Negotiators OK cease-fire areas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra and Sandinista negotiators agreed on the cease-fire areas where rebels will begin gathering Friday, and President Daniel Ortega urged the United States to discuss normalizing relations with Nicaragua.

The negotiators identified the cease-fire zones Tuesday at the end of two days of talks in the southern outpost of Sapoa, but failed to resolve other crucial issues, including when the Contra rebels will lay down their arms.

Citing the cease-fire accord signed last week by Sandinista and Contra rebel leaders, Ortega said in a speech Tuesday the United States should begin negotiating a return to normal relations with his leftist government.

"We hope President Reagan keeps his word. He has repeatedly said that the day the Sandinistas sit down for direct negotiations with the Contras, then the United States government would sit down and negotiate with the Sandinistas.

"We hope he is a man of his word and immediately fulfills his word to accept bilateral conversations to deal with security issues that concern the United States with respect to Nicaragua and with Nicaragua in respect to the United States," Ortega said. The discussions should focus on normalizing relations, not the internal policies of Nicaragua, he said.

Ortega also urged the U.S. Congress not to approve more Contra aid in violation of last week's cease-fire agreement, in which the rebels agreed to accept only humanitarian assistance from neutral organizations.

House negotiators later reached agreement in principle on $50 million in non-military aid to the Contras and for children injured in the six-year war.

U.S. aid to the rebels expired Feb. 29 and Contra leaders say Reagan's inability to secure them continued military aid was a factor in their decision to sign the accord.

After three days of talks in Sapoa last week, the Contras and Sandinistas agreed to try to work out a lasting peace during a 60-day cease-fire that is to begin Friday. The Sandinistas also promised to restore democracy in Nicaragua.

A communique released Tuesday night at the end of two days of talks in Sapoa aimed at hammering out details of the cease-fire said the two sides had agreed on the size and location of zones where the rebels are to gather.

The truce and zones — two in the north, two on the Caribbean coast and one in the south — were agreed to only in general terms. The exact locations of the areas were not immediately disclosed.

Army Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Joaquin Cuadra, the chief Sandinista negotiator, said that issues including what supplies the rebels may receive and whether they must lay down their weapons remain to be decided when the talks resume in Sapoa next week. Under last week's Sapoa accords, the main peace talks are to begin in Managua on April 6.

"We are trying to guarantee the physical and moral security of our combatants," said Aristides Sanchez, head of the rebel delegation.

Ortega spoke on Tuesday at a ceremony honoring anti-war activist S. Brian Willson of San Francisco as a "hero of peace." Willson lost both legs last fall when a train ran over him during a protest at a U.S. Navy weapons depot in Concord, Calif.

In November, Reagan said Secretary of State George P. Shultz was prepared to meet with the Sandinistas "once serious negotiations" on a Nicaraguan cease-fire were under way. The United States and Nicaragua have not held talks since 1984.

Meese probe to be expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III faces an expanded criminal investigation and top Justice Department officials are resigning for fear of being tainted by his mounting legal problems, officials say.

Independent counsel James McKay has widened his probe by subpoenaing payroll records and other documents of the Washington chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society in connection with a $40,000-a-year job Meese's wife, Ursula, got with the group in 1985.

Washington attorney James Bierbower, legal counsel for the society and a board member, said the records were delivered to McKay's office on Monday.

The independent counsel is trying to determine whether longtime Meese friend E. Robert Wallach used his influence to help get Mrs. Meese the job, said several sources familiar with the probe, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Meanwhile, Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and Carl Levin, D-Mich., demanded that Meese explain why Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, Assistant Attorney General William Weld and four of their aides abruptly quit on Tuesday. Specter, a member of the Judiciary Committee, said it may be necessary to convene hearings if an explanation is not forthcoming.

"It's absolutely necessary that the American people be told why these six have resigned," Specter said. "It appears to be unprecedented in the history of the Justice Department. The department isn't operating when six resign together."

Burns and Weld offered little in the way of public explanation, but they told associates they were concerned that the nearly year-long criminal probe of Meese is hurting the entire Justice Department, according to several department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Meese has said he won't step down and he repeated that assertion as he left the office Tuesday night.

Swaggart to return to pulpit

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart will return to the pulpit on May 22, with or without the blessing of national Assemblies of God church officials who suspended him for a year, his lawyer said today.

The date coincides with a more lenient three-month suspension given Swaggart by the church's Louisiana council after his tearful confession on Feb. 21 that he committed sins against his church and family.

The national Executive Presbytery had decided that the state council's penalty was not severe enough and announced Tuesday that Swaggart must stop preaching for at least one year and undergo two years of rehabilitation.

"We have an issue involving the constitution and bylaws of this organization," said Bill Treeby, a lawyer for Swaggart. He said there was a conflict over whether the national presbytery or the Louisiana district council had the right to discipline ministers.

"He is willing to submit himself to the Louisiana District," said Treeby. "He will be considering an appeal to the National Presbytery."

Although Swaggart did not specify the sins he confessed to, a prostitute has said Swaggart paid her to pose nude for him.

Treeby said the National Presbytery might dismiss Swaggart from the denomination if he resumed preaching on May 22, but that Swaggart would have the right to appeal that move.

Rev. G. Raymond Carlson, the Assemblies' general superintendent, had earlier said that if Swaggart did not accept its ruling, "the Executive Presbytery would no doubt take action to dismiss him."

Asked if Swaggart had considered leaving the Assemblies, Treeby said, "He is considering the possibility of an appeal. He has not thought beyond that."

The national group has not officially been informed of the decision, since Swaggart is still deciding what to do about an appeal. Treeby conceded, however, that Swaggart's leaving the ministry is a possibility.

Menudo cook-off begins celebration

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

More than 30 cooks from throughout West Texas are expected to compete Saturday in the first Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off at Midland County Exhibit Building and Grounds, according to Jose Cuevas, cookoff chairman.

To date teams from Pecos, Fort Stockton, Lubbock, Big Spring and San Antonio have indicated they will attend the pre-Easter cook-off and celebration, said Elvia Hernandez, director of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and sponsor of the event.

The cook-off, which will crown the Menudo Champion of the Oilpatch, is the kick off event for Oil Appreciation Week, a week-long celebration which will end with a Blow Out cook-off and dance on April 9. Menudo is a traditional Mexican stew made of tripe, hominey and peppers.

Ms. Hernandez said the event had been planned around the family to provide local families and out-of-town visitors something to do the day before Easter.

MCH patient found shot

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 78-year-old Odessa man hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital for treatment of vascular problems was found wounded on the floor of his fourth floor room early this morning.

Police Cpl. John McAhon said MCH nursing supervisor Bob Havranek heard what he believed to be a gunshot about 6 a.m., went to the critical care unit room and found the patient lying on the floor.

Investigating officers said the man had what appeared to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound in the throat. A .38 caliber handgun was found in the room, McAhon said.

The man was in serious condition at mid-morning, according to MCH Communications Director Frank Beaman.

He was admitted to MCH March 28 and placed in a regular care unit, Beaman said. He was subsequently transferred to the critical care unit.

Beaman said there is no indication how the man obtained the gun. However, he speculated it may have been in his suitcase when he entered the hospital.

Dukakis thanks 'people who know me best' for win

Associated Press

Michael Dukakis today thanked "the people who know me best" for his decisive win in the Connecticut primary, which puts his Democratic presidential campaign back on track for coming contests. Jesse Jackson chalked the results up to Dukakis' regional ties.

George Bush, with the GOP nomination all but in hand, called on Republicans to "keep together and get to work." Bush won overwhelmingly in Connecticut — as he had been expected to do even before principal rival Bob Dole dropped out of the race on primary day.

Dukakis celebrated the 2-1 victory as a "good win for us."

"We won with a big, big margin, but it's not the first of my victories," the Massachusetts governor said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "I've won in the South. I've won in the Northwest. I've won in the Midwest. I've won up here in the Northeast and I'm very pleased.

"But this is a marathon and it's going to be all the way to the finish line. I'm just very pleased that people who know me best were so supportive," he said.

■ Dole promises to help Bush get nomination— 3A

Jackson, who has beaten Dukakis in two states in the last two weeks — Michigan and Illinois — congratulated the Massachusetts governor but suggested geography and campaign finances played a key role.

"You did well with your home field advantage," said Jackson, who also appeared on the NBC program.

Sen. Paul Simon, who barely contested Connecticut, made the same point Tuesday night. "We assumed this was Dukakis territory," he said.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who spent $75,000 in the state, called the Connecticut results a "total non-surprise."

Dukakis, however, insisted that his win was no less important for coming on home ground.

"It's as absurd to say those should be discounted as it is to say Jesse's should be because it's next to Illinois," he said Tuesday night.

With 100 percent of the Connecticut precincts reporting, Dukakis had 58 percent to Jackson's 28 percent. Gore trailed with 8 percent, and Simon had 1 percent.

That restored Dukakis' lead in the national delegate race. The latest AP count put Dukakis at 647.5; Jackson at 634.55 and uncommitted at 500.6. Gore had 364.8 and Simon 169.5.

Jackson swept the black vote and won about 20 percent of the white vote, according to television network exit polls. His share of the white vote was put at 5 percent in 1984.

Merritt heads panel that will review movie proposals

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Merritt

The chairman of a blue ribbon panel charged with mediating a movie rights dispute between two associations of Jessica McClure rescuers was setting up meetings and clarifying the panels' purpose this morning.

"The general nature of our charge is to resolve the dispute between the two groups and get it done quickly," United Bank of Midland chairman Wayne Merritt said this morning.

Mayor Carroll Thomas Tuesday named Merritt chairman of the five-person committee that will review producers' proposals for filming a television movie of last October's rescue of Jessica McClure.

Also named to the panel were former Chamber of Commerce chairman Joan Baskin, construction company president Dave Leonard, First Baptist Church pastor Dr. Daniel Vestal, and current chamber chairman and Reporter-Telegram publisher Charles Spence.

"The two groups have agreed to back off and quit doing what they were doing," said Merritt. He includd within that category the groups' efforts to engage a movie producer and what some news media have called public "bickering."

"They have essentially agreed to lay down arms and go back to being paramedics or policemen or whatever," Merritt said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be mostly fair tonight and temperatures will be warmer with the low expected in the lower 50s. Winds will be southeasterly at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Windy conditions are expected for Thursday becoming a little warmer with the high to reach the upper 70s. There will be less than a 20 percent chance of late afternoon showers with winds blowing from the south at 20-30 mph and gusty.

Tuesday's high of 68 which was set at midnight was 27 degrees cooler than the record high of 95 set for that date in 1963. Today's low of 33 was 16 degrees warmer than record low of 17 set for this date in 1967.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are forecast tonight and Thursday over most of Texas.

Forecasts called for scattered showers over South Texas and Southeast Texas tonight and Thursday and for increasing cloudiness over the rest of the state tonight with scattered thunderstorms possible over most of the rest of the state.

Scattered showers were reported early today in South Texas and along the coastal plains behind a cold front that moved across the state Tuesday. The front was located early today offshore in the Gulf of Mexico.

NATION

Scattered showers and thunderstorms dampened a broad area from the Great Lakes to the lower Mississippi Valley today after 50-mph winds toppled a tree into a Louisiana mobile home, killing a 2-year-old boy.

Snow fell on northern Illinois, parts of Wisconsin, southeast Idaho and northwest Wyoming. One to 3 inches of snow was reported in southeast Wisconsin, and up to 2 inches at Rockford, Ill., late Tuesday.

The heaviest rainstorms were moving from western Alabama into southeast Louisiana on the heels of showers and thunderstorms that struck Louisiana on Tuesday afternoon and evening with high winds and a tornado.

The winds knocked a large tree into a mobile home near Bastrop in northeast Louisiana, pinning 2-year-old Oriando White and his 3-year-old sister, Shahonda, in a recliner chair, said Police Chief Stan Neathery.

Oriando died at a hospital, Neathery said. Shahonda was treated for leg injuries and released.

The tornado touched down in central Louisiana, near Bunkie, destroying two brick homes and injuring a 76-year-old woman.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from southern and eastern Texas to the lower Mississippi Valley, Alabama, Tennessee, the upper Ohio Valley, and the Appalachian Mountains; snow showers over the northern and central Rockies and the northern High Plains; scattered rain showers in the Northwest, with snow showers in higher elevations and strong, gusty winds across much of the nation's southwest quarter.

Protesters fight Israeli troops

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Hundreds of Arab protesters fought Israeli troops today in defiance of a big clampdown in the occupied territories. Hospital officials said two Palestinians were killed and 24 wounded.

The army confirmed one death and said three people were wounded on Land Day, an annual demonstration against Israeli confiscation of Arab land.

The West Bank and Gaza Strip were closed, and thousands of extra police and soldiers were deployed. Six Arabs were killed in the first Land Day protests 12 years ago.

Police swept through the offices of a key Arab news service and ordered it closed for six months.

A Supreme Court panel denied a foreign press request to allow media access to the occupied territories, but it ordered the army to explain within 30 days why journalists should not be allowed free access.

Only the territories' 65,000 Jewish settlers were permitted to travel freely.

In the West Bank village of Deir Abu Mashal, 20 miles northwest of Jerusalem, soldiers killed a woman and wounded her husband and two sons.

The army and hospital officials gave conflicting accounts.

Doctors at Ramallah Hospital told The Associated Press troops entered the home of Wajaiah Rabir, 50, while she and her family were eating breakfast and fatally shot her in the head.

A visitor to the hospital quoted Mrs. Rabir's 17-year-old daughter, Zeinab, as saying the soldiers came in and asked if there were any men in the house.

The girl told the troops no men were home, but they entered anyway, the visitor said. The visitor, who spoke on condition of anonymity, quoted the girl as saying a soldier then shot one brother who started to run. Other family members then lunged toward the troops, who opened fire.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Rabir's husband and two sons were in serious condition from gunshot wounds. The officials, who have been barred from speaking to journalists, insisted on anonymity.

The army said the woman was shot after she attacked a soldier with a rake. "All those hurt were hurt during a very aggressive attack on our soldiers," the commander said on Israel radio. "They attacked with pitchforks, axes, clubs and metal bars in a very aggressive way."

Officials at Nablus' Al Ittihad hospital said another Palestinian, Khalid Salah, 22, died of a gunshot wound to the back during a clash with troops in the nearby village of Burqa. They said another Arab was wounded in the shoulder in that clash.

The army said it was investigating the death which, according to U.N. figures, brought to 121 the number of Palestinians killed by soldiers since unrest broke out in the territories on Dec. 8. One Israeli soldier has been killed.

Hospital officials said 24 Palestinians were wounded by gunfire, including a 12-year-old girl near Hebron.

In east Jerusalem, police officers swept into the Arab-owned Palestine Press Service and ordered it closed for six months.

Ibrahim Kareen, publisher of the service, said police told him the agency was being closed because it was funded by the Palestine Liberation Organization. He denied PLO funding and vowed to continue providing information.

"All we need is a telephone," Kareen said.

An extra 4,000 police were stationed in Israel's Arab sectors.

Telephone lines to Gaza remained severed, troops warned on loudspeakers that curfew violators would be shot, and Gaza and the West Bank were closed to most outside traffic.

Reporters were barred from entering the territories without a previously arranged army escort, and army spokeswoman Ofra Preuss said violators would be prosecuted.

The maximum penalty for entering a closed military area is five years in prison.

Robert Slater, head of the Foreign Press Association, said he was pleased with the court decision ordering a government explanation for the media ban.

"The court sent a signal to the government that it cannot close off the Gaza Strip and the West Bank entirely to the foreign press," he said. "We were fighting for the principle. We consider this a great victory."

A general strike was observed in Israel's Arab towns, east Jerusalem and the West Bank. Dozens of mounted police and foot patrols moved through east Jerusalem's main Salah Edin Street.

In Nazareth, the village where tradition says Jesus grew up, Arab activists today monitored the effectiveness of the general strike.

"We've been sitting in this car since 4:30 a.m. and everything has gone according to plan," Suheil Diab, head of the local strike organization, told the AP. "This is the most successful strike we have ever had."

MEESE

Weld, who as an assistant attorney general oversees all federal criminal investigations, told assistants at a final staff meeting that the continuing investigation of Meese and Wallach was casting a "cloud" on the Justice Department, according to several department sources.

Another top Justice Department official, Solicitor General Charles Fried, said the resignations were leading him to reconsider his own future at the Justice Department.

Weld quit as of the close of business Tuesday, telling his staff he didn't want to get in "50 fights" and have "blood on the floor," said the sources. Burns will stay on until April 22.

Meese did not learn the two were quitting until Burns and Weld walked into his office Tuesday morning and informed him of the decision. Several department sources characterized Meese as "shocked."

CBS News and The Washington Post reported that Burns and Weld had met with White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker a week earlier and expressed their concerns about Meese. According to CBS, they asked if the Reagan administration was willing to urge Meese to step down, but Baker responded that the president felt Meese was a victim of political backstabbing and they could expect no help from the White House.

Meese has been under investigation for nearly 11 months by McKay, the independent counsel who last May 11 began looking into Meese's involvement with the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

The investigation later expanded to include his involvement in a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project, with the independent counsel trying to determine whether Meese may have been paid off by Wallach or others in exchange for helping Wedtech or the pipeline project.

Regarding the new area in the Meese probe, Wallach's lawyer, San Francisco attorney George Walker, was quoted in today's Post as saying Wallach played a "peripheral" role in getting Mrs. Meese the job at the MS society.

However, Bierbower said the idea for hiring Mrs. Meese came from the chapter's executive director, Jeanne Bradley, who was pleased with Mrs. Meese's volunteer work for the group. The attorney general's wife has been associated with the group's Washington chapter since 1981.

SWAGGART

Asked if a one-year suspension would ruin Swaggart's ministry, Treeby said, "He is weighing all those considerations very carefully."

Officials of the national church had said Tuesday they felt the organization had survived a major constitional crisis.

"I believe that the church is strong and I believe that the church is purified and strengthened by this," said Carlson.

Carlson said Swaggart thanked him and the two said a prayer over the telephone when Carlson gave him the news Tuesday, but they did not discuss whether Swaggart might refuse to accept the terms.

"I will just await word from him...It is very possible he may do that," Carlson said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Swaggart has 30 days to appeal his suspension, according to church bylaws.

Before May 22, Swaggart will remain in Baton Rouge taking care of administrative business and receiving counseling from the denomination, Treeby said.

Swaggart will stay out of the pulpit and no tapes of his television shows will be shown before May 22. Treeby did not say whether Swaggart would refrain from attending services to introduce guest speakers or testify as he has since the scandal broke.

The ministry has said it took in $150 million in 1986 from its worldwide operations, including sales. It contributes an estimated $12 million a year to the Assemblies' foreign missions program.

Swaggart is the latest evangelist to be forced from the pulpit. His accuser, Marvin Gorman, was forced from the Assemblies of God when he admitted to an immoral act with a woman. And Jim and Tammy Bakker were forced from their PTL ministry in a scandal that included a sexual encounter between Bakker and young female follower.

According to the terms of rehabilitation, Swaggart must stop preaching and distributing videotaped sermons that reach a worldwide audience for at least one year, and undergo counseling and supervision by church elders for two years.

Swaggart's preaching may be limited during the second year of his suspension, church officials said.

Carlson said the rehabilitation formula announced Tuesday was the same plan recommended last month to Louisiana district officials, who had urged only a three-month suspension and resisted the recommendation.

"Basically, he has been caught in the middle of a power struggle between Louisiana and Springfield," said Cliff Jackson, a Little Rock, Ark., attorney and Assemblies of God member who was involved in mediating the dispute.

Louisiana district officials, who refused comment Tuesday, have close ties to Swaggart's multimillion-dollar church, television and Bible school enterprise. Cecil Janway, superintendent of the Louisiana district, also sits on the board of Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries.

The Louisiana district had recommended that Swaggart be barred from preaching for three months during a two-year rehabilitation.

Louisiana officials were unswayed by arguments that every other Assemblies minister who had confessed to moral failure had been barred from the pulpit for at least a year. They apparently began then to question the Executive Presbytery's authority in ministerial matters.

On March 3, the Executive Presbytery asked an oversight body, the 232-member General Presbytery, to resolve the impasse during a special meeting convened Monday. The General Presbytors discussed the matter for about eight hours Monday and Tuesday.

When they adjourned, Carlson announced that the General Presbytery had reaffirmed the 13-member Executive Presbytery's authority to discipline Swaggart.

Church spokeswoman Juleen Turnage said that decision and another approving the Executive Presbytery's rehabilitation plan were approved by the General Presbytery by voice vote, "and there were no nays."

"The two groups from the start have had the best interests of the community at heart," Thomas noted Tuesday in naming the panel, a sentiment that Vestal echoed.

"I think they're good people in all of the groups," Vestal said this morning. "I think the general desire of all the groups is to do what's best for the community."

The pastor asked for "the prayers and support of all the people that we can bring a resolution to the conflict."

Rescuers who attended Tuesday's announcement included paramedic Robert O'Donnell and police media liaison Cpl. Jim White, co-chairmen of the municipal employee's group, and Todd Young, chairman of the volunteer organization.

Young said he is "optimistic" that the panel can bring the matter to a resolution but was reluctant to make other comments because the groups agreed to stop talking to the press.

"They're trying real hard to let the past stay in the past and to move forward from this point united," said Thomas.

Said Young: "We're trying not to say anything to anybody."

That agreement apparently didn't sit well with a television reporter from the Fox Network attending the press conference, who said she had been gathering information since last Monday.

The reporter said she already had conducted interviews with the volunteer group, but had yet to talk with the municipal employees.

After a quick huddle between Thomas, O'Donnell, White and Young, they agreed not to speak further with the reporter, which prompted her to complain.

"Now that we're in agreement, ya'll are trying to get us to fight," quipped White to the reporter.

An issue that remains unresolved is the volunteer organization's continued legal commitment to Hollywood producer Larry Spivey of Highland Communications Group Inc.

Young said he could not comment on his group's status in regard to Spivey. "We're waiting until we get down the road a bit further," he said.

Spivey has said making a movie with only the rights he has in hand is possible but has not said whether he would follow through should he not receive the panel's final nod.

The producer also has demurred from releasing the volunteer organization from its rights commitment while the two groups try to reach a solution.

A spokesman for the McClure family, Pete Snelson, said this morning: "I'm sure the McClures would be pleased with any progress that would renew the spirit of that which was evident last October."

The movie rights problem remains "somewhat of a dilemma" for the family, Snelson said.

"They don't want to be in a position of commercializing something, but at the same time, they are appreciative of the community and the rescuers," he said.

MENUDO

"Many visitors come to Midland to visit family and friends at Easter, and find there is little to do the Saturday before. We are hoping the Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off will remedy that," said Ms. Hernandez.

The full day of family activities will include an easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. with the Midland Boys Club providing more than 3,000 eggs. There will also be free balloons, clowns and pony rides for the children. A scooter race, starting at noon, will be sponsored by Bike Masters of Midland.

For adults there will be the Mex-Tex Olympics featuring adult tricycle races, a dunking booth and washer pitching contest.

There will be live entertainment throughout the day with mariachi musicians and dancers. A battle of the bands competition, featuring six local bands, will get under way at noon.

Menudo cooking will begin at 8 a.m. and will be available from contestants throughout the day. Judging of the menudo will begin at 2 p.m. with final awards at 5 p.m. Judging will be in four categories: sponsor, commercial, amateur and showmanship.

Judges for the event are: Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas; KWEL radio personality Gracie Rayos; Fort Stockton attorney and menudo critic Steve Woolard; Midland Reporter Telegram business/oil editor John Paul Pitts; KMID newsman Mike Monseur; menudo critic John Rendon; and Reporter-Telegram account executive Paul Cavazos.

The day will end with a dance, from 8 p.m.-1 a.m., featuring the Destino Band of Midland.

"We are hopeful the Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off will grow into a major event in Midland and will serve to attract hundreds of visitors each year," said Ms. Hernandez.

DUKAKIS

However, primary-day surveys of voters by WNBC-TV in New York suggested only one-fifth of the Democrats believed the nation was ready to elect a black president. ABC found that one-third of the Democrats would switch to the Republican side if Jackson were nominated.

Only last week Dukakis was suggesting he was the inevitable Democratic nominee. Now he is saying he expects a long duel with Jackson.

"This is 15 rounds and it's going to be a decision, not a knockout," he said Tuesday night. "It's going all the way to the final round."

Some party heavyweights may have come to the same conclusion. Jackson was meeting in Washington today with the front rank of the Democratic establishment to discuss issues and policy.

Former party chairman John White, who set up the "summit," said it would allow Jackson to talk with Democratic leaders about "the parts of the political world he might not be familiar with."

Jackson came under fire Tuesday from Gore, in the first serious attack on him by a Democratic opponent. Gore said Jackson has a "complete and total lack" of experience needed to be president.

"We're not choosing a preacher, we're choosing a president," the Tennessee senator said. Jackson retorted: "I assume that he is stimulated by his own status in the campaign to attack me."

The exchange came as the two were in New York, jockeying for position in New York's delegate-heavy contest on April 19. Gore was in Wisconsin today, making an early-morning visit to a dairy farm where he was to milk cows and do farm chores.

On the Republican side, Dole's departure left Bush with only a nominal opponent — former television evangelist Pat Robertson, who acknowledged, "It seems obvious now that George Bush will be the winner."

As the Kansas senator bowed out Tuesday, he put aside his differences with the vice president.

"I return to the Senate as the Republican leader...ready to do all I can to elect Republicans in November and doing all I can for our nominee, George Bush," he said. Bush beat Dole by a lopsided 71-20 margin in Connecticut.

If Dole's delegates — now in the uncommitted column — go to Bush, the vice president is likely to clinch the delegates needed to nominate in the next few weeks.

With the Republican nomination a nearly done deal, Republicans were holding the first of three platform hearings today, this one on foreign policy and defense. GOP chairman Frank Fahrenkopf and the president's daughter, Maureen Reagan, were among those attending.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, who dropped out of the Democratic race on Monday, filed Tuesday for re-election to his House seat from Missouri, saying he was somewhat relieved to have life return to a more usual pace.

"Now we can go to the drug store and the movies and be fairly normal," he said.

Dole resigns from presidential race, promises to help Bush

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Bob Dole, who for one winter week looked like a good bet for the Republican presidential nomination, has ended his quest for the White House as much the victim of his own campaign's shortcomings as of George Bush's success.

"My friends know that I am a fighter; I don't like to lose," the Senate Republican leader said in bowing to the inevitable Tuesday. "I have been beaten before, and no doubt will be again. But I have never been defeated and never will be."

In an ad-libbed addition to his prepared speech, Dole promised to do "all I can for our nominee, George Bush."

Bush, with an insurmountable delegate lead, called Dole while campaigning in Wisconsin to thank him for a "very generous statement." He added, "It's been a hard-fought campaign and I respect the tenacity of Bob Dole."

Only Pat Robertson remains in the GOP race as a stubborn challenger to Bush. Robertson conceded "it seems obvious" that Bush would be the nominee but said he won't withdraw as a candidate.

Dole formally withdrew surrounded by family and friends in the Senate Caucus Room, scene of Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings. A supportive audience of Senate and House colleagues jammed the room.

Also present were two former senior aides to the campaign, David Keene and Don Devine, who because of the public manner of their firings were reminders of the Dole campaign's internal divisions and ineptitude.

Dole's withdrawal must have been painful for a candidate who, in the glow of his lead-off victory in Iowa, could see the nomination almost within his grasp.

He benefited in that farm state from his rural, humble roots in neighboring Kansas, and the contrast with the patrician Bush. His victory in the nation's first delegate contest left Bush a stunned third-place finisher behind Dole and Robertson.

For the next week, critics called Bush a failed campaigner and Dole appeared on a winner's roll. Even his own pollster told Dole that he would likely win New Hampshire, riding a surge in popularity built on his Iowa success.

But the Dole campaign, thinking it could coast across the finish line, did not answer tough, last-minute Bush television ads that suggested Dole would raise taxes.

Fiercely and historically opposed to taxes, New Hampshire voters dealt Dole a loss from which he could not recover. Dole later described his failure to answer the Bush ad as his big mistake.

Dole's campaign was beset by internal divisions and vacillation. Critics said it was a reflection of Dole himself, calling him a consummate legislator but lacking in an executive's ability to delegate authority or organize.

After New Hampshire, Dole's campaign went into a tailspin. It seemed to unravel in embarrassingly full view.

Campaign manager Bill Brock, in a struggle for control, fired Keene and Devine as reporters watched. He ordered the two off the campaign plane in Florida.

Dole's strategy for winning the White House had been based primarily on winning the first two contests, and when he fell short in New Hampshire his candidacy collapsed.

He found himself far behind Bush in the Southern primaries on Super Tuesday three weeks later. Unable to focus his energies on his best opportunities, he lost everywhere. In one night, Bush moved halfway to a delegate majority.

U.S. hints at possible military action in Panama

■ Related story — 6B

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is raising the prospect that the U.S. military may be used to protect the estimated 50,000 American citizens in Panama against possible harassment by that country's security forces.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater appeared to open the door to that possibility Tuesday after an incident the previous evening in which Panamanian troops confiscated the tapes of four U.S. television networks and briefly detained several American journalists.

Discussing the harassment against Americans, Fitzwater said, "It has always been a principle that we will protect American citizens as best we can and, while we have said that we don't plan to go in militarily, it's also important to note that there are limits."

But when President Reagan met with senior advisers Tuesday afternoon to discuss the Panama situation, use of military force was not discussed, according to an administration official who asked not to be identified.

The official said other options were discussed for bringing pressure to bear on Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, the de facto head of what the United States considers to be an illegal government.

