U.S. embassy penetrated

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, after discovering sophisticated electronic spy equipment in a chimney of the Moscow embassy, are assessing the damage it did to American security and puzzling over how the gadgetry works.

One official called the Soviet's use of the espionage equipment a "serious penetration of our embassy," but said the electronic gear would have to be analyzed before deciding if it had caused a major security breach.

The official, who asked not to be named, said the equipment was apparently maintained by Soviet technicians who sneaked into the embassy by crawling through a tunnel, which originated on nearby Soviet property, and then climbed up the chimney.

The discovery last week also raised questions about the equipment's possible link to other mysteries involving the Moscow embassy — such as why the Soviets have beamed microwaves at the building for years, worrying U.S. officials about possible health hazards.

Thomas Reston, the State Department's associate spokesman, said Thursday the devices were discovered May 25 and that a protest was lodged with the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Reston declined to give details about the devices or how they were found.

However, another official said the electronic gear — including a large antenna — was discovered during a routine security search.

He said U.S. officials followed a cable from the equipment down the chimney and through the tunnel. They then constructed a barrier in the tunnel to "keep the Russians out," he said.

"There was regular physical penetration of the embassy by Soviets without the knowledge of the United States," the official said. "They would come through the tunnel and up the chimney."

Flash flood warning issued in storm's wake

Skies were clearing off about 9 a.m. today after a lightning storm moved through the Permian Basin in the early morning hours. Odessa and Midland caught the brunt of the storm.

Flash flood warnings were issued for Odessa and rural parts of Midland County early today after the storm hit. A spokesman with the Odessa Fire Department said the city received from 2 to 2.8 inches of rain, but water was flowing eight to nine feet deep in some parts of the city. "It's stacked up over the tops of cars," he said. Water was receding by noon, and traffic was getting back to normal, he added.

The National Weather Service received .68 inch by 8:30 a.m. and it was still raining slightly, according to the weatherman at Midland Regional Airport. Total amount of rainfall for the year in the Midland area is 3.30 inches.

Rainfall reported in Midland was 2.7 inch on the east side, .5 inch on the west, and .5 inch on the south side. Midkiff had at least an inch, according to one report. The Sprayberry switching station belonging to Texas Electric Service Company near Monahans received 1.56 inches of rainfall.

The National Weather Service experienced a short power failure early today, but the weatherman said when lightning is in the area and the "lights flicker," the backup generator will come on automatically. The power failure knocks out the radar temporarily, he explained.

Rainfall in many areas of the Permian Basin ranged from very light to none at all, according to reports from area towns. The storm had moved to Stanton and Big Spring by 7 a.m. Cloudy skies were reported over Andrews, Lamesa, Rankin, Big Lake and Crane. It was sprinkling in Garden City.

A 30 percent chance exists for more showers tonight and Saturday, the weatherman said.

The high Thursday was 84, and Saturday's high should reach only into the low 80s again, the weatherman said. The low should be in the middle 60s. Southeasterly winds of 10 to 15 mph are predicted.

Bush (of Connecticut) reveals his single regret

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA — George Bush said Thursday he has only one regret about his campaign — he wasn't born in West Texas.

But, at the time he was born, Bush said, he felt it was more important that he stay close to his mother, and "she happened to be in New Haven, Connecticut."

Bush, a Midland independent oil man, is running against Jim Reese, an Odessa businessman, in a runoff election Saturday for the Republican nomination to face Democrat Kent Hance of Lubbock for the 19th Congressional District seat. The post is being vacated by George Mahon, who is retiring after serving as the West Texas district's representative in Washington for 44 years.

The race heated up increasingly this week as Bush called a press conference Thursday in the Holiday Inn here to answer charges made by Reese in his press conference at his Odessa headquarters on Tuesday. At that time, Reese criticized Bush's father, a former CIA director, for his involvement in the Trilateral Commission and questioned Bush's credibility.

Reese also had charged that Bush, in his campaign literature, has claimed he (Bush) was born in Midland.

Bush said he called his conference to answer "silly allegations" that have been leveled at him.

"I am disappointed at the turn of events in the campaign," Bush said, referring to the charges made by Reese.

"He (Reese) questioned my integrity. He questioned my father's loyalty to the United States. My father has an excellent track record in national security matters," Bush said.

In a prepared statement Tuesday, Reese charged Bush's campaign with negativism and trying to "capitalize on the rivalry between Midland and Odessa.... This divisive effort has been counter-productive."

Bush countered that statement Thursday by saying he has never tried to divide the two cities in his campaign. Several months ago, he said, he and several businessmen met to come up with ways to heal the split between the two cities, "a split that was not caused by our generation."

Instead of trying to capitalize on the split, Bush said, he has been working to end it.

The 31-year-old Midlander went on to explain his involvement in an Odessa business known as Field Services Inc., which Reese brought up in his conference. Bush said he and Reese

Saturday election day

Midland County voters of both major parties will go to the polls Saturday to finish the process of electing nominees for the November general election ballot.

Republican voters will be selecting a nominee for the 19th Congressional District seat being vacated by George Mahon. George W. Bush and Jim Reese will be on that ballot.

Democratic voters will be choosing a nominee for railroad commissioner between Jerry Sadler and John Poerner.

Those who voted in one of the party primaries May 6 may vote in the same party's runoff Saturday. Those who voted in neither primary may choose their runoff. Voters with questions about whether they are registered may call 682-9481, ext. 130, during voting hours.

Birthday party for Hilton 'kid' ends with two-tier cake uncut

They threw a birthday party for "the kid" Thursday but forgot to cut the cake.

Maybe it was the parfait and the cordial sneaked in it that caused most to overlook the two-tier cake that the Swiss chef, Gary Baldwin, had whipped up for the occasion. Maybe it was the red table wine.

No. Likely, it was neither.

The party-goers had just had their fill of rib-eye steak and the trimmings, and most certainly not on the tipsy side, had to go back to work. One such was District Court Judge Barbara Culver who, judiciously, passed up the wine but opted for the parfait.

The light-hearted occasion was to celebrate a two-fold business project: (1) The 11-story inn, The Midland Hilton, which opened to the world two years ago this month, and (2) the ground breaking for its overdue twin, which is expected to be "born" about 14 months from now.

The 2-year-old Hilton babe has fared exceedingly well business-wise. Midland Hilton General Manager Richard Lowder called it "a totally viable product," as he was emceeing the treatful luncheon in the hotel's Permian Ballroom. The hotel was hosting 50 or so friends of the Hilton at the luncheon following the ground breaking just to the south of the first born.

Lowder just happened to mention the need for a second Hilton tower here.

"Sometimes we made enemies," he said in hopeful jest, "because everyone couldn't get a room when they wanted to come to Midland. Now, we have the remedy to that with a new tower."

The first born was not without its stumbles and falls in its first two years. Lowder mentioned a fire or two and a jarring and shattering explosion.

"But a 2-year-old child goes through the same scrapes..." he said.

Ahhh, but what's important, it seems, is the economic climate and prospects for prosperity reflected in Hilton tower No. 2.

The dynamic and rapid-but-sure-fire Harry Clark, senior vice president of The First National Bank of Midland, said Midland is coming right along economically. In the first quarter of 1978, Midland "led the entire state" in per capita construction.

And the unit value of houses in Midland, Clark said, is so high that it adds to "the prestige of the quality of life in our community."

"It gets a little high for some people to own a house," however, he noted. Too, Midland is Texas' metropolitan leader in its low unemployment rate.

Nevertheless, "the need for diversification is important" in Midland, where the mainstay of the economy is petroleum production.

"If you get the jobs here, you'll get the people," he said.

But the "real key" to Midland's prosperity is "the energy" of the people in Midland.

After the birthday was over and the Alabama politics further clouded by solon's death

By SCOTT SHEPARD

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The unexpected death of U.S. Sen. James B. Allen has added more uncertainty to the already confusing political landscape in Alabama.

The 65-year-old senator died Thursday after suffering an apparent heart attack and tumbling down the stairs of a coastal resort condominium at Gulf Shores, Ala.

That created a rarity for Alabama politicians: For the first time in this century there are clear shots at two vacant U.S. Senate seats.

Fellow Democratic Sen. John Sparkman has already announced that he will not seek re-election this year.

And Gov. George C.

Wallace, nearing the end of his third term, dropped a political bombshell that surprised even his closest aides earlier this month when he said he had changed his mind and would not run for Sparkman's seat.

Wallace can make a temporary appointment until a successor to Allen is elected in a special election.

In theory, Wallace could step down and ask his successor, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley, to appoint him. However, a Wallace spokesman said Allen's death would not change the governor's plans to step out of politics, at least for the time being.

Wallace's press secretary, Billy Joe Camp, said it would be some time before Wallace considers appointing a successor to Allen, who would not have come up for re-election until 1980.

A special election is required by law since Allen's death came more than four months before the next general election.

Most state politicians declined to comment Thursday on whether Allen's death would alter their plans in this year's upcoming elections, saying political speculation would be inappropriate and discourteous so soon after Allen's death.

Meanwhile, flags flew at half staff today in Alabama to mourn Allen's passing.

Wallace called the senator's death a "deep personal loss." Allen had served as lieutenant governor under Wallace from 1963-67.

And from Allen's present and former Senate colleagues came praise for his skills as a parliamentarian.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Allen "commanded respect with his mastery of the rules and his courtesy on the floor."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who often found himself on opposite ends of an argument from Allen, said the senator was "perhaps the greatest parliamentarian ever to sit in the United States Senate."

And former Sen. Sam Ervin, a North Carolina Democrat, said, "We really can't afford to lose Jim Allen. He had intelligence, he had industry and he had the courage to stand up for what he knew to be right."

Allen's most celebrated stand came against the two Panama Canal treaties that were approved by the Senate March 16 and April 18.

Because he frequently held the Senate floor for hours during debate on the treaties, Allen's voice became known to millions who listened to the live broadcast of the proceedings on National Public Radio.

His voice was already familiar in Alabama, where his political career spanned more than three decades.

Funeral services were planned Tuesday at Gadsden, Ala., Allen's hometown.

House group favors abortion restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — In approving $58 billion for federal social programs, the House Appropriations Committee is endorsing a controversial amendment which would reinstate tight restrictions on abortion payments to poor women.

The committee agreed to the amendment containing abortion regulations Thursday when it reviewed the 1979 budget proposals for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

The abortion restrictions, known as the Hyde amendment for the congressman who initially sponsored the measure, would permit payments for abortions from the Medicaid program only to women whose lives would be endangered by a full-term pregnancy.

The new amendment is more stringent than the one Congress agreed to last year after a six-month feud. It is one which the House has endorsed repeatedly during the past several years and which the Senate has rejected nearly every time.

It was written into law for fiscal 1977 which ended last Sept. 30. Many senators supported it in the appropriations bill thinking the Supreme Court would overturn it.

But instead, the court upheld its constitutionality. Last year's compromise, which expires on Sept. 30 with the close of fiscal 1978, calls for abortion payments when a woman's life is in danger, if two physicians certify that she would suffer severe and long-lasting physical health damage because of a pregnancy or if she is a victim of a reported incidence of rape or incest.

Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, chairman of the House committee has already predicted that House-Senate compromise this year will resemble the one adopted last year.

Congressional law may be needed to halt searches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti says Congress might have to pass a law that would prohibit police from using a search warrant to launch surprise searches at newspaper offices.

Civiletti said Thursday that a U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing such searches was predictable because, he said, there is nothing in the Constitution prohibiting police from getting search warrants to seek evidence of a crime.

"But that's different from what should be the policy," he said.

"There ought to be safeguards in policy and if necessary, by statute...so that the chilling effect of intrusions (into the news media) is lessened," he added.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday ruled that the First Amendment provides no special protection to the press from police searches. The court ruled that the police are under no obligation to first obtain a subpoena, although a search warrant is required.

Civiletti said the Justice Department will stand by its policy that U.S. prosecutors must get approval from the attorney general before going to court to subpoena a reporter or any notes or unpublished documents in the possession of a news organization.

He acknowledged, however, that the Justice Department has no control over local police forces and local prosecutors who may wish to obtain information from news organization under the new Supreme Court ruling.

Zaire may break ties with Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko has threatened to break diplomatic relations with Belgium over Belgian press reports of rebellions in northeastern Zaire, far from Shaba Province, the Zaire news agency AZAP said today.

The agency, in a dispatch from the Shaba capital of Lubumbashi, said Mobutu was discussing the matter with Zaire's only political party, the Popular Movement of the Revolution, this morning.

In addition to his troubles in northeastern Zaire, Mobutu may have a third revolt in the center of his country. This time there was no report of foreign involvement.

A spokesman in Brussels for the Congo-Lumumba National Movement said its guerrillas have been in control of the towns of Aba and Bunia, in northeast Zaire, for three months.

He said guerrilla attacks on army barracks in the two towns on March 3 to capture weapons were followed by popular uprisings that drove the troops from the towns.

Paul-Roger Mokede, head of the guerrillas, said his men had orders not to bother civilians, black or white. He said if there had been killings, they were done by Mobutu's men so he could appeal for foreign aid.

Aba is a small outpost on the border with Sudan, about 1,000 miles north of the recent invasion of southern Zaire by anti-Mobutu exiles who Mobutu and President Carter claim were trained by Cubans in Angola and equipped by the Soviet Union.

Bunia is a large commercial center on Lake Mobutu, formerly Lake Albert, about 100 miles south of Aba.

Your vote counts!

Saturday is the big day the really important day when both Republicans and Democrats settle nomination contests which were not determined finally in the first primary balloting last May 6.

It is the day of the runoff elections of the Democratic and Republican parties. And, as in all elections, all eligible voters should go to the polls. Voting in the runoff elections will require only a few seconds of a person's time.

In Midland County and throughout the 19th Congressional District the one big Republican race is between George Bush of Midland and Jim Reese of Odessa. The winner will emerge as the party's nominee for the congressional seat being vacated by George Mahon of Lubbock.

The Reporter-Telegram previously has endorsed George Bush in this particular contest and strongly recommends his nomination.

The winner in Saturday's balloting will face Democrat Kent Hance of Lubbock in the November general election.

The Democrats have only one statewide contest to settle in Saturday's runoff. This is the important race between John Poerner and Jerry Sadler for nomination to fill the vacancy on the Texas Railroad Commission created late last year by the resignation of Judge Jim C. Langdon. Poerner presently is holding the position by appointment.

The Reporter-Telegram has endorsed John Poerner and recommends his nomination in the Democratic runoff election.

The winner of the race will face Republican James W. Lacy of Midland in the November general election.

The really important thing now is to cast YOUR ballot Saturday, remembering all the while that YOUR vote may be the determining factor.

The hours and places of voting, along with other pertinent election information, have been published in The Reporter-Telegram.

Anyone who voted in either primary on May 6 is eligible to vote in the runoff primary of the same party. A person who did not vote in either primary last month is eligible to vote Saturday in the party runoff of his choice.

Midland County has an excellent opportunity of exceeding previous voting records in runoff elections, based on unusually heavy absentee balloting. Let's work to that end anyway.

Remember, please, that Saturday is runoff election day here and across the Lone Star State. Let's all go to the polls.

Unruly neighbor

If Cuba's adventurism in Africa and the Middle East had not been indication enough, President Carter has made it clear that Cuba is not about to join the United States' family of good neighbors.

