Gorbachev wins party's backing

Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev won Communist Party backing Friday for sweeping changes that would limit top officials to 10 years in office and create a stronger presidency that he might assume while remaining party chief.

The four-day national conference of 5,000 party members, the first since 1941, closed with Gorbachev saying the reforms would point the way to a new "democratic image of socialism."

He also found himself in the middle of an open feud between the No. 2 Kremlin leader, Yegor K. Ligachev, and former Moscow party chief Boris N. Yeltsin, which was played out on television and gave millions of viewers an unprecedented look at cracks in the party monolith.

Alexander Lukyanov, secretary of the party Central Committee, told a late-night news briefing that several resolutions were approved.

He said the conference backed Gorbachev's proposals to allow elected party officials only two five-year terms, with no exceptions.

He also said the new, stronger presidency would have the powers Gorbachev requested to settle matters of foreign policy and head the Defense Council, a position traditionally held by the party chief.

Also approved was Gorbachev's controversial recommendation that party leaders lead the corresponding legislatures, all the way up to combining the job of president and party general secretary. That could enable Gorbachev to take an even firmer grip on power by assuming a stronger presidency while retaining the party leadership.

Georgy Razumovsky, a non-voting member of the ruling Politburo, said 209 delegates voted against that provision, an extremely rare show of dissent in the party.

■ Heated debates liven up Soviet TV — 9A

An amendment calling for the party newspaper Pravda to be taken away from the policy-making Central Committee and turned over to the party as a whole received only 56 votes, said Tass, the official news agency.

Assessing the results of the conference just before it closed late Friday night, Gorbachev said: "Through democratization, economic reform and changes in the political system we will make perestroika irreversible. We will reach a fundamentally new state of our society, a new humane and democratic image of socialism."

Perestroika, or restructuring, is the name Gorbachev has given the ambitious reform program on which he embarked soon after gaining the leadership in March 1985.

In his final address, Gorbachev also proposed a final break with the Stalinist past by building a monument in Moscow to the dictator's millions of victims and said elections for stronger local and national legislatures should be held next spring.

Tass said Gorbachev presided over an "unusually stormy and long" debate on resolutions. That reflected the extraordinary spirit of open criticism permitted during the meeting.

The main drama on the final day was provided by the bitter personal dispute between Ligachev and Yeltsin. Gorbachev devoted much of his final 40-minute speech to a critique of Yeltsin's work as Moscow party chief before his dismissal last November.

Yeltsin appealed to the conference to absolve him of any blame for accusing entrenched bureaucracy of slowing down the pace of reform.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

George W. Bush briefs reporters Friday in Midland on the progress of his father's presidential campaign as wife Laura and 6-year-old daughter, Barbara, look on.

Son says Bush will be next president of U.S.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

George W. Bush returned to Midland Friday to celebrate Independence Day — and unleashed some fireworks of his own at his father's opponent.

The younger Bush, son of all-but-sure GOP presidental nominee George Bush, termed Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis a "Massachusetts liberal" with a "fuzzy" agenda.

The son — accompanied by his wife, Laura, and daughter, Barbara — met with reporters as the "second phase" of the presidential campaign unfolds.

"George Bush, despite what some polls say, is going to be the next president of the United States," the son said, referring to opinion poll results that show the Massachusetts governor ahead of the vice-president.

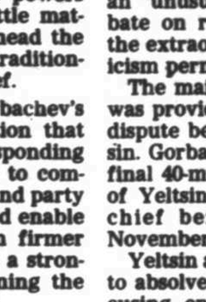

"I really don't give much credence to polls," Bush said. "I'm glad we're behind a little bit, because it keeps our people fired up."

Bush said that when the party conventions are over and campaigning heats up in the fall, voters will discover that Dukakis is "a Massachusetts liberal — and proud of that fact."

North will be in town to raise funds for trial

From Staff Reports

North

Lt. Col. Oliver North will venture to Midland next Saturday, July 9, for a family barbeque at the Midland Country Club.

The gathering will be hosted by a group of Midlanders interested in helping with the retired Marine's legal defense fund, said William Kleine, a sponsor.

"The group of sponsors believes in Oliver North. I think it will be exciting for Midland," Kleine said.

North, a controversial key player in the 1986 Iran Contra arms-for-hostages scandal, is currently under federal indictment for his role in the matter.

Invitations were sent out this week for the barbeque, but anyone wishing to pay the $150-per-family ticket price may attend, Kleine said.

Money raised from the ticket proceeds will go to the North Defense Trust Fund.

A private reception will be held for North at 5:30 p.m. and dinner begins at 6:30 p.m.

At the barbeque, North will mingle with supporters and give a speech on his love for the country, according to the invitation.

"We are stressing the opportunity that Midland will have. The event is geared for the family and his remarks will be directed toward the youth," explained another sponsor, Beth Blakemore.

For further ticket information call 683-5384. Those who can't attend, but would like to donate money, may write a check payable to the North Defense Trust Fund in care of 200 W. Illinois Ave., Midland, Texas, 79701.

Crude oil dips below $15 per barrel

NEW YORK (AP) — A selling wave swept the oil markets Friday as crude prices fluctuated wildly and then slumped to their lowest levels in almost two years.

The contract for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, plunged 22 cents a barrel, piercing the $15 level to settle at $14.94 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude prices have not finished as low since Dec. 10, 1986, when the near-term contract closed at $14.92 per 42-gallon barrel.

The price on near-term contracts has dropped from $16.83 a barrel since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed on June 14 to extend its previous production quotas, which have not prevented an oversupply of crude oil.

Prices of refined products traded on the exchange were mixed Friday. The July contract for home heating oil edged down 0.06 cent to 41.02 cents a gallon. The July contract for unleaded gasoline settled at 48.35 cents, up 0.29 cent from the previous.

Traders noted that the chaotic activity was unusual for what typically is a subdued session ahead of the long Independence Day weekend.

Crude prices fluctuated in a wide range, trading up to $15.44 a barrel early in the session before dropping below $15 after noon.

The lower prices were met with strong buying from investors on the sidelines. "There's good buying around here," said Madison Galbraith, a trader at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. "The sellers are the ones who are hurting."

Analysts were divided over the reason for the selloff. Some said that consistently lower oil prices finally convinced investors it was time to swallow their losses and sell off contracts that were purchased at higher prices.

"They're having to cut their hurt," Galbraith said. "Those who bought above $16 a barrell...are trying to get out."

But others suggested some of the selling might have been undertaken on behalf of Saudi Arabia, which hoped lower prices would choke off oil revenue for Iran, removing a financing tool in Iran's 7-year-old war with Iraq.

Lower oil prices could cut off "the supplies of money to Iran and bring the war machine to a grinding halt," said Peter Beutel, an assistant director at Elders Futures Inc.

Carlucci suspends payment on contracts

Carlucci

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, declaring "we do not need to wait (for) convictions, or even trials," in the Pentagon procurement affair, on Friday suspended payment on $1 billion worth of potentially tainted military contracts.

Carlucci acted on the basis of information included in search-warrant affidavits that were unsealed by a federal magistrate in Dallas on Thursday. In the documents, the FBI said it eavesdropped as one consultant obtained and passed along inside information on nine contracts worth more than $522 million. They heard a Navy procurement official read off 10 sealed bids in a $120 million contract.

Carlucci also announced that the Pentagon was beginning suspension procedures against three individuals and a company named in the documents.

He said the Defense Department was reviewing existing contracts with four implicated companies and freezing new contracts on nine weapons systems.

"The affidavit provides the department with evidence concerning individuals and companies," he told reporters.

"The Navy has initiated suspension procedures with respect to George Stone, Mark Saunders, Joe Bradley and the Continental Electronics division of Varian Associates Inc."

The Navy said it would be unable to give full details on the contracts for which payment was suspended until Tuesday.

"Names of those companies and status of those contracts will be provided when the information has been appropriately verified for accuracy," the Navy said in a statement.

The Justice Department, caught off guard by the disclosures in Dallas, took steps to ensure that no additional affidavits or search warrants are disclosed in the probe.

At a hastily called news conference, Carlucci said the Pentagon would take further actions as evidence in the case becomes public.

"Wherever we have specific evidence, we will take action," he said. "We do not need to wait (for) convictions, or even trials, for that matter.

"We are in an ongoing dialogue with the Department of Justice," he said. "The Department of Justice quite correctly points out that what they are dealing with is grand jury information, and (it) would be inappropriate for them to supply this information to us at this time.

"But as soon as they are able to, they will be supplying information to us, and as soon as we get the information, we will act," Carlucci said.

He said the current actions did not gravely impair national security, but that additional suspensions might. "Clearly, anything that slows down the process of producing defense equipment or requires us to reopen contracts has an impact on our ability to get equipment in the field," he said.

Carlucci said the Pentagon was reviewing existing contracts with four companies named in the Dallas affidavits — Litton Industries Inc., Norden Systems Inc., Hazeltine and Emhart.

Norden is a division of United Technolgies Corp., the eighth largest defense contractor in 1987 with deals totalling $3.3 billion. Litton was the 14th biggest, with contracts worth $2 billion. United Technologies is based in Hartford, Conn. Litton has offices in Van Nuys, Calif.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Holiday weekend to be warm

From Staff and Wire Reports

Independence Day weekend revelers will have partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures to look forward to, with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms predicted, according to National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Saturday will be partly cloudy with a high near 90 and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds will be from the east southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Saturday night will be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low near 70.

Sunday will be fair with a high in the lower 90s, according to forecasters.

Friday's high of 90 was 15 degrees cooler than the record for the date of 105, which was set in 1964. The record low of 60 was set in 1936, and was nine degrees cooler than Friday's low.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms lingered over sections of the Panhandle and South Plains Friday, while isolated thunderstorms developed over the Big Bend Valley.

Meanwhile, the the Texas coast saw widely scattered showers and thunderstorms, the only other significant rain in the state.

The National Weather Service reported a nearly stationary and weak cold front extending from west of Sherman in north Central Texas southwest to the Stockton Plateau in the Trans-Pecos.

Skies remained mostly cloudy over the northwest sections of the state while partly cloudy skies prevailed over the rest of Texas.

Forecasts called for a chance of thunderstorms Saturday over the west and northern sections of the state, possibly severe thunderstorms in north Central and Northeast texas.

There is also a chance of thunderstorms over much of the rest of Texas Saturday.

NATION

Unseasonably cool air washed over the northeastern quarter of the nation Friday and rain was widely scattered over the Plains, New England and the South.

Low temperature records were posted from New England into North Carolina and around the Great Lakes. Elkins, W.Va., had a low of just 32 degrees.

Five inches of snow fell overnmight at the top of Mount Washington in New Hampshire, and the noon temperature was in the 30s at the top of Mount Mansfield, N.H.

Also about noon, there were thundershowers over southern New Hampshire, at Nashua, Derry and Manchester.

Afternoon showers and thunderstorms extended from southern Maine across central New England and eastern New York state.

Showers with occasional thunder and lightning were scattered over the Texas Panhandle into southeastern New Mexico.

For Saturday, scattered showers were forecast over northern Maine. Showers and thunderstorms were forecast over Florida, Alabama, northern Mississippi, Arkansas, southern Missouri, Oklahoma and northwestern Texas.

BUSH

"When the people get a clear focus, take a hard look, the American people will be for our dad," he said.

Bush recalled when his father was behind in polls taken during the string of primaries, "he performed like a heavyweight champ."

Dukakis has taken stands on two issues that show he is a liberal who Texas voters will not support, Bush said.

A state program backed by Dukakis — and since discontinued — allowed convicted murderers with life sentences weekend furloughs. In one instance, an inmate on furlough raped and beat a woman, Bush said.

In the other instance, the Massachusetts governor vetoed a bill that would have allowed public school students in that state to say the pledge of allegiance to the United States flag, Bush said.

"He has a liberal record, and the polls don't reflect that yet," he noted.

While blasting Dukakis, the younger Bush also praised his father for his "warmth, caring for people combined with his experience."

The Bush presidency will mirror the Reagan years in politcal philosophy, though if elected the vice-president likely will emphasize education and environmental issues more than his predecessor, Bush said.

When asked about Dukakis' rumored choice of Ohio Senator John Glenn as a running mate, Bush said the former astronaut would be a "good choice."

"He is a decent, solid American," he said of Glenn. "Liberal, but decent and solid, and from an important state." He added: "John Glenn will not screw up the ticket for Mike Dukakis."

Bush — a Midlander who is living in Washington D.C. while serving as a key campaign adviser to his father — said the choice of a running mate on the GOP ticket has not been made.

"He has not really begun to focus at all" on the choice, he said, adding the Bush camp is waiting for Dukakis' pick as veep.

When the vice-president makes his choice, it might be a woman, Bush said.

"I know a woman is being considered as a running mate," he said without naming her.

Questions about his unpopularity with women — the so-called "gender gap", the Pentagon procurement scandal, and the "wimp factor" will not harm the vice-president in the election, his son contends.

"The truth of the matter is, he is what he is," he said.

"What you see in George Bush is what you get, which is experienced, dedicated, loyal, steady."

Dukakis' lack of experience in foreign policy will be one of the crucial campaign issues, Bush noted.

In his foreign affairs naivete, the Democratic contender resembles another "governor as president" who was a "total failure," Bush said referring to former President Jimmy Carter.

The largest single weapons system on which payments are being frozen is called the Anti-Submarine Operating Center, known as ASWOC, a $712 million system of shore-based command and control centers to coordinate efforts to locate, and in time of war, destroy submarines.

Carlucci said that the contracts provided for suspension of payment, and possibly recouping profits from the companies, but did not spell out whether work would continue on the affected weapons systems.

The Dallas affidavits disclosed that FBI agents eavesdropped as Stone, a Navy procurement official, read to Saunders, a consultant, the secret bids from 10 companies competing for a $120 million Advanced Tactical Air Command and Control system. Payments on that system, known as ATACC, were also suspended Friday, Carlucci said.

Saunders is a former Navy procurement officer convicted of and fired for stock trading on insider Navy information in 1982. The FBI said Saunders was receiving inside contract data from Stone, his Navy successor, and it "believes that Saunders is paying Stone for this information."

Stone is one of six Pentagon officials transferred to other duties after their offices were searched.

The third individual named by Carlucci, Bradley, has been placed on administrative leave from his job as vice president for marketing of Varian Continental, of Palo Alto, Calif. according to a company spokesman.

SOVIET

That criticism cost him his Moscow job and his non-voting seat on the Politburo.

He has identified Ligachev in foreign television interviews as the official most responsible for holding up reforms, and called on him to resign.

Ligachev thundered back in a speech Friday that he made his region self-sufficient in food while workin g as a party leader in Siberia, but "the district where you, Boris, worked for nine years now has rationing of food."

Gorbachev broke in at one point to quiet delegates and make sure Yeltsin could finish his address. As he closed the session he gave a lengthy account of Yelstin's failings.

Resolutions adopted by the conference were not published immediately but Razumovsky, a Gorbachev protege, told the news conference the Soviet leader has won his fight to reform the political system.

About the dissenting votes, Razumovsky said: "Nothing of the kind has happened for a long time at a similar forum."

In his closing remarks, Gorbachev said the Central Committee and other party organs should settle questions of political reform on an urgent basis so a fall session of the Supreme Soviet can begin to implement it. He said elections for the new legislatures could be held next April.

Referring to his proposals for a new 2,250-member Chamber of People's Deputies, a smaller and more active Supreme Soviet, and for presidential powers over defense and foreign policy, he said: "the conference will continue living in the society, in the discussions in the society, but now we know how we must transform the political system."

DEATHS

Survivors include his mother, Dora Olivas Lujan of Odessa; three daughters, Diana Rios, Dora Lujan and Loanna Lujan, all of Odessa; three sisters, Alicia Muniz of Monahans, Maria Elidia Lujan of Rancho, Calif., and Ida Hernandez of Dallas; five grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Hearing slated on foreign labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Lamar Smith and one of the principal authors of the 1986 immigration reform act will conduct a congressional hearing in San Angelo on the difficulties ranchers face in hiring cowboys now that it is "virtually impossible" to use foreign labor.

The hearing is scheduled for Monday, July 11, at the San Angelo Convention Center, Smith's office announced.

Smith, a San Antonio Republican, has introduced legislation to ease restrictions on the use of foreign labor by ranchers.

He will be joined at the hearing by Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., chairman of the House subcommittee on immigration. Mazzoli was a principal author of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

The hearing will be conducted by the House Judiciary Committee.

"Cattle raisers and sheep and goat herders have had a tough time since the immigration overhaul of two years ago," Smith said. "That's because the Labor Department has made it virtually impossible for them to continue getting the foreign labor they have relied on for so many years."

Big Lake will have July 4 celebration

BIG LAKE — The Big Lake Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a July 4th Celebration in the Reagan County Park.

The day's activities begin with an 11 a.m. parade featuring antique, classic and street rods from various San Angelo clubs. The vehicles will be on display in the park for the general public to view in the early afternoon.

A barbecue sold by the plate will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The West Tex Sky Sports will have two parachutists jump into the park at 1:30 p.m. Games for the family are planned during the afternoon.

The public is invited to attend.

Entomologist's research flies in face of tradition

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wasp larvae or water bug eggs are fine, but Gene DeFoliart prefers deep-fried greater wax moth larvae, which taste just like bacon.

"Insects are as nutritionally valuable as many kinds of meat animals," said the University of Wisconsin entomologist, who has been promoting bugs as a staple since around 1974.

"They are the most protein available to people who don't have anything else. They also have a good fat, vitamin and mineral content."

DeFoliart, who snacks on the critters himself once in a while, finds ways to use them as cheap feed supplements in poor countries.

There are 500 different insect species worldwide eaten by people in nearly three dozen Asian, African and South and Central American countries, he said.

DeFoliart said he is concerned many people in developing countries are being pressured to consume less nutritional alternatives to insects because of growing Western influence on those areas.

"It's not a goal of ours to get people in the United States to eat insects," DeFoliart said. "But we don't think we should stand in the way in places where they are being used."

In Mexico, a favorite is wasp larvae, which taste like almonds. Various ants taste like lemon, nuts or cola.

Certain types of water bug egg, which taste like shrimp, are harvested for Mexican caviar and served in the best restaurants. Another delicacy is escamoles, or immature ants.

In 1983, the Thai government began urging farmers not to spray crop-damaging grasshoppers, but catch them, DeFoliart said.

Soon after, fried grasshoppers became a favorite. "They hawked them in the streets of Bangkok and served them in the best restaurants," said DeFoliart.

"Termites are particularly important in some parts of Africa. The termites we're talking about are much bigger than the ones you see here," he said. "Some of these have a wingspan of 4 to 6 inches."

DeFoliart is involved in two projects to determine the value and feasibility of using insects as feed supplements.

This spring, Nepalese farmers are harvesting a species of large brown cricket for poultry feed in place of imported fish meal, an expensive item.

In Mexico and Central America, Wisconsin researchers are raising crickets for poultry, swine, and pond fish food, as well as human consumption, DeFoliart said.

Similar efforts in the United States, involving mormon crickets primarily found in the West, have had little success.

"We have not yet found a feasible way to mass produce them so that crickets can compete economically with soybean meal," DeFoliart said.

One of his less important pet projects is to someday market three types of insect food for human consumption in the United States: cricket nymphs; bee brood, which is the pupae stage of the drone bee; and greater wax moth larvae.

"If they're ever on the market they'll probably be expensive. It will be a novelty item for a cocktail party," he said.

Colleges often find world hunger courses hard to digest

By LEE MITGANG

HAMILTON, N.Y. (AP) — A year later, the student's question still disturbs philosophy professor Jeffrey Barker.

"Why do we have to study world hunger?" the student asked Barker, who teaches a course on "Contemporary Moral Problems," including a unit on hunger, at Albright College in Reading, Pa. "We've already solved that problem. We had 'Live Aid.' It's no longer in the news."

Barker's anecdote became a favorite at a conference on how to teach undergraduates about world hunger held at Colgate University this month. It drew 68 college professors from 50 schools in 21 states.

The student's question also illustrated two sad truths. Apart from attending benefit concerts like "Live Aid," which sent millions of dollars to starving African nations in 1985, American students seem barely aware of world hunger and where and why it occurs. And most colleges do little to end that ignorance.

The conference enabled college professors to swap lesson ideas, such as assigning students to spend only a dollar a day on food to experience how poor people have to stretch their money.

They also got firsthand reports on food problems and solutions in Ethiopia, India and other hungry nations, presented by veteran relief workers from eight religious organizations.

Frank Conlon, program director for Africa with Lutheran World Relief, showed how simple technologies are helping West Africans survive: animal power harnessed for irrigation, cow manure turned into natural gas to fuel stoves and lanterns, special ditches dug to keep goats from gardens.

Alan Berg, nutrition adviser to the World Bank, told of the baffling insistence of Javanese mothers to nurse their infants only with their le[illegible]ore[illegible]which commonly leads to malnutrition.

Such hard realities of other countries' efforts to feed their people seldom reach college classrooms in the United States.

"Step 1 is information — many of my students don't even know where these countries are," said Barker.

"Hunger at the college level is dealt with by taking walkathons or swims. We've let hunger on campus but not in the classroom. We want it in the official curriculum," said Monsignor Robert J. Coll, executive director of Interfaith Hunger Appeal, a New York-based umbrella organization representing Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish relief services which cosponsored the meeting with Colgate.

The point of such courses is not to create legions of altruistic student volunteers flocking to Third World countries. "Hunger field work is no place for amateurs," said Coll. "It's expensive and it's dangerous."

What's needed, said Coll and other conference organizers, is activism steeped in knowledge of how U.S. corporate and governmental policies affect hungry nations, sometimes for the worse.

"I'm not training Peace Corps volunteers. I'm training citizens of the world," said Gary Larson, himself a former Peace Corps worker in Gambia who now teaches biology at Bethany College in West Virginia.

Such courses should also lead students and teachers to ponder that universities may themselves be culprits in worsening world hunger, said Jack Kloppenburg, a rural sociologist from the University of Wisconsin.

Kloppenburg gave an example: university and corporate biotechnologists have collaborated for years to develop heartier seeds for various crops, and they've often gathered rare varieties from Third World countries. They claim such genetic resources are mankind's "common heritage," like the air we breathe, and resist the idea that countries should be compensated for those resources.

Bells ring out at carillon towers

NEW YORK (AP) — From Manhattan's Morningside Heights here to the campus of the University of California in Berkeley, and from Lake Wales, Fla., to the Houses of Parliament in Ottawa, bells are ringing.

Ditto throughout the Netherlands and Belgium and parts of France and West Germany. These are not just any bells, but carillons — musical instruments housed in towers and played by experts who may have learned their art at Mechelen in Belgium or Amersfoort in the Netherlands, or the University of Kansas in Lawrence or Berkeley or Springfield, Ill.

Carillonneurs love to get together, it seems, so there are a number of international carillon festivals in the United States each year — at the Bok Tower Gardens in Lake Wales, in Berkeley, in Springfield. This is in addition to the concerts the local carillonneur will give throughout the year — once a week, perhaps, or even more often.

