Judge rules Exxon overcharged for oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled on Friday that Exxon Corp. overcharged $895.5 million for crude oil from a Texas field and ordered the nation's largest oil company to reimburse the public through state-run conservation programs.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Flannery ruled that Exxon improperly classified "old" oil under federal price controls from its Hawkins field as "new" oil between 1975 and 1981 in order "to unjustly reap huge profits."

The refund is the biggest ever awarded under the 1973 Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, which set up a two-tier system of federal price controls on domestic oil production immediately after the Arab oil embargo.

The Department of Energy has estimated that consumers were overcharged as much as $10 billion under the law until President Reagan removed all price controls on oil eight days after taking office in 1981.

"From what we understand of the judge's ruling, we believe it is incorrect and unfair. We will proceed promptly in the courts to attempt to correct this decision," Exxon said in a statement read by James A. Morakis, manager of press services in New York.

"Without any doubt, the investments involved would not have been made if regulations now being used by the court had been in effect at the time. This retroactive application would penalize Exxon and more than 2,300 other companies and individuals owning interests in the Hawkins field."

If the ruling is upheld, the Exxon statement said, payments made by Exxon would be significantly offset by payments recovered from other producters and royalty owners in the field.

Flannery said Exxon improperly classified "old" oil at the Hawkins field as "new" oil and "thereby increased the average cost of crude oil of all refiners."

"The broad scattering of the ill effects of Exxon's wrongdoing renders impossible the tracing of the overcharges to their ultimate victims and the calculation of the precise damages suffered by each," he said.

The judge ordered the money put into an escrow account in the Treasury Department, which will then distribute it among all the states. "Each state must then use the funds under one or more of five existing federal energy conservation programs," he said in the 90-page ruling.

One program finances residential weatherization for homes of the poor and elderly while a second assists them in paying energy bills. The other programs give states money to devise energy conservation programs, reduce energy consumption in schools and hospitals and promote conservation in small businesses.

Flannery rejected the Energy Department's petition to assess $38 million in civil penalties against the company in addition to ordering the refund.

"This is not to excuse Exxon's behavior," he said. "Exxon pushed the agency at every turn and probed each nuance in the regulations to interpret them to Exxon's advantange.

"Still," the judge said, "the Energy Department has not proven...that Exxon in fact gerrymandered production at the Hawkins Fields in an attempt knowingly to circumvent price controls."

Exxon owned two-thirds of the production from the 10,000-acre Hawkins field about 20 miles north of Tyler, Texas. The field had been producing oil since the early 1940s and, under the regulation of the Texas Railroad Commission, was producing about 112,000 barrels a day in the early 1970s.

As the field became exhausted, Exxon launched enhanced recovery projects to keep the production going. Nonetheless, production began to decline in 1977, falling to about 45,000 barrels a day when oil prices were decontrolled in 1981.

"Despite the steady decline in production, an increasing percentage of oil was accounted for Exxon as upper-tier, higher-priced oil, until beginning, June 1, 1979, almost all of the then 62,000 barrels per day was classified as new oil," Judge Flannery's ruling said.

Under the 1973 law, oil was divided into two categories, "old," and "new." Any production above 1972 levels from a particular field was treated as "new" oil that could command higher prices. Any production at or below 1972 levels from a particular field was considered "old" oil subject to more stringent controls.

Exxon had contended that the field was exempt from the old oil controls because of the enhanced recovery programs it had launched to extend the life of the field.

Even if the field was not exempt from the regulations, Exxon argued in the case, the oil went to Exxon's refineries and they, rather than the public, should get any refund for the overcharges.

Clark's passing mourned

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The wife and family of Barney Clark were bearing his body home Friday, leaving "feelings of disappointment and sadness" with doctors and nurses at the hospital where he lived 112 days with his artificial heart.

Bradley Fey, spokesman for the Mormon Church in Seattle, said Clark's wife, Una Loy, and several other members of her family were flying to Seattle and expected to meet with their church stake president Friday night to plan the funeral.

Services for Clark, who died Wednesday at age 62, have been set for Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Federal Way stake center, about 20 miles south of Seattle. He is to be buried at Washington Memorial Park in Federal Way.

Clark, the first person to receive a permanent mechanical heart, died at the University of Utah Medical Center when his circulatory system collapsed and several of his organs failed almost simultaneously.

After the retired dentist's brain showed no function for several hours, the air-driven plastic heart he received Dec. 2 was switched off.

Hospital spokesman John Dwan said Friday the university was receiving telephone calls and messages from throughout the world, most from "common, ordinary, everyday folk."

President Reagan telephoned Mrs. Clark Thursday to express his sympathy at the death of "a brave and courageous man," the White House said.

At the hospital, "everything is returning to a normal routine," Dwan said. But, "there's definitely a feeling of letdown.

"There are feelings of sadness and disappointment. The excitement of caring for Dr. Clark pervaded the hospital. The sadness continues," he said.

The members of Clark's medical team "are not resting. They have other patients," Dwan said.

Former Midlander accused of soliciting

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS — A former Midland businessman has been accused of soliciting teen-age girls for a high-priced prostitution ring by placing ads for babysitters in Dallas newspapers.

William Howard Lathrop was released from jail in the affluent suburb of University Park Wednesday night after posting $20,000 bail on two counts of compelling prostitution.

The 54-year-old independent real estate agent, a 1947 graduate of Midland High School who once owned the Lathrop Diamond Bit Co. of Midland, is suspected of forcing into prostitution at least six girls aged 15 to 17, Dallas vice division investigators said Thursday.

Police said he placed classified ads seeking "pretty, clean, active, nice" baby sitters for jobs offering extensive travel and a top-dollar salary.

"This is not an on-the-street type of deal at all," an undercover vice officer, who asked not to be identified, told The Dallas Morning News. "You're talking big money and everything like that...You're not talking about your run-of-the-mill pimp-prostitute deal."

Lathrop could not be located for comment.

His arrest came after a criminal complaint was filed by a 15-year-old girl who told a Dallas police officer she had worked several months as a prostitute for Lathrop.

Reagan says U.S. into recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared Friday that "we are definitely into a recovery," and his chief economist rushed out a more bullish 1983 forecast calling for stronger growth, lower inflation and unemployment receding below 10 percent by year's end.

The administration moved in record time to replace its original, eight-week-old forecast, which had been widely criticized by experts in and out of government for being unusually pessimistic about the prospects for a healthy rebound from the deep 1981-82 recession.

A batch of unexpectedly good economic reports, particularly an emerging housing boom and falling oil prices, prompted chief White House economist Martin S. Feldstein to bury the initial forecast.

The new forecast predicts 4.7 per cent inflation-adjusted growth between the fourth quarters of 1982 and 1983, up from a weak 3.1 percent, as first suggested. Inflation is now expected to be 4.5 percent, down from 5.6 percent.

The civilian unemployment rate, previously expected to stick at its current rate of 10.4 percent through the end of the year, is now predicted to dip below 10 percent by December. Exactly how much, Feldstein wouldn't say, but he indicated the jobless rate would barely break through the double digit mark.

Feldstein also said the improved forecast will mean slight reductions in the record budget deficits expected for 1983 and 1984, but he cautioned that the reductions would be minimal.

The economist offered no hope, however, that interest rates — still unusually high — would come down soon.

At a brief news conference after the new forecast was released, Reagan was as upbeat as Feldstein's outlook.

"With this recovery, the stage it is, I think we've proven our point, that our system (economic program) — in spite of all the maligning that took place before it was even underway and having a chance to operate — has proven its success," the president said.

Speaking to reporters one day after signing a $4.6 billion recession-relief law to aid the nation's unemployed, Reagan said the recovery "will bring far more jobs to unemployed Americans than could ever be created by new federal jobs programs."

The new law is designed to create about 500,000 jobs for the 11.5 million people now out of work. A 500,000 reduction in the number of unemployed would carry the civilian jobless rate a notch below 10 percent.

Reagan also said he remains opposed to any new taxes at this point of the recovery, even some energy use tax, which some experts are advocating to offset the drop in oil prices.

"On balance it looks like the recession reached bottom in December and we're on our way up," Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters at the White House.

In burying the first forecast, prepared in late December and issued Jan. 31, the administration broke the government's custom of waiting at least until the summer to revise its annual forecasts.

Feldstein, who had been the leading force in drafting the initial forecast, has been criticized within the administration for being overly pessimistic.

However, Feldstein had argued that a more cautious forecast was better than the unrealistically rosy forecasts the administration had issued in 1981 and 1982, only to be embarrassed when a predicted boom turned into a big bust.

Feldstein said he was revising the forecast because of a growing outcry by economists to update it in light of all the favorable trends that have occurred since the start of the year.

Son of Reagan's tax lawyer booked for murder

PALOS VERDES ESTATES, Calif. (AP) — The son of President Reagan's tax lawyer was booked for investigation of murder Friday after his mother's nude, battered body was found in a bedroom of the family home, officials said.

Michael David Miller, 20, was taken into custody after an emotional embrace with his father, Roy D. Miller, who has worked with Reagan for about 15 years.

Marguerite Miller, 52, appeared to have died from a blow to the head, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Sgt. Al Sett said. He said the murder weapon had not been determined, but several items were taken from the home as evidence.

It was the second domestic tragedy in a family that friends described as extremely close. Michael's older brother, the Millers' only other child, committed suicide in 1981 while undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Authorities said Michael, an unemployed health food enthusiast who played the violin, had been undergoing psychiatric treatment for depression in recent months.

"The son, Michael David Miller, voluntarily came to the police department here," said Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy Jerry Beck. "An interview was conducted with him, at which time he made admissions concerning the death of his mother."

Authorities refused to say what those admissions were.

Miller, 53, first saw his wife's bloody eyeglasses as he entered the front door of their modest home in this small, exclusive city some 25 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

"He called his wife's name, and when there was no response, he went to a neighbors' house and called the police," said police Sgt. Ed Jaakola.

Police found her body in the bedroom, but said Miller never saw his wife's body. Sett said an autopsy was scheduled for Friday afternoon to determine the exact cause of death.

It was the first murder in three years in this exclusive Los Angeles suburb, where million-dollar homes, flanked by tennis courts and gated courtyards and surrounded by lush, sprawling lawns, offer breathtaking vistas of the Pacific Ocean.

The younger Miller was "truly nervous and very distraught" after his father called him from a relative's home in Santa Monica and asked him to drive to the station for questioning, Sett said.

The young man had been living at home and was questioned because he was the last to be seen with his mother, Sett said.

"The main thing I have to say is to pay tribute to my wife," Miller said, appearing strained as he gazed out on the Pacific Ocean outside the police station Friday. He would not discuss his son.

"If you want anything else, I don't want to talk about it," he said.

Miller said his wife was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on Feb. 9, 1931. They both grew up in Claremont, Calif., 35 miles east of Los Angeles, and were married Aug. 9, 1952.

"I married the girl next door," he said. "We went to high school together, grammar school and Pomona College. She was a beautiful, beautiful woman.

"You don't need to talk about me. Let's talk about my wife," he said. "It's her death. It's her life we're celebrating.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for the Great Plains and rain for the Great Lakes into the Gulf states.

Tornado watch issued for area

In a 30-minute time span Friday evening, the Permian Basin's first spring storm breezed through a seven-county area at 35 mph, but dropped only small hail and light rainshowers.

While a tornado watch was issued at 6 p.m. and canceled at 10 p.m. Friday, three severe thunderstorm warnings were issued by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport for Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Dawson, Gaines, Andrews and Martin counties from 6:15 to 6:45 p.m.

A watch indicates conditions are right for the development of the specified storm systems while a warning means severe weather is occurring.

Although marble-size hail was reported in Ector and Midland counties, Andrews, Lamesa, Stanton, Rankin, Big Spring and Crane reported only light rainshowers.

According to the weather service, a cold front from the northwest rolled through the area at 30 mph, trailing thunderstorms at 35 mph.

Today, skies should be partly cloudy with the high in the low 60s and westerly winds gusting at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be clear and colder with the low in the mid-30s. Sunday's forecast is calling for fair conditions with the high remaining in the low 60s.

The spring storm's rainfall Friday totaled .12 of an inch, bringing the total precipitation measure to .21 of an inch for the month, and 1.61 inches for the year.

Friday's high of 71 couldn't match the record high of 90 set in 1938, and the overnight low of 51 didn't come close to the record low of 20 set in 1965.

Pope Paul ushers in Global Holy Year

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II opened the first global Holy Year on Friday, tapping three times with a gold hammer on the Holy Door at St. Peter's Basilica in a ceremony televised to 24 countries.

More than 15,000 pilgrims jammed the largest church in Christendom and thousands more stood in intermittent rain in the square outside for the solemn ceremony ushering in the 1983 Holy Year of Redemption.

The jubilee, commemorating the 1,950th anniversary of Christ's crucifixion, is the first Holy Year to be celebrated simultaneously around the world so that Catholics can share its spiritual benefits without having to travel to Rome.

Similar ceremonies launching the year were held by bishops abroad, but the pope instructed them to keep expenses down, and whether a Holy Door was opened was left to each bishop's discretion. Despite the observances elsewhere, Italian and Vatican officials expect millions of pilgrims and tourists to flock to Rome before the Holy Year ends April 22, 1984.

Coincidentally, it was announced in Geneva, Switzerland, that Italy's last king, Umberto II, who died last week, willed the Shroud of Turin to the pope. The length of linen, believed by many to be Christ's burial cloth, has been the property of the royal house of Savoy since the 15th century but remained in the cathedral at Turin after Umberto's dethronement in 1946.

Vatican officials said it might be brought to Rome as part of the Holy Year celebrations.

The rain-swept crowd in St. Peter's Square broke into applause and shouted "Viva il Papa" as the the pontiff, in glistening blue-trimmed white vestments and blue-embroidered miter, carrying a gold triple-cross staff, walked under a gold and white canopy from the Apostolic Palace at the end of a procession of cardinals, other bishops and priests.

The basilica's 10-ton bell pealed, and inside, the Sistine Chapel choir sang "Elevamini Portae Aeternales" — "Lift Up, Eternal Gates."

"Aperite mihi portas iustitiae (Open the door of justice)," the pontiff chanted before he struck the gold hammer three times on the northernmost of the basilica's five front doors.

The Holy Door is sealed between Holy Years, and in past years, the pope's hammer blows were the signal for workmen to knock away the last bricks and lower the door by pulleys. But when Pope Paul VI opened the last Holy Year in 1975, he was showered with plaster, so this year the masonry was removed in advance and Vatican assistants opened the door from inside.

The pope knelt at the threshold of the opened door and prayed, rose and kissed both sides of the doorframe — another break with the past — and entered the basilica to thunderous applause from 15,000 people inside.

The 62-year-old pontiff looked tired, and his voice cracked several times during the homily, which he delivered in Italian.

He prayed that the Holy Year "may also become an appeal to the modern world, which sees justice and peace on the horizon of its desires, and yet yields ever more room to sin."

Family and friends mourn Clark's death

(Contined from Page 1A)

"There will be a fairly large number from the medical staff at the funeral" — between seven and 12, he said.

Among them will be surgeons Dr. William DeVries and Dr. Lyle Joyce and their wives; social worker Margaret Miller; Dr. Willem Kolff, head of the university's Artificial Organs Division; Dr. Robert Jarvik, the heart's inventor, and several nurses, Dwan said.

Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president for health sciences, also plans to attend.

It is unusual for doctors and nurses to attend a patient's funeral, Dwan said. "It's simply indicative of the high esteem they had for him."

At a news briefing Thursday, Peterson euologized Clark as a "hero and winner" who had foregone a peaceful death from heart disease for an uncertain and frequently painful life with the untried heart.

"He did a great thing and as other people do get a quality of life that is more obviously satisfactory, they'd better thank Barney Clark," Peterson said.

Western Union said Friday that several dozen telegrams had been forwarded to the hospital for the Clark family. Gov. Scott Matheson ordered the flag at the state Capitol to half staff until the funeral.

Freeway commuters in downtown Salt Lake on Friday saw a billboard reading, "In Grateful Memory, Barney Clark."

Terry Reid, vice president of Reagan Outdoor Advertising Inc. said the firm donated the $3,000 sign as a community service.

In nearby Layton, police said a Utah State Prison parolee was arrested after several people reported a man, claiming to be making a survey for two radio stations, had sought money to pay for Clark's hospital bill.

Edward Cornish, 29, of Layton, was booked for investigation of soliciting without a license, public intoxication, theft by deception and giving false information to police.

Police said a man told people he was making a survey of how people felt about the artificial heart surgery, then said if they donated money he would have their names read on the air.

Hospital officials say Clark's entire medical bill of between $150,000 to $200,000 already has been paid by private donations.

Former Midlander accused of soliciting

"She told him how the suspect had come on to her," the undercover investigator said. "...He had told her he would give her money if she would do favors for his friends — sexual favors."

The girl said Lathrop would pay the girls "a couple hundred dollars each time" to have sex with his clients at expensive hotels, the investigator said.

"She stated that the guy had threatened her and that he had beaten her up on several occasions."

The teen-ager named five other high school girls who were forced to perform sexual acts for money, investigators said.

After obtaining an affidavit from a second girl, investigators obtained the two arrest warrants.

Lathrop was arrested about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at his business, Colonial Southern Investment Corp.

University Park police said they have been investigating Lathrop since 1979, after a woman accused him of harassing and assaulting her, said police Sgt. E.L. Holman. She also accused him of forcing her into prostitution, but refused to file criminal charges, Holman said.

In 1980, the classified ads began to appear, promising trips for baby sitters to cities such as Acapulco, Rome and Paris, he said.

"It even listed what salary he was willing to pay. It was astronomical," Holman said, noting that some of the ads offered up to $600 a week.

The ads specified that baby sitters must be between 16 and 25 and attractive, he said.

An undercover officer, who was in her early 30s, was sent to Lathrop's residence to answer the ad but was turned away, he said.

Some University Park parents complained several years ago about Lathrop "hanging around" their children, but there were no apparent violations, Holman said.

Lathrop was sentenced to 24 months' probation and fined $1,000 in 1978 for making a false statement to obtain food stamps, and was fined $196 for food stamp fraud, Dallas County sheriff's records show.

In 1964, Midland National Bank brought suit against Lathrop to recover $70,000 on a bad check the bank had honored. Also that year, allegations were made in a bankruptcy hearing that he had more $500,000 in a Swiss bank account.

In court testimony, Lathrop acknowledged existence of the account but denied opening it and also denied knowing how much was in it. It is not known how the case turned out.

Two more rabid skunks found in city

The numbers on Midland's rabid animal tote board rolled over twice more after Animal Control officials announced Friday two more skunks found within city limits tested positive for rabies.

The two cases boosted to 17 the number of rabid animals — 16 skunks and one horse — found within the county during the past 12 months. Eleven skunks and the horse were diagnosed as having rabies this year.

Rice Freeman Zachery, Animal Control spokeswoman, said one of the skunks was shot Tuesday by a resident in the 4600 block of Tattenham Corner. She said several dogs that may have been exposed to the disease by the skunk are being checked for current vaccinations and bites.

She said the second skunk was shot while stalking a turkey in a barn on County Road 1160 North. One dog which may have been exposed is being examined for current vaccination and bites.

"We've had at least one rabid skunk in every part of Midland, from the south to the northwest corner, in the past 12 months," Ms. Freeman Zachery said. She said that during March, six of seven skunks tested proved rabid.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said residents should report wild animals exhibiting strange behavior to Animal Control.

She said Midland County pet owners should ensure their pets are properly vaccinated. State, county and city laws require that pets be vaccinated annually against rabies.

"People are very complacent; they always think it can't happen to me, it can't happen to my dog or cat," she said. "But the situation now is such that anyone's animal probably has the opportunity to come into contact with a rabid animal."

Local pharmacist surrenders license

A Midland pharmacist voluntarily surrendered his license to the Texas State Board of Pharmacy Friday afternoon after he was arrested for allegedly delivering valium to undercover narcotics agents.

According to deputies at the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Robert Alvin Gremmel, 58, owner of Bob's Pharmacy at 3402 Thomason Drive, was arrested at the pharmacy at 2:42 p.m. when he allegedly attempted to deliver 500 valium tablets to a sheriff's department narcotic agent.

At the time of his arrest, Gremmel was served with two indictments, both charging delivery of a controlled substance. Bond was set at $5,000 on each charge.

In addition to the sheriff's office, city police officers and agents from the Texas Board of Pharmacy were involved in the 30-day investigation.

Wiring malfunction sparks blaze

DALLAS (AP) — A wiring malfunction sparked the blaze that caused $6.6 million worth of damage to the Willow Creek apartments this week, fire officials said Friday.

"The fire originated in a section of aluminum wiring extending vertically within the exterior apartment wall from a baseboard wall outlet to the ceiling plate," fire investigators said in a statement.

