U.S. jets repeat Lebanese reconnaissance

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. jets flew low over Beirut in reconnaissance runs this morning, a day after a similar mission drew groundfire from Syrian-held territory. Two radio stations said Syrian gunners fired at the planes today.

In northern Lebanon, meanwhile, Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's besieged loyalists were reported trading sporadic artillery fire with Syrian-backed rebels around the port city of Tripoli.

Arafat rejected an appeal from Tripoli's most prominent policitian to leave the city, Lebanese state radio reported. A radio station of the rightist Christian Phalangists said rebel leaders ordered Arafat to surrender or leave Tripoli by Sunday or face an all-out attack.

Beirut residents saw U.S. F-14 Tomcat interceptors swoop over the capital and surrounding hills at 6:30 a.m., then veer westward and fly back toward the sea.

Two Phalangist radio stations, the Voice of Lebanon and Voice of Free Lebanon, said Syrian gunners fired at the F-14s from mountaintops in central Lebanon. The claim could not be verified.

Spokesmen for the U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut declined to comment on new flights or the reported shooting at the Tomcats, which are based on the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Syria said Thursday its air defenses drove off four U.S. jets that flew over Syrian positions in central Lebanon. But U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger played down the claim, saying in Washington he had no evidence it was Syrian gunners who did the firing.

A White House spokesman said Navy jets doing "routine" reconnaissance Thursday were fired at from the ground but did not identify the attacker. None of the reports mentioned any hits.

Syria, the closest ally of the Soviet Union in the Middle East, has an estimated 50,000 troops in Lebanon. It has refused to pull out its forces until Israel withdraws from southern Lebanon.

Reporters in Tripoli said PLO rebels and loyalists had sporadic artillery and rocket duels this morning. State radio said the mutineers were pounding the Palestinian refugee camp of Baddawi, where there is a small garrison of Arafat loyalists. Arafat's forces fired rockets in return.

On Thursday, PLO mutineers bombarded residential neighborhoods in Tripoli as pressure mounted on Arafat to leave Lebanon's second-largest city.

The PLO fighting, which began Nov. 3, has killed at least 1,000 people, many of them in two Palestinian refugee camps on the outskirts of Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut.

A cease-fire began Wednesday evening, but its mediators from three Arab nations said the truce was only for four days, to give leaders of the warring sides a chance to work out a settlement.

A group of political leaders from Tripoli met with rebel leaders Ahmed Jibril and Saeed Mousa to try to figure how to end the fighting.

Graham given 30-year sentence

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — The trigger finger of the late Richard Lee Graham, who allegedly killed an Upton County deputy before himself falling to a shotgun blast levied by a citizen, netted the man's surviving 18-year-old son, Thomas Alan "Tom" Graham of McCamey, 30 years' imprisonment Thursday at a 119th District trial.

A jury of nine women and three men, which on Wednesday had found the younger Graham guilty of the murder of Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, 45, deliberated almost three hours before deciding the sentence.

The conviction was based on a statute charging Graham with equal responsiblity for the murder after his father reportedly killed Renfro during a July 15 McCamey hardware store break-in participated in by both.

Graham was permanently blinded by a shotgun blast and his father killed when Clifton Hood foiled their attempt to rob an Intratex pressure station near Bakersfield two days later.

Graham, who had been out on bond and in the custody of his mother since being released from Odessa Medical Center July 23, was handed over to Tom Green County Sheriff's Department. He is expected to be transferred Monday to Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville, which District Attorney Aubrey Edwards of Big Lake said has facilities for blind prisoners.

"Mr. Graham, I wish you all the luck in the world," Judge William Earney of Marfa said when he pronounced sentence. He added that Graham's blindness "might influence (TDC) in some early discharge," but did not venture to say how many years he must serve before becoming eligible for parole.

The 30-year sentence came after court-appointed Defense Attorney Lawrence Barber of Odessa made an emotional plea for probation and Prosecuter Edwards called for at least 25 years' confinement.

After the sentence was read by the bailiff, Graham's 19-year-old sister, Terri, put her arm around her brother and they quietly wept together.

"Justice has been served," said Upton County Sheriff Sid Langford, who earlier had testified that Renfro "was a fine officer."

The punishment, said Assisting Prosecuter Dan Edwards of San Angelo, "indicates you've got a very intelligent jury who cares about law enforcement. I think they're sending a message." He added he was surprised but pleased at the length of the prison term.

"I think it is a message to people in this part of the country that juries are not going to tolerate crime like some criminals think they do," said District Attorney Edwards. "This trial has been watched closely by young people, especially in Upton County, and they now know that they cannot get away with crime."

The district attorney, who spoke privately with jurors after punsihment was assessed, noted that he had been concerned they might find Graham innocent of murder and guilty only of burglary.

"The jury told me they only took one vote and did not consider the burglary charge," he related. "It was unanimous that it would be murder."

Jurors, whose ages averaged 32 years, declined comment.

Renfro's widow, Vergie, who sat softly sobbing throughout the trial, was satisfied with the punishment determined by jurors. "I'm relieved," she said. "I think they did the right thing. What they're saying is no one can do something like this and get away with it."

Defense Attorney Barber, who did not challenge a state witness during the trial and called only Graham to testify for the defense, described the case as "the cleanest ever tried. I think there were only three objections made, all by me, and they were all sustained.... There's no basis for appeal at this point."

The state made no attempt to claim Graham ever entered Red Bluff Lumber Co. in the early-morning hours of July 15, instead accepting his story that he waited on the roof while his father gained entry.

Thorough dusting of the building and of the murder weapon, a 12-gauge shotgun from a glass case in the store, failed to turn up any fingerprints, according to Texas Ranger Pedro Montemayor of Midland.

Graham also has been indicted by a Pecos County grand jury on two counts of delivery of a controlled substance, marijuana, in confiection with an incident prior to the murder.

His father, Richard Graham, had a prior felony conviction.

In Ypres, every day brings memories

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

YPRES, Belgium — World War I ended 65 years ago today, and its thinning ranks of aged veterans will pause to remember what they thought was the war to end all wars.

But here, in the quiet market town of Ypres and the Flanders fields around it, where a quarter of a million men perished, remembering World War I and its dead is unavoidable not just on Armistice Day but all year round.

From the rural outskirts where hundreds of farms are bordered by British cemeteries, to the town center, restored brick by brick from a wasteland left by four years of shelling, Ypres is a live-in monument.

Every night at sundown, traffic on the busy Menin Road halts under a Roman-style memorial gateway, and two buglers from the fire brigade play "The Last Post" — the British equivalent of taps.

On Menin Gate are chiseled the names of 54,896 British soldiers who died near Ypres from 1914 to 1917, but whose bodies were never identifed. People have been traveling to it since 1927 to find names and grieve for those they knew who died near Ypres.

This year, as always, there is an ceremony on Armistice Day — now Veteran's Day in the United States — sponsored by the British Commonwealth War Graves Commission.

The war here began about four miles outside town in the autumn of 1914, when the Germans tried to take the city, a strategic roadblock in their drive to outflank allied armies. Four years and 250,000 deaths later, they had gained two miles.

"Everybody thought it would be over in a couple of weeks," said Johan Martin, a local historian. "You can see how wrong they were." He points to a 1919 picture of rubble that was once the city center.

"After the war there were two schools of thought. The British wanted to keep everything as it was so people would see the horror of war. The townspeople wanted to rebuild the town exactly as it was and that's what we did."

The same street layout was kept and buildings were constructed according to old blueprints, giving Ypres the look of Flemish cities that weren't touched by the war.

Deliberations to begin in brutality trial

Policemen deny use of excessive force in arresting brothers

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Jury deliberations are expected to begin this afternoon in the case of seven police officers accused of using excessive force in the arrest of two brothers last year at Hogan Park.

During testimony in federal court Thursday, officers Clint Lovejoy and John Urby — both of whom are named in the civil rights suit — maintained that no excessive force was used in subduing Burt and Marvel Garcia the night of May 16, 1982.

Urby testified that he responded to a radio call for help from officer Tommy Holder. Urby said "there was no fighting" when he arrived on scene.

Shortly afterward, however, Urby said he struck Burt Garcia once in the stomach with a flashlight after Garcia "jumped at" Holder, who was treated for injuries suffered in the fight.

Urby said he also hit Marvel Garcia after an "all-out fight" developed between him, Garcia and officer Frank Gonzalez. Urby told jurors he couldn't recall how many times Garcia was struck.

Responding to allegations that Garcia was beaten after being subdued, Urby said: "No one hit that man when he was on the ground." Urby also claimed that he "never saw any officer act unreasonably under the circumstances."

Lovejoy buttressed Urby's testimony. And in rebuttal to earlier testimony that there were contests among police to see who could make the most arrests, Lovejoy said: "As far as I'm concerned, that's a pure lie."

Former canine officer Lonnie Payne, who was dismissed from the force after his indictment on an unrelated brutality complaint earlier this year, took the stand and testified that "on several occasions" he was asked by supervisors to change reports "to cover the liability of the (police) department."

Payne said he once was asked by canine supervisor Ed Nicks to change a report on a dog bite incident because the report contained "too much detail."

He also told jurors "it was common practice to change reports," leaving him with the feeling that "anything I did, the supervisors would cover for me."

In addition, Payne said another supervisor told him and other officers in the summer of 1982 "to arrest anybody for anything we could think of" at Joker's Lounge, a now defunct "trouble spot" on West Wall Avenue where patrons made "pig sounds" when officers entered the establishment, according to testimony.

"It didn't make any difference if they were drunk or not," added Payne, who further testified that police have harrassed him since his departure from the force.

Outlining one such incident, Payne said Nicks pulled him over on an alleged "adverse traffic move" and told him he was causing the canine division "a lot of heat."

Payne further testified that Nicks also told him: "We're tired of you jackin' against us. Every time something comes up, you're there. You can expect to be treated like this for going to lawyers and news people."

Under cross examination, Payne admitted that he's appealing his dismissal and that he doesn't like Nicks. Payne is also involved in a dispute with the police department over ownership of the dog he used while he worked in the canine division.

Former patrol lieutenant Jim McFadden testified that he "didn't feel the department was very professional." He cited one incident in which he said a patrol sergeant "rammed a handcuffed prisoner's head into a squad car. I didn't file a report on it because, in my opinion, nothing would have been done about it."

Reagan heads for South Korea

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan, winding up a three-day visit of pomp and blunt talk in Japan, is heading for South Korea, where 100,000 security agents are on alert to protect him against the kind of terrorism that recently decimated the senior ranks of that nation's ruling regime.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today that South Korea, which the president and Mrs. Reagan will spend two days beginning Saturday, "is very much an area where you feel the tension. Korea is a tense place right now with these murders."

In Seoul, the security-conscious capital that will be Reagan's next stop just 30 miles south of the border with North Korea, U.S. and South Korean flags already line the streets to celebrate the Americans' arrival. But police and military forces are on full alert, as they have been since a terrorist bomb killed 17 top South Korean government officials, including four cabinet ministers, and narrowly missed President and Mrs. Chun Doo-hwan during a visit to Burma on Oct. 9.

Sporadic anti-government and anti-Reagan demonstrations by several hundred students were reported on the campuses of three Seoul universities today. But students said reinforced police units, some using tear gas an riot control agents, moved in swiftly to break up the protests before they could gain momentum.

Calling for broad international backing for South Korea, Shultz said: "Obviously, we don't want to see a war on the (Korean) peninsula. We want to see restraint. But we also want to see South Korea supported."

Shultz pointed out in a brief news conference in Tokyo this evening that the U.S.-Korean security relationship is vital and said any comments the president makes about human rights in Korea would be made in private discussions with President Chun.

Another senior administration official, in a discussion of torture in South Korea, said that when "you live in artillery range of the enemy and where they constantly come through tunnels or in other manifistations make clear their antagonism to you" there is a need for "a higher level of discipline than in other more tranquil areas."

This official, who spoke on the condition that he not be further identified, added that "a clear and present danger" justifies this "higher level of discipline."

He also emphasized the progress of democracy in South Korea, where Chun came to power after President Park Chung-hee was assassinated, and said the nation was "a democratic country with some considerable promise politically and economically, a model for developing countries throughout the world."

Another senior administration official, briefing reporters on the upcoming trip on condition he not be named, said: "We will talk very bluntly...in private" about institutionalizing democracy in South Korea.

"While there's room for a lot of improvement," the source said, "the trend is in the right direction."

The official conceded there has never been a constitutional change of power in South Korea, saying, "The tendency is to have governments established by military coup."

As for Reagan's planned visit to the demilitarized zone, he said, "It is by definition an area which has been the scene of violence in the past. There is no reason to expect a higher level than what generally exists there."

Reagan is planning to travel to the 2.5-mile-wide DMZ separating North and South Korea on Sunday to visit the 15,000 U.S. troops stationed along the border. The United States maintains a force of 40,000 in South Korea.

U.S. soldiers on special guard duty have been wearing steel helmets and flak jackets and carrying loaded automatic rifles on duty at gates to American bases and other installations in South Korea.

The U.S. commander in South Korea said he was confident the president would be safe visiting the DMZ, where 60 Americans have been killed since the 1953 armistice ending the Korean War.

But, said Gen. Robert W. Sennewald, "The Burma bombing illustrates the unpredictability of North Korea. It shows they have a sense of values quite different from other parts of the world."

Reagan's visit to South Korea, announced last summer, has taken on added significance since the downing by the Soviet Union of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 on Sept. 1 and the Rangoon bombing, which both Seoul and the Burmese government have blamed on North Korean agents.

During his last full day in Tokyo, Reagan told the leaders of the only nation ever to experience the horror of atomic war that "in this modern age, a nuclear war can never be won and must never be fought."

That line won wide applause in the Diet, Japan's parliament, and the American president's 30-minute speech was interrupted by applause 27 times. But in his address, as in his two days of talks with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, there was was an undercurrent of the trade and defense policy disputes that have marked recent U.S.-Japanese relations and Reagan's visit here.

After his speech, the first by an American president to the Japanese parliament, Reagan and his wife Nancy flew by helicopter to Nakasone's weekend villa in the countryside for an informal lunch and less serious talk.

There, Reagan and his host donned sleeveless blue padded jackets and sat on pillows on the floor, Japanese style, to drink sake, the Japanese rice wine.

"I think this wine is more tasty than California wine," Nakasone told Reagan, a Californian who took pride in serving his state's wines to French President Francois Mitterrand in Paris.

Assuring him it was Japanese to turn the sake cup bottoms up, Nakasone told Reagan, "Let's 'kampai.'"

And with that prodding, the president downed the small cup of wine.

"Wonderful," he declared.

After Reagan concluded his meetings today, he and Nakasone issued a joint statement pledging cooperation on energy matters and promising to encourage private industry to determine how Alaskan natural gas can be developed by U.S. and Japanese interests to make American coal more competitive in the Japanese market.

In his address to the Diet, Reagan urged a lowering of trade barriers and denounced legislation passed by the U.S. House last week that would attempt to curb Japanese auto imports by requiring that they contain specified percentages of U.S.-manufactured parts.

"This would be a cruel hoax, raising prices without protecting jobs," Reagan said. "We would buy less from you. You would buy less from us. The world's economic pie would shrink. Retaliation and recrimination would increase."

But he noted that the American business community is convinced that trade barriers are deeply entrenched in Japan and block the sale of U.S. goods here.

"It is not easy for elected officials to balance the concerns of constituents with the greater interests of the nation," Reagan said. "But that is what our jobs are all about."

He said Japan had taken steps to lower its barriers and added, "We very much hope this progress will continue and accelerate."

The president's speech was boycotted by the 29 Communist members of the lower house. Also absent was former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, who was convicted recently in the million-dollar Lockheed bribery scandal.

Tanaka still holds his seat in parliament and wields considerable political power, a point of considerable sensitivity here.

Attempts to set dialogues rebuffed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S. special envoy Richard Stone advised Nicaragua's leftist government to conduct "internal dialogues" with U.S.-backed rebels but was quickly rebuffed by the coordinator of the ruling junta.

Stone made his suggestion in a meeting late Thursday with Sandinista junta coordinator Daniel Ortega.

But Ortega, at a news conference after the meeting, said he rejected such a proposal "because the counterrevolutionary groups are artificial forces created by the United States after the revolutionary triumph of 1979."

The Sandinistas gained control of Nicaragua four years ago in a civil war, ousting the rightist government of Anastasio Somoza.

Elsewhere in Central America, a lawyer in El Salvador appealed an order to try five former national guardsmen for the deaths of four American churchwomen. Also, Frederic C. Ikle, the U.S. Defense Department's No. 3 official, said the United States will help Costa Rica strengthen security along its border with Nicaragua.

Stone, appointed by President Reagan as special envoy for Central America, and Ortega met for 1½ hours. Both men flew to Managua from Mexico City, where they had separate meetings earlier Thursday with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid.

Stone said at the Managua news conference that he came to Nicaragua to express support for the peace process of the Contadora group nations — Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia.

The Contadora group is seeking a negotiated settlement of regional conflicts in Central America. Stone said the U.S government supported the Contadora goal of "peace and democracy in the Central American region."

Stone said he expressed to Ortega the need for both discusssions between Central American nations and the Contadora group and "internal dialogues" among all Nicaraguan factions.

Ortega said Stone specifically had suggested discussions between the government and the anti-Sandinista rebels.

U.S. congressional testimony has revealed CIA support for rebel exile groups battling the Sandinistas. The Reagan administration has accused Nicaragua, with its ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union, of exporting revolution to other Central American nations.

It was Stone's third visit to Nicaragua. After the meeting, Stone was headed for Panama, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Gilbert Calloway.

In Mexico City, Stone said discussions of Central American conflicts in the United Nations, the Organization of American States and the Contadora group over the next three weeks will be crucial to peace efforts.

Jury to deliberate brutality charges

McFadden, a 16-year veteran of the police force prior to his 1981 resignation in a demotion dispute, admitted under cross examination that he recently lost a civil suit against the city over his demotion to sergeant. But he denied having any animosity toward the department or the city.

Taking the stand for the second time in the 3-day-old trial, Chief of Police Wayne Gideon described McFadden as an officer "who caused constant problems" and who "was not a team player.

"He could not get along with judges or prosecutors. It was one constant hassle trying to get him to conform. He was almost paranoid that everybody was out to get him. You could not trust him."

Taking the stand to rebut earlier testimony that he offered to pay patrol officers $5 for reporting "burglaries in progress" directly to him so "his dog could get on" the suspect, Nicks said it was merely "an incentive" to get patrol officers on the "boring" midnight shift to check buildings more closely.

The "reward" also lessened the chance that patrol officers "would risk their lives" by entering a building where a break-in was going on, according to Nicks, who said dogs are used in building searches "to protect officers."

Nicks also denied previous testimony that he carries a switchblade knife as a throwdown weapon. He admitted carrying a knife in his boots, but said it's "not a switchblade."

Under cross examination by Garcia attorney Bob Evans, Nicks admitted resigning from the Texas Tech police force after being asked to do so in a book theft case that also involved two other Tech police officers.

In other testimony, Lt. David Wilks said former officer Paul Love "was a most unsatisfactory officer" who couldn't be depended on to back up other officers in emergency situations.

Wilks described two such incidents and said: "It's my personal belief that he would not come because he was afraid of being reinjured."

Earlier in the trial, Love gave detrimental testimony about the police department and noted that he had suffered a bad knee injury during a disturbance call.

Wilks also said that the victim in an alleged unnecessary dog bite incident involving Nicks and former canine officer Terry Lowe never filed a complaint and that Love's report on the matter was never pursued for that reason.

Both sides rested their cases late Thursday afternoon and summations were to get under way at 9:15 a.m. today in U.S. District Court. Jurors are expected to begin deliberations about noon.

Yachters missing in Pacific storm

By The Associated Press

A wet, gusty storm lashed the Northwest today leaving two yachters missing in the wind-whipped Pacific, as snow deepened in the Midwest where up to 14 inches had fallen in spots and the wintry blast was blamed for eight deaths.

The Northeast, meanwhile, dried out from soaking rains that tangled highway and air traffic in northern New Jersey and New York City.

"This is really only two storms, in the Northeast and Northwest, and in between the cold sinking all the way down to Texas," National Weather Service meteorologist Harry Gordon said today. "This isn't a situation that'll give us widespread flooding or heavy snowdrifts. It's just unpleasant."

The unpleasantness affected much of the nation.

Gale warnings went up for the northern New England Coast. High waves pushed lake trout and salmon onto the Lake Michigan beach in Milwaukee. Farmers in south-central Texas, western Arkansas and western Tennessee braced for frost.

But the Pacific Northwest was taking the greatest pounding thanks to a storm 300 miles out to sea that was pushing toward land.

Winds gusted Thursday afternoon to 105 mph at Cape Blanco on the southern Oregon coast and 81 mph in northern California, causing scattered power outages that continued today. The gusts later diminished, but a high wind warning remained in effect for the Washington coast.

Three vessels called off a search early today after failing to sight a man and woman who abandoned their 31-foot trimaran Thursday off the coast of California's Big Sur, the Coast Guard said.

Aircraft were to resume the hunt today for the couple, who jumped overboard in life jackets after reporting their vessel was taking water, said petty officers Dan Kelleher and Ray Helliwell.

In Ypres, every day brings war memories

Outside the town, there are more than 60 British cemeteries, with names like "Hospital Farm" and "Railway Dugouts," where soldiers are buried near where they fell.

Farmers in the region still reap a harvest of old rifles, metal, spent shells and enough unexploded bombs to keep half the Belgian Army demolition squad on permanent duty in the region.

A 33-year-old farmer was killed by shrapnel near Ypres last year when his tractor churned up a live artillery shell.

Despite the sharp memories of the war, Ypres has decided to do more, and perhaps attract tourists and their money to a region suffering from double-digit unemployment.

The town museum will be converted over the next six months from a grab-bag collection of donated memorabilia to a modern exhibit hall.

The town is paying for much of the project. Some residents, concerned about nuclear weapons and NATO plans to put U.S. cruise missiles in Belgium, want a special "peace corner" with exhibits condemning war.

In a small nearby town where Martin was born there once were 400 members of the local World War I veterans association. The last member died at the age of 90 in 1982.

A special service will be held at St. George's Memorial Church, built by the British in the 1920s to commemorate soldiers and regiments. Typical comments in the guest book are "We shall not forget," and "They died for God and country."

A visitor from Offenbach, West Germany, wrote in his own language: "We pray that such churches will never again be needed."

School memories kept in old wall

BOONEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Most people keep high school annuals to help remind them of the past. But Don Dunn decided to keep an old dressing room wall.

The 10-by-12-foot wall has hundreds of names of former Booneville students carved, penned, penciled and painted on its face — the first of the names appearing in the mid-1940s. Most of the names are of former Bearcat athletes; some are of young lovers.

Dunn, 38, acquired the wall in 1978, the year the old high school was demolished to make way for a new building. "I was on the school board when we voted to tear the old high school down," said Dunn, an insurance agent. "It was a shame we didn't have the money to keep it up."

Dunn, who had attended Booneville High School in the late 1950s and early 1960s, said he was interested in preserving portions of the old building. "I was buying a lot of stuff out of the school," he said. "I bought various things I just hated to see go."

The wall, however, was not prominent on his mind. "The wall was down in the basement," he said. "We called it 'the catacombs.' In fact, it was kind of scary down there."

But the wall brought back good memories, and Dunn decided to have it moved. He numbered each of the 23 pine boards — two of which included his name — and removed them one at a time. They were later re-assembled at the Roger's Scout Reservation about 10 miles south of Booneville.

"At first I thought there were only boys' names on here," he said, standing in front of the wooden structure. But he soon found female names scrawled across the boards. "That's the interesting thing about this," he said. "I see something different everytime I come back here."

Disease not chicken except for drugs

Coccidiosis, a parasitic intestinal disease, annually costs the U.S. poultry industry over $150 million in direct losses and about $100 million for anticoccidial drugs.

Lucas wants to 'be with' girl he killed

DENTON (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, sentenced to life in prison for fatally stabbing his teen-age traveling companion with a butcher knife, says he will "probably" plead guilty to other murders and wants the death penalty so he can "be with" the girl he killed.

Lucas was given the maximum sentence Thursday in the first trial arising from his claim that he killed 165 people while hitch-hiking back and forth across the country.

While leaving the courthouse, the 47-year-old Lucas said he "expected life all along" for his conviction of the stabbing death of 15-year-old Frieda "Becky" Powell.

A note Lucas wrote to Tom Whitlock, his court-appointed attorney, said, "I will get either 75 years or life, which I don't care because I have already gave myself death. God can give a person like me a pardon of sin and He has promised to do so. I know I will be with Becky."

As he was escorted out of the courthouse, he said, "Death — that's what I've asked for. I'm going to get it."

Asked if that meant he planned to plead guilty to some of the other murders with which he is charged, Lucas said "probably."

Lucas has been charged in eight other Texas slayings, including four capital murder charges that carry a possible penalty of death by injection. His next trial will be in Georgetown, near Austin, either in December or October, prosecutors said.

Lucas is charged there with the strangling death of a young, unidentified woman whose body was found near Interstate 35 in 1979. He was taken to Georgetown soon after his sentencing here.

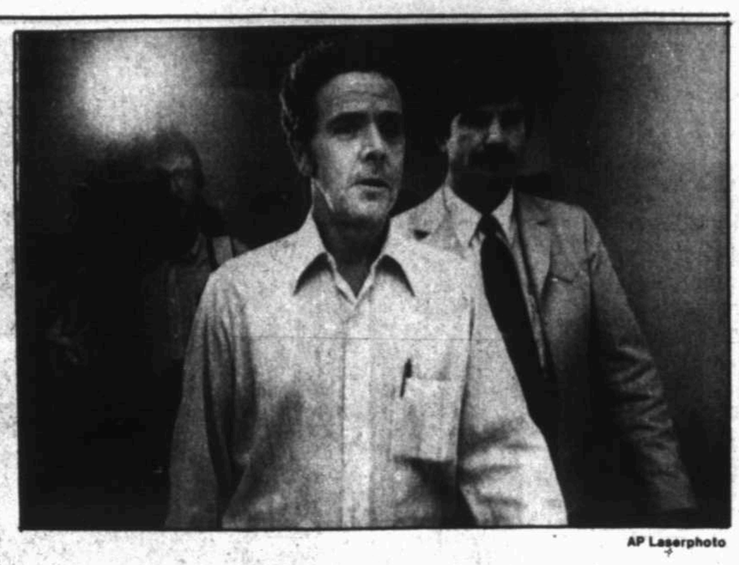

Earlier this year Lucas pleaded guilty to the 1982 slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich in Ringgold. Ms. Rich's bones were found in Lucas' woodburing stove. He was sentenced to 75 years in prison, but has since requested a new trial.

The Denton County jury deliberated nearly three hours before announcing its sentence. Lucas shook hands with prosecutor Jerry Cobb and told the Denton County district attorney he had "done a good job."

In a hand-written statement addressed to "members of the press" Lucas said, "I have not tried to win. If I ever desire to win, I can." The note was written Wednesday night in the Denton County Jail.

Lucas said the trial and the attention it gathered enabled him to "to gain peace of mind."

Whitlock said Lucas did not tell him that he planned to seek the death penalty in future cases. He was asked after the sentencing if he believed Lucas could be the largest mass murderer in U.S. history, as he claims, and said he did not know.

Board reverses itself

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Corrections has killed a proposal to build a $4.5 million dairy processing plant — a decision one board member called a signal that "helter-skelter" spending in the prisons has ended.

The unanimous vote came Thursday after Gov. Mark White restated his opposition to the plan. Board members had voted 5-3 Monday to go ahead with the plant.

"I want to let the Legislature and the (prison) staff know we are not spending money helter-skelter over there like we have in the past few years," said Harry Whittington of Austin, who led the move to rescind the Monday vote.

White told the board he was "disturbed" that the need for a new dairy plant was not mentioned to lawmakers this year.

"This is not something that just sprang up overnight like a mushroom," he said.

Whittington said the dairy plant is symptomatic of "helter-skelter" spending that at times has surprised even the board. He mentioned a $640,000 "change order" approved by the Texas Department of Corrections staff for another dairy project.

Board member Joe La Mantia of McAllen defended that move, saying that the board had been "notified" about the expenditure.

