Winning ways

Chaps cap week with 93-88 win

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Unranked, unknown, injury-riddled and somewhat unrespected Midland College not only won the National Junior College Athletic Association championship here Saturday night, but in the process they won over a town and had their own fans loving every minute of it.

The Chaps waltzed through the tournament with four straight victories, including wins over defending champion Westark, Ark., and No. 1 ranked Miami Dade North. The win over Dade, a 93-88 double overtime decision in the finals, left even the most ardent fans limp.

Nancy Lowe, a longtime Chap booster, was asked how she felt after the game. With tears of joy rolling down her face, she said, "I just can't say anything right now. This is just too much to take in."

But husband John took up the slack from his teary-eyed wife, saying, "This is just about the best you can do and be No. 1. This team did everything that was expected of them and even more."

Charlie Wyatt, another Chap fan, said, "Ever since the day I checked out the road atlas to Hutchinson, Kan., I knew I wanted to attend this NJCAA tournament. I felt our Chaps could create a happening, but never did I dream of one of this magnitude. Needless to say, I'm extremely proud of our kids, Coach Jerry Stone and Midland College. This team has truly put the Tall City on the national basketball map in more ways than one. How sweet it is."

Chap booster Bill Williams felt from the beginning that Midland College was going to win the crown.

"The first night we were here, we sat by Howard and Carolyn Hedge. They are from Hutchinson and they gave us two suckers. We opened them up and one was green and the other was gold (Midland College's colors). I knew something good was going to happen."

The Hedges sat with the Williamses in the Chap rooting section during Saturday's finals. Barriers like that fell all over town and there were few Midlanders who felt like strangers.

Hutchinson almost adopted Midland College right from the beginning. The main reason was because of tiny 5-foot-6 Spud Webb who captured the imagination of well-knowing Hutch basketball fans right from the beginning.

"When I saw that little kid (Webb) dunk the ball that first night of the tournament I nearly fell out of my seat," said Gerald Timmons of Hutchinson. "We didn't get our team in the tournament this year and when that happens we usually adopt one. I had Volunteer State in the company pool. But when I saw Spud dunk one I didn't care if I lost that bet or not."

Joe O'Connor, who served as the Chaparral team host, said, "This is the fourth year that I have served as a host. But this is my first championship and these kids will always be special in my heart.

"I give a week of my time every year. The first year my team finished seventh and the next year we lost our two first games. And last year Lincoln went to the finals against Westark. We lost that one. But Midland College beat Westark in the first round of this tournament and I knew we were on our way," he added.

"Midland College has two super players that I'm sure most colleges wouldn't be interested in because they are not tall. Puntus Wilson and Spud Webb are just really great and I'm glad we gave them the top two honors after the championship game. I haven't talked to anyone in town who hasn't

In unprecedented vote, OPEC cuts production

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Faced with a world oil glut, OPEC agreed Saturday to formally limit production for the first time in its 21-year history, cut differentials in half and retain its base price.

Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest exporter, said it will slash production 500,000 barrels.

Western analysts said the accord and unilateral Saudi cut, effectively cutting OPEC production to 17.5 million barrels daily, may shore up the $34 base price for awhile. Consumers will see little immediate effect, but economists predicted an eventual slowing in the decline of gasoline and home heating oil prices.

A more immediate consequence may be a buttressing of OPEC's influence in world oil trade. The group's sagging sales had broken its grip on oil prices as control shifted toward non-OPEC producers such as Mexico and Britain.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries, said a production ceiling of 18 million barrels a day will take effect April 1 and be reviewed at OPEC's next meeting May 20 in Quito, Ecuador. The Saudis announced their own 500,000-barrel cut outside the agreement.

Oteiba told reporters OPEC was prepared to cut production even more later if necessary to maintain its benchmark price of $34 a barrel.

"We are ready to go to 10 million barrels a day if necessary," said Oteiba, who also is the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates.

OPEC ministers also agreed to halve the differentials charged on certain grades of crude. Those surcharges, scaled upward from the OPEC benchmark price, reflect advantages in quality and proximity to market for certain producers.

Under the agreement on differentials, price hawks Libya, Algeria and Nigeria will lower their price to $35.50 a barrel. Libya and Algeria currently charge $37, and Nigeria $36.50.

Oteiba estimated OPEC's average production for the first quarter of 1982 at about 19 million barrels daily. Of this about 2 million barrels go unsold on world markets daily because of energy conservation and recession in the industrialized countries.

Oil prices in the past year have fallen by nearly 4 percent and consumers have benefitted. Gasoline prices in the United States, for example, have fallen about 10 cents a gallon since last March to an estimated average for all grades of about $1.25 a gallon.

The OPEC agreement on a production ceiling included quotas for each member except Saudi Arabia. For all except a few members, the quotas represent a drop for current output.

In a surprising twist that climaxed the final day of meetings, Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said his country would cut production to 7 million barrels a day for the month of April.

Volcanic activity could continue several days

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens spewed ash and steam miles into the air in two eruptions, dusting parts of two states with ash and sending an 8-foot wall of hot mud and melted snow down the nearby Toutle River, officials said Saturday.

Fears of flooding prompted the evacuation of about 65 people, but no injuries were reported and evacuees returned home late Friday.

And while rumblings beneath the volcano eased after the blasts, scientists said the activity could persist for several days. Clouds obscured the top of the volcano Saturday.

The first blast, at 7:28 p.m. Friday, shot an ash cloud to nearly 9 miles above sea level — nearly 7 miles above the top of the volcano — and the second blast six hours later sent an ash cloud some 3 miles into the air.

Earthmoving vehicles on the north fork of the Toutle River were tossed about like tinker toys by the force of the blast, but there were no reports of damage to homes.

Kathy Cashman of the U.S. Geological Survey said one large flow of mud, about 660 feet wide, swept out of the north side of the crater after the first eruption. The flow eventually broke into two parts, with one headed down the Toutle River and the other toward Spirit Lake.

Nuclear freeze furor

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

HEARST

NEW YORK — President Reagan quickly and forcefully responded to the slick announcement by the Soviet Mr. Big that the U.S.S.R. was suspending deployment of new nuclelar missiles in European Russia. The ailing Kremlin leader, President Leonid I. Brezhnev, always posing as an apostle of peace, hedged his offer: Should the U.S.-led NATO alliance implement new long-range missiles in Western Europe, Brezhnev warned, then the Soviets will take retaliatory measures which he didn't spell out.

On a tour to promote his program for a "new federalism," President Reagan laid it on the line. Quite simply, he observed in Oklahoma City, the Brezhnev proposal for a mutual freeze in Europe "isn't good enough because it doesn't go far enough." Our president repeated his call of last November in which we would forego 572 new missiles if the Russians agree to scrap their

Issues low-key as election day approaches in area towns

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a 14-part series examining the candidates and the bond issues appearing on the ballot in the April 3 city, school and hospital elections.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Voters in Midland-area towns and communities will be trudging to the election polls April 3 in, most likely, scant numbers to cast ballots in mostly lackluster elections. If not almost nil, issues seem to be low-key even in contested races for election to city councils, school boards, hospital district boards and Upton County Water District.

One somewhat controversial issue may be the vote on legalizing bingo.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on election day.

GREENWOOD

GREENWOOD — Pasty Herrington, the 34-year-old president of the Greenwood Independent School District's board of trustees, is seeking her second three-year term on the seven-member board.

"I really do believe a woman's viewpoint does make a difference," said Mrs. Herrington, a former nurse. She is the first woman to serve on the board since the Greenwood ISD was created in 1951.

Also asking for votes of confidence in other uncontested positions are Ted Benton, who was appointed to the board last year to succeed Bob Coffee, who resigned in his move to the Brownwood area, and J.D. Hanson, who succeeded Bud Lea when Lea resigned from the board in 1980. Benton is a tire dealer; Hanson is an instructor in vocational shop at Odessa's Ector High School.

Greenwood ISD, which is experiencing a dramatic growth as indicated in an enrollment increase from 500 to 900 students in less than a year, currently is undergoing a building expansion program. Last year, voters approved a $7.5-million bond issue to expand the elementary school, to build a new high school, fieldhouse and bus barn.

Mrs. Herrington noted the increasing urbanization of the heretofore rural school, which is about seven miles east of Midland.

"It will be doubly hard (to keep discipline)," she said, "because our classes have been small. We're hoping to maintain that discipline we've always had, but it will be more difficult now."

Mrs. Herrington said one of the school's main goals is to maintain quality education through a sound curriculum, firm administration and a strong teaching staff.

"That's one of our main goals — the best education," she said. "We hire the best teachers that we can — those who are most qualified."

GARDEN CITY

GARDEN CITY — It's a no-issues race for two positions on the Garden City Independent School District's board of trustees.

Five people, including the incumbent, Leroy Hoelscher, a St. Lawrence-area farmer, are seeking school-board posts in this ranching-farming country.

STANTON

STANTON — Stanton Mayor Danny Fryar will be seeking re-election April 3 to the city post he has held since the mid-1970s.

City councilmen seeking re-election to three at-large posts are Howard Jenkins, Bill Rees and Ronnie Christian. Trying to edge in on the council is a fourth candidate, Leslie B. "Les" Carman.

Three slots on the Stanton Independent School District's board of trustees are to be filled by the voters but only one place is contested. Mike Hall is challenging Herb Sorley for Place 3 on the board. Sorley was appointed to the board following the resignation of Mary Sale Midkiff, who moved to San Antonio.

Unopposed candidates are Terry Franklin, board president, Place 4, and Fred Hermandez, Place 5.

LAMESA

LAMESA — Dawson County and Lamesa voters will be heading for the election polls April 3 to decide on legalizing bingo and to fill posts on the school board and city council.

Lamesa Mayor Pro-Tem Nickey Smith is being challenged in his bid for election by Rudy Arredondo, a brick mason who served on the council from 1977 to 1980, when he was defeated by Dr. J.V. McKay. Smith, who operates a music company, is completing his first term on the council.

Councilman Don Bethel is unchallenged in his bid for his first full term on the city's governing body. He was appointed to the post last summer

Texas A&M strives for 'world university'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tradition. And money. They're as visible at Texas A&M University as ivy is at other colleges. But this school that pays its football coach a six-figure salary and is the butt of nine volumes of "Aggie jokes" has been changing as dramatically as any in the country.

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Driving along Texas Farm Road 60, which skirts the northern border of Texas A&M University, there's plenty to reassure Aggies that their school is still the place they remember and cherish.

But turn south onto this Texas-sized, 5,200-acre campus, and ever-watchful alumni of this most conservative of state universities can find plenty that has changed since the days when it was an academically limited, all-male military college.

Texas A&M today is the fastest growing university in the country. It is also one of the richest — rich enough to stir up a coast-to-coast controversy this winter by paying its new football coach a six-figure salary.

Most Aggies don't flinch at the idea of paying big bucks to a winning coach, but some may be wondering about other plans afoot that seem a departure from long-accustomed ways.

There's talk from the university's new president of ending the school's regional provincialism, of making it a "world university," of broadening its academic horizons, of linking arms with other institutions of learning around the world to help fight hunger and disease.

But for a student body and alumni who have, until now, not been notably international-minded, the verities of "good ole Aggieland," can still be found on Texas Farm Road 60.

THE HITCHING POST is still there in front of the Dixie Chicken where Aggies went to party after a football victory. There's Smith's North Gate Barber Shop, where for 50 years scraggly-haired freshmen have surrendered their locks for a military flat-top.

Johnny Holick still runs the boot store his father founded in 1891, where generations of Aggie cadet seniors have spent $400 or more for the calf-high military jackboots that are a rite of passage to manhood.

And at most local bookstores, except for the one on campus where Aggie-dom apparently is no laughing matter, you can still buy volumes of Aggie jokes — nine volumes to be exact. (Did you hear about the Aggie who took an aptitude test and found he didn't have any? Or what do you call an intellectual at Texas A&M? Answer: a visitor.)

Despite these signs of stability, Texas A&M is as drastically changed as any university in the nation — a far cry from the all-male military school that catered mostly to the sons of poor farmers from its founding in 1871 through the 1960s.

The school changed its name in 1963 to go along with its broadened curriculum offerings — from Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, to Texas A&M University. Women were admitted unconditionally for the first time in 1969, and now make up a third of the student body.

The school's Corps of Cadets, repository of Aggie traditions since the school's founding in 1871 and mandatory for all students, was made voluntary in 1965.

WITH ITS BROADER curriculum and the arrival of "Waggies," as female Aggies are referred to, enrollment has tripled since 1968 — from 11,000 to a current 35,000.

The school's president, Frank Vandiver, says that faced with even more dramatic change ahead, worried alumni write him often. "Some are concerned that this is an institution devoted to honor," he says. "They are asking me for reassurance that that is not being watered down."

A living example both of change and permanence is Aggie senior Beth Seibert, who works part time at Lightsey's Drive-In Grocery Store a little farther down Texas Farm Road 60.

Until 15 years ago, to be an Aggie was to be a male in a cadet uniform, most likely studying engineering or agricultural science.

Beth dresses in jeans. She is studying drama. But like most students, she came to Texas A&M to fit in, not to stir things up at College Station. The U.S. Justice Department brought suit against the university two years ago because women aren't allowed in the Aggie Marching Band. Beth doesn't think that's sexist at all.

"Traditions — that's part of the reason I came here in the first place," she says. "People are down to earth here. It means something to be an Aggie. I like it."

If sheer size and wealth made a university great, Texas A&M would certainly be in the front ranks of the nation's 3,000 institutions of higher learning.

THE CAMPUS includes 157 major buildings — 699 if you count things like chicken coops. Eight more buildings are under construction.

Thirty-four percent of Texas A&M's $295-million budget comes from the state, 34 percent from tuition and other fees, and 5 percent from the federal government.

The rest is derived from non-government sources, including $35.7 million in gifts from alumni, corporations and foundations. And $39.5 million a year comes from the proceeds — shared with arch rival University of Texas — from some 2.1 million acres of West Texas oil land the state has bequeathed forever to the two state schools.

Alumni loyalty runs deep and pays off. Randy Matson, former Olympic shot-putter now in charge of Texas A&M's Association of Former Students, says 35 percent of the school's 100,000 living alumni donate to the school each year, against a national average of less than 10 percent. It brought in $9.5 million this past year.

Such is the wealth and prominence of A&M's graduates in the military and in the booming Southwest's business and petroleum world that Dr. Robert Page, dean of the School of Engineering, offers a visitor an Aggie joke of his own:

"What do you call an Aggie five years after he graduates? Answer: Boss."

But something is still missing, President Vandiver feels. A former president of Rice University, a scholar on the Civil War and World War I, he wants the school to take the next big step, and some of his proposals have the more hidebound among the Aggies quaking.

"THERE WILL BE world universities," he says, "and I want this school to be one of them."

The most spectacular step Texas A&M has taken recently, however, was to consolidate and enhance its position as a football power. In February, it hired Jackie Sherrill as coach at $267,000 in pay and perquisites, a sum that caused considerable comment in academic circles around the country.

Vandiver is aware of it. Did it help the cause of a school aspiring to academic glory?

"I worry about that. I think you can achieve the goal of world university without constant No. 1 football ratings. But regarding Jackie Sherrill, I fall back on a cynical observation: at least they spelled our name right.

"But certainly it didn't do our academic reputation any immediate good."

Art is often exhibited on campus, but Texas A&M does not grant a fine arts degree. Can a school with no degree-granting art department be a "world university?"

"We will have to include fine arts," Vandiver says. "I get the distinct feeling that the faculty is behind me on that. I would like to be sure, too, that the core areas, the basic sciences, the liberal arts, are shored up here as we move ahead in such areas as engineering."

STATE UNIVERSITY presidents, says Vandiver, can't simply decree what a school will offer academically. In Texas, a state university "coordinating board" ultimately decides what broad academic areas state schools can offer. And so far, the board has left it to University of Texas to be strong in the arts.

Still, money has helped Texas A&M raise its academic profile in recent years with an aggressive campaign to recruit faculty from other schools, especially those in economically troubled states.

The average salary for professors on campus is a competitive $36,900. Last Fall alone, 170 new faculty were hired, and about one-third were from other schools like M.I.T., Berkeley, Iowa State, Tulane University, University of Illinois and University of Kentucky.

Helped by six-figure contributions from wealthy alumnni, the university increased the number of its endowed chairs from one to 15, and endowed professorships from one to 12 in just the past five years, according to Robert Walker, A&M's vice president for development. Such chairs offer professors high salaries, assistants, travel allowances and other perks.

"That gives you the chance to recruit the superstars," says Dr. Clint Phillips, Dean of Faculties.

Of 35,000 students, nearly 30,000 are from Texas. There are students from each of the remaining 49 states and more than 60 other nations. And the school has 145 National Merit Scholars among its current freshmen, more than any college in the nation. But Texas A&M hasn't shown much interest in competing for outstanding students across the country the way state universities in, say, California, Wisconsin or Michigan have.

FOR INSTANCE, Margaret Addis, a guidance counselor at the college-oriented Newton South High School in Massachusetts, says, "Texas A&M's reputation at Newton is dim. They haven't tried to recruit kids here. None of our students has applied to A&M this year, and I don't remember anyone applying last year."

"I think we have to change that," says Vandiver. "The people of Texas support this institution and their wishes have to be considered. But this is a university."

Clements' father-in-law dies

HOUSTON (AP) — H. Mason Crocker, father-in-law of Texas Gov. Bill Clements, died of cancer Saturday. He was 75.

Crocker died at 4:15 a.m. Saturday at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute, where had had been undergoing treatment, said hospital spokesman Brian Wells.

The Brady rancher had been ill for more than a month, according to a statement released by the governor's office in Austin.

Crocker is survived by his wife, Florabel, of Brady; a daughter, Rita Clements, of Austin; a son, the Rev. Byron Crocker, of Beaumont, and several grandchildren.

Crocker was a native of Flint Hill, Kan., where he also had a ranch.

Funeral services tentatively are scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brady, with burial at Resthaven Cemetery.

Two memorial funds have been established for Crocker at St. Paul's and at M.D. Anderson Hospital, the statement said.

Election issues low-key in area towns

Two incumbents and a new candidate are running unopposed for three spots on the Lamesa Independent School District's board of trustees. Richard Gentry, board president, and Don Bryant, a trustee, are seeking re-election. Frankie McKinney has filed for election to the board. Not seeking another term is Fred Daffern.

Both city and school elections will be held at City Hall.

Fourteen polling places, including the courthouse, will be set up for the countywide election to vote in bingo in as a legalized gambling game or to reject the notion. The 1981-passed Bingo Enabling Act left the bingo question up to voters at the local levels.

ANDREWS

ANDREWS — Andrews voters will be electing two new school trustees, a mayor and two city councilmen in the upcoming elections here.

Steve Smith, who has been the city's mayor pro tem, is seeking the mayor's job in the April 3 election. Smith, who is general manager of an automotive dealership here, is reaching out to succeed Louis Miller, who resigned from the position last January.

Asking for the voters to return them to office are Councilmen William Hoermann, a banker, and Denny Porter, a grocer; both are unopposed. Vying for the Place 4 slot vacated by Smith when he opted to run for mayor are Dr. Windle Harper, a dentist, and Barbara Gross, a housewife.

Six candidates, including an incumbent, are campaigning for two seats on the Andrews Independent School District Board of Trustees.

Seeking the post being vacated by Trustee Rose Hutcheson are JoAnn Sealy, a legal secretary; Larry Dupler, who runs an electric company; Charles Clevenger, who is in the air-conditioning and heating business, and Paul Jurek, a psychologist.

Incumbent Harvey Harris, who is in the oil-well service business, is being opposed by Gwen Rasco Turnbull.

KLONDIKE

KLONDIKE — Four candidates, including two incumbents, are campaigning for trustee terms on the Klondike Independent School District board.

Challening incumbents Ralph Williams and Jerry Webb are Daniel Cave and Duane Snell. Balloting will be in the Klondike High School cafeteria.

GRADY

LEONORAH — Three candidates are vying for two at-large positions on the Grady Independent School District's board of trustees.

Listed on the ballots are C.M "Mike" Black, a farmer who was appointed to replace Malcolm Turnnel, who resigned last year, and newcomers James Billingsley and Charles McKaskle.

Board President Jackey Romine is not seeking re-election. The election will be held in the Grady School Board Room.

CRANE

CRANE — Six candidates are running for three places on the Crane City Council.

Challenging incumbents T.L. "Rip" Eggleston and Jack Atkinson are Ray Pahl, Danny Wayne Mathis, Douglas Burrous and Keith Coburn.

McCAMEY

McCAMEY — McCamey voters will be casting votes in three elections — city, school and hospital district — here April 3.

Bids by Richard Partney and Grover Gunnels to get re-elected to the McCamey Hospital Board are being challenged by Gary Edmiston and John Peterson. Voters will select two of the candidates to serve two-year terms.

The four candidates for city council posts likely will be shoo-ins, as they are running for four places. Seeking re-election are Carol Bolen, Don Berryhill and Paul Tishhauser. Elmer Jones is seeking the spot vacated by Eddie Odom, who last year moved outside the city limits.

The most contested election here seems to be the school trustee race; eight candidates are running for three positions.

RANKIN

RANKIN — Voters in this ranching-oil country will be offered four elections into which to cast their preferences here April 3. Elections will be held at the city, school, hospital and water district levels.

On the school front, Trustees Eddie Hyatt and C.E. Winn are without opponents for places on the Rankin Independent School District's board of trustees. Ballots will be cast at Rankin and Midkiff.

Rankin Mayor Ruben "Cat" Peterson is being challenged by Allen Moore, former mayor and one-time Upton County judge, for the two-year term. Peterson, who operates a service station here, became mayor in 1980 following the death of J.B. Pettit, who had been mayor since 1964.

Challenging Aldermen Marcus Price and Olevia Clanton for a spot on the city council is Phillip West, a former alderman. Ballots will be cast at City Hall.

Asking the voters to return them to the Upton County Water District board are W.E. "Billy" Rankin, board president, and E.F. "Bud" Cummings, the Rankin superintendent of water, gas and sewer plant. Challenging Rankin is Jim Eggemeyer of Midkiff; opposing Cummings is Uvonne Morgan of Midkiff.

Three unopposed candidates are running for terms on the Rankin Hospital District's board. They are Tommy Wilkes and Melvin Tiemann, both of Rankin, and Bob Whisman of Midkiff.

"There's not going to be too much exciting," noted an observer.

BIG LAKE

Running for election to the Reagan County Independent School District's board of trustees are insurance agent Terry Page, who is unopposed, and Rose McWilliams, a nurse who is opposed by Alyce Gooch, a homemaker.

Aside from those two races, Big Lake voters will be deciding on the bingo issue — whether or not to legalize the game. "I don't have any idea how much opposition there is to it," said Tony Wille, Big Lake's secretary-administrator. "I don't expect any surprises. I expect the bingo to probably pass; that's guessing."

Editor's Report

President Reagan's proposal makes eminently good sense. The Russians obviously want to keep up their margin of nuclear missile superiority, while stirring up European fears about being possibly incinerated in a superpower East-West conflict. The Soviets also are frustrated by the inclination of NATO allies to station Pershing II and land-based cruise missiles that could conceivably reduce their edge.

"Let's consider some facts about the military balance in Europe," he said. "The Soviet Union now has 300 brand new SS-20 missiles with 900 warheads deployed. All can hit targets anywhere in Western Europe. NATO has ZERO which can hit the U.S.S.R."

Incidentally, Brezhnev grandiloquently made the same type of offer before the same audience last year — the regime-run "trade unions." Now his propagandists and "disinformation teams" collaborated again to dust off the old theme because the Soviets keenly sense uneasiness in Western Europe and among Americans about nuclear confrontation. This Brezhnev ploy is primarily aimed, I believe, at West Europeans to put pressure on members of NATO.

A groundswell toward a nuclear freeze has been building in our country with many members of Congress and referenda in town communities adopting decisions in favor of a nuclear freeze. While the concern is commendable, it is unrealistic.

I'm reminded of England's late Socialist leader Aneurin Bevan's picturesque remark about unilateral nuclear disarmament: "How could we ever negotiate," he told the House of Commons, "if we enter a nuclear conference stark naked?" That was put ringingly on the record though many of his present-day followers conveniently ignore it.

There's one thing about Soviet communism that I must grudgingly admire. Their propaganda machine knows how to put its act together and hit the soft spots in Western views as it did with Brezhnev's warmed-over, rambling discourse. His additional warning to the U.S. about "retaliation" also makes people think of Latin America.

This is where Cuba under the regime of Fidel Castro fits in. The Soviets in 1962 during the missile crisis were compelled to remove from Cuba their nuclear weapons aimed at our mainland. In that breathtaking countdown, the late Nikita S. Khrushchev blinked first. We don't know if the Soviets will now try the same thing in Cuba, or elsewhere in Central America where they have a foothold. To butter up Castro, the U.S.S.R. is providing him with over $1 billion annually in oil and hard currency to keep the Cuban economy afloat. In the last few years Castro has had to pay his way by sending Cuban legionnaires to Africa and the Middle East. Their casualties in these expeditions have been heavy.

We can do lots better. The U.S. for years has proved how well it can live and even help communist-run states like the People's Republic of China and Tito's Yugoslavia and its successors. They never sought to export their revolutions and certainly kept scrupulously away from interfering with anything and anybody the U.S. sought to encourage.

That type of U.S. help — without any strings attached — has gone to China and Yugoslavia while the Russians exacted their pound of flesh from the emaciated frame of Cuba. It is, indeed, something of the gravest import for Castro to ponder instead of trying to promote rebellions for his masters in Moscow.

When you come right down to it, we've even gotten along in post-World War II years with the Soviets except when they tried to poach directly in our own preserve. They're trying to do that right now with a synthetic gesture from Brezhnev. To his credit, President Reagan set him straight and told him where to go — right to Geneva where nuclear arms limitation talks just recessed for a while to enable U.S. and Soviet negotiators to obtain fresh instructions and hopefully enjoy a little breather. There must never be a one-way freeze, unless of course you believe we can safely entrust the future of our country in Communist Russian hands.

Reagan vetoes oil price control, allotment bill

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, maintaining that Americans have been hurt by past efforts to allocate fuel supplies, vetoed a bill Saturday that would have given him power to allot crude oil supplies and impose price controls in cases of severe shortages.

"We must recognize that an interruption of a significant portion of foreign energy supplies...will involve real costs," Reagan said in a written message to the Senate. "No magic federal plan can simply make them go away."

It was Reagan's second veto since he took office in January 1981. His first was cast last Nov. 23 against an emergency spending bill that he said was too costly.

Reagan said he sympathized with the idea of trying to prepare for energy disruptions, but insisted it was invalid to assume that "giving the federal government the power to allocate and set prices will result in an equitable and orderly response to a supply interruption.

"We can all still recall that sincere efforts to allow bureaucratic allocation of fuel supplies actually harmed our citizens and economy, adding to inequity and turmoil," Reagan said without elaborating.

"Further, the threat of such controls will discourage the very steps that are needed to provide real protection against such emergencies."

The veto message was released by the White House while Reagan and his wife, Nancy, spent the weekend at Camp David, Md.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said he had hoped Reagan would change his opposition. Rep. Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind., called it "an unfortunate sign of complacency and lack of preparedness for the next energy crisis."

Since the United States imports a third of its oil, Sharp said, it remains "dangerously vulnerable."

Reagan said he did not want and did not need "general power to reimpose on all Americans another web of price controls and mandatory allocations."

He maintained that controls would only "shift losses from one set of Americans to others, with vast dislocation and loss of efficiency along the way."

The legislation was passed earlier this month in the House by a vote of 246-144, which would not be enough to override a veto, and in the Senate by a 86-7 vote. A two-thirds vote is needed to override.

The bill, which replaced emergency powers that expired last year, required the president to draw up an emergency plan within 180 days for dealing with severe petroleum disruptions, such as the 1973 Arab oil embargo or the 1979 Iran-Iraq war.

It gave the president sole discretion over whether the plan would be implemented, and would have expired Dec. 31, 1984, or 20 days before the end of Reagan's term.

Senate Republicans had supported the bill, but many House Republicans argued that it only reimposed emergency powers that failed to deal effectively with earlier disruptions.

really been turned on by this team," said Randy Edge of Hutchinson.

Nolan Richardson, who guided Western Texas College to the national title in 1980 and who is now head coach at Tulsa University, was back in Hutchinson this week in wishing Jerry Stone the best of luck.

And he should.

It was Richardson's team which kept MC out of the tournament in 1980. The Chaps may have had their best team that year.

After Midland College's first win of the tournament, Richardson said, "I think the Chaps can go all the way. I hope they do."

The Chaps did what Richardson said they could do, but maybe the most surprising thing of all was the way they took this community by storm. Every one was talking about the Chaps all week long.

Pleasant weather continues

With spring officially arriving this weekend, it's time to pull out the shorts and swimsuits and get on with the business of relaxing.

Pleasant weather should continue through Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies will be fair, with the high today in the low 70s. The low tonight will be near 40 degrees. Winds will be variable at 5 to 10 mph.

Saturday's low of 38 was 11 degrees short of the record for that date, which was set in 1965. The record high of 89 for Saturday's date was set in 1934 and surpassed Saturday's high of 73.

Five Reporter-Telegram employees' works cited

Gilbert also received an honorable mention in the photojournalism category for his photos on a black revival. The story was written by Patrick Dearen and copy editor Jack Glascock put together the page.

Two staff writers were recognized for separate stories in the feature category, each receiving an honorable mention.

Dearen's entry was a story on hoboes riding the trains and passing through Midland. Gail Burke's story related the experience of spending several nights in the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Bill Modisett received an honorable mention for his editorial writing. Singled out was his Sept. 3 editorial asking Southwestern Bell to assign a full management team here.

ODESSA — The Department of Public Safety has identified the victim of a weekend traffic fatality as 22-year-old Karen Sue Fuson of Odessa.

She was killed when the car in which she was riding hit the rear of an 18-wheeler on U.S. Highway 385 some 600 feet north of Loop 338 about 9:30 p.m. Friday. Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee pronounced her dead at the scene.

In critical condition at Medical Center Hospital Saturday night was 5-year-old Amanda Jo Fuson of Odessa. She suffered head and chest injuries in the crash, which also injured 21-year-old Larry D. Herrington of San Angelo. He was listed in stable condition with facial lacerations.

According to the DPS, Herrington was northbound on 385 when his 1978 Pontiac struck the rear of a northbound tractor-trailer rig operated by James D. Richards of Odessa. The Fusons were passengers in Herrington's car. Richards was not injured.

Fuson's body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home, where arrangements are incomplete.

Car-pedestrian accident kills one

ODESSA — One person is dead as the result of a car-pedestrian accident near here about 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Department of Public Safety said the mishap occurred about four miles north of Odessa on U.S. Highway 385. No other details were available at press time.

Four fire department units responded to the blaze, which broke out about 12:45 a.m. Saturday at the Garden City Apartments — the site of a fire that claimed the lives of four children in December 1980.

The cause of Saturday morning's fire is under investigation by the city fire marshal's office. Firefighters remained at the scene for more than an hour. The complex is scheduled for demolition.

Psychologist calls death row 'emotional sinkhole'

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prisoners sentenced to death in Texas used to be placed in solitary confinement in one of eight prison cells lined up next to the room housing the electric chair and its generator.

Most were electrocuted 30 days after their arrival, so there was plenty of space on "death row." But the specter of a row of cells filled with grim men spending their final days a few feet from the electric chair is history.

Despite a U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the state's 1974 capital punishment law and a poll last year showing 84.6 percent of Texans favor the death penalty, an unofficial moratorium on executions in Texas dating to 1964 remains in effect.

At last count, the Department of Corrections said 165 men — including two sets of brothers — and two women were under sentence of death. That's the most since the state took over the burden of executing outlaws from the counties in 1924.

Today's death row is a multitude of cells down several hallways stacked three levels high in a prison located 16 miles from the execution chamber. So many condemned men are being sent here with little expectation of being put to death that prison officials wonder where they are going to house them all.

The chair used to put to death 361 convicts was put in storage in 1977 when the state adopted lethal injections as the method of execution.

Condemned prisoners are still housed one to a cell, and for security reasons have their meals brought to them. They are escorted, one by one, to a shower each day except Sunday. They get an hour of recreation a day when they can mix with nine or 10 other death row inmates in a day room or a small yard.

"We're lucky because so many are out on bench warrants — if more than 12 of them came back today, we wouldn't have any place to put them," said a prison official who asked that his name not be used.

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes blamed the crowding on judges who routinely issue stays of execution, often "without even reading the petition." He thinks there should be a time limit on appeals.

"Why should the courts be allowed to let them hang on for years? Why not make them say, 'OK, use your best shot in your writ and you have got to hear it within this period of time,'" Holmes said.

Inmates are here for robbing or sexually assaulting then killing men, boys, girls, young women, babies, elderly widows, and even a cripple in a wheelchair. There are execution-style killers, hired killers, mutilation killers, thrill killers and those who killed for profit or revenge.

In spite of the atrocities, guards say the condemned inmates create fewer problems than the prison general population — mainly because they spend about 23 hours a day alone in their 9-by-5-foot cells.

They can watch television — one color set is mounted halfway between two tiers to serve several cells — or read, write letters, sleep, or listen to radios. Many spend time reading the Bible or praying.

Still, psycholcgist Jeff White, who worked with death row inmates for two years, making rounds among the prisoners twice a day, says death row is "an emotional sinkhole."

"The minute I walk into that place I get a feeling of hostility and bitterness," he said. Frequently, he found no sense of guilt or remorse.

White said most condemned men profess their innocence "in the delusion that they will never actually be put to death."

Road work bids taken

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids April 13 on proposed improvements to Interstate Highway 20 in Midland County.

The highway department plans to modify inlets, guardrails and bridge rails; extend culverts; add grates; and widen bridge decks on 13.05 miles of I-20 from 1,863 feet east of the east end of the State Highway 349 overpass to the Martin County line.

Estimated cost of the project is $2,790,891 and completion time is estimated at 300 working days.

Bids will be received at the highway department headquarters in Austin until 9 a.m. April 13.

Cat rabies is increasing threat

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cat rabies is an increasing threat in cities and rural communities, the Texas Department of Health reported Saturday.

William Bilderback of the health department said there were 22 confirmed rabies cases in cats last year.

This was the second time in five years that there had been more cases of rabies in cats than dogs, he said. Statistics show 12 cases of dog rabies in 1981.

Rules require risks to be in writing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Medical Association seminars will start Monday on new rules that require risks to be put in writing for certain surgical procedures if a doctor wants medical liability coverage.

The Texas Medical Disclosure Panel of six doctors and three lawyers also has completed a standardized "disclosure and consent" form that doctors and other health-care providers can require patients to sign.

Seminars will be held in 16 cities.

10,000-year-old campsite found

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state archeological crew has uncovered traces of a 10,000-year-old Indian campsite, including part of a human skeleton, in Williamson County.

Frank Weir, director of archeological studies for the state highway department, said the central Texas site — east of Cedar Park at a planned extension of Farm 1431 — is rich in artifacts from 6000 to 3000 B.C.

Sheriff arrested

BRACKETTVILLE, Texas (AP) — A county sheriff has been arrested for allegedly swapping confiscated drug laboratory equipment for five pounds of marijuana.

Kinney County Sheriff Morgan Bailey, 28, was arraigned late Friday before County Judge Albert A. Postell, who set bond at $10,000.

Bailey faces charges of official misconduct for allegedly trading the methamphetamine laboratory equipment, which he had been ordered to destroy.

Newspaper reports weapons smuggling

DALLAS (AP) — More than $125 million in Libyan money was earmarked for U.S. military weapons in the largest smuggling plan of its type ever uncovered by customs agents, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

An alleged plot to smuggle 15 sophisticated Cobra helicopters from the United States would have comprised the first of several arms shipments, the newspaper said in a copyright story.

"This is the most major case of its type in the history of the Customs Service," a federal source said. Those allegedly involved "would have taken anything we offered. Nobody was talking atomic weapons, but missles, automatic weapons, tanks — the usual heavy military equipment."

Seven men have been indicted on conspiracy charges of violating the federal Neutrality Act after an investigation in which customs agents posed as representatives of the U.S. Army and Bell Helicopter.

The undercover agents were told representatives for Libyan president Col. Moammar Khadafy would deposit more than $125 million in a Cayman Island bank account to pay for the gunships from Bell's Textron Co. plant in Amarillo, sources said.

The money was to have been laundered through Switzerland and then on to the Cayman Islands, sources said.

"What we are talking about are two detachments of helicopters, and this was a preliminary shipment; many more were to come," a source close to the investigation said.

Sources said a Texas-based air cargo company had been contacted to transport the helicopters to Libya on modified Boeing 747 cargo planes.

The indictments returned March 4 allege the Cobra gunships would have been stolen this month. Federal prosecutors said black-market weapons brokers from Spain, Italy and the United States started talks on the illegal arms sales in January.

Customs agents arrested three men in Amarillo a week ago, and a psychologist and a real estate broker were arrested the Los Angeles area. Authorities believe the other two men have fled the country.

Libya has not been able to purchase military hardware from the United States since the early 1970s, and the Reagan administration announced earlier this month that all oil imports from Libya would be halted.

Also indicted were Paolo Marcucci of Italy; Alfonso Lopez Quesada, 61, of Spain, and Michael Kulungian, 34, of Encino, Calif.

Two other Italians, Daro Ronca and Serverio Nuccio, also were indicted, but have not been arrested.

Committee says youth has alcohol problem

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House subcommittee investigating alcohol and drug abuse by youths Thursday was told that alcohol abuse among teen-agers is reaching "epidemic" proportions, and that more alcohol education in schools and tougher drinking laws are needed to combat the problem.

"The problems of youth driving and alcohol are fast becoming an epidemic, and they're increasing 7 to 10 percent per year," said Bob Draper, representing both the Texas Safety Association and Texas Traffic Safety Association.

Austin Police Sgt. Hank Gonzales also told the House subcommittee on Drug Addiction and Alcoholism in Youths, chaired by San Antonio Rep. Frank Madla, that a recent survey of two Austin high schools showed that 80 percent of the students are using alcohol.

Subcommittee member Rep. Arnold Gonzales, D-Corpus Christi, said he finds the Austin statistics "shocking."

The police officer and Marinelle Timmons, Texas director of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, said teenagers under the legal drinking age of 19 apparently have little trouble buying alcohol.

"They can get it if they want it," said Timmons, who also presented Department of Public Safety figures showing more than 600 children between the ages of 10 and 14 were arrested for drunk driving in 1980.

Timmons said society presents "conflicting information" to teen-agers about the problems of drinking. Parents and teachers stress the evils of alcohol but television commercials show that drinking "goes with having a good time," Timmons said.

Timmons recommended that alcohol education begin as early as first or second grade.

Draper, of the traffic safety groups, also recommended strong alcohol education programs, including

"Alcohol and drug education is important in the schools," she said, "but by the time they start it in school now, the kids already have formed their ideas about drinking."

Groups work together on water plan

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Members of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council have agreed to work with the Department of Water Resources, Water Development Board and Governor's Water Task Force in preparing recommendations on changes in the Texas Water Plan.

TENRAC members, headed by Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, approved the recommendation of the group's staff that TENRAC also review the recommended changes in the plan, which it could then support or modify as its own recommendations.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, a TENRAC member, asked Water Development Board Chairman Louis Beecherl Jr., Dallas, to consider the issue of use of fresh water for oilfield recovery operations as part of the revision efforts.

Armstrong noted that question has become of growing concern to West Texans, and argued that the matter should be looked at from the standpoint of water conservation.

"We are really ignoring a water conservation area," he commented.

Armstrong agreed that use of freshwater may be necessary in some instances but said he feels the matter should be addressed as part of the water plan revision effort.

Beecherl agreed.

TENRAC also passed a resolution urging Congress to reaffirm its commitment to the construction grants program for sewage treatment facilities, by providing $2.4 billion annually for fiscal years 1982 through 1985, as authorized by the 1981 Clean Water Act Amendments.

Coast Guard smothers tugboat fire

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Coast Guard firefighters smothered a fire Saturday that forced a crew of seven to abandon an offshore tugboat about 20 miles east of here.

The blaze erupted aboard the 126-foot tugboat Robin 5 Friday night, said Coast Guard Duty Officer Jeff Huse. Several crewmen suffered from smoke inhalation but the injuries were minor, Huse said.

The tug captain said the fire started in the engine room and moved upward, forcing the crew to board a life raft, Huse said.

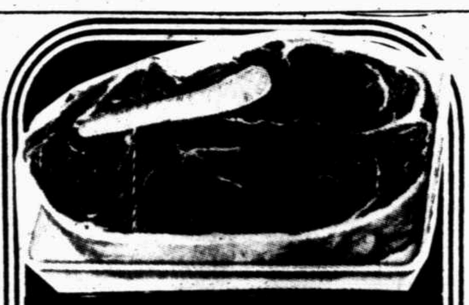

The tug, registered to a Louisiana company, was not towing anything when it caught fire, Huse said.

Firefighters on three Coast Guard boats poured water and foam on the burning vessel Friday night and Saturday morning to extinguish the blaze.

Huse said the charred vessel would be towed to a Morgan City, La., scrapyard by another tugboat, Robin 12.

Two people die in Petersburg, Va., fire

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — A fire touched off a series of explosions that blew the front of a downtown building across the street, killing an elderly woman and a firefighter and causing at least $3 million in damage, authorities said Saturday.

"I do not believe that this city has (ever) had a fire of this magnitude," City Manager Jack Bond said at a news conference.

At least 26 people were injured in the Friday night fire.

The fire destroyed the three-story Franklin Building and damaged several others, including the offices of the Petersburg Progress-Index, the city's daily newspaper.

The brick building housed a row of stores on the ground floor and 12 apartments with mostly elderly tenants, Bond said. Three of the apartments were not occupied, and nine people were left homeless, authorities said.

Daisy Houchins, 78, an apartment resident, was pronounced dead on arrival at Petersburg General Hospital, a spokesman said. Officials had not determined the exact cause of her death.

The body of Sgt. Mike Goff, a city firefighter, was found in the rubble where a wall of the building had collapsed on him, Assistant Fire Chief E. W. Brockwell said.

Officials tentatively estimated damage at between $3 million and $3.5 million.

Fire Chief M. Russell Rakestraw II said the cause of the fire had not been determined, but that it appeared to have begun in the basement.

Rakestraw said authorities had no reason to suspect arson. He said firefighters found two 275-gallon fuel oil tanks in the basement. The building had been converted to gas heat, he said, but the tanks had not been removed.

Bond speculated that gas lines in the building or the heating oil tanks may have contributed to the explosions.

Bond said firefighters were called at 6:39 p.m. to fight a fire at the building. The first explosion blew the front of the building across the street almost as soon as they reached the scene, he said.

Rakestraw, Fire Capt. James C. Rice and two policemen were injured in the initial blast, Bond said.

Firefighters were beginning the first rescues when a second explosion rocked the building about three minutes later, Bond said. Goff was killed in the second explosion, he said.

Goff, 29, was the first Petersburg firefighter killed in the line of duty, Bond said.

The fire was brought under control about 10 p.m., Bond said.

Harry L. Marsh Jr., managing editor of the Petersburg Progress-Index, said the fire destroyed the newspaper's computer room, sports department, his office and "melted" wire service machines and computer terminals used by reporters and editors.

The paper used the facilities of a Hopewell newspaper to publish a combined Saturday-Sunday edition, he said.

Stores on both sides of Sycamore Street also were damaged by flames, smoke, flying debris from the explosions or water sprayed by the more than 100 firefighters who battled the blaze, Bond said.

Petersburg General Hospital officials said 26 people were treated, but all but four suffered minor injuries and were released Friday night.

Body parts in doctor's home

MIAMI (AP) — Detectives searching the home of a Miami gynecologist for narcotics found fetuses, body parts and a crimson altar in addition to the drugs, authorities said.

Dr. Jaime Franco, 51, was arrested outside his office Friday after he allegedly sold a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of cocaine to two Dade County undercover officers for $56,000, said Lt. Vincent Gable.

Franco, who police said practiced at American Hospital, was charged with possessing, selling and trafficking in cocaine. He was being held Saturday at the Dade County jail.

After the arrest, detectives from the Metro-Dade Organized Crime Bureau went to Franco's home in southwest Dade County with a search warrant to look for more narcotics.

Gable said detectives found three 18-inch marijuana plants growing in a pot in the doctor's bedroom and also confiscated several pounds of marijuana and a small amount of cocaine.

"In the living room we found a fetus sitting on a coffee table," said Gable.

"All kinds of body parts and fetuses" were found, he said, as well as a large, red-draped altar which many Cuban-Americans in Miami use in rituals of Santeria, a voodoo-like cult.

"No matter who he is, he isn't supposed to have those," said Gable. It was not immediately known from where the fetuses and body parts were obtained.

Inspectors told to follow suggestions

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — City building inspectors have been told to follow suggestions in a report criticizing lax code enforcement. The study was commissioned by the city after the collapse of two skywalks at the Hyatt Regency Hotel killed 114 people in July.

City Manager Robert Kipp urged city officials Friday to give "immediate attention" to suggestions in the report by the International Conference of Building Officials.

The report on the codes administration division of the Public Works Department said the division "is not producing a level of inspection service intended by ...the city building code."

In a Feb. 25 report, the National Bureau of Standards said the skywalks were designed to support less than one-third the weight capacity required by city codes. The codes called for the walkways to to hold up to 68,000 pounds. The federal report concluded that the support structure as designed could bear only 21,400 pounds.

Weicker to seek third term in Senate

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., a maverick Republican often at odds with his party, announced Saturday he would seek a third term.

Weicker told about 200 supporters at Greenwich Town Hall he expected to win the GOP nomination at a July convention and then go on to defeat Democrat Toby Moffett in November.

However, he refused to say whether he would seek the nomination in a September primary if his chief opponent for the nomination, Prescott Bush Jr. of Greenwich, got the nomination at the convention.

Weictting a strong challenge from Bush, the older brother of Vice President George Bush and son of the late U.S. Sen. Prescott S. Bush Sr. of Connecticut.

Minister pleads no contest in shooting

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A minister has been placed on probation after pleading no contest to involuntary manslaughter charges in the shooting death of a neighbor's son.

The Rev. Timothy Donald Nichols also was ordered Friday to pay the victim's family $3,000 to cover the cost of the funeral and to work 40 hours a month in a nursing home during the first year of probation.

Nichols, 37, was accused of killing 17-year-old Robert D. Jones in the Cross Lanes neighborhood where both lived. Nichols claimed that the youth had threatened him shortly before the March 1981 shooting.

Kanawha County Circuit Judge John Hey said jailing Nichols would accomplish nothing.

Youths to stand trial in girl's shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six reputed gang members must stand trial in the shooting of 7-year-old Silvia Adame, who was partially paralyzed by a bullet when she was caught in a gang crossfire, a judge has ruled.

Municipal Court Judge Nancy Brown set an April 4 Superior Court arraignment for the six — reportedly members of rival gangs — who are charged with 14 counts, including attempted murder.

The judge heard five days of testimony at a closed preliminary hearing before ruling Friday that there was enough evidence to try the youths in connection with the Aug. 30 shooting.

Well guarded by state and local police officers, members of the Ku Klux Klan hold a rally on the steps of City Hall in Meriden, Conn., Saturday. The rally was peaceful, but Klan head Bil Wilkinson's speech was drowned out by the crowd.

Rally of Nazi-type group disrupted

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Demonstrators hurling eggs and rocks disrupted a downtown rally by about 15 uniformed members of a Nazi-type organization Saturday, authorities said.

Police waded into the mass of jeering people outside a federal office building here and forced them to back away from members of the SS Action Group, officers said. There were no arrests or serious injuries.

The group, which uses swastikas and other Nazi symbols on its publications, had planned to give speeches in support of the Reagan administration's policies on El Salvador and oppose "pro-leftist" sentiment on the nearby University of Michigan campus, a member of the group said before the rally.

That member, who in the past has used the names Ted Dunn and Mark Heydrich, could not be reached for comment after the confrontation.

"The Nazis received a message very clearly that they are not welcome in Ann Arbor," said Albert Nelson of San Francisco, who identified himself as a spokesman for the Committee to Stop the Nazis on March 20th.

There were no official estimates of the crowd's size, but 1,000 to 4,000 people may have taken part in the demonstration, Ann Arbor Police Lt. Harold Rady said.

No arrests were made even though police and members of the SS Action Group were pelted with rocks and eggs because "in a crowd situation, you don't have time to separate people out and arrest them," Rady said.

No one was injured seriously enough to require treatment, but there were some minor scrapes, said Police Chief William Corbett.

"We have one officer that was struck with a rock," Corbett said.

Priest charged with cruelty for killing cats

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who said he drowned 10 cats because they squalled and defecated on the grounds of a high school where he lives and teaches has been charged with cruelty to animals.

Deputy City Attorney Steve McKee said he filed misdemeanor charges Friday in Van Nuys Municipal Court against the Rev. Allen DeLong, who teaches at Chaminade High School in suburban Canoga Park.

McKee said the charges were filed after an investigation by the city's Animal Regulation Department, which said the cats were owned and fed by people who lived near the school.

The drownings came to light when 35 animal lovers picketed the school Feb. 17, demanding action against the priest.

DeLong said he drowned the cats in a water-filled drum after catching them in a cage he got from Mercy Crusade, a Van Nuys humane society.

"It seemed to me to be the humane thing to do," he said at the time. "I couldn't get them to the vet in the wire cage without them tearing themselves trying to get out."

DeLong said he drowned the cats as a last resort after animal regulation officers failed to respond to his telephone calls for help. He said the cats were fighting and defecating on the school grounds.

The animal regulation report said a school worker disposed of the cats off campus. DeLong said he buried them himself "in the (school's) rose garden."

DeLong was out of town Friday and couldn't be reached for comment. However, his attorney, Richard Kennedy, said, "We are certain that when all of the facts have been ascertained and this matter is brought to conclusion, that everyone will have a fuller and complete understanding of what occurred and that Father DeLong is not guilty of cruelty to animals."

DeLong won support from a member of the Chaminade High School Parents Association. Marlene Hynes called the legal action "absolutely absurd."

"I feel the cats were wild and would have been killed anyway," she said. "He did it in a merciful way."

Mercy-Crusade officials protested the drownings in a letter to Cardinal Timothy Manning, who passed it to his secretary, Msgr. Clement J. Connolly.

Connolly called the cat-drownings "an untraditional practice with regard to the Gospel, totally at variance with the position of the church."

But he said the archdiocese was referring the matter to the Marianists Order in San Jose, of which DeLong is a member.

All systems go for Columbia

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia embarks Monday on what its pilots term the "ultimate test flight," a mission to advance the ship toward cargo-carrying journeys later this year and to demonstrate it is a reliable, on-time transport to space.

The first two crews, says Columbia's third commander, proved the spaceship could get up and down, and fly again. "We're going to do that plus a lot more," said Jack R. Lousma. The mission, seven days, will double the ship's time in space.

"We're ready to do it on time, on schedule, to fly the full duration next week," his crewmate, C. Gordon Fullerton said upon arrival from Houston on Saturday. "After the flight I'll tell you how it is to fly that magnificent machine that we have waiting on the pad."

After their jets were refueled, the astronauts took to the air for an hour of spins and rolls over central Florida.

At launch pad 39A, the countdown activities were running ahead of schedule, and the weather outlook for Monday was "very good."

MARINE COL. LOUSMA, 46, and Air Force Col. Fullerton, 45, are to begin their 116-orbit mission with a fiery sendoff at 10 a.m. EST.

The flight plan calls for them to roast and freeze Columbia's systems and lift payloads with its robot arm, measuring its capacity as an orbiting science laboratory.

And then the unexpected test bringing it home to a contingency landing site — a white sand runway in New Mexico's Tularosa Basin. The new destination was necessary because the primary runways in the California desert are flooded with rainwater.

Lousma, the commander, is a veteran of 59 days in orbit aboard the Skylab space station in 1973. Fullerton, after 16 years as an astronaut-in-waiting, is making his first trip out there.

"It's a very ambitious and challenging flight plan," Lousma said in a recent interview.

"It's not just another ride; we're going to break new ground," Fullerton said. "From liftoff to landing, it's a textbook test flight — the ultimate test flight."

FOR THE PUBLIC, nothing exciting, like landing on the moon. But passing grades on this and on one more seven-day flight in June or July would end Columbia's test program and set up its first operational mission next November. The first commercial payload will be two communication satellites.

A lot more paying customers are waiting with checkbooks in hand to get their packages aboard the shuttle, and 70 flights have been booked into September 1987 for Columbia and three uncompleted sister ships.

But because of the technical and financial problems that delayed the shuttle's maiden flight more than two years, several potential customers have shifted to the unmanned European-built Ariane rocket, which starts commercial flights from a base in French Guiana next month.

Several customers have double-booked on Ariane and the shuttle to assure the earliest possible launch time. The shuttle is considerably cheaper, because it is reflyable and can hoist heavier loads, but to a communications satellite owner, lost time in orbit is lost revenue.

To stem the burgeoning Ariane boom, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided Columbia's third flight should demonstrate the shuttle is a reliable and less expensive way into space.

When the primary landing site at Edwards Air Force Base was washed out last week, the Monday launch date was threatened. So NASA picked up tons of support gear at the California base and started moving it in chartered trains to the contingency landing strip at White Sands, N.M. That, in the words of one officials, is a "monumental task" that also involved shifting mearly 500 shuttle technicians to New Mexico to "safe" the shuttle and to mount it on top a Boeing 747 jumbo jet for the return to the launch pad.

"THE DECISION was made partly because we consider an on-time launch vital," said Brian Duff, NASA's director of public affairs. "We have to assure our customers we can do it. We want to tell them that even if there is a weather problem, we can make our schedule."

"We're going to move this closer to an operational vehicle," Lousma said.

Astronauts feel ready for Columbia's launch

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts Jack Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton arrived at this launch site Saturday, proclaiming themselves so ready for the third flight of Columbia that, "if we trained any more we wouldn't be able to stand it."

But training is one thing and flying is another. Soon after they arrived, the astronauts donned flight suits again and climbed into individual T-38 trainers for an hour's flying of aerobatics in the teal blue Florida sky.