Wooden wall studs and paper-backed insulation were ignited from the heat generated by the malfunctioning wiring, the statement said.

The fire spread to the attic without breaking through to the exterior of the wall, the statement said.

Owners of the apartments have said the wiring was being replaced in the 824-unit apartment complex.

Student stabbed during argument

HOUSTON (AP) — A 20-year-old high school junior was stabbed in the arm after an argument with three girl students erupted on a school bus, Houston school officials said.

Officials said Henry Garrett was taken to a hospital for treatment of knife wounds in his arm. The wounds were stitched up and he was released, they said.

Geri Konigsberg, a Houston Independent School District spokeswoman, said the dispute arose when a girl's foot was stepped on aboard a crowded school bus.

When the bus arrived at Sam Houston High School and the students alighted, the dispute continued, she said. It ended when one of the three unidentified girls involved drew a pocket knife and stabbed Garrett.

Pharmacist allegedly fenced Tylenol

FORT WORTH (AP) — Bond has been set at $50,000 for a pharmacist accused in a federal complaint of purchasing stolen Tylenol tablets.

A complaint filed Thursday by Assistant U.S. Attorney Jimmy Tallant alleged that Alvin Eugene Langley, 51, operated as a fence for an employee of the McNeil Pharmaceutical Center.

According to an affidavit of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, the employee has admitted stealing Tylenol and other drugs "for several months" and delivering them to the pharmacy Langley operates in southeast Fort Worth.

U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchey set Langley's bond and told him not to comment on the charges until he received legal advice.

Forth Worth court house evacuated

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Civil Courts Building was evacuated for about two hours Friday while workers fixed a freon leak in a basement air conditioner, authorities said.

Several people reported feeling ill after inhaling the freon, and one employee, Don Bowen, was treated and released from Harris Hospital.

Two ambulances and a dozen firefighters were called to the building about 8 a.m.

The building houses state district and county courts.

Panel charged with forming immigration policy

Gov. Mark White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White joked to his task force on immigration Friday that "guards on the door" would let none escape the potentially grueling sessions the committee faces before May 30 when it is expected to produce a "consensus" policy on illegal aliens.

White appointed the 27-member panel earlier this month. The panel's recommendations will be passed along to the Congress for use in formulating new national policies on immigration.

"We, as the state with the longest border with Mexico and many of the gravest difficulties because of immigration policy and its failure, have a special opportunity and special responsibility to make suggestions to the Congress at this time," said White, as he opened the group's first meeting.

Made up of lawyers, public officials, labor leaders and community activists, the task force will consider proposals for dealing with almost one million illegal aliens estimated to be in Texas.

"I would challenge you to do great things," White told them.

The members range from Houston Chamber of Commerce president and former Mayor Louie Welch to Leonel Castillo, who was appointed by President Carter to be commissioner of the U.S. Naturalization and Immigration Service, a job he held until 1979.

The task force is chaired by Houston lawyer Charles Foster, a former president of the American Immigration Lawyers Association.

For years, debate has focused on whether illegal aliens now living in the U.S. should be given legal status and whether aliens should be licensed to come into the U.S. to work temporarily.

White has said he expects efforts to cut down on the number of illegal aliens coming to Texas will have to include sanctions against employers who hire them. The problem, he said, is to avoid a system of identification so difficult or penalties so harsh that employers will be afraid to hire anyone Hispanic.

Pollsters Lance Tarrance and Associates of Houston surveyed as many illegal aliens as they could and estimated that Texas has between 600,000 and 900,000 illegal aliens living within its borders. The researchers also informed the task force that illegal aliens appear to come to Texas to make money and that few speak English.

After White spoke to the panel, he told reporters that congressional committees grappling with the problem will be glad to get input.

Police hunt for baby abducted from hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Police searched Friday for a newborn boy who was snatched from his mother's arms by a woman masquerading as a nurse at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Police and FBI agents had no leads Friday in the abduction of Harold Deshawn Patterson, who was taken from a fourth-floor room at 6:15 p.m. Thursday, said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

Gretchen Patterson, 18, told investigators she was feeding her son when a woman dressed as a nurse came into the room and said she needed to take the baby for a checkup.

The woman walked away with the baby "at a fast pace," said FBI spokesman Joe Hersley.

Miss Patterson became suspicious because the woman wore a blouse unlike those of the nurses, said police investigator James Shivers.

Patients in a room across the hall also became alarmed when they saw the woman run down the hall through a set of double doors that led to an elevator.

Miss Patterson rushed to a nurses' station to get help. The nurses called security officers who immediately secured the hospital's exits, but did not find the woman.

Shivers said Miss Patterson, who is unemployed, believed the abductor had visted her room in street clothes after the baby was born Monday, saying she was looking for another patient.

The mother "is upset and acting like a mama ought to act that just lost her baby," he said.

FBI agents suspected a kidnapping after employees could not identify the nurse.

"In a situation like this," said Hersley, "it would very obviously appear to be an abduction."

Police said they believed the woman may have been a Parkland employee because she apparently was familiar with Miss Patterson's condition. Miss Patterson and her baby were to have been released Wednesday, but were kept an additional day because the mother was running a fever.

Shivers said police would pore through some 4,000 photographs of present and former Parkland employees to see if any match the description of the kidnapper.

Alexander: Harris has new lawyer

NEW YORK (AP) — Writer Shana Alexander says that Jean Harris the convicted killer of Scarsdale diet doctor Herman Tarnower, has a new lawyer who will try to win her a second trial.

Mrs. Harris is serving a 15-years-to-life sentence for the 1980 murder of Tarnower, her lover for 14 years. The U.S. Supreme Court earlier this week refused to hear her appeal that her trial was unfair.

"Losing that just cleared the decks for (the lawyer) to present the new evidence that he has found," Miss Alexander said Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"The only way she can have a new trial is if there is new evidence. He believes he's found it and within a week or two he'll be making an announcement, he and Mrs. Harris together, and filing papers for a new trial," she said.

Mrs. Harris' new lawyer is Michael Kennedy. Her Supreme Court appeal was handled by Herald Price Fahringer and the trial by Joel Aurnou.

Miss Alexander champions Mrs. Harris in her book about the killing and trial, "Very Much a Lady."

Ted Turner

ISLE OF PALMS, S.C. (AP) — Robert E. Turner IV, the son of communications and sports magnate Ted Turner, was rescued unharmed two miles from the beach after he got into trouble while windsurfing in high waves.

"I knew I was going to make it but I was sure glad to be rescued," said the younger Turner, a student at The Citadel in nearby Charleston.

Turner, 19, was rescued Monday evening by the Isle of Palms Rescue squad after they received a report that someone was in trouble off the beach.

Turner said he went wind surfing about 3 p.m. and had been on the water for about an hour when he decided to return to shore.

But he said the harness on his windsurfer malfunctioned and the winds and high waves began pushing him out to sea. He was spotted as he tried to paddle back to shore.

Richard Nixon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of California Board of Regents has asked officials at its Irvine campus to renew a bid for the Richard M. Nixon presidential library, an assistant chancellor said.

Discussions about bringing the library to Irvine collapsed after the faculty decided in February not to vote on the issue, but instead established a committee to investigate the matter.

The Richard M. Nixon Archives Foundation had told UC Irvine that the campus was out of the running due to the delays caused by the organization of that committee.

However, the foundation's site negotiator, John C. Whitaker, said Thursday that he "can't rule it out," and UC Irvine could still win the facility if it acts quickly with the regents' support.

At the regents' request, the UC Irvine faculty committee is scheduled to meet Monday to reconsider submitting a proposal to Nixon's representatives, Assitant Chancellor Ramon Curiel said Thursday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If she'd been able to get a baby sitter, Carmen Culver, who adapted Colleen McCullough's "The Thorn Birds" into a 10-hour miniseries, might never have become a screenwriter.

"It's such an absurd tale, but it's true," said Ms. Culver, 44.

The year was 1975, and Ms. Culver, who had retired from teaching at UCLA a year before when she gave birth to twin girls, decided to take a class in writing novels.

Unfortunately, the only class on novel-writing offered by UCLA Extension was on the one night she couldn't get a baby sitter.

So what did she do? "There was a screenwriting class," she said. She enrolled in it instead.

In the class she learned of a screenwriting contest sponsored by the Sherwood Oaks film school in Hollywood. But she had only two weeks to meet the deadline.

Her solution was to hire a housekeeper — an extravagance in light of her financial situation at the time. She then bore down for some intensive writing at her improvised "office," a park bench a few blocks from her house in the San Fernando Valley.

At the end of two weeks, she submitted a finished script, titled "Willa," about a woman who overcomes sexist attitudes to become a truck driver. She won the competition.

"Willa" became her calling card and led to her first screenwriting assignment: "First You Cry," based on Betty Rollins' autobiographical story about a woman who undergoes a mastectomy.

"The Thorn Birds," starring Rachel Ward and Richard Chamberlain, is the seventh screenplay she has written in as many years.

Wilson's typewriter silenced after 40 years

NEW YORK (AP) — After 40 years and 11,424 columns about who's hot and who's not, pioneering gossip columnist Earl Wilson hung up his typewriter ribbons Friday in favor of a life of leisure.

Despite suffering from Parkinson's disease, a nerve disorder, the 75-year-old writer churned out three columns a week for the New York Post and the Field Newspaper Service.

The first priority now that he's retired will be to take it easy.

"For the first few weeks I'm not going to do much of anything," Wilson said in a telephone interview from his Manhattan office.

Later, he plans to re-catalog and file the reams of material he has gathered during 50 years in the business.

Although Wilson said he needs to rest, he spent his first day of retirement in his office sorting through hundreds of letters, telegrams and cards he received from both stars and fans who say they will miss him.

"It's marvelous. I'm really touched," he said of the tributes.

But as always, the columnist could not resist a joke or two.

He wrote in his final "Last Night with Earl Wilson" column that actor Lee Marvin called to ask "Who's going to pay for your meals in the future? You'll starve to death."

In the column, which was for publication in Friday's newspapers, he also quipped, "My decision to retireas a gossip columnist is the most popular thing I ever did."

"If I'd known how much everybody would be pleased I would have done it years ago," he added.

In his folksy style, Wilson also discussed the fact that columnists aresupposed to be feared.

"Nobody ever feared me," Wilson said, recalling a particular incident when he telephoned Elizabeth Taylor to ask if her split with her husband at the time was permanent.

"Hang up, Earl," she crossly told him. "I'm watching a movie."

"That ended my dreams of being a superpower," said Wilson. "It's too late. I'll never make it now."

Not true, according to rival Liz Smith, whose syndicated column appears in the New York Daily News. In her Friday column, she called Wilson "a tireless terrific reporter.

Hoosiers meet the 'houngan'

Missionaries try to convert Haitians

PONT LEACON, Haiti (AP) — This is where the Hoosiers met the houngan.

"The other night, we started hearing the drums at about 10:30. They kept getting closer, louder and louder. They built a fire right outside our gate and started performing their ritual," recalls Denny Shipley, of Lafayette, Ind.

"It was a frightening situation. At a time like that, you really start thinking about your faith," says the Rev. Ted Kittrell, also of Lafayette.

Such greetings are common for Protestant missionaries who come to Haiti seeking to convert people from voodooism and the influence of local high priests, called houngans.

"When we first got here, we passed out some religious tracts, leaflets," Shipley adds. "We figured they were getting back at us."

The group of 17 Indiana and Illinois natives on vacation came to this village of tumbledown shacks, 70 miles north of the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince, to build a small church, spending $10,000 donated by their home congregations.

The concrete church, which can be seen for miles in the barren valley, is the latest of more than 40 chapels built in Haiti by Free Methodist Church missionaries. Other Protestant sects, particularly Baptists, have made major inroads in this nation, where the state religion is Roman Catholicism.

The church- and school-building projects invariably result in dozens of conversions, church members say.

"These are really good projects. The people here are inspired by the faith and commitment of the visitors (the church builders). There are always many Haitians who are converted," says Warren Land, mission board director for the Friends of Haiti Organization.

"The community is very poor," adds the Rev. Edward J. Toussaint, who had been holding services in a brush hut that was home to roosters and goats during the day. "We had no possibility of a real church. This is the answer to our prayers. It will be used as a school, and it will help the people who want to come to church."

Missionary projects to Haiti are popular with U.S. churches because of the "low cost, compared to going to Central Africa or somewhere farther away," said one Protestant church official who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

As many as 30 percent of the Caribbean nation's 6 million people are now Protestants.

"It's changing now, but for a long time, the Catholic Church in Haiti didn't do much out in the country," says a Roman Catholic lay worker, who asked not to be identified. "The Protestant missionaries really came in and paid attention to the needs of the poor people in the countryside."

The lay worker also said that the number of Protestant conversions is most significant because the Protestant missionaries tell the Haitians they must first renounce voodoo, which has not been strictly required by Catholics.

AP Laserphoto

Protestant missionary Denny Shipley of Layfayette, Ind., left, talks to the Rev. Edward Touissant of Pont Leacon, Haiti. Touissant must battle superstitions in order to convert Haitians from voodism. American missionaries are building the church seen in the background. The minister now holds services in a hut that is home to roosters and goats.

A Roman Catholic nun from Boston has for four decades run Haiti's only school for handicapped children. But generally, people here say, the Protestant missionaries have been more active in the poorest areas of the country, while the Catholic hierarchy in Haiti had been closely identified with the autocratic government.

Most Haitians have traditionally combined Catholic worship with voodoo — religious beliefs and practices, brought here from Africa, that emphasize magic and trances.

The people interchange Catholic saints with voodoo spirits and praying with church priests while paying homage to the houngans, who act as religious leaders, doctors, counselors and social arbiters in many peasant villages.

"When they come to the altar, we tell them before they can go with Christ, they must first get rid of everything that belongs to the devil. They must go home and get their drums, scarves and robes, then we burn them," Toussaint says.

The houngans don't directly interfere, he says, but they often pay visits to the new converts. Their methods are usually psychological — such as the ceremonies that confront visiting missionaries.

Usually, though, the converts stay with their new religion, Toussaint says.

Although Midwestern missionaries might arrive in Haiti smiling at voodoo lore, their exposure to it can be unnerving.

Greg Ennis, an Indianpolis native who with his wife runs a guest house for missionaries in Port-au-Prince, says he respects the power of the voodoo beliefs.

He has seen, he says, "a girl who is possessed. She was experimenting with black magic...a woman told her she would send demons into her.

Miller not worried play will show U.S. society in bad light

PEKING (AP) — Playwright Arthur Miller, directing his play "Death of a Salesman" in China, said Friday he had no worry that it could be made into propaganda to show U.S. society in a bad light.

Miller said it "can't be made into propaganda. It is too deeply felt."

"I have the feeling the audience sitting out there is going to discover Chinese society," he told a news conference. "In some cases it won't. But I tend to think they will identify with people and their dilemma."

Miller said the play, which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1949, "deals with contemporary man's inability to find some meaning in his existence... And I think it's probably true here."

The whole world, he said, "has the problem of how society is to serve man and how the human being is not to be wasted.

"Everybody knows we have terrific problems in the United States. I think they probably have the same problems here with a different face."

Miller, who arrived Sunday and began rehearsals on Monday, said Chinese actor Ying Ruocheng has done an "unbelievable job" of translating the play into Chinese and "I can follow it line by line. That could only be if the rhythm is the same."

Ying, who also translated Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" for a recent successful production here, joked: "In a way Shakespeare is easier. There are more reference books, for one thing."

Ying recently played the emperor Kublai Khan in the U.S. television series "Marco Polo," and will play the lead, Willy Loman.

He said Miller's plays "All My Sons" and "The Crucible" also were considered.

"The Crucible" is "so close to the 'Gang of Four' — about witch hunting," he said. The so-called gang, led by Chairman Mao Tse-tung's wife, Jiang Qing, now is in prison on charges of frame-ups and persecution in an effort to seize complete power in China during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

But Ying said "Death of a Salesman" was chosen because "I thought we should do the best and most typical," and with Miller here, "we can be assured it will be the King James version."

On the play's significance to Chinese society, he said, "I don't believe in direct messages. I believe we had too much of that in the past. It leads to propagandistic plays."

Miller said the actors will wear 1940s American clothing and the stage setting will be American, but "we started with my prayer that they would not try to impersonate Americans."

If the actors look like Chinese who are carrying out the same actions, "we can arrive at some level of reality," he said, adding that otherwise it would just be "a second-rate American production."

"I believe there is a universal human being," Miller said.

He said the play's history in other countries had shown people laugh and cry in the same places.

Miller said he never before had directed one of his plays being performed in a foreign language.

"It gradually began to seem feasible after the first shock," he said, and after a week of rehearsals he called it a "fantastic adventure" to learn about parallel feelings, experiences and thoughts in China.

He said that in directing, he knows what has to happen on stage every minute and the "screen" between him and the actors "gets thinner with each day."

Initial problems, he said, included Chinese actors speaking too slowly and playing too much to the audience rather than talking to each other, but these were clearing up.

Ying, who returned Jan. 20 From a five-month visit to the United States, said he did the translation in two months for the production that is scheduled to open May 7. Tickets are to cost one yuan, the equivalent of 50 cents. An average Chinese worker makes about 65 yuan a month, $33.

Chess masters play to draw

VELDEN, Austria (AP) — Grandmasters Robert Huebner of West Germany and Vassili Smyslov of the Soviet Union played to a draw Friday in their opening game of the world chess championship quarterfinals.

Huebner offered the draw after Smyslov's 55th move.

Opinions differed as to who had been stronger coming into the match.

While Willy Kaufman, a Swiss referee, said Huebner was on the defensive, Yuri Averbak, a Soviet grandmaster and head of the Soviet team, insisted that Smyslov had to fight back for the draw.

The two play again today.

Signs will change

Korea is taking a hard look at its traffic signs in preparation for its 1986 Asian Games and 1988 Summer Olympics. Authorities plan to abolish 48 of its 125 kinds of signs that have caused some confusion.

Man dies from electric shock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two city power employees received electric shocks while working in an underground power box, killing one and critically injuring the other, officials said.

Charles Michael Noto, 28, of Granada Hills was dead on arrival Thursday at Northridge Hospital Medical Center, hospital spokeswoman Marnell Jameson said.

The injured man was in "critical but stable" condition Friday in the burn unit of Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, a nurse said.

Both men worked for the city Department of Water and Power. Department officials weren't sure Friday how the accident occurred.

Police seek male stripper

VALPARAISO, Ind. (AP) — Police are seeking a man who knocked on the doors of two women and performed a strip-tease after saying he was from a company that provides male strippers for a fee.

Twice recently, a man in his 40s with thinning gray hair showed up on the doorsteps of local women, claiming to be from a Chicago company "Show and Telegram," authorities say.

A later check showed no one at "Show and Telegram," had ever heard of the man, described as polite, about 6-foot-1 and 195 pounds.

Both women let the man into their apartments and said later he was a fairly convincing male stripper.

City police Cpl. Al Eisenmenger said officers aren't sure what, if any, charge would be filed if they catch the man.

Soviets to visit Michigan town

GREENVILLE, Mich. (AP) — Two Soviet Union Embassy officials from Washington plan to visit this town of 8,000 people next month to talk about the nuclear arms race, an anti-nuclear activist says.

"I think they (the Soviets) want to hear what small-town America has to say," said Vince Laveri, a Greenville church pastor and member of the Ground Zero peace activist group organizing the Soviets' April 25 talk in the northern Michigan town.

An embassy spokesman, who refused to identify himself, said Thursday the embassy is awaiting final OK for the trip from the U.S. State Department.

Laveri identified the expected guests as Michael Lysenko, an embassy press officer, and Alexander Ilytchev, embassy political officer.

Girl attacked in college restroom

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — A Orange Coast College coed was assaulted in a campus restroom, the fourth such attack on campus since mid-February, police said.

Lt. Rick Johnson said the victim had gone into the women's restroom around 1:15 p.m. Thursday and was confronted inside a stall by a man who grabbed her arm.

When she fled, he yelled: "Come back, come back," Johnson said.

Police and campus officials have posted two composite drawings around campus of suspects described in the first two attacks. But police have no solid leads, Detective Paul Cappucilli said.

Mystery professor identified

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A man whose odyssey of academic disguise led to 34 aliases and at least five college teaching positions before ending in a jail cell was identified Friday as a long-time Washington, D.C., professor.

State Attorney General LeRoy Zimmerman confirmed the so-called "mystery professor" is Paul Crafton, 60, who has taught engineering administration at George Washington University in Washington full- or part-time since 1956.

Crafton, of Potomac, Md., applied for a total of 24 teaching positions between Dec. 23, 1981, and April 13, 1982, all under false identities, Zimmerman said.

Crafton was hired at two Pennsylvania colleges, teaching full-time at both while continuing part-time at George Washington.