It was not clear whether Fitzwater's comments represented a genuine re-evaluation of U.S. policy or were part of the continuing war of nerves between the administration and Panama's military-dominated government.

One major deterrent to military intervention is that any such move would generate a hostile reaction throughout Latin America. Most delegates attending a conference of Latin American representatives in Venezuela on Monday and Tuesday called for the U.S. to exercise restraint.

In recent days, the administration has been weighing the possibility of imposing additional sanctions against Panama.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Reagan could invoke the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which would give him broad discretionary authority to limit private U.S. transactions with Panama. One example would be the suspension of all air service between the two countries.

Over the past month, administration actions have effectively cut off the flow of dollars into Panama, leaving the country near insolvency. Reagan has called on Noriega to step down.

There was a new sense of urgency here Tuesday over signs of an accelerating deterioration of the situation in Panama. On Monday, thousands of anti-government demonstrators were routed by government forces with the help of shotguns, tear gas and water cannon. Witnesses said several people were injured and dozens arrested.

Later, security agents forced their way at gunpoint into the offices of four American networks at a local hotel and confiscated tapes of the demonstration. Eight foreign journalists, including Americans, were detained for several hours before being released.

Shortly before Fitzwater spoke, ousted Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle, whose authority the United States continues to recognize, appealed for the creation of a U.S.-led international force to oust Noriega.

Delvalle, who has spent the past month in hiding, made his appeal through Panama's ambassador, Juan B. Sosa, who has been acting as Delvalle's representative in Washington and has refused to relinquish the embassy to a replacement appointed by Panama's new government.

While criticizing the violence used against Panamanian demonstrators, the focus of the remarks by both Fitzwater and State Department spokesman Charles Redman was on the harassment of the American journalists.

Broken romance motive behind activist's death, lawman says

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A broken romance, not political assassination, was the motive behind the shotgun killing of an Indian judicial candidate by a Lumbee Indian who later committed suicide, a sheriff says.

Another Indian, Sandy Gordon Chavis, 24, was charged with first-degree murder Tuesday as an accomplice in the slaying of Julian Pierce, a popular, 43-year-old legal services lawyer who was running for Superior Court judge in racially troubled Robeson County.

County Sheriff Hubert Stone, who had initially called Pierce's killing an assassination, said a friend of Chavis, John Anderson Goins, 24, had been having problems with his girlfriend, whose mother was Pierce's fiancee.

"Two warrants were issued last week by the girlfriend's mother, charging Goins with trespassing. Goins felt Pierce had something to do with it. He got mad and he killed him," Stone said.

Goins' body, with a bullet wound to the head, was found in a closet at his father's home Tuesday by police who had a murder warrant for his arrest. Stone called the death a suicide.

"I can assure the world that there was no political involvement in the case," Stone said at a news conference. "I think the people of Robeson County will understand that it's just another murder."

On the eve of Pierce's funeral today, however, some county activists said they doubted Stone's conclusion.

"In light of our history here, any hasty conclusions to a murder in Robeson County will always be highly suspect in the community," said the Rev. Mac Legerton, director of the Center for Community Action in Lumberton.

"You got a few who believe it's the real thing, but I don't," said the Rev. S.D. Lewis, assistant pastor at Hilly Branch Baptist Church, a predominantly black church in Lumberton. "They're trying to pull a cover-up on us."

Before Tuesday's arrest, commissioners in the county of 100,000 people in southeastern North Carolina had urged the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate Pierce's killing because of fears it was racially linked.

Anger at what the Indians called corrupt local government and entrenched racism in Robeson County boiled over Feb. 1, when two Lumbees took hostages at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton, the county seat.

The siege ended when the governor agreed to appoint a task force to investigate allegations that law enforcement was biased against racial minorities.

Indian leaders have also called for a special session of the Legislature to change a law that would automatically hand the judgeship over to Pierce's election opponent, District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who is white.

Gov. Jim Martin said Tuesday he would continue to investigate the possibility of a special session. He also said he had talked with Britt about a special prosecutor, but the district attorney "was not prepared to do that."

Under state law, a special prosecutor could be appointed only if Britt requested one from Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

Pierce was shot in the chest and side early Saturday morning.

Chavis accompanied Goins, who was described as a longtime friend of his, during the crime, Stone said.

Roberts launches new money drive

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — TV evangelist Oral Roberts said he will ask followers to donate another $8 million for his troubled medical school, but he did not repeat last year's warning that God would call him "home" if the drive failed.

Roberts, in a taped appearence Tuesday on his son's program, "Richard Roberts Live," said he would reinstate the medical missionary program that the university canceled two months ago for lack of funds.

"Now, by faith...we will undertake a second year of scholarship. You heard me say it the way I said it, by faith, we will go for a second year," Roberts said on the program, which was to be broadcast today.

The evangelist agreed with his wife when she said their "faith wavered a little" when they announced cancellation of the scholarship program.

The scholarships are provided to the students, who in return work in Third World countries after graduation for several years as part of the Roberts ministry.

In 1986, Roberts announced the drive to raise by March 1987 the $8 million needed to fund the scholarships and the medical school, saying he wanted his students to concentrate on their education without worrying about tuition.

In announcing that fund-raiser, Roberts said God told him, "I want you to get this going in one year or I will call you home."

Two men charged with selling fake Hebrew document

NEW YORK (AP) — Amateur detective work by a dealer of rare Hebrew books who paid $60,000 for a counterfeit, 15th century Haggadah — the prayer book of Passover — has led to the arrests of two men accused of selling the document.

"Nobody in the world had this Haggadah except the library in Israel so that's why I bought it," says Dov Berlin, a Brooklyn dealer of rare books.

Raphael Podde, 45, of Woodmere and Gabriel Reguer, 49, of Anaheim, Calif., were arrested Tuesday at their homes and indicted for allegedly selling or trying to sell counterfeit Haggadoth to dealers, federal prosecutors said.

The Haggadah, which recounts the story of the deliverance of the ancient Hebrews from slavery in Egypt, is read by Jews during the Passover holiday celebration, which begins Friday evening.

The documents were handwritten until the invention of the printing press in the late 1400s. Scholars believe the Haggadah was first printed in Guadalajara, Spain, in 1482.

The only known edition from that printing is kept at the Jewish National and University Library in Jerusalem, authorities said.

Berlin, with a business partner in Israel, bought what he thought was a previously unknown copy of the Guadalajara Haggadah for $60,000.

In a telephone interview, Berlin said Podde offered to sell him the rare Haggadah in the spring of 1986, saying he had inherited it from the estate of his father.

Berlin said he began to doubt its authenticity a few months later after a friend told him that he had just been offered a chance to buy a supposedly genuine Guadalajara Haggadah. So, he went to Israel to compare it with the original.

There, he discovered differences in markings between the two documents and he later contacted the FBI after Podde refused to buy back the phony Haggadah, Berlin said.

Prosecutors said the defendants made the phony Haggadoth by printing photocopies of the original onto paper made in the late 19th century.

"The only way to tell it was a counterfeit was to go to Israel to compare it to the original," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jonny Frank.

The indictment also accuses the defendants of selling three pages of the six-leaf counterfeit document to another dealer for $12,000 and unsuccessfully trying to sell two other phony Haggadoth to two dealers for $80,000 and $100,000.

Podde, an Italian citizen, was identified as an expert printer and restorer of ancient Hebrew books. He and Reguer are partners in the Pardes Rimonim Press, a company that prints and sells limited editions of Hebrew books.

Podde was arrested Tuesday morning at his Woodmere home, which also is where the printing company is located. Reguer was arrested Tuesday at his home in California.

They were each charged with one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud and three counts of wire fraud. Each count carries a maximum sentence of five years in jail and a $250,000 fine.

Denominational distinctions 'melting away'

Catholics, Protestants linked by appreciation of Bible

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second installment of a four-part Easter series, "Strangers No Longer," on efforts for Christian unity, dealing with the quiet, seldom noted ties among Roman Catholics and Protestants in Bible scholarship and worship.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a gray stone building called Adams House at Princeton University, the 30 scholars gather in a first-floor meeting room. After prayer, discussion of their agenda and progress reports, they break up into two groups and go to work in separate rooms.

Each is stocked with reference books, reproductions of Hebrew and Greek manuscripts, language grammars and biblical commentaries.

The participants are Protestant, Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish experts on the Bible, and in the two sections — Old Testament and New — they are working on a revised translation.

"So far as this book is concerned, we're essentially at one," said the Rev. Bruce Metzger, a Presbyterian and head of a committee turning out a new rendition of the Revised Standard Version, a Protestant-sponsored, broadly used version that also has Roman Catholic approval and use.

"Biblical scholars of Roman Catholic and Protestant affiliation approach their work in terms of scholarship with little if any differences remaining about it," Metzger said in an interview.

"The lines of distinction have melted away."

THAT COMMON treatment and usage of the Bible, the foundational, authoritative rule of faith and practice for all Christians, has become a powerful, shaping undercurrent in their advance toward unity.

The book is seen as the inner glue, now unitedly examined and dispensed, acting from within toward mending the ruptures.

"Traditional differences are not relevant," said Roman Catholic Old Testament scholar Conrad L'Heureux of the University of Dayton. "We have lots of debates but they don't fall along denominational lines.

"We've done a lot of pioneering, getting our work together and cooperating together. It's become second nature to get at what the text says objectively without bringing the perspective of your own church into it.

"In an odd sense, biblical scholars are ahead of the crowd."

That confluence is rarely noted and often not even realized in popular terms.

"IT'S A wave of the future," said Roman Catholic Bible scholar William Holladay of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary in Massachusetts. "It may well bring everybody else along. Confessional differences may seem to divide people on Saturday and Sunday, but they don't make any difference when it comes to biblical work."

Besides the joint scholarly approach to the Bible, a large proportion of American Christians, Protestant and Roman Catholic, hear the same biblical passages read each week in their worship services, even though many congregations likely don't know it.

"For the most part, they aren't aware of it," said the Rev. Monsignor Alan Detscher of the U.S. Catholic Conference's liturgy office in Washington D.C. "They generally experience only the Scripture readings in their own church, and aren't aware the passages are now mostly identical that Sunday in other churches."

This synchronizing of Scripture readings has come about as a result of a widely used common lectionary, the three-year cycle of Old and New Testament lessons read in each Sunday services and based on the Roman lectionary developed since the reforming 1962-65 Second Vatican Council.

In most mainline denominations, Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Presbyterian, United Methodist and to some extent others, "the readings now are generally the same and follow the same pattern," Detscher said.

For instance, last weekend on Palm Sunday, marking Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem before a week of plotting against him and his last meal with his apostles before his arrest, trial and crucifixion, the epistle read in most mainline Protestant and Catholic congregations was Philippians 2:6-11, saying in part:

HE "EMPTIED himself, taking the form of a servant, being born in the likeness of men. And being found in human form, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even death on the cross."

Provisions are made for shortened or longer forms of the readings and for alternative and supplemental passages in both Catholic and Protestant congregations. The weekly pattern may get off a week or two in some cases, or longer in some denominations in periods not linked to major Christian seasons.

But to a large extent, Christians of various branches regularly and simultaneously hear the same Bible passages at their services. This congruence isn't followed in evangelical-style congregations such as Southern Baptists and other independently inclined bodies.

However, in the mainline, more liturgical denominations, it has become a prevailing pattern, a bedrock, every-Sunday unison in Bible readings that provides a fundamental, practicing tie among Christians, even if they are unaware of it.

In many places, neighboring Protestant and Roman Catholic pastors "get together to prepare their homilies because common Scripture materials are being used," Detscher said.

Sharing the same texts on which to preach, they can helpfully trade ideas in planning sermons, something that also makes for intellectual cross-pollinizing in dealing with common themes.

THE REV. Roland Murphy of Washington D.C., a Catholic Bible scholar, said that people's "hearing the word of God Sunday after Sunday in the same readings, more or less, is creating a bond of unity that didn't exist before.

"The power of the word of God, 'sharper than any two-edged sword,' ultimately will bring us together."

In addition, Protestant and Catholic liturgies also have become increasingly parallel structurally, so that a casual visitor can't tell in most respects whether he's in a Catholic, Episcopal or Lutheran service.

"People no longer feel uncomfortable going to one another's churches," Detscher said. "Ecumenically, both in readings and liturgical structure, we're pretty much doing the same thing, each with its own adaptations.

"From total separation in worship we've moved to a commonality in worship. Slowly but surely, we've come a long ways toward unity. Now that we're beginning to pray the same way, maybe we'll start believing that way."

Even in denominations of historically free-style worship, such as the United Church of Christ and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), worship has widely become more liturgically ordered, using classic formats and creeds.

MOST MAJOR Protestant denominations also increasingly recognize that "word and sacrament" — the Bible passages, preaching and Holy Communion — go together, a tradition in Catholic and other liturgical churches.

Of course, the touchstone Catholic-Protestant barrier remains officially in Holy Communion, the celebration of the Lord's Supper, the central act of worship in which joint participation so far is barred. But even that sharing happens occasionally, quietly and untalked about, as Roman rules forbid it.

"In places, it's taking place casually, although it's not really kosher," said United Methodist theologian Albert Outler of Dallas, a longtime worker in the ecumenical vineyard.

"All kinds of Protestants are at Roman Catholic altars, and Catholics at Protestant altars. They're beginning to think of ways to have pulpit and altar fellowship without the bureaucrats bothering them."

However, in an officially approved sense, one of the most intertwining links is their now common appreciation for the Bible and popular study of it, something formerly inhibited by Roman Catholicism, but now heartily encouraged.

The transition came at the overhauling Second Vatican Council of 1962-65, which urged general reading of the Bible, including translations produced in cooperation with Protestants.

THAT EMPHASIS on the Bible has sparked not only amplified use of it in Catholic worship and joint Protestant-Catholic translation and exegesis, but regular Bible study by Catholic lay folk, often in shared classes and neighborhood home study groups.

Previously, "reading or studying the Bible was regarded as a Protestant characteristic," says a noted Roman Catholic New Testament scholar, the Rev. Raymond E. Brown, but he adds that "picture has changed dramatically."

Brown, who teaches at New York's interdenominational Union Theological Seminary, said that American Catholicism had "moved from scarcely mentioning the Bible to a siuation where the Bible has become a fundamental referent in Catholic theology, spirituality and religious discussion.

"The ironic result," he added, "is that there may now be more interest among Catholics in the Bible than among the Protestants of some mainline churches."

The now corresponding, basic regard for the Bible prompted a mutual searching of origins in the ecumenical process, a refocus on roots, drawing the churches closer to that common ground.

In academic circles, the interchurch connections have become the norm, with Catholics teaching at Protestant schools and seminaries and Protestants teaching at Catholic institutions.

INCREASINGLY, THEIR seminarians and other students rub elbows in classes, studying together, sharing libraries and other facilities, with cross-registration at Protestant-Catholic theological clusters and unions, such as in Chicago, Washington D.C., and San Francisco.

Protestant and Catholic scholars also belong to the same professional organizations, such as the American Academy of Religion, Society of Church History, Society of Christian Ethics and the American Theological Society, sharing papers, discussion and personal ties.

They've become an interacting, interdependent league, an underlying intellectual stratum that nourishes the whole enterprise, potentially drawing it into ever greater cohesion.

An "intellectual rapprochement," it's called by Yale's Paul Minear, a United Church of Christ Bible scholar.

It's "not often advertised as ecumenical, or labeled as such, but the work is going forward ecumenically" both in theological and biblical scholarship, he said. "Sometimes there is greater loyalty among those in professional societies than to their own seminary or denomination. They're building lines of communication that simply ignore denominational identities."

He said both Scripture scholars and theologians are "much more united than church hierarchies. It just shows that what preserves the different denominations is a set of non-theological factors. Historic conditions keep them apart institutionally. Theological development has produced a great range of agreement in terms of basic faith, but it is not yet reflected in the institutional arrangement.

"FOR ALL practical purposes in Bible work, the unity sought has come into being," says Baptist Scripture scholar J. Walter Harrelson of Vanderbilt University. "We say, 'Let someone else worry about the differences.' They don't bother us. We do our work without resorting to them."

With theological training becoming more similar, with Protestant and Catholic worship and sermons more alike, with scholars working together, it's "going to make an enormous difference in the long run in creating a sense of commonality," said Lutheran theologian George Lindbeck.

Asked in an interview if this common undergrowth eventually may sprout into full-scale, functioning unity of an interlinked community of Christians, accepting, caring for, listening to and helping one another, he said:

"If the urge becomes stronger, then the similarities will make it much easier. Things could take off very quickly. But it's likely to require major external events, something to catalyze it."

Builder's dream of chapel at Camp David coming true

By W. DALE NELSON

Plans (for the chapel at Camp David) call for a 150-seat chapel with a detached bell tower. The Navy has agreed to donate a bell from an as-yet-undesignated ship...will be conducted by visiting military chaplains and guest civilian clergy.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prominent Methodist layman who spent weekends at Camp David as a Boy Scout before any president ever saw the mountain retreat wants future chief executives to have a place to worship there.

If Kenneth Plummer Sr. has his way, a wood and glass chapel, complete with a bell from a Navy ship, will rise a short walk from Aspen lodge, the presidential cabin at the weekend hideaway in Maryland.

President Reagan has approved plans for the privately financed, interdenominational chapel, which might be ready before he leaves the White House in January.

"I went up and put stakes in the ground for the president and Mrs. Reagan to look at," Plummer said in a telephone interview, adding that the Reagans OK'd the site earlier this year.

Plummer is head of a five-member board of directors of the Camp David Chapel Fund Inc., which is launching a drive to raise $750,000 to $1 million from church people throughout the country.

A retired builder in Chambersburg, Pa., Plummer is president of the National Lay Leaders Association of the United Methodist Church and a trustee of Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington.

He started going to the wooded site that now is Camp David on winter weekend outings when he was a Boy Scout and the place was known simply as Camp No. 3, part of a Park Service recreational area.

"At that time there were simply open shelters enclosed on three sides with a screened opening on the fourth," he said. He said the scouts preferred the future presidential site to other camps in the area, partly because it was on the mountaintop and surrounded by rock outcroppings attractive to hikers.

In 1942, Camp No. 3 was turned into a wartime retreat for President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who called it Shangri-La. After Roosevelt's death in 1945, President Harry S. Truman decided to retain it for presidential use. President Dwight D. Eisenhower renamed it Camp David for his grandson.

Plummer's connection with the camp did not end with his scouting days. As a builder, he has had construction contracts with the Navy, which runs the presidential retreat.

"I have been up there quite often over the years," Plummer said, although he said he could not describe the work he did because of the tight security that surrounds the camp.

On Nov. 22, 1963, when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, Plummer was at the camp and watched a television replay of the shooting.

"I thought it would have been better if we had had somewhere to go, a chapel of some kind," he said. "It's been a dream of mine."

The dream had to wait 24 years to begin moving toward reality.

President Lyndon B. Johnson occasionally went to an Episcopal church in nearby Thurmont, Md., and President Jimmy Carter used the Camp David movie theater as a makeshift chapel on Sundays. "We obviously invited whatever guests we had with us that weekend and our own staff members, plus members of the military who were stationed at Camp David permanently, to join us in the services," Carter said in a 1985 interview.

When Egyptian President Anwar Sadat visited for the negotiations that led to an Egypt-Israeli peace treaty, the theater was converted temporarily to a Moslem place of worship for his daily prayers.

Reagan seldom attends church, pleading that the elaborate arrangements required for his security are an inconvenience to others.

Plummer first presented his proposal to the commanding officer of Camp David, who passed it up through the chain of command. Reagan gave his approval and Secretary of the Navy James H. Webb authorized construction on Oct. 30.

First lady Nancy Reagan's press secretary, Elaine Crispen, said Mrs. Reagan gave one of the first contributions, a check for $1,000.

The site is in a clearing in the woods about the equivalent of a city block from the president's lodge.

Plans call for a 150-seat chapel with a detached bell tower. The Navy has agreed to donate a bell from an as-yet-undesignated ship.

Mrs. Crispen said services will be conducted by visiting military chaplains and guest civilian clergy.

Plummer said the board hopes to start construction in two to three months and hopes to have the building completed by the end of this year.

Although this would make it possible for the Reagans to use the chapel, Plummer stressed that "this is a gift for all presidents and for the personnel at Camp David."

Kenneth Plummer Sr. shows off his plans for the Camp David Chapel, a privately financed chapel which will be built at the presidential retreat in Maryland. Plummer, a Methodist layman, spent weekends at Camp David as a Boy Scout before any president even saw the mountain retreat and wants future chief executives to have a place to worship when they go there.

Fighting terrorism never-ending job

A recent State Department briefing on terrorism offers some hope to a world weary of outrage, though the briefing makes clear that optimism still must be leavened with realistic notions about a dangerous world.

According to a State Department expert on counterterrorism, who spoke to editorial writers on guarantee of anonymity last week, the center of terrorist activity has shifted in the past year or so from Western Europe to what he called the periphery — Sri Lanka, India, Pakistan, Peru, Colombia, western Africa. Recent gruesome events in Northern Ireland underscore the fact that Europe is not completely free of terrorist atrocities, but what the spokesman called "containment" has occurred over large areas of the continent.

The spokesman credited increased international cooperation. He also noted that in the last year, international terrorists have been arrested, indicted and in some cases convicted in eight European countries.

"Progress," he said, "is very thin and at the margins. Often it could be the result of the attentiveness of one baggage inspector."

Elsewhere, the State Department remains concerned about Libyan People's Bureaus around the world. "They are still nests of terrorist operations," the expert said.

The spokesman noted that Palestinian terrorism has not ended, "though in the future," he said, "it may be more sharply focused on the Middle East and Israel."

The State Department spokesman was asked about Abu Nidal, leader of the radical, offshoot Palestinian Revolutionary Council of Fatah.

"Next to the IRA (the Irish Republican Army), Fatah remains the world's deadliest international terrorist organization," the spokesman said. "It is becoming a military organization, because Nidal wants to be seen as a more legitimate political influence. He has not given up terrorism, though there has been no Western target since the Karachi airline hijacking in September 1986."

Syria, the spokesman noted, "has been thrashed diplomatically by America and the Europeans. The Syrians pay attention to condemnations and collective actions. Since Abu Nidal was expelled from Damascus to Tripoli about a year ago, no direct support for terrorist operations has been seen."

In the war against international terrorism, the spokesman emphasized, we cannot depend upon the good will of notoriously unreliable governments. The State Department, for example, endorses legislation that would allow law-enforcement authorities to hold terrorist suspects for a slightly longer period of time before bringing them before a magistrate.

The department also would like to see more ambitious witness-protection programs and reduced sentencing arrangements for witnesses who cooperate with authorities. "Plea bargaining is a powerful tool," the department spokesman said. And there are other "tools" that can be employed, such as upgrading embassies and other government buildings to make them safer.

Terrorism cannot be "defeated" in the way an enemy can be defeated in war, but the civilized world must be just as cunning and resourceful as Abu Nidal in its efforts to prevent terrorist incidents. The message from the State Department last week was that those efforts require a wide range of resources. It may be springtime, when hope traditionally blossoms, but it's no time to let down our counterterrorism guard.

Rescuer story appalling

In today's (March 24th) Fort Worth Star-Telegram, I read a story written by Lisa Belkin, New York Times News Service, regarding the volunteers of Jessica McClure.

I don't know when I have ever read anything so disgusting in my whole life. If I were these rescuers I would certainly not have the gall to have their dirty linen aired in public.

As volunteers I really thought they did their respective parts out of neighborliness, compassion and love of a child. Apparently, I was all wrong. They did their so-called deeds just for the sake of recognition. They have left a tarnished image now instead of one that the nation seemed to have rallied around at a time when Texans really needed a boost. Now, the offers of big money have damaged what to all was a beautiful story.

What if the McClures were having marriage problems? What possible reason is it for personal problems to be brought into the story of this near-tragedy? Why can't the simple story of Jessica's rescue be told without impertinent factors being brought out? And last, but by no means least, why can't they settle their differences in private and not let the whole world know that their jealousy is so consuming that they can't pull together on this as they did during that crucial time?

Think how this looks to us and potential volunteers down the line that may be needed again. They probably just won't be there for someone else.

Experience humiliating

As the parent of a handicapped child I was appalled by the lack of assistance we received while attending the circus on March 14th, which was held in the Midland Chaparral Center.

Once inside the center, I asked someone where the ramps were or how we were supposed to get to a seat. He didn't know so he did find an employee of the center to help me. The employee said he didn't know where any ramps were; he then directed us to the concession stand and said we could stay behind the roped off area and watch the show.

It was a humiliating experience for my son. We will never attend any event held at the Midland Chaparral Center. I am extremely disappointed and cannot believe the uncaring attitude of some people.

Trustee tried to help

The Rusk Elementary PTA would like to thank school district trustee Betsy Robinson for her efforts to help not only the schools listed in the current bond proposal, but all the Midland elementary schools.

Her proposal to add multi-purpose centers to the schools not receiving the classroom/LRC/activity center additions illustrates her desire to make each and every school a quality one. We deeply regret that the board chose not to take this suggestion under consideration.

At this time, when there are so many inequalities between elementary campuses, the Rusk PTA applauds Ms. Robinson's efforts to correct the situation.

Drugs real threat in Latin America

WASHINGTON — As the United States was rushing 3,200 troops to Honduras to face the Sandinistas, it was ignoring the most dangerous threat there to our security: drugs.

Jack Anderson

A scant few U.S. agents in Central America are battling the Medellin cartel, a multibillion-dollar criminal consortium, which is tightening its control over the region. The cartel supplies 80 percent of the cocaine that is smuggled into America.

The cartel uses Honduras, with its craggy coastline and sparsely settled hinterland, as a hub for the transshipment of U.S.-bound cocaine. Some of the same Honduran officers who Washington has trained and armed allegedly are paid to protect the cartel's smuggling operations.

The Reagan administration has pulled out all stops to disrupt the strident Sandinista regime in Nicaragua, but little has been done to break up the murderous Medellin cartel, whose illicit drugs have taken a terrible toll in wrecked lives and rampant crime across the United States.

President Reagan's avowed intent is to halt the subversion and destabilization of Central America by the Sandinistas. The irony is that the Sandinistas have been surpassed in subversive skills by the Medellin drug lords, who have certainly corrupted more high officials, undermined more allied governments and destabilized more countries.

They have bribed ministers, generals, judges and police chiefs from Colombia, Haiti and the Bahamas to Panama, Honduras and Mexico. Lesser authorities are also carried on the cartel's payroll. Often, those who can't be bribed are murdered. The cartel's enforcers have reportedly gunned down thousands of rivals and recalcitrants.

This has brought some Latin American governments to the brink of chaos. The most notorious recent example, of course, is Panama. The cartel's prize contact there, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, assumed power several years ago and turned Panama into a drug smugglers' haven. Panama's banks, which deal in dollars, are ideal for laundering drug profits.

There are men like Noriega in half a dozen countries — men high in the ruling circles who have sold out to the Medellin cartel. The cartel has such a tight grip on Colombia, for example, that it openly challenges the authority of the government, routinely murdering judges and officials.

In the Bahamas, many people in high places, including a top minister, have close ties to the drug lords.

The cartel's man in Haiti is a military commander so ruthless and powerful that the government dares not oppose him.

In Honduras, a former Army intelligence chief is said to be the cartel's key man, and a secret network of military officers is allegedly paid off.

In Mexico, the government is honeycombed with officials on the take from the drug cartel, our sources say.

The massive scale of drug trafficking would not be possible, sources stress, without the collaboration of high-level authorities. It is only a matter of time, our sources warn, before the cartel will erode good government here, as it has done in Latin America. For the drug lords, it is simple economics. They have discovered that it is cheaper to pay bribes than to pay taxes.

Who is responsible for the mushrooming growth of the Medellin cartel and its insidious influence? The ultimate blame lies with the drug users; their purchases have created this Frankenstein monster. It is the yuppie who thinks it is fashionable to snort cocaine, the street kid who shoots it into his veins. They are the ones who have become America's public enemy No. 1.

TRACKING BAD DEBTS — Doctors, nurses and other health professionals who borrowed money from the federal government to go to school are delinquent in their payments by more than $120 million, according to an investigation by the General Accounting Office. At the same time, some of those delinquent doctors are being paid by the federal government for treating Medicare patients.

Three years ago, the inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department suggested that Medicare payments to the delinquent doctors be confiscated to repay their loans. Medicare objected on the theory that the doctors would simply bill their patients directly and then force the patients to collect from Medicare. The GAO is now suggesting that the technique be tried anyway in a pilot program to see how the doctors react.

Medicare officials say they would rather just disqualify the doctors from treating Medicare patients, thus forcing the doctors to repay their loans before they can get back on the approved Medicare list. Medicare can exclude a doctor who owes money to the federal government, but the law requires that all reasonable steps be taken to recover the loan in other ways before doing that.

MINI-EDITORIAL — A federal appeals court has greased the flow of information with its ruling that a police officer cannot be fired for talking to the press. That happened to a Michigan officer who uncovered evidence of corruption in his force. The officer can have his job back, and the right of everyone to speak up has been fortified. The questions asked by the press are often painful, and the answers are seldom easy to give, but that exchange of information must be preserved if we want any guarantee of control over our government.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Progress marches on, despite best attempts

Soon after I got my first bigtime sports department job, back when the Super Bowl was still a novel idea, I noticed the bigtime sportswriters all carried the same kind of portable typewriters.

Grizzard

They were manuals manufactured by Olivetti, and they fit neatly — for travel purposes — into a blue leather case.