Besides being fun and relaxation, the flying helped the astronauts to acclimate their bodies for their week-long journey. The weather Saturday was perfect; it was expected to be the same on launch day.

More flying was in store for the astronauts this morning. They will practice emergency aborts on the Kennedy Space Center's 15,000-foot strip, flying in a Gulfstream modified to handle and feel like the shuttle. Then Lousma and Fullerton will pay a visit to the shuttle on its launch pad.

Lousma called the space shuttle program "something that's really good for Americans...a boost to our national spirit."

On pad 39A the countdown to ready Columbia for a 10 a.m. EST liftoff on Monday was two hours ahead of schedule when the crew began a scheduled eight-hour rest period at 10 a.m. Saturday.

And, at White Sands, N.M., a 23-car train was to arrive after nightfall carrying equipment needed for the shuttle's landing after its seven-day flight. NASA officials were confident everything will be in place by launchtime Monday.

White Sands, whose two intersecting runways served as a backup landing site for the first two flights, was designated the prime site last week when rains made Edwards Air Force Base in California unusable.

"We're more trained there than anywhere else in the world," Lousma said when he was asked if the change in sites concerned him.

By custom, the astronauts piloted T-38 jet trainers from their training base in Houston to a military air field near the space center on Saturday.

They arrived to applause from well-wishers and hugs and kisses from their families.

"I've flown down here many times in a T-38 and I've always gone back in a T-38," said Fullerton. "For the first time I'm going to let someone else take the airplane home and I'll pick another way to get back to Houston."

Fullerton said, "Things are almost looking too good: The weather, the vehicle, the state of our training." He added: "We're really ready to do it; on time, on schedule, for the full duration, next week."

Crews rehearse Columbia landing

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — While work crews graded the runway after a heavy dose of desert winds, space agency officials prepared Saturday for a dress rehearsal of the space shuttle's first landing here.

At today's rehearsal, a B-52 military jet will stand in for the shuttle which is to launch Monday morning.

A 23-car train with 448 tons of equipment was to arrive from California after nightfall. The equipment was sent from Edwards Air Force Base after NASA officials decided to name Northrup the primary landing site because of muddied runways at Edwards.

"The coordination and the logistics of the thing is the biggest job," said Rob Tillet, manager of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's White Sands Test Facility.

NASA officials met to nail down final plans for the landing of the shuttle and for today's rehearsal.

"THERE ARE no major problems that I know of," said NASA senior engineer Alex Paczynski. "But it's certainly not a simple job."

"We're going to try to get the essential equipment — the purge and cooling units, the escape vans — out there first," Paczynski said. "We want to get the essential equipment out there for the dress rehearsal and, for sure, for the (abort-once-around) contingency."

Paczynski said NASA officials were studying forecasts to determine if the seasonal windiness of the area will interfere with the landing.

Saturday, crews graded the seven-mile-long landing strip to remove sand drifts blown onto the strip by Friday winds that created a near-blizzard of swirling white sand and forced workers to wear goggles and masks.

Nearby, Air Force crews erected seven temporary shelters and a hangar to house the influx of equipment and personnel.

TODAY'S REHEARSAL is scheduled to begin about 8 a.m. MST when a B-52 stand-in for the shuttle will roll down the glistening white gypsum strip.

"It will give us the chance for some high fidelity type rescue work," Paczynski said. "It has all the hatches just like the shuttle so that the rescue teams can enter the aircraft."

The rehearsal actually will be three tests in one. The first rescue simulation will be as if the shuttle had a normal landing. The second will be as if the shuttle had a problem on the landing strip, such as broken landing gear. And the third will be as if the shuttle missed the strip and the rescue must be carried out by helicopter because of the rough terrain.

Paczynski said the crews also would put new black markings on the landing strip to make it more visible to the astronauts.

The public will not be allowed to watch the landing from the White Sands Missile Range because there are no facilities there.

"There is, and there's going to be public pressure to make arrangements for viewing of the landing," Tillet said.

"WE WISH PEOPLE wouldn't pile up on the (nearby) highways," Tillet said. "All they could see is a dot in the sky at the very best."

Wives plan to enjoy voyage

ELLINGTON AFB, Texas (AP) — The wives of astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton say they intend to relax and enjoy the third voyage of space shuttle Columbia.

Marie Fullerton and Gratia Lousma flew to Cape Canaveral, Fla., Saturday for Columbia's Monday launch. Both said they looked forward to returning to Houston and following the mission on a speaker system at their homes.

Lousma was a member of the Skylab II crew, which spent 59 days in orbit. Mrs. Lousma said the seven-day shuttle mission "is a short one. We'll just relax and enjoy it."

Flight covered live

NEW YORK (AP) — The television networks plan live coverage of the third flight of the space shuttle Columbia, beginning as early as 9 a.m. EST Monday.

Reagan declares Fort Wayne disaster area

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Flood waters receded over most of Fort Wayne on Saturday despite a night of steady rain, and President Reagan declared the city a major disaster area while city officials planned cleanup operations.

City officials hoped a network of dikes would hold so the huge operation could begin.

"Our major concern is that we don't cause a leak," said Mark Rozeen, spokesman for Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. "The dikes are in many respects a house of cards. Our engineers tell me in some cases the only thing holding them up is the weight of all those sandbags."

Reagan's declaration was limited to Allen County, where Fort Wayne is located, but Bob Blair, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington, said other counties could be added.

Blair said the area now is eligible for federal funds for repairing public facilities, small business loans, unemployment insurance and temporary shelter for about 1,200 families displaced by the flooding.

FORT WAYNE Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. thanked Reagan for the declaration in a conference call with Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., who was touring the flood area Saturday.

Quayle quoted a relief worker's reponse to the declaration as, "Thank God, now we'll be able to do something for these people we've been taking care of."

Moses briefed the president, saying, "The rivers are going down. Those kids did the job. At the end there were nearly 30,000 volunteers coming here...really a lot of enthusiasm for a city of our size. Your coming here really enthused those volunteers."

Reagan replied, "Well God bless, oh boy, this is the best news of all."

After the call, Moses said the worst flooding may be over, but cautioned residents of the city's evacuated areas against returning to their homes.

"We would rather be safe than sorry when dealing with a very fragile dike system," Moses said. "If our rivers continue to drop as they have the past two days, I anticipate evacuees can return on Monday."

SANDBAGGING ENDED on all of the dikes early Saturday as the rain decreased to intermittent drizzle and water in the streets dropped to a depth about knee-high. There were no reports of leaks.

The Maumee River dropped to 23.07 feet by 9:30 a.m. Saturday, down about two feet. The St. Joseph River was down to about 16 feet, a foot above flood stage, while the St. Mary's River was at 17 feet and reported rising slowly south of the city because of rain overnight.

"We're not out of the woods yet," said Robert J. Binder, meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Wayne. "There's a lot of ifs, ands and buts on this river stuff."

More than 9,000 people were still being told to stay away from their water-logged homes, but the mayor's office reported many evacuees were going back anyway. George Drew of the American Red Cross said about 200 people were still at the four emergency shelters around the city.

The mayor said he would wait until Sunday night to decide whether the evacuees can return home then.

The Red Cross also said well water in nearby River Haven was contaminated by sewage because of the flooding, and bottled water was being distributed to about 500 people in the area who depend on wells for their water.

MEANWHILE, there was confusion over which of Fort Wayne's streets were open to cars, and traffic was snarled in some areas.

The main problems facing city officials were traffic control, a high school basketball tournament Saturday night and finding assignments for volunteer workers who continued to stream into the city.

Wilson, wearing work clothes, rubber boots and a baseball cap, was accompanied by 75 volunteers who drove to Fort Wayne in a caravan of 21 vehicles.

"We came up to help and to do whatever we're assigned to do," said Wilson, who was joined by his 12-year-old daughter, Jennifer. "I'm sure Fort Wayne would have done the same thing for us."

Sandbag-filling was suspended because volunteers had built up a surplus of 97,000 bags, but the basement of the coliseum remained busy Saturday. Scores of muddy, tired workers milled around waiting for the next chores to be assigned.

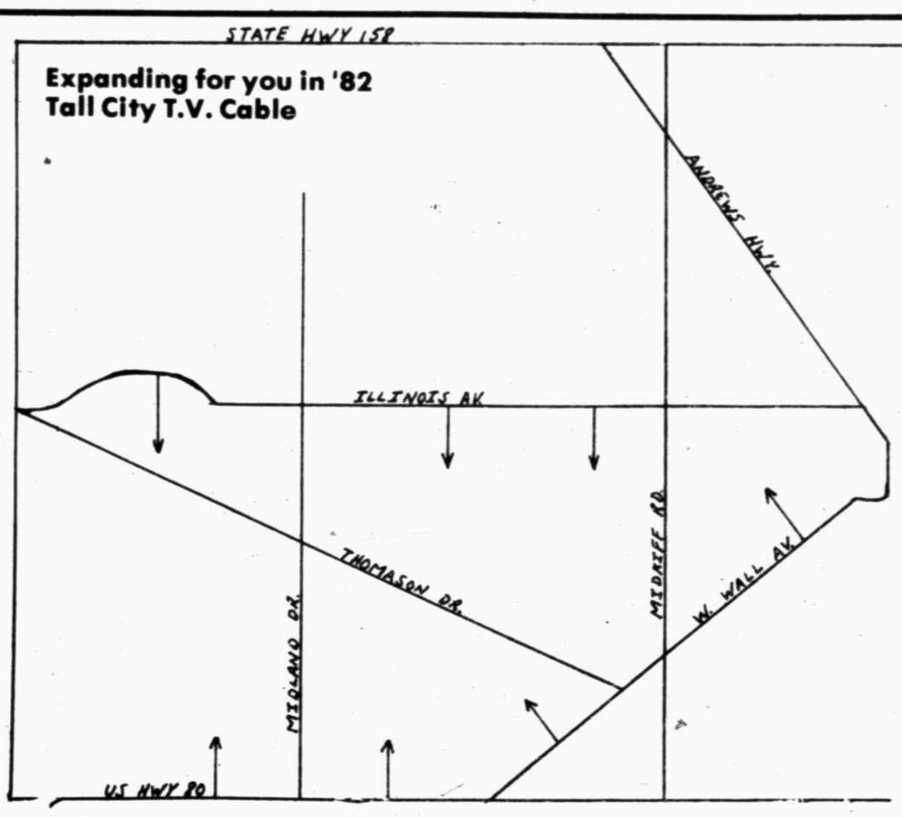

OTHERS SAT slumped in folding chairs, the strain of a week of flood-fighting lining their faces.

"These kids have done wonders," said Betty Collins, a member of the city Board of Works and supervisor of the coliseum staging operation.

She said her main problem Saturday was finding meaningful tasks for all the volunteers.

While busloads of workers left the coliseum parking lot for the flooded areas of the city, more busloads of people pulled in. Arriving passengers were spectators for the boys high school semi-state basketball tournament.

Wife says Walesa not allowed at baptism

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's martial law regime has barred interned Solidarity leader Lech Walesa from attending his daughter's baptism Sunday, his wife said.

In other developments Saturday, the military rulers dissolved the nation's journalists' union and declared "void" a U.N. call for a human rights investigation of conditions under martial law.

Warsaw radio later announced the formation of a new press group called the "Association of Journalists of the Polish People's Republic." Declarations by the organization indicated it was firmly pro-government.

WALESA'S WIFE, DANUTA, wept on the telephone Saturday as she told The Associated Press that her detained husband won't be allowed to travel to the Baltic port of Gdansk for the christening of Maria Victoria, who was born Jan. 27. Walesa has never seen the baby.

"These are not humans, these are devils. The father won't be there. I am in despair. I have no hope that he still may come," Mrs. Walesa said, sobbing audibly.

She had appealed for her husband's release to attend the ceremony and said earlier this month he was given permission by the minister for trade union affairs, Sylwester Zawadzki. But Zawadzki denied it.

She then appealed in writing to Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's Communist Party chief, prime minister and defense minister, but apparently got no answer.

Walesa, national chairman of Solidarity, has been held since the labor federation was suspended and martial law imposed Dec. 13. He has been moved periodically, and is believed sequestered near Warsaw.

The suspended Association of Polish Newsmen was ordered dissolved for "actions encouraging the dismantling of state and social institutions, (and) actions disintegrating the community of newsmen," the state-run media said.

THE ORDER FOLLOWED days of intense published criticsm about the 6,000-member journalists' organization, whose leaders were Solidarity backers and advocates of news media independence. They also opposed media subordination to the Communist Party.

The organization's chiefs were accused in an account Saturday by the offical news agency PAP of having links with Solidarity "extremists." PAP said the journalists' union "became a springboard for political activity contrary to (its) statute."

In announcing the new journalists' organization, Warsaw radio said the group sent a letter to Jaruzelski saying "We resolutely dissociate ourselves from the irresponsible activities of a portion of the leadership of the former association of Polish journalists." It added, "The organization we are setting up...proclaims its support for the (Communist) party program."

PAP quoted Poland's delegate to the U.N. Human Rights Commission as saying the 43-nation panel's call for an unprecedented inquiry in Poland was "void."

The delegate, Adam Lopatka, was quoted further as saying, "the commission has no mandate to voice its opinion on human rights in this or any other country, if the rights are not violated on a mass scale, continuously, and in a flagrant manner. This is not the case in Poland."

Dutch protest deaths

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Demonstrators, protesting the deaths of four Dutch journalists slain in El Salvador, placed memorial candles in front of the U.S. Consulate in Amsterdam Saturday and burned an American flag outside the U.S. Embassy in the Hague.

Several hundred protesters carried a petition to the U.S. Embassy at the Hague urging an end to American support for the El Salvador regime. When they were unable to hand the petition to a U.S. official, they burned the flag.

The Dutch government is investigating reports the four journalists who were killed Wednesday may have been shot by Salvadoran troops. The United States has said it found nothing to contradict the Salvadoran government's report that the four were killed during a clash between left-wing guerrillas and an army unit.

At the U.S. Consulate, protesters piled flowers at the foot of crosses set up for the four journalists. Many windows in the consulate were shattered during a violent anti-American demonstration Friday night.

The Dutch have not accepted El Salvador's official explanation for the death of the journalists. The Dutch ambassador in Mexico City arrived in El Salvador Friday to make his own investigation and met briefly with junta President Napoleon Duarte.

On Friday, Dutch Foreign Minister Max van der Stoel said some reports indicated the four may have been shot down by government troops.

Holland's largest newspaper, De Telegraaf, said in an editorial, "Nobody can have trust in the official statements of a dictatorial junta."

Autopsies reported on Dutch journalists

By JOE FRAZIER

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadoran government autopsies on four Dutch journalists showed no powder burns to indicate the killing was done at close range, judicial officials said Saturday.

The handwritten reports, which noted the starting time for each autopsy, indicated it took about one hour to conduct the autopsies on the four, plus a fifth unidentified man. The reports, indicating the first autopsy started at 6:20 p.m. and the last at 7:15 p.m., were shown to journalists. Each examination took about 10 to 15 minutes, according to the log.

The government claims all were killed in a firefight Wednesday between guerrillas and government troops.

However, the Dutch government says reports it has received indicate the reporters may have been murdered.

The autopsy reports said all were shot at least twice and apparently died instantly at the spot they were found, 35 miles north of San Salvador, where they had gone to cover the guerrilla side of El Salvador's war.

They said Jacobs Jan Willensen, a cameraman, died "of multiple gunshot wounds that left his skull and brain completely destroyed."

Soundman Hans Lodewijk Ter Laag was shot twice through the side with bullets that struck his heart and left lung, and director Jan Kornelius Kuuyper was shot twice in the face and had a wound in the stomach area that could have been from grenade shrapnel, the reports said.

The autopsy reports, signed by Dr. Julio Alberto Chavarria, described the fifth man as about 6-foot-1, fairly dark skinned and with dark wavy hair. The reports said he died of two wounds in the head.

Officials said the unidentified man did not appear to be Salvadoran, partly because of his height, extremely tall for a Salvadoran.

Meanwhile, two freelance U.S. television reporters working for ABC News in El Salvador were stopped by armed men Saturday morning as they were trying to leave their hotel for the airport to go home to Atlanta.

The freelancers, Dennis Suit and Larry Aumack, said they would leave on a later flight and would make the 35-mile drive to the airport with a U.S. Embassy escort.

Suit said he and Aumack were not threatened. The men who stopped them were dressed in civilian clothes and carried pistols on their belts, Aumack said. It was not known why they were stopped.

But they said their Salvadoran driver was questioned intensely about his family and where he lived and told to be at security force headquarters at 11 a.m.

A group of American journalists who went with the Salvadoran driver to the National Guard headquarters quoted guard officials as saying the incident involved an undisclosed security question and that there had been a mix-up. The guard reportedly said the men who had stopped the driver were not guardsmen.

The network moved the driver's family to the Camino Real Hotel, where many foreign journalists stay and where the junta has posted guards with automatic rifles since a "death list" with the names of 35 targeted journalists was circulated.

Hundreds of foreign journalists have been covering the war in El Salvador, where a coalition of leftist rebels is fighting a U.S.-backed civilian military junta that came to power in October 1979.

On Friday, Dutch Foreign Minister Max Van Der Stoel told reporters in The Hague that reports received by his government indicated the Dutch journalists were murdered by Salvadoran troops.

Deputy Premier Joop Den Uyl said his government had no specifics on the circumstances but "we have strong misgivings about the matter." He said the Salvadoran government account of the deaths "was highly improbable."

The U.S. Embassy in San Salvador said it sent two officers to the area where the Dutch reporters were killed but found nothing to counter Defense Ministry claims that the men were accidentally gunned down.

Castro reportedly increased arms orders

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro personally ordered increased arms shipments to the Salvadoran guerrillas last December in an attempt to disrupt the March 28 elections in El Salvador, the State Department said Saturday.

"Within the past three months, shipments of arms into El Salvador reached unprecedented peaks, averaging out to the highest overall volume since the 'final offensive' last year, the department said in a public report entitled "Cuban and Nicaraguan Support for the Salvadoran Insurgency."

Dean Fischer, the chief State Department spokesman, said, however, that the Reagan administration will not make public the hard intelligence evidence on which he said the report is based.

"We cannot and will not make this intelligence information available publicly," Fischer told reporters. "Were it to be released, the United States would lose access to critical information and might well risk the lives of some brave people who believe it is important that the government of the United States know what is going on."

"A government that does not keep secrets does not receive them," Fischer said.

The 11-page report is the latest in a series of administration attempts to demonstrate Cuban and Nicaraguan control of revolutionary forces in El Salvador.

Castro and Cuban and Nicaraguan spokesmen repeatedly have denied involvement in arms shipments and other support for the Salvadoran guerrillas.

But Fischer insisted Saturday that the "cumulative weight" of both classified and publicly available evidence "makes clear that the guerrilla movement in El Salvador receives vital assistance of many kinds from an international infrastructure outside El Salvador."

He said the purpose of the report was "not to produce new revelations but to describe the general pattern of outside support for El Salvador's guerrillas, including arms supply, training, and command and control."

Thus much of the information in the reports duplicates a department "white paper" issued nearly a year ago.

Meanwhile, in a separate but parallel development, the State Department denounced as "nonsense" and a "transparent propaganda effort" charges by Nicaragua that the United States is working covertly to undermine the Sandinista government in Managua.

Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is consulting other members of the U.N. Security Council to see if they want to consider Nicaragua's accusations, department spokesman Joseph Reap said, adding that Mrs. Kirkpatrick was acting in her role as this month's president of the council.

The State Department's latest report states that intelligence reaching Washington is consistent with a two-year pattern of guerrilla activity and foreign support and that "Cuba played a major role in developing this support system, and remains its key link."

The report indicated, however, that U.S. intelligence analysts are having difficulty interpreting some of the data.

For example, it said that when a secret arms shipment is seized or an arms cache located "it is often impossible to know with certainty whether the ultimate recipients are Guatemalan, Honduran, Costa Rican or Salvadoran terrorists" since the supply network is using the same routes and techniques to funnel arms to guerrillas and terrorists in all four countries.

The report said Castro met with guerrilla leaders in Havana three months ago and then directed "that external supplies of arms to (Salvadoran guerrilla) units should be stepped up to make possible an offensive to disrupt a peaceful vote in the March 28 constituent assembly elections" in El Salvador.

"Extreme leftist groups throughout Central America were mobilized to support this effort," the report said.

A new flow of Cuban and Nicaraguan arms into El Salvador has been dispatched both by sea and by overland routes through Honduras, the report said.

Writers' safety urged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Society of Newspaper Editors urged El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte on Saturday to protect journalists in the wake of the slaying of four Dutch television newsmen.

"To provide the most accurate coverage of the events in El Salvador to the people of the United States and of the world, it is necessary for journalists to be able to move freely throughout the country in safety," the organization said in a telegram to Duarte and his defense minister, Gen. Jose Guillermo Garcia.

The telegram was signed by Michael J. O'Neill, president of the ASNE and an editor of the New York Daily News; Anthony Day, chairman of the society's Committee on International Communication and editorial page editor of the Los Angeles Times; and Seymour Topping, vice chairman of that committee and managing editor of the New York Times.

Over 50 killed in train-bus collision

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An express train slammed into a tourist bus at an unguarded crossing in southern Andhra Pradesh state Saturday, and at least 50 people were killed and 25 others injured, news reports said.

Those killed were 21 men, 26 women and 12 children, the United News of India said. It said the bus was broken in two by the impact. The driver of the Rajeshwari Bus vehicle was among those killed, UNI said.

It was not immediately known if there were any foreigners aboard the bus. The Mangalore-to-New Delhi express train did not derail and none of its passengers or crew was injured, according to UNI.

The accident occurred near the town of Kolanur, nearly 125 miles south of the state capital of Hyderabad.

Gunman's denial becomes confession

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A Palestinian who had denied in court that he shot to death a Vienna city councilman has reaffirmed his earlier confession to police, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The man, Husham Mohamed Rajih, told police he was the gunman who shot and killed councilman Heinz Nittel last May 1, the newspaper Kurier said.

Rajih and an accomplice, Marwan Hassan, were recently sentenced to life imprisonmentin the bomb and grenade attack that killed two people and injured about 30 in a downtown synagogue last Aug. 29. Although Rijih had confessed to the Nittel shooting earlier, he denied it during the trial on the bombing charges in January.

Due to a lack of evidence, Rajih was only convicted of being an accomplice in the Nittel assassination.

Indian legislators have a free-for-all

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Legislators and a Cabinet minister punched and kicked each other during a 15-minute free-for-all Saturday in the Rajasthan state assembly.

The altercation took place after House Speaker Poonam Bishnoi called for a vote on a report by the state's Business Advisory Committee, the United News of India reported. Opposition lawmakers objected, demanding further debate.

When the speaker disagreed, members of at least four opposition parties charged the podium, knocked aside the sergeant-at-arms, climbed up on the platform and began shouting. The sergeant-at-arms tried to head off a second wave of opposition members, and was aided by an unidentified Cabinet minister who kicked a member grappling with him, UNI said.

Members of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's ruling congress party jumped from their benches and a brawl ensued. After two recesses failed to cool tempers, the opposition legislators decided to boycott the rest of the day's events.

Hit-and-run driver takes body away

PARIS (AP) — A hit-and-run driver kept driving for about 20 minutes with the body of a pedestrian on the roof of his car, police said Saturday.

The victim, Jules Nouveau, 77, had been thrown by the force of the accident onto the roof of the car, police said.

Authorities arrested Gerard Babouin, 34, on the main highway south of Paris after other drivers alerted police Friday night.

Witnesses said the victim was struck as he was crossing a road in suburban Evry. They said the driver appeared to slow down, then sped away and went on to the nearby express highway.

Cambodia claims Thai violations

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia has published a white paper claiming Thailand committed gross violations of its territory in 1981 and served as China's chief agent in the region.

The paper says that, according to incomplete statistics, Thai aircraft violated Cambodian airspace 527 times, heavy artillery based in Thailand shelled Cambodia 6,958 times and Thai vessels entered Cambodian waters 4,674 times.

The paper also accused Thailand of working with China to set up a "united front" of Cambodian reactionaries aimed at sabotaging the government.

Thailand still recognizes the ousted regime of the Khmer Rouge, which was toppled by a Vietnamese invasion force in early 1979.

Iran claims leftist defeat

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Radio Tehran claimed Saturday that Iranian Revolutionary Guards crushed the leftist Fedayeen Khalq during raids in which 40 top guerrilla leaders were captured and eight rebels were killed.

"The Fedayeen Khalq, which from the beginning of the (1979 Islamic) revolution had worked toward the interests of the United States, is now crushed," the radio said.

NATO expected to stick with U.S. nuke feelings

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials predict NATO defense ministers will stand together this week against Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's latest maneuver to head off the basing of new medium-range U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

The two-day meeting of 13 defense ministers in Colorado Springs, Colo., opens Tuesday, a week after Brezhnev announced a freeze on deployment of SS-20 medium-range missiles in the western part of the Soviet Union.

Brezhnev coupled his announcement with a call for NATO to follow suit and a warning of "retaliatory steps" if U.S.-Soviet negotiations on limiting such weapons on both sides fail to make progress.

"I expect there will be general agreement rejecting freeze proposals," said one senior U.S. defense official who has been involved in preparations for the semi-annual meeting of the North Atlantic Alliance planning group.

"VIRTUALLY ALL THE allies have been opposed to proposals to freeze the imbalance now existing beween NATO and the Soviets," said the U.S. official, who asked to remain anonymous. "We expect that nobody will depart from that."

But European defense ministers, pressured by an anti-nuclear movement in their countries, are expected to urge the United States to continue talks with the Soviet Union on limiting medium-range weapons and to start negotiations on long-range forces.

One possibility mentioned was a request for early announcement by the United States of a date for renewing strategic arms limitation talks - once called SALT and redubbed START by the Reagan administration.

Unlike the Geneva talks that deal with European nuclear forces, START, short for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, would try to reduce the numbers of U.S. and Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Athough U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said last week that START talks could get under way by this summer, the Reagan administration's official position has been that the current East-West climate, notably the situation in Poland, precludes such negotiations.

But with the likelihood of thousands of Europeans taking to the streets in ban-the-bomb demonstrations this spring, their governments want the United States to resume the big-weapons talks last held during former President Carter's administration.

"This is something President Reagan himself has to make up his mind about," said a member of one of the bigger NATO delegations, who asked that he not be identified. "But the issue of the START talks is sure to be raised at the Colorado meeting."

Meanwhile, top U.S. officials have made it clear they believe Brezhnev's missile freeze is a propaganda gambit aimed at splitting the Western alliance and stoking the anti-nuclear movement in Western Europe.

THE LEADERS OF MOST NATO countries have taken the same stand. In a typical reaction, a West German government spokesman said Brezhnev's annoucement was an old proposal that would maintain a huge Soviet missile advantage in Europe.

Though Brezhnev pledged to dismantle some older generation SS-4 and SS-5 missiles, the Reagan administration and most NATO leaders take the position that his freeze still leaves the Soviets with a 300-0 score.

The Soviets now have in place 300 of the new triple-warhead SS-20 missiles able to strike targets across Western Europe while there are no similiar weapons in the NATO area capable of reaching the Soviet Union.

The NATO alliance in 1979 first approved deployment in Europe of 572 U.S. ground-launched Cruise missiles and Pershing ballistic missiles. That plan was reaffirmed at a meeting of NATO defense ministers last October at Gleneagles, Scotland.

Heavily armed Israeli soldiers patrol streets in Ramallah on the Occupied West Bank during the general strike called after Thursday's dismissal of the mayor of El Bireh. Israeli soldiers shot and killed a 19-year-old Palestinian during an anti-Israeli protest in El Bireh Saturday.

Israeli soldiers kill Arab teen

By KEN KUSMER

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed an Arab teenager and wounded two other Arabs Saturday when a mob of demonstrators in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River began stoning the soldiers, the military command reported.

It said the soldiers fired "warning shots" over the crowd in El Bireh and one youth identified as 19-year-old Ibrahim Aly Darwish Koran was fatally wounded and two other demonstrator were hit. A soldier was seriously injured when he was struck in the head by a rock, according to the command.

Israel television quoted a "senior security source" as saying Israel would continue to use "a tough hand to deal with demonstrations on the West Bank."

The source was quoted as saying Israel would have to wait out the crisis and continue to encourage "moderate elements" in the West Bank.

The bloodshed came as Palestinians throughout the West Bank protested the military dismissal of El Bireh Mayor Ibrahim Tawil on Thursday. General strikes began in most of the territory Friday.

Saturday marked the second straight day of rioting in El Bireh, eight miles north of Jerusalem.

One woman required medical attention after soldiers used tear gas to disperse a group of women trying to organize a protest near the El Bireh municipality building. Israeli radio said a mob soon gathered in the center of town and threw stones at soldiers, who then opened fire.

The command issued a statement saying, "In the course of a violent demonstration by El Bireh residents, troops were obliged to fire warning shots in the air. Three local residents were wounded and evacuated to the Ramallah Hospital where one of them died."

The army and police are investigating the incident, the command said.

In Hebron, 14 miles south of Jerusalem, one person was injured in a clash between Arabs and Jewish residents of the nearby settlement of Kiryat Arba, Israeli radio reported. It said a Kiryat Arba resident was struck by a stone while he and other Jews were trying to prevent an Arab demonstration at Patriarch's Cave, believed to be the burial site of the biblical figures Abraham and Isaac.

The army imposed a curfew near the holy site and arrested several Arab students, the broadcast said.

In Nablus, 29 miles north of Jerusalem, the army prevented Mayor Bassam Shakaa from calling a city council meeting. Israeli radio said troops allowed only Shakaa inside the municipal building and used tear gas to disperse demonstrators.

Shakaa, the most influential Palestinian leader on the West Bank, later called on El Bireh municipal workers not to cooperate with the Israeli officials now running that town. Israeli radio quoted him as saying workers in other West Bank towns also would refuse to cooperate if Israeli authorities try to dismiss their municipal leaders.

The broadcast said Israeli troops were out in force in El Bireh, Ramallah, Nablus and other West Bank towns and a number of Arab protesters had been arrested.

Israel's Moscow-aligned Communist Party introduced a no-confidence motion in the Israeli Parliament to protest the government's dismissal of the El Bireh city council and the "intensification of oppressive measures" on the West Bank, a party spokesman said.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government was expected to defeat the motion with no difficulty. Israeli television said the vote might come as early as Tuesday.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon dismissed Tawil and the El Bireh city council because they did not cooperate with the Israeli civilian administration that replaced military rule on the West Bank last November.

Mubarak approves death sentences

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak on Saturday approved death sentences for five Moslem militants and jail terms for 17 others convicted in the Oct. 6 assassination of President Anwar Sadat.

A Defense Ministry statement said the convicted men would be officially informed of Mubarak's decision on Sunday, and would have 15 days after that to appeal to Mubarak for mercy.

The sentences had been handed down March 6 by Egypt's Supreme Military Court, but were subject to Mubarak's approval.

Sadat, who had ruled Egypt for 11 years, was killed in a hail of bullets during a military parade when four uniformed men rushed the grandstand. Seven local and foreign dignitaries were killed and 27 others injured in the assault.

The military court convicted five defendants of premeditated murder and the other 17 of involvement in the plot. Two defendants were acquitted.

Sadat was the first head of state in contemporary Egypt to be assassinated. It was the second murder of a public figure in five years by self-proclaimed Moslem fundamentalists who advocate the establishment of an Islamic state in Egypt.

The military penal code calls for execution by firing squad for the two military officers among the condemned. The three others condemned to death are to be hanged.

The Defense Ministry statement said the 17 prison terms ranged from five years to life in prison.

The convicted men's lawyers can appeal after reviewing the files compiled by the three-judge tribunal detailing the reasons for the sentences, the statement said. It added that the judges had "restricted themselves, in their decisions, to the assault and the subsequent crimes."

The announcement of the sentences March 6 did not provoke any public protest, but militants have said they were too harsh. Christians, concerned at what they see as a revival of fanaticism, say they are too lenient.

The two defendants acquitted in the Sadat assassination are still being held in connection with what the government believes are plots to overthrow Egypt's secular regime and establish a religious one, according to press reports.

Four years ago, five Moslem extremists were hanged at dawn for the kidnap-murder of a former Sadat religious affairs Cabinet minister who spoke out against radical views held by Moslem fundamentalists.

Islamic fundamentalism is growing in Egypt, mainly on university campuses. Militants vehemently oppose what they perceive as Western-style permissiveness seeping into Egypt's traditional society. They also rail against the gap between rich and poor they say came with the economic liberalization policies introduced by Sadat.

OPEC ministers' meeting heavily guarded

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers were shielded by heavily armed security police during their emergency meeting that ended Saturday — the authorities taking no chances on a recurrence of attacks like one in 1975 led by the international terrorist "Carlos."

Eleven ministers were taken hostage and three people were killed after a squad led by "Carlos" shot its way into the headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries seven years ago. The building had been guarded by only a handful of watchmen then.

Ministers attending the latest conference were guarded by about 2,000 police carrying submachine guns. There were metal-detector checks for those entering the hotel where the oil ministers from the 13 member nations met behind closed doors. Closed-circuit television was used to monitor the entrances of the OPEC headquarters.

What is it, meteo-right or meteo-wrong?

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

As Bogart said of the Maltese Falcon, it's the "stuff dreams are made of."

Only this time, the story goes beyond the realm of a mere statuette of a bird from Malta — it extends into the uttermost reaches of the cosmos, from whose abominable abysses a mysterious sphere of metal is alleged to have hurtled to the earth.

The telephone call came in mid-week, and from the first words drawled by the fast-talking man of his "close encounter of the metallic kind" the plot began to unfurl with all the intrigue and twists of a Dashiell Hammett mystery. It was a story spanning six long years and involving the enigmatic disappearance of "extraterrestrial objects" from a Dallas backyard, the loss of vital photographs, reputed investigations by scientists nationwide, eyewitnesses who were and who weren't.

It lay on the wooden table in his home, a 2½-pound sphere of metal shaped like a handball but cratered like a lunar sea. Just off-center, a pencil-sized hole pierced it two-thirds of the way through, while the darkness of its rugged exterior gave way to smoothness as silvery as a sunlit ocean where knife blade had whittled. When slivers were placed on a cookstove burner, its variance with lead was dramatically demonstrated: when melted, the latter rolled away with one sweep of the knife, while the former refused to yield, forming instead a mirror-like shield.

Jim Williamson reports seeing a crater "big enough to drive your car into" and piles of glass created by sand "being melted at 3,000 degrees."

It was obvious from first glance that this unique orb spawned far more sense of wonder than did the ebony bird chased by Sam Spade, but would the investigation into the "Midlandese Sphere" prove as riddled with drama and mystery?

Enter the owner of the object, Jim Williamson of east Midland County, a thirtyish driller with a wife, Patricia, and nine youngsters. As newsmen sat across the table from them — the Midlandese Sphere looming ominously between — the couple detailed their encounter with "something from beyond."

IT WAS A SPRING night in Dallas, 1976. They stood outside their home — where strange things had been known to happen ever since a "man murdered his entire family there," said Patricia — and watched a spectacular meteor shower streak the heavens. Then came a thunderstorm and ensuing sleep. But Patricia, pregnant with a son, was restless, and at "2:30 or 3 a.m." she rose to pace the floor.

Suddenly, a "super bright light" burst about their home, illuminating the buildings across the street as though they had exploded. A deafening crash alongside their house wrenched the structure, shattering "five or six windows" and cracking a ½-inch plate glass picture window. The electricity meter and television set blew out. The force of the impact drove dirt up through the cracks in the floor, leaving the interior of the house buried in two inches of catacomb-like dust.

Patricia feared their home had been struck by lightning. She woke her husband, but it was not until the next day that they discovered what had happened.

Near the back corner of their house lay a pair of impact craters, each about two feet across, while beyond a creek a few hundred yards away lay evidence of cataclysm — a "hole big enough to drive your car into," said Williamson.

Melted glass was piled two feet deep in their yard, the result, he says, of sand "being melted at 3,000 degrees." The grass was charred white and left brittle as dust, as was the one-by-four which formed a partition to Patricia's flower bed. The rain continued, but it was not until a week had passed that the ground cooled enough for the couple to dig into the smaller craters.

One hole angled through their yard 14 feet, and yielded at a vertical depth of four feet an object similar to "rusty cast iron or a motor block." Mangled and covered with glass, the 35- to 40-pound mass was about 18 inches by three feet in size.

The second crater yielded an even larger object of similar design, this one weighing 80 to 90 pounds, but it was the initial find that stirred interest within Patricia, for it was fractured virtually to the core.

CHIPPING AWAY at the object, Patricia discovered in its interior the "cannonball-like" metal orb — and the "Midlandese Sphere" was first perused by the eyes of man after what the Williamsons believe was a journey through the universe.

Such a catastrophic event, say the couple, obviously resulted in quite a stir around the neighborhood, as the adjoining houses also had been damaged. Although persons throughout the area flocked to the site to view the extraterrestrial finds, the Dallas news media seemed uninterested.

The Williamsons soon noticed the Midlandese Sphere had some rather strange properties about it. After handling it for a few days, small blisters appeared all over their hands — but it was what happened in the ensuing months that spoke most intensely of unearthly influences.

The child Patricia was carrying proved to be the largest of all her children. A tree long dead began to blossom. Unusual plants sprang up; hollow like bamboo, the sticky flora appeared first as pencil-sized vegetation, then burst into awesome dimensions that allowed an entire foot to be placed within. When Williamson dug at their base, he discovered no roots existed.

But that wasn't all. Their garden, planted where the objects had plummeted, yielded amazing produce that year, including okra two feet long which grew so swiftly they had a hard time keeping it cut.

The 35- to 40-pound chunk of "cast iron" wound up being used as a doorstop, while the larger mass was used to plug a hole in the back fence. Meanwhile, the Williamsons solicited the aid of experts in an attempt to determine just what the Midlandese Sphere was. He took it to a metallurgist, who determined it was slightly radioactive. Patricia's brother, a nuclear physicist, examined it but was unable to ascertain its genesis.

When the Williamsons moved to Midland County a few years ago, they left the larger chunks behind, bringing with them only the metal ball, which they continued to have analyzed without success. One Midland man, he said, conducted more than 80 tests and still failed to determine its metallic content, though he did offer to purchase it for $3,000. On another occasion, two meteoritic experts from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington flew down and made an offer of $1,000.

BUT IT WAS NOT until 10 days ago that the ball really started to roll, so to speak. Dr. Robert Reeves, head of the geology department at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, and Nick Short, a senior scientist and specialist on meteorite impact craters from Goddard Spaceflight Center in Greenbelt, Md., came to the Williamsons' home to examine their find.

Contacted shortly afterward by The Reporter-Telegram, Reeves would not speculate on the sphere's origin, but did express his conviction in its legitimacy. "We don't have any doubts that it came down from outer space," he said, adding, however, that tests should be conducted.

Patricia Williamson recalls strange things had been known to happen in the family's Dallas home, where a "man murdered his entire family."

Short, meanwhile, was just as convinced in the object's authenticity. While his first reaction was "My gosh, here we go again with one of these manmade things," as he examined it more thoroughly he discovered the presence of "brownish-covered gouges filled with some type of mineral" which suggested a meteoritic origin. He noted that it was not unknown for meteorites to contain "inclusions" of seemingly foreign metal, and concluded from his cursory examination that the orb "has a real possibility of being a meteorite and a very unusual meteorite."

But its sphericity confounded him.

"I have never seen anything quite like that in my life," he noted.

Other experts joined him in being confounded, but for different reasons. While Williamson and The Reporter-Telegram awaited analysis of a sample sent to astronomer Robert Patterson of Southwest Missouri State University, metallurgist Jack Barton of Southwestern Laboratories in Midland observed a demonstration of its remarkable melting characteristics and noted in amazement, "I have never viewed a piece of metal that exhibited those characteristics.... It just didn't act normally."

THE MYSTERY MOUNTED as detail became piled upon detail.

But wait — about that plot twist....

On a routine check with Mrs. F.L. Armstrong of Dallas, who lived next door to the Williamsons when the cataclysmic event was said to have occurred, inconsistencies began to surface. While Williamson had said Mrs. Armstrong had examined the larger chunks and was well aware of the circumstances surrounding their origin, the Dallas woman had a different story.

"I've lived here 30-some-odd years and there's nothing like that ever happened around here," she said, adding that no "car-sized crater" lies in the area behind her house. "We couldn't be that lucky."

The house in question since has been abandoned, but the owner, James McPeters, was located in Irving. While according to the Williamsons the McPeters house supposedly had been racked by the impact and the windows shattered, McPeters denied any knowledge of the event. "I don't know a thing about it — that would really be weird," he said, adding that Patricia's father is a close neighbor and that such an occurence never has been mentioned in conversation.

And as for whether or not the large chunks of metal still lie in that backyard —

"I'm working on the house right now, fixing it up, and there's nothing like that around there," he said.

Williamson was confronted by The Reporter-Telegram with the failure of the owner and next-door neighbor to verify his story.

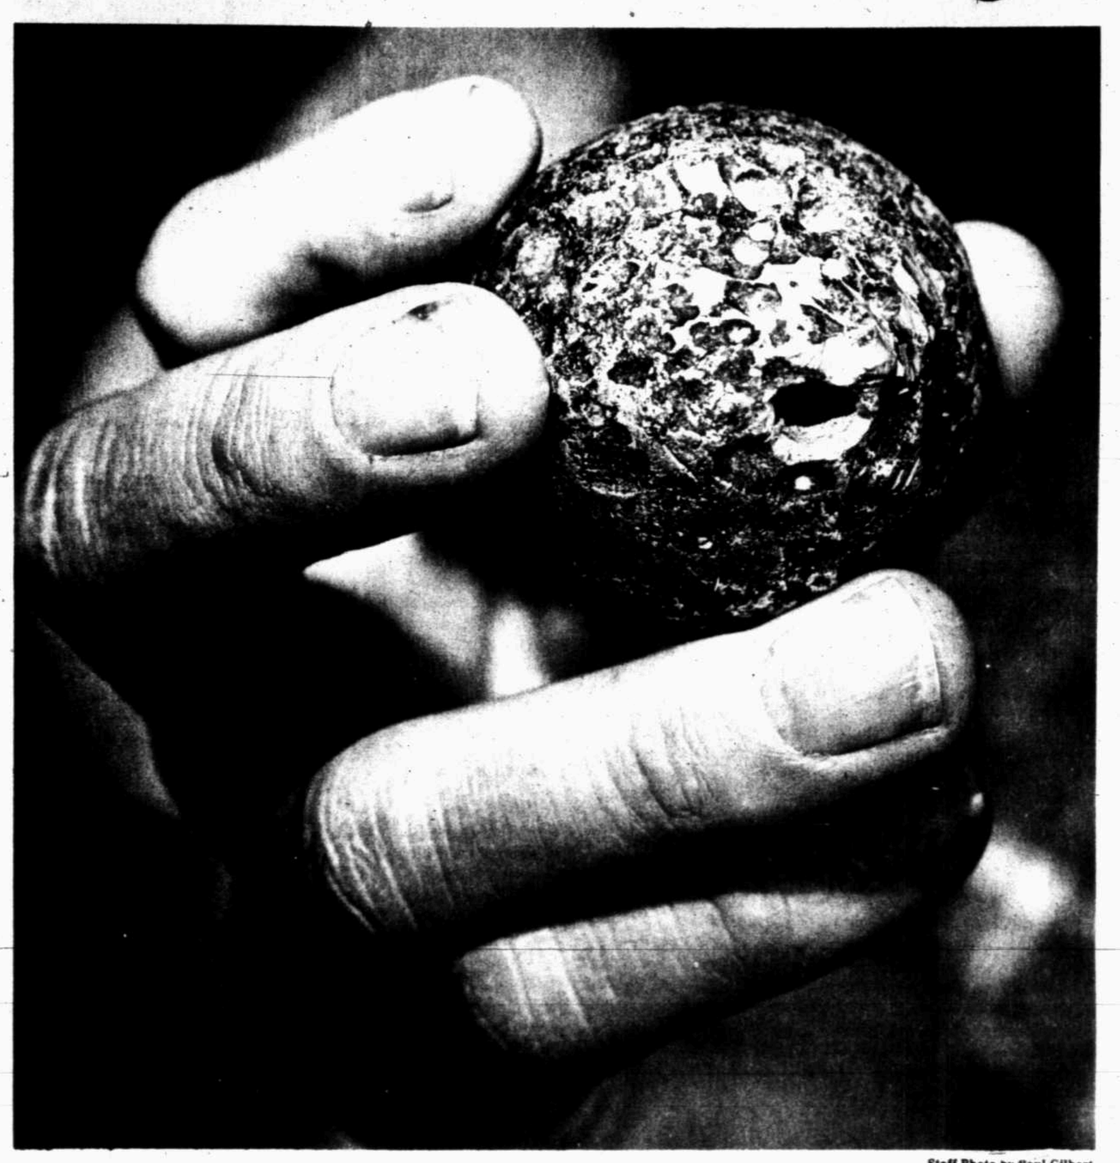

"The owner never was there," he said. And as for Mrs. Armstrong, "I don't know. She didn't like us too good anyway. She may not remember the larger chunks, but I know if someone showed her the metal ball she'd remember that."

To offer verification, Williamson produced the telephone number of his brother-in-law, Edmund Mantooth of the Dallas area, but a quick check with the man yielded the comment "I haven't seen it."

Of vital concern to the verification of his story were several photographs Williamson said were taken of the larger masses, but in the intervening years the prints mysteriously have disappeared, either having been claimed by a house fire or given away by his children, he says.

There's nothing 'new' in sewage disposal plan

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

In the history of the world, the city of Midland's plan for disposing of its sewage isn't new.

It's a simple idea wrapped up in modern technology. Basically, it involves applying treated sewage water to land for growing crops, and it's a method that has been used by many countries for centuries.

Cities throughout the world are reverting increasingly to this system in disposing of their wastes, with Lubbock a prime example. And if Midland can hurdle the public hearings and technical studies, this West Texas community will join the growing numbers.

Although Midland already irrigates some land with sewage water for growing alfalfa, this plan would be implemented on a far larger scope. Prompting the change in disposal sites has been an influx of residents.

With the sudden boom in population last year, Midland saw its holding ponds overflowing with treated sewage. One farmer was using some for irrigating acres of alfalfa, but once the growing season ended the city was stuck with no place to dispose of the sewage water during the winter.

AFTER MONTHS of seeking a place to put that wastewater where it couldn't harm the ground water, the engineering firm of Black and Veatch and the hydrology firm of Ed Reed and Associates thought they hit the right solution when they came up with the idea of piping it to land owned by J. "Timber" Floyd. On those sections located southeast of the city and adjacent to the Glasscock County line, the sewage water could be used for irrigation while allowing Floyd to experiment with the kinds of crops that could be grown with the nitrate-rich water.

The council has submitted the plan to the Texas Water Commission in hopes of getting a permit to carry out the project as soon as possible.

Complicating the picture is the fact that Midland is squeezed between a rock and a hard place watching a 24-month time clock, that started on Feb. 1, tick off the days. By the end of that time limit, the city must have another sewage disposal plan in operation and the only plan they have is the Floyd project.

In the meantime, the city has contracted with farmers adjacent to the sewage treatment plant to use as much of the treated sewage as possible for irrigation.

City officials also have described the plan as not being a perfect solution since it still includes too many variables, including the fact that Floyd doesn't own all the land in the area that is needed to make the project successful.

THE FLOYD LAND wasn't picked out of a hat, according to hydrologist Joe Reed. He explained at an earlier City Council meeting that a spot was sought which had poorer quality ground water than the sewage water. Reed said he had tested wells throughout the southern part of the county. Results indicated water in the area of Floyd's land and along Johnson Draw "is poor with dissolved solids ranging from 20,000 to 30,000 per milligram."

The technical plan calls for using sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15 on Block 37-3-South and 36-3-South. Floyd owns sections 13, 14 and 15.

According to Midland Public Utilities Director John Lowe, Floyd will have to "buy, lease, beg, borrow or steal" the additional needed sections.

All in the timing: Midland likely will pay for project

The city of Lubbock pushed its foot in the door at the right time.

By getting a $15 million research and development grant, most of the cost of the project to use treated sewage water for irrigating crops was borne by the federal government. The grant came through the Environmental Protection Agency's Clean Air Act.

Midland, instead, will have to pay the $20 million tab for its project through the taxpayers.

With President's Reagan's budget cutbacks, grants for such programs also were reduced, according to Emory Long of Austin, director of construction grants division of Texas Department of Water Resources.

"I would doubt if there would be funds available for Midland," said Long.

Reform legislation cut down federal cost share of such projects, he said, adding the share used to run from 75 to 85 percent. It's been reduced to 45 to 50 percent with the city picking up the rest of the tab.

Even if Midland decided to get on the list, it would be at least three to four years before it would be considered for federal money.

"If you delayed it three years to get on the list, inflation would offset the costs. It would be to Midland's advantage to construct the project with their own money," Long said.

The list already contains $650 million worth of projects ready to go, except for the money. Approved for funding were slightly more than $100 million worth of projects. Long said that leaves more than $500 million of projects "sitting on the shelf."

In fact, he added, "We don't even know the status of 1982 construction money."

"It would be the most desirable from the city's standpoint to have one person to deal with" on contracting to use the sewage water for irrigation, he said.

Lowe noted the city "worked on the premise that we had to select a site where the existing ground water was 3,000 total dissolved solids or higher. It would give us some assurance that any possible leakage would not degrade the ground water. That's what has dragged this project out for almost a year. There's not very much bad ground water in the county."

Any place that tested to have 10,000 total dissolved solids couldn't be ruined by sewage water. "There's no way you're ever going to hurt that water," said Lowe.

TWO SPOTS in the county were found to have high amounts of dissolved solids, according to Lowe. One was at Salt Lake about eight miles south of the city. The other was along Johnson Draw to the southeast.

The city stopped looking at Salt Lake as a disposal site after adjacent land owners complained. "They may have done us a favor," said Lowe. "That site has a limited life" whereas the Floyd property should be able to take the city's sewage water for at least the next 30 years.

Further testing of Floyd's land prompted the engineers and hydrologists to move the proposed locations for the project farther east. Another point in its favor is that this area has a triassic clay layer under the soil and above the ground water. This clay layer, according to Lowe, would divert the water away from good ground water to the south and direct it into Johnson Draw.

"This triassic serves as a barrier between water on the surface and ground water. As water percolates from the surface down, it can't pass that barrier," he said.

Basically, the plan calls for pumping primary treated effluent from the sewage treatment plant in a pipeline that will run parallel to Garden City Highway until it gets to Floyd's land where it will veer off and be diverted into a holding pond, Lowe explained. At this point, the "terminal reservoir" is designated for the south half of Section 12. Here the water will be held until needed for irrigation.

"THE RESERVOIR gives you some operating room. You can't irrigate 365 days a year," said Lowe. "It will be a bay-tiered system with six cells, or ponds."

The unlined pond will hold 300 acres of water and allow for 36 days of storage, figuring on a flow of 9 million gallons a day, he added.

Lining the pond with clay would run about $1.50 per square foot. "The economics are just fierce if you line one. If you locate the pond over water that has 10,000 total dissolved solids and if you have leakage it won't harm the water. Effluent has 1,500 to 1,800 total dissolved solids and is better than the ground water," Lowe explained.

An irrigation pump system will distribute the water over six sections of land as it is needed.

Estimated cost of the project is broken down into: irrigation pump station, $500,000; terminal storage, $2 million; land preparation, $1.2 million; piping and electrical, $1.4 million; irrigation equipment, $700,000; pipeline, $7.5 million; pumps, motor, $500,000. Putting all construction items together, estimated cost is $14.8 million; engineering, $1.5 million; contingencies, $1.5 million; legal fees, $1 million; to add up to $18.3 million.

Adding in inflation and other unknown costs, the city has estimated the project should cost $20 million. To pay for it, the City Council is planning to have the Colorado River Municipal Water District sell bonds.

"THESE BONDS will be based on the actual construction costs and will be sold as the various bids come in. Hopefully, the project won't cost this much," Lowe said.

In looking at the proposed site, Lowe noted it would be an area that has few inhabitants. "Most of the land out there is used as rangeland. We would be out of the heavily-growing community, which is desirable from the city's standpoint."

The problems facing the city in getting the project finished in 24 months

Spherical object creates controversy, curiosity

expert on meteorites recommended by the Smithsonian Institute, examined the object and listened to the description of its supposed origin and expressed his skepticism.

"I've never seen a meteorite that looked like that," he said. "It's possible, but highly improbable, and I've seen thousands of meteorites. Meteorite metal is always iron and brittle, not soft."

BUT WHAT ABOUT the possibility of it being part of a downed satellite?

That question hung in the balance for several days.

Meanwhile, says Williamson, a series of persons came by his home to examine the Midlandese Sphere. One such authority, Roy Westbrooch of a New York museum, conducted on-the-spot tests and asked the Williamsons what they would sell it for.

"A million dollars," quipped Patricia.

"If it's what I think it is, it may well be worth that much," Westbrooch told them shortly before leaving with a promise to contact them soon.

Furthermore, said Williamson, a physicist examined the orb and expressed an opinion that it consisted of either pure platinum or a hitherto unknown element that could completely alter mankind's theories of the universe. And, indeed, Short of Goddard Spaceflight Center told The Reporter-Telegram "one of the wild possibilities is that it might be one of the platinum metals."

Visions of great wealth and national notoriety began to rage — but then came the laboratory report from Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield, Mo. Patterson had turned over the samples sent him to a member of the geology department, and in a telephone call to The Reporter-Telegram this week, the astronomer said a definite conclusion as to its metallic components had been reached:

"The largest portion would be cadmium," said Patterson. "It also has silicon, and traces of copper and silver." He added that microscopic examination had revealed the samples to be "unlike any common meteorite (and containing) materials that are not usually present in meteorites, as well as having a lack of iron." He also expressed doubts it could have come from a satellite. "I don't think there'd be this high a proportion of cadmium. I asked the geology faculty member where it would come from, but he could not guess."

At this stage, all evidence pointed toward a terrestrial origin for the Midlandese Sphere, as cadmium is used in industry for high-speed bearings.

But wait — what about a quick phone call to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Houston?

