DYING WHEAT
...Crop needs a soaking rain in near future

Wheat 'needs good rain'

BY ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

Area farmers seem to be coming down with a case of the stiff necks.

Each day, they point their eyes to the sky in hopes that raindrops will bounce off their faces, but until this morning's light showers, all they had seen were blue skies above and brown, dying wheat below.

"The only thing that's saving the dryland wheat right now is the rain we got back in September," said George Turrentine, a wheat farmer who has opted to irrigate most of his wheat during this unusually dry winter season. "We need a good 2 or 3 inches of rain, I'm thinking."

Hereford's average rainfall for January is .38 inch. According to Ted Peabody, office manager at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Hereford, this area has received only a trace this January.

"Our dryland wheat needs rain in about two weeks. It'll hold on until then, but we really need to get some rain by mid-February," said Donald Meyer, a wheat farmer from Milo Center. "I think there's been a lot of wishful thinking when these weathermen have gotten on and said we had a chance of rain. I haven't seen any of it."

Meyer isn't alone in his frustration over lack of rain. There are about 200,000 acres of wheat around Hereford and only half of it is irrigated.

"I've seen a lot of farmers water their wheat this January which is really rare. It's usually not this bad," Meyer said, "but a lot of the farmers are watering to hang onto their wheat because there's a really good price on it right now."

The cash market price on wheat is $3.75 per bushel, and Meyer thinks it will reach $4 by June. But if it doesn't rain, the price may be even higher, said Richard Schlabs, co-owner of Schlabs & Hysinger Commodity Services, 1500 W. Park Ave.

"Obviously, the weather pattern could lead you to believe the price will be up there in that range, but on the other hand, these weather markets are hard to predict, often going up and down with each weather report," said Schlabs.

The price of wheat may be benefitting from the especially dry season, but so are the green bugs, said Carl Kleuskens, a farmer at Dawn.

"With the wheat as dry as it is right now, it's a lot harder to kill off those green bugs," said Kleuskens. "Of course, any stressed plant is more susceptible to damage, but the dryland farmers say they're not gonna want to spend the money to spray it and I really don't blame them."

Neither Meyer nor Kleuskens anticipate the spring to be anything different from this winter--dry and windy. But there's a 40 percent chance their crops will see some beneficial rain today.

Seeing is believing.

Valley View may scrap plans

Valley View Energy Corp., under contract to sell the City of Austin electricity from two planned West Texas power plants fueled by cattle manure, has offered to scrap the manure plnts and build two natural gas-fueled units in the northwest Austin area, according to a Tuesday report in The Austin American-Statesman.

The contract dates back to 1984 when Valley View agreed to build one plant near Hereford and the other near Gruver. It called for the first plant to be in operation by October 1986 and the second by April 1987.

If the deadlines were not met, Valley View was to pay a $1,000 per day penalty for each plant. The company ran into difficulties in building the plants and has paid $1.5 million in penalities to date.

A company official was quoted as saying the gas plants would be a better deal for Austin because they would mean lower-cost power, increased employment and an increased tax base for the city.

William Graham, president of Valley View, told Austin officials his firm has worked out its problems and intends to build the manure plants, if necessary. But he said his firm has come up with what he considers a more attractive alternative for both sides after talks with Austin Electic Department officials since last fall.

According to the Austin newspaper, the proposal calls for Valley View to build two 26,000-kilowatt gas-fired plants in the Austin area, rather than the two 50,000-kilowatt manure-fired plants near Hereford and Gruver.

Electricity generated by the gas units would be sold to Austin at a cost about 25 percent lower than the manure plants. An Austin newsman said the city city currently has a glut of generating capacity.

Austin will have to decide, stated the Austin article, whether to buy power from the gas units at the lower cost, or--if the city believes the manure-power plants will never be built--to hold Valley View to its contract to build the plants.

Valley View needs a decision from Austin by Feb. 2 because of financial commitments on the manure project, Graham said. The Austin City Council is scheduled to receive a briefing on the proposal in a closed session this week.

The site of the proposed Hereford plant is east of the city. It has been fenced in and a concrete foundation was poured, reportedly at a cost of about $80,000.

Valley View reported an initial problem was in getting agreements from other utilities to transmit the power to Austin. The second major problem has been in getting a company to build the power-plant boilers to burn the manure, Graham said.

Valley View has already sunk $14 million into the project, according to the Austin article. It has approval for $100 million in industrial development bonds to finance the construction.

Hightower beef plan is snubbed

WASHINGTON (AP)--A defiant Texas agriculture commissioner is invoking states' rights as he presses efforts to sell hormone-free beef in Europe, although a federal official says Jim Hightower has no business steering into the trans-Atlantic trade dispute.

"There is no purpose to such negotiation," Roger Bolton, a spokesman for the U.S. trade representative's office, said Thursday of Hightower's dealings with the European Economic Community. "It's not going to happen."

Bolton said federal export laws would bar any sale of hormone-free beef from Texas to the EEC, even if the state and the EEC can agree to a certification procedure for hormone-free meat.

The EEC has banned imports of U.S. beef and beef products because the meat, worth about $100 million in sales, contains growth hormones that the EEC contends are a health threat. The United States disputes those claims and retaliated by setting about $100 million worth of higher tariffs on a variety of Common market products.

Hightower's interference in the trade dispute has infuriated Texas Farm bureau officials, who are calling for his resignation. They contend Europe is using artificial hormones as an excuse to toss up new barriers to U.S. exports and that Hightower's meddling just undermines the U.S. position, further jeopardizing the state's $6 billion beef industry.

"Mr. Hightower knew before he started he couldn't go through with it," said Texas Farm Bureau spokesman Vernie Glasson, who called Hightower's plans "fraudulent from the beginning " and an attempt to "manipulate the media to his political advangate."

Hightower contends "this is not a matter of scientific 'truth' or ideology," but an attempt to find a new niche for Texas agricultural products.

"We see no legal ability for them (federal officials) to stop it unless they impose a formal embargo," Hightower said. "We're taking a states' rights position. If Ollie North can go run a private war with the applause of the administration, why are they getting in the way of a few cattlemen who want to make a sale to our very best customers?"

