Murder by numbers

SANTIAGO, Chile — President Patricio Aylwin disclosed Monday that 2,115 political killings have been documented under Gen. Augusto Pinochet's rule and asked Chileans to make sure "something like this never happens again." The president said efforts will continue to find out what happened to hundreds of people who disappeared after being arrested. Aylwin appeared on radio and TV to make public a report on human rights violations during Pinochet's 16½-year reign.

A proposal to expand Medicare home health care and nursing home care was rejected as too costly Monday by the Bush administration. Jeffrey G. Sanders, director of the Health Care Financing Administration's office of legislation and policy, said the proposal by Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., could cost $1.2 billion a year. Stark's bill would allow home health care services to be covered by Medicare for up to seven days a week for 38 days. Currently, Medicare will cover only "intermittent care" — not more than three days in a week — for up to 21 days.

Pill poison

Cyanide, the poison found in tainted Sudafed 12-hour capsules, is the perfect poison and capsules are the easiest type of pills to tamper with, according to medical experts. One death and one serious illness in Washington state have been linked to the poisoned capsules, said Susan Hutchcroft, a spokesperson for the Food and Drug Administration. Another death thought to be linked to the drug is under investigation. Burroughs Wellcome, the maker of the drug, issued a nationwide recall Sunday of the cold remedy.

No peace

WASHINGTON — The end of the gulf war hardly means the world is at peace. Depending on how and what you count, there are more than two dozen conflicts going on, from Afghanistan to Mozambique to the luckless Kurds still fighting for a country of their own in the Middle East. Groups of people on four continents are still trying to kill each other — or arguing vehemently — over religious and ethnic differences, for political one-upmanship or territory, or simply because, after years of it, war has become a way of life.

Violence rocks Iraq

Fierce anti-Saddam fighting erupts

■ Reports indicate that defeated soldiers have joined Shiite fundamentalists in effort to bring down the government.

N.Y. Times News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Fierce fighting raged between supporters and enemies of President Saddam Hussein in Basra and up to a dozen other cities in southern Iraq on Monday, rebel leaders and American officials said. It was the worst civil unrest of Saddam's long rule.

Reports reaching other countries in the region, including Iran, Syria, and Kuwait, said that defeated soldiers streaming north from the battlefields of the Persian Gulf war have joined Shiite fundamentalists, long opposed to Saddam, in an effort to bring down his government.

Troops from the Republican Guard were said to be backing the Iraqi leader, turning their remaining heavy tanks and big artillery pieces on the protesters.

Iran's official news agency said that the mayor of Basra, the second largest city in Iraq, had died in a pitched battle there, along with a provincial governor and Saddam's oldest son, Udai.

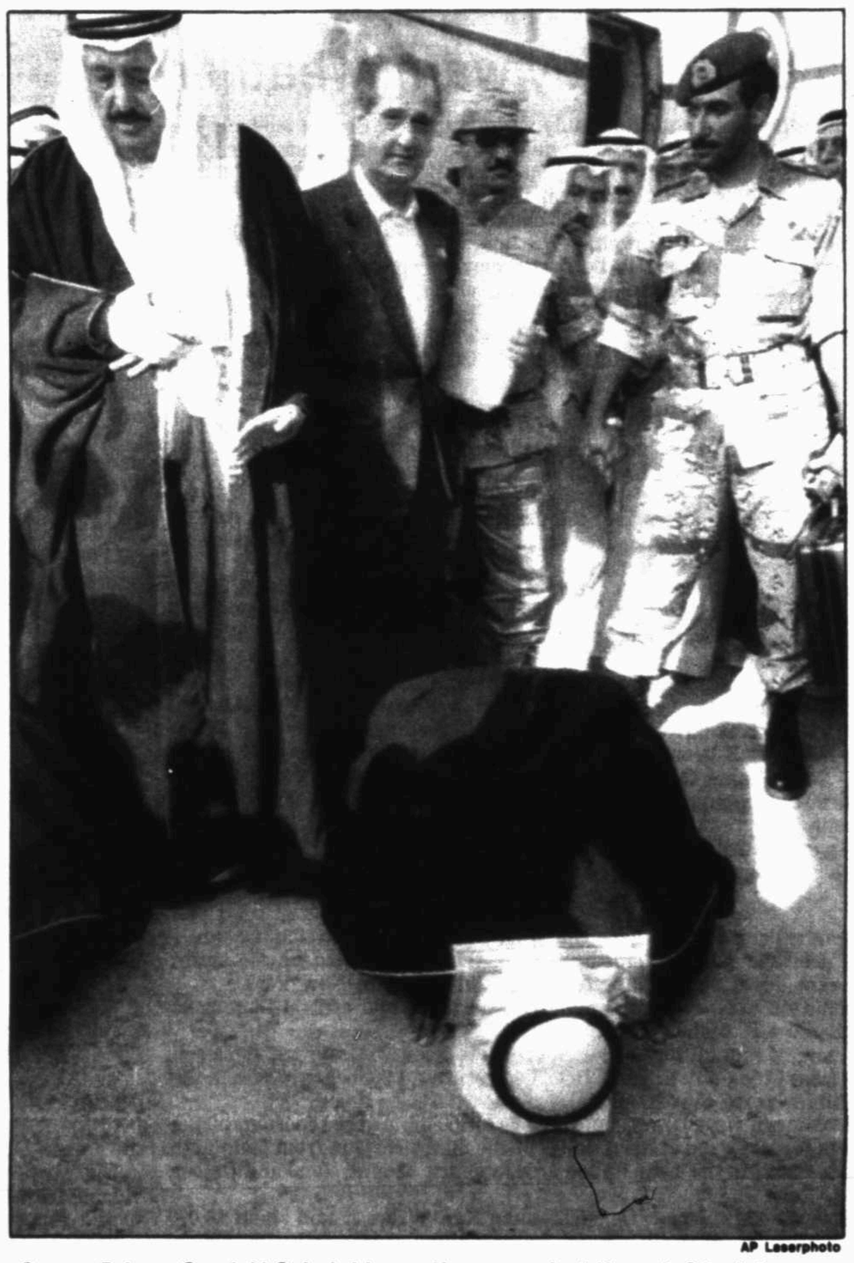

Mahar Hakawati, a Jordanian photographer who arrived in Kuwait City from Basra, said he saw Republican Guard tanks moving through the streets of Basra. He said the guard forces were "destroying everything in front of them," knocking down buildings because people shouted from them.

For the second straight day, men armed with rifles seized from police stations were said to be riddling the ubiquitous portraits of Saddam in Basra and elsewhere.

At a briefing in Washington, Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, the Pentagon operations chief, said that American reconnaissance planes had taken pictures showing buildings and vehicles on fire, checkpoints set up by soldiers within cities, and T-55 and T-72 tanks, "not necessarily on the same side."

He said that calling the situation a civil

Families joyful as allied POWs fly to freedom

The horrifying wartime image of American airmen held captive, their faces swollen and voices halting, was countered by celebration Monday after Iraq released the first allied prisoners of war.

"It's been rough, not knowing whether he's dead or alive," Jeanette Williams of Bessemer, Ala., said after her brother, Army Spc. David Lockett, and five other American POWs were freed in Baghdad.

"We are all just waiting to give him a hug," she said.

It was a joyful wait, one gladly accepted by relatives and friends who over the weeks were unsure whether they'd see their loved ones again. But

Parker vows to hold firm on school-finance issue

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Carl Parker, one of 10 members named to a Senate-House conference committee on education financing Monday, said he will stand firm on limiting the amount of local property taxes that school districts can raise without sharing the money with their property-tax poor neighbors.

Parker said he wants to solve the public-school financing problem for the long term, and the House bill would have the Legislature in the courts again in a few years after property-wealthy districts start raising taxes for local use.

Parker

The House bill, thanks to an amendment authored by Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, and presented by Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, is much more lenient that Parker's Senate bill on raising taxes for what is known as "unequalized enrichment."

High court refuses to cap punitive-damage awards

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Supreme Court rejected a constitutional attack on punitive damages on Monday, leaving juries with the broad discretion over damage awards that they have exercised since the earliest days of the American legal system.

The decision was a defeat for the insurance industry and other industry groups, which had hoped the court would set clear standards that would curb the growing number of multimillion-dollar verdicts in personal injury and product liability suits.

The 7-to-1 decision upheld a punitive damage award of $840,000 in an Alabama case growing out of an insurance fraud that deprived the victim of $3,800 in medical coverage.

Writing for the majority, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said that the constitutional requirement of due Football, foosball, air hockey, basketball, pool, ping-pong and an Atari game are just a few of the attractions awaiting restless youngsters at the club at 110 E. New Jersey.

Bill Shuey, the new executive director of the club, said activities this week will include indoor and outdoor sports, organized educational activities (including library visits and art projects) and several field trips to the movies.

City crime rate holds steady, report says

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

While aggravated assaults in Midland increased last year, burglaries decreased and the overall crime rate remained about the same as in 1989, according to a preliminary crime activity report.

In 1990, there were 772 aggravated assaults in the city, an almost 60 percent increase over the 484 assaults in 1989.

Because aggravated assaults are usually crimes of passion — often committed in the heat of anger — the ability to anticipate an increase or decrease is poor, said Cpl. Jim White of the Midland Police Department.

Patrol officers' ability to prevent the crime is limited, White said.

The percentage of assaults in which arrests have been made also increased in 1990.

That probably was due to more victims filing charges, said Lt. Earl Luckey, of the Crimes Against Persons division of

Fire at Colorado Springs home for elderly kills nine

COLORADO SPRINGS (NYT) — Shaken by Sunday's airline crash, this city awoke to learn that fire had swept through a home for the elderly early on Monday, killing nine people and injuring eight others.

The blaze at the Crystal Springs Estates home, the deadliest fire ever in Colorado Springs, stunned the already grief-stricken residents of this usually quiet city in the Rocky Mountain foothills.

"People in Colorado Springs are asking, 'Why?'" said the Rev. Ronald Crosley, co-pastor of New Hope church, next door to the burned building. "I don't have the answers. The reality is that life sometimes just is not fair. And there is a lot of grieving in this city today."

For some emergency workers, who had toiled both at the site of the plane crash that killed 25 people and at the home fire about a 20-minute drive away, it was a work day filled with nearly incomprehensible ghastliness.

After surveying the grisly site of the plane crash, the workers rushed to pull frightened, elderly people, some them still in their beds, away from the flames, which investigators said probably were started by an overheated furnace flue that ignited a wooden beam.

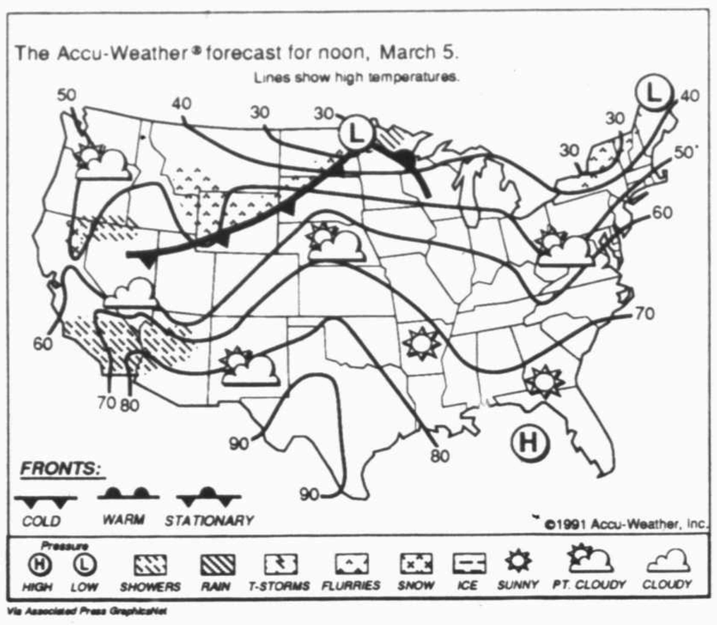

"Some of our people got a double dose of tragedy," said Ronald Culp, a captain with the Colorado Springs Fire Department. "But they're trained to focus on the job at hand, and to keep emotions at a distance." Officials said the plane disaster had not affected fire-fighting operations at the home.

A neighbor, Chris Hicks, had watched the dreadful scene. "You could see all those scared old people; my heart just broke," he said, his voice cracking. "These poor people are helpless anyway. And then to wake up to that kind of a nightmare ..."

Eight injured residents of the home were taken to hospitals here.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sit back, enjoy warm weather

The effects of an unseasonably warm southerly flow of air from the Gulf of Mexico will continue to be felt today as temperatures press the record high for today's date of 90, set in 1985, the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport reported.

Today's forecast is for partly cloudy skies, a high of 90 and gusty southwest winds 10-20 mph, NWS said.

Tonight is predicted to be partly cloudy with a low near 55.

Wednesday is predicted to be mostly cloudy with a high of 85, NWS said.

After an overnight low of 44, Monday's high was 83, compared to the record high for the date of 85, set in 1938. The record low for today's date is 11, set in 1989.

STATE

Mostly clear skies and summer-like temperatures were reported across Texas Monday, brought by a compression heating system that hovered over the state through Tuesday.

The warmer than normal temperatures were caused by strong low level west winds blowing from the higher terrain of West Texas onto lower elevations throughout the state.

Meanwhile, a weak high pressure system continued over South Texas while an area of low pressure to the west moved slowly eastward.

Temperatures warmed rapidly by afternoon, with a new record set in Austin of 89 degrees.

High clouds scattered over the Panhandle and South Plains as West Texas readings ranged from 72 degrees in Marfa to 85 at San Angelo.

North Texans felt warmer Monday with readings in the upper 70s to low 80s, with Killeen reporting the area's high of 87 degrees. The West and South Texas forecasts predicted highs today would reach the 80s and 90s, dropping to the 40s and 50s in the west, the 60s south by evening.

An even warmer day is in store for North Texas today and Wednesday with readings expected to hit the upper 80s.

NATION

A new Pacific storm gave the West Coast heavy rain Monday, while the previous storm dumped snow on the Rockies, and an ice storm brought down power lines from Ohio into upstate New York.

Rain fell over western Oregon and northern and central California, with snow at higher elevations.

Heaviest rainfall for the six hours up to noon CST was 1.22 inches at Crescent City, Calif. Eugene, Ore., had received 1.96 inches of rain in the 24 hours up to that time.

In western Nevada, wind gusts of 60 to 100 mph were reported during the night along the eastern slopes of the Sierra Nevada from Mammoth Lake, Calif., to the Lake Tahoe area, and also around Reno and Carson City, Nev.

Sierra Pacific Power Co. spokesman Karl Walquist said about 10,000 customers in Tahoe City, Calif., were without power and 2,000 people scattered around the Tahoe Basin also lost electricity early Monday.

The last storm that hit the West Coast was producing snow in the Rocky Mountain region Monday. Wind in northeastern Colorado gusted to 68 mph at Fort Collins early Monday.

A storm that was responsible for severe thunderstorms and tornadoes in the Southeast on Sunday moved up the East Coast during the night and on Monday produced rain and freezing rain from the upper Ohio Valley to the middle and northern Atlantic Coast.

Freezing rain coated roads, trees and power lines with a thick coat of ice from eastern Ohio to upstate New York, and over Maine.

REFUSES: Ruling a defeat for insurance industry process of law does apply to the awarding of punitive damages. He suggested that some awards might be so "extreme" as to violate due process.

But the court stopped well short of defining when such a constitutional limit might be reached. Referring to the jury, Blackmun said: "As long as the discretion is exercised within reasonable constraints, due process is satisfied."

Blackmun said the court "need not, and indeed we cannot, draw a mathematical bright line between the constitutionally acceptable and the constitutionally unacceptable that would fit every case."

His opinion, as well as separate opinions by Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy, stressed the historic roots of punitive damages, which go beyond the damage award that is intended to compensate a victim for particular injuries and have the additional purposes of punishing misconduct and deterring similar behavior.

The sole dissenter was Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, long an outspoken critic of punitive damages. Justice David H. Souter did not participate in the case, which was argued the week before he joined the court.

Encouraged by the criticism that Justice O'Connor and three other justices had directed at punitive damages over the years, dozens of industry groups had filed briefs urging the court to set specific rules governing matters like the size of punitive damage awards, instructions to the jury, and standards for appellate review of jury decisions.

Spokesmen for some of these groups reacted sharply to the setback Monday. "With this decision, the Supreme Court has declared open season for trial lawyers to go after companies for punitive damages in civil litigation," said Quentin Riegel, deputy general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Martin Connor, director of the American Tort Reform Association, a coalition of industry groups and professional organizations, including the American Medical Association, said the "obvious next step" was to turn to state legislatures and urge them to place limits on punitive damages, as a number already have.

Connor said he was encouraged by the court's recognition that "the due process clause does place some limits" on punitive damages.

On the other hand, groups supporting the continued availability of punitive damages were exultant. "Companies need to know they can be punished if they hurt people," said Linda Lipsen, legislative counsel for Consumers Union.

Michael Maher, president of the Trial Lawyers of America, said the decision sent "a firm message to those who make unsafe products, defraud consumers, and hide industrial hazards." He said the message was: "Act responsibly."

The case the court decided on Monday grew out of a fraud carried out in 1981 against a small Alabama town by an agent of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. The agent, Lemmie L. Ruffin Jr., sold a life and health insurance package to the town of Roosevelt for its employees, who paid the premiums through payroll deductions.

But after the initial premiums, Ruffin did not forward the payments to the health insurance carrier, the Union Fidelity Life Insurance Co. Instead, he kept the money, and did not inform the employees when the company had canceled their coverage.

One employee, Cleopatra Haslip, learned she had no medical coverage a few months later when she was hospitalized for a kidney infection. The $3,800 in uncovered medical bills was more than half her annual take-home pay of $6,700.

She sued and the three other city employees sued Ruffin and his employer, Pacific Mutual. A jury awarded Mrs. Haslip $1.04 million, of which $840,000 was punitive damages; the three other employees won negligible amounts that were not at issue before the court on Monday.

The Alabama Supreme Court upheld the award. Ruffin did not appeal further, but Pacific Mutual did, arguing to the justices that it should not be subjected to punitive damages for its employee's wrongdoing and, more generally, that a lack of standards to guide juries in making punitive damage awards violated the due process guarantee of the 14th Amendment.

FAMILIES: Three Britons, 1 Italian also released the jubilation was tempered in knowing that for other families, the wait continued.

"There she is," Lee Rathbun said after spotting his daughter, Army Spc. Melissa Rathbun-Nealy, on television. "She looks good. . . . My God, there she is."

Lockett, 23, of Fort Bliss, and Rathbun-Nealy, the only woman taken prisoner, were captured while delivering supplies to frontlines military units in Saudi Arabia during the battle of Khafji.

"We're going to have one heck of a 21st birthday party for her when she's home," Rathbun-Nealy's mother, Joan, said from Newaygo, Mich.

Also freed were Air Force Maj. Thomas E. Griffith, 34, of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, N.C.; Navy Lt. Lawrence Randolph Slade, 26; Navy Lt. Robert Wetzel, 30; and Navy Lt. Jeffrey Zaun, 28, all based at the Oceana Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach, Va.

Three Britons and one Italian POW also were released. Angelo Gnaedinger, Red Cross delegate-general for the Middle East and North Africa, said all 10 soldiers were in good health after a checkup by Red Cross doctors.

They were given Swiss chocolates, Pepsi Cola and cheeseburgers before being escorted to the Jordanian border by three Iraqi army vehicles. The group left Jordan for a U.S. hospital ship off Bahrain late Monday.

"I was awake all night last night," said Griffith's wife, Liz. "I was very, very nervous and I found it difficult to sleep, hoping my husband would be among those 10 but not thinking he would be."

Dressed in yellow jumpsuits with the letters "PW" emblazoned on their chests, the POWs were handed over to International Red Cross officials early Monday in Baghdad. The news soon reached across the Atlantic Ocean.

The Zauns awoke neighbors up and down Whitman Avenue in Cherry Hill, N.J., with their cheers and the clank of a bell. By 6 a.m., well-wishers still wearing bathrobes and slippers were crowded into the family's white clapboard home.

"You don't know whether he's going to be dead or whether he's going to be alive," said Zaun's father, Calvin. "Even though he's not home now, the main thing was that we saw that he's all right and he's on his way home."

"We're grateful to God," said Kathleen Wetzel of Neptune City, N.J., whose son was piloting the F-6 Intruder jet on which Zaun was a navigator-bombardier. "We had no idea he was a POW."

Wetzel had been among 66 allied troops listed as missing — 45 Americans, 10 Britons, 10 Saudis and one Italian — since the war began Jan. 17. The Red Cross did not have immediate access to the names of other prisoners, an official said.

The families of six other known American POWs were still awaiting word Monday. They included the families of Air Force Capt. Harry M. Roberts, 30, Savannah, Ga.; Air Force Maj. Jeffrey Scott Tice, 35, Sellersville, Pa.; Air Force Lt. Col. Jeffrey D. Fox, 39; Army Col. David Eberly, 43, of Goldsboro, N.C.; Marine Lt. Col. Clifford M. Acree, 39, and Chief Warrant Officer Guy Hunter Jr., 46, both of Camp Pendleton, Calif.

"Our last knowledge about Cliff was his original appearance on CNN in January," said Acree's wife, Cindy. "At this time, it is too early to speculate until we know more. I am anxiously awaiting news."