"What his motive is, I don't know," said Zimmerman. "After a person is caught...you always hear a variety of good motives. What that motive is will be up to him to determine in a courtroom at some later time.

"What he did has had a significant impact on the colleges in this state, on their faculties and their credibility, and particularly on their students and their families. These are crimes."

The Baltimore Sun reported that Crafton was trying to raise money for expensive spinal surgery for a 17-year-old daughter, crippled since birth by cerebral palsy. Zimmerman said Crafton has one other child.

The Sun reported Friday that Crafton, in an interview Thursday with two jail officials in Cumberland County Jail at Carlisle, Pa., talked at length about his daughter. It said he told Tom Powers, director of inmate treatment, how the girl's disease had affected her hips and legs. Gloria Walker, a nurse who was present during the interview, said she was impressed by Crafton's intelligence and medical knowledge.

The Sun said he told the two he had taken his daughter to Switzerland for treatment, and that his goal is to be a "loving father and husband."

The Sun also reported Crafton has had financial problems for at least six years and has been the subject of at least 11 lawsuits because of indebtedness.

Among the aliases, which dated back to 1977, were identities for two physicians. "We have evidence he used the M.D. aliases to obtain information, such as birth certificates, not to get jobs," Zimmerman said. There was no evidence Crafton tried to practice medicine, he said.

Zimmerman said Crafton's identity was confirmed through FBI non-criminal records, a passport and identification by lifetime acquaintances of the suspect.

Charges against Crafton resulted from his employment as an economics professor under the name Dr. Peter Hector Pearse at Millersville State College from last fall until his arrest Monday, Zimmerman said.

Crafton also was accused of portraying John Hext at Shippensburg State College, where he taught mathematics and computer science from last fall until he was fired earlier this month when college officials found out the real Hext was a professor in Australia.

Prof. Paul A. Crafton of Potomac, Md., was arraigned Friday on charges of theft by deception, tampering witgh official documents and forgery. He is in the custody of Dorinda Simms, special agent of the Pennsylvania Attorney General's office.

Crafton had been held in the Cumberland County jail in lieu of $150,000 bail on charges of theft by deception, four counts of forgery, four counts of tampering with public records and false swearing in connection with the Shippensburg position. He was taken to Lancaster County on Friday and charged with theft by deception, four counts of tampering with official records and four counts of forgery. Bond at Lancaster also was $150,000.

Crafton received $16,000 of a $28,000 annual salary at Millersville and $14,779 of a $28,500 annual salary at Shippensburg, in addition to his part-time salary at George Washington, Zimmerman said.

Crafton was suspended from his $14,000-a-year engineering position at George Washington on Thursday.

Zimmerman said Crafton also taught auditing, basic accounting and international business at Towson State University in Maryland as David Gordon from the fall of 1979 to March 1982, and computer systems at the University of Delaware from February to May 1981, under the name Jonathan D. North.

Arkansas's Bumpers decides to enter presidential race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a late start and almost no money, Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas has decided to join the crowded field seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

Political sources say Bumpers, 57, is anxious to enter the political fray and likely will announce early next week the creation of a committee to explore his chances for getting the nod from his party.

Dale Bumpers

The senator may also decide on a simpler route and announce his candidacy without organizing any preliminary effort, said the sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified.

"He has decided to enter the race full out," said one source who has advised Bumpers in recent weeks.

Bumpers, one of the Democratic contenders with the least national recognition, has spent the last six weeks contemplating whether he has any chance overtaking former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and others who began their campaigns months ago.

Yet the sources said Bumpers believes the race remains a toss-up and can be won by an intensive organizational and fund-raising effort over the next year.

In early 1984, Democratic caucuses and primary elections begin selecting delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

As of late this week, the sources said Bumpers planned to create a committee composed of prominent supporters from Arkansas, organize the campaign and raise some money, then formally announce in a few months.

But since Bumpers is eager to get going, he may decide to scrap the exploratory committee, the sources said.

A former Arkansas governor, Bumpers has been elected twice to the Senate by voters from his traditionally conservative state despite a moderate-to-liberal voting record on some issues.

Some critics in Arkansas say Bumpers has grown too liberal for his constituents and cite as an example his vote to support the treaty returning the Panama Canal to Panamanian contol.

However, Bumpers has had a history of pulling off major political upsets in Arkansas. He beat a legendary political figure in the state, Orval Faubus, in a 1970 Democratic gubernatorial primary and then went on to defeat the incumbent Republican Winthrop Rockefeller.

In 1974, Bumpers defeated J. William Fulbright, then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a well-known opponent of the Vietnam War. To this day, Fulbright will not speak to Bumpers.

To get started, Bumpers will use about $100,000 now in a Senate campaign fund. He has established a direct mail fund-raising operation and is also seeking help from wealthy Democrats.

He has also begun assembling a staff, including David Doak, a highly-regarded campaign organizer who enhanced his reputation by running the successful gubernatorial campaigns of Charles Robb in Virginia in 1981 and Mark White in Texas in 1982.

Bumpers was born and reared in Charleston, Ark. He was a Marine in World War II, graduated from the University of Arkansas and earned a law degree from Northwestern University Law School.

Soviet Union launches satellite

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a Cosmos satellite Friday that carries equipment for space research and "apparatus to try out a system for determining the location of ships and aircraft in distress," Tass said.

The official news agency said the satellite carried a radio system for "precision measurement of orbital elements" and a radio-telemetric system to transmit information gathered back to earth.

The Soviets last launched Cosmos satellites March 16. Pentagon officials said one of the pair, Cosmos 1445, came down in the Indian Ocean less than 12 hours after launching.

Strike cripples Italy air traffic

ROME (AP) — A nationwide strike by airport administrators and control tower employees crippled air traffic in Italy Friday.

The strike came as thousands of pilgrims were pouring into Rome for the opening of the Roman Catholic Church's Holy Year.

The strike was called for 12 hours. Alitalia, Italy's flag carrier, canceled most of its flights but said some national and international connections would be made when the strike ends.

Unions called the walkout to press the government for a new contract. Contract proposals have been stalled in Parliament for two years.

Paper-mill guards kidnapped

CHITTAGONG, Bangladesh (AP) — Anti-government insurgents kidnapped six employees and two security guards from a paper mill in Karnaphuli, 38 miles from Chittagong, officials reported Friday.

They said the insurgents, who are demanding full autonomy from the central government, also set fire to a large quantity of bamboo used to manufacture paper in the attack Thursday.

In the past three months, bands of insurgents have kidnapped 24 people, releasing only one. The fate of the others is not known.

Basque gunmen ambush police car

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Suspected Basque gunmen ambushed a police car Friday, killing one officer and wounding two, authorities said.

The policemen were returning from duty at a nearby prison when the gunmen riddled their car with submachine-gun fire from a hilltop position.

Tass: Andropov's health improved

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri V. Andropov met and posed for pictures Friday with Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega in an appearance that seemed aimed at ending speculation about the Kremlin chief's physical and political health.

Soviet sources said Andropov, 68, was hospitalized last week for treatment of kidney and heart problems.

On Tuesday, Defense Minister Dimitri F. Ustinov returned from Budapest, Hungary, on the same day he arrived there. The trip was considered unusually short for a visit by a member of the Soviet Politburo to an East bloc ally.

On Thursday, it was announced that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko had been named a first deputy premier, becoming one of three men holding the title.

These developments came before Soviet sources indicated that Andropov had been released from the hospital, and coincided with the visit to Yugoslavia of Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov. He returned to Moscow on Friday.

The report of Andropov's illness and Gromyko's new job caused some Western observers to believe Kremlin power maneuvers were under way.

A report by the official Tass news agency later Thursday said the ruling 12-man Politburo had met — an indication that Andropov had evidently recovered satisfactorily and was back on the job. But there were no pictures of the meeting released to confirm that Andropov attended.

The Soviet press, since Andropov took over as Communist Party chief when Leonid I. Brezhnev died in November, has regularly reported when the Politburo meets, and the pattern has been that the Kremlin rulers convene every Thursday.

However, last week there was no report on the Politburo, an apparent indication that it did not convene because of Andropov's hospitalization.

Andropov's publicized meeting Friday with Ortega, who arrived in Moscow after a visit to Mongolia, indicated the Kremlin chief has resumed an active schedule.

Tass offered Western news agencies a photograph of Andropov and Ortega seated at a table during their meeting.

AP Laserphoto

The Soviet aews agency Tass released this photo Friday showing Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov, right, meeting Nicaraguan junta leader Daniel Ortega, left, in Moscow on Friday. Andropov was reported hospitalized earlier in the week with heart and kidney problems. The man seated next to Andropov is unidentified.

The news agency reported that Ortega was making a "stopover" in Moscow en route to Nicaragua, but it did not indicate how long he would stay in the Soviet capital.

Andropov's last publicized meeting was on March 3, when Tass and the party newspaper Pravda carried pictures of him meeting with the president of Mozambique, Samora Machel.

Andropov sometimes walks stiffly and with a slight stoop, indicating he is not in robust health. On Dec. 21, during a major Kremlin speech marking the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet state, Andropov faltered slightly on a step, and hesitated a second or two before continuing his walk.

However, Andropov is rarely seen in public, outside of the official posed photographs taken with visiting foreign dignitaries or when he is giving a major speech.

The reports of Andropov's hospitalization, in keeping with the secrecy surrounding Kremlin leaders, were never officially confirmed.

Some Western diplomats who closely follow and try to interpret Kremlin movements say it is possible the party chief has not been ailing. The speculation is that the reports leaked to Western reporters were a kind of political sabotage by those in the Soviet heirarchy trying to block Andropov's consolidation of power.

This position is supported by those who saw the appointment of Gromyko to first deputy premier as a successful move by the Andropov camp to thwart any rise in influence by Geidar Aliev, one of the other two first deputy premiers.

Head injuries most frequent cause of death in collisions

Almost all injuries occur when an occupant strikes a hard edge, a knob or a lever in the car because all of the force of the impact is concentrated on only a small part of the body surface. Severe injuries from hard or sharp objects can happen even in a relatively minor crash.

Mileage rankings may change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists who complain that their new cars don't get anywhere near the fuel economy promised in the government's mileage rankings may have less to gripe about in the future. The government is thinking about deflating the ratings.

The cuts may be as much as 25 percent in some of the figures now featured prominently in automakers' advertising.

The Environmental Protection Agency has been under attack for years from critics who say its annual mileage ratings bear no relation to real driving conditions. A congressional study in 1980 found the gap between the figures and actual mileage was as great as 30 percent.

Officials said Thursday they hope to issue in the next several weeks proposals to slash the ratings. While the exact way they will do this has not been picked, one proposal being looked at would cut the numbers from the laboratory tests by a fixed percentage.

Under one plan, the highway mileage figure would drop by between 20 percent and 25 percent, and the city mileage figure would go down by between 5 percent and 10 percent.

If fixed-percentage cuts of 10 percent and 25 percent were applied to the top-rated 1983 Volkswagen Rabbit, it would drop its city rating from 50 miles per gallon to 45 mpg and its highway average from 67 mpg to 50 mpg.

For years, the EPA has urged motorists to use the annual rankings only to compare one model against another, not as a prediction of their own mileage.

But government surveys show consumers ignore this disclaimer.

"We have heard loud and clear that consumers use the numbers in a certain way and all our previous efforts to change this haven't worked," said Charles Gray, director of EPA's auto mileage testing center in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Gray said the fixed-percentage cuts were favored by the staff because they would be the simplest to apply. He said other options such as using different percentages depending on car type or modifying the test procedure would be much more complicated to implement.

The EPA tests cars on a laboratory treadmill that duplicates a typical drive. Critics have said for years that the laboratory test does not take into account important conditions, such as weather, which lower mileage.

The EPA has published the lower city mileage figure only since 1979, but automakers are free to feature the higher highway number in advertising.

The highway number is inflated because the EPA test is conducted at an average speed of 48 miles an hour, far below the speed most motorists drive on the open road, Gray said.

Spokesmen for General Motors and Ford said Thursday they supported any change that would give consumers more confidence in the mileage ratings.

EPA ends electrical field research

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel wants to know why the Reagan administration plans to scrap the Environmental Protection Agency's research on the health effects of electrical and magnetic fields even as scientists are finding more evidence of a link to leukemia and birth defects.

The administration also has eliminated funding for a scientific advisory group that over the past decade has coordinated U.S. research in this area.

The radiation issue is expected to figure in hearings scheduled for next month by the House Science and Technology subcommittee on natural resources, agriculture research and environment.

Anthony S. Clark, a technical consultant to the panel, noted in an interview that "not much is really known about how this type of radiation affects human behavior or the human immune system," which helps protect the body against disease.

Electromagnetic radiation is around everyone, every day. It ranges from extremely low-frequency fields found near high-voltage power lines to the very high frequencies used for television, microwave cooking, radar, and satellite communications.

Recent studies have cited higher rates of leukemia among workers regularly exposed to intense electrical and magnetic fields — including power linemen, communications workers, electronic technicians and power-station operators in this country and in Britain.

Also, a forthcoming study from Sweden reports that children whose fathers work in high-voltage substations tend to have a higher rate of congenital birth defects.

Citizens' groups concerned about the health problems are opposing construction of microwave relay towers, broadcast transmitters, satellite earth stations, and high-voltage power lines.

Over the past two years, such disputes have arisen across the country, including Bainbridge Island, Wash., near Seattle; Multnomah County, Ore., outside Portland; Haverford, Pa.; Vernon, N.J.; Onondaga and South Nyack, N.Y.; Coventry, Conn., and Manassas, Va.

Clark said the House subcommittee has asked EPA officials for a detailed justification of agency's fiscal 1984 budget request that proposes shutting down the radio-frequency and microwave program at EPA's Health Effects Research Laboratory in Research Triangle Park, N.C.

The administration's decision to eliminate all funding in this area for the Health Effects Research Laboratory — which currently costs about $1.5 million a year — also has been criticized by career EPA officials.

Richard Tell of the agency's Office of Radiation Programs said the move was unfortunate because the agency is developing federal guidelines standards on radio waves, microwaves and other forms of nonionizing radiation.

EPA spokesman Dick Hoffman said Thursday the funding is to be dropped because "all the known research will be contained" in the guidance document and EPA research officials "wouldn't be able to get anything more out of it through any further research effort along these lines."

In another action, the Commerce Department's National Telecommunications and Information Administration has cut off funding for the Electromagnetic Radiation Management Advisory Council, a scientific panel which had coordinated research by federal departments and agencies.

Among the recent scientific articles citing a correlation between disease rates and exposure to electromagnetic fields was a report by Dr. Samuel Milham Jr. of the Washington State Department of Social and Health Services.

Milham said he had found an apparent link with leukemia — a type of cancer in which white blood cells multiply out of control — while updating a study of 438,000 men who died in Washington State from 1950 through 1979.

For 11 occupational categories with presumed exposure to electrical or magnetic fields, he said, the overall leukemia rate was 37 percent higher than expected.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, March 27, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: German physicist and x-ray inventor Wilhelm Roentgen, celebrated photographer Edward Steichen, lithographer Nathaniel Currier (of Currier & Ives) and legendary New York Yankee manager Miller Huggins were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: former British Prime Minister James Callaghan, Gloria Swanson and actor Michael York. Contradictions slow you down until summer is past, but then business and career really take off! Steer clear of fancy high-risk ventures. Only self-restraint will bring lasting financial security.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A call from a college student boosts your spirits. You are very proud of how this young person has matured. Learn to take the bitter with the sweet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You and your loved ones can do pretty much as you please today. Visit your neighbors, but phone first. Do not tire yourself out traveling. You are happiest at home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romance provides a happy surprise today. Call a family member who is far away but thinking about you. A bicycle trip to a picturesque spot is great fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use your clout to help a young person advance his/her career. A loved one could be coming into money. Make needed purchases but refuse to spend more than you can afford.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Deal with a strong-willed individual in an even-handed way. Delays give you a chance to make your work better. Travel proves very worthwhile. Romance becomes sweeter when family disapproval fades.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not begrudge someone his good fortune. A creative venture could bring you a second income. Ask mate questions. His/her answers may astound you. End a relationship that is not reciprocal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You win an argument with an authority figure. Do not feel timid about embarking on new adventures. Romance can be sensitive. Be particularly attentive to someone confined to hospital or home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Differentiate between essentials and luxuries. Your romantic prospects improve when you pay more attention to your appearance. Postpone signing a lease. Business entertaining promotes important good will. Go along with employer's plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An enthusiastic attitude lets you conquer new worlds! Curb a tendency to be overly possessive of mate or offspring. Your best relationship may be with an older member of the opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Interference and distractions make happiness elusive today. Use tact even if irritated by a last minute change in plans. A new romance will be fun but expensive. Curtail purchases.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid those who cry the financial blues. Or remind them that you have your own family to look after. You feel great rapport with a college roommate or an old flame.

Seaman A.J. Stevenson

Big Spring resident has age-old job on modern Navy ship

By GLENNA HOUSTON
Special to The Reporter-Telegram

Aboard the USS Texas — Anthony J. Stevenson of Big Spring has a job that would be recognized by sailors 200 years ago even though he works on one of the Navy's most modern ships.

Seaman Stevenson, a crewman on the guided missile cruiser USS Texas, is a signalman.

"Most people don't realize that the Navy still has signalmen," said the 19-year-old son of George Stevenson, 1410 Nolan St., Big Spring. "We use methods of communication — signal flags, semaphore and flashing light — that have been used by ships for centuries, and we still have an important job.

"We work closely with the navigators and send signals to other ships telling them about course changes.

"If we have to maintain radio silence, we still have to be able to communicate with other ships; that's when we use visual communication."

Stevenson works on the signal bridge high up on the ship's superstructure.

"I really like my job because it's different," he said. "When it's raining or cold it can be miserable standing in the open, but most of the time it's fun."

Because of his viewpoint, Stevenson will have the first look at ports the Texas will visit during its around-the-world cruise.

"I'm really excited about the trip," he said, shortly before the ship's departure. "In civilian life I'd never have a chance like this to see some of the places we'll visit. It's like a magic carpet ride.

"The hardest thing will be not seeing my family for so long. I won't see my second child until it's almost 6 months old."

Stevenson and his wife, the former Brenda Jones of Sherman, have a son, Bryan, 1, and are expecting another baby in June.

"It's hard on my wife for me to be gone at a time like this," Stevenson said. "She understands that it's part of my job, that doesn't make it easier for us. She's going to stay here in Virginia until the ship gets to San Diego; then I'll come back here, and we'll drive across country together. We plan a stop in Texas to visit our families on the way."

The former Big Spring High School student has served on the Texas since June 1982. He was assigned to the ship after completing recruit and signalman training.

"My father was in the Navy as an aviation mechanic and my brother, George, is on active duty. He's a petty officer third class working as a hull maintenance technician in Long Beach, Calif. I knew a little about the Navy from them before I enlisted. I'm glad I did. It's a good, secure job."

"I think it's a great opportunity for young people. If you apply yourself, you can do about anything you want. You just have to work for it."

Stevenson said being on a ship named for the Lone Star State has special meaning for him.

"I'm proud to be a Texan and proud to be serving on the Texas," the San Saba native said. "When we go overseas we're like United States ambassadors to the people we meet. I feel like I'm also an ambassador for Texas. For me it's different from being on an ordinary ship."

Parker's role in Texas legislature, education panel not easily defined

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Carl Parker is not an easy man to categorize.

Portly and baby-faced, he does not look like a 20-year veteran of the Texas Legislature.

A good ol' boy back-slapper, he is surprisingly liberal.

Respected for his savvy by his colleagues, he can quickly turn on them a disdainful, biting wit.

"Being right is too often a consolation prize up here," the Port Arthur Democrat complained during last year's special session to give smaller Texas colleges a quick fix of construction money.

Parker wanted a long-term solution to the problem, a gradual phase-out of state property taxes — not the quick abolition of the tax and short-term financing lawmakers already seemed agreed upon.

"Too many people are more concerned about November (elections) than about the next 10 years of higher education in this state," he scolded last year.

That was easy for Parker to say, however. Unlike most of the other senators, he was running for re-election without opposition.

The property tax was abolished and the schools were given a short-term fund for immediate construction.

Parker, 49, was named chairman of the Senate Education Committee this session, where a showdown over the $2 billion dollar question of state college funding is virtually inevitable.

He jokes about so suddenly becoming "an expert in education," but he is sure of what he wants for Texas colleges.

The University of Texas and Texas A&M systems are guaranteed a $1.7 billion yearly source of construction funds through the Permanent University Fund, a constitutionally dedicated source of money from revenues paid to the state by oil drillers.

But there are 17 other state colleges, and they must come individually to the Legislature for construction funds out of general revenues — competing with public schools, water shortages, prison overcrowding and highways for state money.

