Barbecue cookoff set for Saturday at mall

Highland Mall will be the site for the first CASI-sanctioned Bar-B-Que Cookoff at Saturday, said Mall Manager Bettye Gossett.

Cooks will compete in five categories: brisket, chili, ribs, fajitas and beans. Registration fee to compete in all five divisions is $50, $15 in the brisket and chili divisions, $10 in the ribs and fajitas categories and $5 in the beans division.

Contestants may register the day of the event, Gossett said.

The cookoff begins with a cooks' meeting at 8 a.m., although brisket cooks can begin preparing their entry after midnight, she said.

As an added attraction, ping-pong balls containing chances for free Garth Brooks tickets and other merchandise from mall merchants will be given away during the event, Gossett said.

The event will conclude at about 5:30 p.m., she added.

For more information, contact Gossett at 263-1132.

Blood drives planned

There will be two United Blood Services blood drives Tuesday in Big Spring.

The first, for Howard County employees, will be held at the County Annex from 8:30 a.m.-noon, while Big Spring city employees will have a chance to give blood from 2-5 p.m. at the 11th Place and Birdwell Lane Fire Station.

For more information, contact UBS at 658-2423.

Stanton fun run slated

Registration is ongoing for a fun run to be held in conjunction with the Martin County Old Settlers Reunion July 11 in Stanton.

The hour-long run will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the downtown area, according to organizer Frances Valles. The event is sponsored by the Catholic Youth Organization.

For more information, contact Valles at 756-2816 or 756-2107.

Local residents pack Beals Creek forum

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council wanted citizen input on the Beals Creek flooding project Tuesday night and the council chamber was packed with citizens in favor of dealing with the problem.

City officials voted unanimously to put the proposal before the public in a bond election.

"This is what city government is all about . . . allow these elected officials to hear the concerns of the citizens," said council member Corky Harris, who thanked all those that attended to show their support.

"I certainly support this being put into a public referendum," said council member Mark Sheedy.

Over the period of an hour, residents discussed the need to address the worsening problem of flooding along the city's west end. Discussion of the project completely overshadowed the redistricting proposal public meeting, in which no one spoke.

As an overview of the problem, Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said that since 1890 there have been 29 floods along the creek and that city officials and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers officials have

Speakers concur on flooding problems

Citizens commenting at a public hearing Tuesday on a proposed flood control project on Beals Creek say the eyesore and lost commerce caused by flooding should be a concern for all Big Spring residents.

Persons addressing the meeting of the Big Spring City Council also said that more than just the Jones Valley area on the westside is being flooded because of Beals Creek and suggestions were made to do other work on the creek to prevent flooding in the downtown and east side areas.

Also important, they said, is getting the message out to Big Spring voters before a referendum is held to authorize the city's share of $1.4 million for the $4.7 million federal project. No date has been set for the referendum.

Besides boosting Big Spring's image by preventing floods of magnitudes that occur about once every 10 years, the injection of some of the $4.7 million in funds would boost the local economy, they pointed out.

A dozen citizens addressed the council. Comments include:

- "If we abandon Jones Valley, then we are creating another eyesore for our community," said Howard Walker, owner of the Harley-Davidson Shop at 907 W. Third in Jones Valley, where some of the worst flooding problems are. He pointed out that Third Street is a major exit and entrance to Big Spring.

Walker said he plans improvements to the shop, which is the oldest Harley dealership in Texas and draws numerous visifors from around the country and foreign countries. "As you can see our dealership fits the entire community."

- At least 113 people are permanently employed full-time and another 21 employed part-time in Jones Valley, according to a survey by Charles Cawthon, owner of Chuck's Surplus at 904 E. Third. "That's only a partial list," he said.
- An estimated $3.7 million needed to buy out residents in the 10-year flood plain, according to a 1989 U.S. Corps of

U.S. railoads shut down by stoppage

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Freight railroads shut down today coast-to-coast and Amtrak stopped passenger service almost everywhere after a union went on strike against one of the nation's biggest freight lines.

Freight shippers, farmers and a small number of commuters scrambled to arrange backup ways to markets and to work.

Union leaders accused the rail companies of locking out workers in an attempt to create a national emergency and force Congress to intervene. And Transportation Secretary Andrew Card called on Congress to do just that.

"They should step in quickly," Card said this morning on Cable News Network.

"We need to keep the economy moving. ...," he said. "This is jeopardizing that recovery."

President Bush said before the strike that a nationwide shutdown would be so devastating to the economy that "it ought to end the day it begins," through legislation if necessary.

The shutdowns came less than two hours after other unions had agreed to extend contract talks with Amtrak and Conrail and other freight railroads for at least 48 hours past a strike deadline of midnight Tuesday.

A strike by the Machinists union against CSX Transportation derailed that agreement. Machinists union officials did not return calls early today seeking comment.

The Association of American Railroads, which represents all major freight railroads, said the Machinists had placed pickets at key CSX points.

"Because of the seamless nature of the nation's freight rail system, a strike that begins in one region of the country affects service in the entire nation. Thus, the freight railroads are taking steps to proceed with a safe and orderly shutdown," said AAR President Edwin L. Harper.

Minutes later, Amtrak suspended operations because the vast majority of the 24,000 miles of track over which it operates is owned by the freight lines.

Amtrak spokesman Howard Robertson said the only unaffected service would be the line between Washington and Boston, which is entirely owned and operated by Amtrak. But in Chicago, Amtrak said service between that city and Milwaukee also continued, because the 90-mile route was on Soo Line track, which is not affected by the stoppage.

Robertson said that there would be "a mixed impact" on commuter lines around the country.

Council weighs options

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

City officials are looking into a number of options regarding the rusty water problems in the Capehart Addition, but Kerr Management Inc. Vice-President Tim Kerr was disappointed that no action was taken.

In Tuesday's meeting of the council, Public Works Director Tom Decell discussed possible solutions to the problem from stopgap measures costing $300,000 to fully replacing all water lines at a cost of more than $750,000.

The measure could wind up as part of a bond referendum, which will be put before the voters regarding the Beals Creek flooding problems. "I am not, at this time, prepared to offer any one of these options," Decell said when asked which was the better solution.

The city has already spent $480,000 on the water system to the area, and Decell is still searching for possible state or federal funds to assist with the addition, which was annexed from the U.S. Air Force after the closing of Webb Air Force Base.

City staff have not, as yet, found any agency, state or federal, with funds to loan to improve the water delivery in the subdivision, he said.

Along with the iron oxides from the cast iron pipes, Decell blamed the recurrent "rotten egg smell" on stagnant waters in the system caused by decreased usage in the area. Less than half of the houses in the area are occupied at this time, he said.

"I'm still a little amazed that they are still coming up with things," said Kerr, who had hoped for some definitive action on the matter at the council meeting. Kerr Management owns 318 of the houses in the area.

Court: Cigarette firms can be sued

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled today that cigarette companies may be sued under state laws for allegedly misrepresenting the dangers of smoking. The decision could prompt a flood of lawsuits seeking billions of dollars from the companies.

The court said a federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages does not shield the companies from all suits based on state personal-injury laws.

The ruling is a big victory for the family of the late Rose Cipollone of New Jersey, who died of lung cancer at the age of 58 in 1984 after 42 years of smoking.

The nine-year legal battle between the family and the cigarette industry now goes back for a new trial in New Jersey.

The justices voted 7-2 to allow the family to sue the cigarette companies on grounds the manufacturers deliberately concealed the dangers of smoking and also conspired to withhold the truth.

Justice John Paul Stevens, writing for the court, said the basis for such a lawsuit goes beyond any restrictions in the federal labeling law.

But the court rejected efforts by the Cipollone family to sue the companies on the grounds that their advertising neutralized the effect of the federally required warning labels.

Stevens said that claim is preempted by federal law because the family is alleging the companies tried to minimize smoking's health hazards in their advertising rather than deliberately deceive.

Superfund settlement will let families move out

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Donna and Greg Black finally get to move out of their dream house.

The home they bought five years ago is just blocks from the Brio Refinery Superfund site, listed by the Environmental Protection Agency as the 13th worst toxic dump in the nation.

Last week, the Blacks and about 1,700 other residents reached a settlement under which seven chemical companies and a thrift that developed the Southbend subdivision will pay $207.5 million to buy up more than 200 homes and pay for the medical care and college education of 700 children from the neighborhood.

The families claim that toxic materials contaminated their drinking water, soil and air.

The government had long maintained that the neighborhood about 20 miles south of downtown Houston was safe, and the settlement contained no admission of wrongdoing by the companies.

"In the eight houses on our street," Mrs. Black said, "there were two infant deaths; the next-door neighbor had uterine cancer; across the street, the woman suffered from a severe bladder condition, while the children all had auto-immune deficiencies. That's just not normal."

Since 1987, the Blacks said, their son Jason, 16, has suffered colitis, kidney failure, severe weight loss, chronic fatigue syndrome and trouble with his immune system. "We have a real battle during the school year to keep him afloat," Mrs. Black said.

She said her own health troubles include endometriosis, colon problems and a facial nerve disorder.

The Blacks refused to say how much they will get under the settlement. They said they will move now that they are free of the mortgage and huge medical bills that made it impossible for them to leave before.

The settlement of 38 class-action lawsuits brought by residents includes $39 million from Monsanto, the dump's original owner; about $8.5 million from six other chemical companies; and $160 million from Farm & Home Savings Association, the Kansas City, Mo., thrift that developed the subdivision.

The payments to children range from about $100,000 to $3 million for a youngster with leukemia. The average adult payoff is about $40,000, not counting the mortgage buyout.

The 80-acre Brio site was used from the 1950s to the 1970s as an oil reprocessing, recovering and refining plant. In 1978, it was sold to the Brio Refinery, which went bankrupt four years later.

Monsanto disposed of some 519 million pounds of styrene tars and 20 million pounds of vinyl chloride tars at the site.

Bob McEntire, his wife and their three children moved into their $84,500, two-story, brick home in Southbend in 1983. The next year, the EPA declared the area a Superfund cleanup site and the home's value plunged to $45,000.

Donna Black and her son Jason, 16, stand outside of their home south of Houston, which is located near the 13th-worst toxic dump in the nation, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Since moving into the house, Jason has suffered colitis, the shutdown of one kidney, weight loss, chronic fatigue and trouble with his immune system.

McEntire and 177 other homeowners sued Farm & Home and Ayrshire Corp., a builder, for failing to tell them about the dump. The companies settled in 1987 for lost property values.

Plaintiffs push 10-year, $2 billion education plan

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — State leaders applauded a plan pushed by Hispanic leaders to improve higher education in the border region, but said the $2 billion pricetag would be difficult to pay.

Gov. Ann Richards said Tuesday the proposal "is an ambitious list" and added, "It's very difficult for me to figure how successful it will be."

Hispanics introduced the plan as a way to end a lawsuit in which Texas' public college and university system has been declared unconstitutional.

The 10-year blueprint is designed to lift higher education opportunities in the region up to par with the rest of the state. The 41-county area runs from Corpus Christi to El Paso.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said, " ... fostering new institutions of higher learning takes money.

"And unfortunately, the search for new money will be limited by a state budget that will see little new revenue next biennium and by a profound opposition to new taxes in the Legislature and around the state."

John Bender, a spokesman for House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said that Lewis was impressed with the plan. But Bender added, "The big question is how do you pay for it without a tax increase, and without taking money away from other critical needs."

But supporters of the proposal promised to scrutinize all funding sources to provide the $200 million per year needed for implementation. And they said they were not afraid to seek a tax increase if that's what it took.

"We are not new when it comes to putting our necks on the line," said state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, chairman of the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus, said border residents pay their fair share of taxes, but "are not getting their fair return."

Despite a vow from state leaders to keep the lid on taxes next year, Cavazos said, "I don't think anybody said read my lips yet."