A NASA spokesman told The Reporter-Telegram that while such a fallen object "could not be a NASA satellite or we'd know about it since we track them," cadmium indeed "is used probably by any country launching satellites."

And the evidence began to swing back toward the Williamsons' allegations.

For confirmation of which satellites, if any, might contain cadmium, the NASA spokesman referred The Reporter-Telegram to the Air Force Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., who referred The Reporter-Telegram to NORAD in Colorado, who referred The Reporter-Telegram to the foreign technology division at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, who said the foreign technology division was long-since defunct.

IT SEEMED LIKE a wild goose chase for a fowl that had laid a cadmium egg.

But at this point, the Smithsonian Institution came to the rescue, suggesting that NASA's geochemistry expert Everett K. Gibson Jr. be contacted.

The scientist, who analyzes more than 100 such objects sent NASA each year — of which only one turns out to be a "meteo-right and the other 99 meteo-wrongs," he says — was definitive in his telephone analysis:

"I know of no spacecraft item that is composed largely of cadmium," he said. "Now what it is, I couldn't tell without analyzing it...but I would say that it's probably not a spacecraft item because it's not composed largely of aluminum, and I know of no spacecraft item that is basically spherical."

There's the story. Match that one for intrigue and enigma, Mickey Spillane — an object cast out from heaven, illuminated by massive details, opposed by evidence, supported by counter-evidence, refuted by counter-counter-evidence that hints of a less dramatic genesis than being spawned by the limitless bounds of the universe.

Meanwhile, the Midlandese Sphere of cadmium — deadly poisonous to man — remains in Williamson's possession, pending possible in-person analysis by NASA.

It's the stuff dreams are made of, all right, along with metaphysical apparitions, haunted houses, UFOs and 20th Century dinosaurs. But is it any more real?

Williamson, for one, is sticking to his guns in saying it is.

"I know it did happen," he swears. "I'm not trying to blow smoke in your face."

comes, first, in getting the permit and, second, in getting the equipment delivered in time, Lowe said.

"The pumping equipment and electrical switching gear can take 18 months to get. But we can't go out for contracts until we know what that permit will be."

While the area looks like barren land now, a portion of the idea behind applying sewage water to the land is to experiment with what kinds of crops could be grown and harvested. For years, the effluent has been used for growing alfalfa near the sewage treatment plant. But there are strong indicators the kinds of crops could be expanded on Floyd's land.

Dr. Geoffrey Stanford, director of Agro-City Inc. near Dallas, indicated at a recent session with the City Council that several varieties of crops could be grown. In addition, he suggested a method called coppicing in which trees are planted and are harvested 20 years later. During their growing years, the trees would provide windbreaks for growing other crops.

STANFORD PREDICTS more cities will be turning to using the sewage water for farming purposes, rather than disposing of it through chemical treatment and he cited increasing energy costs as a factor to back up his theory.

Stanford's assistant, David Donahue, pointed out that Lubbock Christian College "is putting together one of the most innovative systems in the country."

Directing that program at LCC's Institute of Water Research is Dr. Dennis George, who has worked with land application of sewage water for six years. He has been involved with the LCC project about a year.

That project is funded through a $15 million grant from the Environmental Protection Agency and consists of two farms.

George said one of the farms is run by Frank Gray and he has used Lubbock's sewage water for 40-plus years for growing crops. Started in 1939, the farm was expanded over the years until it reached 2,440 acres. But Gray now is boxed in by other landowners. LCC has taken over the system and added a 3,900-acre Hancock farm to it.

The Hancock farm is about 18 miles from Lubbock near the town of Wilson, said George.

"Our system is a slow-rate land application system and we apply secondary treated effluent to 6,000 acres. The Gray farm uses flood irrigation and the Hancock farm has 22 spray center-pivot systems that move around in a circle," George said. Both farms grow cotton with the Hancock farm also producing oats and milo. "About a fourth of it is kept in crops the year-round."

THE EPA GRANT, he noted, "is the largest one awarded in the history of the EPA. It's a research and demonstration effort." Continuing, he said it's one of two studies being done in the world on effects such a disposal system might cause on the health of nearby residents. The other study is going on in Israel.

Past studies have shown no ill effects, said George, "and these two studies should put it to rest. We're testing about 450 persons who live in Wilson and around the Hancock farm."

Using sewage water for irrigation is the most viable use of the water, according to George, who pointed out that the western part of the country lacks an abundant supply of water. Applying sewage water to crops is a way "of putting it back into the environment and utilizing it."

Muskegan, Mich., he said, uses it to grow corn while other cites grow black-eyed peas with sewage water. Melbourne, Australia, "which has one of the largest land application systems in the world," grows alfalfa and oats and allows cattle to graze on the land, said George. The only requirement is that these cattle must be put into feed lots for three months prior to slaughtering for human consumption.

Hydrologist Joe Reed said crops which consume the highest amounts of nitrates are the choicest crops, such as alfalfa and bermuda grass. "Any crop will use nitrates, but these use more."

In determining what crops to irrigate with effluent, Reed said it comes down to a question of how much will the crop consume.

He noted that most of the water used on crops doesn't make it below the root system. With evaporation into the air and consumption by the crops, only about 10 to 15 percent of the water goes into the soil. "Any growing crop is predominantly water," Reed added.

Although Lubbock takes it's sewage through secondary treatment before applying it to the land, George said it can be used raw, which is the method utilized today in Israel.

"ISRAEL IS TAKING it raw to bring back the humus in the soil," noted George.

Midland is planning to use primary treated effluent and Lowe said the secondary treatment doesn't remove many more total dissolved solids. "Primary treated effluent is better for land use than secondary. It has soil enhancement properties that secondary wouldn't have. Most soil in West Texas is almost devoid of any organic matter. It improves if you add organics to it."

George supported Midland's proposal to use holding ponds to store the sewage water before applying it to the land.

"Lagoon systems followed by land application is a low maintenance system. It has a buffer capacity on days you can't irrigate," he said. Lubbock's system will involve lagoons, but those ponds aren't ready for use yet. George said the lagoons are old playa lakes which are being lined with native clay.

WITHOUT THIS LAND application system, Lubbock would be forced to go to tertiary, or third step, treatment. This additional step, said George, would cost the city 10 times more than the irrigation method.

Lubbock didn't get the grant and implement the system without first going to the state for a permit. The system was ready to start in June 1981. But the permitting procedure held them up until late December, according to George.

The Texas Water Commission won't allow Midland to violate the standards and contaminate the ground water, he contended. In scrutinizing the proposal, George said the state staff looks at two criteria — how much water the soil can take and how much nitrates the crop will take.

In summarizing the project, Midland's utility director Lowe said, "That water will go somewhere. All we're arguing about is how the process will be done. What the city is trying to do is find a place that will cause the least amount of problem for the least amount of people."

Scholarship applications accepted

ODESSA — Applications are beingtaken for the fall semester scholarship at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin from the Odessa branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW).

The $150 scholarship is available to any woman who plans to attend UTPB and who is a resident of Ector County or of an outlying community that does not have an AAUW branch.

Joyce Thompson, director of financial aid and placement at UTPB, said scholarship recipients are chosen on the basis of financial need, academic standing, intended course load and previous education or need of retraining.

Deadline for applications for the fall semester is April 15. Applications and further information are available in the UTPB Office of Financial Aid and Placement.

San Jacinto honor students listed

Thirty-two students at San Jacinto Junior High School were named to the honor roll for the fourth six-weeks.

Seventh graders making the list were Jennifer L. Allen, Catherine M. Anderson, Melanie C. Bell, Jill K. Bramlett, Trisha M. Carver, Griselda A. Casarez, Connie D. Culpepper, Perthelen Garnett, Holly K. Herd, Dana M. Jones, Paula C. Jones, Elizabeth Kallus, Missi Liscum, Brian L. Mackinlay, Lauri A. Marburger, Kim K. McKinnon, Kelly Nance, Tim B. Youth centers fighting cutbacks, too

—By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Instead of running off-campus for the lunch break, students at Lee High School take a short walk to the Lee Youth Center. Money brought in by students is one of the revenue sources for this center and the one at Midland High. Another past source of revenue will be terminated in 1983, but the Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Inc. board of directors hope that with continued student involvement and the Sustaining Membership Drive, the centers can remain open.

One portion of the revenue is brought in by the students, and they usually generate it during the lunch hours and after school.

But soon that source of income could be the sole factor in keeping the youth centers open.

In the past, United Way has contributed heavily to Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Inc. This year, due to cutbacks, United Way will give only $13,000 to the non-profit organization. And that sum will end United Way's involvement with the centers.

With a 1981 operating budget of $210,000 for the centers, the possibility of closing them could become quite threatening.

The two youth centers were formed in 1945 as the Midland Junior Canteen. Purpose of the organization is to provide a meeting place with wholesome recreation and entertainment with adult supervision for freshman and senior public and private high school students.

With pool tables, ping-pong, air hockey, foosball, video games and a juke box, both of the facilities are open to all students with interchangable memberships during lunch, after school, in the evenings and during the summer.

"AS LONG AS the students want to participate, we'll stay open," Marvin Rascoe, director of the Midland Youth Center, 1001 W. Illinois Ave., said.

However, Rascoe added, participation at his youth center, unlike that at Lee High's, has been decreasing.

"Lunch is the biggest thing (for generating money)," he said, "but we only serve about 250 kids per day.

"Last year we had 500," he added.

Only a small group of students frequents the Midland Youth Center after school, Rasco said. "We get about 40 kids in here, waiting for their buses, playing pool, pingpong or video games. They usually buy a few soft drinks and candy bars," he explained.

Across town, the lunch turnout is much better, Bill Collins, director of the Lee Youth Center, said.

"We're even up a little (in the number of students occupying the center during the lunch hours)," he said. "We serve around 450 kids who eat here, and more than that come in for a soft drink or to play the games.

"We've got about 500 kids in here during the two lunch periods," he added.

Collins said that one reason he thinks the students enjoy eating at the center is due to the convenience of it compared to leaving the area for a restaurant.

"I'D SAY ABOUT 90 to 95 percent of our students really want to be back at school in time," he said. "For that reason, a lot of kids stay around."

"We haven't had a lot of people after school because they are involved in sports," Collins said. "After school, we'll maybe just have 12 to 16 kids."

But, according to Collins, during the in-between seasons, such as between football season and basketball season, the after-school activity picks up at the center.

"We can have maybe 30 to 35 (students) after school during the off-seasons."

Both centers provide a place for dances and often are used for school-sponsored events and Junior Cotillion dances.

"We try not to schedule dances the same night at both youth centers," Rasco explained. "We try to split them up because memberships at either of the centers are interchangable."

"If I've had 60 people at a dance, it's been good," Rasco said.

"We could probably have a dance every Friday night and have 500 kids or so," Collins said. "We've had about 14 or 15 dances since August."

ALTHOUGH PARTICIPATION at the centers has it's ups and downs, the possibility of closing the centers has become more likely.

According to Sarah Neisig, publicity chairman for the centers, funds were generated in the past by proceeds from concerts. Verne Dwyer, chairman of the Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Inc., said in a letter sent to the parents of high school students that although the concerts were moderately successful, about half of the funds raised went to the entertainer.

Dwyer said the 18-member board of directors, which consists of nine parents from each of the high schools, "feels that all money donated by Midlanders should stay in Midland."

Instead of the concert, the board established a six-week Sustaining Fund Drive to give parents and other citizens an opportunity to make contributions to support the centers.

A total of $40,000 is hoped to be raised through the drive, which began March 1 and will continue through April 15.

—THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT—

Midland City Council

Midland City Council will take a look at two proposals for regulating activities at Wadley-Barron Park Lake when the panel meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers for its regular twice-a-month session.

Residents surrounding the lake appeared en masse at the March 9 meeting in voicing a strong protest to fishing and boating uses of the unfinished lake. Last week, 46 residents met with the Parks and Recreation Commission to work out a compromise.

According to Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation, two versions will be presented to the council, which can choose one proposal or come up with a third.

The commission listened to the ideas of the residents, which were endorsed by about 59 of those citizens, and then came back with a version which Kohout called slightly more restrictive than what the residents suggested.

Concerning fishing, the residents would like only those people 16 years of age or younger and 65 or older to be allowed to fish. And fishing days would be set aside only three days out of the calendar year.

The commission proposed restricting fishing to those 16 years of age or younger and only to fishing events sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department. The number of fishing days would be left up to the department, Kohout said.

Neither group would allow swimming or wading while the commission also vetoed scuba diving.

The residents' suggestions on boating took a more restrictive turn when compared to the commission's recommendations, according to Kohout.

Residents want to see boating limited to two days per month and between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Only non-profit organizations would be allowed and no one younger than 15 would be allowed unless supervised by a parent, guardian or instructor.

The commission would limit boating to persons not less than 15 unless accompanied by the aforementioned persons. But they didn't specify what days or time of day, said Kohout.

Both groups saw eye-to-eye on the model boating regulations, which would prohibit motorized model boats and require a retriever line on all the craft. No swimming or wading would be allowed to retrieve a boat.

In addition, the council will eye a contract draft with Colorado River Municipal Water District for financing water and sewer projects. Tentatively, those projects should total $23 million, with $3 million going for various water and sewer projects in the city and the remainder funding a sewage disposal system at J. "Timber" Floyd's land.

At 10:30 a.m. that day, the council will go to Tall City TV Cable Co. where they will be shown slides and given a presentation on that company's rebuilding program.

At 4:30 p.m., the council will hold a public hearing on an appeal from Thomas Hodge to construct a six-story bank on the southeast corner of Midkiff Road and Loop 250.

Annexation of Green Tree North's Addition, a 310-acre tract north of Green Tree Blvd., will be considered on first reading.

Hiring a consultant to provide retiming of Central Business District traffic signals to accommodate the one-way street system will be discussed by the council, which approved the one-way system several months ago. Implementation of the system should come in the next few weeks.

Also on the agenda are discussion of a school crossing at Midland Drive and Neely Avenue, consideration of rescinding a freight permit zone in front of the Paper Clip, a possible change order on remodeling a room at Midland Center, execution of a contract for ambulance service with Midland County and possible action on Yarger personnel recommendations.

County Commissioners Court

Midland County commissioners on Monday will consider a report by Betty Sheeler of the Midland Housing Association on four rehabilitation housing projects in the so-called windowpane area.

The projects are part of a $1.6-million federal grant to upgrade an economically disadvantaged section of south central Midland.

Other business to be discussed at the commissioners' 10 a.m. meeting in the Midland County Courthouse include:

—Consider appointment of officers and directors to the Midland Industrial Development Corp.

—Consider final approval of the Taylor Park lease from the city of Midland and authorizing County Judge Bill Ahders to execute the lease. The park is to be site of a $250,000 community day-care center in the windowpane area.

—Consider authorizing County Auditor Johnnie Thompson to issue a check to pay filing fees for the non-profit corporation of the day-care center.

—Listen to a report from County Road and Bridge Superintendent Albert Stewart.

—Consider a request by Jim Yeley for use of the Midland County Exhibit Building on March 19, 1983.

—Consider a request by Bill Saxton for use of the Midland County Exhibit Building on June 17.

—Discuss an insurance plan for Midland County.

—Consider approving a plat of Greenwood Estates.

—Consider pipeline adjustment of Mobil Pipe Line Co. on Farm-to-Market Road 662 from West Industrial Avenue to southwest of FM 1369.

—Consider final approval of payment of pipeline adjustment of American Petrofine on FM 662.

—Consider authorizing the county auditor to re-advertise for bids for asphalt.

—Consider changes in the Midland County purchasing policies.

MISD Board of Trustees

A report on the progress of construction and architectural designs of the new De Zavala Elementary School and the new Northwest Elementary School will be given at the regular meeting of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the administration building, 702 N. "N" St.

Architect Preston Geren will give the presentation on the schools, which are expected to be open for the 1983 fall semester.

Renovations and additions to other schools also are expected to be discussed.

Board members are expected to take action on recommendations for contract renewals of faculty members for the 1982-83 school year. The recommendations will take place in two categories: teachers and staff personnel to be reappointed and personnel to be appointed on the condition that certification requirements are met by Aug. 25.

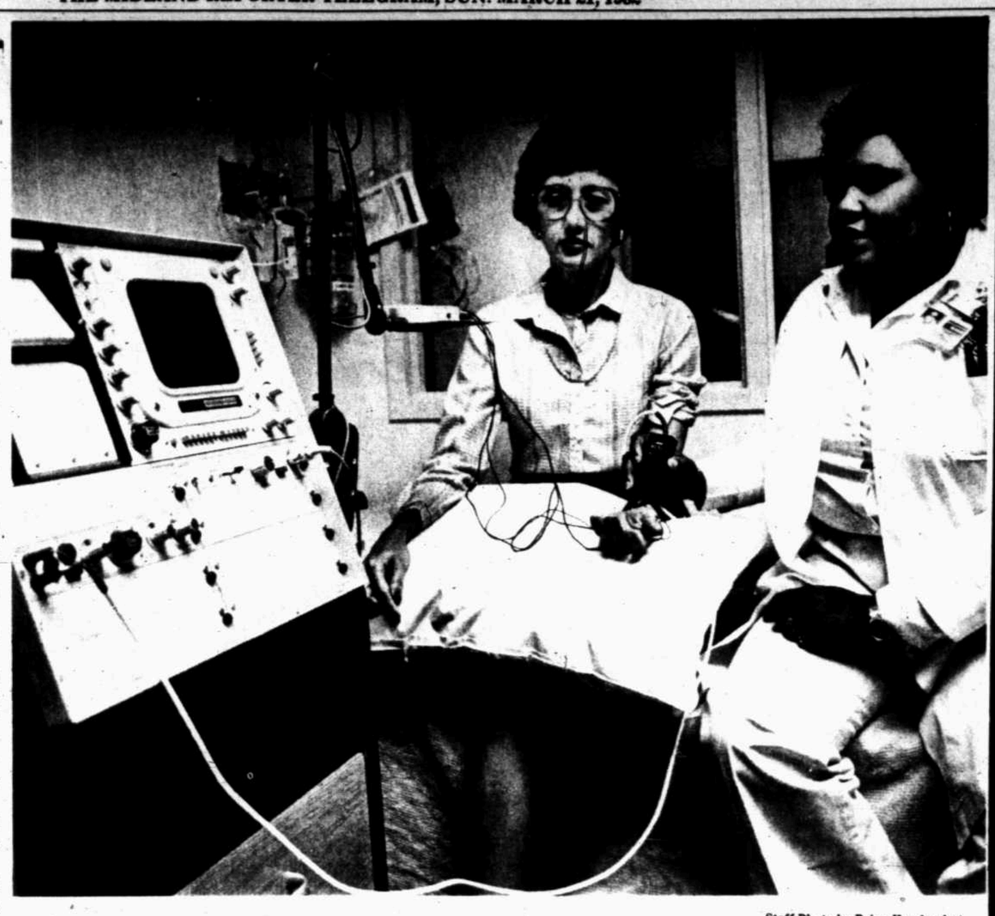

The summer school calendar and revisions to the program are expected to be approved by board members. With construction taking place at both of the high schools, staff members have recommended that summer school for secondary students be held at Alamo Junior High. The staff is also recommending that the elementary school program be changed to a six-week session at Bonham Elementary School. According to the agenda, the modification is necessary due to the new promotion and retention policy.

Other recommendations include special education summer school to be held at Bonham Elementary on a tuition basis, with parents providing their own transportation, and a 10 percent increase in tuition rates to increase the teaching salary 10 percent.

Trustees also are expected to approve gifts of a plain paper copy machine from Emerson Elementary PTA and four fold-up-roll-away cafeteria tables from the Travis Elementary PTA.

Requests by political parties for the use of various school facilities for the primary election and bids on janitorial supplies and duplicating paper are expected to be approved.

Board members are expected to meet in an executive session pertaining to personnel matters.

NOTICE OF TAX RELIEF AVAILABLE TO CERTAIN HOMEOWNERS OVER 65

Homeowners who were 65 years of age or older on January 1, 1979, and failed to receive their school district homestead exemptions in 1979 have until April 1 of this year to do so. In this way, elderly homeowners will be able to take advantage of the tax freeze associated with the $10,000 homestead exemption.

According to a law passed by the 67th Legislature, over-65 homeowners who were qualified for the school homestead "tax freeze" in 1979, but who did not apply for or receive their homestead exemption, may file an application with the chief appraiser of the country appraisal district in which the homestead is located.

Eligible over-65 homeowners in Midland County must make application to the Midland County Appraisal District, Suite 160, Dellwood Mall, Midland, Texas, before April 1, 1982

To qualify for the tax relief, a homeowner must have satisfied these requirements on January 1,1979:

*Been 65 years of age

*Used that home as his residence homestead

The chief appraiser of the Midland County Appraisal District will consider all applications and notify each applicant before April 15, 1982. If the application is approved, the chief appraiser will make an entry on the appropriate school district's 1982 appraisal records.

This entry will indicate the amount of tax the over-65 taxpayer should have paid in 1979, had he applied for and been granted the $5,000 general homestead exemption and the $10,000 over-65 homestead exemption. No refunds of taxes paid may be given for 1979, 1980 or 1981.

For 1982, the taxpayer's school taxes on his homestead may not exceed the amount of taxes the school district would have imposed on the homestead for 1979, had the taxpayer received his homestead exemptions. This frozen tax amount will remain the same as long as the homestead remains the same.

Permian General Hospital memorial fund honors Dr. Henry T. Leigh

ANDREWS — A memorial in honor of Dr. Henry T. Leigh, an Andrews physician, has been set up here. Dr. Leigh, a 64-year-old physician-surgeon who had practiced medicine in Andrews for 23 years, died last November.

A committee of Andrews citizens has been formed to raise funds to purchase needed equipment for Permian General Hospital in memory of "Dr. Leigh's many years of faithful service" to Andrews and area citizens.

Tax deductible contributions to the Leigh fund may be made to the Commercial State Bank, 113 W. Broadway St., Andrews, Texas 79714. Checks may be made payable to the Dr. Leigh Memorial Fund.

Water district sets training session

GARDEN CITY — The Glasscock County Underground Water District will hold a training session and field day April 2 to evaluate farmers' irrigation methods and pump efficiency. The session will begin at 9:30 a.m.

The session, to be held at the Hubert Frerick farm four miles east of Texas Highway 158 here, will be headed up by Leon New of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and by Jerry Walker of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service's irrigation team in Amarillo.

Alpine plans centennial celebration

ALPINE — This historic West Texas town will launch the celebration of its centennial, Fiesta 100, April 22-25 with a Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rodeo and ranch cowboy rodeo.

Several West Texas ranches have entered teams in the Big Bend Cowboy Round-up and will be competing in such Wild West events as team penning, team branding, wild-horse catching, wild-cow milking, team roping and bronc riding on April 24.

Ranches entering teams include the McIntyre and Morrow Ranch, Kokernot 06 Ranch, Reynolds X Ranch, Dyer's Rancho Espuela Cattle Co., Apache Adams' JA Ranch, Blakemore's 111 Ranch and the Means' Y6 and Moon Ranch.

Announcing the PRCA will be Tom Hadley of Mason.

Stock producer for the PRCA will be Mack Altizer's Bad Company Rodeo Co.

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Art Association is sponsoring an area art show April 16-18 at the new Big Spring Mall off Farm-to-Market Road 700. Judge will be Mike Thornton, who is head of the Fine Arts Department at Western Texas College in Snyder.

Categories in the show will be graphics, pastels, mixed media, water color, acrylics, oil crafts, sculpture, photograph, youth and class or copy work. There is no limit on number of entries or sizes. The Big Spring Art Association will take a 20 percent commission on all sales.

Entry fee is $4 for non-members of the BSAA and $3 for BSAA members. Entries are to be hand delivered to the mall from noon to 6 p.m. on April 16.

The show will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. April 18.

Entries may be picked up between 4:30 and 5 p.m on April 18.

Fifth annual Lamblast to be held soon

Cook-off activities in the fifth annual event will begin with the selection of Miss Lamblast '82 on April 16. The 18- to 30-year-old contestants are to be judged on beauty, personality, poise, speech, posture, walk and talk in an interview. Judging will begin at 5 p.m. April 16 in the Holiday Inn Holidome.

State University's Block & Bridle Club.

Those wishing to cook lamb in the annual festival may write to the Lamblast Committee, P.O. Box 2645, San Angelo, Texas 76902 by telephone Felicia Armstrong at 915-949-5092.

Trustees to discuss contracts

Contract renewals of Midland College personnel are expected to be approved during the regular meeting of the MC Board of Trustees at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the board room.

Trustees also will hear a presentation by a department head and the president's report from Dr. Jess H. Parrish, MC president.

The tax office error and correction list and the county appraisal district's tax refunds are also expected to be approved.

Ham radio operators in sight-saving network

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Vision is a precious gift of life.

And Midland amateur radio operators, who generically are called "hams" and who depend on sound waves for their avocation, are hooked up to an eye bank network. Through this hook-up they locate donated eyes of dead people and get the fresh eye tissue to the living who are blind or who are going blind.

"You know," said a ham who prefers to be identified by the call letters WB5-JLG, "it feels pretty good when you help save somebody's eyesight."

The hams, who generally are members of the American Radio Relay League (ARRL), routinely make national and international contacts in their search for donated eyes for waiting recipients.

Since 1962, the hams have assisted in about 11,000 sight-saving projects.

"The last four (donations) left Midland for Fort Worth," WB5-JLG said recently.

The hams contact fellow hams in distant cities about the availability of donated eyes for recipients. In the meantime, eye banks have maintained contact with eye surgeons — those who may remove the eye tissue, the cornea, and possibly the fluid from the eyes of the deceased and those who surgically will try to restore the sight of others with that tissue.

"Cosmetically, you'll never know it," WB5-JLG said.

In most cases, the cornea is transplanted within 48 hours of the donor's death. Those transplants are highly successful, he said.

The radio operator noted that "age is important" when it comes to the donor.

"I want to get across to young people to sign the papers (back of their driver's licenses or official donor cards) and to tell their families" about their wish to donate their eyes or other parts of their bodies to medicine or medical science.

In Midland, the eyebank is the Lions Eye Bank and is sponsored by the Lions Clubs International at 2203 W. Illinois Ave. Margie McCain, eye bank secretary, can be reached at 685-1550 or at home at 697-1633. Leonard Hanson, who may be contacted at 684-6544 or 684-7233, is one of the founders of Midland Lions Eye Bank, which is operated by the 25-county West Texas District 2A1 of Lions International.

Armando Rogelio Durrette Turro, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Defendant placed on probation for three years.

Rebecca Sue Reed, pleaded guilty to aggravated assault on a peace officer. Defendant placed on probation under a deferred judgment for five years and was fined $750.

Ben, E. Wheeler, pleaded guilty to criminal mischief. Defendant placed on probation for seven years and was ordered to pay $243.63 in restitution.

Tommy Lee Johnson, pleaded guilty to the lesser offense of unlawfully carrying a weapon on Dec. 6, 1981. Defendant placed on probation for one year and was fined $500.

Roderick S. McDougall, pleaded guilty to obtaining a controlled substance by forgery. Defendant placed on probation under a deferred judgment for two years.

Edsall Joe Brittain, pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated (DWI) on Dec. 5, 1981. Defendant placed on probation for two years and was fined $500.

Hugh Worthington Trammel, pleaded guilty to DWI. Defendant placed on probation for two years and was fined $500.

William Cornelius Fisher, pleaded nolo contendere to aggravated assault. Defendant placed on probation for three years and was ordered to pay $3,171 in restitution.

Army Leigh Moats, pleaded guilty to theft of property. Defendant placed on probation for two years and ordered to pay $425 in restitution.

George Poindexter, pleaded guilty to burglary of a building on Feb. 4, 1982. Defendant placed on probation for three years and ordered to pay $350 in restitution.

Eric Coleman, pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle on Jan. 25, 1982. Defendant placed on probation for one year and ordered to pay $559 in restitution.

Indictments Dismissed

Wanda Mauldin, indictment for attempted murder on Oct. 3, 1981, dismissed. The victim, Roy Keith Mauldin, does not desire to prosecute. Defendant and victim described the incident as an "accidental occurrence."

John Alvin Bell, indictment for murder on June 19, 1981, dismissed. Of the four eye-witnesses, one has died, another is not competent to testify, and two other witnesses have stated that the defendant was acting in self-defense.

Michael C. Loy, indictment for aggravated possession of a controlled substance on Dec. 23, 1981, dismissed. Defendant re-indicted.

Tracy Dale Barker, indictment for aggravated assault on a peace officer on Aug. 18, 1981, dismissed. Subsequent investigation has indicated that defendant had a "valid defense" for his actions.

Booker T. Green Jr., indictment for murder on Nov. 14, 1981, dismissed. Defendant re-indicted and was found guilty by jury of voluntary manslaughter.

Bruce Denson, indictment for theft of property on Dec. 21, 1981, dismissed. Victim says defendant has made restitution.

Robert Kyle Wells, indictment for forgery dismissed. Defendant pleaded guilty to theft of property and was placed on probation for 10 years.

Dusty Nelson Moore, indictments for burglary and theft dismissed. Defendant sentenced to five years in prison for burglary.

Raymon E. Laird III, indictment for theft of property dismissed. Defendant made restitution, and victim does not desire to prosecute.

Eric Coleman, indictment for theft of property on Jan. 25, 1982, dismissed. Defendant pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, was placed on probation for one year and was ordered to pay $559 in restitution.

Can you tell us how the Hogan Golf Course employee situation is structured?

Who is the "boss" at the course? Who hires the golf professional, his assistants, the greenskeepers, etc.? What is the salary of the golf professional and how does he share in profits from sale of beer, vending machines, restaurant, golf cart rentals and practice range?

Please advise whose responsibility is it to furnish the golfers with a course marshal for active policing of the golf course to afford the great many numbers of golfers acceptable etiquette and insure proper use of electric golf carts.

Thank you for not requiring our names because we are retired or semi-retired and can only afford to play on the public golf course. — Ten Retirees

ANSWER: Wayne Kohout, director of the Midland Parks and Recreation Department, reports there actually are two "bosses" at the course. One is Rex Worrell, the golf pro, who is in charge of the Pro Shop, golfing play and concessions, and John Haywood, who is the course superintendent in charge of patrolling, maintenance and development of the course.

The golf pro is hired by the Midland City Council, and is selected from bids for the position received from pros throughout the United States. The pro owns the golf carts, merchandise and is leaser of concessions and vending machines.

Kohout points out that the pro is not an employee of the city, but has entered into a contract agreement with the city for the operation. Kohout also said he does not have the exact figures for Worrell's salary, since he is self-employed and his income depends on several factors.

Worrell, according to Kohout, receives a stated salary plus a certain percentage of all the green fees which are received. In turn, Worrell presents to the City Council a percentage of the revenue from the use of golf carts and the sale of merchandise and income from the concessions. The concessions are owned partly by the golf pro and partly by the city.

The City Parks and Recreation Department is in charge of the policing of the course.

We have a situation in our neighborhood which we have been trying to have something done about for about a year.

There is a business being operated in our residential area. The company even advertises in the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory, giving the home address as the company's address.

We have notified the city of Midland on several occasions about the situation and have asked that something be done about it. We were told a letter had been sent to the company to notify them they would have to locate someplace other than a residential neighborhood. Nothing has been done, and the business keeps operating.

Another company also was operating in the neighborhood, but after receiving a letter from the city has ceased operation here.

Residents in the neighborhood are considering taking legal action on their own, if the city doesn't do something about this. — F.R.

ANSWER: Answer Line contacted Richard Hennessy of the city's Planning and Zoning Department, which now is in charge of such situations. Hennessy says the usual procedure is an inspection of the problem, and sending out a letter to notify the person or persons that the business will have to cease operations in the neighborhood. A check is made by an inspector, and after a certain period of time, if the business has not presented intentions of moving and does not follow through, a complaint is filed with the city attorney, and the case is presented to the Municipal Court.

Hennessy also pointed out the department is operating with a shortage of inspectors, which has slowed down the follow-through on such cases.

The city of Midland last week issued building permits representing investments of more than $8 million.

The bulk of that amount came in one permit, issued for the construction of a $5 million bank office and building to be situated at 3315 N. Big Spring. The owner is Claydesta Corporation.

Other commercial permits went to R. Contreras, 1221 E. Hamby, $1,500; Aquilla Aero, 8501-A Pliska, $300,000, and 3501 Earhart, $600,000; Midland America Bank, 4415 Northgate, $30,000; Billingsley Enterprises, 3325 W. Wadley, $5,424; and Griffin and Burnett, 201 Spring Park, $16,500.

Some $1.8 million in new home construction was represented, as permits were granted Marlin Simpson Corp., 2101 Wydewood, $110,000; Leonard Homes, 2402 Wydewood, $72,000, and 2100 Regal Place, $72,000; Harold Long, 4106 Gleneagles, $70,000; Larry Hambrick, 104, 106, 108, 110, 112, 114 and 116 A&M E. DIRT, SQUIRT AND QUIRT

Get your lawn off to good start by dethatching, fertilizing

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County
Extension Agent — Agriculture

About this time of the year home lawns need a boost to get them in shape for spring and summer. Three operations that can get your lawn off to a good start include dethatching (or scalping), fertilizing and applying a pre-emergence herbicide.

Dethatching a lawn in the early spring serves to revitalize it and promote the development of new growth. Dethatching mowers that slice the turf and bring organic debris to the surface for easy removal can be rented or purchased. These mowers are recommended for bermuda grass but not for St. Augustine grass. St. Augustine lawns should be dethatched by scalping the lawn in early spring just after the initiation of new growth. To scalp the lawn, lower the blade of the lawnmower ½ inch below the normal setting and mow the lawn in two directions. Remove the clippings after each mowing.

After dethatching or scalping, apply fertilizer to promote leaf and root growth. Fertilizers sold for use on turfgrasses are available in many different ratios as well as grades. The ratio refers to that ratio exisiting between the three major nutrients (nitrogen-phosphorus-potassium) N-P-K, while the grade refers to the percentages of total nitrogen (N), available phosphoric acid (P2O5), and soluable potash (K2O) which are guaranteed in the fertilizer.

Research has shown that most turfgrasses grow best when fertilized at a ratio for N-P-K of 3-1-2 or 4-1-2. Remember in our earlier discussion of soil nutrients that all our soils in West Texas contain ample potash and many of them have accumulated plenty, and in some cases, excess phosphorus.

If you don't have excess phosphorus (have your soil tested if not sure) the spring application can be formulas such as 16-4-4, 15-5-5, 25-3-3 or similar ratios.

Timing and rate of application are very important factors to consider when planning a fertilization program. Generally, light, frequent applications of fertilizers produces the best growth, especially on sandy soils. This is also especially true for the soluble (fast release) sources of nitrogen. When using a soluble source of nitrogen, apply ½ to one pound of actual nitrogen per application. For example, sometime in the next two or three weeks apply the following amounts of the above fertilizers: 6 pounds per 1,000 square feet of 16-4-4, or 15-5-5, or 4 pounds of 25-3-3. Do this again in September. Then during the summer months (every four to six weeks) apply five pounds of ammonium sulfate (21-0-0), skipping July and August. Reduce or increase these amounts slightly to achieve rate desired (how much do you want to water and mow?).

On cool season grass (tall fescue) apply the complete fertilizer (16-4-4, 15-5-5, 25-3-3) in early September and again in May. Then apply the nitrogen (21-0-0) during the winter months to provide color and growth desired.

Two to three pounds actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn on warm season grasses (bermuda and St. Augustine) for the season and applied in three to five applications will produce a reasonable color and growth if watered properly and will keep maintenance requirements to a minimum. If you increase this to five to six pounds actual nitrogen for the season, be prepared to water and mow a lot!

One other soil amendment may be helpful. Use five pounds of finely ground sulfur per 1,000 square feet in March and again in May or use iron sulfate (copperas) or chelated iron if you have chlorosis problems (yellowing between the leaf veins). This may be caused by lack of available iron (chemically tied up by excess phosphorus or alkaline soil condition or both).

To reduce crabgrass, foxtail, goosegrass, spurge and other warm season weeks apply a pre-emergence herbicide containing benefin (Balan), dacthal (DCPA) or bensulide (Betasan). Be wary of weed and feed combinations that contain 2,4-D, simazine or atrazine. In sandy soils these materials leach readily and pose a threat to the health to your trees and shrubs.

Cotton council chairman foresees bright future for nation's crops

MEMPHSIS, Tenn. — Cotton farmers may find themselves "sorely needing the ability to see today with the eyes of tomorrow" come spring, says Frank M. Mitchener Jr., chairman of the National Cotton Council's board of directors.

Though the annual U.S. textile mill use of cotton has declined from 8 million to 6 million bales in 10 years, the yearly export use has increased from 4 million to 7 million bales.

And Mitchener sees a modest growth in the domestic cotton market over the next five years. Just the growth of the world population by 420 million in five years will mean more cotton sales, he said.

Cattle association elects officers

FORT WORTH — Frates Seeligson, a Santa Gertrudis breeder from San Antonio, has been elected president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

TSCRA is a non-profit, cattle-producer organization which represents 14,100 cattlemen in Texas, Oklahoma and other states.

Seeligson, 59, is past director of the Santa Gertrudis Breeders International and runs registered cattle at Quien Sabe Ranch near Leeville.

Other 1982 officers of the association are John M. "Jack" Shelton III of Amarillo, first vice president; John E. Birdwell II of Lubbock, second vice president, and Don C. King of Fort Worth, secretary-general manager. Six new directors elected to the board are Tom Beard of Alpine, Coney C. Burgess of Amarillo; Hatch C. Smith of Llano, Vester L. Smith of Higgins and Laurence M. Lasater and James B. Sammons, both of San Angelo.

TAEX director takes on new task

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) since 1976, will leave the post Sept. 1 to head up a new doctoral program in Texas A&M University's department of agricultural education.

TAEX, which is part of the Texas A&M System, is headquartered on the A&M campus.

"His (Dr. Pfannstiel's) experience in extension education will be invaluable in developing the new doctoral program, which we envision as being the strongest in the nation," according to Dr. Perry Adkisson, deputy chancellor for agriculture for the A&M System.

Many cattle lost to poisonous plants

COLLEGE STATION — Poisonous range plants inflict losses of up to $100 million each year to the Texas livestock industry, according to Dr. Allan McGinty, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The losses are reflected in animal deaths, reduced animal performance and increased management costs.

Good soil moisture conditions in late winter and early spring can bring an increase in poisonous range plants.

High Plains farmers may be affected

LUBBOCK — Recommendations that will eventually come from U.S. Department of Agriculture special committee to study premiums and discounts under the Commodity Credit Corp. (CCC) loan program may have a multi-million-dollar effect on the future of High Plains cotton farmers.

The committee's purpose is to "study alternative methods of establishing value of premiums and discounts for grade, staple and micronaire for the Upland cotton loan program that will accurately represent true relative market values and reflect actual demand for U.S. Upland cotton."

Watt outlines cattlemens' 'hopes'

FORT WORTH — The only hope for cattlemen to be an independent economic force is for the government to cut taxes, reduce excessive federal spending and cut back on government regulations, U.S. Secretary of the Interior James Watt told members of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association here.

Watt, a cattleman himself, also said that U.S. President Ronald Reagan understands the nation's problems and needs.

"Reagan is a man of land," Watt said. "He understands that wealth comes from the land, and you have to take care of land and the water and the life that springs from it if you are going to have a strong and mighty nation."

Going back to the ancient ways of starting a fire are two young Boy Scouts who were demonstrating the art during the annual Chaparral District Scout Exposition Saturday at the County Exhibit Building.

Scouting skills

It was a look at life in the past and how it might be in the future when the Chaparral District Scouts put on their annual Exposition Saturday in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

About 2,000 Midland and Martin County youngsters were involved, with each troop setting up its own exhibits to demonstrate a variety of scouting skills.

Sliding backward in time, the Cub Scouts showed how to live in the manner of Indians, by starting a fire without matches, twisting together their own rope and constructing a tower without nails.

Also attracting eyes of the 2,000 to 3,000 visitors was the booth titled 75 Years of Scouting — Then 'Til Now, which was the project of Troop 152.

The scouts tried to provide something that would be of interest to almost anyone and of all age groups. There was the modeling show put on by Post 555, advanced first aid showed by Post 68, aviation and space projects, family games and booths focusing on communication.

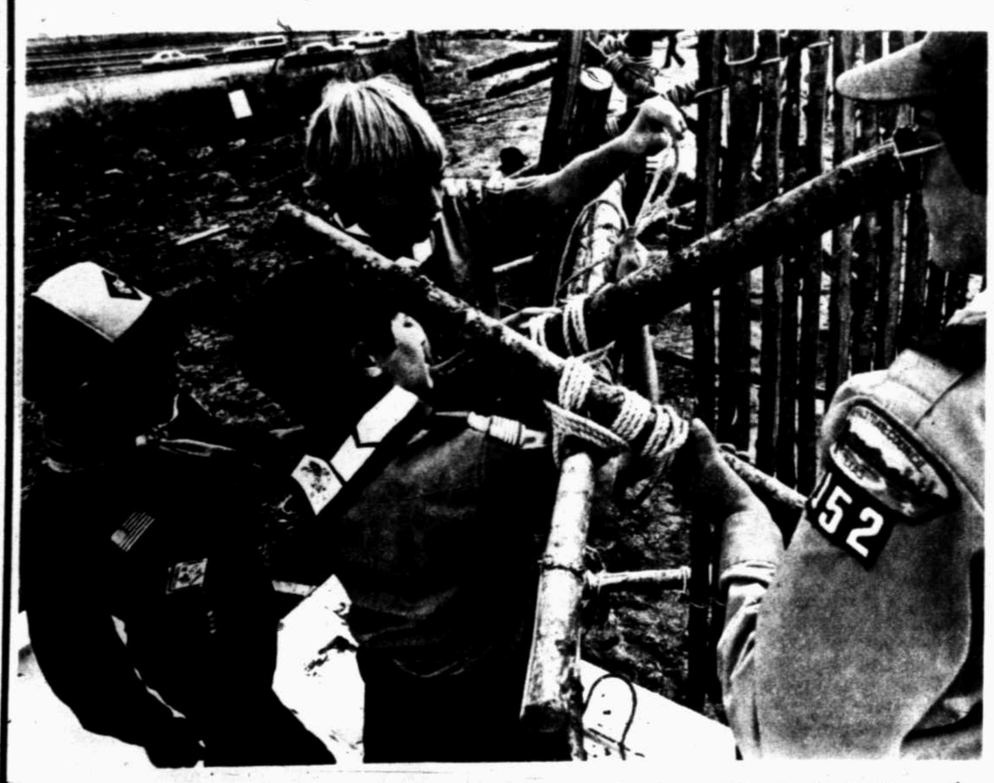

Tickets were sold by the scouts and 40 percent goes back into the individual units' treasuries.

Working as a team, three scouts from Greenwood Troop 53 twist strands to make a thick rope during the ropemaking exhibit.

Oaxaca — a cultural soul, a romantic heart

By PHILIP SOUSA
Copley News Service

OAXACA, Mexico — Ever-changing yet mindful of cultural riches that predate the dawn of Christianity by several centuries, this country abounds in romantic corners whose appeal extends beyond mere physical features.

To be sure, some of the most dramatic and diverse scenery on earth — rugged deserts to the north, dreamy beaches on two coasts, snow-clad peaks in the central region, thick jungles to the south and countless fertile highlands and valleys just about everywhere else — ranks high among Mexico's many lures.

However, sprinkled throughout this large land a number of hamlets, towns and cities deliver more than an attractive picture: They reward the sensitive visitor with a glimpse of the country's variegated soul.

A case in point, this 16th century state capital, a day's journey by road south of Mexico City, captivates the outsider with its exotic flavor, gentle pace, comfortable year-round weather and numerous colonial and Indian treasures. Moreover, Oaxacans are gentle and hospitable, handicrafts are among the nation's best, prices are moderate and tourism remains relatively modest.

Looming 1,200 feet above Oaxaca atop a carved-off mountain, the massive ochre stone is the remains of the heart of what was once the vast city of Monte Alban, adding up to one of the most awesome — and important — archaeological sites in the Americas. Experts from Mexico's National Institute of Anthropology and History say the origins of the town, which eventually spread over 25 square miles and was home to more than 40,000 people, date back at least to 600 B.C.

Built primarily as a holy city for their gods by the Zapotec Indians and their predecessors, the town was abandoned toward the end of the 10th century A.D. when they were defeated by a rival tribe, the Mixtecs. Over the next 500 years these Indians, who counted among them many master gold, copper and silver artisans, turned it into a vast burial ground.

The expertly repaired ruins of Monte Alban's great buildings one sees today are mostly of Zapotec origin. The awesome collection of magnificent solid gold masks, carved jade, bracelets of precious stones and other exquisitely crafted jewels and other objects found here in 1931 and now on display at the Regional Museum of Oaxaca are the work of the Mixtecs.

Housed in a former convent on Alacala Street in downtown Oaxaca, the museum has a number of important displays. Among them, several realistic tableaux depict the methods used by the region's Indians to hunt, feed themselves and execute their highly developed crafts, especially weaving. But the remarkable treasures discovered by accident in Monte Alban's tomb No. 7 are the big draw: hundreds of amazingly detailed and exquisitely crafted necklaces, headbands, rings and other mostly decorative objects made of solid gold, jade, turquoise, pearls, alabaster and bone. These treasures found in 1937 were buried around the remains of what experts believe was a prominent Mixtec chief and his companions.

Another treat, the surprising Church of Santo Domingo, awaits next door.

The austere facade of the early colonial structure, which was started in 1575, gives no clue to the very ornate baroque Spanish interior — specifically, the gold leaf and jade works on the vaulted ceiling. It took a century to complete this church which many rank as one of the finest examples of the style of the period.

Likewise located a short walk from the Zocalo or Plaza de Armas Square, the Rufino Tamayo Museum, established by and named after one of Mexico's most celebrated contemporary painters and muralists, appeals to visitors interested in pre-Hispanic ceramics, stone and other items.

As the hub of a region justifiably renowned for its crafts — notably the black, unglazed pottery made by the villagers of Coyotepec and the green, glazed items crafted at nearby Azompa — Oaxaca holds a handicrafts market every Saturday which ranks as one of Mexico's best. Artisans from throughout the state bring in their brightly colored woven blankets, belts, jackets, purses and various other items. The event is full of bustle and draws large crowds. Visitors who prefer a quieter milieu in which to shop opt instead for the permanent Juarez Market in the heart of town; here, scores of stalls sell all manner of handicrafts as well as food and there are usually a few weavers on hand doing their magic with bright threads and primitive looms.

Significantly, the market bears the name of a Zapotec Indian shepherd who was born in the hamlet of Guelatao north of here and went on to become one of the greatest figures in the country's history. Benito Juarez, widely regarded as Mexico's Abraham Lincoln, rose from humble beginnings to become a lawyer, governor of this state, a supreme court chief justice and then president of the republic. An impressive statue honors his memory high on a hill with a great panoramic view of the town. Across the street from the San Felipe Church downtown, a house in which he lived for several years has been turned into a museum.

The Zocalo warrants special note for it is one of Mexico's liveliest squares. More fluid social event than static spot, it draws everyone in town. Indians from the nearby villages also drop by and so do tourists. Here, under ancient laurel and other trees and around a wrought-iron gazebo bandstand and four splashing fountains, children play with their favorite toys, students share gossipy tidbits, couples give their romances a public airing and adults practice the art of conversation with boundless gusto. Balloon, pastry and other vendors abound as do shoeshine boys. The wooden clapper of the 16th century cathedral across the street counts the hours, but seemingly no one notices. Several times a week the state band fills the place with spirited music.

A spell on the square puts the outsider close to Oaxaca's heart — and should not be missed. But glimpsing this human parade from one of the many cafes all around it turns the zocalo into a captivating living stage. Three of the area's better restaurants — Cafe Guelatao, Cafe del Portal and Merendero Tule — are within sight of the plaza.

Time should be allotted for side trips to at least some of the artisans' villages and archaeological sites that dot the nearby valleys and mountainsides. In addition to the aforementioned pottery hamlets of Coyotepec and Azompa and the ruins of Monte Alban, these would include Santa Maria del Tule, about four miles east of here, where the attraction is a giant cypress tree said to be more than 2,000 years old; Tlacolula, three miles beyond, a little town with an interesting Sunday market; Yagul, 19 miles southeast of Oaxaca, where on a beautiful hilltop several important Indian ruins have been recently excavated, and the village of Mitla, just a few miles farther down the road, also known for its well-preserved and unique ruins.

Mitla, which lies just off the Pan American Highway or National Route 190, was a complex of ceremonial palaces that served as tombs for Indian kings and nobles. It, too, was originally built by the Zapotecs and later taken over and modified by the Mixtecs. Made with stone and mud, the walls of the various structures, believed to date back to the 12th century, are inlaid with perfectly fit pieces of stone arranged in a pattern strikingly similar to those used in ancient Greece.

Manifesto guards German identity

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BONN, West Germany — The so-called Heidelberg Manifesto reads like something straight out of Germany's Nazi past. It warns against the "infiltration of the German people by millions of aliens" and urges that the "spiritual identity of the German people be conserved on the basis of our Christian-Occidental traditions."

But the manifesto, named for the ancient university city, is no yellowing document from the Third Reich. It was written last July and circulated secretly until its existence was disclosed recently by West German newspapers.

And it is not the work of some outlawed neo-Nazi group. It bears the signatures of 15 university professors in various parts of the country who deny that they have any sympathy for Nazi racist theories.

Their concern is more contemporary — the massive increase in the number of foreigners settling in West Germany, people whose alien customs and traditions, the signers say, are undermining the German character.

There are 4.5 million foreigners among West Germany's 60 million people, and the number is expected to grow to about 7 million by the turn of the century.

One of the manifesto's signers, Prof. Harold Rasch, said that unless something is done, "by the year 2000 there will be only one German state left — the GDR," or Communist East Germany.

The issue is viewed by an increasing number of people as West Germany's most serious long-term problem and it is arousing increasing bitterness.

The aliens, though they generally take the most disagreeable jobs, are accused of depriving Germans of jobs at a time of growing unemployment, which is expected to reach 2 million in the near future.

They are accused of undermining German youth through their involvement in narcotics brought in from the Middle East and Far East. Their life styles are condemned as contrary to the German sense of orderliness and cleanliness.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and others are alarmed by the situation.

"There is a tendency among millions of Germans to blame foreigners for all our problems," Schmidt said recently in Hamburg, at a meeting of his Social Democratic Party. "This reminds me of the cheap excuse of the 1920s to blame the Jews for everything. For God's sake, let us not feel this way too."

Yet Schmidt went on to say:

"We have to say clearly and honestly that we just cannot take any more foreigners into our country, except those who have reason to apply for political asylum. It doesn't make sense to allow people into our country who immediately make more money through welfare and unemployment aid than they would make in their home country working 45 hours a week."

Welfare benefits available to foreigners are a major cause of resentment against them, especially those who have flooded into West Germany from poverty-ridden countries like Pakistan and Sri Lanka seeking political asylum.

What to do about the situation has become an issue in the Bundestag, or Parliament. Schmidt's Social Democrats and their coalition partner, the Free Democrats, agree with the opposition Christian Democrats on the need to halt the influx, but they disagree on how to go about it.

The conservative Christian Democrats want tighter restrictions on immigration and stronger enforcement of a political asylum law that is the most liberal in the world.

A well kept secret

Best of Mexico beach resorts

By BILL FREDDE
Special to The Reporter-Telegram

IXTAPA/ZIHUATANEJO — As our sleek Texas International jet began its smooth descent to the new airport below I recalled my first visit to this area a decade ago. Unlike the pleasant two and a half hour flight from Houston I had just experienced, I had arrived tired and hungry after a grueling eight-hour jeep ride from Acapulco.

In those days Zihuatanejo was one of those well-kept travel secrets, an unspoiled haven whose existence was known internationally, but only to a select few. It had about 3,000 inhabitants, not too much electricity, no telephones and half a dozen small hotels that catered to those few travelers who had discovered its rustic charms.

Then in 1970, FONATUR, a tourism development arm of the Mexican federal government, selected a 15-mile stretch of coastline known as Ixtapa, just up the coast from Zihuatanejo, for the site of a major tourism complex.

Everything for Ixtapa was carefully planned and projected, from pre-investment studies and ecological balance to logistics and labor supply. Roads, drainage, water supply and electric power were put in. Robert Trent Jones was given the assignment of designing an 18-hole professional golf ccurse, which was laid out long before the first hotel was finished. Beachfront lots were sold to investors and hotel firms. The old airstrip at Zihuatanejo was replaced by a modern international airport only 20 minutes from Ixtapa.

However, unlike Cancun, Ixtapa has not received a great deal of publicity and even today not too many travelers are aware of this small relatively secluded resort.

But, I believe Ixtapa/Zihuatanejo just may be the best of all the Mexican beach resorts. Golden girls in bikinis, a fringe of writers and artists, the first trickle of celebrities seeking privacy, the ingredients are all here. So I predict that in a very short time Ixtapa/Zihuatanejo will become the mecca for water babies, sun worshipers and lovers of the laid-back life style.

Located only 125 miles up the coast from Acapulco it is actually two tropical resorts in one: Ixtapa, a small, relatively secluded resort located on a breathtakingly beautiful six-mile, palm-fringed bay at the foot of green-clad mountains and Zihuatanejo, a lazy, old fishing village that has been carefully renovated and restored with loving care for its traditional charms. This unbeatably dazzling duo of old and new fashioned vacation life-styles has a melody and rhythm that is guaranteed to soothe even the most severe case of frazzled nerves. Zihuatanejo's time-worn colonial charm and Ixtapa's sparkling 20th century comfort do something for every vistor's soul — after a few hours strolling Zihuatanejo's clay-tilled streets or lazing on Ixtapa's sun-drenched beaches, the pent-up tension of the jet-paced outside world are replaced by a tranquil attitude of "mananaism."

Even though it has passed through the "discovered" state, the area still has a relatively unbothered and uncluttered atmosphere — but not for long.

New hotels, restaurants and shops are going up quickly . . . and no wonder the area has so much charm, it could give some away and be ahead. If they gave out prizes for places with spectacular sunsets Ixtapa would win in a breeze. It's fast getting a reputation as a place to grow a beard and comb the beach instead of your hair.

