Internal medicine specialist to add heart test services

A new physician will open his practice here Monday, Dr. Harold Miller, formerly of Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine.

Miller is an internist, specializing in the non-surgical treatment of illness. A large portion of his work involves diagnosis and treatment of heart patients.

He notes also he is no stranger to Scurry County, visiting here often with relatives while growing up.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar (Ox) Miller, were originally from Ira and Edgar Taylor, a former Scurry County Judge, is his uncle.

He and his wife Deanne cited the familiarity with the area plus "Snyder's excellent school system" as their primary reason for relocating here.

In fact, Miller played a part in the relocation of another Snyder physician — surgeon Mark Pate — by recommending Snyder when Pate elected to move from Alpine.

The two were colleagues at Big Bend Memorial, where Miller at one point served as chief of staff after locating at the facility in 1979.

"I think Snyder has the nucleus for a fine family of physicians," Miller observed last week, noting that he will be able to add medical testing services here normally available only at large medical centers.

These include one recent addition at Cogdell, the treadmill testing device which monitors heart and respiratory rates while the patient is under a controled "stress" situation.

Another will be a heart catheter system which is inserted into the chest area to measure pressures of the pumping heart.

Miller noted his training includes most of the major testing procedures related to heart conditions short of an angiogram,

Miss AJRA crowned

Saturday night was to be awards night at the American Junior Rodeo Association National Finals, but honors were bestowed Friday as well, including the crowing of the 1984-85 AJRA queen.

Anita Balch, from Sonora, was crowned as the new AJRA queen.

In addition, six all-around saddles, two bronzes, a painting and several plaques and buckles were awarded.

Local saddle donors for the all-around champions included Snyder National Bank, West Texas State Bank, Great Western Motel, the Chamber of Commerce, Board of County Development, City of Snyder, Ezell-Key Feed and Seed and C.E. Natco.

All-Around saddles were awarded to Cory Priest, Roanoke, age 16-19; Traci Christenson, Hewitt, age 16-19; Canyon Clowdus, Dripping Springs, age 13-15; Lari Dee Guy, Abilene, age 13-15; and Mitzi Mayes, Manor, age 12-and-under.

Also presented were bronzes to Mitzi Mayes as high-point girl and Ty Watkins, Odessa, as top bull rider. Artists for the bronzes were Sareta Fenton and Dr. Robert Taylor, respectively.

In addition, Marty Yates, Corsicana, received the Rookie of the Year Award, and the Charles Sawyer family presented a painting to top bareback rider Mike Carrillo of Kingsville.

Pole bending finals were held Friday after the main performance. Stacey Henson of Winnsboro won the 12-and-under short-go with a 22.87; Jana Pierce of Crane took the 13-15 division with a 20.41; and Jana Smith, Abilene, won the 16-19 wth a time of 19.63.

AJRA results through Friday night include:

Farm vote session set

A question and answer session is scheduled here Tuesday related to the upcoming Scurry County cotton assessment referendum election.

It will be sponsored by the Scurry County Field Crops Committee. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Room A of the Scurry County Coliseum.

A panel of local resource people will be on hand to field questions.

The election is sponsored by the Scurry County Producers Association. It is due Sept. 7 and will be conducted at the Scurry County extension office in the Senior Citizens Center.

The election has been called in an attempt to establish a long term program to assist county producers with pest management. If necessary, a fall diapause spray program will be implemented to control the cotton boll weevil.

Among the questions to be addressed include how will the amount of assessment be determined; who controls the funds collected; and how will the funds be used.

Faculty to return at WTC

Faculty members will return to the Western Texas College campus in force Monday as in-service programs for the fall semester get underway.

In addition, Tuesday will mark the traditional faculty and administration dinner at 7 p.m. in the college cafeteria. It will feature this year a presentation with musical accompaniment by Houston humorist Margaretta Bolding.

Offices at the college will resume a regular five-day, 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. operation. They have been on a four-day week during the summer.

In-service begins at 9 a.m. Monday in the science lecture hall with introductory remarks by Dr. Don Newbury, college president. New personnel will also be introduced.

Bob Hawes, Snyder school superintendent, will discuss implications of the new education bill for WTC at a meeting set for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The WTC faculty association has planned its first meeting at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

At the annual school dinner, service awards will be made in addition to the special entertainment by Bolding.

Accompanying her will be Elizabeth Real, one of Texas' leading mezzo-sopranoes, and Lee LaForge, pianist.

The trio will present music by Irving Berlin along with comments on his life, all combined into an entertaining program.

A special session for new faculty members is set for 9 a.m. Wednesday and division chairpersons will meet from 2:30 until 3:30 p.m.

Fall semester registration begins Aug. 29.

Vandalisms here prompt reward offer

The Crimestoppers program, sponsored through the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, has offered up to a $1,000 reward for information related to the recent vandalism spree which damaged windows at up to nine local businesses.

The windows were shot by someone apparently wielding an air rifle of BB gun.

The incidents occurred the weekend of July 14-15 and again Aug. 10 when glass was shot at Owens Department Store, 3608 College. Businesses reporting window damage in July include Southern Electric, 900 College; G&G Grocery, Huffman and College; law offices for Rosser, Armstrong and Terrell, 2515 College; Merle Norman, 2513 College; King & Brown Furniture, 1914 25th St.; Snyder Savings and Loan, 2619 College; Charlene's Drapery, 301 N. College; and Globe Vacuum, Clairemont Hwy.

The Crimestoppers number is 573-6700.

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Some people never seem to know when to let go of a helping hand."

It sounded so simple. We agreed to help a sister newspaper locate a piece of equipment that would move the newspaper into the electronic typesetting age.

A call to the manufacturer revealed that the item was no longer made. Even though the system was only five years old, it was obsolete and the salesman told us, "Besides, it never did work very good."

A call to several used equipment dealers also drew a blank. A fourth contact said if we would wire the money, they could get the equipment right out.

It arrived on a Friday as scheduled, and we had set an appointment with an AP technician to install it. On arrival we opened the carton to find that the company had shipped a "MDR" instead of the "MWR" we had ordered.

Most folks were already enjoying the weekend, so we stopped the AP man and started the search for the right item. We came up empty handed after almost $100 in telephone calls to papers across the state who might have a "MWR" in moth balls.

After scores more calls, a used equipment company called on Wednesday to say it had discovered seven new ones that had never been out of the box.

We gave instructions for it to be sent by air to Midland Air Terminal where we would pick it up. On Thursday, a note came across the desk saying it would be delivered to our office on Friday.

That alarmed us enough to call the air freight company in Midland who informed us to call Lubbock who informed us to call Abilene. We learned it would arrive in Abilene early Friday and would be sent motor freight to Snyder.

Absolutely not, we'll pick it up in Abilene. At 8 a.m. the item wasn't there. We were told it would be on the noon flight and available at the freight terminal. It wasn't there, so a call back to Lubbock who communicates with Abilene by beeper revealed the item did come in at noon and was in a truck making in-town deliveries.

We were instructed to call Lubbock anywhere from Abilene and the driver would meet us within ten minutes. After over an hour, another call was made to Lubbock.

It finally arrived and after a quick trip back to Snyder we boarded a plane at 6:45 enroute to Lovington to meet the Albuquerque AP man who was scheduled in Lovington at 7 p.m.

Assuming we would be over an hour late, on arrival we learned the AP man's auto was broken down in Roswell.

Sometimes Fridays--like Mondays--last all week.

Absentee regulations due strict application at schools

Student absenteeism — both for school and non-school related activities — will receive a closer scrutiny this year by local administrators.

Snyder officials say they are now studying ways to implement the student absence rules legislated this summer by the Texas 68th Legislature.

The emphasis of the new law directs schools to more effectively use all available classroom time for academic study.

In addition, the Texas Education Agency directs that schools keep an accurate accounting of absences, both excused and unexcused.

Regarding unexcused absenses, House Bill 72 directs that a student may not receive credit for a class if they have more than five days unexcused absences during the semester.

Local school officials say they will revise current policies to comply with the law.

Local school policy excuses absences which are "unavoidable," with full make-up classroom work privileges.

Examples include personal illness, death or severe illness in the family, family emergency and doctor or dentist's appointments which cannot be scheduled outside the school day.

An unexcused absence occurs when a student misses class or school for a reason not approved by the district. Examples include truancy and suspensions or recreational trips such as skiing, hunting fishing or other trips when the student is taken "for the convenience" of the family.

Another aspect of the new stricter absence rules involves school-related extracurricular activities.

School districts are directed to "preserve the school day for academic activities without interruption for extracurricular activities."

The district is instructed also to not schedule any such activities which will cause a student to be absent from class in any course more than 10 times during the 175-school day year.

Local school officials are studying these rules also with future local policies expected.

In a third related issue, the new law directs that the school day shall not be interrupted for non-academic activities such as announcements and sales promotions "more than once during the school day" except for emergency situations.

Local administrators have been directed to strictly enforce this policy.

Ask Us

Q. — What are the city ordinances which apply to abandoned property — in particular the old Tiger Drive-in property on south College?

A. — The city has two ordinances which apply. The first prohibits buildings characterized as "dilapidated," and the second directs that vacant lots shall not become "unsightly and objectionable." Regarding both, if complaints are made by citizens or if the city "views" such violations, the property owner is first mailed a registered letter asking him to address the situation. If nothing is done, the city may then take steps to remedy the situation, then bill the owner for charges incurred.

School's in

School students will return Monday at Snyder and Hermeligh schools, but Ira students won't be back in class until Wednesday.

In Snyder, regular school times will be observed except at Snyder High School, where students who registered for the new "zero-hour" courses will begin class at 7:30 p.m.

Tax hearing

Western Texas College trustees have set a public hearing for 5 p.m. Tuesday related to a proposed tax increase for the college district.

The public hearing is necessary because the proposed rate of .8030 is more than three percent higher than the present rate of .0770.

This year's effective tax rate is .0800 and the maximum rate allowed without a public hearing is .0824.

Tax rate figures are carried to four decimal points. A rate of .0800 equals 8 cents per $100 of valuation.

Pay vote due

A public hearing related to the 1984-85 Snyder school budget is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday. In addition, it will be preceded at 6 p.m. by a budget workshop during which trustees hope to adopt a teacher pay plan for the coming year.

Representatives for local teachers are expected to present their own pay plan proposal at the 6 p.m. meeting.

Rotary 'sale'

The Snyder Rotary Club has planned a fund raising "garage sale" Sunday at the south entrance to Kmart.

The sale will be conducted from noon until 4 p.m. Proceeds will go toward such Rotary projects as the club's scholarship presentation, sponsoring two local youth to Camp Ryla, a Little League team sponsorship and career day activities at Snyder High School.

Weather

Snyder Temperatures: High Friday, 94 degrees; low, 65 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Saturday, 66 degrees; precipitation none; total precipitation for 1984 to date, 5.80 inches.

Area Forecast: Today, fair, hot and high upper 90s. Wind south to southwest 5 to 10 mph. Tonight, fair and low near 70. Wind southerly 5 to 10 mph. "OK, mister, THAT DOES IT! I'm afraid we'll have to book you for 'Boating Under the Influence.'"

Oil spill: no impact on coastal marine life

HOUSTON (AP) — The local director of the National Marine Fisheries Service said the recent oil spill along the upper Texas Gulf coast did not have a bad effect on marine life because most of the oil remained on the surface.

Speaking before the Texas Coastal and Marine Council Friday, Ed Klima said, "We really looked at the area fairly well from the beach to about 10 fatoms (12 miles), from Galveston to Sabine Pass and we found no problem."

The council is a 16-member advisory body to the Legislature composed of senators, representatives and citizens. The panel helps to develop guidelines in the management of coastal resources.

Klima said NMFS chartered a boat several days after the spill and took samples of marine life but no contamination from oil was found.

"I personally do not think that the oil had an impact on the shrimp which would worry consumers," he said. "Basically, the oil remained on the surface and it did not sink down."

Klima said the only problem with the oil that remains now is that some is stuck along the jettys off the Galveston seawall.

Galveston beaches were covered with oil from the British tanker Alvenus, which ruptured 11 miles off Cameron, La., on July 30. The ship spilled an estimated 2.3 million gallons into the Gulf of Mexico.

Council chairman state Sen. Carl Parker, concerned over the state's small role in cleaning up the oil-blackened beaches of Galveston, said that body needs to draft a plan to help the state cope with disasters.

"The whole thing other than Governor White flying over the spill and seeing alot of oil was virtually conducted without the state," Parker said.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, called the handling of the oil spill a "classic shortcoming" because not one state agency was in charge.

"We have no one in charge of selecting the various state agencies to work with the federal agencies in times of disaster," Parker said.

Coast Guard spokesman Larry Clark, contacted at his Galveston office, said the state has been helping in "an advisory capacity" during the cleanup phase.

Sister Vianney Martinez is the new director of religious education for Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. As director, she will train catechist teachers, supervise classes and teach religious education to adults.

In addition to her work for the church, she will also serve as a resource teacher on master catechists for the religious education teachers in the Snyder Deanery, which includes Snyder, Rotan, Anson, Stamford, Spur, Jayton and Hamlin.

A Franciscan sister, Martinez is a member of St. Francis Mission Community in Amarillo.

Her teaching experience includes assignments with schools in Long Beach, Ca., Holman, NM, Amarillo and Lubbock.

Most recently she has served as pastoral assistant for Christ the King Catholic Church in Lubbock, St. Laurence Catholic Church in Amarillo and Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, also in Amarillo.

Jail teenager to join parents

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — A former high school quarterback probably will not be prosecuted on a burglary charge after he decided to join his parents who had been deported, authorities said.

"He is taking a voluntary departure," Victoria County District Attorney George Filley said. "Since he is not fighting deportation and the property stolen (a lawn trimmer) has been recovered, we anticipate the charge against him being dropped."

Martin Trubka departed for Sydney, Australia, on Friday after being released to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Thursday afternoon. He had been in the Victoria County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond on a burglary charge.

Trubka's parents and younger brother left for Australia Aug. 10 after fighting deportation efforts for more than six years.

Your Birthday

Aug. 19, 1984

Stick to your game plan this coming year, no matter how slow the initial output appears. Your goals are closer at hand than you think; you just need a little time to build up momentum.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There is nothing wrong with being ambitious, but unless you soft-pedal it today, people might construe your aggressiveness as self-serving. Want to find out to whom you're best suited to romantically? Send for your Matchmaker set by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Reveals compatibilities for all signs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Humility is a virture, but not when carried to extremes. If you're too laid back and retiring today, you could let a lesser type dominate you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This may not be a good day to present your ideas to others because, if you don't strike a responsive chord, it might put you in a bad temper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard your image today when dealing with valuable allies. If you behave badly, these people may withdraw the support on which you've been counting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Make this a time of rest, instead of attempting any major project. It's one of those days when a monkey wrench is thrown into all you undertake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're inclined today to do something you don't normally do: take a flyer on something about which you know nothing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Concessions may be called for today when minor domestic issues erupt. It is much easier to give a little now than trying later to make amends.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) How you treat others today will have a fast boomerang effect on you. If you try to boss others, look for an authority figure to nail you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Catering to your whims and forsaking your budget may later put you i a foul mood when you realize you're broke. Don't take it out on others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unless you resolve domestic squabbles early, things could go from bad to worse. Abandon stubbornness, not those you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your vivid imagination may do you in today if you allow it to visualize roadblocks looming larger than reality. You'll be defeated before you begin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Play it cool today if you find yourself in a situation in which you feel that someone else is getting the attention you're entitled to. You'll come out the winner.