Ella Krucoff, spokeswoman for Sir Roy Denman, head of EEC delegation in Washington, said the EEC was in "active contact with the state of Texas. We are interested in maintaining the trade; we want that trade to be in hormone-free meat."

Ms. Krucoff said the EEC would be willing to accept certification of the meat's purity from Texas authorities if the federal government is not willing to certify the meat as hormone-free. An EEC veterinarian was in Texas this week to explain the EEC's certification standards.

Hightower said the TDA has asked acting Agriculture Secretary Peter Myers to accept a protocol with the EEC to certify beef from Texas and other states for export, but "we've had no communication back."

A U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Bolton was speaking for the federal goverment in the matter. The U.S. trade representative's office contends there is no way Texas can verify the meat as hormone-free, thus effectively prohibiting it from being exported.

All meat exports must be inspected and certified by the USDA, Bolton said, and federal law requires they meet the standards of the importing country, whether the country of destination insists on it or not.

But because there is no known test to verify cattle have never been given artificial hormones, the USDA can't grant a hormone-free certificate, Bolton said.

"In order to be able to certify meat for export to the European Community has not been treated by hormones throughout the lifetime of the animals in question. That is perhaps not impossible, though clearly impractical and prohibitively expensive, and is not a realistic answer to the problem," Bolton said.

"Beyond which, of course, we are absolutely convinced, and all scientific evidence supports the belief that there is no health basis for the European Community's hormone ban," Bolton said.

Ms. Krucoff said it is "odd" that federal officials would try to bar American exports. "I just can't imagine that."

"U.S. negotiators have tried to present the European Community standards as nothing but a trade ploy to cut the U.S. out of its market," Hightower said. "Maybe so, but why not find out. It's like a poker game. European negotiators put some chips on the table and said 'meet our standards or fold.' Our team was bluffed and our team folded right then and there. Why not up the ante by saying, 'Ok, we have beef that meets your standards, so buy it'?

Former Hereford resident Frank West, 81, of Vernon died Wednesday night, Jan. 25, 1989.

Graveside services will be held in Guymon, Okla., at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Mr. West was born Feb. 13, 1907 in Arkansas. He married Rose Elizabeth Byrd in Red River County on Oct. 5, 1940. She preceded him in death in 1966.

He moved from Littlefield to Hereford in 1947 and remained in Hereford until the late 1970's when he moved to Vernon.

Survivors include two sons in Guymon and several grandchildren.

House plan: raise, no outside pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — House negotiators have reached a tentative agreement that would require members to give up much more than their speaking fees in return for a 50 percent pay raise, according to bipartisan sources.

Senate leaders were not far behind in negotiating a contingency plan to restrict outside income should the raise become law, as expected, on Feb. 8, a Senate source said Thursday.

Both houses are expected to move hastily to restrict non-salary income once the raise kicks in, to minimize the political damage and avoid the embarrassment of members earning considerable outside income in addition to their new salary of $135,000.

Developments on the negotiations, reported by sources who insisted on anonymity, came Thursday as House opponents of the raise admitted they have virtually no chance to prevent the dramatic rise in salary from the current $89,500. Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, a leading opponent, said he's now focusing on long-range strategy to roll back the increase.

Under a special procedure not followed for other legislation, the pay raise for Congress, judges and top executive branch employees becomes law unless both houses vote to reject it.

The Senate is expected to reject the raise in a vote promised by its leaders, but House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., has said House leaders are not planning to vote on the pay hike.

The tentative House package, which still needs further negotiation, would include:

—An end to the honoraria system, which has allowed rank-and-file House members to keep up to $26,850 of the money they earn each year from speeches, articles and other appearances.

—Abolition of the "grandfather" loophole in campaign financing law. The loophole has allowed 190 House members who were in office as of Jan. 8, 1980, to stockpile more than $39 million in surplus campaign money for their personal use. The provision does not apply to senators.

—Restrictions, probably time limitations, on travel for speaking engagements and other appearances. This would prevent members from getting long vacations at resorts from special interests, who invited them to speak for free.

—Restrictions on non-honoraria outside income.

A Senate leadership aide said once the raise becomes law, "the Senate will move promptly to ban honoraria." But the aide said details of the proposal must still be negotiated.

The House package is designed to make financial restrictions broad enough so that lawmakers will be able to stand the heat from angry constituents. Thousands of Americans have listened to radio talk show hosts and sent their representatives tea bags, symbolic of the Boston Tea Party, to protest the raise.

Business wants embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. trade group has offered to buy the unfinished U.S. embassy building in Moscow, on which construction was halted after it was found to be riddled with Soviet listening devices.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Thursday the government is studying the offer by the trade group headed by Dwayne O. Andreas, one of the nation's richest men and chairman of Archer Daniels Midland Co.

No price has been discussed, Redman said, adding that Andreas had only informally proposed the plan to buy the building, which was being built by a Soviet construction company.

"It's only in channels in what we would call a very informal way, in the sense that we have had a discussion through diplomatic channels of this idea with the Soviets, but as I say, very informally and inconclusively," Redman said.

Last Oct. 27, then-President Reagan recommended that the building be razed and rebuilt from the ground up.

The United States had "no choice," Reagan said at the time, "because there's no way to rid it of the many listening devices that we built into it."

Institute of marriage looks bleak

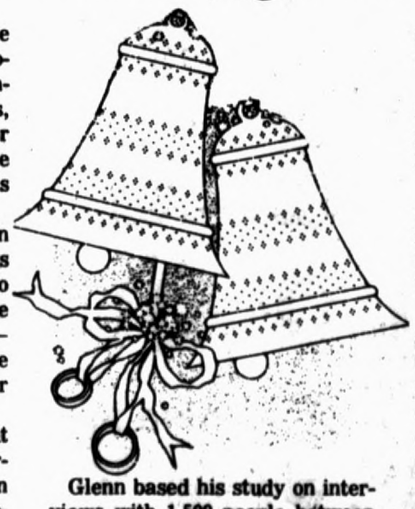

AUSTIN (AP) — Lifestyle pressures on married people today — especially women — increase the chance of unhappiness, and are making "the outlook for the institution of marriage bleak," a University of Texas researcher says.

