A dog's life

Basking in the shade of a carnival tent Friday afternoon is Spike, an English bulldog that isn't part of the show but, nevertheless, attracts attention. He serves as mascot for Great Southwest Shows, the carnival at Trinity Mayfair. The annual arts and crafts show opens today at Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley Ave.

Reagan says gun controls are useless

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — President Reagan, wounded two years ago by an assailant with a cheap pistol, ridiculed gun controls Friday as useless, and said there is strong evidence that high-level Cuban officials are helping smuggle drugs into the United States.

In a speech to a convention of the National Rifle Association, which awarded him a life membership, Reagan declared: "We will never disarm any American who seeks to protect his or her family from fear and harm."

He spoke kindly of congressional efforts to ease restrictions on gun sales that were enacted largely in response to the assassinations of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968.

Reagan received loud applause from 3,000 convention delegates when he reaffirmed his opposition to gun controls. But the audience was silent when he asked support for a mandatory prison term of no less than five years for use of armor-piercing bullets — so-called "cop-killer bullets" — during federal crimes of violence.

The president urged longer and mandatory prison sentences and abolition of parole for federal offenses as the best remedies against crime. And in a departure from his prepared text, Reagan mentioned a Cuban connection when he spoke of federal efforts to halt illicit drug traffic.

"I'm not one who often feels or too often vents anger, but I want the American people to know that they're faced with the most sinister, despicable actions. We have strong evidence that high-level Cuban government officials have been involved in smuggling drugs into the United States," he said.

The president did not elaborate except to say that Attorney General William French Smith and FBI Director William H. Webster have assured him "they will use every resource they have to combat this menace."

Reagan credited the NRA with helping defeat a gun-control proposal in California last November, and cited a letter he had received from a convicted burglar in San Quentin penitentiary who said nothing could make criminals happier than gun controls.

Reagan quoted the burglar as writing that he was most scared when about to break into "one of those homes where the fella has a gun in a drawer by the bed."

Rifle association members had to pass through metal detectors, a standard precaution against firearms at presidential appearances, before entering the convention hall at Phoenix Civic Plaza to hear Reagan's speech. When the president left the center, several demonstrators in the crowd outside shouted slogans supporting a nuclear freeze and denouncing U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

The president said his administration wanted "to reform the firearms laws which needlessly interfere with the rights of legitimate gun owners like yourselves."

He promised to work closely with the rifle association and Sens. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., sponsors of legislation that would make interstate firearms sales easier, remove most restraints on mail-order gun sales and repeal the ban on imports of cheap handguns.

Reagan, who wore a bulletproof vest Thursday when he gave a speech in downtown San Antonio, told NRA members, "It's a nasty truth, but those who seek to inflict harm are not fazed by gun-control laws. I happen to know this from personal experience."

This was a reference to the injuries Reagan and three other men suffered in an assassination attempt outside a Washington hotel where the president had spoken on March 30, 1981. His assailant, John W. Hinckley Jr., is confined to a federal mental institution in Washington.

Praising the rifle association, one of the nation's largest and most heavily financed special-interest groups, Reagan declared, "No group does more to promote gun safety and respect for the laws of this land than the NRA, and I thank you."

Speaking of gun-control advocates, Reagan said, "Don't they understand that most violent crimes are not committed by decent, law-abiding citizens? They're committed by career criminals."

"Guns don't make criminals," Reagan said. "Hard-core criminals use guns, and locking them up and throwing away the key is the best gun-control law we could ever have."

Reagan began his day here by calling Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Prime Minister Menachem Begin to hail the Israeli Cabinet's approval in principle of an agreement for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

In a two-minute conversation with Begin, Reagan praised "the constructive and positive spirit in which the negotiations were successfully concluded," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Woman found kept 'like an animal'

NORTH MATEWAN, W.Va. (AP) — A magistrate, prompted by an anonymous caller, entered a locked room in an empty house and found a retarded woman who apparently had been kept for years "like an animal."

The tiny, windowless room had no bathroom facilities.

"You would never in your life believe that in 1983 something like this would be going on anywhere in the world, much less in the United States," Mingo County Magistrate Ethel Pollis said Friday.

"There's not a hog anywhere in the world living in as bad a situation as she was. I do not have words to describe what I saw. It's unbelievable."

Mrs. Pollis said she found the woman naked, with human feces "all over her body," in the tiny room in North Matewan on Tuesday. The woman was turned over to the custody of state welfare officials.

The magistrate said she learned of the woman's confinement earlier this week from an anonymous caller.

"She told me there was a woman who had been locked in a room for over 15 years and she said she could not sleep because the people who took care of her were out of town and had left her alone. She said she was worried that she wouldn't have anything to eat."

Mrs. Pollis said she went to the house identified by the caller, but no one answered. A neighbor who had been asked to take food to the young woman eventually produced a key, she said.

"I didn't know what to expect. When I went in I heard a kicking or a knocking or a banging. I just followed this noise, and in the back of the house, off of the kitchen, there was a bathroom and then it looked like a closet door, but it had a lock on it. So I unlocked it and opened the door.

"When I opened the door the stench hit me in the face and almost knocked me down. It was awful."

Mrs. Pollis said the woman, in her 30s, "was laying on the bed kicking on the wall, not violently, but like you had nothing to do."

"Then I saw the Clorox bottles with the tops cut off them that food had been put in," she said. "There was some corn, whole grain corn, in one of them. It reminded me of feeding hogs, or worse."

Neighbors said they had been told to slide the containers of food through a small hole in the wall, Mrs. Pollis said.

"They had been putting food through the hole in the wall for a day or two. It finally got to them. Their imagination got to them," she said.

Mrs. Pollis summoned sheriff's deputies and county welfare officials, who bathed the woman, gave her clothes and took her to Huntington State Hospital for examination and treatment.

"The neighbors said that when she was 15, she lost her mind. And they had just locked her up ever since," said Mrs. Pollis.

Officials said the woman had been living with a legal guardian since her mother died. They declined to give the names of either the woman or her guardian, saying the case had been referred to the county prosecutor's office.

"We had never received any complaints whatsoever until all of this broke loose on us on Tuesday. We had no idea whatsover," said Jim Childress, area administrator for the Department of Welfare in Williamson.

Mrs. Pollis said she was appalled that neighbors waited so long to notify authorities.

"The neighbors just didn't want to get involved," she said.

Connally says U.S. needs more innovation

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The United States is on the verge of the greatest economic recovery this nation, or the world, has ever seen.

This recovery will arrive sooner if Americans turn away from uncertainty and get back to confident thinking, John B. Connally said in Midland Friday night.

"We should be spending money, we should be expanding our industries, we should be doing research and development as much as we can," the three-time Texas governor said.

He made his remarks at the Desk & Derrick Club's annual Petroleum Industry Appreciation Banquet.

Americans show an amazing lack of confidence today, Connally said, and this attitude is holding back economic recovery. "Our biggest problem is we're not being as innovative as we should be. Why?"

Connally said the U.S. has been so unselfish in helping other nations, especially since World War II, that it has undermined its own strength and let others surpass it in productivity and trade advantages.

And, because of America's prosperity, the country has grown fat and lazy, and in many ways, not very competitive, he said.

Economic turmoil around the world and continuous technological change should not frighten or confuse us, he said. America should not be uncertain of its role as a leader among nations.

"When we lose faith in ourselves, we really deal all mankind a blow."

Connally said if the United States cannot re-assert itself as the political, economic and moral leader of the free world, there is no country which can do it other than the Soviet Union. This country has no choice but to stay in the vanguard, he said.

"We provide the security shield for the world, we set the pattern for trade, we set the standard for currency...if we can't do it, who can do it? Who will do it? No one can."

Connally reminded his audience of the greatness which lies behind 200 years of American history.

"We've changed the world. We really industrialized it. We put a man on the moon."

The petroleum industry has played its part in the leadership process, he added.

"The oil and gas industry is a great industry, and anybody who tries to deride it around the world won't get any sympathy from me.

"It's American companies, American know-how, American technology that swam the rivers, that crossed the oceans, that went into the jungles, to find oil and gas for the world. It may later have been expropriated by those other countries, but we found it — and we transformed the world when we found it."

The oil business has been through tremendous changes, Connally said, but then, "every single thing we touch changes, almost every day," because of American inventiveness and creativity.

Connally said he thinks the price of oil will remain stable at $29 a barrel, and that by mid-1984 there will be no further oil or gas glut. He predicted 4 percent real growth in the Gross National Product in 1983, versus a 1.8 percent decrease last year.

The former secretary of the Navy and U.S. Treasury cited a list of positive indicators that the American economy has begun its much-awaited recovery.

Experts: Diaries 'obvious fakes'

Materials found to be post-WWII

KOBLENZ, West Germany (AP) — Government experts said Friday that scientific tests had shown the purported Hitler diaries to be "obvious fakes" lifted from a book on the Nazi dictator, written in the 1960s and printed on materials manufactured after World War II.

The experts did not say who they believed might have forged the 62 handwritten volumes.

The weekly magazine Stern has been publishing excerpts of the documents, saying it found them in a hayloft in an East German farm village, but Editor Henri Nannen said Friday, "There won't be a single word about these diaries in the next issue."

He did not say he thought the diaries were faked, but added Stern would "do all it can to clear up the reasons behind the matter." Nannen said Stern had carefully checked the documents' authenticity.

Two other publications that had paid Stern for the right to print excerpts, The Sunday Times of London and Paris Match, said they were suspending further publication because of the West German government announcement.

At a news conference in Koblenz, the president of the Federal Archives, Hans Booms, and Dr. Louis-Ferdinand Werner of the Federal Criminal Office contended the evidence of forgery was "irrefutable."

They said experts from their agencies and the Federal Bureau of Standards had conducted chemical tests on the paper, cover, bindings, labels and glue used on three of the volumes said to make up Hitler's diaries and other writings.

Werner said all the material contained elements manufactured after World War II, while Booms said the contents of the diaries showed they were "clearly" plagiarized from a 1962 book by former state archivist Max Domarus.

"We have examined the papers and clearly established that the diaries are obvious fakes," said Werner, who supervised chemical analyses of three volumes Stern provided at the request of Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann.

The volumes were those that Stern said were Hitler's diaries from 1934, 1941 and 1943.

The archivists said the diaries contained only events mentioned in the book, "Hitler's Speeches and Proclamations," included some of the work's errors of fact, and skipped the same dates the book did.

Domarus did not appear at the conference and his whereabouts were not known.

Booms estimated the diaries were written around 1964.

Booms told The Associated Press in a separate interview that for him, the "deciding factor" indicating a forgery was that the volumes "brought to light nothing but banalities of the day."

He noted that they contained no mention of the Italian dictator Mussolini visiting Hitler during the period covered or of other important historical events.

Disaster exercise carried out in Nevada desert

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Civilian and military workers in protective clothing and masks prowled the rugged desert of America's nuclear testing grounds Friday, pretending to search out radioactive debris from a nuclear weapons accident.

The exercise at the Nevada Test Site, the third of its kind, was designed to provide realistic training for those charged with sealing off and cleaning the site of a nuclear weapons accident.

Adm. Joseph Frick, commander of the Norfolk, Va., Navy base, took over responsibility for the exercises Thursday.

The locale for the 10-day event, dubbed NUWAX 83, is a desolate expanse of desert 80 miles northwest of Las Vegas, where scientists once tested rocket engines.

A NUWAX exercise involving the Air Force was held at the Test Site in 1979 and one involving the Army in 1981.

Federal officials gathered at a cluster of buildings dubbed Port Gaston, Va., which was once the Nuclear Rocket Development Station.

They evacuated 815 people from the mythical town Thursday when a mythical Navy helicopter carrying three nuclear weapons crashed near a city park, spraying radioactive debris all over the place.

NUWAX 83 was kicked off just minutes after a real underground nuclear test was set off 15 miles away. Department of Energy officials say the two events were not related.

DOE spokesman Jack Roeder said an accident spewing plutonium from a nuclear weapon could contaminate a city for years.

A real emergency near a highly populated city could cost millions of dollars and years of cleanup time, Roeder said.

Roeder said the Department of Energy takes precautions to avoid populated areas in transporting nuclear weapons.

There have been 32 accidents involving nuclear weapons, the most recent an explosion at a Titan 2 missile site at Damascus, Ark., in September 1980.

The exercise began with military authorities sending a "Broken Arrow" message Washington that a nuclear weapons accident had occurred and evacuation orders were carried out.

Newsmen were allowed on the site for the first time Friday and spent two hours touring the town and surrounding area.

Marine guards in protective suits and armed with machine guns kept newsmen and civilian workers out of an area roped off in red and described as a "national defense area."

The civilian workers, including 70 from the Virginia State Health Department, swarmed around the desert in their protective gear, searching out possible hot spots.

The workers were checked carefully with radiation-detection gear as they returned to a safe area near a civilian command post.

Memorial honors Americans killed in bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A carved and gilded green marble memorial bearing the names of 13 Americans killed in the bombing of the U.S. embassy in Beirut was unveiled Friday at the State Department. The department's acting chief said their legacy will be the Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement in principle announced hours earlier.

Kenneth W. Dam, the acting Secretary of State, tugged a cord and dropped a jet black curtain in ceremonies inside the department's diplomatic lobby revealing the 13 names newly etched on the memorial roster of American diplomats killed in the line of duty.

Dam called the brief ceremony "a salute that mingles sadness and pride," to those killed on April 18, the bloodiest day in the history of the Foreign Service, by the bomb that shattered the Beirut embassy.

He said the search for peace in which those who died were engaged "took a significant step forward when Secretary of State (George P.) Shultz announced that an agreement had been reached between Israel and Lebanon after long and difficult negotiations."

"That agreement is the legacy of the men and women who died in Beirut," Dam said.

In a message read by Dam, President Reagan said the dead are now "enshrined as patriots" in the annals of the nation, their deaths reminders "that the diplomat is a vulnerable target."

Shultz, in another message, expressed the hope that his efforts "to bring about the settlement of the tragedy in Lebanon will lend some renewed meaning to the brave devotion to duty the Foreign Service is making throughout the world."

Experts say Hitler diaries are 'obvious fake'

Archives director Klaus Oldenhage cited a Jan. 9, 1934, entry in which "Hitler" states he spoke with Reich President Paul von Hindenburg and refused a Dutch request for clemency toward a young Dutch man facing execution for burning down the Reichstag building.

Oldenhage said this was "illogical" because Hindenburg had endorsed the execution order three days earlier and the Dutch request had already been rejected.

The government experts also noted that the diaries contained no crossed-out words or other such errors that might be made by someone writing in a personal journal.

Noting that samples of Hitler's script are so rare that the archives hold only six, Booms and Werner said no handwriting analysis was conducted.

"The paper contains substances which have no way been on the market before or during the war and not before 1955," Werner said. "It's very simple: When the paper's been manufactured later, then (the volumes) cannot be genuine."

The investigators said they also determined that a typewriter used to print diary labels allegedly signed by Rudolf Hess and Martin Bormann dated back to 1925. They said the same typewriter was used for labels signs of wear even though the entire set of volumes are dated 1932-45.

Among errors the experts said were found in both the Domarus book and the purported Hitler diaries was a reference to an Aug. 16, 1937 meeting between the Nazi Fuhrer and General Ritter von Epp.

Both the book and the diaries say von Epp congratulated Hitler on his 50th anniversary of joining the army. But the historians say Hitler in fact congratulated von Epp on the latter's 50th anniversary.

Both the Domarus book and the diaries also refer to a German song festival where Hitler addressed on all the volumes, but shows no 500,000 people. The investigators said historians agree, however, that no more than 130,000 people were present.

Domarus was said to have based much of his material on newspaper clippings from the Nazi period, including ones from the Nazi party organ, which might explain the inflated figure.

Stern has said it spent three years tracing the books to a hayloft where it said they were hidden after being salvaged from a wrecked Nazi plane carrying Hitler's archives. The plane crashed shortly before Hitler committed suicide at the end of April, 1945.

Reagan tells NRA gun controls are useless

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling the prime minister, "It speaks well for the deep cooperation and understanding that exist between our countries."

In his NRA speech, the president saluted Begin, the Israeli Cabinet and Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and his country's leadership. "Today we have crossed an important threshold on the path to peace," Reagan said.

"This agreement is a step forward," he said. "It can lead to the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty throughout its territory while also ensuring that southern Lebanon will not again become a base for hostile actions against Israel."

Reagan also visited Sun City, Ariz., a retirement community of 50,000 people, and hailed the work of the "Sun City Sheriff's Posse," a group of 200 senior citizens who help county officials in law enforcement. Reagan used the occasion to sign a proclamation designating May as "Older Americans Month."

Later the president flew to his ranch at Santa Barbara, Calif., for a three-day stay. He will return to Washington late Monday, stopping off in Ashland, Ohio, to attend a memorial service for the late Rep. John Ashbrook, a Republican who died last year while running for the Senate.

The president told his Sun City audience that the nation's elderly face not only the threat of physical violence but a "terrifying bully called inflation" which robs savings and pensions. Reagan touted his success in reducing inflation since he took office in January 1981.

In his speech to the NRA, Reagan toughened the rhetoric of his campaign to win congressional approval of $110 million in additional aid for the U.S.-backed regime in El Salvador.

"America faces a choice: will we give El Salvador her chance to walk beside us in the sunlight of democracy, or will we turn our backs on a friend, letting her slide into a dark night of tyranny, rationalizing our inaction with detached lectures on morality?" Reagan asked.

"Running away from this clear-cut responsibility would reward aggression and bring dishonor on the good name of the United States," said Reagan. "It would swell the tide of political and economic instability in Central America, creating a new army of refugees and bringing danger closer and closer to home."

He urged the NRA members to tell their congressmen that "they cannot remain indifferent to another communist takeover on our doorstep."

Reagan also appealed for support of his defense buildup and praised the fruits of his economic policies. Referring to his economic critics, the president asked, "Now that our program is doing what we said it would, how come they don't call it Reaganomics any more?"

Connally: U.S. needs innovation

"The prime rate was up to 20 percent, and I worried about that, but now it's down to 10½ percent, and interest rates are down. The Dow Jones is well over the 1,200 mark and I predict it will hit 1,500 — and we've just begun to recover.

"I think inflation will stay down, and unemployment will go down."

Connally told the crowd of Desk & Derrick members and their bosses that as a result of the positive economic trend, Ronald Reagan will be re-nominated and re-elected president in 1984.

The Midland Desk & Derrick Club, an educational organization for women who work in the oil and gas industry, holds its appreciation banquet each year to recognize the contributions the industry makes to the Permian Basin.

Girl may not have to have shots

Midland Animal Control officials have located the owner of two Doberman pinschers, initially saving a 12-year-old girl from having to undergo a series of rabies injections.

Owner of the dogs was unaware of the incident until informed by Animal Control officials Friday, those officials said. The dogs have been impounded and will be observed for signs of rabies for a week.

If the dogs show no signs of infection, the girl, bitten Tuesday evening as she rode her bike near Goddard Junior High at 2600 Haynes, will not have to take the series of rabies shots.

Fishing gear tools reportedly taken from truck

Reports of two thefts and one burglary were turned into Midland police Friday.

Greg Paredes of 1403 S. Marshall reported tools and fishing equipment valued at about $700 missing from a tool box on the back of his pickup. The pickup was parked in the backyard of his residence April 15, and the items apparently were taken sometime between then and the time of the report Friday afternoon. Also missing from the backyard was a child's wagon.

Joan Bailey reported Friday morning that three video games were broken into at the Nice & Clean Laundry, 2201 N. Big Spring. According to police reports, locks across the coin-operated machines had been broken. The burglary apparently took place between 3:30 p.m. Thursday and 7:30 a.m. Friday.

The theft of a ladies' purse and an overnight bag from the Holiday Inn, 3904 W. Wall, was reported by Rick Robinson early Friday afternoon. Total value was placed at $380.

Correction

The Midland Reporter-Telegram in an April 29 story incorrectly identified the promoters of a Jackson concert as Pamela J. Williams and Michael L. Williams, of In Full Bloom Productions. The company is solely owned and operated by Ms. Williams while her brother serves as its attorney.

In addition, Ali Attractions was incorrectly identified as the Jacksons' producers. The Jacksons' management company is Joe Jackson Productions.

Ali Attractions, owned and operated by promoter James Ali of Midland, and In Full Bloom Productions were working on requesting rental privileges for Midland Memorial Stadium for a proposed end of May JACKSONS Concert.

According to a written statement made by Ms. Williams Friday, however: "For economic reasons the promoters have decided to postpone the JACKSONS Concert until a larger facility can be located or costs reduced."