Aug. 20, 1984

Socially, the coming year should be especially active. How much enjoyment it will prove to be, however, depends upon with whom you'll spend your time. The wrong types could introduce frustrations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If possible today, try to get out of a social situation you know could be costly. Chances are it won't turn out to be much fun anyway. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you are an organized and orderly person, a few surprises today may disrupt your game plan. Keep calm so that you can cope with them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's not like you to be negative but, unfortunately, those preconceived ntions you have today may be misleading. Don't prejudge anything.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The smartest course to follow today is to not get involved financially with anybody. Somehow, things will work out so that you'll be the only loser.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're used to making spur-of-the-moment decisions, but today that might not be such a good idea. There are too many variables to be considered.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't attempt any shortcuts today, even if a whole army of unexpected chores are dumped in your lap. Only proven procedures will work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you allow them to, busybodies will butt into your personal affairs today. Just because someone asks you a question, it doesn't mean you are obligated to answer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Everyone is a trifle edgy today, so take extra pains not to speak absentmindedly. The slightest infraction could be blown out of proportion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Failure to get persons to follow directions today might be traced back directly to you. Cloudy instructions on your part could be the cause.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ill-planned or impulsive actions may prove to be costly today. Don't take any risks, especially when you're laying hard cash on the line.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Wasting time is a luxury you can ill afford today. There's a good chance many unexpected additional demands will be placed on your shoulders.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You won't be able to talk your way out of why you neglected anything today, so show a responsibility for your obligations and you won't have to try.

Final Freshman Seminar is scheduled August 20

Western Texas College has scheduled an evening Freshman Success Seminar for August 20, Dr. Mary Hood, Director of Counseling Services, has announced.

This seminar will be much like three previous ones held during the summer but has been added for the convenience of prospective students who were working or who were unable to attend the previous seminars held during the day.

Persons attending the August 20 seminar are to be at the Student Center at 6:30 p.m. They should have their Social Security number and should have had their high school transcript sent to WTC or be able to furnish their GED scores.

If they have taken the ACT or SAT test, they should have those scores on file at WTC. If they have not taken either test, they can take the Asset Placement Program at the seminar and will pay a $5 fee for that service.

Students can register for the fall semester at the seminar and will be required to pay fees to validate the registration. No later billing will be available.

Any student who will be attending WTC for the first time as a freshman planning to pursue a degree should attend this final summer seminar if they have not attended a previous one, Dr. Hood said. Persons who would like more information about the seminar may call the counseling office at 573-8511, ext. 313.

Births

Linda and Joe Key are parents of a 6 lb. 14 oz. son born at 11:24 a.m. on Aug. 15 in Malone Hogan Hospital in Big Spring. Named Joshua Patrick, his grandparents are John and Jean Loyola and Leroy and Nona Key. Great grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. O.D. Hunt of Tyler and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Key of Snyder.

A baby boy weighing 6 lbs. and 15 ½ ozs. was born to Donna and Richard Huddleston of Midland on Aug. 15 in Midland Memorial Hospital. He has been named Ryan Keith. Grandparents are Minnie and Buck Buchanan of Mason and Don and Sandra West of Snyder.

Ira PTA plans first meeting

The Ira PTA will have its first meeting of the new school year Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in the history room.

Plans for the year will be made at the meeting and all interested parents are invited to attend.

Highly educated American women appear to delay motherhood to accommodate their school and career goals. In 1981, among women 18 to 44 with four or more years of college, 47 percent of births were first births, and among those who completed at least five years of college, 55 percent were first births.

6 shuttle astronauts ready for 2nd try

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Six space shuttle astronauts who felt disappointment and surprise last June when a launch attempt was stopped four seconds from blastoff, say they are now eager to go through with the mission, scheduled for launch Aug. 29.

Mission commander Henry W. Hartsfield Jr. said Friday that when rocket engines on his crew's craft started and then shut down, "the overwheliming emotion was bitter disappointment. There was a letdown after that point, but the morale has quickened," Hartsfield said.

The crew was scheduled to have made a seven-day flight starting last June 26 but the launch attempt failed when a computer detected that an engine valve failed to open appropriately seconds after one of the main engines had ignited. This led to an automatic shutdown of the launch sequence.

Hartsfield and his crewmates, Michael Coates, Judy A. Resnik, Steven A. Hawley, Richard Mullane and Charles D. Walker, are scheduled for launch from Kennedy Space Center. They are to land six days later at Edwards AFB in California.

Asked at the news conference if they felt any concern about flying on the shuttle after the launch shutdown in June, the astronauts said the experience proved the effectiveness of the shuttle safety system.

"We were all very grateful that the safety features did what they were supposed to do," said Ms. Resnik. "Even if it means a delay, it's the right thing in the long run."

Hawley said the abbreviated mission will have some effect on the crew's leisure in space.

"We'll be doing some more with some less time," Hawley said. "There's less of an opportunity now to recover if something goes wrong."

Hawley will be the prime crewman for the lauch of two communications satellites. The crew also will launch a third satellite and conduct tests of a solar power wing which will be extended 100 feet into space from the shuttle cargo bay.

GOP, others whoop it up

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Republicans, reporters and rednecks whooped it up Friday night at the "world's biggest honky tonk" in a lusty prelude to the Republican National Convention opening next week in nearby Dallas.

The party, billed as a Texas-size welcoming reception for the Republican National Committee, lured hundreds of GOP leaders and media representatives to "Cowtown" for one of the first in a week-long series of social events.

The reception provided many of the visitors a first look at Billy Bob's Texas, a sprawling night club that features, among other things, top country and western entertainers and live bull riding.

"I think it's really neat that everybody's so excited to come over here," said Patti Barnett, the wife of co-owner Billy Bob Barnett.

Distinguishing himself as always, Barnett, asked by a French television reporter what he thought about Geraldine Ferraro, said:

"I don't know whether she'd make a good barrel racer or not."

It was that kind of night.

Among those in attendance was press secretary Jim Brady, who was seriously wounded in the assassination attempt on President Reagan in 1981.

U. S. warning Soviets, Cubans about Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has informed the Soviet Union and Cuba that it would be deeply concerned if either assisted Nicaragua in the acquisition of advanced fighter aircraft, the State Department says.

Department spokesman John Hughes, following Nicaraguan confirmation that a major military airport is under construction, said Friday the addition of such aircraft to Nicaragua's existing military capability "would alter the balance of power in the region.

"The building of this airport, as well as the improvements and lengthening of several other military airfields in Nicaragua, would not appear directed, at least potentially, against Nicaragua's armed opposition as much as against Nicaragua's neighbors," Hughes said.

He said both the Soviet Union and Cuba are well aware of the U.S. position on this subject.

According to Pentagon officials, Nicaraguan air power is limited to a few jet trainers inherited from the previous government headed by President Anastasio Somoza.

In contrast, neighboring Honduras, aligned with the United States, possesses 26 combat jet planes, including 12 French Super Mystere fighters, four Korean War-vintage F-86's and 10 A-37 converted trainers.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Nicaragua would gain immediate air superiority over Honduras if it acquired MiG jet fighters. The Reagan administration has been concerned about this possibility for some time because it claims that some 50 Nicaraguans have been trained in Bulgaria to fly MiG's.

In addition, Nicaraguan defectors have said that MiGs have been sent to Cuba where they are awaiting delivery to Nicaragua after the November presidential elections in Nicaragua.

A U.S. official, requesting anonymity, said recently that Cuban workers have been constructing the airport on a round-the-clock basis.

Health Views

HUNTERS BEWARE

As each new hunting season approaches, safety authorities start preparing for the bad news: the new toll of victims who will fall prey to their own sport. While hunters prepare with enthusiasm for a sport that challenges their skills and invigorates their senses, families of hunters, farmers, safety authorities and health specialists wait with fear and anxiety.

In their brief encounter with nature, untrained hunters do more damage to property and health than they do to prey. As they stalk the elusive reward, little is safe. Everything and anything that walks, makes a noise, or merely exists is subject to being shot. That includes other hunters, domestic animals, the sides of barns, billboards . . . and even the hunter himself—self-inflicted.

There's nothing profound about these risks in that safety authorities have been bringing hunters' attention to them for years—without too much success.

But there are other risks not quite so obvious that should be noted strongly. And they have nothing to do with a gun. The weapon is the hunter himself. Many hunters wait all year for the opportunity to get out in the woods. Then in one weekend, they will walk, run, and strain themselves physically more than they have done all year. They will climb fences, camp out on the hard, cold ground, walk through cold water and the hot sun. They will lie in awkward positions for hours, stretch and strain as they load, reload and take the brunt of recoil from their guns. They'll return home dragging more than their rifles behind them and be "shot" physically for at least the rest of the season with bad backs . . . or even worse!

The doctor of chiropractic, who is a health specialist in the treatment of back problems and related disorders of the spine and nervous system, offers some good advice. His experience can help you protect yourself from injuries and illness that account for more "lay-ups" of hunters than do shooting accidents.

Every year, a child who is sick and tired of a mother shoving this column into her face and shouting, "Read this! It's you!" will write and ask why I always take the parents' point of view and never the child's.

This year's writer is from Long Beach and she says, "For so long you have written about children that do things that make their parents miserable, how about a few measly words to make parents feel like maybe they have done something right?" Signed: T.H.

You're right, T.H. It must seem like there's no pleasing us. It's time for my yearly child-appreciation tribute.

Parents have done something right when they ask a child to bring them a glass of water from the kitchen and the child knows where the kitchen is.

They've done it when they get a birthday present on their birthday that their child has bought with his own money.

They've pulled it off when their child volunteers that she dropped the camera she borrowed and when the parents ask, "Have you any idea how much a camera like this costs and who is going to pay for it?" does ... and will.

They've raised a winner when they point out to a son that his pants are ripped, his shirt is not ironed, the sole is coming off his shoe and his sweater is inside out, and he looks rotten ... and he agrees with them.

It's a good day for any parent when their child speaks to them in public, when they put gas in the car after they've used it, ask if you're watching a TV show before they flip the dial, do dishes when it isn't their night, and thank you for anything.

It's a good time for parents when their children tell them the truth when you're gonna kill 'em for it, answer their parents without saying, "What do you want?" shut the door in the winter because it makes their Dad smile, or respect their mother's cold as they do their own.

Good kids are like sunsets. We take 'em for granted. Every morning they rise. Every evening they disappear. Most parents in a single lifetime will never imagine how hard they try to please us and how miserable they feel when they think they have failed.

Take a good look at your kids. I mean really look at them. You've done a lot better than you think you did. Now, tell them.

Protesters picket J. Falwell

DALLAS (AP) — The thousands of protesters expected to demonstrate during the Republican National Convention are beginning to pour into Dallas and one group — a coalition of gays and lesbians — already has made its presence known.

About 20 members of the National Gay and Lesbian Alliance on Friday marched outside a downtown Dallas hotel, where the Rev. Jerry Falwell was leading a pro-family forum, to voice their opposition to the Moral Majority and the GOP's apparent alliance with it.

The quiet protest came as the American Olympic medalists were honored in a parade in downtown Dallas, giving residents of the city an odd mix of entertainment.

"I am here because I am upset and I am angry," said Miriam Ben-Shalom, a spokeswoman for the alliance. "I don't like this right-wing attitude. It scares me."

Ms. Ben-Shalom won a constitutional decision against the federal government in 1980, when a judge ruled that she was unfairly discharged from the U.S. Army. She had contended she was discharged because she admitted to being a lesbian.

"It was an anti-gay attitude and that's what Jerry Falwell promotes," she said Friday.

She also criticized the Reagan administration, saying it seeks to take away the rights of Americans.

"I think that religion has no place in our government," Ms. Ben-Shalom said. "Nobody has the right to tell me what I should or shouldn't do as long as I'm not involved in a criminal act."

The gay and lesbian protesters were joined in their picket by the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, a San Francisco-based "order" of transvestite "nuns," who had many of the Olympic parade gatherers raising their eyebrows.

The nuns, clad in makeshift habits, black fish-net stockings and wearing long false eyelashes, white face makeup and sparkly eye shadow, gathered at a sidewalk along with thousands of other people in 95-degree heat to applaud the Olympic athletes.

But they still stood with megaphones, shouting insults at Falwell's Family Forum attendees.

Police reported no problems with the two-hour demonstration, but a verbal altercation occurred between the sisters' leader — Sister Boom Boom — and a woman from the Family Forum.

Helene Freeman of Dallas objected to what she said was the sister's "mocking" of God.

Telling Sister Boom Boom that she could help her "clean up your messy life," Ms. Freeman stood among the protesters until she was asked to return to the hotel by a Family Forum official.

After the protest and the Olympic parade had passed by, Falwell held a news conference, where he said the demonstrators did not bother him.

He also reiterated that he "can find no fault" with the current Republican platform.

"Ronald Reagan now has, in words, a platform that really is his philosophy," Falwell said.

While Falwell said the Family Forum was not in Dallas to endorse the president, he said the Republican Party clearly was embracing the views of American family and tradition better than was the Democratic Party.

To counter Falwell's forum, People for the American Way held a news conference, where the organization's chairman, former Rep. John Buchanan of Alabama, said the Republican Party was abandoning its history with its 1984 platform.

Falwell earlier had said People for the American Way, an anti-censorship group founded by television producer Norman Lear, was a "dying cause."

But Buchanan said his group was "about as dead as the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment)."

Lawyers favoring proposal

HOUSTON (AP) — A study by the Center for Disease Control should convince former Vietnam serviceman claiming damages from exposure to toxic defoliant Agent Orange to accept a proposed $180 million settlement, attorneys favoring the proposal say.

Houston attorney. Benton Musslewhite said that the study, released Friday, showed that Agent Orange did not cause birth defects in the children of Vietnam veterans.

"To even think now we shouldn't take that $180 million would be the grossest injustice in the world," Musslewhite said.

The offer made by seven companies that manufactured the chemical would not be enough to offset medical expenses according to veterans speaking Friday before U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein in the second day of hearings on the proposed settlement.

"My life has been deteriorating since 1969 — the day I left Vietnam," said veteran George Dillard. "I think it would be ludicrous for us to settle the case for the amount of money offered by the chemical companies."

Similar hearings were held in New York and Chicago and others are scheduled to begin next week in. Atlanta and San Francisco.

