4-H SEED SALESMAN

—Robbie Cochran, Lance Brooks and Linda Lee sort seed selections for the Gray County 4-H Seed Sale now underway. The seeds have been tested for the area. Both vegetable and flower selections are available and come five varieties to a card for $1. The 4-H members also are selling pressure cookers — 16 quart for $45 and 21 quart for $48. Proceeds from sales will fund 4-H activities throughout the year. Prizes for the junior boy and girl selling the most seeds will be expense paid stays in county camp. Senior winners will have expenses paid to the state 4-H congress in San Antonio. Seeds may be purchased from 4-H members or by contacting the County Extension Office at 669-7429. (Pampa News Photo)

'Economic Survival'

Cut Middleman, Keep Cattle Movin'

TULSA (UPI) — Former Oklahoma legislators Tom Tate and Ray Tucker are trying to eliminate the middleman in the cattle business to keep from going broke. With 15,000 head of feeder cattle to dispose of each year, they concluded the sure way to lose everything was to take their cattle to the traditional market. Last weekend they went instead straight to the public.

Tate and Tucker, operating under Ranchers' Beef, Inc., pulled a semi-trailer refrigerator truck loaded with packaged frozen beef into the Exhibition Hall at the Tulsa State Fairgrounds and opened for business. They sold more than 28,000 pounds of beef, the equivalent of more than 50 head of Tucker's grain-fed cattle.

"We've got 20 times that many available right now," Tate said. "If he had sold those on the market he would have lost about $17 a head. On this basis he's still losing money because they're being sold at less than production costs, but only about half as much."

The effort is not designed as a great boon to the consumers, although Tate maintains it is a good deal for the buyer as well as an eventual break-even method for himself and Tucker.

"We're not trying to sell the cheapest beef in town," Tate said. "There's a lot of gimmicks in that, but I think it's the best beef for the money, better quality than what they will find in the supermarket."

"We're not doing it as any protest. We're doing it as a means of economic survival. We're both primarily in the cattle business and we're having trouble getting it sold at even break-even prices. Since we do have a quality product we decided to sell it the best way we can."

Their second weekend sale calls for more than 40,000 pounds and they are looking for other locations beside the fairgrounds.

"Ray will move 10,000 head a year and I move 5,000," Tate said. "So we're considering some additional locations. We just can't move the quantity of beef we have to through one retail outlet."

The Ranchers' Beef label goes on all the packages, each of which is individually wrapped in convenient consumer quantities under state and local inspection. Tate said they stand behind it 100 per cent. And their retailer's license allows them to accept major bank cards and food stamps from their customers.

Tate said the idea of selling direct resulted from bad experiences recently in trying to market his feeder cattle.

"Last December I had three semi-loads of feeder calves to sell. I called everybody I knew and couldn't find anyone to buy them. Finally I begged a fellow I often dealt with to make an offer and he said he was afraid to because I might take it. I finally had to settle for far less than my production cost."

"That motivated me to find some other way. We've got to develop an alternative market for these feeder calves. It's a bonafide deal coming as an economic necessity for ranchers trying to survive raising beef."

King Faisal Murdered, Succeeded by Brother

BEIRUT (UPI) — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, a moderate Arab leader who became one of the world's richest and most powerful monarchs, was assassinated today by his mentally unsound nephew, the nation's official Riyadh radio announced.

Death of the 70-year-old Faisal could have drastic effects on the Arab-Israeli conflict, with unforeseen changes of future oil prices that Faisal helped raise by 400 per cent. It came at a time when United States influence in the Middle East had just suffered a major setback.

A State Department official predicted that the assassination would be a "great loss" to U.S. efforts in promoting peace in the Middle East. President Ford sent a message of regret.

Faisal, a leader of the Arab oil embargo which brought economic disaster to many Western nations, earned Saudi Arabia nearly $30 billion last year by selling one-fifth of the oil consumed by the non-Communist world. Western European nations expressed fear today there might be oil price rises in the future.

Faisal was succeeded as king by Crown Prince Khalid, 62, a younger brother who is considered as "pro-American" as Faisal, appearing to ease West European fears the Saudis might turn toward Russia. Khalid, who was first deputy prime minister, underwent open heart surgery in Cleveland last year, and some American officials expressed surprise he would assume such an arduous post.

The quick selection of Khalid appeared to rule out any immediate struggle for power, but French radio reports said the Saudi Arabian army has been put in a state of alert and the Royal White Guard had thrown a ring of armor around the royal palace.

Another brother, Prince Fahd, also a council vice president, was named Crown Prince.

Members of the Royal family pledged loyalty to the King, Riyadh radio said.

It said that Saudi citizens would take part in a ceremony pledging their loyalty to their new monarch and the crown prince in ceremonies beginning at 10 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT) Wednesday. Faisal's funeral will be held later the same day.

Faisal was shot by his nephew Prince Faisal Bin Saud Bin Abdel Aziz while he was holding court on his golden throne in the mirrored hall of his great palace.

He was celebrating the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed, when the Prince approached him and fired several shots at the monarch. Faisal died of his wounds in the Riyadh Central Hospital, a sobbing radio announcer said.

It made no mention of the fate of the assassin.

The monarch, whose full name was Faisal bin Abd al-Aziz Al Saud, was spiritual leader of the world's 600 million Moslems and had ruled Saudi Arabia since November 1964. His nation, the size of Alaska and Texas combined, contains two of Islam's holiest shrines, Mecca and Medina.

Faisal, who was bankroller to Egypt, Syria, Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization, died without fulfilling a lifetime ambition: to pray in Jerusalem at the Dome of the Rock, the third most holy shrine of Islam.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger once said Faisal was "a moral conscience for many Arab leaders." With his religious stature, he acted as "a kind of pure representative of Arab nationalism," Kissinger said.

Pampa Wants Same Share Of Lake Meredith Water

By TEX DEWEESE

Pampa city commissioners today decided to reaffirm a request for the same water allocation from the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority this year that it received in 1974.

The city, entitled to a total allocation of one billion, 682 million gallons for the calendar year is requesting 1.5 billion gallons.

Last year's consumption of water in Pampa totaled one billion, 382 million gallons of water from Lake Meredith and 133 million gallons of well water. The year's total consumption was one billion, 515 million gallons.

At the outset of the year some cities were asked if they could relinquish some of their water to other cities in need of additional water supplies.

"We are entitled to our allocation under terms of the CRMWA contract," Mack Wofford, Pampa city manager, told commissioners today. "and I do not believe we are asking for an unreasonable amount, in as much as it is the same as last year."

The city manager pointed out Pampa's allocation does not exceed the city's contractual entitlement to 7.163 percentage of the 70 per cent total annual allocation of Lake Meredith water to all 11 cities on the CRMWA aqueduct.

Commissioners asked Wofford and his staff to study a half dozen recommendations from the City Traffic Commission concerning handling of traffic in school zones and at school street intersections.

One of the recommendations would increase the speed limit in front of schools to 30 miles an hour from the current 15 mph restriction.

Another recommendation, if adopted, would require crossing guards to be outfitted with bright orange jackets and caps.

The city manager said all of the recommendations would be studied and a report filed at the next meeting of city commissioners April 9.

A city ordinance updating Pampa's building and natural gas code was approved on first reading. The revamped code is the result of a lengthy study of the old legislation by a study committee named several months ago by the city commission.

A resolution was adopted to recognize and encourage the work of the Pampa Area Drug Abuse Commission. The PADAC is a 12-member advisory group formed to assist city, county and independent school district authorities in drug related matters and to continue study and evaluation of drug abuse in the Pampa area.

A public hearing was held on proposed removal of six abandoned buildings. Wofford asked that, because there was evidence action was being taken by the owners, the hearing be continued on structures at 518 Naida, 500 N. Zimmers, 501 S. Henry and 844 E. Campbell.

The building at 123 W. Tuke, in the process of being moved, was taken off the list.

The city manager recommended that a building at 508 Elm be removed under terms of a city ordinance.

Three bids were opened for the annual street seal-coating program. They will be studied by the city engineering staff and a contract recommendation will be made at the next regular meeting.

South Viets Leave Capital

DA NANG, South Vietnam (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops began abandoning the former imperial capital of Hue today in a World War II Dunkirk-style evacuation.

Western diplomats said the retreating troops boarded boats under fire at the nearby port of Tan My for the trip down the coast of the South China Sea to Da Nang.

The pullout from Hue, the third largest city and spiritual center of South Vietnam, left the Communists in control of 11 of the country's 44 provinces.

Wars Set Back Stock Market

United Press International

War in Indochina and the fear of war in the Middle East helped deal the stock market one of its biggest setbacks in four months Monday, according to Wall Street analysts.

The stock market has been one of the few sectors of the economy to show signs of strength this year.

The analysts blamed Monday's drop in prices on the failure of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission and fears of another Arab-Israeli war and Arab oil boycott. Increased war activity in Indochina also discouraged investors, they said.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a key index of New York Stock Exchange prices, plunged 9.63 points to 743.43, its worst loss since it fell 22.69 on Nov. 18, 1974, when Middle East tensions also played a role.

While other sectors of the economy have been sluggish since fall, the stock market has been booming. NYSE officials said the value of all shares listed on the exchange rose $100 billion in January and February.

Trading activity is 40 per cent ahead of 1974.

In Detroit, Ford Motor Co. called nearly 6,300 workers back to three assembly lines over the next two months. President Lee Iacocca said Ford expects higher sales of small cars will result from "improved consumer confidence."