This is good news, indeed, and the only thing unfortunate about it is that the declaration was not made much sooner.

The President revealed his disenchantment with Cuba and President Fidel Castro to a meeting of editors of Hispanic news organizations, rejecting Castro's claims to "nonalignment" and independence.

There is no country, President Carter said, "that acts in harmony with and under the domination of the Soviets any more than the Cubans do."

Castro's intervention in African disputes, he added, "is an obstacle to any further progress between us and Cuba."

The Carter condition for improved relations with Cuba appears reasonable: that Fidel Castro show "in tangible form that he is committed both to peace and the enhancement of human rights."

One wonders what U.N. Ambassador Andy Young thinks about this and when Mr. Carter plans to remove him from his United Nations post?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

American jailed in Nicaragua

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — This is the story of an American businessman who is being held for ransom in Nicaragua by its backwater dictator, Anastasio Somoza. There is no other way to describe the detention of Arthur Chariton in a rat-infested Nicaraguan jail.

He has been held for a year without trial. For months, no formal charges were brought against him. He was locked up merely on the "suspicion" of one of Somoza's judges. Apparently, a business associate defrauded a Somoza-controlled bank, so the dictator is holding Chariton until the money is repaid.

Chariton's health deteriorated so alarmingly that the Nicaraguan authorities finally moved him into a military hospital. He managed to escape from his guards and reach the U.S. embassy. He had been badly bitten by rats and insects. He needed special medical attention. His rights had been abused. Yet incredibly, Ambassador Maurice Solana handed him back to Somoza's goons.

The distraught Chariton resisted. The ambassador summoned several Marines who dragged their fellow American, kicking and screaming, out of the embassy. The next day, we placed a telephone call to Chariton. We were permitted to speak to him at the military hospital. He sounded weak and depressed. Bitterly, he accused the embassy of failing to protect U.S. citizens. Then he broke down.

"I'm so depressed ... I'm just so depressed ... I'm just so down and out," he sobbed. He couldn't believe his own government had delivered him to his tormentors. "The way they carried me out, they way they poked me. They twisted me. They tore me apart. They took my heart out."

The State Department is full of excuses. Any refusal to return Chariton, said a spokesman, would have set a bad legal precedent. The spokesman conceded that Chariton had been held improperly without a trial, but explained blandly: "It's not the place of the State Department to pass judgment on foreign courts."

The truth is that Ambassador Solana didn't want to upset the cozy relationship the embassy has developed with the dictator. When Somoza sought medical care, the embassy arranged for a U.S. military plane to fly him to Miami. But Solana turned away an American citizen whose health had been broken by the dictator. Increasingly, the State Department has put its drawing-room relationships ahead of the welfare of the citizens it is supposed to serve.

The ordeal of Arthur Chariton began in 1975. He went into partnership with Somoza to manufacture textiles. It seemed like a smart business move, since Somoza has the inside track in Nicaragua.

Then Chariton's business associate, Robert Pataky, was arrested for allegedly defrauding a Somoza bank, the Banco de Central America, of $3 million. Chariton learned about the arrest while he was in the States. If he had been involved in the fraud, he obviously would have stayed away from Nicaragua.

But in all innocence, he returned to

CHARLEY REESE

Socialists out to scuttle free enterprise system

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Socialists in this country who are out to scuttle free enterprise are not playing it straight with the American people.

Of course, it's hard to be honest in advocating a system so dishonest as socialism, which claims to be a system of sharing but which actually is just a disguise for the old, old system of control of the many by the few, or oligarchy.

Let's say, for example, a country decides to nationalize its coal mines — as some folks were advocating during the strike. What happens? Well, the government takes tax money and buys the mines from the owners and then takes more tax money and hires the former owners to run them. Nothing changes, except that the former mine owners — still wealthy — are relieved of any obligation to operate efficiently since they are now guaranteed a continuous stream of tax dollars.

That the "people" theoretically "own" the mines is so much eyewash for the people.

One of the tricks socialists use to sell their con game is to create a problem and then offer a solution which, naturally, is socialism.

No where is this more apparent than in Barry Commoner's book, "The Poverty of Power." Supposedly a scientific look at the energy crisis, it is actually a sales pitch for socialism.

Commoner blames both the energy crisis, the environmental crisis, and everything else on alleged inherent defects of capitalism. At each stage, he pretends to be oh so scholarly and analytical. It's absolutely amazing how consistently his analyses show that capitalism is at fault.

In the last chapter, after having created the problem in the reader's mind, he offers a solution:

"All this suggests that it may be time to view the faults of the U.S. capitalist economic system from the vantage point of a socialist alternative — to debate the relative merits of capitalism and socialism."

This last phrase is deceptive because Commoner has already spent the whole book tearing down capitalism. If you believe him, what is there to debate?

The guy is either pathetically naive or callously dishonest. The caliber of his argument is illustrated by use of a New York Times quotation in which the French and Italian Communist Parties claim they are all in favor of complete individual freedom.

With that as his "evidence," the great scholar says, "...it seems unrealistic, then, at this moment in history, to categorically reject a socialist economy on the grounds that its political form is necessarily repressive..."

The rest of his arguments are equally flawed and devious. Thus he says railroads don't carry passengers because people are not as profitable as freight and then argues for nationalization. Never once does he mention why railroads are in such a financial bind — government subsidies of their competition, government regulation of their rates, and government support of unions which still insist on 19th century practices.

You see how the game works. We started with capitalism. Then government intervention creates a failure. The failure is blamed on capitalism instead of the government interference and the solution proposed is socialism.

Commoner is just one of the many propagandists for the socialist viewpoint, but he is a good example because he claims to speak as a scientist and an expert, not as a socialist, just as John Kenneth Galbraith used to claim to speak only as an economist.

The unfair part is that for all these years these closet socialists were paraded before the public as experts in different fields who were making objective, non-ideological evaluations of problems. In reality, they were presenting the socialist viewpoint disguised as objectivity. That's hardly a fair way to debate the relative merits of the two systems.

Only when you keep in mind that socialism really means rule by an oligarchy can you begin to see why some people who are nominally capitalist advocate socialist measures and finance socialist propagandists.

That's a very neat propaganda machine. You manufacture your own experts and then let them con the public.

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviet moves contribute to Carter's hardened mood

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Secret intelligence reports that the Soviet Union successfully manipulated the cobalt market just before the Soviet-backed invasion of cobalt-producing Zaire not only provide additional evidence of Moscow's complicity but contribute to President Carter's hardened mood.

That changed mood could kill a Washington summit meeting with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, long planned to precede the November election, at which a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) would be signed. Behind the president's new mood is the suspicion that the Kremlin is playing fast and loose behind his back, taking advantage of his sincere efforts to meet the Russians halfway.

The bloody Soviet-Cuban mischief in Shaba province has hardened Jimmy Carter's heart. Unlike a few key African specialists in the State Department who warn against provoking Soviet-Cuban retaliation (in Rhodesia, for example), Mr. Carter no longer doubts that Moscow and Havana plotted the Shaba invasion. Furthermore, intelligence sources have supplied the White House with a fascinating piece of evidence.

Just before the Soviet-Cuban-directed invasion of May 14 into the mineral producing heartland of Zaire, Soviet agents quietly purchased nearly 400 tons of scarce cobalt from European brokers. Since Zaire produces half the world's cobalt, one European intelligence bureau estimates that right after the invasion the price of cobalt skyrocketed to three times its pre-invasion value.

Evans

Novak

Here was a clear case of foreknowledge. The amount of foreign exchange saved by Moscow was a piddling $8 million or so, but that is not the point. What angers Mr. Carter is the transparent fraud of assurances that the Communists had nothing to do with the Shaba operation, topped by Fidel Castro's personal protest of innocence to the U.S. diplomatic officer in Havana.

The president and his advisers have carefully studied Western intelligence reports about visits to Moscow late last month of both President Agostinho Neto, Marxist boss of Angola, and Isidoro Malmierca, Castro's foreign minister. These two visits set the stage for the Angola-based invasion, making a mockery of Communist claims of innocence.

Going well beyond public expressions of dismay over Soviet skulduggery in Africa, private signals from Mr. Carter inside his official family show a president fast losing patience and contemplating major course corrections.

The proposed Washington summit might yet be held. But instead of plotting to bring it off as the high point of his first two years, the president is now analyzing reasons for postponing it. Reason No. 1: given rising anti-Soviet emotions in Congress, SALT II would have trouble in the Senate, where the required two-thirds vote does not now exist.

Up to now Mr. Carter has seemed entirely willing to take the chance of signing the treaty this summer, campaign on it during the congressional election campaign, then send it next year to the Senate, where he has always known the reception would be hostile. What has changed, then, is not so much the Senate but Jimmy Carter himself.

Although SALT would be by far the most important sacrifice by a president determined to restrain Moscow, U.S. policy toward black Africa is also in the balance. That policy so far has been set and enforced by United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, Asst. Secretary of State Richard Moose and the State Department's policy planning chief, Anthony Lake.

Their aides privately complained that Mr. Carter's decision to alert elements of the 82nd Airborne Division for possible rescue duty in Shaba province was made without State Department advice or consent.

In fact, Vance not only approved but proposed standby U.S. military power to rescue Europeans in Shaba province if needed. He did so without first checking the department's African bureau — an oversight that had earmarks of careful planning. Taking his cue from the president, Vance is moving toward a tougher U.S. African policy within the State Department in the same way that Mr. Carter is moving away from any automatic decision to gift wrap SALT II and hand it to Brezhnev in late summer.

Late as they come, these possible turns in American policy could yield Mr. Carter rich rewards: a new lease on the confidence of his western European allies and such valuable U.S. friends as Iran and Saudi Arabia, all terrified at the prospect of a rampant Soviet Union unchecked by countervailing American power.

Why not barge through Europe? Wheat for Vietnam

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times

You've done the Orient, right? Hurried through South America, joined one of those dizzying tours to Europe?

So what's next? Figuring out an encore to that one is a perplexing question that legions of travelers face. But don't panic. There's a solution. It's spelled R-E-L-A-X. (Good for the nerves as well as the blood pressure).

Richard Parsons, a 39-year-old Britisher, and his French sidekick, Guy Bardet, 32, figure they've found the proper answer.

Slow down, say these two river rogues. Hurrying is obscene. Try a slow boat instead, particularly one of the colorful barges that drift leisurely through the canals and rivers of France and England.

Since the mid-'60s they've been barging Americans through fields of blood-red poppies, vineyards, pasturelands and medieval villages. They've carried literally thousands of passengers. Now in their 10th season, Parsons and Bardet represent not one but seven vessels, each a converted coal barge.

Operating as the fleet's flagship is an old French peniche, the Palinurus. Parsons and Bardet converted her in 1966 to provide a floating hotel for up to 17 passengers.

"Seeing France at a Snail's Pace" was their sales pitch. It's the same in 1978.

Traveling by barge makes hurrying an impossibility. The Palinurus and other vessels move at a speed of 4 or 5 miles an hour, stopping frequently while their skippers navigate the locks.

As a result, passengers have the time to exchange pleasantries with the locals. Meanwhile, the crew buys garden-fresh vegetables from lock-keepers, and fishmongers come aboard with trout and sole.

I did this leisurely voyage seven years ago and it was a joy. Our days were spent studying ancient chateaux, charming hill towns and forests sometimes so dark the day became night.

We dined on quenelles and cheeses, escargots, frog's legs, magnificent salads and French pastries. Yes, and a rich Burgundy bottled in this very region.

The Palinurus covers nine itineraries during its two-month voyage, circling Burgundy via half a dozen canals as well as the Saone, Yonne and Seine rivers.

Seven years ago the fare for a week-long cruise was less than $200 per person. Unfortunately, inflation travels more rapidly than old barges, and so prices now start at $390 per person for a double or $470 for a single, which includes meals and wine.

After talking the other day with Parsons and Bardet (they were touring the United States) I learned little has changed aboard the barges. Diners still are served by candlelight. Each cabin has a night table with a rose. And the chef still pedals into small villages, buying groceries from country stores.

All that's missing, Parsons said, is the young American girl who tidied up our cabins. It had been her desire to see Europe, as I recall. Well, having seen it, she returned to the United States.

Parsons shrugged. "They all do, eventually." I sensed a touch of melancholy in his voice.

Having been reared in England, Parsons' fondness for canal life grew with the years. It was the same with Bardet. Later both skippers did stints as newspaper reporters. Disliking the regimentation, they set themselves free as barge captains.

For more than 30 years the Palinurus had hauled coal. It took a $120,000 scrubbing and face-lifting to convert her to a passenger-carrying queen. Parsons and Bardet installed four double cabins, two twins and five singles as well as a bar, a salon, three showers, a bath and three WCs.

Well, things are so peachy that today the boys represent six other barges. Besides the Palinurus the fleet includes La Guepe, the Mark Twain, the Virgin- ia Anne, the Bonjour and a couple of others named the Water Wanderers.

Except for the Bonjour (she's confined to the Thames in England) all sail the canals of France.

Together, the two Water Wanderers travel as a team, moving leisurely along the Canal du Midi in the South of France, traveling near the Pyrenees, cruising beneath umbrellas of plane trees and offloading passengers at the old walled city of Carcassonne.

La Guepe, the largest of the barges, sails with 28 passengers along the river Yonne into Burgundy country south of Paris. With 14 twin cabins, she's Europe's queen of hotel barges. That is to say, the largest.

Smallest of the fleet is an old Dutch estuary barge, the Virginia Anne. Operating charters only, she prices out roughly at $1,800 a week. While passengers luxuriate on deck, the Virginia Anne putters along the canals of eastern France, drifting by farms, vineyards and near-forgotten villages.

Joining the others this season is the Mark Twain. She (or is it he?) carries six passengers in grand style. Scattered throughout the vessel are antique pieces and 17th-century furniture seldom seen aboard a boat — particularly a barge. Both bar and salon are paneled in teak and trimmed with brass, and there are windows from a 16th-century Belgian church, plus a library stocked with 700 books.

Skippering the Twain are 64-year-old Norman Riddle and his wife Anna — both Britishers and both in love with the waterways of France.

Their travels take them through a wide area of eastern France — to Strasbourg, Besancon, Nancy and other areas.

When day is done aboard the Twain and other barges, wines are poured in a salute to sunset. The vessels' slow pace attracts travelers weary of exhausting tours and jet-age schedules, those seeking surcease from the world of action.

The barges carry bicycles, and so I recall pedaling away at Avril sur Loire among fields yellow with buttercups and white with daisies, the entire scene framed by shocking green pastures and fields of wheat. Later I found the barge tied up downstream alongside a riverbank. That night the captain led us into a village where we joined the locals for a wine tasting session in a small, friendly bar.

For a brochure describing both barges and itineraries, contact the local French Government Tourist Office or write to Continental Waterways Ltd., 22 Hans Place, London. Barge holidays are offered by yet another organization with a fleet of four vessels operating in Britain and Holland. Write to Floating Through Europe, 501 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. The company also acts as agent for self-drive boats.

Gas rate suspended

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has issued a formal order suspending a proposed rate increase by Odessa Natural Corp. for gas to Mitchell County Utility Co. for 120 days.