Carl Parker

Parker wants the Legislature to quit playing politics and set aside a new, dedicated fund to give those schools a permanent, reliable source of money that they can plan on having.

His plan, Parker says, would "do away with political log-rolling."

"If John Wilson (a La Grange Democrat who died of cancer last year) had a college in his district and a delegation arrived here this session and said, 'We want to fund the John Wilson Memorial Outdoor Library,' you think that wouldn't pass?" he asks rhetorically. "It would pass so fast it would make your head swim."

Parker's $125 million plan will have to contend with a fiscally conservative mood among legislators told they might well face running for re-election in 1984 after passing the first state tax increase in 12 years.

He is cynical about his chances of success.

"The worst enemy you have up here is inertia," he said. "Everybody wants to do something, but they don't like your idea."

Nevertheless, he said he believes some form of his proposal will be passed by legislators, because, above all, Parker is pragmatic.

"I've always thought that if you set out to accomplish something legislatively, if you can get half or two-thirds of what you aim for, you're better off taking it," he said. "I have ultimately passed every major piece of legislation I've undertaken to sponsor — maybe not in the session when I introduced it first."

A "courthouse-going, briefcase-toting" lawyer by trade, Parker grew up in politics. His father was a union organizer and then long-time mayor of Port Arthur. The younger Parker served his first term in the House in 1963.

He quit and ran for the Senate in 1976. That was after he lost the speaker's race to Rep. Bill Clayton, D-Springlake, when several liberal House members deserted Parker, complaining that they could not trust him.

They said Parker "carried water" for then-Speaker Gus Mutscher in 1971's session and voted against the liberal "Dirty Thirty" who were seeking an investigation into the Sharpstown scandal.

Others defended Parker, saying he was only swapping favors to try to get his own, socially conscious bills passed to help his constituency.

"I'd made up my mind to quit the Legislature after the speaker's race," said Parker, but he stayed because "it would have made so many bad people happy" if he had left.

"There are people that for personal reasons don't like me," he said. "Republicans don't like my philosophy. People that are radical on either end don't like my politics. I came in labeled a labor-liberal. I think I'm probably referred to more as a practical, moderate liberal, if labels mean anything."

The penny-pinching mood of the Legislature is not lost on Parker the pragmatist. He hopes to sell his university funding bill by pushing it as a money-saving device.

If colleges know how much money they will have, they can plan ahead and buy land and other capital items when the price is right — not just when the money is suddenly there, he argues.

Broadcasters get tougher

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Correspondent

MUNICH — America's propaganda broadcasting to the Soviet Union has removed its kid gloves. In the words of a broadcasting official here, it is again aiming to "hit where it hurts most."

Largely unnoticed in the overall context of the Reagan administration's East-West diplomacy, Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe, the pair of U.S.-financed stations beamed at the Soviet bloc, are showing significant new toughness and determination to tell their estimated 70 million listeners what their rulers don't want them to hear.

Under former U.S. senator James Buckley, who now heads both stations, the airwaves war is poised to attain a level of intensity unknown since the hottest days of the Cold War.

It's too early to judge what impact this new approach will achieve. Buckley himself only recently arrived here to take over direct supervision of programming. In certain key areas, the strategy may have to mark time for want of money and qualified personnel to handle it.

But what seems sure is that a dramatic new phase in the propaganda struggle has opened. Russia's steadily tightening clampdown on even the slight degree of intellectual and political freedom it allowed following the signing of the Helsinki accords in the mid-1970s is being met by more militant anti-Soviet propaganda by Radio Liberty, which broadcasts in 16 languages to the Soviet Union, and Radio Free Europe whose programs go to the Eastern European countries.

Buckley's deputy in charge of Radio Liberty, veteran American journalist George Bailey, initiated that organization's biggest shake-up in years when he recently removed the American 'managers' from each of the language sections. The action was politically significant. The deposed managers' real job had been to exercise a restraining hand on the editors and writers, all of them natives of the regions to which their broadcasts are destined. With few exceptions, the managers themselves were lacking in first-hand knowledge, Bailey says.

"It was censorship of a kind that should have no place in international broadcasting," he explained. "The editors must be responsible for what they air. If they make a mistake, they answer to me. I stopped it two days after I got here."

Bailey spent 35 years writing about Eastern Europe before taking his present post and is widely considered to be a leading expert on Soviet dissidence. He doesn't say it in so many words, but clearly implies that bureaucratic timidity, as well as past political scars, had, for many years, critically hampered both stations' effectiveness.

The Hungarian Revolution occurred more than a quarter of a century ago, but, in the sprawling building on Munich's outskirts which now houses both RFE and Radio Liberty, the blistering condemnation they suffered at the time from Western adversaries still cause a good deal of wincing.

Radio Free Europe, especially, along with the separate, completely government-run Voice of America, was accused of helping to lead the Hungarians to disaster by raising false hopes that the West would intervene on their side. In the event, the U.S. and its allies kept hands firmly off and the revolt was brutally crushed by the Red Army.

Buckley and Bailey believe it has long been time for the stations to rid themselves of the inhibiting complex created by those distant events. But, they also implied that the broadcasting strategy of RFE and Radio Liberty were for many years shackled by over-sensitivity to the requirements of 'detente'. As Bailey pointed out, even in the balmiest days of East-West 'good feeling', the Russians never displayed much concern to reciprocate in their propaganda efforts.

While Radio Liberty carries on around-the-clock broadcasting to the Soviet Union's sixty million Russian speakers, its programs to its ethnic minorities, especially in Asia, are patchy and, by Bailey's own evaluation, 'amateurish.'

His intention is to change that in a big way, a step that could prove to be a major strategic shift in Western broadcasting to the communist world in the eighties and nineties.

"The minorities question is the Soviet Union's number one problem today and destined to get more and more important," he said. "It's the one which is most worrying to the Soviet leadership. It's the one on which the whole future of the system may hang. We've virtually ignored it up to now. From the propaganda standpoint, that's sheer madness. The Soviet Union is the world's only surviving imperial empire. From now on in our broadcasting, we don't intend to let that be forgotten."

He and Buckley are convinced that, in recent times, this and other "sensitive" issues were deliberately played down, not from ignorance, but as a result of policy decisions not to "aggravate" relations with Moscow. Considerations of that type are, clearly, out now.

"We're not," said Bailey, "in the business of making things easier for the Soviets. At least, we shouldn't be."

Paper's clips have become white elephant

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A collection of old New York newspaper clippings once viewed as an important research tool apparently has turned into a white elephant.

A University of Missouri committee says the "morgue" of the defunct New York World Telegram and Sun should be thrown away if no university or historical society is willing to preserve it.

The morgue contains more than 50 million clips. It was acquired by the university after the newspaper folded in 1967 and is in storage at the University Records Center in Kansas City.

The clips were to be destroyed if no one claimed them by Oct. 1, 1982. But the morgue gained a reprieve when university President James Olson appointed a committee to recommend what to do with it.

The committee, in a report released this week, said the clips were "neither unique nor priceless." It said that unless someone offered to preserve the morgue, scholars should be permitted to take what files they want, with the rest dumped in a landfill.

Olson will make the final decision.

The morgue, containing clippings primarily from 1933 to 1967, fills 256 file cabinets and 500 boxes at the records center, which is in limestone caves on the city's east side.

In a report to the panel, Lawrence H. Larsen, a history professor at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, called the morgue "a gigantic trivia file" of an "undistinguished paper."

> ...The clips were "neither unique nor priceless." ..."A gigantic trivia file" of an "undistinguished paper."

The committee report indicated three institutions have expressed interest in looking at the clips: the College of Journalism at the University of South Carolina, the Archive of Contemporary History at the University of Wyoming, and Park College in Parkville, Mo.

The report said the collection lacks an index and "is organized in such a way as to render it virtually useless to scholars."

It also said that two-thirds of the clippings were wire service stories available elsewhere, adding it would cost only about $5,000 to purchase the complete back file of the newspaper on microfilm.

The committee recommended that only about two file drawers of material be saved, including some reporters' notes that could be considered manuscripts and photographs of the atomic bomb explosions at Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan.

'Gentlemen' are cared for; 'Cripples' are not

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The disabled veterans of Spain's 1936-39 civil war go by two names — "the wounded gentlemen" and "the poor cripples." Their nicknames and their treatment are directly related to the side on which they fought.

The surviving "cripples" are the Loyalists who fought and lost the war to defend the Republican government against Gen. Francisco Franco. They hope that after 44 years, they will at last get equal treatment under the new socialist government.

The "gentlemen" are the wounded veterans of the victorious Nationalist forces who followed Franco in his uprising against the government starting July 18, 1936. They have been taken care of since the war ended in 1939.

Under an agreement signed in 1962, Spaniards — often Nationalist veterans — wounded while fighting in the German "Blue Division" against the Russians on the Eastern Front in 1941-42 receive monthly pensions from the West German government.

Sectors of the army identified with the Franco era are said to be hostile to the idea of granting pensions to all Republican civil war wounded. So far, Felipe Gonzalez's majority socialist government has turned a deaf ear to the demands of veterans' associations representing their cases.

The government is said to be concerned about more pressing issues like a 16 percent unemployment rate — the highest in Western Europe.

Until Franco's death in 1975, disabled Loyalist or Republican veterans were not entitled to any benefits. Many were considered war criminals.

With the return to representative government in 1976, Republicans were given amnesties and certain limited categories fell under a decree entitling them to pensions.

Disabled officers and soldiers who had fought for the Republican side became eligible for some benefits in March 1980. More than 70 percent of the veterans died before the legislation was passed.

According to Francisco Dominguez, president of Madrid's League of Disabled Veterans of the Spanish War, justice will not have been done until all wounded Republican veterans are granted full benefits.

Officers and soldiers who joined the Republican side after the Franco uprising receive benefits that do not take into account their rank. Benefits for Nationalist veterans and those Republicans in the army prior to July 18, 1936 are based on rank as well as nature of injury and extent of disability.

Disabled Republican veterans are not entitled to customary military benefits such as housing and clothing allowances which the Nationalist disabled receive.

The average age of a surviving civil war veteran is 70 years. There are an estimated 5,000 Loyalist veterans in Spain and abroad.

The Ministry of Defense pays pensions to "the gentlemen" but will not give any figures.

Midland's Cubs show speed, power and pitching

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

MESA, Ariz. — What Midland Cubs Manager Tom Harmon has in mind for Tall City Texas League fans perhaps was demonstrated in a morning game against El Paso at Fitch Field here Friday.

Centerfielder Terry Austin doubled and William Hatcher beat out a drag bunt. Then, Austin, who stole 43 bases last year, and Hatcher, who swiped 84, successfully executed a double steal. Tommy Johnson, a first baseman who picked the pockets of catchers and pitchers 43 times last year at Salinas, then showed he could do more than just steal bases by hitting a three-run homer over the right field fence.

THE GAME was rescheduled as a morning contest because of a forecast of rain in the afternoon. As it turned out, the intermittent drizzle turned into a steady rain in the seventh with the Cubs leading 4-2.

The Cubs came into the game with a streak of three straight extra inning ties going.

Richard Buonatony and Rob Schilling continued the impressive pitching Midland has been receiving in Cactus League play. Buonatony went four innings and Schilling three.

Another example came in a 3-3 10-inning tie against the Cleveland Indians' Buffalo Eastern League farm, managed by Dirty Al Gallagher. Harmon got stellar performances from Stan Kyles, three innings; Ron Richardson, three; Tim Millner, two; and Jim Boudreau, son of Hall of Famer Lou Boudreau.

It was a one out ninth inning triple that precipated the tie and resulted in what may have been the spring's first rhubarb.

HARMON CHARGED the plate umpire like an enraged baseball manager and proved to be in mid-season voice. "How could you call that ball fair. This kid is trying to make the club and you call a ball fair that was foul by 25 feet."

More was said, but it was like talking to a stone wall or an umpire. Tom didn't even get an apology.

Dirty Al suggested Harmon was taking a meaningless game too seriously but he was chuckling underneath. For eight innings he had been chiding the umpire, "Try to do a little better job this inning on your ball and strike calls."

Bruce Chaney accounted for two of the Midland runs in the sixth with a 350-foot homer to left. Catcher Ted Trevino, a one-time Cub who has been catching for the last two years for Tabasco in the Mexican League, singled home Midland's other run.

Kyles, a righthander who was 11-5 with a 2.51 ERA and 118 strikeouts in 172 innings at Quad Cities last year, was just sent down by Chicago. The 22-year-old native Chicagoan had been a combined 4-19 record in three previous seasons.

Chicago farm director Gordon Goldsberry said, "He really matured last year. He challenged hitters with a good fast ball and learned to make hitters hit strikes." He also reduced his walks from 98 in 125 innings in those three previous seasons to 66.

RICHARDSON, Albany, Ore., was picked up from the Phillies' organization for whom he was 7-8 at Peninsula in the Class A Carolina League last year while Boudreau, a southpaw, was 4-0 with a 2.18 ERA at Quad Cities. Jim's work against Buffalo prompted scout Brandy Davis to remark, "He looks quicker than when I saw him in the Instructional League last fall."

Buonatony, out of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas like Kyles, turned it around last year. He had compiled a 5-14 record in two seasons with Sarasota Rookie League team before going 12-4 at Quad Cities. He had a 3.91 ERA and 103 whiffs in 161 innings. Schilling, a 6-2, 190 pounder from the University of Pacific, was 11-9 with a 2.59 ERA last year at Salinas.

Goldsberry promised that Midland's pitching would be improved this season and the credentials of the youngsters trying to make the roster and their spring performances back him up.

CUB PRINTS: Sometimes it's difficult to keep up with the day-to-day shuffling in camp. Don Hyman caught for Midland one day and the next day was catching for the Chicago B Team up the street at HoHoKams against Milwaukee while the A Team was off in Palm Springs, Calif. The B Team included Jerry Morales, Leon Durham, Ron Cey, Fritz Connally, Joe Carter and Joe Hicks. Steve Trout, Craig Lefferts and Lee Smith were the pitchers in the 4-2 win. "Craig threw the ball well," Hyman said of his ex-U. Arizona batterymate and former Midland Cub. "He gave up two runs in three innings, but got a few tough breaks in the field. Craig doesn't think he will stick, but he hopes to make it back to the big club before the end of the season...Plans were to send Jon Perlman back to Des Moines, but the ex-Baylor righthander isn't cooperating. He added another outing without surrendering an earned run against the Angels in Palm Springs, which makes it three in a row...Former Midland first baseman Jack Upton quit baseball the other day when it seemed he would be destined to return to Midland after a year in Triple A. Chicago's plans are for Carmello Martinez to play first base at Des Moines and Joe Hicks to alternate at first and DH...

Iowa guard Andre Banks (14) passes out of trouble while being double-teamed by Villanova guard Gary McLain (22) and guard Stewart Granger (10). Villanova won this NCAA tournament game and will play for the Midwest Region championship Sunday.

Memphis St. will dream Akeem

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon poured in 21 points and top-ranked Houston survived a rash of fouls against several key starters to turn back No. 17 Memphis State 70-63 Friday night in a fast-paced semifinal of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

The Cougars, 29-2 and winners of 24 games in a row, will meet No. 13 Villanova in the regional title game Sunday. Villanova edged Iowa 55-54 in the other semifinal.

Olajuwon, a 7-foot native of Nigeria who took up basketball in 1979, was dominant from start to finish, hurting the Tigers with slam dunks, fall-away jumpers and, on one occasion, an off-balance 15-footer.

After a 34-34 halftime tie, Houston nursed leads of two and three points until a 6-0 run put the Cougars on top 57-48 with 8:08 to go. But Memphis State, which tied for third in the Metro Conference, then rallied for seven straight points to climb back into the game, capping the spurt with a driving layup by Bobby Parks that sliced Houston's lead to 57-55 at the 5:59 mark.

Houston's starting front line of Clyde Drexler, Larry Micheaux and Olajuwon played most of the second half with three fouls and Drexler fouled out with 3:17 to go after scoring eight points.

Houston led 61-58 when Memphis State's Andre Turner missed a jumper from the lane and the Cougars' Alvin Franklin was fouled and made both shots for a five-point lead with 1:23 to go.

The Cougars then salted the victory away at the free throw line and never let Memphis State, 23-8, closer than three.

Young had 17 points for Houston, while Parks led Memphis State with 17. Keith Lee, Memphis State's second-team All-America, and Derrick Phillips had 13 each.

Villanova 55, Iowa 54

Gary McClain and John Pinone sank four critical free throws in the final 23 seconds and Ed Pinckney grabbed a key rebound in the closing moments, boosting No. 13 Villanova over Iowa 55-54 in the semifinals of the Midwest Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament.

McClain, with his only points of the night, sank both ends of a one-and-one that gave the Wildcats a 53-51 lead with 23 seconds left. With 14 seconds remaining, Iowa's Greg Stokes made only one of two free throws, enabling Villanova to keep a one-point lead.

Two seconds later, Pinone dropped in both ends of a one-and-one for a 55-52 lead.

Bob Hansen made a 10-foot bank shot with five seconds remaining to bring Iowa within one point at the finish.

Villanova's Stewart Granger missed two free throws with three seconds to go after being intentionally fouled on the inbounds play, but Pinckney grabbed the rebound to preserve the victory.

Pinone's 18 points led Villanova, which tied for first place in the Big East conference during the regular season. Granger had 11 and Dwane McClain 10 for the Wildcats, who meet the winner of the Houston-Memphis State semifinal for the regional title on Sunday.

Stokes had 22 points for Iowa, the fifth-place finisher in the Big Ten, and Hansen had 21.

The first half ended in a 24-24 tie, and neither led by more than four points in the second 20 minutes.

Hansen, a 6-foot-6 senior guard, picked up a loose ball underneath the Iowa basket and banked one off the glass to give the Hawkeyes a 47-45 lead. With 6:10 remaining, Craig Anderson blocked a Pinone shot and fed to Hansen, who popped in a 20-footer for a 49-45 Iowa lead.

The Wildcats pulled even with Stewart Granger's off-balance scoop shot and two free throws, which Pinckney sank when Hansen picked up his second foul with 4:30 to go.

Michael Payne, Iowa's 6-11 sophomore, fouled out with 8:01 left on a play that Pinone turned into a three-pointer to erase the Hawkeyes' 45-42 lead.

Iowa played catch-up the entire first half after Villanova took advantage of Hawkeye mistakes to seize the early lead.

Pinone got the Wildcats started with a three-point play, then Granger's 15-footer put Villanova on top 5-0. The Wildcats' first-half lead reached its apex at eight points, 13-5, with 14:18 remaining on a 20-footer by Granger on a pass from Pressley.

Tar Heels win, but Redmen lose in East Regional

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Defending NCAA champion North Carolina, led by All-American Michael Jordan, overtook Ohio State midway through the second half for a 64-51 victory Friday night in an East Regional semifinal basketball game.

In the other semifinal, third-ranked St. John's fell to No. 18 Georgia, 70-67, at the Carrier Dome. The East final is set for Sunday with the winner going to the Final Four in Albuquerque, N.M.

Ohio State, 20-10, which had finished in a three-way tie for second in the Big Ten, gave the eighth-ranked Tar Heels a tougher time that expected. The Buckeyes rallied twice to lead at halftime 30-29 and led 42-40 on Troy Taylor's jumper.

BUT NORTH Carolina, 28-7, then ran off eight straight points, with Jordan hitting four free throws and Curtis Hunter and Jim Braddock each with a basket for a 48-42 advantage.

The Buckeyes' Larry Huggins scored to cut the margin to 48-44 with almost nine minutes remaining. With 7:57 left, the Tar Heels then went into a stall and Jordan, who finished with 17 points, broke the delay by hitting an easy layup to put North Carolina ahead 50-44 with 6:27 left.

The Tar Heels then made good from the foul line down the stretch, while Ohio State scored only three other field goals for the rest of the game.

Sam Perkins with 15 points and Braddock with 10 were the only other Tar Heels in double figures. Perkins sat out six minutes of the first half and nearly 10 minutes of the second when he got in foul trouble.

JOE CONCHECK paced the Buckeyes with 14 points, followed by Tony Campbell with 13 and Taylor with 10.

Jordan, a 6-foot-5 sophomore, made only five of 15 shots from the field, but he made seven of nine free throws and led the Tar Heels in rebounding with seven. Thirteen of Jordan's points came in the second half.

All told, North Carolina connected on 22 of 25 free throws and shot 47 percent from the field. Ohio State hit 44 percent from the field.

When North Carolina twice built early first-half leads, it appeared the Tar Heels might pull away from the Buckeyes. But Ohio State rallied from a 19-8 and 25-16 leads behind the shooting of Concheck and Taylor.