Added a friend of the Hunter family: "We have the champagne ready."

CRIME: City records 772 aggravated assaults

(From 1A)

the Police Department.

There was an increase in other violent crimes last year, according to the report.

There were 66 sexual assaults in 1990, compared with 49 in 1989.

Murders increased from six in 1989 to nine last year. Of the nine murders last year, eight have resulted in arrests.

Although the report listed arrest rates, the figures may be deceptive because they are preliminary, officers said.

For example, crimes cleared by arrest may not be recorded as such because they are compiled from monthly reports and not solved until after the month they occurred.

Burglaries of homes and buildings — one of the most prevalent categories of crimes in Midland — dropped about 27 percent last year.

In 1990, there were 1,434 burglaries reported, compared with 1,955 the year before.

"I would like to think more public awareness had a lot to do with that," White said. "If the public is more aware, they are quicker to call us and for us to react."

Clearance rates for burglaries remained about the same: 31 percent had arrests made in 1990, and 27 percent in 1989.

The overall crime rate remained basically the same in 1990. There were 60.2 crimes per 1,000 people in 1990 and 60.9 per 1,000 in 1989.

Those figures, however, include only the following criminal offenses: criminal homicide, sexual assault, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary (building and habitation), theft and auto theft.

In Midland County, the incidence of crimes also remained fairly constant from 1989 to 1990, according to Midland County Sheriff's Department yearly reports.

However, there were three homicides in 1990, compared with none in 1989.

Building and home burglaries were almost unchanged, with 232 in 1990 and 236 in 1989.

Aside from burglaries, the bulk of offenses were for misdemeanor theft or criminal mischief, the report said.

club activities except for an annual $5 registration fee, which may be paid in two payments — $2.50 for the first six months and $2.50 for the last six months."

Shuey said there may be additional costs, however, for some field trips or classes, such as cooking classes.

Youngsters spent Monday morning cutting up magazines and pasting collage figures onto Popsicle sticks. Some of the resulting artworks were "pretty humorous" Shuey said, displaying a figure of a bikini-clad female body topped by the head of a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle.

Some young body-builder hopefuls "pumped iron" under the watchful gaze of Pete Ruiz, the club's athletic director.

"Children under 12 must be supervised in the weight room," Shuey said. "We supervise all activities and the weight room is only open to youth between six and age 18."

Shuey said attendance was sparse Monday. "Well, it's spring break, and kids like to sleep in and take it easy the first day," he said.

But the executive director, who just started his job two weeks ago, said the club is ready for youngsters who already are feeling the first nudges of boredom.

"Ideally, I'd like to average about 125 kids per day," Shuey said. "We have about 65 kids attending after-school programs on school days. The whole idea is to keep things safe, fun and consistent."

The Boys & Girls Club will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today through Friday. It is open from 2:30 to 8 p.m. school days and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays. Children are required to finish their homework before engaging in activities on school days.

The club is open to youngsters age 6-18 who are enrolled in Midland schools. For more information call 683-5297.

PARKER: House bill is more lenient than Senate's

(From 1A)

"What I'd like to see come out of committee is something that would solve this problem once and for all and represent good long-range policy for education," Parker said.

He said the House bill "leaves too big a potential to get it out of kilter, and I don't think that's good policy."

Parker said he did not expect a bill to emerge from committee this week, but he was confident the Legislature would approve a bill before the April 1 deadline set by the Supreme Court.

Besides Parker, other senators named to the committee by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock were Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin; Gene Green, D-Houston; Bill Haley, D-Center; and Bill Ratliff, R-Mt. Pleasant.

House Speaker Gib Lewis left room for some argument in the committee by naming both Fraser and Grusendorf as members, along with Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, who was sponsor of the House version of Parker's bill; Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin; and Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio.

Luna, a staunch supporter of sharing property wealth with poor districts, voted with Fraser and Grusendorf as part of an unprecedented Hispanic-Republican coalition to approve the local enrichment amendment in the House.

Hispanic representatives of property-poor districts, who said their vote on the amendment was a compromise, previously expressed fears that if wealthy districts do not have leeway for some local enrichment, they might try to get around the law by setting up foundations or other funding methods.

Fraser said he had lobbied House Speaker Lewis hard to be on the commitee so he could provide a viewpoint for the rural and sparse school districts, as well as local enrichment.

He said the final legislation must make some consideration for the sparsity of West Texas districts, which creates additional costs.

Most of those costs are attributed to transportation.

Fraser said his second priority is consideration for the wealthy school districts that have had low taxes but large amounts of money to spend.

"We don't want to just totally destroy their school districts," he said. "We want to meet the mandate of the courts and still be fair to the school children of those districts."

Most of that problem can be solved through the four-year phase-in period for the legislation, he said. Also, many of the wealthy districts are small and sparse districts, and extra money for those districts will help.

"I think we are reasonably close to a compromise," he said, adding that a bill should be out of committee "in a week, or two weeks maximum."

All five senators have been very close in their agreement on contents of Parker's bill. The Senate approved that bill, however, before the Supreme Court ruled in a 5-4 decision a week ago that it would allow some unequalized local enrichment, as long as the entire system remained "efficient" in using all property for taxes for all students.

The question legislators keep asking, and the court has not answered, is what constitutes "efficient." While the court will allow some unequalized local tax enrichment, no one knows how much enrichment the court will allow before the tax system becomes inefficient again.

The state Supreme Court has ruled twice that the school financing system is unconstitutional because of the big differences in money available to property-tax rich and poor districts.

Entrepreneurs hold contest honoring Black History Month

Staff Report

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs conducted an essay contest in honor of Black History Month at Midland High School recently.

James Fuller, a trustee on the Midland school board, presented awards to the winners.

The essay contest theme was "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow: What it means to be an African American."

There were 10 entrants.

Tyrone Booker won first place with his essay "A Black Man's World." He was awarded a $75 savings bond. His essay concluded with the question: "One thing I would like to know is how to live in the future when the past is still in the present?"

Makeba Mitchell won second place for her essay, "Yesterday was the Beginning."

Latisha Williams and Marla Mayfield tied for third place. Latisha's essay was entitled with the contest theme and Marla's was "What it Means to be Black."

"The essays showed personal and scholarly effort," said contest coordinator Dennis Stratton, an MHS social studies teacher. "We hope to make this contest an annual event."

Another war is over, but world is hardly at peace

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The end of the Gulf War hardly means the world is at peace. Depending on how and what you count, there are more than two dozen conflicts going on, from Afghanistan to Mozambique to the luckless Kurds still fighting for a country of their own in the Middle East.

Groups of people on four continents are still trying to kill each other — or arguing vehemently — over religious and ethnic differences, for political one-upmanship or territory, or simply because, after years of it, war has become a way of life.

The Gulf War tended to obscure such problems as conflicts involving Palestinian Arabs in the Middle East, the Kurdish quest for autonomy in Iraq and Iran, Lebanese unhappiness with occupying Syrian forces in their nation, unresolved divisions of the Mediterranean island of Cyprus between Greek and Turkish communities, and the tragic struggle in Northern Ireland.

And now, in the war's aftermath, the State Department has received disturbing reports that the restored Kuwaiti rulers are taking reprisals against Palestinians in Kuwait who sided with Iraq's invasion forces.

Conflicts come in varying degrees, ranging from the Soviet republics' secessionist efforts to all-out confrontations such as the U.S.-led coalition's attack against Iraq after that nation's invasion of Kuwait.

The conflicts, by region, include: Africa — Angola, Chad, Ethiopia, Morocco-Western Sahara, Mozambique, Somalia, South Africa, Sudan, Uganda. In Central and South America — Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Peru. In Asia — Cambodia, North and South Korea, Afghanistan, Kashmir at the India-Pakistan border, Punjab in India, Myanmar (formerly Burma), Sri Lanka (Tamil areas). In Europe: Romania, Northern Ireland, Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Albania.

A major armed conflict is defined by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, which keeps track of such things, as "a prolonged combat between the military forces of two or more governments or of one government and organized armed opposition forces, involving the use of manufactured weapons and incurring battle-related deaths of at least 1,000 persons.

The Soviet Union, more at peace with the capitalist world than ever before, is embroiled in ethnic conflicts that have cost hundreds of lives in the southern and central Asian republics of Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia and Uzbekistan. There has been violence, too, as the Kremlin cracked down on separatist movements in Lithuania and Latvia.

Another conflict of ethnic origin involves the Kurds, a stateless people who have been fighting for a independent status in areas of Iraq, Iran and Turkey for decades. In 1988, Saddam Hussein of Iraq was accused of using poison gas against his own Kurdish population on suspicion that they had supported Iran in the Iran-Iraq war which was ended that year.

In Afghanistan, where U.S.-supplied rebels are warring against the Soviet-supplied government, the superpowers have agreed in principle to stop the flow of weapons. The country has had 12 years of war, a million deaths, and the devastation has made five million homeless.

In Angola, the fighting is between the U.S.-backed UNITA rebels and a leftist government. Talks to end the 16-year civil war are at an impasse.

El Salvador's civil war, now 12 years old, has seen tentative steps toward settlement. On Sunday voters will choose 84 legislators for the single-chamber parliament and mayors for the 262 municipalities. Unlike previous elections, rebel leaders have not called for a boycott and the United States is trying to enlist Soviet support to stop arming the rebels.

In Sudan, one of the world's poorest nations, widespread famine is aggravated by a civil war between north and south.

There remains the unsettled situation in South Africa, with the question now whether the white minority government can negotiate a comprehensive settlement with the leadership of the black majority.

As always, the Korean peninsula crackles with problems. Last month, North Korea ordered its armed forces to remain on full combat alert during joint U.S.-South Korean military exercises, which it said created the danger of a new Korean war. And yet, North and South Korea agreed to form a single soccer team for an international meet.

War, hunger and disease have driven about 150,000 Cambodians from their villages, west to guerrilla camps or east to government areas. Four factions are trying to reach agreement on ending a 10-year civil war.

In Northern Ireland, the Irish Republican Army struggle to end British rule continues, with the familiar tactics of terrorist bombings. Since it began in 1969, more than 2,800 people have died.

The tragedy of Lebanon, wracked by civil war, appears unending.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, MARCH 5, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New career and vocational interests take shape. Your personal finances show steady improvement. Take your time when making a choice between two attractive options in September. Although you sometimes chastise your loved ones, those closest to your heart know that you would do almost anything for them. Try to sound less critical. Your mate's high spirits will add a special glow to the winter holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Rex Harrison, comedian Marsha Warfield, actor Michael Warren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your social life is on the upswing now. Strengthen the ties of friendship by being more affectionate. Your captivating ways draw admirers from all walks of life. Take a friend to lunch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spending some time alone in pleasant surroundings nourishes your creativity. You have a better head for finance than you realize. Invest in real estate or the stock market. Socialize tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends or business allies at a distance can help you achieve an important goal. Place more emphasis on interaction and team play; new financial rewards will soon follow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A lot is at stake where jointly held funds are concerned. You are in a position to make an impressive and convincing claim. Make sure you have the latest available financial figures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful not to get so wrapped up in other people's affairs that you neglect your own. Work the phone lines, write letters and do what must be done. Make new friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some of the decisions you make today may not be practical; seek more input from your allies. Dress your best when in the public eye. Share the limelight with the deserving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discuss financial matters with your mate, but rely on your instincts when making final decisions. A conversation with a young person proves illuminating. A friendship is a source of contentment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Working quietly behind the scenes is the best way to gain respect within the community. Call in the experts for assistance in setting up new financial or business procedures.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone who has been antagonistic in the past may now extend the olive branch. Accept this person's overtures with good grace but keep your guard up. Think things through.

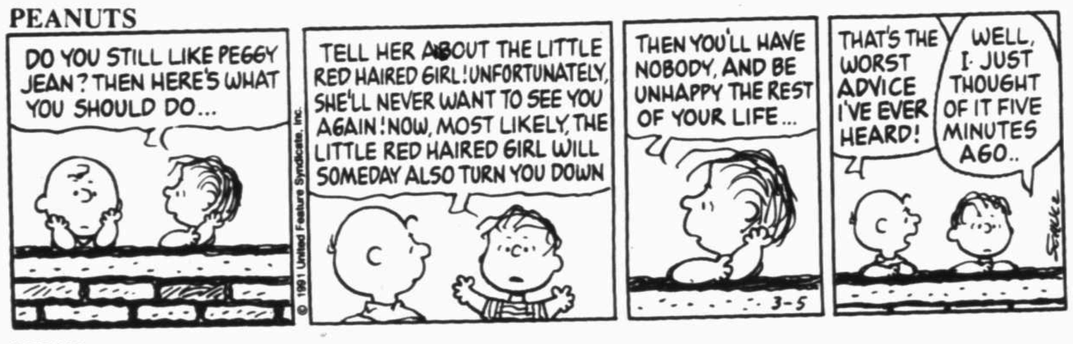

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A romantic relationship could be a source of uncertainty now. Avoid doing anything that might make loved one doubt your good intentions. Assert yourself when attending a public meeting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are more alert than usual today. Capitalize on a rare opportunity that involves love as well as money. You are in the right place at the right time! Romance slowly intensifies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your eating or drinking could affect career advancement. Do not let a lack of will power stand in the way of a promotion. Romance may be influenced by certain financial considerations.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are very people-oriented, eager to find out why others do the things they do. Highly opinionated and verbal, these youngsters are not shy about voicing their likes and dislikes. Wise parents will point out that diplomacy is not the same thing as deceit. Reading is one of these Pisces' greatest passions. Be sure to take these children to the library as frequently as possible. They have what it takes to become famous scholars and philosophers.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣

We have often dwelt on hands that seem too easy to be true. Those are often the most dangerous, because you might easily be lulled into a false sense of security. Give each hand careful consideration before playing to the first trick.

This hand was played in a pair tournament in France, and many pairs reached a heart slam on an auction such as the above. North has an enormous hand in support of hearts, fully justifying a jump shift. When partner showed a red two-suiter, North jumped to five hearts as a request to partner to bid a slam with a good heart suit. South obliged.

A number of competent declarers wasted no time in going down after a club lead. They won the opening lead in dummy and immediately led a trump to the king and ace. West reverted to clubs and East ruffed for the setting trick.

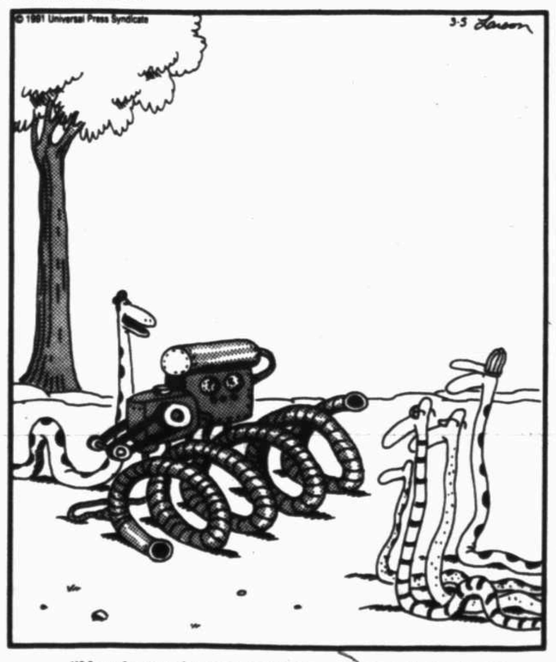

When one of our favorite experts, the exuberant Paul Chemla, held the South cards, he showed just how easy it was to nail down the heart slam. He won the opening lead in dummy and came to hand with the king of spades. Next he cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond high in dummy.

When that held, there was still one more step required to assure the slam. South cashed the ace of spades, discarding the remaining club from hand, and then led a low trump to the king. It made no difference which defender held the ace—the defense was helpless. Declarer would ruff any return high, draw the outstanding trump and claim the balance.

As usual, there's nothing mysterious about being a good bridge player. Just recognize everyday plays that are available, and make them!

Garth Brooks captures 7 music award nominations

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Garth Brooks, who came out of nowhere with his hit "Friends in Low Places," led Academy of Country Music Award contenders Monday with seven nominations, including top entertainer, record, album, song and video.

Brooks

Perennial country favorites Alabama and Vince Gill had five nominations apiece, followed by newcomer Alan Jackson, with four, and veteran Reba McEntire with three.

Gill

The 26th annual presentation of the academy's "Hat" trophies, hosted by Clint Black, Kathy Mattea and George Strait, will be shown on NBC-TV during a two-hour special April 24 from Universal Amphitheatre.

The academy's 3,000 members vote on nominations in 12 categories. The nominees included:

Entertainer of the year: Clint Black, Garth Brooks, Reba McEntire, Dolly Parton, George Strait.

Male singer: Clint Black, Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, George Strait, Ricky Van Shelton.

Group: Alabama, Desert Rose Band, Kentucky Headhunters, Restless Heart, Shenandoah.

Single record: "Friends in Low Places," Garth Brooks; "Here in the Real World," Alan Jackson; "Jukebox in My Mind," Alabama; "Next to You, Next to Me," Shenandoah; "When I Call your Name," Vince Gill.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Costner, who did all his own horseback riding in "Dances With Wolves," was responsible for the co-producer's most terrifying moment during its filming.

Costner

Costner fell off during a stampede of buffalo.

"I was in the copter and all I heard was, 'Kevin's down, Kevin's down,'" co-producer Jim Wilson tells Entertainment Weekly magazine in an interview published this week.

"You can just imagine what goes through a producer's mind," he said.

Costner wasn't hurt. He got on another horse and returned to the chase.

The movie featured two domesticated buffalo: Mammoth, owned by rock singer Neil Young, and Cody, the mascot of a South Dakota meat company.

In one of the hunt's most terrifying on-screen moments, a buffalo appears to be bearing down on a fallen boy. Wilson said it was actually Cody running for an Oreo cookie that was being held up behind camera.

"Cody was obsessed with Oreo cookies," said Wilson. "You could be 100 yards away, pull out an Oreo, and he'd take off like a bullet straight for you."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — John Goodman says he'd like to visit Springfield and his alma mater more often, but his busy acting career gets in the way.

Goodman

"I don't get back as much as I would like to," he said. "The people are great, and you can't beat the area. I mean, it's beautiful."

Goodman is a co-star of television's "Roseanne." He also is promoting a new film, "King Ralph."

Goodman, a St. Louis native, is a 1975 theater graduate of Southwest Missouri State University.

He was in town last weekend to host the local Easter Seals Telethon.

He said his memories of college include a constant shortage of money.

But as for his favorite memory of Springfield, Goodman said with a grin: "Aw, you can't print that."

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled at 11 a.m. today for Billy Jack Wills, the youngest of the Wills brothers who helped shape western music history.

Bob Wills founded the Texas Playboys, the model for western swing bands. Another brother, Johnny Lee Wills, led a popular swing band in Tulsa. Billy Jack Wills followed them into the music business, playing bass and drums in the 1940s with the Texas Playboys, and founding his own Western Swing Band in the 1950s.

Wills, 65, died Saturday in a Shawnee hospital.

He wrote the lyrics to two western swing classics: "Lily Dale," which became a hit for Willie Nelson, and "Faded Love," which was adopted in 1987 as Oklahoma's Western state song.

Duty, honor fall in Senate 'show'

U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston of California is right. As a member of the Keating Five, he was singled out unfairly for possible censure by the full U.S. Senate. The other four were just as guilty but the Senate Ethics Committee allowed them to walk. The only difference among the five was Cranston pocketed more political payola.

The unanimous vote by the six Ethics Committee members exhibited a disgraceful disdain for Senate integrity. The other four senators — Michigan's Donald Riegle, Arizona's Dennis DeConcini and John McCain, and Ohio's John Glenn — were just as guilty as Cranston in pressuring federal regulators to back off an investigation of Charles Keating's shenanigans in the savings and loan scandal. Keating paid the five more than $1.3 million in campaign funds for their help in trying to get him off the hook for allegedly bilking thousands of investors in his operations.

The committee copped out by saying there were no written standards in campaign finance law that governed lawmaker intervention with federal regulators. That is an outrageous defense in the face of such conclusive proof that the five senators tried to frighten regulators by sheer political power.

The committee now piously says the Senate should adopt written rules specifying what activities would be permissible for senators raising campaign funds. Everyone in politics knows that senators — based on their feverish activity to collect campaign war chests — would find ways to circumvent the law. It comes down to what special counsel Robert Bennett said: the clear appearance of ethical misconduct violates Senate principles.

All of the Keating Five have brought discredit on themselves and the Senate. So has the entire Ethics Committee in trying to cover up that disgrace. These men share responsibility for sending U.S. troops to die in the Persian Gulf war. The troops won but the six failed the test of duty and honor.

'Warthogs' prove their worth in the Gulf

WITH U.S. TROOPS IN NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA — The Commander of the American Air Force in Saudi Arabia had to eat crow — or in this case "Warthog" — three days after the Persian Gulf War began.

Anderson

Lt. Gen. Charles Horner, in charge of Central Command Air Forces, had initially opposed the deployment of the tank-killing A-10s — the warplanes that the pilots affectionately call "Warthogs." Horner was overruled by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

In an Air Force battle staff closed-door meeting a few days into the war, Horner admitted he was wrong. "I take back all the bad things I've ever said about the A-10s. I love them. They're saving our asses."