Warehouse for books sought

Friends of the Midland County Public Library has lost its gratis lease for book storage at the Lancaster House.

As a result, the group is desperate in its quest for an alternate book warehouse until the 16th annual Friends' books sale Nov. 4-6 in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The Friends, a non-profit volunteer group which benefits the library, is "seeking either a house, a warehouse or a vacant commercial property with room enough for about 800 to 1,000 cartons of books," said Mary Lou Cassidy, Friends' leader.

Anyone knowing a suitable space for book storage may contact Librarian John Deats at 683-2708 or Friends President Rob Sutphen at 682-2525.

The Lancaster House, south of the Museum of the Southwest, is being renovated.

Greeting cards 'talk'

As early as 1878, "talking" greeting cards were introduced: two thin pressboard layers sandwiching a flat suction whistle which emitted a chirp when pressed. The cards usually pictured robins and other familiar birds.

New Braunfels inmates end hunger strike

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — A hunger strike by jail inmates has ended, but protesters are still fighting a prosecutor's refusal to try a soldier for the deaths of three members of a Hispanic family.

Two jail inmates started eating again after a three-week hunger strike to protest the probated sentence given Pfc. William Dale Savage for the Oct. 30 death of Ruben Sauceda.

Juan Lopez and Gilbert Gonzalez had vowed not to eat until the Army private was tried for running over Sauceda's pregnant wife and two children.

Hispanic leaders contend Savage is not being prosecuted for the three deaths because the victims were Mexican-Americans.

The 23-year-old private had just left Wurstfest, an annual celebration of this city's German heritage, when he struck the Saucedas with his car.

A Bexar County medical examiner testified Savage was "stumbling drunk" at the time of the accident.

New Braunfels is about 30 miles northeast of San Antonio.

State District Judge Robert Pfeuffer has set a May 16 hearing to consider a motion for the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the case.

That motion came from a largely Hispanic group called the Committee for Justice for All, which has been picketing the Comal County courthouse for three weeks.

District Attorney William Schroeder has refused to try Savage, who is stationed at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston, on the remaining charges.

He said "justice has been done" with Savage's involuntary manslaughter conviction, 10-year probated sentence and $5,000 fine.

Lopez said the inmates decided to begin eating Thursday after hearing of the death of Gary Byrd, a Comal County sheriff's deputy.

"This morning, when I heard of his death, it really hurt me," Lopez said.

Clergymen and family members also had urged the inmates to stop the strike, he said.

Two other inmates had been participating in the hunger strike, but one was released on bond and the other transferred to another jail.

Justice for All's chairwoman, Virginia Pachecho, said the demise of the hunger strike will not mark the end of her group's protests.

Soldier hurt in embassy bombing returns to U.S.

KILLEEN (AP) — U.S. Army officials said Friday that a Texas soldier wounded in the bombing of the U.S. embassy in Beirut has returned to Fort Hood and is listed in good condition in a hospital here.

Chief Warrant Officer Rayford J. Byers, 38, was flown to Fort Hood Thursday night and was admitted to Darnall Army Community Hospital, said base spokesman Tom Kiddoo.

Byers was flown from Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland to San Antonio and arrived at the base at 5 p.m. Thursday, Kiddoo said.

Byers was on two months' temporary duty in Lebanon with the 502nd Supply and Transportation Batallion, 2nd Armored Division.

Nude photograph causes uproar

LUMBERTON (AP) — A school district trustee says he doesn't plan to quit although hundreds of people are in an uproar because his wife, clad only in earrings, appeared in a men's magazine photo.

"I'm not on trial. I won't resign," Arthur Williams told a board meeting of the Lumberton Independent School District Thursday. Williams, a 28-year-old machinist, said he took the picture of his wife, Terri, which ran in the June issue of Gallery magazine.

The magazine publishes photographs each month of nonprofessional models taken by amateur photographers.

Mrs. Williams, a 26-year-old waitress, said submitting the photo to the magazine was her idea. She said it was something she wanted to do before "I was old and gray" and that she hoped to win prizes offered by the magazine.

Lost suitcase nets DA's office $4,000

HOUSTON (AP) — The district attorney's office is $4,121 richer today, thanks to the person who tried to send a suitcase stuffed with $119,000 cash to Colombia.

The suitcase, shipped Miami to Colombia on an Eastern Airlines flight, ended up at Houston Intercontinental Airport nearly four months ago, said District Attorney John Holmes.

Eastern claimed the money as the finder, but state law specified a 90-day waiting period. During the three months, Holmes said, the money was deposited in the bank and earned $4,121 interest. A justice of the peace has awarded the airline the $119,000 and the DA's office the interest.

Joker arrested for bomb threat

HOUSTON (AP) — An engineer from Singapore claims he was only joking when he told inspectors at Houston Intercontinental Airport that he had a bomb.

Wong Fong Lin, 32, was arrested Thursday and charged with making a terroristic threat, officials said. He was released on $2,000 bond.

Carolyn Coleman is rescued from the swift waters of Eagle Creek Thursday by members of the Wayne Township, Indiana, fire department. Authorities said she and three friends either fell or waded into the creek and made their way to a small island. The 34-year-old woman was hospitalized in good condition Friday.

Four die in New York City fire

NEW YORK (AP) — An early-morning fire raged through two Chinatown buildings Friday, setting off fireworks and killing four people as rescuers tried to wake and save the tenants.

Ten people were injured, and several were in critical condition.

The dead were identified by Deputy Fire Commissioner John Mulligan as Thomas Lee, 60, and Fon Hen Leong, 50, both men, and Ming Kim Lau, 60 or 64, a woman. The fourth fatal victim was an unidentified female, about 50.

The injured included a mother, in critical condition, and four of her children.

Firefighters placed ladders against the building and carried tenants to safety as flames licked at their backs.

The three-alarm blaze was first reported at 12:44 a.m. A second alarm was sounded five minutes later and the third at 1 a.m. The fire was brought under control an hour later.

Mulligan said fire marshals ruled the blaze accidental, saying it was electrical in origin. They said it started in the kitchen of a restaurant on the first floor of one of the buildings and spread to the adjacent building.

Motorists passing by honked their horns in an effort to waken the residents, and one man who lives nearby said he ran into the building and pounded on doors.

Several tenants of the five-story brick buildings under the Manhattan Bridge were dragged out unconscious, prompting police and fire departments originally to report nine dead. However, most were revived by paramedics and firefighters using resuscitators.

There were no smoke alarms in the building, said Fire Department spokesman Lt. Frank Martinez, and "gates on windows hampered the use of fire escapes."

A passer-by, Anthony Mazzocchi, a driver for the New York Post, said he spotted flames shooting out of the second-floor windows and tried to alert tenants by pounding on their doors.

He said a ground-floor restaurant was closed, but a man inside was mopping up, apparently unaware of the flames above.

"A couple of people in cars on the street had stopped and were honking their horns, trying to wake up the people in the buildings," he said.

"I tried to make enough racket to wake the people up, but I didn't known how to shout 'fire' in Chinese," he said.

Martinez said the fireworks were stored on the second floor of the second building. The tiny bombs exploded as firemen dashed into the building to fight the flames and search for victims.

"The fireworks could have been a contributing cause in spreading the fire," said Deputy Fire Chief John Rossi, "but I don't believe they were the cause of the fire."

Nick Mancuso, president of the Uniformed Firefighters Association, said the area south of Houston Street, including Chinatown, had lost six fire companies in the past decade. One had been directly across the street from the fire scene, he said.

Mancuso said the area has increased in population since then and urged Mayor Edward I. Koch to re-evaluate the need for increased fire protection there. Two engine companies closest to the fire scene already were on call to other blazes, he said.

Judge resigns over tickets

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A municipal judge who voided 53 parking tickets he got on his own windshield has resigned at the order of Mayor Vincent C. Schoemehl Jr.,

Judge Robert F. Hoffman, 50, said Thursday night that "the best thing to do was to take care of the tickets and resign my post."

Hoffman acknowledged that his car had been ticketed at various places when he was not necessarily on official business. Officials said he will pay $397 in fines.

Assistant City Counselor George Hubel, who was assigned to the courts and who had been ordered by Hoffman to help void the tickets, was suspended without pay for two weeks, officials said.

Schoemehl said that, as a result of an investigation, he changed a longstanding city policy of voiding parking tickets given city employees when they are on official business.

Dead man's tape to be heard in trial

BALTIMORE (AP) — Testimony tape-recorded by a hotel manager who was later shot to death execution-style will be introduced at a federal narcotics trial, a prosecutor said Friday.

The testimony of David Scott Piechowicz taken during a pretrial hearing would be read during the trial of Anthony Grandison, 30, of Baltimore, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ty Cobb said in his opening statement.

"There is another witness (Piechowicz) who will not testify in the case, whose testimony was recorded from a prior hearing, who is not available to testify," said Cobb. "For that reason, his testimony will be read into the record."

Cobb did not tell the jury that Piechowicz, 27, and his sister-in-law, Susan Kennedy, 19, were killed April 28 in a barrage of bullets from a .38-caliber machine gun at the Warren House Hotel in Pikesville, where they worked.

Piechowicz and his wife, Cheryl, had both testified against Grandison during a pretrial hearing. Both had allegedly linked Grandison to the room where narcotics were found.

Mrs. Piechowicz, who was on sick leave the day of the shooting, has said she believes the bullets were intended for her instead of her sister. Mrs. Piechowicz is scheduled to testify against Grandison, Cobb said.

Grandison is on trial for narcotics and weapons charges. He was paroled from federal prison last fall and was arrested for a parole violation in November.

First-grader strangles on towel

SOLON, Iowa (AP) — Two cloth-towel dispensers have been removed from an elementary school here after a first-grader became entangled in one and was strangled to death, school officials said Friday.

Classmates discovered Jeff Hansen, 7, of Solon, in a Lakeview Elementary School restroom, hanging by his neck in the machine's cloth towel.

The boy's father, Edward, a third-grade teacher at the school was one of two faculty members who first arrived at the scene.

Sniper randomly kills executive

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A savings-and-loan executive was shot dead by a sniper who police said apparently was firing at random at passers-by, authorities said.

The same rifleman who killed 35-year-old Jon Thomas Van Wormer as he stood on a bridge early Thursday had moments before fired at a 19-year-old man fishing from the bridge, police said.

Nurse appeals firing over letters

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A West Virginia Penitentiary nurse fired for writing love letters to a former inmate has appealed to the Civil Service Commission, saying the dismissal violated her right to free speech.

Donald Bordenkircher, the warden at the prison in Moundsville, said LPN Linda Jo Ann Sutton was fired because she violated regulations by corresponding with Gary Stotler, a former Moundsville inmate who was transferred to the Huttonsville Correctional Center.

Crippled jet lands safely

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Republic Airlines DC-9 jet carrying 111 people blew a tire on takeoff and lost power in one of its two engines Friday, but landed safely on a foamed runway at Sky Harbor International Airport, officials said.

No injuries were reported.

The flight had originated at Ontario-Riverside Airport in California and was due to continue on to Kansas City, Mo., and Detroit.

Dan Fraijo, aviation fire division chief for the Phoenix Fire Department, said the crew and passengers climbed down a ramp to waiting buses for the return to the terminal.

Fraijo said that as the plane took off at 9:31 a.m., the inside tire on the right wheel blew out. Debris from the tire — one of six on the plane — was sucked into the right engine, causing it to shut down temporarily.

"It's not uncommon for a jet to come in with an engine out or a tire out," Fraijo said. "What is unique is that this plane had to land with reduced power and a tire out."

The pilot radioed the tower that his right engine had to shut down and he was returning for "an anticipated hard landing."

"That's when we sounded a second alarm," Fraijo said.

If economic summit fails, West should abandon such meetings, Schmidt says

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany predicted Friday that if this month's economic summit in Williamsburg is a failure Western leaders will abandon such meetings.

Helmut Schmidt

Last year's summit attended by President Reagan and six other leaders in Versailles ended in disagreement, Schmidt said, and "a second disaster would make Williamsburg the last summit in the Western community."

He said good relations between the United States and its European allies have withered away since 1976, and warned that unless the trans-Atlantic partners devise a common strategy toward the Soviet Union, "we're going to have headaches."

Schmidt made the comments in a speech to a private seminar audience that included major military commanders in the Western alliance, government officials from the 16 NATO countries and some journalists.

In one of the widest ranging commentaries since leaving office last year as West German chancellor, Schmidt said:

—He would have accepted a preliminary arms control "agreement" made by U.S.-Soviet negotiators last year but rejected by their governments.

—The number of short range nuclear weapons in West Germany should be halved to about 2,500.

—Countries that have abandoned the draft should reinstate it to show the Soviets "we have both the means and the guts to do what's necessary," to deter an attack.

—No country except the United States can lead the Western alliance. "If it fails in leadership there will be nobody else to take it up," Schmidt said.

The May 29-30 Williamsburg summit will be held at a time when the Reagan administration is trying to put together a Western consensus to economically pressure the Soviet Union.

Schmidt said Reagan's attempt last year to impose sanctions on Western European companies selling gas pipeline equipment to the Soviets was an indicator of how bad trans-Atlantic relations had become.

He said the Soviets and the United States should have agreed to an arms control formula hammered out by U.S. negotiator Paul Nitze and his Soviet counterpart Yuli A. Kvitsinsky during a "walk in the woods," last July at the Geneva talks to control medium-range missiles in Europe.

"I would have bought it," Schmidt said. "The fact that both sides rejected it makes me think it was a good idea."

The deal called for the Soviets to remove a large number of its sophisticated SS-20 missiles and the United States to forego deployment of some of the Pershing 2 and cruise missiles to be deployed in Western Europe beginning this year.

West Germany is scheduled to receive the Pershing 2 rockets, which can reach the Soviet Union in about 10 minutes and have been the target of the anti-nuclear movement in West Germany, by the end of 1982.

Schmidt said that to swing public opinion behind the deployment the United States must prove it is willing to share the risk of nuclear war and go ahead with its controversial MX missile, despite public opposition to it.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who died last year, "was willing to compromise," but the West will find the new Soviet leader, Yuri V. Andropov, "a rather sober character," Schmidt said.

"He will not let himself be humiliated. Andropov appears to be more of a Russian computer than a Russian soul," Schmidt added.

Schmidt called for an increase in conventional war capability by NATO, especially in the number of men in reserves ready for action within six weeks.

He brushed aside questions about nuclear freeze proposals, like one that passed the U.S. Congress this week, asserting the concept is a "catchword phrase that means so many things."

Half the 5,000 tactical nuclear weapons in West Germany should be withdrawn and replaced by conventional ammunition less dangerous to West Germans who would be in the middle of any East-West war, he added.

Vatican official praises bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The head of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences on Friday praised American bishops for their pastoral letter denouncing nuclear weapons.

"I commend the American bishops because they resisted numerous pressures, beginning with their government," Dr. Carlos Chagas of Brazil told a news conference.

"They went further than we did (in their condemnation), but we were in a different position," said the biophysicist who is chairman of the academy.

"We are an international body and have to be extremely conscious of problems that are going on all over the world. On the contrary, the bishops had a special national problem that...military programs are ruining the social welfare programs of the United States," he said.

The 70-member academy published a warning in 1981 that a nuclear war would cause death and suffering on "a gigantic scale with no medical intervention possible."

The pastoral letter approved this week by American Roman Catholic bishops rejects as morally unacceptable any first use of nuclear weapons and said the destruction caused by nuclear weapons "goes far beyond legitimate defense."

The pastoral letter was passed over the strong objections of the Reagan administration.

Chagas spoke at a news conference to announce that the academy, which just ended a two-week meeting in Rome, will issue a report soon on the need to protect mankind from radioactivity — both natural and manmade.

He said the report will stress that world governments must find the "ways and means" to protect their citizens from growing radiation in the world.

'Machine-gun grandma' out of prison

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Caterina Picasso, the 76-year-old "machine-gun grandma" and dubbed by the press as "the grandmother of the Red Brigades," was freed Friday after serving nearly two years in prison.

Arrested in October, 1980, she was sentenced to three years and four months in prison in December 1981 on terrorism-related charges.

She appealed her sentence, but the Genoa Court of Appeals last November increased her sentence to four years, convicting her on charges of organizing and taking part in an armed band.

Guerrillas invade school

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Roman Catholic nuns, shouting "get out, get out," pushed six leftist guerrillas armed with submachine guns out of a high school in Medellin, the Bogota daily El Tiempo said Friday.

The guerrillas invaded the church-run school Wednesday night to harangue the pupils, the Bogota newspaper quoted one of the nuns as saying.

There were 80 nuns and 200 boys and girls in the school when the guerrillas tried to shove their way into the school, the newspaper said.

Official asks for African aid

ROME (AP) — The head of the Food and Agriculture Organization has appealed to the international community for increased aid to African countries facing serious food shortages, the U.N. agency reported Friday.

In a telegram to 27 countries and to the European Economic Community, Edouard Saouma requested urgent help in making available additional staple cereals and supplementary foods and assisting affected countries to rehabilitate and protect food and livestock production.

He said the food situation in many African countries was expected to be much worse than in preceding years. He said additional food requirements may exceed 1 million tons.

German charged with spying

PARIS (AP) — French officials have charged a West German citizen with stealing documents related to national defense and turning them over to East Germany, government sources said Friday.

Klaus Dieter Tscheu, 43, formerly employed by a French import-export firm, was charged Thursday in a continuing investigation by French counter-intelligence agents that last month resulted in the expulsion of 47 Soviets from France.

So far, sources say, two others, both French, have been charged with spying. They were caught making contact with Soviet diplomats shortly before the expulsion of the Soviets.

Police kill African guerrillas

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Police shot and killed two black nationalist guerrillas and a third black man at a roadblock near the Botswana border, police said Friday.

Police Commissioner General Mike Geldenhuys said the two guerrillas were members of the African National Congress, the main movement trying to overthrow the white-minority South African government.

Sam, a 1½ year old Great Dane, doesn't like other dogs, according to personnel at the Animal Control Shelter, 1601 Orchard Lane. But he does like cats, they said. He has been neutered and is available for adoption. The shelter is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays and noon to 2 p.m. Saturdays. Phone number is 683-2941.

Summer Mummer tryouts slated

Tryouts for the Summer Mummers' Olio will be held May 15 at 2 p.m. and May 16 at 7:30 p.m. at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Novelty acts, dancers, magicians and "anyone who wants to make a fool of himself (or herself)" are invited to attend.

For more information, or to set up a special audition for those unable to audition during tryouts, call 682-2544.

Charactor actor dies at age 72

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vaughn Taylor, the mild-mannered character actor in TV and film productions from "Playhouse 90" to "Jailhouse Rock," has died in Los Angeles at the age of 72.

The veteran actor died of a cerebral hemmorhage on April 26 at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, spokeswoman Tess Griffin said Friday.

Taylor, once dubbed by TV Guide magazine as having television's "most deceptive face, was forced to retire in 1976 when he was struck by a spinal condition.

His last roles were the TV film "Eleanor and Franklin" and the motion picture, "The Gumball Rally."

'No-Show Jones' strikes again in Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Country singer George Jones, who has acquired the nickname "No-Show Jones" because of his reputation for not showing up at concerts, angered patrons of an Athens club by leaving in the middle of his act.

Jones, 52, who was voted Country Music Male Vocalist of the Year in 1980 and 1981, left the stage Thursday night after performing for 29 minutes at the Armadillo Palace, said Marion Cartwright, the club owner. The show had been scheduled to last at least an hour and more than 750 tickets were sold at $15 apiece, she said.

George Jones

Cartwright, meanwhile, filed suit Friday against Jones and said the entertainer did the same thing at his club last July.

Athens police Lt. Clifton Freeman said Jones "apparently became ill halfway through his program. Of course that didn't sit too well with some patrons."

But Cartwright said Jones left by a side door as soon as his agent received his $10,000 fee.

"George was doing a good show. I don't understand. He just took his guitar and took off, almost running," Cartwright said. "We thought at first he was doing an encore. But then he went out the side door and took off in a van."

He said his lawyer sued, asking reimbursement of the $10,000, plus damages. He said ticket holders will get full refunds.

Gerald Ford

Freeman said witnesses told police that the owner tried to stop Jones' bus from leaving and threatened to shoot out the tires and windshield, but no one was arrested in the incident.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The growing U.S. population of senior citizens has a "bright future" and is "far better off than ever before," says former President Gerald Ford, who might be considered a senior citizen himself.