Our small group of travel writers, like a great many of the U.S. visitors to the area, had arrived via one of the Texas International Airlines jets which now fly direct from Houston to Ixtapa/Zihuatanejo every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

We are here to checkout the newest addition to Ixtapa's line-up of super hotels, the Camino Real Ixtapa. The Camino Real is separated from the resort's other hotels by a low hill. Its 450 guest rooms, restaurants, swimming pools, meeting rooms and tennis courts are sprawled across the hillside, making it an ideal retreat for lovers of privacy and seclusion.

At the Camino Real, each of the guest rooms is part room, part terrace and part sundeck. Every room overlooks Vista Hermosa (Beautiful View) Beach, offering guests complete privacy for sunning in the hammock or sipping a tropical drink in the shady coolness of the terrace.

The luxurious "La Esfera" offers sumptuous international cuisine under the stars or inside. After dinner, the room slowly and magically is transformed into a nightspot, where drinks and disco dancing are on the menu until 4 a.m.

For those whom sports are an importat part of a vacation, the Camino Real offers the best of everything, both on land and water.

Three minutes from the hotel is Ixtapa's 18-hole par 72 Robert Trent Jones, Palma Real Golf and Tennis Club. Rolling expanses of green lawns surrounded by tall coconut palms and dotted with water holes and two blue lakes take players right out to the edge of the Pacific Ocean. The club house has a good restaurant, bar, lockers and showers, with pool and some fine tennis courts adjoining.

The Camino Real has four lighted championship courts located on the south side of the hotel. A resident pro and pro shop on the hotel grounds offer complete services to players.

In addition to the private ocean beach, the hotel has 8,000 square feet of magnificent fresh water pools. Four pools, connected by cascading waterfalls, are sculpted into the hillside south of the hotel.

If unhurried beachcombing or acquiring a golden tan is your wish, Ixtapa has almost 24 miles of almost virgin coastline, with coves, bays and cliffs to explore. The sand and surf make you want to stay on the beach all day and the glorious sunsets make you never want to leave.

Jet-setters fly to exotic weekend

By JACK BIESTERFELD
Copley News Service

Ever dream about being a jet-setter?

You know, those chic people who fly off to exotic places for a weekend on a whim. The people who walk into the office with golden tans from three days on a tropical island. Or the person who just happens to mention the art museum in Amsterdam he visited yesterday.

Well, you don't have to be rich to fly off to faraway places. The glamour and glitter of Las Vegas, palm-lined sand beaches on a tropical island, dancing till the wee hours in the moonlight aboard a cruise ship, and even a taste of the cultural treasures of Europe are available to anyone who has three or four days to spend.

With the myriad of charters, package plans and special air fares, a long weekend at an exotic destination is not as expensive as one might think. Since there are so many options and plans available, a good travel agent is almost essential in picking the right one.

CRUISE THE BAHAMAS: Bargain for a new hat or purse handmade by the natives in the straw market. Explore an old stone fort complete with dungeon. Explore the ocean bottom in a glass-bottom boat. Go scuba diving or snorkeling off a coral reef. All this and more are the Bahamas.

Because the islands are less than a hundred miles from Miami, they are a favorite quick getaway spot. A flotilla of cruise ships offer three- and four-day cruises to the islands. The three-day cruise generally leaves Miami Friday afternoon and the fun begins immediately with a gala captain's dinner, followed by a floor show, casino gambling and dancing to early morning.

Four-day cruises leave Monday afternoons and return Friday mornings, and add the island of Freeport with its nightclub, casino and shops.

Rates vary widely, depending on accommodations. Cruises on Costa Cruises' Flavia or the Amerikanis from Fort Lauderdale, for instance, run as low as $235 a person, double occupancy, for an inside cabin on a lower deck for the three-day cruise to $665 or more for a deluxe suite on a four-day cruise. Air fare to Miami is extra. Some cruise lines offer one or two additional days in Florida for a few dollars extra.

FLY THE BAHAMAS: For those who would rather fly directly to the islands instead of cruising also can enjoy the same island delights. Instead of staying on the ship, they stay at one of the Bahamas' many luxury resorts.

Typical of the resorts is the Holiday Inn on Paradise Island, which offers a giant freshwater swimming pool with island bar in the middle, a gorgeous white sand beach, lighted tennis courts, nightclub, sailboats, scuba lessons and much more.

Through Thomson vacations, one of the economy tour brokers, vacationers can spend three nights and four days in the Bahamas for $449, which includes accommodations, round-trip air fare from Chicago, tips, transfers and more. A four-night package is $47 more.

LAS VEGAS GLITTER: For a star-studded weekend amid posh surroundings, fly off to Las Vegas for a few days. Since most package plans are paid in advance, it doesn't matter if you lose your shirt in the casinos, because at least you can get home again.

For as little as $41.50 each for double occupancy, visitors get two nights in the Landmark Hotel downtown, tickets to a show and two drinks, a welcome cocktail, casino bonus book and more. Air fare is extra.

Or for an all-inclusive tour, MIT Vacations offers a three-day tour, including air fare and three nights lodging, for as little as $259. Departures are at almost any time, such as Wednesday to Saturday, Thursday to Sunday or Friday to Monday. A four-day midweek special is also offered. These budget weekends, although not overflowing with frills, leave more money to see stars such as Barry Manilow or the gala showgirl reviews such as Lido de Paris. And, of course, there is the gambling.

A GLIMPSE OF EUROPE: Perhaps one of the best travel bargains, and one of the most unusual, is a weekend in Europe for only $475, including air fare. The entire package is much less than most people pay for air fare alone to the continent.

The European weekend is offered by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines. For their $475, travelers get round-trip air fare from Chicago, three nights accommodations at the five-star Crest Hotel in Amsterdam, continental breakfast each day, transfers from the airport, a canal tour and a culture card that gives free admission to 170 Dutch art, historic and special interest museums and other Netherlands attractions.

An extra day is $14 more, and single supplement is $6 a day extra. The weekend starts with a flight out Friday and return Tuesday or Wednesday.

JAMAICA HOLIDAY:
This lush tropical island, once one of the most popular in the Caribbean, is making a comeback after several years of political unrest. This is fortunate because it has more to offer for the avid sightseer than nearly any other island. There is rafting down a jungle river on a bamboo raft, a festive outdoor feast on a beach lit by torchles, a refreshing climb up a waterfall, lush mountains and white sand beaches.

Thomson offers three-day trips to the island for as low as $359, including air fare from Chicago, hotel for three nights at a low-cost hotel, a welcome party, airport transfers and tips. A similar four-day trip costs $20 more. Departures are Saturdays for the three-day and Tuesdays for the four-day trips.

TRAVEL

Plan introduced to develop marketing

RUIDOSO, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Border Commission has introduced a plan to develop a tourism marketing program aimed at drawing Mexican tourists to New Mexico.

Commission Chairman Ray Sadler made the proposal, which also is aimed at funneling American travelers to Mexico through New Mexico, Thursday at the board's regular meeting here.

Sadler's plan would link $10,000 from the state's tourism and travel division with matching funds from individual southern New Mexico communities.

The plan included using lodgers' taxes collected from travelers who stay in motels throughout the state to form the base for the communities' contributions.

Pyramids offer visit to antiquity in Mexico

By HUGH GRAMBAU
Copley News Service

The hopeful vendor held up the glistening black obsidian statue of the rain god Tlaloc and saw the glint of longing in my eyes.

"It's my first sale of the day. I'll let you have it for 400 pesos," he said.

The elegance of the highly polished hand-carved stone was undeniable and, at $15.20, it would have been a handsome trophy for anyone who had just finished climbing to the top of Mexico's 140-foot Pyramid of the Moon.

But there was still the 200-foot Pyramid of the Sun to go and there were, of course, many specialty shops on the modern outskirts of Teotihuacan — the first major urban development in the Western Hemisphere.

After politely thanking the vendor, I went on with my guide, Julio, down the Avenue of the Dead — a fantasy passage of successive stone altars, honeycombed temples and red-toned frescos that connects the two massive and magnificent wonders of antiquity, the Pyramids.

"You should have offered him 300 pesos ($11.40)," said Julio, "That's how you're supposed to do it."

In fact, that's probably how the mysterious Teotihuacan Indians did it 2,000 years ago, long before the Aztecs founded their temples 28 miles to the south, and 1,500 years before Hernan Cortez brought European culture to Mexico.

Teotihuacan — "the place where men become gods" in the Aztec language of Nahuatl — was founded on agriculture and obsidian workshops which provided the basis for a flourishing commercial trade.

Historically, the city overlapped and rivaled Imperial Rome in its architecture, art and commerce. By the year 450, when Rome was in full crumble, Teotihuacan reached an estimated population of 125,000, although some suggest it may have gone as high as 200,000.

Crops were irrigated by canals, fed by elaborate dams and reservoirs. The farmers tilled the fields during the day and returned to their stone houses in the city at night, according to anthropologists.

Commerce attracted Indian groups from other parts of Mexico, obsidian quarries were maintained far from the city, and the influence of Teotihuacan spread from central Mexico to Guatemala, affecting the Mayan culture to the southeast.

At its peak, the peaceful commercial giant was a tourist attraction, and some of the visitors apparently stayed. One section of the city was a Oaxacan barrio, according to anthropologists, who point to burial customs followed there.

The reason the natives of Teotihuacan are mysterious is because in the mid-700s, at the height of their artistic and political influence, they disappeared.

What modern men know of their religion and social order comes to us through the eyes of the late arriving Aztecs, who gave their own names to the abandoned metropolis with its temples, houses and pyramids.

"According to one theory," said Julio, who studies such things at the School of Tourism at the University of the Valley (of Mexico), "every 52 years they completely destroyed the city, then the priests consulted the gods to see if the signs were good for the future."

The pyramids, temples of the jaguar, butterfly (Quetzalpapalotl) and the famed plumed-serpent man-god "Quetzalcoatl," have been painstakingly restored to resemble their original proportions and form. Plumed sea shells, jaguars, birds and priests embellish pillars and pediments.

"They say Quetzalcoatl might have been a Viking," said Julio of the humanist-poet-god figure who played a prominent role in Mayan and Aztec religious thought, as well as that of Teotihuacan.

Many of the original frescoes that covered temple walls as well as sides of the pyramids are on permanent and protected display at the Museum of Anthropology in Mexico City.

The road to Teotihuacan from Mexico City goes north past Pachuca, Ecatepec and Lake Texcoco.

The urban landscape of the federal district and fast-urbanizing countryside of the State of Mexico is not the most beautiful scenery the area has to offer. And the first glimpse of the chain-link fence surrounding the entire site does not inspire confidence.

But the fence is mercifully invisible from inside, where chattering ladies wearing round straw sombreros sell soft drinks from metal tubs containing blocks of ice, while others sell jewelry, brightly painted ceramics or obsidian statues.

Clusters of humanity spread out along the Avenue of the Dead. People climb in antlike files up the stepped faces of the pyramids — and this could be Shangri-la.

At night, two sound and light shows — one in English and one in Spanish — re-creating the world of Teotihuacan are presented on the Plaza of the Moon.

The site is large, surrounded by a road 4.5 miles long. It is a good place to wear hiking boots or comfortable shoes. Buses leave every half hour from the Terminal Central del Norte, making one stop to pick up passengers at the Indio Verde Metro stop.

Teotihuacan is worth a visit, with or without a climb to the top of either pyramid. "A climb to the top of both on the same day could result in a bad case of sore leg muscles," explained Julio.

Scholarship awarded

Jeannine Acker of Monahans has been awarded a scholarship to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin by the Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation.

Mrs. Acker ranked first in her graduating class from Rotan High School in 1955 and has continued her education through Odessa College, maintaining a 4.0 grade-point average. She is now attending UTPB.

The scholarship provides $400 a year and is awarded on the basis of scholastic achievement, according to Foundation officials. Honor students who wish to attend Howard, Midland, Odessa, New Mexico and Western Texas junior colleges — or UTPB — are invited to apply to the Foundation through the financial aid offices of those colleges.

Application can be made at any time during the student's college career or as an honor graduate of an accredited high school. Students reaching the university level may be eligible for additional funds over and above the $400 per annum grant.

Lodges plan joint meeting

Midland Lodge 623 and Acacia Lodge 1414 A.F.& A.M. will co-sponsor a meeting of Scottish Rite Masons Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Masonic Temple on West Wall Avenue.

A team of Scottish Rite Masons from the Lubbock Consistory will present the "Benedict Arnold Episode." This episode depicts the efforts of Benedict Arnold to regain his citizenship and to be reinstated in his lodge after being declared a traitor by the federal government in 1780.

Arnold was tried for treason in December 1779 and the verdict of guilty was confirmed by Congress in January 1780. Due to this verdict of guilty, his plea was rejected by his lodge.

All Scottish Rite and Master Masons are urged to attend.

Cards beat UAB

Georgetown buries OSU

By The Associated Press

Awesome Georgetown, led by slick guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, and 1980 champion Louisville, sparked by reserve Charles Jones, won regional championships Saturday in the NCAA basketball tournament and advanced to the Final Four.

Georgetown, ranked sixth nationally, crushed No.4 Oregon State 69-45 in the West Regional title game at Provo, Utah, as Floyd destroyed the Beavers with 22 points, after No.20 Louisville, with Jones hitting seven free throws in the closing minutes, downed 17th-ranked Alabama-Birmingham 75-68 in the Mideast Regional championship game at Birmingham.

The other two regional finals will be played Sunday, with No.1 North Carolina facing unranked Villanova in the East at Raleigh, N.C. and a pair of unrated teams, Boston College and Houston, meeting in the Midwest at St.Louis.

Those two winners will play in the national semifinals, with Georgetown facing Louisville in the other semifinal March 27 at New Orleans. The championship game will be held March 29.

FLOYD, connecting on medium-range jump shots and breaking free for uncontested layups, helped hot-shooting Georgetown, 29-6, reach the Final Four for the first time since 1943, when the Hoyas lost to Wyoming in the championship game.

Georgetown, dominating throughout, burst to a 42-25 halftime lead and never was seriously challenged. The cat-quick Floyd scored 18 points during the decisive first 20 minutes and 7-foot freshman center Patrick Ewing contributed 11 of his 13 points.

THE HOYAS shackled Oregon State with a swarming, pressure defense and the intimidation of the big, powerful Ewing.

MC goes two overtimes to win NJCAA title, 93-88

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

HUTCHINSON, Kan.—The Midland College Chaparrals proved here Saturday night that there is absolutely nothing to winning a National Junior College Athletic Association title. All they had to do was to beat Miami Dade-North, 93-88.

There are a few facts you have to forget to believe the above. Like taking double overtime to turn the trick with the only two generals on the team, Puntus Wilson and Spud Webb, sitting out the war with fouls. Like playing without starter Lance McCain, whose cracked vertabra made him miss the last two games. Like the Falcons being ranked No. 1 in the country and unbeaten to boot, going into the game while owning two of the most sought-after juco athletes in the land in 6-10 Yvon Joseph and cardburner Emery Atkinson.

YOU COULD see it on the faces of the crowd of a sellout 7,600 that MC was given up for dead when the giant Joseph tied the game at 77 with 11 seconds left to play and Wilson, who had scored 25 points on the night, and who had helped keep Joseph limited to a mere 13 points, went out of the game at the 4:42 mark of regulation.

The national title was going to Florida. That was the concensus. But the Chaps survived the first overtime when Webb, who ended the game with 36 points, knotted the score again at 81 to force the second overtime. There was hope that the national crown could still come to Midland.

WEBB AGAIN put on a charge in the second OT by opening with a jumper while Jerome Crowe followed with a free throw for a three-point margin. Atkinson, who had 29 for Dade, cut the margin to with 3:20 left, but Webb again answered with a layup over 6-10 Joseph in the lane and came back with a steal and court-galloping layup that could have been a dunk if the game hadn't been so tight. The results, however, were the same as the Chaps led 88-83 and seemed to have things under control.

But the Falcons didn't crumble and moved to within 88-86 before Justin Morrett hit a free throw with 32 seconds left to keep Dade somewhat at bay. Still, the Chaps tempted fate when Webb, who was named Small Player-of-the-tournament, fouled out with 24 seconds left and the Chaps leading by only three. Atkinson missed his free throw and 6-6 Chester Smith, who tossed in 20 points for the night, put the game away with two crucial free throws with 20 seconds left.

IT WAS close all right, but MC coach Jerry Stone still had humor left after the fist-clencher, "There for a while we were making up plays as we came down the floor. I'm not sure some of the people we had out there had ever seen each other before."

But it's easy to joke when the national title is in the hip pocket. But how did Jerry feel going into overtime with the tournament's MVP in Wilson sitting on the bench?

"For some reason, I didn't feel depressed. We performed miracles all year and you get to the point where you expect one from these kids," said Stone. " And then we lose Spud, but the kids didn't seem worried. They just looked at me for instructions like nothing was wrong at all."

However, one Chap admitted feeling nervous in the overtime periods. Smith, who canned four critical free throws in the second OT, said, "Man, I was scared to death when I went to the line that last time. My heart was beating hard, but I guess I did the job. This was great. I'm coming back here next year," said the freshman.

WILSON, WHO watched the overtime from the bench after hitting 11 of 18 shots on the night, said, "I really didn't worry about me being out of the game. Oh, I wanted to be playing, but I knew someone off the bench could come in and do the job as good as I could have."

About getting the MVP award, Wilson said, "All of this—getting the national championship and MVP—is a lot to happen at one time, but I worked hard for this and I really feel I deserve it. It feels great."

Webb wasn't concerned about his fouling out in the second overtime either. "I felt we already had the game in the bag when I went out.," he said. "Despite 24 seconds left and only a three-point lead with Dade at the free throw line."

"I did feel like I had to take charge when Puntus went out of the game and I did get eight points in the overtimes. This the biggest thing that ever happened to me."

MC LED most of the way, but Dade kept it close, never falling behind more than eight points in a game where Hutchinson's fans obviously had adopted Midland College. They cheered every point and went crazy when Webb would hit a point. They didn't get the sought-after dunk from Spud in this one, but he captured their hearts. In fact, the Chaps won the town over all week.

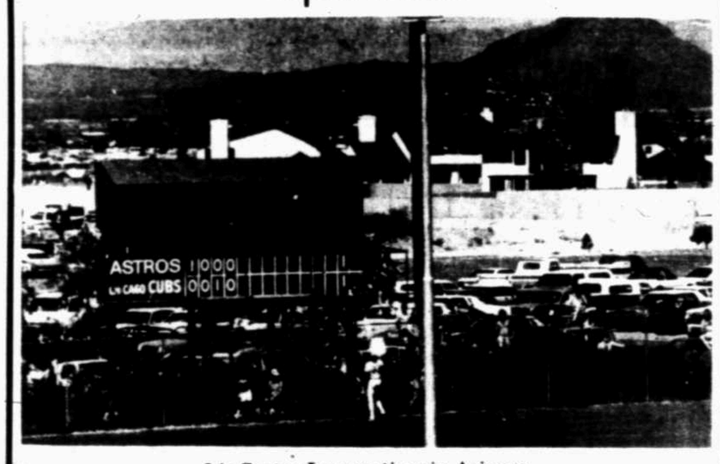

"This is such a great place to play, because the people understand basketball s well," Stone said. "I didn't hear the Dallas Cowboys mentioned one time while we were here and you know that's kind of refreshing."

Miami Dade-North—Yvon Joseph 5-3-3-13; Tracy Stringer 3-2-5-8; James Webb 3-0-4-6; John Jones 4-0-3-8; Kenny King 0-0-3-0; Malcolm Williams 6-4-4-16; Craig Jay 3-2-2-8; Emory Atkinson 12-5-4-29. Totals 36-16-28-88.

Midland College—Spud Webb 10-16-5-36; Puntus Wilson 11-3-5-25; Chester Smith 7-6-3-20; Rodney McChriston 3-0-1-6; Jerome Crowe 1-1-2-3; Justin Morrett 0-3-2-3; Chuck Robinson 0-0-0-0; David Thompson 0-0-1-0. Totals 32-29-19-93.

Rebels capture Mustang Relays

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — Though Midland Lee and Odessa Permian weren't alone in the 5-A competition of the Mustang Relays, by looking at the final team totals you'd almost think they were.

The Rebels and Panthers put on a performance for track fans at Mustang Bowl here Saturday that left the rest of the field far in their tracks. It was such a show in fact, that the varsity team title wasn't decided until the final race of the day, the 1600-meter relay.

Lee and Permian were tied for team honors with 149 points going into the final event and with only one entry per team, the highest finisher in the event would also claim the team trophy.

THE ENTIRE Rebel team had a lot of enthusiasm and confidence going into the race because two of their runners had placed one-four in the 400-meter run earlier in the day and a third had won the 100-meter run.

After the first leg, the Rebels never looked back as the team of Darren Williams, Troy Barber, Carlton Johnson and Sam Morney ran through the four-lap race in 3:19.3 to beat out Permian's Thurman Hines, Mike Christensen, Lorne Isham and Randy Ensch by seven seconds.

The victory gave them the title by four points, 169-165. Far back in third place was Hobbs with 95 points.

In junior varsity competition, it was the same two teams, Lee and Permian, far out-distancing the rest of the field only this time it was the Permian underclassmen that came out on top by

Pack takes two 1sts at Big Spring

BIG SPRING—Midland High's Troy Bush took first place in the high jump and the Bulldogs also won the mile relay in the ABC Relays here Saturday as the Purple Pack took sixth in the seven team field.

Bush's winning jump was six feet, two inches while the relay quartet of Chuck St. Germaine, Earl Phillips, Anthony Adams and Rick Madrid turned in a 3:22.8. Byrone Campbell took a second in the discus with a 148-11.

Todd Crawford took second in both hurdles and ran on the second place 1600 meter relay team for Midland's JV team. His time in the 300-IM hurdles was 41.9 and he teammed up with Ross Petree, Jesse Diaz, and Kane Resignol for a 3:43.6 in the 1600 meter relay.

Also in the JV competition, MHS finished one, two in the 3200 meters with Jesse Diaz winning in 10:50 and Jaun Salinas second in 4:58.0. Randall Swindell won the long jump with a leap of 19-10 and Chris Rooker was third in the high jump at 5-8.

Midland returns to action next Saturday in the Seminole Relays.

Lee takes two from Coronado

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels swept a doubleheader from Lubbock Coronado in exciting fashion Saturday. In the first game the Rebels scored four runs in the bottom of the seventh to pull out a one run victory 7-6. It appeared as though Lubbock would turn the tables in the second game as they rallied for two runs in the final stanza but fell short losing 6-5.

Coach Ernie Johnson was pleased with the victories and hoped the momentum would carry into next week when the Rebels will open District 5-5A play Tuesday against Odessa High in Odessa. "This ought to give us a lift, a little confidence." he said.

IN THE first game Bryan Willis went the distance for the Rebels to raise his record to 2-0. "Willis will be our starting pitcher in district play, Johnson said, because he throws more strikes than anyone." Indeed that was the case against the visitors from Lubbock as Willis did not walk a Mustang while striking out two.

Chris Parker began the seventh inning with his second single of the game. Dennis Matta reached first on an error before Joe Williamson hit into a fielders choice, leaving runners on first and third. Monty Christian then hit a run scoring double as the Rebel bench seemed to come to life. But Lubbock pitcher Richard Smith got pinch hitter Ray Longoria to ground out to short for the second out, while holding the runners on their bases. Scott Ullom, pinch hitting for Scott Carrell, drove a triple to the power alley in right field scoring Williamson and Christian to tie the game. Lane Marks, who had struck out three times in the game, proved to be the final hero as he got his first hit of the game to score Ullom for the winning run.

LEE BEGAN the scoring in the first stanza with a two-out two-run inning. Smith looked strong for Coronado as he struck out the first two batters he faced. But Barry Blackwell smashed a triple into deep center field and scored on Parker's single. After Parker moved into scoring position Matta singled him home to give Lee the two run margin.

Coronado tied the score in the third inning on four hits including a double by Smith. It was Smith again in the fourth inning as he doubled to right field and scored on a fielder's choice giving the Mustangs the lead. Two doubles and a single helped the Mustangs extend their lead to 5-2 in the top of the fifth inning.

The Rebels got an unearned run in the bottom of the inning when Parker led off with a walk, moved to second, then scored on an error by the left fielder Jerry Foster. But Coronado came back in the sixth inning scoring their final run and extending their lead to 6-3 to set up the last minute heroics by Midland.

THE SUDDEN loss seem to shake the Mustangs as they opened the second game giving up a walk and three errors in the first inning. Without getting a base hit the Rebels found themseleves with a three run lead.

Coronado scored their first run in the second inning when Clifford Brown stroked a single to right field scoring Doug Lange from second. Lange opened the inning with a single and advanced to second when Greg Conley walked.

Midland starting pitcher John Denton dug himself into a hole in the third when he walked three consecutive batters. With two outs, and the bases loaded Lange stroked a double to tie the game at three all.

Midland regained the lead in the bottom of the fifth. With one out Marks singled and Bart Ryan stroked a grounder to Brown at third. Brown started his throw to first base then suddenly turned and threw to second trying to get the lead runner. The hesitation cost the Mustangs an out and later a run, as all hands were safe. Blackwell walked to load the bases and Parker singled to left driving in two runs.

MHS girls take second

SNYDER — For the third straight meet, the Midland High Lady Bulldogs have finished second amd according to Coach Brenda Mitchell, "It's getting monotonous."

Going into the final race of the day at the Canyon Reef Relays here Saturday, MHS was trailing Hereford by 3½ points and needed only to beat Hereford in the final event, the 1600-meter relay, to win the meet. Anything behind the Whitefaces and MHS would finish in second place.

The Bulldogs and Whitefaces battled for second and third throughout the race. MHS' Sheila Christian overtook the Hereford runner in the third leg of the race and Penny Griffin was able to hold it through the first three turns but lost it in the stretch as the White Faces finished second behind Sweetwater. Virgie Cooks and Connie Sutherland also ran in the event. The team time was 4:13.94.

"We were ahead going into the mile run, "said Coach Mitchell, "but Hereford finished first, third and fourth to our sixth and that gave Hereford the 3½-point lead going into the last event, the 1600-meter run."

The big event for MHS was the triple jump with a one-two-three finish. Demetra Fort won with a leap of 34-feet-9 followed by Griffin in second and Christian in third.

The Bulldogs backed up the triple jump effort with a two-three-four finish in the long jump. Fort placed second in that event going 17-feet-1 with Christian second and Griffin third.

In the high jump, Rochell Gill went 4-feet-10 along with three other girls to finish in a four-way tie for top honors. Points for the event were divided among the foursome with medals handed out as the result of a coin toss.

Lydia Jackson was another fisrt place finisher for MHS with a 12.48 time in the 100-meter run. Fort added a fifth in 12.92.

The 400-meter relay team, Fort, Christian, Cooks and Jackson, added a second place with a 50:91 time as did the 8-meter relay with Griffin, Fort, Cooks and Jackson in 1:45.03.

Finishing in third place were Griffin in the 200-meter run in 26.74; Christian in the 400-meter run in 62.78 and Sandy Rodriquez in the 3200-meter run in 12-48.74. Sutherland added a sixth in the 800-meter run with a 2:37.71 time.

On Saturday MHS will be out to break the second-place finish streak when the Bulldogs travel to Seminole to compete in the Indian Relays.

Rebs edge Permian for 1st

THE ANDREWS Mustangs easily won the 4A competition with 178 points followed by Odessa Ector in second with 116 and Lakeview third with 83. The Lovington, M.M. team edged out Fort Stockton 149-148 in the girls competition with Andrews finishing third with 108.

The Rebels had two events that scored big points, the 400-meter run and long jump.

Morney took the 400 run in 49.9 while teammates Roosevelt Fort and Johnson finished seeond and fourth respectively. Their combined efforts gave the Rebels 22 points in the event and an early lead in the days' racing.

Long jumpers Fort, Luther Johnson and Clarence Smith fared almost as well finishing one-three-four for 20 points. Fort's winning leap went 22-feet-2½.

Lee also got first place finishes from Williams in the 100-meter dash with a time of 10.9 and Wayne Brandt in the pole vault clearing 13-feet-0 and scored points in every event.

Despite the victory which gave the Rebels a 3-0 record in meet competition, Lee Coach Sam Volpe wasn't totally pleased with his team's performance saying, "We fouled up all day long. We weren't running well. I had given up after the two-mile run (Lee's Piccolo finished fourth). I thought we were out of it. Then the kids taught me something today. It's not over until the last event. Going into the mile relay (1600 meters) I felt that if we were in striking distance with a chance to win the meet, we have four real good quarter milers and they could win it."

THERE WERE some other individual performances that made Coach Volpe happy including 400-meter trio, Morney, Fort and C. Johnson and added "Carl Piccolo ran well in the 1600-meters. He got a second for us (he was beaten in the final stretch by Permian's Bruce Bennett) and that put us back in it (the race for team total). He was sick, wasn't feeling well. He knew we needed the pints and ran in spite of his sickness.

"Darren Williams ran real well today and Wayne Brandt did well in winning the pole vault. Michael Barton finished second in the high jump with a 6-foot-4 leap and that's a personal best for him. That helped us, added Volpe.

Around the area, Andrews got first place finishes from, Brent Petross, Larry Baeza, Eloy Baeza and L. Williams in the 400-meter realy with a 43.3 time; Archie Williams in the 100-meter dash in 11.0; Adam Smith in the 300-meter inermediate hurdles in 39.9; Darrell Ray in the discus with a 144-feet-2 throw; Leo Ruiz in the pole vault clearing 13-feet-6; Randy Frieme in the high jump clearing 6-foot-3; Raul Hernandez in the 3200-meter run with a meet record 9:58.1 and Kirk Pearcy in the 1600-meter run in a divisiona dn stadium record time of 4:20.0;

Lamesa had no first place finishers.

Porsche wins Sebring

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Their powerful Porsche 935 Turbo was virtually lame, running on five cylinders and without third gear, but John Paul and John Paul Jr. held on Saturday night to win the Coca Cola 12 Hours of Sebring sports car race.

The victory by the father and son from Atlanta, who also took the Dayfona 24 Hours in January with the help of German driver Rolf Stommelen, gave them the first sweep of America's two premier endurance races since Hurley Haywood and the late Peter Gregg did it in 1973.

"That's pretty doggone good company," said the Holland-born senior Paul when told about the accomplishment. "I didn't know that nobody had done it for so long, but I've been coming here since 1969 and it's always been in my mind to come here and win. This is just great."

Connors tops Gottfried

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors defeated fourth-seeded fellow American Brian Gottfried 6-4, 6-1 Saturday to reach the final of the $250,000 Rotterdam Grand Prix tennis tournament.

In Sunday's final, Connors will face third-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, who downed Buster Mottram of Britain 6-4, 6-4 in the other semifinal.

Jordan wins in semis

BOSTON (AP) — Kathy Jordan, aiming for her first title in four years as a tennis professional, dominated nervous, errorprone Bonnie Gadusek Saturday night to capture a 6-2, 6-2 semifinal victory in the $150,000 Avon Championships of Boston.

Ministers up in arms; Meyer angry with press

Chapel Hill, N.C., ministers, representing 25 congregations, last week passed a resolution protesting a potential church-basketball clash, which has indeed materialized with North Carolina's Tar Heels qualifying for the NCAA East finals, a game CBS will carry starting at 12:10 p.m. In its resolution, the alliance called the broadcast "an act of scheduling that needlessly compromises the traditional sanctity of Sunday morning in this region as a time for family and church." The game, it said, should be played and shown at 1 p.m. instead.

The Rev. Robert E. Seymour, pastor of Brinkley Baptist Church — the church attended by North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith — said he had a telephone conversation with CBS President James Rosenfield on the subject. "He told me that CBS had locked into that schedule for over a year. But I told him that churches in North Carolina have had a prior claim on the 11 a.m. to 12 slot on Sundays for the past 200 years."...

Complaining that he is being treated unfairly by the Chicago news media, DePaul basketball Coach Ray Meyer, 68, says he isn't sure he'll be back for another season. Meyer's comments came after an 82-75 loss to Boston College last week, marking the third straight year the Blue Demons have lost their opening tournament game. "I hope my detractors sleep well," said Meyer. DePaul 40 seasons and winningest active major-college coach. "My wife is very disturbed at the way the Chicago media has handled this. So much so that she has asked me to seriously consider retiring... All through the season, when we were going 26-1, I was all right, but we lose that game, and all of a sudden I'm stupid. I'm the guy who lost the tournament game in March, all right. But aren't I the same fellow that helped win all those games back in December, January and February?"

Meanwhile, junior forward Terry Cummings says he is thinking about turning professional and making himself eligible for the NBA draft. "At times, our finances are pretty hectic," said Cummings, married and the father of a 2-year-old son. "Turning pro would give me financial stability."...

Former NFL quarterback Jack Concannon was acquitted in Chicago of delivering concaine to an undercover agent, but a judge criticized him for a "woeful lack of judgment" and letting down family and fans... Scotty Bowman, Buffalo Sabres who has shuffled between GM and coach for three years, is back on the bench, replacing acting coach Jim Roberts, who took over for Bowman Dec. 9. Roberts returns to his job as associate coach...Tamara McKinney posted the fastest time Saturday in the first heat of a women's World Cup giant slalom at Alpe d'Huez, France, but a snow stormed forced cancellation of the second heat...Pending approval, Charlie McBride will move on the University of Nebraska football staff to defensive coordinator, succeeding Lance Van Zandt, who took a position with the New Orleans Saints... Defender Graham Roberts scored three goals Saturday as Tottenham Hotspur dropped Southampton out of first place in the English soccer League, 3-2. Swansea beat Wolverhampton 1-0 to take the lead... France beat Ireland 22-9 Saturday but the Irish won the Five Nations Rugby Union Tournament outright for the first time since 1974, by winning three matches and losing one for six points. England and Scotland tied for second a 2-1-1...

Steve Denton defeated Schalk van den Merween 6-4, 6-2 and Eriee Iskersky beat Henri Leconte 6-4, 6-4 to gain today's Metz, France, tennis finals...France's Marc Gomez won the 73rd Milan-San Remo cycling race Saturday in 7 hours, 4 minutes and 12 seconds for the hilly 294-kilometer course...

Simpson blows lead after cameras leave

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Scott Simpson blew the lead with a double bogey-bogey finish — well after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day — and staked Bruce Lietzke and Brad Bryant to a tie for the top spot Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Tournament Players Championship.

Simpson was cruising along with a 2-shot lead when he dumped his tee shot into a tiny bunker on the island green on the par-3 17th. He took two to get out, then missed a 6-foot putt for a double bogey-5.

Simpson, whose only previous victory came in the 1980 Western Open, also bogeyed the 18th, leaving Lietzke and Bryant as the co-leaders going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

Lietzke was a three-time winner last season and Bryant is a non-winner in his fifth year on the tour. They completed three tours over the watery, pot-bunker filled acreage that makes up the controversial Players Club course with matching totals of 210, 6 shots under par.

Lietzke, the game's most successful cross-handed putter, had a 3-under-par 69 and Bryant fought his way to a 71 in the warm, muggy, breezy weather.

Simpson and Vance Heafner were a single shot off the pace at 211. Heafner matched par 72 and Simpson had a 73 despite his horrendous finish.

Scott Simpson's closing collapse also let Tom Watson back in the title chase. He managed a 68, the best round of the day, and moved to within four strokes of the lead at 214.

"My only chance is for the wind to blow tomorrow," he said. "Without the wind, there are too many guys in front of me."

Nancy takes 5-shot lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton shook off a double bogey on the ninth hole to fire a 3-under-par 69 Saturday and take a commanding 5-shot lead after three rounds of the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am women's golf tournament.

Lopez-Melton, who started the day two shots in front of Sandra Haynie, made five birdies and 12 pars on the 6,237-yard, par-72 Desert Inn Country Club course. She faltered only on the par-4 ninth when she hit her second shot long, flubbed a chip shot and three-putted for a six.

Lopez-Melton finished the three rounds at 206, 11-under-par. Haynie, after an even-par 72, was at 211, while Ayako Okamoto of Japan was third at 212.

Okamoto, a star on the Japanese women's tour, shot a 4-under-par 68 to move into contention. She shared the day's best round with Patty Sheehan, last year's Ladies Professional Golf Association Rookie of the Year, who is at 3 under par for the tournament.

Two-time defending champion Donna Caponi struggled to a 2-over 74 that left her well off the lead at 216. Judy Clark, three shots behind starting the third round, also had a 74 to finish at 214.

A non-winner in more than eight months, Lopez-Melton said the 5-shot lead was the biggest she's ever had going into the final round of a tournament.

"Usually when I win a tournament, I come from behind," the winner of 23 LPGA events said.

Cardona flattens champ in one round

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP) — Colombian challenger Prudencio Cardona won the World Boxing Council flyweight title Saturday with a spectacular first-round knockout of champion Antonio Avelar of Mexico.

It took Cardona exactly two minutes to end the bout. Cardona opened with a flurry of wild blows, rested a few seconds, then knocked the champion out cold. Avelar landed face down after a powerful combination of three left jabs and three right hooks to the face.

It took ring doctor Federico de la Colina more than two minutes to revive Avelar, a favorite of the 10,000 fans who crowded the soccer field in this port 360 miles northeast of the Mexican capital.

Cardona, 30, and the 23-year-old Avelar each weighed 110 pounds. Avelar now has a record of 28-8-1 and Cardona is 31-5-1.

It's March and hope springs eternal in Arizona's Cactus League

Cactus League scrapbook

It's spring time in the Cactus League and even the lowliest major league teams look forward to the coming season with optimism and renewed hope, perhaps none more so than the Chicago Cubs, under new ownership, new front office leadership, new field management and new coaches at both the major and minor league levels.

By The Associated Press

Home runs by Lance Parrish, Rick Leach and Chet Lemon powered the Detroit Tigers to a 9-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Parrish' three-run blast came in the second inning off Twins starter and loser Roger Erickson. Leach homered off Erickson to lead off the third and Lemon belted a two-run shot two outs later off Erickson.

The victory improved Detroit's spring record to 6-7, while the Twins dropped to 2-9.

Mike Vail's solo homer ignited a four-run rally as the Cincinnati Reds, 7-4, stopped the Kansas City Royals, 4-7. It was Vail's first home run of the spring and came off Kansas City starter Jim Wright.

Jason Thompson smacked a three-run homer and Tony Pena drove in thre runs with four hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-3, handed the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-7, a 10-7 defeat. Pena went 4-for-4, doubling home a run in the second and punching a two-run single in the fourth.

Rick Monday's grand slam homer powered the Los Angeles Dodgers, 8-4, over the New York Mets 10-4. Craig Swan worked the first five innings for the Mets, 3-7, giving up only three hits and one run.

The Toronto Blue Jays, 9-4, downed the Chicago White Sox 8-4 as Jesse Barfield went 3-for-5, batting in three runs. Aurelio Rodriguez homered for Toronto as the White Sox record fell to 6-6.

Pitchers Phil Niekro, Tommy Boggs and Al Hrabosky scattered two hits as the Atlanta Braves, 11-2, blanked the Houston Astros 2-0. It was the Braves' sixth shutout of the spring. Houston is now 3-6.

Reserve catcher Orlando Sanchez doubled home Mike Ramsay in the 14th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals, 5-5, outlasted the Boston Red Sox 10-6. Boston, now 5-8, scored three runs in the eighth and ninth innings to knot the score at 5-5, but the Cards scored once in the 13th and four times in the 14th off loser Dennis Burtt, the last of four Red Sox pitchers.

Randy Bass' base-loaded two-run single sparked a five-run rally in the sixth inning as the San Diego Padres downed Seattle 6-4. San Diego is now 6-4, while the Mariners dropped to 2-5.

Dave Bergman tripled home two runs in the fifth inning, then scored the tie-breaking run on Darrell Evans' single as the San Francisco Giants, 4-5, defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-3. The Cubs are 6-5 in exhibition play.

Bobby Grich led off the fourth inning with a home run, his third of the spring, to snap a 2-2 tie and lead the California Angels, 5-5, to a 4-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers, 4-6.

Bake McBride and Jerry Dybzinski each hit two-run doubles and Von Hayes added a solo homer as the Cleveland Indians, 6-4, beat the Oakland A's 8-7. The Indians took advantage of the wildness of A's starter Mike Norris, who had his third ineffective outing of the exhibition season. Dan Meyer and Tony Armas homered for Okland, now 5-4.

Longhorns sweep Aggies to stretch win streak to 33

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mike Livermore knocked in two runs with a triple in the first game and Tracy Dophied smacked an RBI-triple and a three-run homer in the nightcap as Texas beat Texas A&M 8-3 and 16-2 in a Southwest Conference double-header Saturday.

The wins increased Texas' winning streak to 33 consecutive games, just one short of the NCAA record set by Texas in 1977. Texas is now 33-0 for the season and 3-0 in conference play.

Texas A&M fell to 17-6 on the season and 2-4 in the SWC.

In the opener, pitcher Calvin Schiraldi, 7-0, held the Aggies scoreless until the seventh inning when Buddy Haney doubled in two runs.

Livermore's two-run triple in the fourth paced the Longhorn attack.

Aggie starter Rick Lueken, 2-1, got the loss.

Dophied, the designated hitter, got his RBI-triple in the first inning of the nightcap and his three-run homer in the seventh.

Arkansas, Baylor split

WACO, Texas (AP) — Tank Davis' solo home run and Cedrick Mack's 10th-inning RBI single gave Baylor a 5-4 victory over Arkansas in the nightcap and a split of a Southwest Conference double-header Saturday.

Arkansas rallied from a 5-3 deficit in the opener to score five runs in the sixth and win 8-7. Billy Dees, who had five hits on the afternoon, doubled home two of the sixth-inning runs and Keith Longoria singled home two.

The split gave Arkansas a 22-2-1 season record and a 5-1 mark in the SWC. Baylor is now 9-10 and 1-2.

Arkansas pitcher Darrell Akerfelds was one pitch away from a 10th-inning win in the nightcap when Davis hit his homer to tie the game 4-4. Mack then drove in Steve Ecton with the game-winning single.

Lester Lancaster got the win for the Razorbacks in the first game and Charlie Corbell got a save. Jerry Arnold was credited wit the loss for Baylor.

UH blanks Owls twice

HOUSTON (AP) — Doug Drabek allowed only two hits in the first game and Bob Reilly surrendered just five hits in the nightcap as the Houston Cougars recorded two shutouts and a sweep of both ends of a Southwest Conference double-header against Rice Saturday.

Houston won the first game 5-0 and the second game 4-0, and the victories completed a three-game sweep over the Owls.

Wesley Gregersen paced the Cougar offense in the first game with two singles and two RBIs. Mark Lavespere had two hits and one RBI.

BOWLING BEAT

Stubborn four pin denies Loranc 300

BY RANDY ISENBERG

George Loranc, a veteran league bowler, left a ringing four pin that robbed him of perfection while rolling in the Keglers Mixed League March 11. Loranc's 299 was completed witha 654 series.

The Keglers Mixed, possibly the highest scoring mixed league bowling this year in Midland, saw teammate Charles Lacy roll a 760 series on games of 255-237-268 for the week's leading series.

Bob Fielding rolled a 640 in the same league March 11, a 763 March 1 and a 639 March 4.

Vern Williams rolled games of 237-233-254—714 in the Lane Blazers League March 12. Cliff Hollaway had a 701 Feb. 25 and a 276 March 15 in the Early Mixers.

JO ANN BOWEN scored a 247-236—654 Feb. 26 in the Hopeful League on perhaps the finest morning this year. Glenda Williamson had a 237-612 and Nancy Martin a 258-583 the same day.

Patti Hall strung together a 212-203-190-214—606—819 in the March 1 Ladies Scratch Trio. Doris McCabe, 244—749, and Ellie Shelton, 217—779, rounded out the league.

March 3, Benita Gibson and Dot Wilkerson posted 599s in the High Sky Ladies League. Gibson scoring 202-220 and Wilkerson 219-202.

Entry deadline: Entries close midnight April 4 for the Midland Women's Bowling Association City Tournament April 17-18 and 24-25 at Dellwood and Super Bowl. The Midland Bowling Association tournament began this weekend and runs three weekends at Super Bowl and Air Park. The men's tournament will be the final one at Air Park. Women's doubles and singles will be bowled with the use of automatic electronic scorers for the first time.

The California Condor might be doomed. There seems to be no way this overgrown turkey buzzard will survive... unless scientists capture what few are left and move them to Arizona or Nevada or somewhere besides California.

There must be something in that California water that makes Californians and other wild creatures do strange things.

Consider the latest episode in what obviously is going to be a futile effort at saving America's largest bird from extinction.

ONLY ONE condor egg has been laid this year. The parents nested inside a cave on a bluff, then the parents immediately began fighting over which would incubate the egg.

The battle was observed by biologostswho are keeping a 24-hour watch on the birds in the mountians near Ventura under a program sponsored by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Audubon Society.

"There was real musical chairs going on in the nest," biologist John Ogden said. "One of them would sit down on the egg, and the other would come in and try to push the first one off. They would jab each other in the face and really get physical."

At one point both condors took to the air and continued the battle. "This went on for hours, they were so absorbed, and no one was incubating," Ogdan said.

OVER A PERIOD of days, the bickering got worse. About a week ago the biologist watched from their observation point a half mile away as the parents began pushing and shoving inside the cave.

The four-inch egg was knocked from the nest and rolled toward the cave entrance. It teetered a moment at the entrance, then fell. It broke on a rock ledge below the cave and was eaten by ravens.

There are only 25 to 30 California condors left in the world, and scientists hope to capture some of the birds and breed them in captivity in order to prevent extinction.

The program suffered its first set back in 1980, when a condor chick, which was being handled by a member of the capture team, turned toes up and died.

The California Fish and Game Commission cancelled permits for the program after that incident. Since then, however, a plan to capture several of the birds has been approved.

WESTERN BASS Fishing Association, which has sponsored professional bass tournaments in the Western U.S. since 1974, makes its debut in Texas this seekend with a tournament at Toledo Bend Reservoir.

The tournament is scheduled for this Friday and Saturday with headquarters at the Frontier Park, one mile west of the Pendleton Bridge on Highway 21.

Western Bass is the organization that staged the Western Bass/Del Webb National Bass Tournament last summer at Lake Mead. The tournament paid out an all-time record $50,000 first prize to champion Greg Hines of California.

Some of the nation's top bass fishermen will be competing at Toledo Bend, including Tommy Martin, Hemphill; Joe Reed, Waco; Ricky Green, Arkadelphia, Ark.; Bo Dowden, Natchitoches, La.; Joe Wilson, Branson, Mo.; Ricky Clunn, Montgomery; Randy Dearman, Livingston; and Lonnie Stanley, College Station.

In a B.A.S.S. tournament in Toledo Bend last November, Martin set a tournament one-day record of 35 pounds two ounces, for seven bass and totaled 81 pounds 10 ounces for three days of competition.

Hogan Park undergoing 'Spring Cleaning'

By JOEL JACKSON
Hogan Park Assistant Pro

Hogan Park Golf Course presently is undergoing a "Spring Cleaning" of sorts in preparation for summer golf. This past week Rick Haywood, our golf course superintendent, and his crew spent many hours working on the greens, getting them ready for the spring growth.

All 27 holes and our two practice greens have now been aerified and top-dressed.

This process involves pulling small plugs of grass and soil out of the green. The greens are then covered with a thin layer of sand (top dressing) which fills the holes left from the aerification and allows water to penetrate quickly and evenly.

For those of you who were curious, now you know what was being done...

SPEAKING OF our golf course crew, we would like to welcome Jim Lutkus, our new assistant course superintendent, to Midland. Jim and his wife, Aggie, and 16-month old son Christopher moved here from Ohio in January. Jim has an associate degree in Turf Management from Ohio State and eight years experience in course maintenance and related fields.

While we are welcoming people to Midland, J.D. Dill has joined our staff as an assistant golf pro. J.D. has 10 years experience in the golf business and comes to Midland from Denver, Colo. I am sure that all of you join us in extending a warm welcome to J.D. and Jim and his family...

THE TENTH annual Kiwanis Open Golf Classic will be held April 17-18 at Hogan Park. Entry deadline is 6 p.m. April 16. Forms are available in the golf shop. The Village Kiwanis Club uses the profits from this tournament to purchase classroom equipment for the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center and for scholarships to the outstanding FFA and FHA students at Midland and Lee high schools. For further information, contact Eugene Thomas (684 4404), James Hill (682 4762) or James Murphy (683 4871).

AGAIN WE would like to remind players of our Spring-Summer starting time procedures for weekends and holidays. Reservations will be taken on Fridays preceding the weekend or holiday beginning at 5:45 a.m. in person, or 6 a.m. by phone (682 7891).

Right now, tee times begin at 7:41 a.m. and end at 9:40 a.m. and then begin again at noon and end at 2 p.m. The period between 9:40 a.m. and noon allows all groups to turn for their second nine holes. Reservations are for groups of three, four or five. If you only have two players or are by yourself, call us after noon Friday and we will start pairing players together until all times are filled. Play on a first-come, first-served basis begins at 4 p.m...

THE HOGAN Park Women's Golf Association held a low-ball threesome competition Thursday which was won by Rene Beique, Nancy Cox and Naomi Colson.

A VISITOR to Midland scored the most recent ace at Hogan Park. W.E. (Gene) Ruharts of Dallas holed a three-iron from 185 yards out on the tenth hole. Playing with Gene were Chuck Dellenback, Charlie Baker and Jay Fortin.

Tom Balles, Jr., hit a driver and four-iron on the 515-yard 24th hole for an eagle, witnessed by Steve Hendley, R.L. (Moose) Wheeler and Oscar Feggett.

Ellis (Honey) Warren, Jr., eagled the 390-yard 23rd hole with a driver and seven-iron while playing with J. Madrid, O.B. Harris, B. Anders, and N. Smith...

Stenmark bows again

KRANJSKA GORA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslavia's Bojan Krizaj, cheered by a partisan crowd, won on the men's World Cup slalom event today, edging Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark by four-hundredths of second. Krizaj posted the combined time of 1 minute, 38.89 seconds for the two heats, against Stenmark's 1:38.93.

Austria's Franz Gruber finished third in 1:39.10.

"I made a couple of mistakes at the start" of the second heat, Krizaj said.

Stenmark, who had declared his satisfaction with the "cemented" course on the Vitranc Mountain, led Krizaj by one-hundredth of a second after the first heat.

S-2, K-55...

Anybody ever hear of Louisville Sluggers?

By ERIC PREWITT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The S-2 has destroyed many a pitcher. The R-43 and A-99 pack proven power. The K-55 is no popgun, either.

These are among the bats that baseball's big and little hitters are choosing now for another season.

"There have probably been more home runs hit with the S-2 than any other model," says Rex Bradley of the Hillerich & Bradsby Co. "It's a model that was made for Vern Stephens. Willie Mays, Billy Williams, Ernie Banks, Eddie Mathews and Al Kaline also used it."

Bradley, who tours spring training camps taking orders for his company's "Louisville Slugger" bats, also could name hundreds of .220 hitters who have used the S-2. It's not the bat, but who swings it, that pitchers fear.

"GEORGE BRETT uses a T-85, originally made for Marv Throneberry," said Bradley. "George Foster uses a P-72 and that was made for a minor leaguer, Les Pinkham. He's a used-car salesman near Louisville now.

"Reggie Jackson's bat, the J-93, is a K-75, Bob Kennedy's bat, with a thinner handle."

Hillerich & Bradsby, which hand-turns bats to order for any major leaguer who requests them, began identifying models with initial and number in the 1930s. The R-43 is Babe Ruth's model. Henry Aaron's A-99 is a modification of the R-43.

Mike Schmidt, top home-run hitter in the majors now, uses the K-55, which originally was made for an earlier home-run champion from Philadelphia, Chuck Klein.

"Mickey Mantle never had a special bat made. He just used whatever felt right at the time. When he hit what supposedly was the longest homer in history, in Washington, he was using (teammate) Loren Babe's bat," said Bradley.

BESIDES specifying model and bat shape, players order by length and weight. Rod Carew uses bats as light as 30 ounces. Dave Parker swings the longest bat, 37 inches.

Hillerich & Bradsby is the largest supplier of bats to the major leagues, although some hitters choose their weapons from Rawlings (the "Adirondack" brand) or the Worth Sports Co., in Tullahoma, Tenn.

The average major leaguer goes through five or six dozen bats a year, according to Bradley. The clubs foot the bill, at $8 a bat.

"Some players use a lot more than others. Eddie Murray of Baltimore is probably the champion bat-breaker right now. He uses an R-161, which has a big barrel and thin handle," said Bradley.

And then there was Orlando Cepeda, a heavy consumer of bats for another reason.

"We made more bats for Cepeda some years than we made for whole minor league teams," Bradley recalled. "He wouldn't use a bat after he got a hit with it. He gave it away.

"I guess he figured there was only one hit in each bat."

Fight with NFLPA looms on horizon

NFL chiefs marshall forces

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A billion-dollar television contract, possible expansion in the next few years and the usual collection of rules changes all will be secondary when National Football League owners conduct their winter meetings.

They will take a back seat to the trial involving the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum and the Oakland Raiders in their suit against the NFL, and the league's stalled contract negotiations with the NFL Players Association.

At stake in the next few months is nothing less than the survival of the league in its present form.

Normally, a large chunk of time and attention at the owners' meetings is given to Competition Committee recommendations — who's allowed to block whom how far downfield and just when the quarterback is really in the grasp of the tackler.

THIS YEAR, too, they'll talk about potential rules changes. The Kansas City Chiefs are asking that the NFL employ the two-point pass-or-run conversion, now used in college ball but once a staple of the old American Football League. The Chiefs, who started out as the Dallas Texans, were a charter member of the AFL in 1960. The team's owner, Lamar Hunt, was an AFL founder and its first president.

The NFL owners also will consider using a kicking tee on field goals and extra points, as the college now do, and decreasing the penalty for pass interference. Some teams believe it's too severe, particularly when it occurs in the end zone and gives a team the ball on the 1-yard line.

The Competition Committee has spent the past week or so pondering those proposals, along with more substantive issues such as the possibility of a college player challenging the league's undergraduate rule.