Chairman Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls, who has promised the board will take tighter control of prison operations, responded, "We were told this was taking place. We weren't asked."

La Mantia conceded that "on occasion things have taken place we haven't been notified of."

Referring to the $640,000 expenditure, Whittington said, "That isn't the only one."

White persuaded the board that the $4.5 million for the dairy plant should be used for more guards. TDC is under a federal court order to hire more guards. White said the board must find $38 million to meet the court order.

Mailman may be charged

EL PASO (AP) — A postal inspector says a mailman who allegedly threw mail into a dumpster instead of delivering it could face federal charges.

Postal Inspector Dave Rivera said Thursday that postman Ricardo Torres was suspended pending the outcome of an internal investigation, which the inspector said he hoped to complete by Monday. He said the decision on whether to charge Torres would be left up to the U.S. attorney.

"We're conducting an investigation on it and I will give my report to him (the U.S. attorney) for him to decide," Rivera said. "The postmaster also will have a say."

Leonard Hall, owner of an El Paso apartments investment company, said he watched a postman take bundles of mail from his truck and toss them into a large trash dumpster in Central El Paso.

You have to put your foot down when exercising

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Although we all try to put our best foot forward, the trouble is that we have only two of them, severely limiting the choice.

Not only that, but so often is the surface underneath of a harmful nature, the foot is just about doomed to suffer regardless.

"Take terrazzo or similar mirror-smooth flooring in a shopping center," said Dr. Charles R. Brantingham. "It is nice to look at, but terribly fatiguing. After about 20 minutes, without knowing why, a shopper wants to leave."

Brantingham, a podiatrist in nearby Los Alamitos, Calif., thinks he knows why.

"If you look at hillsides, grassy pathways and meadows, you see roots and indentations, and you come to realize that the foot was designed to live on the varied terrain of the earth.

"When a podiatrist puts pads on a patient's foot to shield painful areas or to provide support, what we are really doing is providing artificial varied terrain inside the shoe."

So fascinated has the 66-year-old Brantingham been with surfaces for feet that 15 years ago he and several other professionals formed a research team to see if they could come up with something to ease life for the walkers and the standers of the world.

"Waitresses, teachers, police officers, surgeons, postal clerks, machinists, homemakers, bank tellers — about 90 million people stand for more than one hour in the course of their work day," he said.

As for walking, a Chicago podiatrist, Dr. Philip R. Brachman, has been quoted as saying that during a lifetime the average person completes about 65,000 miles of it.

So it is of more than idle interest to know that inside the leg, largely below the knee, is what is known as "the second heart," the peripheral venous pump mechanism made up of muscles that squeeze veins and force blood back to the main heart.

"Needless to say, this pumping function is important," Brantingham explained. "If you were tied to a tree, 15 minutes after you quit struggling, you would black out and your head would fall forward. About 20 minutes later there would be brain damage. And 40 to 60 minutes after that, you would be dead.

"All of this is because the chest heart would have kept pumping, but the blood would have pooled in the legs because the second heart would not have been able to pump it back up to the brain.

"In the military, for instance, if a person stands at attention too long without foot motion, fainting can occur. As a foot doctor assigned to the Waves in World War II, I would tell them to wiggle their toes while standing at attention."

The point is that stimulation of the leg muscles is vital, and even if your civilian boss does not require you to stand at attention while you salute, the surface beneath you has a lot to do with your health. And the same is true while you walk.

During their years of research, after developing a special mat that in effect forces the feet to move slightly and thereby reduces fatigue, Brantingham's team also formed about three years ago the International Academy for Standing and Walking Fitness.

It comes too late to do any good for Henry VIII, whose painful big feet reportedly caused him to wear huge shoes that curled up at the toes, or Abraham Lincoln, whose foot problems had him once complaining: "When my feet hurt, I can't think."

But an academy that hopes to preclude this now exists, headed by Brantingham and consisting of more than 400 members worldwide. One of its functions is to seek out and bestow honors for healthful and comfortable walkways.

The first one in the private sector was awarded early last year to the Buena Park (Calif.) Mall near Los Angeles, for floor surfaces that vary from brick to carpet to wood.

"As for the public sector, patterning of walkways is what is ideal," said Brantingham, former president of the California Podiatric Medical Association.

"You see a lot of patterning in Europe. I don't mean cobblestones, which are a bit too much for comfortable walking, but something along the same principle."

Trashcans designed as furniture

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — For years, Robert E. Fahey has worked at getting rid of everything people don't want — garbage. He's now come up with a way of converting a garbage can into something people do want — furniture!

"This keeps me from going nuts," says Fahey, solid waste director for Collier County, as he works over a galvanized steel container in a building that serves as his home and shop.

His biggest seller is the "garbage can chair" — novel enough to earn him a U.S. patent this year. He also turns the common trash can into patio tables and barbecue grills.

To make the chair, Fahey cuts an opening halfway down the can and then wedges the lid (upside down) into the opening for the seat base. Braces to hold the lid in place are made from the cut section and screwed into the lower part of the can.

A rubber molding is glued over the U-shaped cut. Fahey then stuffs a foam cushion into a round vinyl-coated, polyester cover, places it in the seat base and the chair is completed. The handles remain as is on both sides of the chair, making it easy to move about.

Fahey's chairs are remarkably comfortable and are immediate conversation pieces wherever they're seen.

"So far, I've limited myself to selling them to garbagemen. They're my kind of people."

He does this by advertising his furniture in two trade magazines. There are 300,000 people involved in the solid waste industry in the United States alone, he says.

"That market is enough for me," he adds.

Most of his chairs wind up as retirement gifts, awards or door prizes at Government Refuse and Collection Disposal Association regional meetings which are rotated not only in Florida, but in other states.

Each time one is presented, his Sitcan Corp. gets additional orders. Inquiries are starting to come from as far away as Tangiers and Malaysia.

"You've got to pep up people in the garbage business," he comments. "They never get a 'thank you.'"

Whatever is ordered, the chair, patio table or barbecue grill, the price is the same — $79.

The idea for his chairs came two years ago as he drank coffee from a plastic foam cup. "First I cut the cup and then I bought a garbage can and cut that."

His furniture needs little care. "If the can gets dull, you just wipe it down with vinegar," he advises.

Fahey has spent much of his life in Akron, Ohio, where he worked for city government from 1957-1965. From 1972-1979, he was superintendent of sanitation for that city.

FBI probing case of black engineer

DALLAS (AP) — An FBI agent says the agency is conducting a "fact-finding" investigation into the case of Lenell Geter, a young, black engineer sentenced to life in prison in the robbery of a fast-food restaurant last year.

Geter's former roommate, Anthony Williams, was acquitted Tuesday of robbing a convenience store of $31. The two had moved to Greenville, Texas from South Carolina last year to work as engineers for E-Systems, Inc.

Their cases gained national attention because of allegations the charges against the two men were racially motivated.

Williams, 25, says he hopes his acquittal will help free Geter, 26, whose case is on appeal.

"I hate to think about Lenell. It makes me sad," said Williams. "But I can't forget about him. It's like, 'Now that Anthony's free, why can't Lenell be free?' I'm hoping my trial will help free him."

Woody Specht, a special agent for the FBI in Dallas, said Thursday that an investigation is being conducted into Geter's case, but would not comment specifically on it.

"It does concern the Lenell Geter case," Specht said. "We can't say who the subjects are. No formal charges have been filed. We obtained certain facts and we are forwarding that information to the Justice Department."

During the sentencing phase of Geter's trial, Greenville police Lt. James Fortenberry testified that Geter was a suspect in more than a dozen crimes in South Carolina. He said he learned that Geter was a suspect from J. Edward Darnell, a Bamberg County, S.C., sheriff. Fortenberry testified that Darnell told him Geter was "a bad character."

But Darnell testified at a post-trial hearing that Fortenberry might have misinterpreted their conversation about another man and said he did not know Geter.

Edward Sigel, a Dallas attorney who represented both men, said the FBI last week requested transcripts from Geter's trial and "zeroed in on the Fortenberry-Darnell testimony."

Sigel filed a motion Wednesday asking an appeals court to consider testimony from Williams' case when it reviews Geter's conviction. Sigel said evidence in Williams' trial "is highly material" to Geter's case.

The two men were at one time considered accomplices by Greenville police, though they were charged in separate robberies.

Their pictures were circulated among robbery victims, and in each of the two cases, they were identified as the respective culprits.

Sigel's motion asks the appeals court to review the testimony of 24 witnesses from Williams' trial and 14 witnesses from the pre-trial hearing.

The Texas 5th District Court of Appeals, based in Dallas, did not immediately rule on Sigel's motion.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade has said Geter's and Williams' cases are "not really connected" and has rejected requests to re-try Geter.

Eight-year-old refugee spends years in orphanage

ORANGE (AP) — Years as a refugee carved so many pounds from Lim Cheang's mother that the 8-year-old didn't recognize her when he stepped off a plane that reunited them after four years.

But Cambodian refugees Lim Eng and Lim Hieng knew him. They soaked their son with kisses and tears and coaxed his memory with words of love. He buried his head alternately in the chests of his mother and father.

The talk was lost on him. Spending half his life in Thailand, first in an orphanage, then in a refugee camp, had erased his native tongue from his mind.

The eight days he has been in the United States have begun to restore the language, his cousin, 15-year-old Vang Ay Soan, said Thursday night.

Next week he will grapple with English as he starts school.

Cheang and his family were reunited through the efforts of his family, First Baptist Church of Orange and the office of Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

When Cheang saw his mother at the Jefferson County Airport Nov. 2, it was their first meeting since she left him with a relative in Bangkok in 1979.

Texas students want to make holidays bright in Lebanon

CANYON (AP) — West Texas State University students want to make the holidays a little warmer for servicemen in Lebanon by sending them a big banner Christmas card and smaller individual holiday greetings.

The 6- by 30-foot canvas sign reads, "To Our Servicemen in Lebanon, Merry Christmas From West Texas State University."

Sgt. Ronald Connors, ROTC staff member and head of the project, said the banner project is a way to involve everyone who wants to send a holiday greeting to the servicemen. The goal is to get 6,000 signatures on the banner.

Those who want the name of a serviceman to whom they may send cards can write: Christmas Lebanon, Box 746, ROTC-WTSU, Canyon, Texas 79106, or call the ROTC department on campus. All cards must be received by Dec. 5.

Hance hires former White staffer

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Kent Hance has hired David Doak, who served as campaign manager for Gov. Mark White in 1982.

Hance, a Democratic congressman from Lubbock, on Thursday also announced his campaign had hired media consultant Robert Squier and pollster Irwin Harrison. In addition to directing White's upset win over incumbent Bill Clements last year, Doak was campaign manager for Virginia Gov. Charles Robb in 1980.

Capitol could be more secure

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said he does not worry that terrorists will bomb the State Capitol, but he said Thursday he supports increasing security in the historic building, which he called a "state treasure."

The Capitol was open 24 hours a day until last month, when police roped off all but the ground floor at 9 p.m., prohibiting tourists from wandering around upstairs hallways at night. The entire building remains open during the day.

"I think security can be enhanced and should be," White said. "We've seen what's happened in the national Capitol, and I don't suggest for a moment that that would occur here."

But "It's better for us to protect against a potential danger than to wonder why we didn't take some protection after a problem has occurred," White said.

Land registry inducts families

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials have inducted 171 families into the Texas Family Land Heritage Registry, comprised of people whose land has been maintained in agricultural production for 100 years or more by the same family.

"These families are living, productive symbols of an entrepreneurial unit that is our lifeblood — the family farm," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Thursday's ceremony in the Capitol brought the total number of properties in the registry to 1,729.

Among those attending the ceremony was Tomas Izaguirre, 75. He is the great-great-great grandson of Don Eugenio Ramirez, whose Santo Tomas Ranch in Zapata County was founded with a land grant from the King of Spain in 1790. It is the second-oldest ranch in the registry.

Board gets preview of evolution debate

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education has watched what could be a preview of a year-long controversy over teaching evolution in public school classrooms.

Science and biology textbooks are up for adoption next November, and witnesses testified Thursday on a proclamation setting out guidelines for publishers who want to submit books to the board for adoption.

Mike Hudson, Texas coordinator for People for the American Way, said the proclamation omits any reference to evolutionary theory.

"The board rule which limits the teaching of evolution and Proclamation 60 which emerges from it remain concessions to a small, extremist group that is outside the mainstream of scientific thought and outside the mainstream of American religion," Hudson said.

He quoted Nobel prize winner Steven Weinberg of the University of Texas at Austin as saying the proclamation "dictates science education that is reminiscent of the Dark Ages."

The 27-member board devoted the afternoon to hearing comments on the proclamation, after taking final testimony on $36.3 million in proposed textbooks scheduled for adoption Saturday. Total textbook costs, including replacement of current books, are expected to reach $65.5 million this year.

Former astronaut Charles Duke Jr., who walked on the moon in 1972, was among those supporting the board rule that states in part that textbooks shall identify evolution "as only one of several explanations of the origins of humankind ..."

Duke, a New Braunfels investor, said, "Darwinian evolution...is not fact, but theory."

UT-Austin zoology professor Bassett Maguire Jr. volunteered to arrange for scientists to teach the board a 15- to 20-hour course on evolution, stating that it "is a vital and frequently used tool for many practicing researchers in biology."

A Hardin-Simmons professor, Dr. Virginia Armstrong, said it would be unconstitutional to teach only one theory of creation, and Dr. Norman Geisler of the Dallas Theological Seminary said a recent Gallup poll shows that 75 percent of the people in the United States feel both evolution and "creation" science should be taught.

Even chickens need tender loving care

Copley News Service

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Chickens, though much maligned in jokes, are really sensitive creatures.

If ignored, shouted at, or otherwise treated foully, they lose their appetites and become susceptible to illness.

On the other hand, they eat more efficiently and are more resistant to illness with a little tender loving kindness, such as soft talk, gentle touching and song.

What type of songs?

"Mood music," says Dr. Paul B. Siegal, distinguish professor of poultry science at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute here.

Siegal, who presented the latest research on the care and breeding of chickens earlier this week at the annual meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing, said this "mundane and practical" animal is generally unappreciated in the community.

Yet, many scientific discoveries owe their origins to the chicken. The first vitamins were discovered and isolated from chickens, the existence of hormones was first confirmed in chickens and cancer viruses were first revealed in chickens.

Even the discovery of the pecking order can be laid at the feet of this humble bird.

What's more, it's a valuable and inexpensive protein source, with nearly 4 billion broilers produced each year by America's poultry industry.

"The point is the chicken has been valuable, not just for its food production but for its value in science," Siegal said.

With such use, researchers are always looking for better and cheaper ways to increase productivity through genetic selection techniques and improvements in breeding.

One relatively easy way appears to be gentle handling, according to a study published late last year by Siegal and his colleague, Dr. W.B. Gross, in the American Journal of Veterinarian Research.

In the study, one group of chickens was given kind treatment soon after hatching. During this time, the birds received daily human contact. They were sung to, talked to quietly and gently stroked.

Workers, dressed in subdued dark blue overalls, moved slowly and methodically through the cage.

Meanwhile, another group of birds was totally ignored except for a twice-a-week feeding and cage cleaning.

Yet a third group of chickens was hassled, shouted at, the cages were banged on and loud noises were made in the room.

All three groups of birds were subsequently exposed to infectious bacterial agents.

The results showed that the socialized birds fed easily from the workers' hand and could be handled without much fuss when inoculated. They also showed increased antibody response to the bacterial infection.

On the other hand, the hassled birds fled from the workers at feeding and showed much less resistance to disease.

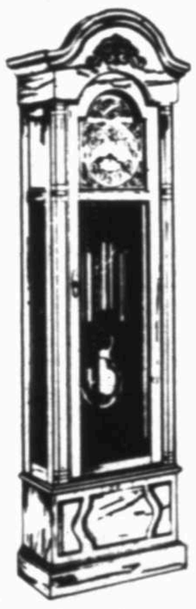

Likewise, the ignored birds retreated to the back of the cage when observed and showed the least ability of the three groups to ward off infection.

"Socialization of poultry," the scientists concluded, "should result in higher productivity with improved efficiencies in feed utilization.

Ma Bell begins costly campaign over phone fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ma Bell is closing out her reign as the world's largest corporation with one of the most expensive and intensive lobbying campaigns ever seen on Capitol Hill.

With billions of dollars of future earnings at stake, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is papering the nation with full-page ads and bringing scores, perhaps hundreds, of its local company executives to Washington to buttonhole lawmakers and their staffs.

AT&T sent letters urging its 3 million stockholders and 1 million employees to contact their senators and representatives. Its ads offer readers a toll-free 800 number they can call for information on how to contact lawmakers.

Pic Wagner, AT&T's spokesman, says the company has spent more than $2 million in stockholders' money trying to defeat legislation that would hold down local telephone rates after the breakup of Ma Bell next year.

The central focus of the battle is whether customers will have to pay so-called "access fees" in order to make long-distance calls. Under a plan approved by the Federal Communications Commission, the initial fee for a residential customer would be $2 a month.

THE LEGISLATION passed the House on a voice vote late Thursday night and was sent to the Senate where its future is uncertain.

With Congress pushing for adjournment Nov. 18, the Senate vote probably won't come until 1984. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has said that the Senate will debate the issue as its first major business when it returns in January.

"This is AT&T's last hurrah," said a supporter of the bill, Herb Jasper, executive vice president of the American Council for Competitive Telecommunications, a lobbying group of companies competing with AT&T for long-distance customers.

"It is probably one of the largest, if not the largest, lobbying campaigns ever seen up here," says Ellis Woodward, a spokesman for the telecommunications subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which initiated legislation to permanently bar access fees.

Each side accuses the other of distortions.

"IN THE POLITICAL rhetoric, the facts have been shoved under the rug," says Wagner, citing an ad foes ran in Tuesday's Washington Post saying that access fees would be a $2 billion-a-year windfall for AT&T.

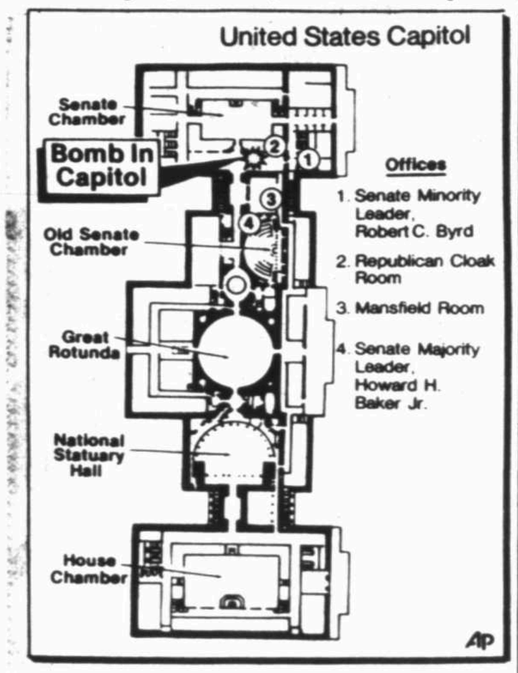

"They're just being deceptive," he adds, saying that AT&T's net gain would be closer to $600 million — an amount he says would simply give the company the profit margin the FCC has authorized.

Woodward said the "nature of the (AT&T) lobbying campaign has been somewhat offensive in that they have tried to mislead members and their staffs by using numbers that are incorrect."

Jerry McAndrews, executive director of the Association of Long Distance Telephone Companies, another group of AT&T competitors, said Ma Bell is waging "an all-out, no-holds-barred campaign. We have to spend a large part of our time refuting arguments that are untrue or not totally true."

IN THE STRENGTH of its field forces, AT&T has the advantage. McAndrews said the coalition of competitors and consumer groups pushing the legislation has at most 20 to 30 lobbyists, not all of them working full time.

AT&T, on the other hand, has called in the troops from around the country. Local phone company officials have been ordered to Washington to dog individual legislators they often know on a first-name basis from state and district politics. Woodward calls this bringing in of constituents "the shepherd system."

Senate offers compensation in capitol blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is offering a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those who bombed the U.S. Capitol earlier this week.

The Monday night explosion near the Senate chamber caused an estimated $250,000 damage, not including restoration of five paintings, the office of the Capitol Architect said Thursday.

During consideration of an unrelated bill Thursday night, Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., offered an amendment to make $100,000 available for "substantial information" leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the explosion.

The recipient of the money would be designated by the attorney general.

Deputy Architect Elliott Carroll said the $250,000 damage estimate is lower than some initial reports because most of the work is being performed by Capitol employees rather than private construction firms.

The blast ripped a large crater in a wall 30 feet from the Senate chamber, caused severe damage to a Republican lounge and meeting room, blew out windows and knocked heavy doors to the office of Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd off their hinges.

No one was injured in the bombing and officials said there was no major structural damage to the building. The Senate chamber was unharmed.

Five 19th century paintings were damaged in the blast, a portrait of Daniel Webster most seriously. Senate curator James R. Ketchum had no restoration cost for the paintings, but said all will be back in place by January.

Discussing the bombing with reporters Thursday, FBI Director William H. Webster said the blast was produced by three or four pounds of dynamite rigged to a dual firing mechanism using two watches.

He said that 10 or 11 other bombings along the East and West Coasts since 1981 had similar mechanisms. He declined to specify those bombings "because that would seem to connect them and I don't want to do that."

"I want to avoid speculating. There's already been a lot of speculation," Webster said.

He said the Armed Resistance Unit, which claimed responsibility for the Capitol explosion, was the same name used by those who placed a bomb outside the Army War College at Ft. McNair here last spring. There were no injuries in either of those explosions.

"I wish we had more information about the makeup of that organization," Webster said. "But we have no specific subjects of this investigation" into the Capitol bombing and "we don't know who did" the Ft. McNair bombing.

Webster also declined to say that the Capitol Hill or other domestic bombings resulted from foreign backing of groups operating in this country.

Antique fire collection contributed to city

NEW YORK (AP) — The days of the bucket brigade were recalled at City Hall as a $2 million collection of antique fire apparatus and firefighting memorabilia was donated to the city.

The collection was symbolically handed over to Mayor Edward Koch on Thursday in the form of a silver 19th century speaking trumpet, once the symbol of the fire officer's authority.

The trumpet was used during the days of the city's volunteer firefighters to give orders and communicate with the firemen and victims in burning homes and buildings.

The collection — which includes the trumpet used by the notorious and colorful William Marcy "Boss" Tweed, who began building his political career in the old Americus No. 6 fire house — was donated by the Home Insurance Co.

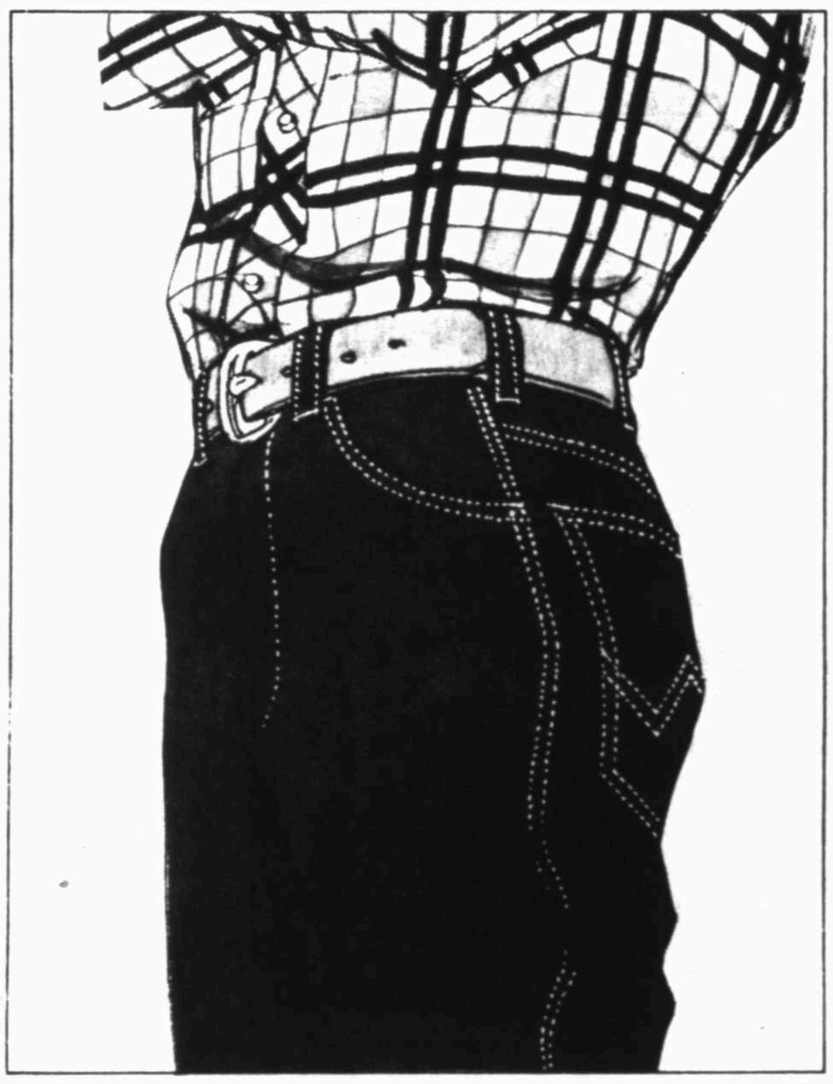

It was presented by George T. Scharffenberger, chairman of Home's parent firm, City Investing Co.

He said the collection reflects the "history, tradition and value that makes New York City's Fire Department the best in the world."

The collection will be combined with the Fire Department's own memorabilia. Next summer, both collections will make up the New York Fire House museum when it opens in the quarters of former Engine Co. 30 in lower Manhattan.

Midshipmen fail Breathalyzer test

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Three midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy have failed Breathalyzer tests since Commodore Leon Edney began ordering the tests for students returning from weekend leave.

Edney said this week the tests, conducted at the academy gates, are not meant to "hassle midshipmen" but to discourage them from driving after drinking alcohol. The practice began after a Sept. 18 accident in which one midshipman died and three were critically hurt.

Other steps in the crackdown include weekend patrols of Annapolis bars and a ban on drinking by freshmen, Edney said.

Research may depend on tests

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — The investigation of the killings of a woman and her three young children may hinge "almost entirely" on lab tests of evidence taken from their fashionable home, police say.

"We have no suspects," Police Chief Lewis DeVault said Thursday in a brief statement. The victims, 30-year-old Susan Hendricks and her children, aged 5, 7, and 9, were found in their beds late Tuesday. They had died of massive injuries to the head and internal organs, according to an autopsy.

Local news media reported that police had found an ax and a knife in the home, but DeVault would not describe any evidence.

Arraignment delayed for men

DETROIT (AP) — Two men who initially received probation for fatally beating a Chinese-American man are free on $100,000 bond apiece while a lawyer prepares to defend one of them in a new federal trial.

U.S. District Judge Lynn V. Hooe Jr. on Thursday appointed an attorney for Michael Nitz and delayed arraignment until Nov. 18 for him and co-defendant Ronald Ebens, an autoworker. A county judge originally sentenced them to three years' probation and $3,780 in fines for the June 1982 death of Vincent Chin, 27.

An FBI investigation that followed a public outcry led to federal charges that they had violated Chin's civil rights. The death came at the height of the auto industry recession, and witnesses said one of the men who beat Chin apparently believed he was Japanese.

Lawyer placed in psychiatric unit

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Attorney Mary P. Evans, charged with helping her convict-client escape from prison, is being hospitalized in a psychiatric unit but wants details withheld, a spokesman says.

The 26-year-old lawyer was in satisfactory condition Thursday, said George Matthews, a spokesman for Park West Hospital. He would not disclose the reason for or expected length of her stay.

Ms. Evans faces trial in March for allegedly helping convicted murderer William Timothy Kirk, 36, escape March 31 from a psychologist's office where she had taken him for tests. FBI agents arrested them Aug. 17 in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Accident prompts safety checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fatal amusement park accident in Dallas has prompted the Consumer Product Safety Commission to check the safety of carnival rides in three states.

The commission said Thursday it was investigating an Oct. 17 accident at a Dallas amusement park in which one person was killed and several injured when a gondola car on a ride called the Enterprise was dislodged and fell to the ground.