Speaking at a fund-raising dinner for Aquinas College here in his hometown Thursday, Ford said the increasing number of older U.S. residents needs more housing, health-care facilities and volunteers to assist them.

"But it's my judgment that we are adjusting and that we are meeting the changing circumstances," the 69-year-old former president said, citing advances in geriatric medicine and increased awareness that older Americans deserve a meaningful place in society.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne says she was the victim of "almost a religious movement" in the city's black community aimed at putting a black at the municipal helm for the first time in history.

Jane Byrne

Polls showing black U.S. Rep. Harold Washington trailing her shortly before the Feb. 22 Democratic primary made the race "a matter of pride" in the black areas on Chicago's South Side, said Mrs. Byrne, here Thursday to address the American Business Press Association, "and the numbers came out in droves. I don't know how you'd be able to overcome that. It was really a movement."

Mrs. Byrne left office upon Washington's inauguration last week.

When ancient crater 'calls,' USGS seismologist listens

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Rob Cockerham carries a little black box wherever he goes. The box is linked to a computer and the computer to seismographs scattered around a snow-packed Sierra Nevada resort 175 miles from his office at Menlo Park.

When the seismographs feel the ground shake in an ancient volcanic crater that surrounds Mammoth Lakes, they tell the computer. The computer tells Cockerham: The box begins to beep.

"If they feel an earthquake at Mammoth Lakes, I feel it, too," the U.S. Geological Survey seismologist said recently.

The USGS, scientists from more than a dozen colleges and agencies and state disaster officials are paying very close attention to the uneasy landscape of Long Valley. Somewhere down below, a pool of molten rock — the magma that's the raw material of volcanoes — is stirring.

Scientists generally agree a volcanic eruption is possible in the breathtakingly beautiful high country with a million-year history of volcanoes and an economy based largely on wintertime skiers and summertime fishermen.

All emphasize they are not predicting anything. But they want to be ready — just in case.

When the mountains began shaking with several moderate quakes and thousands of small ones last January, most scientists were caught by surprise. The area had been quiet for months.

"As we went through that January swarm (of earthquakes), I think all our concern about an eruption went up — a lot," said Dave Hill, who's coordinating the USGS' Mammoth Lakes studies.

Geologists, geophysicists, seismologists, and vulcanologists converged from around the country, strapped on snowshoes and trudged across the valley looking for hints of what was to come.

Nothing happened. The swarm tapered off. The scientists left more instruments on the slopes and made plans to return when the snows melt.

This little piggy won't go to market soon

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A hernia and a kind heart saved this little piggy from the bacon pan.

Because of a hernia, the runt piglet had to struggle in vain with his siblings for a share of dinner, and Sheran Hesser's heart went out to him.

Now the 3-week-old pig, named Iggy the Piggy, has been given the run of the Hessers' farmhouse in nearby Graham.

He's wearing a makeshift supporter and fed a mixture of baby food and molasses every three hours.

And someday he'll have an operation to correct his hernia.

He's even housebroken, according to Mrs. Hesser, a dental assistant, and her husband Bob, a battalion chief with the Tacoma fire department.

Program features ad clips

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — The late James Dean once was a rebel with a cause.

Early in his career, the cult actor did a Pepsi-Cola commercial, but you won't see it Sunday night on NBC's "Bigger & Better: Television's Greatest Commercials 3."

That's because any plug on this commercial-scrapbook show must get approval from the sponsor, ad agency, actors, or their heirs. After an exhaustive search, the producers of "Greatest Commercials" found Dean's aunt, who said Dean's father wouldn't release the clip.

Some thespians are embarrassed that their careers began in deodorant, or something less fragrant. Producer Joie Albrecht wouldn't finger the recalcitrants "because we're hoping they'll change their minds," she said.

For anyone who remembers the toddler and teenage years of television, "Greatest Commercials" is a delightful piece of nostalgia.

The segment on commercial starts for the stars is particularly involving. See if you recognize Sylvester Stallone in a Rapid Shave commercial, John Travolta singing in the shower for Safeguard, Loni Anderson, as a brunette, hawking Secret deodorant, and Lily Tomlin jumping into the rinse cycle to get her blouse clean with All.

"Lily's agent turned us down, but when we talked to her, she said we could do it," said Ms. Albrecht, who produced the program with her husband, Scott Garen.

There's a young Kermit the Frog from puppeteer Jim Henson's college days, and a young Frank Sinatra singing "Halo everybody Halo." "Ed McMahon asked him," said Ms. Albrecht. (McMahon, a friend of Sinatra's, and Mariette Hartley are the show's hosts.)

There's also an appearance from ol' Tootsie himself, Dustin Hoffman, not as a tomato but as a pitchman for Volkswagen in the early 1960s.

A lot of the fun here is seeing commercials that are far more ingenious than the programs they sponsored. For example, the famous commercial for Alka-Seltzer involving the newlyweds' first home-cooked meal. Meteorite-sized dumplings put the husband down for the count, and tomorrow's menu of "stuffed oysters" has him scurrying back to the bathroom for more fizzy relief.

One segment salutes ad legend Stan Freberg, whose witty, irreverent commercials managed to break every rule on Madison Avenue. He once sold pitted prunes with the line: "Today the pits. Tomorrow the wrinkles."

Ms. Albrecht said Del Monte, which now owns Chun King Oriental foods, refused to release Freberg's commercial that said nine out of 10 people surveyed preferred Chun King, and then showed nine Orientals and one Caucasian in an elevator.

Two of the best commercials are foreign advertisements for audio tape.

In a set reminiscent of "M*A*S*H," a doofus British soldier gets a singing tape from his girlfriend which he plays for his buddies. Only it turns out to be a "Dear John" tape recorded on BASF. "Even the bad times sound good."

Magazine praised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush laid the cornerstone for a new, $200 million building for U.S. News & World Report on Friday and congratulated the weekly news magazine on half a century of reporting "with accuracy, skill and objectivity."

The ceremony was part of the magazine's 50th anniversary celebration that included a dinner Friday evening for its 1,400 employees and a filmed message from President Reagan.

The publication had its beginning on May 17, 1933, when The United States News, a weekly newspaper, was founded by David Lawrence, a veteran newsman. The paper dealt with domestic news.

Millions of acres of land used to produce trees

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas has 16 million to 18 million acres of land available for the commercial production of trees. And growers are putting an increasing number of seedlings in more ground.

Southern Forestry Institute said 107.8 million trees had been planted in Arkansas during the 1981-82 season, a 37 percent increase over the 78.6 million seedlings deposited in 1980-81. Planting is normally done between December and mid-March. Figures for the 1982-83 period are not available.

SFI, headquartered in Atlanta, said Arkansas' increase was the largest of the 13 states in its territory.

While the number of seedlings increased, so did the amount of land planted. Jim Tiner, assistant state forester in charge of resources management, said recently Arkansas Forestry Commission figures showed a 22.4 percent increase with seedlings planted on 110,421 acres in 1981-82 compared to 90,200 acres the previous year.

The figures for seedlings and acreage do not cover areas that were direct seeded, which involves sowing seed instead of planting the trees.

"Generally speaking, if you put a seedling in place you have a better assurance of getting a stand of trees," Tiner said. There are not as many variables and the trees are usually better spaced.

The state Forestry Commission produced about 19 million seedlings this year, Tiner said in a telephone interview. Of those, 4 million were sold to industries. Tiner said production had changed and more industries were adding their own nurseries to furnish their stock.

Tiner said he expected the percentages of seedlings planted to increase as industries lean more toward even-age management. That happens when all the trees in a stand are cut and an entire crop must be planted.

Timber growers must look to the future, said B.J. "Merf" Pavlovich, executive vice president of the Arkansas Forestry Association. "You don't turn the faucet off and on for growing trees," he said. Double the amount of wood is to be needed in 20 to 40 years, Pavlovich said, and the trees have to be planted now.

Pavlovich and Leon Robinette of Hot Springs, a spokesman for Weyerhaeuser Corp., say people are deciding it doesn't pay to leave the land idle.

Robinette says smaller land owners, farmers and people who have inherited land are among those beginning to understand they can make the land productive with tree planting.

"If you assume that wood is always going to be a useful commodity ... a commodity that you can build with hammer, saw and nail," Robinette said, "then there is economic return from doing it."

Elk herd decreases

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The state's elk herd, which was at a relatively high population of 135 last year, has shown a decrease this year, according to results of a survey taken by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

The commission estimates the current elk herd at 122, said biologist Bill Drake. Consequently, the game commission has canceled plans for an elk reduction program that was under study for late this year or early next year.

Both Drake and Elk County game protector Harold Harshbarger said reproduction was average, with the game commission estimating that 30 to 35 calves are born annually.

Last year's count of 135 elk was the largest in recent years, according to Harshbarger.

The game commission contemplated an elk reduction program last year because of the expanding herd and the resultant crop damage.

There were 11 elk, including six mature bulls, killed last year for crop damage. In addition, the commission said, five calves starved to death last winter; two cows died of illness; and a calf and a cow were killed by dogs.

Poaching has also reduced the herd size and is becoming a problem in population control.

Desert tourist attraction

TAMANRASSET, Algeria (AP) — When American astronaut Neil Armstrong visited this parched wilderness, he is reported to have said, "I didn't have to go clear to the moon; I've found it here in the Hoggar."

Tour guides love to tell the story to describe the peculiar volcanic landscape of this Saharan region in southern Algeria.

In the remote Tassili range, where the average annual rainfall nowadays is close to zero, Stone Age dwellers some 15,000 years ago painted lifelike images of cattle, horses, elephants, rhinos and giraffes, which all disappeared over the centuries as the area became part of the world's largest desert.

The climatic change that killed off the animals, paradoxically helped to preserve the prehistoric paintings. Despite the difficult access, they are among Algeria's most spectacular tourist attractions.

"There's nowhere like it in the world," said El Hadi Merzougah, director of a local tourist agency.

School gives new insights into nature

KELLY, Wyo. (AP) — From a distance the campus is postcard perfect. A cluster of small log cabins, some 50 years old, house students and staff. The main lodge has a 2,500-volume library and small dining hall. There's a separate laboratory bulding used to conduct student experiments and display bird and mammal specimens donated by the widows of deceased naturalists Olaus and Adolph Murie. The school is surrounded by rolling meadowland only seven miles east of the Teton Mountains' towering silhouette.

"This center is smack in the middle of North America's most diverse natural area," says Ms. Billig. "The ecosystem includes sagebrush plains, meadows, forests, alpine tundra and two rivers. The wildlife includes moose, elk, bison, otter, beaver, bald eagles, swans, antelope, Great Blue herons and all sorts of wildfowl."

Students also study in Yellowstone, the Bridger Teton National Forest, and the National Elk Refuge.

For many, it's their first acquaintance with the great outdoors.

"Kids spend a lot of time hearing about the environmental ethic, but when they get to the Teton Science School they find out first hand what it means to love nature," says Ted Munnecke, chairman of the science department at The Principia, a St. Louis boarding school that annually selects 20 students to attend the school for one week during the winter.

The Principia students spend many hours outdoors, bundled up against the frigid Teton winter, learning how plants and animals adapt to winter, survival techniques, and the tracking of migrating herds. Indoors, beside the library's blazing fire, there are long discussions of art and literature inspired by the natural world. Participants are encouraged to keep a journal, write essays about their experiences, and draw and paint their memories.

"The youngsters get a character education, they learn new values, they gain new insight into themselves and each other," says Munnecke. "Many work for months, babysitting and shoveling snow and doing summer yard work, just to get the money to go."

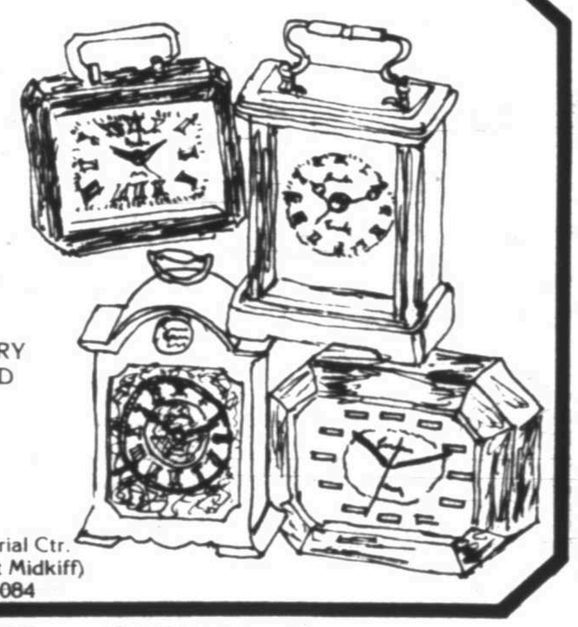

The school operates on a shoestring. There are only four full-time employees, with three others on the payroll for nine months a year. Teaching is also done by qualified interns who work for room, board and experience. The summer seminars, which have attracted such teachers as former Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and Dr. David Love of the U.S. Geological Survey, are self-supporting.

Sporting his new high-top sneaker, a young kangaroo hops around the nursery/hospital building at the Kansas City Zoo Tuesday. Dr. Roger Brannian, the zoo's staff veterinarian, fit the kangaroo with the children's size 13 tennis shoe after doctors amputated about 5 inches of the kangaroo's foot due to a severe infection. The kangaroo has little trouble hopping around in his new footwear.

Aggie drinking may change

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M's chancellor, worried that distinguished visitors will be offended because alcoholic beverages are barred from the campus, has asked regents to change the rules.

The regents will consider Dr. Arthur Hansen's proposal at their meeting May 24.

Aggies have for decades scorned University of Texas students as "tea-sippers," a nickname used as an indictment of their archrivals' toughness.

Missile test on target

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — The 10th test launch of the Army's Pershing 2 missile hit the target area with the "desired accuracy" Friday, a spokeswoman said.

The firing at 1:12 p.m. CDT from this high desert range shot the rocket to a height of 197 miles during its nine-minute flight, spokeswoman Debbie Bingham said.

The single-stage rocket landed 88 miles uprange at a fixed land target, spokesman Jim Eckles said.

"Analysis of data confirms that the Pershing 2 missile fired at White Sands Missile Range impacted in the target area with the desired accuracy," Ms. Bingham she said.

The test launch of the 5¼-ton rocket originally was scheduled for 10 a.m. CDT , but technicians had to replace a communications safety device in the missile, forcing a 2½-hour delay. The launch was further postponed when an aircraft strayed into the test corridor, Eckles said.

The launch also had been delayed since April 29 by the replacement of a faulty circuit device in the missile's guidance system, WSMR spokesman Jim Lovelady said.

The test launch was the 10th in 18 firings scheduled from White Sands and Cape Canaveral, Fla. The Pershing 2, scheduled for initial deployment in Western Europe next December, has been fired five times from this range.

Two previous tests of the 28-foot-long missile were called off at White Sands because of circuitry problems. The first of 108 P2s are to be sent to West Germany as part of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization agreement to replace.

Lee gets off to bad start in Region I meet

Midland High's St. Germain top qualifier in 800

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — The Midland Lee Rebels got off on the wrong foot here Friday in the first day of the Region I track meet at Texas Tech University, and hopes of winning their first regional title may now be just a dream.

In the first qualification race of the day, Lee dropped the baton in the spring relay, failing to qualify for today's 1 p.m. final.

It was a bitter pill for the Rebels and the domino effect took place as the rest of the Lee runners failed to equal or better their best times for the rest of the day.

Other qualification losses, however, were minimal since the only other event the Rebels failed to place one of its qualifiers in the finals was Luther Johnson in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles where he was fifth in his heat.

IN THAT, the only Tall City runner to turn in a top qualifying time was Midland High's lone entry Chuck St. Germain in the 800-meters with a 1:57.0, not his best.

"I feel good about Saturday's race, but I don't know anything about the runners here. I've only run against Permian's Bruce Bennett and he was first in his heat. I really didn't push hard. I just wanted to qualify," St. Germain said.

Lee's Damon Polk, who missed a handoff from Luther Johnson in the sprint relay, did qualify in both hurdles with a 14.2 in the highs (fifth overall) and 38.3 in the intermediates (seventh overall). Bryan's Todd Howard was best in the highs with a 14.14 and Killeen's Darrell Blackley had the top 300 time with a 37.6.

"I just couldn't concentrate after dropping the baton. I just dropped it. I think the whole team choked a little after that. We'll just have to regroup," Polk said.

"You could just see our kids sink back after the sprint relay. I just hope Saturday is another day," said Lee track coach Sam Volpe.

SOPHOMORE MARC Brackens was fifth overall in the 400-meters with a 49.6, not far off his best time. Amarillo Tascosa's John Patterson was best in the 400 with a torrid 46.7.

"It's going to be a tough race for me Saturday, but I have two more years and this is a great experience just to be here," Brackens said.

Sophomore Walter Jones survived a horrible start for a 10.85 in the 100-meters and qualified in seventh position.

"I didn't get out of the blocks that time but I will tomorrow (today)," Jones said. "Still, it's going to be tough."

Fort Worth South West's Greg Scholars had the best 100 time with a 10.72.

Carlton Johnson was sixth overall in the 200-meters with a 22.3 to gain a finals berth. Tascosa's Patterson was the pace-setter here too with a 21.7.

Lee's 1600-meter relay team qualified seventh overall with a sub-par 3:20.0, but Jones and Luther Johnson saved that one. Luther had a strong finish to bring the Rebels from sixth to third in their heat. Permian had the best time with a 3:15.7.

Lee's Eric Cooper and Isaac Garnett will be in the 10 a.m. shot put today while Michael Barton will enter the high jump and Wayne Brandt the pole vault at the same time.

Reagan County's Gregg Fisher has his eyes on two state hurdle berths in the Class AA division. His 38.8 in the inermediates was the best time and his 14.3 in the highs was second best.

Stanton qualified in four events for today's finals. The Buffs placed both relays in the finals with a 43.6 (fifth overall) in the sprint relay and a 3:26.0 (sixth overall) in the 1600 relay.

Rocky Barnes' 50.4 was fifth overall in the 400 while Mark Helms' 11.3 was sixth overall in the 100. Stanton's Mickey Reyna qualified eighth in the 100 with an 11.4.

The top two finishers in today's finals will earn a trip to the state meet Saturday in Austin.

Bryan took advantage of the only two finals Friday by winning the discus with Howard's 179-2 and the long jump with Charles Perry's 22-5¾.