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, said, "The attorney general has responded positively to putting this on the table. We now have something to work with, and it's going to be helpful in resolving this litigation."

In January, a judge in Brownsville declared the state's higher education system unconstitutional because it deprived border area residents of access to educational opportunities available to other Texans.

State District Judge Ben Euresti Jr. gave the state until May 1, 1993, to fix the inequities.

NEW YORK — Ringo Starr says he has come up with an album he can be proud of — finally.

In the July 9 issue of Rolling Stone magazine, the 51-year-old drummer said that during his post-Beatle drinking days, he was content to exist as a "celebrity" rather than a musician.

"I'd be at movie premieres in London with my bow tie on and a bottle of cognac in my pocket, mixed with some Coca-Cola so people would think it was just soda. It got really sad," he said. "Someone in England put it so cruelly. They said, 'If there's an opening of an envelope, he'll be there.' That hit me."

Starr has since undergone rehabilitation for a drug and alcohol problem, and he called his new album, "Time Takes Time," a "beautiful piece of work."

"I've done something I can be proud of — finally, you know — and I'm going to give it my best shot," he said.

NEW YORK — Geena Davis, who helped define the female "buddy movie" in "Thelma & Louise," says she never got to be Madonna's pal while making "A League of Their Own."

"We never got close. I mean, you know, she's had a different life than the rest of us," Davis said in the upcoming issue of USA Weekend.

The film, which comes out this week, is about a women's professional baseball league that was organized during World War II.

Davis plays a dairy worker who becomes a star catcher.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Burt Reynolds gladly gave a young fan an autograph and a hug, but not his watch.

Reynolds, who has been in the area filming the movie "Cop and a Half," was at a bookstore paying for $360 worth of books and tapes Monday when a 10-year-old asked for his gold watch. The actor gave his autograph instead.

But the watch fancier, Andrea Jessop, persisted, offering to swap her plastic-band timepiece for Reynolds' gold one.

He looked at her watch and gave her a hug.

"Gee, you smell good," Andrea said.

"Thanks," Reynolds replied. "But you still don't get the watch."

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Dan Quayle's son Tucker enters Lehigh University in the fall.

The teen-ager, a lacrosse player, is among 1,050 incoming freshmen, admissions director Patricia Boig said Monday. Freshmen must live on campus and eat in the school cafeterias. They cannot have cars on campus, she said.

The vice president's elder son plans to study engineering.

Lehigh costs about $22,000 a year, plus books and other incidentals.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks has obtained a court order to stop the sale of unauthorized Garth Brooks souvenirs.

A federal judge on Monday issued the injunction.

"He intends to pursue this nationwide," said the country star's lawyer, S. Ralph Gordon. "It's not the money situation, either. What he's saying is he wants his fans to get a genuine article of first-quality merchandise as opposed to being ripped off with an imitation product.

"You can tell right off the difference," Gordon said. "A Garth Brooks shirt is the Cadillac T-shirt of the business, so to speak."

Brooks' hits include "No Fences" and "Ropin' the Wind."

BRANSON, Mo. — Country star Conway Twitty passed out on stage during a show, but the diabetic was fine after a shot of insulin, the theater manager says.

"He just got dizzy," David Murphy of Lowe's Theater said Tuesday. "All it is is a diabetes condition."

BERKELEY, Calif. — Whoopi Goldberg has issued a videotaped appeal for help in finding a newborn kidnapped from a hospital.

The baby, identified by police only as Baby Kerri, was snatched from Alta Bates Medical Center on June 12. A woman posing as a county relief worker persuaded the child's 16-year-old mother to give her the 2-day-old baby.

"At this moment, the woman who took Baby Kerri is probably visiting with friends, neighbors and relatives, telling them about her new baby. You may even be living with this woman," Goldberg said in the public service announcement.

"If you know, or just suspect, that the infant recently brought into your home or neighborhood is Baby Kerri, please — show your humanity and help us return Kerri to her real family."

The comedian is in the area to shoot the movie "Made in America."

John Gotti sentenced to life in prison

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Prosecutors got John Gotti off the streets for what a judge says is the rest of his life, but the Dapper Don assured his co-defendant, "We have just begun to fight."

Neither Gotti, 51, nor lawyers for either side spoke at Tuesday's hearing before U.S. District Judge I. Leo Glasser sentenced the boss of the Gambino crime family to life in prison without parole and fined him $250,000.

Outside, a mob of Gotti supporters tried to storm the Brooklyn courthouse, overturned a car and smashed windows of a half-dozen other vehicles. Nearly 1,000 supporters brought in on chartered buses shouted, "Free John!"

Eight police officers and several protesters were injured. Seven people were arrested.

Before the sentencing, the judge rejected a request for a new trial.

Gotti's lawyer, Albert J. Krieger, said that after the sentencing, Gotti told co-defendant Frank "Frankie Loes" Locascio, who received the same sentence, "We have just begun to fight."

Demonstrators protesting the life sentence imposed on convicted crime boss John Gotti overturn a U.S. marshall's car outside the federal courthouse in Brooklyn Tuesday.

The swaggering, silver-haired Gotti wore a mocking smile and a charcoal-colored suit with a bright yellow tie and matching pocket square as he stood before the judge.

Defense attorneys said trying Gotti before an anonymous, sequestered jury created an unnecessary atmosphere of danger and made it impossible for him to get a fair hearing. Three jurors quoted anonymously by news organizations in recent days complained that they felt pressured by federal authorities to find Gotti guilty.

The defense has also claimed that there were legal blunders by Glasser and inflammatory remarks by the prosecutor during closing arguments, and that a juror was improperly removed after she said she saw an FBI agent making what she believed were hand signals to a prosecution witness. They also said defense lawyers were improperly barred from the trial.

Triumphant Rabin will push for peace

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — After scoring a stunning election victory over conservative Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Yitzhak Rabin pledged today that his Labor party will push for peace with the Arabs.

"The first stage has begun, the first stage of a new hope," a flushed Rabin, 70, said as hundreds of frenzied supporters at Labor headquarters in Tel Aviv chanted "Rabin, king of Israel."

Shamir, 76, did not formally concede defeat but suggested his political career is nearing its end.

Rabin, who led Israel's capture of the West Bank and Gaza Strip 25 years ago, has promised the Palestinians in the occupied lands autonomy within nine months. He has also vowed to halt settlements and use the funds to find jobs for a wave of unemployed ex-Soviet immigrants.

The freeze may prompt the Bush administration, which had no immediate reaction to the election results but had grown frustrated with Shamir's lack of flexibility, to drop its objection to $10 billion in loan guarantees to Israel.

The moves would likely speed up U.S.-brokered Middle East peace talks.

IRS tracking big spenders who didn't file tax returns

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A man identified as "potential non-filer A" paid $140,000 in cash for cigarettes in New York but hasn't filed an income tax return since 1985. "E" told the IRS he earned only $3,500 — but handed over $19,000 in cash to buy imported beer in Pennsylvania.

They were among high rollers whose large cash transactions helped the Internal Revenue Service discover they had not filed tax returns for one or more years.

The General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, sampled 578 cash-transaction reports filed in November 1990 and found that 123 — one in five — of the people failed to file a tax return for that year.

The cash reports, which must be sent to the IRS by a business when it makes a cash sale worth more than $10,000, are being used to spot those who have under-reported income on their tax returns, as well as those who have not bothered to file. The reports originally were designed to trace money-laundering schemes as part of the war on drugs.

An IRS sampling found that fully half of those who filed cash reports had under-reported income, by an average of $17,800 each.

The number of cash reports — known as Form 8300 — has grown from 31,000 in 1990 to 71,000 in 1991 to an expected 90,000 or more this year. But many transactions still are unreported, officials say.

A concentrated check of 805 businesses in the Southwest last year found that 35 percent failed to report large cash sales. In Arkansas, 81 unreported sales totaled more than $2.8 million, said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee.

While the number of forms filed is growing, GAO's Jennie Stathis told the subcommittee Tuesday, 38 percent of 982 sampled included an incorrect Social Security number — or none at all — for the buyers. Thus, the IRS could not cross-check the forms to determine whether the cash buyer had filed a tax return.

"We believe it is reasonable to assume that money launderers who want to hide their identity or their non-filing status from IRS would not want to provide their correct identification number," Ms. Stathis said.

She recommended the IRS consider requiring businesses to validate a Social Security number before a big cash sale, in much the same way many credit-card purchases are approved beforehand.

IRS offices in 60 cities made a concentrated effort to monitor jewelers, car dealers and other businesses that make large cash sales. After that sweep, said Deputy IRS Commissioner Michael Dolan, 5,400 businesses filed delinquent reports on cash sales totaling $109 million, resulting in a recommendation for $6.3 million in penalties and 44 potential criminal charges.

Ms. Stathis and Dolan offered these stories from the cash reports:

- A California resident who apparently has never filed a tax return paid $65,000 in cash for two recreational vehicles. He reported the purchase using a false Social Security number.
- A Florida resident paid $90,000 in cash for a bronze sculpture, filed the form required for such a large cash outlay — and failed to include a Social Security number.
- A Texas man laid out $100,000 cash for four armored sedans, but the dealer failed to record his Social Security number.
- A person who had not filed tax returns for four years was caught up in the IRS sweep and forced to report 20 large cash transactions and pay taxes and penalties of $348,000. The IRS seized a $155,000 cash hoard and a $150,000 houseboat.

Female navy officer talks to the press

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A female naval officer, frustrated that the Navy has not brought to justice fellow aviators who allegedly molested her at a Las Vegas convention, has gone public to put "a name and face to this."

"It was the most frightened I've ever been in my life," Lt. Paula Coughlin, 30, was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Washington Post. "I thought, 'I have no control over these guys. I'm going to be gang-raped.'"

Shevardnadze's troops put down coup attempt

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TBILISI, Georgia — Backers of ousted President Zviad Gamsakhurdia tried to stage a coup today by seizing state TV and radio, but government troops loyal to Eduard Shevardnadze crushed the attempt. The government said 40 people died.

Most of the dead were Gamsakhurdia supporters, said Georgian government press spokesman Boris Gazzayev, adding 100 people were wounded in the seven-hour attack to retake the buildings.

Although Gazzayev said 40 people died, the Georgian news agency Iprinda reported only four were killed. The conflicting reports could not immediately be reconciled.

The coup attempt was the most serious challenge to Eduard Shevardnadze's government since the former Soviet foreign minister came to power

Shevardnadze accused Gamsakhurdia's supporters of trying to sabotage today's talks with Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin on an ethnic conflict in northern Georgia, near the Russian border. But Shevardnadze kept to his plans and flew to the Russian seaside resort of Dagomys for the talks after the coup attempt was put down.

When asked about the morning's events in Tbilisi, Shevardnadze told reporters on arrival in Dagomys: "Now everything's OK, but it was bad."

Witnesses and journalists in Tbilisi said about 300 men armed with submachine guns and led by Walter Shurgaya, head of the pro-Gamsakhurdia National Disobedience Committee, broke into the state TV and radio center about 5 a.m.

Process alive Tuesday night

Municipal government was alive and well Tuesday night in Building 1106 at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Members of the Big Spring City Council heard from numerous persons concerned about the flooding problem along Beals Creek as the crowd overflowed council chambers into the hallway. In the end, the council decided to let the members of the community decide how to address the decades-old problem.

Regardless of the part of town in which you live, the Beals Creek flooding problem is a problem that affects each and every one of us in this community.

Each and every one — individual and business.

That's why we feel, as does Owen Ivie, that the Union Pacific Railroad should play a major role in helping solve this problem.

Yes, there are hundreds of persons who are flooded nearly every time there is an appreciable rain on the Beals Creek flood plain. And yes, these persons would benefit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers project.

But who would benefit most of all?

The railroad.

