C. C. Bishop for County Judge

C. C. Bishop has asked the Wellington Leader to announce his candidacy for the office of County Judge of Collingsworth County.

"I would like to point out that this has been my home since 1928 and I have just had my 60th birthday. It is with a great deal of pleasure that I look back to the time when I served this county as County Judge and County Attorney. This period of time was during the depression days, when at one time 22 1/2 per cent of our people were on relief. Even with this condition prevailing our county was able to maintain work for the people and to operate on a cash basis. The County accomplished other achievements and among these was the cooperation with the State Highway Department in building the East-West Highway through the county. The county's share was the expense of the right-of-way. In asking for this office, we realize that it is the office of greatest responsibility connected with it to any office in the county. Therefore the one that fills this place of trust should have good business judgment and a good degree of leadership. When proper leadership is furnished it is opinion of candidate that other county officials will co-operate in the advancement of the interests of the County.

We would like to state in making this announcement that no individual, groups, or organizations are sponsoring my race, neither am I running with any group of candidates.

It will be my pleasure to see the voters of the County and discuss with you the County problems.

Shape of Earth Studied

Astronomical Survey Site Set Up in County

An astronomical survey crew from the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey has set up a station four miles north of Wellington as one point of work in a project to determine the true shape of the earth along the 35th parallel.

The four-man crew, headed by Lt. Kenneth A. McDonald, will take observations each night the weather is clear for a period of about two weeks before moving on to a new observation point.

The crew is following the 35th parallel completely across the United States, working from east to west. Their next stop will be Clarendon.

"We are not observing the Explorer, contrary to what many people think," Lt. McDonald said, adding that it would be an accident if they caught sight of the earth satellite.

The survey will provide basic scientific information, he explained.

"It will make possible more accurate surveys and while it is not exactly connected with the International Geophysical Year, it may have a little bearing on it. It's a little hard to explain this because it is concerned with basic scientific information," he added.

Using a Bamberg astronomical transit and Wild T-3 theodolite, the crew takes observations of certain stars and from these observations arrive at the information sought.

There are a large number of catalogued stars which may be used, but the crew uses the same group for a considerable period of time.

Observation stations are spaced about 15 miles apart, and the one north of Wellington is the group's first in Texas. It is on the farm owned by Mrs. Cameron Beam and Miss Hattie D. Wells, on Highway 83. A marker on this farm identifies the highest point in the county south of Salt Fork River.

"We welcome anyone who wants to come out and watch us, and we will do anything we can to explain our work in the limited time we have," Lt. McDonald said.

Nightly observations will be finished from 11 to 11:30 p. m.

Members of the crew, besides Lt. McDonald are Lt. L. G. Tucker, Robert Pryce, and Floyd Martin. Price and Martin have their families with them.

Wellington in Weather Research Program

Wellington will take part in the Weather Bureau Severe Storm Research program, with special instruments installed that are designed to identify tornado and other severe storm conditions.

T. H. Franklin, in charge of the service department of General Telephone Company, will operate the installation. He also reports rainfall for the Weather Bureau.

Wellington has been chosen as one of 200 stations being established to provide a dense network of special recording instruments which are expected to materially assist in the intensified severe storm research program of the U. S. Weather Bureau, it was announced by E. L. Hardy, Regional Administrative Officer of the Regional Office at Fort Worth, Texas.

Preliminary work in a network of instruments in central and eastern Texas and Oklahoma has indicated that a sudden barometric pressure change in a line of roughly 5 to 100 miles in length and traveling at 30 to 35 miles per hour can definitely be associated with severe storm occurrences such as tornadoes. This phenomena has been called a "pressure jump line" and the Bureau is investigating the conditions immediately ahead of and behind these.

The dinner will be in the community building at 7:30 p. m. Those wanting tickets should contact the chamber of commerce office immediately, N. M. Higdon, manager, said.

Speaking as a newspaperman, Cook will talk on the theme "The significance of world news of the moment and its importance to us."