We wrote in a column last December that the image-conscious Air Force didn't like the A-10s because they are slow and ugly. The Army wanted them in the Gulf because they do their job well, no matter how they look.

Now the A-10 has emerged as one of the lumbering wonders of the war — a Cinderella story about a plane that the Air Force was seriously considering putting on the scrap heap. It now has a new lease on life.

Army officials were relieved to hear Gen. Horner's mea culpa. "We would be in serious trouble if (the A-10s) hadn't come," one Army officer at the front told us before the outbreak of the ground war. "They are the major weapons between us and the Iraqis."

Air Force generals and pilots always favor the glamorous, fast-flying jets. But the Army needs slower, heavily armored planes to stick tightly to the ground troops. The A-10 can go only 450 miles an hour while the F-16 can fly more than 1,100 miles an hour.

The chief armament of the A-10 is a monstrous 30mm, seven-barrel Gatling gun, which fires 4,000 rounds in a minute and can destroy a tank with a single, well-placed shot. It shoots dense, depleted-uranium bullets that can penetrate a tank's armor.

The A-10s also carry Maverick missiles, 500-pound Mark 82 iron bombs and Rockeye anti-armor cluster bombs.

Capt. Jessie Morimoto, an Air Force intelligence officer at one of the forward air bases, said the A-10 took on more responsibilities with every passing week of the war. Warthogs were used to knock out Scud missile sites, artillery supply points, radar installations and surface-to-air missile sites. They even helped rescue a downed Navy pilot. And one engaged in an unexpected dog fight with an Iraqi helicopter. The A-10 won.

One reason the Iraqis had trouble shooting down the A-10s is that Iraqi anti-aircraft guns are usually fired at noise, and the A-10 is relatively quiet, particularly when compared to the other noises of a battlefield. One commander estimated that enemy gunners were only able to identify A-10s by sound in one out of 100 missions.

The sturdy plane is reinforced with titanium, which creates a heavy armor "bathtub" that protects the pilot and the engines. One A-10 took a hit that left a gaping hole in its right wing, destroyed a landing gear pod and took out one of the hydraulic systems. But the plane made it back home. "The plane worked as advertised. It could take a hit and come back," said one source at the scene.

Capt. Morimoto said the A-10s had proved "that they're just as able to hit the target and get out without being hurt as anybody else — and in some cases, better."

WAR MADE IN JAPAN — The performance of American high-tech weaponry in the Persian Gulf War has restored confidence in American technology. Unfortunately, much of that technology is not made in the USA. The pinpoint targeting depends heavily on Japanese semi-conductor casings, flat video screens and imaging devices. The former director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Administration, Craig Fields, was disturbed about the reliance on Japanese technology, and urged the Bush administration to revive the native electronics industry as a matter of national security. Fields was fired.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Persian Gulf War has revived enthusiasm in Congress and the White House for the ill-conceived Strategic Defense Initiative, or Star Wars. To date the SDI research has been a disappointing waste of time and money. The only excuse for reviving it is the success of the Patriot missiles in the war, but the two have very little in common. SDI was a pipe dream of Ronald Reagan to scare the Soviets.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Stormin' Norman — a leadership model

Maybe Saddam was, after all, a sawdust Caesar. Maybe the Iraqi military, underfed and over-led, wasn't exactly the Brigade of Guards or the Army of Northern Virginia.

What of it? Stormin' Norman Schwarzkopf stuck it to 'em: pulled off the swiftest, most one-sided, most decisive military operation in modern military annals — and didn't put a foot wrong.

Murchison

Equally to his credit was his tender but intensely competent solicitude for the lives and well-being of his troops — wherein he may be compared favorably to "the G.I.'s general," Omar Bradley. Military historians centuries from now will study and lecture on how 500,000 allied troops whipped a larger enemy — at the cost of hardly more than a hundred killed. It is an unbelievable feat. I'm not sure I believe it now.

Whatever happens in the Persian Gulf from this point forward, America has a new national hero. A military hero — would you have believed it? — but one whose appeal and capabilities transcend military definitions.

Stormin' Norman — what a guy! To watch his press briefing, the day President Bush announced the suspension of hostilities, was to appreciate a keen mind and decisive character hitting on all cylinders.

What he'll do after the war, God knows. Run for president one of these days? Join the lecture circuit? One doubts Stormin' Norman is deeply absorbed with questions like these. He thinks about his duty and his troops. That's why he's a hero.

Great commanders come in all shapes and varieties. Not all are well-suited to command the forces of a 20th century mass democracy. Douglas MacArthur, a great man and a great general, was fired because he thought he knew more than the commander in chief — which he did, except that wasn't the point.

The modern American army belongs less to the generals and more to the politicians than any other major fighting force in history.

There are large political necessities in 1990s warfare — larger even than in MacArthur's day. War in the '90s must be as brief as possible, and as bloodless. The politicians will not have it otherwise.

This would seem contrary to the nature of war, but instant communications and the frantic tempo of life make it unlikely we'll ever again dig in militarily for the long haul — three or four years, say. We are the instant-gratification society. We want what we want; we wanted it yesterday, in fact.

It's more than that. Vietnam etched upon our national consciousness, as no previous war had done, the suffering of the individual soldier. A single dead soldier "known but to God" symbolized all the American dead of the War to End Wars. Each of our Vietnam dead has his name inscribed on a V-shaped wall in the nation's capital.

There have before been soldier-politicians who understood what was good, politically speaking, for them and their careers. Stormin' Norman understands politics in a higher sense. He's just about the ideal democratic soldier.

How can we know what goes on in the head of a man few of us ever heard of until last summer? We can't. Still, I'd be dumbfounded — wouldn't you? — to learn that Gen. Schwarzkopf had gone to Saudi Arabia looking for a good, quick war that might advance his career prospects.

I think what he had in mind was doing the job he'd been sent to do: doing it completely, quickly and at minimal cost in lives. Doing it, that is, in accordance with all the precepts that govern the warfare modern America wages.

Stormin' Norman is more than a good democratic soldier. He's a marvelous tonic for the grogginess that afflicts us in an age of self-seeking and egoism.

Here's a commander who knows exactly how to get from Point A to Point Z with maximum speed and efficiency. A commander, equally important, who puts his soldiers first.

CHARLEY REESE

Better tyrants reign and we remain free

The American people don't have any control over their country's foreign policy. Most of them don't even know what it is. That's why it is so easy for presidents to take the country into war.

Reese

The key failure is Congress, abdicating its constitutional duty. The framers of the Constitution intended for the American people to control their foreign policy through Congress.

The popular myth perpetrated by modern imperialists, both of the left and the right, is that foreign policy is the province of the president, and Congress should keep its nose out of it.

That's nonsense, of course. The Constitution says no treaty with a foreign country can be entered into without the advice and consent of the Senate. No ambassador to a foreign country can be appointed without the advice and consent of the Senate. No penny in the U.S. Treasury can be spent for any reason on anything without the authorization of the Congress. Only Congress can declare war. Congress is given the duty of regulating commerce with foreign nations, to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, to grant letters of marque and reprisal, and to raise and support armies.

Involving foreign relations, the only duty of the president which the Constitution allows him to do without Congress is simply to receive foreign ambassadors and other ministers.

Of course when the men and women we elect to the House and Senate abdicate their responsibilities and lack the courage to guard jealously their constitutional powers, then the president takes them away. A constitution, like any other contract, isn't worth the ink if the people do not insist that it be observed and if necessary fight to enforce it.

The government we have today is not the government designed by the Constitution and given to us by our forefathers. That legitimate government was clearly centered in the Congress, not in the judiciary or in the executive branch.

Benjamin Franklin reportedly said to a woman who asked what kind of government had been devised, "Madam, we have given you a republic — if you can keep it."

Obviously, we did not keep it. Obviously, we forgot Tom Jefferson's warning: "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be."

If ignorance were gold, America in 1991 would be the richest nation on earth.

It is pointless to suppose that there is some easy solution — a new law or a new book or newly mandated classroom course. If people value their comfort and convenience more than their freedom — and historically most people have — then they will lose their freedom. And after that, they will lose their comfort and convenience, too.

As I look about I see more reminders of Nazi Germany than of the early American Republic. I see lots of people with an itch to march and shout. I see lots of people looking for someone to tell them how to think and what to do. I see a lot of people looking for scapegoats.

Many people have completely missed the point in the Persian Gulf War. Far better it would be to give up the use of all foreign oil than to give up the Constitution's restraints on power. Better a thousand tyrants reign in foreign countries than our own government become tyrannical.

Americans had better start looking to themselves, for we are the people at risk. An elite with a lot of money run the government and the foreign policy establishment and dominate the election process.

Ordinary Americans supply the taxes, the labor, and the cannon fodder. That doesn't seem all that different from what the people in the Soviet Union and China do.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

How to secede without really trying

Lithuania has voted for independence from the Soviet Union. Other Soviet provinces want the same thing. The sweet wind of freedom is blowing.

OK, then. What about the South seceding again?

Grizzard

I realize it didn't work the first time we tried it, but the North wouldn't fight fairly.

As it is told, that great Georgian and Confederate, Robert Toombs, was trying to recruit men to fight for the South at the outbreak of the Civil War.

"Why, we can beat the Yankees with cornstalks," he told an audience.

After the war, Toombs was running for governor. During a campaign speech a voice cried out from the audience, "We listened to you when you said we could beat the Yankees with cornstalks.

"That was a lie, so why should we believe you now?"

Toombs replied, "We could have beaten the Yankees with cornstalks, but the sons of bitches wouldn't fight that way."

I don't think there would be any hostilities if the South should decide to secede again.

If we did it in the winter, how could anybody who lives where it's always blue on the weather map blame us?

And any of the millions of Northerners who had the good sense to move South before the secession could gain their citizenship in the All-New-and-Improved South quite easily.

All they would have to do is agree to go to speech school and learn how to lose their Northern accents.

Think of what it would be like if the South broke away from the Union again.

No more heavy taxes to bail out decaying Northern cities. No more stupid federal regulators.

No more nights tossing in bed worrying about what would become of us if something happened to George Bush, and Dan Quayle became president.

There would be a few things we'd have to agree to do in the spirit of becoming good neighbors with the North.

We would agree to be equal partners in the Persian Gulf — which is more than can be said about any other ally.

We would also agree to come to the North's rescue in case it is needed for something like helping move Philadelphia to somewhere in southern Illinois to make room for a parking lot when all the parking spaces in New York were taken.

I'd make Atlanta the capital of the South this time. Richmond's too close to Washington.

I would want minorities to have a chance in all leadership roles. Andy Young would make a great secretary of state, Cousin Minnie Pearl in another key Cabinet post.

L. Douglas Wilder, governor of Virginia, Shelby Foote, Vince Dooley, and Julia Roberts could run for president.

The Braves and Falcons wouldn't have to play the Mets or Giants anymore. The Braves could join the Florida State League, where they've belonged all the time.

The Falcons could play Tampa Bay every week and actually have a chance for a break-even season.

And Willie Nelson wouldn't have to pay the $16.5 million he owes the federal government and get back to writing and singing his songs.

A man can dream, can't he?

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

IRAQ: 'Guard' reportedly backs Saddam

war would be going too far, but added that the United States was not certain whether it was an insurrection or civil unrest. The scheduled release of tens of thousands of Iraqi prisoners of war in coming days "could exacerbate the situation a good deal," he said.

"What you have returning to Iraq is a beaten army," Kelly said, "and beaten armies can be politically volatile. These soldiers present a threat to the regime."

American military officials here reported that Baghdad had called two mechanized brigades, about 7,000 men, back to the capital region from the Turkish and the Iranian borders, apparently to protect the government.

Diplomats and experts on the region differed over the significance of the spreading violence. A Western ambassador in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, said it "marks the beginning of the end for Hussein." But a Saudi expert said it amounted only to "the turbulent backlash of war, which he'll put down in a week or so."

President Bush, European officials, and some Arab leaders have said that they would be delighted to see Saddam driven from power, and Gen. Colin L. Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said again on Monday that the United States hoped for a new government in Baghdad. But there was no clear sign of allied involvement in the tumult inside Iraq.

Baghdad has made no official comment on the reported strife.

Hojatolislam Mohammed Bakr Hakim, head of the Supreme Assembly of the Islamic Revolution in Iraq, a Shiite Muslim organization based in Tehran, said at a news conference in the Iranian capital that rebels had captured the cities of Nasiriya, Samawa, Kut, Diwaniya, and Amara, and that a Republican Guard regiment had surrendered in Amara. All the cities are southeast of Baghdad in the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, the Shiite heartland in Iraq.

"The popular forces in the uprising have destroyed 100 tanks but casualties are high and tanks are attacking the people," Hakim said of the situation in Basra. The rebels were reported to have had broken into army warehouses and seized food stocks that they were distributing to the poor.

An opposition leader in Lebanon said that specially trained assassination squads had been infiltrated into Baghdad to kill Saddam.

The Iranian press agency said that both sides in the fighting in Basra had heavy weapons, and it reported that the sound of explosions could be heard 25 miles away in Khorramshahr, an Iranian border city.

No independent verification of the reports was possible. Most of the accounts, though not all, came from Shiite Muslims, who dominate Iran and constitute 55 percent of the population in Iraq. Saddam is a Sunni Muslim, and so are almost all of the members of his inner circle.

Although they said they had no proof, diplomats in the region said they believed that Tehran had played an important role in fomenting the strife.

Pete Williams, the Pentagon spokesman, supplied a list of cities where he said violence had been reported, but his list differed from that provided in Tehran. Basra was on his list along with Amara, and he also named Najaf, one of the most sacred sites to Shiites; Zubair, near Basra; Kumayt and Qualat Falih.

Still other names were added by other American officials, including the Shiite holy city of Karbala.

Providing a few new details on cease-fire arrangements in the war, Kelly said that commanders who met in the Iraqi desert on Sunday agreed that neither force would come within one kilometer, or five-eighths of a mile, of a line of demarcation stretching from the Kuwait border up the Euphrates valley and down to the Saudi border.

Quiet Korean War hero praises gulf war effort

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Like most heroes, George H. O'Brien Jr. prefers not to elaborate on the momentous deed that brought him national honor and recognition.

O'Brien, 64, does not talk freely about the October day in 1952, when he leaped from a trench in Korea and led a bloody assault on an enemy position.

A conversation with him likely will not yield a description of how he flung grenades, shot his carbine and fought hand-to-hand despite a bullet wound in his arm.

But former President Dwight D. Eisenhower used words like "gallantry" and "intrepidity" and "beyond the call of duty" to honor O'Brien.

Those words can be found in Eisenhower's citation declaring O'Brien as a Medal of Honor recipient.

Though O'Brien will not elaborate on his heroics, reminders of his service line the walls of his Midland office, where he works as a geologist.

Born in Fort Worth in September 1926, he earned a diploma from Big Spring High School before attending Texas Tech University. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in geology in 1950.

Before attending Texas Tech, he served in the U.S. Marines in the Pacific from 1944 to 1946, an experience he also is reluctant to talk about.

O'Brien was recalled in 1951 and served as a second lieutenant in Korea until 1955. He was rifle platoon commander of Company H., Third Battalion, Seventh Marines, First Marine Division, on his historic day.

Eisenhower's citation states that on Oct. 27, 1952, O'Brien's platoon was under intense mortar and artillery bombardment along an important hill position. The site had been overrun by North Korean forces the preceding night.

As the bombardment continued, O'Brien jumped from a trench and, accompanied by his men, raced across a saddle and up a hill through a maelstrom of enemy fire.

Meter changes increase time for some parking

■ Meters offering hourly parking for 5 or 10 cents are a bargain that won't last much longer

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Motorists cruising downtown Midland streets in search of inexpensive parking can find a bargain if they hunt long enough.

A handful of meters offering hourly parking for 5 cents or 10 cents are sprinkled among ones costing a motorist two bits for 60 minutes.

But because of an upcoming meter conversion project, the bargain won't last much longer.

However, the Midland City Council last week approved giving more time to metered parking in some parts of downtown.

Meters around the Midland County Courthouse offering an hour for 25 cents will be converted to two-hour meters, with each hour still costing 25 cents.

Meters in the vicinity offering one hour for two bits will be replaced by meters giving two hours for a quarter.

The council allotted $7,500 for the conversion project.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said downtown businesses and merchants have complained that the one-hour meters do not give their patrons enough time.

Thomas said the city also plans to take all-day meters in parking lots along the fringes of downtown and move them in closer.

"Nobody parks in those lots because they're too far away," he said.

The two-hour meters that the all-day meters will replace are going unused because "nobody is going to go out every two hours to plunk in quarters," Thomas said. The people most likely to use those spaces need all-day parking, he said.

The replacement project also will weed out the meters offering deals as low as a nickel, he said.

Gary Saunders, city traffic engineering coordinator, said the conversion project should begin late this month or early April and take about a week to complete.

"The whole gist is to expand the time on them a little bit to give you more time to conduct your business downtown," Saunders said.

The conversion project should begin late this month or early April and take about a week to complete. The project is the second stage of a four-phase meter project started in early 1989. Under the current project, meters along streets in an area bordered by Big Spring and Main streets and Missouri and Illinois avenues will be changed. The meters only will accept quarters.

The project is the second stage of a four-phase meter project started in early 1989.

In the first phase, meters were modified to create two-hour parking along Colorado Street between Illinois and Missouri avenues and along the south side of Wall Avenue between Colorado and Loraine streets.

Under the current project, meters along streets in an area bordered by Big Spring and Main streets and Missouri and Illinois avenues will be changed, Saunders said. The meters only will accept quarters, he said.

Meters around the courthouse, downtown's most popular parking zone, will be 25 cents per hour to encourage parking turnover, he said.

Parking meters generate between $10,000 and $12,000 monthly in revenues for the city, Saunders said. The money goes into general revenue funds, he said.

Under the third phase, meters in a four-block area along Marienfeld Street between and Ohio and Missouri avenues will be converted to two-hour parking.

The final phase also would include meters in the downtown area.

A timetable has not been set for the third and fourth phases, Saunders said.

Capsules easiest drug to contaminate

■ Midland pharmacists said they removed all Sudafed 12-hour capsules from their shelves Sunday night.

N.Y. Times News Service

Cyanide, the poison found in tainted Sudafed 12-hour capsules, is the perfect poison and capsules are the easiest type of pills to tamper with, according to medical experts.

One death and one serious illness in Washington state have been linked to the poisoned capsules, said Susan Hutchcroft, a spokesperson for the Food and Drug Administration. Another death thought to be linked to the drug is under investigation.

Burroughs Wellcome, the maker of the drug, issued a nationwide recall Sunday of the cold remedy.

Locally, Midland pharmacists contacted said they removed all Sudafed 12-hour capsules from their shelves Sunday night. All pharmacists contacted said they didn't check the lot numbers on the boxes.

"My instructions were to remove everything immediately and worry about checking lot numbers later," said Steve Spackman, assistant manager of Walgreen's on Midkiff. "We took them all off the shelves and are returning them for new product."

A spokesman for Alldredge Pharmacy, 2309 W. Louisiana, said, "We didn't have any Sudafed capsules. We just happened to be out and don't expect to get any."

Don Haynes, pharmacy manager for Service Drug, A Street & Scharbauer, said, "I removed the capsules as soon as the story came over the news. They are already on their way back to the company."

Haynes said he also removed all Actifed capsules. "I may be overreacting, but they are from the same company," the pharmacy manager said.

Haynes said this latest cyanide scare may sound the death knell for capsules, which have been tampered with in the past. "Capsules sold over the counter will probably become a thing of the past," he said.

The FDA has received a steady stream of tampering reports since 1982, when seven people in Chicago died from cyanide-laced Tylenol capsules, Ms. Hutchcroft said.

The Sudafed capsules had three levels of tamper-resistant packaging: a blue strip of gelatin where the capsule halves are joined, a blister pack and an outside seal on the box, Ms. Hutchcroft said.

This is the first incident of tampering with capsules in blister packs, developed in 1985 as protection against deliberate tainting, Ms. Hutchcroft said.

The government has no plans to recommend further legislation regarding capsules, according to spokespeople at the FDA and the Department of Health and Human Services.

Burroughs Wellcome declined comment on whether they had any plans to stop making capsules.

"Capsules are by far the easiest pill to tamper with," said Ed Webb, a pharmacist with the American Pharmacists Association in Washington, D.C. "The traditional capsules made from two pieces of gelatin that fit together are subject to a fair amount of manipulation and even sealed capsules can be tampered with by in-

Fire damages apartments

Staff Report

Choking billows of smoke forced residents of an 1101 W. Wall St. apartment building to evacuate their homes after a fire broke out in a corner unit Monday night.

"Supposedly a lady in the apartment heard an explosion and ran next door," said Midland Fire Department Battalion Chief Manuel Olivas. The fire department was called to the blaze at 8:24 p.m.

"It was burning really well — fully involved — when we pulled up," Olivas said at 9 p.m. "We've pretty much isolated it to the apartment it originated in and we're trying to get the hot spots out."

Firefighters battled the smoky blaze in respirators, trying to douse a stubborn rooftop flame.

Sylvia Melendez and her two children were at home when fire engulfed the apartment next door. "It was the heater," she said as she watched the men's efforts from the parking lot.