The order states that the RRC is charged under Public Utility Commission Act with seeing that rates charged are "just and reasonable," and that since the "statement of intent" filed by Odessa Natural Corp. "does not contain sufficient information to allow a proper determination of the reasonableness of its rates, the Railroad Commission cannot perform its duty."

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)

— A Kansas wheat farmer turned goodwill ambassador who went to Vietnam with a "reconciliation gift" of wheat from the United States says he hopes it will open the door to a resumption of trade with the Asian country.

Harvey Schmidt was part of a seven-member American delegation which visited Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, from May 13-27. His role was to help present the Vietnamese 10,000 tons of wheat donated by Church World Service from his and other farms in the U.S. wheat belt.

"What we hope it will do is show the government that the people of America are interested in Vietnam and would like to establish a trading relation with Vietnam," Schmidt said Wednesday upon his return to Kansas.

"For me the highlight was seeing the ship come in," said Schmidt, who gathered with the others in Ho Chi Minh City harbor May 20 when the Greek vessel Antiochia delivered the wheat from Houston.

"It hadn't been anchored more than 10 minutes before we were on the ship, and I was the first one to go in to sample the wheat, to see if it was in good shape."

"That was my biggest concern, because of all the exporting the United States has done and reports we'd heard of poor quality wheat going to foreign countries, this was all on my mind. I thought, 'just so this won't be some of that poor quality wheat.' But it was in good shape."

During a meal two days later, his hosts said they were eating bread made with flour from the U.S. wheat.

Schmidt's elation over the trip was tempered when he returned to his farm and found that two hail storms had wiped out almost all of his 500 acres of wheat and damaged some of his corn during the two weeks he was gone.

On June 3, Texas voters will elect one of two men as the Democratic candidate for Railroad Commissioner:

Jerry Sadler, 70, is a twice-defeated former Land Commissioner. Here's what three of the state's leading newspapers have to say about him:

The Austin American-Statesman: "Voters deserve to know whom they will be choosing between in the runoff June 3. Poerner is not a household name; Sadler is. But Sadler has a sorry record in state government. He is the only person ever censured by the Texas House of Representatives (for failure to cooperate with an investigation). He became notorious for attempting to choke then-State Rep. Jake Johnson. He was defeated at the polls in 1970 and lost to Jon Newton in a race for Railroad Commissioner in 1976. And now he's back again."

The Dallas Times Herald: "Sadler has made Texas government a universal target of ridicule and derision."

The San Angelo Standard Times: "Under Sadler, the Railroad Commission just might become the laughing stock he once made of the General Land Office."

John Poerner, 45, is a respected businessman and rancher. John Poerner was elected to three successive terms in the Texas House before being named Executive Director of the Governor's Committee on Aging and Director, Education Resources of Texas.

His honors include being named "Citizen of the Year" in his hometown of Hondo, receiving a "Distinguished Legislator" award from the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association, and being named to the "Agriculture Hall of Fame" at Southwest Texas State University.

He was recently appointed to the Railroad Commission by the Governor.

"Poerner is a solid, competent individual with a record of 10 years of dedicated public service," says the Houston Chronicle. "(We urge) his election."

Teens to get what they want in way of summer programs

Teen-agers are going to get what they want this summer.

Midland Parks and Recreation Department asked teen-agers in the city's junior high schools and at the youth centers what they wanted to see in summer programs and this summer the department is going to supply what they want, according to Elizabeth Lively, teen director.

Working on the summer recreation programs are Ms. Lively and David Stall, recreation program director. After looking at what the teen-agers said they wanted, the Parks and Recreation Department is offering a bowling league, soccer clinic, table tennis tournament, Teen Day at Hogan Park and Catch-n-Fetch.

The bowling league will start Monday and continue through Aug. 9, according to Ms. Lively. Signup days will be from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at Airpark Bowling Lanes, and the fee is $13 for the summer. At the end of the summer, there will be a city-wide bowling tournament on Aug. 12 for those in the teen bowling league. The league is being sponsored by the recreation department and Airpark Bowling Lanes for teens in grades seven through nine.

A soccer clinic or ping pong tournament is the next choice on the list of activities, depending upon which the teens want first, Ms. Lively said.

The Teen Day at Hogan Park is scheduled for June 25. Activities will include a softball tournament, volleyball tournament, flying disc tournament, a picnic and other games. Ms. Lively or Stall should be contacted for further information about participation in the tournaments.

Round discs will be flying at the end of June for the Catch-n-Fetch Tournament, she said.

Plans for the rest of the summer include a skateboard contest, bicycle event, a miniature golf tournament, karate demonstration, trip to the sand hills, skating party and the bowling tournament.

Further information about the teen summer program can be obtained by telephoning the Parks and Recreation Department, 683-4281.

President may still get his way though tuition bill OK'd by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may still have his way despite House passage of sweeping tuition tax credit legislation strongly opposed by the White House.

The 237-158 House vote approving the bill Thursday was 27 votes short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a presidential veto, expected if the measure finally clears Congress.

The legislation, which provides credits against college, elementary and secondary school tuition, now goes to the Senate, which has shown itself even more favorable to tuition credits than the House.

The House-passed measure would allow a taxpayer to subtract directly from his income tax 25 percent of his tuition outlays, within limits.

The maximum credit in the case of college or other post-secondary tuition would be $100 this year, $150 in 1979 and $250 in 1980, for each student. At the lower educational levels, the maximum would be $50 this year and $100 in each of the next two. The program would end after three years unless Congress renewed it.

Pending in the Senate, with the approval of the Finance Committee, is a measure providing credits up to $500.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he does not think a veto could be overridden.

He said House leaders might bring up a bill embodying Carter's proposal to expand existing college aid programs by $1.2 billion and making families with incomes up to $25,000 eligible for some benefits.

The House, which unlike the Senate had never before passed a tuition tax credit bill, not only did so Thursday, approved the measure after first broadening what had been only a college tuition credit to include tuition at the lower educational levels. That change carried by only 15 votes — 209 to 194.

President disputes newspaper report arms talks frozen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, pledging to push aggressively for a new arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union, today denied a published report that his administration has effectively frozen the arms negotiations.

Carter called the report damaging to the country and to his own credibility.

The president took the unusual step of summoning reporters on short notice to his Oval Office in the White House to deny the report in today's Washington Post. The report, quoting authoritative government sources, said the administration "has effectively frozen the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) for the time being."

Carter said "this story is totally inaccurate," and added: "It damages our country; it damages my credibility; it damages the prospects for the continuation of the basic policy of our government, which has not changed since I came in office: that is to proceed aggressively with SALT discussion."

Carter said it is his objective "to conclude a (SALT) treaty as early as possible, without delay because of political considerations and to make sure that that treaty, when concluded, was in the best interests of our country."

Carter, who ignored attempts by reporters to ask questions, said the possibility of a freeze in SALT negotiations has never been discussed, "even informally."

He said at the outset he understood that "inadvertent inaccuracies" sometimes would creep into news accounts and added that he accepts that.

"But this morning," he said, "there was an example that I think was serious enough to warrant a direct appearance before you by the president of the United States."

Referring to the Post account, Carter said: "Before this story was published the reporters were informed that the story was totally inaccurate. The editors decided to go ahead with it anyway."

The Post headline read: "White House Imposing Freeze on Strategic Arms Talks."

Benjamin C. Bradlee, executive editor of the Post, responded to reporters' inquiries today with this statement:

"With the greatest respect, we still believe that our information is correct, that recent decisions taken by the administration have had the effect of freezing SALT negotiations in such a way that agreement this summer is precluded."

Officials in various parts of the government sought to rebut the Post story.

"There's nothing to that (report). It's not true," said Jerrold Schecter, a spokesman for National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Thomas Halsted, aide to arms negotiator Paul C. Warnke, said Warnke "has had no other instructions than to go full speed ahead" on SALT.

At the daily State Department briefing earlier Thursday, spokesman Hodding Carter said: "The idea that there is some administration decision to put this (SALT) on hold is just not so."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter had phoned him at his home early today to let him know a presidential response to the Post story would be forthcoming.

Commissioners add second fee for parks use

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—While expressing some concern over the possibility of public disapproval, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has voted to raise the entrance fees at state parks.

Beginning Sept. 1, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department will begin charging a $1 "day use fee" in addition to the current $1 entrance fee levied against each motor vehicle entering most large state parks.

TP—WC parks chief Paul Schlimper said the staff doesn't consider the additional $1 charge a doubling of the entrance fee but rather a charge for using park facilities such as restrooms and picnic tables.

Commission chairman Pearce Johnson said the proposal likely would make several persons angry, especially by splitting the money required for entrance into two charges.

"I'm sure we're going to have some adverse public reaction," John said. "How are you going to tell them that once they pay their entrance fee they've got to pay another fee to continue past the gate?"

Schlimper said the two fees are necessary in order to divert the revenues into separate funds.

Johnson said some citizens are going to be upset when all they plan to do in a park is drive through and look at the scenery.

"They're going to say that they're not using any park facilities," he said.

"They'll be using the highway," Schlimper noted.

While the legislature last year exempted certain disabled veterans and senior citizens from having to pay an entrance fee (if they have certification from the parks agency), the law will not exempt them from the day-use fee, Schlimper said.

The daily camping fee in state parks will be hiked from $2 to $3 by the commission's action while most other park facility-use fees will be increased somewhat.

The $12 annual park use permit fee, entitling the driver and occupants of a car bearing an annual certificate to admittance to all state parks, will be increased to $15 while the single state park annual permit fee will increase from $5 to $8.

U.S. planes to airlift French troops in Zaire

WASHINGTON (AP) — American planes, now standing ready to fly French legionnaires out of strife-torn Shaba province, may also airlift a proposed Pan-African peacekeeping force into Zaire, U.S. officials say.

White House officials say orders have been prepared for the airlift of the remaining French troops from the copper mining city of Kolwezi, but that the timing on the flights had not been set. The officials asked not to be identified.

Those same C-141 transports would be used if the administration goes ahead with tentative plans to fly a Pan-African peacekeeping force into

Methodists conclude 69th annual meeting

By ROGER SOUTHALL

West Texas Methodists concluded their 69th annual meeting Thursday with a busy round of business meetings, worship services and special events.

This year's convocation, held for the first time in Midland, ended Thursday night with a service of ordination for elders and deacons. The ceremony was in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church of Midland, host church for the 1978 meeting.

The meeting, which began here Tuesday, involved clergy and laity from throughout the 67-county area of the Northwest Texas Conference (geographical administrative division) of the United Methodist denomination. Dr. Alsie H. Carleton of Albuquerque, N.M., presiding bishop of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico conferences, presided at the gathering.

Delegates, in their final business session Thursday afternoon, accepted the invitation of Amarillo's Polk Street United Methodist Church to hold the 1979 meeting there.

In Thursday night's concluding ceremony, nine elders were ordained into full ministry in the Northwest Texas Conference, and 12 deacons were ordained to next-to-final full ministerial status with the conference.

Elders included several Midland and area residents. They are Michael O'Conner and Tom Mills of Midland and Hazel House of Andrews. Mrs. House and another elder, Sammie Ellis Teeter of Irving, became the first women to be given full conference connection in the Northwest Texas Conference.

Mrs. House is beginning her fourth year as minister at Wesley United Methodist Church in Andrews, and previously served churches at Bula, Enoch, Estelline and Amherst. She is a graduate of Wayland College at Plainview and has completed studies at Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University.

O'Conner is beginning his second year as pastor at Fritch and Bunavista. He is a graduate of Texas Tech University and holds a master of divinity degree from Asbury Theological Seminary. Mills, also a graduate of Texas Tech and Asbury Seminary, is beginning his second year as pastor of Amarillo's Forest Hill United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Teeter has a BA degree from Texas Wesleyan College and a master's degree in theology from Perkins School of Theology. She has been assigned to the pastorate of Texas Street UMC at Vernon. Her husband, the Rev. Jim Teeter, has been assigned to the pastorate of the United Methodist Church at nearby Chillicothe.

Other elders receiving full ministerial status in the Thursday service were Kerry W. Hurst of Lorenzo, Michael Struve of Abilene, Johnny T. Robertson of Lewisville, Carl Edward Allsup of Morton, Donald Dean Stalder of Hugoton, Kan., and Raymond P. Wolfe.

Deacons ordained were Mike Downing of Canyon (who will serve on the staff of Midland's St. Luke's UMC during the coming year), Karl Baumgardner of Brownfield, Lynn Parker Barton of Littlefield, J. Carl White of Lubbock, David D. Ray of Abilene, David Hestand of Roscoe, Derrell Patterson of Seymour, Gene Wisdom of Lake Charles, La., Scottie Johnson of Dalhart, Don Gilmore of White Plains, N.Y., Randon Bond Ely of Abilene and Steven Lee Rogers of Borger.

In the closing hours of their 1978 meeting, delegates elected several new trustees to the board of McMurry College (owned and maintained by the Northwest Texas and New Mexico conferences of the denomination) and overwhelmingly passed a resolution reaffirming the official United Methodist stand on homosexuality — namely, that the practice of homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian practice."

The resolution was written by Judge H. M. LaFont of Plainview and submitted to the assembled delegates by the Rev. Carlton H. Thomson, Plainview District superintendent of the denomination.

The resolution cited Section 71 of the United Methodist Book of Discipline at some length, in a passage ending as follows: "...We do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching." (Earlier, however, the Book of Discipline passage affirms that "homosexuals no less than heterosexuals are persons of sacred worth.")

New trustees elected to the McMurry College board are Ted C. Johnson of Midland, Wendell M. Tooley of Floydada and John Harrell of Stamford. A fourth trustee is Dr. Brodace Elkins of El Paso who has had previous service on the board.

Johnson, a member of Midland's First UMC, is owner of Johnson Tire and Supply Co., of Midland. A native of Fisher County, he is a graduate of Angelo State University and served in the military during the Korean conflict. He has served his church as chairman of the official board and as chairman of the finance committee. He was one of the delegates from First UMC to this year's annual meeting and was a delegate to the 1975, 1976 and 1977 conference gatherings.

Tooley is editor and publisher of the Floyd County Hesperian, an award-winning weekly. He is a 1949 graduate of McMurry and holds a master's degree from the University of Missouri. He served in the U.S. Army. Tooley has held numerous church offices and currently is a Sunday school teacher and chairman of the council on ministries for the Floydada UMC. He also is a member of the Northwest Texas Conference's publications board and has twice been a delegate to annual conference meetings. He is active in civic work at Floydada and is a member of the advisory board for the Texas Tech University Mass Communications Board.

Harrell is president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Stamford. He attended Henderson Junior College and McMurry. In his church at Stamford, he serves on the church board and as a member of the pastor-parish relations committee and is counselor to the senior Methodist Youth Fellowship organization. He is past president of the Stamford Industrial Foundation, Stamford Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club and has served on the Stamford school board.

In Thursday's concluding business session, delegates also heard good news and bad news in a special report presented by the Rev. Ivan Allen, minister of Munday-Goree United Methodist churches.

Allen's good news was that giving among Northwest Texas Methodists increased 11.1 per cent, to $1,415,962. Per-capita giving actually increased 12.8 percent, to $152.70.

The bad news was that total membership within the Northwest Texas Conference decreased slightly during the past year, to 92,904 persons. Church school figures also reflected a slight decline, Allen's report revealed.