Granville Waiters, the Buckeyes' 6-11 center and No. 3 scorer, was held to five points, less than half his average. He was sitting on the bench with his fourth personal foul when North Carolina ran off its 8-0 streak.

North Carolina has won seven regional crowns and is appearing in its 18th NCAA tournament.

Georgia 70, St. John's 67

Terry Fair scored 27 points and Georgia held off a late St. John's rush to surprise the No. 3 Redmen 70-67 in an NCAA East Regional semifinal basketball game Friday night.

Georgia, 23-9, making its first NCAA appearance after winning the Southeastern Conference tournament, extended its winning streak to six by going on a 15-4 spree early in the second half and holding off a furious finish by the Redmen.

Fair, the tallest player among Bulldogs regulars at 6-foot-7, capped the Georgia triumph with a slam dunk at the buzzer.

GEORGIA'S BIGGEST lead was six points, the last at 57-51 with 3:35 to go. The Redmen three times cut the margin to two points. Then, with five seconds to go, Chris Mullin of St. John's hit two free throws, cutting the deficit to 68-67.

But Georgia grabbed the rebound and fed Fair all alone under the basket.

St. John's, which finished with a 28-5 record, held two 10-point leads in the first half, only to allow the Bulldogs to close to 29-27 at intermission.

Lamar Heard added 11 points and Vern Fleming and James Banks 10 apiece for the Bulldogs.

Mullin scored 19 points for the New Yorkers, followed by David Russell, 14, Kevin Williams and Billy Goodwin, 12 apiece, and Bill Wennington, 10.

Heard, a 6-5 senior who failed to score in the first half, played a key role in the Georgia comeback after Mullin's 15-footer had given the Redmen a 39-34 advantage with 15:03 remaining.

Heard scored a tap-in and two slam dunks while Fair had five points, including a three-point play, during the 15-0 spurt that gave Georgia the lead for good, 49-43.

Fair, who also grabbed nine rebounds, made 11 of 21 from the field, while Georgia hit 46 percent from the field.

DePaul defeats Rebs

CHICAGO (AP) — Bernard Randolph led a balanced scoring attack with 19 points Friday night, boosting DePaul to a 75-67 victory over Mississippi and into the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

The Blue Demons, 20-11, all but blew an 11-point first quarter lead before putting on a final charge in the second half on the scoring of Randolph, Tyrone Corbin, and Walter Downing.

Corbin finished with 18 points, Downing with 11 and Kenny Patterson added 13, nine of them in the first half.

Carlos Clark topped Ole Miss with 22 and the Rebels closed the season with a 19-12 record. DePaul scored the first five points of the game and blew to an early 13-4 lead. Ole Miss had to spend the rest of the half trying to get back into the game.

The Blue Demons built a 25-14 lead when Corbin made a pair of free throws after Rebel Coach Lee Hunt was called for a technical foul.

Mississippi then mounted its comeback, led by Clark, who finished the half with 10 points to offset the nine points scored earlier in the period by Patterson.

Roger Stieg connected on a three-point play for Mississippi and the Rebels outscored DePaul 15-6 over the final 7⅓ minutes to cut the lead to 31-29 at halftime when Clark made the final basket with one second remaining.

Michael Partridge hit two baskets early in the second half to lift Ole Miss into a 33-all tie and the Rebels tied it again at 35, but Corbin made five of DePaul's next six points and the Blue Demons pulled ahead again.

Lee, MHS seek baseball wins

Midland Lee is seeking its fourth straight District 4-5A baseball victory today, hosting league cellar-dweller Odessa Permian at the Lee Field.

A victory would guarantee the Rebels at least a continued share of first place, depending on how unbeaten Big Spring fares against third place Abilene Cooper.

Meanwhile, the Midland High Bulldogs are trying to retrieve the form they displayed in winning the district opener against Permian. Since that day, the Bulldogs have dropped two are are currently in a four-way tie for fourth place.

Both the Rebels and Bulldogs are coming off mid-week non-district victories. The Rebs collected seven hits against Pecos in a rematch on Thursday for an 8-4 victory, avenging last week's 7-6 loss to the Eagles. The win gives Lee a 10-6 overall record to go with 3-0 in district play.

Midland High pounded out 10 hits Wednesday to gain an eight-inning win over the Snyder Tigers, 4-2. With the victory, MHS is one game short of .500 for the season at 7-8 and 1-2 in 4-5A action.

Elsewhere around the league, the Big Spring Steers will be in Abilene against Cooper while San Angelo hosts Abilene High. All 4-5A games are scheduled for 2 p.m.

Jones sets record with 10.63 100

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee sophomore Walter Jones set a blistering pace in the 100-meter dash preliminaries here Friday as he set a new San Angelo Relays record of 10.63. Teammate Billy Gibbs posted a 10.8 time to also qualify for today's finals.

On the first day of the two-day meet, only two events were completed. Lee's Luther Johnson finished second in the long jump with a distance of 22-feet six inches while Jones went 20-10 for sixth place. Despite the second, Johnson's 22-6 was his best effort of the year.

In the discus, Ricky Lozano placed sixth with a throw of 152-8.

Going into today's finals, the Rebels have 10 points.

In other qualifying races Friday, the Rebel sprint realy team — Jones, Luther Johnson, Damon Polk and Carlton Johnson — qualified for the finals with a time of 42.7 while beating Odessa Permian again. Jones also survived the cut in the 200-meter dash along with Carlton Johnson and David Hoover while Polk and Luther Johnson each qualified in the 300-meter hurdles. Polk added the high hurdles to his list in a time of 14.02. Both Johnsons were members of the qualifying mile relay team with Marc Brackens and Gibbs.

David Myers and Derek Westbrook each qualified for the 800-meter run. Carl Piccolo was a double qualifier in distance races, the 3,200 and 1,600-meter runs. Darrell Fennell made it in the 400-meter dash.

Qualifying went just about as expected for the Rebels who are seeking their fifth straight meet title this year. Lee has not lost a meet this year, but competition will be stiff today.

Polk is the only Rebel who has an unbeaten streak going, never having lost in the high hurdles. His 14.02 was the best qualifying time of the day.

Cougs rip Aggies

HOUSTON (AP) — Second baseman Corky Swindell had four hits and drove in two runs to pace the Houston Cougars to a 9-2 victory over Texas A&M in a Southwest Conference baseball game Friday.

Doug Drabek pitched his fifth complete game in extending his record to 7-0. He allowed eight hits and two walks while striking out seven.

Houston improved its record to 27-2 for the season and 4-0 in SWC play, while the Aggies fell to 20-6 and 2-2. The teams play a doubleheader Saturday.

Houston scored three runs off Aggie starter and loser Rick Leucken, 4-4, in the first inning. Swindell doubled in the Cougars' first run and later scored on a fielding error.

Texas A&M got a run in the fifth inning on a home run by third baseman Tony Metoyer. The Aggies' other run came an inning later, when Buddy Haney reached first on an error and scored on Billy Cannon's two-out double.

Leading 4-2, Houston batted around in the bottom of the sixth, getting five runs on five hits. Billy Savarino and Mark Massey hit back-to-back doubles for the first run. A walk to Steve Seberger was followed by consecutive run-scoring-singles by Rayner Noble, Swindell and Riley Epps.

Bob Waterfield dies

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Bob Waterfield, former star quarterback and coach of the National Football League Rams, died Friday at St. Joseph Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said. He was 62.

Waterfield died of respiratory failure following an extended illness, said Rhoda Weiss, public relations director at St. Joseph. He had been in the hospital's intensive care ward for the past two weeks.

Waterfield first starred at Van Nuys, Calif. High School, where he met his future wife, Jane Russell. He was a standout quarterback at UCLA and later led the Rams, both in Cleveland and Los Angeles, to division titles and the NFL championships in 1945 and 1951.

He and Russell married in 1943, after she finished co-starring in her first movie, Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw."

Their marriage ended in 1968 after Miss Russell filed for divorce. He later remarried, and leaves his widow, Jan, and three sons, Robert John, Tracy and Thomas.

Bucs tag Valenzuela, 7-6

By The Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela, tagged for four first-inning runs, limited the Pittsburgh Pirates to one run over the next five as Derrell Thomas' two-run ninth-inning triple rallied the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-6 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates Friday.

The $1 million-a-year left-hander started shakily, surrendering a two-run single to Tony Pena, another RBI hit to Richie Hebner and a sacrifice fly to Jim Morrison. He allowed one more run in the fifth.

But the Dodgers, trailing 6-1, rallied for two in the eighth off Rod Scurry and four more with two outs in the ninth. Candy Maldonado's two-run single preceded Thomas' game-winning triple.

Larry Gura walked rookie catcher Ronn Reynolds with the bases loaded to force in what proved to be the winning run as the New York Mets downed the Kansas City Royals 6-5. Dave Kingman hit a solo home run, his third of the spring for the Mets.

Jim Gott blanked Houston for the first six innings, allowing only three hits and walking one in the Toronto Blue Jays 5-2 victory over the Astros.

Baseball Roundup

Steve Rogers pitched six innings of six-hit ball as the Montreal Expos beat the New York Yankees 5-3. The Expos snapped a 2-2 tie in the sixth on an infield out by Doug Flynn and a single by Jerry White.

Pat Tabler was the hero of the Chicago White Sox' 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in 11 innings as he tied the game with a two-run homer in the ninth inning and then scored the winning run in the 11th. Tabler reached base when catcher Dann Bilardello muffed a third strike.

The Kansas City Royals got five strong innings from veteran Steve Renko in their split squad 4-2 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Royals scored all their runs off starter Randy Niemann with Amos Otis, Hal McRae, Frank White and John Wathan driving in the runs.

Frank Viola allowed only one run and three hits in six innings as the Minnesota Twins downed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-2.

Ron Cey cracked a homer run in the ninth inning to give the Chicago Cubs their 7-6 win over the Milwaukee Brewers. Keith Moreland also homered for the Cubs and Cecil Cooper had a three-run blast for the Brewers.

California won its fifth straight game as Mike Brown's fourth homer of the spring, a three-run shot, capped a five-run sixth inning that carried the Angels past the Seattle Mariners 7-1.

A squeeze bunt by relief pitcher Jeff Jones gave Oakland the go-ahead run in the A's 11-8 win over the San Diego Padres. Mario Ramirez had a homer for San Diego and Mike Heath had four hits for the A's.

In night games, Texas played Baltimore, St. Louis faced Atlanta, Boston took on Detroit, San Francisco played Cleveland.

Wins keep Perry young

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — As far as 44-year-old Gaylord Perry is concerned, the game of professional baseball is exactly the same as it was when he broke into the sport in 1958.

The major leagues' 15th 300-game winner — almost a sure bet for a spot in baseball's Hall of Fame — says the most important thing for him in 1958 was to win and that's still the No. 1 priority.

"There's nothing like winning" he said. "I think the young players on the Seattle team understand that winning is very, very important. You can't always win but the more you win the more enjoyable the game is."

THAT PHILOSOPHY that has kept Perry going for 20 years and 58 days of major league service. That and a breaking ball that is often thought to be a mite wet.

The sometimes-cantankerous, sometimes-charming peanut farmer from Williamston, N.C., is the big leagues' oldest player. He goes into his 26th professional season with a 307-251 career record and a 3.03 earned run average.

He also is the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues. He took the American League honor when he was 24-16 with the Indians in 1972 and won the National League award when he was 21-6 with the San Diego Padres in 1978. He was 40 at the time.

Last May 6, he posted his 300th victory by beating the New York Yankees 7-3 in the Kingdome. It made him the first 300-game winner since Early Wynn in 1963.

But Perry, who will turn 45 on Sept. 15, says a lot remains to be done.

With 3,452 big league strikeouts, he ranks third on the all-time list behind the famed Walter Johnson (3,508) and Nolan Ryan of Houston (3,494). He'd like 100 strikeouts to put him ahead of Johnson and to make him the first to get over a hundred strikeouts for 19 seasons.

The Mariners are getting Perry's arm and name — not necessarily in that order — for $200,000 this season.

He was released by the Atlanta Braves at the end of the 1982 season and signed by the Mariners. He responded with a 10-12 record and a 4.40 ERA, starting 32 games and completing six, striking out 117 batters in 216 2-3 innings.

"I enjoy the game very much," he said. "You have to have fun no matter what you do. Some days are not fun days. But the majority of days are. Baseball is a game you have to have fun at just about every day."

Perry thinks he has had a good spring. "I've had a couple of bad innings now and then," he said, "but I think a lot of pitchers experience that. I've had some good innings, too."

SEATTLE IS Perry's seventh team. He was a fixture in San Francisco in the 1960s and also pitched for Cleveland, Texas, San Diego, the Yankees and the Braves.

With the departure of free agent Floyd Bannister, Perry's experience and maturity are being counted on heavily by Mariners' Manager Rene Lachemann, who guided Seattle to a suprise fourth in the American League West last season.

Lachemann has named Perry to be his opening day pitcher against the Yankees in the Kingdome in Seattle Tuesday night, April 5.

"All I want to do," volunteered Perry, "is be ready when my turn comes to pitch and do a good consistent job. I want to keep us in the ball game for six or seven innings. We have such a great bullpen. If I can do that, I think I've done my job."

In 1982, in the 742nd game of his career, Perry was ejected for the first time on Aug. 23 against the Boston Red Sox. Plate umpire Dave Phillips warned him in the fifth inning after he found a substance on the ball and then threw him out for a pitch in the seventh inning.

The American League suspended Perry for 10 days and fined him $250.

'Hoss' back on his feed

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The "Hoss" is back on his feed and if home run-hitting Dave Hostetler's spring training performance is any barometer he may again terrorize American League pitching in 1983.

As a rookie, the 6-foot-4, 215-pound Hostetler pounded 22 home runs in his first 76 games with the Texas Rangers in 1982.

Then came a mysterious slump that saw him play the final 46 games of the season without one.

What happened? Did the word get around that he was a sucker for a change-up?

"It wasn't so much the pitchers as it was me," Hostetler said recently during spring training just before he stepped to the plate to smash a 400-foot shot over the left centerfield fence at Pompano Park against Atlanta.

Hostetler explained that he began pressing because the earlier homers had come so easily.

"I wasn't as selective with pitches as I should have been," Hostetler said. "I was getting myself out, not the pitchers."

Since Day One of training camp under new manager Doug Rader, the 27-year-old Hostetler, a Southern California product, has been under the watchful eye of batting instructor Merv Rettenmund.

"Merv has been a big help to me," said Hostetler. "I think he has made me a much more consistent hitter."

Rettenmund has been doing such things as telling the batting practice pitcher to fake throwing the ball several times.

This forces Hostetler to watch the pitches all the way and not be fooled by the hurler's motion.

Hostetler struck out 113 times in 418 at bats and wants to cut that down.

"I'm not pulling off pitches now," Hostetler said. "Merv hasn't tried to change my swing or anything like that. He is in favor of keeping your swing natural.

"He's just helped me be more relaxed at the plate and not go after bad pitches."

Hostetler had three spring training homers after Wednesday's game, including a shot over the centerfield wall in Miami that witnesses said must have traveled over 450 feet.

"There aren't many people who hit the ball harder than Hostetler," said Rader. "He's been impressive."

So where does Rader play Hostetler, who is said to have only an average glove at first base?

That decision hasn't been made yet.

Hostetler could be the team's designated hitter with Pete O'Brien and Bobby Johnson platooning at first.

It's a decision Rader will wait to make just before the regular season starts.

"I'm leaving my options open," Rader said.

Hostetler realizes he has shortcomings at first base but is working hard to correct them.

"I'm adequate at first but I've got to get better than that," Hostetler said. "I'm taking a lot of groundballs. I've just got to get more relxed at first base. Believe me, it will come around."

And so, apparently, will the Hoss' home run bat that disappeared in the last month of the 1982 season.

Tigers cut pitcher Kevin Saucier

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Detroit Tigers cut pitcher Kevin Saucier Friday, requesting irrevocable waivers on the left-handed reliever.

The waivers, which expire March 31, give Saucier, 26, his unconditional release, which means he is free to find a job with any other major league team.

Saucier was acquired by Detroit from the Texas Rangers Dec. 10, 1980.

His enthusiastic antics immediately caught the fancy of Tigers' fans during the 1981 season. Between April 16 and Aug. 18 that year, he allowed only 13 hits and one run in 312-3 innings covering 20 games. He had one victory and 10 saves during that stretch.

Last year, however, Saucier lost his control. He split 1982 between Detroit and the Tigers' Class AAA farm club at Evansville of the American Association and wasn't effective, finishing with a 7.36 earned run average at Evansville.

This year, Saucier toned down his antics, got a short haircut and worked hard in camp. However, his control problem persisted to the point where he couldn't even throw batting practice until the second week of training.

Thursday, Saucier was racked for a double, a single, two walks and a grand slam home run in one inning of relief against the Minnesota Twins to seal his fate.

Hot putter saves Lietzke

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) -Bruce Lietzke, relying on a putter that "saved me time and again" he negotiated the difficult Players' Club course in 68 Friday and established a one-shot lead in the rain-delayed first round of the $700,000 Tournament Players Championship.

"This was not a characteristic round for me, or for this golf course," Lietzke said after his 4-under-par effort on the controversial course that continued to draw criticism from some of the game's leading performers.

"I've always thought of this as a ball-striking course. I didn't drive it that well off the tee and it took some funny bounces off the mounds," the former Canadian Open champ said. "On this course, that usually leads to mediocre or high scores.

Lietzke was one shot ahead of Bobby Clampett, John Cook, Leonard Thompson, Mark McCumber and Bob Eastwood at 69.

Tom Weiskopf was at 70 with PGA champion Ray Floyd, Peter Oosterhuis, Ben Crenshaw and Danny Edwards,

Jack Nicklaus, a 3-time winner of this title before the tournament moved to its present site, was at 73. Masters champ Craig Stadler shot 74. Tom Watson got away early with temperatures in the 30s and shot 75.

Tom Kite shot 72, Johnny Miller 73. Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer, a special invitee, each had a 77.

Lietzke, golf's most successful cross-handed putter, scored two of his four birdies with putts of about 35 feet and got another from 25 feet. The other came on a deft little chip to two feet.

On two occasions, however, he got his second shot into tree trouble. On one of those, he could advance the ball only two feet and on the other had to play away from the flag. He save par on each hole, however, and saved his score by one-putting the last five greens.

"My putter was the saving tool," he said. "It responded as it has not all year long."

The tournament, billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros, was delayed one day by heavy rains that wsshed out Thursday's play. The event is scheduled to end with a double round, 36-hole wind-up on Sunday.

Weiskopf, a former British Open champion and winner of 15 American Tour titles, walked off the course shaking his head after his round of 70.

"It's something from World War III ... It's something from the twilight zone ... bizarre," Weiskopf said of the course, designated as a permanent site for this event.

"It's like being inside a great big pinball machine," he added. "I don't know how to play this course. I really don't. I guess you play one shot at a time and hope to get lucky."

But Clampett, defended the course. "It separates the marginal round from the real good round," he said. "I think that's what makes it such a great golf course."

Navratilova sinks Shriver

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova crushed Pam Shriver 6-1, 6-2 and Billie Jean King, at 39 the "Old Lady" of women's tennis, tamed hard-serving Barbara Potter 6-3, 6-1 Friday night to advance into the semifinals of the $350,000 Virginia Slims Championships of New York.

The overwhelming favorite to capture this select 16-player invitational, the richest women's tournament, Navratilova needed only 55 minutes to dispose of Shriver, her doubles partner, and move into a semifinal matchup against Sylvia Hanika of West Germany. King will face second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd in her semifinal match on Saturday.

THE FINALS are scheduled for Sunday, where the winner will receive $80,000, while the runnerup collects $45,000.

The Navratilova-Hanika semifinal will pair the finalists of last year's Madison Square Garden event, then the windup of the winter circuit. Hanika was an upset winner as she handed Navratilova the first of only three losses the world's No. 1-ranked women's player suffered in 1982.

The only other players to beat Navratilova last year were Shriver, in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open, and Lloyd, in the finals of the Australian Open. If the seedings hold, Navratilova would play Lloyd in the final here.

Navratilova, moving around the court with the grace and quickness of a cat, never was in trouble as she broke Shriver in the fourth and sixth games of the first set.

The left-hander lost her first set point when Shriver hit a perfectly placed backhand to her opponent's feet. Navratilova put the half-volley into the net and Shriver had pulled to deuce.

A SECOND set point was lost when the Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova sent a forehand long. But, when she had a third shot at it, she closed out the set with a forehand volley deep into th corner that the long-armed Shriver could only wave at.

She opened up the second set in the same manner, breaking Shriver at love. But then she had to battle through five deuces and one break point before holding serve as both players moved to the net at every opportunity, soetimes both hitting reflex volleys as they faced each other just feet apart.