Some suggest that the roots of the carillon date back to Chinese dynasties of 2,000 years ago, when bells were cast, tuned in foundries and sounded. But many experts say the carillon as we know it today developed in Europe in the Middle Ages, in the region known as the Low Countries and now centered on Belgium and the Netherlands.

Towers in the Low Countries had a large bell for striking the hour and warning citizens of fire, flood or invasion. Eventually, smaller bells were added.

Carillons are most often played from wooden keyboards whose keys are attached by wires to the clappers of stationary bells. In addition to the keyboard, there is a pedal board somewhat similar to that of an organ.

The carillon player may have at his disposal up to 70-odd bells, weighing from about 20 pounds to several tons and spanning from two to five octaves. The Bourdon, or hour, bell of the carillon in New York's Riverside Church weighs 20 tons and is the largest and heaviest tuned carillon bell ever cast.

The church, on Morningside Heights near Columbia University, offers a rare opportunity to see the bells themselves, as one climbs more than 100 stairs, feeling as if the Hunchback of Notre Dame or his American counterpart might peer out from behind a bell at any moment. There's an earful of sound up there, too, when the 74 bells are being played, and a superb view that includes the Hudson River.

Some other carillon facilities — including Washington Park in Springfield and the University of California-Berkeley — also offer tours of the bell towers.

Karel Keldermans, carillonneur at the Rees Memorial Carillon in Springfield, sees the development of carillons, museums and symphony orchestras as measures of the artistic and economic growth of a country. One needs long-term stability for these things, he says.

He estimates that there are about 175 carillons in the United States, and that the number is growing by about a dozen a year. A good sign, he says. He also notes that the Netherlands, half the size of Illinois, has as many carillons as the entire United States.

Some carillons, like many of the "singing towers" in Europe, are housed in towers all by themselves. Others are in towers attached to buildings.

It's easy enough to hear a carillon concert: just be in the neighborhood. Stroll in the rose garden in Springfield, or watch the birds in the Bok Tower Gardens. Rest your feet after visiting the Luray Caverns in Virginia with a bit of listening to the singing tower there.

More programs offer break for college students

By NICHOLAS G. KATSARELAS

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Education was the last thing on Karen Hofman's mind when she trudged off to McGill University in 1984. Her first year at the Montreal college was a disaster.

"I wasn't doing my work. I wasn't interested," she said.

Instead of returning for the next semester, she spent a year studying cooking in France, learning French, working in Switzerland and traveling.

With her spirit renewed and her focus sharpened, she re-entered McGill the following fall, her grades improved and she settled on a major, anthropology.

"I was a lot more secure," said Ms. Hofman, 21, of Mendham. "I had a better idea of what I wanted."

She represents a growing number of students and others looking for a way to clarify their educational or career goals by taking a new path for a year or so — and at least a dozen organizations around the nation offer them help. Some college officials say such breaks help many students.

Ms. Hofman's year off was arranged by the Center for Interim Programs, a Princeton-based company that charges $700 to match students' interests with some 3,000 different offerings.

For those with an interest in art, the company has offered a museum internship on the island of Belau in Micronesia or a chance to study drawing, sculpture, printmaking and art history in Florence, Italy. There are programs in wildlife management in Kenya and Mayan archeology in Belize.

Those in other center programs help the handicapped, perform community services or work on archaeology projects in 35 countries, including India and the Soviet Union.

They may build a home from scratch in Minnesota, write for a magazine in Washington, D.C., or work for a health care service in rural Kentucky.

One student spent his time off sailing on a research vessel in the Caribbean. Another worked as a tennis pro in San Antonio, Texas.

The company has an alumni list of about 2,500.

Cornelius H. Bull, 62, founded the Center for Interim Programs eight years ago. "I was distressed by kids marching off to school and not knowing what...they are doing there," said Bull, a Princeton University graduate and former headmaster.

The time off, he said, gives students time to reflect on their goals to better plan their remaining years in school.

"We all need to take a few interims in our lives, to get centered, to expand our horizons, to grow and mature," he said.

Among similar programs around the country is International Christian Youth Exchange in New York, which has been in operation since 1949 and offers 35 programs in 28 countries.

"Students want something experientially to do to clarify their career direction," said Edwin Gragert, its executive director. "We've been just overwhelmed by people who want to take time off."

He added: "High school graduates are looking for things to put on a college application that sets them apart."

What do colleges think?

"There's a general feeling that it's a terrific thing to do," said Margit Dahl, director of undergraduate admissions at Yale University. "I wish more kids did it."

She said Yale offers its freshman class the option of taking time off before beginning their studies.

NATION

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space workers will hold a special Fourth of July ceremony when they move Discovery to the launch pad to be readied for the first space shuttle mission since the Challenger tragedy.

One of the five astronauts slated to fly the early September mission and NASA officials will watch from a flag-bedecked grandstand as the spaceship is rolled out of an assembly building into the glare of spotlights at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Discovery will be perched upright on a giant tracked transporter for the six-to-seven-hour trip over a 4.2-mile course to Launch Pad 39B.

The move is timed to avoid thunderstorms and lightning, which often occur during the daytime this time of year.

In a brief ceremony as the move begins, Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, will present the astronaut with a book containing signatures of the 15,240 workers here who have labored to return the shuttle fleet to space.

Commander Rick Hauck and his crew, Dick Covey, George Nelson, Mike Lounge and Dave Hilmers, will take the book into space with them on a four-day mission. Hilmers planned to be here for the rollout ceremony.

After Discovery is on the pad, employees and their families will be able to drive by between 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. Monday to get a close look before a service structure encloses the spaceship.

Jim Harrington, shuttle operations director here, said delays in preparing Discovery placed the rollout date on the Fourth of July.

"We didn't plan it that way," he said. "We had hoped to do it earlier."

Asked if a rollout on the nation's birthday might have an emotional impact, Harrington replied, "No doubt it will have an effect. The biggest effect and the biggest morale booster we can give ourselves is to move the shuttle out to the pad, because that's where it belongs. The name of the game here is to get the vehicle ready to fly, and that's what we're going to do."

He said checks of systems will begin as soon as Discovery is on the pad, and workers will begin preparing the spaceship for critical firing of its three main engines on July 24. With the craft bolted firmly to its launch mounts, the engines will be ignited for 19.4 seconds to test modifications and to give the launch team countdown practice.

Democratic Convention to have high-tech look

ATLANTA (AP) — Even the balloons and bunting are supposed to have a high-tech look at this month's Democratic National Convention.

"We want the people to see this thing as an organized, unified convention — people who've got their act together," Dan Lee, deputy chief executive officer for the July 18-21 event, said in an interview Friday.

Bold tones of red, white and blue will be replaced by "soft blues, soft reds and gray tones" on the podium. Lee said this "more futuristic look" will be used around The Omni and, to some degree, will replace traditional bunting.

"It's not exactly bunting," Lee said of the decorations planned for the skyboxes for VIPs. But he promised plenty of color using paint, bunting and flags.

Balloons in some entry areas will take the form of "air tubes," thick air-filled creations "that will be intertwined in some of the architectural structures," Lee said.

Although Michael Dukakis' campaign has yet to set final plans for the demonstration following his acceptance speech, Lee suggested balloons won't simply drop from nets.

"There are a lot of different ways to use balloons these days — balloon structures, different ways of releasing them," he said.

Still, Lee promised the celebration of the nominee will include "lots of flags, confetti, balloons, noisemakers, lots of traditional things."

Less dramatic moments in the convention are being planned with an eye toward projecting a calm, uncluttered image, a main goal of the podium design.

In past conventions, Lee said, "there were always a lot of people walking behind the speaker and everything. We just wanted to eliminate a lot of that."

So only a handful of convention officials will have seats on the main speakers' platform, and they will not be in the line of prime camera angles. Party staffers will be seated with reporters beside the platform.

Above, two giant screens will project closed-circuit views of the speaker, promotional films or graphics illustrating speeches, Lee said.

For the first time, the party will broadcast floor proceedings and interviews with various officials over a satellite feed.

Artificial heart research will be continued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Institutes of Health plans to reverse its decision suspending a $20 million program to develop a self-contained artificial heart, Senate and administration officials said Friday.

The reversal means that research contracts at centers in six states won't be halted at the end of September, but rather will continue for about 5½ years as originally planned.

The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, part of NIH, said in May that it was suspending the program at the end of the fiscal year and shifting its focus instead to developing a left ventricular assist device, which would help a diseased heart pump blood.

The decision provoked an outcry from senators in the states where the research centers are located. They called the decision "an alarming U-turn" and said the artificial heart program was a key component of the nation's leadership in biotechnology.

Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had threatened in a letter to insert an amendment into an appropriations bill to compel the heart, lung and blood institute to continue the contracts prior to undertaking new obligations.

Word that the contracts were being revived first came from Hatch, who relayed the news to a Utah center with a $5.5 million contract at stake.

"We heard and confirmed that the contract had been reinstated as of the end of the fiscal year, so that there will be no (funding) break," Roger Bliss of the University of Utah's Institute for Biomedical Engineering said in a telephone interview Friday.

Hatch told The Deseret News in Utah that he was told by Claude Lenfant, director of the NIH institute, that artificial heart funding was being restored. Hatch called the decision "good news for the millions who will need artificial hearts or their components."

There has been no announcement yet by NIH that the program is being resumed.

However, an NIH official speaking on condition of anonymity said, "The practicality is that a decision has been made" and that an announcement was expected as soon as next week.

The official stressed that the decision was not just a quick-fix, and that it was anticipated that the program would continue as originally planned.

Besides the University of Utah, the other centers conducting the research are the Hershey Medical Center of Pennsylvania State University; Abiomed Inc. of Danvers, Mass., which is working with the Texas Heart Institute of Houston; and the Nimbus Co. of Rancho Cordova, Calif., which is working with the Cleveland Clinic in Ohio.

In announcing that the contracts were being suspended, the NIH institute cited budgetary constraints and said it was not abandoning the total artificial heart concept.

So far, all five patients with the Jarvik-7 artificial heart have died within two years. The Jarvik-7 runs on compressed air and uses a portable power pack or other external machine. The program temporarily suspended by NIH is for development of an electric, totally implantable heart.

Lively debate spices up Soviet television

MOSCOW (AP) — Lively debate on once-taboo subjects, such as differences among the Soviet leadership, spiced up not only the national Communist Party Conference, but the usually dull state-run Soviet television.

During a Friday afternoon break in the final session of the first party conference in 47 years, Soviet television broadcast live interviews in the lobby of the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses with some of the 5,000 delegates.

Most of the discussion during the broadcast was about what one delegate called the highlight of Friday's session of the four-day conference, a speech by Boris N. Yeltsin, the ousted Moscow party boss and former protege of Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"It's the most heated discussion we have heard in a long time," a gray-haired delegate told a Soviet television correspondent.

A studio anchorman began the 30-minute broadcast and then switched live to the correspondent on the scene.

Delegates had just ended lively floor debate about Yeltsin's speech, in which he asked to be cleared of blame for criticizing other Soviet leaders and said reform was proceeding too slowly.

The discussion spilled over into the television interviews. Some delegates told viewers they supported Yeltsin, while others condemned his remarks as "politically incorrect."

Yeltsin was fired as Moscow party boss and removed from his post as a non-voting member of the ruling Politburo after a bitter speech to the party's Central Committee last October, in which he complained that economic reforms had stalled and asked to be relieved of his duties. His speech at that meeting has never been published.

"It's the most heated discussion we have heard in a long time."
— Delegate to conference

One delegate said the conference discussion about Yeltsin was a healthy sign that democracy and glasnost, Gorbachev's policy of openness, was taking hold.

"We can speak our minds openly and directly, without being afraid of anything," said Ivan I. Maximov, a balding metalworker from the Siberian town of Bilsk.

But Maximov said it is difficult for people to make up their minds about whether Yeltsin's criticism was justified because his Central Committee speech remains secret. "Glasnost must be deep; then such questions wouldn't arise ," he told the television interviewer.

During the conference, Soviet television and radio provided periodic newsbriefs with highlights of speeches and live interviews with delegates.

The popular evening news program "Vremya," which reportedly has a nightly audience of tens of millions of Soviets, departed from its usual fare of dull reports about the latest beet harvest or other economic achievement to carry extensive coverage on the party conference.

WORLD

Eastern Bloc praises Soviet conference

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — East European countries, where the Kremlin's policies are increasing pressure on their leaders for more reform, generally heaped praise on the Communist Party conference in Moscow.

In Poland, which together with Hungary has gone the farthest in matching or even exceeding Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms in the economy and politics, the state-run media have been in the midst of a love-fest, intensified by the fact that the Kremlin leader will be paying a six-day visit to Warsaw beginning July 11.

"In Poland, in our party, we are deeply satisfied with the course of the CPSU (Soviet Communist Party) conference," said a commentary of the official news agency PAP. "With satisfaction we receive the changes brought by perestroika and new thinking."

The "new thinking" at the conference "creates fresh possibilities of a gradual demilitarization and humanization of international relations," Foreign Ministry spokesman Stefan Staniszewski told a news conference Thursday.

In Prague, where officials privately say they are waiting to see whether Gorbachev will strengthen his position at the conference, the Communist Party daily Rude Pravo said the event "will be an inspiration and a source of practical enlightment for us."

If the Kremlin leader gets a mandate for more radical reforms, it would increase pressure on Czechoslovakia's leaders — installed after Moscow crushed Gorbachev-like reforms with tanks 20 years ago — to adopt political change and to reform economic structure more quickly.

"The ideas...are worth thinking about," Rude Pravo said.

In Yugoslavia, which broke with Moscow over ideological issues 40 years ago, the state press carried lengthy reports from the conference describing it as "historic, dramatic and exceptionally open."

Yugoslav media pointed to Gorbachev's words that there will be no prosperity for socialism without fundamental and deep democratization of the Soviet society.

All the Communist leaderships in Eastern Europe — many of them now more secretive and orthodox than the modern Kremlin — have followed the conference debate over the Stalinist past and the need to open up Communist Party life.

One exception was Romania, whose leader Nicolae Ceausescu has so far rejected any need to reform his rigid economic and political system.

The Communist Party daily Scinteia carried a four-paragraph report about the conference opening without any comment and did not publish any excerpts from Gorbachev's speech.

Gromyko given ceremonial post

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Andrei A. Gromyko was honored with the chairmanship of a session of the national Communist Party conference on Friday, one day after he was criticized for contributing to the country's stagnation.

Soviet television showed Gromyko, 78, standing at a lectern in the Kremlin's Palace of Congress as he opened the morning session.

On Thursday, Vladimir I. Melnikov, party boss in the Russian republic's region of Komi, told the conference that Soviets want high officials who served under Leonid I. Brezhnev removed.

"Those who in the past actively promoted the policy of stagnation may not serve and work on the central party and government bodies now," Melnikov said.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev interrupted to ask who Melnikov had in mind, and among those the Komi official listed was Gromyko.

The official news agency Tass said a delegate later sent a note to the conference organizers saying Gromyko, who spent 28 years as foreign minister, had devoted his life to communism.

But it added: "We have worked him too hard. And comrade Gromyko today has fallen behind the times."

When Gromyko was named to the largely ceremonial post of president in 1985, observers believed this was a graceful way to move the elder statesman out of the mainstream of Soviet policy-making. The criticism of him at the conference might indicate he will be eased out of the leadership entirely.

Alleged drug dealers' plane given to DPS

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities Friday delivered to the Texas Department of Public Safety a $1.2 million airplane seized from alleged Colombian drug dealers in Florida and intended now to join the war on drugs in Texas.

"It's Christmas time on July 1 for the DPS," Col. Leo Gossett, Department of Public Safety director, said at ceremonies where he was presented the keys to the twin-engine Aero Commander 1000.

"It won't stop them, for sure, but it gets their attention," Gossett said of the message the seizure sends to drug dealers. "Realistically, when you look at it, it is a way for law enforcement agencies at the federal, state and local levels to utilize resources from the crooks to do their business."

STATE

The state police department is getting the plane under provisions of the Asset Sharing Program, a federal effort that turns money and property seized in drug investigations against drug dealers.

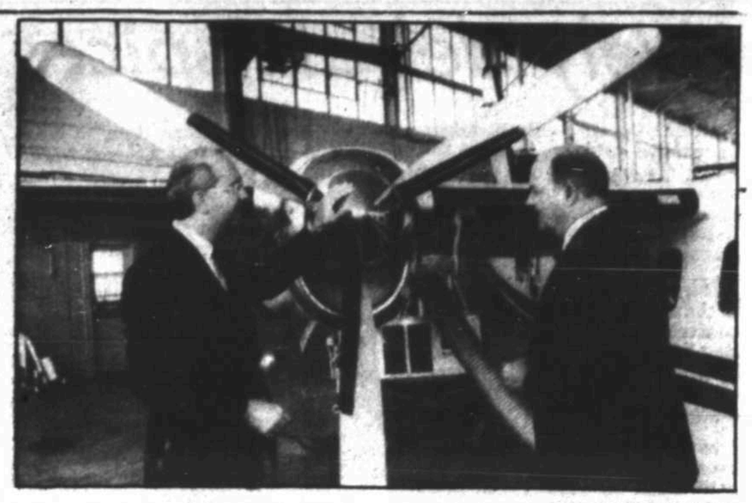

The plane, rolled out of a Houston hangar and flown to Austin to join the Department of Public Safety fleet, was seized by the U.S. Customs Service in Miami after a money laundering and drug running scheme was uncovered in a joint investigation by the state police and Customs Service.

The purchase of the aircraft for $1.3 million in cash, with the payment in used bills of $10, $20 and $50 denominations only, alerted authorities of the possible drug connection, Neil Lageman, director of the San Antonio U.S. Customs district, said. Federal authorities in Miami seized the plane in May 1987 as it was about to leave for Colombia, he said.

The case was cracked by San Antonio Customs agent Bill Hurst and Robert Nesterhoff, a Department of Public Safety investigator. Both were presented with award certificates by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who flew aboard the aircraft Friday for delivery to the state police in Austin.

"It's a happy day because the working relationship among our law enforcement agencies throughout the state and nation has come together to produce a prize of $1.2 million," Gramm said.

He said the plane was the most popular among drug traffickers because of its speed, payload capacity, long legs and ability to fly long distance.s

Gramm hopes group's drug use deterred

LUFKIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Friday he hoped a large law enforcement presence in an East Texas national forest would deter extensive drug use and other problems among members of the back-to-nature Rainbow Family, who are gathering for their annual meeting.

"I'm encouraged to this point," Gramm said. "Simply knowing the law will be enforced and have a deterrent effect, people will be less likely to bring in drugs and use drugs and be less likely to violate our fire code requirements. Given the drought, we have a real potential for a forest fire."

Gramm met Friday in Lufkin with members of a law enforcement task force handling the 17th annual so-called "gathering of the tribes," which is being held in the nearby Angelina National Forest just outside Zavalla, about 125 miles northeast of Houston.

"By letting people know we're going to enforce the law, I'm hoping the deterrent effect will ensure we don't have any problems," Gramm said.

Organizers had predicted up to 20,000 people would join in the gathering although the actual numbers have been just over 1,000. At a similar gathering last year, about 12,000 people met in North Carolina.

Forest Service officials have estimated their costs associated with the family gathering at $500,000.

"I wish the money wasn't spent," Gramm said. "In North Carolina last year, they left $200,000 worth of damages. But our primary objective is to see peope abide by the law.

Texas Department of Public Safety officers have arrested more than 50 people in the two weeks leading up to the Fourth of July climax of the gathering.

Most of the arrests have been for drunk and disorderly although U.S. Forest Service spokesman Carl Gidlund said Friday authorities made a drug bust overnight and seized a bus carrying suspected marijuana.

Forest Service officers have been summoned from as far away as California and extra Texas state troopers have been assigned to the area.

Meanwhile, family members Friday continued building health and sanitary facilities in hopes of coming into compliance with federal guidelines.

"I understand they're digging latrines like a son of a gun," Gidlund said.

U.S. marshals were enforcing a 700-person limit in each of three designated campgrounds until health inspectors approve the areas for up to 5,000 people. More inspections were planned for late Friday, Gidlund said.

On the Fourth of July all the participants will pray for peace, love and harmony and hope to gather energy to last them until their next meeting next summer.

Concert worries residents near Rice stadium

HOUSTON (AP) — Some residents near Rice Stadium worry a heavy metal rock concert planned this weekend may bring crime, traffic and noise to their upper-middle class neighborhoods.

The Monsters of Rock heavy metal concert is expected to begin about 1 p.m. today and last for nine hours, featuring such groups as Van Halen, Scorpions, Dokken, Metallica and Kingdom Come.

"I know there are people in my neighborhood diametrically opposed," Gail Williford, president of the Southgate Civic Club, says. "Most of us are willing to give Rice (University) the benefit of the doubt, they worked pretty hard to make this as positive an event as possible."

Police and officials from Pace Concerts, the concert's promoters, are expecting about 40,000 fans, about half the capacity of the football stadium.

"We're hoping for the best, planning for the worst," Houston Police Capt. John Snelson said.

Pace has hired 270 people for security work plus 90 off-duty Houston uniformed officers.

Homeowners say they're not so concerned with the number of concert fans, but are worried about the quality of the people.

"I will not let my kids five feet from the house," Southampton resident Bob Brandenberger said. "There will be drugs there, there's no question in my mind."

Rice assistant athletic director Steve Moniaci, however, said concert-goers will not be pillaging through neighbohoods.

"I think the majority are coming to have a good time and party in the concert," he said.

Judge says 'neigh' to farm animals within city limits

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Smurf the miniature horse, his girlfriend Smurfette and tiny Moo Moo the cow are farm animals, not pets, a court decided in fining the owner $189 for harboring livestock.

"You call this a farm animal?" asked Calvin Cooledge Lynn of Sacramento, gesturing to his 85-pound Smurf. "My whole three animals wouldn't make up half a horse. Man has bred these horses down for house pets like they do poodles."

But Municipal Court Commissioner William Brigance this week found the 63-year-old Lynn guilty of three counts of harboring livestock in areas zoned for human habitation.

City Animal Control Director Ruben Mora testified during the 20-minute trial that without the ordinance, there would be "goats, roosters, chickens, rabbits and ducks. There would be livestock all over the city."

Lynn offered the signatures of 68 neighbors who said Smurf, 24-inch-tall Smurfette and 28-inch-tall Moo Moo are no bother. "The horses don't bark, they don't bite, they don't hurt nobody," Lynn said.

Group seeks federal funds for habitat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservationists trying to preserve a ribbon of thorny subtropical forest along the Rio Grande, habitat for hundreds of species of birds and the endangered jaguarundi and ocelet, have begun their fourth year of wrangling for land acquisition funds on Capitol Hill.

A House panel voted recently to spend $12 million for buying up land in far South Texas, but backers of the wildlife corridor between Falcon Dam and the mouth of the Rio Grande may have to settle for less by the time the bill wends its way through Congress, officials say.

Bob Schumacher, refuge manager for the Lower Rio Grande Valley National Wildlife Refuge, says the area along the river encompasses four types of ecosystems, making it the richest and most diverse spot in the continental United States for plants, animals and birds.