A study by UT-Austin sociologist Dr. Norval Glenn says couples today are trying to do too much — work full time and be parents, among other activities — and it's taking a toll on marriage happiness, particularly for women.

"There are a lot of women out there who are terribly overburdened," Glenn said. "Even though husbands claim to be doing more household duties than before, they are not."

The study released Thursday also concludes that children have a negative effect on marital happiness for women, but not for men. One or more children reduced the percentage of "very happy" marriages by more than 10 percent, it said.

"Women who take most of the responsibility for child care are burdened by the children more than men," said Glenn, who has been married for 10 years.

Glenn based his study on interviews with 1,500 people between 1973 and 1987, who were asked to rate the level of happiness in their marriages.

The study, which will be published in the National Journal of Sociology in March, concluded that of couples married in the mid-1970s, only a third still have happy marriages.

Of marriages in the 1960s, which were surveyed in the 1970s, 50 percent were still together.

The study also said women are more unhappy than men and that blacks are less happy than whites with their marriages.

People interviewed for the study were asked to rate their marriages as very happy, pretty happy or not too happy.

Glenn said he thought people were less likely to admit to marital unhappiness and would be inclined to exaggerate their happiness.

The greatest decline in marital satisfaction and quality is likely to occur during the first years, when romantic love fades and each spouse's previously concealed negative characteristics appear, the study says.

Half of all divorces occur during the first seven years of marriage, Glenn said.

"Familiarity does not necessarily breed contempt, but it should tend to dispel an idealized image of a spouse," Glenn said. "It is also evident that people go into marriage with overly high expectations."

Glenn said it is misleading to say the divorce rate has gone down in recent years, "because the marriage rate has gone down as well."

Elderly may preserve teeth through proper dental care

The fastest growing segment of the American population is the elderly--people over the age of 65. At the turn of the century, just four percent of the population held "senior citizen" status. By 1980, about 10 percent of the population was in this age group. It's predicted that by the year 2030, 22 percent--55 million Americans--will be senior citizens.

This sizeable, quickly-growing segment of society has special dental health care problems and needs, many of them the result of common misconceptions. According to the South Plains District Dental Society, many elderly Americans neglect their dental health because they assume that dental problems are an inevitable part of the aging process. But this isn't the case. Preventive dental care, focusing on daily brushing and flossing, regular dental visits and a well-balanced diet, can maintain dental health well into the later years.

One of the most disturbing statistics of all with regard to the elderly is this--only 35 percent of people over the age of 65 see a dentist in any given year.

Many people believe, for example, that tooth loss is a normal part of getting older. While it is true that tooth loss does occur among the elderly, much of it can be prevented. Most tooth loss in adults is due to gum disease, which is caused by plaque, a bacterial film constantly forming in the mouth. Careful attention to plaque removal through daily brushing and flossing and semi-annual dental checkups and cleanings can help older adults ward off this major dental health problem.

Fortunately, the percentage of older Americans who have lost their natural teeth is decreasing gradually, thanks to today's emphasis on preventive dentistry. Still, over half of all Americans over the age of 65 have lost all of their teeth. And in 1975, an estimated 21 percent of the total United States population wore either full or partial dentures. (That was down from the 36 percent reported in 1960, however.

Many elderly people who have already lost their teeth and wear dentures also neglect their dental health, remaining unaware that the need for regular dental checkups continues even with dentures. The mouth is constantly changing, and only a dentist can make the adjustments necessary to ensure proper denture fit.

Dental health is a lifelong process, and teeth are meant to last a lifetime.

With consistent dental care, many elderly Americans can keep their smiles glowing for years to come.

Vuytecki assumes duties as Nazarene youth pastor

Michael Vuytecki assumed duties as youth pastor of the Church of the Nazarene in mid-December.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Vuytecki was educated in North Carolina and graduated from Trevecca Nazarene College in Nashville, Tenn.

The single 22-year-old served for one year as youth pastor in Plymouth Church of the Nazarene in Plymouth, N.C. His youth ministry was known as MAD (Making A Difference for Jesus Christ).

Serving as a pastor to youth age 13-19 is Vuytecki's principle duty in Hereford. "I want to reach out to all of the community's youth, not just teens who belong to the Nazarene Church," he said. "My ultimate goal is to raise (Christian) warriors who are overcomers of everyday problems."

Vuytecki has inherited the reins of LIFE, a weekly meeting of Hereford youth held each Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the church's gym. He is assisted by adult volunteers called Lifeguards and said that the format of LIFE would continue but some subtle changes would be made.

"I hope to incorporate more music into these sessions. We have a live band that plays very evangelical, contemporary Christian music. Afterwards we have fun and games, and LIFE's content will vary from week to week." Primarily a singer, Vuytecki also fills in at any of the band's musical positions that may be open.

A MAD Bible Walk is featured for youth each Sunday at 6 p.m. This meeting offers Bible lessons acted out in a dramatic fashion, "done in '80's terms," said Vuytecki. The church's gym is the site for this meeting.

Vuytecki is enthusiastic about his position in Hereford, noting that he currently has a roster of 600 local youth with which to work. "So far, our youth group is growing by thirds each time we meet; we now have a steady attendance of about 150 teens."

A major fundraiser for the group will be held in conjunction with Valentine's Day. A Valentine dinner set for Feb. 10 at the church is open to the public at a cost of $4 per ticket. Barbecue with all the trimmings will be served and a variety show will offer entertainment.

'Faces host Pampa

Hereford will host Pampa tonight at the Whiteface gym at Hereford Junior High with the Lady Whitefaces tipping off their game at 6:30 and the varsity boys scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Both Whiteface teams will be seeking to rebound from a double-header loss at Randall High Tuesday. The girls scored only 18 points in that contest and lost by 40-18.

Coach Frank Belcher hopes his team can establish some rhythm and get some shots to fall. "Pampa has one of the top players in the district in Yolanda Brown and we have to a good job on her and work real hard on the defensive end of the court."

The Herd was down 24 points in the third quarter of the Randall game, and Coach Mike Fields was pleased with the rally that brought Hereford close at the end, 71-65.

