1990, but described the disability as non-football-related.

Sweeney said his drug disability was football-related and started much earlier.

"The record shows that they (the teams) furnished uppers before the game and downers after the game and steroids during practice," Sanford Svetcov, a lawyer for Sweeney, said Friday. "When the downers didn't work, (the Chargers' doctor) told Mr. Sweeney to use marijuana."

After leaving the game, Sweeney got a series of jobs, as a drug counselor, a bartender, an employee of a silk-screening business, a construction worker and a taxi driver.

The NFL said the jobs showed he was not disabled. Sweeney's lawyers said they showed only that he was still a big name in San Diego.

"People would hire him because he was Walt Sweeney, and would fire him because he was a drug addict," his wife, Nanci, told the San Diego Union-Tribune in a 1995 interview before his first federal court hearing.

"He would take fantastic amounts of drugs, things that would kill a horse, but they didn't even bother him. But his body was dying."

Sweeney admitted himself to a rehabilitation center in early 1995, then checked out in the erroneous belief that he was jeopardizing his benefits for his knee. He said he took a heavy dose of drugs, and suffered what was later determined to be a stroke.

Svetcov said Sweeney is doing better now after further treatment.

The NFL retirement board's classification of Sweeney was overruled by U.S. District Judge Rudi Brewster, who said his disability dated back to the time of his retirement, was caused by drugs and was football-related.

Sweeney's lawyers said the retroactive payments ordered by Brewster totaled $900,000, at the time of the July 1995 hearing, plus $1.1 million in interest.

But the appeals court, in a 3-0 ruling, said it was required to uphold the retirement board's decision as long as it was reasonable and supported by substantial evidence.

That evidence includes Sweeney's employment in various occupations after 1977, and the board's explanation that "some players do not transition smoothly into new careers after their retirement, regardless of disability," the court said.

Agassi upsets Sampras

TORONTO (AP) — Andre Agassi kept his impressive run going while keeping Pete Sampras from staying No. 1.

The eighth-seeded Agassi beat the top-seeded Sampras 6-7 (7-5), 6-1, 6-2 Friday night in the quarterfinals of the $2.45 million du Maurier tennis tournament.

Agassi, a three-time champion in this event, has won four tournaments this season, including both he has entered the last two weeks, improving his ranking more than 100 spots to No. 11.

His latest win will prevent Sampras from staying on top of the ATP world rankings. Sampras needed to win this event for the first time to maintain his No. 1 ranking. That spot will now be taken by Chile's Marcelo Rios, who briefly held the No. 1 spot earlier this year when Sampras was struggling to find his game.

In Saturday's semifinals, Agassi will face the winner of the quarterfinal match between fourth-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov of Russia and No. 6 Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands, while third-seeded Patrick Rafter of Australia will meet No. 7 Tim Henman of England.

Each of the players had to play two matches Friday because of rain on Thursday.

Agassi advanced with a 2-6, 7-5, 6-3 victory over No. 10 Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia, who lost the match when he double-faulted on match point.

Sampras, after a three-hour rain delay, appeared sluggish, tired and frustrated in a 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 victory over Tommy Haas of Germany.

SWIMMER: Smith denies charge

tained a large quantity of alcohol, probably whiskey.

The ban includes the Sydney 2000 Olympics and the 2001 World Championships, in effect ending the 28-year-old swimmer's career.

"I am fighting for my reputation and for my right to go to Sydney," she told Irish national broadcasters RTE after her news conference. "I want to be up on the winner's blocks again. ...

"I know I have never done anything in the past to put myself or my family or my country to shame. I am determined to follow this through to the end. I look forward to doing my country proud again."

Earlier, reading from a 12-page statement at her lawyer's offices, Smith emphasized that the alcohol in the sample hadn't prevented the laboratory in Barcelona, Spain, from determining that no performance-enhancing drug or signs of drug use were present.

"I had no motive for introducing alcohol or indeed any other masking agent into my sample, as I have never tested positive for the use of any banned substance throughout my career," she said. "And as the laboratory has confirmed there was no banned substance, the issue of motive does not arise."

Smith said FINA had produced no proof that she was to blame for the added alcohol. She accused FINA of conspiring "to ensure that I did not swim again and to ensure that, by whatever method was available to them, a ban was imposed."

Her lawyer, Peter Lennon, said the first step would be to appeal FINA's decision to the Court of Arbitration for Sport in Lausanne, Switzerland. If that fails, they might go to the European Court for Human Rights.

Smith had a mediocre record before capturing three gold medals and a bronze at the Atlanta Games, three years after de Bruin became her coach.

While fans said her performance was a triumph of will, her detractors pointed to drugs. Smith has denied such charges and said she has been tested more often than any of her rivals.

FINA said her original and backup drug tests, which were stored and tested separately, both showed high-alcohol content. This, it said, ruled out the possibility that anyone other than Smith had tampered with the samples.

Smith's devoted circle in her native Rathcoole, west of Dublin, has remained loyal to the woman lauded in posters as "our belle Michelle." Some said they would donate to a defense fund if Smith wanted.

"It's a disaster, they're devastated really," Smith said of her family. "They can't believe that it's happening and they're very upset."

Members of Jeff Gordon's crew push his car into the garage area following a morning workout before qualifying Friday in Watkins Glen, N.Y. Gordon qualified for the pole position for Sunday's Bud at the Glen race.

Herta earns provisional Miller Lite pole

By Tim Puet
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ohio — Bryan Herta, driving on his home track, broke his own track record in Friday's first day of qualifying for Sunday's Miller Lite 200 at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course.

Herta, last year's polesitter in the race, drove his Team Rahal Reynard-Ford Cosworth to a fast lap of 122.977 mph on the 2.25-mile, 13-turn road course in the hills of north-central Ohio.

If Herta remains the fastest driver when qualifying ends Saturday, it would be his third pole of the year and sixth of his career. He also had the best qualifying lap at Long Beach and Portland earlier this year. He still is looking for his first victory.

Herta's performance beat the record of 122.649 mph he set last year, also on the first day of qualifying. He doesn't expect his lastest mark to last long.

"All I'm thinking about is improving the car for tomorrow," he said. "It's going to get a lot faster because it was faster here earlier this year in testing. ... We won't sit on anything and just say 'OK, we're there.'"

Herta's boss, Bobby Rahal, plans to retire at the end of this season and is making his farewell appearance as a driver at the track. Rahal, the only owner-driver in CART, was 19th Friday. Rahal and Herta's racing operations are based in the Columbus suburb of Hilliard, about 60 miles from the track.

"Winning this race would be special, but then any victory would be special," Herta said. "I don't know if there can be any greater incentive than to win your first race."

Rahal was disappointed with his car's performance.

"The car's rear end wanted to slide too much," he said. "It seems that the track conditions have everybody sliding around a lot. ... Right at the end of the session, I felt the car was on a good lap, but the red flag came out" to end qualifying.

The second-fastest lap was by Mark Blundell at 122.473 mph in a pacWest Reynard-Mercedes. The British driver hasn't qualified higher than sixth this year and is looking for his fourth victory in three CART seasons.

"We've been getting stronger in the last few races," he said. "I just want to continue this through tomorrow and hopefully we can stay in the position we're in now, if not better."

Haskell may be more than two-horse race

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Racing Writer

OCEANPORT, N.J. — Elliott Walden, trainer of Belmont Stakes winner Victory Gallop, knows that Coronado's Quest is the horse to beat, but he also contends the Haskell Invitational is anything but a two-horse race.

"On the outside looking in, it is a two-horse race, but whenever weight's involved it changes things a little," Walden said Friday after six 3-year-olds were entered for the $1 million handicap over 1 1/8 miles at Monmouth Park Sunday.

Victory Gallop will carry 125 pounds and Coronado's Quest will tote 124, while the other four will carry from 114 to 118.

Despite Walden's contention, it still looks like a two-horse race between the stretch-running Victory Gallop and the speedy Coronado's Quest.

The only stakes winner among the other four colts entered is Grand Slam, and he hasn't been the racehorse he was before severely cutting on both hind legs in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile Nov. 8 at Hollywood Park.

"The main reason we're taking a shot is it's a small field and a big purse," said Todd Pletcher, trainer of Ian's Thunder. "It's a big payday just to hit the board."

The winner will get $600,000, the runner-up $200,000 and the third-place finisher $100,000. Every starter gets something, with fourth worth $60,000, fifth $30,000 and sixth $10,000.

Should both Victory Gallop and Coronado's Quest get upset, however, Real Quiet would score a victory in the race for the 3-year-old championship. Real Quiet, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, will miss the Haskell because of a strain in his right hind stifle (similar to a human knee).

Gordon captures his sixth pole of season

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Success is almost automatic for Jeff Gordon these days.

Coming off two straight Winston Cup victories, Gordon kept up an amazing string of qualifying successes Friday by taking the pole position for the Bud at the Glen.

Sunday's race will mark the 11th consecutive event in which Gordon will start in the first two rows, and the eighth time in that stretch he will start from the front row. All six of his poles this season have come during that period.

This one never was in doubt. On a warm overcast afternoon, Gordon, the ninth of 45 drivers to go, turned in a lap of 120.331 mph. The 2.45-mile, 11-turn track at Watkins Glen International is one of only two road courses on the Winston Cup schedule.

Gordon, who turned 27 last Tuesday, was surprised by his qualifying lap.

"That's by far the best lap I've ever had here," he said. "I knew it was a good lap, but it's hard to get the perfect lap on a road course. I was conservative going into the first turn. The car stuck great and I didn't make many mistakes, but I didn't know if I was aggressive enough."

Gordon again credited crew chief Ray Evernham and the rest of his Rainbow Warriors crew with giving him the right stuff at the right time.

"I told Ray what I thought we needed and he gave me exactly what we needed," Gordon said. "We worked on that transmission, like we did in California.

"We learned a lot about road racing in California," Gordon added, referring to the race in June at Sonoma, Calif., where he started from the pole and won.

Gordon is the defending champion at Watkins Glen.

"This race last year did a lot for me confidence-wise," he said. "I didn't know if I was capable of winning on a road course until I won here. ... I like the road courses a lot. I come here and have fun."

Ron Fellows, a road racing specialist from Canada, also enjoyed himself Friday.

Fellows, filling in this weekend for Buz McCall's regular driver, Hut Stricklin, was a surprising second at 120.002 mph, just two-tenths of a second behind Gordon.

"One of the reasons I wanted to come to this team is that I know (crew chief) Sammy Johns and I know the shock guy," Fellows said. "We put our heads together and came up with a plan and it worked pretty good."

Fellows has raced at The Glen in both the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series and the Busch Grand National stock car series.

Wrong-way Irwin creates stir on track

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Call him wrong-way Irwin.

During qualifying Friday for the Bud at the Glen, Kenny Irwin didn't seem to know which way to turn.

It all started when Kenny Wallace disappeared in a cloud of smoke in the final turns of the twisting 11-turn road course.

"I got on the brakes pretty good and had some smoke come up inside the car when I missed my last corner here for some reason, and I couldn't get down to the bottom," Wallace said. "When I came in I told the boys there's smoke all up in the car. I hope I didn't drop anything."

He did — some oil — and Irwin quickly grabbed everybody's attention when he went next.

Irwin was having a smooth run in a Ford Taurus when he came sliding through the oil and flew off course into the sand and gravel.

"When I was coming to the green, I saw some oil in turn 7 and I just couldn't get out of the way quick enough, so I just tried to run straight through the rocks," Irwin said.