After all, don't the railroad tracks parallel the creek for a number of miles? And wouldn't the railroad — with multi-million dollar locomotives and other equipment — stand the most to gain from not having to fight the floodwaters so often?

Yes, we think the railroad should pitch in. We also think the city and county should work together and that it shouldn't take a public forum or a series in the newspaper to get city crews out to clean debris out of the creek.

It's a long-standing problem that can best be addressed by action.

We feel our elected officials took the first step Tuesday night.

Leaders need to speak against racism

By BRIAN SERAILE
Thomson News Service

WASHINGTON— I have a friend who can't seem to tell a story without pointing out the race of everyone involved.

"I saw a black saxophonist on television last night," he might say. "He was really good."

Why bother mentioning that he was black? If he was a good saxophone player, color has nothing to do with it. If he were a deaf saxohonist, that might be interesting.

In news writing, I was taught not to include race unless it furthered the story or explained something unusual.

The test was to substitute white for black and black for white, and if it sounded strange, it was probably best to leave it out.

So I was delighted when Bill Clinton used the same test to denounce the comment by rap singer Sister Souljah that blacks should take a week off from killing each other to kill some whites.

"If you took the words 'white' and 'black' and reversed them, you might think that David Duke is giving that speech," the Democratic presidential aspirant said.

The spotlight on Sister Souljah is fading fast, but the discussions she's sparked are continuing.

Some people were insulted that Clinton denounced someone who they believe is describing the feelings of a generation of young blacks.

Her message "represents an authentic expression of sentiment among a substantial segment of black youth and black people in general," the political science chairman at Howard University wrote in the Washington Post.

In reality, Sister Souljah and her supporters are only fanning flames they should be trying to extinguish.

As a rap artist reaching out to an angry segment of the population, she could do a lot by trying to send a message of unity.

My friends, both black and white, have reacted with similar horror over her remarks and her lame attempts to defend and explain them.

But the whole episode is a reminder that this nation seems to be moving backward in time, and no one in power is making any effort to deal with it.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who in distant memory could be counted on to say the right things when it came to such matters, has been unconscionably evasive about dealing with Souljah's remarks.

Perhaps it is because, as we found out during the riots in Los Angeles, the Sister Souljahs of the world (and her brothers) are rapidly becoming Jackson's harshest critics.

As the city burned many complained that the riots were the result of increasing anger that no one, including black leaders, is looking out for African-Americans.

"Jesse isn't doing anything for blacks," said one angry-looking young man in the center of the riots. "Jesse is only looking out for Jesse."

Poverty and despair have reached crisis proportions and no one seems to care. So these angry people showed what happens when no one cares. They looted and burned businesses, and, if someone got killed, they didn't care.

Souljah believes the soaring murder rate would be stemmed if it started affecting more whites.

It's not clear what she meant when she suggested that black people should not cooperate with police seeking to arrest other blacks, but it's a message that Jackson should strongly oppose.

Race relations seem to be at a low. Our heroes today are people like the three blacks who went to the aid of a white truck driver being beaten to pulp by rioters and a presidential candidate who stands up for what he thinks, despite the political repercussions it might have five months from now.

It shouldn't take a burning city to make political leaders tell the nation that racism will not be tolerated — no matter what color the racist is.

Golf weird game when tried naked

Lewis Grizzard

I am not at liberty to divulge the name or location of the golf course where the incident I soon will describe took place.

The reason for that is the developer and owner of the course told me not to, and he is a very large man who seems to be the sort of person one would be wise not to cross.

Allow me to say, however, this man can also be trusted at his word, and there are other witnesses to the incident, so I believe it to be true without a shade of doubt.

The owner of the course was in his office one afternoon recently and the young woman who drives his beverage cart came running in, out of breath, and visibly stunned.

The more she tried to talk, the more she was unable to get the words out.

"Slow down," said the owner. "Take a deep breath and then tell me what on earth the trouble is."

The young woman finally regained her composure and said, "There are four men out on 13 playing naked."

I play a lot of golf and I know a lot of weird stories.

I also know of the infamous Fort Worth Rule most other male golfers know, but it cannot be repeated here.

But I had never heard of anybody playing golf naked.

"This was in broad daylight?" I asked the owner of the course as he began to relay the story.

"Broad daylight," he said.

I asked him to continue.

"I got into a cart and rode down to see for myself," he went on. "Sure enough there were four of them, butt-naked, except for their shoes and socks.

"They didn't see me coming, at first. I drove around and picked up all their clothes. When they finally saw me, I said 'What's going on here, boys?'

"I could tell they were pretty drunk. One tried to explain that they'd bet if one didn't get across the water, he'd have to play the hole naked, and one thing led to another.

"They apologized and asked for their clothes. I said, 'Y'all seem to be enjoying yourselves so much, just keep going.'

"I made them tee off and play the next hole naked, too. They were embarrassed as hell. One of them even started crying."

So, did you finally give them their clothes back?" I asked.

"Yeah, and they said, 'Well, I guess we can't come back here anymore?'

"I said, 'Not for a while, boys. We'll need some time to get over this.' "

I mentioned I've heard a lot of golf stories. There was one in a recent golf magazine about a guy, angry over being far behind his opponent in a match, who urinated on his opponent's ball.

The magazine consulted a rules expert who said if an opponent urinated on your golf ball, it would clearly be inside the rules to lift, clean and place your ball.

I've also heard of golf shots hitting and killing birds in flight; one golfer going home and getting his gun and coming back to the course and shooting his opponent over an argument regarding whether or not a putt should have been conceded, and I saw a man shank a ball so badly against a strong wind in Scotland, it wound up 20 yards behind him.

But naked golfing is a new one. I've been searching for a moral to this story but one doesn't readily unveil itself. I do, however, realize golf is supposedly a gentlemen's game, and gentlemen normally don't get naked in public.

On the other hand, a bet's a bet.

So there's a dilemma here. I'd simply say, watch what you wager, not to mention, what you waggle.

No surprises over crime statistics

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Nobody around here was the least bit surprised. A few days ago the National Center for Health Statistics published a report on homicide by firearms, and whaddya know? Washington, D.C., won the first-place prize.

That's right. Here in the nation's capital, we murder more people, per capita, than any of the 80 largest urban areas. Among black males aged 15 to 19 we edged out Los Angeles. We beat Phoenix by almost 2-to-1. We outkilled Detroit, Jacksonville and New Orleans. Bloodshed? You want bloodshed? Come to Washington. We got bloodshed.

Isn't it time Congress got serious about concealable handguns? Haven't we had enough killing?

Time is running short for the 102nd Congress. Because of the national political conventions and the August recess, only a few weeks remain before expected adjournment in early October. Even so, leaders could find time enough for a truly bipartisan effort to find agreement on a gun law. All the pieces are in place. They need only to be put together.

This Congress has copied the useless maneuvers of all the king's horses and all the king's men. On one issue after another the House and Senate have marched up the Hill and marched down again. The crime bill provides a disgraceful example.

After prolonged debate, the Senate passed a crime bill last July. The House passed its version in October. The two bills went to conference. On Nov. 27 the House accepted the conference version 205-203. In March the Senate balked. By a vote of 54-43 the Senate refused to stop a Republican filibuster. The moribund bill was removed to a ward for the terminally ill.

Since then a good many things have happened. A fed-up public has grown even more fed up with the disgraceful levels of partisanship in Congress. Rioters have devastated parts of Los Angeles. The statistics on death by gunfire have compelled new attention to this wretched problem.

Sen. John Chafee, D-R.I., has seriously proposed a federal law banning the manufacture, sale or possession of handguns. C. Everett Koop, the former surgeon general, has advanced a sensible proposal for licensing gun owners.

Given this revived attention to an urgent public problem, why can't Congress get on the bail? The Chafee bill has no realistic chance. The senator scorns constitutional objections as "utter nonsense," but the Second Amendment cannot be so easily brushed aside. It says "the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." True, that right is uncertainly tied to the need for a well-regulated militia, but the language retains some force against an outright ban.

If the ownership of handguns cannot be prohibited outright, what could be done? Koop would require gun owners to be licensed, even as automobile owners are licensed. Owners would have to demonstrate their skill in handling firearms. Periodically they would qualify to have their licenses renewed. Licenses would be revoked for cause.

I like Koop's idea. It stops short of registration of firearms, a step that would create a monstrous bureaucracy. It would reduce the number of accidental shootings. It would improve the chances that a homeowner or shopkeeper, shooting at a burglar, would hit his target.

Agreement could be reached, if men of good will would only try, on the Brady Bill. This would establish a rule, nationwide, requiring licensed gun dealers to impose a week's delay between purchase and delivery of a concealable handgun. The time period would be used to check the credentials of the purchaser against police records.

No one represents the Brady Bill as a cure-all. It isn't. Criminals would get guns on the black market. Sen. Chafee estimates that Americans own 66 million handguns. Two million more are manufactured or imported every year. The best that can be said for Brady is that it would be a step in the right direction.

The moribund crime bill contains sound provisions that would increase prison terms for crimes involving the use of a firearm. This approach always has seemed to me the best approach. If Sec. 2004 of the House bill had been in effect at the time of the L.A. riots, looters who stole guns would have been subject to 10 years in prison.

The elements of a workable gun law are on the table. Congress needs no further hearings. Something constructive can be done. All that is required is the will to do it.

Chang upset by Briton

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Guitar-playing buddies by night, racket-toting opponents by day.

Former Wimbledon champions John McEnroe and Pat Cash, who have jammed together in a rock 'n' roll band, won first-round matches Tuesday and will meet across the net in the next round.

"You've just got to do it. It's just part of the game," Cash said. "Sometimes it's easier to do that because you are friends. At least you know if you don't win, your friend is going to win."

While McEnroe and Cash are unseeded this year, the first two days of the tournament have been kind to the seeds. Michael Chang is the only seed who was defeated Monday or Tuesday.

The seventh-seeded Chang, whose baseline game is not suited to grass courts, lost 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 on Tuesday to Jeremy Bates, a Briton ranked 113th in the world.

But for the other seeds, Tuesday was like a sunny stroll on the grass — well, partly sunny. After a bone-dry Monday, there was a late drizzle Tuesday evening that suspended play for the night.

Three women's seeds advanced to the third round today.

Mary Joe Fernandez, the seventh seed, won 7-5, 6-2 over Cecilia Dahlman and 12th seed Katerina Maleeva was a 6-4, 4-1 winner over Manon Bollegraf. Nathalie Tauziat, the 14th seed, needed three sets to defeat Natalia Medvedeva 7-5, 2-6, 6-3.

On Tuesday, defending women's champion Steffi Graf, nine-time champion Defending women's champion Steffi Graf, nine-time champion Martina Navratilova and third seed Gabriela Sabatini had little trouble advancing.

Graf, the second seed this year, swept to a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Noelle van Lottum and Sabatini was a 6-1, 6-1 winner against Christelle Fauche. Navratilova, seeded fourth, won 6-2, 6-2 over Magdalena Maleeva.

Sixth-seeded Jennifer Capriati had to work harder to complete a 6-0, 7-5 victory over Chanda Rubin in a battle of American 16-year-olds.

Other women reaching the second round included No. 7 seed Mary Joe Fernandez, eighth-seeded Conchita Martinez, 11th-seeded Jana Novotna, 13th-seeded Zina Garrison, No. 15 Kimiko Date and No. 16 Judith Wiesner.

Ninth-seeded Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere had won the first set against Nicole Muns-Jagerman when play was suspended.

San Saba coach new HC women's assistant

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Royce Chadwick has been reunited with one of his former assistants.

Chadwick, the head women's basketball coach at Howard College, has a new assistant coach in Terry Gray, Howard College recently announced. Gray joins Howard after serving four years as a high school girls head basketball coach. Gray was Chadwick's assistant at Sam Houston State University in 1989.

He replaces Lisa Chadwick, who took a teaching position at Marcy Elementary.