The land along the river includes Chihuahuan desert to the west, the coast to the east, a temperate influence to the north and a tropical influence to the south. The result is thorny brush lands where the mesquite trees and the Texas ebonys are laced with Spanish moss and where hundreds of birds find their northernmost range.

As many 445 species of birds could theoretically be found in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas, Shumacher said, along with dozens of animals and other fowl.

"There's a long list (of species) that we pay special attention to and we're trying to take care of that long list by managing their ecosystem," he said.

"It's very important because our area in South Texas in the beginning was a paradise, with all kinds of species of birds and waterfowl and the javelina," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, a Mission Democrat who has been leading efforts in Congress to obtain funds for the land purchases. "But just recently, you look around and realize — 'Where has all the cover land gone?'"

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed 107,500 acres be purchased for the wildlife corridor, but conservationists believe that isn't enough.

Cyndy Chapman of the Frontera Audubon Society says a total of 250,000 acres is the minimum needed to preserve the Valley's rich ecosystem. That total would include the federal acreage, two existing national wildlife refuges — the Santa Ana and the Laguna Atascosa, and other parks and privately held acres set aside for conservation.

What has been acquired already is only about one-third of what the Audubon Society and other conservation groups estimate is needed, she said.

Of the 107,500 acres authorized for purchase by the government, Schumacher said 27,283 acres had been acquired as of June 22.

Congress appropriated $8 million toward the project this fiscal year, and $6 million in both 1986 and 1987 fiscal years.

The House Appropriations Committee decided recently to set aside $12 million for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, and the full House was scheduled to take up the matter Thursday.

"I believe that Congress should take fast action to protect this unique ecological area which is home to 56 types of birds and animals facing possible extinction," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Valley native and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"I think it is important that Congress move quickly to expand this refuge while land prices are a good buy for the taxpayers. This is a unique ecological area which includes the only remaining natural habitat with a subtropical climate in the United States," Bentsen said.

But officials concede it is doubtful the entire $12 million will be approved by Congress this year, with de la Garza saying it may be pared back.

Schumacher said dozens of birds and animals will have no where else in the United States to go if their habitat in the Valley is imperiled.

"If these creatures are going to be here in perpetuity we need to do something," he said.

The ocelot and jaguarundi, two endangered species of cat, need a safe corridor to travel under cover of brush.

Schumacher said the area now available for the animals "is too small to maintain a large population of these cats."

Couple's wedding moving experience

OTHELLO, Wash. (AP) — Curt and Kim Andrews' wedding celebration aboard a 71-foot-long 1910 Pullman rail car was a moving experience.

Once the couple tied the knot, a piercing whistle blew and the partly-restored coach carrying the wedding party chugged north, dragging 55-gallon drums.

The Andrews ended their wedding day last week by traveling 40 miles from Othello to Moses Lake aboard the rail car, stopping at Warden to pick up relatives for part of the ride.

"I don't think anybody in town is surprised," Andrews said. "It's gotten so the car is kind of an extension of me, people think of it when they hear my name."

When he bought the train car in 1984, he joked that it was lucky he was single. "I'm married to this car," he said then of his $50,000 investment that cost another $50,000 to refurbish. "A wife wouldn't like the competition."

But, the groom added, "It may take me a little longer to restore it now that I have other inter sts."

Dark Shadows ... a Wimbledon soap opera

Sundown at the Becker corral

By PETER ALFANO
New York Times News Service

WIMBLEDON, England — In true soap-opera style, Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker walked off Centre Court Friday evening with the outcome of their semifinal match very much in doubt.

Will Lendl, No. 1 in the world but frustrated time and again in his attempt to win Wimbledon, overcome what was a two-set deficit to reach a third consecutive final? Will Becker, a two-time champion, prevail? Stay tuned.

After 2 hours and 47 minutes of uneven, sometimes pedestrian play, the match between Lendl and Becker was interrupted by darkness after Lendl saved three match points to win an exciting third-set tie breaker, 10-8.

Becker won the first two sets, 6-4, 6-3, and would have been in the final for the third time in four years if he had made a routine forehand volley while leading, 6-4, in the tie breaker.

Instead, the ball plunked into the net, giving a reprieve to Lendl, who then saved a second match point on his serve.

At 7-6, Lendl wasted a set point, but down 8-7, he saved another match point, although he was serving at the time.

At 8-8, Lendl hit a backhand-volley winner to earn his second set point. He closed out the set when Becker sliced a backhand volley wide, attempting to pick off Lendl's topspin forehand.

THE PLAYERS packed their bags and walked into the dusk of a cool early-summer night. The match will resume Saturday before the women's final between Steffi Graf of West Germany and Martina Navratilova.

This will be the second time in four years that Becker is forced to complete a semifinal match on a Saturday. In 1985, when he won his first Wimbledon at the age of 17, rain halted play in his semifinal against Anders Jarryd of Sweden.

This was also the first time that Becker and Lendl have played at Wimbledon since 1986, when Becker repeated as champion, overpowering Lendl in straight sets.

He was on the verge of doing it again Friday, despite problems with his serve. Neither he nor Lendl, in fact, was having much success getting the first ball into play. But Becker was the better scrambler, coming up with a big serve or an angled volley winner when he had to.

He also had some help. Lendl lost the first set when he was broken in the 10th game, double-faulting on set point. Becker broke Lendl in the eighth game of the second set with a stinging forehand winner down the line, closing out the set on his serve.

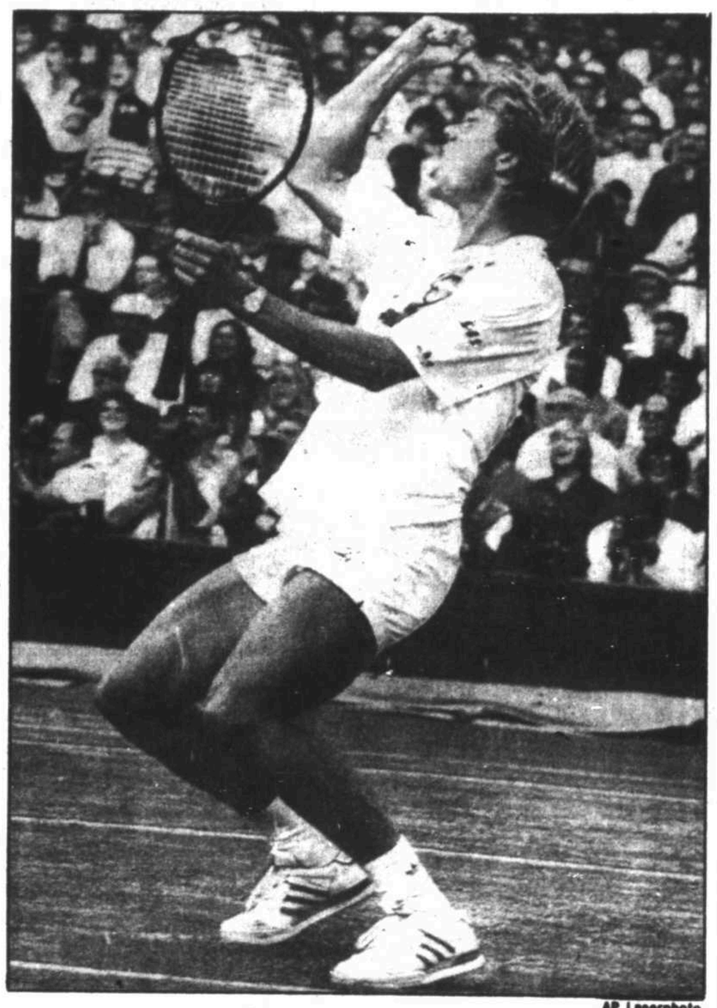

STILL, BECKER did not really appear to be in control. Rain had delayed the start of the match, then the weather ran the gamut from warm to cool, the wind making it feel more like autumn than summer.

At times, ominous clouds rolled across the stadium, then a bright setting sun made it difficult for the players to see.

Becker even called for scissors during a break between games in the second set so that he could trim his shaggy hair, which was falling in his eyes.

Both players held serve in the third set, although both had close calls.

Friday's other semifinal winner, Stefan Edberg of Sweden, makes his jubilation apparent after defeating Miloslav Mecir. See story, Page 2B.

Martina and Steffi, inevitably

By PETER ALFANO
New York Times News Service

WIMBLEDON, England — This was as close to a sure thing as there is in tennis. Even though Martina Navratilova and Steffi Graf had been in three tournaments this year without crossing paths, everyone knew they would finally meet on Centre Court at Wimbledon in the final.

According to London bookmakers, people bet so heavily on the likelihood of this happening that there was no second choice worth mentioning.

All the elements are there for a memorable match Saturday. Graf, the 19-year-old West German, is ranked No.1 in the world and is seeking her first Wimbledon title and the third leg of the Grand Slam. Navratilova, 31, is the former No.1, trying to win a record ninth Wimbledon singles championship, and her seventh in succession.

"The lefty serve-and-volleyer against the booming righty," was Pam Shriver's assessment of the match. "And for Martina, Wimbledon is the last thing she's holding on to, the last thing she dominates in tennis."

NOT EVERYONE, though, is captivated by the final. That it was so easy to predict this matchup is seen as an indictment of women's tennis, exposing the lack of depth in the draw and the paucity of close matches.

In a rather unflattering column in the Times of London on Thursday, David Miller suggested that the women were taking the prize money under false pretenses. He claimed surveys disclosed that most spectators come to watch the men at Wimbledon and that the women are short on personality, drama and endurance.

Miller lamented that the women's game had become a poor imitation of the men's, with players lifting weights, running sprints, trying to be like Boris Becker and Pat Cash. Then he contradicted himself, suggesting it was a travesty that Shriver could earn so much in this sport while being so unathletic.

Tennis may not be strictly a country club game, anymore — a round of quiche and Perrier, waiter — but in Europe, and especially at Wimbledon, there is still a belief that this is an endeavor for gentlemen and ladies. And ladies, of course, do not sweat. The British, or Miller at least, appear to prefer dainty little buttercups, camped on the baseline, playing interminable rallies.

IT SIMPLY is a matter of preference, Jimmy Connors said. There are those who find men's grass-court tennis equally boring, a macho exchange of serves and volleys, the game's equivalent of "in your face." Other shot-making skills are not required.

Others feel there is nothing more sleep-inducing than watching two baseliners slug it out on the red clay of Roland Garros in Paris for about five hours.

A more valid criticism of the women's game is that it lacks the overall depth of the men's and probably should not have a 128-player draw in the Grand Slam events. Ivan Lendl and Mats Wilander, the No.1 and No. 2 male players, are only marginally better than the rest of the top 10. Among the women, though, Graf and Navratilova are now head and shoulders above the rest, which accounts for their matches ending so quickly.

Today's Question: The pitcher with the greatest number of strikeouts in baseball history is: a) Nolan Ryan; b) Al Nipper; c) Cy Young; d) Dennis Leonard.

Friday's Answer: The longest game in baseball history was 33 innings.

Mid City Angels claim league title

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The final game of the Joe Mowles Memorial Tournament had everything a baseball fan could want.

Mid-City Angels pitcher Kerry Doan helped himself out with a two-run home run over the right field fence to give the Angels an 8-6 win over the North Central Cubs Friday at Sparks Park.

But Doan's homer was only the icing on the cake for a game that featured power hitting, clutch pitching and acrobatic fielding from both sides.

Plus, there was a little sentiment thrown in.

Joe Mowles would have coached the 1984 Angels, but he was killed in a car wreck in January of that year. Enter Joe Golding.

Golding not only picked up the slack on the ballfield, but in the heart of Joe Mowles' father Jimmy, who has remained active in local baseball despite family tragedy.

"He's been very special to me," the elder Mowles said. "When I lost my Joe, I just kind of adopted him and he kind of adopted me."

A TEARY-EYED Golding concurred.

"This tournament is very special to me," he said. "Joe Mowles was going to be the coach for this team (in 1984)."

The Angels were in the drivers' seat at last year's Mowles tournament, but lost two games in the finals to go home empty-handed.

But the Mid-City boys rolled through the winners' bracket of this year's tournament and looked en route to another win after building a 6-0 lead through the fourth inning.

Doug Sohres/Reporter-Telegram

The Angels jumped on Cub hurler Paul Rounding for two runs in the first inning, if 'jumped' is the right word for a rally that was set up by an infield hit by Abel Sanchez and an error by Cub shortstop Chris Connally. Chris Ward drove home both runners with a double.

The Halos added three more in the second on walks to Jeff Bishop and Chad Villarreal, another single by Sanchez, and a two-run single by Joseph Golding.

DOAN ADDED a one-out home run in the fourth, and the Angels appeared headed for a rout.

But they weren't.

The Cubs roared back for six runs in the top of the fifth after Doan had thrown a three-hitter through the first four innings.

Angels win again

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

A Midland Angel got caught running with his head down between second and third in the fifth. Wichita's defense didn't know how many outs there were in the second inning and it cost them a run. The Angels' mistake? ... no one even noticed.

That's how it is when things are going good, and for the Angels, life couldn't be better. After Friday's 7-2 win, Midland, the donkey's tail in the first half Texas League West race, was 11-3 and entrenched in first place in the second half. Wichita, losing its second straight at Angel Stadium, is 5-9.

In tonight's 7 p.m. action, the Angels throw Tim Burcham, 3-4, against the Pilots' Jim Austin in the third of the six-game July 4 weekend series.

Rader finds happiness managing family

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

There are no more hot August nights in Arlington.

No more dismal downhill slides late in the campaign, or bitter battles with umpires or media.

No more spotlight for Doug Rader.

But what remains is what's important to the former Texas manager, and the one time controversial skipper of the Rangers is just glad he gets to spend some time with family as he approaches his 44th birthday later this month.

"Last night was only the 16th time I've spent a night away from home since January," Rader said. "My kids are all teenagers now and this is the time of my life when it's important for me to be at home."

Rader, now a scout with the California organization, is away from his Florida home this week, in Midland for the six game series between the Angels and Wichita Pilots. He is here to preview minor league prospects and, he says jokingly, to keep an eye on Midland manager Max Oliveras.

Although Rader always managed to be center stage during his stormy tenure with Texas, he says the spotlight — a luxury he is not afforded as a scout — is something he never really sought.

"It's funny how people bring up the spotlight," he said. "You must like it, or you wouldn't have brought it up.

UNTIL PRESENT Texas manager Bobby Valentine came along, Rader had the honor of being the longest tenured skipper in Ranger history. He managed two full seasons (1983-84) and was released five weeks into the '85 campaign.

Although his most recent on-field stint was that of a coach for the Chicago White Sox, it's been three years now since he last stepped onto a playing field as a manager. He admits to missing the thrill of the job, but not necessarily the thrill of the job in Arlington.

"Sure I miss it," Rader said. "I didn't for a long time, but I'm starting to now. I guess it's like getting divorced, although I've never been divorced. Once you're married and get divorced you find you want to get married again.

"I always hate to talk about (the Rangers) because it always seems like sour grapes. A lot of it is better left unsaid. I didn't do a good job with the media so that might've hurt me. You've got to make your own bed."

Rader, who compiled a 155-200 record with Texas — his only managerial position at the major league level — was released 32 games into the '85 season for what a front office spokesman termed his, "9-23 performance (in '85) and his last place finish the year before."

Rader, who also worked as a minor league manager in the San Diego Padres system, said he hasn't noticed much of a change in what was once his team and what his now Valentine's.

"HOW GOOD is the organization now?" he said. "Everything's rosy on the surface but they're still not winning. All you've got to do is look at the standings.

"The media and public want to be deceived, I guess. If you're honest about everything, most people don't care for it."

So with the spotlight and pressure diminished, Rader can usually be found sitting back with his feet propped up somewhere in a minor league park, checking those who hope to follow in his footsteps as a player.

The former Houston Astro third baseman who finished his career in 1977 with San Diego and Toronto, compiled a lifetime batting average of .251 with 1,302 hits, 155 home runs and 722 RBI. A five time Gold Glove recipient, Rader recorded only 17 errors in 154 games at third during the '74 season.

While he would probably welcome the opportunity to manage again in the majors, Rader said, "it serves no purpose to speculate on what you can't control," and is comfortable and happy with his present position.

"I see a number of encouraging signs about Midland and the Angels. I'm delighted to be working with the organization."

OF THE six major league teams he's been affiliated with, Rader chooses not to name the one franchise he will remember most.

"When you start comparing organizations, he said, "if you single out one, it makes others seem less adequate. I don't want to inadvertently step on any toes. Let's just say I'm satisfied."

Coming back to Texas was "not that big a deal" for Rader, who spent so many years in the state both playing and managing. He enjoyed most of it, saying "there are some very nice people in Arlington and the metroplex in general.

"But my home is in Florida now. I think it would be a little remote for me to go back (to Arlington) just for a visit."

DARKNESS

In the third game, Lendl saved five break points, finally holding with an overhead winner. Becker fought off three break points in the eighth game, hitting two aces during one of the rare stretches when his first serve was working.

Edberg patiently awaits the enemy

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — People used to say Stefan Edberg had no heart at Wimbledon. They can't any more.

And to prove it, the Swede can point to a moment in his semifinal victory Friday over Miloslav Mecir that turned the match around and showed he had steel and well as skill.

For only the second time in his career, Edberg came back from two sets down to win as he tamed the "Big Cat" from Czechoslovakia and reached his first final at the famed Grand Slam tournament.

"It was hard to believe I could come back today," Edberg said after his 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 victory on a windy Centre Court. "It felt such a long way off. I was in big trouble ... then I got my act together."

Edberg will face the winner of Saturday morning's semifinal match between Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker.

Edberg's coach, Tony Pickard, said the comeback was the perfect answer to critics who had accused the Swede of being a choker with no mental toughness.

"Everybody's been knocking him, saying he hasn't got any guts and there's no fire in his belly. This has made an awful lot of people look a bit silly," Pickard said.

Edberg, who lost in the semifinals last year on a surface perfectly suited to his serve-and-volley game, looked to be on his way out again at the same stage.

For 2½ sets, Mecir thundered service returns passed him from both sides of the court. Even a volleyer as sharp as Edberg was completely bewildered by te pace and placement.

Then, facing three break points in the seventh game of the third set, the Swede suddenly remembered what was at stake and refused to die.

Forcing two errors from his opponent, Edberg got to 30-40, then pulled out a big service winner. He went on to hold serve and win the game.

From that moment, it was Edberg's match.

"That was a very important stage of the match," Edberg said. "I did not know what to do early on. Everything was very flat. But it was important to stay with him. I felt really good out there in the end."

Edberg said only intestinal fortitute got him through.

"It was a gutsy performance out there," he said. "If I didn't have guts, I would not have won the match."

Edberg, who saved a total of six break points in both the third and fourth sets, said he kept thinking about his previous meeting with Mecir, a Davis Cup match in April, when the Swede came back from 1-4 in the fifth set to win.

That comeback inspired him to repeat the feat on the Centre Court at Wimbledon.

"I had that in my mind today," said Edberg, who trailed 1-3 in the final set of Friday's clash. "I don't think I could have won today if I hadn't also won that match. I'm sure about that."

The only other time Edberg had staged a similar recovery was in the fourth round of the 1985 Australian Open, against home favorite Wally Masur.

He went on to win that title and said Friday's recovery, the greatest in a Wimbledon semifinal since Bjorn Borg in 1981, would stand him in good stead for the rest of his career.

"Coming back in this match is going to help me a lot. It's very important that you can play like that when you are out of the match. Then you believe you can do it another year," he said.

Mecir said he was disappointed, but paid tribute to Edberg's toughness.

"I think he played very well in the last three sets," Mecir said. "I made a couple of mistakes, but not too many. He was the one who was hitting the winners at that stage."

Pickard, Edberg's coach for five years, said he never gave up on his pupil.

"He had to stay there the whole match, otherwise he could not have come back," Pickard said. "The position he was in today was pretty well impossible. But nothing is impossible until the last point, and he proved it.

"Now he's sitting in the final."

WOMEN

And much was made of the fact that Shriver managed to work her way to the semifinal while playing with mononucleosis. The implication is that none of the men seeded that high could afford even a case of the sniffles.

IF THERE is a major upset early at Wimbledon, it usually occurs in the men's draw. Boris Becker was a second-round casualty last year; John McEnroe packed his racquets early this time. There are also more close calls, matches like Lendl versus Woody Woodforde of Australia, who is ranked only No.54 but took Lendl to five sets, holding a match point. When Connors lost, it was to Patrick Kuhnen, a little-known West German ranked No.90.

The upsets among t... ...n may have been less dramatic, but Gab... ...Sab ...tini, seeded No.5; Sylvia Hanika, No.15; Lori McNeil, No.10; Natalya Zvereva, No.8; and Hana Mandlikova, No.9, all were beaten at least one round earlier than anticipated. And Navratilova's narrow escape against the unseeded Ros Fairbank was as gripping as any of Lendl's close calls.

In general, form held among the men and the women this year. Grass is called the great equalizer by the players, but the French Open provided the upsets, with Navratilova, Evert, Sabatini, Lendl, Becker, Yannick Noah and Stefan Edberg all losing relatively early.

SO WHILE Navratilova-Graf has been a foregone conclusion, it does not lessen the anticipation of seeing them slug it out in saturday's final. It may not be Borg-McEnroe, but it is the women's equivalent.

Navratilova is the best serve-and-volleyer of her time, without peer on grass. Graf, according to Ted Tinling, a consultant to the women's game and member in good standing of the All England Club, is a tennis yuppie with a "go for it" mentality.

He compared her philosophy of trying for winners on almost every shot to the all-or-nothing philosophy of the modern-day brokers on Wall Street. Sometimes, Graf and the stock market crash.

Navratilova's comfort on grass — and the feeling that she has a divine right to the Wimbledon title — will make her tough to beat. In last year's final, she exploited Graf's backhand, slicing her serve and ground strokes to that side. Graf kept returning into the net in the 7-5, 6-3 loss.

Graf has worked on her backhand, she said, and can now hit it with more authority, almost as hard as her forehand, if not as consistently. Graf's serve has also been improving, Evert said. She thinks it is as good as Navratilova's.

Astros go 13 to beat Mets in back end of twin-bill

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Switch hitter Kevin Bass raised his average to .307 from the right side with a two-out single in the 13th inning that scored Billy Hatcher from second base, giving the Houston Astros a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets and a split of Friday's twi-night double header.

The Mets won the opener 3-2 behind the pitching of Ron Darling and Randy Myers when Mackey Sasser tripled home the winning run with two out in the seventh inning.

Hatcher opened the 13th with a pop-fly single off Gene Walter, 0-1, the fifth New York pitcher. One out later, Hatcher broke for second and Walter threw behind him, but first baseman Gary Carter was unable to handle the low throw and Hatcher was credited with a steal of second. After Bill Doran struck out, Bass, batting under .200 from the left side despite four hits in the opener, lined a single to left for the Astros' 18th hit.

Dave Meads, 1-0, who became Hopuston's sixth pitcher after being recalled from the minors earlier in the day, was the winner with two innings as the Astros snapped their three-game losing streak and New York's four-game winning streak.