So I went out and bought myself a new one in 1968. It served me unfailingly in such places as Dodger Stadium, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the Press Hut at Augusta National Golf Club, and I even carried it to the Republican Convention in Detroit in 1980 long after my sportswriting career had ended.

My first Olivetti slowly began to fall apart, however, and my colleagues all suggested I begin to write on a computer.

I will say it again as I have said it before: God never intended newspapers to be put out by computer, as most of them are today. God has punished the nation's newspapers for this transgression, by giving them a headache known as USA Today.

Still, I had a problem replacing my original Olivetti. Manual typewriters are no longer manufactured by any company. What I finally did was ask around and I came up with two used Olivettis like my first one.

They served me gallantly all over the world. I even took one to the Soviet Union.

But one fell apart a year ago in Oklahoma City, and the other's carriage stuck on me as I typed in the Delta Crown Room in New Orleans. It has yet to move again.

"Get the computer," everybody said to me again. "You can't live in the past forever."

I've accepted that now. One occasionally needs to update. I have even stopped wearing Old Spice aftershave for the exotic aroma of Bayou Wind, or some such thing.

The day of the portable manual typewriter — the Olivetti, hallowed be its name — is over.

"So you'll get a computer to take on the road?" I was asked.

"No," I answered. "I will buy a portable electric typewriter, my compromise with the information age."

I have never liked electric typewriters. They make that deep, humming noise like a 1962 Impala on idle.

And in order to operate an electric typewriter, one must have an electrical outlet.

I once had to type a column on the tailgate of a pickup truck that had broken down carrying me out of the wilderness of Idaho. Where would I have plugged in my electric? In the rear-end of a longhorned sheep, the subject of my column?

Something else about electric typewriters is that they type faster than I can think. Try to type an "L" on an electric typewriter and no matter how lightly you peck the key you're going to get "LLLL" every time.

But, as I said, I have decided to compromise. I have purchased a portable electric typewriter to replace my weary Olivetti manuals.

Upon the occasion of my next road assignment, I will be coming to you via a Smith-Corona, which has something called a "Coronamatic Cartridge Correction System" — whatever that is.

While I am home, however, I will continue to use what I am using now, a vintage desktop manual Royal, a good and a loyal tool, the kind Bogie probably used in "Deadline USA," when he uttered those immortal words, "Progress sucks."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Administration falling prey to Genscher line

SAN FRANCISCO — On April 15, 1986, when U.S. bombers gave a permanent headache to Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, Bill Casey brought a group of non-CIA economists in to see the president. As bombs fell on Tripoli, statistics about the Soviet economy rained on Ronald Reagan.

William Safire

"What does all this mean?" he asked as the hourlong presentation ended.

It meant, the outside consultants explained, that the conventional wisdom about the Soviet Union's size and strength was wrong: instead of steadily growing, Soviet production had been stagnant for years.

This meant further that the Kremlin's new leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, would soon be faced with an internal crisis; he would have to shake up the economic system radically to force new growth, or accept a reduction in what was becoming an unsustainable level of military spending. Soviet economic weakness could profoundly affect arms talks and the maintenance of the empire from Afghanistan to Cuba.

The president wanted to know what the effect of this new interpretation would be on his policy planners.

"They'll say, 'Help this nice man,'" replied one of the economists.

Reagan nodded: "I know, the Genscher line." He was referring to the Ostpolitik urgings of West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who is eager to finance the revival of Moscow's trade.

That was just two years ago, when Reagan presided over an administration split between Defense-CIA-NSC hard-liners and the accommodationists at State.

Then, a year ago, an iconoclast among Soviet academicians, Grigoriy Khanin, was permitted to publish in Novy Mir a refutation of all past Soviet figures, exposing the use of hidden inflation — "figure-padding and price manipulation" — in estimating growth rates. CIA analysts gulped; their own estimates for 1986 were closely in line with the earlier, officially rosy Soviet figures, which were in the process of being discredited.

A couple of weeks ago, as reported in this space, Mikhail Gorbachev put his stamp on the gloomy Khanin account in a speech to the Central Committee. If the Russian leader can be believed, the Soviet economy is about one-fourth smaller today than Soviet statisticians — and our own intelligence analysts — have led our defense planners to believe.

Last week, at the Hoover Institution in Palo Alto, the best-of-the-West analysts of the Soviet economy held a friendly intellectual shoot-out.

Henry Rowen, a Stanford University professor and former Rand Corp. president who ran studies for the CIA a few years ago, was the organizer; Charles Wolf of Rand, co-editor with Rowen of "The Future of the Soviet Empire," coming out next month, presented a paper that shows, among other stunners, how China is likely to outproduce the Soviet Union soon after the year 2000. Prof. Richard Ericson of Columbia University's Harriman Institute was, I'm told, a star performer, along with a Swedish economist I want to take to lunch. To its credit, the agency had its team, headed by the economist Derk Swain, in the thick of the argument.

"Team B," as the new-estimate types will inevitably be called, holds that Soviet income is the equivalent of $8,000 per capita; that means the Soviet Union would be producing roughly one-fourth as much as the United States produces. But the old CIA-academic consensus is said to put Soviet output at one-half the United States'; that's about as much as economists can disagree about anything.

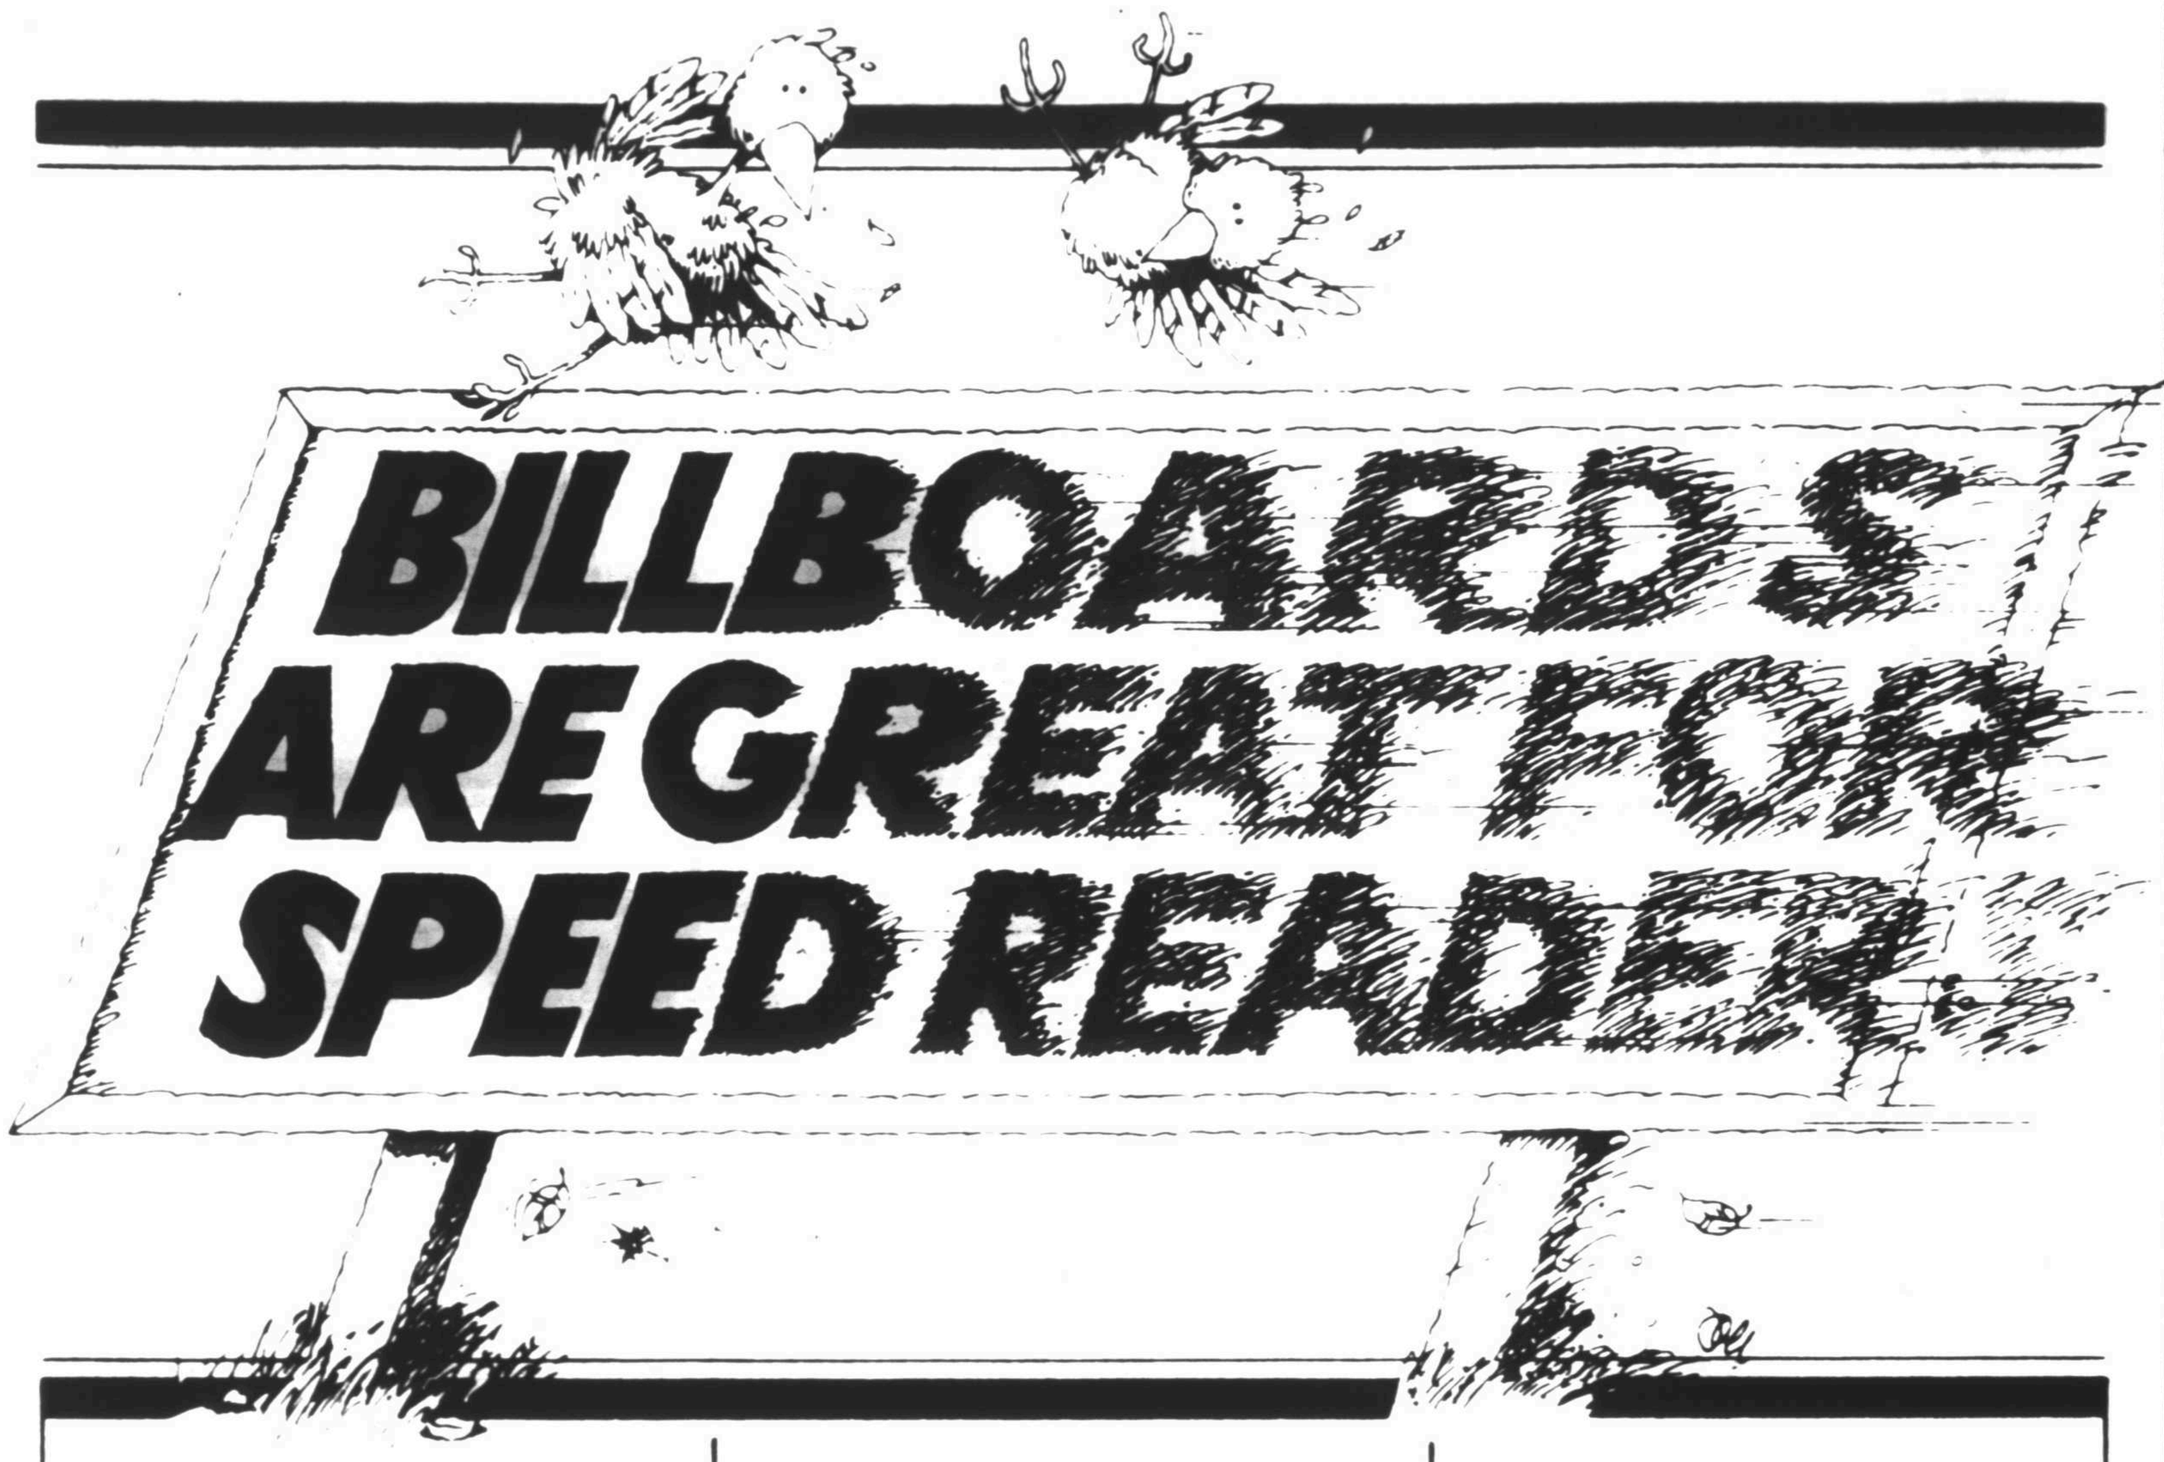

Another schism: The old consensus says the proportion of GNP that the Russians spend on defense, plus underground facilities and the "cost of empire," is still under 20 percent; the Team B estimate of the same items ranges from 25 percent up to 35 percent of all production. (Our spending on the same breadth of items is only 7 percent.) The first estimate would put Gorbachev in some difficulty at the summit meeting; the last estimate would take him to the brink of desperation for a deal.

As Reagan would ask, What does this mean? It means that we should not be in such a hurry to help this nice man.

Unfortunately, the "Genscher line" has taken hold in the Reagan administration; all the hard-liners have been routed. Secretary Shultz has just agreed to link Start to "Star Wars," a huge concession. Although both superpowers have sold the world's media on the seeming impossibility of a Start treaty at the summit, the fix is in for a rush to sign in Moscow.

The Russians are exploiting Reagan's yearning for a blaze of glory; we are failing to exploit the urgency of the Russians' need to catch their breath.

Senate committee expected to approve weapons treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee headed toward approval today of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear weapons, despite partisan bickering over presidential authority.

The Democratic-controlled panel was scheduled to meet late this afternoon to vote on the pact signed Dec. 8 by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The provision says no future president can change the U.S. interpretation of the treaty without the approval of Congress, either through a new pact or through a separate law.

The measure arises from a long-standing fight between Reagan and Congress over Reagan's assertion that the executive branch can unilaterally change how the U.S. government interprets a treaty. Congressional Democrats disagree with that statement, which Reagan has used to justify some tests of his Star Wars missile defense system.

The tests would violate the original interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

Democrats want assurances that Reagan or another president won't assert the same right to re-interpret treaties on the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces pact.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Reagan already has agreed not to change the U.S. view of the INF treaty and said the proposal "is a deliberate attempt to embarrass the president."

But Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., told Lugar, "those of us on this side did not begin this process," a reference to Reagan's assertion involving executive branch rights on treaty intepretation.

U.S. to send high-tech weapons to Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee has voted to make some of the Navy's most sophisticated technology available to Japan to help defend western Pacific seas against the Soviet Union.

The decision came Tuesday as the Democratic-controlled panel voted 48-4 approval of a bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $299 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The committee also cut President Reagan's request for Star Wars anti-missile spending and his plan to put multiple-warhead MX missiles on western railroads.

By a 46-6 vote, the committee approved the tentative administration plans to go ahead and sell Japan up to four of the Navy's $1.2 billion Aegis-class destroyers.

An elaborate array of sensors and radars connected with guns and missiles makes the Aegis the Navy's most sophisticated system of defenses for surface ships.

Japan wants to buy the ships as part of the Japanese role in helping defend vital sea lanes near the Soviet Union.

Some legislators have opposed the move, arguing that the Aegis weapons should remain in the U.S. Navy. Critics have pointed to the case of Toshiba, a Japanese company which has admitted helping in the illegal sale of sophisticated machinery to the Soviet Union to build quieter Soviet submarines.

But Pentagon officials say the Toshiba case involved a private company and they argue that the Japanese government has protected other U.S. technology.

The committee voted Tuesday to approve only $3.7 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is formally known. Reagan had sought $4.5 billion.

In addition, the panel voted to approve $500 million for research into putting the MX aboard trains, $300 million less than Reagan had sought. At the same time, the panel increased Reagan's request for spending on the single-warhead Midgetman missile from $200 million to $500 million.

The $299 billion figure for total Pentagon spending was set last December during negotiations between the White House and Congress over the effort to cut federal budget deficits. The agreement eliminated the normal congressional fight over how much total money should be allocated for the Defense Department.

The bill is expected to go to the House floor late in April. The version that eventually passes the House will have to be reconciled with the separate Senate version of the same measure.

The Star Wars decision would result in a deep reduction from original plans. The $3.7 billion figure would put Star Wars spending next year at about the current level.

Pentagon budget plans last year called for seeking $6.2 billion in Star Wars money for fiscal 1989, but that was trimmed to $4.5 billion by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci as part of a package of cuts he ordered in response to the December agreement.

The dispute over the Midgetman and the MX involves two nuclear weapons at the heart of a 7-year-old fight over Reagan's plans for building up America's nuclear arsenal.

Congress has approved 50 MX weapons for deployment in land-based silos, but the Pentagon wants 50 more for deployment aboard trains. Meanwhile, the Pentagon has been lukewarm toward the Midgetman, a weapon that has been a favorite of congressional critics of the MX.

Carlucci told Congress last month that he thought the Midgetman should be eliminated, but said he had included $200 million at the request of Congress so the program could be kept alive until Reagan's successor makes a decision next year.

Meantime, Carlucci said $800 million should be spent for research into the rail-based version of the 10-warhead MX.

The committee's research and development subcommittee said last week that each weapon should be given $500 million and that subcommittee decision was ratified Tuesday after several unsuccessful attempts to change it.

Hazard notice bill marks unions' first big loss in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions have suffered their first major loss in the Senate since Democrats gained a majority in the 1986 election, as senators refused to guarantee warnings to workers facing on-the-job exposure to toxic chemicals.

The Senate's rejection on Tuesday of a bill to require notice for workers exposed to carcinogens and other job hazards ended a string of union victories this congressional session. In earlier industry-labor showdowns, the Senate had approved measures to ban most uses of lie detector tests and require advance notice of plant closings.

Sens. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chief sponsors of the worker notice bill, could get only 42 of the 60 votes needed to cut off an eight-day filibuster led by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

"In this one I've lost," Metzenbaum said afterward. "But as long as workers are kept in the dark about occupational hazards, we will continue to try to bring them light."

Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., had indicated earlier he would turn the Senate's attention to other legislation if its supporters could not muster at least 55 votes Tuesday. He did so immediately.

Opponents of legislation often use a filibuster to continue debate indefinitely and effectively defeat a bill that otherwise might win Senate passage.

Unlike an up-or-down vote on a bill itself that requires a simple majority — 51 votes if all 100 senators are present — breaking a filibuster to cut off debate requires 60 votes.

The hazard notice bill, which was passed by the House last October, would have set up a seven-member panel of scientists in the Department of Health and Human Services to identify the most dangerous carcinogens and other toxins on the job and the groups of workers at most risk.

The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Heath would have been ordered to notify individually up to 300,000 of those workers a year at an annual cost of $25 million.

Employers would have had to pay for medical monitoring of those workers at a cost of up to $250 a year for each. Armed with the results from such medical tests, workers could file liability suits against their employers.

The American Cancer Society had estimated that Metzenbaum's bill would have reduced cancer deaths by 250,000 over the next 10 years.

But business opponents led by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers claimed that liability suits could cost employers $6 billion a year or more.

NIOSH officials have estimated that one in every four Americans has been exposed to carcinogens or other potentially disabling toxins on the job at some time during their work life, most of them unaware of it.

"For workers exposed to toxic substances, the Senate's action is a tragedy," said Margaret Seminario, a health and safety specialist for the 14-million-member AFL-CIO. "Workers need to know; it's their health at stake."

Hatch and other opponents of the legislation argued during more than a week of debate that a dozen other government programs requiring labels on hazardous substances now provide enough warnings.

"It is already being done," he said. "Union leaders want this bill and they do not care what it costs...They just want it so they can go back to their people and say: 'We have done another great thing for the little people of America,' when they have not."

Mary Bernhard, manager of environmental policy for the Chamber of Commerce, said the bill would have misled "millions of workers into believing that they might some day contract a disease."

She called the vote Tuesday "a major victory for a wide coalition of business groups and a major defeat for organized labor."

Fifteen Democrats, most of them from the South, sided Tuesday with Hatch on the 52-42 vote against ending the filibuster, effectively killing any chance that the measure will become law this year.

"They're a little irritated with Kennedy and Metzenbaum for bringing up all these labor and civil rights bills that force them to pick between their constituencies back home," said one lobbyist who supported the legislation.

Local architect named jail project coordinator

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Steering the overall design and construction of a new downtown jail has become the task of Midland architect Walter Pate — chosen Tuesday as county jail project coordinator.

County Commissioners announced the decision to hire Pate's architectural firm as project consultant after a lengthy morning meeting that included interviews with four finalists — all representatives of local firms.

Commissioner Guy McCrary said a total of nine firms submitted applications for the job opening — a temporary position that will be filled for the duration of the jail construction.

The position demands that Pate prepare design/build specifications for the new jail facility, coordinate communications with organizations offering proposals, assist with the selection of a design/build team, monitor construction progress and advise the county on all matters relating to the project.

"Jail experience weighed very heavily in our decision because the field of jail construction is becoming very specialized," McCrary said in announcing the appointment. "The experience of Pate & Associates, with respect to jails, was greater than any other firm that we interviewed."

Pate will be paid an hourly rate, said McCrary, with a maximum fee still to be negotiated.

The commissioner added that Pate's firm will assume its duties within the week.

The 192-bunk jail — approved by voters in January — is to be built on the so-called Downtown South Superblock at South Main Street and Industrial Avenue.

Housed in the facility will be prisoners awaiting transport to the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville as well as city and federal prisoners. Inmates awaiting trial in district court will continue to be incarcerated in the present jail, located on the fifth floor of the county courthouse.

Commissioners earlier this week awarded bids to Fincer Investment Co. and Hatcher & Company Inc. of San Antonio to purchase county bonds that will be used to finance the new facility.

McCrary has said the transaction should be completed by mid-April.

He pointed out that the group's effective interest rate of 8.92 percent was less than the projected rate of 9.16 percent, so the cost of financing is less than projected by First Republic Bank.

GOP senatorial candidate Boulter to visit Midland

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

U.S. senatorial candidate Beau Boulter was to be in Midland this afternoon to receive an endorsement from National Republican Committeeman Ernest Angelo.

The candidate had scheduled a 1:30 p.m. press conference today at Midland International Airport.

Boulter, a Republican congressman from Amarillo, faces Houstonian Wes Gilbreath in a runoff election April 12.

The winner of the Republican runoff will face U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in the Nov. 8 general election.

"Beau Boulter is a committed conservative with a voting record in the U.S. Congress to prove it," Angelo said this morning.

"I hope we will have a large turnout for the April 12 runoff and that the voters will join with me in supporting Beau Boulter," Angelo added.

Through Boulter's leadership in Congress, many reforms recommended by the Grace Commission have been implemented to reduce the cost of government, Angelo said.

The Grace Commission was commissioned by President Reagan in 1981 to study ways to reduce waste, fraud and abuse in the federal government.

In 1985, Boulter founded a bipartisan caucus in Congress coordinating legislative efforts to ensure implementation of the Grace Commission goals, a Boulter statement said. President Reagan set up the commission to examine waste in government.

"Beau has been a strong advocate of a national energy policy," Angelo added.

"His efforts on behalf of the oil and gas industry have included the introduction of comprehensive legislation, organization of high level meetings with President Reagan and other administration officials.

"He is an articulate and knowledgeable spokesman," the national committeeman said.

This year, Boulter was awarded the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners "Hats Off Award" for his work to promote a national energy policy and assisting the domestic oil and gas industry, the Boulter statement said.

Gilbreath is a Houston businessman with interests in real estate, construction, shopping centers and media groups, he said earlier this week.

Of the runoff race, Angelo said: "I believe that between those two gentlemen, Congressman Boulter would be a much more effective candidate and senator."

Judge sentences Midland woman to 10 years for drug possession

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

As more than a dozen law officers watched intently, a state district judge refused a plea for probation and sentenced a 54-year-old Midland storeowner to 10 years in state prison for possession of heroin late Tuesday.

Emma Duran Valencia showed little emotion as 238th State District Judge Vann Culp told her there was "little doubt" of her guilt. Her age and the fact she is a married mother of three were considered when he decided the punishment, Culp said.

A six-woman, six-man jury took little more than an hour last Friday to convict the woman of possessing 31 "papers" of heroin, found after Midland County Sheriff's officers raided the woman's east side grocery store and delicatessen. The verdict followed a short but heated trial punctuated by charges by defense witnesses that sheriff's investigators had harassed the Valencia family for several years.

But the jury apparently rejected those claims, and instead relied on the testimony of the officers who conducted the raid.

At the punishment phase of the trial Tuesday, Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre called those officers and others — who he said represented "just about every officer who has enforced narcotics laws" for the last 15 years in Midland — to testify against her.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, Capt. Clayton McKinney of the sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division and sheriff's investigator Fred Stubbs testified that the woman had a bad reputation in the community. Several Midland police narcotics officers also testified that they were familiar with the defendant and her reputation. One police detective said he had heard about Ms. Valencia from several drug informants.

To counter the prosecution, defense attorney Tom Hirsch called family members and friends of Ms. Valencia, who testified the woman's reputation in Midland was "good."

In his argument, Hirsch said although he had "no quarrel with the jury verdict," probation was justified because the 31 "papers" weighed less than a gram. He called that a "minute amount of heroin."

Jessica to help raise money for sick boy

LANCASTER (AP) — Jessica McClure, a toddler whose rescue from a Midland well drew international attention, will help raise money for a boy with serious lung problems, an organizer said today.

Jessica, who turned 2 last Saturday, will participate in a balloon release Thursday to benefit 5-year-old Brennan Bolin, said benefit coordinator Bonnie Arnold.

The families of the children are acquainted and that is how Jessica got involved, according to Mrs. Arnold.

Jessica and her mother, Cissy McClure, were being flown to Lancaster Municipal Airport on a private plane for a noon reception today, said Mrs. Arnold.

Brennan has idiopathic pulmonary hemosiderosis, a rare condition in which bleeding occurs within the lining of the lungs.

Mrs. Arnold, wife of Lancaster Mayor Walter D. Arnold III, said the boy needs a heart-lung transplant at the University of Minnesota.

The surgery will cost $650,000 and all but $125,000 is covered by insurance, she said.

Lancaster residents have donated $15,000 before Thursday's official start Thursday of the fund-raising.

Students to engage faculties in pursuit of trivial knowledge

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Eggheads will be pitted against eggheads in a friendly battle of ego and pride in a Trivial Pursuit Tournament between fraternity honor students and Midland College faculty members on April 23.

"We're trying to get away from the 'Animal House' image of fraternities," said Steve O'Neal, a member of Phi Theta Kappa, a coeducational scholarship fraternity, which is the junior-college counterpart of Phi Beta Kappa.

"We are trying to aim for something better (than the old frat-brat image)," he pledged. "Phi Theta Kappa will mop up the floor with the faculty — Nancy Hart notwithstanding."

Nancy Hart, a Midland College faculty member who is a champion of the game of dice and petty knowledge called Trivial Pursuit, is rounding up a team of fellow instructors to challenge the fraternity.