"It made an explosion and there was fire and gas everywhere. We had to leave."

Apartment resident Esperanza Garay said her husband's nephew, Baltazar Borundo, and his family lived in unit 12, the one that caught on fire.

"He wasn't home but his wife was," Mrs. Garay said.

"I saw the smoke and I knew it was there. The rest (of the units) seem safe — I hope so."

The fire took 90 minutes to control. It caused heavy damage to unit 12 and smoke damage to three other units, according to the fire department report.

Its origin was unknown at presstime.

Proposal would require recycling of asphalt

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Use of recycled asphalt could save the state $54 million a year in highway construction costs as well as oil and gravel, lawmakers said Monday, as they moved to require the state highway department to reuse material from old roads.

Amendments to the legislation reauthorizing the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, sponsored by Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, and Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas, and Rep. Parker McCollough, D-Georgetown, would instruct the highway department to recycle asphalt from old roads.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, also plans to provide for asphalt recycling as part of a bill he is drafting to promote various recycling programs, a legislative aide said.

The highway department has agreed to the legislation.

Barrientos said nobody seems to want landfills or asphalt plants near them.

"Recycling asphalt saves money, saves landfill space, saves natural land from being strip-mined for new gravel pits and saves air from pollution," he said.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, whose office helped draft the legislation, said recycled asphalt costs $7 per ton less than new asphalt.

In the past year, he said, the state used 7.8 million tons of hot-mix asphalt on state highways. He estimated that one-third of a ton was recycled asphalt, but recent advances in technology allow wider use.

"Since recycling asphalt saves one barrel of oil for every four tons recycled, had all the asphalt laid by the state during the fiscal year 1990 been made from (reclaimed asphalt paving), we would have saved almost two million barrels of oil," he said.

He also noted that recycling saves sand and gravel, which accounts for almost 95 percent of asphalt mix.

Once the state highway department adopts asphalt recycling, Mauro said he expects city and county governments will follow suit.

HERO: O'Brien has plenty to say about gulf conflict

(From 1B)

Spearheading the assault, he engaged in savage hand-to-hand combat, killing at least three enemy soldiers.

Knocked down three times by the concussion of grenades, O'Brien refused to be evacuated for medical treatment and continued to lead his platoon in the four-hour attack. After the assault, he set up a defense, prepared for a counterattack and attended to the wounded.

"By his exceptionally daring and forceful leadership in the face of overwhelming odds ... O'Brien served as a constant source of inspiration to all who observed him ... " the citation reads.

It was a year to the day of the battle that O'Brien learned that he had won the medal.

The Medal of Honor was created in the 1860s as the highest decoration given to U.S. military members.

Recommendation for the honor, which must be accompanied by eyewitness accounts, must go through a military hierarchy and eventually be approved by the president.

"You have to have eyewitnesses and they have to care enough to write it out," said O'Brien, the only Midland resident to have the medal. "I didn't do this by myself. There were a lot of my men who didn't enjoy the older age that I enjoy.

"There are a lot of military people who deserve this medal. Maybe for them there were no eyewitnesses. Maybe they didn't care to write it down."

After being discharged from the military, O'Brien worked as a geologist for an oil company in Big Spring. He moved to Midland in 1958 after landing a job with an oil company here. He became an independent geologist in 1963.

Unlike his military past, O'Brien has plenty to say about the war in the Persian Gulf.

"I am extremely proud of our military and our president and our country," he said. "I agreed with our president."

U.S. Gen. H. Schwarzkopf, meanwhile, has emerged as a war hero who deserves recognition, he said.

"He's an outstanding tactician. I believe his planning speaks for itself," O'Brien said. "The military planning that went into the war was absolutely fantastic."

As for heroes past, O'Brien meets biennially with others who earned the Medal of Honor, including a handful of World War I veterans.

"We don't exchange war stories," O'Brien said. "We talk about trying to foster good citizenship among the young people of this country."

He said the youth of today are as patriotic as ever.

"I think they're outstanding," he said. "It's a good feeling. They certainly are much more patriotic than their group in the Vietnam era."

O'Brien will serve as grand marshal of a March 23 parade in Midland to honor returning troops and celebrate their overwhelming victory.

Joanne Dinsmoor, a parade coordinator, said having O'Brien involved will give the event a special meaning.

"There are not many like him around," Mrs. Dinsmoor said. "It's quite an honor to have a Medal of Honor recipient. We thought it would be very appropriate to have him in the parade."

jecting them with a substance through a small-gauge needle."

Tylenol is now available in tablets, caplets or gelcaps. All are solid medications coated to make them easier to swallow.

Capsules have no advantage over other types of pills, said Jennifer Evans, a pharmacist at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Capsules are perceived as easier to swallow but compared to caplets, there is probably no difference, said a spokesperson for Smithkline Consumer Products, the maker of the cold remedy Contac.

In 1986 the company issued a partial recall of the product after receiving reports of tampering. No instances of tampering were found. Contac capsules are still available.

Cyanide, once inhaled or ingested, can kill in a matter of minutes, according to Dr. Robert Hoffman, medical director of the poison control center at New York University Hospital in New York.

"Cyanide is one of the most potent compounds known to man," Hoffman said. "Small quantities can easily produce fatality," he said.

Cyanide causes suffocation by blocking the combination of oxygen with red blood cells, said Harvey Berman, associate professor of biochemical pharmacology at the University of Buffalo, N.Y.

"It causes the depletion of oxygen to all the vital organs," he said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Man robbed

Staff reports

A 31-year-old Midland man was robbed of $177 in cash at a local drive-in restaurant at about 2:30 a.m. Sunday morning, police officials said.

According to police reports, Rone C. Ramirez told police he was counting money in his wallet while sitting at a table at Red's, 1807 E. Highway 80, when two men approached him and grabbed the wallet. Ramirez tried to stop the men but was struck in the face several times by both men.

The two men fled the scene on foot.

One was described as a Hispanic man with black hair, between 20 and 23 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds. The second man was reportedly a black man with black hair, between 30 to 35 years of age, 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds.

Clerk robbed

ODESSA — A clerk at an antique store suffered minor injuries after she was robbed at about 12:40 p.m. Monday, Odessa police officials said.

An undermined amount of cash from the register and the clerk's purse were taken from Rita's Unique Shop, 1204 W. 10th St.

The robber reportedly threw the clerk to the floor, injuring her left wrist and elbow, police said.

Arrest warrants

ODESSA — A special task force of the Odessa Police Department will be seeking people wanted on multiple arrest warrants beginning March 11, Odessa police officials said.

Twelve officers will make up the task force that will target multiple offenders wanted on Class C warrants.

Offenders may avoid being taken into custody by contacting the Odessa Municipal Court about their outstanding warrants prior to March 11.

Suspect arrested

ODESSA — An Odessa man was arrested Sunday in Howard County for possession of about $400 worth of cocaine and $5,000 cash, as a result of a Odessa Crime Stoppers tip, Odessa police officials said.

Abel G. Romero, 31, was apprehended after a joint investigation by Odessa police and Howard and Martin counties sheriff's offices.

Bond was set at $15,000 by Howard County Justice of the Peace W.H. Shankles.

Romero was transferred to the Ector County jail where he posted bond and was released, jail officials said.

Three killed in refinery fire

SULPHUR, La. (AP) — An explosion and fire at one of the nation's largest oil refineries killed three people and injured at least 12 others, authorities said Monday.

Officials at the Citgo Petroleum Corp. refinery said one of the plant's three catalytic converters, used in refining gasoline, exploded Sunday night.

Workers cut off pipelines and the fire burned itself out early Monday after 2½ hours, said plant spokesman Bob Davidson.

The explosion occurred as a unit was being brought back on line after being shut down for maintenance for several weeks. Davidson said normal hazards associated with refining are increased when a unit is turned back on.

Senators rip DHS board for absence

AUSTIN (AP) — The failure of any state welfare board member to testify at the department's budget hearing Monday shows what's wrong with the attitude in too many government agencies, Gov. Ann Richards said.

"We are not here to have a good time, we are here to work," Richards said. "It has been a long time since that message was clearly delivered to the agencies of this state."

Her criticism followed a fiery speech by Sen. John Montford, who chairs the budget-writing Senate Finance Committee that considered the Department of Human Services budget on Monday.

Montford said he was impressed when five members of the Texas Commission for the Blind appeared to request a $3 million budget increase — and angry when no DHS board member testified for its $3 billion spending hike request.

"Not a single board member appeared for that hearing. They were requesting, essentially, a 106 percent increase in their budget," Montford said. "Is it unreasonable to ask that the governing board that sets policy for an agency show up?"

Montford, D-Lubbock, said that attitude angers citizens, too.

"Our taxpayers have had it up to here with business as usual in Texas government," Montford said.

Montford and other senators criticized the department for failing to provide the Legislature with solid budget estimates, for failing to solve critical computer problems and for ignoring the needs of thousands of Texans phoning a Medicaid crisis hotline.

"They had presented us evidence of 900,000 — not 9,000, not 90,000 — but 900,000 unanswered telephone calls a month. Now what kind of service is that for the people of Texas?" Montford asked.

DHS Commissioner Ron Lindsey's office said he wasn't immediately available to return calls.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the board right now includes only three of its six members. The terms of two have expired, and former Chairman Rob Mosbacher resigned after the election.

However, he said, if DHS board members can't fulfill their responsibilities, they should quit. He said lawmakers are tired of the department's failures.

"I think the governor and the (House) speaker and the lieutenant governor all feel the same frustration about it," Brooks said.

Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, said he was worried about the department's attitude toward the people it serves.

"Can you imagine what it's like to be dependent upon their programs?" Whitmire asked. "What about these literally hundreds of thousands of folks who are either being served improperly or not being served at all?"

At a news conference, Richards likened the DHS problems to those of the State Board of Insurance, where she demanded that board members either quit or see the agency put under a conservatorship.

"Government has been managed here at the state level in a rather offhand manner for several years," Richards said.

"Anytime an agency does not appear before a Senate or House committee or at the request of an elected official who has jurisdiction over that agency, they're in serious trouble," she said.

'We are not here to have a good time, we are here to work. It has been a long time since that message was clearly delivered to the agencies of this state.'

It Figures: Call today about third anniversary special

■ Are your clothes too tight?
■ Do you want to lose inches?
■ Do you suffer from arthritis?
■ Has your job got you climbing the walls?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, It Figures Toning and Tanning Salon, located at 1028-H Andrews Hwy. in Western Park Plaza is the place for you! New owner Laura K. Morgan is celebrating the salon's third anniversary with a special incentive this week only that you won't want to miss!

For three days only — tomorrow, Thursday and Friday, sign up for 12 toning visits for just $30 plus tax. Save $18 off the regular price while you try out this remarkable passive resistance exercise system. Call 697-5996 to set up an appointment for a free demonstration today. Don't wait — shorts and bathing suit weather is almost here!

If it's inches you want to lose or if you feel tenseness from a hard day at work or with the kids, you can workout in comfort in an easy, relaxed atmosphere at It Figures. Many Midland men and women have found that no sweat, no strain exercise works!

At It Figures, you don't suffer through high impact aerobics which might wreak havoc on your joints, you don't sign intimidating contracts, and you do not pay any membership fees. All you do is lose inches the easy way on seven different fitness machines. Workouts last just under an hour and you should not feel fatigued or sore after a session.

On the program, your center of gravity is spread out as you lay down — the machines do the work for you. There is a table for slenderizing and toning legs, a sit up table for toning the abdomen and hips, a stomach and hip toning table, a circulating over-all body massage table and several others to tone, firm and refresh.

Many It Figures clients are excited to share their results, such as Sherry Howle, who lost 58 inches in 89 visits (during seven months). Colleen Hughes of Stanton lost 52½ inches in 11 months. Juanita Alcorn lost 61 inches in eight months. And It Figures instructor Billee Welch lost 49 inches in five months.

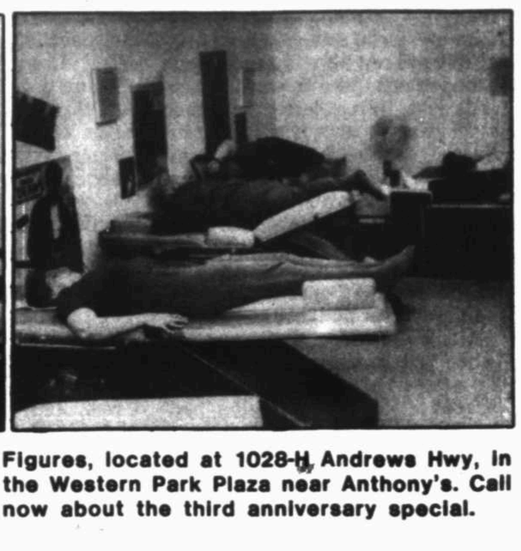

Vicki Builta came to It Figures a year ago. "I needed to tone and reduce stress," she said. "This has helped me tone most in the areas I needed. It also helps me feel good after a stressful day. My father-in-law comes on the advice of his doctor because it increases his mobility after his back surgery."

Another benefit the clients of It Figures comment on is new friendships which easily develop during the sessions. "This is a family-oriented place," said Billee Welch, an instructor. "We have a happy, cheerful clientele which quickly bonds and takes an interest in each other's welfare. You can't be with these people without getting attached."

It Figures works hard to make things convenient for its clients. Senior citizens receive a 15 percent discount on toning (not applicable to specials), husbands and wives also receive a discount when they sign up together (not applicable to specials) and toning customers receive discounts on tanning sessions.

Tanning is by appointment only in a private, spacious and lavishly decorated room. Sessions are complete with stereo music. Ten sessions are $40, one month unlimited is $50 and three months unlimited is $100. Call 697-5996 for an appointment.

At left, It Figures client Sherry Howle exercises on the sit up machine, one of several toning machines available in the salon. At right is a wide shot of the toning room at It Figures, located at 1028-H Andrews Hwy, in the Western Park Plaza near Anthony's. Call now about the third anniversary special.

It Figures hours are convenient also. Drop-ins are welcome from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays. From 3 p.m. to close Monday through Friday, sessions are by appointment only. Saturday mornings are by appointment only.

Join the many Midlanders from teenagers to seniors who either want to tone and firm, follow their doctor's advice for no strain exercise or want to relieve stress and tension. Call It Figures today at 697-5996. MasterCard, visa and Discover cards are welcomed and gift certificates are available.

Let Laura, Billee or Maedell show you with no obligation the system and how it works. And be sure to take advantage of the third anniversary special this week only!

Custom Affects window tinting: New lifetime guarantee offered

Will Willmon, owner of Custom Affects, has five years of experience in tinting windows. Call him today at 687-0233 and find out more about his low everyday prices. Don't delay — summer will be here before you know it!

More and more Midlanders are turning to Will Willmon and his expert cooling window tinting to beat the sun's glare throughout the year. His new business has the answer to help you cut the year round glare and the summer's searing heat out of your life. The best news is that there is a lifetime guarantee on the labor and the materials.

Will Willmon's Custom Affects specializes in quality auto, residential and commercial glass tinting.

Not only can you have the windows of your car professionally tinted, but you can take advantage of Willmon's expertise in applying tinting to home and mobile home windows and boats. With five years of experience in custom window tinting, Willmon has what it takes to get your job done in a prompt, professional manner.

Call 687-0233 for a free estimate. "If I am away from the phone, delivering a car, for example, please leave a message on my answering machine," said Willmon. "I'll return the call as soon as possible." Cars receive same day service, and pick up and delivery are offered at no extra charge.

Custom Affects is an authorized dealer for Sun Specialties tinting film. Choose the amount of tinting — 35 or 20 percent — and choose the color — smoke, bronze, green, red and more. Willmon can find practically any color of your choice for the job.

All materials and labor are guaranteed for life.

Willmon is committed to giving his customers a quality job at a fair price. In fact, he goes the extra step on taking the door panels off to put the film on underneath the rubber so the film won't peel off. Carpets are also taped and each job is handled with professional care.

Call 687-0233 today for more details about Custom Affects. Everyday prices are standard cab minitrucks for just $55.00. Suburbans and Jeep Cherokees can be tinted for $145-$160 and most small two door cars for $105-120. Full-size standard cabs, Ford and Chevy pickups are tinted for $75.00. Mention this story and receive a winter discount.

Cooling window film does much more for you than reduce the temperature in your car or home. It helps save on energy bills and helps keep your interior from fading. As a safety feature, window tinting film helps keep your glass from shattering.

In addition to his skills as a window tinting specialist, Willmon can add custom factory pinstriping to any vehicle or boat.

Custom Affects is located at 1600 Cotton Flat Road — the corner of Francis and Cotton Flat. Call 687-0233 for more information.

Triangle Radiator Service is committed to customer satisfaction

A visit to Triangle Radiator Service could keep you from having an expensive overhaul on your engine. If you are having problems with overheating or a sticking thermostat, for example, instead of buying a new radiator, let the experts at Triangle Radiator Service rebuild, recore or replace with quality parts and service.

For 28 years, Triangle Radiator Service, located at 1010 W. Front at D Street, has serviced thousands of domestic and foreign cars, pickups, oilfield and industrial trucks. Locally owned and operated, Triangle Radiator has earned a well deserved reputation for integrity, dependability and customer service.

Consider these facts and then give the experts at Triangle Radiator a call at 682-9791:

■ Nearly all new truck and car radiators have plastic tanks instead of the original brass tanks. A Triangle Radiator Service spokesperson says, "We are the only radiator shop in Midland that is equipped to remove and replace the plastic tanks. We have available a large stock of plastic and brass tanks. This will save our customers a lot of money." The tank cracks because of a sticking thermometer. The core part of the radiator is still good, so why buy a new, expensive replacement radiator?

■ Triangle Radiator Service is committed to saving you money. If you come in with a problem, it may or may not be the fault of your radiator. If it something else, they will tell you. You won't be sold something you don't need. And if it is a problem they cannot repair, you will not be charged.

■ Triangle Radiator Service is set up to handle all large oil field and industrial truck radiators. The mechanics can resolder headers much of the time to save a very large, expensive radiator.

■ Another Triangle service is removing and replacing gas tanks. It's as easy as bringing in you car's gas tank. Besides cleaning and repairing the gas tank, Triangle Radiator Service also has a tank liner which will coat the inside or outside of the tank if there are too many pin holes to repair or if the tank has become rusty from age.

■ An additional handy Triangle service is to remove and replace heaters in all cars and trucks. Back flush heater service is also available.

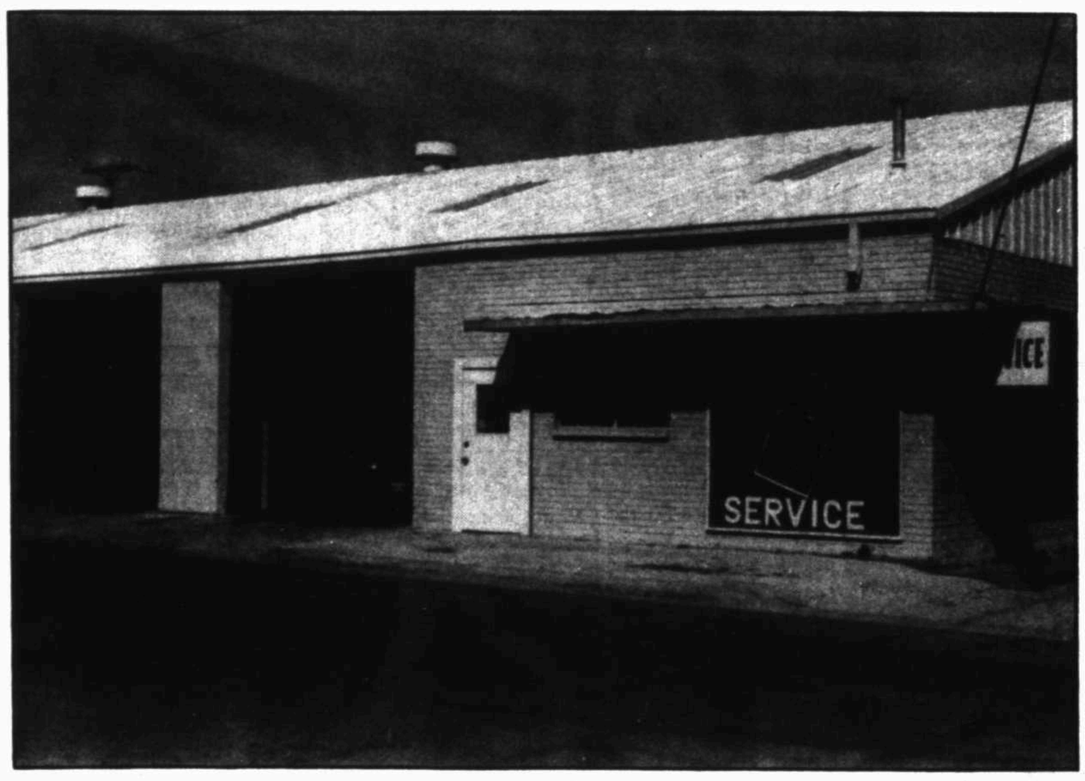

■ A very valuable customer service Triangle Radiator Service provides is the pressure test. When this test is done, it will show leaks from the radiator, thermostat housing, water pump, heater and freeze plugs and hoses. Instead of guess work the Triangle technicians know immediately what needs to be repaired.