This will be in the nature of a "news behind the news" talk, and when Cook speaks of key trouble spots of the world today — Russia, the Middle East, India, Southeast Asia and Africa — he will be speaking of places where he has traveled and worked.

"It is terribly important to us to keep up with world news," Cook told The Wellington Leader this week. "How it affects our every day lives, all the time, is easy to see."

Franklin said he will meet with the Panhandle Amateur radio network every day at 5:30 p. m., or in time of an emergency, he will operate at any time to help keep people advised of tornado conditions.

Hunter Sells Sheet Iron Day After Ad Is Published

"Don't run my ad the second time; I've sold all my sheet iron," Chester Hunter told The Wellington Leader this week.

He advertised the sheet iron for sale in last week's issue, and the day after the paper was published, he had sold all he had to sell.

Hunter considers the 50c he spent for the Wellington Leader ad a good investment.

Local Labor Used

Work Starts Monday On Housing Project

Construction started Monday on Wellington's low - rent Housing project, and at mid-week, workmen were setting forms and making a 11-inch fill with sand from Buck Creek.

N. M. Higdon, secretary of the Wellington Housing Authority, said hiring of unskilled workers started Monday and others will be hired next week, as work progresses. Most of the labor of this type will be hired locally.

S. P. Barker, owner of Barker Construction Company, which holds the contract, was here this week as work got under way. Superintendent of the project is C. R. Rowe.

Robert Bruce, who represents the Federal Housing Authority, arrived last week during the snow from California to represent that agency on the project. Also here is Ralph R. Cole, architect's representative on the job and inspector for the Housing Authority of the City of Wellington.

Present construction is on the 26 units for white occupancy, located on Haskell Street, between 13th and 14th Streets.

Work on the project has been delayed by weather and by the death recently of Mrs. Barker.

Bruce Housing Project Engineer

Robert Bruce has been assigned by the Federal Housing Administration as project engineer for The Wellington Housing Project and he and Mrs. Bruce reached here late last week.

They were transferred here from Vacaville, Calif., Air Base and will be in Wellington about 10 months.

His headquarters are Dallas, but the couple formerly lived at Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce are living in the Rodgers Apartments.

For Windbreak Program

Area SCS Technicians Attend School Here

All professional technicians of Soil Conservation Service in Area I will attend a windbreak school in Wellington Thursday afternoon and Friday morning, February 27 and 28. Classroom sessions will be in the SCS office.

After a lag for a number of years, interest is again growing in windbreaks, or shelterbelts, as they are more often called.

Discussions at the school Thursday will be "Windbreak Job in Texas", Jack Douglas agronomy specialist, SCS, Amarillo; "Planning Field Windbreaks", Fred Squires, work unit conservationist, SCS, Wellington; "Planning farmstead Windbreaks", Marion Everhart, range specialist, SCS, Amarillo; "Source of Material", Douglas; "Keeping Records", Everhart; and "Information program on Windbreaks", Squires.

A field tour from 8 a. m. to 11 a. m. Friday is scheduled, when one farmstead windbreak and one field windbreak will be visited. Area 1 of SCS covers roughly the eastern half of the Panhandle, and approximately 25 technicians are expected to attend.

"Windbreaks are used to protect farm buildings, livestock, wildlife and cropland," Squires pointed out. "Generally speaking the only place suitable in Salt Fork SCD for good field windbreaks is immediately north of Wellington. Windbreaks take a soil that takes water fast, such as sands and sandy loam, that do have high water table.

On tighter soils, field windbreaks have not been successful to the point desired.

"Farmstead windbreaks around buildings of the farm headquarters, however, should be and can be used throughout Salt Fork SCD. These should include evergreens to break the prevailing wind."

CROSSROADS

REPORT

Dear Editor:

I see where a rich young woman in California has divorced her husband on account of when he married her and her money he retired and stays in bed until noon every day.

Seems that she don't believe in equal rights for men, especially when it comes to marrying a meal ticket. Old fashioned, I guess.