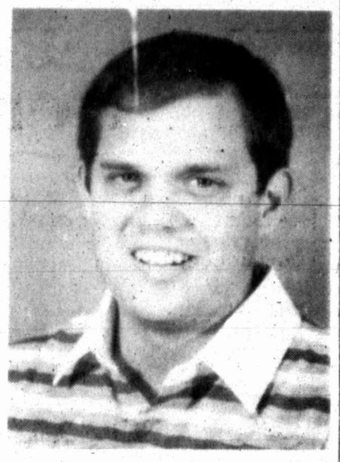
Gray comes to Howard College from Class AA San Saba High School, where he was head girl's basketball coach for one year. San Saba won 19 games, its first winning season since 1967.

Before arriving at San Saba, Gray was head girl's coach at Class AAAA Wharton. In 1990 Gray's Lady Tigers finished with a 25-5 mark, winning district before being eliminated in the area round of the playoffs. It was the first district championship in the school's history.

For his effort, Gray was named South Texas Girls Coach of the Year as well as Wharton County Coach of Year.

Gray's duties will include some part time teaching in the physical education department and being director of the intramural program.

"It's so hard to get in college and He wanted to get back into college (coaching)," said Chadwick. "He wants to get that experience so he can put that on his resume that he coached here and we had a good year, hopefully."



TERRY GRAY

"Terry will be a great addition to our program. "He is a super person, a great recruiter and a tremendous basketball coach. We are very excited about the future of our program."

Gray said the feeling is mutual. "I am very excited about the opportunity to work with Coach Chadwick again," said Gray. "He traditionally has an outstanding all-around basketball program and I am looking forward to being a part of his Howard College program."

Gray is a graduate of Sam Houston State University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Physical Education and English. He has also done graduate work at Houston Baptist University.

Gray and his wife Janell have one son, 9-year-old Michael.

WTC drops men's hoops

SNYDER (AP) — Western Texas College, which won a national championship under former coach Nolan Richardson, has dropped its men's basketball program for 1992-93.

Trustees for the junior college made the decision Monday night. Last week, head coach Kelly Green resigned to accept an assistant's position at Texas-Pan American.

Board members reserved the right to consider reinstating the program later, but said it was doubtful. The women's basketball program, men's golf and rodeo will continue.

Lions lineman run over by truck

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — Detroit Lions offensive lineman Eric Andolsek was killed when a truck ran off the road and struck him as he worked in the front yard of his home, state police said.

Andolsek, 25, was pronounced dead at 1:54 p.m. at Thibodaux General Hospital, about 30 minutes after he was brought in by ambulance, hospital spokeswoman Toni Martinez said.

The driver of the truck, James E. Bennett, 34, of Baton Rouge, was charged with negligent homicide and failure to maintain control, state police spokesman Sgt. Hamilton Mixon said.

Practice players get a raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has tentatively approved a proposed settlement that will pay NFL "practice squad" players a minimum of $3,450 a week for the 1992 season.

Under the agreement, which awaits final approval by U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth, the NFL will be able to have the squads of backup players in 1992.

A monkey on your back is terrible thing to have

Steve Belvin

Random thoughts while trying to get back into the swing of things after a week's vacation . . .

Tom Kite finally got the monkey off his back and the Portland Trail Blazers didn't.

The Trail Blazers lost in the National Basketball Association Finals 4-2 to the Chicago Bulls, who won their second consecutive title.

The Blazers, a favorite to win the title the last three seasons, lost in the Finals for the second time. Last year they were upset by the Los Angeles Lakers, who were routed in a five-game series by the Bulls. Two years ago they lost in the finals to the Detroit Pistons.

The word is out that the Trail Blazers are quickly becoming the Denver Broncos of the NBA — they have all the needed talent, but can't win the big one.

In all fairness to Trail Blazer fans, Portland did win the title in 1977, led by a bearded red-head by the name of Bill Walton.

• • •

Sunday Tom Kite won the 92nd U.S. Open. Now maybe the critics will get off his back.

Dealing with very high winds, Kite won the Open, and once and for all put to rest all the nagging doubts about why he had never won a major championship in his 21-year career.

What people fail to remember is that he's golf's all-time leading money winner. He's won 16 Professional Golf Assocation Tour events, including the Tournament of Champions twice and The Players Championship.

Twice he's been the PGA Tour's leading money winner. He won the tour's Rookie of the Year Award and two Vardon Cups for the tour's lowest scoring average.

What the critics remembered, however, was that until Sunday, Kite's career had a void — a major void. Kite came close, finishing second twice in the Masters (1983, 1986) and once in the British Open (1978) and leading in the final round three other times.

But he never did win, until now that is. I bet he feels much lighter now that that heavy burden has been lifted off his back.

• • •

Now in the no-win situation department . . .

Poor Evander Holyfield. What's he supposed to do? Here he is the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world and the boxing critics of downing him because of the way he's won fights.

So what if he doesn't knock people out every fight, Mike Tyson style. Holyfield has won 28 pro fights, beating everyone that's challenged him. He uses his boxing skills to the best of his ability. That's what makes him a champion.

I got a big laugh from the statements of aging boxer George Foreman and upstart European heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis after Holyfield had beaten Larry Holmes Friday.

Said Foreman: "I still think the big fight everyone wants to see is Larry Holmes and George Foreman."

That would suit the 43-year-old Foreman and 42-year-old Holmes just fine. Two overweight, over-the-hill fighters making $4 million dollars each to see who's the first to suffer permanent brain damage.

Said Lewis: "I think people are getting frustrated with the performances they're seeing out there (heavyweight division). Mike Tyson would've have beaten them both in one night."

Sounds like a aspiring young boxer who's trying to talk his way into a title shot. After all, so many good heavyweights have come from Europe — Not!

Red hot Braves blank slumping Giants, 7-0

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the past month, Tom Glavine and the Atlanta Braves have been practically an unbeatable combination.

Glavine pitched a five-hitter and became the majors' first 11-game winner as the red-hot Braves blanked the San Francisco Giants 7-0 on Tuesday night.

It was the fifth straight win for Glavine (11-3) and the fourth consecutive victory for Atlanta. The Braves have won 20 of 23 since May 27, when Glavine began his personal winning streak.

"We're playing as well as a team can play," said Glavine, who has four shutouts and six complete games this season. "And I feel the same way about my pitching. I feel that I'm not going to give up any more than two or three runs. If I do that, we're going to win.

"We're firing on all cylinders. It makes it very hard for the other team to beat us."

Glavine needed only 83 pitches to finish off the Giants, getting eight hitters on his first pitch and eight others on two pitches.

Glavine didn't walk a batter and struck out four before a crowd of 39,890, Atlanta's fifth straight sellout and team-record 20th of the season.

"We were overmatched tonight," said San Francisco manager Roger Craig, whose team has lost eight of its last 10. "Glavine pitched another great ballgame. He's come up with a heck of a changeup to go with his fastball. He's had one before, but not that good."

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 8, Los Angeles 4; Cincinnati 10, Houston 6; Philadelphia 5, Montreal 0; Pittsburgh 6, St. Louis 4; and New York 4, Chicago 1.

Deion Sanders had a two-run triple and a solo homer in Atlanta's season-high 17-hit attack.

The Braves broke the game open in the fourth, scoring four times and knocking out starter John Burkett (5-4). Sanders hit his 11th triple — tops in the majors — to score Rafael Belliard and Glavine, who had singled. After Terry Pendleton drew a walk, reliever Francisco Oliveras gave up Ron Gant's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single to Sid Bream.

The Braves added two runs in the sixth off Bryan Hickerson on RBI singles by David Justice and Damon Berryhill. Sanders hit his sixth homer in the seventh.

Mets 4, Cubs 1

At New York, Todd Hundley hit a tiebreaking three-run homer and Pete Schourek won for the first time since being recalled from the minors.

It's the first time the Mets have won three games in a row since sweeping the Los Angeles Dodgers at Shea Stadium May 8-10.

Schourek (1-3) broke a personal seven-game losing streak, including four straight losses while pitching at Triple-A Tidewater. In his previous three starts since being recalled on May 24, the Mets had not scored while he was in the game.

Padres 8, Dodgers 4

At San Diego, hot-hitting Gary Sheffield had a three-run homer and Darrin Jackson added a solo shot and two RBIs as the Padres beat the slumping Dodgers.

Sheffield connected in the first inning for his first hit in 15 career at-bats against knuckleballer Tom Candiotti. It was his 14th homer of the season and fourth in his last nine games.

Dan Walters also drove in two runs off Candiotti (6-6) as the Dodgers finished an 11-game road trip with a 1-10 record. Rookie Frank Seminara (2-2) won his second straight, giving up three runs and eight hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Reds 10, Astros 6

At Cincinnati, Reggie Sanders' two-run triple capped a five-run fifth inning that helped the Reds snap a four-game losing streak.

Joe Oliver and Paul O'Neill each had two-run homers in the Reds' 15-hit attack, which followed a special afternoon batting practice supervised by manager Lou Piniella and batting coach Tony Perez.

The loss ended the Astros' four-game winning streak. Tim Belcher (7-6) blew two leads but benefited from Houston's sloppy fielding in the fifth, when the Astros committed three errors and the Reds sent 10 batters to the plate.

Phillies 5, Expos 0

At Montreal, Curt Schilling (6-4) pitched a six-hitter for his second shutout in 15 days.

Schilling, acquired from Houston last February for pitcher Jason Grimsley, struck out five, walked three and worked out of two jams — one in the third, the other in the seventh.

The Phillies broke open a scoreless game with three runs in the sixth inning, two on a double by Ruben Amaro.

A's explode for 10-run third inning

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mark McGwire was right in the middle of it. Still, he could hardly believe it.

"A 10-run inning? My God! That's a lot of runs," McGwire said Tuesday night after homering in the big third inning as the Oakland Athletics outslugged the Seattle Mariners 12-7.

McGwire's two-run shot wasn't the biggest blow in the A's explosion. Harold Baines had a three-run homer and a two-run double in the inning, then added an two-run single in the fifth, tying his career with seven RBIs.

The A's wasted no time putting away their ninth consecutive win over the Mariners at Oakland.

Rickey Henderson — who after the game said he wants to be traded — led off the third, the third 10-run inning in club history, with a single off starter Randy Kramer. Jerry Browne walked and Baines followed with his two-run double.

McGwire hit his 24th homer, bringing in Baines, before Terry Steinbach grounded out, Carney Lansford popped out.

Walt Weiss then walked and Mike Bordick doubled. But left fielder Dave Cochrane's made an errant throw to third for an error and brought in Weiss, giving the A's a 5-1 lead.

Kramer was replaced by Dennis Powell, who hit Lance Blankenship and walked Henderson. Browne drove in Bordick and Blankenship with a single before Baines' sixth homer of the season. McGwire struck out to end the big inning.

Henderson apparenlty is upset that the team wants him to play with a left leg injury.

White Sox 7, Indians 1

At Chicago, Jack McDowell won his 10th game with an eight-hitter. McDowell (10-3) handed the Indians their fourth straight defeat. He walked three and struck out three in his fourth complete game. It was McDowell's 24th career complete game and fourth straight against Cleveland.

Twins 5, Angels 3

At Minneapolis, Pedro Munoz's bases-loaded double sparked a four-run rally in the third inning against former Twins pitcher Bert Blyleven. Scott Erickson (5-5) walked three, hit a batter and allowed seven hits in seven innings; he was helped by three double plays as the Twins won for the sixth time in seven games. He is at .500 for the first time this season after going 20-8 last year.

The 41-year-old Blyleven, who missed all last season after shoulder surgery and began 1992 in the minors, entered the game with a 1.67 ERA. He had allowed only two earned runs in his previous five outings.

But he gave up five hits, five runs, three walks and a run-scoring balk in the first three innings.