■ Many times a car has been heating for a long time or it gets hot quickly because of a stopped up radiator or a sticking thermostat. This will cause a cracked head in the engine and a warped head on the top and bottom head gaskets. This could cause oil to get into the cooling system.

Since these things can happen and can be quite expensive, Triangle Radiator Service recommends the radiator be checked often for correct water flow. The cooling system should be flushed at least once a year and new coolant replaced at that time.

Triangle Radiator Service makes every attempt to complete your job with one day service. You are cordially invited to come to the shop where the technicians will show you exactly what is wrong with your radiator. The shop stocks quality name brands such as Mangum, G&O and Daniels. There is a 90 day warranty on cleaning and repair and a one year warranty of new radiators.

Visa and MasterCard are welcomed at Triangle Radiator Service, which is open from 7:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 682-9791 or stop by 1010 W. Front at D for information or an estimate today.

Triangle Radiator Service, located at 1010 W. Front at D Street, has served Midlanders for 28 years. Let the experts help you save money with rebuilt, recored or replacement parts or a new radiator.

Midlanders are pleased they turned to Lewellen Construction

Many Midlanders are bragging about their homes these days. Not only are they proud of their investment and how it looks, but they are pleased they turned to Lewellen Construction. Owner Bill Lewellen has built a solid reputation for quality installation of no-maintenance vinyl and steel siding, soffit, fascia and storm windows and doors.

Homeowners throughout Midland agree that Bill has the experience and fine products which will increase the beauty and enhance the value of your home for years to come.

Lewellen Construction just completed a siding, soffit and fascia job at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Moffit. Mrs. Moffit reported that she and her husband were "very pleased" with the work. She added that her husband had considered the imporvements on their home several times, but contracted Bill recently when Mr. Moffit saw Bill's work.

Other Midlanders are pleased to comment on Lewellen Construction quality work. "I am delighted with Bill's work," commented Mrs. Charles Hyde, a resident of the Ridge Heights subdivision. "I knew I was going to use him from the start because he is a neighbor of mine and he has done work for many of my neighbors."

"I looked at other homes that had been done by another company," Mrs. Hyde recalled, noting that seeing the work of others solidified her decision to contract Lewellen Construction. She said she appreciated the professionalism of siding installer Frank Loewen. "I have certainly recommended Lewellen Construction to my friends," Mrs. Hyde concluded.

Consider this comment from a homeowner and satsified customer at 2314 Cuthbert: "Lewellen Construction did an absolutely marvelous job. Everything was done exactly as said and on time." He went on to say that he had contacted other companies for a quote on adding siding to his home, but the response was slow. "I tried to get estimates, but Lewellen Construction completed the job before anyone else ever responded."

"A friend passed by my house and saw the work being done. Bill was out there next week working on my friend's house," he added.

Lewellen Construction Co. offers a lifetime warranty on steel or vinyl siding. Bill Lewellen, who has 15 years of experience specializing in the siding and window business, asks you to call 686-8007 or 563-4520 for a money-saving quote.

"Lewellen Construction has the same products available as the nation's largest retailers, only at lower prices and better service because we are local," explained Lewellen. "The large discounts you may see advertised don't even come close to our seasonal discounts. Our slow season discounts are far below others. Furthermore, it's not necessary to call us on an 800 number because we are your neighbor."

Lewellen Construction has served Midland homeowners for the past nine years.

Whether you own a wood siding home or a brick home which has eaves and overhangs, you can benefit from Lewellen Construction Co. quality products and workmanship. For the price you'd have to pay every few years to paint, you can get beauty, convenience and savings from steel or vinyl siding. Lewellen Construction Co. offers a ten-year warranty available at no additional cost on siding installation.

Ask Bill Lewellen for more information on steel or vinyl siding. As a professional, he knows that you want your home to reflect your own style and taste, and can offer you his expertise on colors and designs that will bring out the flair and beauty of your home.

In addition to vinyl and steel siding, Lewellen Construction Co. also sells and installs storm windows.

Lewellen Construction Co. offers honesty, dependability and expert installation at fair prices — what more could you want? Protecting your investment should be your top priority. When you choose to make your home more attractive, more durable and less costly to maintain, you're putting smart dollars into that investment.

Make an important phone call to Lewellen Construction Co. for a free estimate on vinyl or steel siding or storm windows. Bill Lewellen can readily answer any questions you may have.

Lewellen Construction craftsman Frank Loewen adds a finishing touch to a siding job on the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Moffit of Midland. Call 686-8007 or 563-4520 for a free estimate.

Choose Supreme Water Treatment for your reverse osmosis system

Supreme Water Treatment technicians are qualified to install or repair reverse osmosis systems in Midland homes and businesses. Shown with a commercial reverse osmosis unit, back row from left are Brad Hamilton, Cara Rice and Danny Carroll. Front row, from left are Duane St. Clair and J.D. White.

Make an important investment in your family's good health with quality reverse osmosis drinking water from your own faucet and a system from Supreme Water Treatment. Enjoy the convenience of conditioned water, certified equipment and professional service from a company which has served Midland homes and businesses since 1981.

Choose Supreme Water Treatment for your reverse osmosis system for improved taste because it removes up to 95 percent of minerals and hazardous contaminants which give water a bad taste. Dissolved mineral salts, dead bacteria, chlorine and foreign material all contribute to bad taste. All are removed by the Reo-Pure 10 system, which is sold and serviced by Supreme Water Treatment.

This system also protects your family's health by providing water appropriate for low sodium diets. It saves money as it replaces expensive bottled water and it is energy efficient since it uses only water line pressure. Reo-Pure 10 is the most economical system available at a reasonable price.

The company does not have to pay a franchise fee, therefore it can offer the highest quality products to you and can save you hundreds of dollars on the purchase of new water equipment.

A Supreme Water Treatment reverse osmosis system gives you finger tip convenience by eliminating waiting for deliveries, lifting heavy bottles, storing bottles and the worry and the inconvenience of running out. Just turn to the faucet and you have clean, clear, healthy water for the entire family. Other benefits include:

- Computerized technology
- Spring fresh flavor
- More flavorful beverages
- More flavorful foods — cooked in water
- Water for low sodium diets
- Better tasting, clearer ice cubes
- Mineral free water for steam irons, car batteries, humidifiers and other home appliances.

Brad Hamilton, a spokesman for Supreme Water Treatment, explained how his company's system can make a difference for you. "Midland water contains 1800 to 3000 parts per million of total dissolved solids. With our system, it drops the solids to 200 parts per million. Some other systems water, after treatment, contains 1200 parts per million. Texas requirements for bottled water are under 500 parts per million, so our system drops it well under state standards."

"We also use an auto shut off valve on our reverse osmosis systems. When the tank is full, the system shuts down. Most systems on the market use a check valve system that allows good and bad water to pass down the drain when the tank is full. Our system saves about 1000 gallons of water a month."

Supreme Water Treatment specializes in service. In fact, the factory trained, qualified technicians service all brands of water equipment. This company, a member of the Water Quality Association, services 90 percent of the restaurants in the Midland/Odessa area which have reverse osmosis systems. It has this market because of the company's emphasis on service.

Furr's, Luby's, Cattleman's, Taco Villa, Fuddruckers and approximately 40 other businesses are serviced by Supreme Water Treatment. Reverse osmosis water from Supreme Water Treatment is coming soon to Texas Burger, Dairy Queen, Mr. Gatti's and Short Stop.

If you are tired of dry skin, spotty or white glassware, clothes that turn yellow after one washing, higher energy costs because of scaling in your water heater or heavy bottles, choose the easy solution of having reverse osmosis water at your finger tips.

Supreme Water Treatment, in addition to water system sales and service, sells parts, filters and salt. Feel free to stop by the shop at 1207 S. Garfield. You can also benefit from a salt delivery service. For the price of buying salt for your water softener at a grocery store, Supreme Water Treatment will deliver and install it.

Supreme Water Treatment offers free estimates, a 24-hour answering service and honest, dependable service.

Be sure to clip the coupon in today's Business and Industry ad for a $5.00 savings on a filter change. This special applies to any reverse osmosis system. For more information on a reverse osmosis system for your home, stop by Supreme Water Treatment at 1207 S. Garfield Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 12 noon or 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., or call 689-8868.

For St. Patrick's Day, Easter, select Happy Days Donuts treats

Celebrate St. Patrick's Day with plenty o' festive holiday treats from Happy Days Donuts, located at 315 N. Midland Drive. On March 15, 16 and 17, owner Eddy Willmon and his daughter, Cindy Woolfolk, will be creating specially decorated sweets for parties and snacking.

Green cakes, green iced donuts and cupcakes, green and white sprinkle covered treats and pastries with green and white marshmallow fillings will all be available. Donuts, cakes, cupcakes and pastries will be topped with charming St. Patrick's Day picks.

And for Easter later on this month, you and your family can enjoy edible Easter eggs, which may be filled with candy, such as jelly beans. There will be lots of pretty pastel colors, Easter decorative picks, cake Easter baskets and even edible, puffed sugar grass for a bunny's nest.

Call 24 hours ahead with a 3 dozen minimum order and receive a 10 percent discount. Dial 689-8923 to place your order or to find out more information.

Happy Days Donuts is also the home of the famous Malsovit diet and health bread, which is baked fresh daily. Malsovit is now available in an attractive new package.

And that brings us to the question: How can you cut the fat out of your diet? It's simple with Malsovit bread and a Malsovit Fat Trimmer, a simple device to help you determine the fat and saturated fat content of certain foods. For a limited time, you can get a free Fat Trimmer with the purchase of two or more Malsovit loaves. They are $1.00 without proof of purchase.

The Fat Finder is so easy to use. You just pull the slide until the black indicator locates the desired food (snacks, sugars/sweets, fats and oils, fruits, beverages, vegetables, dairy products, breads and cereals, desserts, meat, poultry and fish).

Then, in the Fat Trimmer window, read calorie, fat and saturated fat counts, the percentage of calories from fat and a low, medium or high fat rating.

Foods that are high in fat have more calories per ounce than foods high in complex carbohydrates. So, a very effective way of reducing calories in your diet is to reduce fat intake.

According to published data from Malsovit, the American Dietetic Association recommends a diet in which calories from fat are 30 percent or less of the total calories consumed. Leading health organizations also suggest that reducing fat intake may not only help you lose weight, but may also help lower cholesterol levels and reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer.

When you think low fat, use Malsovit bread for sandwiches — try sliced turkey breast, extra lean baked ham, low fat cheeses; use low fat or nonfat dressings on your salads, and try snacks such as ginger snap cookies, graham crackers, fig bars and frozen low fat or non fat yogurt.

Malsovit bread is just $2.90 per loaf. So stop in soon and try for yourself the Malsovit difference at Happy Days Donuts. Like so many other Midlanders, you'll be glad you did! Call 689-8923 or stop by 315 N. Midland Drive for more information. Store hours are 6 a.m. to noon Sundays and Mondays, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

Happy Days Donuts is pleased to announce the seasonal additions of St. Patrick's Day cakes and goodies and edible Easter eggs, baskets and treats.

Cause of plane crash puzzles investigators

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Workers dug with heavy equipment and by hand Monday to extricate pieces of a commercial jetliner that plunged nose-first into the ground and exploded, killing all 25 people on board.

Flight 585, with 20 passengers and a crew of five, crashed for unknown reasons Sunday on approach to the Colorado Springs Municipal Airport.

It nose-dived in the center of a community park, narrowly missing a nearby apartment complex and houses.

Investigators found the cockpit voice recorder and the flight data recorder — the so-called "black boxes" — and sent them to Washington for analysis, said Brent N. Bahler, a National Transportation Safety Board spokesman.

Workers used their hands and heavy equipment, including a crane and a fire truck, to recover parts of the twin-engine Boeing 737-200 and remains of the victims.

"We're making slow but steady progress in the initial stage of the investigation," said an NTSB investigator, John Lauber. "We're working in the impact crater. It is necessary to proceed literally by hand."

Investigators dug 6 feet and recovered parts of both engines by midday Monday, Lauber said. He said the parts would help investigators determine if the engines were running at the time of impact.

Air traffic controllers warned the pilot of strong wind gusts just before the plane crashed. The National Weather Service reported gusts of 32 mph.

Such gusts can cause an effect known as wind shear, which can reduce a plane's air speed and make it impossible to maintain flight.

Lauber refused to speculate on whether wind shear caused the accident. Investigators are not focusing on one cause, he said.

"We have a big puzzle on our hands," Lauber said.

A list of passengers and crew was released Monday. The pilot was not identified, pending notification of relatives. Three members of the U.S. Olympic organization, two sports scientists and a cycling coach, were among those on board.

The airline flew family members of the victims to Colorado Springs, United spokesman Joe Hopkins said. Most of the victims lived in Colorado Springs.

The plane, en route from Denver, was on final approach to the airport when it banked sharply and veered into the ground, witnesses said.

Witness Bill Ferguson likened the plane's descent to "a dive-bombing mission."

"It just came down like a missile, like a rocket," said Mark Krueger, who had jogged across Widefield Community Park less than a minute before the crash.

"There was a huge fireball, black smoke and orange flames," said Leo Martinez, another witness.

Authorities said either the pilot did a brilliant job of dodging the houses or was incredibly lucky.

"Whoever the pilot was, he was thinking of me," said Charlie Barker, who lives on the edge of the park. "He could have set it down in my living room."

In the only reported injury on the ground, Michelle Summerson, 12, was thrown back from the doorway of her home by the impact of the crash. She was treated at a hospital and released.

LSU hurting

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — LSU center Shaquille O'Neal, the nation's leading rebounder and Southeastern Conference player of the year, will miss the SEC tournament this weekend because of a hairline fracture of his left leg, the school announced Monday night.

The announcement was made after O'Neal was examined late Monday by team physician Dr. J. Thomas Kilroy. A news release said it wasn't immediately known whether the 7-foot-1 sophomore from San Antonio, Texas, might be available if LSU advances to the NCAA or National Invitation Tournament post-season tournaments.

LSU opens the SEC tournament against Auburn at noon CST Friday.

"He's out of the SEC tournament," Kilroy said.

Rebels sweep Coronado

■ Midland Lee's major obstacle to putting the baseball broom to the Mustangs is geographical.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Midland Lee whisked Lubbock Coronado under mat the Monday by sweeping a pair of baseball games that were as different as night and day, both literally and geographically.

The Rebels collected 14 hits and blasted their way to a 12-8 victory in the opener under the sun at Johnson Field.

And Southpaw Jeff Johnston limited the Mustangs to four hits under the lights of Angels Stadium where the Rebels took the nightcap 8-2.

Both games had been scheduled for Angels Stadium, but the field was not ready for the first game thanks to a communication mix-up and the first game had to be moved.

The sweep — built of Rebel comebacks in each game — lifted Lee to 6-3 for the season, while dropping the Mustangs to 3-6.

Coronado established a 4-1 lead after three innings in Game 1 before the Rebel offense got untracked. But fourth-inning doubles by by Sean Salois, Able Rodriquez and David Sullivan and Shane Greeley's two-run homer gave Lee five runs — all after two outs — and the Rebels never trailed again in the game.

John Nelson, who replaced Lee starter Jimmy Patton to start the fourth inning, earned his first victory as the Rebels added four more runs in the fifth behind an Allen Chase two-run home run and a pair of walks by losing pitcher Wagner Wicks.

Brad Sanders, Greeley, Sullivan and Chase were all 2-for-3 with two RBI each in the game.

"Our bats finally came out," said Sullivan, who came off the bench to produce the two-run double that knotted the score at 4-4. "We've been hitting the ball, but right at people. Today we just started hitting where they ain't, so to speak."

"These kids can hit the ball, and when they're in the groove, it involves everybody," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez, who featured two different starting lineups in the twin-bill. "We scored five runs with two outs, and we had some big innings, which is something I think you're going to see a lot of with this team.

"It's good to see, I'll tell you that," he said.

Coronado touched Johnston for a run on two hits in the first inning of Game 2, but the lefty settled down and held the Mustangs to just two more hits and another run while going the distance. Johnston struck out eight Mustangs and walked two.

"I got mad at myself more than anything else," Johnston said of his first-inning deficit, "but I felt pretty good after they got those couple of hits."

Lee's lineup, with five different starters than in Game 1, responded with three runs in the second inning and four more in the third to give Johnston a comfortable 7-1 cushion.

Smiley Hinojos tripled in the first two runs to stake Lee the lead, and Mark Seidenberger's triple and a double by Sullivan sparked the Rebels in the four-run third.

Johnston, who escaped a jam in the third inning when he struck out the side to strand a runner at third, also had his day in the field when he started a 1-6-3 double play that ended Coronado's big-inning threat in the fourth.

"Our guys always seem come up with good offense behind Jeff (Johnston)," Benavidez said.

Brian Cristan allowed seven runs on eight hits and took the loss for Coronado.

Leyland pitches tirade against Bonds

Associated Press

MVP or no MVP, Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland decided Monday to lay down the law to Barry Bonds.

In an obscenity-laced tirade, Leyland ripped into the outfielder who was National League MVP last season. "I don't give a damn what his problems are," the manager shouted. "He's not going to run this camp. He can just go home."

Leyland

Bonds, angry over losing his salary arbitration and being forced to settle for $2.3 million instead of the $3.25 million he sought, recently said he wouldn't re-sign with Pittsburgh after 1992 "if they offered me $100 million."

The pressure cooker popped when the outfielder and manager shouted at each other after Bonds and instructor Bill Virdon, a former major league player and manager, yelled at each other and traded ugly glances during a routine fly ball drill.

Leyland raced over from an adjacent field and started screaming at Bonds.

"One player's not going to run this club," Leyland said, loud enough to be heard over the Pirates' four practice fields. "If you don't want to be here, get the hell out of here. Let's get the show over with or go home.

"If guys don't want to be here, if guys aren't happy with their money, don't take it out on everybody else."

Leyland was at his angriest when Bonds seemed to question his authority, with the manager yelling, "I'm the manager of this team. That's who ... I am."

Earlier, Bonds and publicist Jim Lachimia shouted at each other when the player asked several photographers to quit taking pictures of him. Bonds has been sullen and moody this spring, repeatedly cursing TV cameramen and declining all interviews.

Bonds said he didn't care if the incident further damaged his public image. Later, Leyland tried to defuse the incident, calling it "a family squabble that just boiled a bit."

Spring Training Roundup

— Baltimore's Jim Palmer threw batting practice for the second time in spring training Monday, but said the real test of his comeback attempt will come later this week. "My theory is — and it's quite simple — that nothing means anything until I face hitters," he said. "BP is for conditioning. You get your arm built up.

— Shortly before noon Monday and only 11 days late — that's PST, as in Pascual Standard Time — the New York Yankees and their wayward pitcher were finally reunited. Pascual Perez, Mr. Visa Problems of spring training, showed up at Fort Lauderdale and genuinely seemed surprised there was so much made of his whereabouts.

Hogs dominate All-SWC

■ Texas got its victory, but Arkansas garners most of AP's basketball awards.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Arkansas got its "three-peat" even though Texas shattered the Razorbacks' dreams of an unbeaten farewell league season. In the process, Arkansas garnered most of The Associated Press 1990-1991 All-Southwest Conference basketball awards.

Texas kept Arkansas from becoming only the third team in SWC history to go through a season unbeaten with a 99-86 victory over the third-ranked Razorbacks in Austin on Sunday. The Hogs finished 15-1 in league play, two games ahead of Texas.

Oliver Miller, Todd Day and Lee Mayberry earned first team berths for the Razorbacks and Nolan Richardson was named Coach of the Year for the second consecutive season in voting by his peers.

A fourth Razorback, guard Arlyn Bowers, was honored as the best defensive player in the league.

Other first teamers on the mythical all-star team included two University of Texas seniors, guard Joey Wright, the offensive catalyst of the second-place Longhorns, and forward-center Locksley Collie of coach Tom Penders' team.

Arkansas rolled through the SWC to earn its third consecutive title. No team had won three in a row since E.O. "Doc" Hayes' great Southern Methodist teams of the mid-50s accomplished the trick.

Miller, Day, and Mayberry are all juniors and formed the backbone of Richardson's team, which earned more regular season victories than any team in Arkansas history.

Arkansas leaves the SWC for the Southeastern Conference next season. Richardson's Hogs posted a 28-3 mark in the regular season with the only losses to Texas, Arizona and top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas.

Miller, "The Big O" who stakes out the middle of Arkansas' devastating press, pounds the boards, and has one of the highest shooting percentages in the nation, was named the SWC's Most Valuable Player. He won out in close balloting with Day and Wright.

In other balloting, Chase Maag, the deadly shooter for the Rice Owls, was named Newcomer of the Year and Willie Sublett of the Baylor Bears was named Freshman of the Year.

DALLAS (AP) — Here is the 1990-1991 Associated Press All-Southwest Conference basketball team as chosen by the coaches:

FIRST TEAM

Oliver Miller, Arkansas, 6-9, 300, Jr., Fort Worth, Texas; Todd Day, Arkansas, 6-8, 185, Jr., Memphis, Tn.; Lee Mayberry, Arkansas, 6-2, 168, Jr., Tulsa, OK; Joey Wright, Texas, 6-2, 180, Sr., Hammond, IN; Locksley Collie, Sr. Texas, 6-7, 225, Nassau, Bahamas.