Meanwhile, economists at Morgan Guaranty Trust in New York said the "first signs" for a reinvigorated economy later this year "are beginning to appear."

The economists noted a slowing rate of inflation, the prospect of a tax cut, the reduction in outstanding installment debt, the decline in unsold business inventories and more and cheaper home mortgage money.

"The great danger now," the bank said, "is that the lawmakers, through excessively large tax cuts and enlarged

40 Alaskan Musk Oxen Sentenced to Siberia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The musk ox, an ugly but hardy beast that ranged as far south as Iowa during the Ice Age, has grown so plentiful in Alaska that the United States will ship 40 of them to the Siberia, where they are extinct.

With the help of Eskimos at Nunivak, about 40 musk oxen descended from a herd acquired from Greenland will be shipped to Siberia, one of their original homelands until climate changes and primitive hunters destroyed the stock in Asia.

The original Alaskan herd of the musk ox was hunted to extinction about the time of the Civil War. In the 1930s the United States brought 31 animals from Greenland and put them on Nunivak Island, where the herd now numbers about 700. The Fish and Wildlife Service said the 40-year-old program of restoring the shaggy beast to Alaska has been so successful the population must be cut back because the vegetation isn't adequate to support a large herd.

The oxen were once plentiful in Asia, and crossed to Alaska and Canada via land which once bridged the Bering Strait.

A joint Soviet-U.S. scientific exchange agreement provides for the musk oxen to be shipped back to Russia, this time by airplane.

Rodeoman Beutler Dies In Arizona Hospital

Jake Beutler, nationally known as one of the Beutler Brothers Rodeo producers, died Sunday in Tucson, Ariz., following major surgery.

Mr. Beutler was one of the famed Beutler trio that started the nationally known Rodeo Producing Association in 1929 and was known for his care of the stock and trucking part of the rodeo business.

The company produced Pampa rodeos for many years.

The Beutler Brothers included Elra, Jake and Lynn. The three worked together until 1954 when the two younger brothers, Jake and Lynn bought out Elra. They later bought 10 other competitors by topping their strength and thus became one of the largest rodeo producing firms in the world.

Lynn and Jake sold the rodeo firm in November 1967 to Harry Bold of Tonoka, Canada and Mike Cervi of Sterling, Colo., giving the firm the right to use their name and with the provision that Lynn would go with them for two years.

Mr. Beutler received many honors throughout the nation and in Western Oklahoma. He was a lifetime member of the National Rodeo Association. His most recent recognition came in November 1974 when he was inducted into the Western Oklahoma Historical Society's Hall of Fame. A room in the Old Town Museum in Elk City, Okla., is named in honor of the trio and features many souvenirs of the rodeo trade.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday at Martin Funeral Home Chapel in Elk City with W.R. Craig, minister of the Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in Fairlawn Cemetery.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret of the home; one son, Alan, Bossier City, La.; three brothers, Lynn, Elra and Denzil, all of Elk City; five sisters, including Mrs. T.M. Hebron, Elk City; and two grandchildren.

spending programs, will go too far with stimulative programs."

The warning came as House and Senate negotiators began negotiations between the House's $19.9 billion tax cut and the Senate's $33.1 billion cut.

"I'm afraid we're a long way apart," said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

In New York, Mobil Oil Corp. threatened to pull its corporate headquarters out of the United States if Congress takes away its foreign tax credit, as proposed in a Senate amendment to the tax bill.

School Prayer Passes House

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Legislation authorizing Texas school teachers to conduct daily periods of silent prayer or meditation in their classrooms easily passed its first House vote Monday 112-24.

Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, sponsor of the bill, said it is one of the most important measures of the session.

Rep. Andrew Z. Baker, D-Galveston, said it was a waste of time and the legislators ought to be ashamed for even debating it.

"It is not a religious bill unless you determine that in your own mind," Polumbo said. "If they (students) want to consent to meditation or silent prayer on their own, they can do so."

Hill Rules

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas legislature never intended to prohibit politicians from taking contributions to repay past campaign debts, according to a ruling by Attorney General John Hill.

Hill's ruling, issued Monday at the request of Secretary of State Mark White Jr., said legislators accused of acting illegally by taking contributions during the session could use the 1973 law as a defense.

Travis County District Attorney Robert O. Smith has told House leaders the law prohibits solicitation of contributions from lobbyists during legislative sessions, even though the funds are used to pay past campaign debts.

'75 Car Registration Ahead in Gray County

While many Texas county officials are complaining that automobile registration is lagging, Jack Back, tax assessor-collector, said today Gray County is running ahead of last year.

"Registration for the 1975 plates has been real good so far," Back said.

Midnight, April 1 — one week from today — is the deadline for putting on the new vehicle plates in Texas.

After that time, Back said, law enforcement agencies have been instructed to stop motorists not displaying 1975 plates to remind them of their licensing responsibilities.

The local tax collector said around 22,000 sets of plates are issued annually in Gray County, 16,000 for passenger cars and around 6,000 for other type motor vehicles.

Two-thirds of them already have been issued for 1975 in Gray County, Back stated.

According to the tax collector, public response is expected to pick up in the next two or three days for the remaining one-third of Gray County motorists who have not yet obtained their plates.

Tax office employees at the Court House said business seemed to even pick up at a faster pace yesterday and today.

Motorists, Back said, have shown an uncommon interest in the "label" their motor vehicle will wear for the next five years through 1979.

In lieu of annual replacement, motorists will be issued an adhesive-type sticker beginning in 1976. The sticker will update their plate for another year of driving. The sticker will be placed in the debossed upper left corner of the plate.

The following year, Back said, the tag will be stuck in the upper right corner to cover the debossed "75," and will be alternated for the ensuing years.

Once in place, the tags cannot be easily removed without deterioration, a part of the state's plan to discourage vandalism or theft.

Back explained that county tax offices will continue to issue annual plates to certain classes of motor vehicles. These will include radio operators, dealers, government officials and those passenger cars displaying "personalized" plates for which there is an additional $10 fee.

Again, the registration deadline is midnight Tuesday, April 1.

Nuclear Bugaboo Ripped

As any number of eminent writers have repeatedly made clear, there is no shortage of energy in the United States or anywhere else. The entire world, the universe itself, is made up of energy, or energy sources, is childish prattle.

What there is a shortage of is environmentalist and political willingness to get out of the way and let the market place exploit efficient methods of tapping our inexhaustible sources of energy and converting them to forms that can be put to practical use.

One such form, of course, is the nuclear reactor for generating electric power. Literally billions of dollars and millions of man-hours have gone into perfecting this method of energy conversion and making it safe to use within all reasonable bounds. A number of such reactors are operating in this country now with no adverse effects, as well as a growing number of such plants in other countries, Japan, for example.

Yet, in spite of our growing shortage of usable energy and increasing dependence upon imported Arab oil, every attempt to decrease that shortage and dependence by expanding our production of nuclear energy is met with cries of horror, invoked visions of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and political roadblocks.

One of the more serious objections to nuclear power plant construction, providing the anti-nuclear clique with one of its most effective propaganda weapons, came about as the result of an incident at the Shippingport, Pa. reactor near Erie, Pa. in 1954. According to Dr. Ernest Sternglass, a Pittsburgh University physicist, the plant there leaked radioactivity in 1954 and caused a sharp jump in the area's infant, leukemia and cancer death rates, as well as a disturbing number of birth defects.

Fortunately for the usable energy short United States, such scare charges have now been scientifically discounted and, hopefully, laid to rest.

According to an Enterprise

Science News dispatch, the Sternglass charges have been demolished by a shy, unassuming Japanese researcher, Dr. George K. Tokuhata, a Pennsylvania health department epidemiologist.

"With a painstaking bit of medical investigation," the dispatch said, Dr. Tokuhata "has ripped to pieces the controversial claim that a nuclear power plant near Aliquippa was responsible for deaths and birth defects in nearby communities."

"What Dr. Sternglass did," Tokuhata was quoted as saying, "was sit in his University ivory tower, look at Aliquippa's mortality records and jump to erroneous conclusions. The methods he used in his analysis were wrong and his results were wrong."

After three years of patient probing, Enterprise Science News said, the Tokuhata investigation made it clear there is no basis for Sternglass's claims. In contrast to the ivory tower methods of Sternglass, the Japanese epidemiologist took a team of investigators to the area to analyze every infant, leukemia and cancer death and to interview the parents of congenitally malformed children.

Among the facts emerging from the protracted investigation were these: — No large amount of radioactivity escaped from the plant in 1954, or any year before or after.

— Instead of the death rate due to cancer being higher in the Aliquippa area as claimed, it was actually lower than the Pennsylvania death rate due to that cause.

— There was no difference in the leukemia death rate in the area from the rest of the state, the same pattern and incident rate, almost too small to measure, prevailed throughout.

As for the claim of radioactivity - caused birth defects, "There simply weren't any, not one," the Tokuhata investigation revealed.

Health And The Jobless

A person who loses a job loses much besides. Among other things, he is likely to lose his eligibility for his employers' group health plan for himself and his family.

Because unemployment is high and rising, labor leaders and some U.S. senators of both parties are pressing for passage of an emergency unemployment health benefits act. One proposal would pay the premiums of the unemployed for the same insurance they had while they were working.

That kind of piecemeal approach is politically attractive because it addresses itself to a part of the problem which makes an immediate claim upon our sympathy — the plight of the newly laid-off employee who has lost his substantial health benefits and faces the risk of financial catastrophe without any insurance.

But it would be wrong to deal with this fragment of the problem without dealing with the entire problem — the need for a single comprehensive national system to cover retired persons, those on welfare, the indigent and employed persons not fully covered by their employers' plans and protect all of them against such catastrophe.