Tailors cutting union ground in latest struggle

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — They were a small band of immigrant tailors. But they became the cutting edge of the American labor movement during the first half of the 20th century.

They were poor and shabby as they came off the boats, refugees from oppression in Europe who were often shunned here because of their foreign ways and thoughts. Many were East European Jews, inheritors of a rich intellectual tradition who found themselves in America's bottom-rung jobs.

Ignored by the New England tailors who then dominated the garment trades, they formed their own union, under former rabbinical student Sidney Hillman, 27, who had fled Czarist Russia seven years earlier and later became one of Franklin Roosevelt's closest labor advisers. Out of their sweatshops and social militancy came many of the patterns for the fabric of American social welfare — unemployment insurance, health care, pensions, lost-cost housing and many others.

Now the typical garment worker is as likely to speak with the accents of the black or Hispanic ghettos of the New World as the Jewish ghettos of the Old World. Women outnumber men as heavily as men once outnumbered women. The frontier has shifted from big-city garment districts to southern mill towns, and the task is no longer to absorb workers from other countries but to keep other countries from absorbing American jobs.

This is not one of those curtain-falling end-of-an-era stories, however. The cast has changed, but the plot moves on.

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union — a recently merged 500,000-member union of Hillman's clothing workers and the textile worker union that they helped create during the organizing battles of the 1930s — has resurfaced as a pacesetter within the labor movement.

"It isn't radical in the sense that it was in the '20s and '30s," said a longtime observer of the union, "but there's been a revival of the old spirit of pushing out against new frontiers."

"We started as a union of immigrants, strangers in a strange land, and there has been a basic social philosophy that has carried over and lasted," said Jacob Sheinkman, secretary-treasurer of ACTWU and a spiritual descendant of its founders.

This has been true as well of other immigrant-founded unions like the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which sewed clothes for women while the Amalgamated made them for men and shared its progressive traditions. But the ILGWU has sung its way into the national awareness of the '70s with its "Look for the Union Label" television commercials, while ACTWU, although larger, remains relatively unknown outside of labor circles.

Actually, ACTWU may be best known for its leading adversary — the J.P. Stevens textile firm. Against this tempting target the labor movement has mounted a nationwide consumer boycott, rallied other elements of the somewhat frazzled labor-liberal coalition and attempted to build a case for overhauling labor laws to make it easier to organize workers at Stevens-like firms.

The anti-Stevens campaign may never succeed, but it has served as an antidote to tired blood within the labor movement. And the performance of ACTWU, to the extent that it is the catalyst in this major organizing and legislating effort of the 1970s, may tell as much about where unions are going as where they came from.

Boycotts are not new to unions. The Amalgamated itself successfully wielded this economic weapon (called "blackmail" by its victims) to force the El Paso-based Farah pants makers to the bargaining table in the early '70s. Lettuce and grape boycotts by Cesar Chavez' farm workers were other examples.

But the Stevens campaign has spawned a gamesmanship that transends the norm of union bargaining and lobbying. The tactics are being watched closely by both labor and industry.

In addition to its highly publicized consumer boycott, the union has been working quietly to isolate J. P. Stevens from the rest of the corporate community. It is doing this because Stevens has successfully resisted traditional organizing efforts among its 44,000 employees at 83 predominantly southern plants . . . and has also resisted several National Labor Relations Board orders and court injunctions in the process.

With an assist from other unions threatening to withdraw their millions of dollars in pension funds from financial institutions that retain ties to Stevens, ACTWU brought pressure to cut Stevens off from the interlocking directorates that proliferate on Wall Street.

In March the first returns were in: James D. Finley, chairman of Stevens, and David W. Mitchell, a Stevens director who is also chairman of Avon Products Inc., disclosed they were stepping down from the board of Manufacturers Hanover Corp. Then Mitchell, the Avon man, resigned also from the Stevens board. The resignations followed intensive union-sparked pressure on both Avon and Manufacturers Hanover, prime targets because of the cosmetics maker's susceptibility to a consumer boycott and of the bank's extensive (reportedly $1 billion) holdings of union pension funds.

The next targets are said by the union to include New York Life Insurance Co. and Seaman's Bank for Savings. Both those chairmen sit on the Stevens board. (Finley sits on New York Life board).

"You've got to look at Stevens not as a huge corporation with thousands of workers but as 13 men (directors) who are motivated by their own interests and won't put pressure on Stevens unless their own interests are directly involved," explains Raymond F. Rogers Jr., a former anti-poverty worker who heads "corporate strategy" for ACTWU and is credited with primary responsibility for the recent coup.

There are strong differences of opinion over the strategy. The Wall Street Journal has referred to "terrifying" the business community. Even within ACTWU, some wince at the Rogers power-rattling rhetoric. But the AFL-CIO, which some activist unions have accused of stonewalling on other matters, sees potential in the tactic. "I think it's a coming thing," said AFL-CIO spokesman Al Zack. "Unions are going to get tougher with these kinds of situations, and nothing succeeds quite like success."

The Amalgamated's re-emergence as a major force within organized labor followed more than 25 years of stable but uneventful leadership by aging Hillman lieutenants who took over when he died in 1946. Big breakthroughs were largely in the past: organization of the big garment centers in New York, Chicago, Baltimore and other northeastern cities, industry-wide collective bargaining and arbitration of disputes, an unemployment compensation program that served as a prototype for federal jobless benefits, health and pension programs, cooperative housing a union-run bank that still flourishes in New York.

More recent efforts, including pioneering in establishment of daycare centers and broadening college scholarship opportunities, percolated up from local and regional offices and reflected the expanding number of female and minority workers.

In 1972, the older generation stepped down and was replaced by Murray H. Finley of Chicago as president and Sheinkman of New York, the secretary-treasurer. In 1976, the Amalgamated merged with the smaller, always struggling Textile Workers Union that it helped organize 40 years earlier. The textile workers' chief officers, Sol Stettin and William DuChessi, moved in as vice presidents.

Lamesa man sentenced

A Lamesa man was sentenced in federal district court in Midland Wednesday to six months imprisonment after previously pleading guilty to burglary of a Helotes, Texas, post office.

Ronald Eugene Dobbs of Lamesa also was sentenced by U.S. District Judge John H. Wood to two years probation with supervision.

In the same burglary, Thomas Henry Hopkins

III of San Antonio pleaded guilty Tuesday night. He is to be sentenced July 5.

Also Wednesday Ruby Lee Hankins of Odessa was sentenced to five years probation with supervision after previously pleading guilty to possession of stolen mail. She also was fined $500 and ordered to pay $1,236 restitution for U.S. Treasury checks.

During the Tuesday night session, William Clarence Ransome of Odessa pleaded guilty to receipt of a firearm by a convicted felon. Ransome is to be sentenced July 5.

Public corruption meeting powerful new force that nets convictions

By RICHARD O'REILLY
The Los Angeles Times

PHILADELPHIA — A powerful new force against public corruption is sweeping the nation and the FBI investigation of the Pennsylvania Legislature is the latest example.

Using an eight-year-old law, federal prosecutors have seized extraordinary power over state and local politicians.

Three months ago the most powerful member of the Pennsylvania Senate entered federal prison at Allenwood, Pa., to serve a five year sentence.

Henry J. "Buddy" Cianfrani, Democratic chairman of the Pennsylvania Senate Appropriations Committee, was faced with such overwhelming evidence that he pleaded guilty or no contest to every one of the 110 federal felony counts on which he was indicted.

His crimes: Putting his mistress and her sister on the payroll of the Senate Appropriations Committee as "ghost" employees, taking $62,500 in bribes to get four students admitted to Pennsylvania medical and veterinary schools, and evading $62,828 in federal income taxes.

Except for four counts of federal income-tax evasion, the crimes Cianfrani committed traditionally have been state crime rather than violations of federal law.

But in Pennsylvania Cianfrani was merely the latest public figure to be successfully prosecuted under the eight-year-old federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statute.

RICO is a sweeping law, originally aimed at organized crime, with a stiff 30-year imprisonment provision.

It is the same law now being used in Sacramento as the basis of a Special Federal Grand Jury investigation of several past and present California lawmakers and lobbyists.

That investigation has been under way for more than a year and could take as long as another year and a half. Although federal authorities have refused to reveal the full scope of the Sacramento probe, it is generally believed to be focused on about half a dozen lawmakers and several lobbyists.

Nowhere has RICO been used against corrupt politicians more frequently and more successfully than in Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania House Speaker Herbert Fineman was sentenced to two years in prison for obstruction of justice related to a bribery scheme involving students seeking admission to Pennsylvania medical and veterinary schools. (The students were not the same as those involved in the Cianfrani case.)

John R. Sills, Philadelphia's Democratic Party patronage chief, is now serving a two-year federal prison term for receiving a $1,000-a-week bribe for eight months as his part in a ring which smuggled out-of-state cigarettes into Pennsylvania to escape the state's heavy cigarette tax.

Common Pleas Court Judge Vito N. Pisciotto is now in the second year of a two-year federal prison sentence for conspiracy and tax evasion in the cigarette-smuggling case. Testimony at his trial revealed that Pisciotto had paid Sills $20,000 for his judgeship. The FBI uncovered a coded list identifying numerous other judges who also "bought" their posts. Authorities told The Times the list has been decoded, but so far there have been no prosecutions as a result.

Augustine A. Salvitti, director of the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority, is awaiting sentencing after being convicted of racketeering and mail fraud for taking a $27,500 kickback to settle a real-estate dispute between the Redevelopment Authority and a landowner.

Across the state, in Pittsburgh, 35 bail bondsmen and associates, court magistrates, and constables were convicted or pleaded guilty to bribery and related charges under RICO. The scheme involved a single bail bonding company which kicked back half its net bail-bond premium to the magistrate who both set the bond amount and referred the criminal defendant to that firm. A state senator was among those indicted but he died of natural causes before trial.

Federal prosecutors and FBI agents here consider RICO the most powerful weapon in their arsenal.

Its application is limited only by the creativity and ingenuity of the prosecutor, according to Assistant U.S. Atty. Alan M. Lieberman, chief of the Public Corruption Unit of the Philadelphia U.S. Attorney's office.

The section of RICO used in political corruption cases provides:

"It shall be unlawful for any person employed by or associated with any enterprise engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce, to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debt."

The creativity is in defining the "enterprise", linking the enterprise to interstate or foreign commerce, and defining the "pattern of racketeering activity" in political corruption cases, Lieberman explained.

In Cianfrani's case, the Senate Appropriations Committee was considered to be the enterprise, according to Gregory T. Magarity, first assistant U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, who prosecuted Cianfrani.

The committee affected interstate commerce by "collecting data from other states by attending seminars and conferences, and cooperating and exchanging information with legislative budget and financial committees of other states," according to the Cianfrani indictment written by Magarity.

The "pattern of racketeering activity" must include at least two specific state or federal crimes from a list contained in the RICO statute.

Those commonly used in political corruption cases include bribery, exortion, mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

In Cianfrani's case, the pattern included bribery involving the medical and veterinary school students; a separate mail fraud count for each semi-monthly paycheck sent by the Appropriations Committee to his mistress and her sister, and obstruction of justice for his efforts to persuade the mistress not to testify before the federal grand jury and, later, to change her testimony.

In the case of Sills and Judge Pisciotto, their codefendants in the cigarette-smuggling scheme were officials of the State Bureau of Cigarette and Beverage Taxes. The bureau thus became the enterprise. Interstate commerce was easy to show since the smuggled cigarettes came from North Carolina and Virginia.

The various bribes paid and received constituted the pattern of racketeering activity.

A peculiar interpretation of the law was used in the prosecution of House Speaker Fineman. The government's key witness, Martin Abrams, had acted as the bagman in the bribes involving parents of the four students. Thus Lieberman chose to define the association of Fineman and Abrams as the enterprise.

Several of the parents lived in other states and two of the students were enrolled in foreign medical schools, making it easy to meet the interstate or foreign commerce test.

The four bribes and obstruction of justice formed the pattern of racketeering activity in the indictment.

The jury, however, did not find Abrams a credible witness and acquitted Fineman of the bribery counts even though Abrams testified he took the bribes from the parents and passed some of the money on to Fineman.

But the jury did convict Fineman of obstruction of justice for causing officials of the schools involved to remove from school files all letters he had written seeking admission for the students whose parents paid the bribes to Abrams.

Abrams agreed to testify only after he was convicted of perjury for lying to the grand jury earlier about his role in the bribes. Abrams's perjury conviction was obtained after he was trapped by an FBI informant wearing a hidden transmitter. Both Abrams and the FBI informant were relocated and given new identities through the federal witness protection program.

An even more unusual use of RICO was made in the Salvitti case.

Salvitti really had committed only one crime — taking the $27,500 bribe for settling the Redevelopment Authority's lawsuit against landowner William H. Sytk.

To get the two or more crimes required to sustain a RICO prosecution, Lieberman broke the bribery into its component parts, charging Salvitti with one count of bribery, one count of extortion and 14 counts of mail fraud — one count for each time the mails were used in the seemingly routine settlement of the dispute with Sytk.

In Pittsburgh, the case presented a straight-forward RICO prosecution. The bail bonding company provided the enterprise; an out-of-state bond underwriter provided the interstate commerce, and the long series of kickbacks to the individual magistrates provided the pattern of racketeering activity.

Gathering the evidence for these RICO cases has been a difficult, time-consuming task. Each of the Philadelphia cases took 15 to 18 months to put together, Lieberman said.

The series of RICO cases here was started by FBI Agent Michael M. Ryman, now supervisor of the 15-man public corruption squad in the Philadelphia office.

He began by investigating the cigarette-smuggling ring in 1974, after state prosecutors had spent two fruitless years trying to prosecute Sills, the Democratic Party patronage chief.

The first state indictment, in 1972, ended in a fast acquittal in a non-jury Common Pleas Court trial in which 15 other Common Pleas judges took the stand to praise Sills; some even walked over to pat him on the shoulder after their testimony.

That was followed by a 14-month state grand jury probe and another indictment of Sills and others, this time for perjury and conspiracy. That indictment was dismissed on a technicality.

It was at that point that Ryman began to investigate the case, inheriting the state's witnesses and evidence.

Eventually Lieberman was assigned to the case. The result was a personal and professional friendship between Ryman and Lieberman, and unprecedented teamwork which allowed assistant U.S. attorneys to advise FBI agents on interview strategies and agents to suggest legal interpretations to the attorneys.

Both Lieberman and Ryman said they believe such close teamwork is essential to successful RICO prosecutions.

Ryman went so far as to say that without it, he didn't think they could have gotten to the top politicians — Fineman and Cianfrani and several others still under investigation.

Each of the prosecutions has depended on the testimony of insiders — persons induced to talk because of their own pending criminal cases or impelled by other motives.

In the cigarette-smuggling case, a cigarette dealer caught with a truckload of smuggled cigarettes became the key witness after being given immunity. He was placed in the witness protection program, relocated, and given a new identity.

Violence was a real threat. One convicted defendant, Rocco Frumento, who held a political patronage post in the State Bureau of Cigarette and Beverage Taxes, was found dead with two bullet holes in the head shortly before he was to enter prison.

Ryman said he believes Frumento was killed to silence him and to warn others.