Here are Friday's Region I finals:

Class 5A

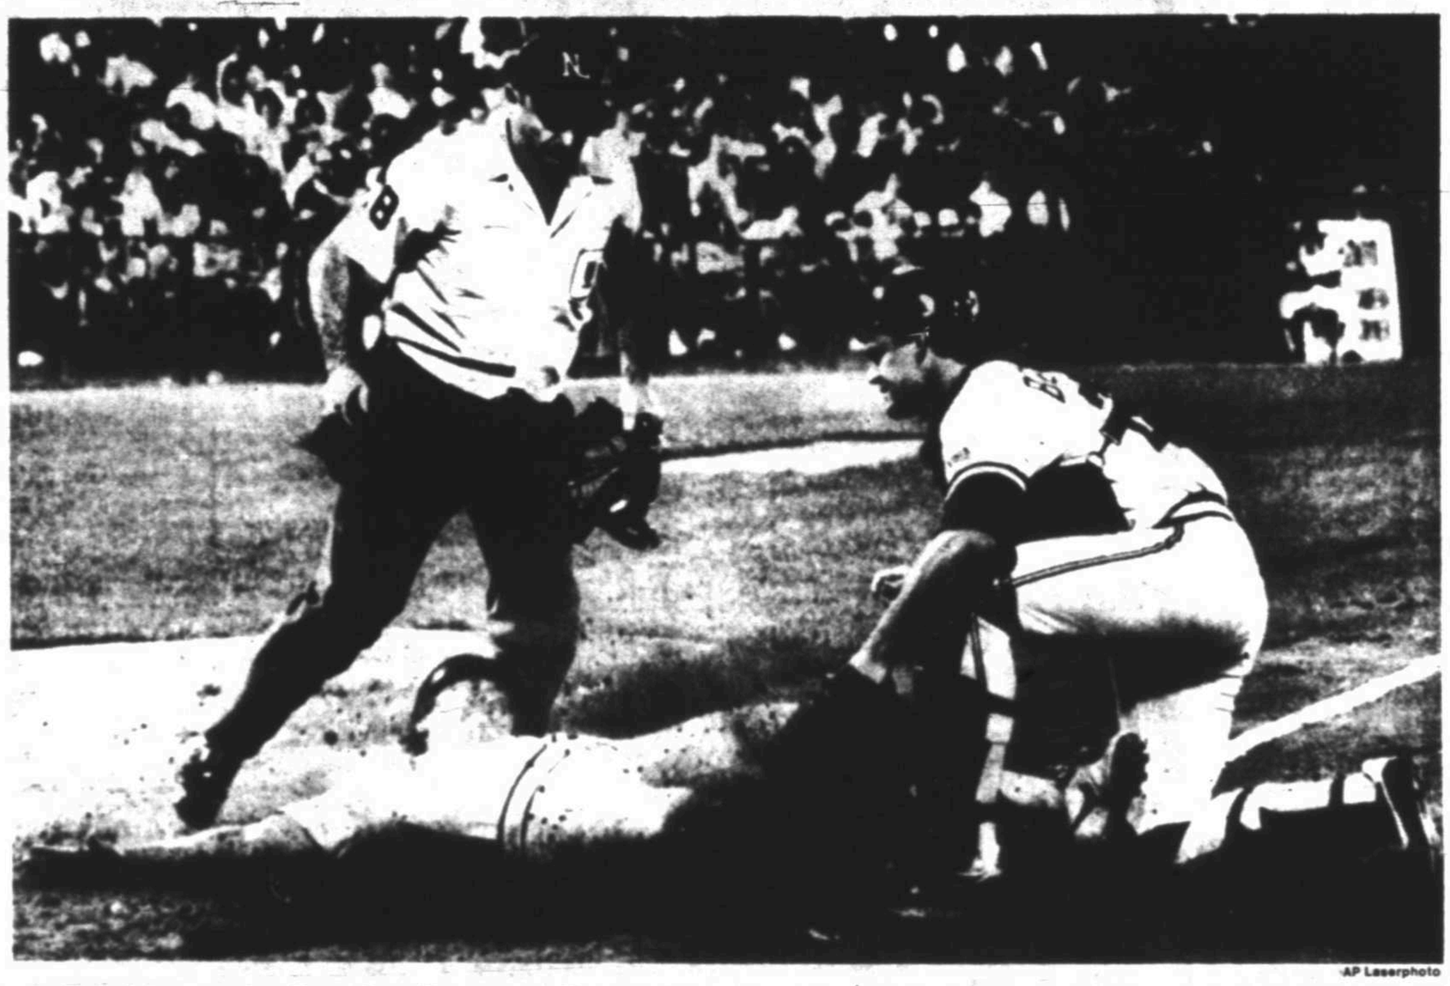

Discus: 1.Todd Howard, Bryan, 179-2; 2.Clinton Wilson, Southwest, 177-0; 3.Rodney Griffin, Amarillo, 163-0; 4.Gus Perez, Riverside, 159-6; 5.Felix Sanchez, Bowie, 157-11; 6.Colin McCall, Richland, 154-0.

Chaney homers Cubs to victory

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

With Midland behind 7-6 in the 10th, shortstop Bruce Chaney drove a majestic two-run homer into the darkness beyond left field to give the Cubs a series-squaring 8-7 win over El Paso Friday night.

The Cubs had to come from behind all night and had to score twice in the ninth to force extra innings. Chaney's second homer gave Midland its first lead since the first inning.

WITH THE series tied at two, tonight's 7 p.m. finale will be the rubber game, which is the way it seems have been all season. All of the series have been close.

Doug Welenc, 1-3, will start for Midland while Jack Lazorko, 0-0, with Tulsa last year, will pitch for the Diablos.

Chaney's homer to left, defying a blustery crosswind, came with A.J. Hill, who had singled to keep his hitting streak alive at 18 games, on base. "He (relief pitcher Bill Hinrichs) got behind and had to come in with a fast ball. I knew it was gone the moment I hit it."

"We played a sloppy game tonight, but one swing of the bat takes care of a lot of bad plays," Manager Tom Harmon said.

It was a moment of atonement, in a way, for the Vancouver, Wash., shortstop, who earlier had made two errors. He also had two doubles and wound up with three rbi.

But his homer was what Chicago Cub farm director Gordon Goldsberry had in mind back in spring training. Goldsberry hoped Chaney would supply some power on the basis of his 10 homers last year for the Cubs.

BUT BEFORE Bruce could swing his magic wand, the Cubs had to strike for two in the ninth and it was a double by Chaney that ignited the rally and sent El Paso starter Tim Crews to the shower. Relief pitcher Don Hinrichs, 0-1-1, walked Don Hyman and then, for the second straight time, Bill Hatcher dropped a picture book bunt down the third baseline and beat it out for a hit.

Tom Lombarski, who had drilled his fourth homer into the trees beyond right field in the fifth, walked to force in a run and Randy LaVigne's fly to dead center kept the Cubs alive.

El Paso got to Ray Soff, who had relieved starter Stan Kyles with one out in the ninth, for a go ahead run in the 10th on Carlos Ponce's popup double and a single to right by Ernest Riles.

"Kyles didn't win, but he pitched too well to lose," said Harmon. "He made them hit a lot of ground balls. There was that windblown homer, but most of the night he kept that fast ball down. It was one of his better outings this season."

IT WAS Bobby Glenn Smith who hit the windblown homer in the sixth, none on. But it was a three-run second that put Kyles behind the eight ball. Three scratch hits, a couple of costly errors and Stan Levi's double did the damage. After that Midland spent the rest of the night trying to catch up.

Lombarski kept the Cubs in the game, singling home a run after Rick Baker singled and stole second in the first, homering in the fifth, and driving in Hatcher with a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Hatcher beat out a bunt and his daring swiftness took him to third on Baker's single to left to set up Lombarski's key hit.

Valvano in town for Italian dinner

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

While most reporters thought the coach of the national basketball champion North Carolina State Wolfpack was in Midland to visit his junior college recruit — Midland College's Anthony 'Spud' Webb — Jim Valvano had another reason.

"I heard you had some nice Italian restuarants here and I thought I would come down and eat a little lasagna and ravioli," he said.

It was a comment typical of Valvano's flamboyant style which came to the nation's attention when the Wolfpack upset the Courgars of Houston for the NCAA title.

But like any coach, Valvano's job didn't end with that game as he and his assistants almost immediately began the major task of recruiting.

One of his last signees was the Chaparrals 5-foot-6 junior college All-American.

"WE RECRUITED Spud early but then we thought we had a young man who was kind of committed to us and when that didn't go well we needed a point guard," Valvano expalined.

When N.C. State lost Kenny Hutchinson to Arkansas, the Wolfpack found themselves with out a point guard.

"We lost a great guard in Sidney Lowe, my quarterback and coach on the floor," he said.

"So we went back and said, 'Who posibly might still be interested in us?' Spud said he might, and we took it from there."

Webb went to Raliegh for one of his three campus visits and obviously liked what he saw.

"I told him the truth. Here he would have an opportunity to play right away. It's very important for a junior college player to go where he can at least have the opportunity to play right away.

"I said, 'come visit', he did and we offered him a scholarship," Valvano said.

"I'm darn happy about it."

"WE CERTAINLY hope Spud can be the catalist for us. I wanted someone with leadership and experience and I liked the fact he played on a national championship team and he's had that kind of experience.

"I liked the confindence he had in his game," Valvano said.

"He saw a lot of film on us and when I asked him if he thought he could take that kid's spot he said, 'Coach you need me.'"

"From what I've seen he can do it. I think Spud is a pure point guard with offensive possibilities," he said.

"He gets a lot of assists, he can shoot, he runs the show, he can lead the break and he can hit the outside shot."

APPARENTLY SPUD is already a household name in Raleigh as are all Wolfpack players.

"First you have to understand that basketball is a religion in North Carolina. It is not a sport.," Valvano said.

"We are the 10th largest state by population and of those 7-point-something million, if you can find one that is not interseted in basketball, I haven't located that person yet.

"Any player we sign is a major story," he continued. "They want to find out every single thing about the person.

"Obviously Spud creates a certin interest that transends the signing of a junior college All-American. He is interesting just playing in a game in the land of giants.

"He will be an instant hit in an area where basketball is king."

VALVANO REFLECTED on the championship season as though it happened yesterday and with the humor that is always present in his speech.

"It was really an incredible year," he said. "We started the season with such high hopes.

"We were nationally ranked, in the top 20, as high as twelfth in some polls. That was my uncles.

"Our schedule was tough, in addition to the ACC we played everybody because I wanted to be ready at the end of the season.

"I felt we had the club that could get hot at the end of the season and we did."

Valano knows the season was no fluke and says all the signs were there.

"In the ACC tournament we beat Carolina (ranked fifth) Virginia (No. two) that should give you some indication that we were ready," he said.

"We beat number six, five, four and two teams and played the No.1 team 11 times. When you play Sampson four times and beat them twice you can play anybody."

"By Spud's senior year I think we'll return to that national prominence," he said.

Cast of characters ready for Derby

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The favorite is a headstrong, undisciplined gray colt who can't run straight and who has earned the intriguing label, Marfa the Mugger.

He's as harmless on a red dirt track as a drunk in a demolition derby.

There's another chief threat named Sunny's Halo whose trainer is awakened in the middle of the night by nightmares that his horse is in danger and who rushes out to the barns to see if everything is okay.

Explosive Wagon is asthmatic. He'd be wheezing and coughing in every race without the help of a nebulizer, a gadget that breathes antibiotic fumes into his lungs to clear up congestion.

Two horses, Play Fellow and Country Pine, were so obscure and undecided about their intentions they failed to make the press guide.

THE KENTUCKY Derby for most of its 109 years has been America's favorite horse race but never more so than Saturday, when a crazy-quilt field of 20 colts, most of whom have lost more times than they've won, compete for the garland of roses at storied Churchill Downs.

Horsemen are confounded. Handicappers are out of their skulls trying to squeeze some sort of sanity out of disarray. The tip sheet hawkers may go broke.

This is the "Roulette Derby." You spin the wheel, around and around she goes and where she nobody knows.

It's a disaster for the wheeler dealers in Las Vegas. It's chaos for the smart guys who pore over form sheets in smoke-filled rooms and sharpies who hang over the track rails.

But it's a ball for the common people — secretaries and clerks, thousands and thousands of them, who get up those one-buck pools at the office. It's great for the hardhats and the guys down at the corner saloon.

It's anybody's Derby. So it's everybody's Derby.

IN RECENT years race fans have been spoiled by the abundance of Triple Crown winners — Secretariat, acclaimed the fastest horse of the century, in 1972; Seattle Slew in 1977, Affirmed in 1978, not to mention the great performances by Spectacular Bid and Genuine Risk the two following years.

They were dramatic Derbies, to be sure. But they were the years of the super horses. The true aristocrats come in clusters. Then follow the droughts

This is such a year — no dominant 3-year-old, except maybe the unbeaten filly Princess Rooney, who won't run with the boys.

If ever there was a Derby for the ordinary guys and gals, the people who get excited about horse racing one time a year — the first week in May — this is it.

With no sure things, down-home America will have to depend solely on hunches, long a favorite handicapping device of the uninitiated.

An unusual equine name may strike a familiar chord or awaken a memory. Some are bound to be intrigued by personalities of the participants — the bully, Marfa, for instance.

Marfa turned the Blue Grass Stakes a week ago into the Blue Cross Stakes. Running amok in the stretch, he blocked out three horses and battered highly rated Copelan so badly the latter had to be withdrawn from the Derby.

It wasn't the first case of Marfa's bullishness. "He's a nice colt," says trainer Wayne Lukas. "He just wants his own way."

Sentiment will bring support for Slew O' Gold from those who fondly remember papa Seattle Slew, and for Current Hope, trained by a young man named Roger Laurin who once turned over two young colts to his father, Lucien, only to have them turn out to be Derby winners Riva Ridge and Secretariat.

Maybe some will be intrigued by David Cross, Jr., hypertensed trainer of Sunny's Halo. "No more midnight rides," says the trainer's pretty blonde wife. "We're buying a kid a bucket of fried chicken and paying him to baby-sit the horse Friday night."

Names sometimes have a fetching ring. Luv a Libra — named by a romantic star-gazer? Paris Prince — old world royalty.

1906 — Detroit pitcher Bill Donovan literally stole a run in the fifth inning against the Cleveland Indians when he singled, swiped second and third base while Ty Cobb was at bat and then stole home to help the Tigers beat the Indians 8-3.

1925 — Shortstop Glenn Wright of the Pirates executed an unassisted triple play in the ninth inning of the Pirates' 10-9 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals when he snared Jim Bottomley's line drive, stepped on second base to double up Jimmy Cooney and tagged Rogers Hornsby, who was going from first to second.

Johnson, Dent spark Rangers past Brewers

By The Associated Press

American League

MILWAUKEE — Bobby Johnson hit a two-run double and Bucky Dent an RBI triple to spark a six-run Texas fifth inning, and the Rangers went on to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-4 Friday night.

John Butcher, 2-0, who relieved Ranger starter Charlie Hough at the start of the fifth, earned the victory with 3 2-3 innings of four-hit pitching. Odell Jones finished up and earned his third save.

The Rangers overcame a 4-0 deficit with their big fifth inning against Mike Caldwell, 2-3. George Wright singled and scored on Dent's triple off the left-center field wall. Wayne Tolleson followed with an RBI single.

Tolleson stole second, took third on an infield single by Billy Sample, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Buddy Bell. Sample then was trapped off first base, but reached second when second baseman Jim Gantner dropped the throw from first baseman Cecil Cooper for an error. Dave Hostetler reached when shortstop Robin Yount bobbled his grounder for an error, and Johnson lined his two-run double to right.

Pete O'Brien capped the rally with an RBI single.

The Rangers added three runs in the ninth on an RBI double by Bell and a two-run single by Larry Biittner.

Paul Molitor lined his second homer of the year with one out in the third to put the Brewers ahead 1-0. The Brewers made it 4-0 in the fourth. Ted Simmons and Ben Oglivie singled and Gorman Thomas slammed a 3-2 pitch into the left field bleachers. It was Thomas' third homer of the year, and 200th of his career.

White Sox 8, Indians 3

CHICAGO — Tony Bernazard and Ron Kittle each rapped a pair of doubles to lead the Chicago White Sox to an 8-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The triumph was the third straight for Chicago and snapped a five-game Cleveland winning streak.

Blue Jays 6, Royals 1

TORONTO — Jesse Barfield went 4-for-4 and knocked in three runs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Winner Dave Stieb, 5-2, gave up eight hits, struck out a career-high 10 and walked three before needing ninth-inning relief help. Kansas City lefthander Larry Gura, 4-2, pitched 6 1-3 innings, struck out three and walked three.

Clinging to a 2-1 lead in the seventh, Toronto got some breathing room on Barry Bonnell's two-run double off reliever Mike Armstrong, who came in after Gura walked Dave Collins and had given up a single to Damaso Garcia.

Yankees 8, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Steve Kemp and Lou Piniella lashed consecutive home runs in the second inning and 41-year-old infielder Bert Campaneris went 4-for-5, propelling the New York Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Ron Guidry, 3-2, earned the victory, scattering 12 hits in 7 2-3 innings before getting relief help from Goose Gossage, who earned his first save of the year. Jack O'Connor, 1-2, took the loss for Minnesota, the Twins' fifth straight.

Angels 4, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Juan Beniquez hit a tie-breaking, two-run double in the seventh inning and red-hot Rod Carew belted three hits to raise his batting average to .500, triggering the California Angels to a 4-2 decision over the Detroit Tigers.

Winner Bruce Kison, 3-1, gave up seven hits, struck out eight and issued two walks before getting relief help in the ninth from Mike Witt, who recorded his second save.

Orioles 9, A's 2

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken Jr. blasted a pair of two-run homers and a single, pacing a 13-hit Baltimore attack, as the Orioles whipped the Oakland A's 9-2.

Dan Ford contributed a single, double and a homer, driving in two runs in his 12th multiple-hit game of the season, and Rich Dauer also had two RBIs for the Orioles.

Dennis Martinez, 2-5, snapped a four-game losing streak with an eight-hitter that included solo homers by Bob Kearney and Kelvin Moore.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 4

BOSTON — Jim Rice drove in five runs with a pair of doubles, the second with the bases loaded and two out in the seventh inning, to rally the Boston Red Sox to a 6-4 decision over the Seattle Mariners.

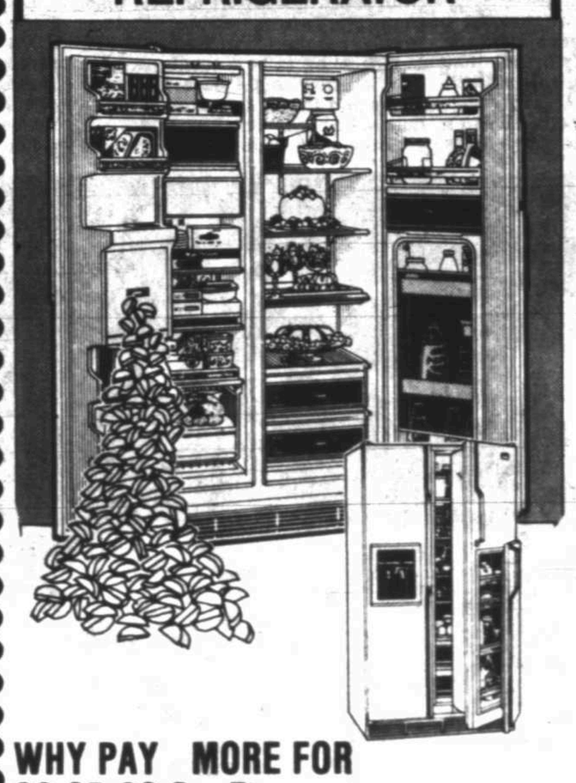

Rice drilled a two-run double off the wall in left center against Seattle righthander Gaylord Perry in the first inning, then lined a shot into the alley in the same area to pull the Red Sox from behind against reliever Mike Stanton in the seventh.

DiPino, Moreno lead Astros to victory, 6-0

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — Frank DiPino pitched five perfect innings of relief and Omar Moreno had four hits and drove in three runs to lead the Houston Astros to a 6-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves Friday night.

Houston starter Mike Scott allowed only two hits by the Braves but was taken out of the game after suffering spells of wildness in the third and fourth innings. DiPino, 1-1, struck out five Braves.

Moreno drove in the Astros' first two runs in the fourth with his third single of the game off Phil Niekro, 1-3, and had an RBI-triple in Houston's two-run sixth.

Ray Knight singled in the fourth and took third on Alan Ashby's single but was thrown out at home by first baseman Chris Chambliss on Bill Doran's chopper. Scott bunted Ashby and Doran ahead and both scored on Moreno's single to center field.

In the sixth, a walk by Doran and an RBI-double by DiPino preceded Moreno's triple and Houston added a run in the seventh when Dickie Thon singled, stole second and scored on Phil Garner's single. Thon singled in the ninth and Jose Cruz doubled him home for the Astros' final run.

The only hits by Atlanta were leadoff singles by Dale Murphy in the second and Glenn Hubbard in the third. Scott loaded the bases with two walks in the third and filled them again with three walks in the fourth. He escaped both jams unharmed, but was pulled from the game.

Phillies 5, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Tony Perez slammed a three-run home run in the ninth inning to power the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-2 victory over his former Montreal teammates.

Greg Gross and Mike Schmidt, the first two batters in the ninth, singled off reliever Bryn Smith, 0-1, and the 40-year-old Perez, signed as a free agent in the offseason, belted an 0-1 pitch over the fence in left field for his second homer of the season.

Ron Reed, 2-1, the third Philadelphia pitcher, was the winner with 1 2-3 innings of one-hit relief.

The Expos, trailing 2-1 in the eighth, tied it after Andre Dawson chased starter John Denny with a one-out single. Al Holland took over and gave up Al Oliver's run-scoring double to left-center field.

Philadelphia snapped a 1-1 tie without getting a hit in the seventh inning. Schmidt walked and came around on a grounder and two fly balls, the second by Garry Maddox. The Phillies got a run in the second on an RBI-single by Maddox and Montreal pulled even in the fourth when Oliver tripled and Carter singled.

Mets 7, Reds 4

NEW YORK — George Foster's fourth home run of the season and New York's fourth of the game, a three-run blast in the 13th inning, gave the Mets a 7-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Twice the Mets were one out away from losing their sixth in a row, but each time they rallied to tie it on a home run. And with two away in the 13th, Bill Scherrer, 0-1, walked Darryl Strawberry and Mike Jorgensen. Frank Pastore replaced Scherrer and Foster sent his first pitch over the 396-foot sign in left-center field. Jesse Orosco, 1-0, won with three perfect innings of relief.