However, with just a turn or two to go to the finish line, instead of just continuing on and going into the pits, Irwin reversed his field like a good running back and drove backwards around the whole course and then went behind the wall for a cooling-off period.

Moments later, he came out and qualified 18th, and the car didn't seem any worse for the wear.

Official Rules: The game will begin the first week of the regular season and end the last week of the regular season. Each team owner must fill out the entry form and attend the Fantasy Football Kickoff day at the Midland Hilton. Each team will consist of two Quarter Backs, 2 Running Backs, 3 Wide Receivers, 2 Tight Ends, and 1 Defensive team. Points will be issued as follows: A touchdown pass will give the Quarter Back who threw the pass and the receiver who caught it 3 points a piece. A rushing touchdown will result in 6 points. Field goals will count as 3 points and extra points as one point. Any play that is over fifty yards resulting in a score of any kind will double the points for that play. The only way to get a defensive score is if there is an interception or a fumble returned for a touchdown, or if the defense has a shut out. If any defensive player scores points on special teams or on offensive points the points will still be awarded as defensive points. All players selected by the owners must be offensive players; for example an owner can not pick Deon Sanders as a Receiver because generally he does not play offense. Whoever has picked the Dallas defense will receive the points in the event Deon catches a touchdown pass or runs for a touchdown. Each team owner will have the opportunity to trade players halfway through the season. This will be the only time trades or changes will be allowed. Weekly winners will receive a room for two at the Midland Hilton (this includes dinner and drinks for two). The Grand Prize will be awarded after the contest has been completed. This will include: A round trip for two to the National Collegiate Championship in Tempe Arizona at the Fiesta Bowl January 4, 1999, and two nights hotel for two. Second Prize will be a cash award of $250.00 and Third place winner will receive $150.00 cash. All entries must be received before or during the Kickoff Nite Monday, August 17th to be eligible to win the Grand Prize. Anyone can enter a team after this for the weekly prizes, but are not eligible for the Grand Prize. Ties will be decided by random drawing for both the weekly prize contests and the Grand Prize contest. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Midland Hilton and Midland Travel not eligible. No Purchase Necessary. You must be 18 or older to enter.

Wetteland sits Vaughn down again

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas closer John Wetteland faced Boston slugger Mo Vaughn with two outs in the ninth representing the tying run for the second straight game.

And the result was the same.

Wetteland struck out Vaughn to register his 31st save, matching last season's total, as the Rangers won their sixth straight with a 4-3 victory over the Red Sox on Friday night.

A weary Wetteland, appearing in his fourth straight game, altered his pitching pattern from Thursday night when he went almost exclusively with his fastball.

"I wanted to pitch guys a little differently than last night," said Wetteland, who has three saves and a win over the four-game span. "Against Vaughn, I wanted to give a different look than last night, so I threw a lot more breaking balls. This would have been a difficult game to let slip away. The guys played inspired baseball tonight."

Vaughn noticed the change in Wetteland's pitch selection.

"He switched the whole pattern on me," Vaughn said. "He started me out with two hard breaking balls."

Rick Helling outdueled Pedro Martinez for his 15th victory as the Rangers tied their longest winning streak of the season.

Martinez (15-4) recovered from a three-run first to strike out a season-high 13. He allowed four runs, six hits and two walks in 6 2-3 innings.

"Anytime you face a guy like that, a Cy Young winner, you want to get off to a good start," said Will Clark, who had a two-run homer in the first for the Rangers. "From there he got into a groove and only got tougher. Three runs is a big cushion against a guy like Pedro."

Trailing 4-3 with runners on first and second and two outs, Martinez was taken out of the game in the seventh by manager Jimy Williams after throwing 124 pitches. Martinez angrily shouted to himself as he walked to the dugout.

"I'm not big on coming out of a game," Martinez said. "It's my pride. I don't get mad at anybody."

Helling (15-6) allowed three runs and seven hits over six innings, leaving after Mike Benjamin's leadoff double in the seventh. Tim Crabtree got out of the seventh without allowing a run and the Rangers bullpen held the Red Sox scoreless on one hit over the final three innings.

Helling struck out three and walked two as he extended his career-high for victories by prevailing against the AL's ERA leader.

"When you face a guy like that, you know runs are going to be hard to come by," Helling said. "The key was getting three in the first against one of the best pitchers in baseball. From there I just tried to do my job."

Juan Gonzalez's major league-leading 119th RBI helped Texas take advantage of an error by first baseman Vaughn in the fifth, breaking a 3-all tie. Tom Goodwin led off with a single and Luis Alicea bunted. Vaughn fielded the ball and threw over the head of second baseman Benjamin, putting runners at second and third. Gonzalez's sacrifice fly drove in Goodwin with an unearned run.

The Rangers capitalized on a couple of rare mistake pitches by Martinez in the first. Rusty Greer hit a run-scoring double and after Gonzalez struck out, Clark hit his 16th homer, a two-run shot over the Rangers bullpen in right field.

Boston tied it with a three-run fourth, highlighted by RBI singles from Darren Bragg and Damon Buford and Scott Hatteberg's sacrifice fly. The Red Sox got a break early in the inning when Mike Stanley's fly ball fell between Goodwin in center field and Greer in left for what was scored a single to load the bases.

■ AL Roundup

Yankees 8, Royals 2
Yankees 14, Royals 2

NEW YORK — They win in the daylight or at night, with their stars in the lineup or sitting on the bench.

The New York Yankees just win, period.

"I say, 'Wow' a lot, either out loud or to myself," New York manager Joe Torre said Friday after the Yankees swept a day-night doubleheader from the Kansas City Royals 8-2 and 14-2. "This ballclub just continues to come at you."

Despite sitting several regulars, New York pushed its record 53 games over .500 for the first time this season with the sweep.

In the second game, Rookie Shane Spencer, playing right field so Paul O'Neill could get some rest, went 5-for-5 with his first two major league homers and David Wells (14-2) ran his home record to 9-0 for the Yankees, who have beaten the Royals six straight times this season.

In the opener, David Cone became the majors' first 16-game winner and Darryl Strawberry homered.

Bernie Williams hit a two-run homer and Luis Sojo drove in three runs in the night game.

Spencer hit a solo homer in the seventh inning, then connected on a two-run shot in a five-run eighth. It was the first five-hit game for a Yankee this season.

"I've never had five hits in my life," a beaming Spencer said. "Not even in Little League. A couple of home runs, but nothing like this."

Chuck Knoblauch also homered in the second game as the Yankees improved to 82-29. On pace to the break the 1906 Chicago Cubs' record of 116 wins, the Yankees will play 33 of their final 51 games at Yankee Stadium, where they are 40-8.

Wells allowed six hits, struck out four and walked none in his second straight complete game and fourth this year. He has won six straight decisions.

Torre rested O'Neill, Tino Martinez, Darryl Strawberry and Scott Brosius in the second game, and the Yankees didn't miss a beat. Spencer and Sojo, replacing O'Neill and Martinez, went a combined 8-for-10 with five runs scored and six RBIs.

After he came back to the dugout after his second homer, Spencer came back out for a curtain call as Yankee fans screamed for their newest hero.

"I never expected anything like that in my life," he said. "I couldn't stop smiling. I haven't stopped smiling yet."

Mariners 7, Tigers 1, 2nd game

DETROIT — Alex Rodriguez was 3-for-5 with his 34th homer as the Seattle Mariners beat the Detroit Tigers 7-1 Friday night to complete a doubleheader sweep.

In the first game, Raul Ibanez, recalled from the minors earlier in the day, hit a tie-breaking two-run double in the eighth inning in Seattle's 6-3 victory. The Mariners have won four of their last five.

Ken Griffey Jr. was 1-for-5 with two RBIs in the second game after going 1-for-3 in the opener. The Seattle star, the AL homer leader with 41, hasn't homered in seven games.

Heathcliff Slocumb (2-4) pitched 1 2-3 shutout innings, and Mike Timlin got three outs for his eighth save. Dean Crow (1-1) was the loser.

In the second game, Brian Moehler (12-8) lost at home for the first time in 10 decisions this season. Jamie Moyer (9-8) won for the fourth time in five starts, allowing one run on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Indians 5, Devil Rays 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Dwight Gooden (4-6) won as he pitched a regular season game in his hometown for the first time, but Cleveland lost Jim Thome to an injury.

Thome, the AL's starting first baseman in the All-Star game, broke a bone in his right hand when Wilson Alvarez (5-10) hit him with a pitch in the seventh. Cleveland said Thome will be sidelined 4-to-6 weeks.

Athletics 7, Blue Jays 6

TORONTO — Ed Sprague, traded from the Blue Jays to the A's on July 31, doubled to break a 2-all tie in the sixth in his return to Toronto and Rickey Henderson homered for the second straight game.

Jimmy Haynes (8-4) started in place of Blake Stein, pushed back a day to rest a tender shoulder. Haynes allowed two runs — one earned — and five hits in 6 1-3 innings. Woody Williams (9-7) was the loser.

Orioles 16, Twins 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Harold Baines had a go-ahead three-run homer and a season-high five RBIs, and Brady Anderson had a career-high five hits, including two homers, in Baltimore's victory at Minnesota.

Baines had a two-run single in the first and added his sixth homer in the sixth, raising his AL-best average with runners on base to .367.

Anderson, 5-for-6, had a two-run homer, a solo shot, two doubles and four RBIs, which tied a season high. Baltimore won its fourth straight and moved four games over .500 (59-55) for the first time since April 25.

ANGELS: El Paso spoils great night by Buxbaum

(From 1B)

Passini, a fast working hurler, didn't worry long about a no-hit bid in this one since the first two Angel hitters (Norm Hutchins and Keith Luuloa) both laced singles to start the game. However, Passini struck out Eddie Christian and got Buxbaum to ground into a double play.

Buxbaum came back in the fourth to nail Passini with a two-run blast over the Green Wall in center for his 17th homer of the year. Passini then gave up a single to Lee Tinsley for his third consecutive hit of the inning before working out of another jam, leaving two Midland runners stranded.

"He (Buxbaum) got a fastball and really hit it hard," Passini said. "That guy hit the ball hard all night. I had a few concentration problems on the game, and maybe it was because I was working on some of my mechanics. I had watched the Midland hitters for three games before tonight and knew they were a good hitting team."

Buxbaum was short a triple in hitting for the cycle. He homered, doubled and singled in the game, but Midland could never get any big innings going.

Passini looked to be headed for his second complete game in his last three starts until Luuloa lined a drive off his left shoulder with two outs in the eighth. Passini was pulled from the game and he was icing down that shoulder after the game.

El Paso took a 2-0 lead off of Midland in the fourth on a two-run double by Alex Andreopoulos and then broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth with three runs coming on back-to-back doubles by Toby Kominek and Todd Dunn to make a loser of Midland starter Matt Wise (8-8). Dunn scored an insurance run in the eighth on a grounder by Miguel Correa.

Midland scored in the ninth when Buxbaum doubled, moved to third on a grounder and scored on Matt Curtis' grounder.

ANGEL DUST: El Paso shortstop Kelly Phair ended an 0-for-17 streak at the plate with a single in the ninth off of Midland reliever Danny Greene... Buxbaum's homer was his second of the homestand... Midland is 12-14 against El Paso this season and still has six games left with the Diablos... El Paso's Anthony Iapoce was hitless and lost an eight-game hitting streak... Myron Noodleman will make an appearance for the final game of the homestand as El Paso sends Stacy Hollins (RH, 2-2, 4.70) against Midland's Lou Pote (RH, 8-7, 4.77)... The Angels (3-6 on the homestand) scored 18 runs in the first two games and have scored 11 runs in the last seven games, losing six of those seven...

with."