The Pittsburgh bail bondsmen case went quickly in contrast to the Philadelphia prosecutions. It began when a frightened ex-employee went to the FBI with details of the scheme, according to Jeffrey A. Manning, an assistant U.S. attorney in Pittsburgh who helped prosecute the case.

(Another person who worked on the Pittsburgh case was Melvin Dildine, a Washington-based attorney in the U.S. Justice Department's Public Integrity Section. Dildine now is commuting to Sacramento to work with U.S. Atty. Herman Sillas there to present evidence of political corruption to the special federal grand jury.)

Manning said the case was sewed up when a 19-year-old secretary at the bail bonding firm was interviewed by FBI agents.

The secretary described how she, on instructions from her boss, meticulously put the cash due each magistrate into separate envelopes bearing their names, along with the name of the criminal defendant for whose bond the kickback was being paid, and the amount due the magistrate, Manning said.

The ex-employee who first disclosed the scheme was placed in the witness protection program.

The FBI's most notable job in turning a witness was in the Cianfrani case, however. Their prize was 49-year-old Vera Domenico who had been Cianfrani's mistress for 22 years.

Cianfrani, separated from his wife for 20 years, had not only arranged for Miss Domenico to have an income in the $9,000 a year range on the payroll of a Senate Appropriations Committee she had never seen; he also built her a fine house across the river in New Jersey, complete with swimming pool.

But, according to Ryman, Cianfrani had not always been faithful to Miss Domenico, nor had he been very discreet about his other affairs.

Miss Domenico learned of Cianfrani's latest girlfriend in late 1976 when she found a strange phone number on her telephone bill. She dialed the number and found herself talking to Laura Foreman, then a political reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer.

MIDLANDERS Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Thames of 1901 W. Kentucky Ave. will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary by their family with an open house from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday in the Thames home. The couple was married June 3, 1928, in Oak Grove, La. Their friends are invited to attend the open house.

Dalinsky brunch for chosen few

WASHINGTON (AP) — The table is a cloth-covered cigar case, there are no chairs, the cups are chipped, and more often than not someone interrupts the conversation to ask where he can find the toothpaste. But brunch at Doc Dalinsky's drugstore is a favorite Sunday ritual for the chosen few.

"Hi, Artie ... Hi, Benjie ... Hi, Herbie ... Where's Joey?" voices call out over the racks of cosmetics, shampoos and magazines.

It's columnist Art Buchwald, Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee and cartoonist Herbert Block exchanging greetings and wondering about the whereabouts of HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

Most Sundays, they're the regulars, along with David Hume Kennerly, former President Gerald Ford's photographer; and Sen. John Heinz, the Pennsylvania Republican. Occasional visitors include Lauren Bacall, Dustin Hoffman, Kitty Carlisle Hart and novelist Herman Wouk.

Celebrities and shoppers alike make their entrance past the big Ex-Lax thermometer into the cluttered and cramped Georgetown pharmacy where Harry Alexander Dalinsky is waiting with friendly service for his customers but a veritable feast for his friends.

Bagels, cream cheese, lox, salami and sausage, spice cake and Danish pastry are spread out on a white table cloth that covers the pipe and cigar case just across the narrow aisle from the deodorant selections.

Coffee is served from a two-gallon container with a sign that says "private party," and strangers who wander in to buy the morning paper or some aspirin look with longing at the cheerful gathering or perhaps the pastry.

Dalinsky has had his drugstore for more than 40 years, but the brunches started about 10 years ago when the owner of the hotel across the street started to send over some coffee, Danish and grits on Sundays.

"And then Art (Buchwald) started coming over and things just escalated," said the balding, bespectacled Dalinsky, the kind of man who can get away with kissing all the women who come by.

"The excuse to come here is to buy the newspaper, but it's really a chance to chat with Doc and the others and find out what's going on," said Polly Shackleton, who represents Georgetown on the District of Columbia City Council. "It's sort of a nice cozy thing to do on a Sunday morning."

Dalinsky limits attendance to his old friends and neighbors and occasional outsiders who must be recommended by one of the regulars.

"It just gets too crowded to let anyone who comes by join the party," Dalinsky said apologetically. But he nevertheless relented after first saying no and welcomed inside a Cleveland visitor who had heard about the celebrated brunches.

"You should franchise this operation all over the country," Buchwald suggested.

"But there's only one Doc Dalinsky," protested the one and only. "Yeah, but there's only one Col. Sanders too," Buchwald reminded him.

The humorist said he came every week because "you have to show up. Doc takes attendance and if you don't come you have to have a written excuse."

With "Joey" Califano out of town one recent Sunday, the gang was joking about the handwritten note he had pinned to the bulletin board, crowded with meeting notices and lost-kitten announcements.

"For sale — 1971 Ford wagon. The car that drives Buchwald, Valenti, Bradlee (sometimes), Geyelin and Califano to Redskins games. See Doc."

"It's only $500, but so far no takers," said Dalinsky.

With the summer heat already seeping into Washington, the Doc was considering discontinuing the Sunday brunches. His clientele was dismayed by the news.

"There'll be withdrawal pangs all over the city," Buchwald predicted. He said he'd try to cope somehow by simply staying in bed Sunday mornings.

Mender can save garden hose

By AL CARRELL

Last week, you dragged the garden hoses out of storage, and this week you got out the power mower. Today, you mowed right over the garden hose, and so now you have a sprinkling hose. Maybe you don't have to throw the hose away. The several types of hose mender units are very easy to install if you can cut away the bad section and still have enough hose left to fool with. These mender units cost practically nothing, and a good new hose isn't all that cheap. The old clinker type menders are the cheapest and do a good job if they're done right. Here are the keys.

First, get the proper size. This is governed by the diameter of the hose. Why not cut out the bad section and take that with you to the hardware store to be sure. Next, the two hose ends where the connector will join should have perfectly straight cuts. Slip the corrugated nipples on the mender into the hose ends so they all fit snugly together. Put the mender down on a scrap block of wood. Start tapping the claw-like fingers on the mender down against the hose. When you've got this done all the way around, the leak is mended, and you're now ready to mow over it again. Believe me, this cure sure beats the old tar tape wrapping method.

Dear Al:

Many times a garden hose will leak around the connections at either the faucet or the nozzle. This is usually because of the washer. Before I replace one, I always try the old flip treatment. I just flip the washer over so the other side makes the contact. Often this new side will seal the connection. I know this should be a temporary repair, but it can mean a couple of more seasons. No, I'm not too cheap to buy new washers, but I am too forgetful—N.D.

Dear Al:

A garden hose left on the driveway at night is almost assured of a crushed nozzle connector or botched threads. I make our hoses visible so they can be seen at night. I used some left-over reflective tape. A ring of the tape every few feet picks up the light from the car and warns me to get out and move the hose—L.N.

A SUPER HINT:—Sometimes when you have a pinpoint leak in a plastic garden hose, you can mend it by just touching the hole with a hot soldering iron or with a hot icepick. The heat melts the plastic and closes the hole. If it doesn't work, you can still cut out the hole and reconnect the hose with a mender. When working with a plastic hose, dip the ends into a bucket of very hot water for a few moments. This will soften up the plastic and make the hose much more flexible and thus easier to work with. Sometimes inserting those menders can be almost as frustrating as the leak.

SHOP TALK:—Where the hose hooks to the faucet is a stress point for the hose. As you move around the yard, the hose bends and can be weakened. A gooseneck swivel connector will save your hose from stress and kinks and make your life a lot easier too.

Al Carrell welcomes all mail, especially tips from fellow Handymen which he can pass on to readers as space permits. While he cannot answer all individual letters, he will try to nail down your problem in his column whenever possible.

Satisfying marriages: why they always stay that way

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

Happy marriages aren't built on the kind of lifestyle you lead; or such factors as whether you are conventional or non-conventional; religiously committed or even whether the relationship is free of conflict.

They're built on strong commitments between two people; on an affectionate and enjoyable personal relationship; on mutual admiration and respect; on an enjoyment of each other's company.

The bottom line to a happy marriage, in fact, can be found in the answer to a simple question: Would you marry your spouse if you had it to do all over again?

These findings are the result of research by a University of California psychologist whose studies followed 250 persons for about 50 years. Arlene Skolnick, a research psychologist with UC-Berkeley's Institute of Human Development, has analyzed her conclusions for a chapter in a new book, "Present and Past in Midlife," which is scheduled for publication early in 1979.

"Happy spouses may do many things together, or each may go his or her own way," Skolnick pointed out. "They may have an egalitarian relationship or follow traditional sex-role patterns; they may have an active life or keep to themselves; they may have close contacts with kin ties; they may be religious or not practice any religion."

On the other side of the coin, happily marrieds in the studies showed the least evidence of a utilitarian living arrangement (as opposed to having a close personal relationship); of serious conflicts and disagreements; and of strained sexual tensions.

"Happy marriages were not free from trouble and conflict by any means," Skolnick pointed out. "But dissatisfactions tended to be treated with a grain of salt rather than being looked upon too seriously."

Her research also found that, unlike the popular concept of "opposites attracting," couples who were most like each other in temperament, personality and background tended to be more content with their marriages.

Fifty percent of married men cheat on wives, study indicates

By GINNY PITT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Half the men in a nationwide study admitted cheating on their wives. If the study is accurate — and many experts believe it is — every other man is having or has had an extramarital affair.

Is your husband among them? If he is, what should you do about it?

A Philadelphia-area psychiatrist says the first thing you should do is examine your relationship with your husband. Cheating is a symptom of a relationship in need of improvement, says Dr. Mary Ann Bartusis, whose new book, "Every Other Man," examines marital cheating.

The title of the book is based on the findings of "Beyond the Male Myth: What Women Want to Know About Men's Sexuality," a study by Dr. Anthony Pietropinto and Jacqueline Simenauer. The study found that half the men questioned said they cheated on their wives and two-thirds said they would cheat under certain circumstances.

Dr. Bartusis, 48, says she believes the findings may not reflect the full extent of adultery in the United States. She says she believes even a higher percentage of men may be cheating on their partners.

Her book is aimed at women whose husbands cheat, but the advice she offers also applies to men whose wives are having affairs, she says.

"More men than women cheat now because... they have more opportunity," she said in a recent interview. "But I believe that as more women get out and work and travel and do the things most men now do, there will be more women cheating on their husbands... because the opportunities present themselves."

Dr. Bartusis, clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at the Medical College of Pennsylvania and a member of the board of trustees of the American Psychiatric Association, has developed a "Crisis Guide" for people whose partners are cheating.

There are two stages — the suspicion stage and the discovery stage — and suggested courses of action depending on whether the cheating is a first-time offense or a habitual problem.

Whether you merely suspect your husband of cheating or whether you know it for a fact, examining your relationship first and talking it over with your husband is a must, Dr. Bartusis says. If your husband is cheating because something is missing in his relationship with you — and that's the reason most husbands cheat — you may be able to end the cheating and strengthen your marriage at the same time, she says.

If you have conclusive proof that your husband is cheating, confront him with it, she suggests. He may be relieved to have the situation out in the open, to have an opportunity to discuss what's wrong with your marriage and how you both can make it better.

Dr. Bartusis does not advocate adultery to bolster a faltering marriage, but she says she believes that when cheating has taken place "if both (spouses) change afterwards, it can be a healthier marriage. But if one or the other doesn't change, they're heading down the same road again."

Dr. Bartusis, married and the mother of four, says her husband has never cheated on her "that I know of," nor she on him, but no couple is safe from the temptations that are constantly present.

DEAR ABBY

Winning is name of the game

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Boy, do I ever have a solution for TOO TIRED, whose husband was ready to jump into bed at the drop of a hat, raindrop or snowflake. She went on to describe her daily routine of household chores, taking care of five children, running errands and helping her in-laws. I'd like to say this to her and to other wives in the same boat.

DEAR TOO TIRED: I had the same complaints some years back. I had four kids, and worked full time outside my home, and I still managed to attend the kids' baseball games, dancing lessons, etc. I was also pooped by 9 p.m.

Then my husband started "working late" even on weekends. I found out that while I was either "too busy" or "too tired," he had found himself a girlfriend. She had her own business, and she'd just lock the place up and hang a CLOSED sign on the door just to be with him. Should a wife do less than that?

Hire some help for your children and teach them to do for themselves. Take a nap if you're tired, and learn to let some things go, but NEVER let your husband go. If you're alive in bed, he won't notice what's UNDER it. — WON HIM BACK

DEAR WON: You make it sound so easy, but winning is the name of the game, so I won't argue with success.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter from a loving husband whose only complaint was a wife of 32 years who had a habit of saving everything for a rainy day. He said he had bought her some beautiful nightgowns, but she never wore any of them. (Some were still in their original boxes after 20 years)

You wisely reminded us, "Enjoy today—for it's later than you think."

Thank you for that timely reminder, Abby. Tomorrow I'll be 60, and I have put off treating myself to things like vacation trips, a brand new car, or even a really good suit of clothes. I never married because there always seemed to be a member of family who needed money for something, and I never said no to any of them.

Your column was exactly what I needed. Now, life for me will begin at 60. Thanks for listening. — NEW MAN IN MUNCIE, IND.

DEAR NEW MAN: What a coincidence. Today I received a lovely poem from an 84-year-old gentleman who expressed my sentiments perfectly—only more eloquently. And here it is:

"COME LET US LIVE TODAY
Bright ribbons she packed away,
She guarded all the brightness
And even robbed herself.
Carefully she hoarded gifts—
Refused to eat her daily bread,

Saved pennies for a rainy day
And left life's scroll unread.

All these things she guarded
Miserly, day by day
And one dull morning
In her mirror
Found her hair had turned to gray."
— JAMES NEIL NORTHE,
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

Students receive CPR certificates

One hundred and twenty-seven ninth grade students at Austin Freshman School have completed a Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation course.

The course was conducted by members of the Junior League of Midland, Inc., in conjunction with the Midland Heart Association.

CPR is best defined as artificial breathing and artificial circulation of blood provided by a trained rescuer, which means the rescuer must provide the oxygen and pump the oxygenated blood for a victim, because the victim's own lungs and heart cannot do it. It is an emergency first aid procedure which may save the life of a victim of cardio-pulmonary arrest.

Some causes of cardio-pulmonary arrest are heart attack, drowning, electrical shock, suffocation, poisoning, choking and smoke inhalation.

Any person interested in learning CPR may contact the Midland Heart Association.

Detroit woman collects Temple dolls, others

DETROIT (AP)—Mary Stuecher, 47, collects all kinds of dolls, but Shirley Temple dolls are her specialty.

Mrs. Stuecher devotes a large room in her basement to that collection. More than two dozen curly-haired dolls sit on wall shelves, overlooking a chest filled with Shirley Temple magazines, scrapbooks and paper dolls. A huge stand-up theater poster of Shirley Temple's face smiles from one corner of the room.

Mrs. Stuecher, a former kindergarten teacher, said, "I grew up in the 30s and 40s. I had Shirley Temple paper dolls and coloring books as a child. My mother packed them away in the attic, and now they are part of the collection."

Woven fabrics provide crisp, tailored look

COLLEGE STATION—Woven fabrics with stretch, such as polyester gabardine, provide a crisp, tailored look for sportswear with the flexibility and comfort of knits, says Beverly Rhoades.

A few hints can make sewing with these fabrics a success.

Miss Rhoades is a clothing specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

When preparing woven fabric for pattern placement, allow fabric to relax on a flat surface. Fabric should not hang off the edge of the table, she advises.