Orioles 7, Brewers 1

At Milwaukee, Cal Ripken continued his hot hitting with two homers.

The Orioles star, now 23 for 47 during an 11-game hitting streak, hit a solo homer in the fifth off Jaime Navarro and added a three-run shot, his 10th of the season, off James Austin in the seventh.

Royals 2, Yankees 1

At Kansas City, Hipolito Pichardo, who had not won in his last five starts, allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings. Rusty Meacham and Jeff Montgomery finished for Pichardo, who started the season at Class AA Memphis and whose previous longest start was six innings. Montgomery got his 17th save.

Melido Perez (7-6) lost despite pitching a four-hitter.

Keith Miller tripled and scored on Gregg Jefferies' single in the first. George Brett doubled leading off the sixth and Jim Eisenreich was safe on second baseman Mike Gallego's throwing error. Mike Macfarlane walked to fill the bases.

Tigers 11, Red Sox 7

At Detroit, Cecil Fielder hit his fourth career grand slam, capping a seven-run fourth inning. Fielder hit it off Matt Young, the second slam Young has allowed the Tigers slugger.

Coach will get new contract

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The owner of the Portland Trail Blazers said the NBA team intends to sign coach Rick Adelman to a contract extension soon.

"Rick is going to be back as coach," Paul Allen said Tuesday, dismissing rumors Adelman would be fired or moved to another position within the organization.

Adelman, 46, has one year left on a three-year extension signed midway through his first full season as head coach of the Blazers.

UPI rescued by Arabic network

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — United Press International, the perennially on-the-brink news service, has been rescued by an Arabic TV network that is among the fastest-growing companies in a burgeoning global market.

Middle East Broadcasting Centre Ltd., a London-based company owned by Saudi businessmen, offered $3.95 million in cash, outbidding a group of American investors at a bankruptcy court auction Tuesday.

The bid, accepted by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Francis Conrad, averted an imminent shutdown of the 85-year-old news agency, which owes creditors $60 million.

UPI, owned by Infotechnology Inc., has lost money for 30 years and is operating under bankruptcy protection for the second time in a decade.

The news agency's 500 remaining employees have been "in Dante's hell because they never know if they're going to have a job from one Friday to the next," the judge said. "Lord knows, in this economy, we need to keep as many reporters alive and eating as we can."

MBC's first goal is to "stabilize the company, try to assess what changes need to be made to bring it to profitability," said spokesman Michael Costelloe. Lawyers said they expected to close the deal on Saturday.

The first all-Arabic TV network expects to invest up to $12 million in UPI over the next two years, Costelloe said. He said it was too soon to talk about staff changes.

Kevin Keane, president of the Wire Service Guild, which represents UPI editorial employees and is its biggest creditor, said he hopes to begin negotiations soon on a new contract. The current pact expires at the end of the month.

Tuesday's hearing turned into a bidding war between MBC and a group led by Leon H. Charney, a New York lawyer and real estate developer who had put up $180,000 to keep UPI afloat while he examined its books. That money ran out Monday.

Charney, who went into the auction offering $3.6 million, went as high as $3.9 million but backed down.

He later said he wanted to bid $3.75 million but needed another day to consult with his partners. Conrad denied the request. Charney said he would appeal.

Earlier, the judge rejected religious broadcaster Pat Robertson's $900,000 offer to buy only the news agency's name, archives and copyrights — a deal that would have had the effect of putting UPI out of business.

Robertson had offered $6 million for the whole company at a bankruptcy auction in May, but later backed out.

MBC, which started in April 1991, delivers a daily mixture of news and entertainment programming to about 12 million Arabic-speaking viewers in the Middle East and North Africa. It estimates potential viewership at 100 million and expects to broadcast to North America next year.

The network buys broadcasts from TV networks in Britian and elsewhere, adding Arabic narration and eliminating any risque activity or nudity to avoid offending Islamic sensibilities.

Its principal owner, Sheik Walid Al-Ibrahim, is a brother-in-law of Saudi King Fahd, who is said to have given tacit approval for the network to broadcast by satellite to Saudi Arabia, despite tight government control over the airwaves.

The left photo, photographed last Thursday, shows the drainage ditch for the south side of Big Spring, just east of the Owens Street Bridge, overgrown with weeds, trees and debris. In the right photo, City of Big Spring workers clear the ditch Tuesday. Several businesses last week claimed the clogged ditch was the cause of flooding in the eastern downtown area.

Council

been looking at the problem since the 1970s.

As no action had been taken, the project narrowly missed deauthorization by Congress in the early 1980s. Only the actions of Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, removed the project from the cut list.

Much of the discussion centered on the projected gains from the project, as the property in the 10-year flood plan has been evaluated at $700,000 to $800,000; whereas the city's part of the project funding now stands at $1.4 million, Decell said.

This figure does not include railroad assets and property values would increase when removed from the 10-year flood plain. Colorado River Municipal Water District General Manager Owen Ivie suggested trying to gain assistance from the Union Pacific Railroad with project funding.

Ivie also raised questions of resedimentation of the creek even if the project were completed, he said. "I just don't want this to become some kind of albatross around our neck." Ivie mentioned the use of leveling maintaining vegetation along the banks to reduce soil runoff into the creek and canal. Corps representative Mike Mocek said the sedimentation characteristics of the canal should not allow the reduced flow to return and plague the area. Harris concurred, however, stating his desire to fix the problem completely or not at all.

Business owners in the area, including Howard Walker, owner of the Harley Davidson dealership and Charles Cawthon, owner of Chuck's Surplus, said that rescuing the area from the flooding, which is increasing in frequency, will benefit the entire city and should not be ignored.

City staff are currently designing referendum questions regarding the now $1.44 million in city matching funds for the total project cost, which, as of June 23, stands at $4.69 million, Decell said.

Engineer report, is much higher than the $1.2 million that the city would spend on flood control, said Paul Hopper, director of Big Spring Main Street Inc., a downtown revitalization organization. The property, not including the railroad, is appraised at $780,000 on tax rolls.

Also, Hopper said, we should not just dispose of the neighborhood. "These are valuable buildings and need to be protected."

• Jones Valley is not the only neighborhood with flooding problems, said Carl Schoenfield, an east side businessman who says he has seen flooding from downtown to Owens Street on the east side. "These little ol' rains we have right now, you can't drive down Second Street."

• Besides the project to build a water channel in Jones Valley, the city should also consider leveling and putting grass on land along Beals Creek all the way through Big Spring, called a greenbelt area, and keep the creek cleaned out, said Owen Ivie, an engineer and general manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District. The extra cost would be an estimated $400,000.

Vets defy court in selling shirts

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The leader of a Vietnam veterans' group says he's defying a court ruling that he needs copyright permission to sell T-shirts depicting the statue of three soldiers at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ruled Monday that the sculptor who designed the statue and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund holds a valid copyright to the statue.

The judge said Ted Sampley and his veterans' group, Homecoming II, infringed on that copyright by selling T-shirts with pictures of the statue without getting permission.

Within hours, Sampley said his group had resumed offering the shirts for sale at its booth near the memorial.

"They are on sale right now, and they're not copyrighted," Sampley said from his home in Kinston, N.C.

Sculptor Frederick Hart and the memorial fund sued Sampley and his organization last year, contending they must pay a licensing fee and submit to control over use of the artwork.

The memorial fund is a nonprofit group that raised the money for the statue, which stands near the black granite walls etched with names of Vietnam War dead.

Sampley contended that the statue belongs to the public and should not be subject to copyright law.

"What right does he (Hart) have to tell a Vietnam vet what to do with the Vietnam vets' memorial?" Sampley said. "I don't have a battle with the courts . . . but I feel it's my moral obligation to take whatever heat's necessary and put the shirt back up and offer it to the American public."

Evan Roth, an attorney for the memorial fund, said Sampley would risk a contempt-of-court citation by selling the shirts without a licensing agreement.

Sampley said Hart and the memorial fund targeted his group because of its political beliefs, including its contention that there still are American prisoners of war in Southeast Asia.

Other vendors along the Washington Mall have been selling T-shirts with pictures of the statue without getting copyright approval, Sampley said.

But Roth said other vendors have agreed to pay licensing fees and that Sampley's group was the first one to refuse. The memorial fund intends to enforce its copyright on all who want to sell pictures of the statue, Roth said.

Judge John Garrett Penn issued a preliminary order in February barring Sampley's group from selling T-shirts and other items depicting the statue, and requiring it to turn over its inventory of those items.

'Nothing Sacred' and nothing great

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The second album from Babylon A.D., "Nothing Sacred" provides good, clean guitar and plenty of it — along with lyrics that were called sophomoric by a sophomore.

The first cut, "Take the Dog off the Chain" — classic, hard driven, three chord power rock. Free verse lyrics appear to be an outcry against general injustice. What the song brings to mind, however, is the old adage, rrebell without a clue.

"Bad Blood," is a typical "I'm not going to change for anybody and especially yyou" kind of anti-love song. One of the worst tracks, the music seams to have come from some computerized archive of lead, bass and drum rhythm.

In an interesting juxtaposition, "So Savage the Heart," the first power-ballad of the album, is about the pain of love gone bad — the pain of finding a new place to start over. As with Bad Blood, the music is tediously ordinary.

Sacrifice your love. A double-quick banger with clean, strong licks and adolescent ideations of love. As an illustration, consider this verse:

Let me lay you down.
Come share my bed of fire!
I will show you how!
How it's done now baby. Open up to me.

As a second opinion of the overall album, the following quote was garnered from a local high school sophomore. "It sounds good until he starts to sing. It's like the lyrics were written by a twelve-year old.

The music is articulate and powerful enough to keep a party going, but, as a rule, is not something on which, to spend a great deal of thought.

In an apparent diversion from their normal lyricist, "Redemption," is a disturbing power ballad of a girl growing up suffering a father's molestation. Pretty heavy stuff.

Take my burning hands!
I want redemption!
Give me redemption!
Help me to understand.
God help me find my redemption.

A young girl's eyes are filled with pain, she suffers, forever her life is changed.

"Down the River of No Return" is almost a Christian rock ballad. A short song about death and final deliverance.

In another odd juxtaposition, "Psychedelic sex reaction" is just what the title indicates. It's reminiscent of a late 70s Aerosmith-esque hard-rocking ditty about sex, drugs and rock and roll.

Another obviously Aerosmith-fluenced song, "Dream Train" isn't too bad. But just like Dan Quayle is no Jack Kennedy — Babylon A.D. is no Aerosmith.

"Blind Ambition" is another "I'm just going to die if I can't have sex with this woman" kind of a song, but at least the music keeps your attention.

I believe the words "fire" or "burning" appear in every song on the album.

"Slave your Body," another, three-chord power banger fraught with sexual innuendo.

"Pray for the Wicked" is not too bad. Very strange — as if Black Sabbath did a Christian rock number about the wages of sin and forgiveness.

The album, overall, seems to say "Believe in God and party hardy," a confused philosophy for all those who haven't the faintest notion of who they want to be.

I'll give it a 6 out of 10 for good music and general strangeness. Points lost for sophomoric lyrics.

Babylon A.D. debuts their new album "Nothing Sacred" this summer. The heavy metal rockers provide articulate music, but could use some help on the dead, lead lyrics.

Erika Slezak wins Daytime Emmy, but loser Susan Lucci steals the scene

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Susan Lucci wept tears of gratitude and got a standing ovation at the Daytime Emmys. The only thing missing was the award.

Erika Slezak, who plays the good-hearted heroine Victoria Buchanan on ABC's "One Life to Live," won for best actress for a third time.

Lucci, who plays cunning, tough-as-nails Erica Kane on ABC's "All My Children," lost again, and has never won despite 13 nominations.

Had this been a soap opera, there might have seen a real cat fight Tuesday night during the NBC broadcast of the 19th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards.