Heart transplant baby has died in London

LONDON (AP) — Eighteen days after becoming the world's youngest heart transplant patient, Hollie Roffey died Friday in the hospital where she spent most of her short life wired to machines and fed by tubes. She was 28 days old.

Having suffered two major medical setbacks since she received the heart of a 3-day-old Dutch baby, Hollie developed breathing problems and died at 10:15 a.m. (5:15 a.m. EDT) in National Heart Hospital, said hospital spokesman Mark Purcell.

"Her heart was working perfectly well, but the deteriorating lungs put pressure on the heart and it failed," Purcell said.

"She was a brave little soul and put up a tremendous fight in her short life," said Hollie's grandfather, Richard Roffey. "We all came to love her dearly and she will be remembered as a very real part of our family."

Egyptian-born surgeon Dr. Magdi Yacoub, who gave Hollie her new heart July 30 when she was 10 days old, led attempts to resuscitate her. Purcell said the surgeon "was there for the last 15 minutes of her life trying to save her," and Yacoub was described as "very upset" by the infant's death.

Hollie's parents, 26-year-old Anthony Roffey and his wife, Janet, 24, had been at the hospital earlier in the day but were not there when their only child died. They returned after being told of her death.

The only physical contact the Ashford, England, couple had with Hollie after the transplant was when they occasionally were allowed to put on hospital gowns and surgical gloves and reach into her germ-free incubator to touch her.

With her chances of survival from the experimental surgery never rated better than slim, the dark-haired baby clung to life, even improving slightly each day, despite kidney problems and surgery to seal a hole in her bowel.

Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a very weight-conscious female. I don't feel I have anorexia because I enjoy eating. However, at times when I overeat, I relieve that situation with laxatives, and I have now become dependent on them. Is there an alternative to quitting them cold turkey? What other effects will they have on me if I continue them?

DEAR READER — Although starving oneself, as in anorexia nervosa, and inducing vomiting after eating, as in bulimia, have received widespread publicity, little attention has been given to a variation on the thinness obsession, the abuse of laxatives. It is rather common. Some individuals take an absolutely enormous amount of laxatives in the hope that it will help them stay thin while they are feeding themselves.

It won't work. And it can be dangerous. The laxatives commonly used for this are chemical laxatives or salt laxatives. They cause your bowel to empty prematurely. But they act on the colon, and calories are absorbed in the small intestine before food residues get to the colon. So they don't prevent the normal absorption of calories in your food.

They can cause you to lose weight because you lose normal salt and water from the colon and usually have diarrhea. That can be harmful, and the more abusive the practice, the greater the risk of upsetting the normal water and salt balance of the body.

Quitting cold turkey is a good idea. To help get over the laxative habit, one can use tapwater enemas every two or three days if needed. Using a bulk agent such as Konsyl or Metamucil also may help.

If a person is taking a diuretic, which may also be abused in the interest of controlling pounds, the bulk-forming agent may become dried-out. But in normal people, bulk-formers do help in such situations.

You should read about laxatives, which I have discussed in The Health Letter 12-8, Laxatives, Enemas and Suppositories, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Don't misunderstand me. I think avoiding obesity is very important to one's health, but that means eliminating body fat, not dehydrating the body or emptying the digestive tract. It is the excess body fat that is important, not just the weight you read on the bathroom scales.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Two months ago I felt bumps around my anus. I figured they were hemorrhoids and decided to try an over-the-counter medication. The bumps continued to grow, and I decided to go to a doctor. He told me they were anal warts and said these were caused by homosexual contact. I am not gay and have never slept with another man.

Please explain about anal warts and what causes them. I'm very upset.

DEAR READER — They are often called venereal warts because they are frequently spread by sexual contact, but you can have them without sexual contact as well. Just because they are anal warts does not mean the sexual activity was homosexual. They are also common in pregnant women because of the increase of secretions at that time. They can accumulate around the genitals or the anal areas. They occur in moist areas, which is why they are also called moist warts.

These moist warts are technically called condyloma acuminatum. They are caused by a virus, but the virus is different from the virus that causes ordinary warts. That is wny they tend to develop only in moist areas. They are sometimes difficult to treat. You might wish to see a dermatologist.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been to two different doctors and both of them told me I have an irritated colon. What is the difference between an irritated colon and a spastic colon? The only medication they will prescribe is Surfak.

My symptoms are constipation, severe abdominal cramps and gas. At the time of bowel movements, I have diarrhea and the abdominal cramps are relieved. If you could please tell me what to do about this, I would greatly appreciate it.

DEAR READER — It depends on what you mean by irritated. That could mean "inflamed." But if you mean irritable, it means that the colon is hyperactive, which is another way of saying you have a spastic colon.

Your colon is a muscular tube, and when the muscles in it contract too frequently, irregularly or overcontract, as in a spasm, this can cause a lot of bowel symptoms, including trapping of gas, pain from the spasm, constipation and diarrhea, and often both.

I am puzzled by your medication with that diagnosis. Surfak is a contact (chemical) laxative and tends to soften the stool. Most doctors avoid such laxatives in people who have a spastic colon. Rather, they recommend bulk-forming agents, such as Metamucil, Konsyl, Modane Bulk or L.A. Formula, which are inert substances that absorb water to form bulk. The bulk may improve the rhythmic contractions and helps prevent spasms.

You can use bran or other sources of bulk in your diet, which serve the same purpose. Unfortunately, some people form a lot of gas when they first use bran. These people may do better with one of the bulk-formers.

Constipation, then passing a diarrheal stool or loose stool, is common with a spastic colon. Both often, but not always, disappear when a person becomes regulated on a bulk-former. You might ask for a referral to a gastroenterologist to clarify your problem and to determine what program you should follow.

Meanwhile, I am sending you The Health Letter 16-4, Spastic Colon, Irregularity and Constipation, which will discuss the usual program used for such problems. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a son who will not eat meat, fish or chicken. He has not eaten meat for more than six months but takes protein, vitamins and eats lots of spaghetti and meat substitutes. Isn't this a dangerous diet for an active teacher who is 48?

DEAR READER — There area lot of healthy vegetarians and, as a group, male vegetarians live about 10 years longer than their meat-eating friends. But if you eliminate meat from your diet, you must be sure you are getting an adequate amount of high quality protein from other foods, and vitamin supplements are important, too. Still, there may be an iron deficiency because the best source of iron your body can absorb is called heme iron, found in meat and not in vegetables or cereals.

The phosphates in meat are also helpful as your bones are hardened by the salts of calcium phosphate. A poor phosphate intake can affect bones as much as an inadequate calcium intake. I am assuming your son uses milk as a good calcium source and his vitamins include vitamin B-12.

Bell, AT&T are squabbling

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and AT&T Communications disagree over AT&T's request for different phone connections that AT&T says could save it about $100 million annually.

AT&T Friday asked the Public Utilities Commission to order Bell to provide the different service. Bell argued that AT&T wants the same service for less money and asked the commission to rule that it need not honor AT&T's request.

AT&T wants to offer cheaper service to long-distance customers and stay competitive with other long-distance companies, said spokesman Phil Bode.

Southwestern Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence said AT&T's request ultimately means "AT&T will have short-changed Southwestern Bell and its (customers) in excess of $310.1 million a year in interstate and intrastate revenues."

At issue are "access charges," fees paid by AT&T and other long-distance companies to Bell and other local phone companies for use of the companies' local telephone networks. AT&T wants to purchase cheaper phone connections from Bell.

Bode said AT&T, Bell's parent company before the court-ordered divestiture on Jan. 1, has the right "just like any other (Bell) customer" to order which service it wants from Bell.

If Bell doesn't honor AT&T's request for cheaper connections within a reasonable time, AT&T asked the PUC to order Bell to pay AT&T refunds.

The PUC earlier this year designed prices for different types of telephone service. AT&T pays about $491 million to Bell for premium service. AT&T customers can make long-distance connections by dialing only the number "1" instead of a multi-number access code. The premium service also gives AT&T benefits in transmission quality and billing.

Other long-distance carriers pay less, but receive a lower grade of service.

AT&T officials said the company can use the savings from the cheaper connections to reduce costs and spark increased use. They said local phone companies would receive more money through a higher volume of calls.

Bell said the request was "a flagrant attempt to avoid" AT&T's share of fees long-distance companies pay local companies.

A spokeswoman for the utilities commission said hearings will be held on the case.

Reagan seeks aid for Poland again

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring the United States does not accept a permanent division of Europe into eastern and western blocs, says he'll ask Congress to approve $10 million in aid to Polish farmers.

The aid fund would be administered by the Roman Catholic Church in Poland under the first private foundation permitted by Poland's communist authorities since the end of World War II, the White House said.

Reagan said the United States may decide to contribute further money to the aid fund, depending on its effectiveness over a 15-month trial period.

Reagan also said he is prepared to set aside U.S. objections to Poland's application for membership in the International Monetary Fund if there is a "complete and reasonable" implementation of the Polish government's recent amnesty decree freeing many political prisoners.

In a speech at the White House before Polish-American leaders that was interrupted 24 times by applause and which drew a standing ovation at the end, Reagan said that the Soviet Union promised in the Yalta Conference near the end of World War II to permit free elections in Poland and the other nations of Eastern Europe.

He said he sees no reason to "absolve" the Soviets from those promises now or to accept "the permanent subjugation" of the people of Eastern Europe.

"Let me state emphatically, we reject any interpretation of the Yalta agreement that suggests American consent for the division of Europe into spheres of influence," Reagan said.

The president, whose speech in the State Dining Room of the White House marked the 40th anniversary of the Warsaw uprising against Nazi occupying forces, presented three posthumous Legion of Merit medals to the descendants or representatives of three Polish generals who were leaders of the 63-day Warsaw rebellion.

He himself was presented with "the Cross of the Home Army" representing Polish resistance fighters.

Reagan said the United States has not forgotten and never will forget the now-suppressed independent Polish labor union, Solidarity.

Campground takes shape near confab

DALLAS (AP) — Gaily striped tents hover over the hard, parched ground. It's 97 degrees and there is no shade. The nearest building is the city jail.

Welcome to Tent City, the temporary home of an estimated 1,500 social activists drawn to Dallas by the Republican National Convention.

Ken Wright puts down his sledge hammer. Sweat streams down his face. He squints in the relentless sun.

"My granddaddy used to preach under tents like this," he said, remembering the late and controversial South Texas evangelist Lester Roloff.

A few tents away, Leon Crutchfield tilts back a gimme cap with "Mondale" emblazoned across the front and leans on the side of his truck.

He is one of the members of Local 59 of International Brotherhood of Electricians who volunteered to help install electrical lines at Tent City.

Their gesture was only partly motivated by politics, he said.

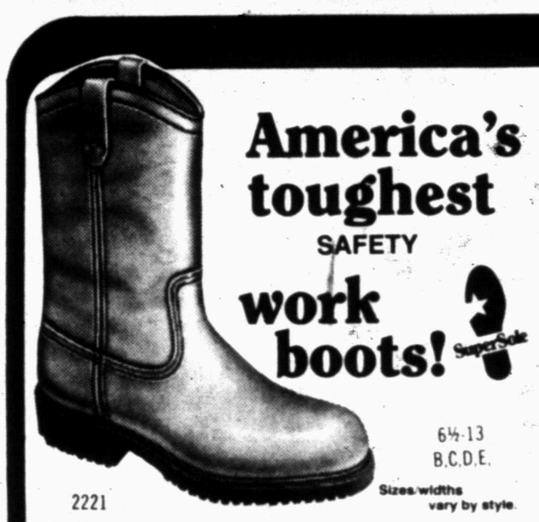

"But mostly we're helping people who need help. These people have got something to say," Crutchfield said.

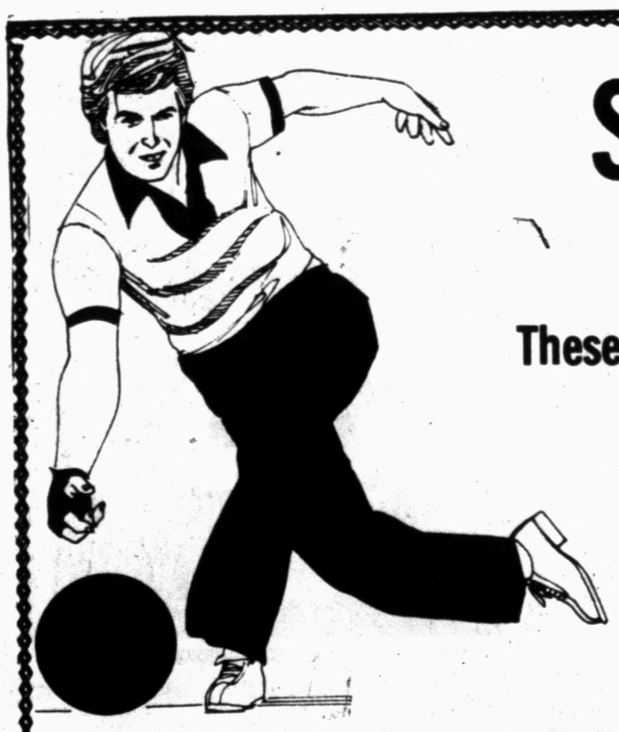

The sleek glass flanks of downtown Dallas, where the convention will occupy center stage, seem very far away.

But the people who will camp out on the banks of the Trinity River say they can't be ignored by the party or the president.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing something I came across a while back in the Catholic Digest. It was written by a 9-year-old third-grade girl, and it made me smile.

I hope you think it's worth passing along to your readers.

ILLINOIS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: It's well worth it, and here it is:

WHAT IS A GRANDMOTHER?

A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other people's little girls. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He goes for walks with the boys, and they talk about fishing and tractors and things like that.

Grandmas don't have to do anything except be there. They're old, so they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the market where the pretend horse is and have lots of dimes ready.

Or, if they take us for walks, they should slow down past things like pretty leaves or caterpillars. They should never, ever say, "Hurry up."

Usually they are fat, but not too fat to tie kids' shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off.

It is better if they don't typewrite, or play cards except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like why dogs hate cats and how come God isn't married. They don't talk baby talk like visitors do, because it is hard to understand. When they read to us, they don't skip or mind if it is the same story again.

Everybody should try to have one, especially if you don't have television, because grandmas are the only grown-ups who have got time.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a wife who insists that each time I take a shower I wipe down the walls and glass doors in the shower?

Frankly, if it weren't for co-workers and customers, I wouldn't shower at all.

HENPECKED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR HENPECKED: Somebody has to tidy up, so why not the person who made the mess?

And since you shower only out of consideration to co-workers and customers, it's obvious why your wife doesn't feel like doing anything for you.

DEAR ABBY: Last year my daughter, who had just turned 12, did not want me to see her yearbook. We had some words about it, and when I looked at it I knew why she didn't want me to see it. A girlfriend had written something really obscene, so I called the girl's father and told him about it.

My husband wrote to the school authorities and made a case out of it. This year just before the annuals came out, we won a school-wide vote requesting that parents carefully examine their children's yearbooks, and if we come across anything offensive, we should call the parents of the offending writers.