The 'Faces are on the road again next Tuesday with both teams playing at Dumas.

Stockton leads at Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Dave Stockton has a new putter, some old habits and absolutely no illusions.

"So I shot 65. Do you think that's going to cause Mark Calcavecchia and those other (young) guys to lose any sleep?"

"No way," was the answer to his own rhetorical question by the man who describes himself as "a 47-year-old with a bad back."

"But it was fun. It was a lot of fun," said Stockton, who found some old habits hard to break in his 7-under-par effort at Pebble Beach.

He kept calling this tournament "the Crosby," the title it held the first 23 times he played it.

And he kept making those putts, getting it up and down from some unlikely places, making the birdies when the opportunity arose, just as he did in his golfing prime more than a decade ago.

Stockton was acknowledged as a wizard around the greens — one of the great clutch putters in golf — when he won PGA national championships in 1970 and 1976.

And that mastery was very much in evidence Thursday when, using a new putter for the first time, he one-putted 13 times and took a one-shot lead in the first round of the tournament now called the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

He got it up and down for par after missing a green by 52 yards.

He used only 10 putts over the last nine holes.

He holed putts for birdie or par totaling 54 yards in length.

And he saved the best for last.

He finished with three straight birdies, dropping an 18-foot putt "with about 10 feet of break," he said, on the 16th and holing from 20 feet on the 17th and 18th.

"I'm not as consistent as I used to be, but on my bad days, my short game is a good as some guy's on their good days," said Stockton, now a part-time performer on the PGA Tour.

Stockton, making his 25th appearanace in this event, took it into the third generation. He once played with his father — "I think it was '74," he said — as his amateur partner. This time, his partner is his 20-year-old son, David.

Under the format that calls for the 180 pros and their partners to play one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses, they'll go to Cypress Point today.

Nick Price of Zimbabwe and Mark O'Meara, both of whom played at Cypress Point, shared second at 66.

Tom Kite, John Cook, Loren Roberts and Lennie Clements were another shot back at 67. Roberts and Clements were at Pebble Beach. Kite and Cook played at Cypress Point.

Jack Nicklaus, 49, opened his season with a 69 at Cypress Point, where defending champion Steve Jones shot 71.

Foreman wins 15th bout since return

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — George Foreman ate an early breakfast of pancakes, with lots of butter and syrup, and sausages to keep his weight up and celebrate his seventh-round victory over Starvin' Mark Young.

"I won't eat like this again until my next win, but if I don't eat now I might lose too much weight and not be able to fight," the pudgy Foreman, who weighed in at 253 pounds, said early today.

Foreman, 40, said he has to keep his weight up around 250 so he can continue the busy fight schedule he's been following since beginning his comeback in 1987, following a 10-year retirement.

He said he plans to fight again Feb. 16 in Orlando, Fla., but he couldn't recall his opponent's name. Thursday night's victory was Foreman's 15th straight since coming back into the ring.

His lifetime record stands at 60-2 with 57 knockouts.

The former heavyweight champion stopped Young at 1:47 of the seventh round after knocking him to the canvas a few seconds earlier with a right hand to the head.

After the Miami fighter, who weighed in at 231, took a mandatory eight-count, Foreman delivered a left and a right, and Young's corner stopped the fight.

"All of a sudden a good shot came from nowhere," said Young.

Young, 10-12, conceded that he made a mistake and turned the wrong way before Foreman landed the big right hand that knocked him to the canvas in the final round.

While Foreman was celebrating and looking forward to his next fight, another former world champion on the comeback trail, Aaron Pryor, was wondering about the future of his career.

Pryor, 33, was taken off Thursday's boxing card by New York Athletic Commission Chairman Randy Gordon after a doctor determined that Pryor's left eye was too badly damaged to allow the junior welterweight to fight.

Dr. Robert Vanderlinde, a Rochester opthamologist, said Pryor has at least "a very dense cataract" and maybe a detached retina. Vanderlinde said Pryor will undergo surgery Tuesday.

Illinois, Duke lose again

By The Associated Press

What a bad night for top-ranked teams — past and present.

Illinois, which moved into the No. 1 spot this week, was upset at Minnesota 69-62 Thursday night. Former No. 1 Duke fell to North Carolina State 88-73 for its third straight loss.

"We came out tonight kind of tight and kind of tentative. I don't know exactly what the reason was," Illinois' Stephen Bardo said.

"It's a tribute to our young men and how hard they worked to be number one," Illinois coach Lou Henson said. "But it (being ranked first) certainly doesn't help you win ballgames."

Willie Burton had 20 points and 13 rebounds and threw three great passes during a 13-0 run in the first half.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 3 Louisville beat Southern Mississippi 95-76, No. 6 Arizona trounced Arizona State 96-71, No. 11 Florida State got past South Carolina 69-67, No. 12 Iowa defeated Wisconsin 78-70, No. 17 Ohio State downed Northwestern 100-68 and No. 19 Stanford whipped Oregon 75-53.

Minnesota turned a 12-11 lead into a 25-11 bulge behind Burton.

Illinois, trailing 33-24 at halftime, scored 10 straight points and closed within 61-59 in the final minutes. But Burton made a jump shot and Kevin Lynch had two free throws to keep Minnesota in control.

Minnesota is 11-5 and 3-3 in the Big Ten. Illinois is 4-1 in the conference.

No. 3 Louisville 95, S. Mississippi 76

Pervis Ellison and Kenny Payne led a second-half spurt that sent Louisville over host Southern Mississippi for its 14th straight victory.

The Cardinals, 14-2 and 3-0 in the Metro Conference, went on a 22-6 run that made it 65-45 with 11:40 to play. Ellison finished with 26 points and Payne had 19.

Darrin Chancellor scored 28 points for the Golden Eagles, 6-9.

No. 6 Arizona 96, Arizona St. 71

Sean Elliott scored 20 points and Arizona used a 21-4 burst in the first half to beat its intrastate rival for the fifth straight time.

The visiting Wildcats, 14-2 and leading the Pac-10 at 8-1, were ahead 45-27 at halftime. Elliott scored nine points as Arizona went on a 14-2 spree to start the second half.