"Mr. O'Neal really ought to remember who his teachers are and who gives the grades," said Hart, a lawyer who teaches business and legal assistance (paralegal) courses. "I don't know if he is going to 'mop up the floor' with us or not," she said.

O'Neal, 42, is studying to be a paralegal.

"But, really," Ms. Hart said, "we are in it just for the fun and to help the students to raise money."

Funds will be raised with pledges garnered by the game's players and by non-gambling side games open to spectators in the 10 a.m. Saturday, April 23, event. Proceeds will go toward expanding the fraternity and to a Midland charity.

Ms. Hart, who said the game may be played in a round-robin format, is the city of Midland's 1984 Trivial Pursuit champion. "That's one of my hobbies — playing Trivial Pursuit."

Several mixed editions of Trivial Pursuit will be played in the tournament, Hart said.

One of O'Neal's ploys in promoting the game is to upgrade the image of fraternities.

"A lot of things they do are illegal, like rape," he said. "Guys have died or have been seriously injured in hazing. Guys have gotten so drunk that they have drowned in their own (vomit). We are trying to sanitize it.

"If they (social fraternities' misdeeds) are not illegal, they are despicable," O'Neal said. "We are trying to be the good guys. We are trying to clean up the image of fraternities. It's kind of Herculean."

But, mostly, said O'Neal, "We are trying to have fun doing it."

Quipped Midland College student Gloria Maddox, 33: "We're out to get them (instructors). This is revenge."

But it's not really, she said.

"There is nothing vindictive," Ms. Maddox said, "but it would be a feather in our cap to come on top."

Ms. Maddox, a 33-year-old "returning student" as opposed to freshmen just out of high school, said the Phi

By KAREN SVENDSEN WERNER

VALLEY MILLS (AP) — The Bosque County Historical Commission this week will unveil a memorial honoring one of the foremost witnesses of Bosque County history.

That witness — an oak tree — provided shelter for pioneers who organized the Bosque County government in 1854, and shaded many a picnicker.

The tree stood 4.5 miles south of Clifton on the west side of Highway 6 for more than 200 years, before it died from oak wilt in 1980.

But county historians plan to keep its memory alive.

To commemorate county history, the historical commission will unveil a preserved cross section from one of the major branches of the tree at 10 a.m. Thursday in the front hall of the Bosque County Courthouse in Meridian. The main trunk was too hollow to preserve.

Elizabeth Torrence, chairwoman of the historical commission, said the tree played a major part in Bosque County history.

During the county's first election on Aug. 7, 1854, settlers placed one of three polling places under the tree and added the county's 20 ballots there, Elizabeth Torrence said.

there, she said. The election approved the formation of the Bosque County government.

Ms. Torrence said her grandfather, Tom M. Pool, owned the land surrounding the election oak and, in 1928, deeded five acres to the Old Settlers Association composed of local pioneers.

The pioneers and their families celebrated Fourth of July picnics under the tree until World War II. A later picnic under the tree in 1954, commemorated the Bosque County centennial, she said.

The Texas Forest Service recognized the tree's history and included it in the book, "Famous Trees of Texas," published in 1970.

Once the limb cross section is mounted in the courthouse, a year will have passed since preparations to preserve it began, Ms. Torrence said.

Jud Piner of Fort Worth sawed off the tree limb using a saw from Precinct 3 Bosque County Commissioner Calvin Reuter of Clifton. State Rep. Bob Melton, D-Gatesville, helped Ms. Torrence locate Larry Schaapveld of the Texas Forest Service, who treated the cross section and dated its rings.

Calvin Smith and David Lintz of the Strecker Museum in Waco mounted the lettering and photographs for the exhibit, and J.R. "Bob" Allen, a member of the Bosque County Historical Commission, built a case around the display.

The Texas Forest Service marked growth rings on the 150-pound cross section to indicate the limb's origin in 1700, each turn of the century, March 2, 1836, the day Texas gained its independence from Mexico, and each county anniversary. Schaapveld estimated the tree began growing in 1776, or about 10 years before the limb branched out, Ms. Torrence said.

White resigns as candidate for council

From Staff Reports

Former District 3 City Council candidate Hugh White threw his support behind his opponent Tuesday after resigning from the May 7 race.

Midlander Bob Monaghan is now the sole candidate in the race for the seat vacated Friday by former city councilman Kelly Fish.

White could not be reached for comment this morning.

The recent 142nd District Judge's race was the catalyst that made him quit the race, his letter of resignation claimed.

"After watching the recent district judge's race with all the allegations, innuendos and half-truths, I have decided not to be a party to such a campaign," White wrote.

He added that he believed an expensive campaign would be "counterproductive to the local political process."

TRIAL

Probation was proper because of prison overcrowding and the fact that a daughter of Ms. Valencia's suffers from polio, the attorney said.

"She is needed at home," Hirsch told the judge.

But prosecutor Wayne Frost blasted Hirsch's arguments and instead echoed Schorre's plea for the maximum 20-year sentence.

"Those who apparently ignore state law...must ultimately face that law," Frost said. He said the defendant's status as a mother does not deserve sympathy because "she should know better."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

This week we shall focus on a special need: The position of Assistant Volunteer Coordinator for the Adult Probation Department.

The Adult Probation Department is responsible for supervising individuals placed on probation by the courts.

Probation is a tough row to hoe — ask any probationer. He/she is supervised in every aspect of his/her life. Job, travel, friends, entertainment, intellectual life — all are circumscribed by and subject to the approval of the probation department.

The probationer benefits by having someone to help meet his needs while he gets his life together. This requires, on the part of the probation department, much clerical and paper work, telephone calling, letter writing and outright counseling.

The Assistant Volunteer Coordinator will be in charge of developing and implementing volunteer programs as they relate to the above activities, and will be in charge of recruiting new volunteers as needed. Requirements for this job are outstanding managerial, organizational and human relations skills. The rewards of this job are: the opportunity of polishing one's interpersonal skills and the chance to gain or increase managerial skills by dealing on a day to day basis with persons from a wide range of walks of life — from probationers and their families to judges.

So, if you are an organized or highly motivated individual with latent executive abilities, and you have some time on your hands, please call or come by The Volunteer Center of Midland, 1030 Andrews Highway, Suite 207, 684-5866.

Please do not contact the Adult Probation Department directly.

For more information on how you and/or your group or organization can become involved, give the Volunteer Center a call at 684-5866.

Theta Kappa fraternity members "just all love Midland and Midland College so much that we would like to contribute something. I am proud of the fact that I have a new start as a returning student."

Connie Miller, the 38-year-old president of the Phi Theta Kappa chapter at Midland College, said that the "whole idea" of matching students against instructors "has taken on a life of its own."

Ms. Miller, who said returning to the classroom has helped her perspective and self-esteem, claimed the "fun event" is "just a chance for us to get together and have a good time and try each other out."

Four people will be on each team, said Ms. Miller, who is working out details of the tournament.

"I'm a firm believer in Murphy's Law," she said, "and I'm trying to think of everything that could go wrong."

Firm gives software to United Way

From Staff Reports

Ashton-Tate Corporation has donated an estimated $1.3 million worth of microcomputer software packages to Gifts In Kind, a United Way organization that will distribute the products to non-profit groups throughout the United States.

United Way of Midland is one of several dozen United Way branches across the U.S. which has received the software for redistribution to local charities.

"It gives us a wonderful feeling to be able to provide these agencies with much-needed computer equipment, a gift which might otherwise be unattainable on their fixed budgets," said Ann Brumley, office manager and Gifts In Kind coordinator for United Way of Midland. "Computer software was given to Community and Senior Services, Casa de Amigos, Salvation Army, Salvation Army Day Care and Midland Association for Retarded Citizens."

Ashton-Tate, one of the largest independent microcomputer software companies in the world, is donating almost 20,000 units of its popular software programs and hardware components, including MultiMate word processing software and Master Graphics Series presentation graphics software and MultiMate Advantage word processing keyboards.

"We are delighted to make this contribution through Gifts In Kind," said Lydia Dobyns, Ashton-Tate vice president of marketing.

Gifts In Kind encourages gifts of products, goods and services to voluntary service organizations as a supplement to financial support. It assists corporations in finding appropriate, qualified organizations to receive and distribute in-kind gifts to those in need. Gifts In Kind also helps companies coordinate donations and establish on-going in-kind giving programs.

Rhinos hunted for horn

Since 1970, some 83 percent of all the world's rhinos have disappeared, primarily because of illegal hunters who want only the animals' horns. The horns are used for knives and handles, and as unproven headache remedies.

Police Roundup

A 25-year-old Midland man was charged Tuesday with possession of methamphetamine with intent to distribute, the Midland County Sheriff's office reported today.

Martin K. Reed, 3418 Lousiana Ave., was arrested about 7 a.m. at his home without incident, reports said. Less than an ounce of methamphetamine packaged in plastic baggies was found in the home, investigators said.

His bond was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, reports said.

Officers also found a small amount of marijuana and a television set in the house. The television is believed to be stolen property from Florida, officers said.

A scale and other paraphernalia were also found in the house, according to reports.

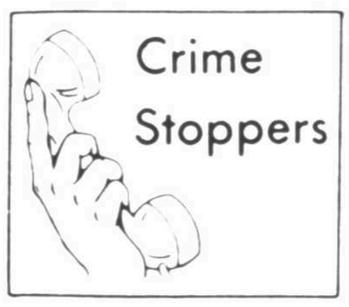

Crime Stoppers seeks information on rapist

This week, Crime Stoppers is asking for help in finding a "Notre Dame" connection to help solve the rape of a 29-year-old Midland woman.

On Nov. 8, 1987, at about 5 a.m., a Midland woman went to Windlands Park, Wadley and A Street, to jog. At the time, the woman was the only person in the park.

After jogging a couple of miles, she saw a man running toward her from the west. The woman moved off the track to let the man by, but instead he grabbed her and threw her to the ground. The suspect then pulled her sweatshirt up over her head and led her off the track about 50 feet, where he then raped her.

The suspect was described as a white man, 6 feet to 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighing between 190 and 210 pounds. He had short brown hair, was clean shaven, and wore a white T-shirt with "Notre Dame" written across it in two or three-inch high printed letters and dark sweat pants.

The suspect may be in his late teens or early twenties.

Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible for the crime.

In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers can remain anonymous.

Tough hombres Robert Urich, from left, Austinite Julius Tennon and Jerry Biggs add realism to the set of "Lonesome Dove" near Decker Lake east of Austin, Tuesday. The miniseries, based on Larry McMurtry's popular novel, has set up temporary shop in Central Texas, before moving on to Del Rio and New Mexico.

CBS hopes for soaring ratings on wings of 'Dove'

AUSTIN (AP) — A lot is riding on "Lonesome Dove" a television miniseries based on Larry McMurtry's story of two old Texas Rangers and a cattle drive from Texas to Montana.

In recent years, long television miniseries haven't fared well in the ratings. But CBS is turning over four nights of prime time to the project during the November ratings period.

The eight-hour production has a budget of more than $15 million and a cast that includes Robert Duvall, Tommy Lee Jones, Anjelica Huston, Danny Glover and Ricky Schroder.

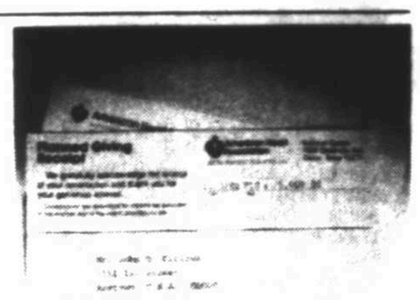

Filming was taking place this week on land about 12 miles east of Austin owned by miniseries' screenwriter and executive producer Bill Wittliff.

"I think everybody senses the special quality of the material and the cast," Wittliff said. "Duvall was cast first, and Robert Duvall is like a magnet for other actors."

The principal leads are Duvall, who plays Gus McRae, and Jones, who plays W.F. Call. Ms. Huston is scheduled to join the cast in New Mexico.

Among a seedy gang of outlaws being filmed in one scene was a character called Frog Lip, played by Austinite Julius Tennon. A juvenile probation officer when he's not playing a Western villain, Tennon auditioned for the role at Wittliff's house and suspects Wittliff may have had something to do with his selection.

National AIDS study to draw from UT Austin students' blood

AUSTIN (AP) — AIDS researchers plan to use blood from students at the University of Texas at Austin and other schools to find out more about the virus that can lead to the fatal disease.

UT Student Health Center officials say they will send to the Centers for Disease Control a portion of every blood sample taken in routine tests. The identity of the students will remain confidential and the universities will not know the results of the tests, according to Robert Wirag, UT health center director.

UT will be one of about 25 colleges, and the only one in Texas, included in the study.

The samples will be labeled only with the person's sex, race and age, and date the blood was drawn. Additionally, every 10th sample will be discarded by CDC.

"If blood was drawn on me as part of the study, we wouldn't even know whether it would actually be tested," Wirag said.

Dr. Scott Spear, a health center physician who is an organizer of the study, said individual students and individual universities will not be able to find out results of the tests. Each university is supposed to collect about 1,000 samples.

"I think it's important to point out that we wouldn't be ordering blood tests just to get enough samples to send," said Dr. Melinda McMichael, the health center's medical director.

UT will begin sending blood samples to CDC in April and continue through November.

Lover's quarrel ends with two dead, one injured

EL PASO (AP) — A lover's quarrel apparently drove a man to shoot his former girlfriend and kill his sister-in-law before he turned the gun on himself, police say.

Juan Venegas, 32, of El Paso, died at the scene of the shooting shortly after noon Tuesday on a Goodwill Industries store parking lot, police said.

His sister-in-law, 31-year-old Elva Venegas of El Paso, died of a gunshot wound to the back about an hour after arrival at R.E. Thomason Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Venegas' former girlfriend, Gabriella Ramos, 24, of El Paso, was in stable condition Tuesday at R.E. Thomason with a gunshot wound to the face.

Police Lt. J.R. Grijalva said the incident appeared to be the result of a lover's quarrel.

"We have information he (the assailant) possibly was an ex-boyfriend of (Ms. Ramos)" he said.

It was not clear why the three were at the Goodwill Industries store.

Ernestina Medina said she was inside the store during the shootings but did not hear any shots. She said she saw Ms. Ramos run to the store's door, her face bloody from the gunshot wound, but instead of entering the store, turned back toward Ms. Venegas.

Soledad Chan, the store's manager, said she told customers to stay inside in case there was more shooting.

Coast officials ready for big crowds

PORT ARANSAS (AP) — Area officials say they want to cut down on spring break anarchy, and plan to take a beach safety program on the road to reach high school students.

Tough law enforcement also was suggested at a session Nueces County Commissioner J.P. Luby hosted Monday to prepare for this weekend's expected Easter crowds of more than 100,000 on Padre and Mustang Islands.

"Our best bet is to really give it to them. Prosecute them and give them heavy fines," said Port Aransas city councilman Ken Williams.

Nueces County Attorney Carlos Valdez suggested that fines for some liquor law violations could be raised as high as $1,000.

Plans were set into motion at the session to send Nueces County constables' representatives to San Antonio to speak to high school students about beach safety.

A week ago Saturday, a crowd of spring-breakers overturned a car, set it on fire and tossed beer bottles and cans at police officers trying to disperse the crowd. Other incidents the same night included stabbings and the deaths of two young men whose car plunged into 18 feet of water at the Port Aransas ferry crossing.

Officials have attributed many of the problems at spring break to high school students who travel from San Antonio and other cities.

At the southern tip of the Texas coast, on South Padre Island, a survey of visitors during spring break gave the Texas Department of Public Safety the highest marks and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission the lowest, preliminary results show.

Professor Chris Clearman said the survey by his criminal justice students at Pan American University-Brownsville showed the DPS was given the most "excellent" ratings among spring-breakers under age 26, local young people under 26 and adults, including winter Texans.

Pan American students questioned 1,000 visitors to the island over the past month and by Tuesday, 671 of the questionnaires had been tabulated, Clearman said.

Clearman said generally a law enforcement agency must make a bad impression to receive a "very poor" mark from someone.

The Pan American survey comes while tension is high between TABC agents and South Padre Island officials over the plainclothes agents' enforcement of Texas' 21-year-old drinking law. This month, TABC officials at the island have arrested more than 1,500 students for possessing or drinking alcohol under age.

TABC Assistant District Supervisor Raul Santiago said Tuesday his officers perform a thankless job, and have helped maintain a safe atmosphere that attracts the students.

"The liquor laws as far as minors are concerned are not very popular, and that could explain that," he said of the survey.

"I wish we could go down there and be popular," Santiago said. "If the people don't want the law enforced in that area, they should write letters to my supervisors and our headquarters."

DPS officers received 305, or 44 percent, of the excellent ratings handed out while the TABC was second in the excellent category, with 187, while city police had 129 and park police 134.

However, the TABC got 22, or about half, of the "very poor" ratings given among the total interviewees. Seventeen of those "very poor" ratings came from spring-breakers, some of whom had been arrested by TABC agents.

On the other hand, Clearman said the DPS got high marks, even from at least one young man who had been ticketed by the state troopers for speeding.

Among criticism of TABC agents was they were "rude, pushy and did not treat them (students) like human beings. To get a bad rating, you have to do something to get them on your bad side," Clearman said.

Though total results are not in, Clearman said the police agency mentioned most in a negative way by older island visitors, including winter Texans, was the Los Fresnos Police Department, which patrols Texas 100 through its city, which is known as a speed trap.

'Wheel of Fortune' spins player into 'double jeopardy'

GARLAND (AP) — Being a wheel watcher put D.J. Smith's game show winnings in jeopardy and left him spinning.

Smith, a 55-year-old business analyst, appeared on two Merv Griffin-produced game shows in less than three months, winning on $5,000 on "Jeopardy" and $1,200 on "Wheel of Fortune."

But "Jeopardy" officials, citing network rules that prohibit contestants from appearing on game shows more than once a year, gave him only $1,000 and banned him from ever coming back.

"I feel like I'm in double jeopardy," Smith said Monday. "They won't give me my money, and they won't let me be on the show again."

A representative for "Jeopardy" invited Smith to Los Angeles in January to play in a special seniors "Jeopardy" tournament.

Smith said he told her: "That's great! I was just on the "Wheel of Fortune" a little while ago."

Smith won $1,200 for his "Wheel of Fortune" effort in November.

Smith said he again mentioned his earlier game show appearance when he filled out a registration form for "Jeopardy." Game show officials said nothing, he said.

After winning $1,000 on "Jeopardy," representatives from the show approached him and said his appearance on "Wheel" disqualified him for the next round, which carried an automatic prize of $5,000.

School's demand for dead animal stirs SPCA protest

WYLIE (AP) — A decade-long requirement that advanced biology students at Wylie High School either kill a live animal or acquire a dead one for a lab project has drawn criticism from a parent and the Collin County Humane Society.

School Superintendent Don Whitt says the district will re-evaluate the class project although the practice has gone unchallenged for 10 years.

"It's already over now," Whitt said. "We're going to restudy the program for next year."

Juniors and seniors enrolled in Biology II have been assigned to find or purchase an animal to create a "bone mount," a project that requires them to skin and debone their choice of a wild or domestic creature.

Whitt said the students then reassemble the skeleton, which is intended to teach them about various skeletal anatomies.

Wylie High School principal Robert Shirley said students are advised to get chickens or rabbits from local breeders, but are allowed to make their choice with their parents' consent.

Shirley said this year, the variety of animals included three dead cats — one of which was hit by a car in front of a student's house — and a guinea pig bought from a local pet store.

The mother of the student who bought the guinea pig complained to the school and the Humane Society after her son was troubled by killing the animal for the project.

The 16-year-old bought the guinea pig after he failed to get a dead animal from the local animal pound or by hunting one on the family's 10 acres, she said.

"I'm very concerned about the project," said the boy's mother, who asked not to be named. "There must be some way to get the animals without placing all that responsibility on the student."

Collin County Humane Society president Jennifer Golden demanded that the school district stop the practice or contract with a commercial vendor to provide animal specimens.

"Our recommendation is that they eliminate the student completely from the process to eliminate the possibility of disease and the moral issue of instructing a student to kill or have killed a healthy animal strictly for this lab project," Ms. Golden said.

"The principal told me the parent is over-reacting," Ms. Golden said. "Can you imagine if you were a child and this assignment was bothering you?"

The mother said she complained after her son expressed reservations about the project.

"He said all he could think of doing was drowning the animal," she said.

Platoon rescues woman

EL PASO (AP) — A Mexican woman found near death after spending six days lost in the desert will be turned over to the U.S. Border Patrol when she recovers, officials said.

Maria Terragas, 34, was rescued Sunday morning on the McGregor Firing Range about 17 miles south of Orogrande, N.M., by a platoon of New Mexico National Guardsman who stumbled onto her while on maneuvers.

She was suffering from sunburn and dehydration, said 2nd Lt. Robert T. Nevarez, the National Guard platoon leader.

Sgt. 1st Class Jack Walker, who administered first aid to Ms. Terragas, said the woman weighed about 90 pounds when she was found.

Two die in botched holdup

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man attempting to rob a service station early today fatally shot the store manager, wounded a clerk and a customer and then killed himself as police moved in to arrest him in an open field, authorities said.

The confrontation began about 3:45 a.m. when a man walked into the Gulfstar Gas-and-Go service station on the city's southeast side, said officer Tom Smith.

The man brandished a weapon and demanded money from a night manager. He was attempting to herd the manager, a female employee and a male customer into a back room when the manager resisted and was shot, Smith said.

As the gunman was fleeing the store, he shot the clerk in the shoulder and the customer in the back, Smith said.

Police arrived a few minutes later and one of the victims gave the man's description to police, who broadcast it on law enforcement channels.

City income tax possible

AUSTIN (AP) — A home-rule city in Texas could impose an income tax if authorized to do so by its charter, the Texas Legislative Council says.

In response to a question from Rep. Bob Richardson, R-Austin, the legislative council said state law "allows a home-rule city to impose any tax authorized by state law or by the city charter and not prohibited by state law."

State law does not prohibit the imposition of an income tax by a city. Richardson said Tuesday he is drafting state legislation to forbid municipal income taxes.

The specificity required in a city charter for an income tax to be allowed is in question, and there do not appear to be any Texas legal cases addressing the point, said Jeff Archer, a council lawyer, in a letter to Richardson.

Panamanian market chains reopen stores

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The nation's three largest supermarket chains reopened their stores today, signaling a major rupture in a 10-day general strike aimed at toppling strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The government announced that the nation's banks, closed since March 3 because of a cash shortage brought on by U.S. economic sanctions, would reopen Thursday with limited service.

It announced tight restrictions on withdrawals from savings and checking accounts.

The Gago, Rey and Super 99 markets in the capital were doing brisk business after Panamanians rushed to buy food and essentials that have been virtually unattainable.

The weakening of the strike came two days after a harsh crackdown on leaders of the National Civic Crusade, which is leading the anti-Noriega fight. More than 20 crusade directors were arrested Monday in a raid by soldiers and state security agents. Most were detained overnight, then released.

Owners of the reopened stores could not be reached for comment. Crusade leaders, who vowed to continue the strike until Noriega left Panama, have been reluctant to talk since their arrests. Some of those not detained were said to be in hiding.

The Roman Catholic church Tuesday joined opposition leaders in calling for Noriega's resignation. But Noriega, leader of the 15,000-member Defense Forces and the power behind the civilian government, said Tuesday night he had no intention of stepping down.

"Here, it is not one man who is the problem," said Noriega, who blames his problems on what he considers a U.S. slander campaign against him. "This is a matter of dignity and conviction involving the entire hemisphere."

In a speech to delegates of a Solidarity With Panama conference in the capital, Noriega condemned the presence of the U.S. helicopter carrier Okinawa on the Pacific end of the Panama Canal. It passed through the canal Tuesday on its way to its home port, San Diego.

The U.S. Defense Department said in Washington that the passage was "routine." But Noriega called it "a threat and an aggression." There was no immediate indication how long the vessel would stay in the area.

Noriega claimed the United States had spent more than $100 million in the effort to topple him. "But with all the gold in the world they have not been able to bring this people or this commander or these Defense Forces to their knees," he said, shaking his fist to wild applause.

Delegates from about 25 Latin American and Caribbean countries attended the conference, but few represented governments. About 400 spectators were on hand in the convention center.

Noriega's forces used a harsh irritant sprayed from water cannons, tear gas and birdshot to break up a march Monday by 10,000 anti-government protesters. Many people were beaten with rubber hoses and dozens were arrested.

Almost all those detained were released by Tuesday. But Carlos Gonzalez de la Lastra, a top leader of the opposition National Civil Crusade, was still held at a military intelligence center early today.

He had not been allowed access to a lawyer or visits by family members.

"We're worried. We have been told by sources in the Defense Forces that he has been beaten," his wife Vilma, told The Associated Press.

Gonzalez de la Lastra apparently was not released with the others because he had been out on bond on a previous sedition charge.

A church spokesman told a news conference on Tuesday that Panama City Archbishop Monsignor Marcos McGrath contacted Noriega and the opposition and the archbishop had "a positive impression" about prospects for mediation.

But the spokesman, auxiliary Archbishop Mons. Oscar Brown, said there's still a lot to be done, "and because of that we cannot have an excessive optimism."

In a statement, the church said a committee of bishops met with Noriega last week and asked him "to separate himself from his position as soon as possible." The statement said Noriega failed to respond to the request.

This critical phase of Panama's 10-month-old political and economic crisis began Feb. 26, when Noriega orchestrated the ouster of President Eric Delvalle. Hours earlier, Delvalle had tried to fire Noriega, who has been indicted in the United States on drug-trafficking charges.

Military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega told a crowd gathered at a Solidarity for Panama Conference that he would not be brought down by what he claimed was an imperialist plot against him.

South African offices bombed

PARIS (AP) — A bomb exploded early today near the South African Embassy in Paris after demonstrations protesting the killing of an African National Congress spokeswoman. No injuries were reported.

In the southern port city of Marseille, at least six gunshots were fired Tuesday night at the windows of a building in front of the South African Consulate. The gunmen fled in a car and no arrests were made.

The bomb, which caused only minor damage, exploded about 3 a.m. in Paris at an office building a few blocks from the South African Embassy. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the bombing.

The explosion occurred a few hours after police arrested more than 80 demonstrators who broke into the South African Tourism Office and protested outside the residence of the South African ambassador in Paris.

They were protesting the slaying of Dulcie September, 45, the ANC representative to France, Switzerland and Luxembourg who was found dead Tuesday outside the door of her Paris office from a gunshot to the face.

Police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said at the time that the killing looked like "the work of a professional."

The ANC, the main guerrilla group fighting white domination in South Africa, blamed Pretoria for the killing. The South African government denied responsibility and said the attack was related to strife within the ANC, which was banned by South Africa in 1960 for its anti-apartheid activities.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said on Tuesday that no claim of responsibility had been received.

In Marseille, the gunshots were fired late Tuesday night at the windows of a building in front of the South African Consulate. The building was painted with the slogan, "Botha, assassin, SS." The slogan was apparently referring to South African President P.W. Botha.

In Paris, 41 protestors were arrested Tuesday night after breaking into the tourism office after it had closed and smashing the interior. Two officers and a French journalist were slightly injured in the scuffle to eject the protesters from the office.

Forty-six demonstrators were arrested Tuesday night outside the residence of the South African ambassador in Paris for painting anti-apartheid slogans on the wall of the building. Police identified the protesters as young leftists who supported the ANC and all but four were released overnight.

Earlier, at least 1,000 people marched peacefully in separate protests of the killing in Paris.

President Francois Mitterrand said he would ask South Africa about the attack and reaffirmed his "condemnation of the regime of racial segregation."

A colleague of Ms. September's claimed that the victim had requested protection from the Interior Ministry after receiving threats. She also said she had been followed for several days.

The Interior Ministry denied she had requested protection.

"We were never called on for the least demand for protection," a spokeswoman said. "If she had asked, we would have given it to her."

Iraqi planes fire missile into Cypriot tanker

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi warplanes attacked a Cypriot tanker off Iran's coast today and Iranian rebels said their forces killed 2,000 of Ayatollah Khomeini's Revolutionary Guards in a two-day battle in southwestern Iran.

In another development, the Kuwaiti Defense Ministry said Kuwaiti forces clashed today with three Iranian gunboats that had opened fire on Kuwait's Bubiyan Island in the northern end of the Persian Gulf.

And Iran said its warplanes dropped 10 tons of bombs on an northern Iraqi provincial capital.

The "war of the cities" also continued today. Iraq said it fired three long-range missiles into the central Iranian city of Isfahan, ancient capital of the Persian empire.

The Iraqi-backed National Liberation Army of Iran said in a communique telexed from its headquarters in Baghdad that an assault force of 15 brigades has withdrawn back across the border after a two-day offensive into Iran's oil-rich southwestern Khuzestan province.

The NLA, fighting to topple Khomeini's Islamic regime, claimed its forces, including two battalions of women fighters sent into combat for the first time, also wounded 1,500 Iranian troops and captured 508. NLA losses were listed as 30 killed and 92 wounded.

The rebels claimed they captured or destroyed Iranian equipment including 17 Korean War-vintage U.S.-built M-47 tanks, armored vehicles and rocket launchers worth an estimated $100 million.

The rebels said their force, estimated at several thousand fighters, was spearheaded by an armored brigade, the first time the NLA has used tanks since it began assaulting Iranian positions 13 months ago.

The Baghdad communique said the NLA fighters decimated nine battalions of Iran's 77th Khorassan Division in the fighting south of the garrison city of Dezful.

In the tanker war, Iraqi jets fired a missile into the Cypriot supertanker Anax today, setting its engine room on fire but causing no casualties, shipping executives reported.