Nancy Harvey Steorts, the commission's chairman, said investigators were also checking Enerprise rides at amusement parks in Valdosta, Ga., West Palm Beach, Fla., and Lakeland, Fla.

Folding gates may be hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Folding gates that are used to prevent babies from falling down stairways may themselves be hazardous, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Preparations are being made to pick foster parents for a 14-month-old AIDS victim, whose name is being withheld. Offers have poured in from the United States and Europe to help the baby find a home. Originally fear of the disease caused foster homes to reject the child, but after her plight was publicized offers of assistance poured in. Child Life Specialist Delia Cano of Miami Jackson Hosptial holds the victim.

Many offers made to help AIDS baby

MIAMI (AP) — So many offers have poured in from the United States and Europe to help a homeless baby with AIDS that officials "have given up tallying," as preparations begin to pick foster parents for her.

The 14-month-old girl, suffering from the disease that breaks down the body's immune system, has spent five months in Jackson Memorial Hospital's pediatrics ward.

Her father has abandoned her, and her 33-year-old Haitian mother died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome three weeks ago.

Originally state health officials said fear of the disease caused about 20 foster homes to reject the tot, but after her plight was publicized this week, offers of assistance have poured in from as far away as England, Norway and California.

Officials "have given up tallying" the number of foster care offers for the frail, wide-eyed little girl expected to survive no longer than three years, said Jay Kassack, district administrator for the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

More than 60 calls from Florida and nearly 200 from other states, Canada and Germany had been recorded, he said.

Kassack said newspapers in England and Oslo, Norway, also have inquired about the toddler, one of fewer than 100 children nationwide with AIDS.

Social workers are starting the formal process of identifying prospective foster parents through home studies and interviews, Kassack said. It will take at least two weeks to place the child, he said.

"Seeing that baby this morning (on television) kind of broke my heart," said Daniel Benoit of Lake Charles, La., an oilfield roughneck. "I'd do anything I can do to help in any way."

The girl, affectionately called "Pumpkin" by the hospital's staff, was admitted in June with symptoms that doctors described as "failure to thrive." But because she was not acutely ill, hospital officials three months ago began trying to place her in foster care so her bed would be available for a sicker child.

State officials were anxious to move her out of the private room, where her care has cost nearly $60,000.

AIDS isn't highly contagious, but doctors believe the illness can be transmitted through intimate contact and that the baby probably got the disease from her mother.

"The child is doing well right now," said pediatrician Dr. Gwen Scott. "She has no acute illness, but will require love, care and stimulation to improve her developmental status."

Surgery donated for TV

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (AP) — A physician whose offer of a vasectomy brought $75 in a public TV station's fund-raising auction says he donated the surgery because "Basically, what else do I have to offer?"

Dr. A.E. Miller Jr.'s unusual donation was snapped up by a viewer Wednesday night during station KISU's week-long money drive.

"One physician in Pocatello was giving away a nose job," said Miller, of Blackfoot. "A vasectomy is a commodity people buy. If I were in the potato business and offered 100 pounds of spuds, that wouldn't startle you, would it?"

Miller said he's offered the operation in recent years as a door prize to Ducks Unlimited, a hunters' group. But while the service is "invaluable," it's never been cashed in, he said.

"It's always been won by a man in his 70s," Miller said.

"If this can be my contribution to mankind and Channel 10, then it's for a good cause," he added.

Day to remember

Ironically, today as Americans celebrate Veterans' Day — or Armistice Day — events in Lebanon and in the Caribbean in recent weeks have created a new wave of combat veterans in the United States.

The annual observance, of course, is intended to pay homage to those who served in past wars. That will be done in Midland and around the nation as it is every year to recognize patriotic service to the nation.

November is a month dedicated to veterans. The U.S. Senate adopted a resolution Oct. 4 designating this week, beginning last Sunday, National Disabled Veterans Week. That resolution asked President Reagan to issue a proclamation calling on all government agencies and Americans to observe the week with appropriate programs, ceremonies and activities.

The other observance this month involved Vietnam veterans. It's was the five-day national convention of Vietnam Veterans of America held in Washington, D.C.

During this month of activity regarding veterans, it's particularly important for each American to reflect on what the service of these millions of individuals have meant to their personal lives. Veterans' Day is not to be taken lightly, because freedom is not to be taken lightly.

Americans should be particularly thoughtful of the Marines killed in the recent terrorist bombing in Beirut, Lebanon, and in the invasion of Grenada. Their lives and service were given for all of their countrymen.

Remember all American veterans this day and the sacrifices they made for you.

Argentina's new day

Argentina appears to have rid itself of the ghost of Juan Peron. If the defeat of the Peronists in the recent election is the sea-change that commentators think it is, there is reason to hope that Argentina finally can make a go of democracy.

Raul Alfonsin and his Radical Civic Union have wooed the Argentine working class away from the romantic promises of Peronism. This is the first time in nearly half a century that the Argentinians have been able to break the spell cast by Juan Peron or one of his wives. The country has see-sawed between disastrous attempts by the Peronistas to govern and rescue missions by military coups. The last Peronist government survived for only three years, and was succeeded in 1976 by a heavy-handed military government.

Alfonsin has the charisma that is essential in Argentine politics, but he has coupled it with a realism toward the country's problems that is new to the scene. A majority of the voters apparently no longer believe in the kind of miracles which the Peronist candidate, Italo Luder, was promising.

There are no miraculous cures for what ails Argentina. Its $40 billion foreign debt is the third largest in the world. Its inflation rate is off the charts. Some of its major industrial firms are on the brink of collapse. What the country needs is a heavy dose of economic discipline — and Alfonsin can claim a mandate to administer it.

The new government hopes to renegotiate the terms of its huge debt, and should find a sympathetic response among international bankers if it can show the will to follow through on economic reforms. The surge of trading on the stock market in Buenos Aires recently is a gauge of the optimism which the election outcome has generated.

The United States can hope for an improvement in relations with Argentina as the shift to civilian government is carried out. In his foreign policy, Alfonsin needs to assure his neighbors that there will be no more nationalistic adventures like the invasion of the Falkland Islands. A lower military budget will have more than an economic benefit if it helps contain the ambitions of Argentine generals.

River monster lives!

The U.S. Senate buried the Clinch River breeder reactor last week. But it did not drive a wooden stake into the heart of the monster, and the Reagan administration may agree with Clinch River's best friend, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., that there "is a flicker of hope left." The project still could rise some night and sink its teeth back into the U.S. Treasury.

The breeder reactor has been in a state of permanent groundbreaking for years. It never had much going for it, except the majority leader and a dogged hope that it might keep a promise that other nuclear technologies could not — that fission power would eventually make electricity too cheap to meter.

Over the years the potential price tag for a single experimental plant in Clinch River, Tenn., rose from an estimated $700 million in 1970 to what critics now say is $8.4 billion, and what even its supporters admit is $4.1 billion.

During that time the project, which is designed to create more plutonium than it burns (hence the name breeder), deepened concern among those who believe that the world already has more weapons-grade fissionable material than makes sense.

Finally, with the demand for electricity virtually flat, the General Accounting Office estimated that no breeder reactor would be commercially useful for 40 years.

The Reagan administration persisted, supporting an arrangement under which private investors would pay the bulk of the costs for finishing the plant while the federal government would guarantee them against loss. The Congressional Budget Office suggested last month that this approach would cost more than if the government simply paid for the plant itself.

With that much evidence before them, a coalition of the cost-conscious and the bomb-conscious in the Senate defeated Clinch River, 56-40. "We put some money down a rat hole," said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., who led the fight against continuing the project, "and decided not to spend any more."

But the breeder project has seemed safely buried before, only to be dug up and revived. Continued vigilance is indicated, particularly when the moon is full.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Election prelude to revolution?

WASHINGTON — Intelligence sources raise two equally alarming possibilities in the wake of the election of moderate Radical Party leader Raul Alfonsin as president of Argentina: a military coup to prevent his scheduled December inauguration or renewed leftist terrorism if he makes it into office.

Jack Anderson

I sent my associate Dale Van Atta to Buenos Aires to look behind the scenes of Argentina's first election in 10 years. He spoke to both Argentine and American sources and found they shared the same concerns over the country's future.

Heading the secret agenda of a recent meeting of the U.S. Embassy's "Intelligence Group" — senior Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency and Foreign Service officers — was this ominous item: "Possibility of military intervention prior to inauguration."

The sources would not estimate the likelihood of a military coup but they agreed that Alfonsin's landslide victory over Peronist candidate Italo Luder was probably the best deterrent to the generals and admirals. His clear popular mandate is in sharp contrast to the public's contempt for the top military brass, which capped years of misrule with a humiliating defeat in the Falklands war.

The chief cause of apprehension is Alfonsin's emphatic pledge to bring the top brass to book for the disappearance of perhaps 20,000 Argentines during the anti-leftist "dirty war" of the 1970s. If he persists in this determination, the military may move in to save their own skins. The armed services are still controlled by men with plenty to hide. It seems improbable that they'll hold still for open public disgrace.

That's why many military leaders quietly backed the Peronist candidate. Luder indicated he might be willing to make a deal with the generals, in the tradition of Peronist-military back-scratching that has endured through four decades of seesaw power.

Alfonsin dropped no such comforting hints. But he will undoubtedly have to compromise, probably by prosecuting enough of the responsible military leaders to set an example, but not so many that the entire officer corps feels threatened.

The second item on the Intelligence Group's agenda was "Terrorism potential after inauguration." In the worst of the "dirty war," leftist terrorists murdered 800 Argentine officials and family members.

The biggest terrorist group was the Montoneros. They were originally Peronist-backed and, in fact, dozens of them marched in hoods at a pre-election party rally. Though some in the crowd gave them the Argentine equivalent of a Bronx cheer, the Montoneros still have Peronist supporters who may turn to terrorism to avenge the party's election defeat.

The election and its immediate aftermath were surprisingly non-violent, considering the bitterness manifest in the campaign. Peronist posters depicted Alfonsin as the "Coca Cola candidate" — a puppet of Ronald Reagan, multinational corporations and Jews. The Star of David over his head was a clear appeal for the anti-Semitic vote.

The wealthy aristocrats backed Alfonsin, whose left-of-center views suited them better than the radical populist rhetoric of his opponent. In conversations with my associate at an exclusive club, several members of the upper crust referred to the Peronist party as "a zoo," and its supporters as "animals let out of their cages."

Interestingly, according to intelligence sources, both presidential candidates received modest covert campaign contributions from the CIA, which was hedging its bets on the outcome.

FEUD OF THE WEEK: There's no love lost between Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker. Kemp has privately complained to President Reagan about Volcker's tight-fisted monetary policy. And, the other day, the congressman carried the feud to the House floor. What ignited the rhetorical blast was Volcker's suggestion that he might be willing to reduce interest rates if Congress "did the responsible thing" to cut the deficit. The remark was made privately to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Kemp was outraged. He interpreted Volcker's remark to mean a tax increase, which Volcker is known to favor — but which no elected official wants to enact in a campaign year. "It is absolutely imperative," Kemp thundered, "that the U.S. Congress on a bipartisan basis send a signal to Paul Volcker... that we expect interest rates to come down right now, not later, not after a deal is made but right now."

HELP FOR ASIA: President Reagan is about to recommend a "free-trade zone" between the United States and four friendly Asian nations: Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and the Philippines. Goods and services would flow both ways without any tariffs or quotas. The idea is to help the Asian nations' economic growth.

Textiles would be excluded from the free-trade plan; electronics and other manufactured goods would be the main items coming into this country.

But the plan will run into heavy fire on Capitol Hill, where critics will charge that it won't bring much benefit to the United States, and will result in a net loss of American jobs.

Jack Anderson writes for United Feature Syndicate.

INSIDE REPORT:

Assad views Reagan — darkly

DAMASCUS — President Hafez L. Assad's scorn for American fist-shaking along his Mediterranean border should not be mistaken for fear just because, without public announcement, he ordered full mobilization of Syria's 400,000-man army Monday.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Talking to an American friend behind closed doors over the weekend, Assad heaped ridicule on President Reagan's recent statement that the U.S. has "vital interests" in Lebanon, a country that used to be an historical part of Syria. It is Israel, he said to the American friend in a private conversation, that wants expansion, not Syria.

That such sentiments fall on deaf ears in Washington shows the depths of the danger that now stalks the Eastern Mediterranean littoral. As perceived in this capital of a powerful, dynamic Arab police state, that danger goes beyond possible new conflict between Syria and Israel, with or without American participation. The core is whether the Lebanon crisis and its redoubling of the American affinity for Israel, regardless of Arab viewpoints, are rushing the U.S. headlong into permanent hostility from the most powerful and feared Arab state – and beyond that the Arab world.

Assad talks mildly, sometimes wittily, but there is little that is mild or witty in the scorn he heaps on the Reagan administration's handling of the Lebanon issue. During the latest crisis over Lebanon, in which Israel's 1982 invasion has thoroughly enmeshed the U.S., his talk exhibits toughness, a refusal to genuflect to Washington and genuine confidence.

"Israel and George Shultz (the U.S. secretary of state) have dealt Assad several aces he never had before," a top European diplomat told us. That explains the confidence. Assad's Western borders are now lined with late-model Soviet anti-aircraft missiles where before there were only Soviet castoffs, increasing his military power; he has proved his influence on the potent dissident factions, mainly Shiite and Druze, who refuse to take orders from Lebanon's U.S.-backed Maronite president, Amin Geyamel – and Israel; his flippant dismissal of what all Arabs regard as the one-sided Israeli-Lebanon troop withdrawal agreement has stopped the U.S. in its tracks, forcing mobilization of one of the greatest naval task forces since World War II.

Assad correctly predicted that Camp David would result in a separate peace between Israel and Egypt. Israeli occupation of his own Golan Heights is a matter he has put on the shelf, insisting that a comprehensive Arab-Israeli settlement, including the West Bank, is the only way to deal with Israel's occupation of Arab lands.

When asked why he does not accept the May 17 Israeli-Lebanon troop withdrawal agreement (which he wickedly calls "Camp Shultz"), he counters by asking why the U.S. has abandoned the U.N. Security Council resolution it voted for that demanded immediate Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon well over one year ago. Syrian politicians say that not much is heard from Washington about that resolution.

Assad's scorn is tinged with ridicule. Talking privately, he recently derided President Reagan's definition of the Lebanon crisis as a shootout in the East-West corral. That, he said, may explain U.S. naval gunfire against anti-Gemayel forces at Suk al Gharb, which is Arabic for West Market.

American confrontation with Syria, resulting from Israel's invasion of Lebanon, has nevertheless created a difficulty for Assad. The difficulty, ironically, worsens the problem that President Reagan wants the confrontation to cure: rising Soviet power in the Middle East.

Ever since the U.S. began to flex its military muscle along the Syrian-Lebanese shores, the Soviets have exerted more pressure on Assad to let them show the depths of their love for Syria. That means Soviet-controlled bases and Soviet extra-territorial rights to airfields in Syria.

Assad has held the downfield position over Moscow in this penetration effort. But if the fist-shaking from Washington, cheered on by Jerusalem, comes to blows, Assad fears that the downfield position may go to Yuri Andropov. That would move Assad closer to the position he has skillfully avoided thus far — the position that some Foggy Bottom analysts claim he is already in: that of Soviet puppet.

The sickies you can't do anything about since their real problem is neither hunting nor hunters but some little demon in ther own little heads that causes them to hate people more than they love animals.

This column is for those of you who simply are unfamiliar with hunting as it is really done, as opposed to the way it is often protrayed on television.

When you talk about hunters "slaughtering" deer, you have no idea how much laughter this produces among experienced deer hunters. The success rate in deer hunting is roughly 5 to 10 percent. In other words, the overwhelming majority of deer hunters of which I am one hunt with the same unfired bullets each year.

Deer are not fierce, though they are really not like Bambi either. But all deer are very fast, very keen of nose and eye and ear, and very good at eluding hunters. I suspect deer keep calendars with the hunting seasons marked. You can scout woods the day before the hunting season and see lots of deer sign and even deer. But as soon as the season opens they seem to vanish into a time warp.

Modern hunting is employed as a scientific game management tool, a means of harvesting the deer so that the herd will stay of a size in a given habitat to be healthy. The proof that this works is that there are today more deer, despite an alarmingly shrinking habitat, than there were 100 years ago in the Eastern United States.

The various game management agencies ordinarily take a "census" of the deer herd before and after each hunting season. If the herd is growing too fast, they may allow hunters to take a few more than the normal limit; if the herd is too small, they will close the area to hunting or limit the game you can take.

Today it would be impossible to manage deer without hunting. The deer's natural predators, the panther and the wolf, are gone. Without a hunting season, the herds would multiply until they overpopulated their habitat and died of starvation and disease. Believe — a hunter's bullet is far more merciful.

Most deer are killed with one shot. Today's firearms are very reliable and no good hunter will leave a wounded animal, even if it means tracking him for hours in terrible terrain.

You may ask, if 90 percent of the deer hunters come home empty-handed, why do they do it? Well, that's the real key. You see hunting is one of those things that is a pleasurable activity in itself. That's why it's called hunting, not killing. Being outdoors from dawn to dusk, matching your eyesight and wits against those of the deer on the deer's turf, sitting around the campfire enjoying the comradeship of your companions — that's the pleasure of the hunt. If you are successful, it's meat for the freezer but hunting is one of the few things you can enjoy while not being successful. Maybe hunters are more philosophical. Very few people would play tennis if they had to go two or three years without winning a match, but deer hunters don't seem to mind. There's always next season.

If you care for wildlife, you should support hunting and help us hunters combat the single biggest threat to American game animals — loss of habitat. Hunters are animal lovers, too. We don't shoot much and we eat what we shoot.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1919, the first Armistice Day was celebrated.

Ten years ago: Egypt and Israel signed a six-point cease-fire agreement sponsored by the United States and began direct discussions on carrying out the accord.

Five years ago: More than $250,000 worth of jewelry was taken from Bloomingdale's department store in New York City in an apparent burglary.

One year ago: The space shuttle Columbia was launched, and later that day deployed the first of two satellites it was carrying.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Jonathan Winters is 58. Actress Jane Alexander is 44. And actor Philip McKeon is 19.

Thought for today: "Delays have dangerous ends." — William Shakespeare (1564-1616).

U.S. members of the multi-national peacekeeping force drive past liberation graffiti in St. George's, Grenada.

Many rifles confiscated on Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. Army spokesmen say invading troops on Grenada confiscated 5 million rounds of ammunition, 29 tons of TNT and 6,322 rifles — at least three for each soldier believed to have been in the island's army.

Capt. David Boggs, a spokesman for the U.S. Army Command on Grenada, said Thursday that the captured rifles included AK-47 models, the standard issue for Soviet bloc infantries.

The size of the People's Revolutionary Army, Grenada's military force under pro-Cuban Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, has been estimated at 800 to 2,000 men. However, Bishop, who was slain Oct. 19 during a coup, had talked of raising a militia of 20,000.

U.S. officials say Bishop later scaled the size of his envisioned militia by half, but admit they have no estimate of the size of Bishop's standing army or of the militia at the time of the invasion. But they say some 1,800 army soldiers and militiamen have surrendered.

In 1981, U.S. diplomats in the Caribbean estimated the standing army at 2,000 members.

The Reagan administration, trying to win support for the U.S.-led invasion of the island Oct. 25, said after the operation: "We have discovered a complete base of weapons...which makes it clear a Cuban occupation of the island had been planned."

U.S. intelligence had not detected the arsenal before the invasion, which the Reagan administration said was undertaken to protect U.S. citizens on the island from a radical Marxist military junta which seized power.

Many of the rifles were found in caches or warehouses near the Point Salines airport being built by Cubans. President Reagan had claimed the new runway would be used by Soviet and Cuban warplanes. Cuba said its people were there to develop the island, not occupy it.

On Oct. 28, Reagan said the arsenal was big enough to "supply thousands of terrorists."

The other rifles were taken from captured Cuban and Grenadian soldiers, the Army said.

In the confiscated arsenal, according to Boggs, were 5 million rounds of ammunition, 111 machine guns, 13 anti-aircraft guns, 65 mortars, 68 rocket propelled grenades, and 29 tons of TNT. U.S. troops blew up part of the explosives Thursday.

The soldiers also continued searching for resisters believed to be hiding in the rolling hills and volcanic ridges southeast of St. George's, the capital. Army officials say a handful of Cuban or Grenadian snipers fired at U.S. troops on Tuesday and Wednesday.

U.S. officials said Thursday that 220 Grenadians are in custody on the island, most of them soldiers and politicians of the short-lived military government.

Diplomat's wife discusses invasion

HAVANA (AP) — The American-born wife of Cuba's ambassador to Grenada says the detention of Cubans in the embassy after the U.S.-led invasion was "a gross and flagrant violation of diplomatic immunity."

Gail Reed Rizo

Chicago-born Gail Reed Rizo, in an interview Thursday, described how U.S. troops surrounded the Cuban Embassy and said the people inside were held prisoner until evacuated under Red Cross protection back to Havana.

"There were women and three children inside the embassy and I was particularly concerned about their safety," she said.

Mrs. Rizo, 35, returned to Cuba aboard a repatriation flight Tuesday, one day before her husband, Ambasssador Julian Rizo, left Grenada with those who had remained in the embassy.

She said U.S. forces conducted "unprecedented" body searches and examined the baggage of women and children who asked to leave the embassy and return to Cuba.

Mrs. Rizo said she and her son were thoroughly searched, including their nose and ears.

"They read every piece of paper in my purse," she said. "The diapers of a 15-month-old baby were also examined."

Two Cubans stayed in St. George's to arrange for the identification and return of those Cubans who died in the conflict with U.S.-led forces who invaded Grenada on Oct. 25 to topple a week-old Marxist military regime.

Mrs. Rizo first visited Cuba in 1970 with the "Venceremos" brigade to help harvest sugar cane. As a student, she said, she had protested American involvement in Viet Nam and was a member of Students for a Democratic Society.

While in Cuba she met Rizo, who was with the Foreign Ministry at the time. The two met again in New York after he was assigned there as first secretary to the Cuban delegation to the United Nations.

Seven million Peruvians expected to cast ballots

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru — Despite guerrilla threats of bloodshed, more than 7 million Peruvians are expected to vote Sunday in nationwide municipal elections testing three years of democracy under President Fernando Belaunde Terry.

Voters in one of the guerrillas' strongholds face a particularly difficult choice. They have been threatened with death by the rebels if they vote and arrest by the government if they do not.

The military commander of Ayacucho, an embattled state capital in the Andes, has ordered the arrest of anyone who appears on the street Sunday without a voter registration card. The Maoist guerrillas of the Shining Path, strongest in the area around Ayacucho, have issued repeated threats against people who vote.

Many opposition politicians, meanwhile, are looking toward presidential elections in 1985 and have declared Sunday's balloting a plebiscite on Belaunde's administration.

"The people will vote against the government because of its unpopular economic policies," said Social Democrat leader Alan Garcia, whose opposition party is forecast to win many of the 1,700 mayoral races, possibly including Lima's.

But Belaunde has declared the elections a victory for democracy and a blow against terrorism.

"No matter what happens, they are taking place," he said.

The municipal elections are the second since Belaunde took office in 1980, ending 12 years of military rule. They are only the fourth of the century, the other two held during Belaunde's first term before he was deposed in a military coup in 1968.

Belaunde has rejected accusations his government has mismanaged the economy and failed to stem terrorism.

But the government is struggling to renegotiate $350 million in foreign loans and has reserves of less than $1 billion. A projected drop in the gross national product, annual inflation of 120 percent and 30 percent unemployment are expected to be reflected at the polls.

The guerrilla war launched the Shining Path has taken more than 2,500 lives, blacked out Lima three times, forced a 100-day national emergency and brought charges of repression by police and armed forces in trying to hunt down the rebels.

Belaunde's Popular Action Party has been trailing the Social Democrats in public opinion polls for several months, indicating slippage from the 35 percent the government candidates won in 1980 municipal elections. The Social Democrats finished then with 22.6 percent.

Voting is expected to be light in south central Peru around Ayacucho, 350 miles southeast of Lima, where absenteeism was 48 percent in 1980.

Last December, the president assigned Brig. Gen. Roberto Clemente Noel y Moral to establish military control over 4,000-square miles of territory around the city.

Under a state of emergency to combat the guerrillas, Noel y Moral established a 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew, suspended civil rights, banned campaign rallies, prohibited posters and limited speeches to radio and television and subject to military censorship.

More than 40 candidates in the Ayacucho area have resigned for fear of guerrilla reprisals.

The guerrillas, saying they will disrupt the elections and warning Peruvians not to vote, have killed one mayor and wounded another.

Peruvians between 18 and 60 are required to vote.

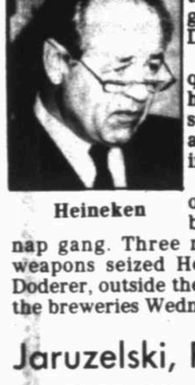

Under new regulations for the Ayacucho region, those who do not vote risk losing many rights, including: holding a public or private job, practicing a profession, withdrawing money from the bank, signing contracts, holding a passport, getting married or registering births, registering in a state university or receiving a degree and traveling within Peru.

About 150,000 of more than 7.5 million voters are affected by the military regulations.

Ransom sought for Heineken

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Holland's largest newspaper reported today that a ransom of more than $8 million has been demanded for the release of kidnapped multimillionaire brewer Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur.

Heineken

The unattributed report was carried in morning editions of the Amsterdam daily De Telegraaf. It was not confirmed by Dutch officials.

At Amsterdam police headquarters, a spokesman said: "I have no comment on the story. At the demand of the abductors, we don't give any information to the press."

De Telegraaf based its story on a message relayed to the brewery Thursday by the kidnap gang. Three men armed with automatic weapons seized Heineken and his driver, Ab Doderer, outside the Amsterdam headquarters of the breweries Wednesday evening.

Jaruzelski, Rusakov meet

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski met with Soviet Communist Party Central Committee Secretary Konstantin Rusakov, the highest-ranking Kremlin official to visit Warsaw in more than two years, Polish newspapers said today.

They said during the meeting Thursday the "two sides examined problems concerning expansion of all-around ties between the Polish United Workers' (Communist) Party and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

The reports, which were the first news of Rusakov's visit, did not indicate the nature of the "problems" between the two parties.

Six arrested at missile base

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — Six women with bolt-cutters were arrested today as they tried to cut through a perimeter fence at the cruise missile base here, police said.

The women were the latest of more than 200 to be arrested since launchers and communication equipment for the missiles began arriving 10 days ago at the base, 50 miles west of London.

The missiles themselves, and their 200 kiloton warheads, each 16 times as powerful as the bomb that leveled Hiroshima, are yet to arrive, but a shipment of 16 is expected within the next two weeks. They are to become operational before Dec. 31.

Four Italian casinos raided

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Customs and security agents swept into all four of Italy's casinos in late-night raids aimed at cracking down on money-laundering, judicial authorities said today.

Armed policemen blocked exits and checked identities of hundreds of gamblers in the casinos at San Remo, Saint Vincent, Campione d'Italia and Venice, all in northern Italy.

The officers checked serial numbers of banknotes the gamblers had exchanged for chips and seized the gambling houses' record books, police said.

Police sources said at least 15 people were taken into custody.

Earthquake shakes Japan

TOKYO (AP) — An earthquake of moderate strength shook northern Japan today, but there were no immediate reports of any damage or casualties, national police said.

The Central Meteorological Agency said the quake's epicenter was in the Pacific Ocean six miles off the coast of Iwate state.

The agency said the quake registered 5.5 on the Richter scale, a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake as measured by ground motion. A reading of 5.5 indicates the potential for "considerable" damage.

Irish police reservist killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gunmen killed a Roman Catholic police reservist at his home near the border with the Irish Republic, police said today. He was the fourth Northern Ireland policeman slain in seven days.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said two gunmen shot William Fitzpatrick, 46, on Thursday night as he was doing building work on his home, in a remote location several miles from the fishing village of Annalong in County Down.

The two gunmen fired through a window, hitting him in the head and neck, and then fled on a motorcycle, police said. They said Fitzpatrick was a Catholic.

The majority of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force, is Protestant. No group immediately claimed responsibility but suspicion fell on guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army.