Johnson, making just his 12th NL start, struck out eight and walked one, getting his third shutout of the season.

"I don't walk on water," Johnson said. "In due time I will get roughed up. But for now, this is nice. The true test will come when I face these teams again after they've made adjustments."

After a leadoff double by Kevin Sefcik in the third, Johnson retired nine straight before pinch-hitter Ruben Amaro beat out an infield hit in the sixth.

The Astrodome's previous record crowd during the regular season was 51,526 on May 16 against Atlanta. In last year's playoffs, Houston set its postseason record by drawing 53,688 against the Braves.

Bagwell's third-inning homer off Mike Welch (0-2) gave the Astros a 3-0 lead. Moises Alou hit his 29th in the fourth inning, a two-run drive.

Bill Spiers got three straight hits for the Astros and scored two runs.

Alou, a member of the world champion Florida Marlins last season, is getting the same playoff feeling.

"It does bring back memories," Alou said. "He brings a different atmosphere to the club. Now we can start thinking about the playoffs. Once we get there, we have to play good, stay healthy and get a little bit lucky.

"If we can get there, I like our chances. This man has brought some excitement to the team and to the city."

Notes: Astros closer Billy Wagner returned to the roster Friday night for the first time since he was struck in the head by a liner by Arizona's Kelly Stinnett on July 15, ... The Phillies have rallied to win 33 games this season. Twice, they've recovered from seven-run deficits.

Cards' 11-run inning destroys Cubs

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — It was a big night for the St. Louis offense, but not for Mark McGwire.

While the Cardinals scored 11 runs in the first inning, McGwire stayed stuck at 45 homers as the Cardinals routed the Chicago Cubs 16-3 Friday night.

"That's about the wildest thing I've ever experienced," said Ray Lankford, who hit a three-run homer to cap the first. "Tonight was just one of those games that everything went well."

McGwire went 1-for-4 with a walk and has not homered in 28 at-bats since July 28 against Milwaukee. McGwire, who didn't speak with reporters after the game, was given the day off on Wednesday when the Cardinals played at the Brewers.

Sammy Sosa, second to McGwire with 43 homers, went 0-for-3 with a walk.

St. Louis, which rallied from a 3-0 deficit, had its biggest inning since an 11-run eighth in a 16-8 win over San Francisco on May 9, 1996 — also the last time the Cardinals scored 16 runs. The team record is a 12-run third of a 23-3 win against Philadelphia on Sept. 16, 1926.

"That's baseball," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said. "You see the top half like that — and you get the 11 spot. I still don't understand it."

It was the biggest inning against Chicago since a 12-run fifth during a 17-15 loss to Montreal at Wrigley Field on Sept. 24, 1985.

Kent Bottenfield (4-5) pitched seven innings allowing three runs — one earned — and five hits. Steve Trachsel (11-6) got just one out, getting pounded for nine runs — seven earned — five hits and three walks.

"I get staked to a three-run lead and I immediately walk the leadoff guy. I'm my own worst enemy," Trachsel said. "I just pitched pretty poorly."

St. Louis sent 15 batters to the plate in the first against Trachsel and Dave Stevens, piling up two singles, three doubles, one homer and four walks. The Cubs also allowed two men to reach on errors.

"After that first inning there was no chance for the offense to come back," Trachsel said.

Kelly, Jordan and Ray Lankford each scored twice in the inning. McGwire started the scoring with a two-run single after Pat Kelly walked and Brian Jordan hit the first of his three doubles. One out later, Fernando Tatis hit an RBI double, and two more runs scored on Trachsel's throwing error to make it 5-3.

■ NL Roundup

Luis Ordaz followed with an RBI single, and Kelly chased Trachsel with a two-run double. Lankford, 2-for-3 with four RBIs, hit a three-run homer, reaching 20 for the fifth season.

"They put the ball in play and found the holes," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "That's just the way it went." St. Louis added three runs in the third, getting a two-run homer from Ron Gant. Jordan had a two-run double in the sixth.

Chicago went ahead 3-0 in the first on Mark Grace's RBI single and a two-run throwing error by McGwire at first.

Cardinals 16, Cubs 3

ST. LOUIS — St. Louis had its biggest offensive outburst of the season with a 11-run first inning, but Mark McGwire remained stuck at 45 homers as the Cardinals routed Chicago.

McGwire went 1-for-4 with a walk and has not homered in 28 at-bats since July 28. Chicago's Sammy Sosa, second to McGwire with 43 homers, was 0-for-3 with a walk.

St. Louis had its biggest inning since an 11-run eighth in a 16-8 win over San Francisco on May 9, 1996. The team record is a 12-run third in a 23-3 victory over Philadelphia on Sept. 16, 1926.

Steve Trachsel (11-6) got just one out, getting pounded for nine runs — seven earned — five hits and three walks. Lankford hit his 20th homer in the inning. Ron Gant homered in the third.

Kent Bottenfield (4-5) pitched seven innings for the victory.

Reds 17, Brewers 0

CINCINNATI — Reggie Sanders, Sean Casey and Aaron Boone hit bases-loaded doubles in a 12-run sixth. It was the largest shutout win in the majors since Florida won 17-0 at Colorado on Sept. 17, 1995.

Cincinnati sent 16 batters to the plate against Brad Woodall (5-6) and two relievers. The Reds got four at-bats with the bases loaded and produced a walk and three doubles as they pushed the lead to 14-0.

It was Cincinnati's biggest inning since it scored 14 times in the first against Houston on Aug. 3, 1989.

Barry Larkin started the big inning with a solo homer. Sanders and Eddie Taubensee hit solo homers in the third.

Pete Harnisch (8-5) got his first victory since June 26.

Diamondbacks 6, Expos 4

MONTREAL — Jay Bell hit his 15th homer, and Andy Fox had a two-run triple as Arizona won for the seventh time in 10 games.

Brian Anderson (8-10) allowed four runs and eight hits in 7 1-3 innings, and Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Shane Andrews homered for Montreal. Javier Vazquez (3-11) took the loss.

Mets 8, Rockies 7

DENVER — Mike Piazza hit his 12th homer in 22 games at Coors Field, driving in three runs as New York beat Colorado.

Piazza, 3-for-5, is 45-for-100 at Coors Field with 37 RBIs. He has 20 homers this year, 11 with the Mets.

John Olerud was 2-for-3 with a three-run double, extending his hitting streak to 21, the most in the NL this season and three short of the team record Hubie Brooks set in 1984. Olerud leads the NL in hitting at .345.

Rick Reed (13-7) allowed seven runs and 12 hits in six innings, and John Franco finished for his 22nd save. Pedro Astacio (10-11) took the loss.

Larry Walker homered for the Rockies.

Dodgers 3, Pirates 1

LOS ANGELES — Brian Bohanon allowed two hits in 7 1-3 innings as Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh to end a three-game losing streak.

Bohanon (5-7) allowed only consecutive one-out doubles in the fourth inning by Manny Martinez and Kevin Young. Antonio Osuna retired both batters he faced, and Jeff Shaw pitched a perfect ninth for his 34th save.

Charles Johnson hit his 16th homer for Los Angeles.

Todd Van Poppel (1-1) took the loss.

Eagle provides Chamblee with lead in Buick

Associated Press

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Brandel Chamblee came to Michigan because he figured it was too hot to hang around home in Arizona. It might be the best move he's ever made.

■ Golf Roundup

Chamblee, seeking his first win on the PGA Tour, used an eagle on the seventh hole — his 16th — Friday to shoot a 4-under-par 68 that left him at 11-under 133 and a stroke ahead of rookie Kent Jones, who shot 67.

Dudley Hart (69) and Phil Blackmar (68) were at 135. Defending champion Vijay Singh (70) was tied with Steve Stricker (67) at 136.

Tiger Woods, starting the day at 1-under 71, eagled No. 1 — his 10th hole — birdied the third and seemed to be making a run after getting to 7-under. But Woods, using Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club as a tune-up for the PGA Championship next week at Redmond, Wash., couldn't keep it going.

He was up and down with two bogeys and a birdie over his final six holes, shooting 68 for 138.

The start of each round has been delayed 30 minutes because of overnight thunderstorms that left the course almost flooded in some areas. Workers used squeegees to push water off the greens early Friday, but some standing water remained in spots around the 7,105-yard course.

Because of the softened conditions, players were allowed to lift, clean and replace shots in the fairways. Usually that would guarantee massive red numbers on this course on which the tournament record is 26-under.

But moist conditions work the other way, too. Approach shots tend to spin back more than usual on wet greens, and that left many players farther from pins than they expected to be. As a result, the birdie barrage was fairly mild.

Chamblee, who shared the first-round lead with J.L. Lewis, used a driver and 3-wood to get within 82 yards of the pin at the par-5 seventh, a 584-yard hole.

"I had 82 yards to the pin, which was perfect because I hit my 60-degree wedge 84 yards," said Chamblee, who has failed to make a penny in three previous tries at Warwick Hills. "I figured I'd hit it two yards past the hole and back it up. That's exactly what it did, and it spun right back into the hole.

"It was pretty exciting, actually."

Jones, who has missed the cut in three of his last four tournaments, rolled in birdie putts of 20 and 30 feet. He also hit a wedge to within 18 inches of the cup, resulting in birdie at the par-5 16th.

"It's been a tough season," Jones said. "There have been a lot of frustrations the last couple of months. It's been a learning experience, this being my first year."

Pepper takes one-stroke lead in Star Bank LPGA

BEAVERCREEK, Ohio — Dottie Pepper shot a scorching 9-under-par 63 to take a one-stroke lead Friday in the opening round of the Star Bank LPGA Classic.

Pepper combined arrow-straight tee shots with precision putting to collect nine birdies on the 6,302-yard, par-72 Country Club of the North course.

"All I tried to keep doing all day was just get further and further under par," Pepper, 32, said. "Everything felt good."

Pepper's career-best 63 was a record for the tournament. Donna Andrews shot a 65 in 1996.

Breathing down Pepper's neck was Meg Mallon at 64, South Korean native Pearl Sinn at 65 and tour veterans Beth Daniel and Judy Dickinson, both at 66. Brandie Burton, who captured last week's du Maurier Classic in Canada, shot a 68.

The players had to weather 90-degree heat and high humidity on the Jack Nicklaus-designed course in this Dayton suburb. However, overnight rain softened the greens and the course earned high marks from the players.

Four of the 14 tournaments Pepper has won since joining the tour in 1987 came in 1996. But she hasn't won since.

Brandel Chamblee hits out of a sand trap on the 9th hole during Friday's second round of the Buick Open at the Warwick Hills Country Club in Grand Blanc, Mich.

Pepper birdied five of the first six holes on the back nine, dropping putts of between 12 and 15 feet. She hit every fairway.

Her only bogey came on the par-3, 187-yard seventh hole, when she three-putted.

Mallon relied on her chip shots to move into second place, including a shot from the woods on the par-4, 464-yard fourth hole that rolled to within 12 feet of the hole. She sank the putt for a birdie.

"That was nice," said Mallon, 35. "That kind of kept my momentum going."

Sinn, who hasn't won a tournament since joining the tour in 1990, combined accurate tee shots with strong putting for eight birdies.

"I've been spending a lot of time out there on the green, practicing," Sinn said. "It seems like that's helping a lot. I'm making a lot of good putts. I'm not making too many mistakes out there."