Trent Edward scored 21 points for the Sun Devils, 9-8.

No. 15 N. Carolina St. 88, Duke 73

Brian Howard scored 23 points to lead North Carolina State.

The Wolfpack, 13-2 and 4-1 in the ACC, won for the 11th time in 12 games. The Wolfpack made eight steals in the first half and four more in the final 10 minutes of the game.

Duke, trailing 45-39 at halftime, rallied for a 63-61 lead with 10:15 to go. But the Wolfpack scored six straight points, all resulting from steals, and went ahead for good.

Duke is 13-3 and 3-3.

No. 11 Florida St. 69, S. Carolina 67

George McCloud made a 3-point shot with seven seconds left, rallying Florida State in the Metro Conference game at Columbia, S.C.

The Seminoles, 15-1 and 3-0 in the league, were held 30 points below their season average. Tat Hunter had 20 points and McCloud finished with 17.

John Hudson scored 18 points for South Carolina, 12-4 and 2-2.

No. 12 Iowa 78, Wisconsin 70

Roy Marble got 24 points and became Iowa's all-time leading scorer.

Marble, a 6-foot-6 senior, surpassed the record of 1,768 points set by Greg Stokes four years ago. Ed Horton added 22 points for Iowa, 15-3 and 3-2 in the Big Ten.

No. 17 Ohio St. 100, Northwestern 68

Perry Carter tied a career-high with 25 points and Jay Burson had 19 as Ohio State beat Northwestern.

The Buckeyes scored 14 straight points and took a 23-4 lead.

Ohio State is 14-4 and 4-2 in the Big Ten. Walker Lambiotte scored 12 points for the Wildcats, 8-9 and 1-6.

No. 19 Stanford 75, Oregon 53

Howard Wright scored 19 points and Todd Lichti added 15 for the Cardinal.

Wright hit five of seven shots from the field and scored 13 of his points in the first 20 minutes to spark Stanford to a 34-28 halftime lead. Lichti took charge in the second half, scoring nine of his points as Stanford, 15-4 overall and 7-2 in the Pac-10 conference, pulled away.

'Dream come true' for 49ers Seifert

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Bill Walsh left coaching on top of the world and gave George Seifert a chance to live a dream.

Seifert, a native of San Francisco, was Walsh's hand-picked choice to take over as coach of the 49ers, winners of three Super Bowls this decade.

Walsh's long-rumored move to the front office Thursday passes the 49ers' reins from an offensive mastermind to a nine-year assistant whose forte is defense and whose reputation is for intensity.

Seifert concocted a shifting zone defense that smothered Cincinnati's no-huddle offense in the Super Bowl last Sunday. Now he'll have to figure out how to succeed a mentor he acknowledged is headed for the Hall of Fame.

Seifert said it is a "lifetime dream" for anyone to grow up in an area and go on to coach its team. "It's a heck of dream come true."

Owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr., presiding over a packed new conference, rewarded the 49-year-old Seifert for his patience with a new multi-year contract and his first NFL head coaching job. He praised him as "the foremost defensive coach in the country" and said he will be "one of the best coaches in history."

"The players can rest assured there's not going to be a big changeover as far as the system goes," said Seifert, who grew up in the shadow of Kezar Stadium, the 49ers' former home.

DeBartolo had perhaps an even bigger prize for Walsh, who decided it was simply "time to step aside" after 31 years as a coach. The owner turned over the final say in all 49ers' football-related decisions to the man he called the greatest coach ever, and did it without changing his $1.3 million-a-year contract.

Walsh made his resignation official in a meeting with DeBartolo in nearby Pebble Beach on Wednesday, three days after the 49ers gave him his third Super Bowl title in 10 years as coach.

DeBartolo, who stripped Walsh of the team presidency a year ago after a third straight playoff loss, did not try to talk him out of it. But in naming him executive vice president for football operations, he gave Walsh the chance to help mold his team of the '80s into the '90s.

"It (the meeting) got emotional a little bit because I don't think anybody likes change ... when things have gone so well and so right for so long," said DeBartolo.

As part of the 49ers' reorganization, General Manager John McVay will take on the new title of vice president of football administration. But DeBartolo said that Walsh will be in charge of the draft, trades and roster cuts.

Walsh, the only coach besides Vince Lombardi to quit after winning a Super Bowl, said he's looking forward to his "new career."

He said he had more or less made up his mind to retire during the season but wanted to wait until it ended before making the decision final.

He ended his career with a coaching record of 102-63-1, including playoff games.

Cowboys may not be sold this year

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' excitement over a No. 1 draft pick and a buyer's market have convinced Dallas Mavericks owner Donald Carter that the Dallas Cowboys won't be sold to him or anyone else this year.

"I've accepted that the Cowboys are not going to be sold this year," Carter told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram after the Mavericks' NBA game against the Los Angeles Clippers on Wednesday.

"I haven't heard of any activity the last couple of weeks," Carter said. "My gut feeling is that inactivity means there won't be a sale. That's the way I'm reading it."

Carter wrote a check for $10 million to Salomon Brothers, who is handling the sale of Bum Bright's franchise. Carter was to back up that check with a reported $110 million.

"There's some disappointment," Carter said, "but I can understand their thinking. Say I've got a building for sale. I want it sold badly, but if you come and offer a fair price for it, I've got to turn you down. I've got to wait till the market improves.

"The Cowboys have some things going for them: the draft, the excitement of rebuilding. I wouldn't want to sell it, either."

Carter had said Dec. 29 he was "very serious" about buying the Cowboys. He reportedly had a group of investors in line to assume ownership of the Mavericks because NFL by-laws prohibit cross-ownership.

Some people close to the negotiations questioned how serious Carter was about buying the Cowboys and their lease for Texas Stadium.

After an initial offer of $120 million was rejected, Carter returned with the same offer but posted the $10 million check as a show of good faith.

Jim Francis, a Bright associate who is helping handle the negotiations, told the Star-Telegram there have been no negotiations in more than two weeks.

Francis said that while he has been in contact with several people regarding the sale, there was "nothing of any substance to report. Nothing dramatic." He also said Bright was operating under the premise that he still would be the team's owner for the 1989 season.