Some people believe that a "birth tree" planted at the time a child is born will reflect in its growth the nature of the child's life.

RE-RUN IN COLORADO

Example of Falling Into Trap

By C.R. BATTEN
"This is where I came in," I thought, when I finished reading the packet of material on the proposed Eagles Nest and Flat Tops Wilderness Areas in Colorado.

Since I am somewhat lazy, and having worked seven days a week for some time, I was tempted to pull out an old column of 1970, change the date on it, and then go fishin'. Instead, I decided to see if I could find a lesson somewhere in the re-run and in the slight editing that has been accomplished between the first and second showings. It illustrates the trap we so often fall into if we do not agree with the trend of governmental action.

The Wilderness Act provides that designated Primitive Areas be studied and considered for inclusion in a permanent Wilderness Preservation System. Back in 1966 the Forest Service held its first public hearing on the proposed Flat Tops Wilderness. In 1968, it presented a 142,000-acre proposal to Congress. Now Senator Haskell has introduced a bill for a 237,500-acre Flat Tops Wilderness.

The Forest Service held public hearing on the proposed Eagles Nest Wilderness in 1970. One group of persons who were disturbed at the increasing erosion of the resource base by Wilderness and other land withdrawals decided that they would oppose in principle the classification of the Eagles Nest Wilderness. They proposed that the Primitive Area be declassified. They had good reasons, which we need not go into here and they attracted attention.

Their view was unorthodox. Until they entered the growing controversy, the debate had centered around the question of "how much land should the Wilderness enclose?" There were those who wanted to hold the line at the existing primitive Area boundaries, those who wanted to greatly expand the boundaries, and the Forest Service was somewhere in between.

Bills for both the Flat Tops and the Eagles Nest Wilderness passed the Senate, but the House did not act on them. Now Senator Haskell has introduced the bills again. His bill for the Flat Tops includes 67 percent more land than the Forest Service proposal, and 35,000 acres more than his own 1972 bill.

The bill for the Eagles Nest Wilderness includes 46 percent more than the Forest Service proposal, and 3,000 acres more than Senator Haskell's 1973 bill. Both extended areas include private lands, roads, and water developments that are not compatible with Wilderness. Haskell has scheduled a hearing on the bills in Glenwood Springs on April 3.

The following indicates the change in the size of the proposed Eagles Nest Wilderness over the years: Original Primitive Area (1941): 61,762 acres; — Original Forest Service proposal (1970): 71,785 acres; — Forest Service proposal to Congress (1972): 87,755 acres; — Haskell's bill (1973): 125,000 acres; — Haskell's bill (1975): 128,374 acres.

Some of those who supported the original Forest Service proposal because they did not want to see a larger Wilderness still support the yet larger Forest Service proposal.

But most surprising is that those who proposed that the Primitive Area be declassified now support the Forest Service proposal and to Haskell's bill? It is as good an alternative now as it was in 1970. A good case for it was built then, why not now?

This is an illustration of how politics works. Those who play the political game know that if they don't get everything they want this year, they can get it next year, or the year after. For those who want to hold the line, the starting point is always moved ahead.

It reminds me of Norman Thomas, for many years the Socialist party's perennial candidate for President. When he retired from campaigning, he announced that there was no need for him to run again, because every government program he had ever advocated had been adopted. It all happened through the process of continual compromise. Every year his opponents compromised further, until they finally gave him everything he ever wanted.

Another word for compromise, according to my dictionary, is "surrender."

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Congress Boodles in High Gear

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, March 25 — Like old man river, congressional boodling just keeps rolling along.

In the two months Congress has been in session, virtually every week has seen a multi-million dollar grab of some kind — and it is still going on.

Latest is a $10 million hike in funds for House committees. That's 79 percent more than they got last year.

Intriguingly, biggest hikes went to committees headed by new "reform" chairmen — who replaced veteran legislators who ran their panels with tight purses.

The "reform" chairman apparently feel the way to cut a resounding do-gooding swath is to create numerous subcommittees with sizable staffs and other expensive appurtenances — naturally paid for by taxpayers. Illustrative:

Agriculture Committee, now headed by Rep. Thomas Foley, D., Wash., whose budget was boosted to $788,000 from $150,000. His predecessor, Rep. William R. Poage, D., Tex., prided himself on holding down committee spending. First thing Foley did was to name a batch of subcommittees, each with its own funds and staff.

Veterans Affairs Committee, raised to $400,000 from $120,000 to provide 15 additional staffers.

Marine and Fisheries Committee, $477,500 from $203,000 for the avowed purpose of enlarging its staff by 15.

Ways and Means committee, $1.7 million to finance six brand new subcommittees and a staff of 65 instead of the 30 that sufficed former chairman

Wilbur Mills, D., Ark. Of these new staffers, a number will be paid $35,000; others $27,000. Obviously it can be noted without exaggeration that Congress is a recession-proof enterprise.

No Surprise
The $10 million boodle grab was whisked through the House quietly, smoothly and perfunctorily. Few members were on the floor, there was no dissent, and naturally no roll call.

No one is on record one way or the other.

Actually, to knowledgeable House voted $17 million for additional office space to remodel and air-condition a large warehouse relinquished by the FBI.

In justifying that, when Republicans protested, Democratic floor leader Thomas O'Neill, Mass., retorted, "we're going to have to have a lot more space to take care of the bodies. We all know there are going to be many more bodies with all these plans for new subcommittees with staffs. We've got to put them somewhere. It's as simple as that."

That's exactly the way it turned out — $10 million worth, as a starter.

It's a virtual certainty these greatly expanded committees will be back for more funds before the year runs out. That's an old story on Capitol Hill. "Supplementary appropriations" are so.

Promising Boodler
Sen. Gary Hart, D., Colo., has been a member of Congress only a little over two months, but he's already getting into the spirit of things.

He is vigorously touting an imaginative idea — providing legislators with "mobile offices" so they can comfortably and conveniently tour around their home bailiwicks to maintain closer touch with constituents and "be of greater service to them."

According to the ingenious one-time McGovern campaign manager, this scheme won't cost any additional money.

That demagoguery didn't pay off in the presidential campaign, and neither will Hart's "mobile offices" scheme.

But patently, he's a young man to keep an eye on. He has all the makings of a top-notch boodler. (All Rights Reserved)

She's sick of friends who aren't "THAT sick"

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-H.N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please try to get it across to people who are sick that they should stay home? And if their kids are sick, they should keep THEM home, too?

One night last week, we invited another couple over for bridge. When they arrived, I opened the door, and Mrs. X. greeted us with a voice so hoarse she could hardly talk. Then she wiped her dripping nose and went into a coughing fit.

I said: "Oh, if you aren't well, maybe we'd better make it another night—when you're feeling better."

She said: "Oh, I'm not THAT sick." Then she walked in and sat down. Her husband said he just got over something that had been going around and he must have given it to her.

She kept wiping her nose and coughing all evening. She even asked if she could see the children. (Imagine!) I told her I thought maybe she'd better not.

Abby, I couldn't wait until that couple went home. I wish you'd put this in your column for all those inconsiderate carriers who insist on going to work and school to spread their germs around.

SICK OF CARRIERS

DEAR SICK: Here's your letter. I'm as sick of inconsiderate carriers as you are.

DEAR ABBY: On last New Year's Eve, I drove 150 miles to surprise my husband. I surprised him all right! Him and her both.

After she left and I finished my screaming and cursing, we settled down to a sensible conversation. I don't know what made me give him the chance to explain, but I'm glad I did. He told me that I am the woman he LOVES, and I believe him.

We have talked many times since then and are slowly recovering from this single act of unfaithfulness. My husband travels for a living, and what happened to him is more likely to happen to a traveling man, no matter how much he loves his wife.

We all make mistakes. But the biggest mistake of all is refusing to forgive and forget.

LOVED IN KENTUCKY

DEAR LOVED: Hooray for you!

DEAR ABBY: You said that when a young, beautiful girl marries a man who is old enough to be her father, he is usually very rich—or famous.

Well, you're dead wrong. I am 15 and my husband is 49, and as for his being either rich or famous—forget it. We live on a farm and barely have enough money to pay our bills.

"Dumb chick," you might say. Sure, I could have maybe married some 20-year-old kid who wouldn't give a darn about me or the kids. My husband takes real good care of me and our two sons, who are 1½ years and three weeks old.

I think you owe me and a lot of other young girls an apology.

SATISFIED

DEAR SATISFIED: If I offended you, I'm sorry. I said "usually," which allows for some exceptions, but I never expected to hear from so many exceptions.

Exxon Honors M.C. Dorman On Retirement

Melton C. Dorman 619 South Ballard, field gauger for Exxon Pipeline Company, retired from the company recently with over 25 years of service.

ANNUAL CONVENTION
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The Christian Holiness Association, an organization of pentacostals, has chosen Atlanta, Ga., as the site for its April 2-4 annual convention, with the theme of "Christian Holiness: Faith Working by Love."

Employees of the Odessa District and the Pampa area honored Dorman at a dinner in Pampa where C.B. Reese, gauging foreman for the company, commended Dorman for his service and presented him with retirement awards and gifts.

Dorman is a native of Gorman. He joined the company in 1945 at Pampa as a pipeliner. All of his company career was spent at company facilities in the Texas Panhandle. He held field assignments including pipeliner, oiler, station operator, and field gauger at company facilities located at Merton and Alameda Stations and served briefly at Odessa.