Sinn, 31, who lives in Long Beach, Calif., collected birdies on four of the first six holes on the back nine. She sank a 25-foot putt on 14 and dropped a 12-foot putt on 15.

The front nine was only a bit less kind.

"I started to skid a little bit," Sinn said. "I pulled my 6-iron on No. 2, went left and over the green, and really didn't have any shot at it. So I just made my bogey."

Rain washes out seniors' opening round

COON RAPIDS, Minn. — Heavy rain didn't hurt the scoring in the opening round of the Coldwell Banker Burnet Senior Classic on Friday, although in the end it was all for naught.

After a one-two punch of rain and lightning washed out the opening round, tournament officials said the 54-hole tournament will be shortened to 36 holes, 18 each Saturday and Sunday.

Brian Henning, the senior tour's vice president of operations, said it was the first washed-out round on the tour since the Bell Atlantic tournament in May 1997.

"The good thing is that unlike the PGA Tour (which requires 54 holes), we only have to get in 36 holes to be an official event," he said.

For Friday's round to have counted, officials said at least half of the field of 78 golfers had to finish. Just 27 golfers were in, with 51 still on the course, when the day's second suspension was called at 4:57 p.m.

With skies still threatening and getting darker, officials made the decision at 6:30 p.m. to terminate the round and wipe out all the day's scores.

Horton, Gale share halfway lead

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland — Former Ryder Cup player Tommy Horton birdied four of the last five holes Friday and shot a 4-under-par 68 for a share of the second-round lead in the Senior British Open.

Horton finished the 36 holes at 140, the same as Australian Terry Gale who had his second straight 70 at the Royal Portrush course.

$100 fee in the 1930s buys golf for life

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tired of paying up to 25 cents for a round of golf, Henry Dehen bought a lifetime pass to Portland's municipal golf courses for $100 in 1935.

The next year, two of his golfing buddies, Louis Rose and Jake DeYoung, did the same.

And the three haven't paid for a round on the Portland courses since, still using the worn and tattered passes they bought more than 60 years ago.

"It was a great investment," Dehen said.

DeYoung, 86, admits he has gotten a lot more out of the pass than he ever imagined. He walks three 18-hole rounds during the week and another nine on Saturday. He even credits the pass for his longevity.

HOOPS: Team U.S.A. will face Russians next

special about this group of guys."

Myers finished with a tournament-high 32, including 15-for-15 free throws. Seven came in the final 4:57 when he hit three foul shots, giving Italy a 73-66 lead, its largest of the game.

Only 4,000 saw the U.S. victory in 18,000-seat Olympic stadium — and maybe a few hundred were Americans, most family and friends. But the players hugged at midcourt like they'd already won a medal, and each used one word to describe their feelings: relief.

Particularly when they looked like they might become the first U.S. team in a world championship in 20 years not to return home with a medal. The U.S. team in 1978 took fifth.

The Americans face a highly experienced Russia team in Saturday's semifinals and, even with a loss, would have a chance at a bronze medal Sunday. A victory would give them a chance to defend the gold the Dream Team won four years ago.

Russia advanced Friday with an 82-67 win over Lithuania as Vassily Karassev had 31 points.

Russia lost to the United States in the gold medal game at the 1994 worlds and Yugoslavia was the silver medalist to the Dream Team at the 1996 Olympics.

"There's all the expectation on us since we got here," said U.S. center Gerard King, who had nine points. "Some people said we wouldn't get there. It's a sigh of relief, but we're not quite there yet."

Alexis, the 34-year-old team leader, answered a question suggesting the Dream Team would have beaten Italy by 30.

"Well, the Dream Team's not here, so you've got to go with what you have," said the former Syracuse player who plays in Germany. "This is what's here and we're doing our best."

The other semifinalists will be Yugoslavia, a 70-62 winner over Argentina, and Greece, a 69-62 winner over Spain.

Chrysler LHS luxury sedan sets new mark with elegant design

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

ATLANTA, Ga. — Look at that stunning new automotive face: A broad and bold egg-crate grille highlighted with flashes of chrome tucks between gleaming headlamp bezels individually articulated in aluminum ripples which sweep rearward across a low hood to the massive expanse of a sharply canted windshield.

It's bold and clearly dramatic, uncommonly fluid and smooth in an unusual oval format with curt prow and exaggerated cabin clustered behind all of that reflective window glass.

It's also downright elegant in form and shape and tone, the slickest design yet for a big 4-door car.

Chrysler's LHS full-size sedan, revealing this sophisticated new exterior form and riding on a stiff new chassis which carries a powerful new engine and the comforts of a luxury car, returns as a 1999 model in second generational design following a year's absence.

This interpretation of LHS represents the third in a triad of new sedans bearing the winged badge of Chrysler, with all cast from the so-called LH platform.

The trio — mid-size Concorde, the new full-size performance flagship 300M plus a revised LHS luxury sedan — share some mechanical components but maintain separate and unique traits as Chrysler elevates both the quality and quantity of the line.

All trace to the 1998 remake of Chrysler's mid-size Concorde sedan drawn from the LH chassis.

The original LH cars — Chrysler Concorde and Dodge Intrepid — debuted in 1993 promoting cab-forward architecture mated to strong engines and responsive handling systems. Then in 1994 the LHS performance spin-off from a New Yorker label appeared in a stretched version of the Concorde as a new full-size Chrysler sedan.

New Yorker subsequently vanished in favor of LHS.

Now, the new LHS arrives, and it's a bold step beyond the former edition.

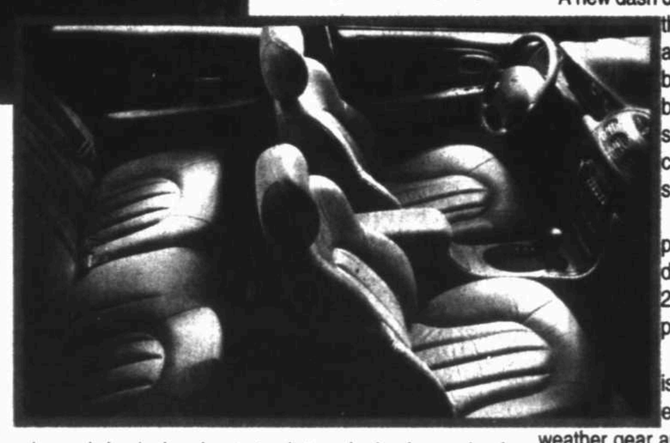
Using the same stretched platform of 300M and the same powerful V6 engine, LHS as an expanded version of Concorde provides a tilt toward refined luxury with cushy ride quality and deluxe appointments — from standard leather-clad seats with power controls and dazzling instruments to mechanical gear like traction control and anti-lock brakes.

Besides platform, components shared by Concorde and LHS include door panels, roof and front fenders.

Compared against Concorde's chassis, LHS was fortified at critical flex points to create a stiffer structure that generates smoother ride sensations.

Chassis extends in length and width beyond normal measures, and wheels pin to corners of the rectangular plan. The wide track and long wheelbase work together to forge a stable foundation. To the stiff unibody frame independent suspension components attach to set up reactive and adaptive behavioral characteristics.

Front suspension components — isolated in a special hydroformed cradle — include an iso-strut tied to single-pivot lower control arm and tension strut. In the rear, a multi-link Chapman strut mounts to a new aluminum cross member. Coil springs and integral gas-charged shock absorbers stand at each aluminum wheel, with Goodyear Eagle R-rated tires exaggerated to 17 inches.



Recent driving tests in LHS demonstrated that a big car can still be lively and easy to maneuver.

Does a big car like LHS need V8 power?

Apparently not: The aluminum V6 that propels LHS — a technologically advanced 3.5-liter plant with single cam on top and four valves in each cylinder — applies muscular torque across a broad spectrum of engine speeds.

Output runs high to 253 hp, yet the rig operates on regular gas and earns good fuel economy figures.

Couple the strength of this engine to light-weight aluminum used in engine and suspension, even structural components like the hood, and LHS feels quite active with a sizable power-to-weight ratio.

The engine teams with a new electronically-controlled automatic 4-speed transmission that marks a significant improvement over previous Chrysler shifters. It's quiet and efficient when running through gears, and not intrusive.

A sophisticated exterior design theme with refined and graceful curves continues inside LHS to an airy cabin with luxurious appointments and room for five adults on plush leather seats.

Front buckets flank a center console in front of a back bench for three with an access door into the expansive trunk. Despite the low roofline, adults riding in back share more than adequate headroom and enough floor space to cross legs comfortably.

A new dash design anchored with magnesium brace for the steering column has concealed airbags and analog instruments with handsome black-on-white graphics ringed in chrome bezels. The typeface employed on speedometer and tachometer looks like it came from some deluxe machine from the stylish automotive era of the 1930s.

Standard equipment for LHS extends from power controls for seats and windows and doors to automatic climate system and a 240-watt Infinity audio with nine speakers plus cassette deck and CD player.

Configured in a single trim style, the car is so complete that options narrow to a power moonroof, upgraded audio system, cold weather gear and special chrome wheels.

Although it reaches market in an elegant package with superior mechanical systems and fine appointments, LHS honest pricing to the entry point of $28,995. ■

Baja Baby Ranger concept vehicle designed for adventure

If you're the adventurous type who enjoys going places no one has gone before, Ford has a new concept vehicle designed to get you there and back. The Ford Baja Baby Ranger concept vehicle is based on the off-highway capabilities of the '98 Ranger 4X4, only it's a lot more extreme than any Ranger you've ever seen before.

"Ford Tough" Theme

The "theme" Ford engineers used to designed the Baja Baby was to mix the "Built Ford Tough" integrity with a self-assured outdoor attitude, creating an all-terrain vehicle than can handle any situation. They started with a standard cab, short bed '98 Ranger 4X4. DST Industries transformed the concept team's drawings into a functional vehicle.

While many of the modifications to the Baja Baby required custom fabrication, a variety of off-the-shelf aftermarket accessories were incorporated to give the design real-world credibility. For example, a Borla cat-back stainless steel exhaust system can be added to any Ranger.

At a glance, the Baja Baby sports an aggressive stance with a tall look, due in large part to the suspension components from Trail Master. The 4-inch lift allowed the design team to incorporate 20-inch B.F. Goodrich Proto/TA off-road tires on 20X9-inch one-off alloy wheels. Oversized integrated wheel flares were fabricated to cover the larger-than-life wheel and tire combination.

Electric Winch Assist

The front of the Baja Baby is protected by a custom grille guard with an integrated skid plate that includes a Warn winch. Square stock tubing was used to fabricate all the exterior accessories, including the side steps and the rear exo-structure.

The bed mounted exo-structure is also a functional part of the overall design. It allows the Baja Baby to carry a matching dirt bike in a specially designed cage without intruding on bed space.

The top rear bar incorporates a small Warn utility winch to hoist the dirt bike into place or lift heavy cargo into the bed. Another rear-mounted Warn winch allows the Baja Baby to pull from either direction.

A canvas cover is mounted to the inside of the exo-structure to protect camping gear stored inside the bed. The structure serves as a mounting point for both fuel and fresh water containers and Marvel Communications/Everhardt Antennas for the on-board communications system. In addition to the two-way radios, the Baja Baby also features a Magellan portable GPS to guide the way in and out of those remote off-road sites.

For night operation, a bank of CATZ high performance driving lights from FET, USA are built into the integral light bar.

Tool Boxes Galore!