Like my no-account neighbor's wife. When she had to start taking in washing, she dispossessed herself of him and both of his hound dogs.

School district up in New York City is having trouble with some of its youngsters who get very rowdy at times and pull all sorts of childish pranks such as driving their principal to suicide.

My bitter Creek school alumnus neighbor says the kids gave trouble there, too, but the nearest teacher ever got to suicide was when he tried to whip a 17-year-old fifth grader.

Says, though, the parent-teacher clique in that district had a system whereby a kid which got into trouble at school was in more of the same when he got home, and this method turned out three or four pretty decent citizens.

My jinxed neighbors got called on by an Internal Revenue agent here the other day, on account of he has been losing money and this manner of doing business is not approved by Uncle Samuel.

Of course, it is still technically legal to keep from paying income taxes by refraining from making a profit, but Congress will likely soon get around to plugging up this loophole.

Being as this don't produce any bureaucrat fodder, the chances are that before long when a man starts losing money he is apt to go to jail for trying to overthrow the government.

I see where an advertisement writer says the new chemise (sack) style dresses flatter the feminine figure, and all the time I thought there was a Bureau to keep advertisers truthful.

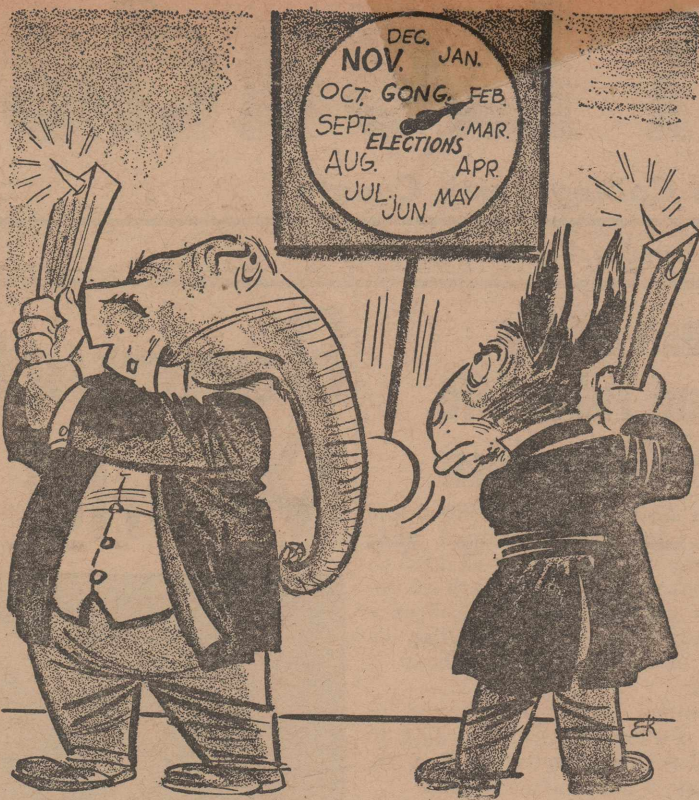

My tottering neighbor says it's true some gals' figures look better in a Mother Hubbard or behind a tree, but this is an exception to the rule and gets more exceptional the older a man grows.

Says the bag motif ought to be outlawed just to keep us elderly citizens from getting short-changed on our looking privileges.

I note that the house of representatives in Washington has got a group which they call their subcommittee on legislative oversight.

My shrewd neighbor reckons this must be the boys who see to it that the legislature don't leave anything untaxed through over-

I see where it's reported that some FCC members have taken little presents like TV sets and expense money from people in the radio-TV business, but say they don't ever let these gifts influence their judgment in favor of the givers.

Mrs. Mattie A. Jameson Observes 80th Birthday Quietly at Home in Dodson

Mrs. Mattie A. Jameson of Dodson observed her 80th birthday Friday, February 7, when her four children gathered to join her in a birthday dinner.

This was held at her home one-half mile west of Dodson, the home in which she has lived since February 1901. The only time she has stayed away was from 1906 to 1908, during the school months, when the family lived in Wellington for the children to attend school. At that time, there was no Dodson, and the children, then small, would have to walk four or five miles to school.