Down 3-1 in the bottom of the ninth, Wally Backman beat out an infield single and Dave Kingman hit his fifth home run of the season to send the game into extra innings. And after Gary Redus' triple and Eddie Milner's double put the Reds ahead 4-3, Hubie Brooks' second homer of the year, off Tom Hume, tied it again.

MHS' Mobley places eighth in State golf

AUSTIN — Midland High's Kelle Mobley had trouble on the front nine but finished strong Friday to tie for eighth place in the girls' State golf tournament here.

Mobley shot a 48 on the front and was one-over par 37 on the back nine for her 85 and a two-day total of 169.

Kim Dirks of Arlington Heights won medalist honors with a 75-58-153 followed by Sue Thomas of Texarkana at 77-77-154.

Cypress won the 5A golf title with a 338-362-700 with Westwood finishing second at 357-352-709.

Westwood's Bonita Brown wins four events

AUSTIN (AP) — Bonita Brown of Palestine Westwood won four events Friday, including the 100-meter dash in a state record 11.4 seconds, and Fort Worth Polytechnic and Gilmer won team championships at the girls' track state meet.

Meledy Smith of Houston Sterling and Kim Whitaker of New Braunfels also set state records with Smith leaping 20 feet, 5 inches in the Class 5A long jump and Whitaker breaking her own state mark in the 3,200-meter run with a time of 10 minutes, 43.2 seconds in 4A.

Brown, who piled up 36 points in last year's state meet was even better this year, won the 200, the long jump and the triple jump in 3A in addition to her record-breaking sprint in the 100 for a total of 40 points.

Whitaker, an 81-pound junior who said she had been sick, broke her old mark in the 3,200 by nine seconds but was nearly 36 seconds off her national mark of 10:07.9 set March 31 in San Antonio.

Fort Worth Poly won all three relays — the 400 meters, 800 and 1,600 — and Lisa Ford was a double winner in the 100 and 200 as Poly won easily over Dallas Madison in the 4A team race. Poly's 46.8 in the 400 relay tied a conference record, and Ford's 11.8 in the 100 also tied the 4A record.

Gilmer grabbed 48 points in the three relays for a total of 52 to beat Waco Robinson for the 3A team championship.

The East Texans won the 400 relay, were second in the 1,600 and third in 800. Robinson had 43 points and Westwood had 40.

Other conference records included Kimberly Beasley of Dallas Madison, 19-11¾ in the 4A long jump. Mary Boldin of Hamlin, 19-¾ in the 2A long jump; Erica Carerra of Goliad, 11:26.9 in the 3,200 meters in 3A, and Sheila Quigley of Austin Westlake, in the 1,600 meter run in 4A in 458.5.

Trevino likes Woodlands' winds

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) - While others complained of high winds raking The Woodlands Country Club course Friday, Lee Trevino called for more of the same kind of weather for Saturday's third round of the $400,000 Houston Coca Cola Open.

"If the wind keeps blowing, I will have a chance," Trevino said after he shot a three-under-par 68 to take a two-stroke lead with a 136 total after 36 holes of the tournament.

"If the wind dies down and it becomes an aerial game, it may be difficult for me with everyone shooting for the flag."

Trevino, winless on the PGA tour in the past two years, sarted the day two shots off the pace set by first-round co-leaders David Graham and Jim Nelford.

But he charged from the start and at one time was seven shots under par. He finished with a 36-hole total of 136, or six under par.

That gave Trevino a two-shot lead over Fred Couples, Graham, Gary Koch and Nelford, all knotted in a tie for second with 138 totals.

GRAHAM RALLIED with a birdie on the final hole for a second round 72 after shooting a first round 66, and Nelford got two early birdies before falling back. Couples birdied the first four holes and finished with 67 for a 138 total. Koch shot a second-round 69.

Despite his idential rounds of 68, Trevino said he played better on Friday.

"I saw a lot of this place that I'd never seen before in the first round," Trevino said. "You know, there are some nice houses out there."

Trevino has played in only seven tournaments this year and said he was not playing in top form.

"Right now, I'm going with my punch shots and hooks," Trevino said. "My game is not where it should be."

JIM THORPE, who had an even-par 71 in the opening round, shot a 68 in the second round for a 139 total and a fourth place standing.

Lou Graham, who made a run at the lead in the first round, shot a second-round 69 for a 140 total and shared fifth place with John Cook, who had a 73 after a 67 opening round.

Trevino ran in birdie putts of 10 and 40 feet on the fifth and seventh holes to get his charge started.

After back to back birdies on Nos. 13 and 14 in which he sank putts of 10 and 18 feet, Trevino got his only bogey of the round on No. 15.

He hit a five iron through the green, chipped back and then two-putted.

THE HIGHLIGHT of Trevino's round came on the 455-yard No. 14 when he ran in a birdie putt to go seven under par for the tournament. He hit a 5-wood within 18 feet of the hole and sank it for the birdie.

Couples said the key to his round was the four-hole birdie run to start the second round.

"They (the holes) were playing short and after that all the holes are very tough," he said. There just weren't any more easy holes."

All of Couples' four birdies were from short range and he sank a 12-footer for a birdie on No. 8 to go five under for the tournament.

Couples dropped in a 30-foot birdie putt from just off the fringe on No. 13 to go six under par.

The high winds turned on him on the back nine, however, and Couples bogeyed the final two holes when he two-putted from 20 feet on both occasions.

Jay Haas shot a hole in one on the fly on the 180-yard, par 3 No. 5 hole. Haas bogeyed the next two holes and finished with round with a 73 for a 145 36-hole total.

Greenwood's Burleson wins Region I-A tennis

LEVELLAND — Greenwood's Stuart Burleson will be returning to the State High School Tennis tournament this year in Austin to try adding to his already impressive high school achievements.

The Ranger senior has apparently fully recovered from orthoscopic knee surgury as he easily defeated Wink's Don Jacobsen 6-0, 6-2, Saturday to win the Region I tennis title here on the South Plains College campus to gain the state berth.

This year could be a repeat of 1982 when Burleson had to compete in the state tennis and track finals which on the same day in Austin.

Horse Show

The Arabian Horse Club of West Texas had several winners in the Big County Arabian Horse Show in Abilene.

Omar Bandit, owned by Tony Martin won the Arabian/Half Arabian Foals competition. Second was Martin's Tamar Bandit and fourth went to Arameisha, owned by J.R. Grant.

In the Purbred registered Stallions, Tamar Bandit was second and Baskalita, owned by Grant, was third.

Jeff Brazeal, aboard Alarifa, took fifth place in the Walk Trot (green rider-green horse, english or western). He also finished fifth in Showmanship at Halter (14-18 year olds) on Classic Mizba the same horse C.W. Brazeal used to finish fourth in S-H (19 and older).

Rick and Ashley White were third in the Tandem Bareback. Rick, aboard Montcrest-Indy, took second in the Walk-Trot Lead Line and fifth in S-H (19 and older).

Coles, Lock tied for Michelob lead

ROSWELL, Ga. (AP) — Former champion Janet Coles and three-time Australian amateur champion Jane Lock posted 5-under-par 67s Friday to share the first-round lead in the $150,000 Lady Michelob golf tournament.

Coles, who won this event in 1978, had seven birdies in her round and what she called "the greatest (par) 3 of my life" and Lock turned in a steady, bogey-free round.

The two held a one-shot advantage over Alice Miller, still seeking her first victory in her sixth season on the LPGA tour.

Coles, Lock and Miller all posted their scores early during the ideal day — temperatures in the upper 70s and virtually no wind — and they held up against some of the more celebrated players competing later in the day.

Amy Alcott, the season's leading money winner who needs to earn $5,010 to become the tour's sixth $1 million winner, was in fourth place with a 69, two shots off the pace.

Hollis Stacy, seeking her third consecutive victory, had a 72 when she went bogey-double bogey on the final two holes. Nancy Lopez, the only other two-time winner this year, also had a 72.

Defending champion Kathy Whitworth, winner of a record 84 tournaments, had a 75.

Coles' bogeys came on the second where she 3-putted from 25 feet and on the ninth where her approach carried over the green.

She salvaged par on the 174-yard 11th after her tee shot ended up 45-50 yards off the green "almost in the clubhouse. I just had to hit a great shot and I did, to within one foot. It was just a great par."

R.T. French employee decides what cuts the mustard

By PETER COY

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The fate of R.T. French Co. hangs on the tongue of Sam Wentz, the man who decides what cuts the mustard.

The beefy inspector has been dipping plastic spoons into French's mustard jars and onto his palate since he left the Navy in 1960. It was a job he was born for, he says.

After a day in the factories and test kitchens, Wentz says, he loves to go home to his favorite meal — meat loaf slathered with lots of mustard.

"I'm glad I like the product," he says. "I like a scrambled egg sandwich with mustard. When I was a kid I used to eat plain mustard sandwiches."

Wentz and others test French's and competitors' products for salt, solids, acidity, color, fineness of grind and viscosity.

ENTERTAINMENT

But in the final analysis, the proof of the Poupon — or Dijon, or Creamy Salad — is in the eating.

"I can truthfully say that in all the years I've worked here I've never had a boring day," says Wentz.

The pursuit of good mustard has taken the 43-year-old Wentz from the mustard fields near Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, to the giant elevators of Thunder Bay, Ontario. A big part of his job is inspecting French's three processing plants in Souderton, Pa.; Springfield, Mo.; and Fresno, Calif.

THE WORK HAS not all been a labor of love, however. Wentz's love of mustard has been bitterly tested.

Once, for instance, in 1963 or 1964, a pair of company officers were playing gin rummy and eating ham sandwiches in the company cafeteria when they noticed their French's mustard was inedibly bitter.

A huge batch of weathered mustard seeds from Montana had slipped through inspection, and Wentz had to find out how many jars were spoiled.

Dutifully, he went from case to case dipping his finger into more than 1,100 jars. Thousands of cases of foul-tasting mustard had to be tossed out.

"It took me five days to do it," Wentz says. "My finger was yellow and my tongue was yellow for about a month."

Now Wentz is having to broaden his tastes.

As a leading mustard producer, with more than 40 percent of the U.S. market, French's only entry in the field until recently was the mild, bright yellow sauce it dubbed "America's Favorite Mustard."

THE "SUNSHINE" mustard, introduced by George French in 1904, has been widely imitated — eight out of 10 mustard-eating households in the United States stock a yellow mustard.

But in recent years demand has been growing for spicier, more cosmopolitan mustards, and R.T. French has brought out two new products in the last year to compete. Wentz, of course, has played an important role in the startups.

Bold 'N Spicy, a brown delicatessen-style mustard that went into national distribution last summer, is intended to compete with Gulden's Mustard, made by American Home Products Corp.

THE SECOND MUSTARD, Vive La DiJon!, is a more expensive mustard made with white wine. It began appearing in supermarkets last month as a slightly milder rival of Grey Poupon.

Bradbury draws from his childhood

By JEFF RISTINE
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Ray Bradbury, fantasy writer extraordinaire, swears he can vividly remember his own birth, the taste of his mother's milk, the exact spot inside his Waukegan, Ill., home where, in the first few days of life, he stared out through a window at a world that would provide him with a lifelong sense of wonder.

But it wasn't until a few months ago that the Bradbury memory bank released a final little piece of childhood that turns up in his novel and a new Disney movie, "Something Wicked This Way Comes."

"My mother took me on my first carousel ride when I was about 5 and I screamed bloody murder," Bradbury says. "It scared the hell out of me.

"I finally got off the thing but I don't think I went near a carousel for years after that. I'm sure it marked me forever. So when it came time to write the novel and the screenplay, it just naturally fell into the center of things as a frightening ride of some sort, huh?"

That nightmare is a centerpiece of the 'Something Wicked," the story of a sinister traveling carnival troupe and its seductive effect on a typically Bradburian Midwestern town.

THE FILM, FOR which Bradbury is getting screenplay credit, is chockablock with other, mostly dark elements of his youth: his love of libraries and old-time movie monsters; the carnivals, abounding with magicians and freaks and outcasts; even the locomotive whistle he heard in the distance, late at night, shortly after his sister died.

"As I got older I learned how to bring the nightmares out in the open and get rid of them," Bradbury says. "Everyone goes through that normal process in their teens of making do with darkness, making do with death. Because you finally begin to believe that it means you, too, huh?"

Appropriately enough, the "Something Wicked" novel, which was published in 1962 and has since completed 25 paperback printings, got its start a few years before that as a film script treatment.

"When I was 38 I met Gene Kelly and he invited me to a screening of "Invitation to the Dance," Bradbury says. He went home that night determined to produce a screenplay for Kelly to direct.

Using one of his own short stories, "The Black Ferris," as a springboard, Bradbury wrote a 70-page outline, but Kelly couldn't find the money to get the project off the ground.

Following publication of the novel, the idea of a film went through at least two more false starts before the Disney studio and producer Peter Vincent Douglas "put the thing into production at long last."

BRADBURY AND DISNEY have a long if not entirely fruitful history.

Years ago, Bradbury heard of a plan to rebuild part of Tomorrowland at Disneyland, and asked Walt Disney himself if he could be hired on as a consultant.

"He said, 'Ray, it's no use. You're a genius and I'm a genius. We'd kill each other by the end of the first week.'

"I accepted that. That's a compliment from Walt."

Later, Bradbury was asked to come up with an idea to illustrate the history of energy and mankind's use of fire for a Monsanto Corp. exhibit at Disney World in Florida. Two months' work went for naught — Monsanto didn't care for Bradbury's fascination with fire.

Bradbury and the Disney studio alike clearly have higher hopes for "Something Wicked," which was directed by Jack Clayton ("The Innocents," "The Great Gatsby") and stars Jason Robards as the town librarian and Jonathon Pryce as the evil carnival ringmaster, Mr. Dark.

It represents the unofficial kickoff of another summer full of fantasy and science fiction at the nation's movie houses that will include "Return of the Jedi," "Superman III," "Blue Thunder," "Spacehunter: Adventures in the Forbidden Zone," "Brainstorm," "Twilight Zone" "Krull"and "Sword of the Valiant."

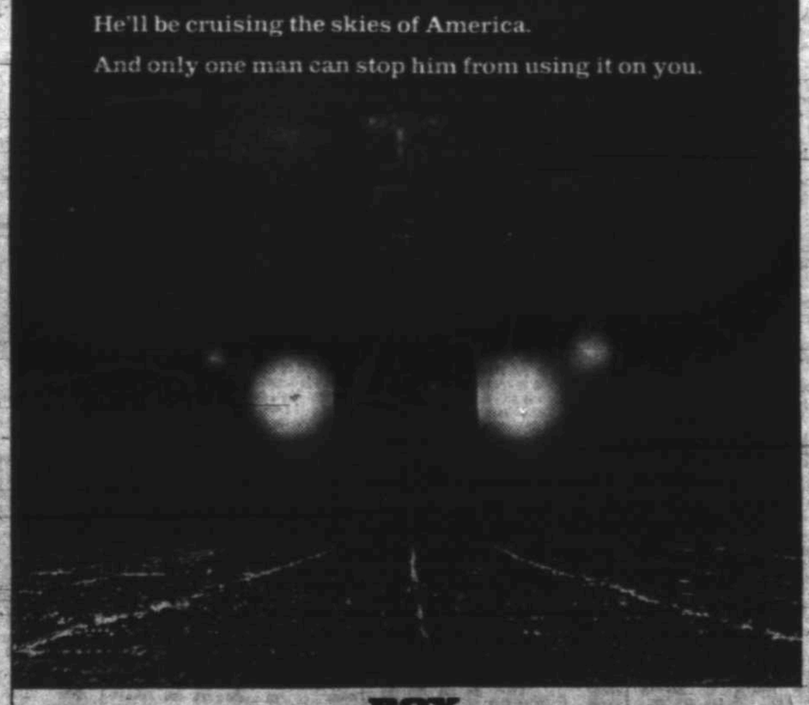

ITS EARLY RELEASE (it was originally scheduled to hit theaters next October and the special effects were completed only a few weeks ago) is no accident but it's not necessarily that smart either, says Bradbury.

"I know what their reasoning is. They think that by staying away from the competition you give it a better chance. I don't believe that, I believe a good film is a good film. And you can open it on St. Patrick's Day or 3 in the morning two days after New Year's, and if it's any good it will do well."

French communists undergo crisis

Mitterand, Socialists keep them in second place

By MICHAEL DOBBS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PARIS — The French Communist Party is going through a crisis of identity that is closely connected with its second-string position in President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist-led government.

After serving nearly two years as junior partners in the coalition, the Communists have gained a certain amount of the respectability that they sought. But they are losing their image as the natural party of the disgruntled and underprivileged. And they have failed to halt their long-term electoral decline.

Differences within the party over strategy were papered over at an important meeting of the party's policy-making Central Committee recently, which ended with a solemn reaffirmation of Communist participation in the government. As is customary, the meeting "unanimously" adopted the report submitted by party leader Georges Marchais, despite earlier rumors that he was in danger of being replaced.

Recent public opinion polls have suggested that the Communist share of the vote is now down to a little over 10 percent from a high of 28 percent in the elections of 1946 when the party was the largest single political force in France. In the 1981 presidential election, the party received just over 15 percent in the first round.

THIS ELECTORAL decline has left the party uncertain about its place in French politics and its relationship with Moscow. Despite dabbling with Eurocommunism in the mid-1970s, the French Communists never went as far as the Italians or the Spanish in criticizing the Kremlin. At home, the party's attitude toward the Socialists has veered from cooperation to bitter rivalry and back again.

For their part, the Socialists seem to be attempting to kill the Communists with kindness. Socialist leaders constantly praise their Communist colleagues for their contribution to the government but make all the important decisions themselves.

By offering the Communists four relatively minor posts in his Cabinet, Mitterrand caused alarm bells to ring in Washington. His own view, however, was that the Communists were easier to control inside the government than out of it — particularly after he demonstrated that he did not need their votes for a majority in the National Assembly.

The slump in the Communist Party's fortunes has been particularly evident since 1972, when Marchais became its secretary general. During this period, the Communists have had to cede to the Socialists their claim to be the largest party of the left.

IN A RECENT newspaper interview, sociologist Andre Touraine described the Communist Party as "a sand castle surrounded by the sea."

"The Communist Party doesn't have a future. From the moment when it ceased to be a Leninist party and was no longer identified with the whole of the left, which is now better represented by the Socialists, it was condemned to decline," he said. Touraine speculated that if the Communists left the government now, their share of the popular vote would fall quickly to beneath 10 percent. If they remained inside, the same decline would eventually occur but perhaps more slowly.

Here lies the heart of the Communists' dilemma. As allies of the Socialists, particularly during a period of gathering economic austerity, they have been forced to make one humiliating concession after another. But under the present electoral system, which favors the larger parties, they have no place else to go as long as they want to remain a significant political force.

They also have to accept the sometimes humiliating conditions imposed by the dominant Socialists. For the past few weeks, the noncommunist press has been describing with glee how the Communist Party is being made "to swallow snakes"-a French expression for taking a bitter pill.

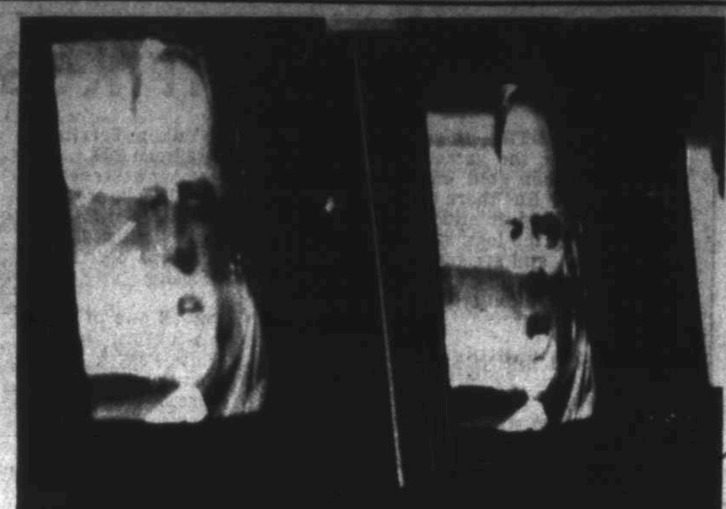

AMONG THE "snakes" the party has been made to digest are the mass expulsion of Soviet officials, the "Atlanticist" foreign policy under Mitterrand and a drastic austerity program at home that is likely to increase unemployment and cut into the average standard of living.