Francis, however, stressed that's the only way Bright could proceed. He made it clear that Bright still is ready to sell for the right price.

Carson 'odds-on' pick at Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bud Carson, the defensive coordinator of the New York Jets, was the odds-on favorite to become the next head coach of the Cleveland Browns.

Browns president Art Modell and the team's top front office officials flew to New York to meet over dinner Thursday evening with Carson at his home near Greenwich, Conn.

Modell's attorney accompanied him, a possible indication that negotiations with Carson had reached the point of drawing up details of a contract.

Modell had originally indicated that today was his deadline for naming a new coach, but later said he might need the weekend to make a selection.

Modell said Thursday that his list was down to Carson, 57, and Fritz Shurmur, 56, defensive coordinator of the Los Angeles Rams.

Modell met with Shurmur for 12 hours earlier this week, but a source said Thursday that Carson had emerged as the front-runner because he has worked in the AFC and had more experience with the conference in which the Browns compete.

The Browns lost to the Denver Broncos in the AFC championship game in the 1986 and 1987 seasons.

The Browns began searching for a head coach Dec. 27, three days after their 24-23 loss in the AFC wild-card game to Houston.

Browns' Coach Marty Schottenheimer resigned after being informed by Modell that he would have to dismiss several of his assistants. Schottenheimer, whose dual role as coach and offensive coordinator rankled Modell, was hired Tuesday as coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

SWC videotape: 'Stay and play'

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference is taking a high-tech approach to convince athletes from Texas to play football at schools in the scandal plagued conference by using a videotape featuring some of the conference's top coaches.

It's an effort by a conference that has six of its nine schools placed on probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for rules violations in the past five years to shed its outlaw image.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes is credited with the idea for the videotape.

The message on the tape is "Stay and play in the Southwest Conference."

Prominently featured on the videotape are several of the conference coaches.

On the tape, Texas Christian University coach Jim Wacker implores recruits to remember that "these are your roots. We want the Texas high school athletes to stay right here and play in our conference."

"Hey, who are the most important people in your life?" Wacker asks. "It's your mom and your dad, your loved ones. The guys you grew up with. You want them to be able to see you on TV every week? Listen to your games on radio? Come and see you play in the stands? You bet you do. And the way you can do that better than anything else is to play for a Southwest Conference school."

SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby Thursday told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the 13-minute videotape is part of a league-wide effort to battle negative recruiting from non-SWC schools that use the league's scandal-scarred image as a means of luring Texas players to their campuses.

Last year, 43 recruits from the Star-Telegram Top 100 list signed with out-of-state colleges. Of 409 visits planned by this year's Top 100 players, 281 are to out-of-state schools. Only 157 visits are scheduled to SWC schools, the Fort Worth newspaper reported today.

On the tape, league coaches take turns downplaying the SWC's outlaw image.

"We've had problems," Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum says. "But our league is probably in the best shape of any league in the country. We've undergone the most intense scrutiny that any conference has gone under probably in the history of college football. We're working out of that now, and we've got programs in place to ensure rules compliance.

"The other leagues would be the ones I'd be concerned about — going into another conference or to another program that may be the next stop for the NCAA," said Slocum, who replaced Jackie Sherrill, who resigned in the wake of a play-for-pay scandal that is still under investigation.

Texas A&M was already under NCAA probation at the time the scandal that led to Sherrill's resignation surfaced.

The video, which features game highlights and interviews with seven of nine SWC head football coaches, cost an estimated $2,000 to produce.

The interview footage was shot two weeks ago at the American Football Coaches Association annual convention in Nashville, Tenn.

Houston coach Jack Pardee was absent, and Rice had no coach at the time. But current Owls coach Fred Goldsmith appears as Arkansas' representative. Arkansas' Ken Hatfield was coaching in a post-season all-star game, and Goldsmith, formerly Hatfield's defensive coordinator, filled in for his former boss.