Later the children did attend one of the schools that was a forerunner of Dodson, Brewer, with Mrs. Ola Cochran Hopkins, now of Hollis, as teacher.

Mrs. Jameson was born in Montague county, and was married there to C. E. Hunt. They later lived in Idaho, but returned about 1897, and he filed on land at Madge. She recalls that many of the people already here were from Montague county, and three wagon loads of friends met them when they got off the train at Childress.

Mr. Hunt died in 1899. In February 1901 she was married to R. S. Jameson and moved with him to her present home. He died in 1936.

Mrs. Jameson is still active, with quilting and crocheting as her hobbies. During the snow last week, her children arrived at her house to find her outside looking after her chickens. She frequently walks to town, over the protest of younger members of her family.

During the early years, she and her family attended church services at Bitter Creek, but with the establishments of Dodson, she became a charter member of the Church of Christ.

Mrs. Jameson has four children: Gilbert Hunt, Mrs. Pete

O'Brien, Mrs. Van Bonneau and Rufie Jameson. All of them live at Dodson. She also has one sister, Mrs. George Spurlin of Vinson.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Strickland are visiting with their children, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Strickland and son of Orange; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Robinson and family and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Poor and family of Baton Rouge, Louisiana. From there they plan to go to New Harmony, Indiana to visit another son and family, Don Strickland; then on to Decatur, Ill., to visit with their daughter and family, Mrs. Kenneth Babb.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Herring and Cheryl Gawn of Dallas spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Smith.

New Texas Egg Law in Effect February 17

By CLYDE JOHNSON

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas has joined the 47 other states in setting up an egg grading, labeling and inspection law. And enforcement of this new act got under way on February 17.

Passed by the last regular session of the State Legislature, the law is administered by the Texas Department of Agriculture under Commissioner John White. It regulates handling and sale of chicken eggs and provides for the licensing of all handlers and dealers.

Under the law, no person can buy or sell eggs within the state for subsequent resale without first obtaining a license from the Commissioner of Agriculture. Producer selling only eggs from their flocks are exempt from the law unless they claim a grade. Hatcheries, public eating places and food manufacturers also are exempt.

Although retailers must be licensed, they aren't required to pay a fee. The annual license fee for dealers, wholesalers and processors is determined according to the average weekly volume of the month in which the licensee handled the most eggs, in the preceding 12 months ending on May 31. License fees create a fund for enforcement of the act.

The law became effective on Aug. 22, but actual enforcement of violations won't start until February 17 under provisions of the act.

Commissioner White announced that the Egg Marketing Advisory Board, appointed by Gov. Price Daniel, had adopted a strong policy against willful violators — including those egg handlers operating without a license, from the Texas Department of Agriculture. Violation of the act is a misdemeanor with penalties of from $50 to $1,000 in fines. Also, licenses may be suspended; and "stop" sale" orders can be enforced on any eggs found to be in violation. Commissioner White explained that egg grading is not mandatory. But labeling of cartons is required.

When eggs are ungraded, the word "ungraded" must be plainly printed on the carton in 1/4 inch letters. Cartons of graded eggs must be labelled as to size and grade. Standards and grades established are those, used by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

As a result of the law, the consuming public can select the quality and size of eggs desired.

Cold storage eggs also prohibits advertising of egg prices without also designating the size and grade of the advertised eggs. And descriptive advertising, such as "fresh", "yard", "cage", "infertile", and words of similar import, is prohibited on eggs below Grade A quality.

Commissioner White emphasized, however, that producers don't come under the law if they sell only from their flocks and don't claim grades. If the producers claim a grade, he must conform with the act's provisions.