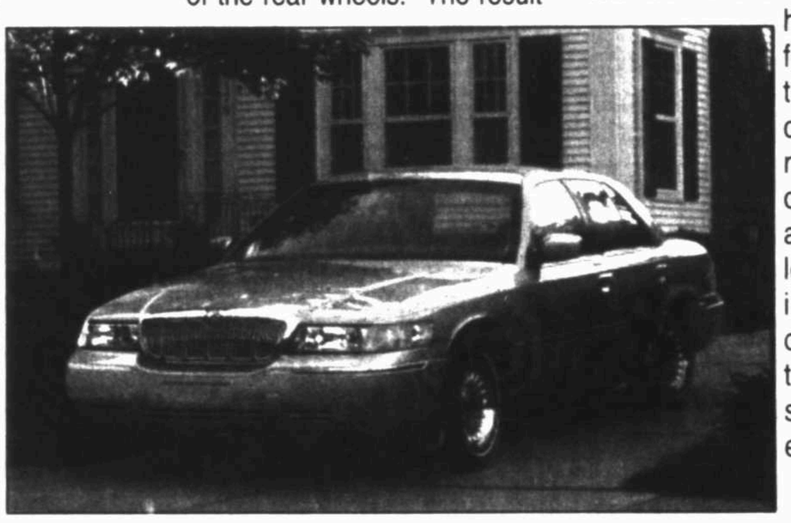
Such a vehicle would be incomplete with a tool box. The Baja Baby has got 'em, with slide-out tool boxes built into the top of the bed sides. Like most concept vehicles, the Baja Baby isn't likely to make it's way into the mainstream production line. However, don't be surprised if some of its features are included on future Ford truck and SUV models.

ROADWORTHY

BY KEN CHESTER, J

Interstate Iron
'98 Mercury Grand Marquis LS sedan

The Ford Motor Company enjoys an exclusive franchise as the only domestic manufacturer of the large, traditional rear drive American sedan. The good news is that while the overall numbers of traditional "Detroit Iron" have dwindled in recent years, the folks at the blue oval saw fit to continue its improvement and evolution. I recently drove a new '98 Mercury Grand Marquis LS to see how far it has progressed.



Just the Right Refinements

Built in St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada alongside its mechanical twin, the Ford Crown Victoria, the large rear drive, body-on-frame Mercury boasts new sheetmetal and a host of improvements for the 1998 model year. Available in GS and LS models, the Grand Marquis is powered by a refined 4.6L SOHC V-8 engine, which cranks out 200 horsepower @ 4,250 rpm and 265 ft-lbs of torque @ 3,000 rpm. This wonderful powerplant is bolted to a AOD-E four-speed automatic transmission.

On the road, the large Mercury was nimble and responsive due in part to the new Watt's linkage rear suspension. This new system is specifically designed to provide more direct, and therefore stiffer, lateral location of the rear wheels. The result of this improvement is the increase of lateral stiffness nearly 300 percent — greatly reducing the sedan's body motion in cross winds and over jarring roads. On center feel is also improved, reducing the amount of steering corrections necessary to maintain a straight, stable path. The Grand Marquis exhibited world class handling and control.

Inside the cabin, layout of displays and controls are excellent and the driver's view of the road is one of the best that I have experienced. At speed, the cabin was very, very quiet, coddling driver and passengers in a secure and safe environment. Seating front and rear is very comfortable as well, with plenty of room for all. The trunk is huge, with a low lift-over height. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked. I have just a few gripes: there is no cupholder for rear seat occupants and the anti-lock braking/traction control system is not standard equipment.

By the Numbers

Standard safety features include: dual airbags, dynamic side-impact protection, four wheel disc brakes and SecuriLockô anti-theft system. Optional safety features includes four wheel anti-lock brakes w/traction assist ($775). EPA fuel economy for the Grand Marquis is 17 city/25 highway. Retail sticker prices range from $22,090 for the GS to $23,990 for the LS model. Destination charge adds $605. Supplies are good and there is no rebate.

Stanton's Century of Grace

First Baptist Church, a 'Hospital for Sinners,' turns 100

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON — "What do you have to do to be saved?" the preacher asked the sweet lad.

"Sin," the boy replied in his innocence.

"What do you have to do to go to Heaven?" the preacher, still persistent, inquired of the boy.

"Die."

Meanwhile, many believers called Christians regularly go to hallowed edifices called churches to worship their God, to deal with worldly problems, to seek peace on Earth, and to pursue an afterlife in Heaven.

And generations of people, youngsters and oldsters alike, in Stanton and elsewhere in Martin County have been attending the First Baptist Church of Stanton for 100 years in life's circuitous journey.

"Church is not a society for sophisticated saints," figured the Rev. David Harp, the 41-year-old pastor of the church. "It's a hospital for sinners."

And toward the people's spiritual wellness and in praise of God, the glory, grace, and love of Jesus Christ will be acclaimed in sermons and songs on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday in a revival that celebrates the 100th anniversary of the community's First Baptist Church.

"Jesus Christ meets our needs," Harp said. "As we look to Him and trust Him and depend upon Him, we find our strength."

The church was organized in August 1898 eight years after the rural community shucked its Marienfeld name and took on Stanton.

Three of the church's past pastors and a former interim pastor will preach sermons during the three-day celebration that is keyed to the theme "Cherishing Our Past and Looking Toward a Challenging Future."

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE ...
A CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST

Jack Lawrence is chairman of the board of directors at Midland's First Church of Christ Scientist, a religion that counts about 100 Midlanders among its members. His wife, Alice, is a librarian of the local Christian Science Reading Room, 201 W. Wall. In this installment of our recurring series, "What it means to be ... " Religion Page Editor Jimmy Patterson talked with Mr. Lawrence about Christian Science.

What is Christian Science?

Christian Science was found by Mary Baker Eddy in the 19th century, about 1866, when she had her first healing in Christian science. It took her until about 1875 to get her textbook, Science and Health, finished. To quote her, she wanted a religion that would re-introduce the lost, primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing, and this means literally healing; physical healing, not just moral and spiritual healing, but the whole ball of wax. From that beginning, she went on and they got the church organized about 1879. Miss Eddy was a member of the Congregationalist church in her early years. She had organized along congregational lines and saw that it needed a different organization, so in the 1890s it was reorganized in its present form. We have what we call a branch church here in Midland; the Mother Church and the international headquarters is in Boston.

(Inter)Faith in Action:

San Antonio's COPS brings improvements, empowerment

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

In the mid 1970s, Beatrice Cortez was a self-described housewife in San Antonio. Her minister told her one day about Community Members Organized for Public Service, or COPS, an interfaith organization that was working for change in the minority neighborhoods of her hometown.

Impressed by the group's goals and principles, Ms. Cortez couldn't sign up soon enough, and from that day forward, her life was changed.

Ms. Cortez worked with other Hispanic "leaders" as they are referred to in the area foundation structure, to help change the political system in San Antonio from at-large to single-member district representation. The move had a profound impact on the minority community, but it was just the start of what is now viewed as a model system for other similar area organizations that are popping up around the state.

In its initial stages, the West Texas Organizing Strategy is setting up shop in Midland-Odessa to empower the poor of the communities in West Texas and to give a voice to people who may not otherwise have one in local government. Another bi-product of the organization is that it unites people in the community who may not have had the opportunity to work together for the betterment of their hometown.

WTOS is in its formative stages, but has attracted Christians, Catholics, Hispanics, African-Americans and Caucasians alike. Tuesday, it received the endorsement of The Rev. Michael Pfeifer, bishop of the diocese of San Angelo, who presented the organization with a $1,000 donation.

"I had always been a church leader and a PTA leader," Ms. Cortez said, "but because I was so

Youth quake — independent church ministers to teenagers

By Tara Dooley
Associated Press

HURST — Behind the covered windows of a Pipeline Road storefront, a room full of teens, hands in the air, sways to the sounds of young men jamming on guitars, drums and electronic keyboards.

Flashes of red, green, pink and blue shoot through the darkened room. The glow of a large video screen offers minimal lighting and a second glance at the band. A disco ball twirls slowly over the stage.

More than 85 teens wearing tank tops, body piercings and a rainbow of hair colors have filed into rows of folding chairs for an experience that 15-year-old Jeremy Lyne of North Richland Hills says has "pretty much changed my life."

Although the scene of Youth WAVE church in Hurst may owe some of its flavoring to musical grunge gurus, the smell of teen spirit exudes no sourness here. In this independent church that ministers to 13- to 25-year-olds, pastors Spencer and Cyndy Nordyke purposefully channel this teen spirit as an expression of Christian spirituality.

"We're reaching out to a group that has their own language, their own dress," Spencer Nordyke said. "We're not trying to pull kids out of the

Looking back on a life filled with purpose

Let's assume that you are celebrating your 95th birthday. Your family is there, as well as your dearest friends. You have had a great and productive life. You look back and start reflecting about who you have become, what you have stood for and those you have loved and served. You also had your share of challenges, but they made you wiser and stronger.

Kituku

In your mind, think of why this day is special? What are the surrounding circumstances? How is your physical appearance? What expression predominates your face and eyes? At this moment, what are your deepest feelings and thoughts? Through the years, what has been important in your life?

Now, it is time for those present to say something about you. What would you like each to say? Think of other people who might be there: perhaps an employer, neighbors, co-workers, fellow civic organization members or church members.

After you complete the above exercise, you are well on your way to formulating your mission statement that is so unique, there is none like it. As you went through the mental exercise, you realized that people were a central part of your life. People brought happiness into your life, encouragement and a sense of belonging. They helped you realize your vision and goals, and they were there when you needed support and understanding.

They taught you life lessons and held your hand from the bottom of your "social and emotional valleys," when you asked yourself, "What could I have done that I didn't do?" People were there to console and uplift you. When you asked, "Why me?" you were comforted by the knowledge that other people had undergone the same experience; therefore, you knew you could handle your situation, too. When your future was blurred with questions like, "How can I handle the emotional pain?" and "What does the future hold for me, now that life will never be the same?" somebody provided a shoulder for you to lean on as you built hope for a new beginning.

All that matters in life is relationships. Once, I heard that, "No one at his or her deathbed wishes he or she had spent more time in the office." It's not the project we accomplish, but the people with whom we accomplish the projects that is essential in life.

People are the greatest resource God has given each one of us. My mother taught me that people will always have a way of figuring solutions for other people's concerns or problems. How true that is! I have shared my wild dreams with some people who have different expertise only to find that they knew how I could overcome whatever obstacles I had envisioned.

In his book, Think and Grow Rich, Napoleon Hill says that we should treat everybody the way we would treat an uncle who is a millionaire, and we would like him to pass a part of his will to us. Hebrews 12: 14 admonishes us to "fellow peace with all men and holiness without which no one man shall see God."

The second thing to look back to is our contribution to the world. The starting point is looking at the future. In our minds, we create the future we want to live in. Remember, "where there is no vision, the people perish" (Proverbs 29: 18). Our vision is an expanded purpose that leads to a more focused orientation. It is the deepest expression of what we want, ducts mass. Ours is called a lesson sermon. We work from two books. Miss Eddy ordained the King James Version of the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures. They are, quote, the pastor of the Christian Science Church. This is where you go for consultation, inspiration and healing. These textbooks form the major part of our church service. Every week we have what we call a lesson sermon. The first reader reads from a textbook, and then we go into six sections from the lesson. One person reads from the Bible and then what we call correlative passages are read from the textbook. This is all (developed) by a Bible lesson committee in Boston.