Shriver then held her own service in the third game. In the fourth game, which again saw the two fight to deuce, Shriver, after watching a Navratilova volley sail by her, screamed: "God, you're terrible." Moments later, she said, "I feel better now," and the crowd roared its approval.

But it was Navratilova, displaying the serve and volley tactics that have dominated women's tennis in the last year, who drew the crowd's applause with her brilliant game.

She broke Shriver again in the fifth game and held at love in the sixth to take a 5-1 lead.

After Shriver held at 15 in the seventh game, Navratilova closed out the match, fittingly winning the final point on a perfectly placed smash.

KING, A pioneer on the women's professional tour in 1970, used her delicate touch, especially around the net, and experience to defuse the power game of the 21-year-old Potter.

Now ranked 12th in the world, King appeared overmatched as Potter whipped through the opening game at love, including a second-serve spin ace. The "Old Lady," as she is affectionately called by the other players, was taken to deuce before holding her own serve.

Again Potter's left-handed serves dominated as she dropped only one point — that coming on a double-fault — in the third game. But by then, King had begun changes in tactics ever so slightly, merely keeping the ball in play rather than going for winners.

Steve Lundquist of Southern Methodist lowered his American record and NCAA record in winning the 100-yard breaststroke while claiming his seventh individual NCAA title with a 52.48 second clocking.

Lundquist lowers record

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Senior Steve Lundquist of Southern Methodist lowered his American record and NCAA record in winning the 100-yard breaststroke NCAA championship for the fourth consecutive year and sophomore Rick Carey of Texas reclaimed the American and NCAA standards in the 100 backstroke Friday.

Lundquist claimed his seventh individual NCAA title with a 52.48 second clocking. The 21-year-old from Jonesboro, Ga., who will be the defending champ Saturday in the 200 breaststroke, had set the U.S. Open, American, meet and NCAA standard of 52.93 in 1981.

The winner of last year's American swimmer of the year award joined Hall of Famers Mark Spitz of Indiana and John Naber of Southern California in a group of five swimmers to successfully defend individual titles in three consecutive NCAA meets. The other two members of the group are Yoshi Oyakawa of Ohio State and Bill Smith, also of Ohio State. He also became the 10th swimmer in NCAA history to claim seven or more individual titles.

Carey boosted the title hopes of the pre-meet favorite Longhorns with a 48.25 performance — just .05 faster than the standard fourth-place finisher Dave Bottom of Stanford set Thursday while swimming the backstroke in the 400 medley relay. Runner-up Mark Rhodenbaugh of Southern Methodist nipped Clay Britt of Texas in 48.88 as Britt failed in his bid to win the event for a fourth consecutive time.

Other champions in the second day of competition at the Indiana University Natatorium included Ricardo Prado, SMU's 18-year-old freshman recruit from Brazil; Arizona State's Mikael Orn, a junior from Sweden; and junior Matt Gribble of Miami, who just missed joined the record-breaking as he successfully defended his title in the 100 butterfly.

Prado, the world record-holder in the 400-meter individual medley, took the lead after 50 yards and held off all challenges to win the 400 individual medley in 3:48.19. Cam Reid of Arizona State, the early leader, charged from third place on the final 50 yards to edge Pat Kennedy of Florida for second.

Orn won the 200 freestyle in 1:36.02 — more than two seconds quicker than his time in last year's finals when he placed 11th. Rich Saeger, one of SMU's talented freshmen who have the Mustangs in contention for the team title, was second in 1:36.17 after being the quickest qualifier at 1:35.82.

Gribble, who few considered a serious contender for repeat laurels, had a career-best 47.26.

Two North Carolina State University fans paint their faces red and white in anticipation of gaining a Final Four berth in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Wolfpack must duplicate upset

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — North Carolina State, peaking just in time for post-season tournament play, has won seven straight games in a streak that includes an 81-78 verdict over Virginia in the championship game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

When the Wolfpack, 23-10, battles Virginia, 29-4, today in the final game of the NCAA West Regional, it will be the fourth meeting of the season between the two ACC rivals.

Although they are well acquainted with each other's styles and abilities, it is doubtful NC State has faced a Virginia team when Ralph Sampson was so single-minded of purpose.

PLAYING LIKE a man who has something to prove, Sampson led fourth-ranked Virginia to a 95-92 victory over No. 11 Boston College in a regional semifinal game Thursday night.

The 7-foot-4 All America scored 19 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and had four blocked shots, despite missing more than 12 minutes of the second half because of foul trouble.

During the time he was sidelined, instead of sitting morosely on the bench, Sampson was involved, standing for minutes at a time along the sideline exhorting his teammates. His intensity and total absorption in the matters at hand represented a departure from the Sampson who at times during his career has seemed distracted and almost passive in his approach to the game.

His failure to win a national championship in three previous seasons gnaws at Sampson, although his public pronouncements would indicate otherwise.

"That is not a great concern to me," says Sampson of the criticism. "I'm not worried about that pressure. I try to put pressure on myself to perform. All I can say is I'm not here to lose. I've felt like every year was my year to win."

BOSTON COLLEGE Coach Gary Williams explained Sampson's predicament this way: "When Ralph went to Virginia, everybody expected a couple of NCAA championships. I think Virginia has been very successful with Sampson there — look at their record. But it's a fact that some people measure success with NCAA titles, and they don't have any."

One other thing the Cavaliers proved Thursday night was that they have an abundance of talent even when Sampson is riding the bench. In his absence Virginia outscored Boston College 15-1 during a five-minute span to take a 68-57 lead.

The Eagles eventually cut the deficit to three points, but Virginia guard Rick Carlisle made six of six free throws in the final 27 seconds to protect the lead.

In Thursday night's other semifinal, North Carolina State buried Utah 75-56 with 68 percent shooting from the floor.

Guards Dereck Whittenburg and Terry Gannon were particularly effective from the perimeter, hitting baskets from the 18-20 foot range.

WHITTENBURG finished with a game-high 27 points and Gannon had 10.

"I don't think we'll be able to play to the same level on Saturday," said NC State Coach Jim Valvano. "Virginia's perimeter defense is one of the best in the country. We are not going to be able to shoot that well against a defense that good."

Valvano said getting a crack at Sampson for the fourth time this year was no advantage. "He'll never be less intimidating no matter how many times you play him," said Valvano.

"Shakespeare said familiarity breeds contempt, but I've always enjoyed watching Sampson play. To see a player of that size move with such grace and take those jump shots — I think that's incredible."

Trophies tell Putnam of Ranger good times

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The trophies from Pat Putnam's rookie major league season sit in the living room of his home, to help him remember the good times.

"It's nice to have them around," Putnam said with a shy grin.

In 1979 with the Texas Rangers, he was selected as the American League Rookie of the Year by The Sporting News and the Topps Chewing Gum Co.

He hit .277 with 18 home runs and 64 RBI that season. He hasn't repeated that kind of success since.

In 1982, he was back in the minor leagues, splitting the season between Texas and its American Association farm club in Denver. He batted just .230 for the Rangers, but .310 for the Triple-A Bears.

During the offseason, the Mariners got 29-year-old first baseman, for a minor league pitcher, Ron Musselman. Now, Putnam is battling Jim Maler for the Seattle first base job, and he may be winning.

The Mariners would like to have more left-handed hitters in their lineup, says General Manager Dan O'Brien. Putnam bats from the left; Maler hits right-handed.

"It's going pretty good," Putnam said this week after going 1-for-3 against the San Francisco Giants to raise his spring training average to .300. "I'm in pretty good shape and I feel pretty healthy. I'm just looking forward for the season to start.

"I think everybody wants to play every day. If they don't, I think there's something wrong with them. Sure, I'd like to play every day. I believe I can hit left-handed pitching."

With the Rangers' organization, Putnam said, he didn't he got a fair chance to play every day.

"They said I couldn't hit left-handers, so they platooned me," he said. "That kind of stigma is kind of hard to shake sometimes."

Putnam also disagrees with an label applied to him in Texas — that he was a defensive liability.

"But those things," he said with a grimace, "are kind of hard to shake sometimes."

O'Brien and Hal Keller, Seattle's director of player development, both were at Texas when the Rangers picked Putnam in the secondary phase of the June 1975 free-agent draft out of South Alabama University.

"He looks like the Putnam I remember," Keller said. "But he's done it in the big leagues before and he's done it well."

"You have to realize one thing when you're talking about Pat Putnam," O'Brien added. "He's the kind of player that you should put in the lineup and let play every day."

Keller says Arlington Stadium in Texas, where the Rangers play, is death on left-handed power hitters because of strong winds that blow in from right field.

But, unless someone opens a door, there is no wind in Seattle's Kingdome, where the Mariners play their home games. The Kingdome led the major leagues in home runs from 1979 through 1981, and ranked third last season.

'WAR': Louisville vs. Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Fans are canceling weekend plans and begging for tickets. Headlines screaming "WAR" are stretched across The Louisville Times.

The Bluegrass State is in a frenzy because The Game is finally going to be played.

Kentuckians will put aside their worries today to watch the University of Kentucky tangle with the University of Louisville for the first time in 24 years when the teams meet in the final of the NCAA Mideast Regional.

No ordinary contest, this matchup of two of the nation's most successful basketball programs has defied cogitation, legislation and even television since 1959.

SCALPERS IN Knoxville, Tenn., site of the Mideast playoffs, are talking about selling $15 tickets for $500 each and Louisville newspapers have been filled all week with pleas "to trade Kentucky Derby tickets for Mideast finals."

"You walk down the (Capitol) halls here today and you can sense the electricity," said Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., who attended both schools and owned the defunct pro basketball team, the Kentucky Colonels. "There is a smile on everyone's face."

"I was born and raised in Louisville and this is something I've been looking forward to for a long time," said Brian Johnson, who works at the Cardinals Inn across the street from the Louisville campus.

The Game was set up when Kentucky beat Indiana and Louisville came from behind to win in Thursday's semifinals. When Louisville won, students and fans danced in the streets.

In a state where the boys' high school basketball tournament finals plays to a sell-out crowd of 25,000, this was the ultimate game.

THE UNIVERSITY of Kentucky — "The Big Blue" — was one of the first dynasties in college basketball.

Louisville, on the other hand, is something of an upstart — the city school that in recent years has drawn more notice outside Kentucky than within.

Many local restaurants will be opening up early for the 11:45 p.m., CST, tipoff and some owners are moaning because they haven't had time to advertise.

The Louisville Times on Friday had a a half-page illustration of Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall and Louisville Coach Denny Crum facing each other with "WAR" emblazed in big red letters.

For more than two decades, it had been a cold war.

"I've been in this job three years and I've tried to schedule Kentucky," said Louisville athletic director Bill Olsen. "And I know the people before me did, too. But the answer they always give is that it's their policy not to play other teams in the state, that if they played one they'd have to play them all."

Not so, says the University of Kentucky, which says it wanted to play an exhibition game outside the state with the understanding that Louisville, which does play other state schools, be included.

Hall reiterated at a news conference Friday Kentucky's long-standing policy of not scheduling state rivals in the regular season.

HALL SAID the pressure was "more on them than us" because "we have an opportunity to be the underdog and play Louisville."

When Crum was told Hall said the pressure was on Louisville, he responded:"I think it's just the reverse. They've got a chance to carve into ours. The last 10 years our record is better than their's."

The two schools have not faced each other since March 13, 1959, when Louisville posted a 76-61 triumph in the NCAA tournament. Kentucky holds a 9-3 lead in the series, which hasn't involved a regular-season meeting since 1922.

"I'm looking forward to it," says Kentucky athletic director Cliff Hagen. "I think it will be great."

In the last General Assembly session, a legislative effort to get the two teams to meet failed.

The Game almost was played in last year's NCAA tournament. All Kentucky had to do to play Louisville was beat unherald Middle Tennessee.

Nixson takes Bass lead

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — Larry Nixson, of Hemphill, Tex., caught four fish Friday to move from third place to first after three days of the $327,000 Super Bass Anglers Sportsman Society St. Johns River largemouth fishing tournament.

Nixson's catch weighed six pounds, six ounces; boosted his three-day total to 29 pounds, 12 ounces, and sent the 32-year-old, five-time B.A.S.S. champion ahead of second-day leader Don Rank, of Elkhart, Ind.

Rank caught two fish weighing two pounds, two ounces and had a three-day total of 27 pounds, nine ounces. Robert Beckton, of Orlando, was in third place after catching three fish for three pounds, 14 oounces. His tournament total was 27 pounds, seven ounces.

Landry, Phillips hope new kid on block is success

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Because of what it would mean to others in their profession, two of the best-known head coaches in the National Football League hope the fledgling United States Football League is a success.

Tom Landry, the only head coach the Dallas Cowboys have ever had, and Bum Phillips, who coaches the New Orleans Saints, have been associated with the established NFL for many years.

Nevertheless, both put in a good word for the new kid on the block, even though that new kid is on the other side of the street.

"My feeling is I like to see coaches and players working," said Landry, who has guided the Cowboys into the National Conference championship game each of the past three years. "That's a great thing about the USFL.

"I haven't watched them yet. It's going to be a tough thing. They've got a shot. They've got to have the following, the big TV following, if they're going to make it."

Phillips expressed similar sentiments."I'm not smart enough to tell what's going to happen, there are so many ifs," he said. "At a time when the economy needs help, it's going to help a lot of people if the USFL makes it. That's a lot of coaches and players getting a chance."

Landry and Phillips are among those who have gathered in this Palm Springs suburb this week for the annual NFL meetings.

"The jury is still out," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said of the USFL. "They play 18 weeks. So far they've played only three. You have to find out how the public is going to receive it at the games and on television."

"I've watched a few games," said Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg. "Since I don't know many of the players, it's hard to get an impression."

"I haven't seen enough of it to comment on the play," said Billy Bidwell, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals. "I think they've done a very good marketing job on the product."

"I think they're off to a very good start," said Hank Stram, a former NFL coach at Kansas City and New Orleans who has been a broadcaster for CBS in recent years. "I think they have a good chance if they're patient. And the competitive balance of the league is very important."

"I'm not high on the quality of the players," said Jim Hanifan, coach of the Cardinals. "I think the coaches are doing a great job. It's up to the public to decide if the league will succeed."

"They have some very good people," said Billy Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots. "Philadelphia's coach, Jim Mora, was our defensive coordinator. And he's not the only one.

"Competition is part of the American way. If the USFL makes it, it might make our league more efficient. Maybe the USFL will be the best thing that has happened to the NFL."

"The next six or eight weeks will be critical," said Gil Brandt, the master builder of the Cowboys. "There's a lot of novelty early on. We'll see how they do against baseball, the NCAA Tournament, the NBA playoffs and good weather."

"They've had some pretty good results so far," said Rankin Smith, owner of the Atlanta Falcons. "The crunch will probably come next year. Things might change if they start losing a lot of money. They've got a tough road, but it's not something you can just brush aside."

"If they don't get greedy and stay with their constitution and by-laws, they'll do all right," said Joe Foss, the Commissioner of the old American Football League from its beginning in 1959 until April 1966. "If they can provide a good, competitive game, like a Triple-A baseball league, they'll be all right."

Wranglers hit road to face Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Arizona Wranglers, with two straight victories behind quarterback Alan Risher, will face two new experiences and possibly three in their United States Football League game against the Birmingham Stallions tonight.

It will be the first road game for the 2-1 Wranglers and their first time on artificial turf. In addition, if predicted thundershowers result, it will be their first game in the rain.

"I'm concerned that it's our first road game," Coach Doug Shively said Friday.

HIS TEAM will work out briefly Saturday to get used to the footing on Legion Field.

"With thundershowers predicted, the running game probably will be a bit more of a factor and that should help us some, because Risher is mobile," Shively said.

The Stallions' top quarterback, Reggie Collier, is suffering from a hip pointer and "is questionable, very questionable," said Coach Rollie Dotsch. "I fully intend to get him well. There is no sense in trying to play him half the time. We tried it, and it is not fair to him or the club at this point."

In that case, Bob Lane probably will start. He has hit on 20 of 40 passes for 202 yards. Lane, Dotsch said, "is a different kind of a quarterback than Reggie. He is a dropback passer. He can throw the ball on short routes. He doesn't have the arm Reggie has deep."

BIRMINGHAM is 1-2 with a road victory over Oakland and home losses to Michigan and Philadelphia. The Stallions drew 30,305 fans for their home opener and, in rainy weather last Monday night, drew 12,850.

After losing its opener to Oakland, Arizona has edged Chicago and Los Angeles.

Risher has hit on 45 of 80 passes for 474 yards and four touchdowns, and has run 13 times for 60 yards.

Arizona's top runner is Steve Howell with 116 yards on 34 carries from his fullback slot. Calvin Murphy will be at tailback, the third Wrangler to start at that position.

Shot clock, 3-pointers boost college scoring

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Shot clocks and three-point goals boosted college basketball scoring for the first time in eight years, according to the NCAA.

The NCAA said Thursday that Division I teams in 1982-83 combined for an average of 138.61 points per game, 3.53 points more than last season's 135.08, which was the lowest in 30 years.

If all three-point goals were counted as two points, the average would have been 137.56.

The scoring average breaks down to 70.03 points offensively for Division I teams and 68.58 defensively.

The 12 conferences that experimented with shot clocks, three-point goals or both averaged 71.89 points offensively, 4.12 points more than a year ago. The remaining Division I teams averaged 68.82 points offensively, up .34 points.

Holmes' fight is gift

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Larry Holmes, who earned $63 for his pro debut here in 1973, will get considerably more when he fights for the 10th time in this northeastern Pennsylvania city of 88,000 people Sunday.

But it's what Holmes is giving that is important to him.

His scheduled 12-round defense of the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship against Lucien Rodriguez of France is a gift to this former hard-coal capital where he fought nine times as a preliminary fighter.

"I'm a Pennsylvanian and my thing is not to forget my roots," said the 33-year-old titleholder from Easton, 85 miles to the south, who promised he would fight here as champion.

Holmes had wanted to end his career with a title bout here, but he decided to fight now while he had the chance.

There has been criticism that the 31-year-old Rodriguez, a Moroccan-born gas-meter reader, who holds the European championship is not a worthy challenger to Holmes, who is signed to defend against Tim Witherspoon May 20.

But Holmes noted Friday that promoters would not put a major money fight here.

Holmes' homecoming is being promoted by the Chic Feldman Foundation of Scranton and Sports-Cor, Inc., a group headed by Charles Spanziani, Holmes' attorney, and Dick Lovell, the champion's public relations man.

Rodriguez, ranked No. 9 by the WBC, is getting $200,000, and Holmes will do well financially. The live gate at the 6,700-seat Watres Armory will be about $700,000, with another $600,000 coming from NBC, which will televise the fight live on its "SportsWorld" show from 3 p.m.-4:30 p.m. CST.

While there are more attractive opponents for Holmes, the mood here seems to be one of satisfaction and pride that the champion has chosen to defend the title in Scranton.

Deposits take time

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Don't be too quick to try to spend that check you deposit in your bank account. It may be your money — but not yet.

Officials in several areas have recently questioned check-clearing procedures, particularly the amount of time that passes between the date a check is deposited and the date the money is actually credited to your account.

The delay varies from bank to bank, from area to area and from check to check. According to a consumer newsletter from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., banks in California alone reported delays ranging from seven days to 20 days.

Bob Walters of Sheshunoff & Co. Inc. of Austin, an industry consulting firm, said there are several reasons for the seeming slowness.

The bank does not want to pay you interest or allow you to withdraw the funds "until the bank has actually received credit for those funds," he said. "They're trying to protect themselves in two ways. If it's a checking account that bears interest, they don't want to pay interest on funds they don't have and can't invest themselves...and they don't want those funds withdrawn and gone and then the check comes bouncing back..."

Walters continued: "It's perfectly legitimate. There's no problem there. The problem you get into (is) where the banks push that maybe sometimes too far." Suppose you deposit a check written on a bank in the same town as your bank. It should clear within a day or two at most. "If they don't give you credit on that for...a week, then either they're using your funds after they have been cleared, but (they) haven't given you credit for it, or they may have a very, very inefficient manner of clearing funds..."

Banks themselves are concerned about clearing checks rapidly because of today's high interest rates. Walters said the banks have two ways of determining when a check has cleared. They may get actual proof of deposit — proof that the funds are available — or they may estimate when a check will clear based on where the check originates. If the bank uses a system based on estimates, you may wait longer for your money than you have to.

If you are comparing banks, Walters said, and the length of time it takes a check to clear is important, you should ask: "What method or procedure do you use to give me credit?" If the bank credits you as soon as it receives proof of deposit, you probably will not be able to find a faster system, Walters said.

How long should it take a check to clear? Walters said that if a check is written on a local bank, "999 times out of 1,000, that check will be cleared the following day."