The proposed crackdown on violators was planned at the January meeting of the Egg Marketing and Advisory Board in Childress. Members of the board are T. D. Craddock, Hamilton; G. F. Siebel, Burton; Jim E. Whittaker, Paris; Jack DuBose, Gonaes; Dewey Stringer, Houston; Marvis Gilbreth, Weimar; D. W. Reneau, Sequin; Tom H. Boothe, San Antonio; Frank Ehrle, Childress; and F. Z. Beanblossom, ex-officio member from College Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Winegart of Pampa visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Belew and family Sunday.

Rex Peebles, student of West Texas State College at Canyon, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Peebles.

Farmers May Use Alternate Way to Figure Earnings

Self-employed farmers may use an alternate method for figuring earnings from their farm John R. Sanderson, District Manager of the local Social Security Administration Office, and Jim Pierce, Group Supervisor of Internal Revenue, Amarillo Office reminded farm operators today.

Mr. Pierce pointed out that self-employed farmers may figure their earnings for social security in several ways.

(1) If your gross income from agricultural self-employment is not more than $1800, you may count as your net farm earnings either your actual net or 2/3 of your farm gross income;

(2) If your gross farm income is more than $1800, and your net farm earnings are less than $1200, you may use either your actual net or $1200.

(3) If your gross farm income is more than $1800 and your net farm earnings are $1200 or more, you must use the actual amount of your net earnings.

Pierce added that use of the optional method, the 1956 amendments extended social security coverage to some farm owners who receive cash or crop shares from tenant farmers. If the farm-landlord under his agreement with his tenant, materially participates in the production or management of production of the farm crops raised on his land, this income, formerly excluded as rental income, may be reported for social security purposes. This provision is effective for taxable years ending after 1955.

Requests for information regarding taxes due and tax return forms should be directed to the Internal Revenue Office at Dallas, Texas. Questions concerning the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program will be answered by your social security office at Amarillo, Texas.

Now Is Time to Reset Shrubs

Now is a good time to organize shrubs into screen or foundation plantings around the home, according to Miss Kathryn Potter, home demonstration agent. Any shrubs that dot the lawn and complicate mowing may be reset at this time.

Consider potential size of the tree or shrub, when choosing a location for setting or resetting. Large growing plants are not suited for planting around the walls or foundation of the average home. They do make excellent screen plantings to give privacy to the work or recreation area of the landscape. Some large plants that require very little water are the althea, ligustrums, Arizona cypress, cherry laurel, crape myrtle, evergreen sumac and others. Nearly all of the hollies should be used in screen planting rather than placed around the house.

Shrubs for foundation plantings should be in proportion to the size of the house. For the low, ranch type house, which is very popular now, true shrubs, that is shrubs that will not grow over 8 to 10 feet, are best suited. There are many true shrubs that are drought and insect resistant. Among these are rosemary, lavender, the dwarf junipers, spirea, dwarf pyracantha, nandina, abelia, native agartia and others.

Proper location of scrubs will not only save work in pruning and care, it will add to the attractiveness and comfort of the home grounds.

THE ALL-NEW

Massey-Ferguson 65

We are introducing for the first time a 4-plow tractor with the famous Ferguson System of 4-Way Work Control and traction weight transfer. The MASSEY-FERGUSON 65 steps way out in front of the field — to stay in front for years to come. It features 41 per cent more horsepower, the new high torque engine "works with the load" — digging in when the going gets tough, easing up to cut fuel costs to a minimum when the load is light. The new wrist action 3-point hitch means even faster hook-ups, more precise implement control.

It has stronger and longer lower links with capacity to handle bigger implements and tougher jobs that are backed by a 30 per cent more powerful Ferguson hydraulic system. Swinging draw bar and interchangeable front ends make the 65 more versatile. To believe it, you will have to see it and try it. We have a full line of matched equipment to make your work faster and easier.

Trade in Wellington

... where your trade supports
prosperity you, too, can enjoy

It depends on what you like, of course. There is the warm neighborliness . . . the dignity and satisfaction of life in a community like ours . . . and there is life as she is lived in the cities . . . as one of the scrambling herd . . . where neighborliness is viewed with suspicion . . . and squalor is the lot of anybody who gets pushed aside in the rat race.