The Mets, who trailed 5-3 after five innings, tied the nightcap when Keith Miller opened the sixth with his first major-league homer and pinch hitter Howard Johnson delivered a sacrifice fly in th seventh.

Houston starter Jim Deshaies allowed five runs and seven hits — two homers and three doubles — in 6 1-3 innings.

With one out in the Mets' seventh, Barry Lyons' fly ball fell just inside the right-field line for his second double. Ernie Camacho relieved and a wild pitch sent Lyons to third. He scored on Johnson's fly ball off Juan Agosto.

Craig Biggio's double, his first extra-base hit in the majors, started a two-run second inning for Houston in the nightcap and fellow rookie Louie Meadows hit his first major-league homer in the sixth on reliever Terry Leach's first pitch.

Deshaies was nicked for a run before he retired a batter on Mookie Wilson's fly ball double and a bloop single by Miller.

New York's Rick Aguilera, making his first start since April 18 after spending two months on the disabled list with elbow problems, yielded four runs — three earned — and eight hits in five innings.

After Biggio's second-inning double, he beat catcher Lyons' throw to third on Deshaies' sacrifice. Hatcher singled one run home and, [illegible]r Lyons picked Deshaies off second, Hatcher went to [illegible] on a double by Rafael Ramirez and scored on Dora[illegible] groundout for a 2-1 Houston lead.

Both teams scored single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings.

In the opener, Darryl Strawberry opened the Mets' eighth by drawing the fifth walk issued by Houston starter Joaquin Andujar, 0-4, and stole second.

Two outs later, Sasser drove a 3-0 pitch into the right-field corner, the 12th hit off Andujar, who went seven innings.

Darling, 9-5, scattered nine hits over 7 1-3 innings and Myers retired the last five batters for his 12th save, striking out the side in the ninth.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when right fielder Strawberry lost two balls in the sun.

Bass led off with a single and took second when Strawberry lost Bell's fly ball for another hit.

After Meadows struck out, Alex Trevino hit a fly to shallow right which probably wouldn't have scored Bass. However, Strawberry lost that one, too, for an RBI single.

McReynolds doubled in the New York third and later scored the tying run on a sacrifice fly by Johnson.

The Mets went ahead 2-1 in the fourth with the help of Meadows, the Houston left fielder.

With two out, Lenny Dykstra singled and stole second and Wally Backman walked. Meadows then misjudged McReynolds' line drive and it sailed over his head for another double. Dykstra scored but Backman was thrown out at the plate.

The Astros tied it 2-2 in the fifth on Doran's one-out single and a two-out triple by Bass.

NL Roundup

Reds 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Nick Esasky and Barry Larkin homered, helping Tom Browning to his fifth straight victory as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Browning, 7-3, gave up five hits in 7 1-3 innings and John Franco worked the ninth for his 10th save. Shane Rawley, 5-9, allowed five runs in eight innings and lost his third straight decision.

Cincinnati took a 2-0 lead after two outs in the third. Browning blooped a single and reached third on Larkin's hit-and-run single before Kal Daniels looped a ball to center field that took a high bounce off Bob Dernier's glove for a two-run double.

The Reds boosted it to 4-0 in the fourth when Eric Davis beat out an infield single and Esasky followed with his sixth home run of the season.

Philadelphia cut it to 4-2 in its fourth as Mike Schmidt singled with two outs and Lance Parrish hit his 12th home run of the season.

Larkin homered in the top of the eighth and Phil Bradley homered in the Phillies' eighth.

The fireworks night crowd of 56,502 was the largest in the National League this season.

Expos 9, Braves 3

MONTREAL — Andres Galarraga went 4-for-5 with two doubles and drove in three runs and the Montreal Expos beat Atlanta, the Braves' sixth straight loss.

Otis Nixon scored four runs and Rex Hudler scored three times as Montreal won its third consecutive game.

Pascual Perez, 5-3, went 6 1-3 innings for the victory. He extended his scoreless-inning streak to 22 before Ken Oberkfell homered in the fourth. Joe Hesketh pitched 2 2-3 hitless innings for his third save. Zane Smith, 3-6, gave up seven runs on 10 hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Padres 5, Cardinals 1

SAN DIEGO — Andy Hawkins pitched a three-hitter and the San Diego Padres beat the slumping St. Louis Cardinals.

Hawkins, 8-6, won his third straight decision and has allowed only two runs in his last 23 2-3 innings. He walked four and struck out two in his third complete game.

Hawkins had lost his previous three decisions against St. Louis since July 27, 1985. Jose DeLeon, 5-6, took the loss as the Cardinals fell for the 15th time in their last 20 games.

Once lowly Oriole's down struggling Texas

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mike Boddicker pitched his third complete game this season and Fred Lynn homered in the first inning, helping the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers.

Boddicker, 4-10, gave up 10 hits, fanned seven and walked one as he upped his career record against Texas to 8-3. Baltimore won for the fourth time in its last seven games.

Lynn's 14th homer of the season got Baltimore off to a 1-0 lead. Texas countered with a first-inning run on Pete O'Brien's RBI single.

The Orioles broke the tie in the second when Larry Sheets scored on second baseman Curtis Wilkerson's throwing error while attempting to complete a double play. Sheets had an infield single, Terry Kennedy also singled, then Wilkerson made his bad throw on Rick Schu's grounder.

Baltimore got two more runs in the third on RBI singles by Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray and added another run in the sixth on Joe Orsulak's sacrifice fly. Murray had an RBI double in the ninth and was singled in by Jim Traber.

The Orioles got to Rangers starter Jeff Russell, 7-2, for five runs, four earned, and 11 hits in five innings before Ed Vande Berg relieved after two batters in the fifth. Russell had won his first seven decisions this season before dropping the last two.

Athletics 2, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Mark McGwire snapped out of a 15-for-88 slump with a two-run single in the seventh inning that broke up a scoreless tie as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Toronto Blue Jays.

Dave Stieb, 10-5, had blanked the A's on two hits through six innings, but Jose Canseco led off the seventh with a double, Dave Henderson singled with one out and Carney Lansford was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

McGwire, who entered the game batting .236, then singled up the middle to give Oakland a 2-0 lead.

Dave Stewart, 11-6, also allowed only two hits and faced just 19 batters through six innings. Toronto scored a run in the seventh when Lloyd Moseby led off with a single, took second on a walk to Rance Mulliniks and scored on Kelly Gruber's two-out double.

AL Roundup

Tigers 11, Angels 0

DETROIT — Dave Bergman drove in three of Detroit's seven second-inning runs with a homer and a single as the Tigers routed the California Angels.

The Tigers sent 12 batters to the plate during the big inning. Bergman started it with his second homer, a shot into the lower deck in right-center off Mike Witt, 6-8.

Chet Lemon singled, Tom Brookens walked and Jim Walewander reached on a sacrifice bunt to load the bases. Gary Pettis singled, driving in Lemon and Brookens.

Walewander and Pettis moved up on a bunt by Matt Nokes. Pat Sheridan was walked intentionally to reload the bases with one out and Witt got Darrell Evans on an infield popup.

Mariners 11, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Scott Bradley had four hits, scoring three runs and driving in two, and Mark Langston got his first victory since May 30 as the Seattle Mariners handed the Cleveland Indians their sixth consecutive defeat.

Mike Jackson pitched 3 2-3 innings for his second save in relief on Langston, 6-8, who snapped a personal six-game losing streak. Langston allowed three runs on six hits and six walks in 5 1-3 innings.

Greg Swindell 10-7, lost his sixth straight decision, allowing four runs on seven hits in 3 2-3 innings. Swindell, who has a 7.34 earned run average during his losing streak, has not won since May 30.

Cleveland has lost 16 of its last 21 games.

Twins 5, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Frank Viola won his American League-high 13th game and Gary Gaetti and Randy Bush each homered as the Minnesota Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Viola tied for the major-league victory lead with the Chicago Cubs' Greg Maddux. The left-hander became the earliest 13-game winner in Twins' history.

Viola allowed seven hits and struck out five before yielding to Jeff Reardon, who pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Toronto's Ernie Whitt reaches for second base as Oakland's Walt Weiss makes the relay for a successful double play.

Paul Molitor, who had a two-run homer in the eighth against Viola, had a two-run single in the ninth off Reardon to make it 5-4. But Reardon got Jim Gantner to pop out, ending the game.

The Brewers have lost five of their last six games.

Royals 8, Red Sox 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kurt Stillwell doubled home the go-ahead run in the sixth inning, lifting Kansas City over Boston Red Sox and snapping their five-game winning streak.

Steve Farr, the fifth Royals pitcher, collected his sixth save with 1 1-3 innings of relief of Jeff Montgomery, 1-0. Steve Ellsworth, 1-6, was the loser.

Dwight Evans was 4-for-5 with a double, triple, two singles and three RBI for the Red Sox.

With the Royals trailing 7-6 after leading 6-0, Frank White and Pat Tabler singled leading off the sixth inning and moved up on a sacrifice. An infield out by Jim Eisenreich scored the tying run and Stillwell's double made it 8-7.

White Sox 2, Yankees 1

CHICAGO — Gary Redus greeted reliever Cecilio Guante with a game-winning single in the ninth inning, lifting the Chicago White Sox over the New York Yankees.

Chicago's first victory over the Yankees in six meetings this season went to reliever Bobby Thigpen, 5-5. Steve Shields, 1-3, was the loser and his error help lead to his downfall.

Fred Manrique opened the Chicago ninth with a single to deep shortstop. Ozzie Guillen sacrificed, but was safe at first when Shields muffed the ball for an error. Dave Righetti came in and struck out pinch hitter Darryl Boston before Guante relieved Righetti. Redus hit his first pitch down the left-field line for the game-winning single.

Ron Guidry, who had been on the disabled list with shoulder problems, made his 1988 pitching debut for the Yankees. Guidry gave up one run, six hits, walked two and struck out one but left in the fifth inning with the bases loaded and two out after throwing 90 pitches.

SMU breaks ground with new hoop coach

Shumate

Associated Press

DALLAS — John Shumate, Southern Methodist's new basketball coach, is the first black to coach any sport at a school trying to shake its conservative, predominantly white image.

"I wanted to be the next coach at SMU, but I had to compete against so many qualified people. But I overcame the odds," Shumate said.

The son of a Pentecostal Baptist minister, Shumate said he believes a strong work ethic got him the SMU job, which was announced Thursday.

"I think the best way to overcome odds is with hard work. And I'll do that at SMU."

The school's 1987-88 basketball team, under former coach Dave Bliss, won the Southwest Conference regular-season title for the first time since 1967, and a school-record 28 victories sent them to the NCAA tournament.

Despite the banner year, the Mustangs averaged only 3,528 in attendance at home games. And Shumate must recruit athletes under the toughest admissions standards at any Southwest Conference school.

The 36-year-old former Notre Dame All-American was head coach at Grand Canyon College from 1983 to 1986. He coached the Antelopes to a 58-33 record before returning to Notre Dame as an assistant coach to Digger Phelps. He has never been a head coach in the NCAA's Division I.

The former NBA star, who ended his pro career at 29, is no stranger to hard work. He earned his way out of a New Jersey ghetto on a basketball scholarship to Notre Dame. In his two college seasons, the 6-foot-9 Shumate fought to earn respect as an undersized center.

Shumate said he plans an upbeat style of play at SMU, describing himself as a "hands-on" coach who sometimes gets on the court to show players how he wants things done.

Shumate played for six teams in seven years during his NBA career. He missed 2½ seasons due to a potentially career-ending blood clot. The clot started in his left leg during his sophomore year at Notre Dame, but it became life-threatening when it moved to his lung.

"It was really scary," recalled Gary Brokaw, head coach at Iona and Shumate's college teammate. "For a guy that strong ... he was almost invincible on the court, and to see him down like that was shocking."

Filly brings more than pocket coins

From Staff Reports

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Tommy Joe Hoyt's Just Like Lace, a 2-year-old Bold Gun filly, took on a full field of freshman campaigners in Friday's $12,700 Pocket Coin Handicap and emerged with a 2 1/4 length victory.

Winning reinsman Joe Martinez was content to let Ribetjaws, Gohn Bold and Bold Warpath vie for the lead in the early going of the 5 1/2 furlong contest. He made his move at the top of the stretch, and pulled away to victory in front of Bradleys Khalie and Loose Lips Cash.

Ruidoso

JUST LIKE Lace has won four of her six lifetime trips to the gate, including two show finishes in stakes events and Friday's win in the Pocket Coin. The T.E. Davidson-trainee, who collected a first-place paycheck of $7,620, boasts a hefty bankroll of $41,669.

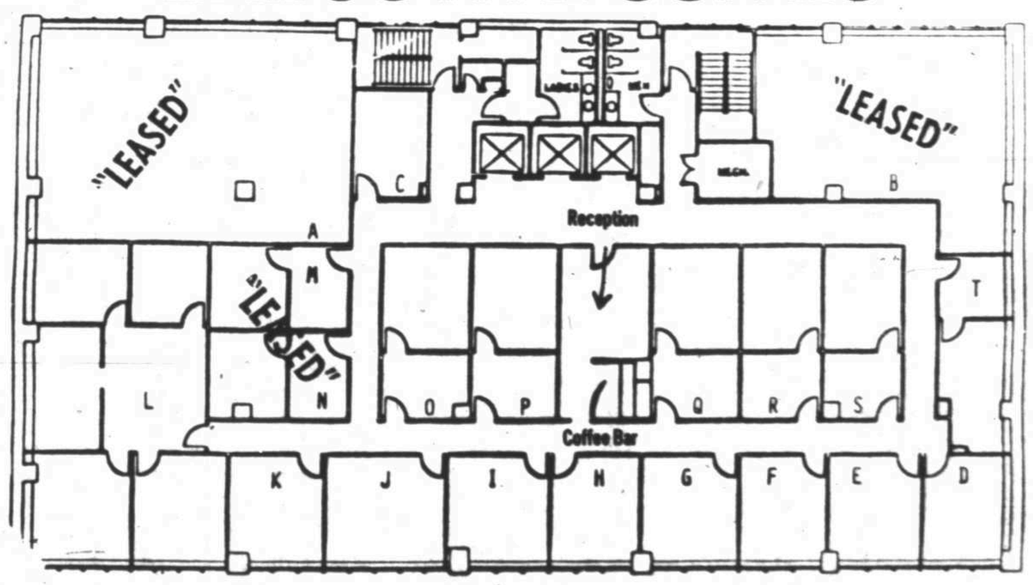

Bradleys Khalie, ridden by Leroy Coombs, also stalked the pace, storming down the stretch on the outside to pick up second-place money. Gerald Marr trains the Mamaison gelding, who broke his maiden in his last race, for James H. Bradley of Hereford, Texas.

LOOSE LIPS Cash, also coming off a maiden win, came from far back to finish third. Darrell Blevins was on board the Clean Cash-product for trainer Jim Boss and owner Dallas M. McCasland of Eunice, New Mexico.

Quarter horses share the spotlight when racing resumes Saturday. The 440-yard Rainbow Derby Consolation and split divisions of the $10,000-added Jet Deck Handicap are on tap.

Fed voted in May to increase interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top policy-makers at the Federal Reserve voted in mid-May to push interest rates higher as a way of fighting inflationary pressures, according to minutes of the discussions released Friday.

The Federal Open Market Committee, which sets monetary policy for the central bank, voted 9-2 at a meeting on May 17 to tighten credit conditions slightly in the weeks following the meeting.

The two dissenters, Lee Hoskins, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, and Robert Parry, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, argued that a more substantial tightening move was needed to dampen inflationary pressures.

Fed policy-makers met again on Wednesday and Thursday of this week and many analysts believe the central bank discussed boosting its discount rate, the interest it charges to make bank loans.

An increase in the discount rate, which was last raised in September, is the strongest signal the central bank can send of its intention to push interest rates higher.

The minutes of the May meeting confirmed what many analysts had already suspected, that the Fed moved in late May to tighten credit conditions because of concerns that the economy was growing so fast in the first part of the year that it was putting severe pressures on prices and wages.

The last tightening move followed two earlier moves to push interest rates higher in late March and in early May. The central bank's goal was to restrain credit and thereby restrain overall demand in the economy.

It accomplished this objective by restricting slightly the amount of money that banks have available to make loans, thus pushing up the price of this money — interest rates.

A variety of interest rates, including the bank prime lending rate and mortgage rates, did move higher in the spring, partly as a result of the Fed's tightening moves.

The minutes of the May meeting showed that Fed officials remained concerned about the rate of economic growth.

"The members generally agreed that some further tightening of reserve conditions was needed to counter the risks of rising inflationary pressures in the economy," the minutes said. "A failure to act in a timely fashion not only would be inconsistent with the committee's commitment to achieving price stability over time but would in fact compound the difficulties of accomplishing that objective."

The two dissenters argued that the central bank should be doing more than the small tightening steps it was contemplating.

Hoskins and Parry argued that "the risks were considerable that price and wage inflation would accelerate from rates that were already too high."

Giamatti: Baseball's own 'Untouchable'

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Whether it's in the classroom or on the baseball field, A. Bartlett Giamatti's top priority is order.

Giamatti, who was president of Yale for eight years, is now in his second year as president of the National League. He was selected president of the NL on June 10, 1986 and the decision came as a surprise to his brethren in academia.

"One group thought it was nifty, the other thought it was the ultimate proof of my essential unsoundness. They fell into the camps I would have predicted," Giamatti said in a recent interview.

Instead of volumes of poetry by Dante and Spenser, his bookshelves and desk are now cluttered with baseball memorabilia.

"It became clear to me that this was a whole new culture," Giamatti said. "There were some interesting similarities to where I had been, in the sense that both cultures are very historically oriented and in some ways retrospective. And both were fairly closed, in terms of how people come up the ranks."

GIAMATTI, WHO spent a relatively quiet first year in office, made headlines this season when he suspended Cincinnati manager Pete Rose for 30 days for shoving umpire Dave Pallone.

Some baseball officials and players compared Giamatti to a "dean of discipline" or a self-styled Eliot Ness.

"Order without freedom is repressive and freedom without order is anarchy," Giamatti said in describing his thought process.

Giamatti came to office as a wide-eyed fan and has had to learn the various intricacies of baseball law.

While president of Yale, Giamatti was sometimes seen around the Ivy League campus toting a transitor radio tuned into a Boston Red Sox game.

When Giamatti was announced as league president he made it clear that he had no grand illusions of changing the game he loves.

"I think in general, one tampers with baseball as little as humanly possible," he said. "The fundamental grid, the geometric beauty of baseball ought to be altered gingerly."

Giamatti says his job was made much easier by the help he got from former NL president Chub Feeney.

"I was blessed," Giamatti said. "My predecessor was gracious, knowledgeable and wonderfully forthcoming. I spent from July 1st to December 10th (1986) as the president-elect. I listened, learned and watched.

"THERE'S AN enormous amount of baseball law, regulations, policies written and established from past practices that I as a fan had no grasp of. That has taken a long time to acquire and I still don't pretend to control all of that," he said.

Earlier this month, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth announced he would not accept a second five-year term and Giamatti has emerged as the likely replacement.

Ueberroth said, however, he will remain through the negotiations for a new players' contract in order to avoid a chaotic transition.

Giamatti says his priorities are similar to Ueberroth's:

— 1. Continued advancements in minorities in baseball.

— 2. Monitor substance abuse and provide support and rehabilitation.

— 3. Provide an orderly ambiance at parks and install programs to curb alcohol abuse by fans.

GIAMATTI IS particularly concerned about fan rowdiness and considers it a threat to the future of spectator sports in the United States.

In an article he authored for the Boston Globe last year, Giamatti wrote: "I believe that at the heart of the deteriorating environment is excessive drinking. It must be stopped. Those who wish to enter a contest already drunk must be turned away; those who come only to drink in the stands and disrupt must be controlled or ejected. ..."

Giamatti says he is "against prohibition" at the ballparks but wants better monitoring.

He says there have been "fruitful, sensitive, insightful and productive discussions" with the clubs concerning alcohol abuse.

"If the ambiance for the sporting event is not considered crucial by management, there is no reason to believe that fans will leave home and come out; there is no reason to believe that families will subject themselves to goons and call it fun; there is no reason to believe that in 10 years' time the vast majority of those who care about the sport will see it anywhere but on a (TV) screen," Giamatti wrote.

Giamatti is a Renaissance scholar and a gifted conversationalist who somehow seems out of place dealing with baseball's procedural problems and trivial controversies.

THIS SEASON, much has been said of the various umpiring incidents but Giamatti isn't overly concerned.

"Due to a variety of causes mostly due to television and replay and baseball's sacred right to second guess, the umpires are more visibly on the spot," Giamatti said. "That't not a terrible thing because it's part of the world we live."

Chisox fans celebrate

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Chicago White Sox fans were jubilant Friday over an extra-inning victory in the state Legislature that will keep the ballclub in the city it's called home for nearly 90 years.

But many scorned the multi-million-dollar package for a new stadium to keep the ballclub from leaving town and blamed greediness on the part of the team's owners for the near-exodus to St. Petersburg, Fla.

"I think it's great! My heart was breaking last night when it looked like this deal wasn't going to pass," Paul Losensky said outside Comiskey Park while waiting to buy tickets for Friday night's game.

"This is one of the charter teams in the major leagues. It would have been kind of a cruel joke on the city" if the White Sox left town, said die-hard fan and jazz musician Joe Bianco, 30.

"They're an institution that's associated with Chicago," said Bill Lazzaro, 46, who's lived near Comiskey Park, the team's stadium, all his life.

But Losensky, 30, and Lazzaro accused legislators of mixing up their priorities by favoring sports over more important issues like education.

The deal, narrowly passed as a midnight deadline Thursday expired, could cut $60 million from the team's cost of occupying a new $150 million state-financed stadium near the site of its current home.

But education would get only a $200 million funding increase under a budget being prepared by lawmakers, far less than educators had sought. And Gov. James R. Thompson's proposed 40 percent state income tax increase, tied heavily to funding education, fell on deaf ears in the Legislature.

"I find that a really bad set of priorities," said Losensky, a student at the University of Chicago.

"Schools should be first; sports should be last," Lazzaro said.

Legislators point out that funding for the White Sox deal is not directly tied to a tax increase and comes from a 2 percent tax on hotel and motel rooms in Chicago that was imposed specifically to pay for the stadium.

Gov. James R. Thompson said Friday the White Sox are now "legally and morally bound to stay" in Chicago.

"They signed a lease. We have their word," he said. "The White Sox promised to stay in Chicago if we passed the bill, and we passed it."

Final passage of the deal came on a tense 60-55 vote in the House on the last regularly scheduled day of the 1988 session. A short time earlier, the package cleared the Senate on a 30-26 vote. There wasn't a vote to spare in either chamber.

Thompson said he had lobbied heavily for passage of the deal.

"I told members of the Senate Republican caucus that I don't care what they think of baseball ... we can't let Illinois be wounded by losing a major league team."

Keeping the White Sox in Chicago "is going to help the economy around here, that's for sure," said Mitch Hale, 31, who manages a gas station near the ballpark.

"I think it was kind of dumb that the state of Illinois was just going to let them slip through their fingers," Hale said.

A team statement said the White Sox are "elated" by the Legislature's action.