Aquino's alleged assassin buried in same cemetery

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rolando Galman, who police say killed opposition leader Benigno Aquino, was buried today in the same cemetery as Aquino after a noisy funeral march attended by thousands of government opponents proclaiming his innocence.

While his mother and 10-year-old son sobbing aloud, Galman was laid to rest simply, without a religious ceremony.

"I swear to God my son didn't do it," cried Saturnina Galman, 53, dressed in black. "My son was a good man.

"To the Filipino people, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. My son. My son. I love you, my son," she chanted mournfully before she was led away from the suburban Manila Memorial Park by daughter Marilyn, 21, and other relatives.

Galman, 33, was gunned down moments after Aquino, the chief political rival of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, was shot and killed at Manila's airport on Aug 21. Military authorities at first said Galman was a hoodlum hired by communist subversives to kill Aquino, but they now say he was himself a communist uerrila.

Aquino followers accuse the government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos of complicity in the killing — a charge Marcos repeatedly has denied.

A green pickup truck served as a hearse as Galman's body was transported from a working-class funeral parlor, through the downtown Makati business district and out to the cemetery.

It's playoff time...Win or take inventory

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech's 47,000-seat Jones Stadium holds two Class 5A bi-district keys for four of West Texas' best high school football teams. Win here Saturday or start taking inventory. There's no second chance from here on out.

Midland Lee's Rebels, making its first playoff trip in seven years, will take on the Amarillo High Golden Sandies at 1:30 p.m. while Odessa Permian will take on the Hereford Whitefaces in a 7 p.m. outing. It's District 4-5A vs. District 3-5A. The two winners will advance to the area round of the playoffs against the two emerging bi-district winners in El Paso.

ALTHOUGH LEE is seeded as the No. 2 team from 4-5A and AHS the No. 1 team from 3-5A, the Rebels are favored to bring home its second bi-district championship in the school's history. Lee won a bi-district contest in 1976 against Euless Trinity. Amarillo's last trip to the playoffs was in 1980 when they lost to Permian in the quarterfinals.

The state of Texas has whittled down the 300-plus Class 5A schools to a mere 64. Bi-district winners will then be members of the elite 32 and so on until a state champion is determined in December. A team must win six playoff games to become the state champion. Losers go home.

The winner of the Lee-AHS outing Saturday will face next weekend the winner of the all-El Paso matchup between Irvin and Bel Air, a game that is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. MST today in the Sun Bowl.

When the playoffs start, there are really no favorites since this is a one-shot, do-or-die situation. Both Lee coach Spike Dykes and Amarillo coach Larry Dipple expect this one to be a tough game to win.

"Amarillo is an excellent defensive team. They have great size and once this season produced a string of 17 scoreless quarters," said Dykes. "I don't care if you have been playing junior high teams, that's a good defensive team. They certianly have not been playing junior high teams."

Dipple also sees a major strength at Lee, "Awesome is the word for Lee. I think they may have the best offensive line in high school football. Defensively, Lee is solid and built around that fine middle linebacker Michael Johnson."

LEE DRAWS the favored role from games played between common opponents. Lee defeated Odessa High by a 14-9 count while AHS lost to the Bronchos by a 14-7 margin. Lee ripped Lubbock Coronado by a 35-7 count while AHS dropped a 13-12 decision to the Mustangs. Lee is also 8-2 on the year while the Sandies are 6-3.

Lee's two losses have come to San Angelo (14-9) and to Abilene Cooper (23-21) while the Sandies' other setback came against Amarillo Palo Duro 27-0.

Amarillo actually finished in a four-way tie for first place in 3-5A with a 6-2 district record. The Sandies, however, were named as the top 3-5A squad by virtue of victories over Hereford (17-7), Plainview (3-0) and Lubbock Monterey (7-3). Hereford won the No. 2 spot in a flipoff with Plainview and Monterey. Permian won the 4-5A title outright with a 6-1 loop mark to Lee's 5-2 reading.

"Everyone I talk to says Lee is the best team in 4-5A. After all, they beat No. 1 (Permian), didn't they?" said Dipple. "It doesn't feel like you're playing a No. 2 team."

On paper, the Rebels appear to have a big edge offensively while the Sandies have a slight edge defensively. Lee has outscored Amarillo by a 289-137 margin this year, but it must be noted that the Sandies played one less game. Defensively, Lee has given up 72 points in 10 games while AHS has given up only 64 in nine outings.

Offensively, Lee has averaged 332.1 yards per outing while Amarillo has totaled 226.7 per game. Both offensive teams are highly rush motivated. Lee has 2,893 yards rushing this year and only 294 passing. The Sandies have compiled 1,480 rushing and another 561 passing.

LEE FULLBACK Isaac Garnett stands alone when it comes to individual effort. Garnett has rushed for 1,397 yards and 17 touchdowns this season. But Lee also has halfbacks Walter Jones with 428 yards and Tyrone Thurman with 306 and quarterback Jeff Motley with 222. In addition, Lee has Billy Gibbs (202), Gordon Norris (129) and Randy Ellis (102).

Amarillo High's key is tailback Scotty Reasonover, who has rushed for 769 yards in nine games for 12 TDs. Fullback Thomas Huyck is the only other Sandie rusher over 300 yards this year. Quarterback Russell Ringo has thrown for 447 yards, completing 32 of 98 passes and has had only one interception. The main target in the passing attack is Kyle Carter, who has caught 11 passes for 226 yards. Carter is also the punter with a 36.4 average. Both teams have thrown only two TD passes this year.

Defensively, AHS has given up a mere 196.7 yards per game in nine outings while Lee has given up 201.3 yards in 10 games. One of the defensive keys for Amarillo is 220-pound defensive tackle David Scott, who has turned in 102 tackles in nine games. He is a good one.

Despite missing 2½ games this year with a leg injury, Lee linebacker Michael Johnson has been in on 103 tackles, 17 unassisted. He also has an interception, eight tackles for losses and two quarterback sacks.

Two other Rebel defenders of note have been end Eddie Kittle with 47 tackles, seven for losses and two sacks; and safety Andre Mayfield with 36 tackles, 17 unassisted, three interceptions, three fumble recoveries and he broke up six passes.

Amarillo is fit and sound for Saturday's game. Coach Dipple said his entire team is ready to play while Dykes said Glenn Starnes with a thigh bruise and Matt Mabe with a hurt shoulder are questionalbe for the Rebels. Starnes and Mabe are both special team members.

Lee quarterback Motley missed two days of practice with a knee that was hurt against Midland High, but may have reinjured that leg Thursday in practice. His status was unknown late Thursday.

Garnett also suffered a mild leg injury, but has not missed practice. Guard Devoe McMillen, who has a broken hand, will not be able to punt again this week, but will play. Tim Wright, who punted for Lee last week, will use his bare foot technique again this Saturday. Linebacker Scott Hicks has a broken thumb, but is ready to play. Both McMillen and Hicks have been working out this week.

ONE OF the big blessings for Lee is that linebackers Johnson and Reggie Ellis are both well at the same time again. They played last week against MHS and appear to be well after coming off leg injuries.

The game will be broadcast by radio locally on both KCRS-AM and KBAT-FM with Dick Baize and Ed Clements providing the coverage.

The AHS-Lee game will be televised by KOSA-TV on a delayed basis at 10:30 p.m. Saturday. The Permian-Hereford game will be shown Monday at 11 p.m. Gary Hopper and Jeff Schull will be the TV announcers for both games.

Tickets may be purchased at the gate Saturday for $5 each. All tickets are general admission.

Chaps roll over St. Philip's

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland College Chaparrals met little resistance in their opening game of the 1983 Chaparral Classic Thursday night, rolling to a 102-68 victory over St. Philip's.

It was a close contest for the first few minutes — very few. The Chaps took the outright lead at 4-2, increased it to 12-5 and then left the Tigers in their dust. MC built up a 58-40 edge by halftime and only let St. Philip's cut into the 18-point margin once in the second half, 66-50, before giving up four unanswered buckets for a 77-50 edge.

IT WAS hard to tell how good Midland College played, the opposition being far outclassed, as the Chaps dominated nearly every category of the game. For the Tigers, only Tommy Lee did any real damage, coming off the bench for 22 points. Kevin Blount followed with 12 and Darrell Johnson and Donald Tucker had 11 each There were only 14 points added from the remaining five players in the game.

The Chaps, on the other hand, came up with points from all 13 players in the game led by Teviin Binns and Chuckie Graves with 14 apiece. Jackie Phinnessee added another 12, Brian Essary 11 and Zeak Williams 10. Midland College did draw more fouls than St. Philip's, 26-19, but hit 20-of-28 free throws compared to the Tigers' 18-of-29.

"I really think that we played a team that wasn't real strong," said Chaps head coach Jerry Stone, "but I did think we improved a lot from our first game (a 94-82 victory over Cisco Monday). Overall, we settled down and hit some shots that didn't seem to drop in the first one."

This year's Chaparral Classic is being played under a new single-elimination format to determine the tournament winner from a field of eight teams. In years past, MC, Howard College and Odessa College would each contend themselves with playing non-Western Junior College Athletic Association teams in a round-robin format.

"With eight teams, we've got something to fight for that we haven't had," said Stone.

IN THE tournament's opening game, Odessa College knocked of McLennan Community College 96-93 followed by Barton County Community College holding off a fierce Howard College rally for an 83-79 win, MC's win over St. Philip's and Garden City defeated Ranger 82-74.

For the Wranglers, Dewayne Chism led both teams with 25 points while Lavelle Wilson added 16, Luther Burks and Tommie Bolden 13 each, Bruce Nedd 11 and Patrick Faris 10.

Arthur Williams led McLennan with 21 points while Brian Mattson and Calvin Carrier chipped in 18 each and Terence Woods 11.

Barton's Cougars were led by Wayne Montgomery with 25 points, Tommy Johnson, Andre Harris and Leon White with 14 each and Steve Stokes with 12. For the Howard Hawks, Dwight Harris and Jerry Stroman did all the damage with 36 and 26 points respectively.

For Garden City, Marc Houston set the pace with 22 points, closely followed by Andre Ervin with 21, Alton Taylor with 18 and William Feazell with 14. Jerry Thomas led Ranger with 24 points while Tim Ford was the only other in double figures with 12.

Today's tournament action opened in the loser's bracket with McLennan and Howard playing at 3 p.m. and St. Philip's against Ranger at 5 p.m. Tonight, Midland and Garden City square off at 7 p.m. followed by Odessa and Barton at 9 p.m.

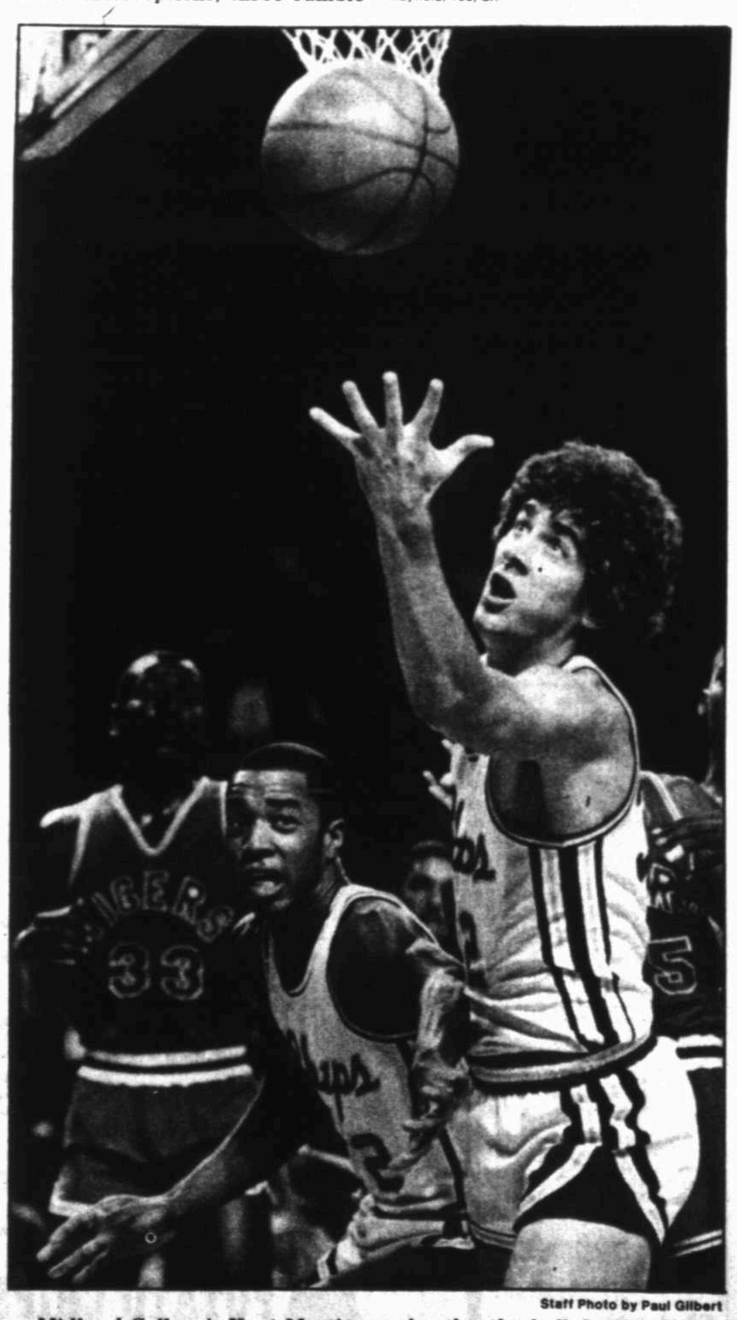

The tournament concludes Saturday with four games. Action starts at 1 p.m.

Marvelous Hagler retains title belt

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — After 13 gruelling rounds, Marvelous Marvin Hagler returned to his corner, feeling pretty good about the way he was handling Roberto Duran's bid to take away his world middleweight championship.

He thought he had been controlling the fight, charging a high price in punishment everytime Duran sought to get inside his eight-inch reach advantage. The title belts Hagler treasures so, seemed safe to him.

"I couldn't see him beating me," the champion said.

It was then that Hagler got some bad news from his handlers, Goody and Pat Petronelli.

"My manager and trainer told me, 'We've got to win these last two rounds big,' " he said.

It was if they had peeked at the scorecards of judges Guy Jutras of Canada, Yusaku Yoshida of Japan and Ove Oveson of Denmark because, after 13 rounds Thursday night, they had Hagler's crown tipping perilously toward Duran's corner.

Jutras had the fight even, but Yoshida and Oveson each had Duran ahead by one point.

So, like a craftsman, Hagler went out and tended to business in the final two rounds, winning them on the cards of all three officials to capture a workmanlike but too-close-for-comfort unanimous-decision.

Jutras scored it 144-142, Yoshida 146-145 and Oveson 144-143. The Associated Press' card had Hagler in front, 145-142.

Duran's dream of a history-making fourth championship was shattered by those vital final six minutes and when it was over, Hagler paid tribute to the man he had defeated.

"I'm very proud of myself to beat a man with three world titles," he said. "He's a very gutsy warrior. I give him a lot of credit, but give me a lot of credit, too. This man's a legend."

And for a while, it seemed Duran would add to that legend on a cool November night in the 15,000-seat arena constructed on the tennis courts at Caesars Palace.

Duran started smartly, carrying the fight to the champion in the early rounds. He taunted Hagler and stood toe-to-toe with him, seemingly perfectly happy to slug it out. At one point, Duran almost looked as if he was daring Hagler to hit him. And the champion willingly obliged.

In the fifth round, Duran said, he got into trouble. "I hit him on the head and felt pain in my right hand," the Panamanian said.

After the fight, when promoter Bob Arum tried to grasp the hand, Duran winced in pain and offered his left instead.

If he was hurting during the fight, though, Duran didn't show it. There would be no "No mas," no quitting on this night. He went after Hagler and that fourth world title with all he had, trying the same weapons he had used to lift the lightweight crown from Ken Buchanan in 1972, the welterweight title from Sugar Ray Leonard in 1980 and the junior middleweight title from Davey Moore last June.

Over the course of his career, which started in 1967, Duran has evolved from the street brawler who beat Buchanan to the ring technician who outsmarted Moore.

But Hagler was having none of Duran's tricks.

"I tried not to fall in the traps Davey Moore fell in," Hagler said. "I can see why (Moore lost). He was very clever."

Clever and tenacious and determined. Hagler had said all week that he was a man with a mission, but his own mission was no less important to Duran. A fourth world championship spanning boxing divisions ranging from 135 pounds to 160 pounds would be a truly remarkable and unique accomplishment. And Duran, weighing 156½ pounds, one pound less than Hagler, went after it with a vengeance. He closed the champion's left eye and inflicted his share of damage.

"I didn't expect to come out looking pretty, anyway," Hagler joked. "I started loosening up very late. I realized I had to get my combinations off faster. I had to give up my plans for a knockout and go for the win."

But the bottom line was that Hagler is a true middleweight and Duran was reaching up to that division. "I felt near the end the (extra) weight was a factor on him," Hagler said.

Henderson is given week's court delay

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former pro football star Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson has won a week's delay from a municipal court in answering to five felony sex and drug counts based on his alleged gun-wielding assault on two teen-aged girls.

In tears, the former Dallas Cowboys linebacker earlier in the week gave his 1978 National Conference Championship ring to his attorney, Arnold Barry Gold, and checked himself into the CareUnit Hospital in Orange for what Gold termed "a relapse of chemical dependency."

Henderson, 30, who once admitted having a cocaine habit that cost him $10,000 a week, was free on $16,000 bail Thursday after Municipal Court Judge Elvira S. Austin granted Gold's request for a postponement to review police reports of the alleged incident.

Henderson was charged Wednesday with two counts of false imprisonment and one count each of forced oral copulation, sexual battery and furnishing cocaine to a inor, Deputy District Attorney James Cosper said.

Gold said Henderson "maintains his innocence" of the charges.

Because the allegations include the use of a gun, Cosper said, Henderson could face a maximum of 17 years in prison if convicted of all counts.

Henderson checked himself into CareUnit Hospital on Tuesday "for a relapse of chemical dependency compounded by the worsening effects of a neck fracture sustained while a member of the San Francisco 49ers," Gold said.

"He's very ill," Gold said. "He's in very bad shape."

Henderson, who played in three Super Bowl Games for the Cowboys, was arrested after a 15-year-old girl claimed that he lured her and a 17-year-old paraplegic girl to his apartment.

Hagler shakes identity woes

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Marvelous Marvin Hagler no longer will have to worry about having a public identity problem and Roberto Duran has laid to rest forevermore the nagging ghost of "no mas."

Duran erased that term of cowardice from Panama's Spanish dictionary.

It was a slashing, slambang fight and there were no losers. Only winners.

For Hagler, the awesome-looking, bald-pated warrior out of New York's slum-ridden Bronx, it marked final and complete recognition of him as the worthy middleweight champion of the world.

THREE MILLION people throughout the world, watching on closed circuit TV, saw him rally for a 15-round decision over the rugged and popular Duran at Caesar's Palace and qualify for $5 million-plus in prize money, his first big purse.

The same widespread throng saw the swarthy, bearded Duran, a third grade dropout and one-time street fighter in his native Panama, gain full redemption for quitting in the middle of a bout with Sugar Ray Leonard three years ago while muttering "no mas, no mas" ("No more, no more") in New Orleans.

Cowards don't win 76 fights against the best that can be thrown at them over 15 years. Nor does they take the most destructive shots of a puncher like Hagler for 60 minutes and keep moving in while asking for more.

Duran's own Panamanian countrymen despised and deserted him, denounced him as "quitter," threw stones at his mother's humble home in Panama City and forced him to go into virtual seclusion to avoid public abuse.

For shame.

Those same fair-weather friends rushed to rejoin their fallen hero's bandwagon after he fashioned a remarkable comeback and they crammed into Caesar's outdoor arena Thursday night, waving Panamanian flags and hailing the fighter once again.

"Duran! Duran! Duran!" they shouted in cadence as Roberto slugged it out with the heavily favored Hagler and they raised banners trumpeting their pride in the man they christened "Hands of Stone" one day and "Quitter" the next.

IF ROBERTO Duran recognized the hypocrisy of the demonstration, he never showed a sign of it. He seemed justifiably proud to fight his way back into his countryman's good graces.

The fierce battle was so close, one damaging flurry in the 15th and final round might have rescued victory from defeat.

Duran was leader on two of the three judges' until the bell rang for the 14th.

"My trainer (Pat Patronelli) told me I had to win the last rounds big," said Hagler afterward. "I went after him.

"I think the edge in weight showed on him at the end."

Hagler, who weighed in at 157½, is a natural middleweight. Duran, who scaled 156½, was lightweight champion for eight years before stepping up in class — first as a welterweight, then as a middleweight.

This, the ring seers insisted, would be the determining factor of the fight. In its final analysis, it was.

"I felt I was getting tired around the 12th round," Duran said. "He finished better than I did."

Duran beat a tattoo on the left side of the champion's face with his smashing right throughout the fight, creating a gash over the eye and raising an ugly knot below it.

The confident Hagler, who led a monastic life in training for the defense, started slowly, letting Duran press the fight.

With a 75-inch reach, eight inches longer than that of his foe, Hagler's southpaw attack was like that of a serpeant's tongue, sharp and deadly.

But the man with hands of stone had a jaw to match, and the gutsy Duran absorbed the darts and answered with a swarming, two-fisted assault of his own.

He snapped Hagler's head back. He belted the champion into the ropes. But he paid a price and the quick, sharp-shooting Hagler produced enough firepower to score heavily in the middle rounds before Duran found extra strength and dominated the ninth, 10th and 11th.

ALTHOUGH EXCHANGES at times reached a furious and devastating level, neither fighter was floored or even appeared to be badly shaken.

Hagler was a disciplined yet intense artisan — his shaved head glistening under the lights and his sleek body moving effortlessly over the canvas as he methodically slashed away at his uncompromising target.

Duran was an animal, his thick black hair disheveled and knotted with sweat, snarling at times, late in the bout thrusting out his chin as if to say, "Hit me — you can't hurt me."

In the end, both men were gracious as winner and loser alike — two great pros, two undisputed champions.

Bowls eye SWC teams

By The Associated Press

The heavily favored Southern Methodist Mustangs and Baylor Bears hope to thrill a few more people than the hometown crowds in their Southwest Conference games against Texas Tech and Rice.

The Sugar Bowl has sent a representative to view the No. 7 ranked Mustangs, and scouts from the Liberty, Sun and Bluebonnet Bowls also will be at Texas Stadium Saturday where Southern Methodist is a 19-point pick over Tech.

Scouts from the Bluebonnet and Independence Bowls will be in Waco to see the Bears, who are a 23-point favorite over Rice.

A source has told the Bears that the Independence Bowl "definitely wants" Baylor. And the Aloha Bowl has expressed interest if the Bears defeat Rice.

"We're hoping to go to a bowl game and this game is a key to that," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "It's a situation we'll have to handle properly.

"They'll come in here like a bunch of Kamikaze pilots. They'll give it their best shot. All you have to do is look at what they did against SMU to see they can play well offensively and defensively."

SMU, which has lost only to second-ranked Texas, beat Tech last season because of a bizarre kickoff return.

With the score tied 27-all, Blane Smith fielded a squib kick and lateraled the ball across the field to Bobby Leach on the left sidelines. Leach raced 91 yards untouched to the goal for the touchdown.

"We've got a lot riding on this game," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "It's a big one."

In other SWC games, No. 2 ranked Texas was a five-touchdown choice over Texas Christian in Austin and the Texas Aggies were picked by two points over Arkansas at College Station.

The unbeaten Longhorns will face TCU without guard Doug Dawson, who suffered a leg injury last week in Texas' 9-3 escape from the Houston Cougars.

The 'Horns have won 15 straight games over TCU. The last TCU win came in Austin in 1967.

"TCU has been playing with great effort all year," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "They've lost some tough, close ball games."

TCU Coach Jim Wacker said of Texas: "The Longhorns have the best defensive team in the nation. They are just a great football team, but you never know what's going to happen when you snap that crazy football."

Arkansas hopes to keep its dwindling bowl ambitions alive against the Aggies.

The Razorbacks lost 24-21 to Baylor Saturday, yielding a school record 34 first downs to the Bears.

"A&M's defense held Baylor to 13 points at Waco and we really have our work cut out for us," said Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz.

'Slingers woo Earl Campbell

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The fledgling San Antonio Gunslingers of the United States Football League have made Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell a "substantial offer," The San Antonio Express-News reported today.

Campbell, the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas, said Tuesday he wanted to be traded from the 0-10 Oilers, who have lost 17 straight games.

Gunslingers' owner Clinton Manges said Thursday that Campbell has received a "substantial offer" from the USFL expansion club.

Campbell's agent, Bob Armstrong, said the six-year National Football League veteran was considering the deal, despite having two years to go on his contract with the Oilers.

"Where we stand now is that an offer, a substantial offer, has been made" to Campbell from Manges, Armstrong said Thursday night from his Scottsdale, Ariz., office. "It is a better contract than the one Earl has with the Oilers, and a better one than Eric Dickerson is playing under with the Rams.

Dickerson, the former Southern Methodist All-America, was the Los Angeles Rams' first-round choice in this year's NFL draft and the second player chosen overall.

Armstrong refused to disclose specific terms of the contract. Campbell currently earns $400,000 a year from the Oilers and can collect an additional $100,000 if he fulfills all incentive clauses in his contract.

"I restructured the contract and I think it will benefit both parties. From a conceptual standpoint, I think it's one of the finest contracts I've ever seen. And from the money standpoint, it's one of the best I've ever seen," said Armstrong.

Campbell had been scheduled to meet with Gunslingers' officials today, but the meeting was put off to give him more time to think about the deal, Armstrong said.

"It has nothing to do with the offer itself," Armstrong said. "Earl just personally feels that everything is going too fast. He needs a little more time."

Houston General Manager Ladd Herzeg has said he hopes Campbell will continue to play for his club, but would not say any more until he had discussed the situation with Campbell.

Campbell has an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment.

Bob Hyde, Oilers director of public relations, said Thursday night that "Mr. Herzeg has stated he will have no further comment until he has a meeting with Mr. Campbell."

Herzeg said Wednesday he had tried to meet with Campbell regarding the running back's statements that he wanted to be traded, but said Campbell told him he wanted to put off any such meeting.

Under USFL rules, the Gunslingers have territorial rights to players from the University of Texas.

"Earl is the player our franchise needs," Manges said. "He's a great player who everybody in the country knows and recognizes."

The newspaper said negotiations almost hit a dead end when Armstrong and Campbell's agent, Tommy Williams, discovered that their client's contract with Houston extends through the 1985 season.

Campbell reportedly had been under the impression that he had only one more year left on his contract after the 1983 season, the Express-News said.

But the newspaper said Manges apparently was not deterred when Armstrong and Williams called to confirm that Campbell is committed to the Oilers through the 1985 season.

"This is not Earl's option year," Armstrong said. "So what you are looking at is a 28-year-old superstar who cannot play his first down of football with the Gunslingers until he's 30.

Orioles earn record haul

NEW YORK (AP) — For winning the World Series, the Baltimore Orioles will take home a record $65,487.70 a man. And for losing it, the Philadelphia Phillies will pocket $44,473.31, also a record.

Those unprecedented figures were announced Thursday by the baseball commissioner's office, which pointed out that the winner's full share was almost $22,000 better than the previous record set by the 1982 St. Louis Cardinals' figure of $43,279.69.

The previous loser's share record of $32,211.95 was held by the 1980 Kansas City Royals, who dropped that year's World Series to the Phillies.

THE WINNING and losing share records were produced by a players' pool that totaled a record $6,109,306.62 in the five-game Series.

Twenty-nine uniformed members of both the Orioles and Phillies received full shares. The Orioles got a record $2,199,350.38 for Manager Joe Altobelli, his coaches and players to divide up, while the Phillies received $1,649,512.78.

However, Managers Pat Corrales and Paul Owens had to split a full share, each picking up $22,236.66. Corrales started the year as the Philadelphia manager, but was fired on July 18 and replaced by Owens, who was the team's general manager at the time.

Also, the Phillies' players voted a full share to pitcher Tug McGraw, who spent the regular season with the team but was not on the Series roster.