Herschel Walker, Georgia's All-American tailback, decided last Tuesday not to challenge the rule, which bars players from entering the league before their college classes have been graduated. But somewhere, someday, a player probably will decide to take the NFL to court to force open the door.

Barring a reversal of philosophy by either the owners or the players, the league and the union will be without a collective bargaining agreement after July 15, just when training camps open.

THE PLAYERS want a fixed percentage of the gross — right now they say it's 55 percent — going to them. The owners say the percentage idea is unacceptable because it would mean surrendering some control of the game.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle and television committee members Art Modell, president of the Cleveland Browns, and Gene Klein, president of the San Diego Chargers, will report on the contract talks with ABC, CBS and NBC.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, Super Trial II has begun. The Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, which wants an NFL tenant to replace the Rams (who moved to nearby Anaheim in 1980) and the Oakland Raiders, who want to be that tenant, are locked in a lawsuit with the NFL.

The league has rejected the demands of Al Davis, the Raiders' boss, that he be permitted to move.

Players talk strike at convention

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The possibility of a strike next fall will be the major topic of conversation as members of the National Football League Players Association gather for a five-day convention beginning Monday.

The current contract between the NFLPA and the league expires on July 15, and brief negotiations between the union and the NFL Management Council since the completion of the 1981 season have made it clear that settlement could be a long way off.

The players want a fixed percentage of the owners' gross earnings. The union has reported that players get only about 30 percent of a team's gross revenue, and wants the players' share raised to 55 percent.

The Management Council, which bargains for the owners, says players receive closer to 44 percent of the gross revenue. The league flatly opposes the concept of giving the players any fixed percentage of earnings.

In fact, following a negotiating session in Washington, D.C., last Monday, Jack Donlan, executive director for the NFLMC, said the union's demand for a fixed percentage was "probably illegal" under sections of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Chip Yablonski, legal counsel for the NFLPA, disputed Donlan's claim, saying: "We believe the fund (from which the players' percentage would be drawn) is lawful. If the council has trouble with the joint administration, we will consider alternative controls, however."

Cougars to face surprising Boston College Eagles today

Surging Louisville, raising its record to 23-9 after an 11-7 start, ended Alabama-Birmingham's Cinderella saga and prevented the Blazers' Gene Bartow from becoming the first coach to take three teams to the Final Four. Previously, Bartow led Memphis State and UCLA into the national semifinals, although he never won the title.

"Even when we were 11-7, I didn't give up on this team," said Crum, who has four starters from his title team of two years ago. "I'm an optimist."

The unheralded Jones, Louisville's high scorer with 19 points, hit seven clutch foul shots in the final 2:31, enabling Louisville to stave off a late Alabama-Birmingham rally. Derek Smith had 16 points for the Cardinals and Jerry Eaves scored 13.

Oliver Robinson had 20 for Alabama-Birmingham, which finished its fourth season of basketball with a 25-6 record.

Georgetown's Pat Ewing outmuscles Oregon State's Charlie Sitton for ball in NCAA action at Provo, Utah.

NORTH CAROLINA, 29-2, has by far the best record of the remaining teams. In Villanova, 24-7, however, the Tar Heels will be facing a team that has tied its best victory total ever.

North Carolina reached the East Regional final Friday night, beating No.13 Alabama 74-69, as all five of its starters scored in double figures. Villanova advanced with a 70-66 overtime upset over ninth-ranked Memphis State.

Smith says North Carolina, because of being No.1, is under a lot of pressure.

"It's hard for a No.1 ranked team to go on through the NCAA," said Smith, who has taken North Carolina to the Final Four six times without winning the national title. "Being ranked No.1, you always take another team's best shot."

Dokes dynamites Thomas for fifth round knockout

Suddenly, Dokes crashed a left hook to Thomas' chin and followed wth a right-left-right to the head that dropped the West Virginian in a heap. Thomas struggled up at seven, took the mandatory eight, then turned to meet Dokes' attack. But he had nothing left to withstand the attack.

Referee Zach Clayton didn't even bother to count. Instead he signaled the scheduled 12-round fight was over at 1:33 and then rolled Thomas over on his back as Thomas' handlers and a doctor entered the ring. Thomas was able to get up after a brief time.

The victory on national television was the 25th for Dokes, 21²³⁄₄, against a draw. The 23-year-old Akron, Ohio native, ranked second by the World Boxing Council and third by the World Boxing Association, scored his 14th knockout.

Dokes tool control at the outset and seldom missed as he speared Thomas with hooks, jabs and right hands to the head and also worked well to the body. Thomas landed an occasional hook but he missed more often than scored.

In a scheduled 10-round heavyweight fight, Tim Witherspoon of Philadelphia, 208¼, ran his record to 16-0, when he knocked out Luis Acosta, 210½, of Argentina with a single overhand right in the second round.

In middleweight 10-rounders, Irish Teddy Mann, 160, of Fork River, N.J., came on in the late rounds to score a unanimous decision over Robby Epps, 156¾, the WBC No. 7 contender from Clovis, N.M., and Bernard "Superbad" Mays, 160¾, of Detroit, scored an unanimous decision over Lamont Lovelady, 162, Des Moines, Iowa.

Larry Frazier, Portland , Ore., the WBC No. 9 heavyweight contender, failed to appear for a 10-round fight against Jumbo Cummings of Chicago.

There's a tradition at Anheuser-Busch. A tradition that says never be satisfied until you've achieved the best.

Now, out of this tradition, comes a light beer worthy of the King of Beers. One with a clean, distinctive taste. Budweiser Light.

It took time. Patience. And a quest for quality that led to the proud list of ingredients and the Beechwood Aging process made famous by the King.

We know the best never comes easy. That's why there's nothing else like it.

Bring out your best.

It was a day for sharing feelings as Melisa Bosque, right, gets a hug from fellow Bowie Bulldog Christann Webb even though they competed against each other in the girls softball throw.

Special Olympics special for all

It was a day of cheers and of tears. It was a day of laughter and of disappointment. But, overall, it was a day of competition in which everyone won.

It was the fourth annual Special Olympics for 150 very unique youngsters of all ages. What is so "special" about this track and field event is not so much the youngsters who compete — for they are handicapped — as it is a special day for those parents who see their children take part and those volunteers who cheer and console and cry. It's a certain kind of "special" feeling that everyone gets but which defies definition.

This year the spring track and field event was sponsored by the Midland Independent School District and the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens. Held in Memorial Stadium, the olympics featured running, relays, softball throw, long jump, wheelchair assisted and unassisted races, wheelchair slalom, crawling race and even a crutch race.

Competitors ranged in age from the 3-6-year-olds in the Early Childhood classes through the high school groups. Special participants were members of the MH-MR Community Living Evaluation Workshop.

As in the well-known Olympics, these competitors started off the day with a parade of the athletes. And then the races began as the youngsters poured out every ounce of determination and willpower.

It was a day in which they lived the Special Olympics motto:

Let me win,
But if I cannot win,
Let me be brave in the attempt.

About 50 volunteers turned out, including members of the American Businessmen's Association, the Lee High Key Club, college students home for spring break, parents of athletes and interested individuals who worked as timers, starters, coaches and "buddies," who waited to congratulate every athelete as he or she crossed the finish line.

The overall winners to receive the traveling trophy were the Fannin Mustangs, sponsored by Harold Dumas.

Winners in the girls' division were first place, Tonia Chambers, member of the Jane Long Warriors, sponsored by Southside Lions Club; second place, Peggy Gutierrez, Alamo Scouts, sponsored by Tall City Office Supply; and third place, Juli Fincher, Bonham Bobcats, sponsored by Stadium Sports.

Winners in the boys division were first place, Anthony Price, member of the Sam Houston Cowboys, sponsored by R.J.'s Bar-B-Q; second place, Bradley Wortham, CLEW Cowboys, sponsored by R.J.'s Bar-B-Q; and third place, Chris Alexander, Alamo Scouts, sponsored by Tall City Office Supply.

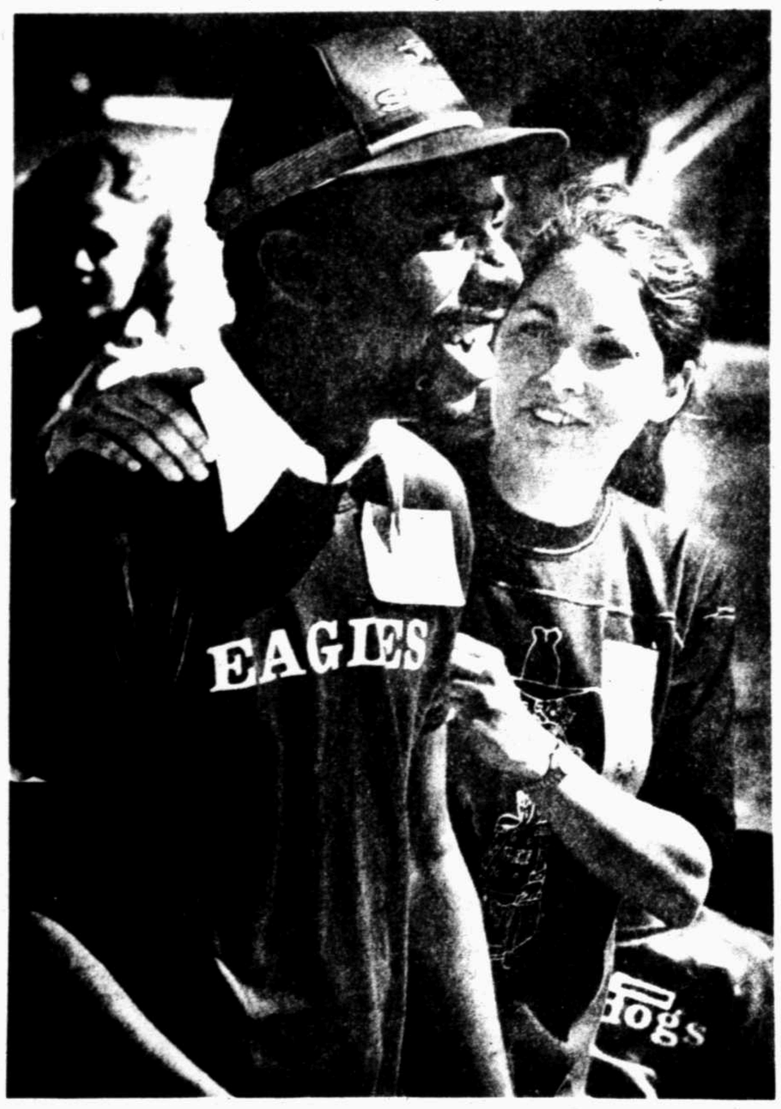

MISD special education teachers acted as coaches for their class teams. The competitors also made colorful banners to decorate the stands and cheered for each other as the races were run.

Local businesses supplied T-shirts for the school teams and the following businesses provided the lunch: Corley Paper, Borden's Dairy, Der Weinerschnitzel, Rainbo Bread, Furr's, Frito Lay, Gillys' Wholesale, Albertsons, Imperial Produce, "M" System, Safeway, Coca-Cola and What-A-Burger.

Directors for the meet were Amy Robnett and Denise Rhea. Announcers were Rick Etheredge and John Beasley.

The annual event served as a preliminary for the Texas Special Olympics Track and Field meets. The area meet will be in Big Spring April 3, and the state meet is scheduled for May 26-28 at the University of Texas at Austin.

Special education teachers involved in coordinating the event were George Ann Powers, TSO area coordinator; Amy Robnett, head coach for the Midland Track and Field team; and Billie Nixon, chairman of the Midland TSO committee.

A wide grin spreads over Quint Johnson's face as he realizes he won the boys 17-19 100-meter dash. Congratulating him with a pat on the back is volunteer Pam Casey, Key Club counselor at Lee High School.

'Gala of Stars' benefits Westminister Ringers

The Gala of Stars benefit, scheduled for March 28 at 3 p.m. and April 3 at 8 p.m. at Theatre Midland, has been organized to help The Westminister Ringers of First Presbyterian Church carry out its June summer tour.

The Gala of Stars will feature local performers presenting popular selections from previous Midland Community Theatre musicals.

The cast list includes Janice Archer, Pat Baskin, Paula Cahoon, Charles Dixon, Bob Fennell, Shirley Hansen, Cherry Jones, Lewis Kluck, Coila Morrow, Daphne Pemberton, D.A. Plumlee, Janet Pollard, Bill Pomeroy, Jim Salners, Bill Shaner, Oza Whitten and the Westminister Ringers.

This summer, the Westminister Ringers are scheduled to perform at the White House, the Capitol and the National Cathedral, all in Washington, D.C. The group also has been invited to perform for the faculty and students in the summer session at Westminister Choir School at Princeton, N.J.

The group will present a special concert recital at Carnegie Hall recital hall on June 24. While in New York City, they also will perform at Riverside Church.

Directed by Susan and Tom Roberts, the ringers have presented over 30 concerts in toured in 14 states in the past two years.

Westminister Ringers, from left, Steve Baskin, Tanya Olsen, Paul Kowert and Sandy Specht practice ringing for the Gala of Stars being presented at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., March 28 at 3 p.m. and April 3 at 8 p.m. The Gala has been organized to help the bellringers with their June tour plans. Tickets for the performances, priced at $6, may be purchased at the theater or at First Presbyterian Church.

Tillis concert set for April 6

Country music star Mel Tillis will perform at Chaparral Center April 6 at 8 p.m.

Although Tillis and his band, The Statesiders, are constantly on the music trail touring the country, his fans perhaps know him best through his numerous television appearances. He has been a guest or host on a gamut of talk and feature shows, including "The Tonight Show," "The Today Show," "The Merv Griffin Show" and "The Mike Douglas Show."

Tickets, priced at $9.50, may be purchased at Flipside records in Odessa, Endless Horizons, Midland and Odessa, Music Haul and Chaparral Center. Mail orders will be accepted when accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a money order or cashier's check made out to Chaparral Center, 3600 N. Garfield St., Midland, Texas, 79701.

Texas Opera Theatre to present 'Rigoletto'

Texas Opera Theatre will present Verdi's "Rigoletto" at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., March 30. In preparation for the presentation, the Musicians Club of the MC and the Midland Opera Advisory Committee, headed by Mrs. Buddy Anguish, in cooperation with Theatre Midland. It was partially underwritten by a grant from the Texas Fine Arts Council and Midland National Bank.

TOT, which has been featured in Time and Newsweek, was recently acclaimed by CBS—TV as the nation's finest touring opera company.

Staged by Cynthia Auerbach, who directed TOT's production of "Madame Butterfly" two seasons ago, this production of "Rigoletto" retains the traditional 16th century setting, colored by James Joy's scenery and Suzanne Mess's costumes.

Collaborating with his librettist, Francesco Piave, Verdi adapted Victor Hugo's play about French royalty, "Le Roi S'amuse," which was banned in Paris after only one performance, into "Rigoletto."

Hugo's play was not only deemed politically dangerous, it was also considered to be immoral by the censors of the day. Twenty years later, political pressure forced Verdi and Piave to make major changes in the story-line to avoid censorship since any hint of royal assassination would ignite revolution, or so the Italian political establishment believed. As a result, the king was demoted to duke and the setting was changed to the nonexistant city of Mantua.

The opera's title character, Rigoletto, is the stereotypically spiteful jester, ready at a moment's notice to hurl dagger-sharp insults at anyone who enters the duke's palace. He does have one redeeming virtue, however — his love for his daughter, Gilda.

But Rigoletto discovers that a father's love is no match for a father's curse. In fact, "La Maledizione (the curse)," which is the catalyst for Rigoletto's final tragedy, was Verdi's first title for this work.

ENTERTAINMENT

Texas Federation of Music Clubs will present an opera preview at 3 p.m. today in the choir room of the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College.

The Musicians Club is offering this free preview to those interested in opera. The program will include performances of several of the best loved arias from "Rigoletto" by soprano Lee Harley, tenor Tom Roberts and baritone Michael Jordan. Jane Ward will be the commentator.

Opera tickets, priced at $8, may be purchased at the preview, or at the Allison Fine Arts Building during regular office hours. Tickets will go on sale at Theatre Midland Tuesday. The TOT's production will be sung in English.

'Animal House' star tries Shakespeare

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tim Matheson has finally grown up.

Type-cast as a "kid" since playing the preppy president of a gross-out college fraternity in the hit 1977 film "Animal House," the 34-year-old Matheson is happy to be playing a real adult in his next movie.

In between projects, Matheson accepted an invitation to return to his real love — Shakespeare — in a St. Edwards University production here of "The Taming of the Shrew."

What started as an enjoyable experience with the high-quality staff and student actors at St. Edwards became an emotional trial midway through the play's run, when Matheson learned of the death of his friend and "Animal House" co-star, John Belushi.

"I didn't know if I wanted to do the show that night or not," Matheson recalled during an interview after a later performance. "It was just hard to absorb. It made me angry more than anything, and I don't know why. But I am angry. It was a great loss, because he was so talented — maybe that's why.

"He always did sort of pop every balloon of pretension that he came in contact with," Matheson said. "But even in all his slapstick, there was a continuity of human behavior that was very real. That's why he was such a good actor."

Matheson was obviously still shaken a week after Belushi's death. Even so, he drew fire and energy to the difficult role of Petruchio, tamer of shrewish Kate.

He shares with most other actors a life-long fascination with Shakespeare.

"You want to see how you can do it. Like 'Hamlet,' which is twice as long as this part — you just want to see if you can physically do it. Thank God they have to carry him off the stage at the end. But if you can do that, you can do anything.

And you can pit yourself up against Burton and those guys and see how you measure up."

German violinist performs at OC

ODESSA — Violinist Alois Kottmann of Frankfurt, Germany, will perform at Odessa College Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building.

The program includes works by Mozart, Telemann, Bach, Haydn and Mendelssohn. Kottmann has studied with Marie-Louise Graef-Moench and Max Rostal.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call OC's fine arts department.

Mission in Kentucky mountains to be run by Mother Teresa

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mother Teresa of Calcutta, who won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for service to the poor in India, will open a mountain mission in eastern Kentucky this summer.

Mother Teresa

Plans for a mission to be managed by Sister Teresa's Missionaries of Charity were announced by the Rev. William Hughes, the Roman Catholic bishop of Covington.

Hughes, whose 57-county diocese includes the state's Appalachian region, said the exact location of the mission will be decided in April.

Mother Teresa is expected to visit Kentucky in June to open the mission as part of a planned trip to the United States, said Hughes' secretary, the Rev. Raymond Hartman.

The mission would begin with a staff of four sisters, at least two of them Americans, Hartman said.

Al Fassi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Armed guards placed around the burned-out Beverly Hills mansion of a Saudi Arabian sheik must permit his estranged wife to live in an undamaged guest house on the property, a judge has ruled.

Sheika Dena Al Fassi won the order Friday. She is suing Sheik Mohammed Al Fassi for $3 billion, which she claims is half of his fortune.

Superior Court Judge Pro-tem Robert Schnider issued the order permitting the Belgian-born woman to occupy the house undisturbed.

The mansion was gutted by an arson fire in 1980 and is still uninhabitable, said the 23-year-old woman's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

Schnider's temporary restraining order also requires police not to return property to the 27-year-old sheik pending a court hearing, and requires the insurance company to withhold payment of the fire claim until the court decides who is to receive the funds.

His wife last week won custody of the couple's children, aged 2, 3, 4 and 5. But the sheik moved them from a hotel in Hollywood, Fla., to the Bahamas. A Bahamian court is to study the custody dispute but has not ruled.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Iloe M. Tracey, 92, is the oldest person in the nation to receive the equivalent of a high school diploma, and the White House wants to recognize the achievement.

Mrs. Tracey, a retired schoolteacher despite her lack of a high school diploma, said the activities director at the Garden Village Care Center where she lives encouraged her about a year ago to hit the books. She thought it was a good way to "pass the time away."

But Larry Smith, the care center activities director, said that when he learned that Mrs. Tracey had passed the examination, he decided to check with the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C. He learned that Mrs. Tracey was three years older than the previous oldest General Education Diploma recipient.

Smith called the White House and he said he has received two return calls, with spokesmen telling him that Mrs. Tracey would receive recognition from President Reagan.

Mrs. Tracey says that while she is proud to have received her GED, she notes that she taught school in Craig, a town north of here in northwestern Colorado, during the 1920s.

"Back then teachers didn't have to have all of the education," she said.

Afterwards, Princess Margaretha, 25, and Prince Nicolas, 35, appeared on the balcony of the palace in the center of this city, capital of a tiny Grand Duchy by the same name wedged between Belgium, West Germany and France. The balcony appearance was followed by a reception for those who attended the wedding.

The wedding guests included King Baudouin, who is the bride's godfather, and Queen Fabiola of Belgium, former King Constantine and Queen Anne-Marie of Greece, the Count and Countess of Paris, and Prince Albert and Princess Paola of Belgium.

The groom's parents, Prince Francois Joseph II and Princess Gina of Liechtenstein, were also present at the wedding.

Judy Congdon

Free organ recital scheduled tonight

The music department of First Presbyterian Church will present organist Judy Congdon in a recital at 7:30 p.m. today in the church sanctuary, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The program will include Bach's Fantaisie and Fugue in G Minor, Hindemith's Organ Sonata I and Cesar Franck's Choral No. 2 in B Minor.

Ms. Congdon, staff organist at First Presbyterian and adjunct organ instructor at Midland College, holds music degrees from Wheaton College, the University of Colorado and the Musikhochschule at Frankfurt, Germany.

The public is invited to attend this free concert.

British comedy presented

The production "The Importance of Being Earnest" will be presented at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Friday through April 10.

This classic British comedy features Robyn Rose as Gwendolyn, with Lisa Livingston as Cecily. Mark Schneider plays Jack and Phillip Coffield is Algernon. Others in the cast include David Perkins as Chausable, Gloria Stephenson as Prism, Loree Fitzgerald as Lady Bracknell, Andy Kimbrough as Merriman and Michael O'Rourke as Lane.

Tickets, priced at $3.50 to $4.50, may be purchased at the theater's box office, or reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

The public is invited to attend.

Where are marriages?

By ELAINE PFEIFER
Hearst Feature Service

Think real-life marriage is in trouble? Take a look at marriage in the movies. The sheer number of bad marriages in movies today makes the real-life variety look as happy as Myrna Loy and Cary Grant in "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House."

And it can no longer be assumed that marriage will be the next logical step when films end happily. Take Harrison Ford and Karen Allen in "Raiders of the Lost Ark." By movie's end, they are yielding to mutual physical attraction. But marriage? It seems unlikely.

Just consider the fractured relationships in such movies as "Pennies from Heaven," "The Border," "They All Laughed," "Shoot the Moon," "The Aviator's Wife," "Making Love," and "One From the Heart," (in the last the couple wasn't married, but after five years of living together they were experiencing all the malaise of modern marriage).

Perhaps even more disturbing than the mere numbers of bad movie marriages is the often dismissive, off-hand way in which Hollywood treats marital upset.

Oscar has its share of troubles

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Indians and Poles and rival awards shows have added a new chapter this year to the long history of controversy surrounding the Academy Awards.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was founded in 1927 by industry leaders seeking dignity for a community that had been scandal-ridden and an entertainment form that had been sniffed at by highbrow critics.

Over the years the Oscars have succeeded in bringing a kind of dignity to movies as an art. The years also have brought a wide range of controversy, and 1982, although far from a vintage year for flaps, is no exception:

—Indians from various tribes picketed the Academy for failing to nominate "Windwalker," an independent film about life on the Plains before the white man. It was ineligible because it had been released in 1980.

—The Polish government asked the Academy to withdraw the nomination for foreign language film of "Man of Iron," which concerns the Solidarity movement. The Academy said the request came too late.

—NBC threatened to sue over Academy producer Howard W. Koch's edict that stars who appeared as presenters on NBC's "American Movie Awards" could not be on the Oscar show. The dispute was soon resolved as "a big misunderstanding."

—The Academy filed suit against "Your Choice for the Oscars" over the syndicated TV show's use of the word "Oscar." The dispute was settled when the show agreed to carry disclaimers denying any connection with the Academy.

And so it has gone, year after year, teapot tempests or raging battles adding color to the Academy's 54-year history. At least twice controversy has threatened the very existence of the Academy and its awards.

The first crisis came when the Academy was barely five years old. When the nation's banks closed in 1933, the studios used the crisis to hammer down salaries. Since the Academy was the only organization comprising all elements of the industry, it was used to negotiate pay cuts ranging up to 50 percent.

The banks reopened, but the cuts remained. Meanwhile studio bosses continued collecting $5,000 a week. Film workers started forming unions, and they accused the Academy of being a tool of the bosses. Membership dropped from 800 to 200.

"The Academy survived only by the grace of God," recalls Frank Capra, who became president in 1935. "The odds were 10 to one that the Academy would fold." But he and a few others gradually pursuaded the guilds and unions to participate, and the Academy revived.

Another crisis year: 1948.

The studios were beginning to feel the competition from television, and they withdrew their financial support of the Academy. Jean Hersholt resigned as president, accusing the studios of trying to influence Academy policy.

The poverty-stricken Academy was reduced to handing out Oscars in its own 850-seat theater. Finances were repaired, and a year later the ceremonies recovered their glamour at Grauman's Chinese theater.

Other controversies that have involved Oscar:

In 1939, George Bernard Shaw responded in England to his screenplay award for "Pygmalion": "It's perfect nonsense! To offer me an award of this sort is an insult, as if they had never heard of me before — and it's very likely they never had."

In 1940, guests arriving at the Los Angeles Biltmore were surprised to read the headline on the Los Angeles Times: "Eight Academy Awards Won By 'Gone With The Wind.'" The pre-release of the news caused a furor, and the Board of Governors decreed that ever afterward the awards would be secret until presented.

In 1941, Bette Davis, as president of the Academy, proposed the awards should be given as a benefit for British War Relief. She also suggested voting reforms and the staid Board of Governors was aghast. She resigned.

In 1951, at the height of the McCarthy era, Oscars went to Judy Holliday and Jose Ferrer, both under congressional fire for support of leftist causes. Said Ferrer: "This means a lot more to me than the honor to an actor."

In 1957, a writing award was voted to Robert Rich for "The Brave One." The Oscar went unclaimed for 18 years because no one could find Robert Rich. Finally in 1975 it was presented to the dying Dalton Trumbo, who had written the script under an alias because he was blacklisted as a radical.

Artist's a long way from cowboy days

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

He knew what he wanted to do in life; it was the "how to" he didn't know.

"It was the Sputnik generation and they had me programmed. I had three scholarships and was a scholastic student in the sciences in college. I was a pre-med major at the University of San Diego, but I was a bad student.

"I wanted to paint, I didn't really want to study," artist Buck McCain said in an interview prior to the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library's annual Contemporary Western Art private showing and sale held Saturday. Works purchased by Midland buyers will be on display at the library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., beginning Monday.

One of about 35 artists participating in the show, McCain was raised on a cattle ranch in Southern California. After completing his studies at the University of San Diego and the University of Guadalajara, which he loved — "Everybody falls in love there. It has the most beautiful women in the world." — McCain went to work as a cowboy on a ranch in Nevada.

Cowboying is "the lowest paying job for the longest hours," McCain said. He knew what he wanted to do, but again "how" was the question.

"I was painting for my own pleasure. I'd always been interested in it. It's what I always really wanted to do; the problem was I didn't know how to do it. For example, I'd never been in an art gallery."

A SMALL CAFE IN Fallon, Nev., became McCain's first gallery.

"I started putting paintings in this 24-hour cafe, and they started selling. My first commission was for a whorehouse in Reno; the madame used to eat in the cafe," McCain said.

"I really enjoyed the painting. I loved it. It was a lot better than cowboying," McCain said.

But McCain's success didn't happen overnight.

"It gradually evolved. I didn't literally stop (cowboying) and start painting. I worked into it slowly; it evolved over a long period of time while I continued cowboying.

"From there I went to work for Al Aaron," McCain said. At this time, Jim Clark, the show's organizer, joined in the interview, saying, "You got to start somewhere. You have to hope someone recognizes you, and they will if you're good enough."

McCain added, "I just came up through the ranks."

Clark described his relationship with McCain as: "I'm sort of his godfather. I take care of his work. He paints what he wants to or sculpts what he wants to, both he does from life, and we sell it."

Clark also talked about the local show and sale.

"IN THE WESTERN ART world, it's the fourth largest in existence. It's a really nice first class show."

It's not an auction.

Every year in this show, or any other that Clark does, the price is listed on each painting. Collectors have several opportunities to look at the work and decide what, if any, items they want to purchase. Then they put their names in the box designated for that piece of art. The drawings are held following the Saturday night dinner.

Auctions in the art world, as far as Clark is concerned, are "bad news for the art business. Prices get bent out of shape; they get too high. Too many get carried away — caught up in the bidding. That's not good for any business. Art is a unique commodity; you can't put art on sale. This way the price that is paid is the honest price for that piece."

Many of the artists represented in the show were in town for the event. Thus, the show also presents an opportunity for artists and collectors to get together and talk about a shared love — Western art.

And for McCain, who was awarded the Franklin Mint Gold Medal in the mid-'70s, "It's a long way from Nevada, when I used to sell a painting for $35, and the frame cost me $20."

Ustinov repeats role of Christie's Poirot

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gone are Philo Vance, Nick Charles, Nero Wolfe, Mr. Moto, Charlie Chan, Ellery Queen, Bulldog Drummond, Nick Carter, The Saint and all the other omniscient movie detectives. But — sacre bleu! — Hercule Poirot is still alive and arrogant.

The Agatha Christie sleuth, hero of her first published mystery, is returning to the nation's theaters in the Universal/EMI film, "Evil Under the Sun." As usual, Poirot has a colorful cast of suspects and victims: Maggie Smith, James Mason, Diana Rigg, Roddy McDowall, Sylvia Miles, Jane Birkin, etc.

Peter Ustinov is Hercule Poirot, repeating his role in the successful "Death on the Nile." This time he is on the prowl of the murderer of a Broadway star with a penchant for making enemies. The scene: a lavish resort in the Adriatic (actually the film was shot on Majorca, where the director, Guy Hamilton, lives).

Ustinov was here recently, and he talked about his alter ego, Poirot, who was created by Miss Christie in "The Mysterious Affair at Styles," written while she was a volunteer worker in World War I.

Is Ustinov a fan of the Christie art?

"Not really," he admitted. "I admire it, but I never read it. I admire Wagner, but I never listen to it. To appreciate Agatha Christie requires a crossword puzzle mind, which I do not have.

"I must say that my performance (in 'Evil under the Sun') kept its freshness. During most of the filming I couldn't remember whodunit."

New recording comers promising

By ROBERT HILBURN
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — If the pop scene seems lethargic these days, there is a reason. We are nearly into the second quarter of 1982, but we are still listening to last year's music.

Except for the "Great White North" comedy LP and the Simon and Garfunkel reunion package, the newest album on Billboard magazine's Top 20 last week was ACDC's "For Those About to Rock," and it was released early in December.

Three of the albums in the Top 10, in fact, have been on the charts for more than eight months: the Go-Go's, Foreigner and Journey. Five others are nearing or past their fifth month on the charts: the J. Geils Band, the Police, Olivia Newton-John, Loverboy and the "Chariots of Fire" sound track.

Though the new year is usually a slow period in a record biz that concentrates increasingly on the brisk fall-to-Christmas sales rush, the number of noteworthy new releases in recent weeks have been especially small.

Rock radio stations are in such desperate need of something new that they have turned their play lists over to hopelessly recycled hard-rock entries like Aldo Nova and Wrabit.

But do not lose hope.

There are at least six reasons for optimism, including a great new David Bowie-Giorgio Moroder single, a Blasters hookup with Warner Bros. Records that could propel the L.A. band's album into the Top 10 and an interesting, diverse crop of new groups, one of which is a sly mixture of ACDC and the Go-Go's.

The Good News:

1. DAVID BOWIE's "Cat People" (Backstreet) — Giorgio Moroder, the producer-composer, has given us some of the most seductive movie music of recent years, including the anxious "Midnight Express" and the sensual "American Gigolo." For the theme to "Cat People," Paul Schrader's new "erotic fantasy about the animal in us all," Moroder has switched from the nervous synthesizer pulse of the other films to a tough, guitar-oriented attack. But there is still plenty of familiar Moroder tension in this tale of Doors-like psychological obsession. Key line: "I'm putting out fire with gasoline." Bowie, who wrote the lyrics, responds with one of his strongest vocals in years. If the track isn't too unsettling for Top-40 radio stations, "Cat People" should be a smash.

2. RAY PARKER JR.'s "The Other Woman" (Arista) — Best known for the silky R&B of hits like "Jack and Jill" and "You Can't Change That," Parker shifts dramatically to a harder rock edge in this cheating man's semi-lament about how an intended interlude turned into a complicated affair.

This married man, you see, was just looking for a one-night stand, but he — whoops! — fell in love with this other woman.

So, he's understandably a little confused. Rather than a tortured exercise like Luther Ingram's old "If Loving You Is Wrong," however, this is more a playful tune with the mock-bravado of the Memphis soul tradition, complete with such naughty admissions as "Now, I hate to cheat, but it feels better when I sneak." Along with the more aggressive work of Rick James and Prince, "The Other Woman" is another welcome attempt at breaking down the barrier between R&B and rock.

Blood pressure often falls during sleep

Dear Dr. Solomon: What happens to a person's blood pressure when he is sleeping? Does it go up, down, or remain the same? — Ira, Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Ira: Arterial blood pressure ordinarily decreases during sleep, but why this occurs is not known.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and I have three children and I make enough so that I know they will all be able to go to college and get some of the advantages in life that I never got. But I won't be able to say that if we have any more children. When I told my wife that we ought to think about one of us being sterilized, she said she doesn't know anyone who ever had it done. As a matter of fact, I don't either, but don't some people get sterilized so they won't have children? — Mike, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mike: Quite a few people choose sterilization as a form of birth control. According to the Association for Voluntary Sterilization, over a million men and women were sterilized in the United States in 1980. Altogether, the total figure in the United States is 13 million men and women who have chosen sterilization.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I visited a friend in a hospital after he had a hernia operation. While I was there a nurse came in with some pills, but my friend refused to take them until he was told what they were. In fact he raised such a ruckus it embarrassed me. How do you handle a patient who insists on knowing what every kind of medicine is before he agrees to take it? — Greg, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Greg: I do not wait for my patients to ask me about the medication I prescribe for them. I tell them what it is and its purpose even if they do not ask.

In the first place, I respect my patients and treat them like the intelligent human beings they are. Secondly, I have found that a patient's compliance in taking medication is enhanced when he or she knows what is being taken and the reason for it. Therefore, sharing this information with my patients makes me a better doctor and permits me to be more effective.

I see nothing wrong in your friend's insistence on knowing what he was being given, and I hope you would do the same under similar circumstances. Who has a better right to know about medication than the person being asked to take it?

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

CONSUMER TIPS

Investigate siding companies before investing

By Linda Truitt
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Painting a house can be an expensive and time-consuming job if your house is not bricked. Faced with the reality of repainting every few years, many Permian Basin residents decide to throw away the paint brushes and apply vinyl or steel siding. Unfortunately, every year a significant number of homeowners are swindled out of hard-earned cash by a few dishonest siding companies. They are taken in by hasty deals with the greatest appeal in the world — something for nothing.

According to Jim Patton, owner of T-West Insulation and Siding, Inc., homeowners who use out-of-town siding companies have the worst problems. Companies with main offices in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Lubbock will set up temporary offices in either Midland or Odessa. Dishonest selling techniques will be used to secure jobs and, when a number of jobs have been completed, the office will be closed. When the homeowners want service, either he cannot find the company because it has gone bankrupt, or he will be told the company can only provide service if supply trucks happen to be coming his way.

DON'T FALL FOR THE SALES PITCH

Siding companies are notorious for using deceptive selling tactics to lure a home owner into buying siding. The old "model home" scheme is, perhaps, the most widely used strategy. The homeowner receives a direct mail advertisement, telephone call, or reads a newspaper ad that states by allowing his home to be used as a demonstration model he will be given either a discount on the price or commissions on resulting sales. Of course, the promised commissions never materialize and the discounts are from inflated prices.

Another common practice has been to advertise siding at ridiculously low prices purely for the purpose of obtaining sales leads. Salesmen who follow up leads developed by this "bait" advertising then attempt to switch prospects to a much more expensive product, usually at greatly inflated prices. To get the prospect to "switch," he is told the cheap siding is of inferior quality and will require extensive and costly maintenance. Sometimes, the big discount is then given making it appear to the homeowner he's getting a real bargain.

A variation of this is for the company to use factory seconds (flawed siding), according to Patton. The homeowner is told the siding carries the full factory warranty, but when the siding needs service, the factory tells the owner the truth — the siding has no warranty.

"Spiking-a-job" is what Patton calls another deceptive sales practice used by many out-of-town siding companies. The company will send out an applicator to start applying siding to the house the day after the salesman has sold the job, even though the federal law allows the homeowner 72 hours to change his mind. It is hope that by starting the job early the homeowner will be convinced the siding is needed.

GET THE FACTS

—Investigate the reputation of the company. Ask for references and then check them out. If the home office is located in another city, check their reputation in that city. It could be they are in the Permian Basin because they could not get a job anywhere else.

—Get at least two bids from reputable contractors. Remember that the cheapest bid is not always the best one, anymore than is the most expensive. Don't be bulldozed into signing with any contractor until you have had time to think over his proposition.

—Ask for quality, name-brand building products. Make sure the siding being installed is of good quality, as well as the insulation used underneath. Patton states a few companies are using aluminum foil underneath the siding instead of regular insulation.

—Check the warranty. You should get a warranty covering workmanship as well as a warranty covering the manufacturer's product. If you have to pay extra for the warranty, be careful.

—Read every contract and paper before you sign. Be sure the contract is completely filled in and signed by the salesman before you sing.

—Don't sign a completion release until you have thoroughly inspected the job and are satisfied with it.

Remember, only you can make it unprofitable for the dishonest siding companies to stay in business. Be wise, investigate before you invest.

your horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, March 22, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actors James Brown and William Shatner, lyricist Stephen Sondheim and U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) celebrate this birthday with you. A charmed time lies ahead for those who have prepared themselves to undertake new challenges. Business will be conducted under the best of conditions throughout most of the year! Expect to be unusually busy, but happy. Although love is a fleeting thing for many of you, those who really get to know their partners can build a lasting relationship. A more serious attitude is shown by those heading off to college or already working on degrees. Look forward to a new arrival at home.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can enlarge your circle of friends today by either attending a club luncheon or a party. Loved ones may have to be cautioned to make their money go farther.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is not like you to take love so lightly. Friends have trouble decoding what you are saying to them lately. Lay your cards on the table if you want their help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Luck and love go together this week! Get better organized at work so that you do not waste time looking for things. You receive a surprise from someone special.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A sensitive time for romance. Keep your head and everything will be okay! A power struggle at work will shift in your favor this week. Friends shower you with attention and love.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not sit around and wait for a lucky break. New beginnings pay off handsomely. Invest time and money in travel. It will give your business prospects a boost.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although you may enjoy secret dealings, you will not like their results. Be alert to fraud. Romance and finance are intertwined now. Do not take any unnecessary risks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You revel in some good news that arrives early in the day. New financial rewards may be involved. Reduced tension means increased productivity and greater rapport with loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new partner adds spice to your life. Look for the answer to a question that is on your mind. Your jealousy could be aroused by something that you see this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek cooperation this morning and you will have a very successful week at work. Your self-esteem grows. A romantic setting does not guarantee happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finding practical applications for your new ideas may take time. Patience and dedication are essential. A small child soon seeks and receives your full-time attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can dismiss those fears that sprang up regarding a family matter this weekend. Information that was kept from you is now revealed. Changes at work will be favorable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Today marks the start of what should be a marvelous week. It is easy to carry out your plans. Short trips are valuable in rebuilding a business relationship.

YOUR FUTURE IS RIGGED!

A warm dust blows over a West Texas field, stirring theories about timelessness in a dry desolate region. The only representative of modern day technology is a Ranger Rig, one of the many lines of rigs built by the Skytop Brewster Company. Influencing the course of the future is no easy task, especially to the benefit of man. But Skytop Brewster has a course which is "rigged" in your favor—we offer you the chance to grow, both personally and professionally. If your background meets with the requirements of the opportunity below, we invite you to join us in challenging the future.

SERVICE CENTER ACCOUNTANT

We presently have a position available in our Odessa office for a Service Center Accountant. Requirements call for an individual with a degree in Accounting, one or more years experience in an oil-related industry and familiarity with a computerized accounting system.

SKYTOP BREWSTER

Our benefits are what you would expect them to be—complete and professional. Interested and qualified candidates are asked to submit their resume in confidence to our Employee Relations Department, The Skytop Brewster Company, 4801 Woodway Drive, Suite 400E, Houston, Texas 77056. We are an equal opportunity employer, m/f.

29 EPA EST MPG 37 EPA EST HWY These figures were turned in by the Volvo diesel wagon during recent EPA mileage tests which compared Volvo against the 34 other cars in its class. Including diesels from Mercedes and Peugeot. Volvo outdid them all. Of course, fuel mileage is just one advantage the Volvo diesel wagon has over the competition. See your Volvo dealer and he'll show you more.

*The Volvo diesel wagon with manual transmission and overdrive. Use these numbers for comparisons. Actual mpg may differ depending on speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be lower.

The 1982 Honda Civic 4-Door Sedan. A roomy, comfortable automobile that comes with practically everything.

You'll also appreciate the Civic Sedan for its handsome interior, spacious trunk, remarkably responsive handling and smooth ride.

As well as tachometer, quartz digital clock and remote trunk release.

This car gives class to economy.

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan to value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six-month Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5% rounded to the highest 1/8 of 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.5% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 120%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS

Humpty Dumpty portrayed by Mrs. Guy Hall has mixed feelings in "A Play About Feelings" presented by the Junior League. The play was presented as part of the Cultural Arts Program in the Midland Independent School District.

Junior League supports community in service

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

A glance through Sunday's Lifestyle pages is evidence enough that many clubs exist in Midland. Some exist solely for social purposes, many are auxiliary organizations and a few are educational.

But throughout the years, one organization here has always been a leader in service.

It's the Junior League.

Major goals of the League throughout the years have emphasized health and welfare, and the arts—particularly concerning children.

Current projects of the league in health and welfare include audio/visual screening, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) instruction, involvement in the Children's Dental Clinic, publication and distribution of a Directory of Community Services, operation of Perinatal Clinic, volunteerism in the Physical Therapy Clinic, assistance in the Tape Lending Library, and instruction in the Adult Basic Education program.

Arts projects include the Cultural Arts program, Visual Arts program, Theatre Arts program, and volunteerism through tour guides of the Petroleum Museum, Museum of the Southwest, and the Haley Library and History Center.

New projects include the program of Exploratory Experiences for Gifted and Talented, and Young People's University.

These projects are not selected haphazardly. Committees are an important part of the League organization. It currently numbers 507 members, both active and sustaining.

Many projects have also been initiated by the League over the years that have been turned over to other agencies for permanent operation.

THEATRE ARTS

Approximately 265 seventh and eighth grade drama students in the Midland Independent School District toured Theatre Midland last November through the Theatre Arts program.

They were welcomed by Don Bachmann, director, and Ted Strickland, assistant director, who delivered a history of the Theatre and its role in the community.

Students visited the entire facility, including the Control Room and Scene Shop where employees explained the procedures involved wih lighting, sound, scene production and special effects.

Michael and Elizabeth Spicer, Children's Theatre directors, spoke to the students and encouraged them to become involved with the Pickwick Players.

League volunteers also gave a tour of the Theatre and answered questions about the facilities and opportunities available to the students.

League members leading the Theatre Arts program include Mrs. Sikes Johnson, chairman; Mrs. Jack Eiteljorg, researcher; Mrs. Ted Fergeson, Mrs. Ed Harris and Mrs. George Tucker.

CULTURAL ARTS PROGRAM

Goal of the Cultural Arts Program is to incorporate grade level theme concepts in order to provide enrichment in first and second grade cluster school settings.

This year Mrs. Jim Morrow wrote "A Play About Feelings" which involved Carmelita, the gypsy baby sister for Mother Goose; Jack and Jill; Humpty Dumpty; and three soldiers.

In a fun, musical setting, the play discusses problems and solutions that children face, such as hitting, tattling and hurt feelings. Songs included "Smile," "Self Control," "Goodness," and "Love."

Chairman of the Cultural Arts Program committee is Mrs. Charles Ray. Members include Mrs. Don Kidwell, Mrs. Guy Hall, Mrs. George Hover, Mrs. Nancy Coleman, Mrs. Bob Dutton and Mrs. Bill Wallace.

VISUAL ARTS PROGRAM

The Visual Arts program provides meaningful artwork, both educational and enjoyable, to areas in the community which need this service.

Some of the artwork is purchased and some is done by League volunteers.

This year, the committee is in the process of decorating the Allison Cancer Center.

Following the theme of "Images of Texas," the committee has hung 32 signed Beckendorf prints throughout the Center and two signed prints by Leroy Neiman.

A focal point is the quilt "Texas Star" which has been hung in the main waiting room.

The Beckendorf prints are of Texas wildlife and scenery. The Neiman prints were donated by Jastrow Gallery Inc.

Decorating will be completed next year, with plans continuing to hang more quilt art and Texas photographs and to do some painting on the walls.

MUSEUM OF THE SOUTHWEST

League volunteers were guides for two exhibits this year.

One exhibit, the "History of American Quilts," was a survey of the development and direction of quiltmaking in America from pioneer days to the present.

Many qults were on display showing patterns, stitches, techniques, materials and workmanship, all of which have made quiltmaking an important part of the American heritage.

The tour concentrates on the aerodynamic designing used in the Chaparral series of race cars built by Midlander Jim Hall. Several cars are on display.

League docents work with the Midland Independent School District and the museum to coordinate tours and introduce students to the museum.

Chairman of the museum volunteer program is Mrs. Lee House. Members of the committee include Mrs. Steve Betton, Mrs. David Childress, Mrs. Corby Considine, Mrs. Eugene Grimwood, Mrs. Tom Owens and Mrs. Louis Williams.

Student Art Festival co-chairmen are Mrs. Neal Meares and Mrs. George Bush.

"People of all ages tour the museum, from tiny babies to grandparents," said Mrs. House.

"In conducting student tours, we hope that they get a good learning experience coming to the museum. A lot of them have probably never even been to a museum before.

She said that she believes they get a wide exposure to what the exhibit offers. "For example, the quilt and the car exhibits have been totally different. We hope that the students will get a chance to learn what the museum experience really is.

"Of course, we, the volunteers, also learn about the new exhibits and get the education from that," added Mrs. House. "We also improve our skills as far as vocal presentation and speaking before the public.

"All of us have learned how important the museum is to the community, I think."

Charity Ball

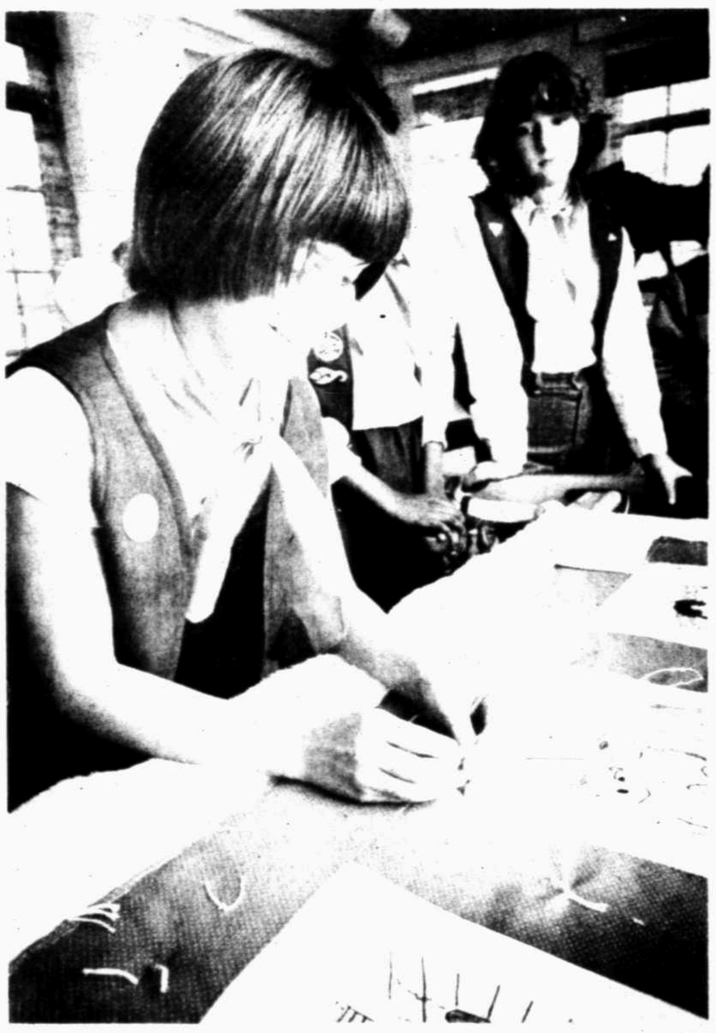

All of the Junior League projects on this page naturally require thousands of dollars to exist and continue. Activities are funded through two main sources: the Next-To-New Shop which is a secondhand store owned and operated by the Junior League; and the annual Charity Ball.

The ball is set to begin at 8 p.m. Friday in the Midland Center.

Theme of this black-tie event is "Le Bal aux Jardins" which translates into "Ball of the Gardens." Last year, approximately 1,000 persons attended this event, considered one of the social highlights of the year in Midland.

Entertainment will be provided by Mal Fitch and His Orchestra, and First Crossing.

Steely sculpture

Called "Forth," it is a six-ton steel sculpture that reaches 20 feet up toward the ceiling skylights in Stamford Town Center's downtown urban revitalization project.

"Forth" is painted bright red and is approximately 28 feet in length and 13 feet in diameter. With its completion, Perry can point to 65 major pieces to his credit throughout the United States and Europe, as well as Saudi Arabia and Australia.

Questions on colors

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We are moving from a large house into a condominium and I want to use my beige sofa in the living room. The new quarters aren't large so I have to pare dowm my belongings. However, I want to have a very attractive and decorative room.

What colors would look well with a tan sofa. What colors should I use for draperies and floor covering? — G.F.S.

A. You might be inspired by a room created by designer Bob-Jack Kallejo who selected a camel velvet upholstered L-shaped sofa with pillow accents and chrome-framed velvet benches in forest green.

For the window treatment, vertical blinds were selected in shades of vanilla, muschroom and green. Two contrasting wall coverings were used in the same colorations — one a small geometric and the other a larger stylized floral design.

To soften the deep rich floor tiles of the room, a straw rug was added. Although not a lot of flashy color was used, the room — because of its interesting contrasts and textural interest — was charming and lively.

Q. My guest room has off-white walls, off-white wood shutters and honey-toned hardwood floors. I have a number of pieces of refinished pine furniture — not really antiques but rather good primitive pieces.

The room is really rather dull and I'm not sure why. Perhaps with a very pretty spread I can add more life. With those kinds of things, should I choose a bright bold color scheme or something more restrained? — P.B.M.

A. How about a russet-colored, inviting comforter for the bed, rather than a spread. Stitch up a dust ruffle and perhaps a modified canopy in navy blue and rust calico.

Make some pillows of the calico for a chair or bench if you have one in the room.

Accent with copper, brass and greenery.

Q. I have dusty rose tile in my bathroom that dates the whole room.

What would you suggest would be a good color or colors to add?

A. I'm assuming you have white fixtures in this room with the dusty rose tile. If that's the case, what about a light and airy floral with perhaps a white background and lacey dusty rose and green flowers — light on the rose and heavier on the green and white.

Majority shun exercise

Between one-third and one-half of the U.S. population exercises on a regular basis. Physicians rarely prescribe exercise to their healthy patients.

Don't overdo hair spray

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Sprayed hair doesn't have to look that way, says Patrik Moreton, a hair stylist.

"I like to use an aerosol spray on hair, then run my fingers through the hair. This loosens the hair so that you have the body and the durability but not the set look," the stylist said.

"Like anything in excess, too much spray is bad," he added.

Girl Scout action project

Sharon Graham, left, and Jennifer Howard show their support for the Girls Scout's yearly action project, "The Gift of Water." According to information distributed by the Girl Scout office, water is conserved by placing a brick in the toilet. The pamphlet noted that a brick displaces a quart of water, so that a family of five with an average of four flushes a day would save 5 gallons a day. With 17,000 families in Midland, this would total a savings of 31,025,000 gallons a year.

Sharon is a member of Cadette Troop 474 in the Jupiter Neighborhood. Jennifer is a member of Brownie Troop 67 in the Great Bear Neighborhood.

Midlander copes with cancer

"The cost of living takes on a different meaning when it is your life you are talking about," a Midland National Bank bookkeeper told an American Cancer Society area audience at the Holidome this week.

Her audience had to listen closely.

Marie Dillestone, who was diagnosed with cancer of the larynx in 1976, was using a small attractive hand-held instrument which reproduced buzzer-like tones as clearly understandable words.

Holding the instrument to her throat, Mrs. Dillestone recounted how cancer had affected her life.

She and her husband conducted management seminars throughout Texas, she told her audience, and had a warm home life which included two grandchildren.

"My world was beautiful," she said. Then, she developed a slight case of hoarseness, one of the symptoms which may indicate a cancer of the larynx.

Her doctor performed a biopsy and it was determined that there was a malignancy affecting her vocal cords. She underwent an operation.

"I had known this man less than an hour," she said of the physician, "and he turned my world upside down."

She recalled how devastating it was to realize that she could no longer make a "sound of any kind."

But Mrs. Dillestone revealed the undercurrent of her message when she related how she told her nine-year-old grandson what had happened in a note.

"He looked at me and said, 'Good grief. Do you mean I'm going to have to read your writing for the rest of my life?'" Mrs. Dillestone's audience broke up with laughter.

That humor dotted her speech as she talked about learning to live as a largyngectomee. Within two months of her operation, she said, she was back conducting management seminars, using her artificial larynx. Today, she quite obviously leads a normal life.

She outlined how a local orgaization for laryngectomess was formed in the Permian Basin with 36 members.