SCIENCE: Faith is in no way connected to Scientology

Is the Church of Scientology affiliated with the Church of Christian Science?

We are not in any way connected to the Church of Scientology. Christian Science is over 100 years old.

What is the "Rule for Motive and Acts"?

The Rule for Motive and Acts states that, "Neither animosity nor mere personal attachment should impel the motives or acts of the members of the Mother Church. In science, divine love alone governs man, and a Christian Scientist reflects the sweet amenities of love in true brotherliness, charitableness and forgiveness. The members of this church should daily watch and pray to be delivered from all evil from prophesying, judging, condemning, counseling, influencing or being influenced erroneously." Miss Eddy stipulated that that would be read the first Sunday of each month by the first reader. It's a bylaw, actually, of the church.

'We feel, just as Miss Eddy said, that we should follow Christ Jesus's example. He heals spritually. He didn't do it by the Hippocratic Oath.'

— Jack Lawrence, on Christian Science's practice of Christian healing.

What is the most common misconception about the Church of Christian Science?

What I perceive, where we feel we've had bad press over the years, is our treatment of our children and that we hold them hostage to our religion, which is anything but the truth.

Why do people feel that way?

Well, I guess where there have been some unsuccessful healings, they catch the press' attention easier than thousands of positive healings. We've raised three sons in our religion. We had medical attendants for childbirth but we've just defended our regular Christian Science healings for healing their colds and rashes and whatever.

Even more serious ailments as well?

Yes, one of our sons was healed of asthma.

No medicines, no antibiotics? Is that a misconception or is that reality?

No, that's a valid perception. It's not like it is someone holding it away from you. It all has to be voluntary. If you're looking for a mental healing method, the whole mind has to be right to make it happen. We feel, just as Miss Eddy said, we should follow Christ Jesus's example. He heals spiritually. He didn't do it by the Hippocratic Oath. We feel literally we're to go and do likewise. At the same time that I talk about our reliance on Christian and spiritual healing I would emphasize that there's no compulsion to do that. People are perfectly free to pick whatever form of help they feel would do them best. But we feel that what we are working with is a spiritual means and if your dependence is on a material means, you're blocking the spiritual means. The two are sort of incompatible. But we have no quarrel with those who choose conventional medicine.

What are your beliefs on prayer?

If you depend on prayer for your healing, prayer is very vital, very personal with God. Prayer is often just a declarative thing to acknowledge God's perfection, and God's beauty and completeness and we are reflections of God. This is our way of linking God and what leads us to healing is through prayer. As mortals we are not perfect. It's God's perfection we are seeking to perfect and come into contact with. But I guess we hasten to say that it's not a pleading with God to change some condition. Our thought has to be aligned with God's perfection. It's never less than perfection, it's always present and the imperfection or the malady is the mis-perception that has to be straightened out through prayer, so prayer is very vital.

How do you differ from other Christian religions?

We don't deify Jesus. He is a man who came to show us the Christ and he's the link between divinity and humanity through the Christliness that he taught us all. But he was really showing us the truth about ourselves. He's not the only thing that's Christly, we all have the potential within us.

Is he viewed as the Savior by Christian Scientists?

Definitely. He had virgin birth and he had a spiritual origin.

Was Jesus without sin?

Yes. Tempted at all points, like as we are, yet without sin. He showed us how to be the sinless man. I guess the thing I get put out with about deifying is it puts Him up on a pedestal and it gives the rest of us an excuse to cop out and say, 'Well, we'll never reach that perfection he had.' He's elevated all right, but he's up on the teaching platform showing us how to do it.

What is a Reading Room?

It's kind of our window on the community. A place where people can come in and seek spiritual refuge in the middle of a busy community. We have a lot of Biblical reference books, books to study the lessons from and our own Christian Science literature. It's not just another Christian bookstore. We emphasize Christian Science publishers.

COPS: Similar efforts prove to be success in Dallas, San Antonio scared to get out into the public, I didn't feel like I would ever learn about our environment if it wasn't for the pastors challenging me to do this.

"I always considered myself a church-going person and I acted that out by teaching Catholic doctrine to children and helping at festivals, but I had never had my faith tested as much as I did when I had to go out and act out my faith in public. '

COPS, Ms. Cortez said, teaches those involved more about what Christ and St. Paul did.

"It is what pastors try to teach us every week," she said. "To me we're living the Gospel. I've said this many, many times: it was the church, through COPS, that strengthened my faith.

COPS didn't stop with empowering minorities and bringing change to the San Antonio political system.

The organization has also trained workers and insisted that both existing and new businesses in San Antonio use those workers and pay them a living wage, or one that is over the poverty level; it has helped solve drainage problems in low income neighborhoods brought on when San Antonio expanded northward into the Hill Country, and most recently it has influenced the city's tax abatement policy; additionally, it has begun an education partnership and an after-school study program with the San Antonio Independent School District.

"Right now, we are trying to get the city to set up a human development fund," Ms. Cortez said. "We put money into the fund and use the interest to reach out and do more and reach more people to go into training programs in COPS.

When Rev. Pfeifer visited St. Anthony's Church in Odessa Tuesday, he invoked the names of both St. James and the U. S . Catholic Bishops to get his point across as to the need for such a strategy in West Texas.

"St. James, in his inspiring and challenging letter, makes it clear that our faith needs to have action to it," Pfeifer said. "In their letter, 'Economic Justice for All,' the U.S. Catholic Bishops give a personal invitation to use the power of our faith, the resources of the economy and the opportunities of democracy 'to better shape a society that better protects the dignity and basic rights of our sisters and brothers.' "

Prior to joining COPS, Ms. Cortez said the only place she ever used power was in her own house.

"I was a housewife," she said, "and I had no idea how the city did business or how the schools were run. I knew nothing about power. I was using it in the house to get things done but I had never recognized it as a tool to use in the community to make things better for our families."

Relationships with pastors, PTA, school officials and local politicians are vital if neighborhood improvements are ever to be realized.

"The kids in our neighborhood needed a park," Ms. Cortez said, "so we said, 'Why don't we develop a park?' Six parishes got together and said, 'We want a park with 3-4 basketball courts, some baseball diamonds, an indoor gym, barbecue pits and a covered pavilion with tables.' Now we have Rosedale Park, a humongous park on the west side."

Similar projects have been completed through the work of the Dallas Interfaith Council, where the Rev. Gerald Britt serves as the group's organizer.

Job training, an after-school program, neighborhood redevelopments, and a housing initiative are but four of the projects that have been completed or are ongoing in Dallas.

"We work wherever people want to organize," Britt said. "We tend to focus (on the minority neighborhoods) but we are willing to organize around any issues where people can build a constituency.

Namely, two needs have been recognized and groups formed in affluent, predominantly white Plano.

The group, which has 4,000 leaders, has also helped both Republicans and Democrats "see the benefit of working with citizens," Britt said.

Britt, pastor of the African-American New Mt. Moriah Baptist Church in South Dallas, said through all the good the Dallas Interfaith Council has accomplished, all the change it has brought, all the self-esteem it has raised, there is one thing the group considers it grandest accomplishment.

"Our greatest success is in the organizing of leaders that had previously not been working in the public. People who have led successful lives but who are not traditionally thought of as leaders. And these are people who cross racial, class and denominational lines and have recognized the importance of one another."

Or as Clare Petersberger, minister at Midland's Unitarian Universalist Church and a WTOS leader said, "This is about getting critical masses working together on common problems and their solutions. It's not just one person who decides and it's not just one person who can make a difference.

"We are developing relationships that otherwise would not exist, because we tend to stay with people we know, whether it be in our churches or in our neighborhoods. And this is an opportunity to reach out to get to know people we would otherwise not get to know and what concerns them and how our concerns are similar."

STANTON: Regular attendance now at 300 worshipers

(From 1E)

Preaching at the 11 a.m. Sunday revival service will be the Rev. Tim Swihart, who pastored the church in the early 1990s and who today is a missionary in South Korea.

The 6 p.m. Sunday service will be led by Dr. James Shields, from time to time the church's interim pastor, who is professor of theology at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene and former Howard Payne University professor at Brownwood.

The Rev. Bill Uhlman, who pastored the church in the 1960s and who now lives in Alabama, will preach Monday's noon and 7:30 p.m. revival services.

And the Rev. Warren Hall, who pastored the church in the early 1970s and who now lives in the Dallas area, will lead Tuesday's noon and 7:30 p.m. services.

Harp, who worked in orchestrating the revival, noted that Mike Harris is the church's minister of music and minister to senior adults. The church's incoming youth minister is Hoop Harper of Kentucky.

Stanton's First Baptist Church was organized 100 years ago on site of the old Union Church following a revival that was conducted by the Rev. J.R. Burkett, then pastor of Midland's First Baptist Church, and by the Rev. G.H.M. Wilson, who became the church's first pastor, according to a church booklet on history of the church.

The church's six charter members, according to church history, were Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Smith, Leman Glasscock, and Mrs. J.H. Epley.

Early services were held in a Union Church building on the site of the present steepled brick church building just west of the Martin County Courthouse. A wooden church was built in 1906. Sunday School rooms were added later. And "The Annex" was constructed in 1936 for additional classrooms.

The present church building was constructed in 1948 and expanded later, although the congregation had voted to enter a building program seven years earlier — on Dec. 7, 1941. But that day, a Sunday, was "Pearl Harbor Day" when the United States was plunged headlong into World War II, which ended in 1945. The building was put on hold until after America's and the Allies' victory over the Axis powers.

Dr. Rupert Richardson, then president of Hardin-Simmons University, preached the dedicatory message on Dec. 5, 1948, when services were first held in the pillared building.

One-hundred years after the founding of the church, the Sunday main worship service attracts about 300 worshipers, and Sunday School draws about 225 youngsters and adults.

"The focus of our church (in the 1990s) has been on missions around the world," said Harp, who noted that the church sponsors or has sponsored lay ministers of the Gospel and of good works to Japan, Russia, and Czechoslovakia.

In its Texas missionary work, the church has adopted the Iglesia Bautista Emmanuel Church in Presidio near the Rio Grande and helped to build a church building there.

"We've got some guys going over Labor Day weekend to help start another project down there," he said.

On the home-front, "I think people in town look to our church for spiritual direction," Harp said. "That's what we are here for, obviously."

In helping to serve the community's needy people, Harp noted, for example, that the church staff and lay ministers "work with" Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport in a "behind-the-scenes ministry" to help people who are in need of food, clothing, shelter, spiritual counseling, and emotional support.

While Stanton is a strong farming-ranching Christian community of about 2,500 people, "We've got a lot of unchurched people here," Harp said. (All told, about 5,000 people live in the county.)

Throughout the year, the Baptists, "preacher included," form a ministry team, which "is to get out into the community and be among the people and developing (Christian) relationships.

"Whether it's over a cup of coffee or at the post office," Harp said, "I have a chance to minister through relationships."

The church also has a television ministry for the homebound citizens.

And periodically, many of Stanton's Christians, ir cluding Baptists and Methodists, "come together" for the singing of old gospel-music standards.

"In a small community like this, people tend to rally together," Harp said. "They really do. It's a great town as far as people rallying together. Of course, everybody knows everybody. That's good, too."

A premier example of that was last year when Stanton High School's Buffaloes won the Texas State 2A Football Championship.

"We had a really super year with a state championship in football," said Harp, who pastored churches at Big Spring, Mineral Wells, and Quanah before he and his family, including his schoolteacher-wife, Andrea, moved to Stanton in the mid-1990s.