Dorman is a member of the Calvary Baptist Church of Pampa. He is married to the former Imogene Windom Hansford.

Mr. and Mrs. Dorman plan to continue their home at Pampa during retirement.

Court Dismisses 'Gag' Rule Challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday dismissed a challenge to a judge's ruling in New Orleans which attempted to prevent newspapers from publishing important facts about a case in order to assure a fair trial for the accused.

In an unsigned order, the justices said the case was moot — in other words, there is no longer a pending controversy.

The decision to dismiss the appeal challenging the court "gag" order neither affirms nor overrules a Louisiana Supreme Court decision upholding the order.

The "gag" rule was handed down by New Orleans Judge Oliver P. Schulingkamp for coverage of a murder trial. It was attacked in court by the New Orleans Times-Picayune Publishing Co.

The last time the Supreme Court dealt with the question of whether governments could forbid newspapers from printing information in their possession was in 1971 in the Pentagon Papers case.

A sharply divided court reaffirmed its rule that any system of prior restraint bears a heavy presumption that it is invalid. The justices upheld the right of The New York Times

The Washington Post and other newspapers to print previously secret Pentagon documents about the Vietnam War.

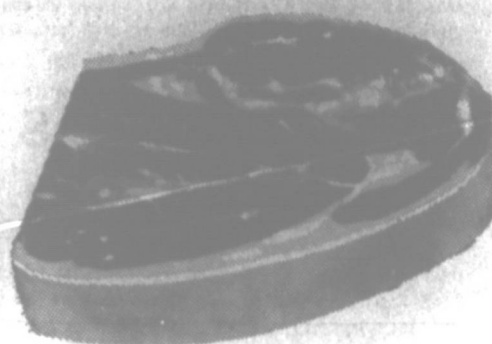

Schulingkamp, fearing that prejudicial publicity might make it impossible to get a fair jury for the trial of two men charged with the rape-murder of a young nursing student, issued strict orders narrowing press coverage of pretrial motions and the trial itself.

Phillips Records 86 Per Cent Gain

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Phillips Petroleum Co. claims reports showing the nation's 10th largest petroleum company increased its net income 86 per cent last year as distorted by inflation and increased operating costs.

In an annual statement to stockholders, Phillips' earnings were reported at $489.7 million, compared with $263.4 million in 1973, with an 11.2 per cent rate of return on average total assets, compared with 6.9 per cent the previous year.

However, in a letter to stockholders, Phillips chairman W.F. Martin said inflation and other factors seriously distorted the financial condition of the company.

"Your company's recorded net income has increased during most of the past 10 years as more and more capital was invested in the business and in 1974 was 215 per cent higher than in 1965," Martin wrote. "But in terms of 1965 dollars, the 10-year increase was 105 per cent — less than half as great — representing an annual compounded earnings growth of only 7.5 per cent."

The statement reported total tax liabilities, including U.S. and foreign income taxes, of $440.8 million. Federal and state income taxes alone equaled 45 per cent of earnings before income taxes, Phillips said.

The company also reported capital expenditures of $627.5 million, up more than 75 per cent from 1973, and equivalent to nearly 50 per cent more than earnings for 1974. Nearly two-thirds of those expenditures were reported to have been domestic.

Martin said the future looked bright for Phillips, but joined company President William C. Douce in warning against actions being considered in Congress.

"Legislative proposals or regulatory mandates designed to restrict the operations, cut back the prices or tax away the profits of the oil industry will, in the final analysis, hurt the people the industry serves," they said.

"A sound national energy policy is urgently needed, one that places reliance on competitive enterprise."

"The policy should (1) bring about conservation of natural resources, (2) permit sufficient capital formation for the energy industries to increase U.S. production of oil and gas and develop other domestic energy sources such as shale oil, coal, thermal and nuclear energy, (3) reduce the nation's dependence on imported oil, at the same time keeping avenues open for obtaining its minimum foreign oil needs and retaining adequate incentives for American companies to explore for and control oil that would help supply these needs and (4) start the nation on the road to economic recovery and minimize further inflation."

remaining production lines at its Jones Mills, Ark., reduction plant and 17,000 tons at the Arkadelphia, Ark. reduction plant.

"The actions will affect a total of about 1,000 employees at the three locations, and will become effective within 10 days," the company said, emphasizing curtailments are temporary and "that lines will be reactivated as soon as economic conditions restore demand for aluminum."

The company said when the cutback takes effect, the firm will be operating at two-thirds of its annual United States capacity of 975,000 tons.

Reynolds Cuts Back
RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The Reynolds Metals Co. has announced cutbacks in its aluminum production that will result in the temporary layoff of 1,000 workers in Texas and Arkansas.

The firm announced the action Monday, saying it will cut back an additional 124,000 tons of annual primary aluminum capacity to avoid excessive inventory buildup.

"The action will not affect the aluminum supply situation since the company already has accumulated inventories more than sufficient to meet foreseeable demand," the company said.

The announcement involves the temporary idling of the remaining production line at the company's Corpus Christi, Tex. reduction plant, two

Ambassador Flees
PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Five Communist rockets landed just outside the American Embassy in the Cambodian capital today, forcing Ambassador John Gunther Dean to leave his office and take cover in a ground floor shelter.

The rockets were among 26 fired into the city or the nearby airport this morning. One of the missiles landed within 50 yards of one of the American airlift planes, but apparently caused no damage.

Outside the city, the government defense perimeter continued to shrink as insurgents increased pressure west and north of the capital and at the isolated river town of Neak Luong.

Salvation Army Recruits More for Golden Luncheons

By TEX DEWESE
The Salvation Army's Golden Agers luncheon that has been held each Monday since Jan. 20 is in danger of being abandoned unless there is better attendance.

Capt. Bart Deggs, head of the Army post in Pampa, said today unless more interest is shown by senior citizens it will be necessary to do away with the weekly meetings and perhaps schedule the get-togethers on a monthly basis.

Deggs said when the meetings started in January the attendance was around 60. Dropping off some each week, only 20 persons attended the luncheon on Monday of this week. The Army had prepared for 40.

The weekly meetings offer a meal for $1.50 or less if persons are unable to pay that amount.

Deggs said the program of interest to men and women in the 55 years and over age bracket also has been provided. The Army even furnishes transportation to the meetings to those who need it.

The Salvation Army official stated the plan is to show the opportunities life still offers to help cope with medical, social and financial problems of age.

He said the program also offers enjoyment to be found in various games such as dominoes, checkers, chess; in special trips and tours and, as the Army captain put it, "in good old-fashioned fellowship and a hearty meal."

Deggs said one of the latest transportation trips provided was for a group of 50 taken to a performance of "Ice Capades" last week in Amarillo.

A tour of the White Deer Land Museum is scheduled for the seniors at 2 p.m. Wednesday of this week.

Following next Monday's luncheon, a program on "Driving Safely" will be presented by Don Hatcher of the State Highway Patrol.

Weekly programs have been scheduled through May 26, Deggs said. He added that unless attendance picks up at next Monday's luncheon, succeeding weekly meetings will be cancelled.

"We don't understand why the attendance has fallen off," Deggs said. "The Salvation Army is not in competition with any other group seeking to help senior citizens. All we are trying to do is complement what the others are attempting to do."

Salvation Army headquarters is at 701 S. Cuyler. Persons who wish more information about the Golden Agers program may contact Deggs at that address or call him at 669-9921.

Udall Calls for Jobs
BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Presidential contender Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., says one of the nation's top priorities is to find jobs for the unemployed.

Udall, an announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, criticized President Ford's handling of the nation's economic problems Monday during a state labor meeting.

"Under the Nixon-Ford-Rockefeller economic policies we've got as many people unemployed as we had in 1939," Udall told the Louisiana AFL-CIO convention.

Snow Blinds Midwest; Tornadoes Twist South

By United Press International
Tornadoes and winds ripped across eight states from the Eastern Seaboard to the Mississippi Valley Monday and a blinding snowstorm lashed the upper Midwest, stranding thousands of motorists.

The one-two punch of violent spring weather left at least eight persons dead and more than 200 injured.

A station wagon carrying a Massachusetts family plunged from an icy, wind-swept interstate highway bridge at the Des Moines River. A 2-year-old boy was killed and his parents were missing and presumed drowned.

A 14-year-old boy was struck by lightning and killed as he flew his kite in Bettendorf, Iowa.

Wind gusts of up to 50 miles per hour whipped St. Louis, Mo., sending a 30-foot tree toppling onto an automobile, killing the motorist.

Another powerful wind gust wrenched a church bus from Interstate 69 near Marshall, Mich., and flipped it over, injuring 22 persons. The bus was en route to Kalamazoo, Mich., from Germantown, Ohio.

Tornadoes were reported from Missouri to North Carolina and Virginia Monday. Five persons were injured by tornado-force winds in Indiana, two in Illinois and one in North Carolina.

Snowstorms mounting to blizzard intensity at times swept the upper Midwest, leaving mazes of abandoned cars to clutter snow-clogged highways in the Dakotas, Minnesota and northwestern Wisconsin.

More than 1,000 motorists were stranded along Interstate 35 in northern Minnesota. Duluth, Minn., was snowed in. Businesses were closed and traffic was at a standstill.

The Red Cross set up temporary shelters for more than 2,000 stranded motorists in Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas. A Red Cross first aid chairman in Cass City, Minn., assisted in a childbirth and reported mother and child doing fine.

Flooding plagued southeast Wisconsin and northwestern Illinois. Some 80 families in the Rockford, Ill., area were forced

Tornado Scares Gov in Shower

ATLANTA (UPI) — Gov. George Busbee was one of the lucky ones. He was taking a shower when he heard a roar and felt the huge governor's mansion shake.