But Lucci, serving as a host of the awards show, merely wept — and stole the scene anyway.

"Thank you, thank you," she told the crowd of 1,500 who had openly rooted for her. "I couldn't begin to tell you how much that meant to me."

Lucci's series, "All My Children," won its first best-drama Emmy.

"I think Erika is a wonderful actress," Lucci gushed backstage. "I vote for her every year. I really do."

Slezak said she was proud to have been with "One Life to Live" for more than two decades. "I don't really know of another actress who's had that kind of opportunity ... to act, as I have, for 21 years, almost every day," she said.

Peter Bergman, who plays Jack Abbott on CBS' "The Young and the Restless," received his second consecutive Emmy for best actor.

Oprah Winfrey won her third Emmy as talk show host. Her syndicated program also was honored as best talk show. Winfrey said backstage that she and her boyfriend, Stedman Graham, were celebrating their sixth anniversary that evening.

Asked how they planned to celebrate, Winfrey wooped, "Party!" and twirled around with her Emmy.

The award for best supporting actress went to Maeve Kinkead, who plays Vanessa Chamberlain on CBS' "Guiding Light." Thom Christopher, who plays Carlo Hesser on "One Life to Live," won the Emmy for supporting actor.

"I've kind of squelched any critics who say that daytime is about people with hair only," said Christopher, chuckling and patting his bald pate.

Kristoff St. John and Tricia Cast of "The Young and the Restless" won Emmys as outstanding younger actors.

"Sesame Street" received its 50th Emmy with the award for best children's series. "Vincent and Me" on cable's TV's Disney Channel won for children's special, and "Rugrats," on cable's Nickelodeon, won for animated program.

"Jeopardy" picked up its ninth Emmy as best game show, and Bob Barker won the game show host honors for CBS' "The Price Is Right."

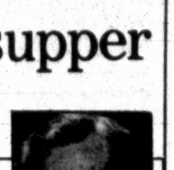
A light and easy supper



Papa Joe Reed

Today I want to talk with you about a tuna salad. Now don't jump to conclusions; I know what most of you are thinking — the same old tuna salad. Not so, dear friends. The tuna salad we are going to fix today is entirely different. This salad makes for a light and easy supper. I know you'll like it. The name is pretty fancy, but it's easy to fix. You will need the following for:

TUNA AND WHITE-BEAN SALAD IN TOMATO SHELLS

4 medium-ripe tomatoes
¼ cup oil
2 tablespoons-red wine vinegar
2 cloves, minced garlic
½ teaspoon oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
1 can-20 oz.-drained white kidney beans
1 can-drained-broken in small pieces tuna
1 red-small-sliced thin onion
Lettuce leaves, optional

First, you cut a thin slice off the top of each tomato. Scoop out the pulp (reserving it) leaving a sturdy shell. Drain the shells upside down on a paper towel. Chop the pulp coarse, and reserve. Now in a large bowl, mix well the oil, vinegar, garlic, oregano, salt and pepper. Add the chopped tomato pulp, beans, tuna and onion. Toss well to get a good even coat. Spoon into tomato shells and serve chilled on lettuce leaves. Garnish with pickles or olives or cheese strips. Be creative. It's not only delightful to the eye, its delectable to the palate.

Now for a dessert to go with this light salad. Tonight, we will have a pudding that tastes rich, but never fear, it only has about 142 calories per serving. You will need the following for:

DATE FLUFF

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1½ cups skim milk
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon creamy peanut butter
⅓ cup pitted, snipped dates
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites
Pitted dates, snipped, optional

In a saucepan sprinkle the gelatin over milk; stir over medium heat until gelatin is dissolved. Now slowly stir half of the hot mixture into the beaten egg yolks and return all to the saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat for 1 to 2 minutes or till slightly thickened. Remove from heat. Now blend in the sugar and peanut butter. Stir in the ⅓ cup of dates and vanilla. Chill till partly set.

Next beat the egg whites to stiff peaks and fold into the gelatin mixture. Spoon the mixture into individual dessert glasses or 6 ounce custard cups. Chill until firm. You can garnish this with snipped dates if you desire. Sure makes it look pretty. There you have it. A delicious pudding to go with a delicious salad. Together, they make a terrific summer supper.

Papa Joe's kitchen tip: If you'll keep a powder puff in the flour canister, it sure comes in handy when you are dusting flour onto the rolling pin or pastry board.

If you would like a copy of Papa Joe's Cookbook, "How To Open An Egg", just send $5.95, plus $1.00 postage to, Papa Joe Reed, 1425 E. 6th St. Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Expert shares menus, snacks

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

Michelle Werner, a registered dietitian at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, visited Howard College's baby-sitting clinic June 18 to teach participants how to prepare nutritious meals for children.

She also offered daily menu suggestions. A typical menu might include:

- Breakfast: ¼ cup orange juice, ¼ cup malt-meal cereal, ½ cup milk.
- Morning snack: ½ banana, ¼ cup milk.
- Lunch: 2 tablespoons ground meat, ¼ cup chopped cooked carrots, ½ apple, peeled and sliced, ½ roll, ½ cup milk.
- Afternoon snack: 1-inch cube cheese, 2 crackers, ½ cup milk.
- Supper: 2 tablespoons chopped chicken, ¼ cup sweet peas, ½ peach, sliced, ½ slice bread, ½ cup milk.

Werner also offered recipes for fun and tasty snacks, including:

ANTS ON A LOG

Celery stalks
Smooth peanut butter
Raisins

Cut celery stalks into 3-inch lengths; place hollow side down and spread rib side with peanut butter. Sprinkle with raisins.

SEASONAL SUNDAES

Assortment of cut-up fresh fruits
Plain low-fat yogurt
*Chopped nuts
*Sunflower seeds
Raisins

Assemble any combination of cut-up fresh fruits. Spoon some yogurt on top. Top with nuts, seeds, wheat germ, grape-nuts cereal, and/or dried fruits. Serve to older children only.

FRUIT SHAKE

1 cup milk
½ cup sliced strawberries or other fresh fruit
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon teaspoon vanilla
3 or 4 ice cubes

Mix all ingredients in blender for 1 to 2 minutes or until ice is finely crushed. Makes two servings.

ANTS ON A RAFT

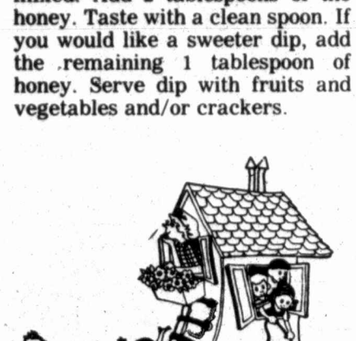
Apple halves
Smooth peanut butter
Raisins

Core apple halves. Put 1 tablespoon peanut butter into the hole left after core was removed. Sprinkle with raisins.

PEANUTTY DIP

½ cup peanut butter
½ cup plain yogurt
2 to 3 tablespoons honey
Apple wedges, celery sticks, cucumber sticks, sliced carrots, and/or crackers

In a small bowl, stir together peanut butter and yogurt until well mixed. Add 2 tablespoons of the honey. Taste with a clean spoon. If you would like a sweeter dip, add the remaining 1 tablespoon of honey. Serve dip with fruits and vegetables and/or crackers.



CHEESE DIP

2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup skim milk

Place all ingredients in blender and blend until smooth. Serve dip with fruits and vegetables and/or crackers.

The girls also learned valuable safety tips, including:

- Whenever they eat, children should be sitting upright, not lying down or running around. Always supervise at snack and meal times, because a child who is choking cannot make noise to attract your attention.

- Avoid feeding children under four years of age foods that are hard or tough to chew, small and round or sticky. Examples include: frankfurters, corn, grapes, raw carrots, nuts, peanut butter, candy, peas and corn.

Some of these foods can still be enjoyed by young children if a few precautions are taken. Simply cut frankfurters into fourths lengthwise; cut grapes into fourths; and serve peanut butter with jelly, not by the spoonful.

Peel, core and seed fruits for very young children. Fresh, dried, canned and frozen fruits and juices make nutritious snacks and desserts.

Older children enjoy raw vegetables served with thier own individual bowl of dip.

Serve toasted bread as an alternative to plain bread. Cut bread or toast into strips for easy eating.

Allow children to help prepare cereals, snacks, and sandwiches.

Kitchen safety tips

- Always wear oven mitts or use pot holders when moving food in or out of the oven. Never let young children handle hot food items.

- Turn handles on all pans toward the back or middle of the stove top so pans won't get knocked off the stove.

- Keep oven mitts, pot holders, and cloth and paper towels away from the burners to avoid a possible fire.

- Check the oven and burners to make sure they are all off when you're done cooking.

- When working with knives, always cut away from yourself. Also, curl your fingers under, keeping away from the blade. Remember to workly slowly and to pay attention to what the knife is cutting and where your fingers are.

- Be careful when using a cheese grater. Keep fingers and knuckles away from the grating surface.

- Turn off kitchen equipment — such as a blender, mixer or food processer — and unplug before stirring ingredients with a spoon or any other utensil.

Man hopes teen angel is waiting in the wings

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, when I was a senior in high school, I dated a sweet, bright and very pretty girl I'll call "Lisa." I was crazy about her, but I am ashamed to say that I hurt her deeply when I dropped her, because I was ready for a sexual relationship and she wasn't. I ended up dating several girls I couldn't take home to Momma, and Lisa started dating a real "straight arrow."

I lost track of Lisa when she went off to college and became engaged to the straight arrow. I married someone else and later divorced (no children), but I've never been able to forget Lisa.

With our 20th high school reunion approaching, I've been in touch with some old friends from high school and learned that Lisa never married the straight arrow — in fact, she never married at all. However, she had a son a few years ago and gave him the same first name as mine. While it may have been a coincidence, it is not a very common name. Now I'm wondering if maybe she hasn't been able to forget me either, but I haven't the faintest idea of how to approach her.

I live 2,000 miles from my hometown, and don't know if there is another man in Lisa's life. I would go to the reunion if I knew she'd be there and was not involved. But how do I find out? I don't want to contact old friends for fear of making a fool of myself.

Any ideas, Abby? — REMEMBERING LISA

DEAR REMEMBERING: Don't worry about making a fool of yourself. Use whatever means you have to track down Lisa. One telephone call to her will tell you all you need to know.

However, don't get your hopes up. Even if Lisa goes to the reunion solo, she may not be the girl you remember from your high school days. And you may not be the boy she remembers. But it's worth a gamble. Win or lose, it could be an exciting adventure.

DEAR READERS: Spied in the column titled "Sno' Foolin'" by A.C. Snow in the News and Observer in Raleigh, N.C.:

"All the media mileage on candidates' past peccadilloes makes us appreciate Dorothy Sayers' comment:

'As I grow older and older
'And totter toward the tomb
'I find that I care less and less
'Who goes to bed with whom.'"

FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1992

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Carly Simon, director Sidney Lumet, TV host Phyllis George Brown, actress Barbara Montgomery.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An improvement in a financial situation boosts your productivity. Adopting a pragmatic approach brings the best results. Romance with a stranger could prove unwise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Give a major project your best shot. Distant or long-term matters may pose certain problems today. Act less judgmental. Be sure that your appearance and demeanor are first class.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The professional recognition you seek may elude you today but it is right around the corner. Dig in, work hard and wait for your just reward! Join in the fun and merriment tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fresh start is needed. Be interested and interesting when talking to important people — it could be your big chance for success. Do not be a bystander when the parade of creativity goes by.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Certain coworkers may try to make you look bad — a matter of "guilt by association." You can enhance your status best by emphasizing your independence and self-sufficiency.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be time to seek a pay raise or new employment. Be willing to relocate. You can avoid domestic upheaval by consulting your mate or partner before making any final decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will have to be your most beaming, people-loving self to counter the tension that exists in the workplace today. Your gift for gab convinces someone influential of a project's worth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Success is certain if you uncover new facts today. The information you obtain could signal events to come or provide you with a new vantage point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you have your eye on a special household item or business venture, now is an opportune time to investigate further, and perhaps invest money. Should you have any doubts, consult an expert.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An urge to get out and about should be indulged. A public event attended by VIPs could be right up your alley. Dress to impress if dining out tonight. Polish your image.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A long-cherished dream could come true now. A close friend or business associate waves the lucky wand. Become a comparison shopper; you have a sharp eye for bargains.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A bit of good luck will suspend financial worries. Nonetheless, try to keep expenses down. An old romance could be rekindled. Group activities and parties are under favorable influences.