This sets higher expectations.

ATLANTA MOTHER

DEAR ABBY: If I don't write this letter, I won't be able to sleep tonight. First I want to say that I have never before bought a Penthouse magazine, but I was one of the first to run out and buy one as soon as that well-publicized issue was on the newsstands. I gloated over that piece of trash just like everybody else, and even took it to work to show around!

Now I feel rotten. I'm no better than the Penthouse publisher who made millions off that poor girl's misery. And I helped him do it.

I hope you will print this to let the former Miss America and her family know how sorry I am.

Go ahead and let me have it, Abby. I have it coming. I'm too ashamed to sign my name, so sign me ...

SORRY AND SICK AT HEART

DEAR SORRY: Stop beating yourself. Your curiosity was only human. Perhaps the ugly incident that sent shock waves through the land was not without its positive side, for in it is this valuable lesson for all young women:

Think before you act, and refrain from conduct that could bring disgrace upon you or your family. And should you have a lapse of judgment when you are young and foolish—or hungry for money and fame—don't count on your misdeeds never being exposed.

If millions of young women can benefit from the former Miss America's fall from grace, then her "contribution" may be even more lasting than all the previous Miss Americas who wore their crowns with dignity and were honorably retired.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the letter from "Keep Me Anonymous," the woman who lied about her age on her job application. She was 41, but feared she would not be hired if it were known, so she put "29" on her job application and got away with it.

Abby, this woman urgently needs to be alerted to a serious potential problem when she reaches retirement age.

A woman I know well recently retired. In applying for her pension, she submitted her birth certificate, which revealed that she was 75 years old—not 65 as her employment records showed.

The private pension plan carrier, alleging fraud, denied her pension application. She received nothing, even though her employer had paid premiums for many years!

Please advise "Anonymous" to get her correct age into her pension file immediately. Faithfully yours,

(THE REV. CANON)
OLIVER B. GARVER JR.,
LOS ANGELES

DEAR SIR: Bless you. Your informative letter will no doubt save many souls. And a few heels, as well.

* * *

DEAR ABBY:
We know you're bombarded with questions,
Your mail likely runs into tons,
After picking the questions to answer,
Must they always be answered with puns?
Your wisdom we value most highly,
Your witty responses are fun.
We love you, Dear Abby—but spare us
The silly, nonsensical pun!

TOM IN CAMBRIDGE, MD.

DEAR TOM:
Writing would be much less fun,
Without the "nonsensical" pun.
I know you abhor it,
But others adore it,
You lose—by 10 million to one.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

The average American took 22.5 minutes to go 11.1 miles to work in 1979. The average one-way commuting time and distance ranged from 10.8 minutes and 0.7 miles for those who walked, to 60.1 minutes and 34.2 miles who travelled by rail.

FBI anticipates making few changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI plans to review what went wrong with the prosecution of automaker John Z. De Lorean but top Justice Department officials predict few, if any, changes in federal undercover operations.

Attorney General William French Smith said Friday he was disappointed a jury found De Lorean innocent of cocaine-trafficking charges, but he said, "An acquittal in one case will not affect our use of undercover operations in our continuing battle against crime."

FBI Director William H. Webster said it was "hard to say" what changes in FBI procedures the case might spawn. "This is one case out of many, many cases, most of which have been persuasive to the jury," he said.

Assistant FBI Director Bill Baker added, however, "We don't currently see a problem with our undercover review procedures. The jury's problem appears to have been with the credibility of the informant and the credibility of the agents testifying, rather than with our undercover process."

Some FBI officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, have criticized the FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in the De Lorean case for altering their records and paperwork — a fact the De Lorean defense brought out. But these officials noted that such conduct is already forbidden by agency policies and regulations.

Noting that "we all must accept the results of our jury system," Smith said in a written statement, "Undercover operations are one of the most effective and successful investigative tools available today in the war against organized crime, drug trafficking, bribery and public corruption. In many cases, it is the only method of combatting these evils."

Webster pointed out that the government had produced enough evidence for the judge to let the case go to the jury. "I respect the decision of the jury. That's what our system is all about," Webster added.

De Lorean was found innocent of drug trafficking charges on Thursday after a trial in which it was shown that undercover federal agents worked with middlemen formerly in the drug trade to try to set up a deal with De Lorean so he could save his troubled auto firm.

Spokesman John Russell said the Justice Department has not undertaken any review of what went wrong with its prosecution or of its guidelines for undercover operations. But he added, "We'll be living with this a long time."

Smith defended the overall undercover investigation that led to the charges against De Lorean. He said the investigation also led to guilty pleas from two other individuals and the forfeiture to the government of more than $2 million in criminal assets.

Russell said nobody in the Justice Department was planning to calculate the cost of the De Lorean investigation and trial, "because the costs are fragmented. They even go outside the Justice Department agencies like the FBI and marshals to the court system." Nevertheless, he acknowledged "it's expensive."

City seeks restoration of trolleys

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The City of Galveston, which clings to its historic past, is trying to bring back a transit system from a bygone era — a trolley.

The Houston-Galveston Area Council tabled the city's request for federal funds for the project Friday after members said they needed more detailed information on the trolly project.

But the city will get another chance at $8 million in federal transit funds in September.

The project likely will cost between $7.5 million and $10 million, Matthews said, with 20 percent of the money obtained locally.

Ex-resident is promoted

Harold Kornegay, former Snyder resident, was recently promoted to the rank of lieutenant and is stationed in Corpus Christi.

He has been with the Texas Department of Public Safety for 20 years.

He served as sergeant with the License & Weight Division for four years in Garland.

He is the son of R. A. (Bob) and Bessie Kornegay of Gause.

He and his wife, Zola, are the parents of three children: Kenny of Snyder, Bob of San Diego, Ca., and Vickie of Dallas.

CANCER RISK
Twenty years may elapse between exposure to a carcinogen and the development of cancer. Americans have been taking cinnamylanthranilate for years as grape or cherry flavoring in soft drinks, ice cream, bakery, candy, gelatin and chewing gum. High doses have caused cancer in male rats. Rose thrills Cincinnati fans

by The Associated Press

The fans came to see Pete Rose - and Rose gave them something to see.

With two hits, two RBI and a patented head-first slide into third base, Rose made a triumphant return to Cincinnati as player-manager Friday night and led the Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The 43-year-old Rose, appointed manager Thursday to replace Vern Rapp, inserted himself in his first line-up because "I knew the crowd was coming out to see me. They didn't come out to see me manage, they came out to see me play."

There were 35,056 - the largest crowd since opening day - that came out to Riverfront Stadium to see Rose's return. Rose spent 16 seasons with the Reds before leaving as a free agent in 1979, playing in Philadelphia and then Montreal.

"It's a whole new feeling having somebody like Pete Rose, who at 43 can show you how to hustle," said Cincinnati second baseman Ron Oester.

In the other National League games, it was Houston 7, Pittsburgh 4 in 10 innings; St. Louis 3, Atlanta 1; Montreal 8, San Diego 4; Los Angeles 2, Philadelphia 1, and New York 2, San Francisco 0 in 10 innings.

Rose didn't wait long to thrill the fans at Riverfront. In his first at-bat, he lined a run-scoring single and reached third base with a headfirst slide when the ball was misplayed for an error. He also doubled home the Reds' final run in the seventh after Dave Parker cracked a tie-breaking homer in the fifth.

Winner Mario Soto, 13-6, hurled a five-hitter, striking out three and walking five. Dick Ruthven, 3-8, was the loser as the Cubs dropped their fourth straight game.

"Some people, when you put the spotlight on them, good things happen," said Cubs Manager Jim Frey. "I just wish we'd had more runs."

Astros 7, Pirates 4

Jim Pankovits cracked a two-run single in the 10th inning as the Astros rallied to beat Pittsburgh and extend their winning streak to seven games.

The Astros trailed 4-3 after Doug Frobel's solo eighth-inning homer but singles by Mark Bailey and Kevin Bass and Don Robinson's run-scoring wild pitch in the ninth sent the game into extra innings.

Phil Garner drew a leadoff walk in the 10th before loser Kent Tekulve, 2-8, retired the next two batters. Tekulve then walked Terry Puhl and Bailey before Pankovits singled home the tie-breaking runs. Bill Dawley, 8-4, who worked two scoreless innings, then made it 7-4 with an RBI infield single.

Rangers trip Quisenberry

by The Associated Press

Dan Quisenberry was brought in to go for his 33rd save. Instead, he threw a gopher pitch.

The Kansas City Royals, who have counted on their ace reliever all season, turned again to Quisenberry to protect a 6-5 lead in the final two innings against the Texas Rangers on Friday night.

But the Rangers ganged up to score three runs in the bottom of the ninth, the final two coming a two-out homer by Pete O'Brien, for an 8-6 victory in Texas.

"In the eighth inning, I heard someone say that he had 20 saves in the last 20 attempts," O'Brien said. "I didn't need to hear that."

Nonetheless, O'Brien connected for his 17th home run of the season, which left the Royals 4½ games off the pace in the American League West.

In other AL games, Cleveland stopped Milwaukee 5-3, Minnesota held off Boston 6-5, Detroit trumped Seattle 6-2, Oakland crunched New York 7-3, Baltimore tripped California 6-5 and Toronto rallied past Chicago 4-3.

Billy Sample led off the ninth with a single and stole second. Gary Ward's infield single put runners on the corners, and Larry Parrish hit a one-out sacrifice fly.

That left it up to O'Brien.

"Maybe it was divine intervention," he said. "This is a real rarity for me off the Quiz. I was telling somebody that this was the first hit I've had off him since 1981. I had a broken-bat single."

Quisenberry's record fell to 4-3. Texas reliever Dave Schmidt got the victory and is 6-5.

Jeff Kunkel homered for the Rangers and Jorge Orta homered for the Royals.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

Bert Blyleven upped his record to 13-5 as the Tribe moved out of last place in the AL East while dropping Milwaukee into the cellar.

Blyleven went 6 1-3 innings for the victory and Ernie Camacho went the final two for his 16th save as Cleveland won its 53rd game of the season.

Andre Thornton's 26th home run, a solo blast, lifted host Cleveland into a 2-2 tie in the fourth. Brett Butler lined a two-run single in the fifth to send the Indians ahead.

'Friendship' bests better olympics in some efforts

MOSCOW (AP) - In the first two days of the Soviet Union's Friendship-84 competition at several Eastern European sites, Communist-bloc athletes have consistently recorded efforts exceeding those posted by gold medalists at the Los Angeles Summer Olympics, but crowds have been relatively small. That may be because the Soviets have been careful not to risk violating the International Olympic Committee charter by trumpeting Friendship-84 as an Olympic alternative.

A notable, though not unexpected, development has been the inability of Soviet-bloc athletes to equal the standards established by Carl Lewis of the United States during his romp to four gold medals at Los Angeles. Both the 100-meter and long jump winners at Moscow on Friday fell short of Lewis' marks, and the Soviets' 400-meter relay team couldn't equal the world-record time by the Lewis-anchored American team.

About 20,000 attended women's track and field events in Prague, Czechoslovakia's 50,000-seat stadium, and the 103,000-seat Lenin Stadium in Moscow was about one-third full for the opening session of men's track and field. Organizers were hoping for a full house for today's opening ceremonies at Moscow.

The Soviets organized Friendship-84 after announcing a boycott of the Los Angeles Olympics. The Eastern European meets, while organized for the 13 allies who joined the Soviet walkout, were also intended to attract teams that also competed in Los Angeles.

According to Soviet officials, 23 nations were taking part in track and field. Athletes from 49 nations are expected to compete in at least one of the nine sports on the Friendship-84 agenda, but only a handful of Western countries were represented.

Instead, many of those Western teams were in Berlin for the first of Western Europe's post-Olympic track meets. On Friday, American gold medalist Evelyn Ashford shook off jet lag to capture the women's 100-meter dash in 10.94 seconds, .03 faster than her winning time at Los Angeles. It also bested the 10.95 recorded Thursday by East Germany's Marlies Goehr during the Prague competition.

Greg Foster of the United States, silver medalist in the 110-meter hurdles at Los Angeles, captured his speciality in 13.16 seconds, the fastest time of the year for the event.

The highlight of Friday's Friendship-84 competition was a world-record discus heave of 240 feet, 6 inches by Irina Meszynski of East Germany. The throw was two inches better than the 1983 standard by Galina Savinkova of the Soviet Union, and over 26 feet further than the 214-5 effort of the Netherland's Ria Stalman at Los Angeles.

CFA sued by two major universities

LOS ANGELES (AP) - UCLA and the University of Southern California, accusing the College Football Association (CFA) of selling the television rights to football games it does not own, has filed suit in federal court against that organization.

The two schools joined with the Pacific-10 Conference and the Big Ten Conference in filing the suit against the CFA, ABC-TV, ESPN (which is owned by ABC), the University of Notre Dame and the University of Nebraska.

Quarterbacks lead charge as Oilers test New Orleans

HOUSTON (AP) - There will be plenty of quarterbacking talent on display in the Astrodome Saturday night when the Houston Oilers host the New Orleans Saints.

The Oilers likely have settled on Warren Moon as the starter although 1983 starter Oliver Luck has completed 82 percent of his passes in two preseason games.

New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips is watching three prospects, Ken Stabler, Richard Todd and Dave Wilson.

Kickoff is at 8 p.m. CDT.

"If you watch three horses race for four weeks, even if you don't know anything about horse racing, you could pick the best one after four weeks," Phillips said. "So I'm just going to let them play."

The Saints will take a 2-0 record into the game while the Oilers, trying to regain the playoff glory they experienced during the Phillips era, are 1-1 under new head coach Hugh Campbell.

Todd, obtained in an off season trade with the New York Jets, has completed 15 of 24 passes and two touchdowns in his bid to earn a starting assignment. Stabler has hit 10 of 17 for 119 yards and Wilson has completed 11 of 14 for 60 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Moon has completed 17 of 38 passes for 258 yards and three interceptions in two preseason games. Luck has completed 14 of 17 passes for an 82 percent completion rate.

"Moon is a good veteran quarterback, you can tell that," Phillips said. "He's got good movement. It will take him just a little while to adjust to the NFL."

Moon made an immediate impression last week, in his home debut in the Astrodome. His first completion before the home crowd was a 61-yard touchdown bomb to rookie Eric Mullins.

The Oilers have been hit by a series of knee injuries that have depleted the starting lineup. Earl Campbell, recovering from May arthroscopic surgery, won't play against the Saints. Defensive end Bob Hamm, offensive guard Mike Munchak and linebacker Tim Joiner also are recovering from knee operations.

WTC clubs will stage women's extravaganza

The Western Texas College Rodeo Club and the Rodeo Booster Club are sponsoring a Women's Extravaganza on Sept. 3, Bob Doty, WTC rodeo coach, has announced.