He leaped out of the shower, threw on a jumpsuit and assembled his family in a room in the middle of the mansion. The tornado ripped into the three-story Greek-style home, peeling part of the roof off and casting it into the backyard.

"It was a shock," Busbee said later. He and his family survived uninjured.

from their homes by the Rock River, which stood nearly three feet above flood stage and continued to rise. No crest was expected until Wednesday, and floodwaters already ran nearly two feet deep in some low-lying homes.

One Error Sends 13 To Sky Death

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The final radio exchange took only nine seconds. But it contained a one-sentence error that sent 16 persons to their deaths.

C. B. Walk Jr., regional Federal Aviation Administration director, played the tape recording at a news conference Monday.

"Seattle, four-zero-six-four-one is level at 10."

That was the pilot of an Air Force C141 Starlifter jet transport giving his identification numbers and telling Seattle air traffic control he had leveled off at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

At that moment the plane was approaching the Olympic Mountains with jagged peaks of nearly 8,000 feet to cross on the final leg of a flight from Japan to McChord Air Force Base, Wash.

"Four-zero-six-four-one, maintain five thousand."

That was the traffic controller telling the pilot to descend to 5,000 feet.

That was the key — the order to drop to 5,000 feet. The controller made a mistake. He had meant the command for a Navy A6 plane in the same area.

But the C141 pilot didn't question the controller. He responded tersely. "Five thousand, four-zero-six-four-one is out of 10."

About three minutes later the Starlifter — then traveling at an estimated 275 miles per hour — slammed into the 5,900-foot level of Warrior Peak in the Mt. Constance range of the Olympics.

Ten crewmen and six Navy passengers died.

"It was human error," Walk said. "None of us in the northwest region can recall an accident of this type before."

Walk said the controller who gave the erroneous instruction was a fully qualified journeyman who had worked at the exacting task since March 18, 1973, following three years of training.

He said the controller, whom he did not identify, had been relieved of his duties.

South Texas Dynasty Crumbles

SAN DIEGO, Tex. (UPI) — The dynasty of the Duke of Duval may be crumbling.

The Duke himself, George B. Parr, 74, the South Texas political czar who has held sway in Duval County since 1914, had his federal income tax evasion conviction upheld Monday by the 5th U.S. Court Circuit Court of Appeals.

That decision was announced just minutes after District Judge O.P. Carrillo removed Parr's nephew, Archer Parr, from his office as Duval County judge.

Judge Carrillo's brother, former state representative Oscar Carrillo, said last year his family was poised to take over the Parr dynasty when George Parr fell from power. The Carrillos have another brother, Ramiro, who is a county commissioner.

The first major step in the takeover came last week when Judge Carrillo issued an order removing four Parr supporters from the Benavides school board.

A Duval County grand jury has been investigating several public entities which, for years, have been affiliated with Parr's political domination. Government investigators claim the Parrs have been siphoning money from these entities for decades.

Piles Of Rubbish Pay Tribute To Her Recycling Success

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

JUST mention Margaret DeCristofaro's name in any of the four communities that make up California's Palos Verdes Peninsula and people immediately identify her as "Miss Trash" or "The Garbage Lady." Mrs. DeCristofaro, a homemaker who is deeply involved in volunteer work, is the guiding spirit behind a four-year-old Peninsula project, the Palos Verdes Recycle Center, that's become a model for the nation.

In the summer of '70, working with a five-woman study group, sponsored by the American Association of University Women, she conceived the idea of a citizens' group pilot program for the recycling of solid waste materials. Her first task was to convince the Los Angeles County Sanitation District that the idea had merit.

The First Step

"They gave us an OK to put a recycle center on their landfill site," she said, "and the location is excellent. Most people on the peninsula pass it coming or going."

The Sanitation District also provided signs and insurance. It was up to Mrs. DeCristofaro, Permanent Chairman of the Center, to get the public into a recycling frame of mind so they'd use the facilities. This she did by blanketing the Peninsula with publicity.

"For starters, we distributed 10,000 flyers through churches and all 289 organizations—scouts, women's clubs, etc.—in the area," she said. "The week before the center opened in November, 1970, another 10,000 flyers were sent home with elementary school children."

In addition, a speakers bureau was set up and a 30-minute slide presentation on environmental issues developed. In short order, there wasn't a citizen in the area who wasn't aware of environmental problems and what he, via recycling, could do to ease them. "Even so," Mrs. DeCristofaro confessed, "we worried about opening day. But we needn't have. Well before 9 a.m., cars were lined up on nearby streets waiting to drop off loads of paper, cardboard, aluminum, glass and tin."

Special Events

The Center has continued to draw crowds because Mrs. DeCristofaro's committee keeps interest alive with well-publicized events, including a "Pollution Solution" poster contest, an "Operation Preservation" environmental fair and occasional "Peninsula demand as a speaker for programs sponsored by school, church, YMCA and other civic groups. Recently, when she took a course in recycling at UCLA, the 17 male engineers in the class turned to her for advice. She was the only one with practical experience.

Her volunteer efforts on behalf of the Palos Verdes Recycle Center brought her the 1973 Status of Women Award from the Palos Verdes-Rolling Hills chapter of the AAUW, as well as a Beautiful Activist Award this past January in the program sponsored by Germaine Montell, the cosmetic DISCARDED CANS, deposited in chute, drop into roll-off container at the Palos Verdes Recycle Center.

Cleanup Days," that send hundreds of youngsters out trash-hunting for recyclables. Additionally, flyers are prepared and distributed every six months.

The faithful continue to drive in and there are new recruits all the time. One woman doctor makes several trips to the Center each week to drop off the bottles used for intravenous feedings.

The Center is equipped with roll-off containers that roll off to attach to the cabs of trucks. Each is clearly earmarked for paper, glass, tin, aluminum or bi-metal cans. They're filled to overflowing by some 2,000 families (12 per cent of the peninsula's population).

Impressive Record
"To date, we've recycled 850 tons of glass, 110 tons of bi-metal and 22 tons of aluminum," Mrs. DeCristofaro observed, "and we've saved 41,660 trees by recycling 2,540 tons of paper."

Profits from the Center thus far total $29,000 that has also been recycled. It has been placed in a trust fund and is used for the peninsula's public and private schools to underwrite ecology studies and conservation projects that cannot be funded in any other way. The recycle money has bought microscopes, water pollution testing equipment, geology equipment and books and has paid for nature study gardens.

Voice of Experience
Mrs. DeCristofaro is so knowledgeable about the problems of waste accumulation all over the world that she's in firm, that recognizes outstanding women volunteers across the nation. When she was in New York City to accept the Germaine Montell award, she admitted that the Recycle Center is only one of her volunteer efforts. A registered nurse, she and another nurse, Mrs. Rita Buhl, developed and conduct a unique weekly class, called "Understanding Stroke," at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach, Cal.

Help For Families
"In stroke cases," she said, "it's the family of the victim that needs help. People are afraid of what they don't know so we explain what a stroke is, why it occurs and what you can and can't, should and shouldn't say or do."

Each session, involving a small family group, lasts two to three hours and is, says Mrs. DeCristofaro, her most rewarding activity.

A veteran volunteer, she also raised $160,000 for the California Heart Association during a 1973 Cyclopedia and worked on a recent month-long Blood Pressure Awareness Month in Long Beach.

Despite her busy life, she is careful to schedule her days, which often include two or three meetings, so she's home when her children, Susan, 11, and Andrew, 9, return from school. Her husband, Dr. Dominick DeCristofaro, a heart specialist, takes a lively interest in his wife's activities. He's somewhat amused to find she's busier now as a volunteer than she was in the early years of their marriage when she was a pediatric nursing supervisor.

Buying Sale Items Cuts Cost of Living

COLLEGE STATION — Families can cut the cost of living by planning sale purchases, Lynn Bourland, family resource management specialist, said this week.

"Retailers are conducting almost continuous clearance sales to keep their inventories moving and build up store traffic," the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System, said.

"It's vital today for families to plan spending. One way to do this is for each family member to list the clothes, school supplies, grooming aids, gifts and regular budget items he will need for the next few months, or even for the rest of the year," she suggested.

Then the family can discuss the things listed, making sure the style, size or quality necessary is included. It can be a loss instead of a gain if the wrong item is bought, the specialist said.

"One family member can be in charge of the lists by grouping like items together. Be sure to add family items like furniture and appliances if they're needed. "Everyone can help keep a lookout for sale advertisements in newspapers and on television."

The specialist suggested keeping a record of each item's regular price and sale price. This way it's easy to see how much the cost of living has been cut, she said.

Diamond Is Investing In Beauty

Copley News Service

Diamonds, in these days of economic uncertainty, continue to seal the engagement of 76 per cent of all first-time brides in the United States. So it is a wise well-informed young couple who educate themselves about diamonds before making that all-important purchase today.

A diamond is an investment in beauty for a very special person. It is an investment in the future, because a diamond, the hardest substance known to man, is forever. So it's wise to learn all you can about how to buy a diamond — whether it's an engagement ring or a piece of diamond jewelry.

The reason one diamond costs more than another is not because of size alone. There are four factors that govern prices — carat weight, clarity, color and cutting. No two diamonds are alike — nature saw to that.

Even two diamonds of the same size have different qualities of color, clarity and brilliance and will be priced differently.

Asking how much a one-carat diamond should cost is like asking how much a car costs. You would certainly want information about the make, model, year and condition of the car. The diamond has characteristics that determine cost, too. There are no "fixed" prices for diamonds.