The London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said the 259,447-ton vessel was hit in an Iraqi air raid, although Baghdad had not reported any ship attack today.

The official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said Iraqi planes hit two tankers off Iran Tuesday night. There was no confirmation of those attacks.

The Anax, which was also hit by Iraqi warplanes Dec. 2, was attacked south of Iran's big Kharg island oil terminal in the northern Gulf with a full load of oil. It was on charter to the National Iranian Tanker Co.

Both sides have resumed the "tanker war" in the last two weeks, hitting about a dozen vessels. Two Iranian tankers were set ablaze in an Iraqi air raid on Kharg March 19, killing at least 50 seamen.

Nearly 300 ships have been attacked by both sides since 1981 and nearly 300 seamen killed.

In other action today, Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia, reported that a squadron of Iranian fighter-bombers attacked three "important military garrisons" in Sulaimaniyeh city, an Iraqi provincial capital in the northeastern mountains.

The communique said dozens of people were killed in the attacks, in which the regional state-run radio and television headquarters was also hit.

The radio said eight warplanes dropped 10 tons of bombs, including one half-ton bomb, on the targets. It was one of the heaviest bombing raids by Iran's badly depleted air force reported in a year.

First City suitors alter terms of deal

By THOMAS C. HAYES
New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Embroiled with Wall Street arbitragers who continue to balk at its terms, the group bidding to acquire the ailing First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. Tuesday reduced the percentage of bondholders who must approve its $1.5 billion offer to 70 percent, from 90 percent.

The group headed by A. Robert Abboud, the Chicago investor, had received 62 percent of the outstanding debt at 5 p.m., Eastern time, when their offer had been scheduled to expire. It extended the deadline Tuesday for a third time, to 5 p.m. April 12.

In agreeing to the new terms, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. now must wait longer before it can begin collecting up to $100 million from First City's bad loans, which are to be spun off into a new "collecting" bank once the purchase is completed.

The reason is that $44 million, or 20 percent of the total of First City's $220 million in outstanding debt, will not be retired by the Abboud group. Instead, the money must be collected from liquidations of bad loans, Abboud said.

Professional traders and arbitragers acquired millions of First City bonds at deep discounts over the last several months in hopes of being among the 10 percent permitted in the Abboud offer to remain as bondholders after the Abboud bid was completed.

In that case, the bonds would be worth 100 cents on each face dollar amount, compared with 35 cents or 45 cents for bondholders who tendered their debt. Wall Street firms were understood last week to be holding approximately 40 percent of the outstanding debt, or $55 million.

Abboud said he had been spending most of his time trying to persuade more people to tender their bonds. He repeated earlier warnings that the FDIC was ready to operate the bank in various ways that would make First City stock and debt almost worthless if the Abboud plan was rejected.

Abboud said that since the current reorganization was the only open-bank proposal being considered by the FDIC, it was unlikely that debt holders, under an alternative plan, would receive anything for their interests.

Flag-Redfern elects chairman, mulls future direction

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Rosalind Redfern Grover has been elected chairman of the board of the closely-held Flag-Redfern Oil Co., replacing John Redfern III.

The change of leadership came Tuesday at a board of directors meeting and as the result of a difference of opinion on the board about the direction of the company, according to Redfern.

Redfern said he had been opposed to board discussions about a possible sale of the company, first broached at a board meeting two months ago. He said he thought oil prices were too low to consider a sale. "You sell at the top, not the bottom," said Redfern.

"No decision to sell Flag-Redfern has been made," said company president Glenn Brant. "We have discussed a range of options for the future of the company, but it is entirely premature to say that we have decided to sell the company."

Brant did say, however, that he has held exploratory discussions with several investment bankers about the possibility of managing such a sale.

Flag-Redfern Oil Co. was established in 1960 by pioneer oilman John J. Redfern Jr., who purchased Flag Oil Co. of Delaware and merged it with an amalgamation of Redfern companies. Redfern, who came to Midland in 1939, built the highly successful oil company both through exploration and through a series of advantageous acquisitions. The senior Redfern was killed in an automobile accident in 1967.

Today, Flag-Redfern has a payroll of 60-70 employees, operates 600 wells in the Permian Basin, Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma and the Powder River Basin in Wyoming. The company's daily production averages 2,600 barrels of oil per day, and approximately 15 million cubic feet of gas per day.

There are 250 stockholders in the closely-held company including family members.

The company's new chairman, Rosalind Redfern Grover, is the wife of Midland oilman Arden Grover and the eldest daughter of John Redfern Jr.

From Staff and Wire Reports

At midmorning, oil prices had reversed Tuesday's loss, rising 18 cents to stand at $17.16.

Tuesday, oil prices finished mostly lower, snapping a four-day rally as some investors sold futures contracts and took profits.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, settled at $16.98 per 42-gallon barrel Thursday, down 12 cents from Monday's close. All other contract months also lost 12 cents a barrel.

Among refined oil products, the April contract for wholesale heating oil edged down 0.02 cent a gallon to 48.15 cents. Unleaded gasoline for April rose, on the other hand, by 0.24 cent a gallon to 48.26 cents.

Analysts noted that the decline was moderate and prices moved within narrow trading ranges. The selling was led by oil companies, they said.

Prices are "still showing a fair amount of resiliency," said John Azarow, an oil futures trader for Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

The recent strength stems from hopes that the pricing committee of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will achieve an agreement to prop up prices, analysts say. Prices have risen in eight of the last 11 trading sessions on the Mercantile Exchange.

New home sales 'out of dumper'

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Sales of new homes rebounded smartly in February after three straight declines that seemed to be bearing out fears that housing would drag down the nation's economy.

The 20.3 percent jump last month, to an annual rate of 628,000, was somewhat more than expected and the biggest in nearly two years. But analysts remained cautious about the outlook since the drop, particularly in January, was so severe.

"This brings the numbers back out of the dumper," said Martin Regalia, an economist for the National Council of Savings Institutions. "But it only gets us back to something still relatively weak."

House sales appeared to benefit last month from lower interest rates, which by one government index eased to 9.89 percent on conventional 30-year mortgages from 10.43 percent in January. Analysts said the latest figures, along with a recovery in starts of new homes, suggested that consumers had largely shed inhibitions resulting from last fall's stock market dive.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday that the government's main economic forecasting index climbed nine-tenths of 1 percent in February, with the biggest contribution coming from a large increase in building permits.

This rise, which matched most expectations, was noteworthy mainly for "what didn't go up," said Carol A. Stone, senior economist at Nomura Securities International. She said that a decline in the price of materials especially sensitive to the business cycle and quicker deliveries by suppliers provided further reassurance that inflation was not picking up to any worrisome degree.

This, in turn, would help housing by keeping interest rates, which have edged back above 10 percent in the last week or so, from reaching prohibitively high levels.

KKR files to buy 15% of Texaco

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Corporate raider Carl Icahn will not take over Texaco Inc. as the oil giant rebuilds from its battle with Pennzoil, Texaco President James Kinnear said Tuesday.

Icahn is the White Plains, N.Y.-based company's largest shareholder, holding 14.8 percent of its shares, and one of four parties expressing an interest in Texaco, which is to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy court reorganization early next month.

Later on Tuesday, the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. said in New York it will seek federal approval to acquire up to 15 percent of the oil giant's stock.

Stock market regains 18.5 points

NEW YORK (AP) — A stable dollar, lower interest rates and some positive news about the economy helped push the slumping stock market broadly higher Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 18.57 to 1,998.34, after venturing across the 2,000-mark during the afternoon. The closely watched index had lost more than 80 points since Thursday.

The broader market also gained ground Tuesday. About 13 stocks rose in value for every six that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,015 up, 467 down and 482 unchanged.

As measured by Wilshire Associates 500 Equity Index, stocks gained $18.5 billion in value.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 152.69 million shares, higher than the 142.82 million shares that changed hands in the previous session.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 178.58 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index climbed 1.11 to 147.22.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 2.62 to 301.70, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.01 to 260.07.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 294.33, up 2.33. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 372.96, up 2.54.

Uneven rates

Since the Texas Legislature authorized voters to add an optional half-percent sales tax to the local tax rate to cover revenues lost in the downturn more than 82 counties and 54 cities did just that; others did not.

As a result sales tax rates across the state are no longer uniform. While most incorporated cities remain at 7 percent, rates range from 6-8 percent.

This map shows how tax rates in a 13-county area of West Texas vary. There is a full percentage point difference between Midland's city and county taxes.

Local option sales tax increases approved by voters in several Texas cities and counties are now in effect. These new optional tax increases have resulted in varying sales tax rates, between 6% and 8%, throughout the state.

This is a list of new rates for area cities and counties. Area cities and counties that are not listed keep current rates.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Federated to weigh final merger offers

NEW YORK (AP) — Federated Department Stores Inc., seeking to end a 2-month-old takeover war, plans to weigh final offers by the two companies that want to buy the retailer.

One of its suitors, Campeau Corp., immediately objected Tuesday to the guidelines for choosing a winner, but a federal judge rebuffed its attempt to block Federated's plan. The deadline for bids is Wednesday.

In a letter to Campeau and R.H. Macy & Co. Inc., Federated said its board would choose the "best proposal" from the final purchase offers. Campeau and Macy have each offered to buy Federated for more than $6 billion.

Odyssey sweetens bid for J.P. Stevens

NEW YORK (AP) — Odyssey Partners has sweetened its tender offer for J.P. Stevens & Co. to $1.14 billion, but analysts predicted further bidding in the battle for the textile giant.

West Point-Pepperell Inc., which has made a $1.1 billion bid for Stevens, is expected to compete fiercely for the crown jewels — three state-of-the-art factories and licenses for hot designer labels that lure consumers around the world to Stevens' quality sheets and towels.

Odyssey, a New York investment firm, said Tuesday it would pay $64 for each of Stevens' 17.8 million outstanding shares, up from the $61.50-a-share tender offer Stevens' management accepted earlier this month.

Court: Congress singled out Murdoch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress unconstitutionally singled out publisher Rupert Murdoch by prohibiting his continued ownership of newspapers and television stations in the same city, an appeals court says.

A recently enacted provision barring the Federal Communications Commission from extending temporary waivers from its cross-ownership rule is unconstitutional because it "strikes at Murdoch with the precision of a laser beam" without a legitimate purpose, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington ruled Tuesday in a 2-1 opinion.

Murdoch recently sold the New York Post so he could keep a New York television station in compliance with the law, and faces a similar choice in Boston.

WOLFE NURSERY, 127 Northland Shopping Center, has opened an outlet at Midland Park Mall — leasing the garden and patio area from Sears Roebuck.

Assistant Manager Kennie Cosper said the new location carries the same items as the original nursery — and the same guarantee — but on a smaller scale.

She added that the majority of the outlet's customers have been out-of-town shoppers who found the location convenient.

The Federal Communications Commission has assigned a new FM radio channel — Channel 236A — to Midland, and is seeking applications to operate the new radio station.

According to a Nashville radio consultant, any U.S. citizen can submit an application, provided they meet certain basic requirements and have their applications on file with the FCC by April 21. If no one applies for a new channel, it's not likely that channel will be reopened, according to the consultant.

He added that the FCC tends to favor applicants from the area, who do not currently own any other radio station or other type of media, and no experience is required because the FCC encourages new owner-operators to enter the field.

The new station would cover the city of Midland and surrounding area, and be licensed to operate 24 hours a day in stereo.

The Midland New Car Dealers Association has added some horsepower to the Midland-Odessa Health and Retirement Effort (MOHRE).

Texaco Philanthropic Foundation academic scholarships of $1,000 will be awarded to each member of the championship team, and $500 scholarships to each member of the second-place team. In addition, the winning team will receive the Texaco Star Academic Challenge trophy for display at the school.

The challenge will be conducted in late April, and will be broadcast on KMID-TV on May 7 and May 14 at 5 p.m.

Participating high schools include both Midland and both Odessa schools plus Andrews, Coahoma, Fort Stockton, Grady, Kermit and McCamey.

Underground economy creates $87 billion gap

By PAUL FARHI
Hearst News Service

American taxpayers appear to be cheating less on their tax returns, although little white lies still cost the U.S. Treasury billions of dollars each year, says the Internal Revenue Service.

In a new study, the IRS says individual and corporate taxpayers will owe — but not voluntarily pay — an estimated $87.1 billion in income taxes this year, or roughly half the projected federal budget deficit for 1988.

This "tax gap" is largely the result of individuals who understate their income on their returns or fail to file a return at all. Underpayment by corporations is another major factor.

The gap measures unpaid taxes in the regular economy and the legal portion of the "underground" economy, such as moonlighting by carpenters or unlicensed child-care providers. It doesn't include income from the criminal part of the underground economy — drug dealing, gambling, prostitution, etc. — which the IRS admits is impossible to measure and tax.

The government usually recoups a portion of the unpaid taxes after follow-up audits, but an unspecified portion escapes collection, according the agency.

The federal agency says the estimated tax gap for 1988 is only 2.5 percent higher than the 1987 figure, $84.9 billion. However, the 2.5 percent increase is below the rate of inflation and the expansion of the economy's tax base last year.

Moreover, the 1988 projection is 9 percent below tax gap estimates for 1988 ($95 million) and just slightly under the 1985 projection ($87.8 million).

Meanwhile, the voluntary compliance rate has been rising in recent years, an indication that individuals and companies are increasingly likely to fork over what they owe the first time around.

In 1988, the IRS said 81.1 percent of all taxes were voluntarily paid. In 1987, the figure was 83.2, and this year it is projected at 83.6.

"It may be that people are getting a little more honest, but it's partly because we're using computers more and more" to track compliance, said Maria Inchauspe, an IRS spokeswoman. "Some people think they can get away with (non-compliance), but sooner or later they'll find they can't."

In recent testimony before a House subcommittee, IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs said federal tax-law changes in 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1986 have slowed the rate of growth in the tax gap. The changes repealed or limited many deductions, thus minimizing the possibility that taxpayers would overstate these deductions, he said. Also, lower marginal tax rates reduced the tax gap associated with unreported income.

Although the total tax gap is projected to grow to $113.7 billion by 1992, a 30 percent increase over 1988, this increase is less than inflation and economic expansion, the IRS says. The agency estimated that the voluntary compliance rate will be 84.2 percent by 1992, the highest level ever.

"Despite the magnitude of the tax gap, I can't emphasize too strongly that most taxpayers are conscientious, and that the tax system is basically sound and reliable," said Gibbs in his testimony.

He urged Congress not to tamper with the Tax Reform Act of 1986, which improved voluntary compliance by phasing out certain deductions and setting two tax brackets for 1988.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Dividend reinvestment easy stock acquisition

By BILL DOYLE

Q. What is your opinion of "dividend reinvestment and optional additional investment plans?" As I understand such a plan, the idea is to buy one share of stock and then buy additional shares directly from the company.

Doyle

A. I have the highest opinion of dividend reinvestment plans, especially those with optional additional investment features. They provide an easy and usually inexpensive way to acquire stock.

With most stocks, you must make your initial purchase through a broker. As a percentage basis, the commission on just one share might be awfully high. Depending on the brokerage firm, the commission on 100 shares might be the same as on one share.

Once you own stock in a company with a dividend reinvestment plan, you simply sign up to participate in the plan. From that point on, every dividend on your stock is automatically used to buy more full and fractional shares — to the third or fourth decimal place in most plans.

Through this process, the number of shares you own increases with every reinvestment. Each dividend check you reinvest is larger — even if the company never raises its per share dividend.

Straight dividend reinvestment plans are great. When such a plan has an optional additional investment feature, its's even better.

That feature allows a shareholder participating in the dividend reinvestment plan to send in checks to buy still more shares. Typically, the maximum optional additional investment is about $5,000 every three months. But that varies from plan to plan.

In most plans the charge for each purchase is either small or nonexistent — certainly lower than a brokerage commission. Some companies permit dividend reinvestments and/or optional additional investments at discounts from the stocks' going market price.

Q. My wife and I, retired in our early seventies, own stocks from which we receive a $122 dividend check quarterly. We can get by without that dividend payment. Do you feel we should join the company's dividend reinvestment plan?

A. I don't. I have always felt that retired folks should spend their money. My blue-eyed finance officer and I participate in dividend reinvestment plans but, when retirement time rolls around, we'll start taking our dividends by check.

Q. I am in the process of selling some — not all — of the shares in my dividend reinvestment account. How do I handle this for tax purposes?

A. Use the "identified share" method. Instruct the dividend reinvestment plan agent, which is either the company itself or a bank, to sell the shares you acquired through dividend reinvestment on certain dates or from one date to another.

Every time you reinvested or made an optional additional investment, you received a statement listing the number of shares purchased, the per share price and the total amount reinvested. At year-end, you received a summary statement showing all transactions for 12 months.

Let's hope you hung on to your year-end statements. You'll need them to pick the shares you want to sell and to figure your cost — the amount of reinvested dividends. If you didn't keep those statements, get copies from the plan agent.

The difference between the cost — your "basis" — of the shares and the amount you receive from the sale will be a capital gain.

Q. I intend to sell stock I have in a dividend reinvestment plan. The company will either sell the shares for me or issue a stock certificate to me so that I can sell. Which way should I go?

A. Let the company sell the stock for you. The cost for selling that way is virtually certain to be lower than the commission you would pay if you had a certificate issued in your name and sold the shares through a broker.

for a specific buyer — was broadly spread. The South posted a 42.9 percent seasonally adjusted advance, while the increases in the Northeast and Middle West were 29.2 percent and 18.2 percent, respectively.

But the West showed a 7.1 percent decline, a result that analysts said was somewhat puzzling because of independent reports of strength in the huge California market.

"I think we'll see some pretty good numbers in this home-buying season," said Mark H. Obrinsky, an economist at the U.S. League of Savings Institutions. "But this doesn't mean we're in a housing boom." He said it was possible that there would be 650,000 new houses sold this year, not far under the 671,000 level of 1987 but a level not reached since October.

The latest figures also showed that if new houses continued to sell at the February rate it would take 7.1 months to exhaust the current inventory, down from an exceptionally high 8.7 months in January.

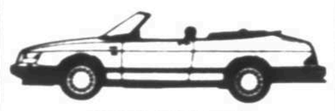

The median price of new homes sold last month was $110,800, down from $118,000, while the average price fell to $139,000 from $145,700 in January. Although these figures are volatile, Stone said they implied that the rise in unit sales was aided by price cuts or by a greater concentration of buyers' interest in the less-expensive homes.

While February's 628,000 sales rate compared favorably with the abysmally weak 522,000 revised rate in January, sales last month were still 14.9 percent below the 738,000 rate of February 1987, according to Tuesday's joint release by the Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

AN EASTER EGG HUNT CELEBRATION

Now that the last colorful egg has been discovered the youngsters are ready to enjoy their new-found treasures and your homemade treats.

These yummy Easter goodies featuring Chocolate Candies will help make your egg hunt a pleasure for everyone. The kids will have great fun finding the dyed eggs and hidden treats. Friends, parents (and grandparents) can share not only in the joys of the kids' discoveries, but in these festive Easter treats as well.

The colored chocolate candies add springtime sparkle to your table as edible decorations and crunchy ingredients in these home-baked treats. The Funny Bunnies and Lemony Easter Egg Cookies can also be carefully wrapped and tucked into appropriate hiding places for the hunt. The Decorative Easter Egg Cake makes a great centerpiece. Carrot Cake Squares, Floppy Crispy Bars, and Easter Egg Hunt Bars are delicious and colorful treats that add spark to this Easter celebration.

As spring approaches, enjoy this traditional prelude to its arrival. To add a seasonal touch, present each guest with a fresh flower. We hope these treats and ideas will make this Easter a very special time for you, your family and friends.

TIPS FOR THE EASTER EGG HUNT

- Hide a variety of Easter specialties: traditional dyed eggs, these homemade treats and individual bags of Chocolate Candies.
- Wrap cookies individually and loosely in plastic wrap. For cookies with frosting, bring the wrap up over the cookie and tie with a ribbon.
- Have a prize for the child who finds the egg with a "special" design.
- Consider the ages of the children as you plan hiding places.
- Remember to keep the hunt more fun than competitive. Each participant should be encouraged to feel each "find" is a special one.
- Be prepared to go inside if the weather doesn't cooperate.

CARROT CAKE SQUARES

Cake:
⅓ cup vegetable oil
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
⅓ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 carrots, grated (about 1½ cups)
½ cup uncooked quick oats
Topping*:
½ cup flour
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
Dash ground cinnamon
1 cup Plain Chocolate Candies

Preheat oven to 350°. To make cake, beat together oil and 1 cup brown sugar until smooth; beat in eggs. Stir in ⅓ cup flour blended with baking powder, baking soda, salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon and nutmeg. Stir in carrots; then oats. Spread into a greased 13 x 9-inch baking pan.

Bake at 350° for 25 minutes. Meanwhile, combine ½ cup flour, ¼ cup brown sugar, the butter and dash cinnamon until crumbly. Sprinkle over cake and top with candies. Bake an additional 15 minutes or until cake starts to bake away from the sides of the pan. Remove to wire rack to cool. Cut into squares to serve. Makes one 13 x 9-inch cake.

*For a Frosted Carrot Cake, omit the topping; baking cake for 40 minutes. When cake is cool, spread with favorite cream cheese frosting and decorate with Plain or Peanut Chocolate Candies.

DECORATIVE EASTER EGG CAKE

1 package (about 18.5 oz.) cake mix, any flavor
Ingredients per cake package directions
2 cans (16 oz. ea.) creamy white frosting, tinted pastel colors if desired
1 cup Plain Chocolate Candies

Preheat oven to 350°. Prepare cake mix batter according to package directions. Pour 3 cups batter into greased and floured 9-inch round cake pan. Pour remaining batter into 4 or 5-cup greased and floured metal bowl.

Bake round layer at 350° for 30 to 35 minutes; bake bowl for 40 to 45 minutes or until cake tests done. Let cakes cool on wire rack 10 minutes. Loosen edges from sides and invert onto wire rack to cool completely.

To form the egg cake, invert the bowl shape onto the 9-inch round aligning top edge. Trim 9-inch layer on each side from edge of bowl towards the bottom of the round layer, leaving a 4-inch wide bottom edge. Trim the side scraps to fit on the top of 9-inch layer, below the bowl. Once the shapes are cut, disassemble. Place the bottom layer on a serving plate. Cover bottom layer with some frosting; sprinkle with ½ cup candies. Re-assemble cake, using frosting to hold shapes in place. Cover completely with frosting. If desired, using a pastry bag fitted with a star tip, pipe frosting around the base of the cake and decorate with additional Plain or Peanut Chocolate Candies. Makes one 2-layer cake.

FLOPPY CRISPY BARS

¼ cup butter or margarine
1 package (10 oz.) regular marshmallows OR 4 cups miniature marshmallows
6 cups crisp rice cereal
1 cup Plain Chocolate Candies
2 squares (1 oz. ea.) semi-sweet chocolate
1½ cups Peanut Chocolate Candies

Over low heat in large saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add half the marshmallows and stir until melted. Remove from heat; stir in 3 cups cereal until well coated; stir in plain chocolate candies. With greased spatula evenly press into a well greased 13 x 9-inch pan; set aside.

In same pan, melt remaining butter with semi-sweet chocolate. Add remaining marshmallows, stirring until smooth. Remove from heat; stir in remaining cereal until well coated; stir in peanut chocolate candies. With greased spatula evenly press over first layer. Cool completely. Cut into squares to serve. Makes one 13 x 9-inch pan of bars.

LEMONY EASTER EGGS

6 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
⅔ cup sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons lemon peel
1⅓ cups flour
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 can (16 oz.) creamy white frosting, tinted pastel colors if desired
½ cup Plain Chocolate Candies

Beat butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in egg, lemon juice and peel. Stir in flour mixed with baking powder and salt until dough forms. Flatten into a round and wrap in plastic wrap. Chill several hours until firm.

On floured board, roll dough ¼-inch thick. Cut into egg shapes with oval cookie cutter. Place on ungreased cookie sheet and bake at 400° for 7 to 8 minutes or until edges are just starting to brown. Remove cookies to wire rack to cool. Spread or pipe frosting onto cookies and decorate with candies. Makes about 15 4-inch cookies.

Recipe may be doubled.

EASTER EGG HUNT BARS

¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup brown sugar
¾ cup light or dark corn syrup
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup Peanut Chocolate Candies

Preheat oven to 350°. Beat butter and sugar together until light and fluffy; gradually beat in corn syrup. Beat in egg and vanilla. Stir in flour mixed with baking soda and salt. Spread evenly into 15 x 10 jelly roll pan.

Bake at 350° for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with half the candies. Bake an additional 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Immediately press in remaining candies. Remove to wire rack to cool. Cut into squares to serve. Makes one 15 x 10-inch pan bars.

FUNNY BUNNIES

2 cups brown sugar
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups uncooked quick oats
1½ cups Plain Chocolate Candies

Preheat oven to 350°. Beat sugar and butter until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs and milk. Stir in flour mixed with baking soda and salt. Stir in oats and 1 cup candies.

To form bunnies, drop a rounded teaspoon of dough onto ungreased cookie sheet to form body. Just above the body, but not touching, drop a rounded ½ teaspoon of dough for the head. Add two small strips of dough just above the head for the ears.*

Bake at 350° for 8 minutes. Press additional Plain Chocolate Candies into each cookie for the ears and tail. Bake an additional 5 to 7 minutes or until golden. Let stand on cookie sheet 1 minute. Remove cookies to wire rack to cool completely. Makes about 4 dozen bunnies.

*Cookies can also be baked in simple round shapes. Drop rounded teaspoonfuls of dough onto baking sheet.

Brunch breads add flavor to Easter festivities

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

Of all the major holidays, Easter seems the most conducive to brunch.

You could argue that it's because brunch is a natural climax to this most church-oriented of holidays. Or that the almost always sunny skies invite an early start to the day's celebrating. Personally, I think it's the irresistible attraction of all those breakfast-oriented baked goods.

How often do you get to indulge in warm and wonderful yeast breads and brioches, fruit-and-nut-filled coffee cakes, paper-thin pastries or soft, tender rolls?

The recipes that follow offer a little bit of the traditional, the whimsical and the just plain irresistible.

PORTUGUESE EASTER BREAD

5 to 6 cups all-purpose flour
2 packages quick-rise yeast
⅔ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 cup milk
½ cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 eggs
¾ cup golden raisins
2 uncooked eggs

In large mixer bowl, combine 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, salt and lemon peel; mix well. In saucepan, heat milk, butter and lemon juice until very warm (120 degrees F to 130 degrees F; butter does not need to melt.) Add to flour mixture, add eggs. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed.

By hand, gradually stir in raisins and enough remaining flour to make firm dough. Knead on floured surface 5 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 30 minutes.

Punch down dough. Set aside a dough ball about 3 inches in diameter. Divide remaining dough into 2 parts; shape each half into round loaf. Place in greased 8-inch cake pans. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 25 minutes.

Place an uncooked egg in middle of each loaf. Press down gently to keep in place. From dough ball, make four ropes about 9 inches long and form a cross over each egg. Bake at 375 degrees F for 40-45 minutes until golden brown, remove from pans; cool.

CARROT BUNNY BREAD

5½ cups all-purpose flour
2 cups grated carrots, at room temperature
¾ cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages quick-rise yeast
1 cup water
⅔ cup milk
3 tablespoons margarine or butter
1 egg, beaten
Raisins

Set aside 1 cup flour. In large bowl, mix remaining flour, carrots, walnuts, sugar, salt and yeast.

In saucepan over low heat, heat water, milk and margarine or butter until hot to touch (125 degrees F to 130 degrees F); stir in dry mixture. Mix in only enough reserved flour to make soft dough. On lightly floured surface, knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Cover; let rise 10 minutes.

Divide dough in half; set half aside. Divide remaining half into 2 equal pieces. Form one piece into a round ball. Place on lower half of greased baking sheet. Flatten into smooth, round ball. Divide remaining piece in half.

From one half, break off a small ball about the size of a cherry, to be used as a nose. Shape remainder into smooth round ball and place above large piece on baking sheet to form a head; flatten slightly, attach nose.

Divide remaining dough into 4 equal pieces. Shape 2 pieces into 4-inch-long rolls, tapered at one end, for ears; attach to head, sealing seams. Shape 2 remaining pieces into 4-inch-long rolls for arms, seal to body and bring across stomach. Cover loosely with towel. Place large shallow pan on counter; half fill with boiling water. Place baking sheet over pan; let dough rise 20 minutes. Repeat with reserved dough.

Make indentation in each ear. Brush surface of bread with beaten egg. Use raisins for eyes and mouth. Bake at 400 degrees F for 25 to 30 minutes or until done; remove from sheet, cool on wire rack.

STAR HAZELNUT RING

1 recipe basic sweet dough (recipe follows)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1 egg yolk blended with 1 tablespoon milk for glaze
Filling:
1⅓ cups ground hazelnuts
¾ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon almond extract

Prepare basic sweet dough through first rising. Grease large baking sheet. Punch down dough. Roll out dough to an 18x14-inch rectangle. Brush with butter or margarine.

To make filling: In small bowl, combine all ingredients; stir until blended. Spread over dough. Starting on long side, roll up dough jelly-roll fashion. Pinch seams to seal. Place on greased baking sheet, seam side down, make a ring. Punch ends together to seal. Use razor blade to cut 8 connected "V's," making 16 diagonal lines around outside curve of ring. This will carve an 8-point star around center of ring.

Cover; let rise in warm place, free from drafts, until doubled in bulk. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Brush with egg yolk glaze. Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until browned. Remove from baking sheet; cool on wire rack.