ANGELS

Steve McGuire went the route for a team-leading third complete game in improving his record to 4-9, pitching out of a none-out bases loaded situation in the sixth, just when it looked as though he appeared headed for an early shower.

Midland raked three Wichita pitchers for 11 hits and used a couple of three-run bursts in the second and fifth to nail it down.

JEFF MANTO singled home Jesus Alfaro, recently returned from Edmonton, with the first run in the second. With two out and Tom Alfredson at first and Manto at third, lefthander Greg Harris fanned Mike Knapp. Catcher Mike Basso dropped the ball and, instead of throwing to first to complete the third out, he threw to second as Alfredson broke in an apparent steal.

Second baseman Bill Wrona took the throw between first and second, ignored Alfredson and threw home in a futile attempt to catch Manto, who had broken for the plate in what had all appearances of a double steal, save for that dropped-ball strikeout. Manto scored, but instead of his third steal of home this season, was credited with scoring on a fielder's choice.

In the fifth, two runs were in and Alfaro and Pappas at first and second when Alfredson singled. Pappas steamed to around second only to find Alfaro had been held up at third. Pappas was cut down, but Alfaro scored in the meantime.

OUTSIDE OF the fifth, McGuire's most serious trouble came in the third when a walk to Mike Basso and Craig Wiley's double scored him from first. However, rightfielder Lee Stevens to first baseman Pappas to third baseman Manto cut down Wiley going for three. It was a big play since Wrona, the next batter, powered a homer to left that made it 3-2 instead of 3-3.

In the fifth, after Howard doubled, Craig Cooper singled and Chris Knabenshue walked to start the inning, McGuire escaped by getting a strike-out, pop out and force out. A nifty clutch job.

HALO HOOPS: Harris was a No. 13 draft choice out of Gonzaga U. in 1986. In fact, five players in last night's Wichita lineup were 1986 draft choices.

The Pilot left side may have been a sieve in Thursday's loss, but Wrona backhanded a shot by Alfredson to force Pappas at second in the second and Jim Tatum handled seven chances, some circle deserving stops, flawlessly Friday ...

MID-CITY

David Stock doubled to lead off the inning and later scored on a wild pitch that had potentially disastrous consequences for the Angels when Doan collided with the runner while covering home plate. After a pause in the action, Doan was ready to continue, however.

And the Cubs were ready for him. Successive singles by Eric Benavidez and Connally plated another run, and Brian Henderson also singled.

Sanchez robbed Jeff Pursley of extra bases with a fine over-the-shoulder catch in deep center field, but Sean Low doubled home two runs and Alex Hale capped the rally with a two-run blast well over the right-center field fence.

The Cubs were able to get runners on first and second after Hale's homer, but Angel second baseman Rob Lawson ended the threat with a diving stab of a blooper to short right field off the bat of Benavidez.

A group of Midland boys will soon participate in the district tournament at Big Spring later this month.

Jacobsen leads at half-way mark

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. — Peter Jacobsen scored an eagle-3 on the way to a 7-under-par 65 Friday that lifted him into a two-shot lead after the second round of the $900,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

Jacobsen, on the rebound from a back injury that has slowed him for four seasons, completed two trips over the Butler National Golf Club course in 135, nine under par.

"I don't think I'll shoot nine-under for the next two days, but if I can continue to putt like I did the last two rounds, I've got a good chance of winning," said Jacobsen, who one-putted nine times in the best round of the tournament.

The eagle came on the 12th hole, when he hit a 5-iron second shot to about eight feet and made the putt. He avoided what would have been his only bogey on the final hole by sinking another eight-footer after putting his approach in a bunker.

"You don't want to make bogey on the last hole. Making a putt like that gives me a lot of momentum going into tomorrow," he said.

Ed Fiori and Dan Forsman shared second at 137. Fiori had a 67 and Forsman shot a 69.

It was another two strokes back to Joey Sindelar, Tom Sieckmann, Jim Benepe and Rocco Mediate. Benepe scored two eagles in a round of 68. Sieckmann matched par-72, Mediate shot a 70 and Sindelar had a 69.

PGA champion Larry Nelson, a winner last week in Atlanta, moved up with a 69 and was at 140.

Defending champion D.A. Weibring and Tom Watson, a three-time winner of this title, were six shots off the lead at 141. Weibring shot 71, Watson a 69.

Mark Hayes and Morris Hatalsky, who shared the first-round lead, each went 13 strokes higher, from 66 to 79, and were at 145. Brian Mogg, also tied for the first-round lead, shot a 75 and was at 141.

Jacobsen won two tournaments in 1984, but suffered a back injury the next year and has been battling back ever since.

One of the high points of his comeback effort was a course-record 64 in the last round of the recent U.S. Open.

"I'm just getting my game back," Jacobsen said. "I got a lot confidence from the Open that I can shoot low rounds again.

"There's no question about it. I'm playing better now than I have at any time since '84.

"My game is coming back ever so slowly. But it's coming. It's evident to me that it's getting back to where it was four years ago," he said.

Jacobsen, who started from the 10th tee, added a couple of 15-foot birdie putts to the eagle-3 and turned in 32.

He got the ball close to the hole for birdies on the second and fourth, dropped a 25-footer on the sixth and then preserved it with the scrambling par on his last hole.

Little beats rain for LPGA lead

Associated Press

COQUITLAM, British Columbia — Sally Little overcame damp playing conditions Friday to shoot a 7-under-par 65 and take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the $500,000 du Maurier Classic, the third of the LPGA's four majors.

Little had seven birdies in a bogey-free round that left her at 5-under-par 139 after 36 holes of the only LPGA stop in Canada.

Laura Davies of England, Debbie Massey and first-round leader Sherri Turner were next at 140.

Davies shot a 1-under 71 and Massey had a solid 68, while Turner matched par with a 72.

Light rain and misty conditions made the 6,361-yard Vancouver Club Course difficult for some, but not for Little.

"This is great golfing weather as long as you're dressed warmly," said the South African native, who now lives in Delray Beach, Fla. "The conditions were absolutely perfect for a good round."

Little, 36, has gone six years without a win on the LPGA Tour. After four victories in 1982, she underwent abdominal surgery and has had difficulty in regaining her form.

She birdied three holes on the front nine and four on the back side during the second round.

"Consistent play is what wins major championships," Little said. "I would have been happy with a 70, as long as I was in position for the last nine holes of the tournament."

Two shots back of the leader at 141 were three players. Robin Walton and Sherri Steinhauer shot 72s, while Colleen Walker moved into contention with a 68.

The best of the Canadian contingent of 13 players was Dawn Coe, who shot a 70 and was tied at 142 with Dottie Mochrie, who had a 71, Taiwan's Miki Cheng, who shot a 73, Amy Alcott, who shot a 70, Patty Sheehan, with a 69, and Jan Stephenson, who matched par-72.

Coe pulled off the shot of the day when she holed a 160-yard 5-iron shot on the sixth for an eagle three.

Nancy Lopez, the leading money-winner this year, barely managed to make the 36-hole cut. She shot a 73 for a 150 total.

Defending champion Jodi Rosenthal had a 69 for 145 to move to within six shots of the leader.

Pastor made name for self in science

The Rev. Stephen Hales, an Anglican pastor at Teddington, near London, made a name for himself in science, which he called his "darling amusement."

As an animal physiologist he ranks second only to the illustrious William Harvey for his quantitative measurement of blood pressure. He also founded modern plant physiology.

And his success with artificial ventilation particularly in prisons and hospitals, established him as a pioneer sanitarian. He died in 1761 at the age of 84.

Levelland church to have jubilee

South Plains Church, Levelland, is sponsoring its 4th annual July Jubilee July 10 through 13.

Patsy Behrman will minister through song and teaching July 10. Ms. Behrman is a graduate of Rhema Bible Training Center and has acted as coordinator for Kenneth Hagin's Prayer and Healing Center, Tulsa, Okla.

Steve Vickers, the pastor of Christian Life Church, Montgomery, Ala., will be ministering at 6 p.m. July 10.

Then, at 10 a.m. July 11, Denice Vickers, Steve Vickers' wife, will share her testimony of "how God supernaturally healed her of rheumatoid arthritis," says a release from the church. "Mrs. Vickers has shared her miracle healing on the 700 Club and the Richard Roberts Show."

At 7 p.m. July 11, Willie George, producer of the "Gospel Bill Show," will speak. George is involved in family relationship and child training seminars throughout the United States and Canada.

Closing out the July Jubilee will be Billye Brim at 7 p.m. July 12 and 13. Mrs. Brim was the editor of publications for Kenneth Hagin Ministries, Tulsa, Okla., for more than eight years. She also ministers during Kenneth Copeland Believer's conventions.

South Plains Church is located on East Cactus Drive. Pastors Eddie and Patricia Trice invite the public to attend the Jubilee. For more information call 894-9674.

Number of women still increasing in seminaries

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of women in seminaries continues to increase, while the number of men decreases, with some predictions that by the year 2000, a fourth of mainline Protestant pastors will be women.

Women still encounter some resistance in roles as church leaders, while male clergy are tending to be older. Nonetheless, the ecclesiatical presence of women spreads, as do the gray hairs among male ministers.

Summing up statistics for the 1987-88 crop of seminarians, the Association of Theological Schools says women now constitute 27 percent of total enrollment.

Fifteen years ago, when inclusive figures first were gathered, women amounted to only 10 percent of enrollment 15 years ago.

Compared to an enrollment then of 3,358, the ranks of women have swelled fourfold to 15,310, up 3 percent this year. But the overall enrollment was down by 1 percent to 55,766.

It was the third straight year of overall decline, as men became a gradually shrinking majority in 201 Protestant and Roman Catholic seminaries, while the proportion, and numbers, of women rose in contrast.

Despite the increase in their numbers, women say they still face obstacles as clergy. In the United Church of Christ, which has the largest number of women — totalling 1,460 — a survey found that 61 percent say they've been turned down for jobs because of their gender.

However, the Rev. Ann Cordray, a United Church pastor in Miami, says "there's a great deal more openness toward women leadership in the church than we had for a while."

Most other major Protestant bodies — United Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian and Lutheran — now admit women to ordination, although they're barred from it in Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy.

Roman Catholic study of the issue is advocated in a new bishops' draft paper on women.

The International Bulletin of Missionary Research forecasts that by the end of the next decade, one out of four pastors in mainline Protestant congregations will be women.

An encouraging note among male Catholic seminarians came in a nationwide survey that found them more satisfied with their training than their counterparts about 20 years ago.

For example, 88 percent considered their training "very relevant" or "fairly relevant," while only 68 percent did so in 1966. A majority of those studying for the priesthood — 58 percent — approved women being in seminaries.

The findings show "much greater satisfaction" and "more confidence" among Catholic seminarians, say the researchers, the Rev. Eugene Hemrick and sociologist Dean Hoge of Washington.

Meanwhile, the average age of male seminarians has increased from 22 to 32, with an increasing proportion of "delayed vocations," men who have worked in other careers and then switched to study for the ministry.

Area youth named to All-State Choir

A dozen Midland area Baptist youth were named to the 1988 Texas Baptist All-State Youth Choir and Band, and have just returned from a concert tour to Washington, D.C., and North Carolina.

The 502-member choir and band, sponsored by the Church Music Department of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, performed five concerts including one each at the Lincoln Memorial and on the White House Elipse.

Members from here include Amanda Paris, Greg Rich, Leslie Hobbs, James Hare, Alyssa Archer, Jennifer Cason, Carrie Newsom, Christy Butler, Jennifer Parsley, Rhonda Bentley, Robin Goodson and D'Ann Nichols.

Sponsors were James and Debbie Nance and Melinda Reed, all of Midland.

'227' star to speak at Episcopal meeting

Marla Gibbs, star and creative consultant on NBC-TV's "227," will be the featured speaker at the "Lift-Off Power Breakfast" sponsored by the Women's Missionary Society of the African Methodist Episcopal Church July 11 at the Convention Center in Fort Worth.

Gibbs

The WMS is an group of women from around the world with a membership of 800,000.

Representing Midland at the convention will be Annie D. Jones, conference branch president of the North West Texas Women's Missionary Society; and the Rev. S.V. Ferguson, pastor of Greater St. Luke African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Also attending from the West Texas area are the Rev. I.C. Cooper of Big Spring, presiding elder of the North West Texas District; and Mrs. Billye Wright of Abilene, assistant state director of the Young People's Department, 10th Episcopal District A.M.E. Church.

Ms. Gibbs never imagined a career as an actress, but envisioned a career as a singer. Her mother became the pastor of Universal Guiding Light Church, Detroit, Mich.

"This had a profound impact on Ms. Gibbs, and has caused her to daily lift Christ in all she says and does," says a news release from WMS.

In 1987, Delores L. Kennedy Williams was elected president of the WMS and has built on the foundation of her successors by leading the women to sponsor an on-the-field missionary, to contribute to the Mozambique Refugee Program, to provide blankets for the homeless and clothing for the Haitian refugees in Florida.

Also, the organization has provided sponsorships for women to participate in the frist National Battered Women's Conference; translate literature for the women of Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland, Zimbabwe and the Republic of South Africa. The WMS also affilites with the National Council of Negro Women, the World Federation of Methodist Women and Church Women United.

Mrs. Williams has led the organization in establishing an endowment fund. Charter members will be recognized in Fort Worth.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Wilson named new associate pastor

Wilson

Members of St. Luke's United Methodist Church have welcomed the Rev. John N. Wilson as their new associate pastor. Wilson assumed those duties June 15.

Wilson earned a bachelor of music degree from Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham, Ala., where his major was voice and his minor was organ. His master of sacred music degree was earned at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, and his master of theology degree was earned at Perkins School of Theology, SMU, Dallas.

Wilson comes to St. Luke's from First United Methodist Church in Big Spring where he was associate minister/minister of music. He is married to Mary Lee Dibrell of Big Spring. They are the parents of three children, Rebecca, Emily and Jonathan.

A member of the Northwest Texas Conference for five years, Wilson was ordained deacon in 1977 in the NTC and then ordained elder in 1980 in the Holston Conference. While in the Holston Conference, he served as Conference Worship Workarea Chairperson as well as Songleader for the annual conference.

He has served as president of the Permian Basin/West Texas Choristers Guild and president of the Big Spring Symphony Association.

Church to explain beliefs

What the Seventh-day Adventist Church believes on a variety of subjects will be explored by discussion groups and a pulpit series at the Midland Seventh-day Adventist Church, 3114 Travis St., beginning today.

"Our church members need a complete review of what we as a denomination believe," says Eddie C. Card, the church's pastor.

"This series, under the title of 'Christ Our Foundation,' will be a thorough study of those beliefs as related to salvation through Jesus Christ."

The series opens with the nature of God as revealed in the Bible. The study groups will deal with this topic from 10 to 10:45 a.m. at the church. Card will deal with a similar subject in his sermon, "The Purpose of the Word of God," at 11 a.m.

"I am often asked how Seventh-day Adventist beliefs compare with those of other denominations," Card says. "We invite the public to attend this series to know and understand us better."

Convention begins Friday

The Church of God of Prophecy's annual State Convention will be held Friday through July 10 at the Midland Hilton.

The convention opens at 7 p.m. with the Midland Civil Air Patrol presenting the colors. Next will be committee appointments followed by a Young People's Program. The evening program will conclude with a message given by Bishop Jose Reyes, general field secretary and Spanish Voice of Salvation director for The Church of God in Prophecy, Cleveland, Tenn.

Activities July 9 include business reports, Sunday School, Women's Missionary, pastor's wife and the state overseer's annual address. Activites July 10 include a children's musical, Women's Missionary Program, a message by Reyes and appointments of pastors for another year.

About 500 delegates are expected to attend this convention. The public is invited to attend.

Midlander attends school

Midlander Margie Titus was one of about 400 women who attended the 1988 West Gulf Regional School of Christian Mission.

The annual school was held at Oklahoma City University in June. Officers of United Methodist Women for the 17 conferences in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas studied, worshipped and received updates on leadership responsibilities and current issues.

Study topics for the 1988 school were "Ruth and Esther," "Faces of Poverty in Our Midst" and "South Africa." Theme of the school was "Christian Hope and Human Value."

The highlight of the school was a silent demonstration march of the participants held on campus June 16 in commemoration of the 12th anniversary of the Soweto uprising in South Africa on June 16, 1976, when 600 children were killed and over 1,000 others fled into exile or were detained by the South African government.

Church directory planned

A Golf Course Road Church of Christ Reunion Directory is being planned for distribution to those attending the Reunion activities August 13 and 14.

Organizers hope to include personal information on as many former members of the church as possible. A questionaire has been sent out and needs to be returned by July 15.

Included on the questionaire are such questions as name, address, phone number, time period at Golf Course Road Church of Christ, children's names and ages, grandchildren's names and ages and personal news such as comments on children, grandchildren, job/career, current congregation and achievements.

Even those unable to attend the reunion are asked to respond to the questionaire. For more information please call the church.

Patriotic service slated

"God and God Alone," a service of patriotism and praise, will be presented at 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. Sunday at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave.

Led by the Sanctuary Choir and instrumental ensemble, the service will include traditional patriotic hymns, presentation of the colors and the singing of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the choir and the congregation.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Carlos McLeod, director of evangelism for the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The public is invited to attend.

Crestview presents films

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., is presenting Dr. James Dobson's family relationships film series "Turn Your Heart Home" at 5:45 p.m. July 10.

The schedule of showing is "A Father Looks Back," July 10; "Power in Parenting: The Young Child," July 17; "Power in Parenting: The Adolescent Child," July 24; "The Family Under Fire," July 31; "Overcoming A Painful Childhood," August 7; and "The Heritage," August 14.

The films will be shown in the Adult 4 classroom. A nursery will be provided. The public is invited to attend.

Smith to speak at Aglow

Smith

The Midland Outreach Aglow will meet at the Holiday Inn T-Dome, 3904 W. Wall Ave., Tuesday.

Kathy Smith, a lifetime resident of Odessa, will speak to the group at the 7:15 p.m. meeting. Prior to the meeting, women will meet for a salad bar supper at 6:30 p.m. Cost of the salad bar is $4.

A Bible teacher, Ms. Smith has been involved in Bible studies and home prayer groups for the past 20 years.

For more information call 682-8386 or 1-756-3688.

Homecoming service set

The pastor and members of the Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., will be presenting the 5th annual homecoming service at 3 p.m. July 10.

Speaker for the service will be the Rev. T.G. Oliphant of the Macedonia Baptist Church in Abilene. Oliphant hold several offices in the Progressive West Texas Missionary Baptist Association.

Theme for the program is "The Church's Progress: Past, Present and Future."

The public is invited to attend.

Church to have dance

The Valentino Band from Houston will play for the Our Lady of Guadalupe Coronation Dance.

The dance begins at 8 p.m. today at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center. The dance ends at 1 a.m.

Queen candidates are Belinda Reyes and Melinda Rey.

All proceeds go to the construction of the Our Lady of Guadalupe Shrine.

Flag raising scheduled

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will have a flag raising ceremony at 7 a.m. Monday at the chapel, 2101 Tarleton St.

A short patriotic program will be presented with songs by the combined ward choirs. The flag will then be raised by the boy scout troops of the LDS church. Following the service, a light breakfast will be held.

The public is invited to attend.

What's a Calorie?

SUNDAY, JULY 3, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make important financial decisions as a family. Form a partnership with someone who has a background that complements your own. A thrilling romance will last only if it has a solid foundation. Your high ideals draw you to someone special. Invest in your own future by getting the best education you can afford. Prominent people are impressed by our dedication to duty.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV host Geraldo Rivera, actress Betty Buckley, actor Michael Cole, artist John Singleton Copley, playwright Tom Stoppard, pitcher Frank Tanana, musician Pete Fountain, Sen. Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, actor Tom Cruise.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You bring good cheer wherever you go this weekend. Impulse spending could put you in a difficult position. Enjoy all the free things available to you. Athletic activities attract your attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Baseball may be No. 1 on your priority list this weekend. You are puzzled by the seeming breakdown of a relationship. Take a closer look. There is more to life than making money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Overwork may be pushing you in the wrong direction. Step back and regroup. Others are eager for your company this weekend. Those on vacation meet with good luck. Introduce yourself to people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are enjoying life more now. Stay relaxed, but refuse to ever compromise on principle. A change of pace sets the wheels spinning in your mind. Share a hideaway with a good friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Freedom does not come easy. You must work to protect it. Have some fun before getting serious about a new relationship. Inspiration comes from an unexpected source. Follow up an interesting tip.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Find a way to put across good ideas with your family. Communication is the key to a happy day. Renew old ties. If you owe too much, clamp down on spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Find a positive escape from work pressures. You need to get out of the house. Engage in sports or walk in the park. Pay more attention to the needs of other family members.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Time spent alone may be this weekend's most satisfying experience. Hiking, fishing or deep-sea diving hold new appeal. Plan to consult a travel agent. Romance finds you when you least expect it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your concern for the environment may be blinding you to a community's needs. Stand up for what you believe, but seek practical solutions. Get together with family members. Ask their advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unexpected developments cheer you, turning this weekend into a very special time. In the interest of good health, slow down. It is not wise to work night and day. Watch your diet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be consistent when dealing with children or they will get confused. Your lifestyle may change, but not your values. Always take the high road. Set a good example for young people.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good luck graces your relationships today. A blind date or last-minute invitation gives you an opportunity to make a wonderful new friend. Be yourself. Quality people love you just as you are.

Baryshnikov says Tharp will join ABA as artistic associate

Baryshnikov

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov, artistic director of American Ballet Theater, announced Friday that choreographer Twyla Tharp will join the company as artistic associate.

Baryshnikov said Tharp and several dancers in her company will join at the next rehearsal period, which starts Aug. 22. She will choreograph a new work for Ballet Theater next season and will teach several of her creations to the company during the next two years.

Tharp has directed her own modern-dance company since 1965 and has choreographed more than 80 works. She choreographed "Push Comes to Shove" for Baryshnikov and American Ballet Theater in 1976 and has done three other ballets for the company.

She did choreography for four movies, "Hair," "Ragtime," "Amadeus" and "White Nights" and has choreographed extensively for television.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wolfman Jack has stopped howling about the golden oldies on Southern California's airwaves, but the madman of the radio can hardly be called muzzled.

Thursday was the 49-year-old disc jockey's last day spinning the platters that matter weekday afternoons on XTRA-AM because the station adopted an all-talk format beginning Friday.

"It's nothing personal nor are there any bad feelings," said the Wolfman, who has broadcast with XTRA-AM since September 1987. "They've been paying me a lot of money, so I sure wouldn't leave if it wasn't the right thing all the way around."

Fans of the nifty '50s need not fear. Wolfman Jack Productions is developing a new late-night national radio show. And the Wolfman, whose real name is Bob Smith, can also be seen on The Nashville Network as host of the weekly "The Rock 'N' Roll Palace."

XTRA-AM is a 50,000-watt station in Tijuana, Mexico, near the California border. Wolfman Jack performed his show from his studio at his Beverly Hills home and fed it via satellite to the station.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Lamar Alexander, whose name has cropped up in discussions of possible presidential and vice presidential contenders, has taken on a smaller presidency.