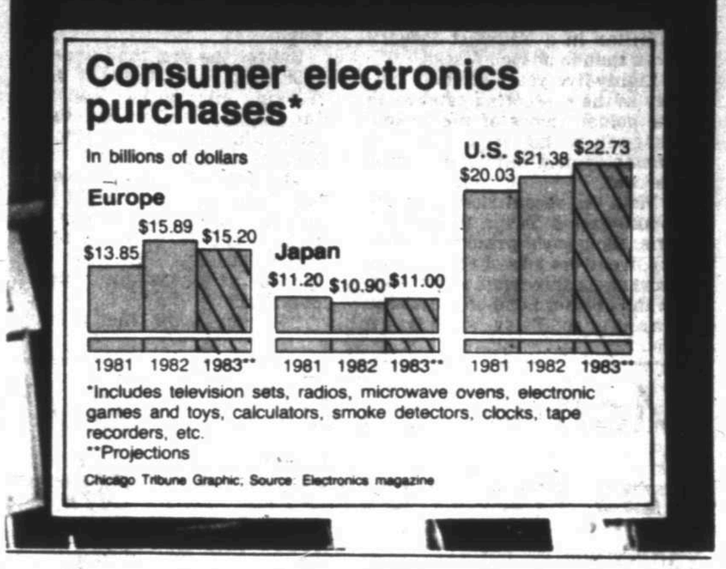

Symptomatic of the disquiet within Communist ranks was an internal document circulated by dissidents prior to the Central Committee meeting criticizing the government for not being sufficiently left-wing. The document said that the Socialists remained a "traditionally anti-Soviet" and "anticommunist" party.

Another attack on Marchais' leadership came in an open letter to the Central Committee from Jeannette Thorez-Vermeersch, the widow of the party's former leader Maurice Thorez and widely regarded as a representative of the pro-Moscow faction. She accused the leadership of being "opportunist" and of "abandoning its revolutionary goals."

Marchais defended the government's record, praising nationalizations and social reforms such as retirement at age 60. He mocked the press by saying that he would gladly swallow "snakes such as these morning, noon, and night."

Perhaps the Communist Party's strongest card in its relations with the Socialists is its control over the CGT union federation, the largest in France. To a limited extent, Communist leaders have been able to exploit Mitterrand's belief that their presence in the government is necessary to prevent strikes and other protests breaking out at a time of economic hardship.

When's last time lawyer filed brief that really was?

Mulligan's Stew

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — It goes without saying, but here goes anyway...

—Florida and Arizona have about the same weather. It was sunny and warm the week before you got there, but not nearly as nice as the day you're leaving.

—Boys Town's Father Flanagan said, "There is no such thing as a bad boy," but he never met the little monsters in the hotel room next to ours.

—When's the last time any lawyer filed a brief that really was?

—Seen from an airplane, the American landscape has changed dramatically in the past decade. Instead of the checkerboard of plowed fields and squre patches of pastureland, you now see enormous perfect circles, like those that beer glasses leave on a bar, from the pivot irrigation devices.

—At age 80, British author Malcolm Muggeridge looks back on his years as editor of Punch and as a top BBC broadcaster and concludes that "The profession of journalism permits one to be a sort of power-voyeur, peering through keyholes at the antics of the great, and deriving therefrom little spasms of obscene excitement."

—Speaking of voyeurs, just because you never see any of those wildly skimpy bikinis shown in Sports Illustrated and the fashion magazines on any ordinary beach is no reason to give up the search.

—Men who wear both suspenders and a belt to hold up their trousers are probably safety consultants.

—There is a new Japanese smoke alarm that lets you sleep an extra half hour.

—The late great Red Smth was right about skiing: "There is something wrong with a sport that only goes in one direction."

—After ABC-TV's ratings success with 18 hours of "The Winds of War," competing media moguls are looking into scripting possibilities of the Hundred Years War for a maxi-mini series.

—The longest one-syllable words used in broadcasting are "and now this..."

—Service is always slower in a restaurant with a hostess to seat you, a maitre d', two captains, a battalion of waitresses and a platoon of busboys with little to do but dole out rolls than at a diner just off the turnpike staffed by only one counterman and a short-order cook.

—Why are Hollywood and Broadway forever picking on the police, politicians, priests and nuns for their shock stories? When's the last time you saw a really good expose of the secret life of a stock analyst, computer programmer, travel agent or a dietician?

—Golfers with little foldup stools built into their club bags seldom let you play through.

—When afflicted with writer's block, the novelist Leo Tolstoy sought divine inspiration in a prayer written by St. Augustine: "Lord, let me offer you in sacrifice the service of my thoughts and tongue, but first give me what I may offer you."

France has bone to pick with U.S. over franc's declining buying power

NEW YORK (AP) — France has a bone to pick with the Reagan administration. And by the looks of it, the economic dispute could become a trans-Atlantic dogfight.

At issue is a U.S. government policy that has allowed the value of the dollar to reach unprecedented heights in relation to the French franc. That has meant lower prices for Americans buying imported French goods and more buying power for Americans in France.

But in France, the franc's decline has aggravated that country's economic crisis.

The dispute has intensified in recent days and could climax at a summit of the seven leading industrialized countries, scheduled for May 28-30 at Williamsburg, Va.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the reasons for the rift:

Q. Is the dollar strong, or the franc weak?

A. Both. The dollar has been gaining value in relation to other major currencies for more than a year, mainly because interest rates in the United States are higher than elsewhere. Many investors, attracted by the higher rate of return earned on dollars, have shifted money out of other currencies. At the same time, the franc has been hurt by the economic problems that have dogged President Francois Mitterand since his Socialist government took office in 1981.

Q. Why does France care if the dollar is strong?

A. Earlier this week you could get 7.39 French francs for one U.S. dollar — the highest ratio on record. At the end of last year the ratio was 6.74 francs to the dollar, and two years before that it was 4.52 to the dollar. That trend is troublesome for France because it gives investors incentive to pull money out of France and put it in the United States, where earnings retain more of their value. That is good for the U.S. economy but bad for the French.

Q. Can't France control the value of its currency?

A. It can influence, but not control, the franc's value in relation to the dollar. The French central bank can buy francs and sell dollars, but that tactic has only limited effect since there are many other buyers and sellers in the market, acting independently of the French. A longer-range solution for France is to beef up its sagging economy.

Q. What do the French want the Americans to do?

A. Not only the French but many other of the U.S. trade partners in Europe want the Reagan administration to intervene more frequently in the currency market.

Hard luck strikes Skagway again

EDITOR'S NOTE — It was the door to riches; the gateway to the Yukon when gold was discovered there. But there are no working mines left and Skagway is feeling the loss. With its colorful past and its spectacular scenery, Skagway is hoping that tourism can help it recover as a town.

By HAL SPENCER

SKAGWAY, Alaska (AP) — Hard luck is no stranger in this town, where busted Klondike gold miners once tramped the muddy streets to catch the steamboat back to Seattle.

But it's a new kind of hard luck in Skagway now — perhaps more familiar in a Midwest factory town than in oil-rich Alaska.

Eighty-five years after its heyday as the rip-roaring gateway to the golden riches of the Yukon, Skagway is staggering under an unemployment rate of at least 50 percent.

With the recent closure of the White Pass & Yukon Route's rail line, Skagway's principal industry, went the jobs of 150 railroad workers in this community of 800 at the northern end of the Alaska Panhandle. Fifty workers in Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, also lost their railroad jobs.

The miners who streamed through here in 1898 "were chasing a dream. We're different. We're trying to build a life," says Ed Bolton, nursing a beer at the Skagway Elks Lodge.

BOLTON WAS one of those left without a job last October when the White Pass & Yukon shut down operations on the narrow-gauge railroad that has been operating between Skagway and Whitehorse since 1900.

While the colorful line was a magnet for summer tourists, most of its income came from hauling ore from the mineral-rich Yukon to tidewater at Skagway.

But for the first time since the 1898 Gold Rush, there is not a working mine in the Yukon as the industry suffers through a worldwide drop in the price of lead, zinc and copper.

The 110-mile railroad, which relied on the Cyprus-Anvil lead-zinc mine near Faro, Yukon Territory, for 70 percent of its freight business, shut down four months after the mine halted operations.

"We don't know when the railroad will resume operations. All we know is it's shut down for an indefinite period," says Marvin Taylor, manager of the railroad's Alaska operations.

Townspeople are bracing for another blow from the closure — fewer tourists who take cruise ships north through the spectacular island scenery of the Alaska Panhandle to Skagway, and ride the railroad over breathtaking White Pass.

"I'VE TURNED my hobbies into a business," says Bolton, who had a high-paying job as a tinsmith on the railroad. Now he makes knives and hopes the tourists will buy them this summer.

Skagway Mayor Rand Snure glances up the boardwalk on the town's main street and shakes his head.

"People feel the railroad is trying to kill off the tourist trade now that they've killed off the jobs...I foresee Skagway getting back on track," says Snure, but he wasn't sure exactly how or when.

"I hope the tourist trade will help us," he says, although he concedes it would not be enough to support the railroad families, now scraping by on $500 a month in railroad unemployment compensation.

The town's tourist attractions include its historic main street and the grave of the Jefferson Randolph "Soapy" Smith, a Gold Rush confidence man who swindled miners out of their gold before being shot dead on July 7, 1898. He was shot by Frank Reid, a member of a Skagway vigilante group formed to clean up the town. Reid also died in the gun battle.

SNURE SAYS some cruise ship operators have told him they may cut back cruises to Skagway next year if the railroad doesn't reopen. Others have said it doesn't matter because Skagway itself is a tourist attaction, Snure says.

"People are pulling out. It's hard to say how many, but it's a lot," says Cheryl Hayes, the bartender at Moe's Frontier Bar.

The mayor says that the jobless in Skagway have a peculiar problem. The gravel road out of town — to the Yukon Territory — is open only in late spring and summer, so residents "can't just drive somewhere else for work."

He and others are thinking about ways to diversify.

1923 dollar worth $23.86 today

NEW YORK (AP) — What's a 1923 dollar worth today? About $23.86, at least for a retired firefighter who finally closed a bank account established by his father 60 years ago.

Nicholas Dunninger, who is no longer alive, opened an account with a dollar at the Amalgamated Bank of New York on May 5, 1923. His son, Mineola resident Louis Dunninger, closed the account Thursday and received 60 years worth of interest — $22.86.

Man who collects outhouses has no trouble finding a seat

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Hy Goldenberg never has trouble finding a seat, especially in his own back yard. He collects outhouses.

Eight of them adorn his rural home along the Wabash River, including several one-seaters, a three-holer, and a Depression-era, U.S. government-engineered model with a concrete floor and a ceramic throne.

But his favorite is a round privy with a wedge-shaped seat and a weather vane on the roof.

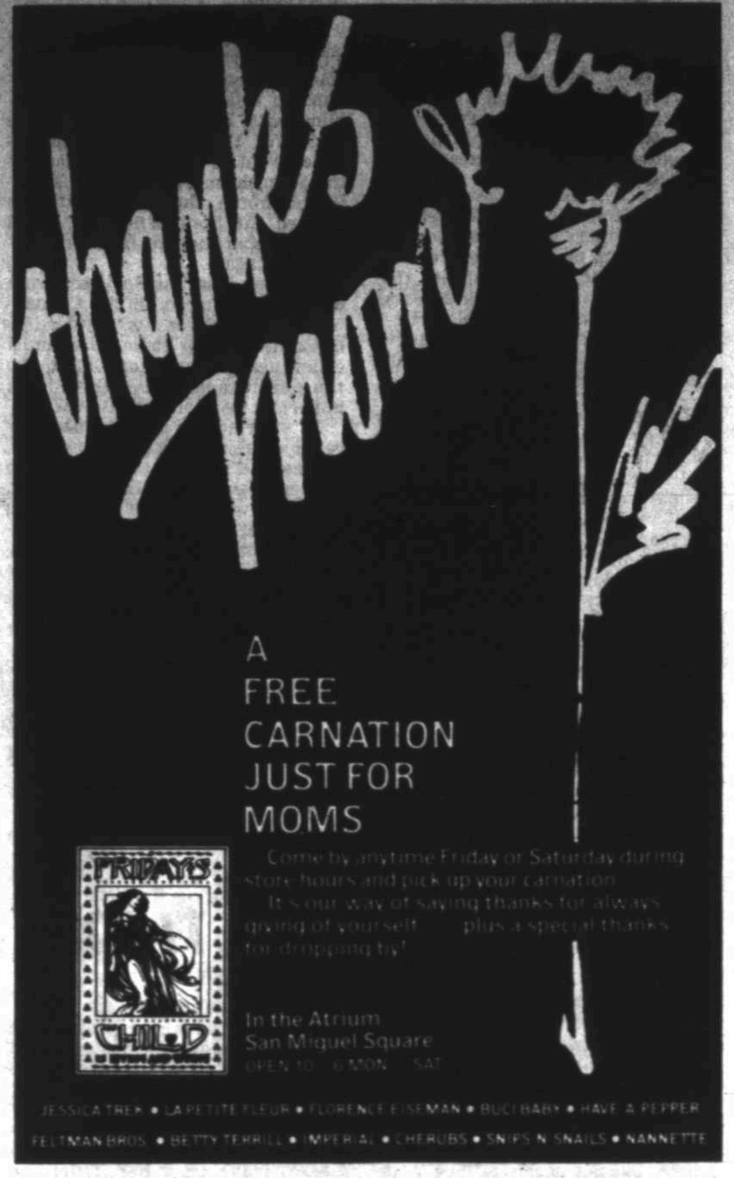

"It's no trouble getting them," said Goldenberg, a 64-year-old retiree. "I've never gone around rapping on doors for them."

He's thinking of putting together an anthology about outhouses. "No one has ever done it," says Goldberg, who takes the subject seriously. "It's always a series of photos or limericks."

Although the outhouses are often the butt of jokes, Goldenberg thinks they have some commemorative value.

"I get to thinking of people going outdoors and sitting down and thinking...if you were a kid, sneaking out for a smoke or hiding from chores," he said. "Just the idea of thinking about what memories they held for people gives me a nostalgic twinge."

Catalog provides relief

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — Among America's dizzying array of mail-order catalogs, one features such hard-to-find items as hand plows, rickshaws, and doctors' services, but with a twist: the merchandise cannot be shipped to the person who ordered it. In fact, it's delivered in another country, often halfway around the world.

The unusual mail-order book, called the Survival Catalog, is published by World Relief, the international service arm of the National Association of Evangelicals, as a way of encouraging Americans to directly assist the needy in Third World countries.

Concerned individuals or church groups select an item from the catalog, such as a hand plow for the Bilaan tribe in the Philippines ($20) or a month's pay for a doctor in a refugee camp in Thailand ($2,000). After the money is raised, often through a special church offering, it is sent to World Relief, which makes sure the money goes to the project for which it is earmarked.

"Our church is very small — about 35 members — and until the Survival Catalog came along, we felt that any money we raised was insignificant in helping people," says the Rev. Woody Market, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Louisville, Ky.

"In the past year, our men's and women's groups have donated enough for several crop starter kits and crutches for crippled children, and we feel like we're really doing something."

Bill Mock, a spokesman for World Relief, says the catalog is well received because there's something in it for everyone: teen groups, Sunday school classes, and adults.

"People identify with the catalog items," Mock explained. "For instance, American children want to help children in other countries, especially the handicapped and hungry. American laborers and farmers can relate to the universal necessity of owning suitable tools and seeds for crops. All of us can identify with the needs for hygiene and health aids."

Man brings realism to games

NEW YORK (AP) — In Ray Dettling's mind, worlds collide, undersea monsters attack atomic submarines and intergalactic armies fight apocalyptic wars. And that's just a typical day's work.

Dettling, whose official title is Product Development Manager for Data Age Inc. in Campbell, Calif., dreams up home video games.

His biggest challenge is trying to bring a sense of reality to a fantasy world composed of strange little creatures like "Pac-Man" and battles in space.

And when it comes to space, Ray Dettling knows what he's talking about. He spent 15 years as a physicist in the aerospace industry, including 10 years at United Technologies, where he worked on rocket propulsion systems for the space shuttle.

Just how did an aerospace engineer — who writes science fiction on the side — make the jump from the space shuttle to Space Invaders?

Dettling was "discovered" last June, when a Data Age executive happened to look over his shoulder in a restaurant. Dettling was working on a "story," which is to a video game as a libretto is to an opera, and Data Age needed help. The company had put together some new games, but they had "virtually no pizazz," Dettling recalled.

It's not just the action, the space ships shooting at the aliens, that makes a game interesting, Dettling said. They must also have stories behind them to explain why the aliens are being blasted.

If the story is good enough, he said, "You can place the person in the spaceship and he can feel he's in a real scenario. The more convincing your copy is, the more reinforced the fantasy becomes."

He joined Data Age as a part-time consultant, writing story lines to go with the games, and soon found himself in a new career.

Dettling spends about 60 hours a week thinking up new ways to keep kids of all ages glued to their television sets. Office life is "a perpetual string of brainstorming sessions," he said. But it doesn't end when he leaves for the night.

"I keep a notebook on the side of my bed," Dettling said in a telephone interview. "I constantly wake up in the middle of the night with a flash, and I'll write it in the book."

Not all of the ideas come from inside his head. Many of them "are just real life situations." A recent trip to a pizza parlor, for example, provided the idea for a possible future video game. "I was watching the guy throw the pizza up," Dettling recalled, "and I started imagining several guys throwing pizzas up or one guy throwing several pizzas up and trying to keep them all in the air. That would be sort of a fun game."

Among the new ideas Dettling has come up with is what Data Age boasts is the world's first rock-and-roll video game, "Journey Escape," based on the exploits of a rock band, Journey.

Another Dettling creation is "Frankenstein's Monster," in which the player tries to prevent the monster from coming to life by building a wall around it, avoiding spiders, ghosts and bats.

Dettling feels that "good science fiction can also have good science," so he tries to make his graphics as realistic as possible. If you're going to show stars in space games, he said, "It takes very little effort to make them right."

In his games "the stars represent real stars and real constellations taken from star charts." In others, he said, "they're just a bunch of spots."

Book name to be changed

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Swastika, the name and symbol of the New Mexico State University yearbook, will be changed, and the school's Board of Regents will have final approval of a new name, the regents decided Friday.

The regents voted 3-1 against retaining the name Swastika, which is an ancient Zuni Indian symbol as well as the Nazi Party's emblem. The school has used the name and symbol since 1907.

NMSU President Gerald Thomas said he supported the motion to change the name, adding that it was no longer simply a student decision. "It is the responsibility of the board when an issue becomes of this magnitude...not because of logic but because of the impact on the university," he said.

The name of the NMSU yearbook has been controversial for years, but debate over the name heightened in the past few months.

A non-binding student poll taken in March indicated that students wanted to retain the name of the yearbook.

Disease may harm general population

CHICAGO (AP) — A study showing children may catch the deadly immune deficiency disease AIDS from their families could mean the general population is at greater risk from the illness than previously believed, a medical journal reported today.

If "routine" personal contact among family members in a household is enough to spread the illness, "then AIDS takes on an entirely new dimension," said Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Infants and children in certain environments appear to be especially susceptible to AIDS, a disease previously thought to affect mostly homosexuals, Haitians, hemophiliacs and some drug abusers, according to reports in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, is believed to be caused by a virus and results in the near-total collapse of the body's immune system, leaving victims vulnerable to cancers and infections. There is no known cure.

Since 1981, more than 1,361 Americans have developed AIDS, and 520 have died, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

An editorial in the journal said the number of victims is doubling every six months. In some big cities, AIDS has reached epidemic proportions among sexually active male homosexuals, its first known victims.

Initial studies led scientists to suspect AIDS was transmitted only through bodily secretions, but a new study suggests it might be transmitted to children in high-risk households without sexual contact or other suspected forms of transmission, such as blood transfusions.

The study involved eight children from New Jersey families that included adults with known risk factors, such as intravenous drug use, homosexuality and Haitian origins. There was no evidence the children had been sexually abused or given illicit drugs.

Since 1979, the youngsters developed unexplained immune deficiencies and infections like those found in adult AIDS victims, according to the study, conducted by nine researchers from four New Jersey institutions.

Four of the children died; the others are still sick.

The study and an accompanying editorial by Fauci stressed that the children had not been definitively diagosed as having AIDS, and that even normal children have decreased immune systems when compared to adults.

But if the researchers were truly dealing with AIDS in children, the finding "has enormous implications" for how the disease is spread, Fauci said. He explained that "although we need more information," the results should serve as a warning of risk to the general population.