Her testimony wrapped up a two-hour session Tuesday for Districts One and Two Crusade volunteers for the American Cancer Society in the Permian Basin.

The session included an urgent message from District One Director Janette Bowers of Alpine to encourage volunteerism in West Texas communities.

Dr. Eric Svenson, a physician with the Allison Cancer Center in Midland, and Melinda Leaseburg, an "I Can Cope" volunteer worker with the Americn Cancer Society, discussed how cancer is detected, treated and the patient grafted into a support system to help him deal with the disease.

The program continued through Tuesday afternoon, and focused on preparations for the Society's annual April crusade, which provides the funds needed to support the Society's programs of public and professional education, service and rehabilitation and research.

Juandelle Lacy of Midland, Ditrict Two crusade chairman and Helen McKim of Odessa, District One crusade chairman presided over the meeting.

The goal for this year's crusade in the two districts is $379,000.

Volunteers from Fort Stockton, Alpine, Rankin, Iraan, Odessa, Midland and Stanton attended the meeting.

Firmer tummy muscles lead to better results

Copley News Service

Chronic fatigue, poor digestion and back and leg pain often result from flabby stomach muscles and a pot belly. By firming this area you can look better, feel better and lead a more active, expressive life.

Here, as always, the best approach is a total one, combining positive mental activity with positive action.

First, take a look at your eating habits. Choose foods high in nutrients, low in calories and drink plenty of water. Also, be aware that food alergies can cause abdominal bloating. Dairy products, wheat and corn are common culprits. I find that by cutting out bread or by switching to rye, I can lose inches from my abdomen right away.

Next, correct your posture. The traditional method of standing erect with knees and shoulders relaxed, stomach pulled in and pelvis rotated slightly forward is still the best. Good posture improves abdominal tone and vice-versa.

To help get rid of that roll of fat just below the waist (or anywere else) I recommend the use of a loofa or natural fiber skin brush which can be purchased in a health food or body products store. Mine is a little over 2 feet long with handles on the ends. A rough towel can be used instead. Rubbing the skin briskly with one of these enhances blood circulation, carrying away wastes and excess fluids while promoting cell metabolism.

And now for the tummy exercises. The following are my favorites. You should breathe deeply and rhythmically while doing them, and at the same time visualize the results you wish to achieve. In your quiet moments, too, it helps to envision your stomach as flat and firm. Shaping up your inner image of yourself will definitely help you shape up your outer image.

1. Lie on your back with knees bent, hands clasped behind your head. Raise your head, shoulders and upper back from floor. Hold and release. Repeat as many times as you can, trying to perform the motion smoothly, without jerking. Do the same thing, rotating your body first to the right as you come up, then to the left.

2. Lie on floor with knees bent and someone holding your feet in place or tuck them under a heavy piece of furniture. With arms extended overhead, roll to a sitting position and touch your feet. Roll back slowly, keeping your back rounded and your chin tucked to your chest as you roll. Try to touch one vertebra at a time to the floor. Repeat several times.

3. Attach ankle weights. Then lie on your back on the floor. With hands beneath your buttocks, raise knees to chest, toes pointed. Pressing the small of your back tightly against the floor, straighten legs at a 45-degree angle to floor. Hold, and then release to chest. A variation is to scissor the legs several times once they are straight.

4. After doing these exercises, place feet a couple of feet apart on floor. Lift hips as high as possible, keeping shoulders on floor. Hold and relax. Repeat several times.

Note: If you are badly out of shape or have physical problems, consult your doctor before beginning an exercise program.

Dear Trisha: I've heard that it's good to use weights in developing the body, but won't this make bulging muscles? — D.T.

Dear D.T.: It takes a lot of repititions with quite a bit of weight to build muscle bulk and women don't have the genetic capability to build the kind of muscles men do. The weights that I recommend are fairly light. What they do is facilitate the development of firm, beautful muscle.

For directions on making inexpensive ankle and wrist weights, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Please send your questions about beauty to Trisha Yeager, P.O. Box 1017, Novato, CA 94948. Questions of general interest will be answered in this column. Volume of mail prohibits individual replies.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday, or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

Midland clubs hold meetings and activities

MORNING LITERATURE GROUP, AAUW

Dr. Mary Quinlivan, professor of history at UTPB, spoke to the Morning Literature Group of the Midland Branch, American Association of University Women, on the history of children's literature up to the Civil War period.

Dr. Quinlivan particularly emphasized books by Jacob Abbott.

ELCOR WIVES CLUB

Mrs. Jerry Dunn was hostess to the Elcor Wives Club in her home. Mrs. Gordon Stafford was named president.

Other new officers are Mrs. Bob Grace, vice president; Mrs. Cooper Daw, secretary, and Mrs. Joe McAneny, treasurer.

New members introduced were Mrs. David Jelf and Mrs. John Sewell.

Special recognition was given to the outgoing officers, telephone committee chairman and publicity chairman. The 1981-82 officers were Mrs. Philip Cochran, Mrs. Nancy Stafford, Mrs. Ben Nichols, Mrs. Joe Lynch, Mrs. Pat Erdwurm, Mrs. Dick Rosenberry and Mrs. Grace.

SAND AND SEED GARDEN CLUB

The Sand and Seed Garden Club met in the home of Nancy Ginzel, following a tour of Midland's Taylor Brown Dorsey Home. Anne Bickham was a guest.

Joan Cunningham announced the following slate of officers for 1982-83: Mrs. Cunningham, president; Rosemary Rose, first vice president; Dorothy Westlake, second vice president; Karen Puckett, treasurer, and Jo Barbee, secretary.

Barbara Drake discussed the fall flower show to be held Oct. 23 in the Midland Senior Center. She also reported on the Texas Garden Clubs, Inc., spring convention to be held April 7 in the Odessa Holidome.

The next meeting will be April 22 in the home of Sharon Dunnam. Mrs. Dunnam and Barbara Porsch will give a program on "Sand Sculpture."

PAINTER DAUBERS

The Paint Daubers met in the home of Jim and Nelda Eakin, 2602 Maxwell Drive, to make plans for a sale at Dellwood Mall April 3.

Demonstrators during the sale will be Coney Thomas, stained glass; Jo Barbee, weaving, and Lula Belle Klingler, oil painting.

XI ALPHA MU CHAPTER, BSP

The Xi Alpha Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in the home of Judy Jehring and elected Jill Arthur president.

Other new officers are Beverly Acker, vice president; Ann Tayrien, recording secretary; Pat Phillips, corresponding secretary, and Pauline Watson, treasurer. Brenda Nance was elected city council representative, and Peggy Brown was named alternate.

Genell Emerson reported on a recent social, a kidnap slumber party for members. Plans were made for members to attend the state convention to be held in Fort Worth June 25-27.

Members voted for the chapter Girl of the Year who will be announced at the Founders' Day luncheon to be held April 24.

MIDLAND RETIRED TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

Linda Bond presented a slide and musical program on her trip to England and Scotland when the Midland Retired Teachers Association met in the parlor of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Louise Weir, assistant state director of Districts 18 and 19, spoke on the importance of retired teachers supporting their organization. She stated retired teachers do not receive an automatic cost of living increase in their annuities, so increased membership is a prime priority and of utmost importance when approaching the Legislature for increased benefits for retired teachers.

The state convention will be held April 2-3 in Houston. Odessa will host an area drive-in conference May 3, it was announced.

MIDLAND JUNIOR WOMAN'S CLUB

The Midland Junior Woman's Club had a spring style show sponsored by Betty's Boutique.

Plans were discussed for the April 25 Parade of Homes. Four homes will be shown between 1 and 5 p.m., with proceeds benefiting the Palmer Drug Abuse Program. Tickets may be obtained from club members or the parade chairmen, Kathy Dill, 694-0186, and Brenda Faught, 684-9798.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Soap pumps

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a great idea for using liquid soap pump containers when they run out of soap. I fill them with liquid dishwashing detergent.

If you don't like the color of the container or if it just doesn't blend in with your kitchen, why not make a little skirt to cover it?

Just cut a piece of material long enough to cover the bottle and wide enough to make a pretty gather around the bottle. Fold over one edge and stitch, making a casing. Insert a piece of elastic, sewing up the seam.

Either hem or pink the bottom edge to prevent fraying. — Carrie Fracassa

Cute idea to cover a bottle so you can show it off. So much better than dragging that bottle of dishwashing liquid out of the cabinet each time you need to use it.

Plus that pump bottle's always handy for cleanups that require only a quick squirt. — Heloise

NICE 'N' THICK

Dear Heloise: I like a thick soup but don't care for flour or cornstarch as thickeners.

To compensate, I put about half of the cooked vegetables and a little of the broth into the blender and puree it.

When returned to the soup kettle and stirred, it makes a thick soup without any added calories. — Claudia Mackin

CAP COVER

Dear Heloise: I obtained a new cover for my vanity chair by using a terry-lined plastic shower cap.

By placing it on the chair, terry side up, I had an attractive upholstering job! — Sharon Stovall

CHAIR WASH

Dear Heloise: Take baby's highchair, stroller, walker, etc., to the local car wash.

The high pressure and hot water clean dried-on food and dirt from all the folds and crevices.

Just be sure to dry them well to prevent any rusting. — Lynda Geddes

GIFT GIVING

Dear Heloise: I cover a coffee can or small box with pretty self-sticking shelf paper.

Throughout the year I buy small articles to put in this container, such as a bottle of lotion, a handkerchief, scarf, bottle of perfume, etc.

At Christmas or any other gift-giving occasion, I tie a pretty ribbon on the container and I have a special gift for a shut-in.

I don't notice the cost and the reward I get from a shut-in's smile is worth it all. — Lillian Griffin

SECURITY GUARD

Dear Heloise: To keep you from losing your watch or rings, hang a cuphook near your sink to hang them on.

This way, you won't misplace them or risk having them fall into the sink and down the drain. — Anna Brown

Send your favorite household hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer your letter personally, but she'll feature the dandiest tips received in her column.

DEAR ABBY

Troubled wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Being married to a doctor is hard enough, but being married to a young, good-looking, successful one is double trouble.

It's not his patients he gets involved with, it's his office help. After his first affair, I thought I was partly to blame, so I gave him all the attention he needed at home, in bed and elsewhere. But after his third affair, I offered him a divorce so he could marry his secretary. He swore that he really loved me and the last thing he wanted was a divorce. If it were not for my faith and my children, I would have ended my life.

Abby, why is he doing this to me? Why can't he fire his secretary? I have talked to her, but, of course, she's too much in love to listen to me.

I don't know how much more of this I can take. Should I be doing something more? Marriage counseling might help, but he won't hear of it. Please advise me and pray for this ... UNHAPPY DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Firing his secretary won't help. He'd probably initiate an affair with the next one. Give him an ultimatum. Either he gets counseling to try to get over his playing around, or you're leaving. Please get counseling yourself to help you cope with this situation. Lead from strength. If he thinks you don't mean it, he'll continue his present behavior.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the dialogue that appeared recently between "Longtime Pastor" and "Lutheran Mother":

I, too, have had some unusual requests for weddings, such as a couple in their 80s asking that the choir sing "The Impossible Dream." (Request denied.)

However, I have also performed a wedding ceremony for an "obviously pregnant bride" because the couple had been previously refused by a Catholic priest. They had been loyal church members, and this rejection had driven them and both sets of parents away from the Catholic Church. They were under a great deal of pressure and on the verge of walking away from Christianity altogether.

Jesus frowned on premarital sex, but he also forgave a woman caught in adultery. The United Methodist wedding service I use doesn't ask the bride and groom whether they are virgins. However, it does ask them whether they will HENCEFORTH remain true to each other, and I expect them to take that vow seriously.

Frankly, I gave the man a lot of credit for not running away, and the woman for wanting a church wedding. I am tired of denominational legalism or fundamental dogmatism wrecking lives of people in the name of Christ. – THE REV. J. ROGER SKELLEY-WATTS, BOLIVAR, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: The story of the married man who castigated her father in his own home in the presence of others for committing the unforgivable crime of talking with his mouth full still infuriates this 58-year-old father. She described him as "warm and loving."

Does that lady not know that there are abusive fathers, drunken fathers, cruel fathers and deserting fathers? I liken her action to that of a woman who receives a beautiful present, then complains bitterly because she doesn't like the box it came in.

May I tell that lady a story:

Once upon a time it was considered ill-mannered, vulgar and completely unacceptable to break your crackers in your soup. Then one night at a dinner party an American broke his crackers in his soup. This was duly reported. Suddenly it became quite acceptable to break your crackers in your soup.

Why? Because your nation was no longer singing, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" Why? Because your nation was singing, "Happy Days Are Here Again." Why? Because the name of the American who broke his crackers in his soup was Franklin Delano Roosevelt!

If you use this, sign me ... CRANKY IN CANADA

AT WIT'S END

Fattening sights

By ERMA BOMBECK

This column could be the most important document you've read since the small print of your credit union loan.

Listen to this. Scientists at Yale University have just concluded some people, especially those who are overweight, can gain weight just by looking at fattening foods. It's true. They discovered that when people carrying extra pounds looked at food, smelled it, or even listened to it sizzle, their bodies released increased levels of insulin which accelerated their conversion of sugar into fat.

And all these years, I believed my cadaver friends who waved a piece of cake under my nose and coaxed, "It won't hurt you just to smell it!"

Have you any idea how many times I've listened to cereal snap, crackle and pop and thought it was just another waltz? Or the TV commercials I've watched in ignorance while I outgrew my chair?

And when I think of the times I've sat in a theatre next to three boxes of buttered popcorn, I could kill them for costing me two beauty queen titles.

But the most revealing thing about this survey is that we don't have to inhale food to suffer its consequences, and where have we heard that before?

I'm taking my anti-eating crusade to the airlines. Why should I have to sit next to a person who stuffs calories into every opening in his face and gain weight for what he eats?

I don't want to stand in a crowded elevator any more next to a man with banana breath or wait in a doctor's office with a woman pigging out on candy bars.

I'm going to put a sign on the office doughnut pusher's desk saying, "Thank you for not eating." And I'll target restaurants and convince them they should have two eating sections: the serious side where they cook at your table and wheel a dessert cart around for you to see, and a godforsaken place where diners may pick at their lettuce alone.

As for grocery shopping, it's what I've suspected for years. They should have a sign over the door that reads, "CAUTION: This store causes fatness. Shop at your own risk."

Just writing this column has probably put a pound or two on me, but it's not the first time I've had to eat my own words.

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

A brand-new baby is just about the greatest thing this world has to offer. Babies are soft and cuddly and sweet-smelling — and they burp.

Any soft baby print will work, or you can use a receiving blanket (new ones should be prewashed and dried). From your fabric cut two pieces in the shape of a short, fat dog bone. The dimensions should be approximately 18 inches long, 8 inches wide at the wide ends and 5 inches wide at the center.

Stitch the two shapes right sides together, leaving an opening for turning. Turn, close opening and press. And that's a burp pad. You can add a layer of fleece between the layers of fabric for a softer pad.

Also, if you want to fancy up your burp pads, ruffled trim may be added to the outside edge. Baste trim to the right side of one fabric piece, stitch pieces together and turn. Tiny ribbon bows may be tacked to each end of pad, but do not attach the bows where babies might get them in their mouths.

One burp pad is like one diaper — not nearly enough. Make a dozen or so. Give two or three — or four or more — pads to a new mother. She'll love you for it.

Dal Walraven, president of D W Roofing and board member for Christmas In April, Inc., said the goal for 1982 is to repair 150 homes. Walraven and all his employees volunteer their time each to help repair homes for Christmas In April.

'Christmas In April' all year

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Christmas In April isn't just in April any more.

Dan Walraven, president of D W Roofing and a board member for Christmas In April, said, "We spent $3,000 last winter fixing pipes that broke, heaters that went out — these are things that can't wait."

He said a group of students do work for Christmas In April all during the summer months. "It's turning into a part-time thing all year round."

Christmas In April is a project in Midland, for which members of the community join together to repair homes of people who can't afford to have their homes repaired themselves. The homes to be repaired must belong to people who are 60 or older or handicapped and who own their own homes.

Walraven said he first became interested in Christmas In April when he read about the project in the newspaper. "I saw a group of citizens taking care of their own. I was inspired because there was no government involved, it was the community taking care of its citizens. Midland has been good to me, so I figured, why not?"

The major repair project on the homes chosen for Christmas In April is done usually on the last weekend in April. Volunteers working for the project form into teams or crews, pick the house they want to repair at a meeting for volunteers held a few weeks before the Christmas In April weekend, and get to work on the designated weekend.

Walraven said his team for Christmas In April is usually, "all the employees in my company plus some church members, and we get it done in one weekend. Last year we had between 15 and 18 on the crew. I'm shooting for 23 this year."

"Last year we took a whole house — we rescreened, painted, fixed the roof, did some sheetrocking," he said. "That's when they asked me to become a board member."

Walraven said his employees are eager to help with Christmas In April. "I tell them what it's for and they jump right in. They enjoy it. It's very rewarding for them. They get a charge out of helping someone who needs help. It's a warm feeling."

The homes chosen for repair by Christmas In April are screened by a committee of people knowledgeable about what types of repairs need to be done. Walraven said this year, "I helped survey. We went out and looked at the houses that have been screened to see what repairs are needed, what supplies are needed. I was depressed to see, in a city this wealthy, how many houses are needing repair."

He said Christmas In April was started nine years ago by Bobby Trimble, "president and coordinator of the whole thing."

Nine years ago, the goal for Christmas In April was fixing nine houses a year, Walraven said. "This year we hope to fix 150 homes. Last year we fixed 110 houses for about $60,000."

"It's a good program," he said, "To me our biggest problem is getting enough people to volunteer their time and labor. All the labor used for Christmas In April is volunteer."

Walraven said, "The more people we get, the more houses we can do. You'd think after nine years we could get all these houses fixed."

With all the labor being volunteer, all or nearly all of the money donated to Christmas In April can be used to buy materials to make the repairs. "The money is spent very wisely," said Walraven, "Bobby Trimble puts every dollar into material for people that he can. Christmas In April is a non-profit organization — everything goes to the people. It has an almost non-existant administration cost."

"Everything is donated," he said, "It all goes to the people who need it. The advertising is donated, the food for the workers is donated, etc. This is a local mission that I back totally. If you're going to help someone else, why not help out your home town first?"

Walraven said he would like "to get more people involved in Christmas In April, so we can help more people and relieve some of the burden on the ones who are already involved. To take a day of your time and help someone is very rewarding."

He said he has a great deal of respect for the Christmas In April project. "I think it ought be nationwide."

The goal for Christmas In April in 1982 is to repair 150 houses on April 24.

A meeting of volunteers or team supervisors will be held on April 8 in the First National Bank Room at First National Bank, at 7:30 p.m. Photographs of the houses to be repaired will be displayed. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer for Christmas In April is welcome at the meeting, or can call 694-2206 for further information.

Tax deductible contributions can be made to Christmas In April, Inc., P. O. Box 3744, Midland, Texas, 79702.

West African nations

The West African nation of Gambia is about four-fifths the size of Connecticut. It has only 601,000 people. The nation looks somewhat like a finger probing some 200 miles into the heart of Senegal, which surrounds it on three sides. Senegal is much larger, in size and population; its capital, Dakar, alone has a population of 800,000.

Senegal is a former French colony, with French as its official language and with cultural and economic ties to France.

English is the official language of Gambia, which is culturally and economically linked to Great Britain.

Testing babies for vision problems

By CECILIA GOODNOW
Hearst Feature Service

If a child has vision problems, it's best to find out as soon as possible. But that's easier said than done, since infants can't read a standard eye chart and toddlers are too restless.

But researchers have sidestepped these obstacles by developing a system that capitalizes on babies' natural fascination with pattern and movement. The elaborate equipment — which can detect such problems as lazy eye, far-sightedness and astigmatism within several weeks of birth — may become a standard screening tool in pediatric clinics within the next decade, one researcher predicts.

"When you take your baby to the doctor, they try to do rough screening. But this system is more sophisticated than rolling a red ball across the floor," said Velma Dobson, a research assistant professor in the psychology department at the University of Washington in Seattle.

To demonstrate the system, Dobson enlisted the help of Jennifer Romberg, a healthy 5-month-old.

Jennifer's mother, Patti, held the bubbly infant in her lap, about two feet from a gray partition the size of a large puppet theater. Patti waved her fingers to lead Jennifer's gaze to a panel of blinking red and green lights in the center. The blinking panel, an attention-getting gimmick, was then lifted out of sight to reveal two discs set into the screen about two feet apart.

One disc was flat gray. The other was striped gray and white. Which would Jennifer choose?

Jennifer's eyes gravitated to the striped pattern on the right, an indication that she was able to distinguish between the two.

Instantly, a black plexiglass window on the right side of the partition lit up to reveal a stuffed mechanical bear banging noisily on a toy drum. After a brief enticing flash, the toy was turned off and the window grew dark again, obscuring the toy.

Jennifer looked nonplussed. Although she didn't know it, this noisy clamor was her reward for a correct response.

Again, Patti directed Jennifer's attention to the blinking panel, which rose like a theater curtain to reveal two different discs. An unseen assistant turnd the wheel to change the presentation.

Jennifer ignored the gray disc and focused on the patterned disc. Sure enough, a mechanical toy again appeared inside the black plexiglass box on the left side of the partition.

Neither the mother nor Dobson knew which side of the screen would contain the patterned disc, a feature designed to prevent bias in the test results. Dobson said some mothers might coach their babies because "they want their kid to be the best kid that ever came in."

Dobson has tested the system with childen up to five years of age, and it works well for all but the 18-month-olds, she said.

"Not all of them will sit still," Dobson explained.

The system is simplest to use with infants, because their eyes automatically "lock on" to the patterned disc without the reward of the mechanical toy. And because infants don't object to being held by strangers, it is not necessary for mothers to be present. In those cases, Dobson holds the infant upright — much as a toddler clutches a doll — and focuses a closed-circuit television camera through the peephole into the baby's face. Dobson then views the infant's responses on a television screen fastened to the wall.

The system, which cost about $5,000 to build, is being used to chart the development of eyesight in normal babies. "There is very little data on how vision develops in children," Dobson said.

As a diagnostic tool, it is especially helpful with cross-eyed babies, who may develop a "lazy eye" if the problem is not corrected before school age, Dobson said. The system also is helpful in testing older children with mental handicaps.

The system is used in only a few clinics across the country, such as Children's Hospital in Boston and the Berkeley College of Optometry, Dobson said.

Home repairs

Q. — I always seem to have trouble putting on the putty when I have to replace a broken window pane. I have no broken pane to replace right now, so I thought this might be a good time to learn how to handle the installation of the putty. Do you put the putty around the edges of the new pane or do you put it into the channels?

A. — Place the putty into the channels first. To do it, first take a chunk of the putty or glazing compound and roll it between the palms of your hands so that it resembles a pencil. Place the putty into one channel sash, then another, and so on. When all the putty is in the sash, carefully install the pane of glass. Now take the glazier's points and push them into the sash. When that has been done, go through the same procedure with more putty and cover the edges of the pane. Shape it to match the putty on similar panes of the window or a nearby window. When everything is all set, trim off the excess putty. The putty can be shaped neatly with a putty knife, after which you will have to do a bit more trimming. Read the label on the putty or compound can to determine whether that type of product can be painted immediately or later — that is, providing you intend to paint it.

Q. — We want to install wall-to-wall carpeting over our living room floor, which is regular hardwood flooring. However, the floor squeaks a bit when walked on in certain areas. It has been suggested that I put down some plywood or hardboard before installing the carpeting and this will eliminate the squeaks. Is this so?

A. — No, although there is a slight possibility that it will do so if the squeaks are emanating from the top or finished floor. Generally, the squeaks are coming from the subfloor because of a separation between that floor and the beams. In that case, you will have to try to eliminate the noise in the same way you would even if you weren't putting down carpeting. Drive nails into the squeaky spot, hopefully where the flooring strips across the beams, after first making pilot holes. Drive the nails in pairs, separated by a couple of inches and at an angle so that the points almost touch inside the wood. If you don't make pilot holes first, the nails are likely to bend in the hardwood.

Q. — I saw your answer recently to someone who asked about lacquer over varnish, and you said that lacquer would tend to lift the varnished surface. Is the same thing true the other way round? Will varnish put on over lacquer soften the lacquer?

A. — No.

Sewing for children

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Have you ever heard of Strawberry Shortcake? If you haven't, you must not know any little girls. Strawberry Shortcake is a must.

Offray has a line of beautiful, high-quality Strawberry Shortcake ribbons, in both grosgrain and satin, in several widths. These pretty ribbons will tie up pony tails, of course, but they also make beautiful trim for dresses, bloomers, sunsuits and tops. Be sure to pre-wash ribbon as you do your fabric to prevent puckering later.

Each day I am amazed at the fascination buttons have for small children. While mother shops for fabric, little ones entertain themselves by turning the button carousel, and "oohing" and "ahing" over all the pretty sights. Why not light up the eyes of your little one by allowing him or her to buy a card of buttons next time you shop. Take my word for it, you'll be a hit!

It doesn't take much fabric to make a little dress, shirt or blouse. The remnant counter, of course, is a great place to look for pieces of fabric you can use. But don't overlook the advantage of "over buy." When you buy a piece of fabric for yourself, "over buy" a half yard or so and have plenty to whip up something for your little one.

You can allow "grow room" in the things you make for your child by leaving a little extra here and there.

Cut extra-long tails on shirts and blouses. Use wide hem allowances on dress and skirts. When little arms begin to exceed the sleeves, make short sleeves. A dress that has a waistline seam can be made "growable" by cutting extra-wide seam allowances. Stitch bodice and skirt together at regular seamline, bind raw edges of wide seam allowances. To let out, stitch a new seam close to bound edges, rip out original seam. Presto! Both bodice and skirt are longer.

Guide to choosing fast foods

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Fast foods - are they good or bad? How did we become a nation addicted to fast hamburgers and instant fried chicken?

Before World War II, the United States was more of a regional collection of areas that were closely identified with the kinds of foods they produced. Famous recipes were named for the places that produced them. Texas chili, New England clam chowder, Boston baked beans, Southern fried chicken, Virginia ham, New Orleans creole are mouth-watering examples of regional diversities and our varying ethnic heritage.

Food habits varied through the country, but most people ate their meals at home and Sunday dinner was a tradition. Mother was the nutritionist, if she thought about it, and dinner in a restaurant was a gala affair.

World War II changed all that. Out of necessity we became a transient, mobile society. Our food habits also became transient, mobile — and fast. Eating away from home became a necessity, rather than an occasional treat. Rising to the situation with admirable American ingenuity were such farsighted entrepeneurs as Ray Kroc of McDonald's and Col. Harlan Sanders with his Kentucky Fried Chicken. The groundwork was laid for our present barrage of fast foods with sales of more than $19 billion.

As a fast food consumer are you jeopardizing your health in any way? Can fast foods be blamed for our increasing obesity and other diet-related diseases that plague thousands of people every year? Possibly. The high calorie, high fat, high salt content of many fast foods can be very damaging on a daily basis. However, the more nutritionally informed consumer may be able to avoid some of the damaging effects of such foods by simply making better choices.

Instead of ordering a calorie laden lunch of a double hamburger, french fries and a coke, a pizza with a salad and milk is just as available and fast, with fewer calories and more nutrition.

On a platter of fried chicken, cole slaw, mashed potatoes and rolls, much of the salt and fat is contained in the batter on the chicken. If you remove that and eat the chicken, vegetables and roll you will have a nutritious meal with less salt, calories and fat.

Avoiding the compulsions to clean the plate, or salting the foods before tasting can help significantly in lowering salt and calorie levels. With a little practice these bad habits (and that's all they are) can be broken.

The best guide to good nutrition for healthy, normal people are still the four food groups:

1. Meat, fish, fowl.
2. Fruits and vegetables.
3. Milk and dairy products.
4. Breads and cereal grains.

It is possible to get all of them in many fast foods. A taco, for example, consists of a cereal shell, ground meat or chicken, shredded cheese, lettuce and tomato. Pizza has a cereal crust, tomato sauce, cheese and various vegetables and meat toppings. A cheeseburger with lettuce, tomato and onion does meet the four food group criteria.

Avoiding the calorie-laden french fries and salty fat encrusted fried batters, doughnuts, sweet desserts, sugary soft drinks and excess salt when eating in any fast food outlet can mean the difference between a potentially dangerous routine and a fairly nutritious diet.

Certainly fresh foods served by loving hands at home are the best, but when fast and cheap foods are the only alternative, you can still make some pretty good choices if you use your head when eating in a fast food outlet.

If you desire information on my home weight control study program, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, P.O. Box 1038, Rancho Mirage, CA 92270. Personal questions will be answered in my column as space allows.

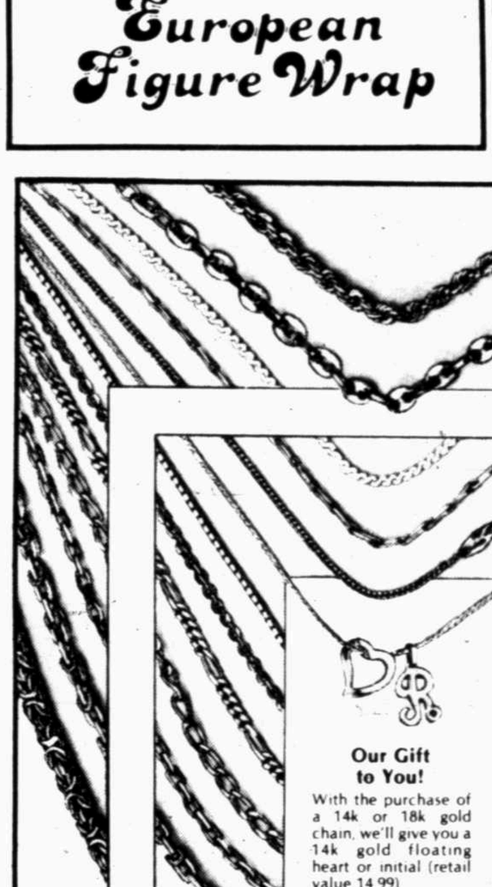

No ice in ice cream

That is because the optimum level for storing ice cream is 15-20 degrees Fahrenheit "below" zero. Home freezers maintain temperatures down to only 10 degrees "below" zero, explains Shirley Franklin of Sealright, a dairy and ice cream packager.

Melody Stewart honored

Melody Stewart has been honored as the Outstanding Girl of the Month by the Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women. The award was presented at the March branch meeting in Commercial Bank & Trust.

Miss Stewart, a senior at Lee High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Stewart. She ranks fourth in her class of 498 with a grade point average of 4.425. She has received two academic letters and two PTA merit awards, is the 1981-82 president of the National Honor Society, member of JETS, Student Council, the President's Cabinet, and has been named to "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

She has been in the band since seventh grade and served as drum major for the Lee band this year. She has received five solo and ensemble medals, was named to the All-Region Band four years, and is listed as a member of the All-American Band Hall of Fame.

She has lettered in track and cross-country.

Miss Stewart has studied piano 12 years. She has won the Whitlock Theory Medal Award nine times, and has been a member of the Texas State Piano Ensemble Team eight years and a member of Student Affiliate eight years.

After graduation from LHS this spring, Miss Stewart plans to attend Texas A&M University, seeking a degree in petroleum engineering.

The Midland Branch selects an outstanding senior girl from a local high school each month of the school year. To be eligible, a girl must maintain at least a 3.5 grade point average and be actively involved in family, home, church, community and school activities. Nomination forms are available from AAUW members.

America's first test-tube baby

By WALTER S. ROSS

(Special from Reader's Digest)

On July 26, 1978, the phone rang at the home of Dr. Howard W. Jones Jr., and Dr. Georgeanna S. Jones, husband-and-wife professors of obstetrics and gynecology at Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, Va.

"Have you heard about the first test-tube baby, born last night in England?", a reporter asked excitedly. "Can you explain the medical techniques?"

The Joneses probably knew more about it than anyone else in the United States. They had been treating human infertility for nearly 40 years — he as a gynecological surgeon, she as a gynecologist-endocrinologist.

Fifteen years earlier, while at Johns Hopkins Medical School, Howard Jones had worked with Robert G. Edwards, a Cambridge University specialist in reproductive physiology. Edwards had perfected the technique of fertilizing mice eggs outside the body in a laboratory petri dish.

Later, he fertilized human eggs this way — the first time it had ever been done. In 1978, working in England with gynecologist Dr. Patrick C. Steptoe, Edwards had developed the breakthrough technique that enabled Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, a previously infertile couple, to have the child the reporter was calling about.

"Could the British method be duplicated in Norfolk?", he asked. "Don't see why not," Dr. Howard Jones replied.

"Actually, we had no idea of starting this program," Dr. Jones told me. "But a few days after that telephone interview was published, I received a call from an infertility patient Georgeanna had treated successfully with conventional methods. She offered $5000 to help us fund a project that would make the new fertilization techniques available here."

The project was approved after careful investigation by the medical school, the executive committee of the medical staff of Norfolk General Hospital — where the proposed laboratory would be quartered — and by the hospital's board of directors. Immutable ground rules were established.

Only stable married couples living together, could be accepted into the program.

There could be no surrogate mothers or fathers. A woman's egg must be fertilized only with her husband's sperm and replaced in her own body.

Successfully fertilized eggs must be returned to the woman's body; they were not to be discarded.

Only women unable to conceive because of irreparable problems with their Fallopian tubes would be eligible. They had to be under 35, have at least one functioning ovary, a normal uterus and a regular menstrual period.

Most pre-menopausal women produce a single mature egg during each menstrual cycle. It develops inside a blister-like follicle on the surface of an ovary until, about the 14th day of the cycle, the follicle grows to approximately 23 millimeters, at which time it opens and the egg emerges: ovulation.

The egg enters into one of the two Fallopian tubes where, if sperm are present, it may be fertilized and, in about 36 hours, become an embryo.

Meanwhile, hormones have prepared the lining of the uterus to accept the embryo. Within 72 hours after ovulation, the embryo completes its passage down the tube and settles into the uterus to become a fetus.

To try to duplicate the natural process of fertilization in women who lack functioning Fallopian tubes, Norfolk General doctors must remove a mature egg from the ovary and help fertilize it while bypassing the tubes. The major problem is pinpointing the time when a patient has a mature egg, and removing it before ovulation.

Once the egg is surgically removed from the woman's ovary, through a tube inserted into the abdomen, it is rushed to the lab and placed in a preheated petri dish containing a culture medium that simulates the environment inside the Fallopian tube. The husband's sperm are transferred to the dish from a heated glass tube.

After incubating the egg and sperm at body temperature for 18 hours, the egg is placed in a different culture medium for another 18 hours so that cell division may occur and fertilization thus confirmed. When this is achieved, the embryo is inserted into the patient's uterus via the vagina. She is able to leave the hospital that same day, but remains in Norfolk a week for daily blood tests. Then she returns home and waits to see if her period arrives. If it does, she knows the implant has not taken — and may choose to return for another trial within six weeks.

In Jan. 1980, the Drs. Jones and their staff made several successful attempts at egg retrieval. But it was not until spring '81 that the first of these implants "took" — resulting in the birth of America's first test-tube baby. A 5-lb. 12-oz. girl was born by Caesarean section to Judith and Roger Carr of Westminster, Mass. on Dec. 28 at Norfolk General Hospital.

"The entire project is still experimental," says Dr. Howard Jones. "We don't know all the answers but we do know the problems — and they're solvable." He reports that seven more clinic patients are now pregnant.

Fixing up at home

By AL CARRELL

With spring just around the corner, it's probably time for you to spring into action and see what damage Mother Nature and Jack Frost might have done during the winter. Also some of the things you do now will help you make it through the summer.

When it's safe to get up on the roof, you should inspect it for any loose or missing shingles and make any necessary repairs. While you're up there, also check the TV antenna to be sure it's well anchored, not corroded, and aimed the right way. Any time you go up on the roof, be sure to wear slip-proof shoes and don't take any chances. Never go up on a windy day or when the roof is wet. If you have a fear of doing this, get someone else to get up there.

You should also get on a ladder and check the rain gutters and downspouts. If they are clogged with leaves or other debris, they can cause problems. I like to use my hands to scoop leaves out of the gutters, but if you do it this way, wear tough work gloves. Some folks use other things to do the scooping such as a whisk broom or a rubber kitchen spatula. The easiest way is to use a vacuum cleaner hose with attachments that let you reach into the gutter from ground level. Then with the hose in the blower end of the vacuum, you can blast the leaves out without having to climb the ladder.

The downspouts can get clogged. I take a garden hose and poke it down into the top of the spout. Then have someone turn on the water full force. Be sure you have good footing on the ladder so that if the spout is too clogged for the hose to blast through, and you get a spraying, you don't fall off from the surprise. In that case, run a plumbers snake up through the downspout from the bottom, and when you have cleared the way, then again use the hose.

Another thing to check is all the concrete and masonry around your home. Look for cracks in the foundations, brick walls, patios, driveways and walks. Check for surface damage on flat surfaces. If you don't fill cracks, they'll probably get bigger, and you could lose your VW in a crack. Those places where the top layer of a concrete slab have come off can be replaced by using a sand mix. This is a pre-mixed bag you buy, and all you have to add is water. However, to make sure the patch stays, also use a concrete bonding adhesive. You can buy this at the same place that sells dry mixed concrete. Be sure to follow all the directions on the container. This makes the old and new concrete stick together.

If you live in an area where you remove storm windows and replace them with screens, inspect and repair all screens that are damaged. Next week we'll talk about screen repair and replacement. In storing your storm windows, be sure you do it very carefully so they're ready for next fall.

Of course, it won't be too long before you'll have to start fighting crab grass and other weeds, so now would be an excellent time to inspect all your lawn and garden tools. Some time soon, we'll discuss getting your mower ready and tell you what to do to make other lawn and garden tools battle worthy.

Each different area has some best times to start feeding lawns and plants. Now would be a good time to check with a reliable nurseryman to find out what your particular type of plants and grass need and when they need it. Also look at your trees and shrubs for broken limbs, and lop them off. You won't be able to see or repair damage after the lush foliage has covered everything up.

I think spring is a good time for a caulking tour to be sure that there aren't any openings for the spring crop of bugs to invade your home. While you're walking around the house, look for wasp nests getting started. It's easier to get rid of them now that after there are 687 killer wasps ready to defend the nest.

When you're sure there's no more need for the fireplace, clean it out real well. Look for any cracks in the fireplace. Don't forget to close the daper. Inspect the chimney to see if it needs cleaning. Remove the leftover firewood from near the house as it will become a haven for bugs.

By now, you'll probably be too tired for spring cleaning, spring painting, or even all the fun things that you can do in springtime.

Preserving waistline

By CECELIA GOODNOW
Hearst Feature Service

Remember when Scarlet O'Hara spurned Rhett Butler's advances in order to preserve her waistline from the ravages of childbirth? Her attitude revealed a common misconception that having babies inevitably ruins a woman's body.

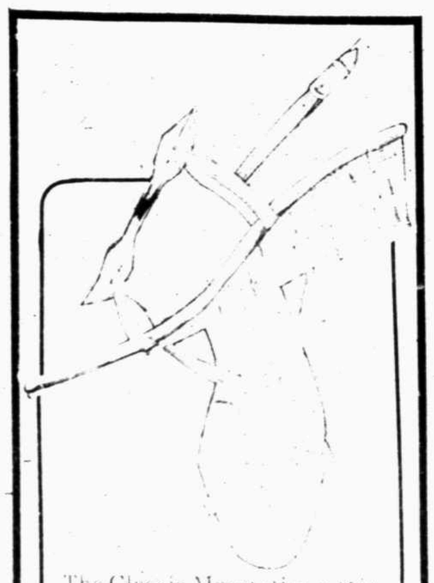

That need not be the case if a woman prepares for the physical stresses of pregnancy, says Elizabeth Noble, founder of the Obstetrics and Gynecology Section of the American Physical Therapy Association.

"There's absolutely no reason why the body can't return to normal," said Noble. "You don't have to accept a sagging belly and pelvic-floor problems."

Noble's premise is that although pregnancy produces changes in women's bodies from conception until several months after delivery, by understanding these stresses, she said, women can prevent problems such as backache, loss of bladder control and sagging of the pelvic organs.

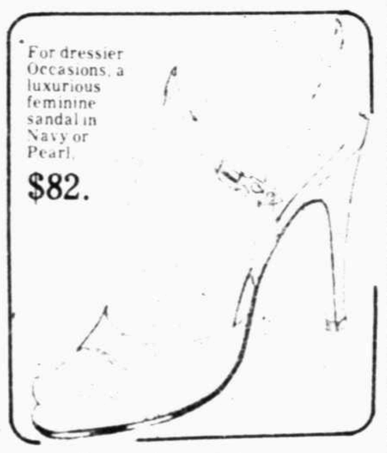

Noble presents a detailed guide to maternal health in her newly-revised book, "Essential Exercises for the Child-Bearing Year." (Houghton Mifflin, $6.95 in paperback; $13.95 in hard cover).

Officers of the Childbirth with Preparation Mother's Club are, from left, Diane Evansin, secretary; Donna Smead, acting president; and Melanie Bowman, treasurer. The chapter is a support group open to all who participated in childbirth classes, mothers and expectant mothers. Purpose is to encourage friendship and fellowship, and to better parent-child relationships by promoting family-centered maternity care.

The chapter meets the first Thursday of the month at Ranchland Hills Country Club at 11 a.m. Upcoming activities include a style show, family picnic and casino party. For more information or to make reservations, call Donna Smead at 684-7458, or Lauri Skinner at 682-9541.

How to grow sod the easy way

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

Any home owner, ardent gardener or otherwise, who has expended the time and effort necessary to establish a new lawn tends to be very lawn-proud and ever alert for signs of damage to that magnificent sweep of grass out front.

Often, the pleasure of winter's retreat is diminished somewhat when various types of damage show up on the lawn, marring its perfection.

Where a lawn is a major landscaping feature, it seems to me the home owner is wise to establish his own turf nursery so prompt, efficient repairs can be effected whenever damage of this nature shows up. Some gardeners set aside a small area in a remote part of the back yard as a turf nursery, simply keeping a miniature "lawn" from which squares can be taken from time to time to replace turf that has been badly damaged by disease, dogs and other scourges of our lawns.

There is an alternative to this system that has been developed to a fine science in some work carried out at Agriculture Canada's research station at Ottawa. This method will be a boon to those who are loathe to give up any precious garden space to this purpose.

This quick and easy method of growing your own sod involves the use of flats. Two years of tests were carried out, raising grass in small flats ready for transplanting to damaged areas of lawn. The only materials needed other than the frame are some 10-mil polyethylene sheeting, washed concrete sand, shredded peat moss, No. 10 cheesecloth, seed, fertilizer and water.

You can make the holding frame for the new sod any size you wish but it must be two to three inches high. The polyethylene sheeting is laid in its base and a growing mix of equal parts of sand and peat moss are added to a depth of about half an inch. It's advisable to check the pH of the mixture to ensure it's suitable for growing grass. A pH factor of 6.0, slightly acid, is good.

A single layer of cheesecloth is then placed on the soil mixture in the flat and another layer, just about a quarter-inch, of the growing mix is added. Tamp it firmly and add a commercial starter lawn fertilizer (18-24-6 or 16-32-6) at the recommended label rate. Then the grass seed is added.

Swearing is language weakness

By WILLARD ABRAHAM, Ph.D.
Copley News Service

Q. My husband has the wild idea that swearing by our 5-year-old is "cute." Can you beat that?

I guess it all relates to the fact that my husband has been a long-distance truck driver for many years, and spends a lot of time with men who pride themselves on their swearingacho image.

But I don't think it's at all funny, and I want it to stop — period. I'd like my husband and my little boy both to stop it, but at least my son.

Is there some way you can help me?

A. Most of us have learned how difficult (or maybe impossible) it is to change our mates, so your attempts to reason with or pressure him may be futile. But you do have one ace in the hole. You are with your youngster a lot more than his father is. By your own example and by quiet correction you may be able to control your boy's language.

A danger you face is in being critical of your husband in conversations with your son, so try to be on guard against that possible pitfall.

An ally you might talk to is your boy's teacher. If you share your concern with him or her, you may be able to have most of the day covered when your husband is on the road.

By the way, swearing is often considered to be a sign of language weakness. Some of us use such words as a kind of crutch, a simple, easy way to avoid seeking words which can more accurately reflect our thoughts.

Q. Our daughter needs help with a problem that she has, and I'd like your suggestions of how to handle it.

It's her height. She is only 10 years old, but is the tallest girl in her room at school. I think she's even taller than most of the boys.

This bothers her a great deal, and I don't know how to console her. She already anticipates being the biggest person in high school and college, and worries about coping with boy-girl situations.

What do you think about this?

A. In addition to being the tallest, with your help and encouragement she might also be the smartest, the best tennis player, the best speller, the outstanding art student, and-or the prettiest.

Height isn't the only characteristic that contributes to a person's standing out from the crowd. Popularity or the lack of it doesn't necessarily relate to how tall someone is, although some research does indicate that taller people receive more recognition in certain occupational fields.

Her clothing, complexion, weight, hair and especially personality are also factors that my wife tells me are important in the boy-girl situation.

In discussing this matter with your daughter you'll probably be more effective if you don't ignore the height issues, but other personal factors can also be brought into the conversation.

Q. The other day while my 3-year-old was playing outside in the front of our house a stray kitten came up to him. They began to play together, and I made the mistake of adopting it. After all, it really was pretty cute. He was very gentle with the kitten, and it was cuddly and playful with him.

The problem is what to do now. We've given it milk, and it continues to hang around the house. We haven't let it inside, but perhaps that will be the next expectation.

I really don't like cats, and hope this won't turn into a permanent relationship. What do you suggest?

A. You obviously have just two choices: To keep it, or let it go.

The situation may be solved by the kitten's just "taking off," some cat owners have noted the disloyalty of their pets. But if it hangs around, you can discourage the presence by withholding food.

However, the combination of a "gentle" child and a "playful" animal often contributes to a happy learning experience for the youngster. Unless your rejection of the kitten is so extreme that you really cannot cope with it, you might consider riding along with the present arrangement.

As far as pressure to bring it into the house, you can probably hold firmly. Many pets are kept outside all the time.

Reading contracts

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. Is it advisable to have a contract for a home improvement job reviewed by my attorney, or are all these contracts pretty much cut-and-dried so that even if a change is desirable, there would be a great deal of resistance to it? - Michael B.M.

A. If you are in doubt about any provision of your contract, or if an answer by the contractor as to the meaning of any part of the contract leaves you still in doubt, by all means consult an attorney before you sign.

Most of these contracts are, as you suggest, standard. They are equitable. But this does not mean that you should freely sign a contract without reading it. Read it through, discuss it, get professional advice if you want and understand it, before you sign.

There are many reliable, qualified remodeling contractors in the business. Unfortunately, there are also some gyppo artists. So it pays to know with whom you are dealing, get references if any doubt, and make other checks. After the job is started, however, any changes may cost extra money, depending on the nature of the change.

Q. We have some wood window sills that are in a state of bad repair and need refinishing. We seem to recall that you had some advice about how to make these repairs in your column some time ago. We would appreciate some of your suggestions. — Betty P.L.

A. Exterior window sills probably take more punishment from the weather elements than any other part of your house. Sun, rain and temperature changes destroy their finish long before paint on the siding or trim shows any sign of age.

Let the sills deteriorate too long and you'll end up needing to replace cracking, rotted wood. To repair a sill before it reaches this unhappy stage, first fill all surface cracks. Use an elastic caulking, rather than the hard-drying type, so the wood remains flexible. Prime with two coats of oil-base primer, and finish with house paint.

If a sill is already badly deteriorated, you can completely cover it with a fiberglass process that waterproofs the wood for many years. The process, in two parts, uses a special mastic and a reinforcing fiberglass fabric. Unlike conventional crack fillers and caulking compounds, it dries to a finish that is pliable to all temperatures. Cracks are bridged rather than filled, so the caulking is not squeezed out when a crack shrinks shut. Also the mastic seals the surface to keep out moisture.

Brush on the mastic with an ordinary paint brush. Next cut a piece of fiberglass to fit, and roll smoothly over the mastic. Let that dry until it is tacky, then brush on another coat of mastic. The final coat should dry several days before the finishing paint.

Q. My question is about your formula for removal of rust stains on concrete. Will this formula bleach out the color in concrete? — Gary W.

A. We know from experience that applications of this formula for removal of grease, oil or rust stains in concrete leaves the treated area lighter than the surrounding concrete.

Frankly we do not know whether it will bleach the dyes from colored concrete. But as a suggestion, experiment with the formula on a small, inconspicuous area of your concrete and see what happens.

Another suggestion: You might try a strong solution of trisodium phosphate and warm water and scrub with a stiff brush. This may lighten the stains without bleaching the color in the concrete.

Babies and tooth decay

By FREDERICK P. SZYDLIK
Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY — Dentists are trying to get babies off the bottle. Particularly the ones they take to bed, filled with fruit juice, Kool-Aid, honey water and milk formula.

"That's a good way for a parent to start a child on the road toward a childhood of tooth decay," says children's dentist Lawrence A. Kotlow, who is the New York State representative of the American Academy of Pedodontics, a national organization of dentists who specialize in treating children.

"I spend about 70 percent of my time repairing the damage done by mothers who gave their babies bottles to take to bed," Kotlow said. "It's chronic. If they invented a vaccine tomorrow that would eliminate tooth decay from all other causes, I'd still be busy because of the baby bottle problem.

"Not all children are affected, though. It depends on what's in the bottle and how long it's in the baby's mouth. But the general advice is not to give the child a bottle to take to bed."

Kotlow said that after giving the baby bottle warning to some parents, they responded by saying they only gave their children fruit juices labeled "unsweetened." He explained that means there is no extra sugar added to the amounts of sugar found in the juices naturally. Those amounts are still detrimental to children's teeth.

He said that the sustained presence of sugar found in drinks is what causes tooth disease. The bottle before bedtime is not the only cause of the disease. Other major factors relating to tooth decay are the form in which sugar is taken and the frequency of consumption. Sugar in a solid, sticky form such as a caramel stays in the mouth longer and poses a greater risk to children's teeth than sugar in a liquid form.

Also, a child's teeth are most vulnerable to decay in the 15 to 20 minutes after he has eaten, so the more often a child eats, the more times the teeth are exposed to decaying substances.

Kotlow advices parents to start cleaning their children's teeth in early infancy. Each day, a parent should wipe the gums and emerging teeth in the child's mouth with a piece of gauze wrapped around a finger. When the child is older and has more teeth, a small soft-bristled toothbrush can be used.

Insulin pumps

By JOYCE PRICE
Hearst Feature Service

BALTIMORE — It looks like a transistor radio, but that little black box hanging from the belts of growing numbers of diabetics is not only keeping them alive, it's giving them a freedom they've never known before.

The black box is a pump housing a small computer that replaces the traditional shots of insulin for diabetics. The computer regulates the flow of insulin from a syringe attached to a needle inserted under the patient's skin.

"Diabetics on insulin pumps can skip meals or delay them indefinitely and can eat pretty much what they want, except foods with large concentrations of sugar in them," said Dr. Angelique Georgopoulos, director of the diabetic Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital here.

In addition, Georgopoulos said, Hopkins currently is working on an implantable-style insulin pump, which would automatically read blood-sugar levels and would adjust insulin delivery to patient need. She said the battery-operated device, which would be similar to a cardiac pacemaker and last up to 10 years, is being tested on animals and should be ready for human use in another eight months.

In a recent decision, the Food and Drug Administration gave its approval to a similar type of pump, the first such implantable device to receive FDA approval, designed to inject drugs to help fight liver cancer and prevent blood clots in patients who otherwise would have only months to live.

About 80 percent of all the nation's 10 million diabetics can control their problem by watching what they eat or by taking pills. But the other 20 percent require insulin — at least one shot a day.

Georgopoulos said clinical evidence at Hopkins has shown that the steady flow of insulin offered by the pump, rather than by two or three injections daily, has meant normalized blood-sugar levels for most diabetic patients, in addition to improvement or stabilizaton of physical infirmities frequently associated with the disease. According to the American Diabetes Association, about 300,000 deaths annually can be attributed to diabetes and its complications.

Midland Country Club Ladies Association held a monthly meeting Friday at Midland Country Club. Social hour began at 11:30 a.m., followed by lunch and a program.

This month's program featured Mary Ann Smith of Dallas. She specializes in dramatic presentations of Broadway plays.

She recently appeared in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as a benefit for the Dallas Summer Musicals. She has been past president of the Dallas Council on World Affairs Women's Group and was appointed by Governor William Clements to the Texas Film Commission.

She has presented several Broadway plays and performed leading roles with the University Summer Stock Players, the former Courtyard Playhouse and the Dallas Little Theatre.

She currently uses her acting talents to bringing Broadway to clubs in Texas and surrounding states in the form of "one woman presentations."

She is a graduate of Southern Methodist University in speech and drama, a member of the Junior League and of the Dallas Woman's Club.

She was chosen "Dallas Woman of the Year" in 1963 by the Dallas Times Herald.

She and her husband Eugane Bragg Smith Jr., a rancher and cotton executive, have two children. The family has a home in Dallas and resides on a nearby cattle ranch.

Italian fashions

By DANIELA PETROFF
Associated Press Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The consensus among fashion experts attending the ready-to-wear showings at the Milan Trade Fair is that the Made-in-Italy label will triumph again next fall and winter.

"All the drapery and costume is show biz," said the fashion editor of a leading U.S. newspaper. "What's important is the essential line (this year wide in the shoulder, narrow in the skirt), the quality of the fabric and the technical skill of the execution."

The three houses that presented their collections Wednesday, the fourth day of the showings, had all the prerequisites for success.

For the more demure, Complice offers navy blue schoolgirl suits, blouson jackets coupled with short culotte skirts.

He sends his woman to the ski slopes in huge mohair jackets with nylon lining in bright colors to sparkle against the snow. To make his point, he faked a slight snowstorm on the runway.

For office hours Complice showed neat gray flannel suits with short single- breasted jackets and pants or slim skirts.

The other two Wednesday shows, Fendi and Missoni, were a demonstration of the heights Italian artisans can reach.

The five Roman Fendi sisters can treat a fur like no one else. In their lavish collection designed by Karl Lagerfeld, they turned Persian lamb into lace by punching holes into it, humble squirrel into see-through fabric by loose stitching, suede into netting by more punching.