To be sure you are getting your money's worth — consult a reputable jeweler. He's the diamond expert, and will be happy to point out the Four Cs to you, and he will explain the differences in various diamonds, and how these differences affect the price.

Carat, the first of the Four Cs, is the unit of weight for diamonds. A carat is equal to 200 milligrams, and there are 142 carats in the avoirdupois ounce. The carat is further divided into 100 "points," like the cents in dollar. A 45-point diamond weighs a little less than half a carat. (The average size of an engagement ring in this country is about 47 points.)

Color is an important factor in determining the price, for diamonds are priced in relation to the intensity of their color, their brilliance and their clarity. And diamonds come in all colors of the spectrum. Most diamonds described as white are nearly colorless but have a slight tinge of color. This color adds warmth to each diamond's unique "personality." Completely colorless, icy-white diamonds are very rare and are priced accordingly. White diamonds with a tinge of blue — known as "blue-white" — are rarer still — perhaps one in many hundred thousands. The variations in color are often so slight they can be detected only by an expert under special lights. The best way to see the true color of a diamond is to look at the stone through its side against a white background.

Clarity — most diamonds contain natural imperfections, spots, bubbles or lines included in the stone when it was crystallized from carbon millions of years ago. Where such "inclusions" do not interfere materially with the passage of light through the stone, they do not affect its beauty. However, the fewer inclusions in a diamond, the more valuable it is. A "flawless" diamond — one that shows no imperfections to a trained eye using 10-power magnification — is very rare. Many people believe that a diamond which is not flawless must have flaws or weaknesses. Inclusions are imperfections, but they are not necessarily weaknesses. A diamond does not have to be flawless to be beautiful. In a sense, the inclusions in a diamond are its fingerprints, and like fingerprints no two are alike.

Cut — this refers both to the make of a diamond, or the way the facets are arranged, and to its shape. Diamonds are cut according to an exact mathematical formula that places the facets (or surfaces) of the diamond in precise relations to each other. The standard diamond cut has 58 facets. For a diamond to have a perfect make, the angles between any two facets must be accurate to within half a degree. This will produce the greatest fire and brilliance. Anything less reduces both the beauty and the value of a diamond. "Cut" also refers to the shape of the finished diamond. The round (or "brilliant" cut) is the most popular of all the shapes.

DONALD DUCK

McDonald After Title And He Just Might Get It

By PAUL SIMS

You won't often catch Amarillo College basketball coach Bill McDonald sporting a frown these days. And the reason, he will tell you, is optimism.

In fact, things are so bright for the fifth-year Badger coach he's already talking of a national championship next season.

"Next year? Well, we feel it's like this — Western Texas won our conference, won the regional and won the national championship. We finished second to them (in conference play). They had all sophomores.

"We were basically inexperienced, we had mostly freshmen. They beat us nine at their place and by one here. We feel like with our experiences and our good recruits, we should go to the national championship next year."

The way McDonald explains it you can't help but believe him, particularly since he has transformed AC's basketball program into a perennial junior college powerhouse. Last season, the Badgers wound up 19-7 with seven of the 10 players freshmen. Two players, including sophomore Tony Wooden who averaged 18 points and 18 rebounds, became academically ineligible before the second semester and missed the brunt of the season.

Wooden's loss has been compensated for: in fact, royalty so. 6-4 Raymond Bullock of Chicago, Ill. recently visited AC, was impressed with McDonald's program and signed a letter of intent to play with the Badgers next season. Bullock, according to the AC mentor, "is definitely a big-time major player, possibly a pro prospect."

Year after year Amarillo College seems to draw at least one player with superior talent. Why? "I think it's two or three things," McDonald explained. "We have a very good school academically. It's a good city. Our players like to think they're treated well, as far as the community is concerned and the college itself."

"It's involvement by our students. They become involved with the program, and so does the faculty. It's a lot more personal, a lot more than a large university."

Other reasons are McDonald said. "You're going to step right in and play in a junior college. If you're gonna go to an outstanding major college school, you're gonna have to be one of the top 10 or 15 players in the country to start. And on our level you're playing good competition."

Perhaps the biggest reason, and the one McDonald omitted, is the coach himself. Good coaches draw good players. And good players draw attention from good colleges. Over 200 major college coaches attended either AC game or practice last season, and it's been that way ever since McDonald took the helm.

It isn't just McDonald being a winner that attracts top personnel.

His recruiting methods are probably his biggest asset. Where coaches have established notoriety of being pushy, often infringing upon an athlete's right of privacy, McDonald is just the opposite... and it pays off.

"I think that everybody puts way too much pressure, demands, on these high school athletes. We bring a player in, show him what we have, and not try to dazzle him, not lie to him. They'll get real disenchanted. This is bad. You should bring a player on campus and you need to say 'this is what we have', or 'what we don't have'."

McDonald, primarily, presents the "merchandise": his players do the actual selling. "When you bring a prospect in to visit, the people who really sell your program are the players already in it. You can sit down and tell a player all you want to tell him, and he'll walk out and it's the players who tell him how the school is, how the coach is, how the program is."

McDonald's respect for the high school star's right to be left alone is indicative in the fact Pampa's Howie Lewis has been hounded by more coaches than he could ever throw a stick at (and he'd like to, literally), but McDonald has not even approached the 6-5 senior.

That's awfully strange, at first glance, since the AC coach one called Lewis "the best white player" reasons are McDonald. "We've just more or less let him play. We make a habit of not bothering players during the season... I saw (Houston) Kashmere and (Fort Worth) Paschal play and I'd say Howie is one of the top players in the state. I'd love to have him. Talking with everybody, I've heard he's gonna go football or go where he can play football or basketball."

Lewis isn't the only Pampa McDonald is impressed with. 6-2 guard Billy Wilbon scored 32 points to lead McDonald's North squad to 81-77 win over Bob Clindaniel's South Saturday in the Plainview Jaycee Panhandle Plains All-Star Basketball Game.

"I thought he had an excellent ball game. We were running the same type of offense we run here at our school. It's not designed for any particular person to take more shots than anybody else. Billy got himself open a great deal. We ran out of a set; there was no pattern to it. We set a lot of picks and rolls.

"I think the thing he did for us, of course he scored lot, but more than anything else, he was able to control the tempo of the game. He was able to do for us what we wanted him to do."

College ball? "I believe he can. I'd like him but the only thing is we have two starting guards coming back who were already committed to play. I'd like him very much but we would be overloading."

When you "overload" with a player like Billy Wilbon, it means you've got so much depth it's almost dripping out your ears. That says a lot for your program. It says a lot for Bill McDonald.

OU's Ramsey Resigns Despite Winning Years

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Oklahoma basketball coach Joe Ramsey, criticized by the school's regents and its administration even though he has winning seasons the two years he coached, resigned Thursday saying it was the only way to "end all the conflict."

"Sometimes we fail to live up to the expectations that other people set for us," Ramsey said in a prepared statement. He did not attend the news conference at which the resignation was announced.

Ramsey assumed the position Sept. 5, 1973, following the death of head coach Lester Lane from a heart attack.

"Sometimes the difficulty of the situation is overlooked," Ramsey said. "I'm aware that some people thought our team should have accomplished a better record than it did. In order to end all the conflict that has arisen over this situation I feel it would be in the best interest of this university and team that I resign."

I enjoyed my relationship with our players. They are first class youngsters who tried hard in every game. I have the utmost respect for them. I have the highest respect for coach (Charles) Spoonhour and Eddie Evans, my assistants. Sometimes a situation like this is tougher on them than it is on the head coach."

Athletic Director Wade Walker

Baseballers At Liberal

LIBERAL, Kan. — Pampa, which had lost four games in a row earlier in the season, is now in the throes of reversing its season and will try to make it six wins a row in a doubleheader today against Liberal, Kan.

Game time for the opener is 1 p.m. at the Redskin Field.

Pampa whipped Liberal twice in a twinbill last week in Pampa's Optimist Park.

AL Needs 3 Managers

Three Little League baseball managers are needed to head teams this season, according to Harley Knutson, president of the Pampa Optimist Club.

The managers will coach in the American League. Interested persons should contact Knutson immediately.

er said Ramsey submitted his resignation because of lack of support from various factions involved in the basketball program.

Walker said the resignation was effective June 30, but Ramsey's duties with the basketball program will terminate immediately.

The Sooners were 13-13 the past season and 3-21 in the two years Ramsey was head coach.

Ramsey's resignation "probably represents the best solution to a difficult problem both for him and the university," university President Dr. Paul Sharp said.

"He is a capable young man who, with more experience and at another time and place, should be an asset to another intercollegiate athletic program."

Walker said Ramsey's contract was discussed in an executive session of the OU regents last Thursday but no action was taken. However, he said it was obvious his contract might not be extended when it came up for renewal at the end of the 1974-75 budget year.

A search committee will be formed immediately to begin looking for a new head coach, Walker said.

White Sox Rip Blass, Pirates

UPI Sports Writer
Steve Blass may have run out of last chances.

The 32-year-old right-hander of the Pittsburgh Pirates is trying desperately to salvage something from a once-promising career that took a downward plunge two seasons ago when he suddenly lost his control, but he's having much difficulty finding the way back.

Even though every member of the Pirates, including Manager Danny Murtaugh, is pulling for Blass to straighten himself out, the club is running out of time. The Pirates will have to get their roster down to the 25-player limit within two weeks and based on his performance to date, Blass will not be one of the players kept.