Dr. Roger Cooper Jr. of St. Michael's Medical Center in Newark, a co-author of the study, said it now appears that medical personnel who treat AIDS victims might be especially vulnerable.

But Fauci stressed that while the disease might be transmitted through close, non-sexual contact, such contact would have to be more than casual.

Exposition makes dreams of future reality

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once upon a time in a future perhaps not far away, you may be gently awakened by a household robot playing music and telling jokes, bringing breakfast and bearing your appointments for the day — displayed on its chest.

That, at least, is a picture of the early 21st century being painted by organizers of an exposition and marketing fair called FutureWorld Expo '83.

The three-day expo — a combination of state-of-the-art consumer products, scientific and architectural dreams, a touch of science fiction and a great many health food vendors — was designed "to create a feeling of what you might do in the 21st century," organizer Todd Mills of Los Angeles said Thursday. He described himself as a "futurist," former teacher, traveler and businessman.

Mills and his expo exhibitors suggested a day in the life of a 21st century family in the suburbs might go something like this:

Your robot, following instructions typed on a keyboard in its midriff, might roll to a carefully organized pantry and refrigerator and collect eggs, juice, bread, jam and coffee. After some simple preparations, it could roll to your bedside with breakfast and wake you with music.

To ease the Monday morning blues, you might even get a joke or two.

"You might call me a chip off the old block," cracked one robot at the show. Robots run on computers, and computers are built of microscopic electronic components called chips.

The morning newspaper might appear on a television screen with moving graphics.

Existing models will even monitor their own batteries, he said, finding an electric outlet and plugging themselves in whenever they need recharging.

When people go to work, they might tell the robot to vacuum the house, mow the lawn, pay bills through computer links with banks and stores, and balance the checkbook. It might entertain the kids after school, take the dog for a walk or guard the house and detect smoke or fire.

The family car, Mills predicts, will probably be a "hovercraft" that creates a cushion of air and rides on it. Highway maintenance would be a snap.

Homeless Americans in depressive situation

Hearst Feature Service

Homeless Americans – uprooted victims of a ragged economy – represent a tragedy of American life and the most serious social dislocation since the Great Depression.

Estimates of their numbers range between 500,000 and 2.5 million. And despite assurances by the Reagan administration that the economy is on the upswing, social workers devoted to helping the homeless agree almost unanimously that the lot of the homeless continues to worsen.

Sometimes called the New Poor or the Underclass, some of the homeless are highly visible, sleeping in church shelters, in parks and under bridges. The invisible ones live with friends or family or in a motor home hooked up to a shopping center's electrical outlet.

So much of their time is spent on trying to survive – standing in lines for food and shelter – that there often is little time left for standing in line for a job.

"It's not only working-class, skilled-labor positions that are drying up. It's from top to bottom," says Michael Margolin, executive director of the Travelers Aid Society of Detroit. "It's a much more intense joblessness. If it were not for government subsidies and unemployment compensation, it would be like the Depression of 1929. It seems that the gap we've always recognized between the wealthy and the poor is widening."

Louisa Stark, an Arizona State University professor and cultural anthropologist, says that homelessness today "is totally heterogeneous." And she suggests that unemployment and homelessness will leave "incredible pathological scars," ranging from alcoholism and drug abuse to family disintegration.

Homelessness is difficult to quantify, because the victims are often transient, drifting in and out of the social-services system, and because large numbers suffer in private, never using public assistance.

"Nobody knows the exact numbers, but that doesn't matter," says Kim Hopper of the New York-based National Coalition for the Homeless. "One would be too many."

But statistics that are available from city social-services agencies, Travelers Aid offices, the Salvation Army and other charitable organizations around the nation leave little doubt that the number of homeless Americans has risen dramatically in the last two years.

"And the stereotypes don't exist anymore," says Robert Hayes, a former Wall Street attorney who heads the National Coalition for the Homeless. "The folks traveling and looking for work are younger, healthier and are more victims of unemployment."

Many of those counted among the New Poor are middle-class Americans, homeowners and jobholders used to supporting themselves.

Some of the earliest victims of the recession were small-businessmen, self-employed and without benefits, whose livelihoods collapsed as large employers around them laid off workers.

The more recent victims, and some of the future homeless, include workers in depressed industries who have accumulated long-term benefits, home equity and savings accounts.

As Jarrie Tent, director of Detroit's Coalition of Temporary Shelters, explains it: "We have auto industry workers who have benefits for a year or more, or they would go back to work for three or four months and be eligible again. Once their benefits run out, they apply for general assistance or welfare. It still takes another six or eight months to have a home foreclosed on. It takes two or three years for those people to really become homeless."

Group cites mistake in lifting ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Products Safety Commission says an appeals court made a mistake when it decided to lift a federal ban on urea foam formaldehyde insulation.

The commission on Thursday petitioned the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans for a rehearing on the matter, citing factual and legal errors in the case.

The commission said the court's decision to lift the ban "represents an improper intrusion on the authority granted by Congress to the commission both to resolve conflicting scientific evidence and to make health policy judgments."

"As a result of the court's decision," the petition said, "the commission's future ability to regulate on the basis of what it deems to be the best available scientific evidence is jeopardized."

While the commission's appeal is pending, the installation of the insulation — commonly called UFFI — in homes and schools will remain illegal.

UFFI is an insulating material that is manufactured on site and pumped into walls of homes and buildings. The commission banned installation of the substance in homes and schools last summer after finding that it increased the risk of cancer and respiratory ailments.

In an April 7 decision, the appeals court said the commission used faulty evidence to reach that conclusion and that it should have followed a stricter — and much lengthier — fact-finding procedure before issuing the ban.

Playgirl magazine celebrates 10th anniversary

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — When Ira E. Ritter dreamed up the idea of Playgirl magazine 10 years ago, skeptics wondered how many women really wanted to look at pictures of nude men.

The answer was plenty, and the response has made Ritter rich. Today, 750,000 monthly readers buy Playgirl's trendy blend of advice, fashions, interviews, erotic fiction and of course, men — slim, sensuous, gorgeous men in every stage of full-color undress.

"No one could understand that women would want to look at nude men," Ritter said Thursday, one day before the magazine's 10th anniversary issue hit the newsstands.

"I did believe I had one of the most misunderstood magazines in this country," the publisher recalled in a telephone interview from New York. "People would say to me, 'Who is this magazine for?'

"But the people sitting across the desk from me, the people in marketing and distribution, were all men, and men have been brought up in certain ways because they have mothers."

Ritter — at 34, a mustachioed blond with a disarming grin — apparently suffered no such misgivings.

He built Ritter-Geller Communications, based in Santa Monica, into a corporate gold mine that yielded $35 million in gross revenue last year for books and calendars, TV productions, a mail-order fashion subsidiary and the magazines Couples and Slimmer.

But at $2.95 a copy, Playgirl leads the moneymakers with $15 million in pretax profit last year. Ritter said the magazine does it by "telling women they can be what they want to be."

"Our direction is telling women, 'If you're a secretary, here's how you can be a lawyer, but if you're a housewife and happy, that's OK too.' We give women more self-confidence.

"Women once were told they went to school for a Mrs. degree," Ritter observed, "But in the '60s there was an awakening, an awareness that they were able to be what they want without limitations. Playgirl was a leader in that change — and we created a lot of uneasiness."

The current issue may provoke more discomfort over centerfold David Van Brunt, 25, of New York. His pictorial is the magazine's first to show sexual arousal.

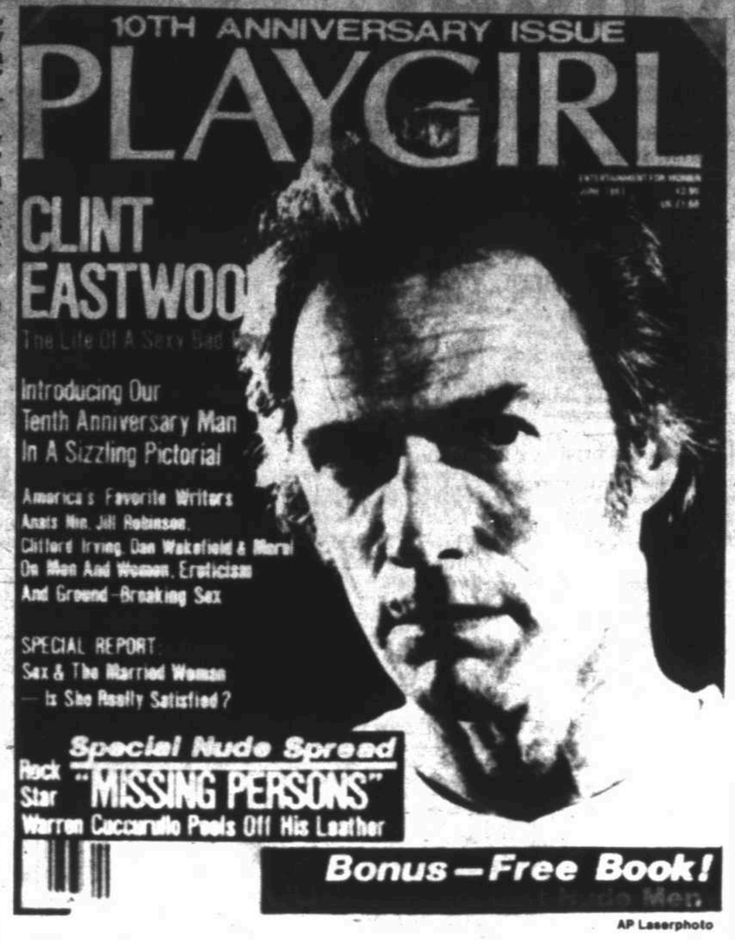

"We wanted this 10-year anniversary issue to have something special, different," Ritter explained. "We got all sorts of letters asking for what you see in the June issue.

"Will it be a regular feature now? I don't know," he said. "I tend to do things in good taste, to keep it high-class despite itself."

What will continue are the celebrity interviews (this month's star is 1982 Best Supporting Actress Jessica Lange); cover story profiles (Clint Eastwood at 53 in this issue); tips on music, diet and beauty; a horoscope column; short stories by readers sharing erotic fantasies and a sex-advice column.

This month, a wife inquires if she must cater to her husband's bondage fantasies (the advice: compromise is crucial), a reader asks how to avoid pain (see a gynecologist) and another wonders if exhibitionism is sick (not if no one gets hurt).

Also highlighted is an excerpt from an upcoming book by Playgirl Press and Simon & Schuster, "Sex and the Married Woman," a national survey of 1,207 married women.

Duke professor takes practice to Bolivia

ANCORAIMES, Bolivia (AP) — Dr. Henry Perry left a comfortable career as a Duke University surgeon and medical instructor to serve as "country doctor" in the harsh environment of Bolivia's highland peasants.

Perry is founder and director of the Andean Rural Health Project, a low-cost effort to spread preventative medicine among 200,000 Indians in isolated villages and farms of the cold, arid altiplano 14,000 feet above sea level.

The stark beauty of the region, north of La Paz, conceals the poverty of a rural society in which 80 percent of all deaths are from diarrhea, respiratory ailments and other preventable diseases. Perry estimates 30 percent to 40 percent of the children there die before they are old enough for school.

"More children die before the age of 5 in Bolivia than in any other place in the Western Hemisphere," the 38-year-old doctor said as he drove his jeep on the narrow, pot-holed road around Lake Titcaca to visit a patient.

"Our goal is to see a significant drop in infant mortality in the next three years," he added. "To do so, we have not come to impose our values, but to work together with the people of the region."

The project — sponsored by Duke, the Bolivian Methodist Church and the Bolivian government — represents a new approach to medical missionary work in this South American country, where previous aid programs gave priority to costly hospital construction.

"There are eight hospitals in the area we serve," Perry said. "But for many people the hospital is a last recourse and a place where you go to die."

Eastern travelers recount 10 minutes of panic, fear

MIAMI (AP) — As the pilot warned that "ditching is imminent," 162 frightened passengers on a jumbo jet screamed, prayed and scrambled for life jackets in 10 minutes of terror before an engine restarted only 2,800 feet above the Atlantic.

"It was a miracle," one passenger scribbled on the back of an air-sickness bag, describing the seemingly endless minutes it took Thursday to restart one engine of Eastern Airlines Flight 855 — restoring just enough power for the Lockheed L-1011 to reach Miami.

"It's like God turned that one flaming engine back on for a few minutes, just enough time to land," wrote free-lance writer Sandy Dix, of Bay Harbor Islands, Fla., who said she could see smoke coming from one engine.

"Everyone was prepared to ditch, we all had our life belts on," she said. "A few were screaming. All of a sudden the pilot said: 'We have an engine, we're trying to land.'"

The flight to Nassau took off from Miami International Airport at 8:56 a.m. with 162 passengers and a crew of 10.

Half an hour later, pilot Richard Boddy shut off the tail engine when its oil pressure dropped too low, Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock said.

Almost simultaneously, oil pressure dropped dangerously in the two wing engines and Boddy decided to turn back to Miami. Moments after the turnaround, both engines failed.

Airline officials said later the engines failed because small doughnut-shaped rubber oil seals which are removed during maintenance had not been reinstalled.

"First we were told we were flying back to Miami because of mechanical failure," said Mrs. Dix, who was traveling to Paradise Island for a vacation with her husband, Gary, and their two children, ages 11 and 5.

"All of a sudden, the pilot announced: 'Stewardesses, all come forward.' That made me realize that something was rotten in the state of Denmark."

Retired sculptor carves special memories in wood

STRASBURG, Pa. (AP) — A small pony peers out the front porch window of a rural Strasburg home.

Only two of the pony's legs are attached to his pine body, and his mane and tail are missing, but its form is unmistakably that of a small pony.

This lifesize animal is the creation of 87-year-old John Andrews. A self-taught woodcarver, he estimates that by the time the pony is finished, he will have worked on it for three months.

This animal is Andrews' largest undertaking, but not his first. He first started fiddling around with wood after he retired in 1967.

Before his retirement, Andrews and woodcarving were strangers. But before long he was most comfortable with his new hobby. Through carving, he found he could connect the present with the past by recreating special memories with wood.

"I started with a horse-drawn team," Andrews said. "I was born on a farm, and I knew how they looked."

Andrews transformed this fond memory into a small, wooden replica of a wagon pulled by a team of horses. In his creations he leaves no detail to the imagination. Everything from the tiny driver's overalls to the wagon's braces is intricately carved and painted.

This wagon is just one of a number of other carvings that sit on Andrews' front porch. Though his cabinet is filled with a few dozen inanimate objects, the shelves seem to be filled with life, action and more history than a schoolchild's textbook.

A small, red trolley car is parked next to the wagon. This tiny replica is a reminder of the real trolleys that served much of Lancaster County in the early years of this century. "Lancaster City Street Railway" appears along the car's side.

"Do you know where those letters come from?" asked Andrews. "They are alphabet soup letters. I dry them, shellac them and they work quite nicely."

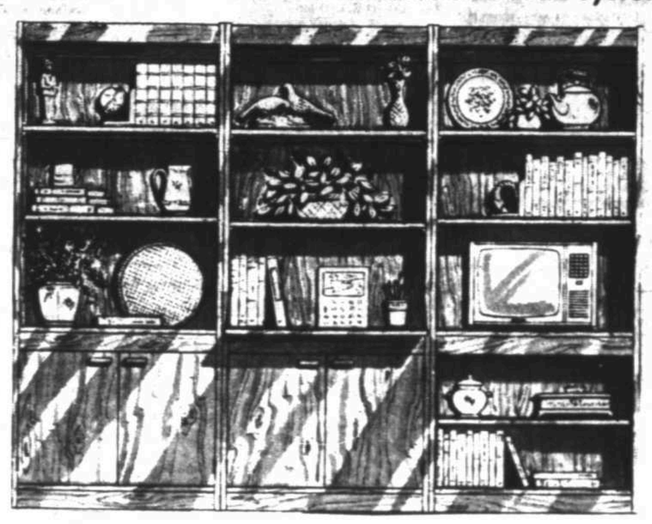

Two horse-drawn sleighs fill space on the shelf above the trolley. The horses' muscles are tight and flexed as they pull the heavy sleighs.

LOOKING FOR GOD

Some say you find God just as well in a garden, in the woods, or on a golf course as in a church — that God is everywhere. But be honest about it.

Are you not more apt to think of weeds, or mosquitoes, or a poor shot than you are of God? And after all, you have made this outing to seek pleasure.

But when you go to church, it is with the specific intention of worshipping. Here you engage in prayer, praise and thanksgiving. Here you mingle with people who are seeking God and have come to feel His presence. In the quiet beauty of a sanctuary you find few outside distractions, and you know that this place is dedicated to the service of God.

For peace and happiness which comes from really feeling God's presence, worship in the house of the Lord this week — make it a regular practice.

The three choirs from the church will join in the singing — children, young adult and adult. Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Cliff Blackburn, assisted by the Rev. Frank Beazley and the Rev. Joe Kennelly.

A parish picnic on the grounds at Chaparral Center will follow the religious service. Each family is asked to bring a picnic lunch. Games and various types of recreation will be provided.

Revivaltime Choir to perform here

Cyril McLellan

The Revivaltime Choir, radio choir of the Assemblies of God, will be singing at Midland's First Assembly of God Church, 100 W. Wadley Ave., at 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Revivaltime" is the international radio broadcast of the Assemblies of God. Currently released over nearly 600 U.S. and foreign stations, the program originates from "Revivaltime" headquarters in Springfield, Mo., and features the Revivaltime Choir on each broadcast.

Under the leadership of Cyril McLellan, members of the 40-voice choir are selected and trained each year from the student bodies of Central Bible College and Evangel College, Assemblies of God schools, located in Springfield.

Since McLellan became the choir's director in 1952, the choir has produced 23 albums and 17 books of his special arrangements. The choir presents a variety of contemporary songs and traditional hymns in an effort to minister to a varied audience.

The church's minister, the Rev. Raymond Schaeffer, invites the public to attend.

Japan's abortion law attacked

TOKYO (AP) — An unorthodox religious group that mixes imported Christian morality with Shinto nationalism has mounted a powerful attack on Japan's liberal abortion law.

While many Japanese are disturbed by a high abortion rate and welcome a tightening of the law, some alarmed feminists claim the anti-abortion movement seeks a return to Japanese authoritarianism.

In a massive campaign declaring "respect for life," Seicho-no-ie (literally "House of Growth") has lobbied intensively to revise the Eugenic Protection Act, a 1948 law that bans "feticide" but has a gaping loophole that makes abortion virtually unrestricted in Japan.

The law allows for abortions through the 23rd week of pregnancy under several conditions, most controversial of which is that the mother's health would be endangered because of "economic reasons" if the pregnancy was continued.

Government statistics show that in 1981, the last year for which figures are available, 597,000 abortions were reported, compared to 1.5 million births. Although the number of abortions has been steadily dropping since it peaked at 1.2 million in 1955, pro-life advocates say the figure is much too high. Many more abortions go unreported, they claim.

More than 99 percent of the reported abortions were performed legally under the "economic reasons" exemption, which opponents say is no longer a valid excuse in a modern affluent society.

"These are shadow abortions, illegal on their face," said Tetsuo Ito of Seicho-no-ie's political department. "The 'economic reasons' clause is clearly being abused."

Ito said Seicho-no-ie has gathered more than seven million signatures in a nationwide campaign for revision of the law.

The Health and Welfare Ministry, under pressure by conservative politicians allied with Seicho-no-ie, has drafted proposed legislation about it, but opponents have forced the bill into a subcommittee for study.

"I'm terrified of what will happen," says Chinatsu Nakayama, 33, an actress turned politician who holds a seat in the Upper House of the Diet (parliament). An independent, she is one of 17 women in the 775-seat Diet, which is dominated by the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP).

Despite its name, the LDP is a conservative party that observers say has moved further to the right with the rise to power last November of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Seicho-no-ie was originally founded as a publishing concern in 1930 by Masaharu Taniguchi, an eclectic spiritualist and prolific author of religious tracts.

During and before World War II, Japan's era of militarism, Taniguchi lent his formidable talents as a propagandist to the dissemination of neo-Shinto myths, focusing on emperor worship propagated by the government, according to religious scholars.

Now, 37 years after the war, Seicho-no-ie claims three million followers, mostly subscribers to its six monthly magazines. Its teachings mix elements of Christian, Buddhist and Shinto religions and emphasize "man's filial relationship with the divine."

Seicho-no-ie also has identified itself with several rightwing causes, including repeal of Japan's U.S.-inspired postwar constitution, a document that grants the Japanese a range of previously unknown civil rights and restricts the military to a defensive role.