Plan can solve financial problems

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

A family's immediate financial problems can be solved by a new plan that would use the equity in their home to boost their income flow.

It does not involve selling the home or executing a new conventional mortgage loan on the home. But it does provide the home owner with a monthly check to help pay college tuition, medical costs — any financial need.

The timing is right for unveiling such a plan. Many people have large equities in their home, due to substantial value appreciation in recent years. And the ever-increasing cost of living promotes a steady stream of "financial emergencies" within the family unit.

The new concept, often referred to as the "equity conversion plan," works basically like this:

A home owner family makes an arrangement with a lender whereby the family receives a monthly check over a specified period of time. In return, the home owner gives the lender a special kind of mortgage that uses the present and future equity to secure and repay the loan.

The lender's reward for his contribution of monthly checks is in the combination of two forms — a modest interest payment on the total amount loaned and a share in the increased value appreciation during the "equity conversion" period.

Terms of mortgage will call for repayment of the loaned amount, plus a deferred interest charge, at a specified time in the future — perhaps five or seven years after the arrangement started.

The interest charged will probably be a fixed rate, well below the prevailing rate for the first mortgage loans.

The lender will also receive a specified share of the property's value appreciation during the five- or seven-year term. This amount is determined by either a sale of the home or an appraisal. The repayment funds will probably come from a sale or rept is realof the property.

The new equity conversions concept is really an outgrowth of the "reverse annuity" mortgage plan. And it is most useful to the same group of home owners — middle-age or elderly couples with lots of equity in their home to convert.

It's a practical system to generate added income when it is most needed. It's a particularly good investment for the lender, allowing him to earn interest and a participation in the property's value growth. And he does it without a large initial outlay of cash or management worries.

Q. Will there be more new homes produced this year than last year?

A. Not according to a recently revised forecast from the National Association of Home Builders. The new report stated:

"For 1982 we are not projecting fewer housing starts than we had in 1981, which was the lowest production year since 1946. We are projecting 1,073,000 new home construction starts in 1982, down from 1,103,000 homes started in 1981."

Plugging in to the new age with video games

Man is certainly crazy. He could not make a mite, and he makes gods by the dozen. — Michel Eyquem de Montaigne

By DAVE BOWMAN
Copley News Service

Playtime gods, more than a mite profitable, come and go by the dozen. Some have already put Miss Piggy on the rotisserie. Pet rocks have been banished to vacant lots, and Rubik's quintillion-sided madness may be peaking. Even the record industry, life's soundtrack for the Tiger Beat set, is warping badly.

Shall we add video games to the list? No, for they will transcend fadism; they're the vanguard of a limitless new era, borne of the computer chip and other arcane components from the black hole of technology. Electricity is the currency of our new plugged-in society. Tune in and turn on, but don't drop out or you'll lose points and be booed at the Stop 'n Rob.

And it's just in time. As our charges gravitate farther from the 3 R's, they'll need something to bring them to adulthood. Since the censors have decided that "Ulysses" and "The Grapes of Wrath" are injurious to moral fiber, youth will have to be enlightened some other way. And what better than to devour power dots with a globule intriguingly named "Pac-Man," or vaporize aliens with push-button lasers?

Look at the dividends: sharpened hand-eye coordination, appreciation for the cosmos, a heightened sense of fantasy — not to mention keeping schizoid punks off the streets, where, if they shoot someone, their only punishment will be two weeks in a coed jail cell complete with video Ping-Pong, Nautilus machines and a wet bar.

A few bad ones, their resistance down, have given the boom a bad name — becoming overloaded addicts with burnt bankrolls, strained limbs and failing grades in their quest for small-screen perfection. We may end up with Shick Centers for the chronically videoed.

A poignant victim of the age is the pinball machine, that kaleidoscopic contraption of the Who's "Tommy" opera and boardwalk pastime of Bruce Springsteen's Asbury Park. Once the king of arcades, it now sits gargoylelike, watching as the Lilliputians forsake it for the brave new circuitry.

But give it time. We'll doubtless soon have computerized pinball, and electric skee-ball. Remember skee-ball? You'd lumber a wooden sphere into some holes and win a stuffed lemur for your effort. But it's too mechanical. Needs some spark!

Some culture-shocked killjoys have not taken kindly to the video explosion. Oakland, Calif., Pembroke Pines, Fla., and Durham, N.H., have passed ordinances restricting play by tads of tender years, while the Philippines, not an abider of indiscreet leisure, has banned the machines altogether.

But why? They're only depriving youth of the inevitable. Paper will someday be obsolete. If the kids read at all, it'll be on a screen. If they wage war as adults, it'll be with joysticks programmed to jolt the arcades of western Russia, should this capitalist phee-nom be there then. Working, playing — it'll all be done in a bleeping, blinking video mode.

Meanwhile, start integrating yourself into the new schematic. While you peruse journals and television programs that celebrate and cerebrate the solid-state of the art, you can dance to the chart-gobbling hit "Pac-Man Fever," resplendent in your Pac-Man T-shirt.

Then join the legions who annually pump more than $9 billion into the gadgets, more than three times the public expenditure for movies. There are "family fun" centers, where limp-wristed parents fish quarters out of groaning pockets and jingle them rotelike down the chutes, all for a few magic moments of cosmic communion with Junior. Plink, plunk, you're sunk!

Or you may stay home, where cassettes enable you to transform your hearth into an intergalactic joust or earthly jai alai match. What better way to bring loved ones together, other than a kumquat-tasting party?

Tommy the Clown performs a magic act for kiddies at the weekly Story Hour sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club. Tuesday's program, which begins at 10 a.m., is on spring. Story Hour is open to children 3, 4 and 5 years of age at Midland County Library. Mothers are encouraged to bring their children to enjoy stories, songs, films, special visitors, storybook characters and clowns. Groups of children from day care centers and church groups are welcome, but must make reservations with the Children's Librarian by the Saturday before each Story Hour.

Shape, tone of legs can be improved

By TRISHA YEAGER
Copley News Service

Regardless of how your legs look now (too heavy, thin, or flabby), you can improve their shape and tone relatively quickly with exercise.

In doing so, however, it's important to follow two steps: Warming up at the beginning in order to avoid injuring muscles, tendons or ligaments, and counter-stretching after exercising to develop a pleasing shape.

The principle of counter-stretching was taught to me years ago by a ballet teacher who thought it important that her students' legs be beautiful as well as strong and flexible. Counter-stretching counteracts the tendency for muscles to become hard and lumpy, causing them to develop a long, smooth shape instead.

Warming up.

Begin with your feet wide apart, toes turned slightly out. Bend right leg and lean weight over right foot, keeping heels on floor. Rock gently over foot. Repeat several times on both sides. Then bring feet together. Step right foot two or three foot lengths ahead of left. Bend right knee, keeping left heel on floor. Stretch and hold. Repeat several times, each side. Finally, lift right knee and clasp it with both hands. Pull it gently to chest. Repeat on other side.

Leg exercises.

1. Attach ankle weights (If you don't have them, these exercises will still help, weights simply accelerate the process. If you want to make your own inexpensive weights, send me a SSAE and I will send you directions.) Sit on floor with legs outstretched, toes pointed. Slowly lift one leg at a time as high as you can without bending leg. Hold and repeat on other side. Do the same thing with foot flexed. Then, turn toes outward and repeat. Do as many sets as you can, resting in between if necessary.

2. On hands and knees, stretch one leg out behind and lift it as high as possible. Raise and lower rapidly with foot pointed, then flexed. Do the same thing to the side.

3. Lie on your side with lower leg bent, top leg straight, upper body raised on elbow. Raise and lower top leg 10 times. Then, grasp ankle of top leg with hand of same side, straighten lower leg and lift it up to meet top leg 10 times. Repeat on other side. This is good for firming inner and outer thighs.

4. Stand with legs apart, toes turned out. Bend both knees into semi-squat position, making sure your pelvis is tucked forward. Bounce gently as long as you can. Rest and repeat.

Counter-stretching.

For calves, lean forward against a wall with feet about four feet from wall. Step one foot forward keeping heels on floor. Repeat with other foot. For thighs, support yourself my holding onto a piece of furniture or the wall with one hand. With other hand grasp ankle of same side. Standing erect on one foot, press the knee of the leg you are holding toward the floor. Relax and repeat.

Executive says CARE card effective for Mother's Day

NEW YORK (AP) — A Mother's Day remembrance that also serves to help others is the CARE gift card, suggests Dr. Philip Johnston, executive director of the international aid and development organization.

"It will convey meaningful remembrances to your mother and other women dear to you, while at the same time helping destitute mothers and children around the world," he points out.

Mother's Day donations to CARE will help provide nourishing food for hungry families, as well as health care and education, Johnston explains.

"Poor families will also be supplied the means and taught the know-how to grow more food, build schools and clean water systems and set up village industries to increase their meager incomes and work their way out of poverty," he adds.

CARE delivers such aid to tens of millions of impoverished people in more than 35 developing countries, Johnston reports.

"Last year, the organization — through stringent economy measures and utilizing U.S. Food-for-Peace commodities and host government cost-sharing — delivered $8.33 worth of aid for every dollar contributed by the public," Johnston notes. "So each gift is stretched to do a lot more good than people realize."

Contributions — minimum $5 per name — should be sent to CARE Mother's Day Plan, Box 570M, New York, NY 10156, or to any regional CARE office, Johnston said.

Each woman honored will receive a card informing her of the gift made in her name or, if preferred, the cards will be sent to the donor. Orders should be sent promptly to assure delivery by Mother's Day, May 9.

Keep plants dust free

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — Dust not only accumulates on household furniture, but it adheres to houseplants as well.

Wipe dust periodically from broadleaved plants with a damp towel or cloth, advises the maker of Garden Scene planterware. For small plants, hold them under running water to remove dust.

A film of dust will lessen the amount of light and reduce the efficiency of photosynthesis in the plant.

Security for seniors

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — New residential locks are contributing to the safety of more than 50,000 lower income senior citizens in Los Angeles County.

Some 30,000 homes located in 20 county cities are receiving the locks free under a federal grant. Installation of the Emhart deadbolt locks in all the homes will take about a year.

The lock program, initiated by the League of California Cities, a statewide civic group, was funded by the now-defunct Federal Law Enforcement Assistance program.

Lipstick can enhance face

To minimize the effect of a long face, exaggerate the horizontal line of the lips.

Lack of good sports

WOODBRIDGE, Va. (AP) — Some 45 percent of all American adults refrain from any form of intentional exercise, according to a national survey.

American adults who do exercise tend to be better educated and more affluent than those who don't.

Controversy continues in Senate over abortion issue

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Washington — A Senate committee's approval of a national ban on abortion is another big boost for the New Right as it pushes forward its controversial social agenda in the Senate.

The first victory had been Senate passage of a proposed constitutional ban on busing. Earlier, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 10-7 for a proposed constitutional amendment by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to give states and Congress the authority to outlaw abortion entirely, overturning a 1973 Supreme Court ruling.

President Reagan, whose political advisors have warned him against assuming the leadership of such national controversies, had no comment. His hands-off attitude toward lobbying on the New Right agenda has caused resentment, especially after they held off last year at his request so he could focus national attention on his economic package.

This year, impatient at still no all-clear signal from Reagan, the New Right plunged ahead, securing pledges from Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker for debate first on busing and now on abortion.

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops called the abortion vote "an auspicious event for the cause of the unborn." Nanette Falkenberg of the National Abortion Rights Action League, calling it "a setback but not a defeat, said "the whole notion that you can have an abortion according to the state you live in is absurd."

Senate approval is uncertain, partly because of controversy within the anti-abortion lobby about Hatch's compromise. Many activists insist a straight constitutional ban on all abortions, with no exceptions, is the only way. House action is unlikely this year.

Indication of the still-present schism in the abortion lobby was last week's reintroduction by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., of yet a third option, his bill to declare that life begins at conception. This would give fetuses the protection of the 14th Amendment and thus make all abortions murder.

Hatch needs a two-thirds vote for his plan. Helms needs only a simple majority although the majority of legal and theological experts have criticized its legality. Using a rare Senate parliamentary procedure, Helms has made his bill eligible for full Senate debate at any time and, if agreement seems remote for the Hatch amendment, his is ready as a backup.

Jackson Exploration booming business

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy and Business Editor

The Permian Basin petroleum industry is facing some uncertian times. Many in the business are marking time, waiting to see what happens before they make any big moves. But not Dallas-based Jackson Exploration, the company is exapnding its operations here.

Recently, the company purchased 20 acres for a pipe yard south of Midland along Rankin Highway. During an interview last week, William Upson, excutive vice president of Jackson Exploration, said there is a good chance a supply store will be opened at the site.

"Whether or not we'll start up a commercial supply company, I'm not sure," explained Upson, "but its in the planning."

The yard will certainly be filled with pipe and production equipment the company needs for its own operations in the Permian Basin.

Since it was established in 1978, Jackson Exploration has drilled about 50 wells in this area, Upson estimated. They're spread over 10 counties, starting with Dawson and Martin counties north of Midland, to Tom Green County, southeast of Midland.

Jackson has had as many as seven drilling rigs running at one time in the Permian Basin, Upson said. There are two drilling now. Many wells are planned for drilling.

Jackson has made some discoveries drilling in the Basin, Upson remarked. Some he called "significant."

"They wouldn't help Exxon," he quipped, "but it helps the hell out of us!"

"We will get bigger in West Texas," Upson said. "Without any outside money, we'll probably drill $50 million this year. Between a third and one-half will be in West Texas."

More money than that may be spent. Upson has a meeting within the next couple of weeks with a company interested in putting up an additional $50 million a year for drilling.

Upson wouldn't say for sure who the high rollers are, but did allow that they are "the national oil comapny of one of the larger producing Middle Eastern countries; that are trying to get money in oil investments outside of their own country."

Starting from scratch four years ago, Jackson Exploration has seen "ungoddly growth," as Upson put it. Today its an international operation. Much of the success can be attributed to the company's agressive exploration policy.

Thirteen geologists work for Jackson, Upson said. "Where ever they locate a prospect, we get after it."

"We never try to take a piece of anyone's action, we want to manage it and operate it.

"We occasionally join with another company in putting together a prospect, but that's not what we try to do."

Jackson promotes deals to people in the industry and to wealthy individuals, Upson said. "For our own interest, we retain about 40 percent of each prospect for our own account."

During the nine-month period ending Sept. 30, 1981, Jackson enjoyed a 64 percent drilling success ratio. Upson attributed the success in part to the quality of the company's employees.

"We try to seek out the best and hire 'em," Upson said. "It is our policy that we'll hire any oil finding geologist we can find; where ever he is. We'll just open an office around him."

To insure continued success, Jackson Exploration has a special way of getting the best from the best it can get.

"We believe in giving our people a direct piece of the action," Upson said. "We hope they get rich.

"Not just geologists, all of our key personnel get an override, across the board. I don't know of any other company that has a girl in the land department that cashes override checks of $3,000 a month."

That policy prompted Jackson Exploration to take a unique step last summer.

"We were the first operating oil and gas compnay to go public on the London market," Upson said.

Some state laws (like the Texas "Blue Sky Law") and security and exchange commission regulations make it difficult for companies with incentive programs like Jackson's to sell stock, Upson explained.

"The law can be gotten around, but we chose not to go public in this country. So we went to London."

There are 40 million shares of Jackson stock. Most are held by company founder Melvin Jackson. Upson and others own some. Ten percent, or four million shares were offered on the London exchange last July. The opening price was 72 pence, or $1.35. It's been going up since.

"Our stock, on any of the London exchanges, is the only oil and gas stock selling above asset value," Upson said. "Offhand, I can't think of any oil stock selling better today than it was in July — on any exchange worldwide."

Upson estimated 80 percent of the stock is held by institutions and pension funds. "They continually ask us to sell additional shares, either privately or with a secondary issue."

Perhaps 10 percent of the shares have sold outside Great Britain. "We know that there's been some buying in Hong Kong and Germany," Upson said.

The stock is not available to citizens of the United States or Canada. The sale in North America is prohibit by a statement printed on the stock certificates. This course was taken, Upson said, because the company did not want at the time to meet the requirements of the 1933 Truth in Securities Act.

Upson expects a few U.S. and Canadian citizens will buy the stock through friends in England. Shares will "trickle back" to this country.

"I'd say we'll be listed within two years in this country," Upson estimated.

In anticipation of that day, Upson explaied, Jackson Exploration did make sure, at the time of the stock issuance in London, that it met the requirements of the 1934 Securities Exchange Act.

Suspicion about Arlington confirmed

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy and Business Editor

There is one thing I know about Arlington, Va., and one thing I suspect.

I know the city is close to Washington, D.C., and suspect, because of its proximity to Washington, it probably harbors a great number of fuzzy-thinking hypocrites.

This suspicion was confirmed recently with the arrival in the mail of two items from the American Gas Association, which is headquarterd in Arlington. The association represents the "middle men" of the gas industry, the utility companies that sell natural gas to consumers.

The AGA opposes decontrolling the well head price of natural gas. The reason, as I understand it, is two-fold. First, if AGA members had to pay producers a fair price for natural gas, it would cut into their profits. Secondly, higher prices at the well head would mean somewhat higher prices at the burner, and consumers wouldn't like that. So, for the good of its members' pocket books, and to forestall consumer wrath, the AGA opposes decontrol.

About the mail.

The first piece to arrive was a press release dated March 8. It was headlined, "Accelerated Natural Gas Price Decontrol Would Offset Many Tax Benefits." It revealed a new weapon in the AGA's anti-decontrol arsenal.

The release began, "Accelerated decontrol of natural gas over two years would offset more than one-third of the business incentives scheduled under President Reagan's tax program in 1983-84 because of the increased cost of gas to industry, according to a study released today by the American Gas Association."

It also told how decontrol would eat up the tax savings to families.

There may be some truth to the claims but I doubt it; considering it was an AGA study. I give little credence to studies supporting the preestablished views of those who did the studying.

As far as I'm concerned it was just a slick bit of propoganda; designed to scare consumers into the AGA lobby.

The second relese was dated March 15. The headline on it said, "Gas Utility Financial Strength Key To Expanded Domestic Energy Use."

The lead paragraph read, "The president of the American Gas Association told a public utility buyers group today that gas utilities must be allowed to expand their financial capabilites to increase servite to help the nation use more domestic energy."

It continued, "AGA President George H. Lawrence told the public utilty buyers that financial strength must be present 'if there is to be the demand which will encourage exploration and development of the domestic natural gas supplies we know are out there'."

Lawrence is quoted saying, "If gas energy is to fulfill its promise of rising supply, however, progressive regulatory policy at both the federal and state levels is imperative."

What is progressive regulatory policy? Policy that lets gas utilities make bigger profits, of course!

What a bunch of bull!

The financial strength of the gas utilites has got darned little to do with exploration and development, as I see it. After all, the utilites are, for the most part, not in the exploration and development business, they're in the middleman business.

Until the people who drill the gas wells for a living start seeing some "financial strength" of their own, there won't be much exploration or development.

The decontrol of oil prices was one of the best things to happen to this country. It did more to encourage exploration for and development of oil reserves than anything else in recent years.

Almost everyone I've talked to, and everything I've read (except that published by anti-decontrol groups), has suggested if natural gas prices are decontrolled, and today's government decreed low gas prices are allowed to rise to their proper levels, then we will also see a big increase in exploration for and development of natural gas reserves. I believe that postiion is 100 percent correct.

As I see it, only fuzzy thinking hypocrits could fight against natural gas price decontrol, which would, without a doubt, encourage exploration and development; and then turn around, and under the pretext of encouraging exploration and development, ask government for regulatory favors, which would, in fact, do nothing to encourage exploration and development.

Like I said, I know Arlington, Va. is close to Washington, and I suspect therefore it is haven for a lot of fuzzy-thinking hypocrites. After reading the mail from the AGA, my suspicions have been confirmed.

IT'S MY OPINION

PBGC starting five new classes

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled three courses at the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Developing the Professional Woman" will be offered Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cathering Mundell will instruct.

The seminar is for female managers and supervisors who want to acquire effective management and leadership skills. Students will be shown how to acquire and use important management skills, communication, decision making, risk taking, leadership and organization.

Registration fee is $150.

The fifth session of Production Engineering for Non-Engineers "Surface Installations and Design" will be Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. Rod Griffin, Sivalls Tanks Inc., and Eric Kaindl, Hy-Bon Engineering Inc., will instruct.

Fee is $30.

"Use of Old Electric Logs" will be Monday and Tuesday, March 29 and 30, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Dr. Douglas W. Hilchie, petroleum engineering consultant, will instruct.

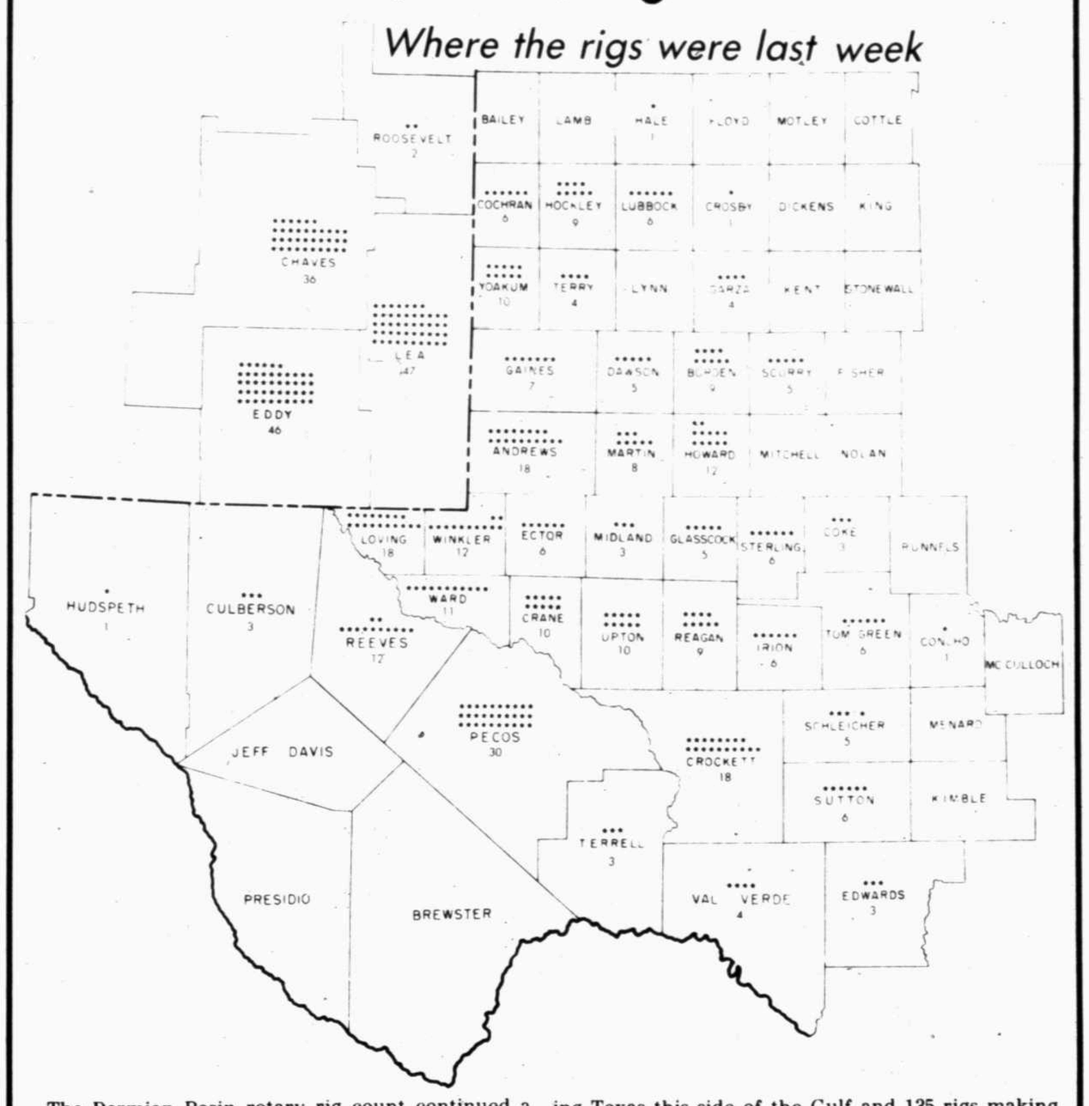

This seminar is designed for geologists, geophyscists and engineers. Exploitation and enhanced recovery projects often require the use of logs run prior to the late 1950s. This indepth presentation will explain the use and interpretation of these logs.

Fee is $295.

For registration or further information, call 563-2311.

Trend holds, Basin rig count down

Where the rigs were last week

The Permian Basin rotary rig count continued a backward slide last week, according to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. The tally was 427, the lowest in nine months.

A year ago the figure was 414.

The count March 12 was 446; March 5, 454; Feb. 26, 452; and Feb. 19 it was 466.

The national rig count is still declining at a relatively steady rate, International Association of Drilling Contractors' figures show. There were 3,823 rigs making hole nationwide March 15. There were 3,911 a week earlier and 4,092 one month earlier.

One year ago the IADC observed 3,582 active rigs.

The IADC's March 15 figures show 1,110 rigs working Texas this side of the Gulf and 135 rigs making hole in all of New Mexico.

During a telephone conversation last week, an IADC staff member reported there is traditionally a decline in drilling activity in late winter/early spring. A number of factors, including restrictions on rig movement down muddy roads in some states, contribute to the drop. Statistically, every third year the decline is particularly hard. This is the third year of the cycle.

The staffer said if every thing follows the historical pattern, the drilling slump should end around the third week in April, with the low rig count for the nation being somewhere around 3,750.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

AMARILLO (SWN) — Diamond Shamrock Corporation has announced it has lowered the price it will pay for crude oil and condensate by $3 per barrel.

Effective March 15, the company will pay $30 per barrel for 40- to 44.9-degree gravity API crude oil and condensate. This is a decrease of $3 per barrel from a $33 per barrel price paid by the company since February 24, 1982. The price change is in effect for all purchases of sweet crude oil made by the company in the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma, Southwest Kansas, Southeast Colorado, as well as West and West Central Texas, Wyoming, Montana and North Dakota.

HOUSTON — AMF Tuboscope, Inc., recently announced plans to construct an $11.6 million oilfield pipe coating plant at Neuss, West Germany.

The 70,000 square foot facility will be situated on a ten-acre site across the Rhine River from Dusseldorf, a major center for steel making and tool jointing. The facility will have barge and rail access, as well as trucking accommodations.

Eagle Exploration Company and an industry partner have entered into a Purchase and Sale Agreement in which they will acquire an interest in 12 producing wells and approximately 1,328 undeveloped acres in the Giddings Field, Burleson County.

The 12 producing wells are currently producing over 600 barrels of oil and 6,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day, net to the entire interest being purchased.

HOUSTON — Texaco U.S.A. and Kerr-McGee Corporation has reached agreement for a drilling program to be conducted in the Fletcher area of the deep Anadarko Basin in Oklahoma.

The companies agreed that Texaco will acquire approximately 40 percent of Kerr-McGee's interest in 31 deep wells to be drilled by Kerr-McGee and other companies in the Fletcher area in exchange for a $60 millicn drilling and leasing commitment on the part of Texaco. All of the wells are scheduled for completion in 1982 or early 1983. Kerr-McGee is now drilling 21 of these wells. Texaco and Kerr-McGee each hold substantial acreage in the area in addition to the acreage included in the agreement.

DALLAS (SWN) — American Petrofina, Incorporated (Fina), announced the signing of a Consent Order with the Department of Energy which settles and finally resolves all civil and administrative claims and disputes against Fina by DOE concerning petroleum allocation and price regulations during the period January 1, 1973, through January 27, 1981. Without admitting any violation of those regulations, Fina agrees to make payments to qualifying jobbers in the amount of $14 million. A reserve for the amount of such payments was reflected in Fina's 1981 financial statements.

Payments to qualifying jobbers will be based upon their purchases of Fina gasoline in 1974. DOE stated it did not find any evidence that Fina committed any willful or intentional violations or any basis for asserting allegations of overcharges by Fina after 1974.

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — South Texas Drilling & Exploration, Inc. has named Michael R. Searles vice president, treasurer, and William D. Hibbetts controller, according to Robert R. Marmor, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company.

As chief financial officer for the company, Searles responsibilities include monitoring the financial performance of South Texas and its subsidiaries, as well as overseeing cash management and bank relations. Previously vice president, controller for South Texas, Searles has been with the company since 1980. Prior to his association with South Texas, he was a senior accountant with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co.

••••

ODESSA (SWN) — ICO, Inc. has announced the company had purchased 259,500 shares of its common stock in a private transaction approved by ICO's Board of Directors.

The company said that the stock which will be used for general corporate purposes was purchased by ICO at less than the current market price of approximately $9.50 a share.

The company stated that it plans no additional stock purchases at this time.

ICO, Inc. inspects, reconditions and coats pipe and tubular goods — basic tools necessary for discovering and producing oil and natural gas. Its patented services and products protect pipe and sucker rods against corrosion and maximize their life.

NEW YORK (SWN) — Travis Petty, chairman of The El Paso Company, in an appearance before investment analysts in New York City today, provided an estimate of the financial impact on the Company of a recent court decision that pipeline-owned production should be priced in accordance with rates prescribed by the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 rather than on a cost-of-service basis.

Petty said that for the year 1982, revenues would increase about $94 million as a direct result of reclassification of the Company's pipeline production. In 1983 and future years, the increase should be of the same magnitude, subject to further increase depending upon resolution of matters affecting special overriding royalty interests in the San Juan Basin of northwest New Mexico.

The financial impact on the Company is significantly greater than the increse in customer rates for which the Company recently filed with the FERC because of timing differences and certain rate mechanics inherent in purchase gas adjustment procedures before the FERC. The increase in customer rates is proposed to become effective April 1, 1982.

HOUSTON (SWN) — The El Paso Company has announced its interstate natural gas transmission subsidiary, El Paso Natural Gas Company, filed its regular semi-annual purchase gas adjustment in gas sales rates with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The increase in rates, proposed to be effective April 1, 1982, totals approximately 62.4 cents per thousand cubic feet or about $770 million in annual revenues.

Farmland Industries, Inc. has announced plans to discontinue operations at the Scottsbluff, Nebraska, refinery operated by its refining subsidiary, CRA, Inc.

The decision to close the 5,500 barrels per day (BPD) plant permanently was endorsed by Farmland's board of directors in late February. The last day of operations at the Scottsbluff refinery is scheduled to be June 1, 1982.

According to O.N. Shoup, vice president of Refining, the decision to close the Scottsbluff refinery was due to unsettled world oil conditions, reduced demand for refined products, and surplus refining capacity in the U.S.

Farmland also owns refineries with a combined capacity of 80,000 BPD, at Coffeyville and Phillipsburg, Kansas, and is an owner, along with other regional cooperatives, of the National Cooperative Refinery Association at McPherson, Kansas.

Jackson Exploration booming business

cially. Upson thinks it is strong enough to survive the tough times many see ahead for the petroleum industry. In addition to the Arab money that may come its way, Jackson has a $33 million line of credt from the Royal Bank of Canada.

"Which, fortuantely we dont need," said Upson, "but it's there if we do need it."

Jackson Exploration also has a unique deal with the company that buys its oil.

Jackson Exploraton worked out an 18 month contract with a "major company" which gives Jackson $33 per barrel of oil, paid one month in advance of delivery. The price Jackson is paid for oil is based on a formula that takes into account the price of oil on the open market.

"I think we're the only one that has that type of arrangement," Upson said.

Jackson Exploration was founded by 36-year-old Melvin Jackson, who the older Upson respectfully described as "a kid, a college drop out," who had made his money in the real estate business.

Another of Jackson's ventures, Sterling Properties, is also active in the Midland area. Windtree Apartments is one of Sterling's projects. Upson said 300 untis are being added to the complex.

Other Jackson projects are Southwest Texas Saltwater Disposal Co. and Link Systems Inc., a gas gathering and processing company.

Upson said Link Systems is "in the process of putting in two large gas gathering systmes in West Texas right now." One will be in Terrell County, the other is in Crockett County.

"They will definitely tie in with a major pipeline," Upson said. Negotiations are under way with several pipeline companies.

Melvin Jackson, Upson, and other key Jackson employees are the founders of the recently opened Texas National Bank in Dallas.

Jackson Exploration is currently negotiating for a 2 1/2 million acre oil and gas concession on the island of Borneo.

Jackson Exploration has offices in London, Singapore, Houston, Tulsa and Shreveport. It has exploration and production offices in Midland.

It has been estimated the company's proved reserves will generate future net revenues of $110 million, based on today's prices. Jackson Exploration has come a long way since Melvin Jackson kicked off the venture with $600,000 is starting capital.

962 Texas cities receive total of $48.9 million

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock Monday sent checks totaling $48.9 million to 962 cities as their share of the one-percent city sales tax for March.

The payment is the largest representing a single month's tax collections ever distributed–29 percent over the same period in 1981.

This record payment, reflecting taxable sales made by Texas Business in January, is the second record payment in two months, but Bullock added a note of caution.

"Record sales can be one indicator of good times, but they are not an indicator of profit margins. These taxes are based on sales price or market value. True, Texans are spending more but these figures don't tell us what the merchants or suppliers or manufacturers are having to pay for the goods they buy."

Bullock explained that last month's record $106.4 million payment to cities who levy the local sales tax represented collections from taxpayers who pay monthly as well as those who pay quarterly and yearly.

The biggest check this month went to Houston, which received $10.3 million, compared with $8 million last March.

Dallas received $5.2 million, up 32 percent from that city's March 1981 pyment of $4 million; San Antonio's check of $2.4 million is 22 percent more than last March.

Austin received $1.5 million, compared with $1.2 million in March last year, and El Paso received $1.3 million, up 44 percent from last March's payment of $919,000.

Bullock also forwarded March rebates to the state's two Metropolitan Transit Authorities. The Houston MTA received $10.8 million and the San Antonio MTA got $1.1 million.

The city and MTA sales taxes are collected along with the state sales tax by merchants and businesses and rebated montly to the cities in which they are collected by the Comptroller.

BLOWOUT — A sudden violent escape of oil, gas and/or water from a drilling well caused by uncontrolled high pressure.

CENOZOIC — Geologic area from about 65 million years ago to the present.

Unbelievable.

But true.

There are some investors who do their own research, make their decision and then call a traditional "full commission" stock brokerage firm.
The result: They pay a commission much higher than is necessary.
The alternative: Little and Company - an execution specialist.
By eliminating a research department, commissioned salesmen and related management staff, Little and Company is able to provide what the experienced client wants...fast, accurate executions with substantial commission discounts.
Many investors have questions about an execution specialist's operation. These are a few of the most often asked:

Q: Are checks issued locally?
A: Yes, Little and Company issues checks directly to its clients.
Q: Can I phone for quotations?
A: Yes, our traders are available throughout the day for quotations.
Q: Are certificates issued promptly?
A: The average time frame is less than four weeks for exchange-traded issues. Certain foreign and obscure issues require additional time.

Anadarko Production completes Eddy County gas discovery

HOUSTON (SWN) — Anadarko Production Company has announced the successful completion of a Morrow Formation natural gas discovery well in Eddy County, New Mexico.

The well, the Arnold Federal Comm. No. 1, was drilled to 11,542 feet and completed from perforations between 11,398 and 11,434 feet in the Morrow Formation. Calculated open flow potential was 36,060,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Tipperary Corporation recently announced the completion of a 864 barrel oil well in the Austin Chalk formation near Dilley in Frio County.

The Mace No. 1 well also tested 300,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

••••

Wilson Energy Inc. has announced the completion of two prolific Strawn oil wells in Martin County.

The No. 1 Nail, located in section 3, block 38, flowed 176 barrels of oil and the No. 10 Stimson-Burley, section 10, block 38, potentialed 320 barrels of oil per day.

HOUSTON (SWN) — Hunt Oil Company, McCormick Oil & Gas Company and Hamilton Brothers have announced the completion of the No. 2 State Lease 74582 well as a new reservoir discovery on the Mustang 772 prospect in Nueces County.

The well was completed through perforations from 10,838 to 10,878 feet in an upper Frio sand. On initial test, the well flowed at a daily rate of 8.237 million cubic feet of gas and 240 barrels of condensate through a 14/64-inch choke, with 7,090 pounds flowing tubing pressure.

••••

TULSA, OKLA. — Texaco has made a discovery of oil and natural gas in northeast shelf of the Anadarko Basin on the Company's Taxi Prospect in Grant County, Okla.

The wildcat discovery, No. 1 LeForce Farms, is located in north central Oklahoma about 22 miles south of the Kansas border. The well was drilled to a total depth of 6,572 feet and was tested in the devonian Misner sand in an interval below 6,000 feet.

The well gauged a daily rate of 394 barrels of 40.4-degree API gravity oil and 331 thousand cubic feet of natural gas through a 17/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 425 pounds per square inch.

••••

MINNEAPOLIS, MN — Apache Corporation has announced the completion of a new zone oil and natural gas discovery well in the Northwest Berlin field of Roger Mills County, Oklahoma, approximately 17 miles northwest of Elk City.

The well, Sprowls No. 1-34, section 34,township 13 north, range 23 west, flowed at the rate of 248 barrels of oil and 615,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Drilled to a depth of 10,650 feet, the well was completed through perforations in the Cottage Grove formation.

AMARILLO (SWN) — Texas Energies, Inc. announces the completion of its Hoagland No. 1-22, a Barber County, Kansas discovery well. The well produced gas at a rate of 2,660,000 cubic feet per day.

The Smith No. 1-21, a discovery well located in Pratt County, Kansas, has also been completed by Texas Energies. The well is producing 80 barrels of oil per day from the Kansas City Formation through perforations from 4177 feet to 4181 feet.

Additionally, the Company has established oil production in its Clark No. 1-33 and No. 1-34 wells. These wells have combined production of 40 barrels of oil per day from the Viola Formation in Stafford County, Kansas.

••••

HOUSTON (SWN) — Conquest Exploration Company announces new zone discovery in Pineview (Utah) Field.

The Newton Sheep Co. No. 1, and oil well operated by American Quasar Petroleum Co., has been completed in the Kelvin Formation in the Pineview Field in Summit County, Utah. The well, a new zone discovery, was completed on a 18/64 choke flowing through perforations from 4366 to 4380 feet in the Kelvin.

During a 24 hour production test the well flowed at a rate of 403 barrels of oil, eight barrels of water, 292,000 cubic feet of gas, with flowing tubing pressure of 390 pounds per square inch.

DALLAS (SWN) — Mid-America Petroleum, Inc. announced the completion of the Riggs No. 2 well located in St. Helena Parish, Louisiana. This confirmation well (located 1200 feet south and 400 feet east of the discovery well) tested at 574 barrels of oil per day plus 127,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 10/64 inch choke with 1180 pounds flowing tubing pressure and is currently producing at 539 barrels of oil per day plus 88 cubic feet of gas per day on a 12/64 inch choke with 1100 pounds flowing tubing pressure. The well is flowing naturally from the Lower Tuscaloosa formation through per-formations between 12,890 and 12,906 feet.

The discovery well, the Riggs No. 1, tested at 530 barrels of oil per day plus 249,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 6/64 inch choke with 1500 pounds flowing tubing pressure and is currently producing over 500 barrels of oil per day plus 300 cubic feet of gas per day through the Lower Tuscaloosa formation.

The prospect on which these two wells are located comprises approximately 6,000 acres.

A third well, the Cole No. 1 (located 2300 feet southeast of the riggs No. 2) is currently drilling.

••••

TULSA, OK — Cities Service Company has completed a multi-zone oil and gas discovery in the Williston Basin, Billings County, North Dakota.

The Cities Service Federal DF P1 well flowed oil at the rate of 552 barrels per day from the Devonian Duperow formation.

The well flowed gas at a rate of 2.6 million cubic feet per day from the Red River formation.

BOTTOM LINES

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Southland Royalty Company has announced its board of directors has authorized the purchase of up to 2,000,000 outstanding shares of the company's common stock. The purchase, if completed in full, would amount to approximately 4.4 percent of currently outstanding shares. Such purchases may be made on the open market or in privately negotiated transactions, and the amount and timing of purchases will depend upon market conditions and other factors. The Company may terminate or suspend this repurchase program at any time. In June 1981, the company repurchased a total of 1,235,700 shares, pursuant to a similar repurchase program.

The First National Bank of Midland is now the 126th largest commercial bank in the United State, up from the 143rd position a year ago. The bank also climed from the 10th position to the ninth largest in the stateofTexas. The survey ranking the nation's 300 largest bankswas baed on deposits as of Dec. 31, 1981, and wasconducted by the American Banker, a daily banking newspaper. First National's deposits on Dec. 31 were $1,348,227,761, up 29 percent from year-end deposits in 1980 of $1,042,549,024.

First National holds the unique position of being the only bank among the top ten Texas banks not located in the metropolitan areas of Dallas, Fort Worth or Houston.

Forest Oil Corporation has reported that income rose 61 percent to $38,523,000 in the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, from $23,894,000 during the same period a year ago.

The company reported net earnings of $1,507,000 or 23 cents per share compared to a loss of $2,115,000 or 31 cents per share for the last quarter of 1980.

Net earnings for the year 1981 were $5,104,000 or 77 cents per share compared to $2,050,000 or 31 cents per share for 1980. The increase in net earnings was due primarily to higher prices for both oil and natural gas and increased gas production.

DALLAS (SWN) — Crawford Energy, Inc. reported a rig owned and operated by its contract drilling subsidiary had been severely damaged by a fire resulting from a high-pressure gas blow-out in a well being drilled for its exploration division in Hardeman County. No one was injured in the blow-out and fire.

The company said that both the rig and the cost of controlling and re-drilling the well are covered by insurance.

The well, Crawford's Kyle No. 1, located 10-1/2 miles northeast of Quanah blew out during a drill-stem test earlier this week. Crawford Drilling Company's Rig No. 1 was drilling below 8,500 feet in the Mississippian formation when surface casing failed below the blow-out preventer.

In addition to natural gas escaping from the well, oil has been flowing at rates up to 300 barrels per hour while efforts were being made to control the blow-out. Oil has been contained at the well site with the company estimating a total volume of some 4,000 barrels.

The well caught fire on Thursday, March 11, and the damaged rig was pulled off the hole. A well control service is now attempting to put out the fire.

Nigeria hopes to avoid crude oil price cut of $5

HOUSTON — Nigeria now hopes to avoid the crude oil price cut of $5 to $5.50 a barrel it had all but promised its customers for March, according to Petroleum Information International.

In a recent issue, the weekly oil and gas publication reports that Nigeria would already be announcing such price reductions if OPEC hadn't agreed to a special meeting that will start Friday in Vienna.

Several oil companies which buy oil from Nigeria had asked the African producer to backdate any price adjustment to March 1, the effective date of British National Oil Corporation's $4 price cut on North Sea oil. Although none of Nigeria's customers has anything on paper, all have received strong signals that the top price will be $31 retroactive to March 1 and down from the current $36.50.

In its March 15 issue, PI International reports, however, that Nigeria now expects to delay a price decision and announcement and may not cut prices at all, at least for March. The weekly oil and gas publication quotes Lagos sources as acknowledging severe market pressures on Nigerian oil. But, significantly, these pressures will have their impact, if at all, on April exports of Nigerian crude rather than on March liftings. "Lagos officials are fairly sanguine about March liftings," PI International reports.

The publication reports that Nigeria's presidential oil adviser, Mallam Yahaya Dikko, told the nine OPEC oil ministers who met informally in Doha, Qatar, recently that Nigeria will move swiftly on prices following the March 19 OPEC session in Vienna. But it would be a mistake to believe a large price cut is a foregone conclusion, Lagos sources told PI International.

If OPEC ministers agree in Vienna to a really effective and, above all, credible production program in which Saudi Arabia shares, Nigeria might yet opt for a small "quality adjustment" in its prices, PI International concludes.

Also in the March 15 issue, PI International cites a new study by the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) that the volume of oil exports from the Arab world in coming years will be sharply reduced. That is because of a continuing explosive rise in domestic energy demand in the Arab World.

RRC approves request

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved a request by Conoco to suspend surface mining of uranium at seven sites of their Conquista Project in Karnes and Live Oak Counties, perform temporary reclamation measures, and delay final reclamation of the sites. Conoco holds Commission-granted surface mining permits covering 5,300 acres but only 357 acres are actually being mined.

According to testimony by Conoco representatives at a public hearing in Kenedy in December, a 300 percent increase in mining costs coupled with a 50 percent decrease in the market price of "yellow cake" uranium ore spurred the company to postpone further mining.

Conoco asked Commission permision to delay final reclamation of the seven mining sites so that re-entering the mines later to resume operations would not be as expensive. Railroad Commission rules require reclamation of disturbed lands following the completion of surface mining operations.

Are you one of the people in our area who should speculate in commodity futures?

The opportunities for profit are enormous. So are the risks. For example: during 1981, December 1981 cotton futures ranged from 86.00 down to 60.00 cents per pound. Potential profit of this range: approximately $12,500 per futures contract. (The margin required was 2,000 per contract.)

To qualify, you need substantial risk capital, and plenty of self-control. That's why Merrill Lynch recommends that you have a net worth of over $100,000, and at least $10,000 in risk capital before you invest in Commodity futures.

We'll tell you more about it at a special Merrill Lynch Seminar we've arranged for people who meet these qualifications.

The atmosphere is informal. You'll personally participate in a frank (and no doubt lively) discussion. We'll give you food for thought and facts for action. For example, you'll learn:

- How you can make money on only 30 percent of your trades—and still come out ahead.
- 3 important trading techniques.

Developing countries owed nation to $90 million in 1981

By CAROLINE ATKINSON
and
JAMES L. ROWE JR.
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Last year, the world's developing countries owed U.S. banks close to $90 billion, almost three times as much as in 1975 when the Federal Reserve began to keep track of overseas lending on a country-by-country basis.

Yet despite the well-publicized problems involving loans to Poland and Romania, there appears to be little concern of a banking collapse as a result of overseas lending. In fact, some experts are more concerned about the impact on the world economy if banks cut back their lending than about the effect on banks if they don't.

For one thing, debtor countries will do almost anything to avoid defaulting on their loans, experts believe. Moreover, major commercial banks are sufficiently diversified and strong enough to withstand small losses on parts of their business, and even if a smaller bank were to get into trouble it would likely be bailed out by the central banks of the industrialized world.

Finally, U.S. banks don't have much money at risk in countries that seem to be in the shakiest financial condition.

Nevertheless, there is growing concern about international banking. There's "no question" that the system faces more difficulties now than a few years ago, according to one top New York banker.

DEVELOPING COUNTRIES that ran up large debts in the 1970s because of the sharp run-up in oil prices may have difficulties making payments because of depressed exports and low prices for their commodities. More of them are likely to ask banks to renegotiate their debts on easier terms in the next few years, bankers agree.

This could force a few small banks out of business, one World Bank official said last week. High profits have attracted hundreds of banks into the international market in the last decade, and as the profits shrink it is "very much a possibility that poorly run banks will go out of business," he said.

But the official isn't greatly worried by that prospect: if banks make poor loans there is no reason why they should not suffer, and no reason why the entire financial system should be threatened, he said.

While bankers don't expect a default, they do warn that the Reagan administration may force a default for political purposes, as some officials — including Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger — reportedly favored in the case of Poland. (Under terms of some bank loans, they automatically are classified as in default if the borrower defaults on other loans, such as those made by the U.S. government.)

BANKERS PREFER easing loan conditions to declaring default, which would destroy confidence in the whole edifice on which international lending depends.

According to the latest Federal Reserve figures available, U.S. banks last September were owed close to $320 billion in direct loans to foreign countries.

Another $45 billion to $60 billion has been borrowed from U.S. banks via offshore banking centers, such as the Bahamas and the Cayman Islands, according to Federal Reserve figures. Regulators here cannot trace the final destination of this money.

Loans by U.S. banks to Eastern Europe have not grown much in recent years. "New money flows (to Comecon countries) have now more or less come to a halt," one Federal Reserve official said last week.

And U.S. bankers also have pulled out of much of Central America — one area where many expect nations to have difficulties meeting their debt obligations. American "banks have not got much exposure down there" now, the Federal Reserve official said.

MANY OF THE COUNTRIES on the international casualty list are simply too poor to have attracted much commercial bank money, and rely almost exclusively on official government aid or loans from international institutions, such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. One major bank that does business with about 120 countries said last week that 62 percent of its loans are to just 13 nations — most likely the 13 largest and most industrialized. The bank asked that it not be identified.

Eight nations were in such difficulties last year that they were forced to reschedule their debts to creditor governments. Seven of these were in Africa, where U.S. banks have traditionally not been big lenders, and the eighth — Pakistan — owed American banks only $161 million last June.

There is some small U.S. involvement in other financially troubled nations. Sudan, considered a "basket case" by some bankers, owed American banks just over $250 million in the middle of last year. Bolivia, also in serious economic trouble, according to one banker who did not want to be named, owed American banks $460 million last year.

But the bulk of U.S. bank lending to developing countries has been to big, stronger economies in Latin America. That area as a whole is "relatively speaking, not so bad," said one New York banker who long has been involved in international banking.

A lot of the anxiety about banks' exposure in foreign countries comes from those — such as bank regulators — who are paid to worry and to be cautious, said one Federal Reserve official. "When you see (Federal Reserve governor) Henry Wallich making speeches about the dangers for U.S. banks in international lending, 'why, that's part of his job.'"

ONE REASON FOR THE frequently expressed fears about overseas lending — which one World Bank official said had amounted to "near hysteria on the part of U.S. regulators" at one stage in the late 1970s — is that international lending is "conceptually" more risky than lending within the United States, one regulator said.

Banks at a distance from their debtors may be less able to gauge what is going on than they would be with a borrower at home, or they may have trouble dealing with a different legal and social structure or different business mores, he said.

Another problem is that "sovereign risk" loans are made to or guaranteed by a nation's government, and if the loans go bad the banks cannot put a lien on the assets of the government as they might in the case of a company at home. There are also fears that an overseas borrower might be unable to service or re-pay foreign currency debts because of its nation's overall balance of payments problems and lack of foreign exchange, even when the individual borrower is not bankrupt. Political upheaval that could threaten investments is another obvious danger to international lending.

Despite this additional "conceptual ri k," the losses on international lending in recent years have actually been only about a third as great — in relation to total loans — as losses on domestic loans, commented analyst Irving Geszel of Bear Stearns and Co. The same is true, he said, for "non-performing assets," or loans where the banks have changed the terms, perhaps by stretching out the loans, so that they are more advantageous to the borrower and make less money, or no profit at all, for the lender.

However, international lending is clearly losing some of its gloss for the banks. The "spreads" that determine profits — between the cost to banks of borrowing funds and the interest rates charged on the loans they make — are now "razor thin," according to a senior Bank of America official.

WHILE NORTH AMERICAN banks are generally more sanguine about the future risks of international lending than banks in Europe and Asia, they are more concerned now than they used to be, according to the preliminary results of a worldwide survey of about 200 banks. It showed that banks worry about the expense and problems involved in rescheduling debts rather than a default and chain collapse, reported Geoffrey Bell, executive vice president and director of Schroder International.

Such worries are real. "Sure it's fair to say that no country has defaulted," said the chief of lending at one of the nation's top five banks. "But who would expect any country to do that? Where would it go? As bankers what we should be concerned about is nonperforming assets ... Do you think a Polish asset is worth a dollar?"

If bankers grow too nervous, warns Jan Vanous of Wharton Econometric Forecasters, or try to reduce their loan commitments in a hurry, then many basically healthy economies may be forced into liquidity crises.

Many of those in the world of international finance worry more about the dangers to the world economy if banks cut back on their overseas lending than the danger to the banks if they do not. The threat in the 1980s is "not that countries will go out and default," but that they may have to depress their economies to cope with less foreign money, and will "contribute to the overall world tendency to deflate" and slow down economic growth, said Nicholas C. Hope of the External Debt Division of the World Bank.

If the resources of the international financial agencies are simultaneously reduced, as the Reagan administration would like, then the problems multiply.

A world economic slowdown will hurt the creditworthiness of overseas countries, but it will also damage domestic borrowers. "If interest rates go to 20 percent" in a world economy that is in recession and burdened with high oil prices, "then all bets are off," said one senior New York banker. "But don't just look abroad. The same thing would happen here."

Study of investment cycles can benefit

By MILDRED HAMILTON
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Beadle, who looked like a million dollars when she was crowned Miss Greater San Jose in 1961, now looks at 40 — like a million dollars plus. And her cash value is comparable.

Beadle, in fact, notes that she is well on her way to a second million dollars. And anyone who will turn to a serious study of cycles, she says, can benefit along with her.

The investment consultant author's concern for cycles came after she had already moved onto a comfortable income plateau. There are cycles, she is convinced, in everything from pigs to poetry, and the trick for a fat bank account is to know these seasons in advance. She says that reports from The Foundation for the Study of Cycles, which has charted economic and other ups and downs back to the early 1800s, are her financial bible.

Her book, "Investing in the '80s," published last year by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich and about to go into its second printing, sets forth her techniques.

After serving her Miss Greater San Jose stint and earning a B.A. degree and teaching credentials, she taught for six years there, then a year in Europe. Returning to San Jose in 1966 with just enough cash to get home, she went back to her old teaching job. Seven months later she made her first financial move by buying a house — a move she advises as basic for most private investors.

"I scraped together $3,000. In 1967 that permitted me to buy a house for $27,775. It was a nice house, and that was a lot of money then."

Two years later she became a land development partner, buying property in a good growth area.

"By this time I was married and about to have my first daughter. So I took my savings and withdrew my money from the teachers' retirement fund to invest. I also started my own small publishing company to distribute the science material I had written for my classes."

Success in both ventures led her to try the stock market. "That was 1973, and the next year the market bottomed out in the recession that few experts predicted. I realized I needed more financial education." Investment of her land development profits in other real estate was coupled with the discovery of the economic cycle theory.

She poured over all the writings of Nicholai Kondratieff, whose Kondratieff Wave theory made "somewhat of an economic legend," as well as the foundation reports. "The foundation had predicted the stock market fall of 1974, its strength of 1977, the real estate market.