BASIC SWEET DOUGH

1 (¼-ounce) package active dry yeast (1 tablespoon)
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ cup warm water (110 degrees F)
¼ cup butter or margarine, room temperature
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk, scalded
1 egg, beaten
About 2¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 egg white blended with 1 tablespoon water for glaze

In large bowl, combine yeast, 1 teaspoon sugar and water. Let stand until foamy, 5 to 10 minutes.

In small bowl, combine butter or margarine, ¼ cup sugar, salt and milk; cool to room temperature. Stir milk mixture into yeast mixture. Add egg and 2 cups flour; beat vigorously, stir in enough remaining flour to make stiff dough.

Turn dough onto a lightly floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic, 8 to 10 minutes. Clean and grease bowl; place dough in greased bowl, turning to coat all sides. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from drafts, until doubled in bulk, grease large baking sheet, punch down dough.

Buttermilk improves texture of vegetable quiche

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Even if you think you don't like the taste of buttermilk, you'll enjoy this quiche. Buttermilk gives a rich, creamy texture without the calories of light cream or whole milk. A cup of buttermilk has 100 calories — the same as a glass of 1-percent milk — and just as much protein and calcium.

BUTTERMILK QUICHE

1 (9-inch) frozen unbaked deep-dish pastry shell
3 slightly beaten eggs
1 cup buttermilk
Dash pepper
1 cup drained cooked vegetables or one 8-ounce can mixed vegetables, drained
1 cup shredded American cheese (4 ounces)
⅓ cup diced fully cooked ham or Canadian-style bacon
¼ cup sliced green onion

Line pastry shell with double thickness of heavy-duty foil. Bake in 450-degree oven for 5 minutes. Remove foil. Bake 5 to 7 minutes more or until pastry is nearly done. Remove from oven. Reduce oven temperature to 325 degrees.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl combine eggs, buttermilk and pepper. Stir in vegetables, cheese, ham and onion. Pour mixture into hot pastry shell. Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until a knife inserted near center comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Cindi's Seafood Tips

This week's tip is something a lot of you will turn your nose up at, but poached fish can be quite delicious, if you do it right. It's great if you're on a diet, there's no added fat, and the fish remains moist. The flavors of both the fish and the broth are intensified. The natural fish flavor is enhanced, not disguised.

You'll need a large pot (such as a roaster) with a rack or a fish poacher. Measure the fish at its' thickest point and allow about 9 minutes per inch of thickness for cooking time. Wrap entire fish loosely in a double layer of cheesecloth moistened in the poaching liquid. Allow ten inches of extra cheese cloth on each end to use as handles later. Using a broth of your choice (more on poaching liquids below), immerse fish in boiling broth to almost cover, and bring to a boil again, lowering heat to simmer immediately, so the fish won't break apart.

After removing the fish, let it cool a bit on a rack, still wrapped in cheesecloth to keep it moist. When the fish is cool to the touch, unwrap the cheesecloth carefully.

If you decide to purchase a fish poacher, they come in several sizes. Remember that it has to fit on top of your stove.

Cindi's Poaching Aromatic Broth

In a large pot, combine the following: 8 cups water, ½ cup tarragon vinegar, 2 sliced carrots, 2 sliced onions, 3 stalks chopped celery with leaves, 2 sprigs parsley, 1 bay leaf, 8 peppercorns, ¼ teaspoon whole cloves, 1 pound fish scraps including bones, head, etc. Bring to a boil, then lower heat, cover pot, and simmer for 30 minutes. This will yield about 7 cups of broth. Be sure to strain before using for poaching.

If you have any questions about fish or seafood, or a recipe you'd like to share, please write to Cindi's Seafood Tips, 2800 N. Big Spring, Midland, TX 79701.

WHAT'S COOKING

'Shortcuts' key to tasty cooking

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the fifth article in a series of interviews with members of the Women's Council of Realtors.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Ella Barnett, real estate broker with Chaparral Realtors, has been in the real estate business since 1966. She is a past president and a current advisory board member of the Midland chapter of Women's Council of Realtors, past president of Midland Board of Realtors and past chairman of all its committees, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce M-Squad for two years and has been named Outstanding Member of Midland Chamber of Commerce M-Squad.

She also, with her husband C.P., has raised four children and has dealt with all the demands of both her careers — businesswoman and mother.

"Believe it or not, realtors are good cooks," she said. "We know all the shortcuts. I mean, we have to juggle our families, too."

Many of her favorite shortcuts in the kitchen revolve around her appliances. "I love convenient things," Ms. Barnett said. "I use my food processor, my blender and all those good little things. With my processor I can make a pizza crust in a flash."

Her most-used appliance, however, is her freezer. "I'm a saver," she said. "I use my freezer to save odds and ends ..." The family's annual garden is the source of most of their produce such as green peppers and peas. She often freezes some of the produce for later use.

"I even freeze tomatoes," Ms. Barnett added. "I slice them and put them on a sheet, quick-freeze them then slide them in freezer bags."

In fact, Ms. Barnett said her freezer is a bigger convenience than her microwave oven. "I don't use the microwave as much as I do my time-cook oven. I don't cook in my microwave."

But she does cook. "I don't always go by recipes, but if I see a good recipe then I can't wait to try it," Ms. Barnett said. "All recipes come from somewhere — friends, magazines — and you keep the ones you like."

Her favorite recipes include casseroles and "bridge desserts," which she said could be "colorful, gooey cakes and pies, or refrigerator dishes. All hostesses try to come up with a new recipe."

A dish she enjoys preparing during the produce season doesn't really have a name. "During the garden fresh vegetable period, I take chopped green pepper, green onions, celery, ripe tomatoes, radishes and toss them with cottage cheese and season with Beau Monde seasoning," Ms. Barnett said. "This is colorful, refreshing and delicious. Beau Monde is found with the seasonings, at grocers' "

Some of her other favorite recipes follow.

Ms. Barnett said the reputation of her Hopkins Country Stew is widespread. "Like the West Texas 'Cook-Off' for chili, this stew is involved in annual 'cook offs' in Sulphur Springs.

Ella Barnett — J.P. Hearn/Reporter-Telegram

HOPKINS COUNTY STEW

3 pounds chicken, cut up
1 pound beef tallow (for flavor) or several strips of bacon
2 cans yellow cream-style corn
2 cans (1 pound each) tomatoes
2 pounds white potatoes, diced
2 pounds onions, diced
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons salt

Combine everything, except corn, with about 1 quart water. Cook for two hours, boiling slowly. Add a little more water when needed. When ready, add corn and let cook for about 5 minutes more. Remove tallow or fat before serving. Taste and add flavor if necessary.

"This one was taken from a magazine article about Barbara Walters," Ms. Barnett said. "I call it Chocolate 'Wa Wa' Macaroons."

CHOCOLATE "WA WA" MACAROONS

1 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
4 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 4-ounce cans shredded coconut
½ cup chopped nuts, preferrably pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Generously grease two large cookie sheets. In top of double boiler, combine condensed milk, chocolate and salt. Cook over hot, not boiling, water, stirring frequently until chocolate melts and mixture thickens, about 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Add vanilla, coconut and nuts. Mix well. Drop rounded teaspoonfuls, 1 inch apart, on cookie sheets. Bake 10 minutes or just until cookies are set. Remove at once with spatula to sheet of waxed paper. Let cool. Makes about 3½ dozen.

SQUASH CASSEROLE

½ cup finely chopped onion
4 tablespoons butter
4 pounds yellow squash
4 tablespoons chopped pimento
1 tablespoon salt
½ tablespoon pepper
2 eggs, well beaten
1½ cups fine bread crumbs

Saute onion in butter until soft. Wash and slice squash, cook in boiling salted water until soft. Drain and mash with potato masher, or put through chopper. Add sauteed onion, bread crumbs, pimento and seasonings. Add eggs and mix thoroughly. Pour into well-buttered casserole dish, dot with extra butter if desired. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

ORIENTAL CHICKEN WINGS

2½ pounds chicken wings with wing tips cut off
⅓ cup soy sauce
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons chili sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon salt

Place chicken wings (without tips) in dish for marinade. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over chicken. Cover and refrigerate 2-4 hours. Drain chicken, reserving marinade. Place chicken in baking dish. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes, brushing occasionally with marinade. Turn chicken and bake additional 30 minutes. Continue brushing. Excellent for appetizers or can be main dish.

Peanut butter adds richness to crumb cake

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

This easy coffee cake reminds me of the old-fashioned crumb cake my mom and grandmom used to make. Peanut butter makes it even more rich and moist. The coffee cake is best served warm, but you can heat a leftover wedge in the microwave oven on 100-percent power (high) for about 15 seconds.

PEANUT CRUMB COFFEE CAKE

1 cup all-purpose flour
¾ cup packed brown sugar
½ cup flaked coconut
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ cup peanut butter
2 tablespoons margarine or butter, softened
½ cup milk
1 egg

In large mixer bowl stir together flour, brown sugar, coconut, baking powder and soda. Add peanut butter and softened margarine. Beat on low speed of electric mixer just until crumbly; set aside ½ cup of mixture. To remaining mixture add milk and egg; beat 3 minutes on medium speed. Pour batter into greased and lightly floured 9x1½-inch round baking pan. Sprinkle reserved crumb mixture over top. Bake in 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until wooden toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Serve warm. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Doctor's confidential files spring big leak

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter a while ago about a woman who had had breast reduction surgery and was upset because pictures of her breasts (before and after) were on file at her doctor's office, and she heard that some of the nurses were snickering about them.

It reminded me of my own experience concerning "confidential medical records." When I was 20, I had an abortion. Seven years later when I was pregnant with my first child, my doctor asked if this was my first pregnancy, so I told him about the abortion.

At one of my early prenatal visits, his nurse walked into the examining room, looked me straight in the eye and said, "So you've decided to keep this one?"

Abby, I was speechless! I'm sorry now that I didn't report her right away to my doctor. Needless to say, never again will I disclose that information on my medical history. Anyone in a doctor's office has access to the patient's records.

Please print this, Abby. I hope that bimbo sees it. And I'd also like to tell her now what I should have said seven years ago: "You don't belong in the nursing profession!" — SPEECHLESS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SPEECHLESS: Since it's still bothering you, tell your doctor now. He ought to know that your right to privacy was violated by nurse so-and-so, and you no longer will disclose your full medical history. I have heard that some physicians record highly confidential information in Latin, Spanish, German or French. Clever? Maybe your doctor should consider it.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your answer to "Life Must Go On" — the woman who wanted to begin dating six months after the death of her husband. You responded that grief is very personal, and no one can presume to make rules for others in that situation.

My husband of five years died, leaving me with a 7-month-old son. I know that some people were shocked when I met a man four months later, and we were married three months after that.

Abby, I adored my first husband. We both knew that he was going to die, and he made me promise to remarry and give our son a good father as soon as possible. I was fortunate enough to meet and fall in love with a wonderful man who is the best father my son (and now our 3-month-old daughter) could hope to have.

Where is it written that one must mourn alone? It took me a long time to deal with my first husband's death. Having someone to love, share my problems with and support me made it possible.

I thank God for having married the two most wonderful men in the world. And thank you for your understanding attitude. — LIFE DOES GO ON

DEAR LIFE: Not everyone thanked me. Many held to the traditional: "Out of respect for the deceased, one should wait a full year before taking company of the opposite sex." But I stand by my answer.

DEAR ABBY: To the person who wrote to alert pet owners to outfit their pets with collars and tags bearing the animal's name and the owner's telephone number — good advice, indeed. But please, do not put the cat or dog's name on an I.D. tag. With dogs especially, it will make it so much easier for someone to steal your beloved companion.

If the dognapper calls the dog by name, the dog will be more apt to follow the stranger to who knows where — cruelty? Experiments? So, a word to the wise: The pet's license number and the owner's address and telephone number are all you need to include. Omit the name. That's between you and your pet! — LISA BARSOTTI, LOS ANGELES

Cooking at high altitudes requires special procedures

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Altitudes above 2,500 feet affect your cooking, especially the time it takes to get foods done. Fortunately, microwave cooking at high altitudes needs fewer recipe adjustments than conventional cooking. If you live at 5,000 feet or higher, these suggestions will help you adjust microwave recipes.

■ Foods that puff, rise or foam may expand more at high altitudes. That means you'll need slightly larger containers for beverage, sauce, soup, cereal, candy, cake and bread recipes than specified in recipes.

■ Because water boils at a lower temperature at high altitudes, you may need to increase the cooking time for foods cooked in liquid, such as vegetables, soups and less tender cuts of meat.

■ Allow 1 to 2 minutes more to cook ground meat until no pink remains. Chicken pieces may need 5 to 9 minutes more.

■ Cakes rise higher than at sea level so use high-sided baking dishes or reduce the amount of batter in the dish. If the batter is thick, fill the dish half full; for light batters fill one-third full. Increase the first baking time (on medium power) by 2 minutes.

■ For package mixes, look for high-altitude microwave directions. If there are none, base your timing on the manufacturers' microwave directions and follow their conventional high-altitude adjustments for ingredient amounts. Or, contact the food manufacturer for specific high-altitude microwave directions.

■ Stir beverages and sauces more frequently to prevent boiling over.

■ A cornstarch- or flour-thickened sauce will bubble before it is properly thickened. Check the thickness at the end of the maximum cooking time and add cooking time, if necessary, until the sauce is thick.

■ Because cooked cereal may bubble over, use a larger-than-usual bowl with a plate underneath. For quick-cooking rice, increase the water by 1 tablespoon for each serving. Cook the rice for 1 to 2 minutes more before letting it stand.

■ Above 7,500 feet rapid evaporation tends to speed cooking, so check foods for doneness before suggested minimum timings. Add an extra tablespoon of liquid to meats and other nonbaked products and cover them tightly.

■ The boiling point above 7,500 feet may be too low to thicken cornstarch-based sauces. Next time try substituting double the amount of flour for the cornstarch.

Passover recipes made by traditional rules

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Passover: If you're Jewish and run a kosher household, this is time for quite a bit of housework and a special Seder menu.

Non-Jews will understand that a holiday means special food, but why the housecleaning? This is, most importantly, to get rid of "chametz" — foods with leavening — which must be removed from the household. Chametz includes any cakes, breads or other baked goods not labeled "Kosher l'Pesach," as well as all grain alcohol products and legumes.

After all the chametz is removed, a thorough housecleaning ensues. This includes scrubbing and lining with paper all countertops and storage areas which are to hold Passover foods. Cooking utensils and appliances are also specially cleaned, or "koshered" — and this includes the microwave oven.

If you have been wondering how to clean your microwave oven for Passover, here's how, according to Zell J. Schulman's "Something Different for Passover," (Triad Publishing Co., 1986): Remove the glass tray and wash it with boiling hot water. (To be strict, you should buy a new one for Passover use only.) Thoroughly wash the inside of the oven and door.

Do not use the appliance for one full day. At the end of this time, place a microwave-safe glass measure filled with 1 cup of water in the microwave and heat on HIGH (100 percent power) until the oven is filled with steam. Your oven is now ready for Passover.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

BOILED NEW POTATOES WITH SOUR CREAM AND CHIVES

1 small clove garlic
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
6 new potatoes with skins on, cut into ½-inch cubes
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
Peel from 1 lemon, minced
1 tablespoon snipped chives
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground pepper
½ cup sour cream

Mince garlic and combine with oil in 2-quart microwave-safe baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, 1 minute on HIGH setting.

Stir in potatoes, parsley, lemon, chives, salt and pepper. Cover with plastic wrap, turning back 1 corner to vent. Microwave on HIGH setting 9 to 11 minutes, or until potatoes are tender.

Stir in sour cream, replace cover, and microwave on MEDIUM setting 3 minutes longer, or until heated through. Remove from oven and let stand 2 minutes before serving.

ASPARAGUS WITH LEMON SAUCE

1 pound fresh asparagus, washed and trimmed
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon potato starch
1 tablespoon cold water
4 tablespoons pareve margarine
1 cup hot water
Juice and grated peel of 1 large lemon

Arrange asparagus in 12x8-inch microwave-safe baking dish (tips should point toward center). Sprinkle with salt and and ¼ cup water. Cover with plastic wrap, turning back 1 corner to vent, and microwave 4 minutes.

Rotate asparagus so that spears along outer edges are in center, and vice versa. Replace cover and microwave 3 to 5 minutes, or until asparagus is crisp-tender. Let stand, covered, for 3 minutes.

While asparagus microwaves, prepare sauce conventionally. In small saucepan mix potato starch with 1 tablespoon cold water. Add margarine and cook over medium heat, stirring until it begins to thicken. Gradually stir in 1 cup hot water.

Add lemon juice and grated peel, and stir until well blended. (Makes 1½ cups). Serve over microwave-steamed asparagus.

For those at home alone, cooking can be chore

By NATHALIE DUPREE
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Perhaps you know him. He may live down the street or in the apartment upstairs from you. You may see him at the local pancake house, or the restaurant that offers a complete dinner for $4 — before 4 p.m. He's one of the more than 8 million individuals 65 and older who live alone. He could be any race, any religion, rich or poor.

My father, an octogenarian, has written me a long letter — four tightly packed handwritten pages, which show much effort and thought. Until recently, he had a wife who did the grocery shopping, prepared the major meal each day. Now, she's gone. He's not much interested in cooking from scratch. He wants his independence and ways to deal with the daily needs of feeding himself, keeping his life interesting and coping with new frustrations.

He writes: "The adjustment to cooking for one is difficult. Preparing from scratch for one is a nuisance." He feels that scratch cooking requires too many items to be purchased. Many elderly people live in small homes and apartments, and their tiny kitchens along with their own diminishing ability to reach all their shelving, means that space for storage and refrigeration may be at a premium.

"There are many products that come in cans designed for single servings: stews, baked beans, corned beef hash are but a sample," he writes. "Unfortunately, there is only a very limited supply of soups meant for one. Individual serving packets of fiber cereals, regular cereals, oatmeal, etc. are plentifully available."

For him, as for many others, microwave ovens have made the task of feeding himself much easier. The microwave industry has made great strides, and there are now many palatable meals for singles available just for the reheating.

I find myself again wishing that he would cook for himself, however, if only to give himself that feeling of well-being that comes from feeding yourself. Oh, yes, it is nice to be able to pull something from the freezer and heat it up and eat quickly. But when neither mobility nor time is an issue, cooking from scratch can bring something that is quite different into the daily experience.

Barbara Kafka's "Microwave Gourmet" (William Morrow and Co., 1987) gives basic recipes with variations. She has a steamed whole fish with variations of Chinese steamed fish, vegetable steamed fish, herb steamed fish, as well as different-size fish — from 1½ pounds to 8 pounds — that might encourage the trout fisherman to bring home that fish rather than let it loose.

The fish steams in its own juice, which in turn can be used to make any of a number of sauces that she lists, from fish veloute to parsley sauce. Leftover fish is good reheated and is also nice in a salad. But, I find myself wondering, why not invite a friend in and fix dinner for two?

STEAMED WHOLE FISH FOR MICROWAVE

1 whole fish, 1½ pounds with head and tail on

Place fish on a 14x8-inch oval platter with a rim. Cover tightly with microwave plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent power for 11 minutes. (To cook in a small microwave oven, use an 11x8-inch dish, making sure to wrap tailpiece that juts out over edge. Cook for 14 minutes.)

Auction features Permian Basin bachelors

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Thirty-three Permian Basin bachelors have agreed to donate themselves to a worthy cause — the second annual Big Brothers/Big Sisters Benefit Bachelor Auction, to be April 16 at the Midland Hilton. The men, and their date packages, were introduced Tuesday evening during a media party sponsored by Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

The auction will begin with a preview party 6 p.m. April 16 to give bidders and bachelors a chance to mingle. The auction will take place 7 p.m., with Janet Storie of KTPZ-TV and Skip Baldwin of KMID-TV as masters of ceremonies. Auctioneer Dennis Black will begin bids at $50.

Tickets for the auction are $15, and include hors d'oeuvres and a complimentary drink. Reserved tickets are $30, which adds a complimentary bottle of champagne per table and an excellent view of the bidding platform to the evenings events. To reserve tickets and bachelor catalogs call 689-6003.

Last year's auction attracted more than 400 women, who bid from $200-$1,350 for some of the area's most interesting dates. The event raised about $16,000 for the agency, said Lynn Musgrove, vice president of fundraising. "We hope to raise at least $20,000 this year."

FINANCIAL SUCCESS is only one aspect of the event's popularity. Because last year was the first year Big Brothers/Big Sisters presented a bachelor auction, finding men willing to participate was sometimes difficult, said executive director Linda Macias. "I turned down bachelors this year."

Several of the bachelors gave their reasons for participating in the fundraiser. "I volunteered," said Terry Perkins. "I figured it was a good cause."

Bachelor Dan Morrison said, "Someone went behind my back and gave my name," but he didn't mind because, he said, "It's a good cause and I enjoying meeting people. I don't mind doing things a little out of the ordinary."

Ray Diaz said, "Someone referred me and I thought I would add a little something to my life. I think it's going to be interesting and exciting — it's different."

Bachelor F.W. "Bill" Schammel said he was asked to participate by Ms. Macias. "I used to be general manager of the Midland Cubs baseball team, and we were helpful to Big Brothers/Big Sisters."

KMID-TV's Baldwin not only is a co-MC of the auction, but he also agreed to be one of the bachelors to be auctioned. "It's going to be fun," he said. "We had a great time last year. Everybody had a great time," but while they are having a good time, Baldwin added, "everybody needs to keep in the back of their minds that it's for the kids."

EVERYONE HAD such a good time, in fact, that three of last year's bachelors — Gary Ott, Edward N. Adcock and Terry Urban — are returning to be auctioned off again this year.

"Last year was fun," Adcock said. "I'm back because they asked me. I'm looking forward to it."

> "I feel like the agency is a good benefit, and it's a great time. Everyone had a lot of fun. I highly recommend it."

> Terry Urban > on Big Brothers/Big Sisters
> second annual Bachelor Auction fund-raising event

Urban said his reason participating again is "I feel like the agency is a good benefit, and it's a great time. Everyone had a lot of fun. I highly recommend it."

According to information from Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Urban is 31, 5 feet 10 inches tall, has brown hair and green eyes, and is a restaurant owner. His desired characteristics in a woman: "Natural beauty, fun loving, sincere and patient."

His hobbies include traveling, being outdoors, playing tennis, snow skiing, water skiing and bike riding. His date package: "A trip for two to the exciting city, Austin, to meet our host for the weekend. Sightseeing, boating, waterskiing and tennis are on our ageanda along with 'I hope' the time of your life, down on Party Street, USA, 5th Street, Austin, Texas." His sponsor is Terry's Coffee Shop Inc.

A preview of some of the other men to be auctioned include:

■ Tom Hill; age 23, 5 feet 10 inches tall, brown hair, green eyes, self-employed. Characteristics and attributes he is looking for in a woman: "Good personality, honesty, symmetrical, a vivacious, robust girl, self-confident, resplendent."

Hill enjoys golf, racquetball, the outdoors and "traveling abroad to unusual places." Date package: "We will be off to Dallas for a weekend of unequaled delight. This funfilled affair consists of two days and one glittering night of sights, entertainment and sumptuous dining." He is sponsored by Bill Hightower, Bill Dillon Insurance, Midland Muffler/Greg Mayo, John Arthur and Joyce Brickey/Remax.

Hill said he volunteered for the auction because "it's a good cause. They say it's going to be a good time."

■ Jim Martin; age 43, 5 feet 7 inches, brown hair, blue eyes, vice president of KBAT-KWEL radio stations. His desired qualities in a woman are "a good listener (and talker) with a sense of humor, intelligent, adventurous and above all — not stuck on herself. It would be nice if she listened to KBAT; however, that is not mandatory."

His hobbies include travel, cooking, dancing, acting, painting, writing short stories, songs and poetry, doing yard work and home improvements. The highest bidder for Martin will be off on: "A 'Surf and Turf' weekend. We'll start with a dozen roses (doesn't everyone?) and a scenic drive to Ruidoso. (Well, it gets scenic somewhere after Roswell.) We'll spend the weekend in a luxury condo at Pinion Park. We'll take in the races by day and explore the local pubs by night. I'll do all the cooking from lobster to blackened Redfish and maybe even Chicken Cordon Bleu (cleaning up is negotiable). If we do good at the races, we'll take another scenic drive back to Midland. (If not we may return on the back of a poultry truck.)" His sponsor is Buddy's Flowers.

■ F.W. "Bill" Schammel; age 45, 6 feet 6 inches, brown hair, green eyes, administrator of Municipal Court. In a woman, the attributes he looks for are "fun loving, athletic and a keen sense of humor. I prefer taller women who enjoy being treated like a woman. Must like spontaneous decisions as well as 'well thought out' plans."

He enjoys playing golf, traveling, "enjoying a fine meal with a special lady," watching Jeopardy, civic participation and baseball.

For the date package: "A May sports package in El Paso/Juarez. A funfilled weekend in the sun. Dog racing in Juarez one evening, baseball game in El Paso the next. Surrounded by diversified eating. In the daylight hours, golf and-or shopping in Mexico. Compestre Country Club's 18-hole course is fun and challenging. If golf is not your idea of fun, how about shopping at all the small out-of-the-way shops in Juarez? We can find many and exciting things to do, we are only limited by imagination. (Of course, we'll fly roundtrip. We will be too exhausted to drive.)"

■ Ray Diaz; age 25, 5 feet 9 inches, brown eyes and hair, accountant for M.C. Diaz Inc. Attributes Diaz looks for in a woman include: "A woman who is talkative, with a good sense of humor and who enjoys the outdoors."

His interests include downhill skiing, hiking, hunting and swimming. The woman who puts her money on Diaz should, "Get ready for a terrific weekend in May or June in the romantic city of San Antonio. We'll enjoy the Riverwalk, taking advantage of all the night life from start to end. We will stay at the Hilton Palacio Del Rio, right in the center of the hottest night spots." He is sponsored by M.C. Diaz Inc.

■ Kim Dement; age 34, 6 feet 1 inch, brown hair and eyes, landman. Desired characteristics he looks for in a woman: "To spend time with me, a woman would have to own a good sense of humor. Beyond that, my ideal woman would be honest, intelligent, flexible and poised; feminine Connie Selleca would do nicely — maybe all I look for is a woman named Connie."

Dement's hobbies include playing bridge, golf and Trivial Pursuit; collecting Southwest art and records of all kinds; the Transpecas; travel and speaking Spanish. He and his date's package: "We will leave Midland late Friday and drive to Lajitas on the Rio Grande. Saturday sightseeing in Big Bend, playing golf, rafting, swimming or any combination thereof. Saturday night cocktails and dinner in Lajitas, or possible Ojinaga, Mexico. Return to Midland on Sunday. This will be a double-date with Ed Adcock and his 'lessee' — provided someone bids on him."

This year, in addition to the auction, the event also will feature a drawing for three bachelors and their date packages. Drawing tickets are $5. These men are:

■ Bill Bundy; 41, 5 feet 10 inches, salt and pepper hair, general manager of U-105 FM and Morning Host Show. His desired characteristics in a woman: "Very attactive, independent, ability to express feelings, nonjudgmental, a friend who enjoys companionship, one who can be herself and not try to control the relationship and the ability to leave work at the office." His date package: "A guest on my morning show in her pajamas, dedicating her favorite love songs. A picnic in the park; lunch. Dinner for two at Charlies in the Hilton. Movies and a reinactment on stage at Theatre Midland of the Odd Couple." He is sponsored by KUPO-U105FM.

■ William F. (Bill) Dungus; 29, 6 feet, brown hair, green eyes, geologist for Exxon. He looks for "an intelligent woman wearing minimal jewelry with no apparent make-up. A woman with a mischievious sense of humor and who can keep me slightly off balance. An independent woman, strong, yet feminine, who privately, is a mystery."

A date with Dungus: "I'm a classic first dater I suppose. First I will pick you up approximately five to seven minutes after the agreed-upon time. You will, of course, be pleased with my, though tuxedoless, still dapper appearance. We will idly chat of this and that on the way to the most luxurious dinner spot in town. There, over a delectable meal for two, we shall become closer as conversation grows bolder, yet more relaxed. Afterward we will explore the nightlife of Midland, until tiring of humanity, move off by ourselves perhaps to a moonlit walk in the park beneath the stars. Perhaps we will be silly and sneak up on some sleeping ducks and goose them. Or frighten a sleeping goose into flight and duck them. Only then, after getting to know one another, can we properly decide when to let the evening end."

■ Tim Bryson; 38, 6 feet 1 inch, black hair, hazel eyes, financial consultant for Merrill Lynch. He prefers a woman who is "bubbly, outgoing, honest, athletic, amitious and independent." Bryson and the women with the lucky ticket will be off for, "Dinner for two at Nisho Seafood Market in Beverly Hills, Calif."

Other bacheiors that will be available to to be bid on in this year's auction are Robert McCommon, 32; Kirk Edwards, 28; Morrison, 22; Jim Byroad, 40; Steve Jurecky, 31; Toni Silvestri, 29; Joe de Compiegne, 27; John W. McAfee Sr., 46; Tony Parish, 34; Ban Green, 32; Chris Van Wagenen, 31; Rollie Hyde, 50; Kent Bicknam, 31; Baldwin, 32; Joe Sitzman, 39; Adcock, 39; J. Gordon Lunn, 40; Ed McCabe, 29; Ott, 35; Alan V. Noel, 30; Jim Slaton, 49; Ed Clements, 33; Robert Schrickel, 28; Paul Sparks, 29; Clint Walker, 29; John Baber, 39; and Perkins, 28.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

The par hands prepared for the 1987 National Intercollegiate Championship by Jeff Rubens provided a fair challenge in both play and defense. To see how you would have fared, cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would go about collecting 12 tricks at six spades.