The two-term Republican governor took office Friday as president of the University of Tennessee.

"This is a university on its way to being real good academically. That excites me," Alexander, 47, said. He succeeds Edward J. Boling, who retired after nearly 18 years.

DETROIT (AP) — The Motown Museum announced Friday that Michael Jackson will donate the proceeds of his Oct. 24 concert in Detroit to the Motown Museum Historical Foundation.

Jackson got his show business start, at age 9, at Motown Records. In 1987 the studio and offices, known as "Hitsville U.S.A.," was proclaimed a historical site by Gov. James Blanchard.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Opera director Gerard Mortier, who brought the Monnaie opera company to international attention in the 1960s, said Friday he has agreed to head the restructured Flemish Opera.

Mortier, 43, will be director of the opera company in northern Belgium for three years while keeping his post as head of the Brussels Monnaie.

The Flemish Opera in the Dutch-speaking part of Belgium was recently reorganized to try to brighten its financial future and add creative impetus.

Mortier said while the Monnaie has an international scope, the Flemish opera would be to give young Flemish talents experience before moving on to larger companies.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Auto heir John Francis Dodge is again behind bars, completing a one-year sentence handed down for violating a probation term set in January on a previous drug conviction.

Dodge, 34, was allowed to delay serving his time until April 4 to give him time to settle a custody dispute over his 6-year-old son. He was released after 56 days by prison officials who mistakenly started the clock on his jail time on Jan. 6, the day he was sentenced.

When the mistake was uncovered, Dodge was ordered to return to the Loxahatchee Road Prison by June 30. He turned himself in on Thursday.

Prison officials on Thursday said they had not calculated a release date for Dodge, youngest grandson of auto tycoon Horace Dodge Sr.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — King Bhumibol Adulyadej on Saturday becomes the longest-reigning monarch in Thailand's 750-year history.

The king will have been on the throne for 42 years and 23 days. The longest previous reign was that of King Chulalongkorn, who ruled 1868-1910.

King Bhumibol, 60, will preside over Buddhist rites in the Grand Palace, pay homage to the relics of Chulalongkorn and travel with Queen Sirikit to the ancient capital of Ayuthaya during four days of ceremonies. Bangkok's buildings have already been festooned with lights and special logos.

The constitutional monarch, born while his father studied medicine in Boston, assumed the throne upon the mysterious death of his brother in 1946. He is widely regarded as a source of stability in this rapidly developing nation.

SOUTH BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — John Zaccaro Jr. began his four-month sentence for selling a quarter-gram of cocaine to an undercover officer by reporting to jail Friday before being put under house arrest.

Zaccaro, 24-year-old son of former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, was booked at Chittenden Community Correctional Center and then left to begin a special house arrest program for non-violent criminals.

"He's come and gone," said Philip Scripture, Chittenden superintendent. "He was processed, fingerprinted, photographed and left at 2:30. We treated this as a routine booking."

After booking, Zaccaro was to be released to the field supervision officer to participate in the state's house arrest program.

"It's like being in jail, but without the walls," said Scripture, adding that Zaccaro would be required to stay in his residence.

"He would have a schedule whereby he could leave for work or community service. He would not be allowed to consume alcohol or drugs, and parole officers would stop by his place unannounced, require him at times to blow into an alcohol sensor, or give a urine sample," Scripture said.

"He must have a phone so that there can be telephone cheks to make sure he is there and he would have to request the opportunity to have visitors."

10 years after Bakke, affirmative action part of U.S. life

Associated Press

Curtis Crawford, a black man, owes part of his success to affirmative action — a process that a decade ago denied Allan Bakke, a white man, admission to medical school.

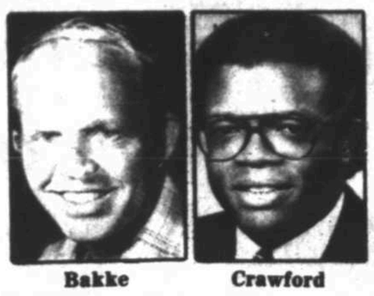

Both men are symbols of the evolving struggle for racial equality in America.

Crawford, who runs a $3.5 billion annual program for IBM, says affirmative action played a big part in his rapid rise to high-powered executive with one of the nation's corporate giants. But he says hard work and personal sacrifice were essential as well.

"IBM's commitment to affirmative action played a very major role in providing a place for me to develop to my fullest," he said. "At the same time, I think I earned everything based on my abilities. I put in a lot of hard work and pain."

In the 10 years since the Supreme Court first endorsed the concept in the case of Bakke, a would-be medical student, affirmative action has become even more of a fixture in American society — in private enterprise, in law and medical schools, in local police and fire departments.

But preferences based on race and gender remain highly controversial, particularly fixed quotas that spark heated debate over "reverse discrimination."

Bakke Crawford

The Supreme Court on June 28, 1978, ruled that Bakke, then a 37-year-old engineer, wrongly was denied admission to study medicine at the University of California at Davis.

The justices, by a 5-4 vote, said a fixed quota for racial minorities at the medical school unlawfully excluded Bakke because he is white. He had been passed over while less-qualified applicants were admitted under a special program.

But a different 5-4 alignment said colleges may consider race as one factor in deciding who gets admitted.

The Bakke case galvanized public opinion as have few legal battles in the nation's history.

But it marked only the start of a continuing debate on how far the nation should go to redress past discrimination.

Bakke himself has since graduated and become a doctor, while studiously avoiding the limelight and declining to discuss his case.

Bakke said he has been working as an anesthesiologist at the Olmstead Medical Group in Rochester, Minn. for about the past two years. He said the multi-speciality group is not associated with the Mayo Clinic, where he took residency training beginning in 1982. Asked if he would consent to an interview he said, "I just really don't want to do it at all."

IBM executive Crawford started with the company 15 years ago, about a year out of college.

Today he is a vice president at the company's plant in Montvale, N.J., in charge of marketing its line of new personal computers, the Personal System II. Yearly sales are around $3.5 billion.

Crawford, son of factory-worker parents and reared in what he describes as the poor part of Joliet, Ill., is no friend of racial quotas.

"I've never been in favor of specific numbers. That's not the way to achieve equality," he said.

He is a strong supporter of American institutions that demonstrate steady commitment to equality by providing opportunities for minorities and women to get ahead.

"We believe affirmative action makes good business sense," he said. "The company also is fulfilling its social responsibility."

Crawford is a symbol of the boon affirmative action can be to middle class blacks, Hispanics, other minorities and women.

On the other hand, civil rights leaders say it has failed to ease spiraling unemployment that helps hold the nation's inner cities in the grip of poverty, despair and drugs.

The Reagan administration has fought a losing rear-guard battle for the past eight years to restrict back pay or other compensation in suits based on claims of affirmative action violations to individuals who can prove they were victims of bias.

The nation's highest court rejected that argument in a series of cases. But fragmented voting among the justices and the advent of new Reagan appointees on the court could mean an uncertain future for affirmative action.

In recent rulings, the court has embraced preferential treatment for women and minorities in hiring and promotion. It even has endorsed quotas, as long as they are narrowly tailored to overcome proven past discrimination and do not trammel unnecessarily the rights of white males.

American business has demonstrated support for affirmative action, particularly big corporations and industry leaders like IBM.

"We're allowing people in this country to participate in the economic process. It's well worth it," says Walton E. Burdick, IBM's vice president of personnel.

IBM began recruiting at black colleges in the early 1950s, and Burdick emphasized the continuing need for long-term commitment.

"There has to be a sustained effort," he said. "You can't decide on Friday night to be a leader in the fight for equality and be there Monday morning."

The National Association of Manufacturers, in its official policy, regards affirmative action "as an effective method of achieving civil rights progress. Industry realizes that it is good business policy to encourage and promote programs that enhance minority and female participation at all levels within the workplace."

Insects attack fields; Youths water trees

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Grasshoppers and other insects left hungry by the drought are wreaking havoc on what remains in farm fields, while young trees are depending on young people scooping buckets of water from city lakes to sustain them.

The good news is a low mosquito population this summer — but "I'd rather have the moisture on my grass," says Ross Green of the Metropolitan Mosquito Control District in St. Paul.

Yellowjackets and wasps may take the place of mosquitoes and be more aggressive at picnics and near garbage cans as they search for food, said University of Minnesota entomologist Jeffrey Hahn.

"It could be that they just die from a lack of food. But it also could be that they will be driven to interact with people when they might not normally do that," he said.

Other insects also are taking a toll.

"We've definitely seen more treatment for grasshoppers than at any time I remember," said Carlyle Holen, area extension agent in crop pest management in northwestern Minnesota's Crookston office.

"Many thousands of acres have been treated over the past month, and there still are fields that need treatment that perhaps the farmers haven't even discovered yet," he said.

Wheat-stem maggots, normally found in 1 percent of the fields in the Red River Valley, are showing up this summer in 30 percent to 40 percent of the fields, Holen said. The maggots sever wheat and barley stems.

Dry weather appears to be responsible for a large drop in the number of European corn borers that feed on corn plant leaves and later bore into the stem.

Record dryness coupled with near-record heat during the past few months has stressed young trees and forced wildlife to change their habits.

Young trees planted in Minneapolis over the past several years to replace those ravaged by Dutch elm disease are facing the dual threat of insufficient moisture and hungry insects such as aphids and bark beetles, said Hahn.

The Minneapolis Park Board this week recruited 280 inner-city young people to dip buckets into the city's lakes and pour the water on young trees nearby. The lakes, highly popular for sailing, swimming and picnicking, are down slightly.

The city already maintains its 160,000 young trees planted in the past 10 years with 23 water trucks. But the concern now is to spread the word via the bucket brigade to homeowners.

"We thought that if people down at the lakes saw all the kids down there watering the trees that are starting to wilt and dry, people will catch on to the news that many of the small trees are wilting and severely stressed and that they all should be out there watering," said Parks Board special projects director Paul Domholt.

Minneapolis, which draws all its water from the depleted Mississippi River, has instituted limited lawn sprinkling restrictions; adjacent St. Paul is seeking voluntary conservation. Both cities have agreed to take stronger measures if the river falls below a certain point.

Duck-hunters face a shortened waterfowl season this year as the birds move to regions with more moisture in search of nesting sites, said Tim Bremicker, resource manager for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

"The drought quickly deteriorated a lot of the good breeding wetlands," Bremicker said. "The ducks then delay nesting or they don't nest at all. They move into the northern parklands in Minnesota, where we still have a lot of water — comparatively."

Biologists also are concerned about other game.

"Any animal has a preferred climate, and when you move outside that preferred climate birds or mammals become stressed," Bremicker said.

Lyng: Drought remains serious

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said Friday the drought remains "very, very serious" despite some rainfall and said the federal government likely will support financial aid to farmers once losses are more fully known.

"If you look at the 30-day forecast or the 6- to 10-day forecast, the prospects are bleak," Lyng told reporters after briefing President Reagan at the White House.

"We did have some showers in the last few days that helped in some places and the weather's cooler, so those are good signs," Lyng said, "but the weather forecasts indicate that it has not broken and is continuing and is still very, very serious."

Lyng, who heads a drought-relief task force Reagan set up last month, said that "sooner or later I suspect that the Congress and the adminstration will see that we need to help with money if the thing continues as bad as it's been. Just how you do that is very complex."

Lyng would not speculate on whether aid money might be available from the roughly $17 billion in the commodity price support payments the administration requested for the new budget year starting Oct. 1. There had been indications that because of the drought, not all of the $17 billion would be needed for subsidies and that the excess money might be used for aid purposes.

"I think it would be premature to start putting dollars up there," he said.

"To get into writing checks to farmers for relief to help tide them over almost needs to await the normal harvest period so that they can compare what they are harvesting, what happened to them," Lyng said. "At that time, we should be standing there with a helping hand."

President Reagan and Agricultural Secretary Richard Lyng discuss the nation's drought.

"The president and I both believe that we need to work this out jointly with Congress and we prefer to do it, if we can, on a bicameral, bipartisan basis," he said. "For us to propose details on that would be to be trying to take a lead role that would not be, I believe, conducive to the kind of a solution that would be responsive to the needs of these farmers."

It was the fourth such briefing that Lyng has given Reagan, who established a task force to work with leaders of the congressional agricultural committees.

A senior administration official, declining to be identified publicly, disclosed that Reagan will travel to Davenport, Iowa, on July 14, where he once worked as a radio broadcaster, to view drought damage in the area.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Lyng showed Reagan a map on which the drought area is shown in red, and the president said, "Every time you come, the red area gets larger." At the end of the meeting, he said, Reagan told the secretary, "Next time you come, let's hope the maps are reversed."

Fitzwater said Reagan principally asked questions during the meeting, inquiring about disaster assistance among other things. He said the two did not discuss specific money figures.

He also said Reagan discussed personal experience of the impact of drought on farm families when he was growing up in Illinois.

In an interim report given to Reagan, the federal drought task force headed by Lyng said "unusually intense drought for this stage of the growing season has spread over much of the nation's heartland."

"The current 30-day weather forecast shows only slight relief," it said. "The prospects of reduced crop production has driven up commodity prices."

Lyng said he thought the impact on food prices would be moderate, perhaps in the range of a 1 percent increase this year and 1 percent to 2 percent next year.

He also said that "damage to the livestock industry will continue."

Lyng's interim report to Reagan noted that the government has opened long-term Conservation Reserve Program acreage to haying in 1,657 counties in 35 states, and land idled in those counties under annual programs to both haying and grazing. It said emergency feed programs have been approved for 278 counties in 17 states.

Tourists take advantage of weak dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — Marie Lemoin came to the United States from France with a bag full of dreams and a fist full of dollars.

She is part of the wave of foreigners taking advantage of the weak dollar to visit America and splurge on goods that have become bargains in their own currencies.

Ms. Lemoin, 21, arrived in New York carrying a suitcase, a satchel stuffed with guidebooks and tourist brochures and a wad of travelers' checks and U.S. currency.

She said she never expected her money to go so far.

Nigel and Rosy Collins of London took their vacation in the United States for the same reason. They estimated their week-long trip would cost about half of what they would have paid two years ago.

They may have been carried away in their enthusiasm, since the dollars is only 10 percent cheaper against the pound than it was at the end of June, 1986, and in recent days the dollar has been gaining.

"Everything is so warm, so new, so cheap," Collins said.

"And you have Don Johnson," added his wife, referring to the star of NBC's "Miami Vice."

The U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration predicts that by year's end a record 30.2 million foreigners — up 2 percent fromlast year — will have visited the United States for business, pleasure or family reunions. Spending by those visitors is expected to hit a record $22.1 billion.

The rise in foreign tourism is due largely to the weak dollar, which has doubled the buying power of the Japanese yen and West German mark since early 1985. Most other nations' currencies also buy more.

"I'm hearing French, German and Japanese everywhere. It's like a language school outside my office," said Michael Finley, superintendent of Florida's 1.4 million-acre Everglades National Park, where attendance is up more than 40 percent over last year.

Nearly half of the foreign visitors will come from neighboring Canada and Mexico, the tourism administration said. It is not much cheaper for Canadians than it used to be and has become more expensive for Mexicans.

However, shifting exchange rates have doubled the power of currencies like the Japanese yen and West German mark since early 1985.

"Projections are that British, German, and French travel to the U.S. will hit a new record, and Japan will hit a new record again," said Ron Erdmann of the agency's research office.

The number of visiting Brazilians also is expected to increase, though the cruzado sinks daily against the dollar. However, Brazilians do benefit from their government's decision to rescind the 25 percent surtax on overseas plane tickets and on U.S. dollars purchased for foreign travel.

Executives at the Resort Hotel Association of Miami Beach said they thought they were overly optimistic when they sent their London tourism office 20,000 brochures touting package deals to the Florida beach resort.

"We were gambling. But in 10 days, we ran out," said Murray Gold, executive director of the association. "The requests coming in are phenomenal. We never expected it."

Ms. Lemoin, who left France a year ago to study languages in Sheffield, England, said at first she did not think she could afford a trip to America. Her home is in Toulouse.

"My aunt always told me the first place I should visit was the states," she said. "But I thought it would be too expensive."

An outing in New York's Greenwich Village and Soho neighborhoods dispelled that notion.

"I've been able to buy whatever I want," she said, looking out into New York Harbor from the top of the 110-story World Trade Center.

"I hope to have a lot more of these before I go home," she said, pointing to a huge bag stuffed with souvenir T-shirts, postcards, coffee mugs and an apple-shaped key ring emblazoned with "I Love New York."

Three rivers set low-water record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's three largest rivers set a combined low-water record in June, running 45 percent below normal for the month, the U.S. Geological Survey reported Friday.

The Mississippi, normally the nation's largest river, slipped to third place in terms of water flow, survey figures showed.

Falling river levels, resulting from the nation's ongoing drought, have stalled barge traffic, threatened water quality and reduced availability of water for drinking and other uses.

The June flow of the Mississippi, St. Lawrence and Columbia rivers marked a decline from May, when their flow was 37 percent below normal, the survey reported. Their total flow had been 8 percent below average in April, which is considered within the normal range.

The combined flow of the Big Three rivers averaged 481 billion gallons per day during June, the agency said.

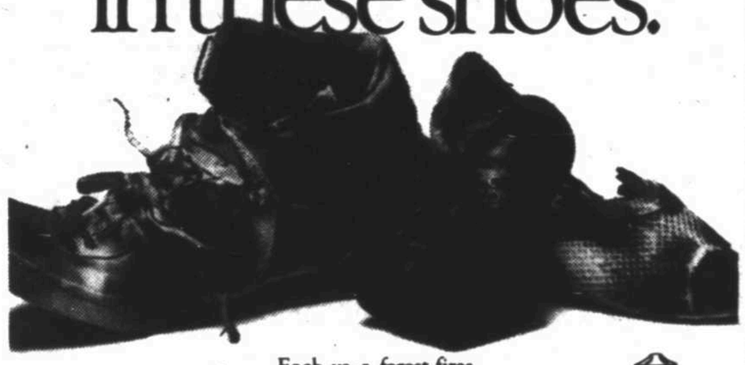

The lowest previous combined June flow for the three, in 60 years of record keeping, was 484 billion gallons per day in 1934.

Water experts monitor the three rivers as a quick check of the nation's surface water resources, since they drain about half of the 48 contiguous states.

For June, the nation's largest river turned out to be the Columbia, which averaged 182 billion gallons per day at The Dalles, Ore. Even so, that was 42 percent below normal and the fourth lowest in 60 years of record keeping. In May it had been 27 percent below normal for the month.

Second place for June went to the St. Lawrence River, which averaged 162 billion gallons per day, measured at Massena, N.Y. That was 11 percent below normal but not in record-low contention. It was the first time the St. Lawrence fell below normal since July 1967.

Put yourself in these shoes.

One person killed, 52 injured in Beirut car explosion

AP Laserphoto

Syrian troops watch rescue workers trying to extinguish a car on fire after an explosion Friday in Moslem west Beirut. At least one person was killed and 32 were wounded.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Cars packed with explosives blew up Friday on a busy block in west Beirut and near a Syrian army checkpoint in the Bekaa valley, killing one person and injuring 52, police said.

A spokesman for a PLO splinter group, the Fatah-Uprising, blamed supporters of Palestine Liberation Organizaton leader Yasser Arafat for the two blasts, which occurred 30 minutes apart.

The first explosion sent flames shooting across west Beirut's crowded Hamra Street, killing one person and injuring 32, a police spokesman said. The street is west Beirut's main commercial strip.

The spokesman said a green Renault 12 rigged with 22 pounds of explosives went off at about 11:55 a.m. (4:55 a.m. EDT) in front of the downtown Grand Hotel. The explosion shattered windows in the hotel and nearby buildings.

Police could not confirm a state radio report that the person killed was the automobile's driver.

They said most of the injured were treated at hospitals for wounds caused by flying glass and later released.

Syrian soldiers fired their AK-47 automatic rifles in the air to make way for ambulances and fire engines and to disperse onlookers, many of them worried about family members who happened to be in the area.

"My 17-year-old son was in a nearby barber's shop. Was anyone hurt there?" a frenzied woman asked a member of the local Red Cross.

Syrian soldiers and intelligence agents also harassed journalists, hitting reporters with rifle butts, slapping photographers and confiscating cameras.

Police earlier had defused a bomb found in a Mercedes Benz that had been parked near the Helou police barracks in West Beirut's busy Mar Elias street, they said.

In the second blast, police said a Mercedes Benz exploded 15 feet from a Syrian army checkpoint in the Bekaa valley town of Bar Elias. Two Syrian soldiers were among the 20 wounded.

Police said the car was packed with about 44 pounds of TNT and blew up about 12:25 p.m. (5:25 a.m. EDT). The explosion set four other cars on fire, police said.

The explosions, the seventh and eighth car bombings in Lebanon this year, came nine days after a similar explosion killed one person and wounded 18 others in East Beirut's Christian district of Karantina.

By police count, the previous six car bombings killed 94 people and wounded 251. There have been no claims of responsibility for any of the bombings.

In Damascus, the spokesman for the Syria-backed Fatah-Uprising blamed the car bombings on Arafat's Fatah guerrillas.

"Such criminal acts are directed against the Syrian army and its national role in Lebanon," Col. Abdul Hadi al-Nashnash said in a statement, and were designed to "create tension in other areas of Lebanon."

Earlier, the leader of Fatah-Uprising was quoted as saying that all Fatah guerrillas would be driven from Lebanon. Col. Saeed Mousa charged that Arafat was trying to create an independent province in the southern port city of Sidon.

Arafat troops evacuated the Chatila refugee camp in Beirut on Tuesday and went to Sidon after Mousa's followers overran the devastated area Monday. Fatah-Uprising is besieging the shantytown of Bourj el-Barajneh on the city's southern edge.

"Arafat is currently seeking to concentrate his forces in Sidon to create a canton...but he will fail there as he had failed in Beirut," Mousa was quoted as saying in an interview published Friday in the Beirut daily Ad-Diyar.

Mousa broke away from Arafat's Fatah, the largest PLO faction, in 1983 and set up headquarters for Fatah-Uprising in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pope makes changes on Curia

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday appointed Cardinal Achille Silvestrini to head the Holy See's highest tribunal, in a small shuffle of the church's central administration.

Silvestrini, an Italian elevated to cardinal on Tuesday, was one of four new appointments to the Curia. He will head the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura, whose jurisdiction includes cases involving concordats between various nations and the Holy See.

Until recently, Silvestrini served as the Vatican's foreign minister.

In other appointments, Cardinal Angelo Felici, an Italian, was named prefect of the Congregation for the Causes of Saints; Cardinal Eduardo Martinez Somalo, a Spaniard, was appointed prefect of the Congregation for the Sacraments and Divine Worship, and Cardinal Antonio Maria Javierre Ortas, another Spaniard, was made head of the Vatican archives.

They succeeded cardinals who had all turned 75, the age at which Vatican officials are expected to turn in their resignations.

China to restrict pornography

HONG KONG (AP) — More than 7 million copies of pornographic publications are on sale throughout China, and the government is preparing a crackdown on pornography, an official Chinese report said.