SECOND TEAM

Alvaro Teheran, Houston, Byron Smith, Houston, Steve Miles, Texas Tech, Reggie Smith, TCU, (tie) Brent Scott, Rice, David Wesley, Baylor, and Tim Mason, SMU.

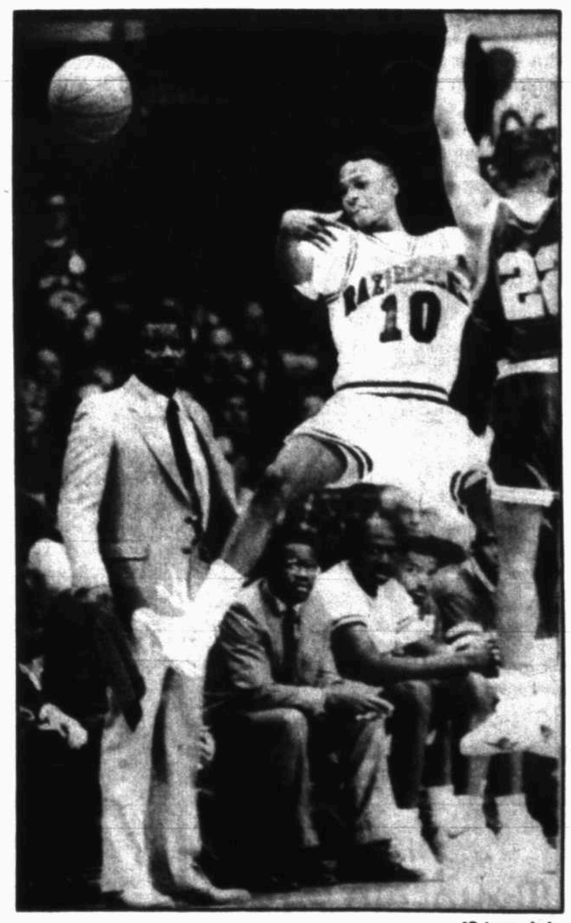

All-Defensive Team

Arlyn Bowers, Arkansas, Darrell Mickens, Houston, Oliver Miller, Arkansas, Alvaro Teheran, Houston, David Wesley, Baylor.

All-Newcomer Team

Chase Maag, Rice, Isaiah Morris, Arkansas, Willie Sublet, Baylor, Mike Wilson, SMU, (tie) Albert Burditt, Texas, and Dexter Cambridge, Texas.

MVP-Oliver Miller, Arkansas.
Defensive MVP-Arlyn Bowers, Arkansas.
Newcomer of the Year-Chase Maag, Rice.

Mavericks win after game over

Associated Press

DALLAS — Rolando Blackman converted two free throws after time expired Monday night, lifting the Dallas Mavericks to a 102-100 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Blackman scored Dallas' last 12 points in the final 3:35 as the Mavericks wiped out a 12-point fourth-quarter deficit and handed the Nets their ninth consecutive road defeat.

Blackman, who scored 21 points, converted one of two free throws with 10.5 seconds left, giving Dallas a 100-98 lead. Reggie Theus' 14-footer tied it with 4.7 seconds remaining.

Dallas worked the ball to Blackman, who just missed a 16-footer as the final buzzer sounded. But he was was fouled by Theus on the play, and Blackman swished both free throws.

Derek Harper added 21 points for Dallas and James Donaldson grabbed 15 rebounds. Derrick Coleman had 24 points and 12 rebounds to lead the Nets.

The Nets expanded an eight-point lead after three quarters to 86-74 on Drazen Petrovic's 15-footer.

Randy White then led a 16-4 Dallas spurt with eight points. White had two three-point plays and converted Brad Davis' lob pass into a dunk with 4:10 to play, tying the game 90-90.

New Jersey, trailing by seven at halftime, got four points apiece from Chris Morris and Mookie Blaylock during an 8-0 run for a 67-61 advantage with 4:21 to play in the third quarter.

Celtics 126, Pacers 101

HARTFORD, Conn. — Larry Bird scored 29 points and tied a team record with seven 3-pointers, leading Boston over Indiana in a possible playoff preview.

Unlike eight days ago, when the Pacers rallied back from a 17-point fourth-quarter deficit against the Celtics for a 115-109 victory, Boston had an answer for every Indiana run.

Bird, who also had 10 assists, was 7-for-10 from 3-point range, tying his own Celtics record set on April 3, 1988 against Dallas.

NBA Roundup

Suns 126, Hornets 93

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Dan Majerle scored 21 points and reserve Cedric Ceballos 20 as Phoenix handed Charlotte its worst loss of the season.

The Hornets previous worst defeat came in a 106-77 setback at Minnesota on Nov. 9.

The Suns improved their road record to 16-14 in the opener of a five-game Eastern swing. They play at New York Tuesday.

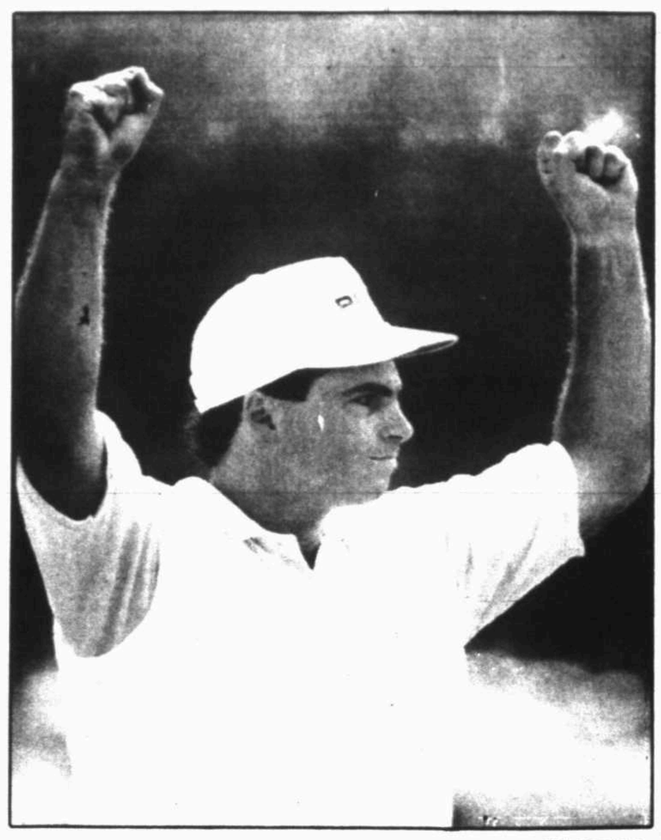

The Hornets had their 100th consecutive sellout to become the first expansion club in any professional sport to do so.

Jazz 106, Magic 88

ORLANDO, Fla. — Karl Malone scored 30 points as Utah won its fourth straight game and improved to .500 on the road.

Malone scored 10 of Utah's first 12 points in the second quarter, keying a 14-4 run that gave the Jazz a 35-26 lead. Orlando, coming off the most successful month in the club's two-year history, never recovered.

The victory was the ninth in 11 games and third straight on the road for Midwest Division-leading Utah, which improved to 14-14 away from Salt Lake City. Orlando was 8-3 last month, but is 0-3 in March with an average losing margin of 15 points.

PGA's top money leader Rocco Mediate ...sudden death victor over Curtis Strange

Mediate takes first title

Doral Open

MIAMI (AP) — After six years of trying, Rocco Mediate finally won his first PGA tournament with a sudden-death victory over Curtis Strange in the rain-delayed Doral Open.

Mediate, one of the tour's most consistent players and now its leading money-winner this season, dropped an 8-footer for birdie on the first playoff hole Monday, while Strange missed a 15-foot birdie try.

"I got in position today, and today I finished it," Mediate, who uses an unorthodox 49-inch putter, said. "I thought first, 'you've done enough.' Then I thought, 'nawww...' "

Mediate's victory came after Sunday's play was washed out with the leaders having completed nine holes.

The win for the 28-year-old Mediate came as no surprise to Strange.

"Look at his record," Strange, who hasn't won since his 1989 U.S. Open victory, said. "He hasn't made many mistakes all year, so you don't expect him to make any in the playoff.

"But gosh, when you get in contention, you want to win. I wanted to win so damn bad I could taste it."

So did Mediate.

"I've worked for this for six years," Mediate said. "I've hit four billion drives like that playoff hole. I expected it (the win) soon. I didn't know how it would happen, but I'm not surprised."

Mediate is one of the few pros using the extra-large putter, more popular among the Seniors Tour players. But since he went to the new putter, he hasn't finished lower than 13th.

In his other five starts this season, he tied for ninth twice, was sixth in another and fourth in the other.

With his victory, worth $252,000, Mediate has earned $403,824 and also leads in stroke average (68.62) and greens hit in regulation.

Arkansas falls in AP cage poll

Associated Press

Arkansas said farewell to the Southwest Conference and, one day later, to No. 3 in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

On Monday, the Razorbacks fell to No. 5 in the poll, the lowest they've been all season, after a 99-86 loss to Texas the night before. Arkansas leaves the SWC for the Southeastern Conference next season.

"It was sad to be playing here for the last time," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said at Austin, Texas. "I've promoted the Southwest Conference in basketball. The higher-ups make decisions about where we go."

The top two, meanwhile, stayed the same: UNLV and Ohio State.

UNLV (27-0) got all 62 first-place votes and 1,550 points after ending its regular season undefeated with a 104-83 victory over Fullerton State on Saturday. Indiana State and Alcorn State, both in 1979, were the last teams to go undefeated in the regular season.

Ohio State (25-1) beat Michigan State 65-64 on a buzzer-beater and had 1,488 points. Indiana (25-4) moved from No. 5 to No. 3 after beating Wisconsin 74-61, getting 1,363 points, and Syracuse (26-4) was No. 4 with 1,347 points after a 62-58 victory over Georgetown.

After Arkansas, the Top Ten consisted of Duke (25-6), North Carolina (22-5), Utah (26-2), Arizona (24-6) and Kentucky (22-6).

North Carolina fell from No. 4 to No. 7 after losing to Duke 83-77 on Sunday. Kentucky moved into the Top Ten from 13th last week with a 114-93 victory over Auburn to end its season. The Wildcats are on NCAA probation and ineligible for postseason play.

The Second Ten consisted of New Mexico State, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma State, East Tennessee State, LSU, UCLA, Mississippi State, Princeton and St. John's. Mississippi State moved from No. 23 to No. 18 after beating LSU 76-63.

Seton Hall, Southern Mississippi, Texas, Alabama and DePaul round out the top 25. Texas and DePaul are new to the poll. DePaul moved up by beating St. John's 79-69 in Rosemont, Ill.

Out of the poll this week are Pittsburgh and Virginia. Pitt was No. 22 until losing to Connecticut 78-68, and Virginia fell out from the 25th spot after losing to Maryland 78-74 in overtime.

Navratilova slows Seles

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Martina Navratilova, the knee-scarred old lady of tennis, forced Monica Seles to wait a week to become the youngest No. 1 tennis player in the Open era.

Navratilova, who played her first Grand Slam tournaments a few months before Seles was born in 1973, dashed youthfully around court on recently repaired legs to win the final of the Virginia Slims of Palm Springs 6-2, 7-6 (8-6) Monday.

The loss delayed Seles ascent to the top of women's tennis and kept Steffi Graf No. 1 for a record 186th consecutive week.

Seles, 17, will get to the top on March 11, because by then her second-round loss in last year's Virginia Slims of Florida will fall off the computer and her average will rise high enough to pass Graf even if the German wins in Florida.

"It's OK not to be No. 1," said Seles, who was carefree enough to drive a rented car without a license all week. "It's disappointing, but it'll come. I'd like to be No. 1, even for a week. I think Martina has a chance to be No. 1 again."

Navratilova said the No. 1 spot is a "toss-up" between Graf and Seles, and worried that she doesn't know "if I have the stamina and mental toughness" to reach the top again.

"This is the first time I've beaten someone ahead of me in a long time," Navratilova said. "I feel pretty good about my game now. There's no sense of urgency, but that goal (to be No. 1) is still up there."

Graf is also keeping track of Seles.

"I'm very much aware of the fact that she's going to become number one," Graf told reporters last week. "It's not a that bad to deal with. I have been number one for so long I don't really feel it any more."

Chaps triumph over TCU men

Staff Report

FORT WORTH — Midland College took four of six individual matches from the Horned Frogs Monday at Texas Christian University in mens' tennis action.

Tonney Van de Pieterman, Berhe Serekebrhan and David Draper won singles matches, while Van de. Pieterman and Greg Muller won in doubles.

The MC men take on SMU today in a duel-team match in Dallas.

Singles: Ton Van de Pieterman def. Pete Gonzales, 6-4, 7-6; Greg Muller lost to Derrin Bowen, 7-5, 6-1; David Draper def. Ota Vojeh, 6-1, 6-2; Berhe Serekebrhan def. Jeff Giese , 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles: Van de Pieterman and Muller def. Jeff Ronan and Giesee, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4; Draper and Toby Curtis def. Ruben Robio and Mark Tjia, 7-5, 6-1.

Manto prepared for any cause

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The only specialty former Midland Angel Jeff Manto has in mind is criminal justice. When it comes to his baseball career, he will try just about anything.

Manto's equipment bag at the Cleveland Indians' spring training camp at Hi Corbett Field is stuffed with seven gloves, a chest protector, a pair of shin guards and a catcher's mask. He is expected to play virtually any position.

Manager John McNamara says Manto is that rare player who can in fact play any position well. Catcher is just Manto's latest role.

"He's one of the best athletes we have," McNamara said.

And that versatility may well translate this year into Manto's first extended time on a major league roster.

The 6-foot-3, 210-pound right-handed hitter had a batting average of .297 with 18 home runs and 82 RBI last season in 96 games at Class AAA Colorado Springs. In 30 games with the Indians, including 76 at-bats, he hit .224 with two homers and 14 RBI.

The resident of Bristol, Pa., is 20 credit hours short of a degree in criminal justice at Temple University. Manto recently put his education to use as a counselor at a halfway house for juveniles released from detention near his home in Bucks County.

Manto says that the teen-agers he tries to help are keenly aware that he is a professional baseball player.

"I try to show them things they need to survive in the world," Manto said. "Things that a lot of us take for granted, like how to fill out a job application or write a check.

"I also want them to feel they're helping me. Sometimes I bring my glove and have them play catch with me. It makes them feel important and improves their self-esteem. And it really does help me get my arm in shape."

Devils seek consistency in NHL, fire coach

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — John Cunniff was fired as coach of New Jersey on Monday and replaced by former Devils coach Tom McVie in a move intended to jolt the Patrick Division's most inconsistent team and get them into the playoffs.

McVie, 55, coached the Devils in 1983-84 and went 15-38-7 before being replaced by Doug Carpenter the next season. McVie had been coaching the Devils' Utica farm team in the American Hockey League.

"I want to take this team to the playoffs and I will do everything in my power to take them there," McVie said.

The Devils said Cunniff would remain as part of the front office team.

The Devils were a popular choice to finish first in the Patrick Division this season. Instead, New Jersey is struggling with a 28-28-11 mark and it is clinging to the fourth and final playoff berth in the division, holding a four-point lead over Washington

Prices rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rallied Monday for a sixth straight session, boosted by an escalating petroleum workers strike in Brazil, a refinery explosion in Louisiana and OPEC's hopes to cut crude production.

The biggest gains came in unleaded gasoline futures, which jumped to 69.40 cents per gallon, up 3.95 cents, for April delivery contracts at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $20.25 per barrel, up 87 cents, at the Mercantile Exchange. Oil last settled above $20 per barrel on Feb. 20.

Prices have been on the rebound since dipping as low as $17.45 during trading on Feb. 25, the first session after the allied ground war with Iraq was launched.

Home heating oil futures also advanced, though not as sharply as gasoline and crude. Heating oil for delivery in April settled at 56.13 cents per gallon, up 1.56 cents.

Natural gas for April delivery settled at $1.355, down .6 cent, per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar closed mixed against the major foreign currencies Monday as traders took a breather after last week's big dollar gains.

Gold prices also ended the day mixed.

The British pound gained against the dollar, closing at $1.9008 in New York, up from $1.8960 late Friday. Earlier in London, sterling rose to $1.8975 from $1.8970 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.53265 German marks, down from 1.5385; 1.3355 Swiss francs, unchanged; 5.2185 French francs, down from 5.2415; 1,144.75 Italian lire, down from 1,150.50; and 1.15515 Canadian dollars, up from 1.15205.

The dollar rose against the Japanese yen, closing at 135.485 yen in New York, up from Friday's 134.60. In Tokyo overnight, the dollar closed at 135.35 yen, up 1.10 yen.

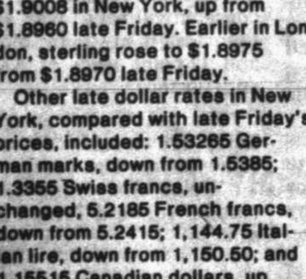

Gold closed at $367.90 on the Commodity Exchange in New York, up 90 cents a troy ounce.

Silver picked up 8.3 cents on the Commodity Exchange, closing at $3.856 a troy ounce.

Small gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eked out an uneven gain Monday amid tentative hopes for an improving economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 20.54 points last week, rose 4.21 to 2,914.11.

Supreme Court to review Fed policy

■ The Supreme Court has agreed to review a Federal Reserve policy known as "source of strength" that has been challenged by MCorp of Dallas.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — At the urging of the Federal Reserve Board, the Supreme Court agreed Monday to review a lower court ruling that invalidated a policy the Fed has relied on for many years in regulating bank holding companies.

The lower court, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled in May that the Federal Reserve had no legal basis to require bank holding companies to transfer money to ailing subsidiary banks. The policy, known as the "source of strength" doctrine, had been part of the Fed's regulatory arsenal for more than 30 years.

In general, the policy has required bank holding companies to guarantee that they will be available as a "source of strength" for both managerial and financial assistance to their subsidiary banks.

The current problems in the banking system have added urgency to the issue. The Fed has sought to use the policy to ensure that bank holding companies support their subsidiaries rather than let them become insolvent, thereby shifting the cost of their failure to the federal deposit insurance agency.

The challenge to the source of strength doctrine was brought by Mcorp Financial Inc., which was the second-largest banking company in Texas before it declared bankruptcy in 1989, soon after the U.S. comptroller of the currency declared 20 of its 25 subsidiary banks insolvent.

After the Dallas-based holding company declared bankruptcy, the Fed began a civil proceeding accusing Mcorp of failing to act as a source of strength to its remaining subsidiary banks.

Mcorp challenged the proceeding as unauthorized.

The Mcorp subsidiaries' failure is expected to cost the federal insurance system about $2 billion.

The case, Board of Governors vs. Mcorp, No. 90-913, will be argued in the fall along with a companion appeal filed by Mcorp. In that case, Mcorp vs. Board of Governors, No. 90-914, the company argues that the Fed should not have been permitted to bring its enforcement proceeding because Mcorp had filed for bankruptcy.

Last May, the 5th Circuit, which is based in New Orleans and has jurisdiction over Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, declared the source of strength doctrine invalid.

The appeals court said that neither the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 nor any other act of Congress gave the Federal Reserve the power to require bank holding companies to transfer money to subsidiaries.

U.S. interest in Soviet oil increases

By Pamela Yip
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – The Persian Gulf War has heightened the appeal of the Soviet Union as a future source of crude oil for the United States, says a Houston energy consultant. .

"Peace has not yet been won (in the Middle East), so you have a great deal of instability," George Reese, head of the energy group of Ernst & Young, said in an interview Friday. "The energy companies, as well as the Western governments, are going to be looking toward the reserves of the Soviet Union as an alternative source."

Reese heads for Moscow this month to head Ernst & Young's 21-member office. He will direct the firm's services to Western energy companies on their projects in the Soviet Union.

Western energy companies are negotiating joint ventures with the Soviet Union on oil and gas exploration because the land has vast untapped reserves of crude oil and natural gas, Reese said.

"It's probably the last frontier where there are very large oil and gas resources," he said. "It's very important to the world economy that we find additional sources of stable production, and the Soviet Union could provide those sources."

The United States is importing more than half of its crude oil, Reese said. Last year, 25 percent of U.S. crude imports came from Arab countries that are members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, according to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a trade publication.

Although the Soviet Union is experiencing political rumblings, they are not as intense as those in the Middle East, he said.

"In the long term, the Soviet Union could be a more politically stable alternative than other parts of the world," Reese said.

But don't expect the Soviet Union to turn on the taps soon, analysts said.

"What Kuwait has experienced with their oil infrastructure through war, the Soviet Union was able to accomplish without firing a shot," said Peter Beutel, oil analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group, a re search firm in Hoboken, N.J. "It's a series of nightmares over there."

Milken's new home

Former junk bond king Michael Milken will call sleeping quarters like the one pictured his new home. Milken surrended Sunday to the Federal Prison Work Camp in Pleasanton, Calif. 40 miles east of San Francisco to begin serving a 10-year sentence for securities violations. During his sentence he will perform eight hours a day of manual labor like construction or landscaping.

Housing less affordable in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices pushed down the ability of a typical family to buy an existing home in January for the first time in seven months despite improvements in mortgage rates and incomes, a real estate trade group said Monday.