After hearing and considering the evidence the Board makes the following findings of fact:
These structures are in such an advanced stage of deterioration that they could not economically be brought up to the City Codes i.e., no plumbing or wiring, missing windows and doors, cannot be secured. Poses a fire hazard to surrounding buildings. All persons determined from official public records to have legal interest in the properties were sent a notice to abate by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested; that the person in charge of the properties failed to respond to said notice; that notice of publication was published in the Big Spring, Herald directed to the owner(s) and all persons determined from official public records to have a legal interest in the properties.
Now, therefore, the Board hereby finds that based on the evidence presented to the Board the above described structures are unsafe and pose an immediate hazard to life and to the safety of the public and constitutes a nuisance and should be demolished.
It is therefore, ordered that the above described structures be demolished upon compliance with the prerequisites set out below and in accordance with the detailed requirements hereinafter specified.
The Building Official shall cause a copy of this decision to be mailed by certified mail, return receipt requested, and by ordinary mail to the owners and all persons, including lien holders, determined from official public records to have a legal interest in the properties and to be published in a paper of general circulation within the county and after ten (10) days has elapsed from the publication dated, or the date returned receipt is returned, whichever is later, the demolition shall commence as follows:
The Director of Public Works shall direct the demolition of the structures to include water and waste water tap facilities. The lot shall be finished to a grade that will allow a hand-held push mower to be used in the maintenance of the property thereafter. An accurate record of all time, equipment and other charges associated with the abatements of the substandard structures shall be presented to the City Secretary, who shall file an appropriate lien against the properties for the charges incurred.
The effective date of the decision shall be the date which is ten (10) days after the said publication date or the date the returned receipt is returned. The building official is hereby ordered to file with this Board a copy of this decision as published along with the complete publishers affidavit and said return receipt.
Dated this 18th day of June, 1992.

Colorado Discovers New Breed Of Vacationer

A new breed of vacationer has been discovered frequenting Colorado resorts in the summer. This upscale vacationer, who rarely travels alone, likes to rough it in style.

To these vacationers, "roughing it" means drinking martinis out of paper cups. Dining under the stars means sitting in the outdoor garden of a restaurant, and camping consists of sleeping in a bed in a comfortable room.

The new Colorado adventurers, however, like the outdoors and "soft adventure" including fishing, hiking, bicycling and white water rafting. They also enjoy sightseeing, particularly visiting small towns and villages. They take in landmarks, historical sites, interesting architecture and outdoor scenery.

But when the day's activities are complete, they return to their resort accommodations, use the amenities such as a hot tub and prepare for an evening at a fine restaurant.

This emerging market segment, which represents 13 percent of summer vacationers to the state, was identified as the Colorado Country Resort Vacationer in a research study conducted by Longwoods International in November 1990.

In addition to their home state, Colorado resort vacationers come from Texas, Illinois, California, Kansas, Wisconsin, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Nebraska and New York. With an average age of 44, most (63 percent) are college educated with an average household income of over $51,000. In addition to their interest in sports, the resort vacationer is more likely to participate in cultural activities which abound at Colorado resorts in the summer.

"With the growing popularity of Colorado resorts in the summer, we are not surprised to find that there are a number of vacationers who like the outdoors and the Colorado experience, but like to be pampered as well," said Rich Meredith, executive director of the Colorado Tourism Board. "Colorado is the only mountain state, per Longwood's, among the top 10 states favored by vacationers for a country resort vacation, and as a result, the resorts have developed special experiences for this vacationer," he said.

Colorado has a variety of resort options to choose from including Aspen, Beaver Creek, Breckenridge, the Broadmoor, Copper Mountain, Cordillera, Crested Butte, dude and guest ranches, Keystone, Steamboat, Tamarron, Telluride, Vail and Winter Park.

NEWS OF TRAVEL

Quincentennial Columbus Celebrations Sail Into Genoa

This is a very special year for Italy's Commissioner of Liguria, Dr. Eraldo Crespi, and for tourists to the bustling Italian port city of Genoa. It is here, on the Ligurian coast, that the great explorer Christopher Columbus was born, and it is here that the largest celebrations of the quincentennial anniversary will take place at the "Colombo '92" exhibition, from May 15 to August 15.

In honor of his discovery of the "New World" in 1492, this exhibition will highlight 500 years of maritime exploration including exhibits detailing the many aspects of ship building and design, navigation, and oceanography through the centuries. There will be many exhibit halls located around the port, and special computer terminals will help visitors find more information on their particular interests. Beyond the halls of this fascinating show, the city of Genoa comes into the spotlight as a new center for world attention.

A tour of the city will reveal an enchanting blend of old and new. One can walk through its well preserved medieval Old Town, where Columbus' father was responsible for the keys to the town gates, and actually tour the home where Columbus was born! Or enjoy more modern pleasures of fine dining and shopping in this city on the Mediterranean coast.

Central Holiday Tours, the official representative of the "Colombo '92" exhibition and the largest wholesaler of tours and travel to Italy, has put together a package which lets Americans get the most from this once-in-a-lifetime experience.

The Colombo '92 mascot, "Gatto Cristoforo," will be a familiar face during the exposition.

For those interested in group tours, CHT is offering a 13-day "Discovering Christopher Columbus" program with visits to Genoa, including a day at the exhibition, and a visit to Columbus' home; Venice; Florence; and Rome. The independent traveler can arrange a completely customized tour according to budget and interests.

Wherever you visit in Italy, you'll be surrounded by its splendor and charm. For a colorful brochure detailing the Columbus Quincentennial, and the wide variety of tour packages available to Italy, see your travel agent or call Central Holiday Tours, telephone (800) 526-6045.

HOW TO "BARE" THE SUMMER

—A Practical Guide to Super Summer Legs—

The heat is on! And as the temperature rises, so do the hemlines. The watchword for summer is LEGS. Smooth and silky legs are an absolute must for the summer season, and with a little TLC ("Tender Leg Care"), your legs can be supersexy all summer long!

The shaving experts who developed the Daisy Plus™ razor for women advise that the first step to smooth legs is, of course, a close shave. But beware! Sun, salt and chlorine often irritate. To protect your legs, shave the night before a day of sun and swimming. Following are more tips on getting that perfect summer shave:

- Moisture is critical—never shave dry!
- Instead of shaving in the shower, treat yourself to a cool summer bath. Lie back and relax—the more you soak, the better shave you will get!
- Lather up! Use plenty of shaving cream in a gentle, sensitive skin formula, or, if you prefer, apply a creamy coat of soap and water.
- Use a sharp, clean razor that's designed for a woman's needs. Daisy Plus™ from Gillette has a curved, textured handle (so you can see where you're going and get a good grip), twin blades (for the closest, safest shave), and the Moisture-smooth™ strip that makes the razor glide effortlessly over your leg and leaves a gentle moisturizer in its wake.
- For the ultrasensitive bikini line, be sure to let the shaving cream soak in well. Using a light touch, shave in the same direction that the hairs are growing (this helps avoid those irritating bumps from ingrown hairs). If you must go over the same area twice, re-lather first.
- After shaving, rinse well and pat your skin dry. Apply an alcohol-free moisturizing lotion to still-damp legs to lock in moisture.
- Never shave with a sunburn. Tanned legs, however, look better shaved. Shaving will remove dried, peeling skin and keep the glamorous glow of your tan alive longer.

Other tips for keeping your cool:

- Give your legs a cool water rinse after you finish shaving.
- Put your moisturizer in the refrigerator for a cool post-shaving treat.
- If you're wearing pantyhose, choose a summerweight style to let your legs breathe.
- Just before going out, dab a little perfume on your pulse points—behind the knee and at the ankle. The alcohol has a cooling effect.

Super Summer Legs need TLC: "Tender Leg Care" Moisture is the key! Soak before shaving, apply shaving cream or soap and water liberally.

SAFETY SENSE

Drowning Prevention Checklist

Here's a checklist that will help keep your child safe when he or she is in or near a swimming pool, hot tub or spa. It comes from the experts at the National Swimming Pool Safety Committee.

Keep toys and other children's playthings away from the pool area.

__Never take your eyes off your child, even for a second.

__Don't allow barriers, such as fences or walls, to give you a false sense of security. There is no substitute for supervision.

__Don't consider your children to be "drown proof" because you enrolled them in "water proofing" or swimming classes.

__Don't rely on inflatable devices to keep your child afloat.

__Make sure your pool or spa has effective barriers that guard against unsupervised access, particularly by young children.

__Learn how to administer life-saving techniques to children, including cardiopulmonary resucitation (CPR).

__Install a phone, or keep a cordless phone in the pool or spa area.

__Post the number of the emergency medical services in an easy-to-see place.

Remember, there is no substitute for supervision when a child is in or near a swimming pool.

HEALTH HINTS

Summer Food Safety Tips

Cookouts, picnics, and afternoons by the pool are just a few of summer's pleasures.

Keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 45 degrees.

The United Food and Commercial Workers Union (UFCW)—whose 1.3 million members process, package, and sell much of the nation's food—reminds outdoor chefs to play it safe when fixing and storing food.

• Pack cold food in an insulated cooler with ample ice or cold-pack inserts.

• Cook meat and poultry thoroughly and keep cold.

• Bacteria's danger zone is between 45° and 140°F. Because toxins that can cause food poisoning are produced in this temperature range, be safe and keep hot foods above 140°and cold foods below 45°.

• Contrary to what many people think, mayonnaise isn't what spoils salads and sandwich spreads; the culprit is the protein it's mixed with. Follow the same guidelines for preparing foods containing mayonnaise as for other perishables.

• Use an electric starter or cylinder to mound charcoal in the grill instead of using starter fluid. Liquid starters contain chemicals that can leave an unpleasant taste on food.

• Trim the fat before slapping that steak on the grill. Even if you don't eat the fat, some of it gets absorbed during cooking.

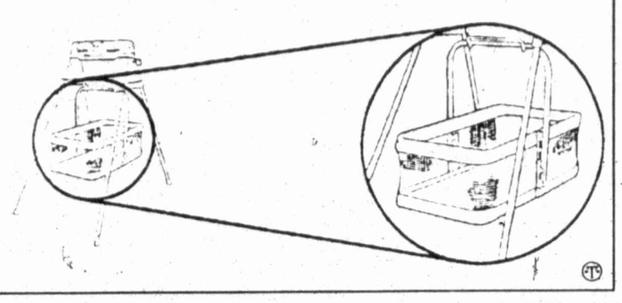
GRACO RECALLS CRADLE PORTION OF SWING BASED ON REPORTS OF SUFFOCATION INCIDENTS

CRADLE with STRAIGHT legs (swinging head-to-foot) CALL

ONLY CRADLE RECALLED— STOP USING IMMEDIATELY!



NOTE: To report an unsafe consumer product or a product-related injury, consumers may call the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission's toll-free hotline at 800-638-8270; the Maryland TTY number is 800-492-9104.

Graco Children's Products, Elverson, PA, in cooperation with the Consumer Product Safety Commission, announces the voluntary recall of the cradle portion of Converta-Cradle® brand cradle swings. Only cradle swings with straight legs and which swing the infant from head to foot are involved. The company has received reports of four incidents of partial or total suffocation of infants while in the cradle when it was used suspended from the cradle swing. A total of 169,000 units were sold after January 1990.