The China News Service, in a report appearing in Hong Kong on Friday, said the government will draft a new publication law to restrict pornography. The news agency did not elaborate.

More than 700 stalls on Beijing's main streets had books for sale that included explicit writing about sex, and about 65 percent of books sold along one street carried descriptions of sex, the report said.

A government survey showed 350 publishing companies were involved in printing the publications and there were as many as 600,000 copies of some books, the report said.

Army destroys cocaine, coca leaves

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Army troops found and destroyed 5.2 tons of cocaine and 36½ tons of coca leaves and paste, the Ministry of Defense said Friday.

The troops had been sent to a zone near Ayapel, north of Bogota, in a search and destroy mission, the ministry said.

Army troops and air force fighters forced the landing of two planes in a clandestine airstrip at a farm and found more than a ton of cocaine.

The soldiers found another 4.2 tons of cocaine at the farm June 25, arrested two people, and confiscated sophisticated weapons and chemicals used to process the drug.

The VII army brigade said Thursday that in another operation in the eastern Guaviare jungle, the military confiscated 36½ tons of coca leaves and coca paste, the military said.

NATO official says Soviets still threat to West

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Manfred Woerner became NATO's top political official Friday and warned that the West still remains under military threat from the East bloc despite Soviet efforts at reform.

The former West German defense minister spoke to reporters shortly after taking over from Britain's Lord Carrington as the alliance's secretary-general. Woerner, 53, is the first West German to hold the post since the alliance was formed in 1949.

"We face a Soviet policy that inspires many hopes but has not given any tangible indication that its military effort will slacken," he said.

Woerner called on the Soviets and their East European allies to follow what he called the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's example of maintaining only the military forces needed for defensive purposes.

"That would be a decisive new turn for the foreign and security policy of the Soviet Union and conclusive evidence of the well-publicized 'new thinking in the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact,'" he said.

His comments echoed those of Gen. John Galvin, NATO's supreme military commander in Europe, who warned the West not to be lulled into a false sense of security by Gorbachev's reforms.

Galvin, speaking to a group of American reporters today in London, said Moscow has shown no change in military policy.

"I see a lot of wishful thinking, a lot of romanticism, about the way things are going," Galvin said. "On the military side...I can find nothing really that has changed."

The two spoke as American and Soviet inspectors traveled to each other's countries to begin the task of verifying compliance with the superpower intermediate-range nuclear missile treaty signed in December.

Woerner is the seventh NATO secretary-general. The appointment holds no fixed term.

Fluent in English and French, he holds a doctorate in international law and served as a conservative Christian Democratic Union member of the Bundestag, or West German parliament, for 23 years before resigning this year to take the Brussels appointment.

Woerner was Bonn's defense minister for nearly six years.

As NATO secretary-general, Woerner is chairman of the main decision-making bodies, including the North Atlantic Council and the Defense Planning Committee, which coordinate the members' national policies. The secretary-general also heads an international staff of 1,500.

Crippled U.S. frigate being shipped home

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. missile frigate Samuel B. Roberts headed for home Friday, riding out of the Persian Gulf on the back of another ship 11 weeks after an Iranian mine nearly sank it.

The 3,600-ton warship rode in a special cradle atop the Mighty Servant 2, a heavy-lift cargo vessel the Navy chartered from a Dutch salvage firm for $1.3 million.

Emergency repairs to the frigate's badly ripped hull were made at Dubai. Its early morning departure from the emirate in the southern gulf was a surprise because U.S. military officials had indicated earlier the Roberts would pass through the narrow Strait of Hormuz at night for security reasons.

As the Mighty Servant 2 and its piggyback cargo approached the strait, the The U.S. missile cruiser Vincennes fired an artillery salute. The Vincennes was on patrol near Hormuz, where Iran has threatened shipping with gunboats and missile batteries since early in its 8-year-old war with Iraq.

About 30 of its crew members are accompanying the Roberts to Newport, R.I., on a trip expected to take about 40 days. U.S. officials said the frigate would be rebuilt at the shipyard in Bath, Maine, where it was launched in 1986.

Officials have denied reports the $400 million ship would be scrapped, but hull damage from the April 14 mine explosion was so extensive that salvage experts advised against trying to tow it across the stormy Atlantic.

Departure of the "Sammy B.," as crewmen called their ship, came 11 weeks to the day after it sailed inadvertently into what U.S. officers said was a newly laid Iranian minefield and collided with a submerged mine while trying to back out.

Ten crewmen were wounded in the explosion, which wrecked the engine room, broke the keel of the 453-foot vessel and started fires and flooding.

U.S. forces retaliated with attacks on two Iranian oil platforms April 18 that led to a day of confrontation in the southern gulf in which six Iranian naval craft were sunk or disabled.

The Mighty Servant 2 is a "semi-submersible" ship, described as one of only two in the world capable of carrying the Samuel B. Roberts home. Both are owned by the the Dutch salvage firm Wijsmuller Transport.

Gas unrationed in Poland for first time since 1981

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gasoline stations across Poland on Friday struggled to cope with demand when gasoline without ration coupons went on sale legally for the first time since 1981.

Customers at a Warsaw station waited an average of four hours in the hot sun to pay $2.69 a gallon, compared with the ration price of $1.58 a gallon.

By midday, station manager Roman Magnuszewski and his co-workers had pumped as much gasoline as they normally had in an entire day when the station sold rationed gasoline.

State-run TV reported the new regulations and said customers interviewed had thanked the state gas monopoly for the opportunity to buy unrationed gas.

Some people feared the new regulations are a government ruse to raise prices even further.

The government announced the regulations Tuesday.

Poachers, poisoning threaten South American wetlands

Silvano Paes de Campos, 9, pushes his river canoe along the flooded Santa Inez ranch in Brazil recently where he grew up with his parents and 12 brothers and sisters. The nine-year-old is an expert ranch hand and a "pantaneiros," an unofficial law enforcer and conservationist.

CUIABA, Brazil (AP) — In the heart of South America, a sprawling wetlands that stretches 154,000 square miles into four countries is imperiled by poachers, mercury poisoning and cocaine traffic.

Called the Pantanal, it is a wildlife haven, a little-known utopia for hundreds of bird species, waterfowl, wild marsh deer, crocodiles, black-spotted jaguars, aquatic flowers and fresh-water fish.

The floodplain is slightly smaller than California, extending for 54,000 square miles in Brazil and 100,000 square miles into Bolivia, Paraguay and northern Argentina.

It is known in parts of those other countries as the Gran Chaco.

In Brazil's Pantanal, in the sparsely populated western states of Mato Grosso and Mato Grosso do Sul, illegal but profitable activities encroach on this paradise.

Just last year, 2 million crocodiles were killed for their hides. Countless other animal skins and live exotic birds were smuggled out. Cocaine traffickers invaded the region in increasing numbers. Prospectors separating gold from river silt left behind some 40 tons of toxic mercury, poisoning fish, animals and people — including themselves.

"It's a monumental problem," Guilherme Augusto Borges, a biologist with Mato Grosso's environmental-protection agency, said in an interview. He added that the full extent of damage to the Pantanal is not known, and that research into the problem is in its infant stages.

"But if it takes five years of study to find out what's happening here, that's too long," Borges said. "It may be too late by then."

Every year from October to March the waters of the 840-mile Paraguay River, the Pantanal's main water source, and its tributaries flood two-thirds of the region.

The high water strands cows shoulder-deep and sometimes brings river snakes right to the doors of farmhouses. Without the floods, there would be no Pantanal. The floods keep the swamp's delicate ecosystem in balance. High water allows wildlife to breed and discourages the Pantanal's main predator: man.

Cyclical chaotic flooding, expected every decade or so and occurring this year, threatening the lives of about 800,000 cattle, also is part of the natural aquatic balance. Uncontrolled flooding tends to be most serious around Corumba, on the Paraguay River in Mato Grosso do Sul, just across the border from Bolivia.

Mayor Hugo Silva da Costa of Corumba, a cancer surgeon turned politician, said the flooding has been getting worse. This year the waters in the region rose 22 feet — seven feet above the level at which swamp isles are inundated and trees die, depriving animals of their habitat.

"The water gets higher and higher every year," the mayor said. "The temperature is changing. And in the dry season there is less water and less grass for grazing."

He added that he believed the changes were directly linked to increased human activity in the Pantanal.

"The Pantanal is suffering, and something has to be done fast," said da Costa, who in April declared a state of emergency in Corumba.

Osvaldo da Cunha, a physician and the owner of a 29,000-acre ranch 75 miles from Cuiaba, Mato Grosso's capital, says a new environmental abuse in the Pantanal comes from farms where dikes are built to hold off flooding and chemical pesticides are used to grow rice, corn and soybeans.

"With dikes, the land can be used year round," he said. "But the water barriers upset the natural cycle."

Da Cunha said also that crocodile hunting in the Pantanal, now illegal but almost impossible to control, may become legal because of the "violent economic pressure" because of Brazil's chronic unemployment and runaway inflation.

To discourage poachers from invading his Santa Inez Ranch, da Cunha has begun a laborious process of "fingerprinting" his caiman crocodiles, cousins of the alligators found in the southern United States, much in the style of the branding of cattle.

Biologist Anacleto Garcia de Arruda, 26, who is in charge of the project, midnight rounds in a canoe, grabbing crocodiles by the neck.

He starts with baby caimans, weighing them, counting their teeth and pinning colored sequins on their scales to identify them through maturity. He says he has no idea of the number of crocodiles on the ranch and that the "branding" process will take four years.

The caimans are easy prey for poachers who at night paralyze them with strong flashlights beamed into their crimson, reflector-like eyes. Then they shoot them.

Caiman hides are considered third rate in the international fashion market and sell for the equivalent of just $10 apiece. Still, they are good enough for making popularly priced women's shoes, belts and handbags, and so clandestine hunters find them profitable.

The police say a flourishing crocodile hide-for-cocaine trade exists in the Pantanal, but they have yet to catch anyone.

In Corumba alone, 660 pounds of cocaine were seized last year. On the other side of the river, in Puerto Suarez, Bolivia, which has 1,200 people and 490 taxis, stuffed caimans are displayed in souvenir shops. Corumba is believed to be a main gateway for Bolivian cocaine.

In Pocone, a tiny Pantanal town 75 miles from Cuiaba, the environmental threat stems from an uncontrolled gold rush. Taxi drivers quote prices in gold instead of in Brazil's weak cruzado currency. Practically every other store buys and sells gold.

But in the environs, the mercury used in the primitive extraction of gold has left its mark: hollow trees decaying like skeletons.

"People want gold, and they don't care how they take it out," said Catia Nunes da Cunha, coordinator of Mato Grosso's environmental agency.

In 1987, tens of thousands of rough, free-lance prospectors used mercury to extract an estimated 50 tons of Brazilian gold, much of it from the northern Pantanal.

National Archives recall U.S. woman killed in Vietnam

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — The Vietnam war's messengers of death are inescapable at the National Archives.

The daily journals, the annual history of the Da Nang mortuary, the certificates of death, the records of things left behind — a peace medal, a Bible, tape cassettes — are abundant in the 12 million pages of Army documents recently made public.

Together, they chronicle the heavy toll paid by the 58,156 men and women who died in Vietnam.

The Da Nang mortuary report tells of processing the remains of 5,377 Americans in 1969 and notes that the number of casualties was generally higher in March through May of each year because of regular North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensives.

Sharon Lane

The second entry in the daily staff journal of the 74th Medical Battalion at Chu Lai on June 8, 1969, brought the dreaded knock on the door back home in Canton, Ohio, for Kay and John Lane.

"1. 0001 Journal opened.

"2. 0550 Rocket attack 312th area. Resulted in the death of a nurse.

"3. 0720 SFC Bailey called SP5 Ellafrits, 312th Evac, on the casualty report on the death of 1LT Sharon A. Lane, N2337551, 283-38-3327, 312th Evac, as a result of attack at 0550 hrs..."

While it was morning in Vietnam, it was the previous evening in the United States because Saigon time was 11 hours ahead. The Lanes heard sketchy details of the rocket attack on the evening news.

"Right after that came a knock on the door and we saw this Army car sitting in the driveway," Kay Lane, now 64, recalled in a telephone interview. "When he (the Army officer) came to the door, even before my husband got there, I said, 'Is she dead?' He said, 'Yes.'"

A piece of steel from a rocket that landed between Ward 4A and Ward 4B of the 312th Evacuation Hospital had ripped through Sharon Lane's aorta. She bled to death less than a month before her 26th birthday, the first woman killed by hostile fire in Vietnam.

Among her last letters home, she wrote on June 4, 1969, that her unit had just reached a milestone by treating its 10,000th patient since arriving in Vietnam the previous September. Then she added:

"Start 'nights' tomorrow so don't have to get up early tomorrow. Nice thought. Still very quiet around here. Haven't gotten mortared for a couple of weeks now..."

Four days later, she was dead. She was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart and the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross.

A memorial statue of the nurse stands in the courtyard of Aultman Hospital in Canton, where she went to nursing school. The hospital's Sharon Lane Women's Center is named in her honor.

Just the same, her mother said, Sharon would approve of none of this.

"She wasn't that kind of a person," Kay Lane said. "She just thought she was a nobody, you know, just an ordinary person, and everybody tries to make a hero out of her now."

Documents reveal efforts to shape opinion

Johnson wanted Vietnam military operations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Twelve million pages of Army documents dealing with Vietnam were recently unsealed. Special Correspondent George Esper, who covered the war for 10 years and was the last Saigon bureau chief for The Associated Press, spent a week going through some of the papers for this report.

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — Secret documents recently declassified and opened to public view confirm behind-the-scenes efforts by President Lyndon B. Johnson and top military commanders to manipulate American public opinion of the Vietnam War and reverse growing opposition.

In one memo, Vietnam commanders were told to "make it clear to all concerned that expressing criticism to news media representatives and others will serve only to aggravate the issues surrounding our problems in Southeast Asia." It was signed by Adm. U.S. Grant Sharp, commander of American forces in the Pacific.

Johnson himself was described in some messages as wanting to play down military operations in 1968 so as not to upset efforts to get the North Vietnamese to enter peace talks.

The 12 million pages at the National Archives are one-sixth of the 72 million pages of Army documents that will be released in installments. The next batch will be released in April 1990.

The papers' topics range from battlefield reports to a division commander's concern that his troops were taking radios and comic books to the front lines, making them less vigilant against Viet Cong attack.

But the most significant papers are the exchanges between Saigon and Washington. While Johnson's sensitivity to criticism and his administration's efforts to put the most favorable light on an unpopular war were widely reported at the time, the papers provide an inside view of official thinking.

ONE PARTICULAR message, signed by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, illustrates the administration's thrust. It was sent Jan. 31, 1968, at the start of North Vietnam's Tet offensive, which began turning Americans against their involvement in the distant war.

In the memo, Gen. William C. Westmoreland was told that President Johnson wanted him to make a brief personal comment to the press at least once each day "to convey to the American people your confidence in our capability to blunt these enemy moves and to reassure the public here that you have the situation under control."

But even as Westmoreland received the memo, the situation was chaotic, with North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops attacking more than 100 cities and towns on the second day of their three-day Lunar New Year, called Tet.

They suffered heavy casualties but showed the vulnerability of South Vietnam's cities, sending a message to Americans that no end to the war was near. In the two weeks of the offensive, more than 1,000 Americans were killed, increasing frustration and dismay back home.

The papers also reveal that Johnson's decision two months later to halt the bombing of North Vietnam in hopes of coaxing the enemy to the peace table was instead taken by military officers as an opportunity to lay low in bad weather and sway public opinion at the same time.

The president appeared on national television March 31, 1968, to announce the cessation of bombing above the 20th Parallel. He then stunned listeners when he added that he would neither seek nor accept the Democratic nomination for a second term.

IN A MEMO dated the same day and apparently reflecting prior knowledge of Johnson's announcement, Sharp, the Pacific commander, pointed out to Westmoreland that the bombing halt was timed just right.

"Since the Tet offensive, support in the U.S. for the war in Southeast Asia has decreased at an accelerating rate," Sharp wrote. "Many of the strongest proponents of forceful action in Vietnam have reversed their positions, have moved to neutral ground or are wavering. If this trend continues unchecked, public support of our objectives in Southeast Asia will be too frail to sustain the effort.

"Weather over the northern portion of North Vietnam will continue unsuitable for air operations during the next 30 days; therefore if a cessation of air operations is to be undertaken, now is the best time from the military viewpoint.

"It is hoped that this unilateral initiative to seek peace will reverse the growing dissent and opposition within our country to the war. The initiative will aid in countering foreign criticism."

In another March 31 message, Wheeler advised Westmoreland that at a White House meeting that night, Johnson "cited the fact that we have been accused in the past of always accompanying peace initiatives with increased military activity."

Wheeler said the president was aware of ongoing operations to open Route 9 and lift the North Vietnamese siege of the American base at Khe Sanh, one of the most widely reported campaigns of the war.

"The purpose of this message is not to have you stand down those operations," Wheeler told Westmoreland. "However, it is desired that you, your subordinate commanders and your PA (public affairs) people play them low key...You and your people should take care to describe these operations as being merely in the usual run of offensive operations."

THE BATTLE to free Khe Sanh, however, was hardly "usual." More than 200 Marines were killed and 1,600 wounded in the 77-day siege, which was lifted April 5.

In the meantime, air strikes continued in the less populous southern panhandle of North Vietnam, and the administration failed to manipulate the press to its liking. When it was reported in mid-April that U.S. bombers had launched the heaviest air strikes of the war in the panhandle, Johnson was furious, prompting a cable April 16 from Wheeler to Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford and others, including Sharp and Westmoreland.

"Apparently, the president was considerably chafed by TV and radio newscasts...to effect that Johnson unleashed yesterday heaviest air attacks of war against panhandle of NVN (North Vietnam)," Wheeler said. "The president thinks we are handing a case to those who profess that our actions are contrary to his 31 March speech by providing so much detail...to the news media."

Sharp and Westmoreland suggested to Wheeler that if bombing were to be renewed beyond the panhandle, their commands should decline comment to the press. Responding on May 23, Wheeler said:

"As I advised you previously, the highest authority (Johnson) desires the noise level to be kept low in such eventuality — i.e, no announcements to the press giving details of weight or effort, targets struck, etc.

"I MUST SAY, Westy, that your proposal and the rationale behind it make good sense: specifically, that you make no announcements but be permitted to confirm that a particular target has been struck if such question is asked."

The North Vietnamese did agree to peace talks, which opened in Paris May 13, 1968. But it was almost five more years, on Jan. 27, 1973, until an agreement was reached ending U.S. intervention in the war. American forces and prisoners of war returned home.

The opposing Vietnamese sides ignored the agreement's call for a cease-fire and continued fighting until Saigon fell to the North Vietnamese on April 30, 1975.

Vicious animals will be required to wear yellow collars

GALVESTON (AP) — Vicious animals will be wearing fluorescent yellow collars and their owners may have to take out liability insurance on their pets as part of a new ordinance passed in response to public complaints about pit bull attacks.

The new law passed by City Council requires vicious animals to wear the collars, which signify the wearer has attacked humans or other animals or has been legally declared likely to do so without provocation.

In addition, owners of vicious animals can be forced to carry a minimum of $100,000 in liability insurance to keep the pets in the city and can be fined up to $2,000 for violations of the new ordinance.

Local letter carriers who gathered in council chambers cheered Thursday when the ordinance was passed.

A Galveston postal worker was severely bitten by a pit bull in January, and an 83-year-old local man died from massive wounds inflicted in a November attack by two pit bulls.

"I hope this action today will save lives in the future," Mayor Jan Coggeshall said.

Earlier, the mayor had called for a ban on pit bulls, but so-called "breed-specific" ordinances have been struck down consistently in the courts in other parts of the country.

Animals automatically will be declared vicious and subject to the special collaring if they cause serious bodily injury to humans or if they kill other domestic animals, according to City Attorney Steve Williams.

The city's animal control office will handle public complaints or allegations and will investigate within five days. The office immediately can declare an animal vicious although the owner has a right to ask for a hearing.

"At that point, there is a very limited amount of time within which the owner must get a liability insurance policy in the amount of at least $100,000 and place the animal in a substantial enclosure that would make reasonably sure the animal would not be running the streets," Williams said.

The ordinance also requires that an animal legally declared vicious be tattooed with the number that appears on the permit allowing the owner to keep it inside the city limits, Williams said.

Judge won't postpone murder trial of three former lawmen

TYLER (AP) — A state judge will not postpone the murder trial of three Sabine County law enforcement officials accused in the beating death of a jail inmate even though they may be facing another trial on civil rights violations at the same time.

The three defendants will be expected to appear in court July 11 as scheduled unless they show a compelling reason why they cannot attend, State District Judge Joe Tunnell said Thursday.

Charged with murder in the Christmas night fatal beating of a Sabine County Jail inmate are former Hemphill Police Chief Thomas E. Ladner, 40, and former Sabine County sheriff's Deputies Billy Ray Horton, 58, and James H. "Bo" Hyden, 34.

The inmate, Loyal Garner Jr., 34, of Florien, La., died two days later in a Tyler hospital of head wounds allegedly inflicted by the officers. Garner had been jailed on a drunken driving charge.

The three defendants also are charged with violating Garner's civil rights in a trial scheduled to begin Tuesday in Hemphill.

STATE IN BRIEF

Police say shooting victims attacked again

JASPER (AP) — Police said victims of a shooting at an East Texas barbecue restaurant were attacked a second time by their three assailants inside the hospital.

Three Jasper men were in Jasper County Jail Friday on charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, said Deputy Sheriff Jack Meyers.

O'Neil Kyle and Eric Adams were being held on $1,500 bond and Alfred Middelton was held on a $5,000 bond.

Jasper Deputy Sheriff Bill Bowling said he does not know how the scuffle at the restaurant in Jasper Thursday night began. When three shooting victims were taken to Jasper Memorial hospital from the restaurant, police said 10 men carrying sticks and chains attacked the victims.

Jasper Police Chief Harlan Alexander said that in addition to the three in jail, seven other men were picked up and charged with disorderly conduct.

Police said they did not now of any motive for the attacks. The three victims, Larry James Carter, Armon Cauley and Enrique Land, were later transferred to hospitals in Beaumont and Nacogdoches, where police said they were listed in good condition.

Meyers said authorities were still searching for one of the three guns believed to have been used in the assault. A .22-caliber pistol and .25-caliber automatic were recovered at the scene, he said.

Drivers warned not to drink

DALLAS (AP) — Police advise against drinking and driving this Fourth of July Holiday weekend, but they admit that even if people insist, offenders will probably get away because of the difficulty in enforcing a 10-month old law.

Under the state's open-container law, officers can ticket people who are observed drinking an alcoholic beverage while driving.

But authorities have complained that the law is hard to enforce.

Lt. Ray Ward of the Texas Department of Public Safety says an officer cannot issue a ticket unless the driver is seen taking a drink, even if the officer sees alcohol in the car or smells it on the driver's breath.

Dallas police Lt. Mike Hibbs said many motorists disguise beer cans with soft drink wrappers or pour alcoholic beverages into soft drink cans or cups to evade the law. Others simply pass the beverages to passengers, who cannot be ticketed under the legislation.