Members of the two league runners-up also fared well. A full share was worth $21,042.58 to 30 uniformed members of the Chicago White Sox, the American League's West Division champions who lost to the Orioles in the AL playoffs. Thirty-one members of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the National league's West champions, received $19,996.38.

Among the other teams in the American League, the Detroit Tigers, who finished second in the East behind the Orioles, received full shares of $3,899.21, while the shares for the runner-up Kansas City Royals in the West were worth $3,689.07.

Players on the New York Yankees received $1,013.41 for a full share for finishing third in the East, while the Texas Rangers in the West received full shares of $967.68.

In the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates received $3,694.63 in full shares for second in the East, while the return for the Atlanta Braves in the West was $3,688.42. Montreal's players got $813.30 per full share after finishing third in the NL East and Houston's players got $884.55 for third in the West.

Will real No. 1 please stand up?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The No. 1 team in the Associated Press college football poll is not among the nation's top 50 in total defense or passing defense and ranks only 40th against the rush. But the Nebraska Cornhuskers are second in total offense and first in rushing.

The No. 2 team in the rankings is not among the top 50 in total offense or passing and ranks only 31st in rushing. But the Texas Longhorns are first in total defense and passing defense and 12th against the rush.

Coaches insist that defense and the kicking game are what win championships, but Texas is threatening to become the first unbeaten-untied team in eight years to wind up second in the final rankings (in 1975, 11-1 Oklahoma won the national championship over 12-0 Arizona State).

"There's nothing we can do about it," says Texas Coach Fred Akers. "All we can do is keep grinding away. If you go 12-0, you've got to consider yourself No. 1 whether you are or not, especially with the schedule we play. People don't consider that. We play strong teams."

Whoa, Fred. Are you saying Nebraska plays weak teams?

Akers isn't about to be drawn into that kind of controversy. There will be plenty of time for that if both Nebraska and Texas finish with perfect records.

But with an impish smile, he repeated, "We play strong teams." That should be enough to raise a few tempers among the Nebraska faithful.

The Longhorns' defense passed its sternest test last Saturday, a day when what passes for the Texas offense was held to 98 yards by an unsung Houston defense. They were especially impressive after Houston recovered a fumble at the Texas 6-yard line in the third quarter — three plays later, the Cougars were still on the 6 — and in the final period when Houston had a first down at the Texas 13. That time, three plays netted two yards. "Pretty much of a goal-line stand all over the field all day long," Akers called it.

"Defense is our strength, and we're always going to play to our strength," he said. "That's our No. 1 high point. We expect to play great defense. The problem with the rankings is that 99 percent of the people in this country don't know how tough Houston is because of their record (3-6). Talent-wise, they could be at least 7-2 right now without all their turnovers.

"Too many times all people do is read the paper and think that's the gospel. There's no mystery to coaches what other teams have and could be doing. I promise you a lesser team would have lost that game.

"We've gotten used to people playing perfect football against us. We seem to bring out the best in everybody. It was our game of the week; it was Houston's game of the year. We represent quite an opportunity for everyone. Each game seems to get bigger; each game seems to get tougher."

But Akers knows it better not get much tougher than 98 yards; there's just so much pressure a defense can withstand before it snaps.

"I don't know if it was great defensive play or poor offense on the part of both teams," he said. "We didn't do much. Houston really shut us down. We didn't have what it took for three quarters. We couldn't generate much offense until we started running right at them in the fourth quarter. Every point was like pulling teeth.

"We've got one of two things — either their defense was playing great or our offense was playing sorry. I don't think our offense was playing sorry, but we have to examine what we're doing. At one point, I thought about trying to generate more offense with option plays. But I thought their team speed on defense could outrun us.

"We don't have a game-breaker. We have to play offense pretty much to precision. In a situation like that, you don't want to take too many chances (Texas threw only seven passes) and put your strength in a hole. We've tried different things. We probably spent too much time trying to go east and west instead of north and south.

"We have a chance to do things a little differently when (freshman tailback Edwin) Simmons is in there. He's a game-breaker. He gives us a different dimension."

But Simmons, who has carried just 30 times but for 259 yards (an 8.6 average), has missed the last three games with a knee injury and may be out for the season.

In addition, star guard Doug Dawson went down — probably for the season — with a leg injury, the seventh offensive regular to be sidelined during the year. He joins center Mike Ruether on the sidelines, taking away a large part of the offensive line's punch.

"We're really getting tested right now," Akers said. "We've been patching up the last month. Thank goodness all the injuries came on one side of the ball except one (defensive tackle Bill Heathcock). We have a lot of players on that injury list. I hope there's some relief in sight soon. We've got to have some relief soon.

Duke shocks NC State, 27-26

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Ben Bennett's 7-yard scoring pass to Mark Militello on fourth down with 26 seconds left climaxed a wild second half and gave Duke a 27-26 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over North Carolina State Thursday night.

Bennett, who is closing in on the NCAA career passing yardage lead, engineered a 67-yard, nine-play drive in which he completed five of eight passes. The fourth completion went to Militello at the N.C. State 4.

Mike Grayson, who rushed three yards for a third quarter score, was dropped for a three-yard loss. Bennett then overthrew Scott Russell and missed a diving Militello on third down before lofting the game-winning pass to Militello in the left corner of the end zone. Bennett's pass for the two-point conversion failed.

Auburn, Georgia in key shootout

By The Associated Press

This was the year Herschel Walker would have been a senior, leading the Georgia Bulldogs into a key late-season Southeastern Conference college football game against Auburn.

Walker, however, bolted the Athens, Ga., campus for the pro ranks, signing with the New Jersey Generals of the new United States Football League.

Even without Walker, the Georgia-Auburn game Sunday is still a battle of top-ranked teams looking for the SEC title and a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

"Obviously we miss Herschel," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said. "We've had to change the offense some. The emphasis is different.

"(But) I expected us to have a pretty good football team because we had a good senior class."

Georgia is 8-0-1 and a victory would give the fourth-ranked Bulldogs their fourth consecutive SEC title. Auburn, ranked third in the nation in the Associated Press poll, has an 8-1 record.

But Georgia is 5-0 in the SEC going into Saturday's contest, while Auburn is 4-0. If Auburn wins, the War Eagles must beat Alabama in their final regular-season game to claim the championship.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, Kansas is at No. 1 Nebraska, Texas Christian is at No. 2 Texas, Indiana is at No. 5 Illinois, Texas Tech is at No. 7 Southern Methodist, Colorado State is at No. 8 Brigham Young, No. 9 Michigan is at Minnesota, Northwestern is at No. 10 Ohio State, No. 11 Maryland is at No. 17 Clemson, No. 12 Iowa is at Michigan State, No. 13 Boston College is at Syracuse, Kentucky is at No. 14 Florida, Rutgers is at No. 15 West Virginia, Southern Mississippi plays No. 16 Alabama at Birmingham, Southern Cal is at No. 18 Washington, No. 19 North Carolina is at Virginia and Army is at No. 20 Pitt

On Thursday night, Ben Bennett's seven-yard scoring pass to Mark Militello with 26 seconds left climaxed a wild second half and gave Duke a 27-26 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State. Bennett hit 32 of 48 passes for 442 yards and three touchdowns and now needs just 246 yards to break Jim McMahon's NCAA career passing yardage record of 9,536 yards.

Fed says consumers taking on more installment debt

By The Associated Press

Consumers continue to take on more installment debt than they pay off, but they aren't building up debt as rapidly as earlier this year, the government reports.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday that consumers took on $2.38 billion more debt than they settled in September, even though car loans slowed from August.

The overall increase in outstanding credit was considerably less than in the previous two months — including the record $4.84 billion of last July — but still well above the monthly gains of less than $1 billion during most of the recent recession.

"That's a pretty healthy increase," said Sandra Shaber, director of consumer economics for Chase Econometrics, a forecasting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

The moderation in growth of consumer credit fits a pattern of generally less substantial gains in other parts of the economy in recent months. Retail sales, for example, continued to grow in October, but at a slower pace than in some earlier months.

The Commerce Department said strong sales of cars and furniture pushed overall retail sales up 1.1 percent last month, a smaller gain than September's 1.3 percent rise. Sales in October were 10.2 percent above the October 1982 level.

Meanwhile, the government said in a separate report that a drop in energy prices helped keep inflation at the wholesale level to a 0.3 percent increase in October.

Through the month, wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of just 0.6 percent, compared with a 3.7 percent gain for all of 1982. With only two months to go, private analysts are betting this year's overall increase will come in between 1 percent and 1.5 percent. That would be the lowest figure since the 0.5 percent of 1964.

Overshadowing the new report was a strong 1.1 percent increase in food prices, the sharpest advance since a similar gain in April.

Fresh fruit prices soared 18.5 percent in October and vegetable prices rose 5.3 percent, reflecting the harsh weather of last spring and summer, analysts said.

The October figures included a 2.4 percent increase in beef and veal prices, a 0.1 percent drop in energy prices and a 0.8 percent rise in new car prices.

In other economic news:

—In Toronto, Amway Corp., which uses an army of part-time distributors to sell household items door to door, was fined some $20 million after pleading guilty to criminal charges of defrauding Canada of about $23 million.

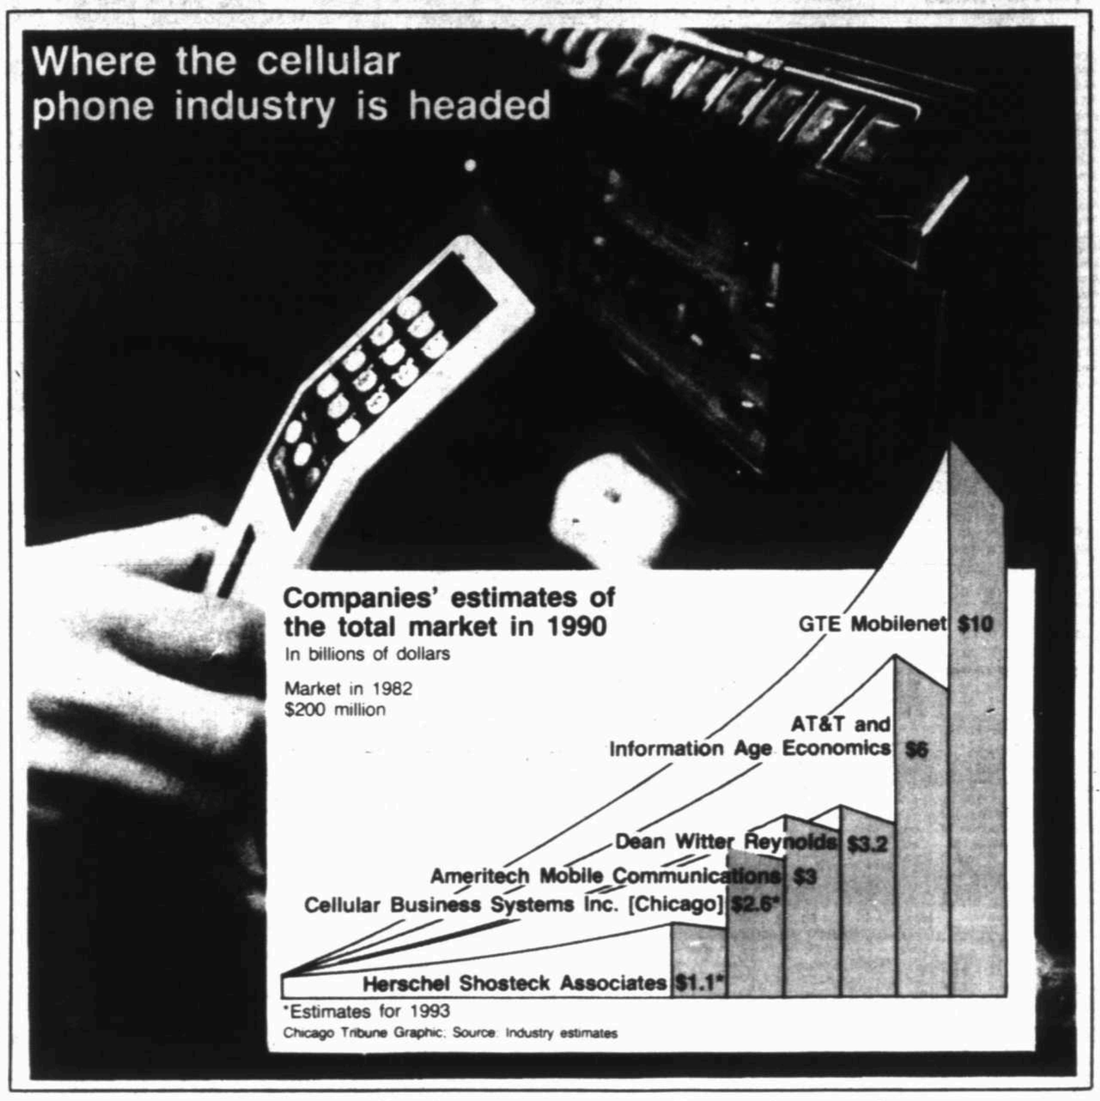

Chief Justice Gregory Evans of Ontario Supreme Court on Thursday ordered Amway Canada, the company's Canadian subsidiary, to pay $4 million, with the remainder to be paid by the parent corporation.

The charges, involving customs duties, alleged Amway cheated on its invoices between 1965 and 1980 and hid the true value of the Amway products brought into Canada by 70 percent.

—The U.S. corn harvest has dwindled to an 18-year low of 4.12 billion bushels, less than half of last year's record yield, the Agriculture Department said. The new production estimate, based on Nov. 1 field surveys, reflected a 3 percent decline in October. A month ago, the forecast was 4.26 billion bushels.

—About 402,000 jobless Americans sought unemployment payments for the first time in the week ended Oct. 29, down 7,000 from the week before. The Labor Department reported the number of people receiving benefits also dropped substantially.

—Assets of the latest week, according to the Investment Company Institute. The increase lifted the funds' assets to $166.85 billion in the week ended Wednesday, the Washington-based mutual fund trade group said Thursday. It was the largest one-week increase since the week ended Nov. 3, 1982.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 249 taxable funds)		38	8.52	8.59

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 249 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $848.1 million to $163.7 billion for the week ended November 8, 1983. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.52% after holding at 8.59% for two weeks. The funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 8.59% from 8.63%. Taxable funds' average maturity remained at 38 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Taxable money funds reported their largest asset increase since November 3, 1982. The bull market started in August, 1982 and many people are now realizing long-term capital gains and taking their profits by moving from the stock market into money market mutual funds."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date. g - one time sales charge. r - restricted availability. FDIC closes Rolls-Royce dealership

From Staff and Wire Reports

Regency Motor Cars, the Rolls-Royce dealership, has been shut down and its inventory repossessed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said C.H. "Hal" Brockett Jr., attorney for the dealership.

Brockett said the dealership, located on Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa, was closed and seven vehicles were repossed last week.

The FDIC called due a loan to the dealership from First National Bank of Midland after the bank was declared insolvent and ordered closed Oct. 14.

Brockett said the note was past due. He said under the arrangement with the bank, the institution financed the purchase of the cars and was to be repaid after they were sold.

The loan was "way under-collateralized" but had been for several years, Brockett said. He explained that the value of the cars in inventory was not enough to equal the debt.

"It's like taking out a $10,000 loan to buy a car valued at $6,000."

Brockett said Regency officials had worked out a new loan deal that was to have been closed two days after the bank folded.

Manek R. Panthaky, Regency Motor Cars president, said he inherited the loan arrangement from the previous owner.

Brockett said Panthaky had been trying to purchase the franchise from John Schaler for over one year.

"There was never a change in ownership simply a change in management. The parties had entered into an agreement over one year ago and had been trying to work out a suitable agreement with First National Bank of Midland before it failed."

Richard Gaskill, the FDIC chief liquidator of FNB's assets, refused to comment about the takeover.

"We make no statements about businesses," he said.

Neither Panthaky nor Brockett would say how much was due on the note, but Brockett said the FDIC "would not let them sell any cars. There was no way to serve the debt.

"The FDIC never would agree on a valid price on each vehicle," Brockett said. "There was no way to know what to sell them for."

Reg Adiss, public affairs director for Rolls-Royce Motors Inc., said the company was "shocked and surprised to hear of the problem" in Midland.

"We were distressed to hear about this. We are very concerned and are urgently looking into this matter."

Hard work only option for Option II MBA students

AUSTIN — Imagine teaching a course at The University of Texas on how to be a baseball coach and finding that most of your students are as experienced as Cliff Gustafson (coach of UT's 1983 national baseball champions).

That's about the level of challenge that teachers in UT Austin's Graduate School of Business are getting from a small, select group of highly motivated older students who currently are enrolled in the school's two-year-old Option II Master of Business Administration degree program.

"It's the hardest teaching I've ever done," admits Eli Cox, assocate professor of marketing who directs the Option 11 M.B.A. program.

"I kid these students that they need to take a de-assertiveness course," he says.

"They are not offensive," Cox adds, "but their experience is such that they are not afraid to tell a prof, 'You've got to be kidding'."

What makes Option II students a challenge in the classroom is that all are mid-career executives who have had at least five years of middle-or upper-management experience. Many have had much more than that. Their ages range from about 30 to the middle 50s. Some have been out of school for several decades.

Option II students continue to hold down full-time jobs while dealing with the extra pressures entailed in completing an M.B.A. in two years.

Apparently, the simultaneous demands of job-holding and degree-seeking have not affected the program's appeal, for this fall's enrollment increased 34 per cent and includes 24 men and seven women. The program was never invisioned to become large, Cox said.

Persons attracted to Option II, according to Cox, are those who can't take off two years from their work to be full-time students, in the normal sense of that term. Instead, Option II students come to the UT campus for two consecutive days twice a month (every other Friday and Saturday) during the fall and sring semesters.

In each campus visit, they squeeze in 16 hours of classwork, attending from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. If a student misses one campus visit, it is as if a regular college student missed two weeks of classes.

Option II offers the same curriculum as the regular M.B.A. program, but the pace is accelerated.

"It's like getting on a fast treadmill," said Cox. "The instruction is intensive; the reading load, extensive." No breath-catching electives are allowed. Requirements are never waived.

The progeam strives to help students gain top-management perspective by examining problems from the standpoint of an organization as a whole; to increase their competence in finance, marketing and quantitative methods, and to develop administrative skills in interpersonal and group relationships.

Since Option II began in 1981, it has attracted persons from buisness and from a variety of professions. Among them have been an Air Force lieutenant colonel, a physician, a pharmacist, lawyers, CPA's, an engineer with a Ph.D degree, state government employees and representatives from nonprofit organizations such as the American Cancer Society.

In Cox's view, that diversity of backgrounds enriches the entire program. "These students aren't interested in just getting a diploma," Cox says. "They are interested in what they can learn".

Alan Tallis of San Antonio, who earned the Option II M.B.A. degree last spring, was a corporate attorney with La Quinta Motor Inns when he entered the program in 1981. Trained in law, he says he wanted to gain a greater awareness of the business side of the corporate life so "I could better represent my company." Recently, he described UT's Option 11 offering as "outstanding."

"It was the most enlightening academic endeavor of my life — and the most competitive," says Tallis, who has been promoted to vice president and general counsel, and assistant secretary, of La Qunita. He claims the M.B.A. experience gave him management skills that will make him able to run better a legal department that has a budget of almost $1 million.

After completing the program, and surviving its time demands, Tallis says he felt as if "a peice of me was missing."

During the two-yar period, each Option II student takes 12 formal courses.

Drilling fluids not hazard report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The discharge of drilling fluids into the ocean by oil and gas exploration rigs does not appear to pose a significant hazard to marine life and ecology, says a National Research Council report.

Drilling fluids emitted in operations on the outer continental shelf "have low acute and chronic toxicities to marine organisms," the council, the research arm of the National Academy of Sciences, said in the study released Thursday.

The study, conducted for the Interior Department, also said that natural ocean mixing at drilling sites dissipates the particle-filled fluids to relatively safe levels.

Drilling fluids are water-based liquids put into the hollow drill pipe to which the digging bit is attached. As the drill bit burrows into the ground, drilling fluids perform several functions while circulating inside this pipe stem: the liquid removes the cuttings that the bit grinds out, controls pressure in the well, and cools and lubricates the bit.

An estimated 2 million metric tons of drilling fluids are discharged each year along the outer continental shelf around the United States because of exploratory and development drilling, the report said.

Environmentalists have expressed concerns that ocean disposal of these fluids and other wastes from drilling operations could be harmful to marine life and the general ecology of the continental shelf.

Government agencies and the courts are considering the future of such drilling in the George's Bank area off New England, as well as Southern California, Alaska and other coastal locations.

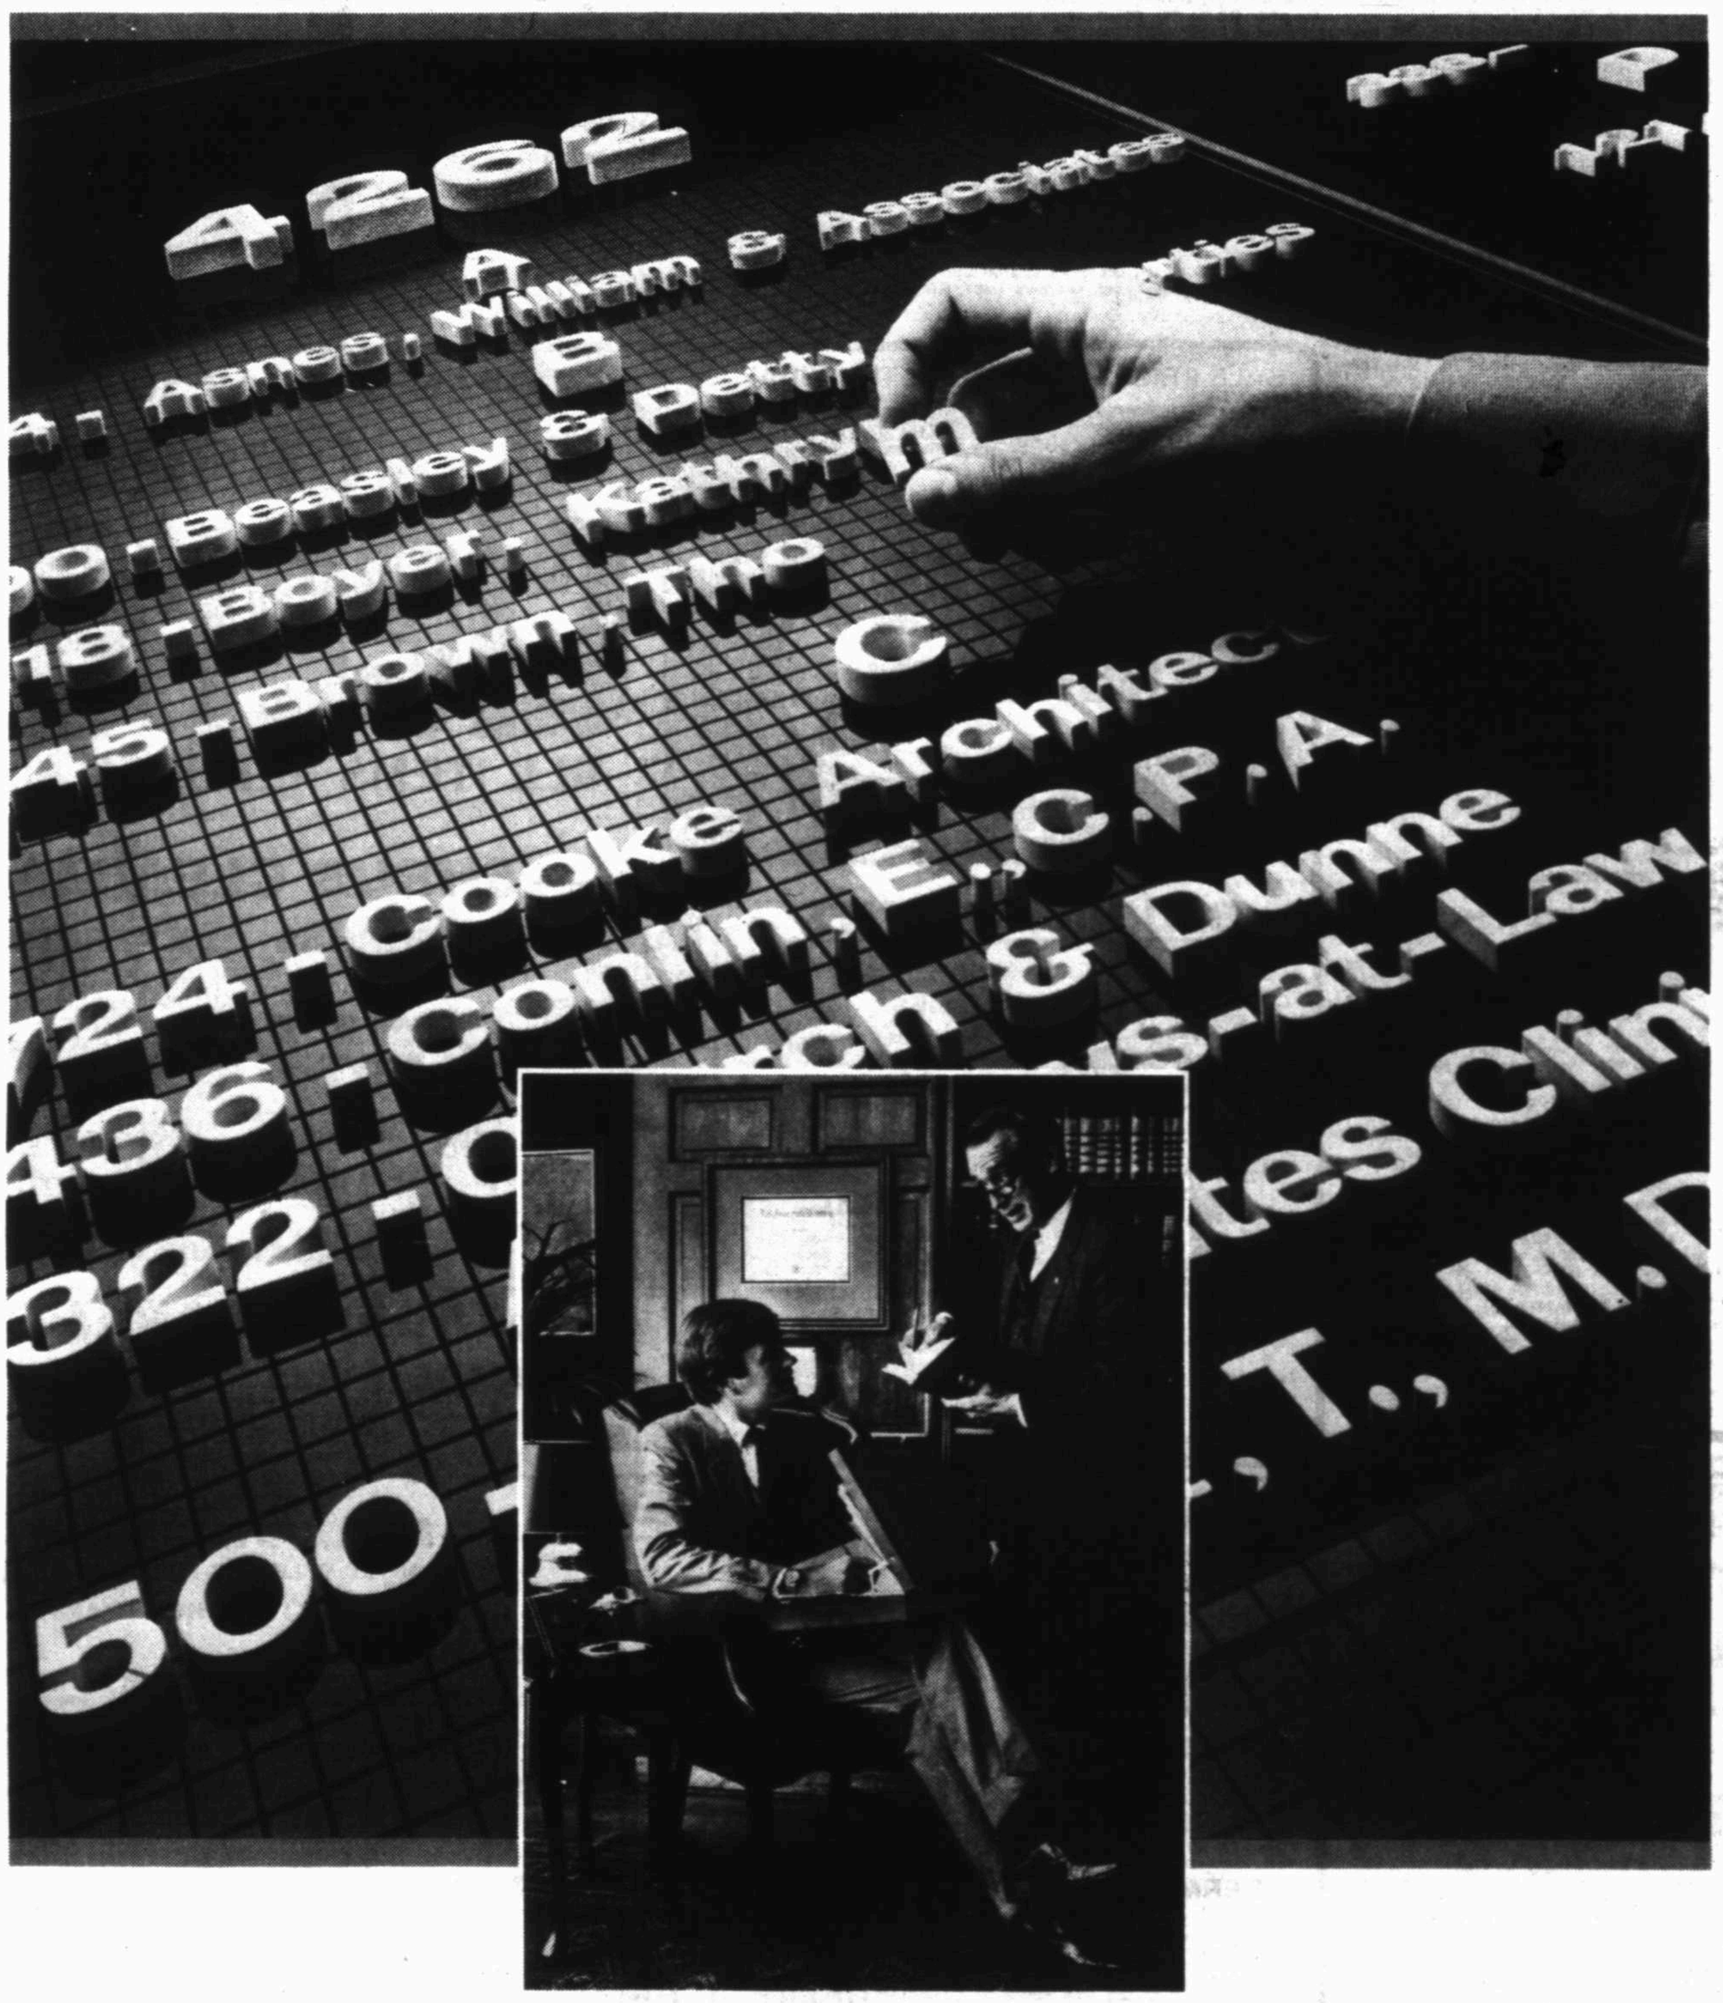

The study panel, chaired by John D. Costlow of the Duke University Marine Laboratory, cautioned that discharges have to be monitored to see that the materials they contain do not bury reef coral and other extremely sensitive seafloor environments. Such areas are those not normally exposed to sediment changes, either natural or manmade.