His status with the club certainly took a nosedive Monday when he walked 11 batters in less than four innings in a 16-4 exhibition loss to the Chicago White Sox. Blass started the game and was charged with three walks and two runs in the first three innings then fell apart completely by walking eight batters in the fourth before Murtaugh mercifully relieved him.

The White Sox ended up scoring eight runs in the fourth en route to the victory which came in the second game of a doubleheader. In the opener the Pirates pounded White Sox ace Wilbur Wood for 14 hits and won, 8-2, in an abbreviated seven-inning contest. Richie Zisk drove in five runs for the Pirates in the opener.

In other games, Philadelphia walloped the New York Mets, 9-7; Los Angeles outslugged Boston, 13-12; Cincinnati downed St. Louis, 6-4; Texas beat Minnesota, 8-5.

Equal Rights For Aggies?

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Senate State Affairs Committee voted Monday to give Aggies equal status with the Longhorns. Sen. William T. Moore, D-Bryan, won unanimous approval for his bill to rename the governing body of Texas A&M University the board of regents, A&M's board presently is called the board of directors.

"This bill is a status symbol," Moore said. "They want to be called regents like the University of Texas Regents. I see no harm in it." Moore's bill now goes to the Senate floor for a vote.

Evans, Reece Capture 1st Spots In Bird Races

Keith Evans captured first, second and third places in the "B" race with the three fastest birds of the day, in either the "A" or "B" races Saturday in the first Top O' Texas Racing Pigeon action of season.

Evans, flying Blue Check cocks, saw his birds have times of 16:04.32, 16:01.94 and 16:58.95 yards per minute, the best times of any of the almost 100 birds entered in the races. Both races were from Goodlett, Tex., to Borger.

Norton, a devout practitioner of positive thinking, used a dozen or so left jabs to deliver a fistful of negative thoughts to Quarry, who was battered into retirement Monday night after suffering a fifth-round technical knockout in their scheduled 12-round elimination bout at Madison Square Garden.

"I'm never gonna get cut again in the ring," said Quarry, whose face was a bloody pulp when referee Johnny LoBianco stopped the one-sided affair at 2:29 of the fifth round.

Eight stitches were needed to close the cut inflicted over Quarry's right eye by Norton in the third round. The 29-year-old California Irishman also was bleeding from cuts over his nose and in his mouth while his left eye was swollen shut.

While Norton, unmarked except for some of his opponent's blood which had rubbed off on parts of his body and around the waistband of his blue velvet trunks, put in his claim for a third and "rubber" match with champion Muhammad Ali, Quarry was being consoled by his handlers and his mother, who leaned over her son in the dressing room and kissed him.

A photographer was snapping pictures of Quarry while he was being administered to by a doctor and the beaten fighter warned the picture taker, "you better stop right now before I take a swing at you. I'd like to go out with a little dignity."

"I see no future for him in the ring," said Quarry's manager, Gil Clancy, who agreed with his fighter's decision to call it quits after 11 years in the ring—the last seven of them as a leading contender for the title.

The Norton-Quarry bout, witnessed by a crowd of 15,397, served as the closed circuit television preliminary to the Ali-Chuck Wepner title fight in Richfield, Ohio. Immediately after Norton and Quarry left the ring, a four-sided screen was lowered and the crowd watched Ali and Wepner.

"Kenny's at the peak of his career right now," said Norton's manager, Art Rivkin. "He's a more devastating puncher than when he fought Ali. His combinations and timing are much better. He's also a positive thinker. He really believes in that..."

Quarry, providing he goes through with his promise to quit the ring, figures to have a lot of time to concentrate—especially on his plans for a new career as a sports broadcaster.

Borger, PHS In Important Volleyball Tilt

Pampa still has a shot at the girls volleyball title and that makes tonight's regular-season finale against Borger a crucial match for the Harvesters.

Pampa, 15-4 for the season and 3-1 in the second half of 3-A AAAA play, must win and Amarillo High, 4-0, must lose to Palo Duro for Pampa to share the second-half title. A one-match playoff between Pampa and Amarillo would then be held to determine the half's champion, who would then play Caprock for the district crown. Caprock won the first half outright.

Pampa defeated Borger and Palo Duro whipped the Sandies in first-half matches.

The B-team match between the Harvesters and Borger will start at 6:30 p.m. Varsityes will play 20 minutes after the conclusion of the B-team match.

Inherited Problems

Ford Reappraises Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After recent setbacks, President Ford is making his first major reappraisal of U.S. foreign policy in the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

His chief spokesman says Ford is looking for new solutions to problems he inherited.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said "the problems we're having in various parts of the world are inherited. Now the President is in charge of foreign policy. He wants to take a fresh look."

The deteriorating situation in Southeast Asia and the breakdown of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy between Egypt and Israel has prompted Ford to begin his review of policies set by former President Nixon and which he has faithfully followed.

Ford may have something to say about Vietnam when he meets today with a South Vietnamese parliamentary group.

The Southeast Asia review follows major military losses in South Vietnam and Cambodia — also decisions by Thailand to halt the U.S. arms airlift to Cambodia from that country and to serve notice American troops eventually must be withdrawn from Thailand.

Ford will oversee the review of foreign policy in both Asia and the Middle East, with his diplomatic, military and intelligence advisers undertaking the study under the direction of Kissinger. Kissinger, however, is expected to begin a tour of Latin America on April 7.

Although many believe Kissinger is the dominant force in Ford's diplomacy, Nessen insists Ford is making the foreign policy decisions. The President appears to be taking a greater interest in putting his own stamp on foreign policy in light of recent events.

Nessen says Ford has no intention of pulling back on American involvement in the trouble spots. "He feels the United States' role should not be diminished."

Ford told the Los Angeles Times in a weekend interview. "As long as I am in this job, our policy will be one of a global policy. It will not be a policy of isolationism."

Ford has tentative plans to go abroad in August or September, meeting with European heads of states in Helsinki and visiting major capitals of Western Europe and some countries behind the Iron Curtain, including Yugoslavia and Romania. He also plans a trip to Peking in late fall.

Bentsen Calls Texas Primary Step Forward for Presidency

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., said a proposal for a Texas presidential preference primary that could give him all of the state's 130 delegate votes is not a winner-take-all proposition but "a progressive step forward."

"It doesn't have the winner-take-all provision," Bentsen said at a news conference Monday. "It's specifically designed to accommodate the Democratic party rules."

The bill Bentsen supports gives the candidate who receives a majority of votes within each state senatorial district all the delegates from that district to the state's Democratic party convention. The delegates elected in the primary would comprise 75 per cent of the state's delegation to the national convention and they would select the remaining 25 delegates to the convention.

The delegates would be listed on the primary ballot under their own names and not by the candidate they supported.

"I think it's a progressive step forward," Bentsen said of his bill which has already passed the Texas House, but still awaits approval from the legislature's upper chamber.

"This is a reform measure," he said. "It does away with the winner-take-all provision. It takes the selection of the candidates out of the backrooms, the smoke-filled rooms."

The bill failed the first time it was brought to a vote in the House.

MRS. BETTY POWELL

PERRYTON — Services for Mrs. Betty Jo Powell, 48, who died Sunday at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday at Calvary Temple in Perryton with the Rev. Sidney Jones, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Ochilree Cemetery by Boxwell Brothers Funeral Directors of Perryton. Mrs. Powell, born at Gallup, N.M., had lived here 45 years.

ED CULBERSON

She was a homemaker.

Survivors include her husband, Russell, two sons, John and Tyson, both of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Connie Fincher, Perryton; three sisters, Mrs. Jane McGarraugh, Perryton, Mrs. Johnnie Collinsworth, Duncan, Okla., and Mrs. Patsy Hyatt, Irving, a brother, Albert Black, Anaheim, Calif., and three grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are pending with Carmichael - Whitley Funeral Directors for Ed Culbertson, 69, 217 Miami, who died at 6 p.m. Monday in Buffalo, Mo.

Born April 23, 1905 in Lacon, Ill., Mr. Culbertson moved to Pampa in 1926 from Mountain Air, N.M.

He retired six years ago from Southwestern Public Service Company where he was employed for 36 years.

Mr. Culbertson was a member of Fellowship Baptist Church. Survivors include his wife, Gertrude, of the home, two sons, E.M. Jr., San Diego, and Robert S. Pampa, one daughter, Mrs. Linda Thomas, Pampa; and 12 grandchildren.

Fields Mens Wear

Bill Ladd, owner of Fields Mens Wear at 111 W. Kingsmill, moved to Pampa from Amarillo last year after buying the store.

"Pampa's probably the finest town in West Texas," Ladd said. "We looked at Plainview. Hereford and many other places before we moved here."

Ladd's faith in the city seems to be justified and his efforts in the clothing business have been rewarded.

"We've had increases every month but one since opening," he said. "And I expect this year to be even better. Things are good in Pampa."

Ladd is such an ardent supporter of Pampa and of the Peppy program that he is giving away a $5 gift certificate every day from March 20 through Saturday.

On Saturday Fields Mens Wear will present a Johnny Carson suit to the grand prize winner.

Ladd's contest rules are simple: each entrant must count his or her blessings and put the total number on the entry blank. The greatest number of blessings is the winner. And the winner must provide a list of his or her blessings to Ladd.

"It's simple," Ladd explained about his unusual competition, "I want people to sit down and think of all the good things about living in Pampa, Texas."

Fields Mens Wear is about 18 years old, but since Ladd became the owner, the store has been enlarged and newly carpeted.

The stock includes a full line of clothing for men and young men, hats, shoes, gift items and other accessories.