Those of us who live here have already voted our preference . . . for the more tranquil smaller community unit as a way of living. We like churches where everybody knows everybody else . . . and schools where we know our children's teachers . . . and they know us . . . we like living that is more calm, easier, safer . . . and we like business dealings with neighbors we can depend on.

But happy communities do not just grow . . . they have to be built. It takes revolving money . . . local trade volume . . . to build and maintain and enrich our chosen way of life.

Eleven Conservation Contracts Completed

24 County Landowners Seek to Enter The Great Plains Program

Twenty-four applications for contracts in the Great Plains Conservation Program, covering 18,602 acres, have been made to the Soil Conservation Service. Eleven of these applications have been processed and contracts prepared covering 8,290 acres.

Conservation work under the Great Plains program on part of these farms will start in the immediate future, marking the Salt-Fork SCD entry into the long-range program by which the government will share the costs of conservation practices with the landowner.

All of these 24 are within the boundaries of Salt Fork SCD. Fred Squyres, work unit conservationist of SCS explained. "The contract constitutes the complete conservation plan on a man's farm or ranch, and at the conclusion of the contract he should have all the conservation practices he needs on that farm or ranch."

The contracts worked up here to date generally run for a three year period, but they may be extended or modified as needed. A contract must run at least three years and not more than ten years.

On the 11 contracts prepared so far, from 20 to 24 stock tanks or erosion control dams will be built. The water ways will be shaped and seeded to carry outside water off the farm without causing erosion. Most waterways are seeded here with blue gramma, bermuda or buffalo grasses.

"On every contract signed to date, there has been some grass seeding of cropland to be taken out of cultivation and put in rangeland. Nine contracts have plans for cross fencing for better utilization of range land," Squyres said.

"Contrary to popular belief, there are still people who believe in windbreaks, and they do have a proper place. A mile and a half on windbreaks, two or three rows wide, are planned. These will include red cedar, elm, and pine."

The contracts so far average $3,500 to $4,000 of government funds. When a contract is approved, the sum of money called for is set aside for these farmers or ranchers to work with for the whole period of the contract.

When the time comes for the landowner to do a practice called for in the contract, he does it and reports the completion to the contracting officer, which is the local office of SCS.

Application for assistance under the Great Plains program can be made at any Department of Agriculture office, such as SCS, ASC, etc. The applications are forwarded to the soil conservation service, who assists the farmer or rancher in drawing up a plan for contract, if it is required to do so.

Squyres pointed out that the Great Plains program works with but does not overlap the regular government farm program. A landowner cannot draw pay from both sources for the same practice, but he can include certain practices in either program.

The cost sharing help provided under the Great Plains program is for a period of years instead of one year at a time. The government will pay up to 80 per cent of the cost of carrying out a conservation practice, the percentage depending on the practice itself.

There is no limit to the amount of assistance a farmer or rancher can receive under the Great Plains plan.

Landowners whose contracts are approved, and the acres in the program, are: L. A. Gilmore, 730 acres; J. S. Coleman, 1280; J. F. McIntush, 640; James Doneghy, 550; P. E. Starr, 320; Dan Hendard, 2,218; Herbert Massey, 640;

Clerk Reports Work of District Court for 1957

The report was made in four divisions: tax suits, divorces, civil suits and criminal cases.

Two tax suits were pending January 1, and 10 were filed during the year. None of these were disposed of, leaving 12 tax suits at the end of 1957.

There were 21 divorce suits pending January 1, 1957, and 20 were filed during the year. Twenty-eight of these 41 suits were disposed of, including 13 divorces granted. Thirteen remain on the docket.

Sixteen civil suits were pending when 1957 opened, and 44 were filed during the year, for a total of 60 on the docket. Twenty-seven civil cases were disposed of, leaving 33 pending at the end of the year. Twenty-six suits were disposed of without jury and one tried with jury. One case was appealed to a higher court.

Five criminal cases were filed during the year, added to the 13 already pending January 1, 1957. Two were tried without a jury and there were no jury trials. Pending at the end of the year were 16 cases, according to Mrs. Dodson's report.