The report also recommended that diesel fuel and other toxic substances that can get into drilling fluids be monitored and controlled.

Water-based drilling fluid normally contains five major components, including clays, soft coal and chemicals, that control the density, viscosity, filtration and acidity of the liquid. The panel did not consider the effects of certain non-water specialty drilling fluids that are used infrequently.

The report said there is little reason for extensive research on drilling discharges alone, and instead called for broader studies on how materials accumulate and move through the underwater environment in general.

Elderly find reason in children's rhyme

Carl Hickey, Master of Ceremonies

Young and old alike shared a morning of fun and laughter Thursday when 70 kindergarteners at Crockett Elementary School displayed their acting talents for senior citizens of Casa de Amigos.

The students performed a play, which had a nursery rhyme theme, for 31 elderly but eager viewers.

Teachers and students worked for weeks making costumes, memorizing lines and practicing songs to put together "A Day of Nursery Rhymes" for the Crockett PTA last week. The program was so well-received that the children were requested to repeat the performance for Casa de Amigos.

"They were able to share with these senior citizens who needed a bright spot in their day," Crockett principal Roberto Banda commented. "It was a learning experience for the children as well.

"I think the part they enjoyed the most was being in the limelight," he added. "My observation was that it was very well received and it was very much worth the effort."

"They really enjoyed it," agreed Isabel Gonzales, senior program director at Casa de Amigos. "They always love children's programs, and they really enjoyed this one."

Casa de Amigos offers a four-hour program for senior citizens that includes meals, crafts, education improvement courses, various programs and trips, exercises, games and a Bible class.

Nation's borders 'meaningless,' U.S. official says

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

H. Eugene Douglas

Preoccupation, comfort, lack of education, long periods of security and the absence of a need to focus on Central American conflicts have led to apathy on the part of Americans in dealing with an alarming situation, according to a government official.

"The borders have become so open they've become virtually meaningless," said H. Eugene Douglas, ambassador-at-large and U.S. Coordinator for Refugee Affairs.

Brought into the Permian Basin Thursday by the Texas Southwest Cattlemen's Association to stress the importance of good relations with Central America, Douglas said he was touring regions that would be most affected by a mass immigration from Central America and the Caribbean countries.

With an increasing number of illegal and legal immigrants spilling across the borders in Texas and California, the nation will be looking to the Southwest for directions in dealing with the situation, he said.

"The cattlemen's association has said it was concerned about Central America and Mexico and is interested in the question about immigrants and the possible mass movement of refugees. It is not felt, by and large, much above Missouri," he said, adding he was urging state and community leaders to take a "more active and assertive role."

ALTHOUGH HE couldn't give a figure for West Texas, Douglas said 1.1 million illegal immigrants were "caught and sent back" last year and "we expect to apprehend 1.6 million" during the operating year, which runs from October 1983 through September 1984.

Only half of those who make it into the United States are caught, he estimated.

If conditions in Central America change drastically, Douglas said the flow would "sharply accelerate" and include even more immigrants from Mexico.

"It is impossible to roll pebbles from the top of the hill and not pick up other rocks along the way," he said.

"I don't think most normal people have any sense about what mass immigration means," he said, defining a refugee as "a legally admitted person who has had to leave his country on a well-founded fear of persecution."

When these people flee for their freedom, "they leave the area on a short notice and under the most unfavorable conditions." Many of them are ill, he said, and must be housed and fed. Many must be detained, with the United Nations participating, in such circumstances.

"AND THE Southwest has become the first asylum for refugees," he said, adding mass immigration is a "very real prospect if we don't accept the challenge and responsibility of Central America."

"We have to face up to the possibility of not only a geopolitical problem in the region but of inheriting the human problems that would come to roost on our doorstep. It is a miserable life to be a refugee and it has no end once you set out on that road."

According to Douglas, the majority of the 1.1 million immigrants who were sent back to their home country were from Mexico.

From Staff and Wire Reports

HOUSTON — Two lifeboats and at least one life raft are missing from a sunken U.S. drilling ship scanned by divers on the floor of the South China Sea, and an official of the vessel's owner says some crew members may have reached shore in Vietnam.

Divers found no bodies during a 9½-hour exploration of the wrecked Glomar Java Sea, which carried a crew of 80, said Gary Kott, president of the Houston-based Global Marine Drilling Co.

But he said Thursday that evidence that both 60-man lifeboats and the raft were launched "in a proper fashion" gives officials reason to hope for the survival of some of the crew.

Patrick Bernard Cates, of Midland and Lawrence Johnson, of Odessa, were aboard the ship when it sank during Typhoon Lex Oct. 25.

"We're considerably optimistic now," Kott said. "We're really encouraged with what we've found."

Bad weather had prevented divers from exploring the wreck previously. When the ship was located, it was resting nearly upside down. Kott said divers were unable to reach the heliport or the pilot house, but they did enter two compartments and found no bodies.

Dick Vermeer, vice president of Global Marine Inc., the drilling firm's parent company, said company officials hope survivors made it to Vietnam, about 200 miles away, but have been unable to reach government officials yet.

"Communications aren't all that great in Vietnam," he said. "I guess that's what's keeping our hope up."

Kott said experts have analyzed the winds and currents at the time the Java Sea sank and concluded that Vietnam was where boats leaving the ship would most likely have landed.

Kott said the U.S. State Department is attempting to arrange permission from Vietnam for a search of its coastline. The Vietnamese have refused permission for a search of their waters by outside ships or planes. Kott said Global Marine was informed that the Vietnamese promised to search the area and to return any crewmen found there.

FBI investigating 'upstanding citizens'

ODESSA (AP) — Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and 14 other "upstanding citizens" have been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury investigating a suspicious 1981 fire at an Odessa office building, federal agents told the Odessa American.

"I absolutely intend to testify," Bryant told the newspaper. He said if he had any information on who was responsible for the fire, "I'm certainly not aware of it."

Bryant was part owner of the building when the fire occurred, but FBI agents said he was not considered a suspect in the arson that investigators said caused the $90,000 in damages, the newspaper reported in a copyrighted story Thursday.

Bill Kirkwood, the FBI agent in charge of the investigation, said 15 "upstanding citizens," including Mayor Bob Bryant, "a couple" of members of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and "certain county commissioners" were subpoenaed this week, the newspaper said.

According to Bryant's subpoena, the grand jury is investigating "violations of certain federal laws, including mail fraud, interstate transportation in aid of racketeering, and explosive material violations," the Odessa American reported.

But Kirkwood said, "The whole thing has got to do with the O'Michael Building."

Bryant said he was surprised when he received a subpoena Tuesday because he thought the investigation was dropped last year.

"If it is ready to come to a head, I'd like to see it happen, and I think it's long overdue," Bryant said.

Kirkwood said the subpoenas were issued by the U.S. Attorney's Office in San Antonio. He said some of the subpoenas had not yet been served but would be by Tuesday, when the grand jury is scheduled to convene in Midland for a two-day session.

Candidate says U.S. needs strong leadership

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Bobby Locke wants to take an image of a conservative strong leader from West Texas to Congress. In doing that he will have to defeat incumbent U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, whose 21st District ranges from Midland to the edge of San Antonio.

Locke, 43, a contractor from San Antonio, announced recently he is seeking the Democratic nomination to the 21st Congressional District seat. He stopped in Midland this week on a tour of the district.

He was planning to announce his candidacy later, said the Army veteran, but jumped in the day the 233 American troops were killed in Beirut, Lebanon.

In Locke's opinion, Loeffler's response was weak and it's time for a strong leader. The Republican-turned-Democrat contends the United States should take a strong stand militarily, stopping short of dropping nuclear bombs, withdraw support of Mexico until it gets a democratic government and get the oil and gas business deregulated. He may not win, Locke said, but in running he hopes to get more persons involved in the political process.

"There's quite a bit of difference between Loeffler and myself," said Locke, 43, who lost to the Republican in a previous congressional race. "I'm more conservative than Loeffler."

He called the congressman's response to the Soviets shooting down the Korean airliner with Americans on board as "milk-toast." That response was that the Soviet Union should be censured. And when U.S. troops were killed in Lebanon, Locke said Loeffler reported he had no comment until he heard what the White House said.

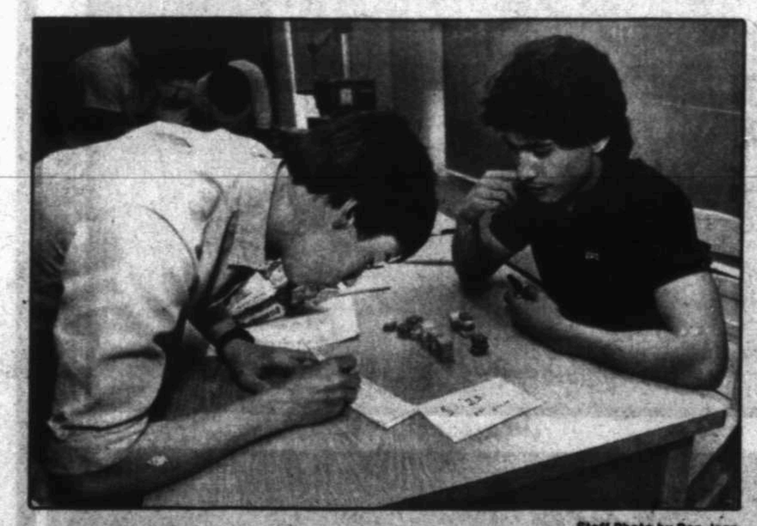

"I don't think Loeffler understands there is a Communist conspiracy worldwide. All these American forces are risking their lives at any moment. What we're facing (in Grenada and Lebanon) is the Soviet Union," said Locke.

"The time for talk is over. It's time for the U.S. to do something militarily." But Locke didn't propose using nuclear weapons.

When Locke was 6, his military father was sent to Japan and the son saw the destruction caused by the atomic bomb in Hiroshima. "I looked at that area and I've never forgotten it. No one wants a war and a weapon of that destructive capability."

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

How many high school freshmen can explain the principles of economics, correlate the relationship between supply and demand and price, contrast capitalism with socialism or communism, or define entrepreneur and conglomerate? Probably a higher percentage than their adult counterparts, thanks to Project Business.

The nationwide program of Junior Achievement is designed to avoid the pitfalls of traditional economics classes that may seem boring, confusing and irrelevant to students.

Project Business is a 10-week required course for all freshmen students in Midland public schools. One day a week dozens of local businessmen come into the classroom and try to explain the principles of business, at the same time relating them to personal experience and current events.

According to Bill Patterson, who incorporates the program into his American History class at Midland Freshman High School, Project Business is far superior to traditional methods of teaching economics. "The kids learn a lot more. They do participate and they enjoy it. It's more practical and they remember a lot better."

"It makes it come alive for the students in a lot of ways," boasted Steve Spackman, program manager for JA. "It gives a personal touch they otherwise wouldn't get."

Surveys show students are distrustful of and have many misconceptions about business, Spackman said. Project Business was established to overcome those attitudes.

The program has been in Midland schools since 1979, and about 100 businesses have participated. This year about 50 local businessmen from banks, utility companies, oil corporations, insurance companies, etc. will take part. They attend a half-day orientation to train them and to offer suggestions for presentations.

The cost, about $500 per class or $25,000 a year, is paid by businesses. The school district's only expense is providing transportation to field trips.

Kim "Jake" Jacobs, drilling engineer for Mobile Oil, is one project volunteer. He not only teaches practical aspects of economics — such as how to write a check, read the stock markets and establish a credit rating — but also sets up mock businesses and relates discussions to current events to help students understand.

He explained how borrowing and interest rates affected the now-defunct First National Bank and how supply and demand brought about the downfall of Texas Instruments' home computer business.

Over the course of an hour topics ranged from the Federal Reserve System and how it works, to the check-cashing process, to supply and demand and how it can create a glut or scarcity, to classifications of business and how they operate, to market research.

He allowed each student $3 and "sells" them candy to demonstrate principles of business. Some caught on quicker than others, as one girl queried, "Can we charge it?"

The students tried to "buy" as many pieces as they could and learned how prices varied with market trends. The exercise was successful, if you discount the fact that all the money was spent for candy instead of saved for college.

According to Patterson, the project's success "depends on how good the businessman is. Kim's the best. This is his third year, so he knows what the kids want to do."

The students will tour First City National Bank next week to study its operation. "The field trip is very good for the kids," Patterson said. "They learn a lot from it."

Jurors convict youth on murder charges

BEAUMONT (AP) — Jurors who heard a taped conversation in which a teen-ager told police he was about to "blow away" a man have convicted the youth of murder and sentenced him to 35 years in prison.

Erik Thor Trove, 17, of Port Arthur, faced a possible life sentence for killing 34-year-old Michael Lynn Bennett on Feb. 5. Witnesses said Trove was forced to leave a birthday party for Bennett's 15-year-old daughter, Stephanie.

Trove will have to serve at least a third of the sentence before becoming eligible for parole following State District Judge Larry Gist's ruling that a deadly weapon had been used in the crime.

Jurors convicted Trove Thursday, a day after they heard a conversation between him and police dispatcher Eddie Myer. The talk occurred as Trove was returning to the Bennett house after picking up a rifle and shells at his home.

Witnesses testified Bennett ordered Trove to leave the party because he was drunk.

In his conversation with Myer, a Port Neches police dispatcher, the teen-ager spelled his name and gave police the address of the house where the party was.

"I'll tell you right now, man, you better get every — unit you got at 698 East Kitchen (the Bennett residence)," Trove said on the tape, played for jurors Wednesday by prosecutor Doug Sikes.

Myer asked what the problem was.

"OK, well, I'm getting ready to blow away some —," Trove said. "You want my name?"

Trove identified himself and spelled his name.

GOP candidates to speak to Texas Republican women

Republican candidates for the U.S. Senate seat will give members of the Texas Federation of Republican Women a sample of the rhetoric voters will be hearing next year during the organization's 14th biennial convention in Fort Worth today and Saturday.

Presiding over that convention is Lou Brown of Midland, president of the Texas Federation of Republican Women.

The meeting, headquartered at the Tarrant County Convention Center, will feature, in addition to the senatorial candidates, speeches by three U.S. congressmen, announcement of the 10 outstanding Republican women and a panel discussion on gender gap.

Remarks by the three candidates seeking the post held by Republican John Tower will come at separate times. Those announced candidates are Phil Gramm of College Station, Ron Paul of Lake Jackson and Rob Mosbacher of Houston.

Discussing the gender gap will be State Reps. Jan McKenna, District 94; Gwyn Clarkston-Shea, District 98; Anita Hill, District 101; and Patricia Hill, District 102.

Other speakers scheduled include former congressman James Collins, Sen. John Tower, U.S. Reps. Tom Loeffler, Steve Bartlett and Jack Fields and Judge Patricia Lykos.

Theme for the convention is "Alive and Kickin'."

DEATHS

Ulysess Thompson

Ulysess Thompson

Services for Ulysess Thompson, 77, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Monday at the St. Paul C.M.E. Methodist with burial in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Jackson Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday.

Thompson was born Jan. 29, 1906, in Lockhart and moved to Midland in 1951.

Survivors include four sons, five daughters, one sister, 34 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

Derek C. Bahr

Derek Charles Bahr, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bahr of 5002 Sunshine Parkway, died Wednesday in an Odessa hospital.

Graveside services were to be at 2 p.m. today in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born early Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital.

Survivors other than his parents include his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerold Browne of Skokie, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. German C. Bahr of West Chicago, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Mathiacha, Fla.

Thomas Norwood

Services for Thomas "Tommy" William Norwood, of Fort Worth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Norwood of Midland, are pending.

He died Thursday, following injuries received in an auto accident.

Jorge Carrillo

BIG SPRING — Jorge Carrillo, 30, of Big Spring, died Thursday morning in a Lubbock hospital from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church in Big Spring, with burial in Trinity Memorial Park directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

He was employed with Village Lincoln-Mercury in Midland.

Fay Reinhardt

MONAHANS — Services for former Midland librarian Fay Reinhardt, 83, of Monahans, were to be at 1 p.m. today at the First United Methodist Church of Monahans. Graveside services will be at 3:30 p.m. in Evergreen Cemetery at Stanton.

Mrs. Reinhardt died Thursday in an Odessa hospital.

She was born Aug. 24, 1900, in Garden Valley. She had been a librarian for the Midland County Library for many years and was retired at the time of her death. She was a member of the Methodist Church.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Wilma Minton of Monahans; a son, E.B. Reinhardt Jr. of Dimmitt; three sisters, Mrs. W.C. Little of Mineola, Mrs. E.L. Herring of Electra and Mrs. Jim Sholes of Inman, Neb; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Nation's borders 'meaningless'

"Not that they're sitting down there and saying, 'I don't know, Juanita. Should we go to Big Spring or Odessa?' But they are stopping where there are jobs. If you could have an economic collapse in the Permian Basin, you'd still be considered better off than those down south. You'd be in high clover if you were from Chihuahua (Mexico)."

According to Douglas, "the administration is advocating a balanced program of assistance to the people in the (Central America) region that want to take care of themselves. We must defend those and help those in the region defend themselves."

DOUGLAS SAID it was important for the United States to assist Central America "rather than abandoning them in a selfish and smug way and waiting for them to have to come over here."

Although the financial burden of illegal immigrants is restricted to providing education for their children and keeping American citizens in jobs, Douglas said there are other problems with the influx of aliens.

He used as an example the recent bombing of the capital.

"The group that bombed the capital was a group of Nicaraguans or El Salvadorans who aren't likely to have been legally admitted to the United States," he said.

Douglas discounted any suggestion that the United States' involvement in Central America would lead to another Vietnam.

He cited geographic and historical differences between the two and stated it was those same aspects which linked the United States to Central America.

According to the literature distributed, half of all U.S. seaborne trade and half of all crude oil imports pass through the Caribbean Basin, of which Central America is a part.

More than 50 percent of the military supplies for NATO would travel through the Caribbean if there were a European crisis. The Caribbean Basin borders the U.S. and, as an example of geographical proximity, Washington is closer to San Jose that it is to San Francisco, he noted.

DESPITE HIS dislike for the term "domino theory," which is based on the thought that once one country becomes communistic, its neighbors will quickly follow, Douglas said the geographical continuity of Mexico and Central America is important.

"I think we certainly have a concern in Mexico," Douglas said, adding the country is experiencing a 30 percent growth rate.

"There are 70 million people in Mexico and it is expected to double by the turn of the century," he said. "Half or more of the population is chronically unemployed or underemployed and a large number are under 25 years of age."

When asked about the U.S. support of right-wing governments, Douglas said "it is a fact of life in the world at large: you cannot specify an ideal regime in a country that itself is often made up of a multiplicity of groups. The choice is not between a good or bad regime but the choice between the better of a couple of regimes that are going to fall short of an ideal."

Area businesses pitch in for city

Area businesses are pitching in to clean up Midland by placing litter barrels all over the city.

Large trash containers to be placed in the areas of highest trash concentration will encourage Midlanders to pitch their litter into trash cans, not on the ground.

According to Richard Wigzell, chairman of the business and development committee of Clean Midland, area businesses are purchasing heavy aggregate concrete trash cans. The 58 gallon exposed stone garbage containers will be situated near the businesses that buy them and will be maintained by those businesses.

"People litter when they can't find any place to dispose of their trash," Wigzell said. "Through this volunteer effort we're going to make it easier to pitch the trash than drop it. We're getting wonderful response from Midland businesses. They know a cleaner city is a better place for all of us."

The concrete receptacles weigh 500 to 600 pounds and have lift-out plastic containers for easy maintenance. Each will have a sign with the name of the company that donated the container.

Each trash container is $275, which includes the container, liner and lid, shipping, placement and the donor sign. The trash receptacles are a tax-deductible purchase. Businesses interested in helping make Midland trash-free can call Clean Midland at 68-CLEAN.

Drug company learns of lawsuit, $550,000 judgment one year later

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Admitting "a serious error," the Richmond-based A.H. Robins Co. has learned it was sued for a half million dollars a year ago and lost, the Lynchburg News & Daily Advance reported today.

The Austin woman who won the suit threatens to have federal marshals seize and sell the $440-million international pharmaceuticals firm if the award is not paid by Dec. 9, the paper reported.

"This may be a case of one that fell between the cracks," Roscoe E. Puckett Jr., Robins' manager of public relations, said Thursday on first hearing of the suit.

The suit was served on Robins' registered agent in Texas on Aug. 3, 1982. The company never responded, and on Sept. 29, 1982, a federal judge in Austin awarded Anne Beck $550,000, the paper said.

As of Oct. 31, the amount totaled $603,625 because U.S. District Judge Hippo Garcia ordered that a 9 percent interest rate be applied until the award is paid.

The 35-year-old Austin woman had sued Robins for injuries she said she suffered from using the Dalkon Shield, an intrauterine birth-control device manufactured by Robins.

The injuries required that Ms. Beck's uterus be removed, her attorney, Richard W. Mithoff, said by telephone Thursday from Houston.

About 6,200 other claims related to the Dalkon Shield have been settled in the past decade by Robins and Aetna Insurance Co., its insurer until March 1978, Puckett said.

He said the companies have paid damages totaling $164 million. Twenty-one of the claims went to trial, and Robins won 13.

As of Sept. 2, about 3,800 claims were still pending in federal courts across the country, Puckett said.

FBI investigating Odessans

Second-degree felony arson charges were filed against John Thomas Peterson, 43, and his brother, Larence Earl "Cotton" Peterson, age unknown, but were dropped in July 1982 because, prosecutors said, they "didn't have a case" against the two.

The criminal complaints filed against the two men alleged they committed the arson for pay.

"We still don't have a case," District Attorney Mike Holmes told the newspaper Wednesday.

Holmes said the investigation has been "dropped as far as the state is concerned." But FBI senior agent Tom Farris said of the federal investigation, "At some point down the line we hope it will lead to some indictments."

Federal authorities began investigating the fire in July 1982.

At the time of the fire, Bryant, City Councilman Keith Weddel and Odessa attorney Ray Stoker Jr. were listed among the owners of the O'Michael Building, the newspaper said.

The building was sold last year.

In late September, the building's former owners reached an out-of-court settlement with American Economy Insurance Co. of Indianapolis.

The amount of the settlement is contained in the case file, which was ordered sealed on June 15 by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, the Odessa American said.

Candidate: U.S. needs leadership

Locke contended that if elected he would succeed where other politicians have failed — getting the oil and gas industry deregulated. "It's a question of leadership. Loeffler is a nice guy. (Former President) Carter was a nice guy. But I'm not sure that's the solution to the leadership problem."

The influx of illegal aliens into Texas can't be stopped until Mexico's dictatorship is eliminated, according to the former government student at the University of Oklahoma and George Washington University.

"You can't stop a starving man from trying to feed his family," Locke said. "The U.S. should withdraw support from Mexico."

One problem with Loeffler, a rancher, is that he has no concept of being a businessman, according to Locke. "He's never been in business. Someone has to make a payroll before they can understand the problems of the average taxpayer."

And as a taxpayer, Locke is calling for repeal of the 16th Amendment, that which instituted the income tax. Instead of that source of revenue, Locke proposed a federal sales tax. And if that didn't meet budget needs, he would add a head tax, such as $75 per person.

Locke is looking for support from people who have dropped out of voting in elections. "Voter returns show less than 50 percent of the people ever participate," he said. "This is where we're going to try and make our biggest push. People have been turned off by government; they've been lied to and stolen from."

Missing lifeboats raise firm's hopes

The crew of the Java Sea included 42 Americans.

Company officials said that an SOS signal received Oct. 27 may have come from a lifeboat. There were two reports of lifeboat sightings and one of four life rafts was recovered, but it was empty.

A ship carrying divers and an underwater television camera has been stationed over the site since last week, but Wednesday was the first day divers were able to explore the wreck. Kott said the survey has been hampered by currents and poor visibility, but will continue.

Police search for two in sexual assault case

ODESSA — Police are searching for two men who allegedly sexually assaulted a women at knifepoint early this morning.

According to a spokesman at the Odessa Police Department, the men broke into a house on the 2100 block of North Adams about 2 a.m. today. One of the men held a knife on the Odessa woman, police said.

Reports state the woman told police she was sexually assaulted by both men. She was treated at Medical Center Hospital and kept for observation, according to reports. Police said they are searching for two black men in their late teens or early 20s.

Police set fingerprinting session

The Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department has scheduled a fingerprinting session for children Saturday.

Parents may bring their children to the Boys' Club at 108 New Jersey from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. There is no charge for the fingerprint records. The records, which the parents keep, are used to aid police in finding a missing child.

Phenomenon actually isn't tide

The red tide, a mysterious phenomenon that kills fish and renders shellfish poisonous, is a misnomer. It's not caused by tides but by a usually colorless accumulation of tiny marine algae called dinoflagellates. Occasionally it lives up to the color in its name by tinting the water a rusty hue, particularly around the Florida coast.