The National Association of Realtors reported its Housing Affordability Index slipped to 114.4 from 116.7 in December, the first drop since June. The December index was the highest since it registered 118.6 in May 1977.

The January reading meant a family earning the national median income of $35,700 had 114.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for conventional financing covering 80 percent of a median-price home costing $94,200.

The Realtors said the median price of a home in January rose 2.7 percent from the previous month. The median means half of the homes cost more and half less.

But the median income rose $119 and mortgage rates fell from 9.84 percent to 9.80 percent in January.

Home sales at 8-year low

■ Although new home sales plunged to an 8-1/2 year low, analysts say an end to the Persian Gulf war has sparked increased traffic, causing many to predict a modest turnaround this year.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New home sales plunged in January to their lowest level in 8½ years, the government reported Monday, but analysts said buyers have become more active in recent weeks and forecast a modest improvement this year.

"January was a month of high anxiety," with spending curtailed across the economy because of concern over the Persian Gulf War and the recession, said Richard Peach, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association.

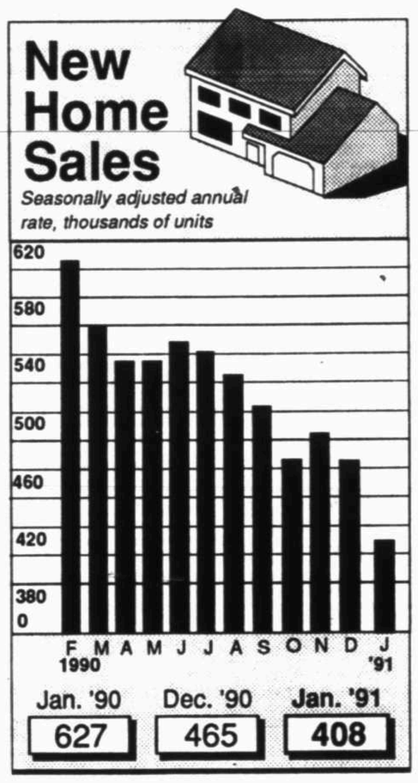

The Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development said sales fell 12.3 percent, to just 408,000 at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, in January. That was the lowest level since a rate of 407,000 was recorded in August 1982.

"Housing activity stalled in the first half of the month as the clock ticked away" on the allied deadline for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, said David G. Seiders, an economist with the National Association of Home Builders.

Since then, however, "we've been getting a lot of reports that things are looking pretty good," Seiders added, citing an increase in buyer traffic and more optimistic builder expectations.

Economist John A. Tuccillo of the National Association of Realtors agreed, saying, "Continuous reports of allied successes had eased consumer anxiety by late January and many markets reported a notable increase in home-buying traffic."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

No interest paid on chain letter bond scams

By Bill Doyle

Q. In 1960, I bought a Series E, U.S. Savings Bond, for $18.75, with the intention of joining a chain letter. I had received a letter with a number of names on it. I was to buy the E bond, have it issued in the name on the top of the list and mail it to that person. Then, I was to add my name to the bottom of the list, send out 10 more letters and ask those 10 people to do the same thing.

Doyle

I found out, after I purchased the bond but had not mailed it, that it was illegal to do this. I did not mail the bond. I found the bond while going through some papers recently.

How can I redeem the bond and get back the money I paid for it — and, hopefully, the bond's interest?

A. You can recover the $18.75 you put up to buy the bond. But your hopes for interest are dashed.

So many of those chain letters, which are get-rich-quick scams for their originators, have popped up, the U.S. Treasury Department has made special arrangements for folks such as you to get your money back.

You can request a refund by using Treasury Form PD 2966. You should be able to obtain that form from your local bank. If not, get it from the Department of the Public Debt, P.O. Box 1328, Parkersburg, WV 26102-1328.

By filling out and signing that form, you agree to indemnify the U.S. government for the bond's value just in case the person whose name appears on the bond gets his or her hands on it and redeems it. Given the circumstances, you have no worry about that.

Depending on the month in which it was issued, that bond now is worth anywhere from $111.93 to $116.55 — the $18.75 purchase price plus accrued interest.

However, you will get only $18.75. The Treasury Department does not pay interest on savings bonds turned in by folks who belatedly realize they were taken in by chain letter con artists.

Q. The new "regional delivery system" for U.S. Savings Bonds seems designed to discourage their purchase. Before that "RDS" went into effect in my area, I was able to go to my bank, buy a bond, receive it immediately and put it in my safe deposit box. Now, I must complete a form at the bank and wait several weeks for the bond to arrive by mail.

This is very troublesome when my wife and I are traveling, as we often are. RDS many be more convenient for the bank, but I see no advantage to me — the average taxpayer.

Whose idea was it to spoil a system that was working well? To whom can we protest? I have complained in a letter to my congressman.

A. You can write to your two U.S. senators. But it's more than doubtful you'll kill off the savings bond RDS, which now is in operation in more than half of the 50 states and is scheduled to go nationwide.

You're really overstating your case. The new savings bond purchase order application is a simple thing and far less complicated than the old one.

Although you wait — perhaps three weeks — for the bond you buy, you lose no interest. It starts accruing interest on the first of the month in which the bond is purchased, even if you buy much later in the month. On the off chance a bond is lost or stolen in the mail, it can be replaced.

A Department of the Public Debt spokesman cites three keys reasons for going to RDS:

To encourage financial institutions, which participate in the savings bond program voluntarily, to continue to offer bonds. Some banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions have been known to steer customers toward products involving less paperwork.

Make it possible to continue to offer small denomination bonds by achieving efficiencies.

Get records of newly issued bonds in "machine readable form" for computerized record-keeping.

SALES: Cause for optimism

(From 4C)

New home sales have fallen for two years and, in January, were 35 percent below the same month of 1990.

At the end of the month, the seasonally adjusted estimate of new houses for sale totaled 316,000. That represented a 9.3-month supply of unsold units, the highest level since a 9.4-month supply in April 1982.

Because builders tend to postpone construction when inventories are high, the report signalled the possibility of continued layoffs in the housing industry.

The Labor Department reported earlier the loss of 155,000 construction jobs in January, although it blamed some of the decrease on unusually bad weather. But the overall weakness in the construction industry has resulted in cutting 450,000 workers from payrolls since May.

Other signs of weakness in January included:

■ The Commerce Department's report last month that housing starts had plunged 12.8 percent to an annual rate of 850,000 units, the lowest level since construction began on 843,000 units in January 1982.

■ A Realtors' report last week that sales of existing homes fell 7.0 percent in January to an annual rate of 2.91 million, the lowest since a 3.07 million rate was posted last October.

There was mixed news Monday on prospective buyers' ability to afford a home.

The government said the median price of a new home fell 4.0 percent to $121,800. "Median" means half of the homes cost more, half less.

But the Realtors said an index measuring the ability of a typical family to buy an existing home edged down to 114.4 from 116.7 in December.

The reading meant that a family earning the national median income of $35,700 had 114.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for conventional financing covering 80 percent of a median-priced existing home costing $94,200.

The government said sales of new homes were off nationwide.

In the South, sales plunged 17.5 percent to an annual rate of 160,000, the lowest since the government began keeping records in 1973. Sales had slipped 6.7 percent in December.

They fell 14.0 percent to 74,000 in the Midwest after being flat the previous month. They were off 12.3 percent to 57,000 in the Northeast, where sales had fallen 5.8 percent a month earlier. And they dropped 1.7 percent in the West to 117,000 after declining 5.3 percent in December.

Travel improves as war ends

N.Y. Times News Service

Some airlines and travel agents with business overseas have reported a surge of bookings as the Persian Gulf war drew to a close.

They said that while some Americans were still holding back for fear of terrorism, many others were now comfortable enough to travel abroad again, particularly because of the discounts being offered.

"Their tentative plans are becoming firm," said Steven E. Heydt, vice president of marketing for Liberty Travel, a large chain of travel agencies on the East Coast. "There is a general understanding that it's OK to travel again."

"Today we're getting calls for Italy, France," he said. The calls for bookings on cruise tours have at times been so heavy that agents have been unable to get through to the cruise lines still taking reservations by phone.

Carriers including Lufthansa, Air France and Pan American World Airways report bookings up significantly since President Bush in an address to the nation Wednesday night stopped the allied drive and proposed a permanent cease-fire.

Kerstin Sabene, a spokeswoman for Lufthansa, said the airline's reservation agents recorded a jump in the number of calls after the speech and had to put many callers on hold.

"It was the busiest since the war broke out as far as telephone calls," she said.

She added that the higher level of calls had continued and that bookings had been running at normal levels, compared with a decline of 20 percent after the gulf war began Jan. 17.

Callers could also have been attracted by lower fares that took effect last Monday, she said.

The fares included a $508 round-trip fare during midweek from New York to Frankfurt.

S&L withdrawals fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Withdrawals from the nation's savings and loans eased in November to $2.9 billion, the smallest amount in 16 months, the government said Monday.

The outflow was markedly less than the net withdrawals of $7 billion in October and $8.7 billion in September. And, it was the best deposit report since thrifts recorded a net inflow of $65 million in July 1989.

Economists said the milder outflow in November, the most recent month for which statistics are available, likely represented a pause and not the beginning of the end of the industry's rapid shrinkage.

Outflows in 1988 and early 1989 were attributed to declining public confidence in S&Ls, while the decline of the last year and a half has been blamed on the deteriorating housing market and on the application of stringent financial standards in the 1989 S&L bailout law.

"They (S&Ls) made the first pass and now they're taking a bit of a breather," said economist Martin Regalia of the National Council of Savings Institutions.

"I don't think the industry has consolidated yet to the point that it needs to. Over the long haul, to say the consolidation has stopped would be grossly premature," he said, predicting that the shrinkage would continue into next year.

SOVIETS: Producers see USSR as more stable investment potential of any former Eastern bloc country, according to a report from the Chicago consulting firm of A.T. Kearney.

For the foreseeable future the Soviet economy is likely to be caught between ill-conceived reform measures on one side, and a reluctance on the part of many Soviet leaders to abandon centralized economic planning on the other.

"The large segment of the Soviet populace and their leaders have not embraced the idea of a market economy," said Michael Griem, Kearney vice president. "There's little enthusiasm or willingness to do anything different."

In the oil industry, the Soviets are struggling with outdated technology, a massive bureaucracy and lack of capital.

"Drilling rig technology is about 20 years behind us," Reese said. "You have so many different governmental entities that are indicating that they have jurisdiction. You have to have all kinds of licenses for bringing in your equipment and you have to have a license for exporting your crude."

Up until about 1989, the oil industry was favored by the Soviet government, said Cristina Haus, analyst at Energy Security Analysis, a research firm in Washington.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eked out an uneven gain Monday amid tentative hopes for an improving economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 20.54 points last week, rose 4.21 to 2,914.11.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,009 up, 605 down and 443 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 199.83 million shares, against 221.51 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 248.95 million shares.

Talk has abounded in the financial world lately that the recession might be at or near a bottom, setting the stage for at least gradual improvement in the months ahead.

A good many analysts believe consumer spending stands to perk up with the successful conclusion of the military campaign in the Middle East.

In addition, some see signs that sectors of the economy like the housing market may be starting to respond to the stimulus of easier Federal Reserve credit policy and lower interest rates.

Although government figures issued Monday morning showed weak sales of new single-family homes in January, demand for houses is widely believed to have increased since then.

But worries persist that a bid at recovery will falter if interest rates rebound significantly from their recent lows or new problems crop up in the banking system.

Gainers among the blue chips included American Express, up ⅝ at 25¾; Boeing, up ¼ at 49½; McDonald's, up ½ at 32½; Merck, up 1⅜ at 103, and Westinghouse Electric, up ⅝ at 28.

International Business Machines, by contrast, dropped ⅝ to 130¾, and Philip Morris was down ⅝ at 65¾.

Securities-industry issues posted some notable gains, benefiting from expectations of improved profits as a result of cost-cutting efforts and the stock market's resurgence of late.

Merrill Lynch rose 1¾ to 31⅝; PaineWebber ⅝ to 20¾; Legg Mason ¼ to 18⅛, and Charles Schwab ¼ to 19.

Chile puts death toll under Pinochet at 2,115

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Patricio Aylwin disclosed Monday that 2,115 political killings have been documented under Gen. Augusto Pinochet's rule and asked Chileans to make sure "something like this never happens again."

In an emotional address, he appealed to the military "to recognize the pain they caused, and try to lessen it."

The president said efforts will continue to find out what happened to hundreds of people who disappeared after being arrested.

Aylwin appeared on radio and TV to make public a report on human rights violations during Pinochet's 16½-year reign. Pinochet yielded the presidency to Aylwin's elected civilian government in March 1990, but remains army commander.

About 300 people, most of them human rights activists and leftist party members, gathered outside Government House, holding lighted candles and chanting anti-military slogans. As Aylwin's speech ended, some attempted a march, but were quickly dispersed by riot police.

Small groups fought brief skirmishes with police, but no arrests were reported.

The 1,737-page report was written by the Commission for Truth and Reconciliation, a nine-member panel Aylwin named shortly after he succeeded Pinochet.

The report did not disclose names of those responsible.

Aylwin admitted that justice will not be served in every case, partly because of an amnesty Pinochet issued covering the 1973-1978 period. All but 253 of the 2,115 documented deaths occurred during those years.

But the president said many cases are already in court and others will be soon. Government sources and human rights groups say more than 300 trials connected with rights violations are going on throughout Chile.

Demands for justice pose a highly sensitive problem for Aylwin in his efforts to promote national reconciliation and consolidate Chile's newly restored democracy.

He says the situation requires extreme prudence, a reference to how the military may react to rights trials.

Besides the 2,115 people listed as killed for political reasons, the report registered 164 cases of people who died as "victims of political violence," including 132 military or security services personnel killed in clashes or terrorist attacks.

It said 957 dissidents disappeared after being arrested by government agents and must be considered dead.

It investigated an additional 1,090 cases but could not find out what happened to them.

Aylwin, saying the abuses were carried out by "agents of the state," added that as president, "I dare to assume representation of the entire nation and on its behalf, I beg its pardon to the relatives of the victims."

He announced "moral and material" compensation to relatives, including pensions, housing, health plans and scholarships

The report said torture of prisoners was widespread, especially during the first three years after the 1973 coup in which Pinochet and other military leaders overthrew elected civilian President Salvador Allende.

Pinochet "accumulated an amount of power never seen in Chile before," it said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Tribal battles leave 24 dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Tribal rivalries broke out in violence at a workers' hostel in the black township of Soweto, where at least 24 people died in hand-to-hand battles between Zulus and Xhosas, police said Monday.

There were 15 injuries in Sunday's fighting.

The battle probably was tied to the murder of a Zulu found Friday in the hostel, police said. Another factor may have been that some hostel dwellers wore pro-ANC T-shirts, The Star newspaper of Johannesburg said.

It quoted a hostel resident as saying an argument broke out between Zulus and Xhosas on Sunday, after a Zulu demanded T-shirts bearing the African National Congress logo be banned from the hostel.

Zulus comprise the largest of South Africa's tribes and are the main support for the Inkatha Freedom Party, the ANC's bitter rival. Most Xhosas support the ANC.

Coalition disbands

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT)N— The United Democratic Front, a coalition of anti-apartheid groups formed seven and a half years ago, announced on Monday that it would disband as a result of the political changes under way in South Africa.

"We feel that the purpose for which we were set up has been achieved," Patrick "Terror" Lekota, who was the front's publicity secretary when it was founded in 1983, said at a news conference on Monday.

The Front's National Executive Committee suggested that its members support the African National Congress, for whom the front effectively functioned as a domestic surrogate while the congress was outlawed for 30 years.

Nominee withdraws

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Col. Faustino Rico Toro, under fire since being nominated last week to lead Bolivia's anti-drug forces, said on Monday he would not take the job.

Human rights groups accused Rico Toro of rights violations. The United States suspended aid talks with Bolivia, reportedly in protest over Rico Toro's appointment by President Jaime Paz Zamora.

The U.S.-Bolivian talks on a proposed aid package of more than $120 million were apparently back on track Monday following Rico Toro's resignation.

Canada abandons case

TORONTO (AP) — A case against a retired autoworker accused of sending thousands of Jews to Nazi death camps was dropped Monday because of insufficient evidence, the Justice Department said.

"Justice has finally been done," said Stephen Reistetter, 76, as he left a provincial courtroom. "I'm a free man."

Peter Kremer, director of the federal Justice Department's War Crimes Section in Ottawa, said the department abandoned the prosecution because of "a deterioration in the quality of the case."

Reistetter was charged last year under the Canada War Crimes Act with helping kidnap and transport 3,000 Jews to death camps in 1942 in his native Czechoslovakia.

Groups denounce move

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The governing party of President Roh Tae-woo said Monday local elections will be held this month for the first time in 30 years. Opponents denounced the move.

DEAR ABBY

Loan is more burden than boon

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a family problem that I don't know how to handle.

Van Buren

My daughter and her husband and children live in another state. They both have good jobs and are decent, reliable people. Last year, my daughter and her husband got into a financial bind and borrowed some money from my mother-in-law, who is also my daughter's grandmother. (I'll call her Nell.) My daughter and her husband asked Nell to please keep the loan confidential, as they didn't want anyone else in the family to know about their financial setback. Nell is financially secure.

Well, Nell phoned me immediately to tell me about the loan. I never did tell my daughter that Nell told me about it. Now Nell keeps calling me to rake my daughter over the coals if she is late with a payment! Abby, it upsets me terribly to hear her complain about what a terrible daughter I have. What should I do? — STILL UPSET

DEAR UPSET: Either write a letter or telephone Nell and convey the following message: "I do not want to hear any more about my daughter and her husband's loan — that is between them and you, so please do not mention it again."

And if Nell calls you and brings it up, tell her you are busy and cannot listen to her. Then hang up. Your daughter and son-in-law have my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago, I fell in love with a man. I told myself it was only a "crush" because I felt ashamed and guilty and couldn't face up to my feelings for him. You see, he was a priest and I was a student at a Catholic college in which he taught.

I have since married and haven't seen "Father F." for some years, but my feelings for him have not diminished — they've grown stronger. I keep thinking about him and don't know what to do.

Should I divorce my husband? He's a decent man. I've never told him about my feelings about Father F., but our marriage is not working, and he deserves a woman who loves only him.

Should I take a job that would let me be close to Father F.? Even if I never have any relationship — even a friendly one — would being near him make me feel better, or would it make matters worse?

Should I go on as before, try to be a good wife and mother, and hope that things will get better and I'll forget him? Or should I divorce my husband and date other men in the hope that maybe I'll fall in love with someone else, and do better next time?

Incidentally, I'm a proud, self-contained woman, and consider myself capable of handling my problems. But the fact that I am actually writing to you for advice is a measure of my desperation. Please help me. I can't sign my name. — MY SECRET

DEAR MY SECRET: You have two major problems. Your marriage is in trouble, and you are obsessed with Father F. (Call it a schoolgirl crush, a fatal attraction, "love" — whatever.)

In any case, I suggest that you see a counselor or some kind of family therapist. You must let go of this fantasy you've been nurturing for far too long.

'Lite' cake tastes great, less filling

By Linda Anderson

A few weeks ago, I wrote a column about a brand of "light" cake mix and canned frosting.

By coincidence (I'm sure), within a week of the column being published, I received a package in the mail full of Pillsbury's new line of "light" baked goods and canned frostings.

Anderson

Called Pillsbury Lovin' Lites, this new line includes both yellow and chocolate cake mixes; vanilla and chocolate canned frostings; blueberry muffin mix; angel food cake mix, and fudge brownie mix.

Never let it be said that newspaper people turn down free food — we divided up the mixes, and took them home to be baked. Then we brought them back to the office to be taste-tested by co-workers. (Of course my children and my co-worker's children got into the act. I had both cake mixes and frostings, and she had the brownie mix, and all the kids got to sample the resulting desserts.)

According to information from the company, Lovin' Lites are low in fat, cholesterol-free, lower in calories and "great tasting!" when compared with other mixes. "In fact," the information claimed, "with the new Lovin' Lites line from Pillsbury, you won't miss the fat and extra calories at all — try them and see. Best of all, people of all ages can enjoy these delicious muffins and desserts without feeling guilty. Naturally, they should be part of a balanced diet which provides the nutrients needed while keeping fat calories to a minimum."

According to this information, the blueberry muffin mix "makes twelve 99 percent fat free muffins ... only 100 calories each;" yellox cake mix makes a cake that is "97 percent fat free with 35 percent fewer calories;" devil's food cake mix makes a "full-size cake which is 97 percent fat free and has 40 percent fewer calories per slice than a regular chocolate cake;" fudge brownie mix "makes brownies which are 93 percent fat free with one-third fewer calories ... only 2 grams of fat and 100 calories per serving;" angel food cake mix makes a loaf-sized "fat free angel food cak perfect for everyday use;" and the frostings are "94 percent fat free" (chocolate) and have "two-thirds less fat" than regular canned frostings (both vanilla and chocolate).

Suggested retail prices, as provided by the company, are: $1.89 for the brownie mix; $1.49 for the angel food cake mix; $1.59 for the yellow and devil's food cake mixes; $1.29 for the canned frostings; and $1.29 for the blueberry muffin mix.