The church uplifts the community's students, teachers, and school administrators. Last year, for instance, the church honored the community's educators and furnished school supplies for children whose families couldn't afford to buy them.

And while the students are so deeply involved in their schoolwork and activities such as sports, band, and University Interscholastic League (UIL) academic events, Harp said that "the biggest challenge is working with the kids and just keeping everybody focused on spiritual things."

In the economic realm, "Last year we had great (cotton) crops" of bumper-crop proportions largely due to generous and timely rains.

However, due to the 1998 drought, "This year is pretty rough" on the farmers, the ranchers, the businesses which largely depend on good crops and livestock, the community as a whole, and the church.

"When the farming is not good, that reflects on the business people," he said. "We started out the year ... really doing great" in wake of the healthy 1997 cotton crop. Now that the drought is forcing a meager 1998 crop on the community, "It's pretty tight. Our folks are pretty faithful (in supporting the church and its missions). Our people pretty much catch up.

"Next year by this time, if we don't get a bunch of rain, it's going to really be tight."

In drought or in abundance, the Gospel changes not.

"My favorite Scripture is the one I'm working on this Sunday," Harp noted.

While his sermons vary in text, the message is constant: The saving grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, who "came to fulfill the law" as reflected in the Ten Commandments, which Harp developed into a series of sermons.

As Stanton's First Baptist Church celebrates its centennial, Harp noted that "The biggest blessing is just the fact the Christian people here really rally together to support one another."

At this restaurant, diners decide what to pay

By Pat Leisner
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — Paul Gonzalez eats a pita sandwich in an unlikely setting. Nearby hangs a huge cross with a crown of thorns protruding from the stained pine.

"There's not only food for the body, but food for the soul here. And I'm not a religious person personally," says Gonzalez over lunch at St. Francis Cafe.

Diners break bread amid statues of Jesus and the Virgin Mary, a collection of religious artwork and spiritual music. But that's not all that sets this restaurant apart.

There is no bill.

Customers receive an envelope for a donation.

Owners Lisa and Bruce Sizemore have been in business for 20 months, sometimes accepting a few coins — or less — for their homemade soups, salads and sandwiches and full dinners. It's been, they say, a struggle.

"I've seen miracles here — just the fact that we're open," says Sizemore. "Every time we get to the bottom of the barrel, something has happened."

Now developers plan a multiscreen theater on the site in Ybor City, a trendy area of nightclubs that borders one of the city's poorest neighborhoods. The cafe must close in September.

The couple have put their life savings into the cafe and their trust in God. They hope to relocate to a site nearby.

"I thought it was going to be a cafe-slash-ministry, but it turned out to be a ministry-slash-cafe," Sizemore says.

A former sheet metal worker, Sizemore has no prior experience with restaurants. "I was hoodwinked and shanghaied," the 43-year-old says with a laugh.

Mrs. Sizemore, 41, abandoned nursing to work as the chef. While he talks, she peels potatoes in the tiny kitchen.

The menu changes as the spirit moves them: soups "prayerfully prepared" and hearty salads, including "render unto Caesar, Caesar salad" and the "Greek Orthodox salad." And consider the "converts": Any salad can become a sandwich on pita.

> 'I love this place. I'm uplifted every time I come in. I've brought people here from all over, and everybody leaves feeling rich.'
> — Paul Gonzalez, nationally syndicated radio host, on lunch at St. Francis Cafe.

Sandwiches are fat; desserts indulging, homemade cheese cake and baklava. Dinners vary daily from coq au vin; poached salmon in a wine, butter and lemon sauce; perhaps shrimp with Portobello mushrooms and peppers over pasta.

Success, says Sizemore, comes on two levels. "On a spiritual level, we have received many blessings and been able to help people. Financially, we have failed miserably."

Sometimes people pay more than their share; other times the envelope is empty. More often, patrons come up with a modest amount. Recently, a group of workers came in, ate well and left 50 cents total. Later in the day, one man came back to pay, saying he felt guilty.

The restaurant also feeds the needy, regardless of their ability to pay. After lunch on certain days, the homeless and penniless are welcomed.

Business at the 70-seat eatery is mostly by word of mouth. Many customers are regulars. They talk of gourmet fare, friendly proprietors, soothing atmosphere.

"This isn't like a restaurant, it's like a church," says supermarket clerk Jason Brown.

"I love this place," says Gonzalez, host of a nationally syndicated radio talk show. "I'm uplifted every time I come in. I've brought people here from all over, and everybody leaves feeling rich."

College student David Gunter is touched by the sincerity and love.

"They cater to people who can afford it and to people who can't," he says. "And everybody gets a quality meal."

St. Francis Cafe is in the heart of Tampa's Ybor City, which prospered a century ago as cigar factories rolled out millions of stogies a year.

Today the factories have been replaced by art galleries, gargoyle shops, antiques collections, gay bars and controversial rave clubs where teens dance till sunrise.

The contrast between street chaos and cafe calm is striking to Dervea Reilly. "There's a weird dynamic in Ybor City," says the architectural student. "And this place kind of bridges it."

The cafe was the idea of Mrs. Sizemore, who converted to Catholicism 12 years ago. "Maybe I'm called to stir a pot," she says. "We touch souls not by our words, but by our witness."

The Sizemores' daughter Cassy and her friend wait tables. When the last dishwasher left, a homeless man asked for the job and stayed.

"We have learned so much," says Mrs. Sizemore. "The business end is the scariest part. But that is part of the Franciscan way. St. Francis loved the poor and embraced poverty."

One wall displays a mural of the saint who founded the Franciscan order of friars centuries ago. It was airbrushed by an Ybor youngster who plied his art in bars and pestered Mrs. Sizemore.

"Street kids, that's the draw of my heart," she says.

Adds her husband: "I'm not nearly as religious as my wife, but I've gone up a bunch on the faith meter. I'm beginning to believe God has a purpose for us being here."

South remains a religious stronghold

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The South remains a religious bastion where nearly everyone believes in God and almost half think prayer heals, according to a poll conducted by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The poll was conducted in the spring by the university's Institute for Research in Social Science. It is based on telephone interviews with 844 adults in 12 Southern states and 413 adults in the other states and has an error margin of 4 percentage points for Southerners surveyed and 5 percentage points for others.

Results show 88 percent of Southerners believe in God, compared with 78 percent of other Americans. Ninety percent of Southerners believe in answered prayers, compared with 80 percent of non-Southerners. And 46 percent of Southerners believe they have been healed by prayer, compared with 28 percent of others.

Both groups polled reject the notion of ghosts, reincarnation and astrology's role in their future.

Spirituality on a roll, thanks to drums

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The sound of drums has drawn crowds to quasi-spiritual services on Sunday afternoons.

For the past four years, even in winter snow, a few die-hard musicians have huddled under a pavilion in Liberty Park, strumming guitars, rattling maracas and beating bongos and congas.

Born on a surge of Generation X-ers' nostalgia for the 1960s and '70s, the park's drum circle has become a haven for counterculture neo-hippies, skinheads, minorities, the homeless and old hippies.

Music starts around noon, or whenever more than one drummer arrives. It wraps up when the last drum leaves, usually at 7 or 8 p.m.

Some of the congregants pick up a few dollars along with spirituality. One young woman sells backless tops, hemp bracelets and bongs. Others braid hair for a fee or make and sell daisy chain bead bracelets.

Susan Cottler, Westminster College history professor and pop-culture observer, said the gathering is evidence of a search for community.

"The '90s really lack a sense of direction," Cottler says. "We're a little more lost than in past decades. People are finding their way back to something that feels familiar."

YOUTH: Teens feel free to be themselves at Hurst church

church. We are trying to provide a nontraditional setting for kids to come into."

Reaching out to teens has long been a goal for many church leaders, who have responded by offering special Sunday school classes, Wednesday evening prayer meetings and socials. For youth pastors of many denominations, the goal remains much the same: provide religious leadership and education for youths who are making life decisions as they feel their way through the secular and spiritual worlds.

But increasingly, church leaders are expanding youth programs beyond religious education and the occasional ice cream social or trip to a Rangers game, youth ministers say. A calendar of events for youths can include a summer full of eye-opening mission trips, weekend retreats, volunteer work and leadership training. In some churches, the result has been a renewed emphasis on youth ministry.

"I think there is very definitely a new interest in it," said Philip H. Briggs, distinguished professor of student ministries at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

The desire for religion geared to youths comes in part from teens themselves, who appear to be very much included in a national religious awakening of their baby boomer parents, clergy say.

"They are really digging spiritually," said Betsy Godbold, associate pastor of White's Chapel United Methodist Church in Southlake. "We are going to have to meet that challenge to provide programs that meet the spiritual needs of these kids. It can't be just lightweight stuff."

More than 350 youths are on the roster at White's Chapel United Methodist Church, and about one-third of the ministry during the week is geared to them, said the Rev. Marty Dunbar, who oversees youth programs.

Not far from the Southlake church, Metroplex Covenant Church in Colleyville offers a youth group, Crossfire. In addition to a Wednesday night worship service in which youth pastor B. Marc Bolling plays the electric guitar with the band, members of Crossfire can take part in many weekly events. They can join prayer team meetings, work on the group's Web site, and join the dance or drama teams. Crossfire also sponsors a concert series of Christian rock music that can attract a crowd from around the Metroplex.

In the past 2 1/2 years, the Wednesday night Crossfire services have grown from about 25 teens to an average of more than 65, Bolling said.

"It's not entertainment. It's not a production. It's a service," he said. "Everything we do is geared toward God."

At services such as Bollings' or those at Youth WAVE, much of the emphasis is on helping teens forge an intimate relationship with Jesus — a relationship that parents or adults may not understand.

It's a crucial relationship, Briggs said.

"God doesn't have any grandkids," he said. "Every person must have a personal encounter with a faith pilgrimage."

But teens are not the only driving force behind new youth programs. Parents often expect their church to directly minister to the spiritual needs of children and teens, Briggs said.

"I feel like if we find a church that we may not be totally happy with but our kids are getting fed, I'm willing to stay in that church for that benefit," said Donna Day of Keller, whose daughter Danyelle attends services at Youth WAVE.

Meeting the needs of the parents is also foremost in the minds of church leaders, especially in growing areas with young families willing to travel to the church of their choosing.

"It's a consumer society," Bolling said. "Consumers go with the best product they can find. When parents go to churches . . . they want to go to a church that can meet every need of their family."

In a consumer society, Youth WAVE is probably an example of niche marketing. Spencer Nordyke calls his church "interest group-oriented."

He said youths have their own culture and it's his job to meet their interests. That means keeping up with the latest in Christian rock and understanding and ministering to the needs of suburban teens.

"Sitting in a circle singing Kumbaya isn't going to do it for these guys," Nordyke said.

For Jeremy Lyne, the result is a place where a 15-year-old can worship on his own terms.

"I feel more free to be myself here," he said.

the preferred future. Our vision must embody the collective values and aspirations of our relationship with God, families and associates. It should be the mental image that is held by our loved ones and appeals to physical senses, emotional needs and spiritual persuasion.

It is with vision of the future that we are inspired to focus on the possibilities of going beyond what is wrong and what has hindered success in the past.

To be prosperous and reflect favorably back at our 95th birthday, one has to develop a clear, self-empowering mission, purpose or objective. Maximum utilization of our potential can only occur if we have total commitment to a mission. As such, we as families and individuals should have a deep, clearly-understood sense of purpose or mission. A mission that incorporates a vision of where we stand is inspiring and elevating to ourselves and those we touch with our lives .