Events will be barrel racing, goat tying and breakaway roping. Prizes will include Skyline buckles valued at $400 each, with cash prizes one fourth the total gate prorated as to the number in each event, plus added money.

A Skyline buckle will also be given to the contestant who enters all three contests, places in at least two and wins the most money.

Entry fee for the barrel race is $75, with $10 of this going for office charges. Breakaway and goat tying contestants will pay an entry fee of $100 each with a $25 office and stock charge taken from the total.

Format for the barrels will be one round and a short round. In goat tying and breakaway, there will be two goes and a short round with the top 10 or 10 percent (whichever is greater) qualifying for the short go.

Entry deadline is Monday, Aug. 27. Cashier's checks or money orders for fees are to be made payable to Western Texas College and mailed to Doty in care of WTC, Snyder Texas, 79549.

Player sets pace; a record 63 score

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Seve Ballesteros described Gary Player's record round of 63 as "unbelievable," but the South African golfing great wasn't getting excited - yet.

"I can't get too excited," said Player, "because you have to go out again tomorrow."

Ballesteros' enthusiasm came after the diminutive Player ran off a string of 10 birdies - and only one bogey - Friday to gain a share of the lead with Lanny Wadkins and Lee Trevino entering Saturday's third round of the 66th PGA Championship.

Wadkins, who fired a 68 for a share of the first-round lead with Mike Reid and Raymond Floyd, shot a 69 Friday over the 7,145-yard, par-72 Shoal Creek course for a 7-under total of 137 to remained tied for the lead.

Trevino shot a solid 68 that included five birdies and one birdie to go along with his opening 69.

One shot back at 138 were Scott Simpson and Victor Regalado. Both had 69's Friday.

"The 63 is unbelievable on this course - for any age," Ballesteros said of the 48-year-old Player's effort over the Jack Nicklaus-designed course that has been praised by the players despite a treacherous rough that surrounds each hole.

Ballesteros, who won the British Open earlier this year, was only two shots off the pace after a 69 Friday. He was tied at 139 with Donnie Hammond, Jay Haas and Floyd. Hammond and Haas had 69s and Floyd a 71.

Player's 9-under total for the round was a PGA tournament record. It also equalled the tourney record low 63 set previously by Bruce Crampton and Raymond Floyd. Crampton did it in 1975 at Akron, Ohio, and Floyd matched that in 1982 at Tulsa, Okla. Both were on par-70 courses.

Said Trevino: "The round Gary Player shot was unbelievale - unbelievable because the course played as long as it can because of the wet weather."

Still in contention, only three shots off the pace, were Reid, who had a 72 Friday for a 140 total, along with Japan's Tommy Nakajima, who had a 68, Larry Mize, who fired a 69 and Gary Hallberg with a 71.

At 141 were Russ Cochran, Dennis Watson, Don Pohl, Calvin Peete and Hale Irwin. Cochran and Watson had 68s, while Pohl, Peete and Irwin had 70s.

Connors-Curren advance to semis

TORONTO (AP) - Third-ranked Jimmy Connors and Kevin Curren, the No. 13 seed, advanced to the semifinals of the $450,000 Player's International tennis tournament.

Connors breezed past fellow American Eliot Teltscher, the No. 7 seed, 6-2, 6-4, while Curren eliminated unseeded American Scott McCain 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Seahawks climb 4-0; defeat Cardinals 17-7

SEATTLE (AP) - Quarterbacks Dave Krieg and Jim Zorn each passed for a touchdown Friday night to lead the Seattle Seahawks past the St. Louis Cardinals, 17-7, and extend their National Football League exhibition record to 4-0.

Zorn, who lost his starting job to Krieg midway through last season, found second-year wide receiver Chris Castor alone in the end zone for a 40-yard touchdown strike late in the third quarter for a 17-7 Seahawks' lead.

Seattle placekicker Norm Johnson had broken a 7-7 halftime deadlock with a 37-yard field goal midway in the third quarter, following a recovery by Fredd Young of an Earl Ferrell fumble.

Krieg, who directed the Seahawks into the American Football Conference title game last season, hit four of eight pass attempts for 48 yards in the first half, including a 13-yard scoring pass to fullback Cullen Bryant early in the second quarter.

St. Louis, 2-1, got its touchdown on its second possession in the opening quarter on an 87-yard, 15-play march that consumed 9:58. Neil Lomax, who was the Cardinals' quarterback for the first three periods, tossed 1 yard to tight end Doug Marsh for the lone score.

HHS varsity dropped; junior high will play

HERMLEIGH -- Hermleigh High School will not field a varsity football team for the 1984 season, Jerry Church, HISD superintendent, has told The Snyder Daily News.

The expected announcement came after Church noted last week Hermleigh school did not appear to have enough eligible players to field a team. Hermleigh, in the same league as area communities Ira and Borden County, competes in Six-Man football.

"I'm going on the assumption this is a one-year thing only," said the superintendent. "We will have a junior high team as scheduled and we have a number of eighth graders who will move up next year."

Church also said he expects Hermleigh to participate in boy's basketball later this school year.

Hermleigh had been coached by Clarance Spieker for the past 10 years, but he resigned recently to take a position at Newcastle. Coaching boy's athletics at Hermleigh this year will be Karl Schoenfield, a native of Miles.

Rogers Hornsby had the best righthanded career batting average, .358. He was second to Ty Cobb's .367. Cobb batted lefthanded.

Team handball, an Olympic sport since 1972, is contested on a large court with seven men on a side. It has elements of soccer and basketball.

What others have said about DEEP CREEK MERCHANT...

"The writer has done an outstanding job of telling the story not only of "Uncle Pete" Snyder, but has drawn in many highlights of the people and events that made the city and county the viable area it is today..."
Lash Lashbrook
Abilene Reporter News

"Mr. Anderson is a careful researcher, a thorough scholar who has spent years searching public and private sources in order to tell the story of Pete Snyder. He has given us an account that is as complete and accurate as existing records will allow and he has made us aware of the contribution of this pioneer to the history of Scurry County."
Harry L. Krenek,
President, Historic Scurry County, Inc.
Ph.D., Dean of Instruction,
Western Texas College,
Snyder, Texas

"A super looking book. You can certainly be proud to have such an "offspring" on the shelf... Sort of like bootlegging a little piece of immortality.."

which involves the injection of a substance into the heart's arteries.

Other medical "areas of interest" he cited include such past activities as service on an emergency medical service council — a citizens group which monitored and encouraged advanced EMS training.

In addition, he served as a guest lecturer at Sul Ross in Alpine for such topics as medical ethics and the aspect of elderly care related to "coming to terms with aging, death and dying."

He expressed an interest in continuing work related to both areas here.

Miller attended high school at Highlands in San Antonio, graduating in 1963. He and his wife met in high school and married while in their junior at the University of Texas at Austin.

Miller earned his degree in 1968, then entered the Air Force, serving from 1968 through 1974 as an F-4 pilot. His service included a combat tour in Southeast Asia in 1971.

He entered medical school in 1974 at Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, where he was a classmate with another Snyder physician, Dr. Bid Cooper.

He graduated in 1978 and served a one-year residency in internal medicine at Keesler AFB in Biloxi, Miss. He joined the staff at Alpine in 1979.

His wife Deanne has a degree in German and French from UT. She holds a secondary teacher certificate in French and has completed graduate work in that language.

In Alpine, she served as her husband's office business manager and plans to continue this work here.

The Miller's have three daughters, Monique, age 15; and twin girls, Ashley and Kirsten, age 14.

Republicans adopt platform preamble

DALLAS (AP) — With platform battles behind them, Republicans are looking forward to a harmonious convention as Democrats face new disclosures about Geraldine Ferraro's family finances and criticism from a leading black supporter of Walter F. Mondale.

The convention platform committee wrapped up its proposed campaign document Friday by adopting a preamble.

Three escape wreck injuries

Three Snyder men, all employees of NL Drilling, escaped injury Saturday morning in a one-vehicle traffic mishap about 11 miles west of Snyder.

According to Department of Public reports, Clyde Young of 511 32nd St. in Snyder was driving his Mercury Bobcat westbound on Highway 180 when a blow-out apparently caused him to lose control of the car which veered off the roadway and overturned.

Neither Young nor two passengers in his car, all enroute to a job site in western Scurry County, were injured in the mishap.

AJRA competitor injured by bull

A Sterling City teenager was treated and released from Cogdell Memorial Hospital Friday night for injuries sutained during the AJRA National Finals Rodeo at the Scurry County Coliseum.

According to reports, Bryan Davis, competing in the boys 13-15 age group junior bull riding, sustained minor head injuries.

EMS personnel reported that Davis was taken to the Cogdell emergency room where he received several stitches for a laceration to the head. He was released from the hospital late Friday night.

Car fire doused

Snyder firemen were called to extinguish a car fire in far southwest Scurry County just after 1 a.m. Saturday.

According to fire department reports, a 1974 Chevrolet owned by Ed Romo of Austin sustained moderate damage. The vehicle was parked about 20 miles southwest of Snyder beside Texas Highway 350.

Hit and runs here

Three minor traffic mishaps, including two hit-and-run incidents, were reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the day's first accident was a 1975 Lincoln driven by Edna Harris of 3500 Austin Pl. which struck a portable sign owned by the Sign-Tist in the 3700 Block of College Ave.

The first hit-and-run report was filed by Bonnie Schupp of Fluvanna at 4:06 p.m.

She told police that her 1984 Datsun had apparently been struck by an unidentified vehicle while parked at the Scurry County Senior Citizen's Center during the afternoon.

The second hit-and-run was rreported on the Safeway parking lot on College Ave. at 7:52 p.m.

According to reports, a 1982 Chevrolet owned by Darby Scott of Rt. 2, Snyder was apparently struck by another vehicle while parked at the supermarket.

Only minor to moderate damage was reported in all three mishaps.

Consolidation 'dead issue'

The proposed consolidation of the Hermleigh and Hobbs Independent School Districts is apparently a dead issue.

The idea first surfaced in May of this year as the two school districts contemplated their futures. Of great concern to each was the new education bill recently passed by the Texas Legislature which is restructuring the entire education system in the state, including finances.

Last May, concerned citizens from Hermleigh traveled to Hobbs, located about 20 miles from Snyder, to view the facilities and meet with their Hobbs counterparts.

A couple of weeks later, people in Hobbs paid Hermleigh a return visit.

Much concern was voiced and many questions were posed as persons living in each school district tried to assess what consolidation might entail.

Hermleigh Superintendent Jerry Church noted last week that since the May meetings, "nothing more has been discussed" regarding the issue.

With school to begin this week, each school district is continuing to function as an independent entity.

LADONNA BENSON

Local to sing for convention

A Snyder girl will sing during opening ceremonies Monday night at the Republican National Convention in Dallas.

Ladonna Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Benson, 4601 El Paso, has been invited to entertain delegates immediately prior to the convention's opening.

She is a 1978 graduate of Snyder High School and currently works as a consultant with the Dallas style shop Marie Leavell. In her spare time, she also pursues a singing career around the Dallas area.

Shoplifting arrest Friday

Snyder police jailed a 26-year-old shoplifting suspect Friday afternoon.

Kmart personnel called police to report the incident at 2 p.m. They were able to provide a description of a vehicle which the suspect left the store in.

The woman was stopped by police later in the afternoon and arrested on a misdemeanor theft charge.

City detectives are also investigating a bicycle theft reported Friday night.

Melinda Jones of 1901 College Ave. called authorities at 10:25 p.m. and told investigators that a bicycle and tire had been taken from the residence earlier in the day.

In other action, city police logged one arrest for DWI and 6 public intoxication arrests Friday evening. One of the PI suspects was also charged with one count of disorderly conduct.

What kind of vacation begins by dipping the back tire of a bicycle into the Missouri River and ends by dipping the front tire into the Mississippi River?

It could only be a vacation which includes the Register's Annual Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa (RAGBRAI).

City engineer Rick Connor and wife Sandy participated in RAGBRAI XII, July 22-29, a 500-mile bicycle tour of Iowa which began in Glenwood on the banks of the Missouri and terminated in Burlington on the Mississippi. Each participant traveled at his own pace, leaving as late each morning and covering as many miles each day as he wished.

RAGBRAI began as the result of the decision of two of the Des Moines Register's staff writers to get in touch with the people of the state. John Karras, who served as leisure editor until his retirement in June, and Donald Call, with the Register's Washington bureau until he retired in Aug. 1983, placed an advertisement in the paper inviting anyone who wished to ride along.

On departure day, 75 people showed up at a cafe in Sioux City to ride with them. Because residents demanded it, the Register sponsored the ride the following year and it has remained a popular annual event. That first ride occurred in August of 1972, but since then tradition has made it the last full week in July.

According to a spokeswoman for the Register, the paper provides an emergency medical team, six policemen and a truck to carry baggage for the cyclists. "Unfortunately, last year we had to begin charging an entry fee to help cover the cost for these needed items," she said.

About 90 percent of the riders in this year's race camped each evening. Since the Connors wanted the chance to "know the personality" of the state, they wrote to the chamber of commerce in each scheduled stop to apply as guests in homes of the townspeople.

They were fortunate to be a part of the chosen 10 percent. Sandy said, "Being from out-of-state, we had a better chance of staying with people. We took along sleeping bags just in case though. We had to use them one night when one family invited six couples to stay with them."

"The best part, what made the ride enjoyable," said Rick, "was first the good food. Churches and civic organizations provided most of it, all homemade. And second was the elaborate welcomings in some of the towns."

At Shenandoah, the first overnight stop, the residents rolled out the red carpet for the cyclists in honor of hometown boy, Chuck Offenburger, a Register writer who produces "The Iowa Boy" column.

The newspaper keeps no records of individuals involved, but according to its clippings, an estimated 17,000 people participated in this year's event, including event sponsors, police, emergency personnel and other staff, spectators and approximately 7,500 riders.

Describing themselves as active bicyclists, the Connors plan to participate in some Texas rides. And they plan to return to Iowa for RAGBRAI sometime in the future.

END OF THE RIDE—Rick and Sandy Connor (on the right, looking at the camera) finish RAGBRAI XII by dipping their front tires in the Mississippi River.

Increased efficiency seen in industry

DANGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — The same amount of wood once used to build a 320-squarefoot log cabin now can provide enough lumber to build a 3,500-square-foot home and furnish its occupants with a 30-year supply of paper and tissue products, says Georgia-Pacific Corp.

The firm, a maker of building materials and paper products, says new products, innovations in manufacturing techniques and better use of wood wastes account for the increase in efficiency.

Computer Receipts

Computerized price scanning systems provide grocery shoppers with speedier checkouts, and can mean lower grocery bills, if you read the receipts.

Many people throw away the computer generated receipts listing each item, size and price without realizing that they provide an ideal way to keep track of food costs.

Consumers can use the receipt information to determine how much they spend in certain categories, such as food and non-food items; or meat, vegetables, packaged products, convenience foods and staples.