An out-of-town check will take longer. It if is a particularly large check, the bank may take special steps to collect it since the extra expense of collection is offset by the extra interest the bank can earn once it has the funds available.

Odessan hears tapes

ODESSA (AP) — A former oilfield worker accused of the December 1981 killing of a Catholic priest has been allowed to hear two tape recordings the prosecution plans to use against him at his trial next month, a judge said Friday.

State District Judge Gene Ater said the tapes were played after he presided over a pretrial hearing Thursday for the defendant, James Harry Rayos, 26.

Also listening to the tapes, the judge said, were Rayos' two court-appointed attorneys

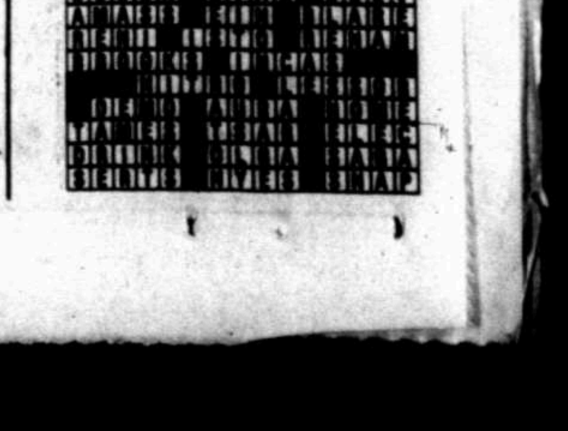
TODAY'S ANSWER



Repeal of withholding law not as easy as it sounds

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civics Lesson No. 1 holds that if a majority of our senators and representatives agree on something, it becomes law. It isn't always true.

Consider the furious fight over repeal of tax withholding on interest and dividends. Savers have dumped millions of letters onto Congress demanding repeal. More than 300 of the 435 House members and 51 of the 100 senators have signed one bill or another to repeal it.

But there's no assurance the majority in Congress will prevail. The chief reason is Civics Lesson No. 2: a president can veto any bill, and it can be overridden only by a two-thirds vote of both houses. President Reagan vigorously opposes repeal of withholding.

At this point, it's not even clear that a repeal bill will ever be sent to the president. The repeal effort may get nowhere.

The battle so far has been focused in the Senate where, on Tuesday, a majority stifled an effort to use a giant Social Security bill as a vehicle for delaying withholding until next year.

A week earlier, opponents of withholding held the Senate at bay for several days, trying to attach their repeal amendment to a bill providing emergency assistance to victims of the recession.

In exchange for letting the recession-relief bill pass, Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., leader of the fight against withholding, was given what some of his allies consider a dead horse. He was assured only that beginning April 15, the Senate will give him a chance to attach the repeal amendment to a minor trade bill.

The Senate is likely to approve that bill with the anti-withholding amendment. That's when the trouble starts. There's a good chance this bill won't even be considered by the House.

That's because the Constitution requires that a trade bill — just like a tax bill — carry an "HR" number, showing that it originated in the House. This bill has an "S" number — it originated in the Senate. So even some senators siding with Kasten say that because of the constitutional requirement, the debate that resumes on April 15 will be meaningless.

The House is following a second path to repeal.

Democratic leadership in that body wants to keep withholding on the books and is not about to let the repeal bill out of the Ways and Means Committee.

So, Rep. Norm D'Amours, D-N.H., has set out to force Ways and Means to release the repeal bill and let the House vote on it. All it takes to get such a "discharge petition" is the signatures of 218 House members — a majority. But that's easier said than done — even when more than 300 members say they favor repeal — because it's viewed as a slap at the leadership.

If D'Amours gets his discharge petition, his repeal bill almost certainly would be passed by the House. That would send the bill straight to the Senate Finance Committee, whose chairman, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is the chief backer of withholding.

The same procedures could be used eventually to force the repeal bill out of the Finance Committee and to the full Senate for a vote. The Senate probably would pass it and Reagan would exercise his veto. It then would be up to Reagan to convince Congress he was right — and it is a rare day when any Congress overrides a veto on any major bill.

But how can the government ignore the wishes of those millions of savers who are writing letters demanding repeal?

Dole argues that most of the letter-writers were scared by the banking industry into believing withholding jeopardizes their savings. He says the debate is convincing honest taxpayers they have nothing to fear from withholding.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who is on the other side of the withholding fight, offered Dole some free advice: "The biggest mistake you can make with taxpayers is to feel they are misled."

Some college students 'ain't gonna study war'

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — If a university student can study war, Prof. Gary Chamberlain believes a student should also be able to study peace.

"We have a military science program on campus," said Chamberlain, a theology professor at Seattle University. "I think the question can rightly be asked, why not peace studies?"

A growing number of campuses across the country are incorporating the issues of war and peace in the nuclear age into the curriculum. The offerings range from a semester-long course on "nuclear energy and contemporary history" at Washington University in St. Louis to a "project on peace and disarmament" established by a five-college consortium in Amherst, Mass.

Last year, the Washington-based Federation of American Scientists answered over 250 requests from educators for copies of syllabuses from a variety of nuclear war education courses.

Faculty and anti-nuclear activists attribute the dramatic rise in academic interest in peace studies to the declining state of Soviet-U.S. relations, the Reagan administration's aggressive stance in the arms race and the successful grass-roots nuclear freeze movement. But critics fear the nuclear education movement is misguided and simplistic, fueled by educators seeking to indoctrinate young people into opposing the nuclear arms race.

At the University of Washington, students can choose from classes entitled "Security in the Nuclear Age," "The Environmental Consequences of Nuclear War," and "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Nuclear War But Were Afraid to Ask." Seattle Pacific University is offering a class on Soviet-U.S. relations with a focus on the arms race. And students at The Evergreen State College can enroll in a two-quarter program entitled the "Roots of Nuclear Confrontation," which starts with a look at communism and capitalism and ends with a study of revolution and nuclear war.

Abe Keller, chairman of the local chapter of Educators for Social Responsibility here, says it is the colleges' responsibility to teach students about nuclear issues. "Why do we teach literature and art? Because it's part of life," he says.

Fort Morgan battles encroaching tourism

By GARRY MITCHELL

FORT MORGAN, Ala. (AP) — Wind whips the brick batteries of Fort Morgan as if the old outpost were a ship in the Gulf of Mexico instead of one of Alabama's treasured landmarks.

From the parapets tourists scan the sandy acres of battleground dating from the War of 1812. They don't see the ships loaded with British or Union troops in Mobile Bay anymore. They view drilling rigs boring for natural gas.

Fort Morgan, at the mouth of the bay, is located at Mobile Point at the end of a 22-mile-long peninsula with beachsides trimmed in summer houses and the rising concrete of condominiums.

Now and then, the fort's protectors wage a battle with sports fishermen who want to run jeeps and dune buggies to the beach. Fort manager Cathy Donelson says they would "cut a road to the beach through the 1812 battleground." So far, they have failed, but she says the war isn't won.

Changing times haven't altered the fort, but its dressed-up image is attracting more tourists. Some come to hear the heroic war stories, for example, the popular account of the bloodstain on the granite step:

During the Civil War, Capt. J.W. Whiting had come from Mobile to inspect the fort. Commander Lt. Col. C.S. Stewart and Whiting were standing along the western rampart for a cannon firing. Stewart told Whiting to go over to the other side for a better view.

The cannoneer, so the story goes, had been drinking and forgot the cannon was loaded. He put in another charge, lit the fuse and the double charge blew up the cannon, killing Stewart and the cannoneer.

Whiting credited the colonel with saving his life when he told him to move for a better view.

The colonel's gold dental plate is on display in the fort museum, along with extensive military gear, most from the Civil War era.

Sightseers reinforce the fort's financial future. The dollar admission goes toward restoring the remaining buildings on the grounds.

"The number of visitors has exceeded our wildest expectations," said Ms. Donelson, a former newspaper reporter now specializing in historical preservation.

In the 1981-82 fiscal year, the first year for paid admissions, some 52,500 people bought tickets to visit the fort. The actual attendance was probably higher, since small children aren't required to pay and season passes are available.

Money from admissions matched a $95,000 Interior Department grant for restoration of the 1902 commdant's quarters. The late Victorian residence was the first home of Fort Morgan commander Maj. Alfred S. Morgan and his family and was the focal point of "officers' row."

Ms. Donelson said managing the park was "kind of like running a farm. There are 600 acres and two miles of beach." A lot of time is spent picking up trash and repairing weather damage to bricks and metal rails.

Caring for the fort can be a lifetime mission.

"Christ Jesus Himself being the corner stone, in whom the whole building being fitted together is growing into a holy temple in the Lord." Ephesians 2:20-21

Breaking ground is an easy chore for this Hancock County, Ind., farmer. Indiana's mild winter made late February and early March almost weather-perfect for farmers in the area.

EARNEST KIKER

Plant double rows

Break custom this spring by planting two rows of vegetables in a single bed instead of just one row. The logic behind planting double is to produce as many vegetables as possible from the garden space available.

Planting double is mainly for vegetables which produce small plants. These include beets, carrots, lettuce, onions, parsley, radishes and turnips and should be spaced two inches apart.

Beans, garlic and spinach also can be grown in double rows, but plants should be four inches apart. Chard, collard, kohlrabi and mustard plants need six-inch spacings.

If growing broccoli, brussels sprouts, cauliflower and peppers on double rows, space the plants 24 inches apart in a staggered pattern. Avoid the double planting technique for plants need more than 24-inch spacing.

Weeding a garden planted in double rows will be more tedious during the first weeks of establishment, but will be less of a problem as crops grow and develop.

Proper watering and periodic side-dressing with ammonium sulfate or ammonium nitrate fertilizer will help insure maximum yields. If you use a drip irrigation system, place the hose between the two rows planted on the same bed. Thus the same amount of water will produce twice as many vegetables.

Oak bud poisoning can be a serious spring problem in livestock, and this spring then potential is especially great. Drought, high summer temperatures, early frost and winter moisture have led to a situation of little or no high quality range forage in certain areas of Texas. Oaks, particularly shin oaks, in these areas present a poisoning problem in late March and April.

Oakbuds when eaten by livestock, expecially cattle, cause poisoning. Toxic substances of oaks are thought to tannins. These are most toxic when oaks are budding and leafing. When more than 50 percent of diet is oak, animals become sick. More than a 75 percent diet of oak usually causes death.

Signs of poisoning are gaunt, tucked up appearance; constipation, frequently followed by profuse diarrhea; weakness; tendency to remain near water; reluctance to follow the herd; emaciation; mucus in droppings; dark urine; and collapse.

Move animals showing symptoms to an oak-free pasture and put them on adequate feed and water. Feeding a supplemental feed containing 10 percent calcium hydroxide may help reduce losses.

Prevention is a better cure. Control oak in a pasture and save the pasture as a reserve for oak-bud season. Use moderate stocking and a deferred-rotation grazing program to improve range forage production.

Consult a veterinarian if you are unsure of the cause of livestock poisoning and losses.

FmHA loans total $109 billion

By DON KENDALL

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON — If it's mind-boggling to ponder the size of the national debt, defense costs and and other federal programs, add the Farmers Home Administration as at least a footnote to the list.

Since the forerunner of FmHA was started in 1935, the agency has poured more than $109 billion in loans and grants into the nation's rural economy through scores of farm and rural development programs, some of which have been discontinued.

Basically, the FmHA, part of the Agriculture Department, offers credit to farmers and other rural people who cannot get it from banks and other commercial sources. It is known widely as the federal government's lender of last resort.

"Loan losses written off during the 47 years of the agency amount to less than 1 percent of principal advanced" to borrowers, says a new booklet outlining the history of the FmHA.

As of Sept. 30, 1982, more than 4 million loans and grants totaling $49.8 billion had been made since 1935 for farmer programs, such as operating loans, emergency loans and ownership.

Farm programs were the mission of the government's Resettlement Administation in 1935, established as an independent agency to help Depression-era farm families get on their feet. It was put into the Agriculture Department in 1937 and called the Farm Security Administration until after World War II when its present name was adopted.

Periodically, Congress assigned new roles to FmHA so that between 1949 and 1981 the agency evolved into the federal government's main force in a variety of programs intended to improve the quality of life for millions of rural Americans living on farms and in small towns.

Rural housing programs rank next to farmer programs on the agency's all-time list at nearly $39 billion. Most of that — $30.5 billion — was in loans to more than 1.7 million individual housing borrowers.

"Congress, during the 1960s and 1970s, added additional programs that benefit families and communities through the rural population, helping to provide safe, modest housing; modern, sanitary water and sewer systems; essential communtiy facilities; and...business and industry in rural areas," the report said.

The community programs total about $12.3 billion and business and industry another $5.4 billion.

Programs that have been discontinued since the agency's roots were planted in 1935 cost about $2.62 billion before they were dropped, the report said.

In the past decade, FmHA programs have totaled nearly $89 billion. That means that more than 80 percent of the agency's loan's and grants since 1935 have occurred since 1972.

By fiscal year, FmHA program operations during that period were:

1973 — $3.75 billion.
1974 — $3.6 billion.
1975 — $5.49 billion.
1976 — $7.19 billion.
1977 — $7.26 billion.
1978 — $11.1 billion.
1979 — $14.6 billion.
1980 — $12.97 billion.
1981 — $13.96 billion.
1982 — $8.78 billion.

"A major advantage to rural people is the localized delivery system developed over the years by FmHA," the report said.

82.3 million acres out of production

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the decision by farmers to take a record 82.3 million acres out of production this year did not exceed projections by nearly so much as many had thought.

When the payment-in-kind program was announced on Jan. 11 a USDA "fact sheet" showed 1983 crop acreages would be cut by about 30 million acres from 1982 under the earlier acreage reduction program and PIK.

The PIK portion of the program, the department said on Jan. 11, was expected to idle about 23 million acres. The regular part of the program would account for nearly seven million acres, according to the fact sheet.

A new supply-and-demand analysis issued on Wednesday, however, noted the 82.3 million acres farmers signed up to take from production this year and added that the actual signup was "up from an earlier estimate of around 52 million."

Ray Waggoner of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said Thursday that the "earlier estimate" of 52 million acres — not 30 million or so — was based on projections in an impact statement circulated shortly after the Jan. 11 announcement.

The impact statement, however, did not mention 52 million acres outright. Instead, it included separate figures which, if someone took the time, added up to about 52 million acres.

Waggoner said the figures were no secret and that he had provided them upon request.

But it still was not clear on Tuesday when Agriculture Secretary John R. Block held a news conference on the crop signup.

Block was asked what his signup projections had been.

"Well, we from the very beginning have been projecting 23 million acres out of production, and certainly we've exceeded that by a very large margin, more than doubled it actually. And that's from the PIK program itself."

As it turned out, signup under the regular acreage reduction program — which provides price supports and some cash payments in return for cutting back 20 percent — will idle 13.2 million acres.

The remaining 69.1 million acres will be taken from production under the PIK options. That means producers of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton will get surplus commodities as payment for taking an additional 10 to 30 percent of the cropland from production — or their entire base acreage in many cases.

Block also said that "setting land aside is not my cup of tea," even though in this case the huge surpluses and depressed prices demanded stern action. He might have recalled another comment almost two years ago.

The marketplace must signal farmers, not the government, Block told a California audience on June 19, 1981.

"That means we aren't going to be providing any encouragement to idle land or divert it from food crops," he said. "I hope we never again find ourselves in the position we were in during the early 1970s when 62 million acres of farmland were out of production."

Full Senate to consider extending compensation to farm workers

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Jurisprudence Committee has reported out SB 338, including farm and ranch laborers under worker's compensation law, on to the full Senate for consideration.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, would apply to only the largest companies employing farm and ranch labor.

Jim Harrington, an attorney from the Rio Grade Valley, testifying for the bill, said it would apply to only 5 percent of companies operating in Texas, which employ 95 percent of the farm and ranch workers.

Harrington said 30 percent of the large companies operating in the state already have worker's compensation.

"There is no reason in 1983 that we should have a special exclusion for farm workers," he said.

However, William E. Weeks, representing the farm workers industry said the bill would add an additional $3 million to operating costs, which he said the industry could not afford.

Weeks contended another problem from the bill would be program abuse. "Some unscrupulous people will purposely fake injury during the period in which they typically do not work."

Schools to begin verification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Schools next fall will begin a verification system to check a sample of students getting free or reduced-price lunches, says the Agriculture Department.

Assistant Secretary Mary C. Jarratt said Thursday that the new rules are the result of legislation passed by Congress which allowed schools for the first time to "routinely verify" information on applications for school meals.

"We want to make sure that free and reduced-price lunch benefits are directed only to those children from families that qualify," she said.

Can state meet challenge of 2000?

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — The year 2000 will see staggering economic and population changes in Texas but "cocky...self confident...can do" Texans can meet the challenge, a University of Texas researcher says.

Victor Arnold, director of UT's Bureau of Business Research, told newspaper executives earlier this week that the fate of Texas 2000 lies solely in the hands of Texans past, present and future.

"Nobody else is going to do it for them," Arnold said in a speech before the conventioning Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

He said water looms as the most serious threat to economic growth and a population that will reach 22.5 million in the next 17 years.

But he also touched on such problem areas as energy, transportation, education, economic diverity and the state's relationship with financially embattled Mexico.

"THE OUTLOOK for Texas is rather bright provided we meet all these challenges," he said.

"My picture of the year 2000 is as cloudy as anyone's, but we can and must understand the trends that move us foward and anticipate and adjust and not react to problems only when they become crises."

Arnold said the 1970 Texas population of 11.2 million will double by 2000 and with the increase will come changes and challenges and a new economy based on diversity rather than oil, gas and agriculture.

"By 2000, one of every 12 citizens in this country will be living in Texas," he predicted.

He said the state population increased by 3 million from 1970 to 1980 and jumped another million, to 15.2 million, in the last two years alone.

"Texas is like a developing country in terms of population growth," he said.

Of the 3 million increase between 1970 and 1980, he said 1.7 million, or 58 percent, were newcomeers rather than native born Texans.

A BUREAU study showed that eight percent of the immigrants migrated here from the 11 northeastern states, 25 percent form the upper midwest, 25 percent from the Rocky Mountain region, 28 percent from the four surrounding states and 10 percent from California.

Arnold said the influx included a large number of young, single women in the "prime child-bearing age" and that a baby boom has begun.

"In 1982, there were 65,000 more babies born in Texas than 1981," he said, and that a 3,000 shortfall of kindergarten teachers can be expected in five years.

There will be 45 percent more children in elementary and secondary schools by 2000," he added.

He noted also that his figures do not reflect the "undocumented guests" from Mexico, whose numbers range today from 300,000 to 3 million.

"Your guess on that is as good as mine," he said.

REGARDING THE labor force, he said Texas must create 190,000 jobs annually "just to break even" by 2000 and that 3 million more housing units will be required.

Economically, Texas has been the "crown jewel" of the entire nation, a leader in the rate of growth of manufacturing, capital investment and bank deposits.

"But the Texas economy in 1983 will not be the same as in 1983," he said.

He predicted that a state economy once based almost solely on oil and agriculture will become even more diversified in the areas of energy development, finance, insurance, real estate and both wholesale and retail trade.

"Diversity is a blessing in that it provides lots of job opportunities," he said. "But it also may be a curse in that we will be more susceptible to fluctuations in the national economy."

He said petrochemicals will continue to be a growth industry but at a decidedly slower rate.

"Without question, the most critical issue is water," he said, "and if we don't do something about it it will become a crisis."

THE WATER shortage is not a regional but a statewide problem, he said, adding:

"It is an absolute myth that we can move water from East Texas to West Texas. There are not sufficient sources."

He cited problems confronting Houston, the High Plains and the Rio Grande Valley and said a $30 billion investment in water development will be needed between now and 2000 to meet economic and population demand.

Arnold pointed to the Missouri River as a potential source of water importation and said a pipeline would be economically and technically possible but probably not politically.

On the energy front, he said oil production will continue to decline but that there is "cautious optimism" for new natural gas exploration and production.

He said the equivalent of one billion barrels of oil lies beneath Texas but that conventional technology precludes recovery.

"We must develop new technology," he said.

ACCORDING TO Arnold, there will also be 50 percent more motorists on Texas highways by 2,000 and funds will be needed to maintain and expand the current 75,000 miles of state and national roadways.

Texas, he said, still enjoys the location advantages attractive to new industry: climate, land costs, housing, labor policy and the absence of personal and corporate income taxes.

He said all Texans must realize their economic future is tied to Mexico and that the federal government should "cut through the political rhetoric and gibberish" and draw up a meaningful national policy.

The Mexican economy is floundering and the bottom has fallen out of its agricultural productivity, he said.

"The Mexican population will double by 2000...and the surplus labor force is not going to Nicaragua or Guatemala. It is going north to the state that shares 1,200 miles of common border and is separated by 50 yards of water."