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Take time off just to yourself. Pressure is unusually high right now. Consider options around it, but take yourself away from the immediate source. A walk along the water or a chat with a dear friend could make all the difference in your outlook. Tonight: Nap, and then out.

Archaeologists turn down Calvin Klein show

ATHENS, Greece — Archaeologists came between Calvin Klein and the fashion shows he wanted to stage at two of the city's most treasured ancient sites.

Klein wanted to show his designs against the backdrop of the Roman Agora and the Herodion theater, built in honor of the Roman Emperor Herod's wife Regilla. Klein's idea was rejected.

"Only artistic shows are allowed at the sites, and a fashion show is not an artistic show," said Mary Pandou, director of the archeological sites for the Central Archeological Committee.

Archaeologists feared a fashion show could damage prized antiquities at the Agora marketplace.

"You can't put a runway in the Agora," Pandou said Wednesday.

The designer still intends to stage a Calvin Klein Jeans event in Greece, even if it isn't held at one of the ancient sites, said Robert Triefus, a New York spokesman for Klein.

LONDON — A rare Gibson Sunburst guitar that rocker Jimi Hendrix used on the single "All Along the Watchtower" sold for $32,600, topping the bidding at a musical auction.

Hendrix's guitar had been expected to fetch double that price at Wednesday's sale, at which one of Eric Clapton's guitars went for $8,000.

Acetates of Elvis Presley's first recording sessions in 1954 achieved record prices. Presley's "That's All Right (Momma)" fetched $27,000.

Former Spice Girl Geri Halliwell's platform boots sold for three times the expected amount, bringing in $1,800.

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. — Johnnie Cochran Jr., no stranger to winning acquittals, couldn't get the same liberty for a pair of Rottweilers in a barking dog complaint.

The dogs belong to Flora Allen, mother of pro basketball player Ray Allen of the Milwaukee Bucks. Cochran, renowned as a member of O.J. Simpson's defense team, is a friend of the family.

Flora Allen had been ordered to keep the dogs, Sampson and Sheba, inside at night because neighbors have complained about the dogs' nighttime barking.

A judge denied Cochran's request for the dogs to be allowed outside later into the night.

The judge said the state would not prosecute the complaint if there are no more complaints about the dogs by March 31. The misdemeanor summons carries a maximum fine of $100.

Mrs. Allen, whose son gave her the dogs, has said her family is the only black family living on her street and that she believes her neighbors don't want her there.

Cochran did not discuss race as a motive in the complaint, although Cochran did say "Mrs. Allen and her family are the only people in West Hartford who have to put their dogs in at night."

LOS ANGELES — Shaquille O'Neal, who admits he can't program his VCR, wants to get kids on the technology bandwagon.

The Los Angeles Lakers center said that when the Internet first became popular, he wanted nothing to do with it. Now, he can't stay off of it.

"If Shaq can work technology, anybody can," he said in a recent interview. He added that "right now, certain kids have access to the Internet and certain kids don't."

O'Neal said he has donated $1 million to the Boys and Girls Clubs as part of a $15 million plan to open 10 technology centers a year for the next 10 years.

"I'm going to do it even if I have to give the $15 million myself," he said.

LAS VEGAS — It wasn't a grudge match, though Debbie Reynolds called it a sad ending: The World Wrestling Federation bought her bankrupt hotel-casino for $9 million.

Reynolds, 66, a movie star for a half-century, showed little emotion Wednesday as bidding opened in a dimly lighted casino. Afterward, she appeared upset by the sale figure.

"They bought a property for $9 million that was worth $22 million," she said.

Ed Kaufman, senior vice president and general counsel for the federation, said the purchase marks his company's entry into the Las Vegas market.

"We plan to extend the brand identification of the World Wrestling Federation into the hotel-casino gaming business and themed restaurants," he said.

The sale is subject to bankruptcy court approval.

Reynolds bought the Paddlewheel Hotel in 1992 and spent millions remodeling the property, which opened a year later with a theater and a museum. The hotel filed for bankruptcy protection last year, a move that forced her into personal bankruptcy as well.

"This is a sad ending to a lot of hard work and special dreams," she said.

Faith, food, fellowship: Salem Campground more than just place to meet

By Gayle White
N.Y. Times News Service

COVINGTON, Ga. — For all the 100 years of her life, Mary Sue Hull Ramsey has spent part of August where she is today — in a rustic cabin at Salem Campground in Newton County.

Her four children have all come, as have eight of her 10 grandchildren and nine of 18 great-grandchildren. They are staying in several of 26 "tents" as the wooden cottages are called in a nod to the days when families pitched tents behind wagons.

August, as born-and-bred Methodists know, is camp meeting time. Young and old abandon the chores of home, school, and office to feast on food, faith and fellowship.

They gather, as their ancestors did, on hard wooden benches in sawdust-floored pavilions to hear revival-minded preachers extol them to follow Jesus.

They chat in rocking chairs on primitive porches, looking out over children playing ball or bicycling together, oblivious to the absence of electronic entertainment.

And they gather along long tables to pass platters of country fried steak, bowls of green beans and plates of sliced tomatoes.

Some people drive over just for worship services — as many as 1,000 sometimes at Salem. But for the "tenters," who stay during the week, camp meeting is a combination multigenerational summer camp and family reunion. It takes place in more than 20 locations around Georgia, including the 170-year-old Salem where services continue twice daily through Friday. Families develop ties and traditions that transcend geography.

Patty Lassiter, 40, came to Salem from Charlotte, N.C., as a child with a family friend. As an adult still living in Charlotte, she's back for her tenth year with her husband and three children.

"It's an experience I wanted my children to have," she said. "We're not related to anyone here, but we've been made such a part of it it is like we're one big happy family. I feel comfortable letting my kids run free. No matter where they are, there's an adult overlooking them."

Her son Robbie Lassiter, 18, has decided to become a minister because of his experience at Salem.

"He prays from his heart," his mother said. "I think he'll make a good one. I really do."

Camp meetings have been a part of the American landscape since the late 18th century, imported to the colonies by Presbyterians from Scotland and Ireland. Among the largest and most significant was a gathering at Cane Ridge, Ky., in 1801, when 25,000 souls came together under Barton Stone, a Presbyterian minister disillusioned with Calvinism. Stone later established the Disciples of Christ.

Many Presbyterians grew uncomfortable with the emotionalism of some early camp meetings, but Methodists were ready to take the gatherings up as their own. Methodist circuit riders spread the word about meetings through announcements and fliers, and the news circulated by mouth. Scheduled between the planting and harvesting seasons, camp meetings became an annual tradition for many families, no matter their denomination.

The men of the family and the farmworkers hitched two mules to a two-horse wagon at the Hull farm in Mary Sue Ramsey's childhood more than 90 years ago.

"We'd bring our mattresses and our trunks," she recalled. "We brought a wood stove , and on the back end of the wagon was a load of firewood. Usually, the children would come on the wagon. Mama and Papa came in the buggy and drove a horse over."

The girls usually had new muslin dresses and white shoes especially for camp meeting, she said, less formal than the silk dresses and patent leather shoes for Sunday church at home.

She met her husband, George Ramsey, at Salem when he and a friend asked some girls to take a ride in his Model T Ford.

"Of the four girls, I was the one he made a date with — to walk me down to the tabernacle for services," she said. "I felt kind of honored he picked me."

Granddaughter Laura Ramsey Kemp, 44, came to her first camp meeting when she was a week old. "I was born the Friday night camp meeting started," she said. "Mother cried because she couldn't come. The next Friday night, she brought me in a basket." She hasn't missed a single year since.

Some things about Salem have changed over the years. A few of the cottages now have window air-conditioning units and the open tabernacle has ceiling fans and fluorescent lights. But there are still a few funeral home fans with scalloped handles. And, the spirit is still the same, said the Rev. Thomas Elliott Jr, 36, pastor of First United Methodist Church in Dacula, Ga. and the fourth generation of Salem's Elliott clan.

"We use the song "Sweet, Sweet Spirit" here," he said after a morning service in the tabernacle. "There really is a sweet spirit in this place. The altar here is really a circle completed in eternity. On the other side are the great cloud of witnesses who have been here but are now in the heavenly realm."

To take their places are plenty of children — 134 of them in youth Bible studies this week.

Anna Tidwell, 11, of Chattanooga, Tenn., Casey Bolles, 12, of Conyers, Ga., and Rebecca Zawinsky, 11, of Houston, are friends who keep up with each other during the year and try to find each other as soon as they climb out of their families' cars at Salem every year.

Anna and Rebecca have been together here for a week each year of their lives. Casey's parents began coming four years ago. They attend services, ride bicycles, play softball and participate in a range of youth activities from scavenger hunts to talent shows.

On the last night of camp meeting, they and the other children make wooden crosses and attach candles to them, then take a candlelight walk through the campground.

"We have communion, and everybody's always crying," said Anna. "Nobody ever wants to say goodbye."

New Jerusalem Baptist prides itself in education ministry

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

New Jerusalem Baptist Church, 1801 N. Carver, prides itself in its education ministry. So proud is it, in fact, that the church opens its doors to the community and welcomes anyone who wants to partake in the teachings offered 4-5 times a year.

"Our Christian education minister, George A. Bell, conducts 4-5 seminars a year," said John Campbell, pastor of New Jerusalem. "We try to teach the members of our church to be better stewards of the Lord in giving of their time and talent, and of their material to advance the Kingdom of Christ. We try to teach them to be more faithful in their attendance and support of the church. One of the problems we've had is in financial support, but through our Christian education program, we've seen improvement in that. We've also seen results from our teaching and some growth in that area."

Christian doctrine, Campbell said, is a program that teaches individual members how to be a better Christian.

"In the class," Campbell said, "we teach about Jesus and we help them to know Jesus better and to know what he expects of them as it relates to their salvation. All too often, people get locked into wanting to know what Jesus is doing for them and they don't take the time to learn what Jesus expects of them. In our Christian doctrine classes, we teach them what they should be, how they should be and how they should respond to the love of Christ."

Bell's seminars are held in January, March, July, October and December.

"We try to do a work with the Lord and that involves serving the community," said Campbell, who recently celebrated his 27th anniversary as pastor of New Jerusalem.

Another way the church reaches to the community is through its Feed the Hungry ministry, a program it hopes to reinstitute by December. The church had been serving the hungry of the community for several years but had to stop when it ran out of cooks.

"We need to get us another cook," Campbell said, "and we hope to have that done by December."

Although he hesitates to guess an exact number, Campbell said at its height, the Feed the Hungry program was probably feeding upwards of 75-80 people a week.

"There have been several people who have been helped by our church," Campbell said. "I can remember a situation where we had an entire family come to us as a result of our Feed the Hungry program. At the time, they didn't know the Lord and were poverty stricken. We reached out and fed them, and then we bought food for them at home, witnessed to them and won them to the Lord. Today, they're members of the church. The father is working and the mother is also, and one of the kids has grown up, finished high school and is working in our church."

The church also supports the mission work of Dick West, who has worked in Kenya for the last 10 years.

"We support him because we believe in his work," Campbell said. "He is doing a tremendous job. When he does make a return to Midland, he always comes to one of our services and shares with us what he has experienced there."

For those unable to make it to church, New Jerusalem has a van ministry. Sunday School starts at 9:30 a.m.; morning worship begins at 10:45 a.m., Sundays.

The church's motto, Campbell said, is "Moving forward in lifting Christ, gathering souls as we go, for this is our business."