"With the study of cycles, I knew stocks would take off in 1980, be weak in mid-1981, and then take a fall. I expect today's market to go lower, but the important thing is that I was predicting these trends more than three years ago. I became fascinated with the study of cycles as an investment tool. It's one of the few available to the private investor.

"You do have to do it yourself, and you can with this incredible tool. It is not what you purchase, but when. Cycles allow you to adjust your investment expectations, to learn how to flow with the trend."

Has she had any losses since her cycle-watching? "Yes and no. There were some individual stock losses, but overall I have made money."

Beadle, who does not believe that the private investor "can get any answers out of Washington," says her personal cycle for the next six months will be making long-term plans and managing her own property.

A vote for progress

During the past several years those of us living in Midland have experienced the excitement, the awe and, yes, the annoyances of living in an honest-to-goodness boom town. We have experienced phenomenal growth in both population and construction. It has been nothing short of mind-boggling.

Many longtime Midlanders have speculated each year that the following year could not possibly match the previous — only to be proven incorrect time and again as more people flooded in, more skyscrapers reached for the Permian Basin sky.

The Midland of 1979 is not the Midland of 1980 or 1981 and certainly not the Midland of today. While the Tall City's growth has cemented an already strong economic base, it also has stretched to the limits the ability of governmental bodies to provide the basic services expected by a burgeoning population. Streets throughout the city are overcrowded, sewer lines and treatment centers barely are able to handle the additional demands, the housing picture remains bleak, school classrooms are overcrowded with youngsters.

And yet the influx of people continues. In fact, the Midland Chamber of Commerce noted not long ago that in January this year more than 100 families were moving to the city each month. That figure is above and beyond the number of families leaving in the same period.

To provide for this growth, two governmental entities — Midland City Council and Midland Independent School District — will be placing before voters on April 3 bond issues totalling $16,475,000. Those bonds would finance a number of much-needed services with the break being $7 million to be presented in five city proposals and one school district package that would total the remaining $9,475,000.

An expenditure of nearly $16.5 million is nothing to sneeze at and we at The Reporter-Telegram, like most Midlanders, are fiscal conservatives who believe government should only spend what is absolutely essential. The less the tax burden, the better.

But in taking a look at the Midland of today and at what has transpired during the past few years, our opinion, frankly, is that all the improvements being asked are not only needed but desperately needed. In fact, even if Midland's growth stopped today, this very minute, that of the past three or four years still would necessitate a vast monetary outlay just to catch up and provide for the city's current populace. But we don't think for a minute that Midland has realized its full potential or experienced its complete growth. We must deal with the situation in the most expedient and economically feasible manner possible.

The city proposal calls for $3 million in street and drainage improvements, $1 million for remodeling and enlarging the cramped City Hall quarters, $500,000 for remodeling and equipping the police station, $500,000 for enlarging the vehicle maintenance building and $2 million for constructing two new fire substations.

The school issue proposes construction of two new elementary schools, the addition of 20 new classrooms at three existing elementary schools and the addition of eight classrooms at Midland Freshman School. In both city and school proposals, these are only the bare minimum.

No, the improvements are not inexpensive. But if not financed now, they will only have to be approved later — at much higher cost to taxpayers.

What is at issue is whether Midland residents will deal with phenomenal growth in an orderly and timely fashion or be caught in an even more pressing predicament.

We believe every Midland voter would be wise to vote for progress and in favor of both bond proposals.

Voting day choices

Midland voters will be asked to make a number of choices when they go to the polls April 3 to elect the officials who will guide the city government, Midland Independent School District, Midland Memorial Hospital District and Midland College in coming months.

A veteran boardman for Midland Independent School District, Parker Humes is the obvious choice in the race for Place 5. Having recently served as the board's president, Humes has exhibited a sincere interest in Midland's educational program and has remained attentive to the district's future needs.

Ed Runyan chose not to seek re-election to the Place 6 seat this time around and that vacancy drew quite a lot of interest, with five individuals filing as candidates. Our choice in this race is Charleen Rosebery. She has been actively involved in civic affairs in Midland, notably the League of Women Voters, Bowie PTA and as a Head Start and classroom volunteer.

Mrs. Rosebery has the background and the time to devote the effort necessary to address district needs. Another female voice on the school board also would be in the district's best interests, we believe.

Moving to the city council election, the only contested race is for the Place 4 seat. Steve Davidson, just completing his first two-year term in that slot, is seeking re-election and is The Reporter-Telegram's pick. In the past two years, Davidson has exhibited the vital enthusiasm of a young man combined with mature judgment. Already he has made major contributions to city government.

The only contested race for the Midland College board is the Place 6 seat. Our choice in that race is Gloria Hinojosa who is seeking re-election. Active in various aspects of Midland civic work in recent years, she has been a fine representative on the college board. Additionally, she speaks clearly as a representative of Midland's growing minority population.

The final contested race in the April balloting pits Patricia Estes, Martin Neill and Tevis Herd in a three-way bid for two positions on the Midland Memorial Hospital District board of directors. Estes and Neill are incumbents while Herd is the challenger. Unlike the school board and City Council elections, the two top vote-getters in this election will be the winners.

The Reporter-Telegram takes no issue with the jobs performed by either Estes or Neill. Both have represented the best interests of the hospital district in admirable fashion and have worked to improve the hospital's standing, image and service.

But the same can be said of Herd who now serves on the appointed board of trustees, which is not to be confused with the elective board of directors. All three candidates in this instance have proven themselves capable and qualified and each has made important contributions to the hospital district.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Moscow using hard line to punish Jews

WASHINGTON — There has been a tragic side effect of President Reagan's hard line with the Soviet Union. The Kremlin apparently has decided there is nothing to be gained by continuing the all-too-brief relaxation of its grip on Jewish citizens.

Jack Anderson

The plight of Soviet Jews has deteriorated drastically. The emigration of Soviet Jews, for example, has come to a virtual halt. This closing of the escape hatch is bad enough, but it has also coincided with a disturbing increase in officially blessed anti-Semitism.

If ever Soviet Jews needed to get out, it is now. But the government has made it almost impossible to meet the official requirements for emigrant visas. From an average of 30,000 a year during the Carter administration, the number of Jews allowed to leave the Soviet Union has dropped to a trickle. Last month, for example, only 283 Soviet Jews were permitted to emigrate.

My reporters Lucette Lagnado and Jeff Nesbit have compiled disturbing evidence of the Kremlin's latest crackdown on its unhappy Jewish population. Here are some of the uglier manifestations:

— The state-controlled press frequently carries vicious cartoon caricatures of Jews with large hooked noses and unshaven jowls — a practice reminiscent of Nazi Germany.

— The Soviet state publishing house has produced a virulently anti-Semitic book titled, "Invasion without Arms," by an otherwise unknown author, Vladimir Begun. It describes the Old Testament as an "unsurpassed textbook of hypocrisy, perfidy and moral degeneracy."

— There are repeated derogatory references in the Soviet press to persons with identifiably Jewish names. One article claimed that American capitalism is "led by the Lehmans, Lazards, Blaunsteins, Stillmans, Warburgs, Kuhns, Guggenheims, Loebs, Kahns, Rosenwalds and Schiffs."

The Soviet press routinely refers to Jews as "criminals and gangsters," and even fantasizes a "Jewish Sicilian Mafia."

The teaching of Hebrew is outlawed, and in recent months more than 30 clandestine teachers of the language in Moscow alone have been threatened with prosecution and banishment if they continue their activities. Homes have been raided to seize incriminating instructional material.

No calumny is too farfetched for the Soviet stable of anti-Semitic hacks. Incredibly, a number of articles in the press accused the Jews of collaborating with Adolf Hitler to destroy the Soviet Union. Jews have been accused of "stimulating anti-Semitism and setting fire to synagogues in order to settle in Israel."

In this frightening atmosphere, it's no wonder Soviet Jews are desperate to leave their homeland. Experts estimate that more than 350,000 have taken at least the first step in the agonizingly slow process of obtaining emigration permits.

But from being merely cumbersome and bureaucratically complex, the emigration process has now become virtually impossible.

For example, to apply for an exit visa, a Soviet citizen must first produce an affidavit from a close relative in another country stating a desire to have the family reunited. But Soviet postal authorities have simply stopped delivering many of these affidavits when they arrive. And to make sure no one smuggles the precious documents into the country, emigration officials are now requiring visa applicants to submit stamped envelopes along with the affidavits.

Furthermore, "refuseniks," as those who request emigration are called, run a serious risk of losing their jobs when they apply. They must receive permission from their parents, their boss and any other "superior" — even their landlord. If the request fails at any stage, the applicant is invariably fired and the whole family is ostracized in the community. Experts say there are at least 10,000 Soviet Jews who are in this wretched limbo.

"I know we've cried 'Wolf' before," said David Harris of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry. "But this is undoubtedly the worst of times. We're talking about the end of emigration."

The drastic decline in Jewish emigration has reflected the deterioration in U.S.-Soviet relations over the past two years, since the invasion of Afghanistan and the breakdown of the SALT talks.

Infuriated by American withdrawal from the Olympic games because of Soviet aggression in Afghanistan, the Kremlin evidently decided a clampdown on Jewish emigration was one way it could get back at Jimmy Carter. Apparently, this was supposed to deprive him of campaign points with Jewish voters on the eve of the 1980 election.

By no coincidence, the number of Jewish emigrants per month first fell below 1,000 in August 1980 — when the U.S.-led boycott of the Moscow Olympics took effect.

The emigration situation has grown worse during the Reagan administration, which has put new emphasis on combating the Red Menace. The rhetoric emanating from the White House and the State Department has given Soviet leaders little incentive to let its Jews go as a favor to the United States.

Yet for all his tough talk, Reagan passed up a golden opportunity to extract some cooperation from the Soviets when he ended the grain embargo. The White House was repeatedly asked to use the lifting of the embargo to win concessions on Jewish emigration — but refused to do so.

GEORGE F. WILL

Government's compassion missed Denny

SILVER SPRING, Md. — The seizures that sometimes afflict John Denny six times a day began soon after he was struck by a bicycle and suffered a head injury. He was six. It was 1953.

George F. Will

Today, he illustrates part of America's unfinished agenda of justice. His mother's plea to Maryland's legislature is for a small reform suited to today, a cost-effective demonstration of a state government's competence and compassion.

The day I visited Mrs. Mary Denny in her small apartment, John had just had a seizure, fallen and smashed a chair. Recently he went five days without a seizure, but once he had 37 in 24 hours. The time he hit his head on the radiator, "you could scoop up the blood like jelly with your hands." When seizures occur, Mrs. Denny must protect his head so he does not have to go to the emergency ward yet again. Then she must get him to bed. It's okay, she says, "he doesn't weigh much more than I do." She is 75, a widow, suffering angina. She is five feet tall.

She is not a complainer: "It's difficult at times, of course, but it's difficult for him, too." Neither is she clamorous. "I'd like him to be involved in something." She means a group home, a daytime activity, something, anything.

Recently, she journeyed to Annapolis, to the legislature, an arena of high-pitched complaining and muscular demanding. She testified concerning a bill that would do something for John, who has received nothing in the way of community services for 14 years, since he turned 21. John's affliction is abnormally severe. The bill would do more for the many mentally handicapped persons who are shut away from the community even though they have no incapacitating physical complications comparable to John's and could master work skills and public transportation.

The bill would move Maryland away from the unnecessary consigning of handicapped persons to institutions. It would commit the state to emphasis on community-based care in smaller, more open units, such as group homes.

Current policy is especially unjust to persons like Mrs. Denny. Her special sense of parental responsibility kept her from making John a burden on the state by institutionalizing him. So today she gets no assistance because available funds are drained away by big institutions.

Gov. Harold Hughes is setting a fiscally and morally correct course by closing one large institution, but there are long waiting lists of adults in need of community programs. Nearly 1,800 are in institutions although they have been evaluated as suited to less restrictive and less costly environments.

Group homes are the heart of the new approach, and they encounter the NIMBY (Not In My Back Yard) syndrome. Money is the most serious problem. But although care in the community costs more than neglect, it costs less than institutional care. And savings are compounded when, with the help of public-spirited corporations, the mentally handicapped, most of whom are less handicapped than John Denny, find fulfilling employment and become taxpayers. The Marriott Corporation, which is headquartered in Maryland, is a splendid example: Four percent of its employees in this country are physically or mentally handicapped.

The Reagan administration has wisely authorized states to apply for Medicaid reimbursement for a range of services provided in the community rather than just for costs incurred in the usual — and usually dismaying — large-scale institutions. Furthermore, in an act of responsibility that should shame other interest groups, the Maryland Association for Retarded Citizens has endorsed revenue-raising measures more than sufficient to pay the costs of the transition to community-based programs.

One measure would recover some corporate tax revenues that Maryland would lose because its tax code is coupled to certain federal tax categories that have been reduced. With such a measure Maryland legislators can assert their independence from federal revenue actions.

The bill Mrs. Denny needs may be a prototype of revivified state politics. By such measures, state goverments can demonstrate that Washington has no monopoly on imagination, and that states will provide themselves with revenue foundations commensurate with the states' minimal duties.

When Maryland's legislators vote, they should picture Mrs. Denny, her placid face framed by white hair, her tiny hands clasped in her lap. She is a demure, composed marvel of courage who has been more self-reliant, longer, than any citizen should have to be. She says, "There's no rush, but John might outlive me." To her credit, and disadvantage, she has not mastered what today's most successful petitioners have — an angry, self-pitying tone of voice.

ART BUCHWALD

Ask not what business can give you now!

President Reagan is asking the private sector to pick up the slack in all the government social programs he's axed. He wants companies to fill the void by supporting charities, universities, medical research, and the arts.

Art Buchwald

He couldn't have asked business to step in at a worse time.

I went to see the president of the Sludge Automobile Company to make a personal appeal for my alma mater.

His showroom was jammed with people, from directors of day care centers, to society women ready to plead for their symphony orchestras.

After a four-hour wait, I finally got in to see him.

"Hi, Jake," I said.

"The answer is no," he said.

"I haven't even made my pitch," I protested. "My school is having a $10 million drive to make up for federal scholarship funds we've lost and President Reagan and I thought..."

"Don't mention that man's name to me. If he thinks he can throw his social problems in my lap, he's crazier than his budget."

"Jake, I thought you were a big Reagan man."

"You saw my showroom. Everyone is out there wanting a handout. My phone hasn't stopped ringing since Reagan said business has to take up the burden caused by his budget cuts. Hasn't he heard of the recession? Our profits are down by 80 percent. We may have to close several dealerships in the first quarter. And you want me to give money to your alma mater?"

"But, Jake, we can't get it from the government, so we have to appeal to the private sector. What better place to start than the auto companies?"

Jake cried. "I haven't sold a car in a month. You want blood? Go to the Red Cross."

"But if the business community doesn't take over the areas where the government can't help any more, where can we go for money?"

"The same place I'm going. To the bankruptcy court. Look, I run a business. When things are good, I give. When things are lousy, I can't give. The reason the government can't give any more is things are lousy. If it was good for them, they wouldn't tell you to come to me. What makes them think things are good for the private sector, if it's lousy for them?"

"Corporate America can't ignore its social responsibilities, just because you're not making any money," I said. "If Reaganomics ever has a prayer of working, you people have to suffer pain. What is more painful than giving money to programs that the government can no longer afford?"

"Trying to make your payroll for one," Jake said. "Going out of business for another."

"I guess Reagan has more faith in private enterprise than you do. He would have never cut out the funds to my alma mater if he didn't believe you were ready to take up the torch."

"Well he can have the torch back. I'm not the keeper of the flame. Why don't you go to the oil companies?"

"I did, but now that there is oil glut they have no guilt money to hand out any more."

Jake was almost in tears. "My wife's on the board of a hospital, my daughter works for a senior citizens lunch program, the only guy who bought a car from me this year made me buy a table for the Kidney Foundation dinner. How the hell can I give to you, when I've already been wiped out by giving to them?"

"I can only give you one answer, Jake."

"What's that?"

"Your President wants you to."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 21, the 80th day of 1982. There are 285 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 21, 1979, the Israeli Cabinet approved the U.S.-sponsored peace treaty with Egypt, clearing the way for a signing ceremony in Washington.

On this date:

In 1829, an earthquake in Spain killed 6,000 people.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that states may not set one-year residence as a requirement for voting.

One year ago: Poland's Solidarity labor movement and communist government agreed to hold emergency talks, amid a crisis atmosphere created by police attacks on union members.

Thought for today: Opposition always inflames the enthusiast, never converts him. — Johann Friedrich Schiller, German writer (1759-1805).

Water issue is as old as Texas — or so the story goes

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Recently, an old acquaintance and one-time lobbyist dropped by the Capitol pressroom after being away from Texas for several years — and his first question was about the state's water crisis.

Did Billy Clayton, he joked, ever get them to move the Mississippi River over to Springlake?

No, he was told, but Texas is in another round of hearings regarding how to develop and use its water resources — and the problem of getting more water to West Texas hasn't been solved yet.

Didn't think it would be, the ex-lobbyist commented. And, he added, he didn't expect to ever see that issue settled.

Currently, the Water Development Board and Governor's Water Task Force are conducting public hearings around Texas on revisions to the Texas Water Plan — and while importing water to West Texas is only one of many issues involved, it's an issue which is getting much attention — and not just from West Texans.

At one point, Texas was looking at the possibility of bringing water from the Mississippi River to West Texas — but that plan was scrapped after the Army Corps of Engineers concluded it would be far too costly just to build the necessary physical facilities (without figuring what the costs in terms of energy would be).

Now, Texas is looking at the possibility of bringing water from closer sources, such as Arkansas or other states to the east — which have shown no great enthusiasm for that idea.

For many West Texans, the idea of importing water has become almost an article of faith — and they feel the rest of the state doesn't understand the need to provide their area with additional water.

But some Texans in other areas are saying they understand the problem in West Texas, but the solutions being discussed aren't practical.

And some are saying flatly they don't see any reason why the rest of the state should be asked to help pick up the tab for West Texas' water problem.

At the first of the current series of hearings on the Water Plan, held in Texarkana, some of those testifying accused West Texas of having used its water "wastefully" — asking why East Texas should pay so that West Texas could prosper.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

The area which will be hit hardest by lack of water, Clements says, isn't Springlake, but is Houston.

But while Clements has been receptive to the idea of bringing water from outside Texas to West Texas, he also expressed the concern on the minds of many East Texas residents during a speech to the State Republican Executive Committee, in which he told West Texans they can't "steal" water from East Texas.

"There is no surplus water in East Texas," Clements said — something many East Texas leaders have been saying for some time.

Clements also suggested that West Texas look to Arkansas for "surplus" water — despite the fact that Arkansas lawmakers already have passed legislation intended to prevent such efforts.

None of Texas' neighbors is enthusiastic about sharing any water: New Mexico and Texas are involved in disputes over the Pecos River and El Paso's effort to get groundwater from New Mexican wells; Oklahoma has shortages of its own; Louisiana told the High Plains Study Council this month its water isn't for sale.

That High Plains Study Council meeting also received a report from the Corps of Engineers regarding possible routes for bringing water into Texas and other states on the Ogallala Aquifer.

Basically, the Corps concluded that the facilities can be built — but left to the politicians and the public the problems of securing the water to put in the canals and reservoirs, and of paying for the water, the facilities and the energy needed.

So the arguments continue — with the one certain thing being that West Texas is running out of water, whether or not anything will be, or can be, done about it.

Texarkana Sen. Ed Howard, the Senate sponsor of Proposition 4 — the proposed water trust fund plan defeated by voters last November — concluded that most Texans don't see lack of water as a statewide concern.

He also commented that it's "unlikely" that taxpayers would back any proposal to import water to West Texas.

Speaker Clayton, Howard and other supporters of Proposition 4 (including Gov. Bill Clements) tried to convince voters that Texas does indeed face a statewide water crisis within the foreseeable future — and that Proposition 4 was a plan to provide a financing vehicle for all areas of Texas, and all types of water problems.

Clements has stressed, over and over, in public statements that Texas' No. 1 problem in water isn't agriculture and irrigation, but supplying rapidly growing urban areas.

SPEAKING OUT

Dear Uncle Sam, Don't you like us?

By CAROL ANN MILLER

Carol Ann Miller is a legal secretary and moved to Midland from Houston five years ago.

This is an open letter to Uncle Sam:

Dear Uncle Sam,

Here it is, income tax time again. We put it off till the last minute this year, hoping a guardian angel (or a huge last-minute tax cut) would come and help us out. But nothing happened, and so enclosed is our IOU in the amount of $2,456.97. We don't have this kind of money. We never did.

You see, Uncle, we only got married last year. Before that we were taxed at the "higher" single person's rate, and each year we got back respective checks from you, a reward for withholding extra taxes from our paychecks and letting you use it as you wanted. When we got married, we wisely sat down and agreed that we'd better withhold even a little more from each of our paychecks.

Let me stop right here and say that we are fortunate people. We are both gainfully employed. Neither of us is on welfare, food stamps, unemployment or dope. We work hard and often overtime to be able to make ends meet in this high-cost-of-living area. We aren't really poor. We eat three meals a day. We have enough left over to drink all the coffee we want, every morning. We have squeezed ourselves and all our earthly belongings into a tiny mobile home originally intended for one-person occupancy, but it does belong to us. We have a six-year old Toyota and a pickup we cannot afford to put gas in, but they are ours.

So, I suppose we really shouldn't complain. But oh! Uncle Sam! We had all this extra money (money we could have used to help us buy a little bit larger mobile home so we wouldn't trip over each other on the way to the bathroom) taken out of our paychecks, just given to you free and clear. It put us in a bind, it sometimes made us angry. But we let you have it, because after all, we are grateful to live in the U.S. of A.

Why, now, do we have to pay you MORE?! If we had not gotten married, thus encouraging an age-old institution, we would be getting back enough money for a Caribbean cruise. If we hadn't held out for these plain little wedding rings, we could have simply lived together and made money. But no, here we are, respectfully married, living in a cramped trailer, possessing no savings account and a barely solvent checking account, spending all our spare change at the grocery store, and having to pay you more taxes than ever before.

Don't you like married people? Don't you like people who work hard for a living and ask for no handouts? Do you get your sadistic jollies by watching people like us, the great working class, struggle and scrimp and still not quite make ends meet, just to have to turn around at the end of the year and start out further in debt — to you?!

Because all you're getting is this IOU. We don't have $2,456.97. We don't even have $56.97. We don't even know where we're going to get it. We wanted to buy a little piece of land this year to park our little trailer on, and hoped we could maybe enlarge it. And we can't even do that, so what makes you think we can pay you more income taxes?

Personally, I should think you'd be grateful enough not to have to support us through all your other help-the-needy programs that you'd pay us for keeping our jobs. That you'd thank us for working and keeping the economy going by spending what we make on frivolous items like granola and eggs and Ivory Liquid, and sometimes (when we feel like splurging), hamburger!

I sure wish you were up for re-election, Uncle Sam. Because right about now, I think my retarded Aunt Lulu could do a better job.

Letters may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must bear the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

For valid reasons, at the discretion of the editor, the name will be withheld but must be included in the original letter.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved.

Letters must be received by noon Thursday for Sunday publication. If necessary, the latest received may be held for publication the following Tuesday or Thursday.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Parking problems

To The Editor:

It looks like the citizens who have been complaining about the parking facilities at Lee High School for the last several years might just as well give up.

The school board has been approached on numerous occasions about correcting the situation so that students will not park in the residential area and, consequently, deny repairmen and visitors access to the residents' homes. The school board's cooperation would also help clean up the trash situation that is created in their front yards as students come and go during the school day.

Each time a citizen has complained, they have been told by the school board that there are plans to purchase the remaining lots they do not own on Neely across from the front door of Lee as soon as the lots come up for sale. There are also supposed to be plans to pave around the vocational building to take care of the parking problem on the west side of school. The lots had a "for sale" sign on them last summer. Did the board not know the lots were for sale?

Now you will notice that duplexes are being built on the land the school board supposedly intended to buy as soon as they were for sale. You will also notice that no paving has been done around the vocational building.

As an explanation for the failure to purchase these lots, a member of the administration said turning the lots on Neely into a parking lot would necessitate putting in a cross walk. My answer to this is: If a student is old enough to drive, he is old enough to cross the street.

Mrs. Richard Williams

To The Editor:

Last Monday evening our dog was hit crossing Wadley at Garfield. He's a big gray dog, not used to traffic and it was 8 in the evening. He was hit twice and suffered from shock and internal bleeding.

So many people, so many wonderful people, came to our aid. Our thanks is insignificant compared to our feelings towards you.

To you, Barbara Williamson, who stepped into all that traffic and dragged him to the curb (he weighs 90 pounds);

To you, Mr. and Mrs. Lentzer, who stopped to help load him and to Anita who called and called to find a vet open at night;

To Barbara and Michelle Williamson who came out to the vet's to be with us and pray for his recovery;

To all those who were there to help and render aid on a busy Monday night and whose names we don't know;

To the 14 people who called the vet the next day to find out how Bernie was doing, our very special heart-felt gratitude.

Dear people with gentle hearts, Bernie is home. There are no broken bones and though stiff and sore, he is on the mend.

That all you special people were there to help, that Dr. Boyd was available, that caring believing people prayed for him was not just a coincidence, it was a miracle. Praise and thanks be to God.

Disastrous news

To The Editor:

I was recently alerted to something I think the public needs to be aware of and comment about.

On Feb. 22, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) published regulations that would — if put into effect — require Title X funded clinics (of which Permian Basin Planned Parenthood is one) to notify within 10 days, the parents of a minor receiving prescription contraceptives (IUD, diaphragm, oral contraceptives). These regulations are currently NOT in effect. They are sitting on the FEDERAL REGISTER until April 23 awaiting public comment.

The results of such regulations being put into effect would be disastrous. Parents should be involved when teenagers are sexually active and need adult guidance. That is why Planned Parenthood always encourages teens to talk with their parents or guardians. Unfortunately, not every family is the ideal and some teens (25 percent) would not come to a clinic if parents are informed. These teens — probably the ones who need guidance the most — will very likely have unplanned pregnancies if these regulations become a reality. Unplanned teenage pregnancies result in children being born to young people who are only children themselves — or abortions, often chosen out of desperation that would never have occurred if pregnancy had been prevented!

Furthermore, most teens already tell their parents about their visit to a family planning clinic. One fifth came at their parents' suggestion!

Studies by the Alan Guttmacher Institute show, however, that 25 percent of teens would not come if parents had to be informed while only two percent say they would stop having sex!

Another concern is that teen-agers will falsify information. This can be hazardous if the clinic needs to do a follow-up. Remember, the clinic also provides cancer and venereal disease screening. While notification will not be required for drugs and treatment of venereal disease, some teens may still falsify names and ages.

Act now if you are concerned about America's teens. A short letter is all that's needed. Please, express your opinion during the comment period. You have until April 23. Write to: Ms. Marjory Mecklenburg, Acting Deputy Assistant, Secretary for Population Affairs, Room 725H, 200 Independence Ave. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20201.

Also, send a copy of your letter to your Texas Senators, John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen.

There is no contraceptive that affects a teen's health as harmfully as pregnancy. And there is nothing more likely to drive teenagers away from family planning clinics and their health services than the knowledge that those clinics may be required to inform their parents.

Permian Basin Planned Parenthood

Special class

To The Editor:

Your editorial of Congress' special privileges:

It is good to get this matter to readers — but you down play the dangers of it.

The Congress has voted itself special tax privileges which are not lawful for any other citizen. This elevates them into a special class as government. It ought not to be so.

They have become traitors to the fact and concept of government "of the people, for the people, and by the people." Those who voted such tax relief can be and should be indicted for treason. And tried. The Supreme Court would sustain the charge.

Not "lawful" for any other citizen today! When do the appointees get these specials? And pensions?

Like the universe, it's amazing man survives

The Earth daily turns on its axis, as it yearly takes a trip around the sun. It happens over and over again ad infinitum and with so much timely precision that you can set you watch or any navigational instrument by it.

Amazing wonders the cosmos holds. Its intricacies and complexities, like those in nature, are baffling to the finite mind.

Down on Earth, there are wonders of a different sort.

It is, for sure, a wonder that man has survived his blunders, including wars, and wiles and ambitions.

It's a wonder that man has the resilience to recover after he so abuses his body and mind. But there is a limit; and the dark side of that is debilitation and not death, which is quite natural to all living things in man's world. Death is just the finale of a full life; otherwise, it is a dread, and the end comes too soon.

Likewise, it's a marvel that man can be a mini-creator, such as Leonardo da Vinci or Michelangelo, who can perform engineering and artistic wonders which approach — and only emulate — those marvels in nature.

Man, when he brings order to his own life and thinking, can glimpse a bare flicker of the powers that are God's; when he allows himself to see, he can behold the miracle of creation in his own life. Undoubtedly, he, too, will experience turmoil and chaos, as he searches for a semblance of order and understanding in his dare to live.

Man's intellect to perceive scientific and natural laws and to employ those principles for his own benefit or detriment are wonders. Man can do what he will with the atoms, the elements and the earth's vast resources — from the heavens to the planet's core. Yet, all along, he is either working with or against the unalterable universal laws.

Simply, it's a wonder that the Earth and the universe exist. It's a wonder that man is. Period.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

Anderson has definite ideas about U.S. presidency

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — John Anderson, who is thinking of running again for the presidency in 1984 if the recession continues into early next year, has some definite ideas about what he would do if he were president today.

He would launch a tax financed public works program to provide jobs for the unemployed, defer the 1983 10 percent income tax cut, negotiate an "accord" with the Federal Reserve System to lower interest rates, and move immediately to seek a nuclear weapons freeze agreement with the Soviet Union.

Explaining in an exclusive interview with The Hearst Newspapers the policies he would pursue if he were in the White House at the present time, the former 10-term Illinois Republican congressmen who won 7 percent of the popular vote as an independent candidate in the 1980 presidential campaign, said other measures he would take to cope with the economic crisis and foreign problems would include:

1. A substantial reduction of the Reagan administration's proposed 18 percent increase in defense spending, although he would strengthen the readiness of America's conventional forces.

2. Assure federal responsibility to maintain a "decent" minimum level of support for welfare programs instead of shifting virtually all responsibility to the states.

3. A "Sadat"-like visit to Havana to offer Castro normalization of Cuban-American relations, economic aid and the return of Guantanamo to Cuba if the Cuban leader stops exporting revolution to Latin America, withdraws his troops from Africa, and helps negotiate a settlement of the civil war in El Salvador that would put in power a government composed of moderates of both sides.

4. Eliminate tax deductions on home mortgage payments in excess of $5,000 annually as an additional measure, along with deferring next year's tax cut, to reduce the federal deficit.

The 59-year-old moderate conservative, who has spent the last few months expounding his views to young people on college campuses throughout the nation, doubts the economy will turn around and pull out of the recession by the end of this year, as President Reagan hopes.

He shares the president's belief that high interest rates are contributing to continuation of the recession, but he points out the high interest rates are caused by the administration's huge deficit projections for the next two or three years.

He recalls that when asked during the Republican debate in Iowa in Jan., 1980, how Reagan would be able to balance the budget while reducing taxes and increasing defense expenditures, he replied: "It's simple. You do it with mirrors." He thinks that is what the administration is still trying to do.

While Anderson favors retention of the president's 10 percent income tax cut scheduled to take effect July 1, he doesn't see "any possibility of the country getting out of the present mess" unless the president "gives in" on congressional calls for deferment of next year's 10 percent cut and "re-examination" of the proposed indexing of taxes to inflation.

"However, as I hear and read what the president says, he sounds as unrepentent about his economic philosophy as he ever was, and I confess that as of this moment I doubt there will be any turnaround in the economy by the end of the year," Anderson added.

"I think President Reagan is becoming clearly the prisoner of his own rhetoric. I doubt he is philosophically capable of changing his basic views and launching new initiatives. I cannot see him doing what Franklin D. Roosevelt did — publicly damning Herbert Hoover one year for excessive spending and not balancing the budget and then turning around the next year and doing the same thing when he saw that without a totally different approach the country was going to founder. President Reagan doesn't seem to be able to reconsider a course of action and set of policies even after they clearly seem to be failing. Lacking that ability, I doubt that his leadership is going to flourish.

Typewriter with a brain

Since Faulkner Office Machine Corporation introduced the Royal Fifty Thirty microprocessor-controlled elec-tronic typewriter six months ago, growth has been phenomenal. Sales are booming; new applications continue to present themselves, speeding up production; and, best of all, this electronic typewriter's service record is outstanding - almost nil, in fact!

The Royal Fifty Thirty provides exceptional speed, comfort and typing ease with an incredible number of fully automatic func-tions like automatic lift-off correction, automatic centering, indenting, underlining, right margin justification and automatic decimal alignment.

The 72-hour memory stores functions and up to three pages of text, even during power failure, and has the capability to print out at a rapid 210 words a minute. The new Royal Fifty Thirty is also perfect for processing forms with multiple fill-ins. It customizes repetitive form letters as well. Further, the Royal Fifty Thirty electronic typewriter offers unlimited automatic correction anywhere in its memory.

Faulkner Office Machines offers the Royal 5030 Electronic Memory typewriter, growing in popularity every day. Let Faulkners give you a free demonstration of this amazing machine's capabilities at 2612 W. Front, or by calling either 684-6625 or 563-0030.

From every point of view the Royal Fifty Thirty is the ideal choice for typing electronically in your office. Faulkner Office Machine Corporation will be pleased to give you a free office demonstration. Call 684-6625 or 563-0030 to arrange this service, or stop by Faulkner's, 2612 W. Front.

The Faulkner Office Machine Corporation has been serving the Petroplex for over twenty years with sales, service and rentals on a full line of new and reconditioned typewriters and office calculators. They welcome the opportunity to demonstrate their equipment.

Commnications Plus has many advantages

Communications Plus brings you a person-to-person answering service with the following advantages:

1) You can come and go without ever missing a call.
2) Your friends and customers are greeted warmly and with care for their concerns.
3) Accurate messages are taken, noting time of call and specifying time of your return call.
4) Messages, RSVP's, etc. are relayed according to your instructions.
5) You are called immediately in case of emergency or an important message.
6) The system acts as your private secretary while you are away from your office or home.
7) It provides part-time or around-the-clock, person-to-person answering of your telephone.

Highly trained, efficient personnel and sophisticated equipment allow Communications Plus to perform this service for a fraction of the cost of hiring an employee. New employees master professional attitude and performance as well as the advanced technology of the Autotas equipment they use, under the guidance of operations manager Gary Johnson. The Bell System Autotas, newest answering service equipment to be developed in the past 40 years, offers automatic call distribution, variable ring count, room for expansion and no hidden charges!

Located at 1006 West Indiana, the business also handles geological supplies, Brunton compasses and Swift microscopes, and offers land surveying which includes oil well and pipeline locations.

While steel industry is closed down, Hunt Energy moves in

By PETER BEHR
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

By nature and practice, Russell W. Spitz is a risk-taker.

As most of Youngstown, Ohio's steel industry was closing down or moving out, Spitz and his Hunt Energy Co. moved in.

They took over a cavernous, 81-year-old steel mill that had been abandoned by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., gutted its insides, and are re-equipping it with modern electric arc furnaces and continuous steel pipe casters. Hunt plans to hire 500 people for the new plant, a helping hand for the Youngstown area, which has lost 11,000 steel-making jobs since 1977.

When completed this fall, the $85-million renovated plant will produce seamless pipe casings to line oil wells, and at the time the project was launched last year that seemed the perfect product.

All through 1981, the demand for the piping, tubing and casing goods used in oil and gas exploration was so heavy suppliers couldn't keep up. Along with Hunt, many large and small steel producers were planning new production facilities to supply the industry, caught up in a drilling boom because of a three-year rise in petroleum prices.

But Hunt figured to be ahead of many of these U.S. competitors. "Our plan is to get on stream as quickly as possible," said Hunt Vice President Robert Williams. Hunt is counting on its modern equipment and a favorable labor contract it is seeking from the United Steelworkers Union to keep its production costs competitive with other U.S. and foreign producers.

Now, however, the road that looked so straight and smooth last fall has developed some jolting bumps.

Oil prices have been falling since the first of the year, thanks to the worldwide surplus of petroleum products; the U.S. drilling surge has cooled off dramatically, and orders for steel pipe have plummeted. After three months of this decline, steel pipe producers now face a huge backlog of inventory, estimated at 5.5 million tons — more than a year's production for domestic steel companies — according to estimates by Peter F. Marcus, a steel industry analyst with Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc.

Quanex, a Texas oil field pipeline manufacturer that was to have had invested $15 million in the Hunt venture for a one-quarter share of the project, pulled out in January.

Despite these reversals, Hunt Energy has not lost faith in its venture, Williams said.

Other financial investors have replaced Quanex, and even without the Texas company, Hunt has contracts now to sell the first two years' production from the plant and those contracts are holding firm.

And Hunt believes it can ride through what it believes will be a temporary slowing in domestic oil and gas drilling. The larger diameter casings it makes are not in such great supply — moreover, casings cannot be used again, while drill tubing is.

"I'm not saying there are no risks. But our feeling is, the more we work with this, the more we feel this mill is a model for the future," he said.

It isn't that risk makes the company shudder. Spitz was a 38-year-old Milwaukee certified public accountant and entrepreneur when he took over the Hunt Valve Co. in 1974. Then it was a backwater manufacturing firm with annual sales of about $2 million, receiving little attention from its parent company, Bellows International.

The financial controls on Hunt then were so tight it couldn't grow, said Williams. There was little research investment or interest in new products. "It was impossible to get any engineering done," Williams said. So the company pumped along with the same product line of industrial valves.

Spitz took the wraps off, Williams said. Instead of waiting for customers' orders, it began designing complex valve systems for steel mills and selling the entire packages, thus eliminating some of their customers' engineering expense. Their list of customers grew to include most of the major steel makers in Japan and Brazil as well as the U.S. industry.

"We upgraded our products — it hadn't been done in 20 years. We built up inventory and reduced delivery time to four weeks (it had been 48 weeks for some products). It was a risk, but we knew we were serving the steel industry, and we had to have parts and people available."

In the last three years, Hunt invested in computer controls for its cutting and shaping equipment to improve quality and sophisticated computer-aided design terminals.

The results were dramatic, Williams said. Before 1974, they were lucky to sell a dozen of their best quality valves a year. Since 1978, more than 500 have been sold. "We started at $2 million. Today we make $30 million in the valve business alone."

Seeing an eventual slowdown in that business, Hunt turned to pipe production, Williams said, believing that it understood steel-making technology from its experience producing valve systems for the industry.

They saw a bargain in the huge Brier Hill steel plant that was closed by Jones & Laughlin in 1979. "You couldn't put that building up for $20 million today," Williams said. Where that was a basic steel plant, melting ore to make ingots and casting these into shapes, the Hunt process begins with steel scrap that will be dumped from trucks into the tops of two electric arc furnaces.

Abilene college contracted for oil research

ABILENE — A contract between Petrogen Inc., an oil recovery firm, and Hardin-Simmons University's Science Research Center in Abilene to improve the field-test bacteria for increasing oil production from shallow "stripper" wells has been in progress since July, said Dr. Terry Foster of the research center.

The Illinois-based company signed a two-year contract Feb. 23 with the University of Illinois to develop bacteria for heavy oil recovery and with HSU to "improve the field-test" bacteria.

The results so far show increased gas production to drive the oil from the ground and increases in the production of oil.

The University of Illinois will develop bacteria capable of selectively digesting and removing the waxes and paraffins from heavy oil, reducing its viscosity and improving its production.

Some 400,000 stripper wells are now active in the United Stats, Loeb said, but they average only two barrels a day.

Low lead gas lowers blood-lead levels

By JON BIXBY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The federally mandated reduction in the lead content of gasoline has helped lower the blood-lead levels of U.S. residents, lessening the danger of lead poisoning in children, health officials reported.

The findings, released by the national Centers for Disease Control, come at a time when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is considering loosening restrictions on the use of lead as a gasoline additive.

A recently completed four-year study suggests that between 1976 and 1980, there was a 36.7 percent reduction in the overall mean blood-lead level in the U.S. population, the CDC reported in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Dr. Vernon Houk, director of the Center for Enviromental Health at the CDC, said an analysis of the findings indicates the reduced blood-lead levels could be attributed only the the decrease in lead in gasoline.

The amount of lead added to the environment from gasoline dropped from 190,000 tons in 1976 to 90,000 tons in 1980 under restrictions imposed by the EPA on the use of lead as an antiknock additive for gasoline.

"There is a positive association between the removal of lead from gasoline and the lower blood-lead levels," Houk said, urging that the EPA standards not be weakened.

The EPA has scheduled hearings April 14-15 in Washington on proposals to loosen the lead standards, particularly for smaller refiners who have complained of the cost of alternate methods of raising gasoline octane levels.

Lead poisoning is a serious health hazard for young children and has been associated with a lowered IQ, impaired attention and difficulties in speech and language in the young.

Reducing the amount of lead spewed into the air from motor vehicle exhausts has not eliminated the problem of lead poisoning in children, who most often are poisoned by leaded paints and lead-contaminated soil, Houk said.

But it does provide children with a greater "margin of safety" by increasing the amount of lead they can absorb from other sources without being poisoned, he said.

Dr. Herbert Needleman, a researcher at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, says one of every 25 children has excess lead in his blood.

"The connection between lead in gasoline and in blood is very strong. Taken together, these facts show the government is entertaining a serious risk for children if it approves increasing the amount of lead in gasoline," he said.

Realtors presented awards

Don Harvey, Patsy Bohannan and Betty Taylor were presented awards for outstanding service to the local board, State Association and National Association during the recent Awards Dinner of the Midland Board of Realtors.

Other members recognized included:

Sara Branum was presented a Certified Commercial-Industrial member certificate, and recieved the Million and Over Award for bost listing and sales of non-residential properties in this category.

Betty Taylor and the Midland Board of Realtors were presented the Texas Political Action Committee award.

Joanne Langston received the Million Dollar and Over residential sales award.

Ruth Young received the Total Unit Award for sales as well as listings, and a diamond pin for listing of the most Multi-Million Residential properties.

Penny Willhite received a gold pin and diamond pin for selling and listing the most Multi-Million Dollar Non-residential properties.

Hazel Moore won the award for best individual attendance at the MLS Caravans, and Jack and Terry Zengler recieved an award for the couple with the best attendance at the Caravan.

FIVE CLUES TO DRUG ADDICTION

Many a parent has learned to their dismay that one of their children has become a drug addict. Usually by the time this information becomes known, it is because the child is in serious trouble as both a drug user and a criminal to procure his daily supply.

Look for these symptoms: 1) A good scholar becomes erratic for no apparent reason. 2) A shy child becomes talkative. 3) A truthful child starts telling lies and plays truant. 4) A healthy child loses weight and is unable to sleep. These characteristics indicate a possible, but not positive drug addiction.

THA may market $100 million single-family housing bond

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — If the Bond Market cooperates, the Texas Housing Agency will be marketing a $100 million single-family housing bond issue "in the next couple of months," THA Executive Administrator Earline Jewett reports.

THA directors also have approved plans to provide interim construction financing for Texas developers receiving Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae) commitments; Jewett reports some $33 million in such commitments have been approved for Texas.

Jewett says THA's underwriters "kind of suprised us" by reporting the bond market appears favorable enough to attempt a multi-family bond issue. THA is hoping to do some multi-family permanent financing, she comments.

Restrictions on agency earnings make it difficult to do much single-family financing at present she says, but the underwriters feel the agency has earned enough money from its first single-family issue that another issue would be possible soon.

So, she says, THA may be involved in a single-family, or multi-family, bond issue, or both, within the next or both, within the next six months.

The State Board of Insurance has approved a staff recommendation for a credit on homeowners insurance for persons whose property meets certain standards for anti-crime devices, such as deadbolt locks, etc.

The credits were authorized to be granted by SBI under legislation sponsored in 1981 by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

SBI staff members recommended a credit of 10 percent for homeowners' premiums in the Seacoast rating territory, nine percent for the Central Inland territory and three percent for the north-northwest territory.

Insuarnce industry oficials had recommended a two percent reduction statewide.

****

Commissioner of Insurance E.J. Voorhis has called all insurers writing credit life and credit accident and health insurance to report "in detail" their premiums, insurance in force and losses for calendar 1981.

The report is to be received by SBI by April 30.

The "call" for statistical information is being made to determine if changes need to be made in rates being charged, Voorhis reported.

The Air Control Board is eyeing a public hearing in May on its proposed fees for new facilities, an effort which had been under development for some two years.

ACB staff members plan to presnet a draft of the proposed regulations to the ACB's Regulations Committee prior to the board's meeting March 26.

If the regulations aren't "vetoed" by the committee, they are expected to be set for a hearing in May.

ACB also is working on plans to establish a research advisory committee, to assist with agency work. That panel would be appointed and functioning this summer.

Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council has approved a resolution urging the Texas congressional delegation to support "establishment of a program for basic scientific research" to help "accurately determine the health and ecological risks which may result from exposure to air contaminents, and to define the legislative standards of protection...."

The same resolution also urges passage of HR 5252, the legislation to amend the Federal Clear Air Act.

Another TENRAC resolution urges Congress to delay implemtation of use of "best available technology" (except for toxic pollutants) under the Federal Clean Water Act pending an "economic impact study" of such changes.

TENRAC also is urging Congress to provide an annual appropriation of $2.4 billion annually to fund the sewage treatment facilities construction program.

Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock reports Texas savings and loan associations registered $1091 million new new savings for January, with $3.216 billion in new savings received and $3.111 billion in withdrawals.

The new new savings were up for Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana and down in Arkansas and Mississippi, FHLB reported in its survey of its five-state region.

Overall lending activity in the region "declined sharply" in January, it reported, with Texas associations reporting $857.5 million worth of loans in progress, almost the identical amount reported for December.

The agency also reported that delinquent mortgage loans ere increasing in the region, to 1.08 percent of the total loans outstanding at the end of January, but still under the 1.62 percent national average.

Administration has drawn up 'hit list' of problem regulations

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Washington — An American teenager may cook hamburgers behind a counter, but not behind a partition. He can work as a horse racing jockey, but not as a disc jockey.

The Reagan administration thinks such regulations are creating problems for small business and has drawn up a "hit list" of "regs" it wants to eliminate.

Vice President Bush, who is heading the Task Force on Regulatory Relief, says the cost of paperwork for small business is estimated at $12 billion a year and promises to reduce federal paperwork burden by 200 million hours by mid-year.

For purposes of the law, small business is defined as fewer than 50 employees and less than $4 million annual sales. Since the majority of new jobs in the economy are created by small business, federal regulations and paperwork requirements impose particularly heavy burdens on small firms.

But as the federal government is cutting down, business is starting to worry that, once the feds ease up on rules and regulations, the states will seize the opportunity to expand their own regulatory power by enacting often tougher state regulatory requirements.

The prospect of increased state regulatory activity is a major business concern, its leaders say. "The Regulatory Action Network," a Washington based watchdog for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce fears that the national marketplace may become "balkanized into independent regulatory fiefdoms, each with its own regulations and paperwork requirements and a disasterous effect on the national economy."

If the states were to decide to fill a regulatory vacuum they could create problems for large and small business as well as industry.

A rising fear is that delegation of regulatory authority to states and local governments is fraught with perils to the economy, leading to interstate trade wars.

Consider the following possibilities:

A. States could be tempted to engage in competition either by lessening safeguards to attract new industry or to defend existing firms from outside competition, or

B. Contradictory and inconsistent state regulations could impose multiple and irreconcilable burdens on interstate commerce, stifling economic growth.

MEDIA & BUSINESS

What separates the news media from business?

Essentially, according to National Investor Relations Institute, the self-interest of each: business wants to focus on its side of the story;the media wants to report on all sides.

But with business and economic news becoming the number one story today, business is realizing the necessity and benefits of communication.

No one should be surprised, however, that there is conflict between the two and that a spirit of advocacy separates them.

Most media people believe strongly that the two should never get too cozy and that their relationship should be similar to that between the media and government.

The first step to improving relationships is to develop a fundamental understanding of each other, an institute seminar was told recently.

There is a fundamental lack of respect for journalists among corporate managers, a leading journalist told the seminar. "Businessmen find it an odd way to make a living and wouldn't want their daughter to marry one."

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Senate plans to honor franchise-owned outlets by proclaiming May 4 as "International Franchise Day." Franchising accounts for nearly one-third of all retail sales in the U.S. today, with sales of goods and services reaching $377 billion last year and employing 4.6 million people...The Census Bureau has decided not to conduct the 1985 mini-census. The 1980 census cost $1 billion and Congress has refused to come up with the $100 million needed for the mini-job...But beginning today 12 metropolitan areas across the country will be canvassed during the next nine months, for the bureau's annual housing survey, including the San Francisco-Oakland, San Antonio, New Orleans, Kansas City and Philadelphia area...Highway Common Carrier Conference claims the nation's shippers would be the biggest losers if the Interstate Commerce Commission deregulates Conrail railroad boxcar traffic.It contends that prices will go up...For the fifth straight year, the intercity bus industry has posted an overall gain in ridership, carrying 378 million passengers in 1981, an increase of 5 million over the prior year and 50 million more than in 1977,according to the American Bus Association...The feds saved $8 million in federal employee travel costs through reduced air fares obtained by contracts with 18 airlines on 160 separate routes from July through September 1981...Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., has introduced legislation to stimulate training of computer and electronics technicians through the nation's vocational education programs...Another Miller measure being considered would establish a workers' compensation system especially for victims of occupational diseases...Small farmers who market thir produce through cooperatives would be allowed to form a Domestic International Sales Corp. under legislation introduced by Sen. S.I.Hayakawa, R-Calif....Another bill would require federal agencies which list services and products as being "free of charge" would have to say instead: "This product or publication has been paid for with U.S. tax dollars;therefore, it is available at no cost in addition to the tax expenditures already made for its production..." Then there is a bill sponsored by California Rep. Wayne Grisham that would limit the number of bills and resolutions which any member of the House may introduce to no more than 20 during any Congress. Of the 8,719 bills introduced last year in the first session of the 97th Congress only 93 have become public law.

Arctic ice useful to oil industry

Oil and gas exploration off the Alaska coast has presented the energy industry with numerous problems because of the extremely cold climate. Yet the offshore industry has responded by experimenting with one of the Arctic region's most abundant products: ice.

Ice islands, ice drilling platforms and ice highways will be three of the subjects explored in technical papers presented at the Offshore Technology Conference in Houston, May 3-6.

Among the papers presented will be a discussion of the construction of an experimental ice island north of Prudhoe Bay, Alaska. Such islands, if successful, would be excellent bases for offshore drilling operations.

Exxon Corporation constructed the ice island in 1979. It was 400 meters in diameter and 30 meters thick. Scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey studied the island during the summer of 1979, and found that the warm coastal waters prevalent during the summer caused erosion and melting.

ON WALL STREET

Interest rates moved to levels to determine recovery

By DAVID W. DEITCH
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Inflation has definitely subsided but the stock market doesn't seem to care, and for good reason: Interest rates, after deducting the lower rate of inflation, have actually moved up to levels that can easily undermine the next business recovery. At the moment, the stock market is saying that corporate profits are still headed down with no upturn in sight.

****

Whipsawed week to week by every billion-dollar change in the money supply figures, Wall Street now fears the inevitability of even tighter money once the inventory run-off hits bottom. Some analysts expect no move to reflate the economy until one or more king-sized bankruptcies make the headlines.

****

That dividend cut by the De Beers diamond cartel is a genuine economic event. If and when South African gold mining companies do the same could be the signal that the gold price has hit bottom.

****

With Mobil having drastically reduced its revolving credit line at the banks, one assumption is that the general corporate takeover movement may have cooled. Certainly oil in the ground is no longer the asset it was just a couple of months ago.

Merrill Lynch's investment strategy is to maintain a high cash reserve, a large position in five- to 10-year Treasury notes, and the balance of a portfolio in defensive, low-multiple stocks. Favored stock groups include utility, food, drug, hospital supply, retail, food chains, soap and mobile homes.

After lots of recent talk about the risk of a depression, has the word gone out to cool it? The E.F. Hutton people, among others, say that what's going on now is a "repression," backing off from linking the current scene to a 1930s-style collapse. People are saying that all the depression talk is hurting confidence and holding back investment.

Sakowitz to offer long distance discount service

HOUSTON (SWN) — Robert T. Sakowitz, Chairman of the Board and President of Sakowitz, Inc., announced Sakowitz will offer its charge account customers residential long distance discount service to any phone in the U.S. effective April 1. The announcement marks a first for retail stores. During a luncheon for business executives and media at the Petroleum Club, Sakowitz introduced officers from U.S. Tel, the Dallas-based telephone company that will implement the residential service.

"We're offering this specially priced communication media for several reasons," stated Sakowitz. "In addition to being convenient for our customers to have their long distance calls charged to their account, we are also providing a quality service at a good value."

The Sakowitz/U.S. Tel residential service discounts all long distance calls by one-third (1/3) from regular Bell rates between 5:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. daily and all day on weekends or holidays. Sakowitz charge account customers who subscribe will be charged a $10 annual and $5 monthly fee on their regular Sakowitz bills, along with the long distance bill for the month. A detailed statement will be sent to each customer from U.S. Tel, listing dates, numbers called, duration and cost of each call.

"The telecommunications industry is exploding," noted Sakowitz. "This service is but the tip of an iceberg of a future relationship between retail distribution and the communications industries. Although we are beginning by offering a customer service value on telephone calls, it will probably lead to also offering telephone products and by-products in our catalogues and stores. We are planning future involvement as well with our catalogue or non-store sales division as the state of the art develops," continued Sakowitz.

"This is the first step for Sakowitz to build a partnership with an aggressive and innovational telecommunications company (U.S. Tel) headquartered in the Southwest," stated Sakowitz. "Together Sakowitz and U.S. Tel will explore the possibilities of video-conferencing, tele-selling, and other telecommunications linked offering and ordering systems. Sakowitz tries to introduce every important fashion trend, and it is only fitting that we are equally innovative in the way we communicate with our customers as retailing changes from a store environment to a multi-offering system environment with or without walls around the merchandise offered. In this case, to paraphrase a famous communicator, the message itself is the medium," concluded Sakowitz.