Lay the pattern pieces on the fabric to provide stretch in the desired direction.

Cut with very sharp shears, and avoid stretching the fabric while cutting. Stitch with polyester or cotton-covered polyester thread for strength and stretchability. A size 14 sharp, ball-point or universal needle is recommended, the specialist continues.

Use light pressure on the presser foot and a slightly looser thread tension than normal.

For best results, make test seams in fabric scraps, Miss Rhoades suggests. For straight stitching, at least 12-13 stitches per inch are needed to allow seams to give with the fabric while wearing.

For extra strength or stretchability, increase the number of stitches per inch, use a tiny zig-zag stitch or use a special machine stretch stitch.

Topstitching helps seam edges lay flat. Use regular thread or button-hole twist with a slightly longer stitch length.

Select conventional-sewn-in or fusible interfacing of similar weight to fashion fabric. Interfacings with stretch in one direction may be ideal in some areas to maintain stretchability of garment, she says.

To stabilize garment sections, such as waistbands, use woven interfacing or cut nonwoven interfacing in the non-stretch direction.

To prevent raveling, finish seams with pinking, hand or machine overcasting, or with zig-zagging.

If only a straight stitch is available for seams, stitch through both seam allowances one-eighth to one-fourth inch from seam line and trim close to stitching.

Westinghouse sees the light

By CECIL SCAGLIONE
Copley News Service

Here's a switch — a light bulb with an unconditional guarantee.

"If our new Turtle-Lite burns out, you just send it back to us and we'll refund the price of the bulb and postage costs," said Thomas Landrum, 59, vice president of Westinghouse Electric Corp. and general manager of its lamp divisions.

The new light bulb is on sale in supermarkets throughout California and Arizona in the first stage of a national marketing plan.

"We're going to spend $1.2 million in these two states over the next 12 months in advertising and coupon campaigns to boost this bulb," Landrum said in an interview. "This is sort of a departure for us because we're primarily in the industrial market and now we're trying to see how this product will do in the consumer market."

Westinghouse, which he said is second to General Electric in the electric lighting field, has established an $8 million national promotion campaign for Turtle-Lite.

PBS program offers food for thought, little else

By JAY SHARBUIT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If taxes didn't wipe you out, you may be planning a summer vacation overseas. It's with fine timing, then, that PBS now offers you a tourist show, "Who Pays for Paradise?" But the program, sent to PBS stations tonight (check local listings), isn't the usual jazz advising you where to go, what to see, how to dress and what happens if you partake of the local waters. Instead, "Paradise" is a food-for-thought hour on the bad effects of tourism in the Caribbean and what the growth of tourism is doing to the so-called Third World nations in Africa.

Be warned this proceeding is gloomy. Its theme:

The natives have met the enemy and they are us — and the Swiss, Swedes, British, French and Germans that tour organizers profitably pack off in herds to exotic locales of surf, sun and play.

But the real villains, it suggests, are multinational firms that do the herd-packing and earn huge revenues they keep, with little of the tour loot reaching the people who need it most — the natives.

Early in the show, made by Boston's WGBH-TV as one of its "World" documentaries, George Odium, a St. Lucia journalist, says: "It is a well-known fact in Caribbean tourism that about 80 cents of every...tourist dollar is repatriated and sent back to the investors overseas."

But no proof is offered, a flaw repeated when similar statements are made in the African nations — the Ivory Coast, Senegal and Gambia — that the program inspects.

And when narrator Lynette Saxe asserts that "multinational corporations dominate tourism in the Third World," only one company is identified, only one bill of particulars is presented.

You mostly get sad, repeated and obvious contrasts of the grinding poverty of the natives with the goodies enjoyed by vacationing white hordes at the luxury encampments they rarely leave.

It is noted that Third World nations offer tour moguls great tax concessions because local poverty is great, any revenue, however small, is welcomed and hopes abound that "tourist facilities will attract other investment."

But after serving up a repetitive list of complaints about how the natives don't benefit from tourism, how tourism is warping national values, "Paradise" offers little else.

No tourists are queried, no tour moguls asked if their firms should show more social conscience, no government officials grilled on why foreign tour firms aren't made to put much more of their earnings back in the area whence it came.

Anniversary revival of play 'disappointing'

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A disappointing "Waiting for Godot" opened Wednesday night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 25 years after its premiere in Paris.

The direction, by

Walter Asmus, is based on author Samuel Beckett's own 1975 Berlin production. It is tempting to write glowingly about the 25th anniversary revival of a play widely considered a modern masterpiece, one in which Bert Lahr had a big success on Broadway in 1956. Indeed, the Brooklyn Academy production has many points to recom-

ment it. But it also has pauses, longer than Harold Pinter's, between its speeches, and one waits for "Godot" to be over. Perhaps the mind is busier when it first encounters "Godot." Beckett seems to be saying that the human condition means people are trapped, going through absurd routines, striving for relationships and meaning, waiting for God to come and rescue them and he doesn't.

On second sight, the play drags. Milo O'Shea was splendid as Lucky, who has one big dramatic monologue. And Michael Egan was excellent as Pozzo, who keeps Lucky as a slave. He explained in convincing heartiness that Lucky enslaves himself, trying to ingratiate himself with the boss.

The other "set" of characters, two tramps who are mostly incompatible but stay together anyway, worked together less well. Sam Waterston was very good, lanky as a scarecrow or a ruined radical, his every step and sway as effective as though choreographed. He did the serious questioning, did the insisting that they wait for Godot.

Austin Pendleton, as the other tramp, sounded like a lyric tenor in a role that needed a heavy, darkly dramatic voice. That tramp has lines which might be funny. They weren't funny, because of Pendleton's clear, youthful voice or a lack of comedic timing.

This ponderous production of "Waiting for Godot" needed some humor relief.

The Brooklyn Academy of Music Theater Company will perform "Waiting for Godot" through June 18.

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturdays, beginning this Saturday, Mrs. Nancy McKinley, curator, announced.

The library, located at 1805 W. Indiana St., formerly has been closed on Saturdays. Mrs. McKinley said the new schedule is being instituted as a convenience to patrons who might not be able to visit the library and to do research work at other times.

The facility is closed on Sundays and Mondays, the curator said.

Shallow characters fail to make new surfing film

"THANK GOD IT'S as unsuspe tant-turne

FRIDAY" is the latest in a new wave of disco films that's encouraging moviegoers to become disco swingers. But that may be its only redeeming quality. Yet, TGIF is downright cute. Filmed almost entirely inside a fancy Los Angeles disco, it's sort of a cross between "Car Wash" and "Saturday Night Fever." There's a lively non-stop sound track, and a skeleton profile of several people whose lives touch as they scuttle across the dance floor, even if their bodies never do. Donna Summer, whose songs are a major asset to the disco dance craze, is disappointing in her acting debut, although her solo singing scene is sensational. But Ray Vitte as the energetic disc jockey in the glass booth, Chick Vennera as the acrobatic dancing man donned in leather, and Mark Lonow as unsuspecting accountant-turned-life-of-the-party hand in commendable performances. There are also a couple of unforgettable gut-splitting scenes, like what finally happens to the disco owner's Porsche that's maimed in the parking lot. And oh yes, there's a happy ending. Rated PG

Terrorist bomb kills four on bus

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bomb exploded on a Jerusalem bus in the pre-Sabbath afternoon rush hour today, killing four persons and wounding 17 others, police reported.

A police spokesman said five of the injured were hurt seriously. The blast occurred shortly after 1 p.m. in the Be'ar Vagan neighborhood of West Jerusalem.

It was the 11th and deadliest terrorist incident in Jerusalem this year. In previous bombings three persons died and more than 50 were wounded. A bomb explosion on a bus Feb. 13 killed two and wounded 48.

As ambulance sirens wailed through Jerusalem rushing victims to hospitals, police warned people to stay away from Beit Vagan to avoid interference with emergency workers.

In Washington, it's not who but where you are

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the game of White House watching, the title on the office doors doesn't tell you who's who. Not if the door is in the wrong neighborhood.

And there's only one right neighborhood: the complex of offices closest to President Carter's Oval Office. That's the West Wing, the Boardwalk and Park Place of official offices.

Ten steps from Carter's door is better than 20. And the senior aide who is assigned a spot in the Executive Office Building, across a private street, is deemed to be in big trouble.

It doesn't seem to make much difference that proximity does not necessarily mean power — or that the West Wing complex has been partitioned so many times that some of the offices are little more than cubbyholes.

"The magnificence of the office is in inverse proportion to the importance of the individual," says one White House aide, who is unimportant enough to have a fancy office in the far reaches of the Executive Office Building.

The issue arises out of the case of Midge Costanza, Carter's adviser on women's issues and on domestic human rights. She joined the Carter staff with broader responsibilities, and an office close by the president's.

Then came the memo from Hamilton Jordan: move. Ms. Costanza was told she would be sent across the street, to the ornate limbo of the Executive Office Building.

That is no hardship post. It was built to house the State and War departments, with old-fashioned high ceilings, paneled offices, fireplaces in many, space galore.

There are third echelon aides there with lodgings that would be the envy of the average senator. But it is not the White House.

Ms. Costanza said she really didn't care where she worked, but couldn't accept the symbolism of the office move. After all, the Carter people had made quite a point of her assignment to an office close by the president's as evidence of close liaison with minority groups, women, and the other interests with which she was to maintain administration ties.

"We live in a very symbolic nation," she said in appealing to Carter against the move. "To move me now, when I have assumed responsibility for women's issues and domestic human rights issues would tend to give the nation the impression those issues were being moved out of the White House."

That is debatable. The nation doesn't know where Midge Costanza's office is situated, or didn't, until she protested the move.

She won a split decision. She is yielding her office to Tim Kraft, who switched from appointments secretary to become political adviser and handyman. But she stays in the West Wing of the White House — in a basement office.

It's a strange kind of office politics, but it has been going on for years.

Richard M. Nixon made a big deal of his plans to assign a White House office to his Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, which was supposed to attest to the importance of being No. 2. Agnew got the office, for a while. But he seldom worked there. And he wasn't very important in the Nixon scheme of things.

Agnew spent most of his time in the far larger vice-presidential office suite in the Executive Office Building.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale does have an office in the White House, he does work there, and he is an important adviser and aide to the president.

Then again, Nixon confused the office watchers by moving himself across the street, to what was described as a hideaway office in the Executive Office Building. Some hideaway. It was, and is, palatial.

It has been occupied by deJongh Franklin, an Atlanta businessman serving as a consultant to the Office of Management and Budget. But he's about to lose the space. The splendor that was Nixon's will be turned over to Gerald R. Ford, the Atlanta advertising executive who joins the administration's public relations staff on July 1.

The fanciest, or at least biggest, digs in the White House staff office complex are those of Jordan and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Those also are Nixon administration bequests. H. R. Haldeman carved out the offices Jordan now occupies. The Brzezinski suite was built for Henry A. Kissinger, who once worked in the basement.

Nixon had the White House press room made into National Security Council offices.

Squirrels out-fox cat — again

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mildred the cat has again been outsmarted by wily squirrels, and — for the fifth time in a year — finds herself stranded atop a two-story house with little food and water.

Once in her lonely isolation she survived, without protection, a two-hour window-rattling thunderstorm.

When she was retrieved the next day, she was unruined and hungry. Her black-and-white hair was as dry as toast.

The scenario is always the same. Mildred, crouching low in the grass, creeps toward a squirrel, who dashes up a front-yard live oak tree, with Mildred in pursuit. The squirrel leaps from an overhanging limb onto the roof and Mildred follows. The squirrel zips across the roof and jumps onto another tree limb and safety.

Mildred is afraid to make the second jump and is apparently incapable of getting down the way she got up.

The first time the owners heard Mildred's plaintive cry and saw her peering over the edge of the roof, they hesitantly called the neighborhood fire station.

Within minutes it seemed that a hundred kids — "Where do all those kids live?" — were clustered around a fire truck. An extension ladder inched out toward the roof, and a fireman in full garb, including helmet, made the climb.

As soon as Mildred spotted him, she made an Olympic cat leap to the trunk of a pecan tree and hit the ground running.

The owners were so embarrassed by the spectacle that one stayed in the house, and the other did imaginary chores in the garage. The kids loved it and suggested the owners call the fireman again.

Not hardly.

The second time Mildred got stranded, a young, agile neighbor who had a long ladder and was accustomed to high places brought her down after a rooftop chase.

On Mildred's third and fourth ascents, the owners decided to wait her out, thinking — surely — she would get so hungry and thirsty she would jump to a tree. But Mildred slept so much they worried she was dead or dying.

It was decided to feed her by throwing eggs on the roof, because Mildred loves raw eggs. The first one splashed all over a second-floor window, and the plan was scrapped. Neither would Mildred jump to a lower roof for an aromatic dish of tuna fish.

Each time one owner balanced a six-foot-ladder on the shorter, slanted roof. Then, holding onto the edge of the roof with one hand, he coaxed Mildred to the edge and grabbed her.

As weak as she was, she was all claws on the descent.

Mildred spent her fourth night on the roof Wednesday night.

She had rainwater in the drain, and the owners threw two chicken bones to her Tuesday night.

A rescue mission, with hopes of Mildred and her owner's safety, was planned late Thursday.

Un-American idea may prove nation's best bet

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — We're back to double digit inflation, as if that's any surprise, and everyone from the President to the most insignificant consumer is acting as if somebody else is the culprit.

But there's no mystery about inflation, and the culprits know it, they being the wasters, the handout promoters, the budget-busters, the loafers, the over-regulators, the spend-thrifts, the greedy.

You can be even more specific than that. You can call them the President, the Congressman, the consumer, the farmer, the manufacturer, the union leader, the doctor, the lawyer, the banker....

Culprits, and victims too, fighting for survival in some instances, seeking at other times to gain a relative edge, feeding the spiral that eventually winds itself into a vacuum that sucks energy from everyone.

But a large percentage of those who complain aren't as helpless to do something as they might claim.

True, millions of Americans on fixed incomes — the very poor, retirees, the handicapped among them — already are living on poor diets and still are forced to pinch more in order to survive.

But many times their number have adjusted to a living standard that does indeed leave room for adjustment. What kind of adjustment? To a lower living standard, un-American as that might sound.

And what, for example, might be cut? Beef. It isn't a necessity of life, at least not in the amounts consumed by Americans. Nor, in fact, are other meats consumed in large amounts.

Gradually but persistently, Americans have been adding more meat to their diets. In 1920, they consumed on average 136 pounds of beef, veal, lamb-mutton, and pork. By 1970 the figure had grown to 186.

Many Americans already have reduced beef consumption, often substituting less expensive poultry, whose consumption since 1940 has tripled to more than 110 pounds per capita.

Other adjustments also are possible. If Uncle Sam's big budget deficits and free spending contribute to inflation, why accept 6 percent on U.S. Savings Bonds that take five years to mature?

Microwave use 'not dangerous'

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: Could the radiation from my microwave oven be dangerous for my unborn baby?—Adelaide N.

DEAR ADELAIDE: Microwave radiation has caused abnormalities in some animal embryos in laboratory experiments. However, the doses are relatively high, and they are given over a long period of time. An environmental health expert of the American Medical Assn., R.H. Wheeler, says there is no evidence at present that the very low amount of radiation allowed around a domestic microwave oven causes birth defects. You should, of course, be sure you take all the safety precautions listed by the manufacturer.