Reviewing the scanner receipt helps identify categories where spending could be cut. You might find, for example, that you're spending substantial amounts on non-food items that cost less at other types of stores.

Scanner receipts also reveal impulse buying. Since impulse purchases make up about two-thirds of all supermarket decisions, reducing these costs can cut overall grocery expenses.

Regular review of scanner receipts permits consumers to track prices on products they frequently buy. Armed with a good knowledge of prices, shoppers can better detect true specials in weekly advertising and unadvertised specials in stores.

Over time, receipt-reading consumers can develop a shopping calendar of items that are better buys at select times of the year. They can stock up when the price is right and save about 20 percent on food buying by eating foods in greatest supply.

Shopping at supermarkets with computerized cash registers and scanning equipment is not without its disadvantages. These supermarkets sometimes remove prices of items on the shelf as a means of reducing their costs.

Without item prices on the shelf, consumers have a difficult time comparison shopping among different brands. Lack of item prices also makes it more difficult to spot computer errors or unchanged special prices at the checkout counter.

Back-to-School Wardrobe

Recent surveys show that the majority of parents with school age children spend three fourths of their back-to-school budgets on school clothes. Even though school clothes are heavily advertised during August, consumers could wait until the school year starts to do most of the wardrobe buying. Dressing like others is important to children, and waiting to buy some items gives them a chance to know what other kids are wearing.

To be united

Dr. and Mrs. Bennie LeBleu of Rotan announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Rebecca Ann, to James Ray Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ford of Hermleigh.

The couple plan to unite on Oct. 20 at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church of Rotan.

MR. AND MRS. JESSIE RUSSELL LOPER

Actress Lee Meriwether won the Miss America title in 1955.

English is the official language in The Gambia. Mandinka and Wolof are also spoken.

Promises exchanged

Lana Lynn Bruns, daughter of Leon and Theo Bruns of Big Lake and Terry and Sandra Smith of Rt.3, was married to Jessie Russell Loper, son of Connie Morris of 2801 Ave. M on July 4 at 10 a.m. in the Smith home. Mike Monroe, minister at East Side Church of Christ, administered vows.

Amy Lancaster and Mike Loper stood as honor attendants with Dawn Morris, sister of the groom, as candlelighter.

The bride chose burgandy, gray and silver for her wedding colors. Her mother, Sandra Smith, made all the flower arrangements.

Soloists Dana Parham and Scott Haggerton and pianist Barbara Tune performed "The Wedding March," "We've Only Just Begun," "Through the Years" and "Almost Paradise."

After a short trip to Dallas, the couple resides in Wichita Falls where the groom is employed by The Boston Tea Party and the bride works for Red Lobster.

Miss Huffman marries Michel in Irving ceremony

Society News

IRVING—Pamela Ann Huffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy J. Huffman, and Matthew Edward Michel, son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald E. Michel of Denton, were married Aug. 18 at noon in the Plymouth Park Baptist Church. Rev. Fred Neyland of the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. May and Mrs. Emma Huffman, all of Snyder.

Pianist Sharon Grahnquist, organist Sandra Davidson, harpist Carolyn Armstrong and soloists Darryl Huffman and Kerri Higgins provided musical selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of white French chantilly and re-embroidered chantilly lace with a Queen Anne neckline and full-length chantilly lace sleeves tied with satin ribbons atop sheer ruffles at the cuff. Re-embroidered chantilly lace appliques enhanced the fitted bodice and a satin ribbon at the waist came to a bow at the back. The antebellum style skirt was accented with multilayers of mini ruffles which came to a point below the bodice in front and draped down the cathedral length train. She wore a Juliet cap adorned with seed pearls and a satin rosebud, falling to a cathedral length chantilly veil trimmed with satin rosebuds and lace appliques.

Trina Wilhelm of Dallas served as matron of honor with Melinda Luby of Denton, Louise Bradley of Denton and Mrs. Palmer McCarter of Fort Worth as bridesmaids. Michel Lester of Tallahassee, Fl., the groom's niece, was junior bridesmaid and Mary Hall Lester, also his niece, was flower girl.

MRS. MATTHEW EDWARD MICHEL

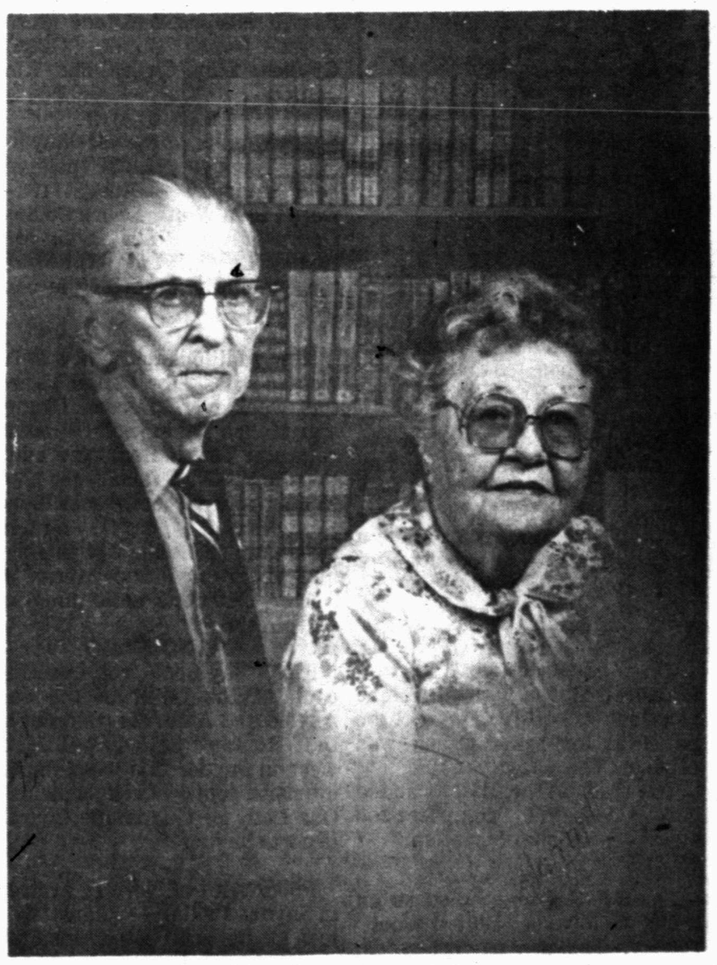

Brett Clark stood as best man for the groom. Dave Dailey of Denton, Niles Holmes of Fort Worth, Kevin Campbell of Denton and Kelly Marcom of League City served as groomsmen. Darryl Huffman, John Schendel and David Michel were ushers with Joey Taylor of Mesquite as ring bearer.

A reception in the church followed the ceremony.

The bride, a 1980 graduate of Irving High School, is currently enrolled at Texas Woman's University.

A 1978 graduate of Denton High School and a 1983 graduate of Texas A & M, the groom is employed as a project engineer at Turbo Refrigerating Company of Denton and is enrolled in the M.B.A. program at North Texas State University.

Following a wedding trip to Ixtapa, Mexico, the couple will live in Denton.

MR. AND MRS. AUDIE MCELYEA

Celebrate anniversary

The family of Audie and Ida Mae McElyea wish to invite relatives and friends to their home at 212 36th St. on Aug. 19 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. for a reception in honor of the McElyea's 62nd anniversary.

Married Aug. 15, 1922, they both were born and raised in Texas. Ida Mae comes from Anson and Audie was born in Snyder.

The McElyea's have one daughter, Anna Gibson, who lives with her husband, R.D., in Lamesa. They also have two grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Lewis, Carter say vows

ODESSA—The marriage of Mary Beth Lewis and Roy Lee Carter was solemnized Sat. evening, June 23 in the First Christian Church. Dr. Gilford Olmstead officiated the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon F. Lewis of 4011 E. Everglade. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carter of 2901 33rd, Snyder.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dropped waist bridal gown of white satin material and imported French Alencon lace throughout the sabrina neckline and led o'mutton sleeves. Several Alencon motifs cascaded down and around the scalloped cathedral train. Her bouquet was a cascade of roses and stephanotis with baby's breath.

The maid of honor, Tricia Furst, wore a formal gown of pink taffeta. She carried an arrangement of pink and white long-stemmed roses.

Bridesmaids, dressed like the honor attendant, were Melinda McCoy, Martha McNeel, Kristy Vineyard, all of Odessa, and Shannon Roberts of San Antonio.

Flower girls, Katie Perkins and Kristie Perkins of Snyder, were dressed in formal pink taffeta dresses with a skirt overlay of lace. All of the attendants wore wreaths of miniature roses and baby's breath in their hair.

Roy Carter of Snyder served as best man for his son. Groomsmen were Greg Davis of Belton, Matt Faudree of Midland, Ross Snell of Aledo and King Nelson of Maraga, Ca.

Jack Lewis, brother of the bride, Mark Galvin of Houston, Greg Holcomb of Midland, Leonard Duncan of Dallas, Steve Blackburn of Denver, Co. and Lynn Cowden of Midland served as ushers.

Mrs. Randy Perkins, sister of the groom, presented a wedding piano recital prior to the ceremony. Her selections were "Liebestraume" by F. Liszt, "Nocturne in E" by F. Chopin, "Moonlight Sonata" by L. Beethoven and "Adagio" from "Sonata Pathetique" by L. Beethoven. The mothers were seated to "Canon" by J. Pachelbel.

Bill Denton of San Angelo sang "Wedding Song" and "Sunrise, Sunset" prior to the ceremony, accompanied on the piano by Perkins.

The wedding party entered to "Trumpet Voluntary" by H. Purcell and played by Don Brasher on the trumpet and Perkins on the organ. The organ recessional was "Hornpipe" from Handle's "Water Music."

A candelabra and a pair of pink rose arrangements decorated the church.

The reception followed in the Odessa Country Club. The rehearsal dinner was held at The Centre.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Permian High School. She has attended Texas Tech University and will be continuing her education at Midwestern University.

MRS. ROY LEE CARTER

A 1975 graduate of Snyder High School, the groom received a BS degree from Texas Tech University in 1980 with a major in entomology. He is employed by I.C.I., Americas.

Special guests included the bride's grandparents, Edna Soper of Senton and Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Lewis of Burnett, and the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Branscum of Snyder.

The couple will make their home in Vernon following their wedding trip to Jamaica.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

School starts Monday, and a sizable group of folks had better prepare themselves for a bad day.

We are creatures of habit who have fallen victim to summer's sloth. But an 8 a.m. deadline now faces two large groups — those who work in the school system and those who let loose kids into it.

Summer's slack is about to get tight again.

Boxers go into the mountains to work the excess fat from their bodies. Now the flabby habits that have developed during the summer will have to be burned away again.

In the morning time, getting yourself or someone else off to school generally means an extra 30 minutes. And 30 extra minutes in the morning must be the most precious of the day — judging by the favors some people will promise for an extra half-hour's sleep.

With these same folks having to get up early, it's going to make for some pretty testy people.

We expect Monday to contain a range of minor horrors all across Snyder. The alarm clock will go off and here's what you can expect.

Coffee pot parts are going to be misplaced or, worse yet, coffee canisters will be discovered empty.

Menfolk will realize how disorganized their sock drawers have become. And after finding a pair in the dim-dark, it's a good bet you'll find the wife has paired unmatched socks together.

Children will be cranky and slow to rise. And once they're dressed and fed, the route to school will be unfamiliar and dangerous.

A whole line of drivers new to the country will terrorize the school grounds with last minute and uneducated maneuvers into the no-parking zones.

Those still unused to the new early hours will also make kamikaze approaches to the school buildings to unload carloads of half-asleep children.

As bad as it is on parents and kids, the major victims are still the teachers.

Students know they'll get out of school someday. That education is some type of temporary resting place before embarking on a wonderful, fulfilling and fuzzy future.

But teachers will wake up Monday morning and realize it's time to go to work again. The summer is over and the future has arrived.

Coming back from a week's vacation is hard enough. But having to interrupt a two-month period of rest must be like receiving your draft notice twice in one lifetime.

Anyway, Tuesday will be better, and Wednesday better still. By the beginning of next week, you'll have almost forgotten vacation ever existed.

You'll again be in step with the rest of the world's poor working stiffs. Excuse us for saying it, but welcome back.

Some will say DeLorean beat the rap. No he didn't, because he was never on trial. The government was, and in the end, got stung by it's own sting operation.

Two years ago when the story broke that a big wheel in Detroit was caught in the act of purchasing dope — a lot of it — the reaction was outrage and disgust. A lynching seemed in order.

Being civilized, we had to settle for righteous indignation. Witnessing a juicy scandal unfold would probably be more fun anyway.

The evidence seemed irrefutable. If you were a lawyer how would you have got around that video tape? The one we saw on national TV showing a beaming DeLorean exclaim that, "It's (cocaine) better than gold." His only chance seemed to be if a pack of high-priced lawyers could get him off on a technicality. Then he still wouldn't be safe. We would sic our dogs on him.

To its credit, the defense didn't look for loopholes. The thrust was on two things: (1) Keep the trial focused on the big brother tactics of the government agents, and (2) Don't let the jurors focus on the fact that he did it and is therefore guilty.

"We would have had a hung jury," said one juror if the judge had not instructed them to acquit DeLorean if they decided he was not "predisposed" to commit the crimes.

What was the government on trial guilty of? According to testimony, it singled out a celebrity who was desperate for money and made him an offer he couldn't refuse. And at one point, when he tried to back out, his family was threatened. A family, I noticed, that stuck by him through his darkest hours.

And what about that video tape? How did it come to be viewed by a national audience before the trial began? This key piece of evidence was possessed by the Justice Department. How did it suddenly appear in the television studios? Magic? I suspect it was sent, Special Delivery.