Belew & Caison Announce New Massey-Ferguson

Arthur Belew and Charles Caison, owners of Wellington Farm Service, have announced the arrival of the all-new Massey-Ferguson 65 tractor — the first time on the market for a 4-plow tractor with the famous Ferguson system of 4-way work control and traction weight transfer.

The consolidation of the Massey Harris and Ferguson companies has brought about this new tractor, owners of Wellington Farm Service point out.

It features among other things 41 per cent more horsepower, a new high torque engine, and wrist-action 3-point hitch for faster hook-ups and more precise implement control.

The regular Massey-Harris lines of tractors and implements are continued as they were.

Belew has owned and operated Wellington Farm Service for services years, and only recently sold an interest in it to Charles Caison.

McIlhany Cited By B&PW Club

A Certificate of Service has been awarded the Honorable Grainger W. McIlhany by the Wellington Business and Professional Women's Club in appreciation of his efforts "during the 55th session of the Texas Legislature in behalf of the Women of Texas for unqualified support of legislation removing some of their legal disabilities from the property laws of Texas."

"This certificate was prepared by the legislative steering committee of the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. and signed by its president, Mrs. O. C. Hazlewood.

"The award is a means of recognition of the splendid support that Representative McIlhany and others gave in the legislation which was designed to remove some of the discriminations against married women from Texas property laws," according to Mrs. Billy Mac Sims, president of the Wellington Club.

"This legislation, known as SB 24 and HB 135, was practically nullified by amendments adopted by the Texas Senate. The legislation was designed to give a married woman control of her own separate, the property she owned before she was married or acquired afterwards by gift or inheritance, to give a married woman the right to sue or to be sued, and to enter into business with her own funds without first going to court to have her disabilities of coverture removed.

"The Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., does not consider any Senator who voted for any of the amendments to the separate property bill as having supported its bill since the version finally passed was not even a reasonable facsimile of the bill as originally introduced. No award is being made to any Legislator whose sole claim to support of the bill is that he voted for the amended version, nor is an award being made to any Legislator who was absent when the vote was taken," she continued.

County Agent to Continue Vet Contract Service

County Agent Bob Lynch said this week that he will continue the service of contacting an out-of-town veterinarian to serve county farmers.

Farmers wishing to have the veterinarian call at their places for work not of an emergency nature are asked to contact Lynch either by dropping him a card, phoning his home, No. 249-R, after 5 p. m., or leaving word in the office of the county judge. There is no phone in the county agent's office.

Lynch requested that until he becomes familiar with farm locations, those asking for veterinarian service also give directions to their homes.

When several calls have accumulated, the county agent will arrange for an out-of-county veterinarian to handle the cases, at considerable saving in mileage charge to the individual farmers.

Driver Escapes As Truck Upsets

lines in the greater detail in order to bring about a clearer understanding of the terrifying and destructive forces of tornadoes and other storms which may be associated with the phenomena.

The network of instruments is now being extended into the Panhandles of Texas and Oklahoma.

A major reason for bringing the project to Texas initially was because of the success of the Texas Tornado Warning Committee organized several years ago. Texas, through successful cooperation of Texas A&M, State and Municipal organizations and the Weather Bureau, now has practically complete radar weather coverage of the entire state. If the pressure jump program fulfills expectations, it should prove a valuable ally to radar in severe storm forecasting.

The equipment will be operated by T. H. Franklin, 901 Dalhart St., Wellington, Texas, and essentially will consist of a sensitive microbarograph and hygrometerograph. The microbarograph is designed to record rapidly changing barometric pressures. The hygrometerograph records changes in temperature and relative humidity which are known to be important factors in the development of tornadoes. Information will be channelled to the Fort Worth Regional Office of the Weather Bureau for examination and local use and sent on to Washington, D. C., for scientific analysis. The success of the program will depend to a great extent on the endeavors of the co-operative weather observers who give much of their time and effort without personal recognition.