Once the cue-bidding sequence showed that there were not two fast losers in any suit North, whose hand was greatly improved by the opening bid, wasted no time in setting the level of the contract. That left it up to South to make the slam.

Obviously, there's no problem if hearts break 3-2—there's only a club to lose. Therefore, the problem lies in a possible 4-1 heart break. Again there's no problem if West holds a singleton honor; declarer cashes the ace-queen and, when West shows out on the second round, takes the marked finesse against the remaining honor. Alternatively, if East holds a singleton honor, the suit can be run if declarer cashes his honors in a different order. But what if a defender holds a low singleton?

Careful planning will circumvent even that holding. Win the opening club lead, draw trumps and cash the ace-king of diamonds. Now cash just the ace of hearts (or the queen) before exiting with a club.

Since a minor suit return will give declarer a ruff-sluff, whichever defender wins the club will have to return a heart, if he has one. When that defender leads a heart, declarer simply allows it to run to fourth hand. Either he will know the suit splits 3-2, or else he will have a finesse position against the other honor. Try it—you will see it works against either defender.

Owens, Clark to be reunited for 'Hee-Haw' anniversary

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Country musicians Buck Owens and Roy Clark will be reunited tonight as "Ol' Pickin' and Grinnin'" for a 20th anniversary celebration of "Hee Haw."

Owens left the syndicated television show three years ago to pursue other business interests. Clark remained as host of the program, joined by other country music stars as co-hosts.

"It's great to have him (Owens) back," Clark said Tuesday after appearing before the Oklahoma Senate to accept a resolution naming March 30 as "Hee Haw Country Music and Entertainment Day."

Sam Lovullo, the producer of the program, said 104 entertainers are scheduled to participate in the show, including Roy Acuff, Minnie Pearl, George Jones, Kenny Rogers, Conway Twitty, Mel Tillis and Loretta Lynn.

LONDON (AP) — The two young sons of Prince Charles encountered the likenesses of some their most violent royal ancestors during a visit to an exhibition of horrors.

William, 5, and Henry, 3, went on an hour-long tour of the converted warehouse known as the London Dungeon on Tuesday accompanied by two detectives and a governess.

The princes saw life-size models of Charles I, who tried to rule Parliament and was beheaded; King Henry VIII, who had two of his six wives beheaded; and Henry's Catholic daughter Mary Tudor, who burned her Protestant subjects at the stake.

The boys, whose father is heir to the British throne "seemed to enjoy their hour or so with us," said the museum's promotion manager Peter Jay.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Joe M. Rodgers, the U.S. ambassador to France, had hoped to arrange for the Grand Ole Opry to perform at his Fourth of July bash in Paris, but he may have to settle for a jazz combo.

Rodgers

"We had hoped to get some square dancers or cloggers or such from Opryland for the annual July 4th celebration at the embassy, but the idea is falling through because that is the busiest time of year for Opryland," said Rodgers, a successful contractor and Nashville native.

The embassy throws a July 4th party every year, according to embassy officials. About 1,800 people attended the festivities last year.

Andrews

Andrews plays the English king who abdicated for love and created a pre-World War II constitutional crisis in "The Woman He Loved." Jane Seymour portrays Wallis Simpson, the American divorcee he married.

Known to American viewers for his starring role in the Masterpiece Theater series, "Brideshead Revisited," Andrews grew up in a part of London he describes as "lower middle class and stable working class," TV Guide says in its April 2 issue.

His life took another turn when he married actress Georgina Simpson, heiress to a department store fortune. They have a country house in Hampshire, horses and three children.

Despite his affection for the royal family — Princess Anne is godmother to his youngest child, Amy-Samantha — Andrews is disdainful of Edward, who later became the Duke of Windsor.

"It was an extraordinary thing to do — to have decided to throw all our heritage to the wind and upset the constitution of the country," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cable TV operator Ted Turner says his new 24-hour television network will be free of "sleazy sex" when it begins operation next fall.

Turner

"It's a new project. That makes it kind of exciting," Turner said Tuesday. "You don't know exactly what's going to happen. It's kind of like 'Gone With the Wind,' half way through you're not sure the South is going to lose."

Turner Network Television is scheduled to be offered to cable operators on Oct. 3.

"We aren't going to have the tyranny of being totally dependent on advertising revenues," Turner said. "When that's the case, you have to go for the largest audience and unfortunately the programs have a lot of gratuitous violence or a lot of sleazy sex."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Oscar hopefuls for 1988 gathered for the seventh annual Nominees' Luncheon and heard Academy President Robert Wise advise them to "calm down, take a deep breath and enjoy the honor that your peers have given to you."

As in previous years, many of the top nominees were no-shows Tuesday. Among the best actors, Michael Douglas and Robin Williams appeared. Sally Kirkland was the only nominee present of those in the best-actress category.

Albert Brooks was the sole nominee for supporting actor in attendance, and Anne Archer and Anne Ramsey represented the supporting actresses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, who underwent successful breast cancer surgery last October, received a surprise "courage award" from the American Cancer Society on Tuesday for encouraging other women to seek early detection of the disease.

"I can't say this is an award I dreamed of getting when I was growing up, but if you can help other people deal with this problem, that makes you feel good," she said. "I hope that's what has happened."

Mrs. Reagan received the award during a Rose Garden ceremony for 60 award winners including actress Jill Ireland, who is the society's honorary fund-raising chairman.

Mrs. Reagan and the actress both had a breast removed because of malignant tumors. The society said the president's wife was honored for her example of "strength and courage" in overcoming breast surgery and encouraging other women to use mammography, an X-ray technique for early detection of breast tumors.

President Reagan told the "courage award" winners they had proved that "fear was not the end for you but a challenge" to triumph over cancer and help others confront the disease.

"People need to know that cancer isn't something to run and hide from, but cancer is a fact that must be faced and dealt with," he said.

Midland Lee's Robin Pyle (7) steals second base much to the amazement of Permian's Scott Hubert, center, and Arturo Ontiveros.

Bulldogs 'steal' one from Hobbs

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Baseball coaches usually cringe when their players get trapped between bases.

But Midland High coach Tim Whalen called a rundown play in the seventh inning of Tuesday's game with Hobbs, N.M., at Angel Stadium and Jason Stone danced between first and second long enough for Kevin Rychell to race home with the deciding run in a 7-6 non-district win.

Rychel led off the inning with a single, advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by winning pitcher Dorey Thompson, and reached third on Stone's single.

Kyle Lusby worked the count to one-and-one before Stone broke for second base. The Bulldog baserunner stopped halfway between bases, but Rychel scored when Hobbs pitcher Ricky Goode spent too much time chasing Stone toward second base.

"We were first trying to get the balk," Whalen said. "If that didn't work, then we try to get the runner home.

"I imagine if they had it to do over again, they would concede second base and just hang onto the ball."

The winning play capped a game marred by mental and physical errors. But both coaches substituted liberally. Whalen played 15 of his 16 players and was pleased with what he saw from some of his younger players.

"We played a lot of kids who hadn't been regulars, because we wanted to see what some of the young kids would do in competitive situations," he said.

Stone is a sophomore, while Rychell is a junior, who threw two innings of hitless relief before moving to the outfield for the final two innings.

The Bulldogs opened the scoring with two runs in the second inning. Scott Mowles led off with a double to deep center field and scored on a single by David Danley. Danley reached second on the throw home, advanced to third on a one-out single by Joe Rendon, and scored on a wild pitch.

But Hobbs touched Bulldog starter Sam Sowders for two runs in its half of the third, and took the lead with an unearned run off Rychel in the fourth.

Danley reached on an error to lead off the Bulldog fourth, however. Rendon and Russell Page walked to load the bases, and Tony Perez was hit by a pitch for the second time to score Danley with the tying run.

MHS took the lead in the fifth inning on a bloop single by Eric Boyt, walks to Mowles and Danley, and a suicide squeeze bunt by Rendon.

But Hobbs greeted Thompson with two runs in the sixth to force the Bulldogs into another come-from-behind situation. Perez led off with an infield hit and raced home on Boyt's triple to tie the score. Mowles then singled home Boyt with the lead run.

The 'Dogs had a chance to put the Eagles away in the seventh inning, but Curt Owens eluded a rundown situation between first and second with one out and scored on a two-out single by Lance Spivey.

MHS, 12-5 overall, puts its 3-1 District 4-5A record on the line Thursday at Odessa High.

Just by virtue of being open from District 4-5A play, the Bulldogs lost sole possession of first place in the loop race as Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper and Abilene High all won Tuesday, leaving all the teams knotted in a four-way tie for first place.

Bunting Rebels nail Permian, 7-5

Midland Lee's Durian Jenkins
...route going performance

District race top-heavy

ODESSA — It wasn't the prettiest piece of baseball work ever to grace a high school diamond, but somebody had to come away the winner.

Despite 10 errors between Midland Lee and Odessa Permian, the Rebels came away with a 7-5 win which moves them into a four-way tie for first place with Midland High, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper. All four teams boast 3-1 district records.

"We didn't look too good in spots," Rebel head coach Ernie Johnson said. "We kind of staggered through. But a win is a win and you've got to take 'em all. You see all kinds in high school ball."

The errors made their most prominent appearance in the top half of the third inning when Lee jumped out to a decisive 4-0 lead. All four runs were unearned as Permian's Ontiveros had the nightmare inning of his life, charged with mishandling three balls in the crucial frame.

Cregg McGaha, Robin Pyle, Durian Jenkins and Dudley Jordan all scored, either as a direct or indirect result of Ontiveros' errors in the fourth inning.

"He's an exceptional fielder," Highly said. "He has been all year. He's the one I would count on in the clutch.

In addition to their strong third inning, the Rebels laid down four successful bunts in the game. Jenkins was the only batter to not reach base after bunting, but his fifth inning attempt did score Pyle, who with the squeeze play on, was halfway home before Jenkins ever laid wood on the ball.

Huskies, Buckeyes lose back seat cage image

NIT Semifinals

NEW YORK (AP) — Connecticut, last in the Big East, and Ohio State, sixth in the Big Ten, are taking a back seat to no one in the 51st National Invitation Tournament.

"There's nothing magic about the number 64," Connecticut Coach Jim Calhoun said Tuesday night, referring to the number of teams invited to the NCAA tournament. "Why does parity stop at 64 and not 96? We can play with a lot of teams in the NCAA."

The Huskies, 19-14, rallied in the second half to beat Big East rival Boston College 73-67 and advance to tonight's final against Ohio State, 20-12, which defeated Colorado State 64-62 in the other semifinal.

"The Big East prepares you for tournaments like this," Calhoun said. "In the Big East, you play against great basketball teams every night, and it brings you up a notch."

Connecticut trailed 41-33 at halftime as Dana Barros scored 22 points on five 3-point goals in the first 20 minutes. The Huskies then started the second half with a 33-12 spurt for a 66-53 lead.

Boston College, 18-14, scored 10 consecutive points to get back into the game, but the Eagles couldn't recover from having Barros held to two shots and two points after halftime.

"Their box-and-one defense on Dana really shut him down, and we couldn't get the other players going," Boston College Coach Jim O'Brien said. "Our kids hung in and I'm proud of them. We showed a lot of character in coming back and making the game close."

"Psychologically, if Barros had kept going like he did, I don't know if we could have come back," Calhoun said. "But he didn't slow down, we slowed him down."

"We put a tough athlete on Barros," Calhoun said. "DePriest is only a freshman, but he's our toughest player. We started pushing Lyman through picks to get to Barros."

"They played good defense," Barros said. "They shut us down, but we didn't shut them down. It wasn't a case of me wanting to get more shots. We have other guys who can score."

Cliff Robinson scored 29 points for Connecticut, six of them during the 33-12 spurt in the first 14 minutes of the second half, during which the Huskies were 14 for 19 from the field. After Boston College cut the 13-point deficit to three, Robinson scored the next six points for Connecticut as it rebuilt the advantage to 72-65 with 58 seconds left.

"I was confident we could make a run at them," Robinson said of his team's halftime deficit. "We did a good job of keeping them off the boards. Lyman did a great job."

Ohio State also trailed Colorado State at halftime, but only by 28-25 despite 15 points by the Rams' Pat Durham.

The Buckeyes used a pressure defense to hold Durham to five points in the second half, and they weathered a brilliant shooting exhibition by guard Trent Shippen.

"The offense just came off the pressure defense," Ohio State Coach Gary Williams said. "The big thing is not steals and layups, but tempo. I was going to live and die by the press right to the end."

Shippen scored 23 of his 28 points in the second half, when he was 9 for 12 from the field and 5 for 6 from 3-point range. He hit his first six 3-pointers, an NIT record, before missing in the final minute.

Cowboys' 'Kitchen' still growing

IRVING (AP) — Nate Newton's weight gain turned into a loss when he lost his starting job with the Dallas Cowboys during the team's minicamp.

Newton, nicknamed "Kitchen" because of his size, came to the minicamp Monday weighing 354 pounds, 56 more than he weighed at the start of the season last year.

Cowboys offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck said there are three options for the Cowboys. He said they can cut Newton, send him for outside help or rehabilitate him within the team but with outside help.

"The third option is what we selected," Erkenbeck said.

"It could be a carrer-ending set of circumstances for the guy," Erkenbeck said. "We're trying to build a group of offensive linemen who have size, but not anything like that."

The camp is voluntary and Newton is not subject to a fine, but he has been subject to a few jibes from team members who laughed and called him "Body Wonderful."

Last March, Newton's weight was 347 pounds, but he slimmed down to 298 during the season in an attempt to shake the nickname.

"I went home to Florida after the season because everybody told me to relax," Newton said. "Maybe I went a little overboard. I went back to Florida to see my people. But everywhere I went somebody was fixing me a big meal."

Erkenbeck criticized Newton, as he attempted the agility drills Monday. Trainers tried to measure Newton's body fat, but the machine wouldn't calibrate his bulk.

"He did OK in the drills," Erkenbeck said. "But if we had to play in a Super Bowl tomorrow, he would have a hard time finishing. Still, it's not unusual for a player to come to minicamp with a little extra weight."

Bigger wasn't better for head coach Tom Landry.

"His future hinges on weight, and if you don't have pride then you might not have a career in the NFL," Landry said. "It's pretty hard unless you just stay on their back, especially in the off-season. They get hungry and they gain weight."

There is the lingering problem of the failed so-called "Dream Backfield" of Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker.

Landry's attention also was turned to Dorsett who is still waiting to be traded. A film of highlights shown Monday featured Dorsett's NFL-record 99-yard run six years ago.

"A great run," Landry said. "He can still do that."

The inability to make the Dream Backfield a reality was a problem of Walker and Dorsett being unable to adapt and then losing the enthusiasm to make it a success, Landry said.

"When people are not happy doing what they do, they don't do it as well as when they are happy. They just weren't comfortable," Landry said. "The pressure kept building up on the situation. Hershel wasn't too happy. Tony wasn't too happy. Tony wanted us to make a decision, so I made the decision to go with Herschel. He's our future."

Free safety Michael Downs, another disgruntled veteran, stayed away Monday. He has not reached an agreement with Cowboys Vice President Joe Bailey after several meetings.

The Cowboys will work through Wednesday in a series of meetings, timed runs and weightlifting tests at Valley Ranch. The theme for the off-season is "Blueprint for Victory."

Neck woes slow Randy White

DALLAS (AP) — Playing a 14th season in the NFL will be more difficult than Randy White had expected after completing one of the most painful years of his football career.

White has a damaged disk in his neck that might cause him to miss most of training camp and places his career in jeopardy. Trainer Don Cochren said he will suggest to coach Tom Landry that White not participate in contact work at training camp.

"If he starts butting heads out there with (offensive lineman) Nate Newton, we might not have him for the season," Cochren said.

The original diagnosis was a pinched nerve. White was often in constant pain after the third game of the season and said he lost considerable upper body strength because of the neck injury.

He was often replaced late in the season by rookie Danny Noonan. Although he will rarely talk about injuries, White said his shoulders sometimes were numb.

White hasn't even lifted weights since the end of the season. One of the strongest players on the team, White has usually been a fanatic weight lifter.

"Right now, all I can think about is getting back to 100 percent so I can make a significant contribution to the football team," said White, the Cowboys' first-round draft pick in 1975.

"Whatever it entails, I will do. If they want me to sit out some of training camp then I will do that, too."

No doubt, White will be challenged for his starting job by Noonan, who had a superb first season after missing training camp as a contract holdout.

Said Landry: "I just think that what Randy faces is a timing thing. We will wait and see him work out and hope he gets better. You can have a disk problem and still not be critical. Randy will have to show us his improvement."

Could White skip camp and still participate in the 1988 season?

"You wouldn't miss camp and still play in the season," Landry said. "He might just practice once a day."

Gwynn still carries hot Padre bat

Associated Press

Tony Gwynn is one of those players who apparently can fall out of bed and get a base hit — and out of a hospital bed, no less.

All right, so Gwynn wasn't really hobbled. But he did undergo surgery earlier this month for tendon damage in a finger and the San Diego Padres were concerned that the National League batting champion might miss Opening Day.

It was classic deja vu. On Monday, Gwynn's seventh-inning single snapped a 4-4 tie and San Diego beat California 6-4.

In fact, since returning to action Friday, Gwynn is 7 for 16 — that's .438 —and 11 for 23 overall this spring. And that's even better — .478.

"It looks like he hasn't missed a game," Manager Larry Bowa said.

"I can't grip the ball the way I want, so I'm not sure where the ball is going when I throw it," said Gwynn, who wears a glove-like foam pad on his hand. "I'm not going to be 100 percent. That will take a couple more weeks. I'll have to catch up on my timing and things like that."

While the Padres are happy over Gwynn's rapid recovery, the Cincinnati Reds, one of their National League West rivals, are concerned about veteran third baseman Buddy Bell, who may not be ready for Opening Day because of a sprained knee.

Bell has sprained his left knee twice while sliding in exhibition games. The Reds decided Tuesday to leave Bell at their Plant City, Fla., complex to work out when the rest of the team heads north Thursday night for a three-game exhibition swing through Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky.

Bell will fly to Cincinnati on Sunday for an examination that will determine whether he will play in Monday's opener against St. Louis or go on the disabled list.

"To be honest, I'm worried about Buddy Bell," Manager Pete Rose said. "I hope it's not going to be one of those deals where every time he slides he jams the knee."

The Reds lost Tuesday's exhibition to the Chicago White Sox 2-0 as Greg Walker homered and rookies Jack McDowell and Ken Patterson combined on a three-hitter.

Astros 5, Phillies 4

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt had three hits, raising his spring average to .436. He has 20 RBI in 18 games.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 2

Rance Mulliniks drove in three runs with two homers and Dave Stieb allowed three hits and an unearned run in six innings.

Expos 4, Braves 0

Neal Heaton allowed three hits in seven innings and has an ERA of 1.30 for 30 innings this spring. Bob McClure and Randy St. Claire each pitched one scoreless inning.

Cubs 6, Giants 2

Calvin Schiraldi gave up two hits in five scoreless innings and Leon Durham homered, singled and drove in three runs. Schiraldi, pitching himself back into shape after sustaining a sore shoulder earlier this spring, lowered his ERA to 3.15.

Pirates 10, Cardinals 2

Darnell Coles hit two homers and drove in five runs. Coles hit a three-run homer in the first inning and a two-run shot in the fourth, both off Greg Mathews, who was tagged for 11 hits and nine runs in five innings. In his last two appearances, he has allowed 17 runs and 24 hits.

Red Sox 8, Tigers 4

Jim Rice drove in three runs with three hits, including a two-run homer. Boston relief ace Lee Smith, who had given up just one hit in 13 previous innings, yielded three hits in the ninth, including Chet Lemon's second homer, then struck out the side with bases loaded.

Mets 3, Orioles 1

Newly acquired catcher Mackey Sasser single home the winning run in the fourth inning while Sid Fernandez allowed four hits and a run in five innings while striking out six.

Dodgers 10, Royals 9

Mike Sharperson drew a bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the 10th inning off former Dodger Ted Power, who also surrendered a three-run homer to Jeff Hamilton in the ninth that tied the score.

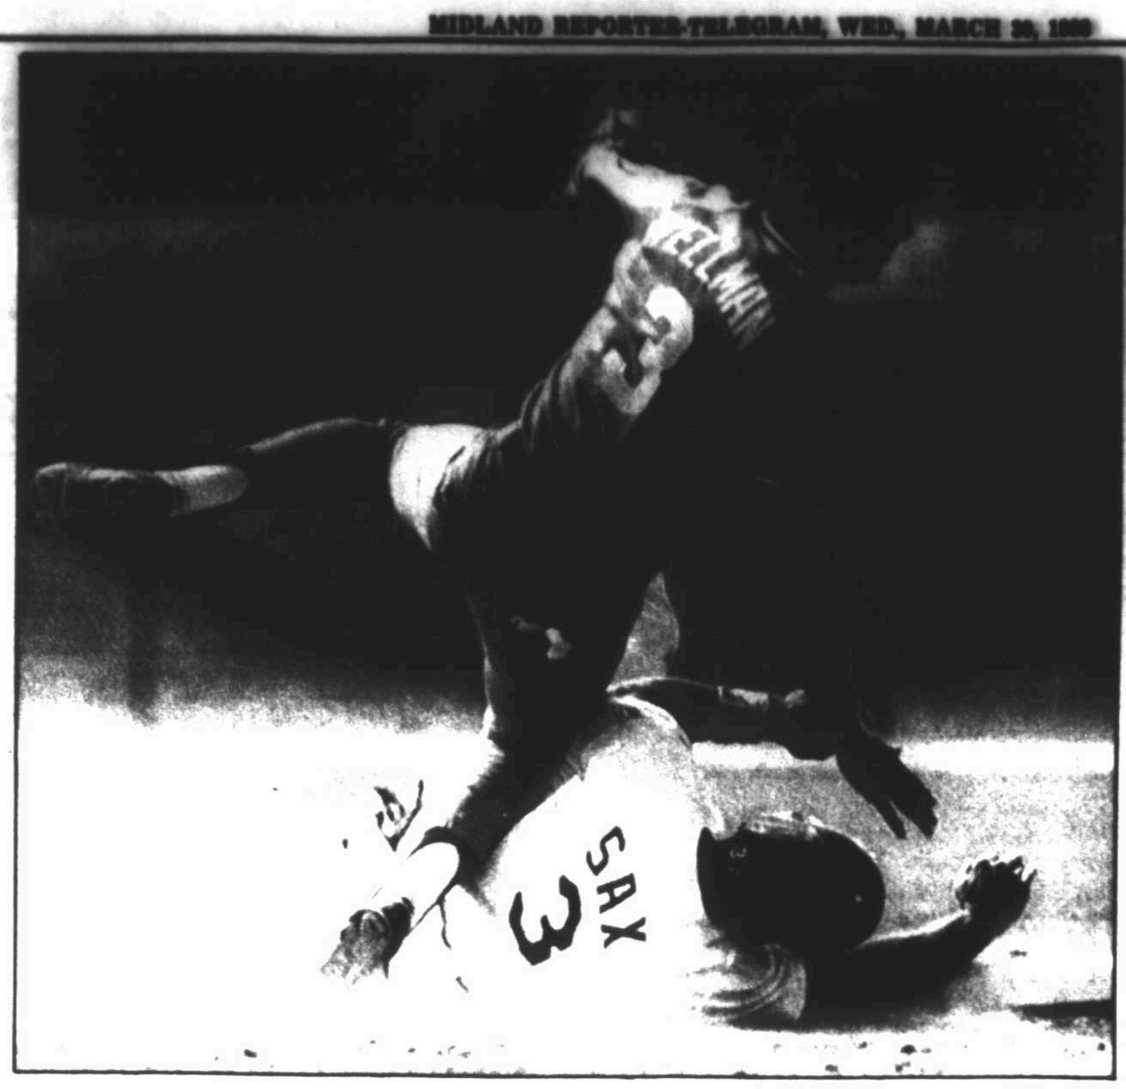

The Dodgers scored six runs — three were unearned — off Royals ace Bret Saberhagen, who allowed 10 hits in 6⅓ innings.

Mariners 7, Brewers 0

Mike Campbell, Bill Wilkinson and Jerry Reed combined on a four-hitter, Seattle's sixth victory in its last seven games. Campbell allowed two hits in six innings. The Mariners scored six runs in four innings off Juan Nieves.

Athletics 12, Indians (ss) 7

Terry Steinbach doubled twice and hit his first home run of the spring and Tony Phillips had a bases-loaded triple. Mel Hall homered for Cleveland.

Spring Training Roundup

NIT

"It's a neat feeling to do as well as I did, but it's not a good feeling to lose," said Shippen, averaging fewer than 10 points per game. "Their full-court pressure took us out of our offense."

Jay Burson scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half for Ohio State after taking only two shots in the first 20 minutes and 12 in the game.

"I was frustrated, but I didn't want to force anything in the second half," Burson said. "In the second half, the press really helped us."

Burson, a 6-foot guard, got inside help from 6-7 junior Tony White, who scored 17 points for the Buckeyes.

"In the second half, it was a typical Jay Burson game, and Tony White was outstanding," Williams said. "Our decision was to keep going inside. They're not the biggest team in the world."

Colorado State, 21-13, had only one player taller than 6-6 for much of the second half as 6-8 center Eric Friehauf sat on the bench with foul trouble.

Rams Coach Boyd Grant said a 33-20 rebounding deficit cost Colorado State the game.

"We got devastated inside," said Grant, who coached Fresno State to the 1983 NIT title. "We don't have fresh people to put in there."

Colorado State was making its first postseason appearance since losing to Drake in the 1969 NCAA West Regional final, but Boyd said the Rams weren't satisfied just making it to New York.

"We wanted to win it," Boyd said. "But I felt we played undisciplined at times."

Colorado State hit its first three shots of the second half, including a jumper and a 3-pointer by Shippen, and grabbed its largest lead, 36-27, with 12:23 left.

Another 3-pointer by Shippen put the Rams in front 49-39 two minutes later before Ohio State scored eight straight for a one-point edge. Burson completed the run with a steal and layup.

Kansas State's Kruger offered UT cage job

DALLAS (AP) — Kansas State University basketball coach Lon Kruger has been offered the University of Texas coaching job and will make a decision soon, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Sources close to Kruger indicated Tuesday he would take the job if it was offered it to him.

Kansas State sources reported that Kruger, 35, was offered the job Tuesday night after a formal interview in Austin with Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds, a fellow Kansas State alumnus.

Neither Kruger nor Dodds was available for comment.

Kansas State Athletic Director Larry Travis said he was aware that Kruger was going to talk to Texas because Dodds asked permission on Monday.

"I don't resent anything," Travis said. "That's part of the business. We're going to do everything we can to keep him here."

Former Texas Coach Bob Weltlich made about $74,000 in base salary, with a total package of $100,000. Kruger, who makes $65,000 a year, has discussed a contract extension and possible raise at K-State, Travis said.

Kruger starred at point guard for Kansas State in the 1970s.

Kruger, 35, compiled a 45-20 record in two years at Kansas State and coached the Wildcats into the finals of the Midwest Regional before losing to cross-state rival Kansas.

The Wildcats defeated two of the teams in the upcoming NCAA Final Four, becoming one of only three teams to defeat Oklahoma and stopping Kansas' home winning streak at 35 games on Jan. 30.

Ryan, Hough great at 40

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

While most of their 40-year-old contemporaries are over the hill, Houston's Nolan Ryan and Texas' Charlie Hough are still on the mound.

Hough and Ryan, among a dwindling group of elder moundsmen over 40 still pitching in the major leagues, reached the 40-year-old plateau with drastically different methods.

Hough keeps ahead of the youngsters with a dazzling knuckleball. Ryan, 41, works out continuously in the off season and attributes his careful health program with extending his career.

Giants make key trades to keep top form

Associated Press

While five teams in the National League West search to fill gaps in their lineups and pitching staffs, the San Francisco Giants know what they want and just how to get it.

Manager Roger Craig and General Manager Al Rosen have assembled an everyday starting lineup, solid bench and deep pitching staff.

Rosen acquired pitcher Rick Reuschel from Pittsburgh last Aug. 31. At the time, the Giants were tied with Cincinnati for first place, but finished 27-13 and won the division by six games.

Over the winter, Rosen signed free agent outfielder Brett Butler and let go outfielder Chili Davis. Butler was ninth in on-base percentage in the American League and stole 39 bases for Cleveland last season.

"My biggest job this year will be to keep these guys aggressive," Craig said. "We're not content winning the division; we want to win it all."

The Giants led St. Louis 3-2 in the NL playoffs, but failed to score in the last two games.

Craig, a pitching guru, thinks the Giants have a good shot at repeating as NL West champions because of their pitching.

"We couldn't have won the division without the kind of outstanding pitching we had and they're all back," Craig said.

"Any one of six guys can start — Dave Dravecky, Rick Reuschel, Mike Krukow, Atlee Hammaker, Mike LaCoss and Kelly Downs. ... The bullpen is just as solid."

San Francisco Giants

With Will Clark at first, Robby Thompson at second, Jose Uribe at shortstop and Kevin Mitchell at third, the Giants have one of the best two-way infields in baseball.

Clark hit 35 homers and drove in 91 runs and Mitchell had 22 homers and 70 RBI last year. Thompson and Uribe helped the Giants lead the majors with 183 double plays.

There's plenty of hitting in the outfield, with Jeffrey Leonard, Butler, Candy Maldonado and reserve Mike Aldrete (.325).