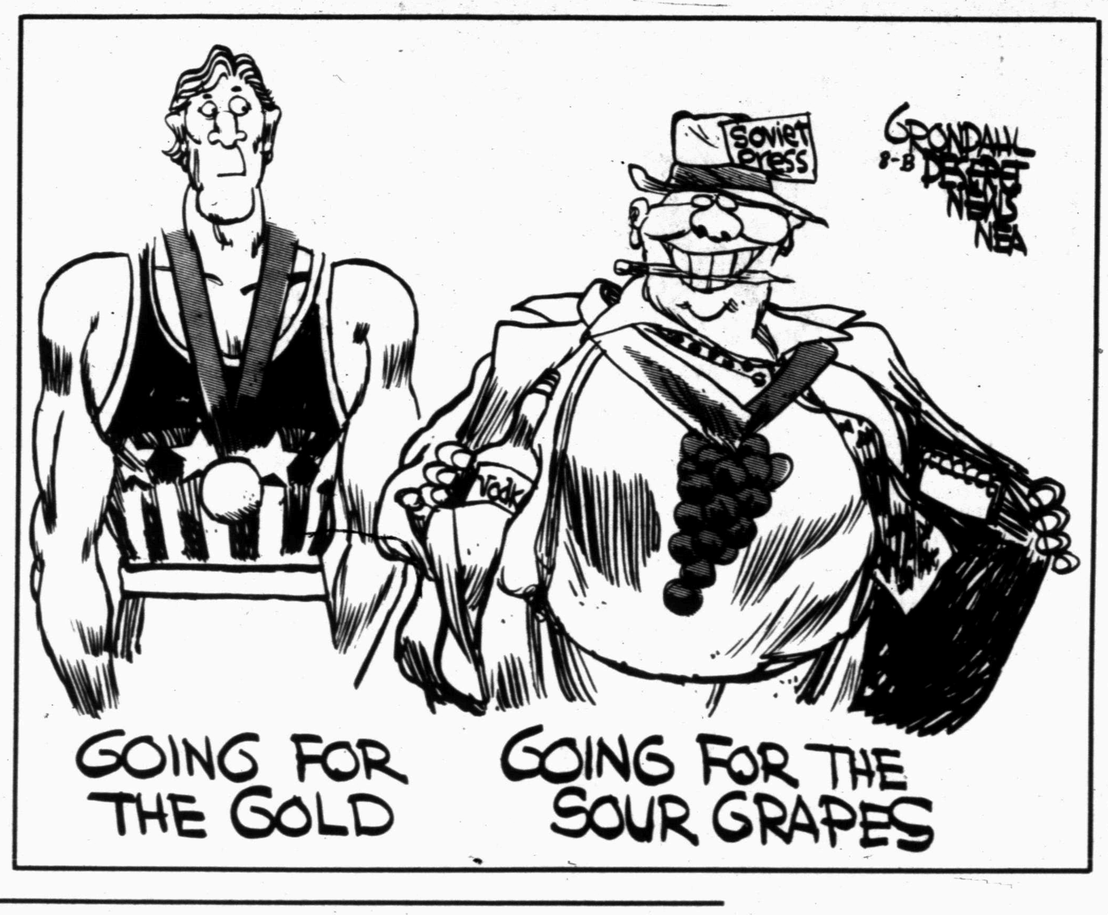

I'm sure it bothers some — and some of those more than others — that DeLorean walked away seemlingly scot free. After all, he did conspire to buy drugs. Sure he was desperate for money, but who isn't?

There are plenty of people around with a need who wouldn't have, as the prosecution put it, "shook hands with the devil." The jury decided, in effect, that the government shouldn't be the devil.

The DeLorean trial will influence issues larger than the case of a tycoon who let desperation get the better of him. Beginning with Abscam the government has displayed a penchant for targeting high profile personalities in it's undercover operations. Are these busts expected to deter common criminals on the local level?

Along with big coverage these stings have generated big questions. Such as how much deception is permissible when going for the deceivers.

But back to John DeLorean. Is he getting off clean? I liked his quote at the end of the trial. "Would you buy a used car from me?"

SUNDAY
August 12

Lone Star Gas Co. Manager Wedge Turner has filed an application for a rate increase which would raise the average residential customer's monthly bill here about $2.47 in the winter and 13 cents in the summer, it was reported Sunday.

The Lone Star rate increase estimate was based on an average of 6,000 cubic feet of gas.

Commercial gas customers' rates would also increase under the requested rate schedule.

MONDAY
August 13

Snyder teachers reported back Monday for a week's worth of in-service activity prior to the beginning of classes for local students next Monday.

Guilty pleas were offered here Monday morning by a father and son indicted for felony delivery of a controled substance last March.

Entering pleas in 132nd District Court were 63-year-old Anderson (Son) Davis Jr. and his 38-year-old son Samuel Lee Davis. The pair were arrested by police in Feburary.

County officials Monday afternoon decided to postpone until next week action related to an intergovernmental contract for services with the City of Snyder.

A possible snag in implementing one portion of the agreement was noted Monday morning — a lack of disc space on the county's computer system to allow it to beging collecting the city's taxes.

County commissioners voted Monday afternoon to adopt a slightly reduced $13 million operating estimate for 1985.

The approving vote came after a 1:30 p.m. public hearing — a session which prompted no appearances or comments from local taxpayers.

In addition, the court hopes to retain the same tax rate as used for 1984 — approximately 15½ cents per $100 valuation.

The options of accepting or postponing energy grant monies to improve utility efficiency at Western Texas College produced considerable discussion Monday at the August meeting of the WTC board of trustees.

The board tabled action regarding the energy grant and a second plan to secure meters to measure areas of high electrical use on campus. Both will be considered again at a special meeting Aug. 27.

TUESDAY
August 14

Six local felony cases have been closed following guilty pleas and subsequent plea bargain agreements in local 132nd District Court, it was reported Tuesday.

Pre-school registration in Snyder elementary schools Tuesday showed a first day increase of 120 pupils as compared to first day totals for last year.

Systemwide, the registration estimate is 1,888 this year compared to 1,768 for the first day of 1983-84.

School trustees Tuesday moved closer to a final decision regarding teacher salaries for the coming year — focusing on two proposals which approximately offer the same yearly increase.

The latest plan would offer all Snyder teachers a $1,000 per year raise in addition to the normal "step" raise they would have received under the old state formula.

The net salary increase would then equal approximately $1,500 for most teachers. A yearly increase might swing from a low of $1,000 per year to a high of just more than $1,900.

As part of the budget studies, the board also approved a one-time salary supplement to be applied toward both administrative personnel, coaches and "extra-duty" classroom teachers.

WEDNESDAY
August 15

The board of directors for the Diamond M Foundation has selected John Jarrell as a new member of the board, it was announced Wednesday by Evelyn McLaughlin Davies, president of the Diamond M Foundation.

THURSDAY
August 16

The addition at Cogdell Memorial Hospital of a machine noted for its ability to predict the potential for heart attack was reported Thursday.

The medical facility has added a Mac System-3 "computerized stress-test monitor system."

The meeting was billed as an effort to form a "united front" regarding teacher pay in Snyder, and the "united" opinion from an apparent clear majority of teachers Thursday concluded proposals to date are too low.

Teachers have now been invited to formulate their own pay proposal — a plan due consideration at a 6:30 p.m. Monday meeting of the school board.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

I happen to be the woman from Fort Worth who was injured in the motorcycle accident on Saturday, July 28. The accident occurred at 2:05 p.m. on 180 about six miles east of Snyder. I do not know where the person driving the gold-yellow Cadillac lives. I do know I "lost control" of my cycle after the person in the car pulled in front of me as I started to pass. The person then pulled back in front of me, putting on the brakes as I pulled back into the right lane. It was apparent the driver was intent on "getting me." I'm not sure if the driver was from Snyder, only the driver knows.

I do know this person allowed me to meet many "nice people" from Snyder. I wish to thank all those who stopped to assist me while I was awaiting the ambulance. The offering of items such as pads, ice and other concerns for my comfort were greatly appreciated.

I would like to extend thank yous to the ambulance personel for their reassurance, care and concern; to the staff of Cogdell Memorial Hospital in the emergency room and X-ray; and also special thank yous to Dr. Stanley Allen and Bill Erwin, CRNA.

From the lady from the "city" I must say I was impressed with the care and how rapidly the process was completed. You are all to be commended.

Pampered pets enjoy way of life

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — When Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard to get her dog a bone, she came up empty-handed.

Today, it's likely the cupboard is stocked with multiflavored bones, cheese-flavored biscuits and vitaminized chocolate drops.

If it's not, Rover might go out for dinner. Restaurants featuring cuisine for canines are the latest thing. At the Beach Regency Hotel in Nice, France, for example, dogs can feast on a buffet of hot and cold meats, vegetables, cheeses and desserts. The meals range from $3 to $9, depending on the appetite and size of the dog.

Pet owners are not just feeding their pets better these days. They are making appointments to have their dogs' hair styled. They are outfitting their pooches with clothing and accessories. And, in the end, they are giving Fido and Spot decent burials.

Dogs are no longer living a dog's life. They're living in an age where pampering has become a popular pastime for many pet owners.

"My pets are my kids; people don't like to hear it but it's true," said Lynn Andrews, proprietor of the Kimberly Pet Cemetery in Fogelsville, and owner of two dogs, two cats and a rabbit. "It's a normal human reaction to form attachments to pets. Pets help us express a lot of things in our lives."

She invites those who are skeptical about the value of relationships between pets and owners to read studies on what social scientists have termed the "human-companion-animal bond."

She said one study conducted at a Lima, Ohio, prison demonstrated that pets can transform hardened prison inmates into warm, loving human beings. Another found that senior citizens living alone and heart-attack victims live longer if they own pets. Yet another proved that pets can be helpful to emotionally disturbed children.

According to pet groomers in the Easton area, bona fide pet-pamperers dress their dog in a raincoat and rubber boots before braving inclement weather. In fact, they have an entire wardrobe for their pet.

What type of clothing is being sold these days? You name it, it's available. Everything from tuxedos to pajamas.

Sandy King's Pets and Supplies in Palmer Township carries a full line of seasonal clothing for dogs. For the winter, there are ski sweaters, snowsuits, leg warmers and scarves.

For spring and summer, there are raincoats, rubber boots, shirts bearing a variety of sayings, and sunglasses. For energetic dogs, there are jogging suits. For dogs who enjoy football, there are Penn State sweatshirts.

Karen Tracy, owner of the Barking Lot in Brodheadsville, insists that dressing dogs in certain types of clothing is practical. Her two Tibetan terriers wear raincoats and boots. "When dogs, especially longhaired ones, go out in the snow, they get caked with it," she said.

Besides, she added, most dogs don't mind being dressed. French poodles seem to enjoy it. "A lot of them are little showoffs," she said.

Many pet-pamperers enjoy having their dogs groomed.

provided his air-conditioned automobile for my husband who was slightly injured. He gave us directions to a motel, transported my husband to the local hospital, waited until he was treated and returned him to us afterwards.

A potential dark moment in our vacation became a time of good memories as we remember the kindness of a deputy sheriff, a wrecker operator and members of the First Baptist Church.

Snyder, Texas remains to reinforce our faith in the friendliness of the folk in this great state.

To the editor:

We want to take this opportunity to highly commend the Snyder Fire Department. At 5 a.m., they were as alert and ready for action as most people are at 9 a.m. We have known for years that they are well-trained but it is something you really don't think about much or appreciate till you have a fire in your own home or place of business.

Ours, of course, was a place of business, the Lake Thomas Lodge located at Lake J.B. Thomas. They had to drive over 20 miles but it didn't take them long to get there and they knew immediately what to do. Our sincere thanks and appreciation go to each and every one of the firemen who answered our call.

We also want to give special thanks to two employees of the Colorado River Municipal Water District for their concern and quick action before the fire department could arrive. They are Richard Halfmann of the lake patrol and Jack Huddleston, a water station pumper.

We can't close without also mentioning the two people who turned the alarm in and have been our mainstay in getting ready to re-open, our son and his wife, John and Tonya Nobles. Our thanks, our love and our appreciation we give to all mentioned by name and to those not named because we don't know the names of all involved.

Growing grass under trees:

Deteriorating lawns are often blamed on a lack of fertilizer or competition with tree roots when the actual culprit is too much shade.

This is especially true in newer residential areas where lawns were established and trees planted shortly after the owner moved in. Everything grew beautifully the first 8 to 10 years, and then suddenly the grass began to thin out and weeds started to invade the lawn.

What actually happened was that as the trees grew larger, their shade covered more lawn area.

Bermuda grass is sun-loving and will look ragged in a shaded location. It is seldom worthwhile to attempt to grow Bermuda grass beneath trees.

St. Augustine will do fine under young trees, but as they grow and produce more shade, the grass begins to thin.

Grass leaves need ample light to produce necessary sugars and starches through photosynthesis. Without light, the plant starves for lack of food, and no amount of fertilizer or water will cure it.

These few steps may help grass in shady areas:

—Raise the height of your mower blade so the mowing height is at least 3 inches in shaded areas.

—Avoid using high-nitrogen fertilizers which can promote disase problems.

—Practice deep watering at less frequent intervals.

—Avoid foot traffic over the area.

—Thin out the crowns of trees by cutting back to side branches, allowing more light to pehetrate.

—Remove a few of the trees completely. The remaining trees will soon fill in, and you will seldom miss the ones that were removed.

—Remove leaves promptly as they fall.

—Remove a few of the lower limbs on existing trees to a height of 8 to 10 feet. This will permit more sunlight to reach the grass.

Shade tolerant ground covers can be an alternative to grass. Good shade-loving ground cover plants include English ivy, ajuga, vinca minor and mondo grass. If the shade is not too heavy, Asiastic jasmine also will do well.

Unfortunately, these ground covers will not tolerate foot traffic, but they will cover the area and look much better than bare ground.

City in Alabama tackles park decay

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Cows and pigs no onger roam Bienville Square, as they did more than a century ago, and gone is the sight of townsfolk hanging clothes from the park's tree limbs.

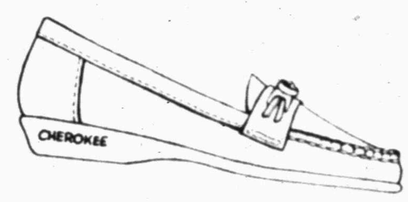

Gone, too, is the fence which the city erected around the square in the 1850s to keep out livestock.

But a fence couldn't keep out the urban problems which now plague the historic park in downtown Mobile— problems such as congestion and the annoying wayfarer with a sleeping bag under his arm or wine bottle is a paper sack.

Since Hurricane Frederic struck the city in 1979, leaving tons of fallen tree limbs in its rubbled wake, concern has increased over the city's landscape appearance and the survival of wind-damaged trees that form a canopy over historic Government Street.

It is named after the city's founder, Jean Baptiste LeMoyne, Sieur de Bienville, who also founded New Orleans.

BRAIN TRUST

NEW YORK (AP) — The country with the highest number of scientists and engineers in proportion to population is Switzerland, where 40 out of every 1,000 Swiss citizens are engaged in those occupations, according to a United Nations survey.

The Soviet Union virtually equalled Switzerland with 39.6 per 1,000, the survey said, but those figures were inflated to include students.

Japan was next highest with 35.3. The United States ranked near the bottom of the list with only 11 engineers and scientists per 1,000 of its citizens.

Italy's Mount Vesuvius erupted in 1631, killing 18,000 persons.

The British Parliament passed the Bill of Rights in 1689.

Patrols searching for loons

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y. (AP) — As a battered canoe glides toward an island in Upper St. Regis Lake, a lilting falsetto laugh drifts across the waves, and two sleek birds — one apparently with three heads — are spotted.

"It's the loons," says Jim McVey, a graduate student from Thunder Bay, Mich., who is one of six people studying the birds for New York state this summer. "One has a couple of chicks on its back."

The spine-tingling wail of the loon across a misty, moonlit lake has stirred the human soul for centuries. The Cree Indians called it Mookwa, Spirit of Northern Waters.

But the waterbirds have vanished from many lakes, and naturalists are rallying to save them in New England, New York and the Midwest.