Travelers wax Cubs to square series

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

For the third night in a row at Cubs Stadium Thursday, 11 proved to be the winning formula as the Texas League bats continue to roll like dice, but unfortunately, it was the Arkansas Travelers who got the 11 this time as the Midland Cubs came up on the short end of an 11-3 score.

The Cubs had taken back-to-back 11-10 victories over the Travelers Tuesday and Wednesday, but when the smoking Arkansas bats quit doing the dirty work Thursday, Midland was left on the outside looking in, probably wondering what happened as the series now stands tied at two games each. The fifth game of the series will start at 7:30 p.m. today as the Cubs host two-bit beer night.

Thursday's outing was a rout from the start for the Travelers as Arkansas exploded for five runs in the first inning off loser Jack Ledbetter. Nine men walked to the plate in the first frame for Arkansas and teed off like they were playing over on the Hogan Park golf course. It was just one of those nights.

DAVID BOYER'S base cleaning double in the first did most of the damage. Boyer, the son of St. Louis Cardinals manager Ken Boyer, laced a bases loaded double down the left field line all the way to the wall. He was a real thorn to the Cubs since he singled, doubled and tripled in five trips to the plate. His triple in the ninth capped a four-run uprising by Arkansas. It was those two frames that really did the Cubs in.

Dave Penniall and Fred Tisdale both chased home runs in the first with clean singles to center to start the rally and Boyer later followed with his base sweeping act. Tommy Herr led off the second with a solo homer over the left centerfield wall and Ledbetter followed by hitting Dave Bialas. The Cubs then brought in Larry Groover for the next seven innings, and he gave up only one run until the Travelers got to him in the ninth.

ARKANSAS RAN the score to 7-0 in the third when Herr drove home Leon Durham with a single to left off Groover. Groover, however, retired 16 of the next 18 batters as the Cub defense contributed a couple of double plays and gunned down a couple of would be base stealers with catcher Greg Keatley.

The Cubs jumped back into the fight with two runs in the bottom of the third when Keatley doubled to left center, scoring Kurt Seibert and Steve Macko who led off the inning with walks. The 578 Midland fans must of had visions of comeback by the Cubs, who turned a 7-0 deficit into an 11-10 win Wednesday, but it was not to be this time.

Aaron Randall followed Keatley's double with a single to right, but the Travelers stopped the Cubs' momentum when Eric Grandy lined to center fielder Gene Dotson for the second out. Keatley tried to score from third, but Dotson nailed him at the plate for a twin killing and the Cubs' power drive was blunted.

MIDLAND SCORED a lone run in the fourth when Steve Macko delivered a double to score Javier Fierro from second. But again the Cubs had a rally stopped as Seibert was tossed out at the plate trying to score on Macko's double. This time it was a fine relay from left fielder Penniall to third baseman Boyer and then on to catcher Terry Kennedy. The Cubs would have been behind by a 7-5 count at that point if both runners had scored instead of being nailed at the plate, and two rallies would have still been alive.

Dotson knocked in a run in the ninth while Leon Durham chased two more home with a single to left. Boyer ended the insult with his triple. The Cubs would have been touched for only a single run in that frame if Keatley hadn't dropped an easy chance at a foul ball off the bat of Kennedy.

Herr and Boyer each had three hits for the Travs while Dotson, Tisdale and Randy Thomas each had two hits to highlight Arkansas' 15-hit attack. Keatley was the only Bruin to get two hits for Midland. Jim Buckner had a rough night at the plate for Midland as he struck out four straight times looking against winner Jim Otten and reliever Bret Houser. Still, Buckner singled in the ninth to end the strikeout slide. Otten and Houser scattered nine Cub hits and 10 Midland hitters went down on strikes.

Toby's belt spurs Texas to triumph

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas third-baseman and former All-Star Toby Harrah still has a long way to go before he can comfortably declare his current hitting slump ended.

But Harrah, hitting at a meager .201 clip this season, says the key is swinging his bat at more strikes and fewer bad pitches.

He slapped a 2-2 pitch over the left-field fence for a three-run homer Thursday night that propelled the Rangers to a 10-7 American League victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"I think it was a slider," said Harrah of the pitch from Minnesota reliever Mike Marshall. "It was a good pitch and it felt good when I hit it."

It was only the second homer this year for Harrah, who hit 27 of the long balls last year and entered this season with a .262 career batting average.

"I just have to keep swinging and be more selective," said Harrah as he enjoyed the dressing room spotlight once again.

Harrah's homer capped a four-run Ranger rally in the seventh inning and helped rookie relief pitcher Steve Comer get his first major league victory.

Rebels in bid for state berth

Showers in the Lubbock area rained out the AAAA baseball playoff game between Midland Lee and Lubbock Monterey scheduled for Lubbock today. The doubleheader, if two games are necessary, has been rescheduled for noon Saturday at Lubbock's Lowery Field.

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

LUBBOCK -- Robert E. Lee is seeking a state tournament berth today.

Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebels, took on the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen at 2 p.m. today at Lowery Field in the state Class AAAA baseball quarterfinals and needed only one victory for a trip to Austin next week.

Lee beat the Plainsmen, 6-4, Tuesday in Midland to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series and needs the one win while Coach Bobby Moegle's outfit must sweep Lee in order to get the berth.

Lefthander Gary Gibson (2-4) was set to pitch for Lee while Monterey was going to counter with righthander Derek Hatfield (12-3) in the first contest. If a third game is necessary, it will follow the 2 p.m. tilt with Terry Willis (10-2) going for Lee and Ron Reeves (13-1) for Monterey.

The Rebels took a 26-9 record into the game today compared to Monterey's 30-5 reading as the 5-4A champions snapped a 21-game winning streak by the Plainsmen with that big victory on Tuesday. Monterey has another streak going in that it has not lost a game in Lowery Field in two years or 29 consecutive games, so Johnson feels like it will be a tough afternoon for his Rebels. "They (Monterey) are doubly tough at home, but we already ended two streaks, the 21 straight wins and beat Reeves for the first time, so we are capable of ending the home win string too," added Johnson.

Gibson lost to Hatfield, 5-0, in the Tournament of Champions back in March, but in that game, only trailed 1-0 going into the seventh inning, so the 230-pound southpaw may be just the choice Lee needs to win the series in two straight games.

In another quarterfinal playoff game played in Waco Thursday night, the Richfield Rams of Waco polished off the Duncanville Panthers, 5-3, to even that series at one game each. The third and deciding game is set for 8 p.m. today in Duncanville with the winner advancing into the state tournament with Houston Bellaire and two other winners, June 8-9. Bellaire won its quarterfinal series with Pasadena Dobie, taking two straight by scores of 5-1 and 17-11. In the other quarterfinal games, Corpus Christi Moody bombed favorite San Antonio Roosevelt, 9-1 Tuesday and the second game of the series was set for today with a third game, if necessary, to be played on Saturday.

Miami-Dade North triumphed in the National Junior College Women's Golf Championships held at the Hogan Park Golf Course with a 935 three-day total Thursday.

Temple Junior College finished second with a 985 total, while Glendale Community College was third with a 1037, and Midland College came up fourth with a 1126.

All five members of the Miami-Dade North team placed in the top six in the medalist competition, beginning with Miami player Pam Elders who took first with a 227 three-day total.

Teammate Monica O'Hare was a close second with a 228, and Lori Clark of Temple was third with a 234.

Nancy Rubin, Jill Fraser and Jill Jerauld swept fourth through sixth places for Miami with scores of 242, 244 and 245, respectively.

Midland Coach Susan Holland said that she expects the tournament "to double in size next year." Miami, she added, was looked on to win the tournament, particularly because of their impressive record against nationally ranked major colleges.

Coach Holland exclaimed that with two more players to be playing on the team next year, her team's chances of doing well will increase.

Spectator participation, which was rather light this year, will increase, according to Coach Holland, proportionately to the size of the tournament.

What can a coach who has won 300 games want?

BY TED BATTLES

What can a coach who has won 300 games possibly want?

Well, if you are Ernie Johnson, "I'd like No. 301," which is spoken like a true coach in the play-em-one-at-a-time tradition. If Ernie had answered "Give me 303," you'd know he was thinking state AAAA championship, but unless his Midland Lee Rebels win today, there's no tomorrow...at least, this year.

Just to test his memory, Ernie was asked if he could remember his first game as Midland Lee coach and how it came out. "You bet I can," he responded "without hesitation. "We lost to Odessa Ector at Odessa when a 6-7 kid stole home on us with Don Puckett pitching. If you want me to check, I've got it right here in my file."

Ernie volunteered, "I also remember the first game we played against Lubbock Monterey," an old foe that understandably is foremost in his mind, since his Rebels must beat the Plainsmen today to earn that trip to Austin.

"We won 8-3 and Carl Schreiner and Sammy Flournoy both hit home runs. We were supposed to play two that day, but we were playing at old Hughes Park in Lubbock and they had just topped the infield with dirt. The win was blowing 40 mph right at our dugout. It was so bad we called it quits after one game."

IN JOGGING his memory for not-to-be-forgotten moments, Ernie recalled the 1969 playoff series with Monterey. "They had a great hitting team. They beat us here 3-2 in nine innings against Randy Prince," who was the ace of the staff. "We went to Lubbock and Mike Griffin, only a sophomore, beat them 1-0. The wind was blowing in and they hit some tremendous shots that would have been trouble, except for the wind. I remember second baseman Doug Christensen somehow got to a ball labeled hit in the last inning and turned it into a double play. Then Prince beat them 3-2 in the next game."

Disappointments? "That's a little tougher. I forget in a hurry. I remember little about the losing seasons."

Yet Ernie still can feel the pain of the 1968 season, which ended when Arlington beat the Rebels two straight in regional, the second played in a drizzle at the Randall Mill Park field in Arlington. "John Howell walked nine or 10 that day and he averaged only one walk a game all year. That was the game where they tried to run over him while he was fielding a ball and we had a man picked off third when the pitcher threw after starting his windup."

That was also the year that Howell, who later was to pitch in the Cleveland Indians organization, won the district title for Lee by singling up the middle against Odessa while in the process of being intentionally walked.

"THE 1964 season was interesting. That was the year we lost our last game to Midland and San Angelo won, throwing the race into a tie. We won the first game here easy over Ken Henson and went to San Angelo for the second game and won. In those days, the district winner had to be certified by Friday, but our game was rained out. The UIL said we would have to flip a coin, but after a lot of phone calls we got permission to play a Saturday game. We won and it was 9 or 10 p.m. when we got back to Midland.

"El Paso Austin wanted to play Monday, because that was the only day they could get Dudley Field, so in order to get a workout under the lights, we had to leave for El Paso 9 a.m. Sunday morning. We got 17 hits off Bob Arnold and it was the first game we ever had played at night."

Arnold, the next year, pitched Austin to state and later went to A&M where arm trouble probably ruined a promising pro career.

Lee reached the state meet that year and lost to Brazosport, 4-3, and then won the consolation game, 1-0 over San Antonio Lee, 1-0, as Bobby Weber pitched a one-hitter. "Our shortstop Jackie Hanks hit the first base bag with a liner and it bounced off for a triple which led to the lone run of the game."

IN LOOKING back, Ernie recalls that not too many of his ex-Rebels turned pro or even played college ball. "I think it's the environment here. They are brought up in an education oriented community and know what they want to do when they go to college, so baseball is secondary. As for those that have turned pro, they really haven't given themselves long enough simply because they want to get on with their lives. Carl Schreiner spent three years in the Red Sox organization and then gave it up," so he could finish dental school.

Among those Ernie recalls playing college ball were Al Wooten, at OC and a small college in Oklahoma where he had some good years; Puckett at Navy; Rusty Laughlin at Tech; Bobby Stevens and Brett Blackwell."

Roger Alexander, who played for Ernie at Lee, is 7-1 for Savannah in the Southern League, but for the success the Rebels have had over the years, there really haven't been that many who continued to play later.

ERNIE ATTENDED and pitched at Texas A&M and later pitched two years in the Pittsburgh Pirates' organization at Waco and Brunswick, Ga. "I always could throw hard but had control problems and then tendonitis in my shoulder-ended my pitching career. I really hadn't expected to go too far. I was 22 when I came back from Korea, which was kind of late in life, but I enjoyed those two years in pro ball."

Perhaps it would seem that coaching would be the natural next step, but Ernie reveals that wasn't the case. "I had a very poor baseball background. I didn't play until I was a junior in Dublin and at A&M the coaching at that time wasn't really that good. I certainly wasn't qualified to coach on that basis."

"Most of my baseball knowledge came from Cecil Ballew, who was an all-conference shortstop at Texas A&M. He coached at Stephenville, where I went to junior college and played and I played for him on a semipro team that had five players go on to pro ball and several others who played in college ball. He was a good teacher, especially on infield play."

Ernie says, "Cecil was where I learned my baseball, not in college or the pros."

"And since becoming a coach, I've done a lot of reading. If it's a good book, I put it in my library. Sometimes when they are very technical, you don't get the message until you read it a second or third time. Out here in West Texas, we are isolated from scouts and outstanding college coaches, so you have to read to stay up to date."

Ernie adds, "You never cease to learn as long as you are willing," which tells you one reason he's reaching for 301 today.

Popular Jim Fregosi takes over Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Jim Fregosi, an original member of the California Angels, is coming home to be their manager and he believes he can help inspire the club to greater heights in the American League West.

"We felt the Angels needed more motivation and that Fregosi is the type of individual to fill that bill," said Gene Autry, team president and chairman of the board, in announcing the firing of Dave Garcia and the hiring Thursday of the 36-year-old former infielder.

Fregosi, who played with the Angels for 11 seasons starting in 1961, becomes the eighth manager in the Angels' 18-year history.

"The biggest thing is baseball is a lot of fun and the players should have fun while they're playing it," said Fregosi Thursday night at the Greater Cincinnati Airport before flying to California. "If they have fun they can win."

Fregosi, who has been a utility infielder with the Pittsburgh Pirates, will take over as the Angels' non-playing manager when they meet the Boston Red Sox in the opener of a 10-game homestand at Anaheim Stadium tonight. He was in Cincinnati because the Pirates open a weekend series there against the Reds tonight.

Fregosi follows Bill Rigney, the late Lefty Phillips, Del Rice,

Beth Stone holds opening round lead

TORONTO (AP) — Beth Stone has been too close to winning in past years to get excited about holding the opening-day lead.

Stone shot the best round of her professional career Thursday over the 6,265-yard, par 73 St. George's Golf and Country Club — a 7-under-par 66 — to take a 1-stroke lead in a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Stone, 38, is 1 stroke ahead of Susan O'Connor, who also shot her best career round — a 6-under-par 67.

Rono 'conceals' his achin' foot

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Henry Rono says his foot is bothering him, but you wouldn't have known it from watching him run.

The enigmatic Kenyan strided with ease to meet records in qualifying heats of the 3,000-meter steeplechase and 5,000-meter run in the opening day of competition Thursday at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Rono, a 26-year-old sophomore at Washington State, says he will try to become the first person in the 57-year history of the NCAA meet to win the steeplechase, 5,000 and 10,000 meters, an attempt criticized by many of his fellow distance runners and coaches.