Catchers Bob Brenly and Bob Melvin combined for 29 homers, and they threw out 39 percent would-be base stealers.

The Giants were second in home runs (203) last season and third in runs (783). They led the majors with a 3.68 ERA and have a strong bullpen. Scott Garrelts had 11 wins and 12 saves and is joined by Don Robinson, Craig Lefferts and Joe Price.

Los Angeles Dodgers

General manager Fred Claire spent the winter trying to keep Dodger blue synonymous with Dodger green — as in profit.

Attendance dropped under three million at Dodger Stadium for the first full season since 1979. There were many reasons for the decrease.

The Dodgers were last in the NL in batting (.252), last in runs scored (635), and last in on-base percentage (.309). They led the majors with 155 errors.

NL West Preview

They finished 73-89, matching their worst record since moving from Brooklyn to Los Angeles in 1958.

In the biggest trade of the winter, the Dodgers acquired Griffin, Orosco and Howell in a trade with the New York Mets and Oakland Athletics.

The outfield has a new look with the signings of free agents Gibson (34 homers, 79 RBI for Detroit) and Davis (22 homers, 72 RBI for Oakland). John Shelby, acquired last summer, will be in center.

The infield will be Marshall at first, Stave Sax at second, Griffin at short and Guerrero at third.

Catcher Mike Scioscia was plagued by injuries but threw out 50 of 143 base-stealers.

Starter Bob Welch went to Oakland in the three-team deal, so the rotation shapes up as Fernando Valenzuela, Orel Hershiser, Tim Belcher, Don Sutton and either Shawn Hillegas or Alejandro Pena.

Cincinnati Reds

Although Eric Davis ended up with impressive numbers (37 homers, 100 RBI and 50 stolen bases), he slumped the second half of the season and so did the Reds.

At the end of May, Davis had 19 homers and 52 RBI. From mid-May on, the Reds were 56-65.

Dave Parker was traded to Oakland, so Davis will bat cleanup. He will be joined in the outfield by Kal Daniels and Tracy Jones.

The infield is a combination of youth and experience, with veterans Nick Esasky (1b) and Buddy Bell (3b) joining rookie Jeff Treadway (2b) and Barry Larkin (ss). Dave Concepcion, back for his 19th season with the Reds, will share second with Treadway.

The Reds potentially could have four left-handers in the starting rotation, with Tom Browning, newcomer Danny Jackson, Dennis Rasmussen and Guy Hoffman. Browning, 20-9 as a rookie in 1985, was the opening day pitcher last year but after a 4-6 start was in the minors by June. Ron Robinson (7-5) could be the only right-hander if Mario Soto doesn't make it back. Off his spring performance, Soto can't throw hard anymore.

The bullpen is the strength of staff with John Franco (32 saves), Rob Murphy and Frank Williams.

Houston Astros

The Astros won the NL West in 1986 with pitching and timely hitting and both areas slumped last season.

The pitching staff allowed 109 more runs and 160 more hits than during 1986.

Nolan Ryan, 40, led the majors with 270 strikeouts and a 2.76 ERA but was only 8-16 because of non-support. The Astros scored two or fewer runs in 11 of of Ryan's starts.

Mike Scott got off to a 10-5 start, but finished 6-8 including 0-7 in his last eight starts on the road.

In the bullpen, Dave Smith converted 24 of 28 save opportunities.

First baseman Glenn Davis got off to a slow start but recovered to hit 27 homers and drive in 99 runs. Second baseman Bill Doran is one of the game's best secrets. He hit .283 with 16 homers, 79 RBI and 31 steals.

The left side of the infield could be shaky with newly-acquired Rafael Ramirez at short and Ken Caminiti at third. Ramirez makes too many errors and Caminiti, a switch-hitter, batted only .189 right-handed.

The outfield has Billy Hatcher in left, Gerald Young in center and Kevin Bass in right. They need to get on base for the Astros to win.

San Diego Padres

In 1984, San Diego won the NL pennant. Last year, the Padres started 12-42 en route to a last-place finish.

The Padres' offense, however, has the ability to produce runs.

They had four .300 hitters, led by Tony Gwynn's .370. Rookie catcher Benito Santiago batted .300 with 18 homers and 79 RBI, first baseman John Kruk hit .313 and rookie second baseman Randy Ready hit .309.

Atlanta Braves

Atlanta finished last in the NL in ERA (4.63), shutouts (four), saves (32) and hits allowed (1,529).

After left-hander Zane Smith, Manager Chuck Tanner is looking at veteran Rick Mahler and youngsters Kevin Coffman, Tom Glavine, Tommy Greene and Derek Lilliquist.

Dale Murphy moved to right last season and hit 44 homers with 105 RBI. With other quality hitters like first baseman Gerald Perry, third baseman Ken Oberkfell, left fielder Dion James and catcher Ozzie Virgil, the Braves can score — but not enough to overcome the shaky pitching.

Predicted Finish: 1. San Francisco, 2. Los Angeles, 3. Cincinnati, 4. Houston, 5. San Diego, 6. Atlanta.

Steelers obtain Blackledge

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, seeking to improve the NFL's worst passing attack, acquired quarterback Todd Blackledge from the Kansas City Chiefs on Tuesday for a fourth-round pick in next month's draft.

"It just never worked out for me in Kansas City but I'm looking to coming here and proving myself and I couldn't be any happier," said Blackledge, 27, the son of Steelers' offensive line coach Ron Blackledge.

"Look what happened to Charles White, what happened to Doug Williams when they went to other teams. Careers don't always start and stop in the same place. I feel the best part of my career is ahead of me."

The trade was just the second involving a quarterback in Coach Chuck Noll's 19 years with the Steelers. Pittsburgh obtained David Woodley from the Miami Dolphins for a third-round pick in February 1984.

The 6-foot-3, 219-pound Blackledge, from Penn State, will duel with the oft-booed Mark Malone; third-year pro Bubby Brister and Steve Bono, a former Minnesota Vikings' backup, for the Steelers' starting job.

"The competition is going to be good for everybody," said Tom Moore, the Steelers' offensive coordinator. "It's going to make this a better football team."

Lee ends MHS net string

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee ended a string of three consecutive losses to Midland High Tuesday at the Lee courts with an 11-7 verdict in a dual tennis match.

The Lee boys won eight of nine matches against MHS while the Bulldog girls won six of nine matches.

Twelve of the 18 matches went three sets. Lee lost last week by a 12-6 margin to the Bulldogs.

"Our boys win and their girls win as always," noted Lee coach Bobby Connell. "It just depends on how bad each wins as to determine the outcome."

WHITE

The Cowboys have an age problem in the defensive line. White turned 35 in January and Ed Jones, 37, is the oldest player on the team. Landry continues to say the team needs more youth in the defensive line, and he is contemplating drafting for that position.

There is little doubt the Cowboys will select a defensive player in the April 24-25 draft.

The future of the defensive line might begin in 1988. White has said he will probably play only one more season, although he has left himself the option of signing another short contract. His current contract, which includes a deferred $8 million annuity, expires at the end of this season.

"I won't come back and play another season if I don't feel like I can help the team," White said. "That's why it's so important that I get well now so I can keep playing."

REBELS

"It's a funny thing," Highly said. "We worked real hard on bunt defense (Monday). And it went real well."

Needing four runs to tie the game, the Panthers made a comeback attempt in the bottom half of the seventh, but were only able to manage a pair before Brian Murry struck out swinging at a Jenkins' fast ball to end the game.

"We didn't execute the basic plays," Highly said. "They did what they were supposed to and we didn't. We're not making our breaks and we're not taking advantage of them."

Permian is now 0-5 in district and 8-9 overall. The Panthers are idle Saturday.

The District 4-5A standings now have a big logjam at the top. Abilene Cooper won a 9-4 decision over San Angelo and Abilene High took an 8-1 win over Odessa High in other loop action Tuesday. Since Midland High had the open district date, four teams were left with the identical 3-1 records.

Study: Aspirin helps survival rate

ATLANTA (AP) — A two-year international study of more than 17,000 heart patients showed that aspirin and the clot-dissolving drug streptokinase, taken together after the onset of chest pains, reduce deaths among heart attack victims.

The Second International Study on Infarct Survival, involving patients in 400 hospitals in 16 countries, is billed as the largest heart attack treatment study ever. It was presented Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology.

The study showed that a chewed aspirin tablet or administration of the drug streptokinase, or SK, improved the survival rate. The rate improved more, however, when the two were taken together.

Mortality among heart attack victims given the combination was 7.8 percent after five weeks, compared with 12.8 percent for patients given a placebo.

Drs. Rory Collins and Peter Sleight and researcher Richard Peto, all of the University of Oxford, England, said the improvements were evident across the range of patients, including high-risk cases involving stroke or patients older than 70.

The importance of the study, they said, lies more in the size of the sample than in what was done. They said other studies were too small to give a true picture of the effects of the drugs.

The median age of the patients was just over 60 years, and 23 percent were women. The study was funded by the British Heart Foundation and one maker of SK. A drug company donated the aspirin.

Peto said the study was done in hospitals in medically sophisticated countries, "but an aspirin tablet will work in rural China."

Sleight said the combination of drugs significantly reduced the likelihood of a second heart attack while the patient was hospitalized and reduced the likelihood of a stroke by about one-third.

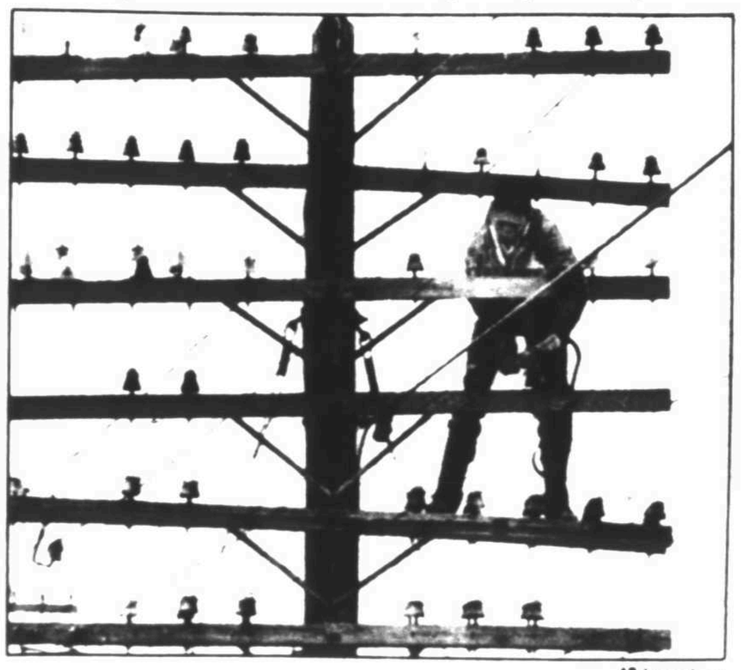

Of 17,189 patients in the survey, 534 given placebos for both aspirin and SK died within five weeks. Of those given aspirin but a placebo in place of SK, 447 died. Of patients given SK and an aspirin placebo, 420 died. Of patients given both medications, 327 died. The choice of treatment was made at random.

Collins said some doctors were uncomfortable giving a placebo. But he said doctors were asked to expose a patient to a possible placebo only if they were uncertain of treatment for an individual case. They were not asked to reject other treatments if they were obviously called for, he said.

The sooner the drugs were administered, the better the results, the researchers said. But they reported significant improvement even when the drugs were administered 24 hours after the onset of pains.

It has been established that aspirin is of value in preventing heart attacks and for patients who have recovered from one, Sleight said.

"This plugs the gap in the middle," he said, saying the tests show it can help for patients who have just suffered an attack.

Mother files lawsuit after son paralyzed by injury in food fight

NEW YORK (AP) — The mother of a teen-ager has filed a $5 million lawsuit charging that her son was paralyzed by injuries suffered when he was hit by an apple during a cafeteria food fight, an attorney said.

Francisco Beltran, 14, of the Bronx was "minding his own business" as he ate lunch Oct. 23 at Junior High School 143 while a food fight went on around him for 15 or 20 minutes, attorney Kevin Concagh said Tuesday.

"One fellow threw an apple at somebody and missed who he was throwing it at and hit Francisco in the back of the head," Concagh said. "It hit him very hard and then the apple shattered into pieces."

Shortly after he was struck, Beltran collapsed when a blood vessel broke in his head, said Concagh, who was hired by the boy's mother, Aida Garcia.

In a lawsuit filed March 18 in U.S. District Court against the Board of Education, Concagh said Beltran has required two brain operations, is paralyzed on his left side and suffered severe brain damage.

Concagh said the lawsuit asks for $5 million in damages, contending that school employees failed to stop the food fight.

Son says bad publicity made Mecham sell firm

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham was forced to sell his auto dealership because of lagging sales blamed on the bad publicity that has dogged him since he took office in January 1987, the governor's son said.

The financial condition of Mecham Pontiac has been a central issue in the second of three impeachment charges against Mecham, that he misused $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning it to the dealership.

The prosecution planned to bring up one or two more witnesses today before concluding testimony on the charge.

Afterward, the Senate was expected to consider whether to vote on the first two impeachment articles, even though no testimony has been heard during the month-long trial on the third charge — that Mecham concealed a $350,000 campaign loan.

A vote to convict the first-term Republican governor would automatically remove him from office.

The governor's son, Dennis Mecham, general manager of Mecham Pontiac, said Tuesday, "The confusion and questions this avalanche of negative publicity has caused...has forced my family to come to this decision to sell Mecham Pontiac while the condition of the company remains solvent and saleable."

Former aides defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says former national security aides Oliver North and John Poindexter are not being presumed innocent on conspiracy, theft and fraud charges in the Iran-Contra scandal.

"Someplace along the line, many of us have forgotten that you are innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt," Reagan told a group of regional reporters on Tuesday.

"What has happened, I think, in the case is it's just everyone is accepting guilt on the basis of accusation."

North, Poindexter and arms dealers Richard V. Secord and Albert A. Hakim pleaded innocent last week to charges that they defrauded the government of more than $17 million by diverting profits from the Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Although he once again spoke out on behalf of his indicted former aides, Reagan backed away somewhat on Tuesday from his assertion last week that North is still an American hero. Reagan said he was referring to the Marine's wartime record.

Town pins diaper solution

LISBON, Maine (AP) — A cloth diaper importer has offered this town a year's worth of free diapers to show his appreciation for the town fathers' refusing to let welfare recipients buy the disposable kind.

Philip D. Anderson, president of Empire Trading Co. Ltd. of Syracuse, N.Y., said he will supply as many cotton diapers as the town needs at no charge.

He said his offer was prompted by a news story about the town's Feb. 16 decision to remove disposable diapers from the list of allowable local welfare expenses.

Anderson said his company supplies diaper services and mail-order houses with Chinese-made diapers designed to retain their shape after laundering.

The town's policy change has drawn support from environmentalists and fiscal conservatives who agree with the choice of traditional cloth diapers as an appropriate technology that saves taxpayers' money.

Pregnant prisoner wanted

EDGEWATER, Colo. (AP) — A woman 8½ months pregnant who complained of being jailed in handcuffs for an outstanding minor traffic ticket is wanted under another name on felony check fraud charges, authorities said.

Kimberly Taylor, 21, who complained to Edgewater police that an officer unnecessarily took her from her home at 5:20 a.m. Saturday for a traffic charge, is wanted under the name Kimberly Addington.

"I couldn't believe it," Mrs. Taylor said Monday, after a visit to her doctor, who said the baby could arrive any time. "It was so stupid. You'd think they'd have better things to do than bother me on a Saturday morning."

Edgewater Police Chief Henry Smith said the department will continue to investigate her complaint, but noted the other warrants raise questions about her credibility.

A check of records showed that Taylor, under the name Kimberly Addington, is wanted on an Arapahoe County warrant issued in January for felony fraud by check.

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The school board voted Tuesday night to withhold a salary increase in the 1988-89 school year for Joe Clark, the tough-guy principal at inner-city Eastside High School.

After meeting in executive session for an hour, the board voted 6-1 to deny Clark an increase on the grounds that he expelled students from the high school without due process, was insubordinate in refusing to readmit the students when directed to do so and failed to maintain proper records and proper reporting procedures.

Board member Elease Evans said she voted against the resolution because she thought the evidence was insufficent.

Clark was not present, but his attorney, Vickie Donaldson, met with the board for about 30 minutes and emerged, saying she had "spoken her peace." She did not elaborate.

Meese asked to resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd called today for the resignation of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, calling Meese "the crown jewel of the sleaze factor in Reagan administration history."

"He ought to get out," Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters. "The country cannot have confidence in the Justice Department when the top law enforcement officer obviously has to spend an inordinate amount of his time defending himself."

"He should be spending his time fighting the war on drugs, crime," Byrd said.

Byrd opened his regular morning meeting with reporters by saying: "Mr. Meese has become the crown jewel of the sleaze factor in Reagan administration history."

Byrd said he usually would not call on any official to resign who hadn't been indicted for a crime, "but we're talking about the top law enforcement officer in this country."

"It's just cloud after cloud after cloud, building in layers over his head to the point where all confidence in this agency is being seriously eroded," Byrd said.

"The president ought to ask somebody, if he doesn't want to ask him himself, to ask Mr. Meese to step aside, step down," Byrd said.

Billions of stamps needed for postal rate change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-seven tractor-trailers backed up to a Kansas City, Mo., loading dock earlier this month to collect their quarry — six billion "E" stamps that had been salted away in a limestone cave for the next increase in postal rates.

It was one step in the complex process of raising postal rates that began March 4, when the independent Postal Rate Commission recommended a sweeping series of rate increases, including a 25-cent first-class stamp. The rate increase takes effect April 3.

Assistant Postmaster General Gordon C. Morison knew there would not be enough time to print new stamps to meet the nation's 100 million-a-day stamp appetite.

So he turned to the "E" stamps that had been stored in Kansas City for more than a year. The stamps have no denomination — when they were printed, no one knew just how large a rate increase would be enacted.

"We printed six billion. It takes about 13.6 billion stamps to make a rate change. Six billion stamps probably will last us around 45 to 60 days...in that period of time we can print enough with denominations to get the next six billion stamps out there and replenish the inventory," Morison said in an interview.

"If we waited to get the rate change (to start printing stamps)...there would be pockets of shortages throughout the country," he said.

It took four days to finish loading the leased tractor-trailers, which fanned out across the nation delivering the stamps to sectional postal centers for distribution to local post offices.

Last Wednesday, the day after the Postal Service board of governors put its formal seal of approval on the new rates, the special stamps went on sale across the nation.

While the public will likely take most notice of the new "E" stamps, it takes no less than 45 different postal items to get through a rate change, according to Morison.

There are the six billion 25-cent stamps to follow the E stamps, plus millions of 1- and 3-cent stamps that will be needed to make up the new rates for people using up old stamps.

There's postal stationery — envelopes and postal cards bearing the new rates — plus new stamps bearing the 45-cent international rate and stamps with the new bulk rates, non-profit rates, Express Mail rates, official mail rates for government use and even special "E" envelopes to mail Savings Bonds.

And for each type of stamp, more than one form is printed — for example "E" stamps will come in coils, booklets and sheets; there will be three different booklets of the current 28-cent Jack London stamp, new booklets of a 25-cent pheasant stamp and other new items, Morison said.

To print the stamps needed for the changeover, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing used 915,000 pounds of ink and 4,600 tons of paper, Morison said. He wasn't sure how much glue was used.

"I don't think people realize," how many stamps it takes, he said, commenting that many people ask why the undenominated stamps are used during changeovers.

If all the new stamps required were stacked one on top of another — the thin way — he said, the pile would be 571 miles tall.

Many people buy stamps in rolls of 100, he said. If all the rolls needed for the changeover were stretched out, they would go around the Earth twice at the equator, with a strip 5,256 miles long leftover.

The other popular sales method is the booklet, he noted, with the consumer seeing only a little folder a few inches long.

"If we laid out all the stamp booklets we are producing they would stretch 10,623 miles, or a round trip between San Francisco and China, so that's why we think we have enough booklets," he said.

Indeed, the last time rates changed, booklets proved to be the major problem, he said, with supplies never able to keep up with demand.

This time he is determined to have enough.

In addition, Morison said, postal and business forms have to be converted to the new rates, decals changed in vending machines, rate charts replaced, new software produced for computer mail terminals and postal scales changed.

In addition to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the American Bank Note Co. has contracted to print some new stamp booklets to help in the changeover.

Then comes the problem of getting the new stamps into the hands of the public — at a time when budget problems imposed by Congress have forced a curtailment of hours at many offices.

To help, Postmaster General Anthony Frank has ordered offices to extend their hours during the next two weeks. In addition flyers will be sent to homes to encourage purchase of stamps by mail.

Plus, telephone stamp sales have also been extended nationwide. Callers can use credit cards to buy stamps by calling 1-800-STAMP24.

Officials don't expect people to be happy paying more, but Morison says he hopes at least for fewer complaints about the appearance of the "E" stamps.

Past undenominated stamps have been rather plain stamps with the head of an eagle. The E stamp has a colorful space-based image of the Earth because, Morison says, "over the years we have been besieged by the public with requests for pretty stamps."

With all this effort, when will they start thinking about the next change and planning an "F" stamp?

"Theoretically, you could have a requirement for a substitute stamp in several fashions, for example if we didn't have the printing capabilities for stamps for some reason, we would have stamps to tide us over. Or if we had a lawsuit that would change the rates suddenly on us, either higher or lower."

- Keep ladders and trimming tools away from overhead wires.
- Don't dig if you suspect there are underground wires–call us first!
- Make sure you're clear of all wires when installing or removing a TV antenna.

Please remember, think about where your power lines are before you work around the house. They may be above or below ground. Find out the exact location, or you might become just another statistic. And that's the shocking truth.

'Shoplifting harness' inventor fined $500

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — A Winnipeg man who proudly claimed to be the inventor of a specialized shoplifting harness has been fined $500 for a $21 theft.

Gerard Edmond Neault, 51, pleaded guilty Tuesday to stealing two pizzas, chip dip and a magazine from a Safeway store by hooking the items to the harness he wore under his overcoat.

Neault told provincial court Judge Kris Stefanson he invented the shoplifting device, claiming it enables him to do twice the work of a younger man.

Neault, arrested Feb.13, said he began shoplifting two years ago to get back at the authorities who forced him to spend time in jail on a charge of mischief.

"Besides, Safeway was such an attractive and easy target," he said, adding he never steals from the friendlier corner food stores.

He asked the court to employ similar inventiveness and grant him a discharge. However, Stefanson said Neault's explanation worsened the crime.

"In my view, that is much more serious than the normal shoplifting when somebody walks by and impulsively takes something," he said.

Fighter crashes, killing pilot

LANDSHUT, West Germany (AP) — A French jet fighter plane crashed and exploded today in a wooded area about a mile from a nuclear power plant, killing the pilot, officials said.

There was no danger of a nuclear accident from the crash, said Alfons Metzger, a spokesman for the state of Bavaria's Interior Ministry.

The Mirage jet fighter went down near the Isar nuclear power plant located at the village of Ohu, said police in the nearby city of Landshut. It burst into flames and exploded on impact, a police spokesman said.

He said wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

The plane had taken off from the Strasbourg-Entzheim air base in the suburbs of Strasbourg and was on a routine mission, according to a French air force spokesman. The identity of the pilot was not released.

Aircraft are normally barred from flying over nuclear power plants in West Germany, Metzger said. Still, the two-reactor facility is built to resist damage in plane crashes, plant officials said.

Minister, Catholics meet

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Tom King, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, met Tuesday with leaders of the main Roman Catholic political party in an effort to resolve a political stalemate in the troubled province.

King and leaders of the Social Democratic and Labor Party (SDLP) conferred for about two hours on the political situation and new surge of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland.

SDLP leader John Hume said after the meeting, "We are ready to sit down and talk with anyone," including the Ulster Unionists who represent the Protestant majority.

Hume said the negotiations would have to be about "how we solve the problem in our society" rather than who wins power. "We believe we should be talking face to face with the Unionists. The sooner we get there the better," he added.

Hume said his delegation told King of their party's desire to see all factions work together to create stability in the British province, where more than 2,600 people have been killed in sectarian violence since 1969.

A British government statement said the meeting "had been arranged to consider the possiblity of moving to a wider dialogue, involving the constitutional parties, about the future government of Northern Ireland."

The British Broadcasting Corporation reported King and the party leaders discussed setting up of some form of power-sharing administration involving Protestants and Catholics.

Chun to be charged with embezzlement

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Former President Chun Doo-hwan's younger brother confessed to stealing a fortune in cash, land and stocks and will be charged with embezzling at least $9.3 million, prosecutors announced today.

Senior Prosecutor Kang Won-il said Chun Kyung-hwan broke down early today after 20 hours of interrogation and admitted he embezzled funds during his seven years as head of the semi-official Saemaul (New Community) Movement.

Kang said Chun, who at first denied the charges, confessed after being shown evidence and said he used the money for land and stock speculation.

"Mr. Chun has largely admitted to most of the charges after prosecutors showed him evidence and through cross-examination," Kang said.

Kang said formal corruption and embezzlement charges were being prepared and Chun would be charged today or Thursday. If convicted, Chun could receive punishments ranging from 10 years imprisonment to the death sentence.

Prosecutors said Chun still denied charges that he peddled government influence and diverted funds overseas, according to Kang.

Officials said he also blamed his surbordinates for taking most of the funds from Saemaul, a huge nationwide organization founded in 1971 to promote urban and rural development.

But Kang, who has headed the investigation, said there was extensive evidence implicating Chun as the key figure in massive corruption involving embezzlement, influence peddling and extorting stocks, land and money from businesses.

"My investigators have already secured enough evidence to incriminate and prosecute Chun," he said.

Prosecutors said Chun was implicated in the misappropriation of $9.3 million. They said investigators were checking evidence Chun embezzled another $6 million.

About 200 Saemaul and government officials have been questioned about corruption or covering it up to protect former President Chun and his family.

Five suspects were charged with embezzlement and fraudulent land sales Tuesday, prosecutors said, two of them top Saemaul officials and brothers-in-law of the younger Chun.

Former President Chun, who has not been implicated in the Saemaul scandal, is on a private tour of the United States.

Opposition parties are demanding the former president return to South Korea immediately to explain his role in the Saemaul scandal. Opposition leaders charge the former president must have been involved.

Widespread government corruption was long suspected under the authoritarian Chun regime. But criticism of the president and his family were not tolerated and the allegations were ignored.

The younger Chun resigned as Saemaul chief in 1987 after being linked to underworld gangsters. He fled to Japan last April when news of the government probe surfaced, but returned two days later to face questioning.

President Roh Tae-woo, who took power Feb. 25, is thought to have approved the Saemaul probe to discredit the former president and end his predecessor's attempts to retain power and influence within the government.

Man on trial for trying to rewrite Nazi history

By JOHN F. BURNS
New York Times News Service

TORONTO — For weeks now, a district courtroom here has resounded with testimony about Nazi vans in Belgrade, the installations at Auschwitz and mass executions in tle German-occupied Crimea as witnesses have taken the stand in to examine in minute detail the fate of European Jews during World War II.

But the man on trial here is not one of the two dozen death camp guards and Nazi collaborators living in Canada who were identified by a government inquiry last year as deserving prosecution. The accused, Ernst Zundel, is being tried not for complicity in Nazi crimes but for the way that he has tried to rewrite the history of them.

Zundel, 49, was a boy in a Black Forest town when the war ended. Now, four decades later, he is a major figure in what he and his associates call the "revisionist community" — an international network of men and women who say the Nazi crime, at least as presented in the standard histories of World War II, never happened.

Among other things, Zundel, a former graphic artist, has published such tracts as "The Hitler We Loved and Why." In the trial here, he is charged with knowingly publishing a false and injurious report as the publisher in Canada of "Did Six Million Really Die?" a 32-page booklet that has become a handbook among anti-Semites.

The pamphletis an attempt to refute what Zundel, in a foreword to the Canadian edition, described as "the biggest money-raising racket of all time, namely the Holocaust Lie."

A trial in 1985 ended with conviction for Zundel and a 15-month jail term. The conviction was set aside last year by the Ontario Court of Appeal, which cited errors in jury selection and the judge's directions to the jury. The Ontario provincial government then ordered a new trial.

It is a decision that has been widely questioned, not least by civil libertarians who say a dangerous precedent is set by putting a man on trial for propagating his beliefs, even when the beliefs are offensive.

The court found that the constitutional guarantee to free speech did not invalidate the provision in the criminal code under which Zundel is being tried. The provision, enacted in 1892, sets a maximum jail term of two years for "everyone who willfully publishes a statement, tale or news that he knows is false and that causes or is likely to cause injury or mischief to a public interest."

Another concern is that the trials have given the "revisionists" a platform. Judge Ronald Thomas directed at the outset that the prosecution had no need to prove that the genocide of the Jews occurred, saying it was "so notorious as not to be the subject of dispute," and there had been hopes that the scope for Zundel's witnesses would be limited. But recent weeks have seen a procession of Zundel sympathizers, many of them Americans, taking the stand in an effort to show that Zundel might reasonably have doubted the truth of the genocide.

Some of these have made claims so grotesque as to provoke Thomas's scorn was a Swedish citizen, Ditlieb Felderer, who said that Auschwitz, so far from having gas chambers, had provided a swimming pool, dance hall and concert auditorium for its inmates.

In a similar vein, Douglas Christie, Zundel's defense counsel, suggested at one point that "gassing vans" the Nazis used to put Jews to death in Belgrade may in fact have been used for disinfecting passengers, and that references to 97,000 casualties in official Nazi reports may have been a reference to items of clothing, not corpses.