McVey keeps a distance from the loon family as he notes the size of the chicks. The researchers will return later in the summer to every nest, to again check the young before they migrate south.

They are magnificent birds, with garnet-red eyes, black, snaky necks encircled with a collar of white bars, whiteflecked black backs and bright, white breasts.

One of the adults sinks slowly like a submarine, swimming with crooked neck extended like a periscope. Then it vanishes — resurfacing just as smoothly a few dozen yards away.

The loon's peculiar way of submerging, made possible by heavy bones and an ability to squeeze the air from its feathers, is unlike that of other diving, fish-eating birds.

"Loons are one of the oldest species of birds," says McVey "They've been around for 65 million years."

Loons are superbly adapted for subaqueous propulsion, but they flail around like seals on land. So they nest at water's edge — where they are vulnerable to dams that change the water level, wakes from motorboats, and disturbances by birdwatching canoeists.

"Some people around here say they don't think the loons are declining, since they still see them around," says McVey. "But since adult birds live maybe 20 or 30 years, they may be seeing the same birds year after year — it's the reproductive success and the survival of the young that will determine the long-range survival."

"The loon isn't threatened on a national basis," says Rawson Wood, founder and chairman of the North American Loon Fund, a New Hampshire-based federation of loon associations from eight states where the birds still breed.

Wood owns property on Squam Lake — the New Hampshire lake where the 1981 film "On Golden Pond" was filmed. When he noticed around 1975 that the birds were disappearing, Wood and others gathered evidence that led to endangered species status for the loon in his state.

Teams of volunteer Loon Rangers organized to stop disturbance of nesting pairs. Artificial nest sites were built. And an educational campaign — boosted tremendously, says Wood, by Katharine Hepburn's Golden Pond loon scene — was launched.

New Hampshire's loon population grew from 271 birds in 1976 to 363 in 1983, Wood says.

In Vermont, he says, the loon population declined from 56 in 1978 to 34 in 1983. In Maine, the Audubon Society estimates there are more than 3,000 loons; concern is centered on the more developed southern part of the state.

Montana volunteers report about 125 birds there. Loons have mostly disappeared from southern Michigan, and about 100 are left in the Upper Peninsula, Wood says.

Wisconsin has about 1,500 loons, he says.

Fonda, husband try to construct change

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Jane Fonda used to say things like "property is theft." Once she observed her state in life and concluded that "a couple of rich, liberal do-gooders dolin out money" can't solve society's problems.

She and husband Tom Hayden, an unequally rich couple of do-gooders, both of liberal bent, are nonetheless trying to do just that.

They were the firebrands of the 1960s. She was intent — to the point of going to Hanoi — on stopping the war in Vietnam. She was assailed by the American Legion, and she sued the FBI for invasion of privacy.

He was the symbol of the off-campus radical, the drafter of the Port Huron Statement aimed at opening and revising the Democratic Party, a founder of the Students for a Democratic Society.

Now he is an assemblyman from this hodgepodge district of West Los Angeles and is well regarded in Sacramento. She, of course, is an actress of remarkable ability who sells her secrets to a well-kept body and funnels the proceeds largely to their personal causes.

They are trying to change society from within.

They don't recognize it as philanthropy or charity and perhaps it isn't, whatever the IRS may opine. One would think, considering their backgrounds, it is a modest kind of subversion.

Consider the Campaign for an Economic Democracy, owner of Jane's first workout book and cassettes, a gift that provides half of the Committee's $500,000-plus-a-year budget. Tom is chairman of the Committee, which has three purposes, according to Jack Nicholl who keeps the books:

To try to get people interested in politics; to try to influence the Legislature in Sacramento and Congress in Washington; to try, through a separate Political Action Committee, to get certain chosen people elected to office.

It is, by Nicholl's estimation, "pretty effective."

"Tom more than Jane, since he is more involved," is its driving force, he says. Even though Hayden has his own campaign committee to finance his political present and future, the committee is a reservoir of political clout.

It espouses causes both believe in: pro-choice on abortion, women's rights, the environment and the control of toxic substances, poverty issues and rent control, a prime cause in Hayden's district which includes Santa Monica, which has one of the toughest rent control laws in the state and is under constant landlord attack.

If you happen to notice the far wall of Tom Hayden's Santa Monica Mall office, you'll see evidence of another Fonda-Hayden project, the Laurel Springs Camp. There on the wall, among the personal memorabilia photos — Tom and Jane and son, Troy, and dog — is a panoramic view of that milliondollar property and some of its 118 acres in the Los Padres National Forest near Santa Barbara.

They've had it for eight years now. "It's our chief focus in the summertime," Hayden says. "Jane's up there now. I go up tomorrow morning. We love it. I guess it's charity in the sense that there is no bottom line. It's not like there is some measurable benefit or profit from it.

"I worked in camps when I was a kid, but in addition to that I have always been involved in kids' programs, including setting up voluntary child care programs wherever I've lived. The child care center I started in Berkeley in 1969 is still there, still functioning. I love kids. And I guess I didn't have the money to do anything really significant for kids until now.

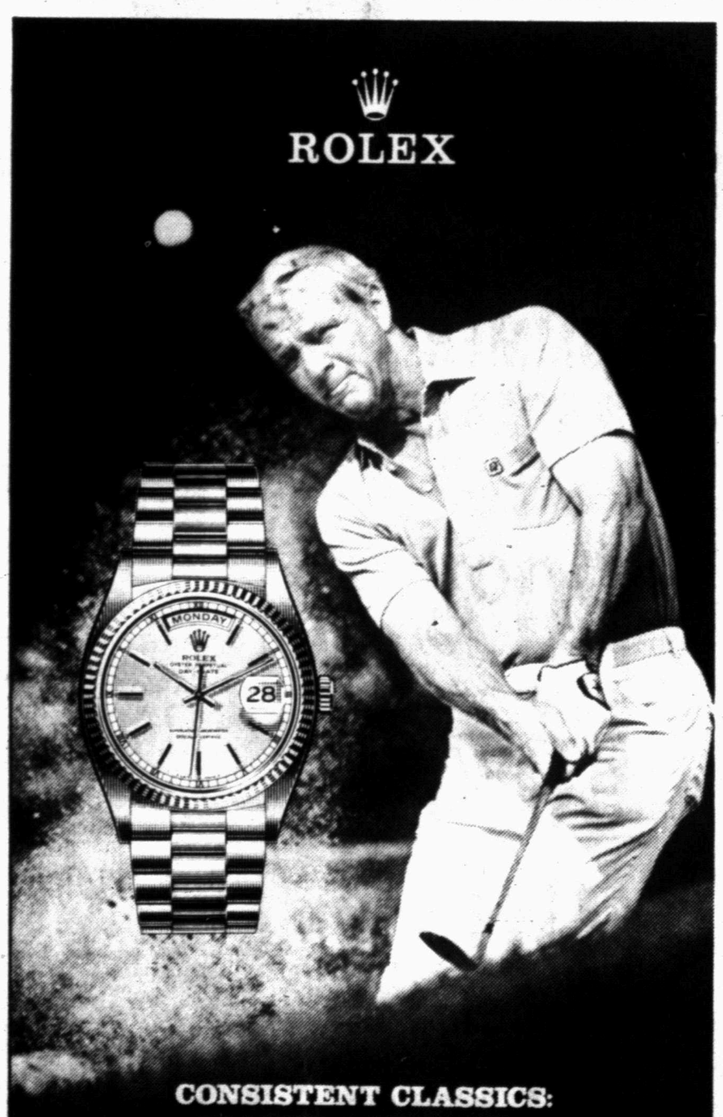

"So I just wanted to create an opportunity for kids to realize a little paradise in their lives and have an adventure in really building a better place.

" ... You know how segregated our society is along all kinds of lines. Here you have kids from ghettos, children of farm workers, kids of movie stars. They're all thrown together in the same swimming pool."

Actually there is no swimming pool, just a pond. Jane champions an active program in the performing arts, staffed by a group of professionals called the Twelfth Night Repertory Company that works in high schools during the regular school year.

Tom is more concerned with the physical aspects.

Texas heroes are buried in Austin

The Texas State Cemetery in Austin, Texas is the burial site for many of the Texas heroes. Here, General William Read Scurry was buried near the grave of Stephen F. Austin.

Scurry had died gallantly at the battle of Jenkins Ferry in Arkansas on April 30, 1864. Historians tell us that Scurry lay mortally wounded at the edge of the water on the Saline River between the opposing forces of the Confederate and Union soldiers. While he lay helpless, bleeding to death, Scurry is said to have used his last strength to cheer the Confederate forces.

His body was returned to Texas and the funeral oration was delivered by Lt. Gov. Fletcher S. Stockdale. Scurry's wife, Janette, died on January 5, 1886 and was buried next to her husband.

When the Legislature of Texas was carving out and creating 54 counties in west and northwest Texas, many of these heroes were remembered. The County of Scurry was so named on August 21, 1876, but it was not until June 28, 1884, that the citizens formally organized a government for the county and made it official.

The tall tombstone in the center of the picture is that of General William Read Scurry. He is buried near the center of the cemetery along with hundreds of others who served Texas in battle or in government.

42 tournament set August 30

A 42 tournament has been scheduled for August 30 in the Senior Center and potential players are invited to sharpen their skills for the coming competition. Play will begin at 10 a.m. and end at 11:30 a. m.

Tuesday evening has been reserved for round dancing in the center. The Hank Davis Westerners Band will be playing for dancing from 7-9 p.m.

Looking forward to the fall season, the Kitchen Band will resume practice sessions on Sept. 6. The Sunshine Choir will also be resuming practice soon and persons interested in performing with either group are invited to join at the first practice periods.

Located at 2603 Avenue M, the Senior Center is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each weekday. Information about the center, its services and activities is available by calling the office at 573-4035.

Defensive driving class scheduled

Western Texas College has scheduled an eight-hour defensive driving course on Aug. 27-28.

Classes will meet from 6-10 p.m. both evenings with Guy Sullivan as instructor. Students will pay fees of $22 each. They must attend both sessions to qualify for certificates which entitle them to discounts on certain types of automobile incurance.

To pre-register, students are to call the continuing Education office at WTC, 573-8511, ext. 240.

SCS Notes

By Rudy Esquivel
Soil Conservationist

A farmer who had always been successful and whose neighbors respected his judgment on almost any farm problem bought another farm. Right away he had trouble. He decided to put a 17-acre field into alfalfa. He prepared, fertilized, and seeded the field. The alfalfa came up, but then it just stopped growing. It turned yellow and didn't make a crop.

The alfalfa didn't grow because the soil in that field stayed wet a few inches below the surface. The farmer knew alfalfa wouldn't grow under these conditions, but he hadn't known the soil was like that before he bought the farm.

An urban dweller who lived in a new suburb decided he would like to grow his own fresh vegetables. He had almost half an acre of nearly level ground behind the house. The soil looked fertile, so he went ahead.

But when he started to work the soil he found it soggy, clayey, impossible to plow. A month of dry weather passed and he tried again. Still wet. He called the county agent and found out that his septic tank was causing all the trouble. The soil was so tight that the liquid waste could not soak in.

Septic tanks nearly always cause trouble in that kind of soil.

There wasn't much this man could do. He was so far from the city mains that it might be years before he could hook on. Enlarging the tank would not help since the subsoil was practically impervious. The soil just wasn't right for a home needing a septic tank. The man was in for trouble, not only with his garden but also with his sewage disposal system. a soil survey would have indicated this tight soil immediately.

Soil information is useful to all people, directly or indirectly. Its importance to farmers, ranchers, and foresters has long been recognized and now city people are beginning to realize how much influence it has on both their home life and their business. Some of the frequent users of soil information are land appraisers, realtors, builders, engineers, city planners, foresters, nurserymen, canners, pipeline, manufacturers, and insurance companies.

A primary purpose of making soil surveys is to provide for the nation's agricultural future. The nation cannot prosper without food; most food can come only from soil; soil has to be protected; protecting the soil is possible only with detailed information about it. Few soils produce economically just as they are. Many of our most productive soils have been made so through the farmers art. Soil surveys provide the basic information for this work.

Almost all farmland in the United States is privately owned. So it's the owners themselves--nearly four million of them--who have to do the actual work of conservation. The job of the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) is to give them technical assistance, based among other things, on the soil survey.

The SCS man doesn't try to advise the farmer on decisions. Planning the future of a piece of land is much like planning your own future. Some soils have few alternatives; for others they are almost numberless. But you don't make dcisions at random. Through experience and education you develop certain standards for making your decisions.

Some of the standards that help a farmer make his decision, in addition to the kinds of soil, are the size of the farm, the rainfall, and the potential market for his crops. Then, too, his skills, age and desires influence his plans for the future. So do the actions of his neighbors.

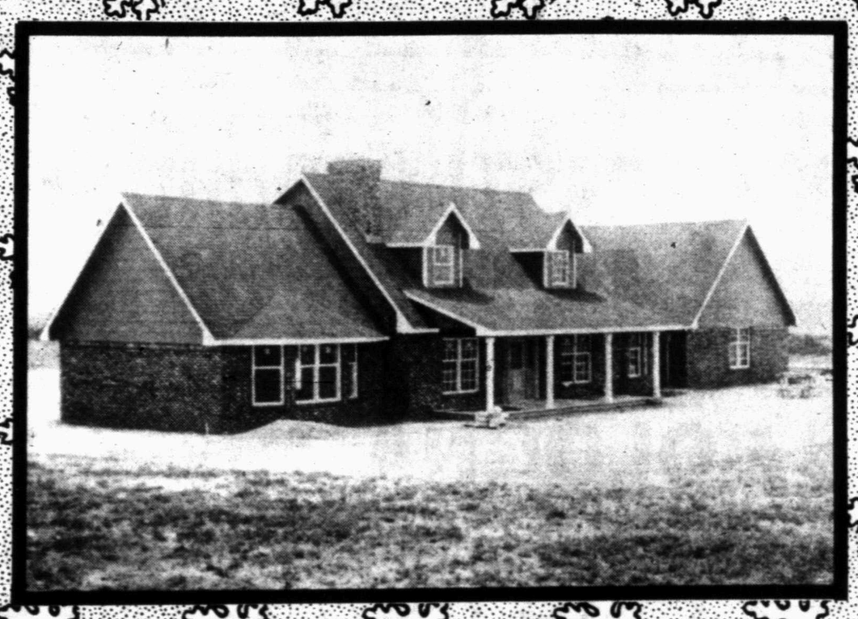

The decisions he makes in developing a conservation plan fall into two categories: how the soil will be used and how it will be improved and protected. The first decision usually determines the second, but sometimes it's vice versa.

Farmers and those who work with farmers, game managers, sportsmen, ranchers, engineers, builders, and newcomers in Scurry and Borden County may be interested in picking up a copy of Soil survey of Scurry and Borden Counties. These copies are available at the Soil Conservation Service office located at 3423 Avenue T in the Shopping Center or call us at 573-0171 and we can mail you a copy of each county.