He said the collapse of the Mexican economy could lead to an internal disruption that could easily spil across into Texas.

Despite all this, he said, the long range oulook for Texas is more bright than bleak.

"Texans are willing to try new things and they have the ability to adapt. The future of Texas is up to Texans."

Pentagon spent more than $6.87 billion in Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Department of Defense purchases of products and services plummeted in Texas last year, and the state yielded to New York its ranking as the nation's number two supplier for the Pentagon, studies indicate.

The studies, of prime contract purchases over $10,000, show that the Pentagon made over $6.87 billion in such purchases in Texas last fiscal year — or 6.6 percent of the total nationwide.

That's a drop of more $631 million from the previous year, when such purchases in Texas ran over $7.5 billion — or 8.6 percent of the nationwide total.

New York's share of such defense purchases, meanwhile, jumped to more than $7.7 billion last fiscal year from $6.5 billion the previous year.

Easily retaining the biggest share was California, where such contract purchases last year totaled more than $22 billion, or 21.8 percent of the nationwide total.

The Pentagon studies were of the net value of all Department of Defense procurement actions of over $10,000 for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, including contract awards, job and delivery orders and price adjustments on contracts.

The studies covered prime contract awards, or contracts made directly between the Pentagon and suppliers. The totals include civil operations of the Army Corps of Engineers.

OF TEXAS' 254 counties, 121 benefited from such purchases last year. Among the counties benefiting most, and the amounts of purchases, were Tarrant, $1.9 billion; Dallas, $1.4 billion; Nueces, $411 million; Jefferson, $404 million; Bexar, $373 million; Harris, $319 million, and Taylor, $307 million.

Two Texas firms were listed among the nation's top 25 corporate recipients of such prime contract dollars last fiscal year.

They were Tenneco Inc. of Houston, whose subsidiaries in various states did more than $844 million in such business, and Texas Instruments of Dallas, which did more than $838 million.

New York, meanwhile, placed five companies in the top 25 and California placed four.

And while Texas' share of such contract purchases declined, California's increased dramatically last fiscal year, from $16.6 billion or 19 percent of the nationwide total the previous year.

The extent to which various states benefit from defense contracts has recently become an issue in the debate over whether to approve President Reagan's proposed 10 percent real growth in defense spending next fiscal year.

REPUBLICAN SEN. John Tower, R-Texas, a staunch supporter of President Reagan's proposed military buildup, last month sent a letter to fellow senators challenging them to propose defense cuts in their own states, and received only six responses.

Tower said the reaction indicated that there is more support for defense increases than is generally recognized or that senators "clearly recognize defense spending provides a tangible economic benefit to their states."

Texas' other senator, Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat who has called for stretching out defense increases over a longer period than proposed by Reagan, did not respond to Tower's challenge.

"We took it as a tongue-in-cheek device," said Jack Devore, Bentsen's press secretary. "I think he was trying to make a point."

At a recent meeting here of the National Governors' Association, Texas Gov. Mark White voted for a resolution questioning "the assumption that significant real growth in the defense budget is required to maintain a strong military posture..."

WHITE SAID that defense contractors could not efficiently make use of all the increased spending being proposed by the president.

"Texas will never suffer from the elimination of waste," White, a Democrat, told reporters. "And if there's waste in the program, it should be eliminated."

Following are selected county-by-county totals of prime defense contract purchases of goods and services in Texas last fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30. Totals are for contract purchases of over $10,000.

Normally, the county is the area where the work is to be performed or the product finally processed.

Judge orders eviction of elderly man

GALVESTON (AP) — A judge has ordered an 81-year-old man evicted from his home because he could not produce a document which he claimed guaranteed him a lifetime rent of $26.50 a month.

Stafford Schmidt has lived 42 years in the house, which he and two brothers built in 1941 on land owned by their nephew.

Schmidt told the judge earlier this week that the document, signed by his nephew and his nephew's wife, was misplaced or stolen from a cedar chest along with other personal items in a burglary 10 years ago.

Although several friends testified they had seen the agreement, Probate Judge Jerome Jones said he needed proof the document existed because there was no mention of it in the will left by the late Selma Hoke, the wife of Schmidt's nephew.

Jones ordered Schmidt to vacate Wednesday. Schmidt, who is hard of hearing and has diabetes, could be forced to leave the house within 30 days.

"I know he's an old man and all, but there really needs to be something in writing," the judge said.

The dispute went to court because the new owners of the property, Kathy Ward and John Luhning, want more rent.

Mrs. Ward, a 31-year-old teacher, and Luhning, a 26-year-old draftsman, are distant relatives of Schmidt. They inherited the property when their aunt, Mrs. Hoke, died in 1977.

In 1981, Mrs. Ward and Luhning decided to sell the house and made arrangements with the prospective buyer to lease it to Schmidt for $230 a month. Schmidt refused to pay the extra rent, and the sale fell through.

Schmidt, a retired carpenter and school custodian, wept at Wednesday's hearing when Mrs. Ward testified her aunt never had mentioned the agreement.

Mrs. Ward and Luhning, both of Houston, refused to discuss the case. Earlier, Mrs. Ward said the dispute "has been horrible."

"I realize it might not sound like a fair thing to do, but he has put us in a box," Mrs. Ward had said. "I don't like forcing him to leave. It upsets me, but we need the money.

Houston studies trolley

HOUSTON (AP) — The Metropolitan Transit Authority is studying a plan which would use trolley cars to take passengers from one side of downtown Houston to the other, an official says.

John Breeding, a senior rail planner for Metro, said earlier this week a "light rail" system which would be powered by overhead electrical lines is under consideration. He said it would most likely run about 1.5 miles from west to east on Texas Avenue, the widest street in downtown.

If the trolley is built, it will run at street level alongside the automobile traffic. The first electric streetcars appeared in Houston in June 1891. By 1910 the city had more than 50 miles of streetcar track. By about 1940, however, buses had replaced streetcars as the transit travel of choice in Houston.

The trolley would be designed to supplement an 18.2-mile rail transit system which would parallel two major freeways, Breeding said. The first 13 miles of that system are set to begin operating in late 1987.

Defeat and Victory

One hundred sixty-two feet high and one hundred forty-seven feet wide Napoleon built his arch of triumph. Proudly it rises above the Place de l'Etoile reminding the world of an Emperor's early victories — and later defeats.

On the road from Bethphage to Jerusalem centuries before there had been another arch of triumph. Nature had fashioned it of palm trees. Beneath their bowing branches the Prince of Peace rode into the city that was to crucify Him.

Jesus, unlike Napoleon, never had need of a gigantic monument to help the world remember Him. The doors of a million sanctuaries bespeak His victory. Men pass through them not to gaze upon the majesty of carved stone, but to worship and serve the Son of God.

Napoleon bought for himself a transient glory at the price of other men's blood.

Jesus bought for all men eternal life — at the price of His Own Blood!

The Newspaper BIBLE

JESUS LOVES ME, THIS I KNOW!

Later on as Jesus left the town He saw a tax collector--with the usual reputation for cheating--sitting at a tax collection booth. The man's name was Levi. Jesus said to him, "Come and be one of My disciples." So Levi left everything, sprang up and went with Him!

Soon Levi held a reception in his home with Jesus as the guest of honor. Many of Levi's fellow tax collectors and other guests were there.

But the Pharisees and teachers of the Law complained bitterly to Jesus' disciples about His eating with such notorious sinners.

Jesus answered them, "It is the sick who need a doctor, not those in good health. My purpose is to invite sinners to turn from their sins, not to spend My time with those who think themselves already good enough."

Their next complaint was that Jesus' disciples were feasting instead of fasting. "John the Baptist's disciples are constantly going without food, and praying," they delcared, "and so do the disciples of the Pharisees. Why are yours wining and dining?"

Jesus asked, "Do happy men fast? Do wedding guests go hungry while celebrating with the groom? But the time will come when the bridegroom will be killed, then they won't want to eat."

Then Jesus used this illustration: "No one tears up unshrunk cloth to make patches for old clothes, for the new garment is ruined and the old one isn't helped when the patch tears out again.

"And no one puts new wine into old wineskins, for the new wine bursts the old skins, ruining the skins and spilling the wine. New wine must be put into new wineskins.

"But no one after drinking the old wine seems to want the fresh and the new. 'The old ways are best,' they say."

Christianity emerges forcefully in China

RELIGION

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

To the amazement of Westerners, evidence is mounting that Christianity grew tremendously in China during past years of brutal suppression, and has now emerged, much bigger than ever.

Just how big is uncertain, but some new estimates suggest immense increases in the number of believers, with some putting the total at more than 10 times what it was before Communism took power there in 1949.

Although cautious about such figures, P. Richard Bohr, a China expert and executive director of the Midwest China Center in St. Paul, Minn., says indications have shown up of a "quite astonishing" Christian expansion.

While the Chinese church had appeared broken up and immobilized under previous suppression, he says it's now obvious that "underneath that public facade of inactivity, a greal deal of fellowship and especially evangelism had been going on.

"It was a daring and risky evangelism, without Bibles or hymnbooks, relying on memorized passages and a strong oral tradition," he says, particularly in the 1966-76 violent drive to stamp out signs of religion.

The results of the underground persistence in perpetuating the faith are now clear, he says, "in a very vital and alive church, with a tremendous sense of spirit and an enormous response both in the cities and countryside."

Concerning the size of that now visible strength, a Hong Kong China watcher, the Rev. Thomas Wang, says estimates of the number of Christians in China now range from 30 to 75 million.

Wang, general secretary of the Chinese Coordination Center for World Evangelism, suggests a reasonable estimate might be about 50 million.

That would be about 12 times the approximately 4 million Christians in China before the Communist takeover — then about 3 million Catholics and 1 million Protestants.

Wang told a recent evangelization meeting in San Bernardino, Calif., that quietly and unnoticed, a sweeping spiritual revival has been going on in China and is just now becoming evident.

These meditations are based on actual and possible conversations taking place during the last days of Jesus' life in Jerusalem and at the cross.

Peoples holds healing service

Peoples Bible Missionary Church, 1201 E. Spruce St., is holding a healing service at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The healing service is held every fourth Sunday.

The church's minister, the Rev. L.L. Martin, invites the public to attend.

Hope Lutheran Church holds Tenebrae rites

The members of Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will hold a traditional Tenebrae service at 7:30 p.m. Friday April 1.

Dating back to the 4th century A.D., the service of Tenebrae was celebrated as a solemn observance of the events that occured on the first Good Friday when Jesus of Nazareth was crucified. The service to be held at Hope Lutheran is a version of an ancient office known as Tenebrae, from Latin, meaning darkness.

Traditionally, the ceremony of Tenebrae embodies the extinguishing in succession of candles and other lights on the altar and in the church, thus casting the entire sanctuary into total darkness.

No sermon is given. Instead, various readings highlight the events of Good Friday. After each major section, another pair of candles is extinguished, symbolic of the gradual flight and denial of the disciples and friends of Jesus away from the crucifixion.

Bishop Stowe to preach at First Methodist Sunday

Bishop W. McFerrin Stowe will be the preacher Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Lenten Sunday Evening Service at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

Stowe is bishop-in-residence at Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University at Dallas. The bishop-in-residence at the seminary is a faculty member and counselor for seminary students preparing for careers in ministry.

Stowe retired in 1980 after having served as the resident bishop of the Kansas area and the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Prior to his election to the episcopacy he served pastorates at St. Luke's UMC, Oklahoma City, and First UMC, Stillwater, Okla.

He is the author of four books: "The Characteristics of Jesus," "The Power of Paul," "It All Began with God" and "If I Were a Pastor."

The public is invited. A reception will follow the service.

Pet law passes quickly

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some lawmakers wait years to get their pet legislation passed. But a sixth-grader who worried about the fate of baby chicks, goslings and bunnies saw her idea unanimously approved after only three months.

Mary Beth Butler of Dyersburg wrote to her state representative in December, complaining that the baby animals given as Easter gifts often are discarded to die after their artificial color wears off.

"They're cute when they're colored and everybody loves them," she wrote to Don Dills. "But when their natural feathers grow out they're ugly and nobody takes care of them."

Dills agreed and sponsored a bill to ban the sale or gift of baby chicks, goslings and bunnies.

Galaxy hitchhiking guide becomes bestseller

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — One evening in the early 1970s, a young Cambridge undergraduate named Douglas Adams, intoxicated with drink and conversation, lay on his back in an Austrian pasture, his head pillowed on his copy of a hitchhiking guide to Europe, and contemplated the starry universe.

"It occurred to me that at some point somebody should write a hitchhiker's guide to the galaxy as well," he recalls now. "I fell asleep and forgot about it for six years."

Adams grew up to become a hospital porter, chicken-shed cleaner, bodyguard and financial burden to his parents. Picking up an avocation from his college days, he began writing radio comedy sketches, one of which translated eventually into a BBC radio serial called — "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy."

Now 31, and still a bit stunned by his subsequent success, Adams has just arrived in Los Angeles to participate in a film based on his creation, which has expanded into a BBC television series (broadcast on 100 PBS stations in America), a stage adaptation, a record album and three novels — "The Hitchhiker's Guide ..." "The Restaurant at the End of the Universe" and "Life, the Universe and Everything."

With more than 2 million copies of the books afloat in England and close to a million sold here ("Hitchhiker's Guide" is currently seventh on the paperback best-seller list), Adams is a full-fledged cult figure. His American agent compares his impact with that of the Beatles.

Adams' appeal is that of the born storyteller with a talent for whimsy. Not only is he enormously entertaining, he addresses common fears of the technological future, reassuring readers that reality will remain just as confusing and elusive, no more or less, than it has always been.

In order to write of his galactic guide, Adams first had to create a galaxy. His is a particularly appealing universe, despite its formidable perils. His cast of characters is interesting but not so dominant that it gets in the way of what Adams calls "the large situations" he's contemplating, such as self-defeating technology.

"I'm not interested in the prediction or technological part of science fiction," Adams said in an interview.

"For me, science fiction is just a good way to examine small events on a large scale. I only use technology to make fun of it, although I hope it will work out logically."

Consider, for example, the Jatravartids, beings with 50 arms each who invented deodorant before the wheel. Or the unexplained fact 85 percent of all known worlds have invented a drink called, phonetically, "gin and tonic," though not necessarily the same drink. Or the planet full of advertising men, marketing experts, personnel managers and television producers who, after 573 committee meetings, still haven't discovered fire because "we've got to find out what people want from fire, how they relate to it, what sort of image it has for them."

"Guide" opens the trilogy by introducing Arthur Dent, a most ordinary person who, according to Adams, "moves from one astonishing event to another without fully comprehending what's going on."

One big thing going on is the suddenly imminent destruction of Earth by machinery from the Galactic Hyperspace Planning Council. A hyperspatial express route is to pass through our star system and it's no use complaining, goes the official announcement, since details of the plan have been on display at the local planning department located in the Alpha Centauri star system for 50 Earth years and no formal complaints have been lodged.

As it happens, the only soul on Earth to receive advance warning of the demolition is Ford Prefect, an odd but convivial unemployed actor who, in reality, is an alien stuck on Earth for the past 15 years while thumbing for his next ride.

Prefect, after arranging to catch a hop with the demolition fleet, has time to save very little from Earth. He chooses Dent, an amiable drinking companion, and the two barely clear the atmosphere in time.

Hamburger lovers go all out

DENVER (AP) — Fifty transplanted St. Louis residents spent $175 — plus the cost of a 1,700-mile plane trip — to bring a taste of the Midwest to Colorado.

A group of workers at Fitzsimons Army Medical Center here dispatched Rick Grant to St. Louis overnight to pick up 700 White Castle hamburgers, a Midwest fast food staple unavailable in Colorado.

Grant placed the order at 6 a.m. Tuesday at the counter of the White Castle burger shop on Natural Bridge Road in St. Louis. By noon, he was back at the medical center, doling out the frozen burgers to employees of the hospital's optical lab, who organized the junket.

The Colorado workers remembered the little burgers from the time when the optical lab was located in St. Louis before it was relocated to the Denver suburb of Aurora 10 years ago.

Seaborg: U.S. students not educated in math, science

Hearst
Feature Service

One of the world's foremost nuclear scientists, Nobel laureate Glenn T. Seaborg, says that America's failure to educate its youngsters in science and math amounts to "unilateral economic disarmament."

That failure must be reversed soon, he said, or the country will be unable to compete technologically with the rest of the world.

Seaborg, a long-time director of the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission, is best known for his discovery in 1940-41 of chemical element 94, plutonium, which accelerated research in constructing the atomic bomb. His later discovery of the short-lived elements beyond uranium, the so-called transuranium elements, won him the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1951.

Seaborg said the crisis in science education is particularly acute in the high schools, although it begins in elementary school.

"THEY ARE already turned off when then enter high school, which is far too soon," Seaborg said. "I think it's a basic misunderstanding of what science is. The teacher isn't interested or excited, so the student isn't. The assignments are boring, so the student is bored. The student can't get enthused about something like that all by himself. It's the teacher who must create that enthusiasm."

Although solutions are complicated, Seaborg said the cause is simple: Those who might be enthusiastic teachers, namely the science and math scholars now graduating from college, are choosing private industry over teaching because private industry pays much better.

"That situation must be reversed," Seaborg said. "Perhaps it will be necessary to introduce a combination of pay based partially on merit and partially on the marketplace. I admit that unions will have to play a role, and that it won't be easy to do. If the whole salary scale must be readjusted, so be it. Teachers are making too little anyway, and the problem is critical."

Seaborg, 70, said the National Commission on Excellence in Education has been wrestling with the question for more than 18 months. "We're just going to have to make our case strongly," said Seaborg, a commission member. "The economic well-being of this country and the ability of its children to get jobs in the future depends on education in the vital subjects." Seaborg defined these as science, math and computer technology, history and the social studies, English and foreign languages.

Seaborg said he owes his scientific achievements to the enthusiastic teachers who taught him in high school and college. He did graduate and post-graduate work at the University of California at Berkeley.

IT WAS AT Berkeley that Seaborg, together with Joseph W. Kennedy, Emilio Segre and Arthur C. Wahl, eventually discovered element 94 and named it plutonium, in honor of Pluto, the planet beyond Uranus, for which uranium had been named.

Because plutonium could be produced in large quantities in nuclear reactors, it was an ideal fuel for a nuclear explosion. Asked if he has regretted that discovery, Seaborg said, "If one could wish God had not made the world in that way, that would be a proper wish. But to have our scientists come in second on any scientific discovery like this is to no advantage.

"The discovery of plutonium, that is in the category of pure research. The practical applications that followed, yes, we were involved with."

New drug appears to help senility victims

BOSTON (AP) — Elderly victims of senility may find "a glimmer of hope" in a medicine already on the market which seems to relieve the confusion and memory loss that accompany the condition, researchers reported.

Until now, the drug, called naloxone, has been used to reverse the effects of narcotics overdoses. Doctors theorized that natural painkillers in the brain may somehow be implicated in Alzheimer's disease, the most common cause of senility in old people.

"We've gone from gloom to optimism," said Dr. Eugene Roberts of the City of Hope Research Institute in Duarte, Calif. "There's a glimmer of hope. We've opened up the window, and now with our new technology, we can plunge through."

Roberts proposed trying naloxone and consulted with doctors at New York University Medical Center, who carried out an experiment with it. The results of that work, directed by Dr. Barry Reisberg, were published in this week's New England Journal of Medicine.

Between 2 million and 3 million Americans are estimated to have moderate or severe forms of Alzheimer's disease, and there is no accepted treatment for the irreversible illness.

Earlier this week, Margaret Heckler, secretary of health and human services, announced formation of a task force to oversee federal research on Alzheimer's disease. Mrs. Heckler said the disease and its complications cause 100,000 deaths a year, and it is the major reason so many elderly people must be confined to nursing homes.

In the experiment, researchers first gave injections of naloxone to five people, and tests showed "notable improvement" in three of them.

Then they conducted a more elaborate study on seven people. This time, improvement in three cases was so great that the patients' families noticed a difference. But they were not cured of their senility.

Reisberg said one woman who had not been able to count backwards from 10 could do subtraction after taking the medicine. Another patient could recite her home address and the name of the president — facts she could not remember before — as well as "some aspects of what she had done in recent days," he said.

The patients took injections of the drug once a week for six weeks, and the medicine took effect quickly, often within 15 to 30 minutes.

If you're like most renters, the tax man's got you down and you're ready to cry uncle. You have no interest to write off, and, to make matters worse, you don't own a home. Each month those rent dollars go out the window with no hope of retrieval.

LIVE-IN TAX SHELTER

At Fairgate you'll enjoy a beautiful home and tax relief. You can deduct a considerable amount of interest expense from your income tax, and because our homes are priced below market value but presently sell for $92,500, you have built-in equity.