Tomono Maeda, spokeswoman for a coalition of feminists who call themselves the Japanese Group for Abortion Rights, claims there is sinister intent behind the Seicho-no-ie's most celebrated cause — the unborn's right to life.

"Seicho-no-ie talks about saving human life," Ms. Maeda said, "but it really believes that human beings are "tamashi" (spirits) whose only reason for existence is to support the Emperor, the pillar who upholds the nation." Tamashi, she contends, make excellent soldiers.

THE CASE OF THE UNFINISHED FUNERAL
Jesus went with His disciples to the village of Nain, with the usual great crowds at His heels.
A funeral procession was coming out as He approached the village gate. The boy who had died was the only son of his widowed mother, and many mourners from the village were with her.
When the Lord saw her, His heart overflowed with sympathy. "Don't cry!" He said.
Then He walked over to the coffin and touched it, and thebearers stopped. "Laddie, He said, "come back to life again."
Then the boy sat up and began to talk to those around him! And Jesus gave him back to his mother.
A great fear swept the crowd, and they exclaimed with praises to God, "A mighty prophet has arisen among us," and "We have seen the hand of God at work today."
The report of what He did that day raced from end to end of Judea and even out across the borders.
The disciples of John the Baptist soon heard of all that Jesus was doing. When they told John about it, he sent two of his disciples to Jesus to ask Him, "Are You really the Messiah? Or shall we keep on looking for Him?"
The two diciples found Jesus while He was curing many sick people of their various diseases--healing the lame and the blind and casting out evil spirits. When they asked Him John's question, this was His reply: "Go back to John and tell him all you have seen and heard here today: how those who were blind can see! The lame are walking without a limp! The lepers are completely healed! the deaf can hear again! The dead come back to life! And the poor are hearing the Good News!
"And tell him, 'Blessed is the one who does not lose faith in Me'".

Church may have to pay tax

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — A staff report by the California's Board of Equalization has recommended that Rev. Robert Schuller's Crystal Cathedral, a world-renowned evangelical church, lose its tax-exempt status and pay hundreds of thousands of dollars in back taxes.

The report says the all-glass building in Garden Grove has been used for numerous profit-making concerts and is the base of the Performing Arts Council, a committee which presented several concerts at the church.

Ernest Dronenburg,state equalization board member in whose district the cathedral lies, said 75 percent to 80 percent of the cathedral's basement was apportioned to performing arts council and that the church tried to include the organization under the umbrella of its religious activities.

Dronenburg said the church can appeal the decision.

Church's minister true man of the cloth

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Fabric can be put to many uses, but few people would think of using cloth for a church roof.

Architect Gene Zellmer says his design for the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church in Fresno has produced the only fabric-covered church in the Western Hemisphere.

"For the first time since the Middle Ages when the great cathedrals were built in Europe, it is possible to economically construct a church of an impressive scale, one that conveys an emotionally uplifting religious experience," he said.

Unlike a tent, the sturdy roof is strong enough for a truck to drive over it, the designer said.

A crane was needed to drape two layers of Teflon-coated fiberglass over three curved wooden beams that join 56 feet in the air.

From the street, the structure looks as if it's all roof because earthen berms were pushed around 10-foot-high concrete walls to hide the foundation. The sweep of the curving walls is enhanced by a 29-foot-tall cross atop the church.

Inside, oak pews form a semicircle around an altar that is recessed in one of the corners of the triangular floor. The church can seat 300 people.

Sunlight filtering through the seamed roof softly illuminates the church, and the white material reflects up to 87 percent of the sun's heat outward.

The new church connects to an older meeting hall.

The fabric design was less expensive to build than a conventional roof, Zellmer said. Construction materials cost less, and a less elaborate foundation was needed to support the lightweight material.

Labor costs also were low because the roof was shipped fully assembled.

Reagan avoids theological debate

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Debating theology with clergymen is a sure way to lose, and the administration is extending that guideline in response to the denunciation of nuclear weapons — and major elements of U.S. nuclear strategy — by Roman Catholic bishops.

President Reagan and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger avoided discussing details of the long-debated pastoral letter adopted on Tuesday by leaders of the 51 million American Catholics.

Instead, they kept their comments broad enough to suggest that the view of the bishops and the policies of the administration really are not that much at odds.

That is pretty broad.

Reagan said he hadn't read the 45,000-word statement the bishops adopted in Chicago, but from what he'd seen, there were many points with which the administration would have no quarrel.

But it doesn't take a line-by-line reading to see some major differences.

The bishops condemned first use of nuclear weapons on any scale. The use of tactical nuclear weapons is one of the options reserved by NATO as a possible response to an overwhelming conventional attack on Western Europe.

THE LETTER challenged the use of nuclear weapons even in retaliation to an attack on American cities. "Retaliatory action which would indiscriminately take many wholly innocent lives, lives of people who are in no way responsible for the reckless actions of their government, must be condemned," the letter says. Credible retaliatory power is at the heart of the policy of nuclear deterrence.

The bishops called for immediate, verifiable agreements to halt the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons — a version of the nuclear freeze to which Reagan is firmly opposed.

The president didn't go into those points. He accentuated the positive:

"They're not saying anything we don't say, that God forbid those weapons should ever be used."

"...What I'm saying is that I think their purpose is the same as ours," Reagan told interviewers. "They're looking for a way toward peace and promoting world peace, and that's what we're also looking for."

WEINBERGER SAID he didn't think the bishops intended to undercut U.S. deterrrent policy. "If we were to end deterrence and erode it by statements that we would in effect never use or dismantle all of our strategic systems, that I think would encourage the Soviets, and I don't think that's really the thrust of their letter."

A State Department spokesman did dispute the bishop's call for a halt in nuclear weapons production and deployment, Alan Romberg saying that instead, the objective should be "deep reductions...promoting a stable military balance at lower levels of arms."

On April 5, after a drafting committee of bishops had toned down the proposed wording of the letter to call for a curb in the arms race instead of the halt the final draft advocates, Romberg said the change was an improvement in keeping with many of the administrations' objectives.

He said then that to call for a halt would be to support the freeze the administration opposes as dangerous to U.S. security and potentially crippling to American arms control negotiators.

REAGAN SAID on Tuesday that there was too much emphasis on the change in wording. He suggested that the difference between "curb" and "halt" was not all that important. "We've had some indications that, in reality, there are many things in there that we'll have no quarrel with at all."

But two months ago, in another religious forum, Reagan took a harsher line on nuclear weaponry. Addressing Protestant evangelical leaders in Orlando, Fla., the president said:

"I ask you to resist the attempts of those who would have you withhold your support for this administration's efforts to keep America strong and free, while we negotiate real and verifiable reductions in the world's nuclear weaponry and one day with God's help, their total elimination."

Wright replica takes off

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A replica of a Wright Brothers military plane lifted off the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base runway and flew 22 miles in its longest test flit.

The Wright B. Military Flyer was flown earlier this week to its new testing site at Daton General Airport as its two pilots sat in front with no protection from the elements — just like pilots of the original 1911 plane.

"I expected it to be cold, so I dressed with three layers of clothes," said John H. Warlick, chairman of the board of the Wright B. Flyer project.

Warlick, an ex-Navy pilot, has been flying for 41 years. His co-pilot, W.A. Sloan, who is retired from the Air Force, is the chief flight instructor at Wright-Patterson Aero Club and has been flying 42 years.

The aluminum and steel craft, built with donations over seven years, is modeled after the wood and canvas plane built by Orville and Wilbur Wright. That craft was the world's first military production airplane.

The flight was the first by the replica to a new destination. On Nov. 27, Warlick and Sloan flew the plane around the Wright-Patterson base on a 7½-minute test flight.

Construction of the plane began in 1976 as part of the nation'a Bicentennial celebration, and the work has been done by volunteers at the base.

Sloan said dimensions of the new plane are identical to those of the original, but the materials are stronger. Instrumentation was installed to meet Federal Aviation Administration requirements.

Dogcatcher impounds own dogs

COBURG, Ore. (AP) — When a man complained about two large stray dogs in his garage, acting dog catcher Robert Rathsack showed up right away — to find his own pets were the culprits.

"We have a 5-foot fence in our yard, but one dog dug a hole and they both got out in the early morning," Rathsack explained after his embarrassing discovery earlier this week.

At least he got a friendlier reception than most officials of his breed. When the dogs saw Rathsack, they jumped into his truck and were quickly impounded — back home.

American employers now pay more than $1.2 trillion annually in wages and salaries, plus more than $250 billion as their share of the cost of Social Security, unemployment insurance, hospital insurance, retirement income and other direct benefits for employees.

Retired carpenters crisscross state turning churches' dreams into reality

AP Laserphoto

The Texas Baptist Men, a group of retired carpenters who furnish free labor to build churches that would be otherwise unaffordable to small congregations, work on the First Baptist Church in Flat, Texas.

FLAT, Texas (AP) — With callous hands and faces cracked and dry from many days of toil under the sun, they come to make dreams reality.

Traveling in trailers and campers, they resurrect the once-extinct barn-raising parties of the 1800s and leave a wake of smiles, good will and fellowship.

The Texas Baptist Men, a group of retired carpenters, furnish free labor to build churches that would be unaffordable to small congregations.

Under the leadership of Olen Miles, 76, the founder of the 5-year-old group, the men are working on two projects in Central Texas — the First Baptist Church of Flat and a dormitory for Christian Farms Inc., a drug and alcohol rehabilitation facility near Killeen.

The Rev. Dave Johnson, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Flat, said the men are "a great testimony" to active retirement and to their Lord.

"These are the best years of their lives for most of these men," Johnson said. "All this comes out of the kindness of their hearts. They help little churches like us who couldn't afford to build otherwise."

The materials needed to build the Flat church cost $100,000, Johnson said, but the price of the building would be doubled without the free labor.

Johnson, 23, managed to keep up with the retirees as they lifted support trusses atop the 4,900-square-foot church, scheduled for early May completion.

"I'm no carpenter, but I'm out here to lend a hand," Johnson said. "I'm trying to encourage some of our retired members to go with these fellows when they leave. I would hate to lose them, but this is the way they should spend their retirement years."

The men spend up to three weeks at some jobs. Their only pay is a space to park their trailers, a large noontime meal provided each day by members of the church, and an opportunity to hold a revival before the completion of the church.

Former Temple soil conservationist Bud Robeson, sporting a multicolored beach cap, said he and the other 16 men constructing the Flat church "all want to keep on going."

"Our plan is to go from now on, but you never know," Robeson said with a wink. "The good Lord can change all that right quick."

The men's wives, Robeson said, are an "integral part of the job" because they leave their homes for weeks at a time on the long trips.

"We wouldn't go out and do this if it wasn't for them," Robeson said. "Sometimes it's harder on them because they have to stay in the trailers so much."

Robeson said the 85-man group built 10 churches in Texas last year. The Flat church was their sixth of 1983.

"We're such a close-knit unit, we're just like a big happy family," Robeson said. "When we get through with a church, we're all wanting to start a new job."

LULAC head: Hands which pick cotton may pick president

AUSTIN (AP) — The national president of the League of United Latin-American Citizens cautioned Texas legislators to remember that the hands that pick cotton today may pick a U.S. president in the future.

Tony Bonilla spoke to a joint session of House and Senate earlier this week.

"As Hispanics we spend in excess of $100 billion a year as consumers today," Bonilla said. "The blacks take home $157 billion. Together blacks and Hispanics represent a quarter of a trillion dollar industry in this country.

"Together blacks and Hispanics represent 23 million voters.

"That's why some of us who are active in the political activities across this country may suggest that the hand that picks the cotton and fruits and vegetables will some day be picking the president of the United States," Bonilla said.

He pointed out that when he served as a state representative from Corpus Christi in 1965 there were only seven Hispanic represenatives and no senators. Now there are 24 Hispanics in the House and four in the Senate.

"That reflects how far the Hispanics have come in this state," he said.

"We know your task is difficult and we want you to be assured the Hispanic community is willing to work with you.

'Money' stashed in sewer

AUSTIN (AP) — Some teenagers have found out the hard way that money doesn't grow on trees — or in storm sewers.

The case began when several businesses in the area near Lanier High School in north Austin recently reported that bogus $5 bills were turning up, police said

Three students were arrested last week after several teen-agers passed phony bills at a convenience store, Lt. C.E. Johnson said earlier this week.

The students apparently found a batch of the counterfeit bills in a storm sewer, Johnson said.

"We found some of them had been crawling in some concrete tunnels off Peyton Gin Road and found a bunch of wet bogus bills in the storm sewers,' Jordan said.

Police recovered 53 of the phony bills and found that eight teenagers were involved in trying to pass the currency, said Jordan.

"They all later admitted that they thought the bills were bogus but said they decided to try to pass them anyway," Jordan said.

The students voluntarily returned the bills and authorities decided not to press charges, police said.

The counterfeiter apparently wasn't well versed in the art of getting rich quick, either. The bills were of poor quality and had the same serial number, Jordan said.

The Secret Service is trying to find out how the phony money wound up in the sewer, police said.

'Birdbrain' refuses to squawk

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — The suspect won't talk, but Oregon State Police say that won't stop them in the case of the jaywalking parrot.

The large-beaked, red-headed, green-feathered bird is in custody in the troopers' office here, Lt. John Hall said earlier this week.

Sgt. Bennett Miller and Trooper Lee Jincks spotted the strutting 10-inch bird last week as the parrot crossed a street — not even at an intersection.

"We jumped out and surrounded it, and then we threw a hat over it," Miller said, adding that he pulled rank in that decision — it was Jinck's hat.

The parrot was taken to the troopers' office.

Authorities are trying to locate the owner.

U.S. Marines at Guantanamo Bay ready to fight

But military might poor weapon against region's revolutions

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

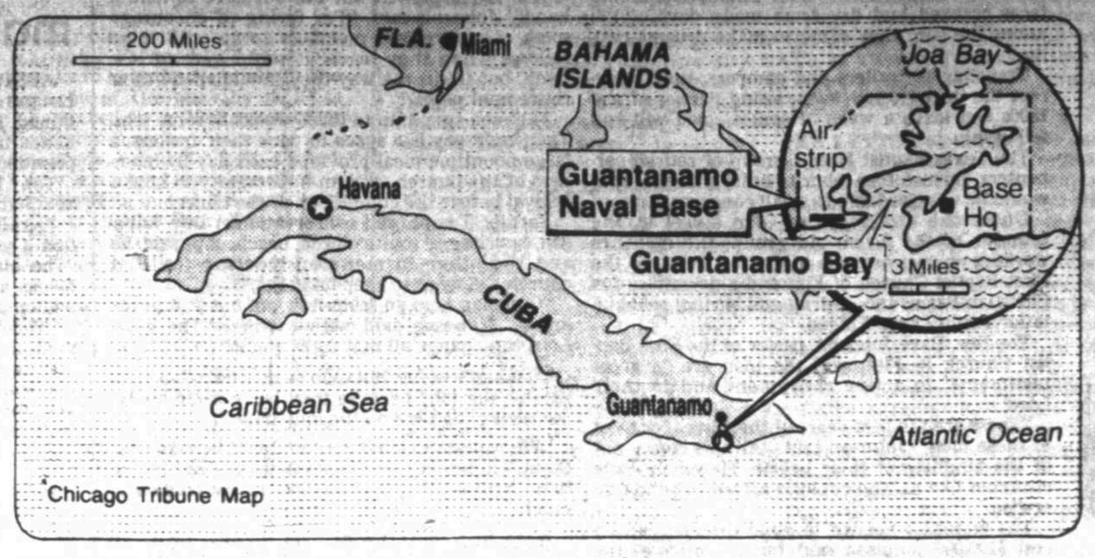

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba — An ear-splitting siren rends the tropical calm. A loudspeaker blares "General quarters! General quarters!" and the whitewashed buildings erupt with Marines sprinting for weapons lockers and ammunition stores. A crew-cut young lifeguard, moments ago lazily eyeing children splashing in the base swimming pool, frantically pulls on fatigues and flak jacket.

Tanks grind out of hiding, clips are jammed into carbines, howitzer shells are uncrated and trucks carrying combat-ready Marines dash for the base's outer defenses.

Although this is only an exercise, Guantanamo is ready to fight.

In another display of American fighting capabilities, the U.S. Navy recently marshaled 77 ships and 400 aircraft for combat exercises off Puerto Rico, an impressive demonstration of coordinated long-range aircraft strikes, "smart"-missile attacks and other high-technology maneuvers.

But the Guantanamo Marines and the Navy's armada illustrate a frustrating paradox for the Reagan administration: The United States can deploy an awesome array of military might in the Caribbean, yet guerrilla wars and insurgent movements flourish in a half dozen countries of the region.

Chicago Tribune Map

AS SOME U.S. commanders in the area concede with surprising bluntness, American military might has proved to be a relatively ineffective weapon against what the administration sees as communist-dominated, Cuban-directed revolutions that endanger America's vital interests.

Although the administration plans to increase its military presence in the Caribbean — strengthening Guantanamo and the Navy's Caribbean presence, it is increasingly apparent that the region's diverse problems do not lend themselves to military solutions — at least not overt ones.

"You don't stop a subversive movement by having a naval exercise off Puerto Rico," Commodore Diego E. Hernandez, commander of U.S. Naval Forces, Caribbean, said in a recent interview.

Hernandez does not dispute the threat posed to U.S. security by Marxist revolution in the region. The specter of successive revolutions spreading north to Mexico, he said, "chills my bones." But he believes that revolutions are bred by social and economic issues and thus cannot be countered with military power.

"WE NEED TO address those problems while there is still time," Hernandez said. "When it gets to actual revolution, it's too late. The question is: Does the United States have enough interest in the region to provide solutions to these social, political and economic problems?"

In Washington, more than a thousand miles away, the answer to Hernandez's question is unclear. President Reagan's proposal for dealing with the region's socioeconomic difficulties, the Caribbean Basin Initiative, has faced hard times.

And Congress has approved only one part of the initiative: $350 million in emergency economic assistance. Proposals for trade preferences and investment incentives died in Congress last year.

Last month, Reagan proposed an additional $298 million for Latin America and the Caribbean, of which $110 million is for military aid to El Salvador and $20 million for military aid for Honduras and Costa Rica and for Panama Canal security.

At the same time, the administration has involved itself in covert military initiatives designed to put pressure on the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua and to curb the spread of subversive movements elsewhere in the region. But alarm in Congress over such U.S. intervention may lead to cutbacks in the administration's aid requests.

SUCH CONSIDERATIONS seem far away from the heat and humidity of Guantanamo.

As the Marines begin drifting back from their hilltop bunkers and their foxholes near the mine fields along the perimeter, the response from the other side — from the Cuban guards stationed in the sere hills nearby and from the Soviet-built Cuban military machine and the Soviet combat brigade somewhere out there under an azure sky — is what one disgusted Marine calls "a big, fat zero."

Although Marxist Cuba is considered by the administration to be the Soviet Union's foothold in the Western Hemisphere as well as the birthplace of regional subversion, nobody here has ever seen a Russian, or even a Cuban, close up, except for the dwindling number of old Cuban employees who come through the gates to work each morning.

And, except for an occasional Aeroflot passenger plane, nobody here has sighted any evidence of the Soviet military buildup.

Indeed, since women and children were evacuated from Guantanamo during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 (they all came back a few weeks later), the most significant military problem here occurred about a decade ago, when Cuban guards began lofting stones over the barbed wire onto the tin roof of one of the Marine observation posts.

THAT, THE Marines explain, is why a wire mesh backstop of major league proportions was erected just behind the observation post at the base's northeast gate. The harassment stoning has stopped.

If the Communist forces in Cuba are largely invisible and the revolutions of Central America seem beyond the reach of Navy and Marine firepower, military commanders here are still confident that they have an important role to play.

But, even if there is no direct strategic result of the U.S. military presence in the Caribbean, Hernandez argues that the United States does benefit in a vague way, that it cannot afford not to be here.

Hernandez readily concedes that Cuba is unlikely to unilaterally attack the base here or even to use its Soviet-supplied submarines against U.S. and allied shipping — an often-expressed Navy nightmare — unless world war breaks out. And, in the event of a world war, he suggested that U.S. Navy units in the Caribbean might well be shifted to fight in more important theaters.

Still, he said, his forces are a valuable influence in the region.

With an increasing Soviet naval presence in the region and subversive movements threatening friendly governments, the Navy must "create the perception in these governments that we are going their way. Demonstrating our ability to respond in a crisis has a very reassuring effect."