In addition to Ladd, there are four other people working in the store.

Courtroom Film Not Show Killing

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ranger Capt. J.F. "Pete" Rogers, his tanned and seasoned face grim and emotionless, stood by the witness chair quietly studying the black and white images flickering on the television monitor by the prosecutor's table.

Across the room, not 20 feet from where he stood in his dark brown suit and polished western boots, sat the bespectacled Ignacio Cuevas, 43, the foe he personally subdued following the shootout ending an 11-day siege at the Texas state prison last summer.

Rogers had just narrated a videotape replay of the final assault for the jury hearing a capital murder charge against Cuevas. Without embellishing the details, Rogers described how he and other lawmen charged a moveable shield protecting Fred Gomez Carrasco, Rudolfo Dominguez, Cuevas and four civilian hostages.

"We weren't going to make a move until they killed a hostage," he told the jury. "We wanted them to move first."

When the 2-minute shootout ended Aug. 3, 1974, Carrasco, Dominguez and two women, Elizabeth Beseda and Julia Standley lay dead. Cuevas is on trial for Mrs. Standley's murder.

The videotape, shown publicly for the first time Monday, was taken from the prison hospital 100 yards away. It shows in varying patterns of crisp figures and shadowy silhouettes the final deadly descent from Carrasco's library fortress to the paved courtyard below.

But it does not show how the hostages inside the shield were killed and wounded, or how exactly Carrasco and Dominguez died.

The final frames reveal the sound of commands from Rogers and other lawmen and two measured shots.

"Don't move. Don't move," Rogers shouted ending a moment of strained silence. "Come out. Come out."

Then a single shot is heard.

"Hold it," comes another command.

Then another shot is heard.

The final scene is blocked by the shield and the ramp from the library to the prison courtyard where the armored cars the inmates tried to reach were parked.

Rogers testified Winston C. Padgett, a Department of Public Safety intelligence officer, fired past him in the last seconds of the shootout, but for the first time Rogers acknowledged Carrasco might have already been dead.

Rogers testified, as he approached the toppled shield which had been repeatedly blasted by water from high pressure hoses, "I could see the wound on him (Carrasco). It was obvious. In my opinion he (Carrasco) was dead."

"I didn't see any wound to indicate Dominguez was dead. There was no sign of life or movement. I didn't know."

It had been hoped the film would answer several questions involving the shootout. Prison officials contend the inmates fired first while detractors argue the hostages and the inmates may have been killed by Rangers.

A coroner's report indicated Carrasco and Dominguez shot their hostages and committed suicide. An autopsy showed the inmates and their hostages were shot at close range.

Bank Victim of Bad Loans

HOUSTON (UPI) — A state banking official said the closed Franklin Bank is a victim of bad real estate loans and the financial times.

"Franklin had been on the problem list for the last several years," Texas Banking Commission examiner Bill Aldridge said. "Efforts to reverse the deteriorating trend weren't successful. A lot of the blame can be placed on the economy."

Since the first of the year, the bank which was chartered as the Downtown Bank in 1965 saw deposits dwindle from $26.3 million to $18 million.

State and federal banking officials went over Franklin's books the last few weeks and finally the board of directors voted for liquidation. A typed note on the Franklin's locked glass door Monday told customers of the news.

"Serious deterioration of the bank's loan portfolio caused by substantial writeoffs of real estate loans made by prior management of the bank," was how the official statement read.

Aldridge said: "Our real estate market isn't what it was. And some individuals are finding it difficult to even come up with the interest payments much less the principal on properties that aren't bringing in any income."

About 95 per cent of deposits at the bank were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or secured, according to Charles Pickett, regional counsel for the FDIC.

"We could be ready for a payoff as early as Thursday," he said.

Judge Orders Bell Employees To Answer

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Twelve employees of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. are under a court order today to respond to questions they once refused to answer about alleged corruption within the giant utility company.

Judge Peter Michael Curry issued an order Monday requiring the 12 employees to answer 75 per cent of the questions posed to them by attorney Pat Maloney, who is representing the plaintiffs in a $29 million damages suit filed against Southwestern Bell.

When Maloney first tried to question the employees they had refused, under the advice of their attorneys, to answer the questions.

Cancer Society Lists For Donations Budget

Donations given to the American Cancer Society in Pampa is budgeted to further the fight against one cancer on many different levels, assured Mrs. Margaret Milam, chairman of the cancer crusade which will be taking place in Gray and Robert counties April 6 and 7.

In the most recent budget, 25 per cent of the funds gathered support research programs. "But while we are waiting for basic answers from research, we are also trying to teach people how to recognize cancer's warning signals and the importance of early detection and prompt treatment. The public education program took 22 percent of our budget," she explained.

Another 29 per cent goes for services to patients, such as rehabilitation activities.

Progressional education for physicians and nurses took another 11 per cent.

Management costs 5 per cent and fund-raising costs 8 per cent.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2
Your birthday today: Your coming year is a personal challenge at all levels. Early good fortune leads you to confront your limitations—from there on the options are strictly yours. Nothing comes easily or smoothly, so you have to decide what is worthwhile. By planning positive goals and realistic schedules, your progress is inevitable. Today's intuitive natives introduce projects that other people later put into effect.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: You have much yet to do to achieve your full potential. Make a list of responsibilities, then figure out how to distribute them over a period of time. Avoid arguments today.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Be prepared to deal with reluctant fellow workers and in-laws. Stay with already existing enterprises rather than set up new ones this week or next. Settle an old problem if you can.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: You have to think fast to stay clear of the repercussions of your recent activities. Concentrate on minding your own business. Evening brings relief, excitement and fun.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: You can impress officials or V.I.P.'s if your facts are accurate. Those who know you well won't even bother to look. Being tactful is vital.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Pull back a little. Give others time to reconsider and restate their wishes in different terms. Patience may save an important asset for you.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Today you see something that you've missed before in your partner or mate. If you have any sort of rivals, they'll show up now. Decide what to do about them.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Retribution comes to those who erred long ago. Make use of convenient resources to better establish yourself and loved ones.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Bear with delay; it isn't quite time to make the serious move you're planning. The less you say about the faults of others, the better. Light entertainment brings a lift to a long evening.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Money matters are tentative. There's no simple solution to the immediate problem of people or property. Drop a losing project in favor of one you prefer.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Don't comment unless you're forced to. It's so easy to make an unrealistic promise. If you can spend your time actively among those who aren't involved in your work, great!

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Today's incidents seem directed toward undesirable goals or intended to hurt you. Neither assumption is true. People aren't against you; they're just for themselves.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: You are tense in early hours when your schedule is hastened or interrupted. Collect what can be saved and go on this evening. Look forward to a night of enjoyment.

1 Card of Thanks

OTTO C. RICE
We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation to the many friends who did so much to ease the burden of our sorrow during the recent illness and death of our beloved husband and father, Otto C. Rice. We want to thank those of you who so unselfishly gave of their time and energies to help greet and serve the family and friends who came by to pay their respects; those who brought food and sent so many lovely flowers in remembrance and comfort to our family; and those who remembered him in their thoughtful ways. We offer our special gratitude to the Reverend Dr. Lloyd Hamilton whose visits during his illness meant so much, and to the wonderful Doctors and Nurses who attended him so faithfully and with such human kindness and understanding.
Mrs. Otto C. Rice and Family

BRANDI ANN DEVOLL
WE WISH to thank our neighbors, friends, especially the nurses on the OB floor at Highland General Hospital, and anyone else who in any way acted in love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Otis DeVoll and family.

Tuesday, March 25, 1975
PORT ARANSAS, Tex. (UPI) — If for no other reason, Dr. James Sharp Sr. wants to attract a young physician to this Mustang Island resort town to save his life.

Sharp, 69, came to the 18-mile-long sliver of sand to retire three years ago. He accomplished that until the island's only fulltime doctor left him holding the bag.

Sharp had a mild heart attack last fall while he was working in his clinic and called his son who lives across the bay in Corpus Christi to come over and treat him. But before his son arrived, Sharp had to treat some patients of his own.

"A mother brought her son into my office with a badly cut foot," he said. "I told my nurse to start sewing him up and a man walked in with a fishhook in him. I was taking care of him when my son walked in."

The island where Sharp

works is proving it's hard to replace a legend.

"We need to get someone semi-retired," Sharp said. "If he could come here, I would do some of the work and he could do some of the work, and we could both go fishing most of the time."

Sharp jokes about the problem because it's his nature. But Sharp, pharmacist Lynn Gavit and Steve Frishman, publisher of the bi-weekly newspaper South Jetty, are serious about their search for a doctor.

"We're desperately searching," Gavit said. "Our mean population in the wintertime is three, maybe two thousand people. But starting in March we jump to as many as 20,000 people. It's kind of a desperate situation to be on an island on the sea without a doctor. We're turning over rocks."

Gavit said the problem was not peculiar to just his small city. He said Breckenridge, Colo., population 3,000, has a hospital and plenty of doctors.

"I guess more doctors like to ski than fish," he said.

If doctors travel south to Mustang Island they'll stay, he said. But, so far, advising in medical journals has been hopeless, he said.

"It's a competition of writers, and quite frankly Mustang Island sells itself," Gavit said.

"If a doctor comes here, he'll be sold. I guarantee it."

"I moved here because I love to live here. I guess everybody else moved here because they got disgusted with the big cities."

Sharp said young doctors, his son included, don't want to run their own practice.

"Physicians are becoming frightened by working without six specialists next door," he said. "The money is here, the work is here, and the fishing is good. What else could a person want?"