Robbers take $80,000

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — No arrests have been made in connection with the robbery of a small oil company where two men took $80,000 in cash, authorities said Friday.

As his partner waited outside, a man entered Dispetco Oil Co.'s office Thursday morning, waved a blue-steel revolver and forced two employees to face a wall, Harris County sheriff's Deputy W.L. Hunton said.

Hunton said the man outside then joined his partner in ransacking the building, where they gathered $80,000 from drawers and stuffed it into a briefcase they found under an office desk.

Hunton said company officials told him the sizable amount of cash was on hand because the independent company dealt on a cash-basis with some of its customers.

Yesterday.

Over 100 years ago, Midland's pioneers discovered the natural beauty of the rustling grasslands. Under the expansive West Texas sky, this vast land provided a place for the cattle to roam . . . for the settlers to call home.

Today.

Now, Midlanders are again finding opportunity on the horizon . . . at Grassland Estates . . . the city's newest, master planned subdivision for executive homes.

Beginning north of highway 191 and extending north to the intersection of Wadley and Loop 250, Grassland Estates offers quality of life plus an investment in the future.

A place to live with controlled urban character, without drainage and access problems, multi-family or unrestricted residential construction. An exclusive, yet convenient and relaxed residential development for tomorrow — Grassland Estates.

Shaded area indicates planned, future development.

Tomorrow.

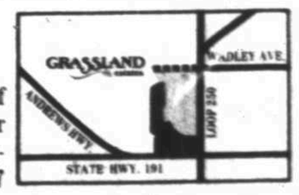

Soon, the sun will rise over a beautifully calm subdivision. Featuring custom designed homes and the most modern amenities, this special neighborhood offers its residents a quiet place to raise a family . . . a solid place to put down roots.

The place . . . Grassland Estates.

Now, you and your family can become part of this very special place. Spacious lots, designed for homes of 2,500 square feet or larger, are currently available. Stake your claim in Midland's Grassland Estates and enjoy its many rewards.

- Large lots sized to accommodate spacious homes for easy living and beautiful yards with room enough to play
- Wider streets, paved alleys, underground utilities and carefully engineered storm water drainage.
- Quiet, convenient, accessible location just minutes from the city's business and shopping centers
- In walking distance of Scharbauer Elementary in the Lee High School district

To discover the carefully insulated beauty of Grassland Es ..es, head west off Loop 250, just north of Highway 191. Or call SBC Corporation at 686-2057

President Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala joins military chiefs at a reviewing stand on Army Day. Seated by free elections and inaugurated in January 1986, Cerezo is Guatemala's first civilian chief of state in 16 years. His election signaled the military's concession of absolute control in the face of international isolation, distress and U.S. pressure.

Guatemala: Emerging into the light

WASHINGTON — In the Guatemalan regional capital of Coban, the weary Indian refugees file out of two decrepit buses: an old man holding a box of chickens, a mother carrying a baby, a blind girl gently guided by a friend, a man cradling the family cat.

They trudge up an unlighted staircase to the second story of a Roman Catholic convent, where they will sleep on the floor that night before starting another life the next day. In the light at the top of the stairs, they are welcomed by smiling nuns.

"As I think about them now, they seem a metaphor for their country," Griffin Smith Jr. writes in the current National Geographic. "Guatemala has lately climbed some very dark stairs and, to the surprise of many who know it best, may at last be emerging into light.

"An intermittent but stubborn quarter-century-old leftist insurgency appears to have been mastered by a policy of 'rifles and beans' — combining material aid to improverished villagers and a remorseless military campaign — though not without the loss of tens of thousands of lives."

Army officers, Guatemala's dominant caste for more than three decades, have voluntarily yielded power under a new constitution that forbids military men from serving as president. In a free election in 1985, a majority of almost 70 percent elected a centrist candidate.

"Although the army still holds more than enough behind-the-scenes power to reimpose its rule, I met no Guatemalans who were betting that would happen soon," Smith writes. "The unrealistic hopes of instant change that flourished in the postelection euphoria have faded now, but a guarded optimism persists."

Five years ago, experts were predicting catastrophe. Some foresaw a downward spiral of ever-harsher repression; others thought revolution was inevitable.

The past five years have wrought a remarkable transformation. But despite its natural beauty and economic potential, Guatemala remains a deeply troubled country.

Smith calls it "the cork in the Central American bottle: Whatever unrest might bubble northward from that turbulent region must pass through Guatemala first. Guatemalans cast an uneasy eye toward Nicaragua and El Salvador and wonder about the future."

Almost one-third of Central America's people — 8.6 million — live in Guatemala. It is blessed with fertile volcanic soil, a cosmopolitan middle class and the largest manufacturing base on the isthmus. Yet, it has never lived up to its potential.

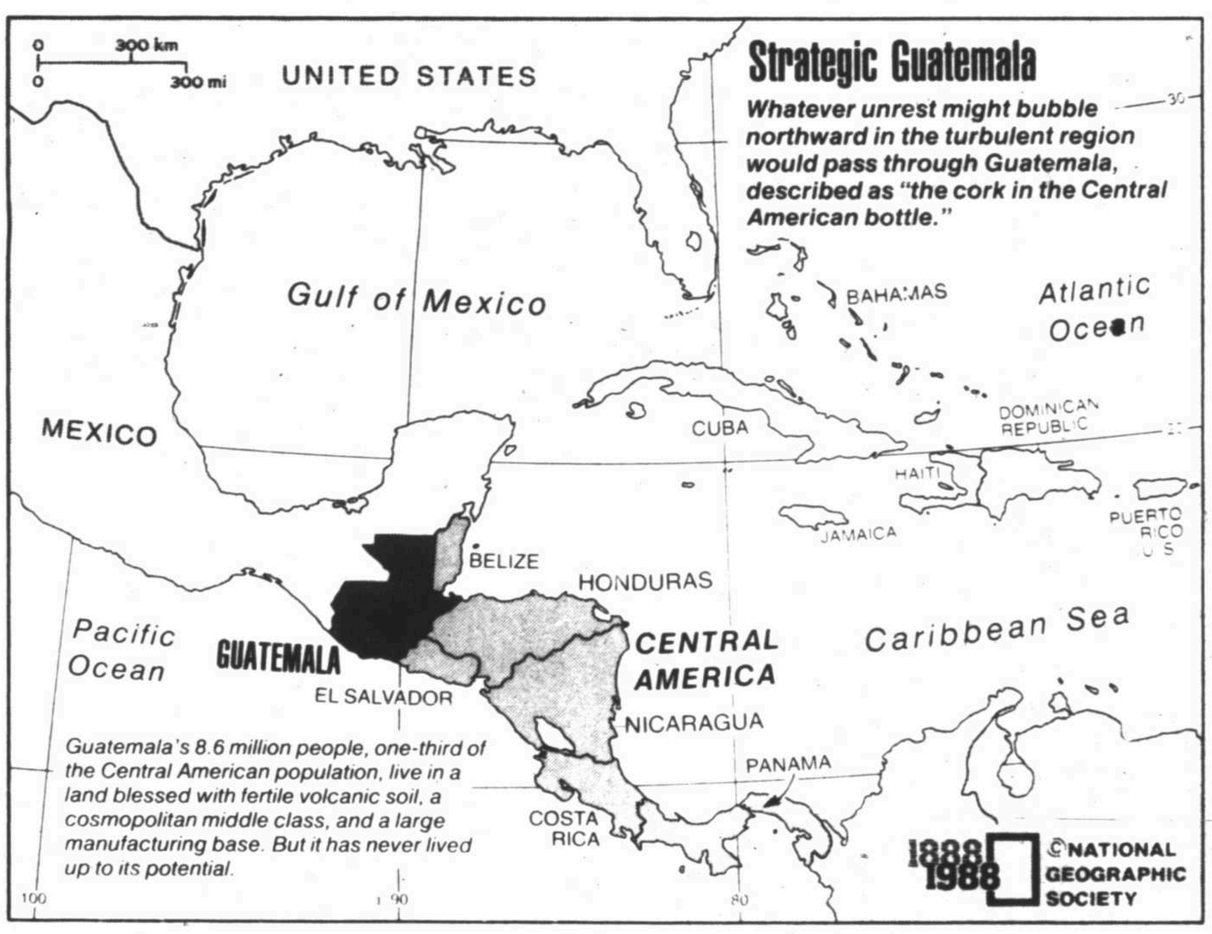

Nearly half the adults in Guatemala can't read or write; only 20 percent have gone to high school. Although Guatemala grows enough food to export, of every 100 Guatemalans who died, about 40 are children under age 5 who perish because of malnutrition. In 1984, the wealthiest 20 percent of Guatemalans received 57 percent of the income while the poorest 20 percent received 5 percent. With an annual population growth rate of nearly 3 percent, the country each year has 200,000 more mouths to feed — twice the number of new jobs.

"Is there any other country this small that has so much diversity?" asks a friend of Smith's who chooses to live in the Ohio-sized nation. In climite and topography it is three countries. The urban-rural split is sharp: While Guatemala City is a modern Third World capital 20 times larger than any provincial city, the countryside is decades, some would say centuries, behind.

Some 55 percent of Guatemalans are pure Indian, only 0.5 percent are pure European, and almost 45 percent are "mestizo," a mixture of Indian and European stock.

"For Guatemala the Indian is the central, insurmountable fact," Smith writes. "Outwardly meek, to all appearances a conquered people, the Indians have inwardly kept the values of late Maya society." As a result, Guatemala is a society of two cultures, separated by a 500-year-old gulf.

"After a time," writes Smith, "I began to think Guatemala's deepest problem is that its people trust one another so little, that in the every-man-for-himself attitude of its society, no one gives an even break because no one expects it."

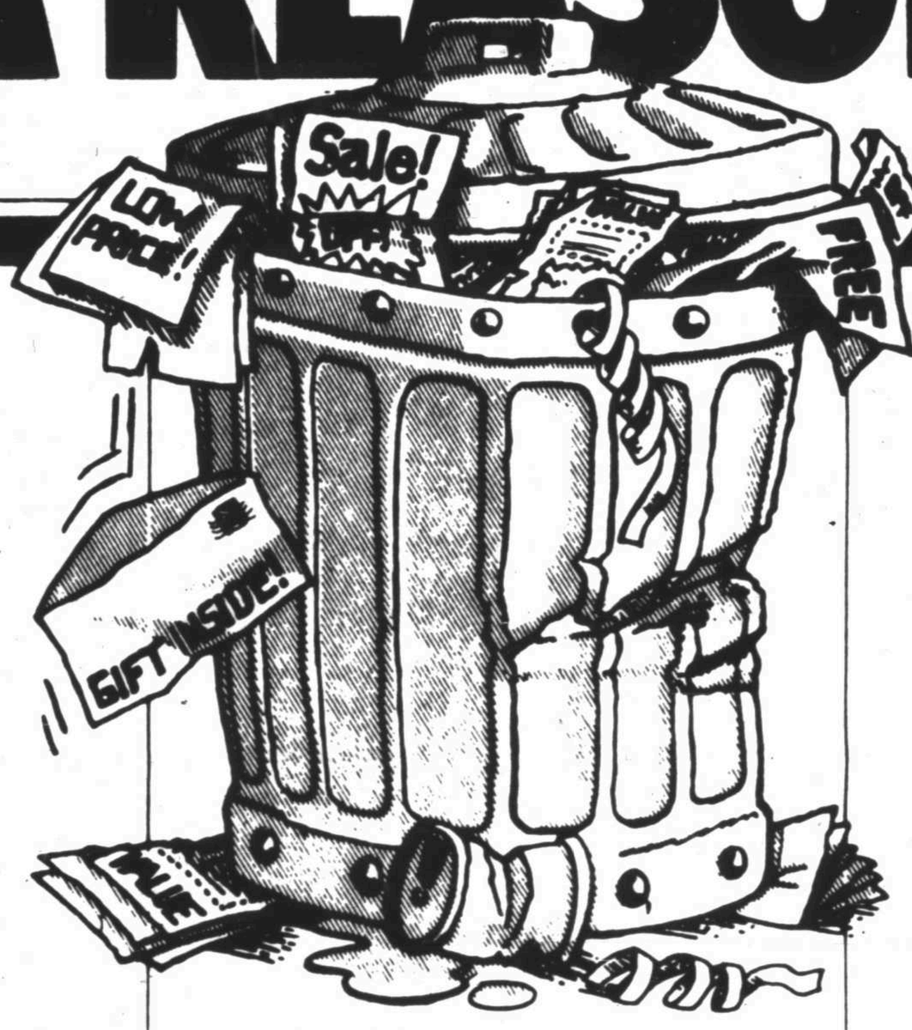

Nestled between Mexico, El Salvador and Honduras, Guatemala, top right, has seen a transformation during the past five years. But despite its natural beauty and economic potential, Guatemala remains a deeply troubled country. Former Guatemalan guerillas and supporters, bottom, try on a new life through a government amnesty program. The men receive donated clothing at Coban army base.

IT'S CALLED JUNK MAIL FOR A REASON

First the wad of bothersome paper must be extracted from the mailbox. Then it gets unceremoniously dumped in the trashcan, often without even a second glance.

It's called junk mail and nobody ever reads it.

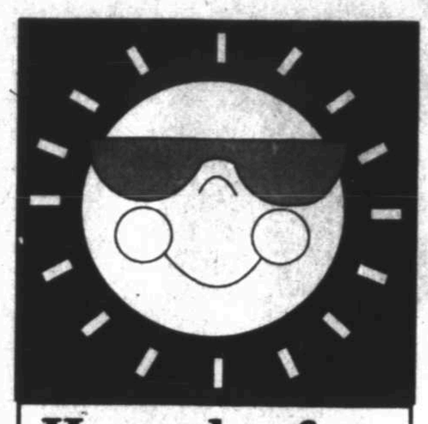

That's too bad. Because the same message in a newspaper could have tickled the imagination. Stimulated a response. And prompted a purchase. Newspaper readers actually look forward to advertising, that's why they're willing to pay for it.

Your ad dollars can work harder and go farther. Call us at 682-5311 and we'll make your message part of a medium that's actually welcome in people's homes.

SUMMER

Hazards of too much sun

- Certain ailments – cold sores, cataracts and a number of skin and systemic diseases – are worsened by excessive exposure to sunlight.
- Some medications don't mix well with the sun. Anti-hista mines, oral contraceptives, blood-pressure medications, chemotherapy drugs and some antibiotics can cause bumps, hives, a rash, or other allergic reactions.
- Many oils that are used in perfume interact with sunlight to produce perma nent brownish patches on the skin.
- Some people are allergic to sunlight. Treatment is the same as for many other allergies: antihistimines or, for sudden, severe attacks, injections of adrenalin.

The effects of solar radiation on your skin

THE SUN'S RADIATION
Visible light is comprised of wavelengths ranging from red to violet. The longest waves at one end of the spectrum are called infrared radiation The shortest waves, at the opposite end, are called ultraviolet radiation. Ultraviolet is divided into three wavelengths, as shown below.

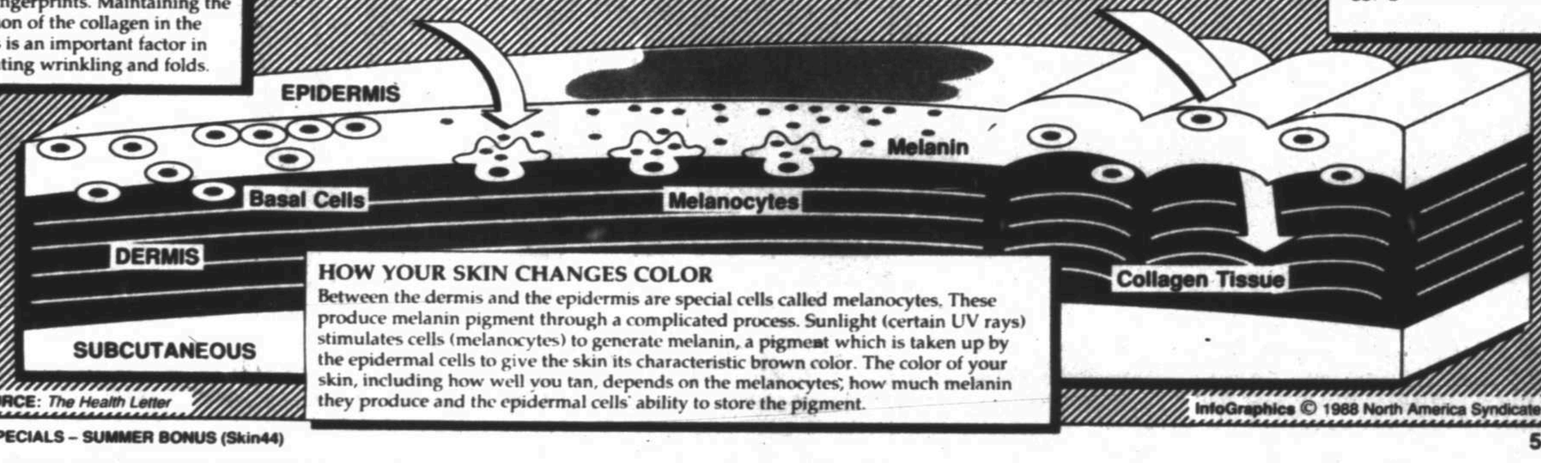

THE STRUCTURE OF SKIN
The skin has three layers of tissue: epidermis, dermis and subcutaneous. The epidermis, the tough outer layer, is about as thick as a sheet of paper, although sunlight makes these cells divide in order to thicken the layer and protect the skin. Basal cells, just below the epidermis, are constantly being formed and pushed to the surface. (It takes about 26 days for new basal cells to mature and rise to the outer surface.) The middle layer, the dermis, is mostly collagen, a special protein which is like a thick gel. It is this layer of skin that is rich with blood vessels, nerves and glands. This layer of the skin gives it definition, including folds, wrinkles and even fingerprints. Maintaining the condition of the collagen in the dermis is an important factor in preventing wrinkling and folds.

Ultraviolet A is far less likely to cause sunburn than ultraviolet B, but it penetrates the skin deeply and damages the dermis and subcutaneous layers.

Ultraviolet C is toxic to life. It is filtered out by the ozone layer of the atmosphere.

Ultraviolet B is called the "sunburn spectrum" because it is the main cause of sunburn.

WHY SUNLIGHT MAKES THE SKIN WRINKLE
After prolonged exposure (especially in fair-skinned individuals), the skin can become wrinkled and "aged" looking. The basal cells do not reproduce as often, giving the outer skin (epidermis) a dry appearance. The collagen tissue undergoes changes.
The elastic fibers and connective tissue fibers may become fragmented and degenerate, all of which causes wrinkling and sagging of the surface skin.

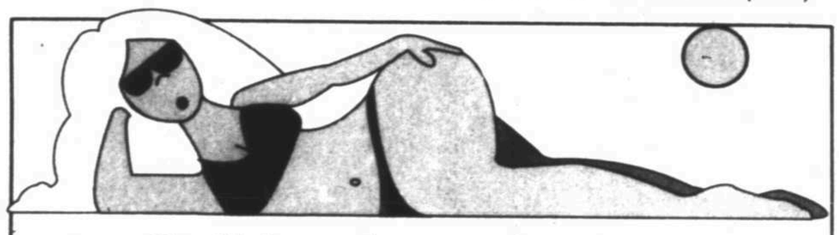

HOW YOUR SKIN CHANGES COLOR
Between the dermis and the epidermis are special cells called melanocytes. These produce melanin pigment through a complicated process. Sunlight (certain UV rays) stimulates cells (melanocytes) to generate melanin, a pigment which is taken up by the epidermal cells to give the skin its characteristic brown color. The color of your skin, including how well you tan, depends on the melanocytes; how much melanin they produce and the epidermal cells' ability to store the pigment.

Stalking the perfect tan

Some terms that are helpful when choosing a tanning product:

SUNSCREENS:
Filter out harmful, burning rays and permit safe tanning.

SUNBLOCKS:
Prevent burning or tanning to a grater degree than suntan lotions.

TANNING OILS:
Lubricate, enhance and otherwise pamper an already acquired tan. Oils do not protect against sunburn.

BRONZERS :
Cream and powder cosmetics that imitate the look of a tan.

SUN PROTECTION FACTOR (SPF) :
This refers to the length of time various skin types can be safely exposed to sunlight. If a person can safely spend 10 minutes in the sun, a sunscreen with an SPF of 4 will protect the skin for 40 minutes.

SPFs OF 2, 4, 6:
Absorbs rays in the or tanning range, but not in the sunburning range.

SPFs OF 8 OR MORE:
Absorbs both burning and tanning ultrviolet rays.

PABA (Para-Aminobenzoic Acid):
PABA esters, cinnamates and salicylates all screen against ultraviolet B rays; oxybenzones protect against ultraviolet A rays.

WATER RESISTANT:
Products that protect for approximately 40 minutes in water.

WATERPROOF:
Products that last for approximately 80 minutes in water. Reapply sunscreen after toweling dry or sweating.

TIPS FOR GETTING A BETTER TAN

- For best protection, apply sunscreen 30-45 minutes before you go into the sun to allow it to penetrate the top layer of skin.
- For thorough coverage, slather on the same amount of sunscreen as you would moisturizer.
- Be sure to apply sunscreen under your bathing suit. Slippage could result in burning.
- Reapply sunscreen every two hours. Keep in mind that if an SPF of 4 gives you 40 minutes of tanning, a reapplication will not give you an additional 40 minutes. If you want to spend 80 minutes in the sun, use an SPF of 8 in the first place.

What not to lack when packing your pack

TEN ESSENTIAL ITEMS TO BRING WHEN YOU GO BACKPACKING

Whether you are going on a dayhike or an overnight expedition, it is important that you are properly equipped to meet emergencies. These are the bare necessities that an experienced hiker should not be without:

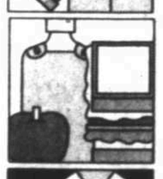

1. U.S.G.S. MAP: U.S. Geological Survey map of the area that you will be hiking in. It should be properly protected from the elements.

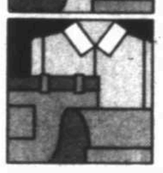

2. COMPASS: It should be a high quality compass that is shock proof. Be sure you are able to read a compass properly.

3. FLASHLIGHT: The flashlight should also have extra batteries and bulbs, and preferably be waterproof.

4. EXTRA FOOD: Don't bring bulky items that will weigh you down. Instead bring high-energy foods that will not dehydrate you.

5. EXTRA CLOTHES: Bring enough clothes to survive the most likely adverse conditions you will encounter.

6. SUNGLASSES: These will protect your eyes from harmful ultraviolet rays and from being irritated by the wind.

7. FIRST AID KIT: Bring as complete a kit as possible, including treatment for snake bites, broken bones and any medications you can't go without.

8. POCKET KNIFE: A pocket knife (with all the tools, blades and can openers) proves invaluable on hiking trips.

9. MATCHES: The more matches the better; they should be the "strike anywhere" type and be in a water-tight container.

10. FIRESTARTER: Since it's harder to start a fire than people think, you should bring some material to start a fire such as a candle, heat tabs, etc.