Cholesterol drug promising

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Synthetic drugs called cyclic imides can lower the body's levels of serum cholesterol and triglycerides, which have been linked to heart disease and strokes, but the drugs probably won't be marketed soon, researchers say.

"At a relatively low dose, these agents lowered 40 to 60 percent serum cholesterol and triglycerides," Dr. Iris Hall, a physiologist and biochemist in the Department of Medicinal Chemistry at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, said in a telephone interview.

Her findings, based on tests of tissue removed from living organisms, were to be presented today at a meeting of the American Chemical Society in Charlotte.

While various modifications of the drugs have been effective in human and rodent cells, Mrs. Hall cautioned that it may be 10 to 15 years before they will be available to consumers.

"These are not cancer drugs," she said. "They don't reach the market that quick. There are extensive tests to go through and approval by the Food and Drug Administration."

Cyclic imides, structurally related to the artificial sweetener saccharin, are the first synthetic drugs to be tested for reducing cholesterol, Mrs. Hall said. Saccharin itself has no such properties.

She said researchers discovered the drugs by examining the chemical mechanisms that incorporate cholesterol into artery walls and seeking a synthetic chemical capable of blocking it. Once cholesterol becomes established, clots may form and certain organs may be deprived of oxygen, leading to heart attacks and strokes.

Cyclic imides slow the action of an enzyme in human fibroblast cells, which make up the plaque that can clog arteries, Mrs. Hall said. Without the enzyme, cholesterol and triglycerides, fatty compounds found in the blood, can't be bound inside the cells, she said.

"All Americans have plaque. They (the plaque deposits) start during adolescence. They grow with age. Once they get there, what you'd like to do is to make sure you're not depositing lipids (non-soluble fatty compounds such as triglycerides) any faster than you have to," Mrs. Hall said.

The drug also speeds the elimination of cholesterol in rat liver cells, she said.

The findings should not overshadow other important factors that can increase the risk of hardening of the arteries, including heredity, stress, cigarette smoking and physical inactivity, Mrs. Hall said. But she added that the American diet contains a lot of cholesterol.

"One of the problems here in the United States is that we are a society that seems to take in a lot of lipids in our diet," Mrs. Hall said. "Consequently, that is a factor in the development of arteriosclerosis in our society."

Drugs now available can reduce cholesterol by 12 percent while cutting triglycerides up to 25 percent, Mrs. Hall said. But those drugs, which use human hormones, are not safe in the high doses needed to produce better results.

Survivor runs from cancer

By JO TUBB
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — I feel like I'm still 18," Lynn Hughes says, as he stretches a muscular arm along the back of the sofa and extends a pair of tanned legs underneath the coffee table.

"I'm probably healthier and in better shape than I've ever been."

The words flowed easily from Hughes who is 34, not 18. Fifteen years after he played football for the University of Oklahoma, he still has the unflappable confidence of a jock.

And that, he says, may have saved his life.

Hughes, despite appearances, isn't just a former fullback who now lives with his family in nearby Lawndale; he's also a former cancer patient.

In the fall of 1980, he came face to face with the toughest opponent of his life — the Big C, The Unspeakable, The Dread Disease. A fast-spreading cancer had invaded his right testicle and was attacking his lung, as well.

It threatened to kill him, to cut him off from his wife, his sons and infant daughter. Never mind that he was only 32 years old. Never mind that there were plenty of things in life he still wanted to do.

While news of the cancer might have devastated someone else, it just made Hughes angry.

"I was so mad," he recalls, "that I said, 'Bull! No cancer is going to kill me!' Once I did that, once I tapped into my self-confidence, I was able to beat it."

It wasn't as simple as all that, of course; Hughes spent weeks in the hospital undergoing nauseating sessions of chemotherapy. But the upshot is that today he is not only cancer-free but is running in marathons. Before his cancer, he didn't run at all.

He's training for the 1984 Iron Man competition in Hawaii, a grueling contest that requires swimming, biking and running. And through his new "Challenge Cancer" organization, he's hoping he can convince others of what he knows for himself — that there is, indeed, life after cancer.

"People are scared to death of it," he says of the disease he's apparently licked. "They don't even want to hear the word cancer. But I'm very open about it. I don't mind talking about what happened to me because I think my experience can help somebody else."

What happened to Hughes was that one day three years ago he noticed that his right testicle was terribly swollen. The condition wasn't painful but it obviously wasn't normal, and Hughes thought he should be examined by a doctor.

On Oct. 24, he went to a doctor in Anahiem, Calif., where he was working for a firm that repairs wooden pallets. The doctor prescribed some medicine and told Hughes to return to his office in a week.

"I went back to the doctor the next Friday — it was Halloween," says Hughes, "and he said he wanted to slap me into the hospital. I wasn't about to argue with him; my reaction was , 'OK, let's get this thing taken care of.'"

By the time Hughes' wife, Ruth, was able to get a baby sitter for their children in Lawndale, surgeons in the Anaheim hospital were removing his swollen testicle. They wouldn't know the results of tests on the removed tissue until Monday.

"On Monday, they told me it was cancer and that for men my age it was a very rapidly growing cancer. They said they were glad they got it when they did," says Hughes. "Then they scheduled more tests for the next day."

Results of Tuesday's tests showed that the cancer wasn't confined to Hughes' testicle — there was a spot the size of a dime on his right lung. On Friday, he met with a cancer specialist who recommended chemotherapy.

"He said he wanted to be aggressive, to attack this thing," says Hughes. "I agreed that's what I wanted to do, too, because I'm an aggressive type of guy. I was already mad at the cancer and I was ready to put all my energy into chemotherapy."

But even for an aggressive type of guy like Hughes, chemotherapy wasn't easy. He faced a torturous regimen that called for one week of chemotherapy, then three weeks at home, then back into the hospital for a week of chemotherapy, then three weeks at home, then back for more chemotherapy ... until the spot on his lung disappeared. There was no guarantee that it would.

DEAR ABBY

Neighbor cries foul over next-door games

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY Something is going on in my neighborhood that has me on edge. A divorced woman with a 10-year-old daughter has her boyfriend living with them. The three of them are together, laughing, playing games and so on. This woman thinks she is a great mother because she has a "happy" child. The fact that this mother is living in adultery and committing fornication right before her daughter's eyes does not seem to bother her.

Now I saw something indecent take place between that 10-year-old and her mother's boyfriend. I called two priests and a minister. One priest said, "Don't say a word," the other priest said, "Tell the mother," and the minister said, "Write the mother a letter."

I went over there and spoke to the mother, and all she said was, "Oh, they are very close. They love each other!" This woman sometimes leaves her daughter in the house alone with her boyfriend. If she isn't an unfit mother, I don't know what "unfit" is.

What should I do? – A CONCERNED NEIGHBOR

DEAR CONCERNED: You did not disclose what you "saw" that you perceived as "indecent." I appreciate your good intentions, but every community has some kind of child-protection agency, so if you saw something "indecent" going on, go to the authorities and make an official complaint. But be prepared to back up your suspicions with some hard facts. A person is still presumed innocent until proven guilty.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was given a baby shower that was attended mainly by my mother-in-law's friends. I promptly wrote my thank-you notes for each gift, and in so doing I addressed each woman as "Ms." (Most were married, a few widowed and several were unmarried.)

A few days later, my mother-in-law called to say that one of her friends was offended by being addressed as "Ms." Then my father-in-law got on the phone and told me I was never to address any of their friends or relatives as "Ms."

I tried to explain that I meant no offense – that this was a new trend so that all women, regardless of their marital status, would feel equal, but he insisted he liked the old way better and in the future I should forget the "Ms."

Did I make a "Ms"-take? – MS-UNDERSTOOD

DEAR MS-UNDERSTOOD: You made no "Ms-take." Your father-in-law ms'd the point.

Life span unknown

Hearst Feature Service

The best-selling book, "Life Extension," and other currently popular recipes for longer lives are about as scientific as alchemy. What's more, they could cost the serious believer a fortune for the same thing ancient alchemists got for their efforts to turn common metals into gold: nothing.

That dreary message arrived in this month's issue of the Harvard Medical School Health Letter. It's author, Health Letter editor William I. Bennett, is a physician who often comments on questionable medical claims.

Before demolishing the hopes of would-be centenarians, Bennett explains that life expectancy has reached 71 for men and 78 for women, but that the potential human life span remains unknown.

Claims of age greater than 114 are unproven, he said, and "how far any of us could go, with all the breaks, is an open question."

Kid proof!

Because the fun is non-stop, so are Buster Brown Wildcats. They'll take the wear and tear your kids dish out, and hand back a full measure of comfort and good fit.

HENDERSON (AP) — The story is familiar.

A large one-screen movie theater in a small town that once often filled to capacity slowly begins having more empty seats as businesses move out of downtown. A multi-screen theater opens, further damaging business. Finally, the sheer weight of hard times slams the doors shut.

This time the theater is in Henderson — the Strand, which had been open for 50 years. At one time, residents say, the town had five theaters, then four, then three, then two...now none.

"It was very sad," said Mike Adkison of Mansfield, La., the owner of the Strand. "I had to admit that when I left town I had a lump in my throat. An era...ended."

Adkison bought the East Texas theater, which had 575 seats, seven years ago. And for the first few years the business prospered.

"It was pretty common to have a line down the street," he said. "You could open a Saturday night late show at 11 o'clock and pack the house."

Two years ago a skating rink opened that drew many of the young people away, he said. Then last year the recession hit. This year a four-screen theater opened in Kilgore, just 18 miles away, and people started going there.

Adkison fought to keep the Strand open but ended up losing money.

"We gave it our best shot — free passes, radio spots, newspaper ads, about anything in the world you can think of," he said. "We just ended up with big bills."

Adkison cut out matinees and the second show; still, he drew only 20-30 a night. The last movie, "National Lampoon's Vacation," attracted only 19 people — and that was on a Tuesday, when tickets were discounted to $1.50.

On Oct. 31 his lease on the theater ran out and he would have had to renew it for 10 years. With talk of a three-screen theater opening in the new Circle Plaza shopping center on U.S. Highway 259, the main thoroughfare in town, he just couldn't see renewing it.

A man from Silsbee who is considering opening the theater called Adkison and asked if he'd like to be a partner; he's not sure, he said. But he thinks the other man is serious.

"I feel like Henderson will have a new theater by February or March," he said.

No announcement was given of the Strand's closing. One day it was open; the next it wasn't.

"It was a complete shock," said Gayle Woodward, tourism director of the Rusk County Chamber of Commerce in Henderson. "Any town of more than 5,000 people usually has a movie theater. It would be pretty sad if we don't."

Jim Craig, a longtime resident, said, "I thought there would always be the old Strand."

But, he said, he knew few people who attended movies there regularly anymore.

"People just quit going a few years ago," he said. "I don't think it'll be missed very much."

The Strand, a one-screen movie theater in Henderson, closed its doors Halloween. It had been in business for about 50 years, when its most recent owner, Mike Adkinson of Mansfield, La., closed it. The Strand was hurt by many businesses moving out of downtown and multi-screen theaters opening elsewhere.

College raises freshwater shrimp

CORSICANA (AP) — Shrimp — freshwater prawns, technically — are being raised at Navarro College as part of a Department of Energy-funded aquaculture research project that makes use of geothermal resources.

About 18,000 nearly transparent, post-larval prawns were released recently into two one-eighth-acre grow-out ponds housed in a long, Quonset-type building in the northwest corner of the campus.

The quarter-inch-long prawns will grow to an edible size — when their tails are 3 to 4 inches long — in about seven months, said Kenan Smith, coordinator of the Navarro College aquaculture project.

Harvesting of the prawns will be done after seven months to a year, as the prawns grow at various rates. Nets with specially sized mesh that allows the undersized prawns to slip through, but retains those of an edible size, are used to seine the prawns out of the ponds.

Since the shrimp-growing project is mainly for research purposes, the harvested animals will not be marketed but will be used by the college cafeteria system for faculty and students.

The freshwater prawns differ from saltwater shrimp in that they generally are bigger and have a much sweeter, less fishy flavor and firmer textured meat. "It has more of a nutty, buttery taste," said Smith.

Research results of the project will be reported to the Department of Energy, which will use them to stimulate the interest of the private sector in using geothermal energy for aquaculture, Smith said.

The role of geothermal energy in the project is heating fresh water to a temperature conducive to growth for the shrimp. Heated waters (125 degrees Fahrenheit) tapped from 26,000 feet under the Earth's surface are pumped from a geothermal well located on the college campus.

Passing through a heat exchanger that keeps the two types of water separate, the geothermally heated water, which is saturated with heavy metals and salts that are detrimental to animal and plant life, heats fresh water to a temperature of about 84 degrees. The heated fresh water will flow into the two grow-out ponds to maintain a temperature between 80 and 84 degrees. The cooled geothermal water then is pumped back into the well to be reheated.

The multi-level aquaculture project also includes a catfish farming operation, a greenhouse for growing ornamental plants and fresh produce, and an experimental irrigation project.

What everyone in business should know about changes in telephone service.

As Southwestern Bell Telephone separates from the Bell System, changes are occurring in the ways we do business with you. And it's important that you understand them. Here's a quick look at some of those changes.

TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT

When the Bell System breaks up, the equipment you now lease from Southwestern Bell Telephone will become the property of AT&T. If you want to continue leasing that equipment, you won't notice a big change. You'll simply lease from AT&T. And if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone to inquire about this equipment between now and the end of the year, we'll refer you to AT&T.

Of course, you'll still have the option of purchasing new equipment from a variety of suppliers. In fact, Southwestern Bell Corporation will form a subsidiary which, beginning in January, will market telecommunications equipment and services.

REPAIR SERVICE

After divestiture, AT&T will be responsible for maintenance of your present equipment.

They also will repair single line telephones purchased from Southwestern Bell Telephone before January 1. However, if your purchased set is out of warranty, you'll be charged for its repair. For repair of equipment purchased from companies other than Bell, contact the original manufacturer or retailer.

Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to repair your telephone line at no charge. However, if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone for repairs and the problem is found to be in the equipment and not the line, there will be a charge if our technicians make a repair visit. And you may still need to contact your equipment supplier to have the problem corrected.

LONG DISTANCE

On January 1, Southwestern Bell Telephone will provide regional long distance service within your surrounding area. But long distance calls outside this area will be handled by the long distance company of your choice.

BILLING

In most cases, you'll still receive one bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone for services previously provided by the Bell System. But each company's charges will be shown separately on your monthly bill. For example, regional long distance calls placed within your surrounding area and handled by Southwestern Bell Telephone will be shown on one page, while long distance provided by other companies will be shown on another*. Special telephone numbers will be on the bill in case you have questions.

YELLOW PAGES

Yellow Pages advertising will soon be handled by Southwestern Bell Publications. Your business will continue to be listed by us in the White Pages. After January 1, a representative of Southwestern Bell Publications will contact you regarding your listings and advertising in the Yellow Pages.

LOCAL SERVICE

Southwestern Bell Telephone will still be your company for local service, so please continue to call us first when you want to establish service. We'll also still be your company for local services like Touch-Tone*, Custom Calling Services, local data networks, ESSX-30 and Centrex.

Southwestern Bell Telephone also will continue to offer the mobile phone service we offer today. In addition, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems will offer new cellular mobile phone service.

If you have specific questions about your business telephone service or equipment, please continue to call your business office.

*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Mom strikes to get family to clean up

BRYAN (AP) — When Elaine Beaird told her husband and five kids they better not mess with mom, she meant business.

For three months, Mrs. Beaird had been threatening her family that they'd better start picking up after themselves or she'd go on strike. On Halloween night, the wet towels and clothes strewn around the bathroom broke her patience.

Now a sign across the front porch reads, "Mom on strike. Pick up or pack up."

"I'm their mother; not their maid," said Mrs. Beaird, 36, who manages a store in a Bryan shopping mall. "Other people go on strike to get what they want, so why can't a mama do it?"

Before the strike, Mrs. Beaird said, she arose at 5 a.m., washed three loads of clothes, cooked breakfast and cleaned the four-bedroom house before going to work. Now she's sworn off cooking, cleaning, ironing and laundry.

One daughter, 13-year-old Dawn, says the idea may catch on. Her best friend's mother has threatened to follow suit if her own household doesn't shape up.

Eight-year-old Chad is unconcerned and estimates the sign "will probably go on for about a month, until we straighten up our act."

As for 34-year-old Jerry Beaird, he says he sympathizes with his wife — but doesn't much care for eating his own cooking.

Striking mom

Elaine Beaird, of Bryan, Texas, a working mother with five children at home ranging from ages 8-18, hung a sign outside her home last week week declaring she was on strike. Following months of threats to pick up wet towels and other clothing, Mrs. Beaird posted the signs and ceased cooking and cleaning.

Book tells how employees chosen

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who run for president do themselves no favor when they ridicule the very government employees who can make or break their presidency, a study said. Such campaigning, it said, lowers the esteem in which public servants are held.

But the temptation to run against Washington — which both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan did in their successful campaigns — is almost irresistible, according to the 108-page book, "America's Unelected Government," published this week by the National Academy of Public Administration.

"There is no safer statement, no surer applause line for a candidate than a withering criticism of the government in Washington and those who operate it," said the report, which delves into the flaws of the way new administrations choose their people.

"Political speeches are full of broad denunciations of the laziness, isolation and venality of public servants," it said. "The simple fact is that prospective appointees in the private sector will not be anxious to join a government that is distruste by the people it serves."

The report spelled out 22 recommendations fo the ways presidents choose their people, inclu ing relaxing FBI scrutiny of nominees, lowe ing the tax burdens that result when a nomine has to unload his investments in a hurry and pa ing travel expenses for those who make the mov to Washington.

The study details some flawed and haphazar presidential appointment methods, including on called BOGSAT by a personnel executive fo John F. Kennedy.

BOGSAT, the report explains, "means a bunc of guys sitting around a table asking each othe 'whom do you know?'...an unsophisticated wa to select the nation's top administrative officers."

The appointment process was refined durin succeeding administrations, but the study says i needs more improvement.

"The government of the United States is no run by career ministers, but by amateurs," it says.

Restaurant workers want better lunches

PARIS (AP) — Employees at several Paris fast-food chains say they deserve a break from the steady diet of burgers, fries and soft drinks they consume during their daily lunch periods.

Uniformed waitresses and waiters for the What a Burger chain passed out leaflets outside one of the chain's restaurants recently demanding better working conditions, including "decent food" for lunch.

Over at Burger King on the Champs Elysee Avenue, employee and union representative Aly Mamadou complained: "It's not that the food is bad, it's just always the same. It's always something between two pieces of bread. Every day is too much, and we've had enough.

"More than that, if we want a second sandwich we have to get in line behind the customers, and we only get 20 minutes for lunch."

By law, French restaurant owners are obliged to provide employees with free lunches, and the employees are demanding some sort of alternative to standard fast food fare, including the possibility of hot lunches brought into fast food restaurants from catering firms.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Myasthenia gravis has favorable prognosis; Victims can lead normal lives

Dear Dr. Solomon: A close friend of mine has learned that she has myasthenia gravis. Can you tell me what this means in terms of her life expectancy and her ability to function from day to day? — Anita, Salem, Mass.

Dear Anita: Myasthenia gravis is a neuromuscular disease that has a much more favorable prognosis today than it did several years ago. Most patients are able to lead fairly normal lives, although there is a tendency for there to be occasional flare-ups of the disease.

Myasthenia gravis is characterized by weakness and fatigue. This is often demonstrated in such symptoms as drooping eyelids, difficulty in swallowing and breathing, double vision. Some patients have slurred speech and are unable to perform simple tasks that require the use of muscles. Another problem is that these patients tend to develop other diseases, such as rheumatoid arthritis, diabetes, and thyroid abnormalities.

Physicians generally speak in terms of control rather than cure for myasthenia gravis. Treatment includes the use of drugs and some patients respond to surgery. Both the extent and severity of symptoms and the response to treatment vary greatly from one patient to another.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard someone on a radio program say that certain kinds of diets can cause breast cancer. What kinds of diets are these, and how can doctors be so certain? Do they test animals? — Vi, Detroit

Dear Vi: Various studies, including animal experiments, appear to show a link between a high-fat diet and breast cancer. For example, epidemiologic comparisons of different populations show an increase in the incidence of breast cancer between groups of people that traditionally have a low-fat diet and those that traditionally have a high-fat diet.

Moreover, when certain groups of people increase their fat intake, as when they emigrate from their country of origin to another country, their rates of breast cancer increase.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you explain what there is about sickle cell disease that makes it so dangerous? I know it is painful, but I also know that people can die from it. — Sully, Lexington, Ky.

Dear Sully: The most significant threat to a person with sickle cell disease is infection, because there is almost no spleen function. Dr. James Humbert, professor of pediatrics at the University of Buffalo, says that a sickle cell patients can die within two to three hours of a serious infection if he or she does not receive prompt treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have known plenty of vegetarians who are in better health than I am, so I certainly don't want to be critical of them. But I'd like to know how this works for very young children. Shouldn't a young child at least get some milk in the diet? — Cissie, Montreal

Dear Cissie: A child who is on a strict vegetarian diet may be at risk for the development of vitamin D-deficiency rickets. This can be avoided if cereals and vitamin-D-enriched milk are added to the diet or if the child is given a vitamin supplement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has a child with Down's syndrome. She says she has heard of a high vitamin and mineral diet that is supposed to be helpful for this condition. I told her to check with her doctor before she tries anything like that. I would like to know what you think about such a diet. — Fern, Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Fern: Some researchers have suggested that large doses of vitamins and minerals can improve the intelligence, growth, health, and behavior of children with Down's syndrome. However, critics contend that this has never been proved.

Dr. Forrest C. Bennett, of the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle, is one person who questions the effectiveness of a high vitamin and mineral diet. In one study of 20 children he could find no significant changes in their physical status or in neurologic or psychometric tests. In addition, there were no differences in school achievement or language tests.

Moreover, Dr. Bennett points out, this type of diet can cause urinary symptoms in young children if continued over an extended period of time. One child in the study began to wet the bed, a temporary condition that was attributed to high doses of vitamin C. I would support your suggestion that your friend check with her physician before embarking on such a diet.

North Dakotan seeks donation of Montana peak

RED LODGE, Mont. (AP) — Publisher Milo Candee has an idea for changing the image of North Dakota — he asked the chamber of commerce in Red Lodge, Mont., for a donation of "one of your spectacular mountains."

"We'll even pick it up at no cost to the people of Red Lodge," Candee told Jim Coates, executive director of the Red Lodge chamber.

Coates said he agreed to provide a mountain of "the Dakotan's choice" provided Candee make good on the transportation offer.

THE BETTER HALF

"I didn't call you a lousy cook, Stanley. I simply asked how you managed to burn ice cubes!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, Nov. 12, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Chinese leader Sun Yat-sen, Reader's Digest founder DeWitt Wallace and Princess Grace of Monaco were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, Chicago cubs catcher Jody Davis and Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski. Changing your base of operations could bring you even greater business or career success. An old friend makes you an offer you cannot refuse. You need to mend some personal relationships. Pursue romance before it slips away. Certain opportunities come only once. Salt away money for investment purposes. A decision you make in the next few weeks will have long-range repercussions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look for new sources of financial help. Someone may be trying to manipulate you. End a no-win situation with a neighbor. You are able to return to your normal weekend routine.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A project that is started now will have a major impact on your community for years to come. Share your hopes with someone who is feeling down. Your enthusiasm is contagious!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A secret desire is fulfilled. Favors are repaid tenfold. A change of pace makes romance happier. Your resolve is strengthened. Reject a suggestion to go against mate's wishes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good time to discuss family matters related to your finances. A mistake is rectified, giving a child new self-confidence. You discover a growing interest in education.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An emotional reunion makes this a wonderful weekend. You see a dream come true and certain money problems solved. Use your leadership skills to improve your environment. Travel is favored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Flattery is fine so long as it is all in fun. You are vulnerable in romance. Keep your guard up! A family member makes a reasonable request. See what you can do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A drive in the countryside lifts loved one's spirits. An attractive stranger enters the picture. You could be in love—or just dazzled. Time will be the best judge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Member of opposite sex pays you an intriguing compliment. Think it over. A change of environment helps you defeat any self-doubt. Follow up is the key to greater business success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You receive an unusual proposition. Trust your intuition. Your best bet for happiness: a peaceful day at home. Spend more time with your loved ones and upbeat friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You do not need any arguments today. Quietly dig beneath the surface to get at the truth. Keep drinking at a minimum this evening and everyone will have a better time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Postpone purchasing a luxury item until you have more money in the bank. A child plays a key role in today's events. Break down the barriers that inhibit romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You feel ready for almost anything today! Have fun, but do not overtax your strength. A temporary solution to a money problem buys you valuable time. A stranger has a beneficial influence.

Presley debuts on CBS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — To Priscilla Presley, Friday is a day that holds both promise and threat. That's when she makes her debut as a character in the ever-popular CBS series "Dallas."

The promise is a big step forward in an acting career she has been carefully preparing for five years.

The threat?

"I'm just afraid I'll become another product in the rumor mill," explains the one-time wife of Elvis Presley. "I'm sure they'll have me feuding with Linda Gray and Victoria Principal. 'Dallas' is such a tremendously popular show that it attracts a lot of sensational publicity.

"They've already reported that I've been feuding with Linda," she says. "How could anyone have a feud with Linda? She's one of the finest persons I've ever known."

Miss Presley says she realizes another result of being on an immensely popular TV series: she will be recognized everywhere.

"That doesn't worry me," she says. "I've always been recognized, and I've found ways to deal with that. I travel incognito, and I'm careful never to expose myself to situations that might get out of hand. There are tricks of the trade that can prevent that, but I'm not going to give away secrets. Then they wouldn't work."

In the sixth season of "Dallas" she plays Jenna Wade, a former girlfriend who re-enters the life of Bobby Ewing.

"Jenna is her own woman," the actress says. "She's extremely self-reliant, she has lived in Europe, and she has a child. Just like me. Except that she's a bit more sophisticated than I am.

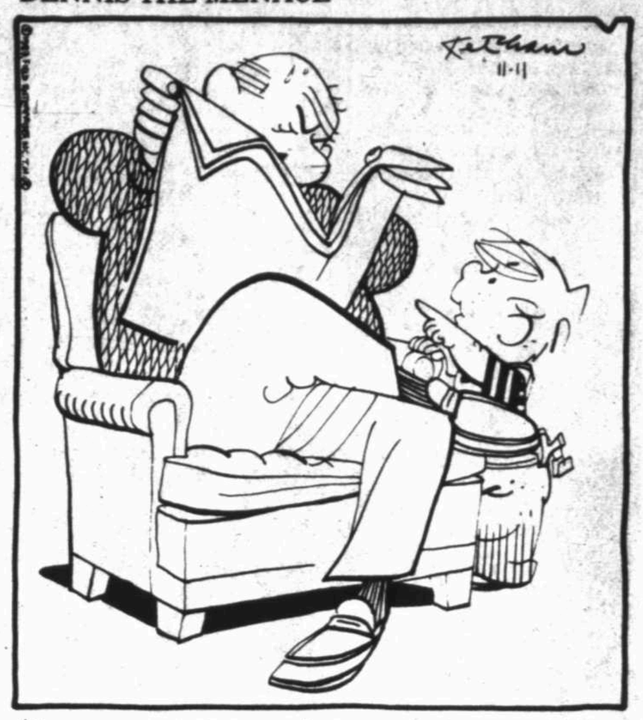

"She has a lot of integrity, she's totally honest. I like her. How could I help but identify with her?"

Priscilla Presley 36, came to a breakfast interview at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel prior to a late-morning call for "Dallas." She has a natural, unglamorized beauty and an easy manner. She talks frankly but not exploitively about her life as guardian of the Presley legend.

Born in Brooklyn to a career Air Force office, she says she met Elvis in Germany when he was doing his military service. They married in Memphis, had a daughter, Lisa Marie, and divorced in 1973.

"I help manage the estate in Memphis," she says. "It has been a hellacious job in some respects. The public, the fans think one way, but I have to do what I think is right. It's a constant fight. I have a concern for the public, and I realize they're very involved. But it's difficult for them to see the whole picture."

DENNIS THE MENACE

Here's another hand from France's runaway victory in the 1983 European Championships. This hand occurred in the match against Italy.