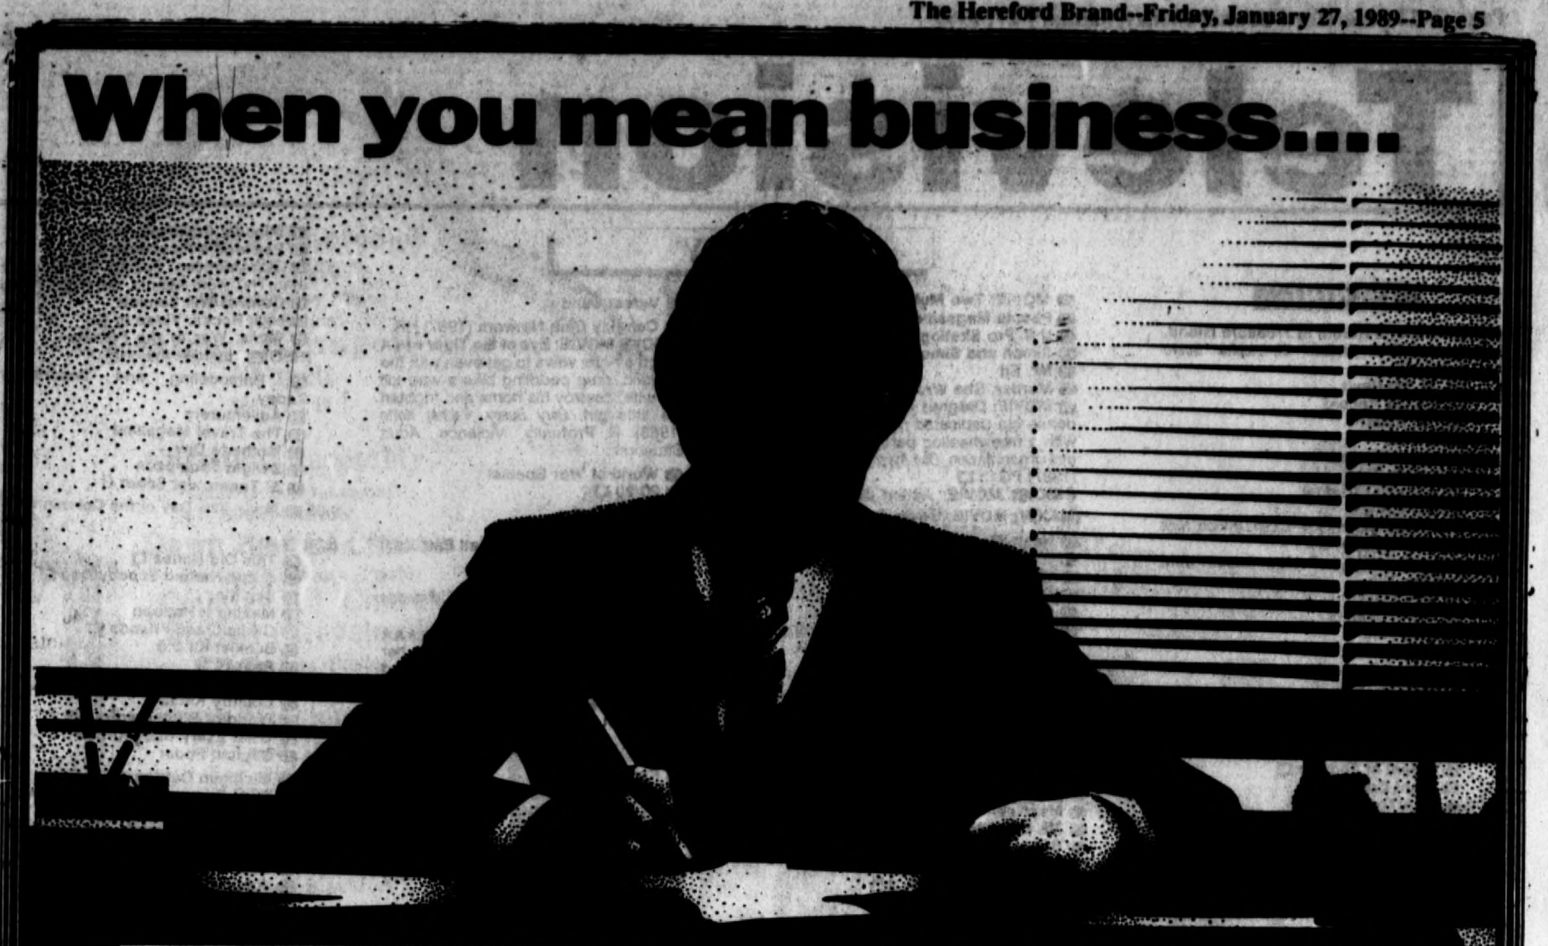

There is no mention of individual schools in the video. Each coach talks about the conference as a whole.

Conference coaches received copies of the video and showed them to recruits for the first time last weekend, Baylor coach Grant Teaff said.

"We asked the guys to wear the conference's hat instead of an institutional hat," said Kevin Lennon, an SWC assistant commissioner. "They did a good job of it.

"This is an effort to show we've taken our licking and grown from it. That we're all in this together," Lennon said. "It was nice to see the cooperation. There was a time when we couldn't have done that."

Another video is planned for the spring. Jacoby said it will be distributed to high school coaches and will address the areas of freshman eligibility, recruiting rules, scholarship limits and letter-of-intent guidelines.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired NBA greats Walt Hazzard, Wali Jones, Bill Bradley and Dave DeBusschere didn't know what they were in for when they showed at "The Cosby Show." They were enlisted by Bill Cosby for a surprise game, and then lost to a group of women.

The women, including Olympians Nancy Lieberman and Teresa Edwards, defeated the men 83-80 in a taping Monday of the NBC sitcom episode scheduled to be broadcast in March.

Hazzard and Jones were enlisted to appear as extras in a restaurant scene but then found out they were going to play some basketball.

"Just as the tape started rolling, out of the other locker room rolls the women's team," said NBC publicist Mary Neagoy. "None of the guys except Cosby knew they were going to play women. They were surprised."

"We did a lot more passing than the women. You appreciate passing when you get to be over 50," Cosby said later.

Lieberman was on the '84 Olympic team and Edwards won the gold in '88. Also on the women's team were Rhonda Rompola, assistant women's basketball coach at Southern Methodist University; college player Anucha Sanders and Stephanie Givens, actress Robin Givens' sister.

Bibs made, donated

Several Red Cross volunteers made bibs and lap robes for Westgate residents recently. Betty Henson, left, executive director of the local chapter of the Red Cross, examines one of the bibs while Helen Kirkeby, center, Westgate activities director, accepts the handmade items from Mary Denton, one of the volunteers. The bibs are available to any of the Westgate residents who may need them during mealtime.

Papayas provide taste of tropics

No matter what the weather's like outside, you can always enjoy a taste of the tropics inside. Even when snow is falling, papayas are available in your local grocery store.

There are many reasons to enjoy a papaya, not the least of which is the fruit's delicious taste, which has been described as a refreshing mix of Crenshaw melon and peach.

Papayas are also low in calories (about 80 per serving, which is half a papaya), and high in potassium and vitamins A and C. (Each half papaya supplies twice the U.S. Required Daily Allowance for vitamin C and two thirds of the U.S. RDA for vitamin A).

And, as if that weren't enough, papayas also have no cholesterol and are low in sodium.

Now that you know why you should head to the supermarket and buy papayas, here's what to look for when you get there.

Make sure that the fruit is blemish free and "breaking" in color-turning from green to gold. Ripe papayas are slightly soft and mostly golden yellow.

Papayas should ripen at home after resting a day at room temperature. Once ripe, papayas should be stored in the refrigerator, where they will stay fresh for several days.

How do you serve papaya? Well, in areas where papayas are grown, such as the Caribbean and Hawaii, people often breakfast on papaya halves (with seeds removed), served simply with a squeeze of time.

But that's just the beginning, papayas work wonderfully in a wide variety of recipes, and they're especially easy to work with because they don't change color after being sliced like most fruits do.

The following recipe ideas come from the Papaya Administrative Committee, Honolulu,Hawaii.

Papaya chunks can be added to coleslaw, carrot, waldorf, chicken, shrimp or other salads, and served in papaya halves.