The Converta-Cradle® brand cradle swing, which retailed for about $99.00, includes a swing stand and motor, an infant seat/carrier, and a cradle. ONLY THE CRADLE PORTION IS BEING RECALLED. Affected units can be identified by two features—the swing stand legs are straight, not curved, and the cradle swings the infant from head to foot. NO OTHER GRACO® SWING PRODUCTS ARE INVOLVED IN THIS CORRECTIVE ACTION.

Consumers who own Converta-Cradle® brand cradle swings WITH STRAIGHT LEGS should STOP USING THE CRADLE PORTION OF THE SWING IMMEDIATELY, and should call the company at 800-942-1700 for information relating to the replacement of the cradle. The company offers, in exchange for proof of destruction of the cradle, a choice of one of several GRACO® products or a refund of $25.00 for the value of the cradle portion of the swing.

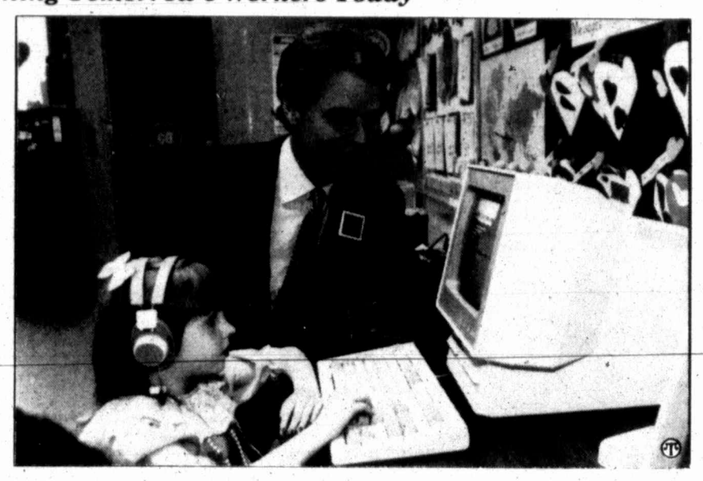
BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Training Tomorrow's Workers Today



When it comes to doing business, computer technology and high speed communications make "where you live" far less important than "what you know." Take West Virginia, for example. Isolated historically by the Appalachian Mountains, the rules of the "old economy" dictated that employment more often than not depended on what nature provided. In West Virginia that was often coal-mining. But today's economy has some new rules and states like West Virginia have been quick to take advantage of them.

As Gov. Gaston Caperton quickly and enthusiastically points out, it no longer matters where a worker sits down in front of a computer screen—the only thing that matters it whether that worker knows how to "work the system."

Here's a small example: pick up a telephone in Washington, D.C. and dial "411" for directory assistance, and the operator you reach will be sitting in West Virginia, not in the District of Columbia.

For the operator, of course, the human benefits are obvious—he or she can enjoy the quality of life in the state one song calls "almost heaven" while making a good living and avoiding those infamous, nerve-jangling, fender-bashing traffic jams in Washington. For a corporation, the benefits are equally obvious—lower costs of doing business and a more contented, more stable workforce.

"The economic hopes of our state and many others depend on our workers being adequately trained for the jobs of the 21st Century, when most jobs will require greater technical skills," says Gov. Caperton. "We are directing every resource to prepare young West Virginians for those jobs."

The effort Caperton refers to is the comprehensive, educational reform package which West Virginia adopted in 1990—an action that won the state recognition in January 1991 from the National Governors Association as one of only eight states in the country moving forward aggressively. (The others are Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.)

"Our goal is to build a model program that is recognized as the nation's best in preparing our future workers," said Caperton.

Here is what is going into the "model" program:

—Upgrading the teacher workforce by (1) raising salaries to attract—and hold—top-flight teachers, and (2) expanding teacher training, particularly in high-tech skills.

—Increasing parental involvement in the educational process at every level.

—Reducing administrative overhead and freeing additional funds for education. Part of this effort is the installation of "educational/information" systems, a financial and administrative reporting program. These systems, being installed with the help of IBM, have the effect of allowing teachers to spend more time teaching, and administrators to better measure high-tech success.

—A 10-year, $70 million program to install IBM computers in every single West Virginia classroom from kindergarten through 12th grade.

Phase One of the computer program, which will be completed in 1993, includes the installation of computers in kindergartens and first grades. The state program is entirely voluntary in each of West Virginia's 55 counties through a working arrangement with IBM Educational Systems.

John Gency, Principal of Clay County Elementary School says "West Virginia recognizes that the same technological tools (computers) which helped create this new age must also become part of the learning process."

Says Caperton, "If a state hopes to produce the educated workforce the 21st century will demand, technology must become part of our students' learning process; it must be in the schools in early grades.

"We're betting our entire future on our ability to prepare these young people for the jobs of the future," says Caperton, "and I think it's the safest bet I ever made."

SPORTS SHORTS

"Pull For The Team"

No other sports competition shows the true meaning of Olympic glory better than the decathlon. One of the first Olympic events held by the ancient Greeks, the decathlon is arguably the most grueling track and field event. By excelling in 10 field and running events over two days, the winner earns the title of "World's Greatest Athlete."

Most Americans remember Bruce Jenner's triumphant moment at the 1976 Olympic Summer Games in Montreal, when he proudly hoisted the American flag around the stadium upon winning the decathlon. Jenner joined an elite group of American decathlon gold medalists -- Bob Mathias, Milt Campbell, Rafer Johnson and Bill Toomey -- that dominated the sport in the 20th century.

Since Jenner, no American has come close to winning the decathlon. That's a 16-year dry spell. But for the 1992 Olympic Summer Games in Barcelona, the U.S. will unleash its dynamic decathlon duo, Dan O'Brien and Dave Johnson, who are front-running gold medal contenders. These Olympic hopefuls have received extensive training throughout the year to prepare them for international competition, along with other top athletes on the U.S.A./Visa Decathlon Team. Through this program, America's top 10 decathletes get high-tech training, personalized coaching and motivational support from American Olympic decathlon gold medalists.

You can join the effort to support U.S. decathletes and the entire U.S. Olympic Team through a special program. Every time you use your Visa card, Visa will make its own contribution to the U.S. Olympic Team or you can make direct donations by calling 1-800-Visa-USA. You'll be serving a worthwhile cause in helping to raise funds for our Olympic hopefuls.

America's dirty dozen: The twelve toughest cities for your automobile's appearance

The changing seasons bring many things to Americans, but the sunshine and rain, heat and cold, ozone and other elements that come and go during the year especially burden one of their prized possessions: automobiles.

With this in mind, Armor All Products Corporation recently compiled America's Dirty Dozen, the 12 toughest cities in America for car appearance. Los Angeles leads the list, followed by Sacramento, the New York/Newark area, Phoenix and Washington D.C.

The study measures five categories — heat, ultraviolet rays, ozone, environmental fallout and annual temperature range — that are most harmful to exposed automobile surfaces, such as paint, rubber, vinyl and plastic.

Kansas City, Dallas/Fort Worth, Denver, Atlanta, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis round out the list.

"While every area has certain effects that can damage a vehicle's appearance, others have combined factors which compound the problems," says Leslie Kennedy, Armor All's manager of consumer relations.

"The America's Dirty Dozen list is designed to alert consumers in these areas that they need to take extra precautions to protect their vehicles," Kennedy adds.

"Preventative measures include regular washing, having a good application of wax on the car, using a silicone-based protectant on all rubber, vinyl and plastic areas inside and out, parking in the shade whenever possible, and rolling down the windows slightly on warm days."

Armor All used a combined 10-point rating system. L.A. was the runaway high scorer with a 9.2; Sacramento's score was 7.6.

Each of the five categories had a two-point weighting system. Heat was based on average daily maximum temperature; UV rating on an average percentage of sunlight between sunrise and sunset; ozone from the number of days per year the city exceeded national air quality standards; environmental fallout through exposure to elements, such as precipitation and acid rain; and annual temperature range on the change of an area's yearly high and low temperatures.

Information was compiled from several sources, including the National Weather Service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. SC926875

Car phones help police catch drunk drivers

The more than five million car telephones in use around the country can be a novel weapon in the fight against drunk driving.

At least 18 states have set up special phone numbers for motorists to report suspected drunk drivers, according to the Insurance Information Institute. (Others ask callers to use 911 or the operator.) The telephone tips can help reduce the annual death toll from alcohol-related accidents of more than 20,000 people.

Callers are asked to provide a license plate number, description of the vehicle, the highway or road and direction of the suspected drunk driver. Police officers will do their own surveillance to establish probable cause.

A Maryland State Police spokesman said car telephone reporting "provides a deterrence for citizens to know that if a car has a cellular phone, that potentially can be the eyes and ears of the police."

Maryland has introduced a hotline to report motorists who are weaving or showing other signs of intoxication. And the state spread the word through newspapers and television along Interstate 95. All a caller has to do is dial #77 on this highway. On other roads, call 911.

For years, the I.I.I. has been urging motorists to use extreme caution when driving and telephoning.

"In the excitement of alerting the police about a suspected drunk driver, you don't want to get your own car in an accident," says I.I.I. spokesman Peter van Aartrijk Jr. "Either have a passenger make the call or carefully pull off the road before calling."

Motorists without car phones still can alert the police — if they can find a pay phone or toll booth, the I.I.I. says. And police emphasize if there's no special number in your state, motorists can get help by dialing 911 or the operator. Phone operators are trained to call the nearest police agency.

States with special phone numbers to report suspected drunk drivers include Alabama: (800) 525-5555; Arizona: (800) 525-5555; Colorado: (303) 239-4501; Idaho: (800) 233-1212; Kansas: (800) 332-REDI; Maryland (I-95 only): #77; Nebraska: (800) 525-5555; New Hampshire: (800) 622-7956; New Jersey: (800) 525-5555; New York (car phones): *DWI; New York (regular phones): (800) CURB-DWI; North Carolina: (800) 662-7956; Ohio: (800) 525-5555; Oregon: (800) 24-DRUNK; Pennsylvania (Turnpike only): *11; Rhode Island: (800) 525-5245; Texas: (800) 525-5555; Washington: (800) 28-DRUNK; and Wyoming: (800) 442-9090.

If there is no special number in your state, motorists should dial 911 or the operator. SC927003

Com Shop can handle all your phone needs

Pictured above the Big Spring location of Com Shop 410 East 3rd can handle all your phone' needs. Give us a call at 267-2423 or come by Let's do business.

Com Shop began in 1985, and was founded on the old-fashioned principle of one company to handle all your phone needs.

Two former telephone company employees saw a need for more personalized and less expensive, telephone repair service and decided to fill the gap. With offices in Odessa and Big Spring Jim Haas, president, and Travis Crow, vice president, incorporated Com Shop in 1986. Their technicians, Kenneth Crow, Clifford Crow and James Sides, have years of combined experience. Their secretary is Johnanna Crow.

It's now 1992 and Com Shop has really grown, we have approximately 24 technicians and have opened offices in Lubbock, Amarillo and DeSota, Texas. Our technicians are attending schools, learning the newest techniques, and how to install the newest systems.

"As a full service telephone company, Com Shop supplies everything but the dial tone."

If you need a new telephone or a new telephone system, or only need it repaired call Com Shop. "We work hard to get the job done as quickly as possible."

Com Shop sells and leases phones and systems, and also sell pay phones, and assorted fax machines, and custom made phone cords.

So if you need service in the Dallas area, from Abilene to El Paso, from Amarillo to the Rio Grande call Com Shop today! An authorized dealer for Wes-Tex Cellular Telephones. Call (915) 267-2423 410 E. 3rd Big Spring or call 1-800-422-3239.