When Belladonna-Garozzo held the North-South cards, they allowed the French East-West pair to play in three diamonds, which was made with an overtrick when the defenders allowed declarer to sluff a spade on the ace of clubs. For France, Henri Szvarc became declarer at four spades after the auction shown. (No, West's jump to three clubs is not a misprint — it showed a red two-suiter.)

The defenders started with three rounds of hearts. Declarer ruffed the third heart as East sluffed a club.

After drawing trumps in two rounds, the ace-king of diamonds were cashed, and declarer eliminated diamonds with a ruff. Now declarer led a club to the queen. East won the ace, but he was end played. A diamond return would allow declarer to ruff in dummy while sluffing the losing club from his hand, and a club return would be into declarer's combined K-10 tenace — the finesse was marked by the fact that West showed out on the first club lead. France gained 13 International Match Points on the hand.

Our eagle-eyed readers will have spotted that, as the cards lie, the contract should have been defeated. East should ruff the third heart with the seven of trumps. That forces declarer to overruff with the king, and the defenders now have a certain trump trick. (Note that it will not do to ruff with the jack of trumps. Declarer can then overruff and finesse the ten of trumps for his contract.)

Hawaii seeks place in filmmaking world

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii has the potential of becoming a regional production and creative movie center, says Dennis Kull, president of the Producers Association of Hawaii, who points out that Hollywood is now the place where only the movie deals are made — "movies are made outside of Hollywood."

"The idea would be to develop young writers, directors and others who up to now have had to leave here to work," he says.

For years, Hawaii has been attracting Hollywood filmmakers. Since 1913, the Islands have been the backdrop for 116 movies, including productions such as "South Pacific," "Old Man and the Sea," "Blue Hawaii," "In Harm's Way," "Hawaii," "The Hawaiians," "Tora! Tora! Tora!" and the recently completed Vietnam MIA feature film, "Uncommon Valor."

In the 1970s, a television cop reintroduced the Islands to the Mainland and eventually to the world, and for 12 years pumped nearly $100 million into the state's economy. The phenomenal success of "Hawaii Five-O" prompted similar endeavors, the latest being Universal Studios' "Magnum P.I.," which with its star, Tom Selleck, began Island production of its fourth season this fall.

Of the $22 million spent annually on the production of Selleck's popular private detective show, Hank Wong, director of the Hawaii Film Office, estimates that at least $10 million remains in the Islands.

Hawaii's scenery and climate are the two major reasons that it's an ideal location for filmmaking — shooting movies, television shows and television commercials — according to Wong, who heads the state's five-year-old film office.

Wong says Hawaii ranks high among movie producers "because people like filming in Hawaii and that's a definite plus in our direction. We have long shooting days, unlike Los Angeles, where sometimes you can't begin shooting until the afternoons because of the smog.

About a year ago, Kull and members of the Producers Association of Hawaii decided to undertake a five-point program to develop all aspects of the movie and television production industry — including educating the local business community on movie deals, developing the infrastructure needed to sustain such an industry and educating the public on the benefits of the movie business.

To that end, the association teamed up with the Chamber of Commerce of Hawaii and the state department of Planning and Economic Development to sponsor a recent two-day symposium. Its purpose was to familiarize Island business leaders, potential investors, lawyers and others with what Kull believes are "the simple facts about building a viable film industry here."

The impact of the seminar, he said, was "to give local lawyers, bankers and financial brokers the tools to evaluate a movie deal."

The association, which Kull says has a membership of 34 of Hawaii's 40 production companies, also plans a public education program, similar to the Hawaii Visitors Bureau campaign, on the merits of filmmaking in Hawaii.

Other projects include training programs to prepare people for the jobs that it is hoped will follow, Kull said.

So far, the association has accomplished at least one of its goals: the passage earlier this year of a law to allow "one-stop shopping" for filmmakers seeking permits to shoot in Hawaii.

From the viewpoint of filmmakers, Hawaii's biggest disadvantage had been "the cumbersome problems of getting assorted government permits required for using beaches, parks, streets or any other public area for commercial filming."

Wong said the passage of the 1983 law gave his office the authority to act as a clearing house.

Heston returns to television

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — Charlton Heston is returning to television for the first time in 25 years in CBS-TV's new mini-series "Chiefs." The six-hour movie will be shown Nov. 13, 15 and 16.

Heston's last television appearance was with Dame Judith Anderson in "Elizabeth and Essex." His easy roaring laugh rolls out as he says, "The biggest difference today is we don't do it all live any more." He explains that a mini-series is produced much like a movie today, with big budgets and "the time to do things right, to do your best."

He chose the part of Hugh Holmes, a founding father of the fictional town of Delano, Ga., because "Holmes is a pivotal character. We see the town through his eyes and his own changing attitudes and inner dilemmas."

Delano grows from a sleepy country town in the '20s, when it chooses a farmer as its first police chief, to the '40s, when a returning World War II hero is selected, and finally to the '60s, with all the changes of the modern South reflected as the town gets its first black police chief.

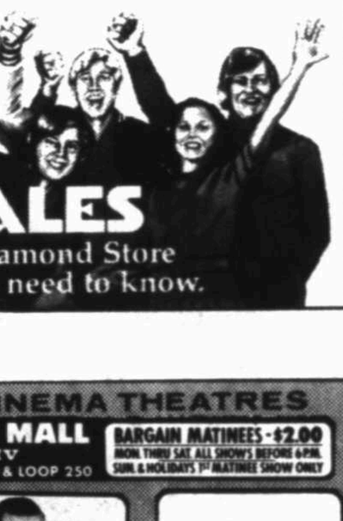

"On one level, 'Chiefs' is a suspense story about a series of undiscovered murders over a period of 40 years," explains Heston. "On another level, it is a very reasonable depiction of what happened in a small Southern town between 1924 and 1963 in the perception of the black community's problems, rights and aspirations.

The film was shot primarily in Chester, S.C., and many local people worked as extras. Heston tells about one of them coming up to him after they completed the scene where he presents Billy Dee Williams to the city council as a candidate for the job of police chief.

Heavens viewed through flying observatory

By RICHARD F. HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

SOMEWHERE OVER THE U.S. NORTHWEST — Astronomer Reinhard Genzel leaned against the cold airplane wall and stared at his computer screen, looking perplexed as a green line zigzagged across it. The telescope in front of him was trained out the side of the C-141 toward NGC 7027, a dazzling clump of gas and dust surrounding the glowing remains of a dying star.

Genzel, flying with colleagues Charles Townes and Michael Werner, had expected to see strong infrared light shining from this bright globular cluster. Either the cluster or the equipment wasn't behaving as advertised.

As the scientists pondered, the Gerard P. Kuiper Airborne Observatory, flown out of Moffett Field in Mountain View, Calif., by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, headed to the northern border of Washington state at 41,000 feet, then southeast over central Idaho. Sightings of two other objects failed to shed light — infrared or otherwise — on the puzzle.

More than two hours into the flight, the observatory turned east and the telescope locked in on W3, a cloud of dust and gas inside which stars appear to be forming. Genzel, by now a bit agitated by the nondescript data he'd been recording, started the computer once again. This time he looked up excitedly as the computer traced a bold hump.

The tension suddenly slid away as the astronomy team gathered around to admire the computer curve the way a fisherman admires a 14-inch trout. "There's nothing like some real data to cheer up the troops," Werner said as he leaned over the back of Genzel's chair.

SO WENT ANOTHER night aboard the world's only full-time flying observatory. Nobody ever figured out what had gone awry early on, though Townes suspected ice on the telescope lens rather than trouble in the heavens.

Before the night was over, the astronomers would be rewarded for their patience. Ten handsome pieces of data from distant galaxies and our own Milky Way were collected as the converted cargo jet lumbered over nine Western states.

A hole in the port side of the jet opens in flight to reveal a yard-wide telescope tailored to pick up faint traces of infrared light. This light is one of the most information-packed "colors" in the universe. Just as visible light reveals certain things about its source (white hot steel is hotter than glowing red steel), infrared light carries information across the universe about the chemical composition of distant bodies, along with their temperatures and densities.

Unlike visible light, infrared can pass through clouds, as any sunbather can attest. This quality makes it a powerful tool for "seeing" through space dust and into the clouds that swaddle "stellar nurseries," where stars are born.

"INFRARED light (and radio waves) have really changed the game of looking at our own galaxy," said Townes, a world-renowned professor at the University of California-Berkeley.

Most infrared light, however, is absorbed by the earth's atmosphere, severely hampering attempts to "gaze" into space from the earth at this wavelength. But because even a few points of infrared data can reveal so much about the nature and evolution of the Milky Way and neighboring galaxies, astronomers find it well worth the arduous all-night plane voyage.

Life is somewhat tough on the plane. Crew members spend eight hours with headsets clamped over their ears and microphones hovering in front of their mouths to overcome the rumble of the four jet engines. The floor gets so cold that anything left on it freezes. And the only view of the stars comes through as fuzzy blots on the television set used to find and track the heavenly body being studied.

But that last point doesn't bother the astronomers so much. Their sense of revelation comes not from gazing into the heavens but from watching their graph for sharply defined data lines. To the trained eye, a collection of such readings reveals colliding clouds, plumes of gas and newborn stars across the galaxy.

The recent flight was part of a four-night run being conducted by the Berkeley group and Werner, an astronomer at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View. The Townes group is one of about 20 that use the Kuiper observatory regularly. It makes about 80 such flights a year at a cost to the government of about $6 million annually.

"OVER THE long run, we are trying to understand the history and structure of our galaxy, such as the formation and relative abundance of materials and the formation of stars," Townes explained before the first flight.

In particular, the telescope was tuned to detect various forms of oxygen in several objects, including the Orion nebula, which is in our own spiraling Milky Way.

Railroad retirement system unique

The Railroad Retirement System is the only retirement system administered by the federal government that covers a single industry. The system was set up in 1937 to provide financial stability among various railroad plans that were facing bankruptcy after many years of financial difficulties.

Telescope keeps eye on universe

WASHINGTON (AP) — An orbiting telescope is rewriting astronomy books with its discovery of new comets, giant rings of dust, interstellar clouds and direct evidence ours is not the only solar system in the universe.

Three new findings were revealed Wednesday as astronomers reported on the first 10 months operation of the Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS), a joint venture of the United States, The Netherlands and Great Britain.

"Man has always wanted to learn his place in the universe; IRAS is our first road map," said Nancy Boggess, program scientist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Newly found are three giant rings of dust in the solar system, huge dust shells around the star Betelgeuse and a mysterious object — possibly an asteroid or a dead comet — that passes nearer to the sun than any planet or known asteroid.

These are not as exciting as some earlier discoveries by the heat-sensing telescope, but are significant nevertheless as astronomers try to piece together the history of the universe.

Project officials reported earlier this year that the satellite had produced the first direct evidence of what may be another solar system besides ours — a vast cloud of particles circling Vega, one of the brightest stars in the sky. Astronomers said Wednesday the satellite's telescope, which detects infrared radiation from an object, may have located as many as 50 such systems in the heavens.

Other earlier findings: The detection of five comets, infrared clouds in interstellar space and large amounts of infrared radiation emitted by galaxies that are only smudges to Earth telescopes.

"IRAS is providing us with a steady stream of stunning discoveries; so far, the results have been nothing short of spectacular," said James M. Beggs, NASA administrator.

"We're getting a look at the universe in a way not possible before," said Mrs. Boggess. "It's a new window on the universe. A lot of chapters in the astronomy books will be rewritten when all the results are in."

The satellite has been transmitting enormous amounts of data since it was launched in January, "and we're just beginning to scratch the surface," she said. "We've only examined a small fraction of it."

The new object reported Wednesday is about 1.2 miles in diameter and passes within 9 million miles of the sun. It has been cataloged 1983TB.

Although 1983TB looks like an asteroid, NASA's Conway W. Snyder said its orbit almost exactly matches that of the Geminid stream of meteoroids, which are visible as a shower of shooting stars each December. Thus, he said, the object could be a dead comet whose ice and other volatile materials have boiled away during its frequent passes by the sun.

Rockefeller encouraged by election of Kentucky's first woman governor

Rockefeller

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Sharon Percy Rockefeller says she's encouraged by the election of Kentucky's first woman governor, but that doesn't mean she'll go after the seat her husband, Jay, is vacating after the next election.

There was talk last year that Mrs. Rockefeller, 38, might try to succeed her husband. But she removed herself from consideration in part because of speculation that he would seek the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va.

Although she stands by her decision, she sounded wistful.

"I wish I could reconsider," West Virginia's first lady said in an interview after Tuesday's election of Martha Layne Collins to the Kentucky governor's mansion.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, recalling his years with his brother, the late president, describes John F. Kennedy as "a brilliant flash of light in our lives which has not gone out."

The Massachusetts Democrat recalled walks he and his brother took, long conversations and days on the campaign trail.

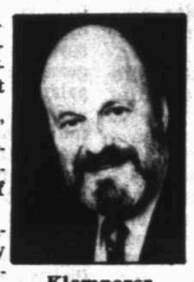

"He could be ironic and humorous about himself, a remarkable trait for a politican," the 51-year-old senator says in an interview for Sunday's Parade magazine. The 20th anniversary of John Kennedy's assassination is this month.

"Twenty years later, his spark still glows — and I do not believe it will fade and die," Kennedy said. "Jack is my brother, and I love him."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tululu I. Schaefer, the mother of Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer, died just two days after her son was elected to an unprecedented fourth term. She was 89.

Mrs. Schaefer, whose health had been failing in recent months, was transferred from a local nursing home to South Baltimore General Hospital late Thursday. Hospital officials said Mrs. Schaefer died at 5:10 p.m. of heart failure.

Klemperer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Werner Klemperer, the bumbling Col. Klink in television's "Hogan's Heroes," has a more dignified role these days — as a guest narrator for symphony orchestras.

"I made no switch in my career at all," says the 63-year-old Klemperer, appearing this weekend with the Toledo Symphony. He said it's just another form of acting.

Klemperer, who played the commandant of a prison camp in Nazi Germany that was virtually run by the prisoners, also has appeared as narrator with the Boston Symphony, the Chicago Symphony and the New York Philharmonic. And he performed in a speaking role last year with New York's Metropolitan Opera.

"The musical phase is merely a new dimension," said Klemperer, whose father, Otto, was a famous conductor and whose mother was an opera singer. "To narrate with an orchestra is standing on a platform on a stage and you're performing it."

Cousteau

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacques Cousteau, the sea explorer and inventor, had high praise for his "sailboat without sails" even though high winds and seas ended his attempt to reach New York a few days before Thanksgiving.

He set out from Morocco in the 65-foot "Moulin a Vent" on Oct. 12.

The venture ended in the Atlantic last week after the boat, the 73-year-old Cousteau and a crew of five were bombarbed for more than two days by winds of up to 50 knots and waves 15 to 20 feet high. Cousteau said the storm only confirmed his belief in the boat's innovative wind propulsion system, which "had a great time" before faulty weldings gave way.

"For me, the storm was only an insult," Cousteau reported via ship-to-shore telephone Thursday as the catamaran approached Bermuda for repairs. The vessel is powered by a 44-foot, non-rotating, moveable vertical aluminum cylinder with the tapered elliptical shape of two aircraft wings joined together.

Jacqueline Onassis Wednesday sued Christian Dior, Lannsdowne Advertising, photographer Richard Avedon, Celebrity Look-Alikes and model Barbara Reynolds in an effort to kill an advertisement showing a Jackie Onassis look-alike rubbing elbows with critic Gene Shalit, center with glasses; actress Ruth Gordon, center foreground; and model Shari Belafonte-Harper, on Shalit's left. The former first lady contends that the ad showing the double, peering over Shalit's shoulder, was "an embarrassment and ...injurious to my reputation, because it makes it appear that I am acting as a photographic model," and she wants to halt the ad campaign.

Employee may have leaked tapes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mystery of who leaked secret FBI videotapes in the John Z. De Lorean case has been solved, prosecutors say, with the disclosure that a law firm employee sold them to Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt.

James J. Smith, who worked for a firm which briefly represented the automaker after his October 1982 arrest on cocaine trafficking charges, approached Flynt with the tapes and was paid $5,000 cash for them, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Drooyan said Thursday.

But Drooyan said Smith would not be prosecuted on federal charges because "it appears there is no federal crime involved. The videotapes were released without any order sealing them or maintaining them as government property."

CBS News obtained and broadcast part of the tapes, which purportedly showed De Lorean celebrating an alleged $24 million cocaine deal that prosecutors say he hoped would save his failing car company in Northern Ireland.

Playing Cards stack up to 15th century deck

NEW YORK (AP) — An antiques dealer's meticulous sleuthing into the origins of a pack of hand-painted playing cards he bought in 1978 has paid off — an auction house says they've been identified as dating from the 15th century, the world's oldest known complete deck.

The research may pay off further if predictions come true that the 52 beautifully illustrated cards, purchased for $2,800, will sell at auction next month for $75,000.

The explanation for their relatively low price five years ago is that they were mistakenly offered at a Paris auction as an incomplete set of "unique" tarot cards, probably from the 16th century.

Unconvinced, the Amsterdam, Netherlands, dealer who bought them set out to prove they were older, launching the Sherlock Holmes-style detective work that positively dated them to 1465-80.

The dealer, who has requested anonymity, has now consigned the cards to Sotheby Parke Bernet, which will offer them for sale at its London galleries on Dec. 6. They were first previewed Thursday at Sotheby's New York galleries, where they were to be on view until Sunday.

The set consists of the same number of cards as modern-day decks, but unlike today's cards, they are larger and oval-shaped. Instead of spades, clubs, hearts and diamonds, their symbols are of the hunting field: four suits of hunting horns, dog collars, game nooses and ropes. Each suit has three court cards, depicting a medieval king, queen and knave.

By the mid-16th century, these symbols were already replaced by the signs found in today's decks.

Christopher de Hamel, Sotheby's expert on medieval manuscripts who followed up the dealer's sleuthing, has concluded the deck is "undoubtedly the earliest complete set of illuminated playing cards." He says his research also proves that they were made in Flanders, probably in Lille, now part of northeastern France.

The clues that led to de Hamel's conclusion included an analysis of the paper, painting technique and color and a study of the type of costumes worn by the cards' court figures.

The style of painting on the cards is consistent with that used in 15th-century manuscripts, and the Flemish connection was made through two watermarks visible on the paper. One, noticed by the Amsterdam dealer, is a Gothic letter "p" surmounted by a quatrefoil, a common mark found in eastern French and Flemish manuscripts in 1464-80. The other, uncovered by de Hamel, is of a shield inscribed with the Gothic letters "iado," and found in southern Flanders and the Netherlands about 1466-79.

Also corroborating the date are the hair styles and costumes worn by the medieval figures on the cards. They conform "with the height of court fashion around 1465 to 1485," notes de Hamel, "including short jackets and hair just above the ears, typical of the 1470s...and the pointed shoes which were going out of fashion by 1480."

But lest all this proof not suffice for some skeptics, the buyer of the cards went to the Central Laboratory for Objects of Art and Science in Amsterdam, where the paint pigments were tested. The mineral content of the paints proved identical to that of paints used in the 15th century.

Prospective buyers of the medieval cards will, no doubt, also want to know what game the deck was used for.

That answer, however, is not as forthcoming as that of the cards' history. Although the French game L'Alouette (The Lark) is frequently mentioned in 15th-century chronicles, the rules of the game are unknown today.

'Up With People' shares optimistic ideals with world

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — For 15 years, Up With People has sent college-age people around the world singing and dancing in shows steeped with a wholesome optimism the organization hopes to pass on to its audiences.

The formula is upbeat music presented by performers who live with families in the countries they are visiting.

So far 8,500 young people — 60 percent of them American — have appeared in famous concert halls, village squares or school gymnasiums in some 50 nations and been seen live by about 8 million people. Millions more have seen them on television.

"We interview about 1,000 applicants each month. But we can only take one out of every 17 applicants," Up With People founder and president J. Blanton Belk said in an interview here.

Though Up With People involves musical shows, Belk said, "We do not hold auditions. When we interview candidates we check for intellectual capacity, motivation, personal interests."

The organization today consists of five groups of 120 performers who travel for one year. Based in Tucson, Ariz., it employs a full-time staff of 75 and has offices in several nations.

Belk was in Belgium for the annual meeting of the Up With People board of directors, the first such gathering outside of the United States, and for a performance to be attended by King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola.

"We give young people an intensive education. We put them in a situation where they have to communicate with the world," said Belk.

All cast members start their year with a five-week course at the University of Arziona in Tucson. "They get to know each other and learn the show. There are also lectures by leaders of industry and others on at least three mornings a week," Belk said.

The organization has a budget of $10 million, half of which comes from sales of records and television and stage performances, he said.

Tuition fees — $5,800 per student starting in 1984 — make up for 25 percent of revenues. Donations make up the rest, said Belk.

Up With People, he said, began in the mid-1960s which were "the days of discontent on America's campuses. I wanted to know what young people wanted to demonstrate for. I got a group together and they wrote some songs and we put together a show at Cape Cod, Mass. in the summer of 1965.

"On Sept. 1 we had our first show in Washington, D.C. attended by 2,000 people. Afterwards, 90 youngsters said they wanted to stick with the show," he said.

Although the force of impact ripped the engine completely out of this Piper airplne, the pilot survived with only broken legs and other injuries after he crashed his plane onto the Harbor Freeway during rush hour trafic Thursday.

Small airplane crashes on freeway at rush hour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A light plane crashed on a freeway during evening rush hour, barely missing commuter-packed outbound lanes and leaving the pilot with a broken leg, officials said.

The single-engine Piper Tomahawk clipped power lines and burned briefly before firefighters extinguished the flames, said city fire spokesman Noel Murchet. Power was knocked out briefly in the area.

The two-seat plane came down in the northbound lanes of the Harbor Freeway at about 5 p.m. Thursday as drivers headed south from downtown Los Angeles.

Murchet said that the plane would have struck many cars had it come down on southbound lanes filled with heavy evening commuter traffic.

A motorist who swerved to avoid the plane drove into a guard rail, but did not appear to be injured.

The pilot, who was not immediately identified, suffered a fractured leg, bruises, contusions and a possible neck injury, Murchet said. He was in satisfactory condition at Daniel Freeman Hospital.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said the plane was based at Long Beach Airport.

Feminists will attempt to defeat opposers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feminist leaders promise to wage political war on those in Congress who oppose passage of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment and to make the ERA a major issue for the 1984 elections.

House Republicans in particular were criticized Thursday by the feminists who said only 27 percent of their ranks are sponsors of the new ERA compared to 73 percent of the Democratic House members.

"Talk about a gap," said National Organization for Women president Judy Goldsmith, alluding to the oft-used phrase "gender gap" used to describe the GOP's problems with women in public opinion surveys.

"Women are going to go to war with those in the GOP who are opposed to the ERA," said Kathy Wilson, the Republican chief of the National Women's Political Caucus.

"It's clear this is going to be a major election issue," added Eleanor Smeal, a political consultant who formerly was NOW president. "The Republicans say they are misunderstood on this. I don't think their stands have been misunderstood."

The ERA was passed by the House Judiciary Committee this week and may come to a floor vote as early as next week, the feminist leaders said in a joint interview. But they said the vote may be postponed until late January or February of next year.

A major defeat for the women's movement came on June 30, 1982, when the deadline for ratification of the ERA passed with only 35 of the necessary 38 states approving it. An identical admendment was one of the first pieces of legislation introduced when Congress convened earlier this year.

"We are adamant about getting a vote on the ERA in the House and the Senate before the elections," added Ms. Goldsmith, head of the 250,000-member women's rights group. "Women have a right to know where their representatives stand on the ERA."

While a floor vote in the House is all but assured, Goldsmith said the GOP-controlled Senate will be tougher.

"They will certainly try to resist it," she said. "They are trying to protect the 19 seats they have up in 1984."

Of the 17 GOP senators who are running for re-election in 1984, six are sponsors of the ERA and 11 are not, the feminists said.

Kathy Bonk, who works with Ms. Smeal, released her study of the ERA sponsorship on Thursday. Of the 241 sponsors this time, 196 are Democrats and 45 are Republicans. That means 73 percent of the 267 Democrats in the House are sponsors, versus 27 percent of the 167 Republicans.

Ginny Foat's ex-husband to testify about murders

GRETNA, La. (AP) — John Sidote says tormenting memories prompted him to tell police that he and ex-wife Ginny Foat killed for money in 1965, but defense lawyers at the feminist leader's murder trial say he was moved by revenge after she divorced him.

Sidote, whose testimony is the foundation of the government's case against Ms. Foat in the murder of Argentine toy manufacturer Moises Chayo 18 years ago, was to take the stand today.

Judge Robert Burns has ruled that only the murder of Chayo, allegedly lured to his death from the tough bar in New Orleans' French Quarter where Ms. Foat was a 24-year-old go-go dancer, may be mentioned in the trial. Sidote says he and Ms. Foat killed another person besides Chayo.

Sidote was brought to Gretna from a Nevada prison where he is serving time for manslaughter in the death of the other victim.

The trial's outcome will depend largely on whether jurors choose to believe the account of Ms. Foat, former California president of the National organization for Women, or that of Sidote, a tough-talking former Marine who was the second of her four husbands.

The accounts were laid out Thursday in opening remarks by Assistant District Attorney Gordon Konrad and defense lawyer John Reed.

Konrad told jurors that Sidote hid in the trunk of a car in which Ms. Foat drove Chayo to suburban Jefferson Parish, and she let him out to rob Chayo, who was carrying $1,400 to pay his son's bills at a New Orleans hospital.

At 62, Chayo was still "strong and robust," Konrad said, and fought back. That's when Ms. Foat bludgeoned him to death with a tire iron, the prosecutor said.

Sidote had agreed previously to testify against Ms. Foat in the other 1965 death — the killing of Donald Fitting near Lake Tahoe, Nev. — but reneged after he was given a 25-year sentence in that case. Charges against Ms. Foat in that case were dropped.

In an emotional 51-minute opening statement, Reed described Ms. Foat as a woman who came to Sidote thinking she was a failure and was in a "cage" of love, fear and beating during her years with him. He called Sidote a "charmer and a spellbinder."

He said Sidote threatened to kill Ms. Foat several times and once said, "I'll make you pay for my crimes if you ever leave me."

That, he said, was exactly what happened when Sidote — "a broken-down, suicidal alcoholic at the pits of his life" — went to a New York policeman in 1977 and said he and Ms. Foat had committed two murders.

Sidote has said he made the statement to police "to set my soul free, so I could kick my alcohol problem, not so I could get revenge on Virginia."

Since 1965, Ms. Foat has risen to prominence in the feminist movement. When she was arrested Jan. 11, she was California president of NOW and a likely candidate for the national NOW presidency.

The New Car is here.

Newly arrived: the Honda Civic CRX. And Civic CRX 1.5.

They sweep away all preconceptions. Just as the original Civic did a decade ago. With innovative aerodynamics. A two-seater design. And, for the CRX, the best gas mileage in America.

The Civic CRX 1.5 blends performance and fuel efficiency* with an ambitious 1.5 liter 12-valve engine.

It also offers an optional automatic transmission with torque converter lock-up. And both the CRX and CRX 1.5 provide torsion bar front suspension, a 5-speed manual transmission and a lockable stowage compartment behind the seats.

The 1984 Civic CRX and Civic CRX 1.5. Totally new cars from Honda. But then, that's nothing new.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

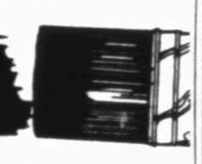

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

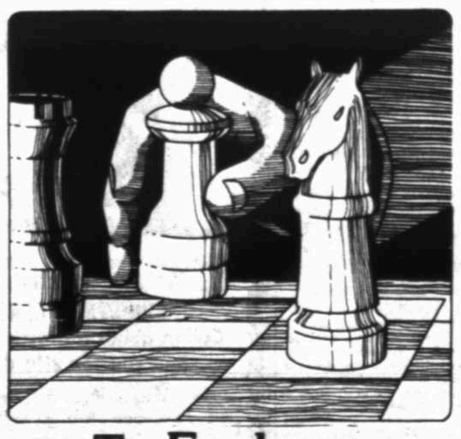

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.