Papaya chunks are also delicious when sauteed in butter until warm, then dusted with nutmeg and served over pancakes or waffles. Papaya blended with milk or yogurt and egg makes an invigorating breakfast drink.

If you'd like to be a bit more creative, try carving a papaya cradle, which can be used to serve seafood sauces or salad dressings. To make the cradle, cut an L-shape, into the papaya and remove the "lid." Scoop out the seeds and you have an interesting serving dish.

Papaya rings can be filled with salad. To make the rings, cut the smaller stem end of a papaya, scoop out the seeds and pack a salad filling into the papaya. Then chill and slice into rings.

Papaya also can be baked into muffins and tea breads, used to garnish poultry, pork, ham or grilled fish, or added to rice pilaf or Oriental stir-fry dishes.

And that's certainly not all. A little bit of imagination is all it takes to think of more ways to enjoy papayas. No matter how you decide to enjoy them, papayas are sure to brighten your day.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS:

Silk is a delicate fabric which is often referred to as the "queen of fibers." Discovered in 2650 B.C., it is produced when the silkworm attaches itself to branches, sticks or straw and spins a silk cocoon. Each of these cocoons yields 1,000 to 3,000 feet of silk fiber.

Although silk is relatively strong, it does require extra care to maintain its beauty. Perspiration and body oils are its worst enemies since they cause weakening of the fibers. Dress shields or spraying the underarm area with a fabric protector spray can help protect those areas most susceptible, along with regular dry cleaning or hand washing.

If something is spilled on a silk garment, do not attempt to remove the stain by rubbing the area with a damp cloth. Silk fibers are easily broken when wet, so blot it, do not rub.

Spills from beverages may disappear when dry, but the sugar in some beverages will cause a yellow stain that will appear later. Take the garment to your dry cleaner as soon as possible and let him know what was spilled on the garment and point out the stained area. And for heaven's sake be sure to tell them if you have used anything to try and get the stain out.

If there is a chafed area that has lost its color or luster, point this out so the dry cleaner can give the item a special restoration bath.

Silk is a luxury worth protecting, so remember these simple precautions and prolong the life and beauty of your silk garments.

Our thanks to the International Fabricare Institute and all the silkworms around the world. — Heloise

Toastmasters assemble

The Ranch House Restaurant served as the meeting site of Hereford Toastmasters early Thursday morning.

President Lynn Cook conducted the regular meeting. Joe Weaver gave the invocation and the pledge was led by Bob Lohr.

Larry Leon announced the new schedule and upcoming contests. Word master was Lohr while Weaver served as grammarian. Leon served as table topic master and timer and Rocky Lee was general evaluator. Toastmaster was Tom Weemes.

Recognized as best program speaker was Bruce Hernandez, who spoke on the causes, results, and problems associated with teen pregnancy and promiscuity. Best evaluator was Chuck Danley and a three-way tie resulted in the search for best table topics speaker.

Joe Don Cummings spoke on "The Curse is Gone." He noted that every U.S. President elected since 1840 in a year ending in zero had died in office except Ronald Reagan, who was elected in 1980.

Table topics included "Equality of All" by Cook; "Citizen of the Year" by Hernandez; "Inauguration Fund" by Weaver; "Does God have White Skin?" by Lohr; and "Sin Taxes" by Joe Walters.

Also present at the meeting was Clark Andrews.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: The following message by United Technologies Corporation (1986) appeared in the Wall Street Journal. It should be clipped and taped to the bathroom mirror of anyone who needs a boost. When confidence flags and you feel like throwing in the towel, read it.

Some folks may think it's corny, but I find it inspirational.

This Will Make You Feel Better

If you sometimes get discouraged, consider this fellow:

He dropped out of grade school.
Ran a country store.
Went broke.
Took 15 years to pay off his bills.
Took a wife. Unhappy marriage.
Ran for House. Lost twice.
Ran for Senate. Lost twice.
Delivered speech that became a classic.
Audience indifferent.
Attacked daily by the press and despised by half the country.
Despite all this, imagine how many people all over the world have been inspired by this awkward, rumpled, brooding man who signed his name simply,
A. Lincoln.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago, I discovered that my 21-year-old unmarried daughter had put her newborn baby up for adoption. I interceded and made her change her mind and keep the baby.

I didn't realize how troubled the girl was, because she was not living at home. I now know she has a serious drinking problem and conks out for three days at a time. I kept her and the baby for four months and ended up with the entire burden of caring for the child. My daughter would say, "I'm going out for a few hours" and she'd disappear for three days. Now, I fear she is on drugs as well as alcohol.

I worry about the baby when my daughter goes on these binges. What can I do to help her before she hurts the baby or kills herself?--Just Massachusetts

DEAR MAS.: Unless you are prepared to assume full responsibility for this child, you must get an outside agency involved. Your daughter, at this time, is an unfit mother and guilty of gross child neglect. Contact the child welfare authorities in your area. They will intervene and get the ball rolling. Meanwhile, the best thing you can do for your daughter is point her in the direction of Alcoholics Anonymous and pray that she goes.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Three years ago I sold my home in California and moved to Rhode Island to be with my son. His wife suddenly left him and their two little girls, who were 10 and 14.

Three months after I arrived, my son was stricken with a heart attack and died. His wife came to the funeral and we had a talk about the girls. She said she was not able to take care of them and that I could do whatever I wished, so long as I didn't let them become wards of the state. I decided to move back to California and take the girls with me.

I have raised seven children, Ann, including two sets of twins. I still have a 31-year-old handicapped daughter at home. My little granddaughters are lovely. I can't understand why their mother refuses to make an effort to keep them with her. Nearly every week she writes telling them how much she loves them. This really burns me up. The woman has made no effort whatever to support them. The entire burden has been on me.

Do you feel that I should allow this derelict mother to continue to write these letters? Please advise.--Resentful in Riverside

DEAR RIVERSIDE: Your granddaughters need all the love they can get. Even though their mother abandoned them, she may still care deeply. Please find it in your heart to forgive the woman and allow her to maintain this bridge. Bridges are far better than walls.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Become one of the first in our community to own a copy of this magnificent atlas.