"I feel good, except for the foot," he said after his training day. The troublesome foot injury, suffered when he set the world steeplechase record at 8:05.4 in Seattle three weeks ago, threatens his unprecedented distance effort.

When asked if he was still confident he could win all three races, he said, "It depends. I'll have to see how I feel tomorrow."

Rono, who also holds the world record in the 5,000 meters, had times of 8:18.63 and 13:21.79, respectively, to set meet marks in his two events Thursday.

Despite winning by large margins, Rono ran surprisingly hard in both qualifying races, including a sizzling 58.3 on his final 440-yard lap in the 5,000. He said he was testing his foot to see if it would stand up in today's 10,000.

He won the steeplechase by 24 seconds and the 5,000 by a half-minute.

JIM MURRAY

By JIM MURRAY
(C) 1978, The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

If Roger DeCoster, the Belgian biker, wins the U.S. Motocross Grand Prix at Carlsbad, Calif., Sunday, he will be the longest of longshots ever to come through.

It's not that he's that bad a rider—five times world champion and lying third in the standings. It's just that it'll be the first time anyone ever won that race posthumously.

You see, the "late" Roger DeCoster passed away in Belgium last February on a hospital operating table after he hit a tree in practice. His blood pressure dipped almost to 0-0, which was not surprising, because he was all but out of blood. He required 1.6 gallons of whole blood to replenish his supply.

IN THE meantime, his heart stopped. The doctors were frantic, and it took open-heart massage to get it up to speed again. Then, like his motorcycle, the accelerator stuck. When the pulse rate soared over 200, DeCoster lay there like his wrecked motorcycle with a wheel spinning. Roger DeCoster had taken his last ride, was the consensus in the hospital. But skillful anaesthesiology brought him safely through. They removed his spleen, gave him an arterial oil change, and heaved a sigh of relief that Motocross racers are among the most superbly conditioned of athletes.

They thought, however, that he might want to change his motorcycle into a lamp stand or a mail box—before it turned him into a lily bed—but DeCoster was back on a bike as soon as they took the bandages off. In a month, he was back on a track. In six weeks, in a winner's circle.

A motocross is no place for a dead man. It has been described cynically as "an air race on the ground." Sometimes, the bikes are aloft longer than the Wright Brothers. It is a refinement of motorcycle racing in which 500-cc bikes compete over obstacle courses like hills, gullies, washboard jumps and rocks, and the contestants wear kidney protectors known as "chastity belts" and several layers of plastic goggles which they peel off as they become encrusted with mud or rocks, and wear a mouthpiece like a pugilist to save teeth from flying debris.

IT'S a punishing sport in which 40 machines burst out at the start for a needle-eye turn which permits no more than four cycles abreast and, for the next 45 minutes, the bikes fight to stay on the ground or away from trees as they go over more ramps than a barrel jumper. There are two "motors" to a cross and your best overall finish determines the winner. Last year's Bel Ray-U.S. Grand Prix race at Carlsbad was won by a rider who finished 3-2 in his heats or "motors." The winner of the first heat that day crashed in the second.

motorcycles since he was a Brussels sprout and he was the king of the sport back when he had a spleen and an unbroken record of heartbeats. The sport was probably invented by German generals who wanted their dispatches on time and knew World War II wouldn't be fought over a paved oval, but the sport is dominated today by Dutch, Finnish and Belgian rider on Japanese cycles. DeCoster represents Suzuki.

DeCoster's riding style has always been so effortless it was said he

Jim Palmer says rumors that the Baltimore Orioles might trade him are grossly exaggerated. In fact, Palmer, who tossed his third straight shutout Thursday in a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees, says he's the source of those rumors.

"I started most of the rumors, so it doesn't affect me," he said. "I called rumor control last night, and they said if I keep pitching like this there's no chance of a trade."

Palmer, now 7-4, yielded only two hits to the Yankees, weak singles by Lou Piniella and Chris Chambliss, in securing his 201st major league triumph and 49th career shutout, one more from active pitcher.

The 32-year-old, three-time Cy Young award winner was blasé.

"Just another shutout," he said. "It was just a win and I just happened to pitch a shutout again. I don't think about shutouts when I go out there. I just try to give up as few runs as I can. It was just a very blah 1-0 game."

Palmer, who walked five and struck out two, has now won four games in a row, and he's still complaining of a stiff shoulder.

"My shoulder has hurt all year," he said. "I thought it was cured when I left Florida but the pain is always there and it never really loosens up. I've had a couple of shots, but they haven't really helped."

In other American League games, Detroit nipped Milwaukee 4-3, Kansas City clobbered Seattle 10-0 and Texas rallied to beat Minnesota 10-7. There were no games in the National League Thursday.

Rookie Jim Beattie, 2-1, who had beaten Palmer earlier in the year, allowed four hits in seven innings.

The Orioles' run came in the fifth when Doug DeCinces walked on four pitches and took second on Rick Dempsey's single. DeCinces moved to third when Mark Belanger hit into a double play, and when Larry Harlow walked and stole second, reserve catcher Cliff Johnson threw the ball into center field, scoring DeCinces.

Tigers 4, Brewers 3
Ron LeFlore drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a single, and bullpen ace John Hiller came in to bail out Jim Slaton, 5-2, who got Detroit's third consecutive victory after seven straight losses. Hiller got his sixth save.

Sal Bando hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Robin Yount hit a sacrifice fly in the second to score Sixto Lezcano for Milwaukee, but Slaton settled down. Slaton gave way to Hiller in the eighth after yielding a triple to Paul Molitor and a walk.

Royals 10, Mariners 0
Dennis Leonard, 4-8, who lost five straight games in May, tossed a six-hit shutout that boosted Kansas City into first place by four percentage points over Oakland in the AL West.

Darrell Porter doubled home three runs for the Royals in the second inning, and George Brett also had three RBI on a pair of doubles in Kansas City's 14-hit attack.

Tom House, 3-4, the first of four Seattle pitchers, took the loss.

Zarley leads on worst round

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — From tee to green, Kermit Zarley considered it one of his worst rounds of the year.

But the 36-year-old PGA tour veteran broke out of his putting slump with a vengeance, knocking in four birdies in his last six holes Thursday for a 6-under par 66 and the first-round lead in the $300,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

"I'm embarrassed," Zarley said afterwards. "I didn't play that well. I wish I could say I did, but I played pretty bad. I was very fortunate on a few occasions. Everything went right for me."

By his own count, Zarley hit bad fairway shots on all but five holes. After 12 holes, he was only 2-under par—but that, he said, was when his wife, Marilyn, entered the picture.

"I had a 12-foot putt for par, and she said, 'Knock it in, honey.' She said it on every hole coming in, and I holed every putt except one from there to the clubhouse."

Included in that stretch were three consecutive birdies. Zarley completed his day's work by hitting a wedge from the left of the green on the final hole.

Baylor faces Michigan first

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Miami challenges No. 1-ranked Southern California and Big Ten Champion Michigan faces Southwest Conference winner Baylor as the College World Series gets underway tonight in Omaha.

Baylor's stock suffered when Coach Mickey Sullivan disclosed Thursday that Burt Coker would not play in the tournament.

The outfielder-pitcher, described by Sullivan as one of those outstanding college players who comes along once in 20 years, had been expected to be available for designated-hitter duty here.

But an X-ray this week disclosed a hairline fracture suffered when Coker was hit in the left arm while trying to beat out a bunt.

Michigan and Baylor were to meet in the Friday opener at 5:10 p.m. CDT. Miami will challenge Southern California at 8:10 p.m.

First-round play will continue Saturday, with first-time CWS entry Oral Roberts meeting North Carolina at 5:10 p.m. and defending champion Arizona State facing St. John's at 8:10 p.m.

Sonics, Bullets resume NBA playoffs tonight

SEATTLE (AP) — Tonight was the night the Seattle SuperSonics figured they'd win it all.

Instead, they find themselves deadlocked with the Washington Bullets in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series and another trip to Landover, Md., ahead of them.

The Sonics held a 2-1 lead in the series entering Game 4 Tuesday night at the Kingdome. If the Sonics had won that game, they'd have been playing for the title tonight.

But the Bullets spoiled those plans when they rebounded from a 15-point third-quarter deficit and outlasted the Sonics in overtime for a 120-116 victory that squared the series and snapped Seattle's 21-game home win streak.

So now it's down to a best-of-three series with Game 5 set for tonight in the Coliseum, the Sonics' regular home court, and Game 6 on Sunday at the Capital Centre in Landover.

The seventh game, if necessary, would be played in Seattle on Wednesday night.

"We're ready to go," said Sonics center Marvin Webster. "The loss won't change the outcome of the series, only delay it. I'm still confident. We know we can beat this team."

"We wanted to end it here. We just had to postpone it a couple of days, that's all," said Seattle guard Fred Brown. "Tuesday night was just a minor setback."

A minor setback for Seattle, maybe, but a major step in the right direction for the Bullets.

"No matter what happens Friday night, we're going back home. I like that a lot," said Washington Coach Dick Motta.

Tonight's game hinges on which team can put its game plan into action.

San Antonio topples Tulsa, 5-3

By The Associated Press

In Texas League games Thursday, San Antonio downed Tulsa 5-3 while Jackson and Amarillo split a doubleheader with Jackson taking the first game 2-0 and Amarillo clinching the nightcap by an identical 2-0 score. El Paso at Shreveport was rained out.

In Tulsa, Rick Sander struck out 11 Tulsa batters as he went the distance for San Antonio to hand Tulsa its eighth loss in a row.

In Amarillo, Scott Holman garnered his fifth victory of the year against one loss as he went the distance in stifling Amarillo with only four hits. Amarillo contributed to its problems with five errors that helped Jackson score its two runs.

Ellis could set precedent

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

DALLAS (AP) — All of baseball, as well as the other big money sports, is watching the outcome of the Dock Ellis insubordination case.

The question: In today's unrealistic society of fun and games, in which million-dollar athletes toil for $100,000-a-year managers, does the worker have the right to disobey the boss?

As they say in the Supreme Court circles, this one could be precedent-setting. Landmark stuff. You know the background:

The Texas Rangers baseball team is flying from Seattle to Minnesota and up there in the aisle is Dock Ellis, the star pitcher, talking loud, sipping a liquid nourishment and roisterously living it up, as fun-loving boys will do.

"Shut up and sit down," barked the team manager, Billy Hunter. Ellis was livid.

He proceeded to launch into a tirade against team rules, which as with most major league teams, include prohibitions against drinking on planes and in public lounges of hotel headquarters.

They are stupid rules, insisted Ellis, a maverick whose defiance set grass fires with the Pirates and Yankees before he came to the Rangers with a $500,000 contract.

He blamed Hunter for the restrictions. Although he was the team's player representative, he invited other players to join him in openly defying the drinking rules as soon as they reached the hotel.

"He may be a Hitler but he's not gonna make a lampshade out of me," Ellis said of Hunter, submitting to gross over-reaction.

"My father ... is the only man who ever told me to sit down and shut up. No one else is going to."

"I told him I was going to do my best to break every rule he has."

Ellis kept up the scathing tirade during the week's home stand during which he resigned as player representative and pitched a winning game.

Hunter seethed and suffered in silence while everybody waited for the other shoe to drop.

It never did. The next move was up to Brad Corbett, the team owner, and he was away in Asia on a business trip. Corbett has described Ellis as "my best man."

It appears there's only one action. Corbett must back up his manager. Otherwise, he invites anarchy. The betting here is that Corbett will tuck it and side with Ellis. That means exit for Hunter.

Rangers appoint Shero

PHILADELPHIA — The New York Rangers have named Fred Shero as coach and general manager of their National Hockey League franchise.

The Rangers obtained permission to negotiate with Shero, who resigned as coach of the Philadelphia Flyers just over two weeks ago.

The New York club acquired the coach's negotiating rights by giving Philadelphia a No. 1 draft choice and an undisclosed amount of cash.

CINCINNATI — The Stingers reached their goal of selling 5,000 season tickets in order to stay in business in Cincinnati.

Club officials reached their goal with hours to spare by selling 225 season tickets at the 11th hour.

The Stingers, who had seen their season ticket base drop to 2,800 subscribers after the current season concluded, began their ticket drive six weeks ago and gave themselves until June 1 to reach the 5,000 level. A Dayton-based department store chain purchased 100 tickets to boost the team over its goal.

Jaskie, Ellenburg take lead

SEATTLE — Fred Jaskie and Frank Ellenburg took the first-round lead in the $75,000 Professional Bowlers Association Doubles Classic.

then sinking a 6-foot birdie putt.

"I just snuck it in there," said Zarley, who bettered his previous low round of the year by two strokes. "I've had eight months, and I'm just coming out of it."

ZARLEY'S HIGHEST finish this year was a tie for sixth at the Houston Open. He hasn't won an individual title on the PGA tour since 1970, and he is eyeing the $60,000 first prize at the Kemper.

"I need the money," said Zarley, who is 78th on the winnings list with $18,567 this year.

Also seeking to end a long absence from the winners circle is Arnold Palmer, who finished Thursday's play 1 stroke back on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Palmer knows the course well. He has a wood-frame home overlooking the 15th fairway and has played the course every day since last Friday.

"It helps that I've stayed at home. I've played this golf course more in the last week than I have any golf course before a tournament in years," said Palmer, who won the first Kemper in 1968 but hasn't notched a PGA victory in the past five years.

Another favorite of the galleries, defending Kemper champion Tom Weiskopf, had a lackluster 71 for the first 18 holes and said he had trouble concentrating on his shots.

"I more or less got what I deserved, I felt," he said. "I wasn't thinking about what I should be doing. I can stop the club in the middle of a swing if I'm not thinking."

Report on damaging nerve gas rejected

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Officials rejected Thursday a report a harmful gasoline additive escaped during the explosions and fire that left six persons dead Tuesday at an oil refinery.

Rick Sherman, industrial relations manager for Texas City Refining Co., said the report that tanks containing 43,000 pounds of nerve damaging tetraethyl lead had ruptured was false. "We're letting people into that area to work now and we wouldn't do that if there was any lead there," Sherman said.

He added that representatives of the Ethyl Corp., producers of the additive, tested the plant thoroughly and found no trace of leakage.

A spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency indicated agreement, saying it had been determined the Wednesday report had been based on erroneous information.

"Through sampling and analysis of our own we determined we don't really have a problem," he said.

As a precautionary measure, however, Galveston County health officials took blood samples from a number of persons who were in the general area at the time of the initial explosions.

Dr. W.W. Kemmerer, county health director, said results of the tests would be known Friday but that available data indicated there was no hazard.

The anti-knock additive attacks the central nervous system and small amounts can cause nervousness, headaches, hallucinations, delusions and convulsions.

Meanwhile, federal and industrial safety specialists continued investigations to seek the cause of the explosions.

Sherman and other officials at the refinery refused to speculate on the case, nor would they attempt the estimate the amount of damages or how long plant operations will be disrupted.

To Our Customers,
The Used Car They Buy
Is A New Car.

In many cases, a family budget just won't stretch to include a brand new car. And this is where a quality used car makes good sense.

As far as we are concerned, that used car is really a new car to the family that buys it.

And we take extra care to make sure our used car customers enjoy every bit as much satisfaction and pride as our new car customers.