The taste tests were thoroughly conducted, with participation by nearly everybody who walked past my office door. Everyone agreed that the baked goods tasted good, and you really couldn't tell they were "light." The blueberry muffins contained real blueberries; the frostings were generally considered better than other canned frostings (although one tester said the chocolate frosting tasted "yuck!"); the cakes were moist, although the devil's food was not as moist as the yellow; and the brownies were as mooshey and chocolatey as all good brownies should be. Only one person liked angel food cake, so we left that taste-test to him.

But what was so interesting about this taste-test was that although the baked goods were all made from mixes and they were all on the "light" side, and everyone knew it, everyone kept coming back for seconds. And thirds.

I guess that means boxed mixes can taste good. And so can "light" desserts.

OK, that's Betty Crocker light cake mixes and Pillsbury light cake mixes. Can Duncan Hines be far behind?

AT WIT'S END

Where are bargains of yesteryear?

By Erma Bombeck

Shopping is one of the last of the combat sports. Even ice hockey pales in comparison. Women used to stand in front of their mirrors and check out their equipment like they were going into battle. Lightweight coats to avoid overheating. Flat shoes for comfort and maneuverability. Credit cards, blank checks, cash, shells, whatever is negotiable. A high-protein candy bar for emergency rations. A folded shopping bag for extra purchases.

Bombeck

It used to be a job for a few good women: the few, the proud, the elite. They were human spending missiles aimed directly at the heart of the city.

But like everything else, shopping has become predictable and without challenge. "Malling" is certainly not the same as dragging from store basement to store basement in hand-to-hand fighting for bargains.

We still have a few ragtag diehards who "do" garage sales. They're the veterans who buy an evening dress for 50 cents and demand alterations, or purchase a picture of the Last Supper in bottle caps for $1.50 and want it marked down because a couple of the caps are missing, but generally, shopping is a sport as dead as chariot racing. There are no more warriors like my grandmother, who bought a $29 watch and paid on it for five years.

I didn't realize how far we had fallen until I tuned in the other day to the Home Shopping Network. A woman was talking about a gold bracelet. She talked nonstop for 15 minutes about that bracelet. I aged watching her talk about that bracelet. She had more to say about that bracelet than I have to say about my three children. Actually, she knew the bracelet better than I know my three children.

A number flashed on the screen to call. That was it. That was all you had to do. No dickering. No fumbling. No bargaining. No threats. When I looked up again, she was waxing on about a pair of bedroom slippers like they had danced down the yellow brick road.

I hate to see American women go soft. I mourn for those who have never seen shopping at its best, but only as a passive sport.

There was a story a few years ago about a woman at a country auction who was attracted to an item. It was a long pole with a rope attached and a cutting blade at the tip of it. She figured she could use a tree trimmer. She bid $2 for it. From the rear came another voice that raised it to $2.50. When she bid $3, the voice from behind her raised it again to $3.50. She countered with $4. There was silence. She went to claim her prize when the bidder approached her from the back of the room and asked, "By the way, what is it?"

Put your hand over your heart. You have witnessed greatness.

Tips help owners get most from VCRs

Associated Press

Videocassette recorders (VCRs) have become almost as commonplace as television sets, but few owners understand how to hook up or care for these amazing machines. Here are some tips:

■ Installing a VCR: Besides the mechanism that records and plays back videocassette tapes, a typical tabletop VCR contains a tuner that selects channels and a timer that turns the unit on and off at the times you set. Hooking up a VCR is much easier than most people think.

If you have a TV antenna, simply connect the antenna leads into the VCR. Then hook the VCR to your TV set; follow the directions in your owner's manual and use the short cable supplied with your VCR.

Note: Most VCRs have jacks that accept 75-ohm coaxial cable, whether the signal is coming from an antenna or a cable system. If your antenna has a twin-wire lead-in, you'll need a simple adaptor, called a matching transformer, to hook the twin-wire lead-in to the VCR. If a matching transformer doesn't come with the VCR, you can get one at an electronic-supplies store.

If your VCR is cable-ready, as most are today, connect the incoming cable to the VCR. Then attach the VCR to your television's cable box. Or hook it directly to the TV set if the TV is cable-ready. Either hook-up allows you to use your TV set with or without the VCR. If you subscribe to a pay channel, you may need a special cable connection to use all of your VCR's features. Call your cable office or a knowledgeable dealer.

■ Troubleshooting a VCR: Make sure the incoming cable or antenna signal or videotape is not faulty.

Make sure there is no loose wiring.

With a prerecorded cassette, try adjusting your VCR's tracking control, which corrects for tapes made on different machines.

If you tune in stations manually on small knobs on your VCR, make sure the station you want is tuned in.

When you can't eliminate interference on the screen with either fine tuning or VCR tracking, the video heads may be dirty, especially if your family uses the VCR often and plays a lot of rental tapes. Refer to your owner's manual for the proper method of cleaning.

CAUTION: If you clean the heads with a special cleaning tape, use it carefully and only as directed; run it 30 seconds maximum. Don't use a cleaning tape regularly on a VCR because it can wear out the heads.

Choice of dentist important to health care

Associated Press

Moving to a new city? Don't wait for a killer toothache before tracking down a dentist.

Get started with the search soon — and be picky. Selecting any new health-care professional is an important, but difficult, task. Rather than choosing haphazardly, or by the size of the phone book ad, follow these recommendations from Better Homes and Gardens:

■ Contact the local dental society for suggestions or ask a respected physician or pharmacist.

■ Seek input from trusted friends.

■ Ask a dental specialist. Through referrals, oral surgeons, periodontists and orthodontists see a variety of other dentists' work.

■ Visit the prospective dentist's office. If this makes the dentist nervous, it probably means something.

■ Look for a clean, friendly office with flexible hours. Also, find a location that's close to home or a place of work.

■ Ask if the dentist takes proper care to prevent the passing of serious contagious diseases from one patient to another. The dentist and the staff should always wear protective gloves and masks during your treatment.

■ Find out if the dentist practices preventive dentistry, such as regular checkups, which may save time and money later on.

■ Finally, ask these follow-up questions: Do they have a reliable means of reminding patients of regular checkups? Does the practice consider a patient's overall health history when planning treatment? What happens in an emergency or if help is needed when the office is closed? How well do they explain treatment plans and how open are they to discussing fees?

What's Dan Quayle to do?

By Maureen Dowd
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — By all rights, Dan Quayle should be enjoying a little boost right now.

President Bush pointedly kept his vice president at his side throughout the Persian Gulf war. When the president and Secretary of State James A. Baker III returned to the White House from Camp David on Feb. 23, the night the ground war began, Quayle was there to greet the helicopter, bounding across the lawn past the cameras with an eager smile.

One of Quayle's pet projects as a senator, continuing the financing for research on anti-missile weapons, was confirmed by the stellar performance of the Patriot missile.

Bush's view of the Soviet peace negotiations as meddling was bolstered by Quayle, whose longtime skepticism about Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to seem more valid. And the vice president was even hailed as part of the president's new inner circle, along with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, in a New York Times column last week by William Safire.

And yet, paradoxically, the historic moment has seemed to dwarf, not enhance, the vice president.

The ridicule about Quayle's peach-fuzz glow — he still looks, as the editor of The New Republic, Leon Wieseltier, once put it, "like the second or third lead in a spring break movie" — has continued unabated.

White House aides were repeating one joke they had seen on television about the president sending out during the war meetings for 20 Domino's pizzas and one "happy meal" for Dan Quayle.

As Bush's other advisers are hailed for their contributions to the diplomatic and military tour de force, there are only two things anyone in Washington wants to know about Dan Quayle. Is he dyeing his temples gray to look older? And is Bush going to dump him in 1992 so he can create the ticket that Republicans crave and Democrats dread: Bush and Powell?

The answer to both questions seems to be no.

A Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll, published recently, showed that half of voters, including a plurality of Republicans, would prefer to see Gen. Colin L. Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as Bush's running mate next year. The general, whose appeal cuts across racial and party lines, got 50 percent to Quayle's 23 percent.

But when Bush was asked about Powell's political future at a news conference, he answered shortly that such questions would be better directed to Powell.

The vice president and his staff members are intensely annoyed by the speculation about the imposing general who directed one of the most successful wars in history; they had feared him as competition long before the war started.

Asked about the poll by Bill Nigut of WSB-TV in Atlanta, Quayle dismissed it as "nonsense, ridiculous," and repeated verbatim a defensive mantra often used by Bush: "Don't pay any attention to the polls. Just listen to the president. Watch what I do. Watch what he does. And listen to what he has to say."

AP Laserphoto

There are only two things anyone in Washington wants to know these days about Dan Quayle. Is he dyeing his temples gray to look older? And is Bush going to dump him in 1992 so he can create the ticket that Republicans crave and Democrats dread: Bush and Powell?

Moving quickly to head off speculation that Quayle might be dropped so that Bush could make a historic campaign with a black running mate, the White House chief of staff, John Sununu, said on the "Evans and Novak" program on CNN last Saturday that Powell had "indicated to a number of us he'd like to be considered for another stint as chairman of the Joint Chiefs."

Sununu said the Bush-Quayle ticket was "lock solid."

Those close to Bush say that he is extremely loyal, as long as his own political future is not jeopardized. ("If it were really a case of George versus Dan," confided one Bush associate, "you could count the seconds it would take to throw Dan over the side.")

But now that Bush's postwar popularity ratings are in the stratosphere, they reason, why should he have to admit that he made a mistake in choosing Dan Quayle?

On the contrary, by relentlessly pushing the 44-year-old vice president into the picture, the president used the war as an opportunity to let the world and the late-night comics know that Dan Quayle would be his man for 1992.

"A high crescendo of aggressive backbiting and mini-campaigns to get rid of Quayle was starting to build in Republican circles, with serious people speculating about different scenarios that might come about with either Powell or Baker," said Eddie Mahe, a Republican consultant.

'If it were really a case of George versus Dan,' confided one Bush associate, 'you could count the seconds it would take to throw Dan over the side.'

"But now, George Bush has sent a precise and powerful signal that 'Dan Quayle is my vice president, and he is going to be my vice president, so just knock it off, folks.'"

It might quell Republican plots to replace Quayle, but the visibility has not translated into greater stature for the vice president.

"He still has a constituency of one," said Richard Viguerie, the conservative organizer.

As one Republican close to the White House put it: "The difficulty with thrusting him forward in the pictures is that it causes frissons of terror each time you see him. You think, oh, my God, he's not actually advising Bush, is he? This is serious life-and-death stuff, not business for Dan Quayle."

Indeed, as Bush is heaped with praise for showing good judgment in the war, he has at his side the vice president who still represents, in political circles, the biggest question mark about his judgment.

Quayle's defenders say that his only problem is that he is in a job that is intrinsically demeaning; Bush and Walter Mondale had the exact same problem, they say.

Walter Mondale disagrees. While he admits it is "a weird job" and its holder is, as Nelson Rockefeller put it, "stand-by equipment," Mondale maintains that the public is still able to "get a notion about your ability and values, your influence and strength."

Mondale said that a political image is like "mixing cement. When it's wet, you can move it around and shape it, but at some point it hardens and there's almost nothing you can do to reshape it."

Many political observers agree that Quayle's problem is that his image has hardened. He is seen as someone for whom things have come too easily, an image exacerbated by the soft cast of his face and the blank and sometimes startled look in his bright blue eyes.

He was put on the ticket in 1988 partly for star quality, and Bush's media adviser, Roger Ailes, even hoped women might try to tear at his clothes. But Quayle, while pleasant, does not have charisma, most analysts agree.

As one Bush intimate said, with a small sigh: "It didn't turn out quite as we had planned and hoped."

Bush administration rejects expansion of long-term care

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A proposal to expand Medicare home health care and nursing home care was rejected as too costly Monday by the Bush administration. Meanwhile, a congressional panel was warned of shortages among nursing home personnel.

Jeffrey G. Sanders, director of the Health Care Financing Administration's office of legislation and policy, said the proposal by Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., could cost $1.2 billion a year.

Stark's bill would allow home health care services to be covered by Medicare for up to seven days a week for 38 days. Currently, Medicare will cover only "intermittent care" — not more than three days in a week — for up to 21 days. Stark's bill also would eliminate the rule requiring beneficiaries to be hospitalized for at least three days in order to qualify for Medicare nursing home care.

Sanders warned that Congress should "think carefully about the costs and benefits of increasing expenditures for skilled nursing and home health care before deciding to push forward with program expansions."

But Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Tex., gave the administration a stern rebuke for failing to offer a long-term or comprehensive health care plan. President Bush said in his 1989 State of the Union message that he would offer such a proposal, but studies within the Department of Health and Human Services are at least several months away from completion and an administration recommendation.

Colorado proposal is food for thought

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

DENVER — Back when the West was wilder, it was deadly dangerous to insult another man's horse. An unkind remark could start a gunfight.

These days, disputes are settled by lawyers, who are better paid than the old gunslingers, if not as quick to get results. And Westerners are no longer so defensive about their horses.

But watch what you say about their vegetables.

Under a bill pending in the Colorado Legislature, those who unfairly "disparage" food products could be targets of civil suits.

In short, if you have something bad to say about peas or carrots or for that matter T-bones, you had better have a good explanation.

Do people have a beef with beef? Why the need for protection for food? Is "anti-veggieism" on the rise?

If so, was it sparked by President Bush's intemperate remarks about broccoli?

The sponsor of the bill, State Rep. Steve Acquafresca, says there was no specific incident that called for urgency on this matter.

Rather, he said, he detected "a general trend in this country to unfairly and inaccurately disparage perishable food products."

Around the state, some people are wondering about the scope of such a law.

'My immediate reaction is that you can't stop a Legislature from enacting silly legislation.'

— David Miller, Colorado ACLU legal director

Kelly Myers, a grocer in Palisade, acknowledged that he had sometimes complained to producers about small bananas and overripe tomatoes.

"Am I safe?" he asked. "Could they come after me for saying these things?"

The bill has caused a lot of snickering. But Acquafresca, who is an apple grower, said he saw nothing funny about it.

"I don't think there is anything funny about producers' being victimized by these unfair, disparaging statements," he said.

As one example, Acquafresca cited the Alar scare two years ago, which raised concerns that apples were unsafe to eat because of the preservative sprayed on them. The fears proved exaggerated, but not before apple prices plummeted.

The measure, which would give agricultural producers the right to sue those who make "reckless and unfounded claims" about food, recently passed the State House of Representatives and now goes to the Senate.

Under the legislation, "any producer of perishable agricultural food products who suffers damages as a result of another's disparagement" of those products "may bring an action for damages."

Colorado's agriculture industry, which ranks second only to tourism in economic importance to the state, has strongly supported the bill.

Brad Anderson, vice-president of the Colorado Cattle Feeders Association, said the bill would also provide a remedy for some of the unkind things being said about beef.

The average person now eats 71 pounds of beef a year, he said, down from 100 pounds per person 15 years ago. He said inaccurate claims about red meat were largely responsible for the decline.

"With this bill, if someone claims that beef is unhealthy, which isn't true," he said, "then we have a mechanism to file a lawsuit."

As an example of a possible suit, Anderson noted that a health food store in Boulder had recently advertised that beef "should be sold in drug stores," because it contains residue from the antibiotics given to cattle.

Jerry Kopel, a state representative from Denver, voted against the measure, even though he considers himself a staunch supporter of all the food groups.

"This is very silly," he said. "It's not going to help the food industry. And it could discourage people from doing legitimate research on products."

Other opponents of the bill say it violates the First Amendment.

Rep. Jeanne Adkins, a former publisher, warned that newspapers could be sued for carrying the views of those who disagree with food producers.

David Miller, the legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Colorado, said his group would be studying the bill.

"My immediate reaction," he said, "is that you can't stop a Legislature from enacting silly legislation."

But Kevin Simpson, a columnist for The Denver Post, concluded that fruits and vegetables had simply "had it up to here" with disparaging remarks.

"It's bad enough they get cored, mashed, ground and pitted," he wrote. "You think they appreciate being defamed?"

New York City faces some tough choices

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Prices of Manhattan apartments may be soft and the city's bridges may be crumbling, but in one category, at least, New York remains on top: It piles on more long-term debt in most years than any borrower other than the U.S. government.

In the 1970s the city's burden of debt was a symptom of its fiscal problems — borrowing to mask poor management and to pay operating expenses. But today's heavy borrowing has a concrete purpose, literally. It is for rebuilding the city.

The city's ferocious appetite for debt stems largely from a decision made in 1988 by the administration of Mayor Edward I. Koch to accelerate sharply its pending on infrastructure, like roads, bridges and the maintenance of city school buildings.

The city's Office of Management and Budget has estimated that even if the capital budgets of Houston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Los Angeles — whose total population is 30 percent more than New York City's — were all rolled into one, that would still equal only 55 percent of New York City's capital program in its 1992 fiscal year. That point is not diminished even if spending by the county governments of those other cities is included.

While most residents applauded the decision to rebuild, the cost of financing this program has now led the city, in its fiscal straits, to an agonizing policy choice: whether it can afford the cost and depressing economic effects now of servicing that debt versus whether it can afford not to fix school buildings, bridges and roadways.

The $22.4 billion in debt the city already has on its books will require it to devote 75 cents of every new dollar of revenue raised this year to meeting interest and principal payments. And over the next four years, the city has plans to issue $17.8 billion more in long-term bonds.

"We're in uncharted waters," said one city official. "Nobody has ever tried to issue this much debt before." The state of California comes the closest, but, as financial experts point out, its economy is many times the size of New York City's, and California enjoys a triple-A rating, which makes its bonds more attractive to investors.

The Koch administration planned to pay for much of that capital investment program with borrowed money. And since the mid-1980s the city has chosen to defer repaying some of its debt and instead to roll it over into the future.

The result of these decisions is that debt service payments are higher now, when the city is in a recession, than they were during the boom years of the 1980s, when the city's tax base increased by 50 percent.

The administration of Mayor David N. Dinkins has already responded to the city's mounting debt problems by paring the city's capital commitment program by $2.3 billion over the next four years, a step that reduced borrowing costs by $1.4 billion. But officials say that may not be enough.

The possibility of another round of cuts in the city's capital spending has already set off a fierce debate within various agencies over the city's future.

While some city officials worry that New York cannot sustain its huge borrowing program because the marketplace cannot absorb that many bonds.

Ice storm paralyzes western, northern New York

■ The storm cut off 1,000 megawatts of power, or 5 percent of New York State's electric output, officials said.

N.Y. Times News Service

The worst ice storm in decades paralyzed wide sections of western and northern New York State Monday, knocking out power to hundreds of thousands of homes and shutting down businesses, schools, government offices and transportation over wide areas.

In a phenomenon both beautiful and treacherous, ice-laden tree limbs that glittered like diamonds and cracked like gunshots broke and fell, bringing down live power lines, striking cars and homes, blocking roads and streets and disrupting countless lives in countless ways.

With power expected to be out for days, Gov. Mario M. Cuomo declared a state of emergency in 19 counties and ordered state agencies to assist the stricken areas.

The New York State Power Pool, representing the state's utilities, said the storm had cut off 1,000 megawatts of power, or 5 percent of New York State's electric output, and had caused heavy damage to power-distribution networks, especially in the Rochester area.

Authorities reported numerous car accidents, wide damage from falling limbs and power lines and many small fires.

But remarkably, no deaths or critical injuries were reported as the storm surged across western New York from Rochester to the Southern Tier and then across the Lake Ontario-Lake Champlain region Sunday night and early Monday.

Utilities said 285,000 customers — more than 750,000 people — were left without power for lights, heating systems, water pumps and other needs. With large segments of the distribution systems down, utility spokesmen said it might be days, or even next weekend, before full power was restored.

"This is the worst ice storm in 30 years," said Mike Power of Rochester Gas and Electric, which reported that 135,000 homes and businesses were without power.

"This is going to be like rebuilding the entire system it took 50 years to put up in the first place."

Niagara Mohawk, which supplies power to much of western New York as well as the Watertown area, said 100,000 of its customers had lost power.

New York State Electric and Gas said it had 50,000 customers without electricity in Hornell, Geneva, Elmira, Plattsburgh and other areas.

While freezing rain is common, producing slushy streets and walks, severe ice storms are relatively rare.

Meteorologists say they occur when heavy prolonged rain over a wide area freezes instantly on trees, rooftops, power lines and other surfaces because of warmer temperatures aloft and freezing temperatures at ground level.

The ice builds up on every surface, forming a glittering, heavy cocoon on limbs and power lines and weighing them down until they collapse.

The Greater Rochester area was apparently hardest hit. Emergencies were declared by the city and the surrounding counties of Monroe, Livingston, Wayne, Allegany, Ontario, Genesee and Steuben, as well as by Jefferson County.

The declarations prohibited all but emergency travel, closed schools and government offices and cautioned residents to stay indoors to avoid the dangers of downed live power lines, toppling tree limbs and streets and roads slick with ice.

Hospitals in the area, all equipped with backup generators, reported no power emergencies.

Responding to calls for aid, utilities in Canada, Pennsylvania and across New York State sent emergency repair crews to assist in what was described as a Herculean task of restoring power.

In Rochester, a city of 280,000, the normally bustling downtown area was all but deserted as businesses remained shuttered.

310 General Help Wanted

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
