Battle On Vice to Be Strongly Waged At Canton, Ohio

CANTON, Ohio, Aug. 22—(AP)—Two distinct battles are imminent in the war on vice and alleged corrupt politics in Canton, which was precipitated by the murder of Don R. Mellett, crusading publisher, on July 16—a murder which investigators believe they are now well on the way to solving.

An intensive drive, tending to break down the alibi of Louis Mazer, member of Canton's underworld, the only man thus far formally charged with the murder, is contemplated this week. He is held at Cleveland.

Tomorrow, it is expected, the establishment of a newly constituted civil service commission will be sought, preparatory to re-construction of the Canton police department.

Controversy over the question of prosecution of the murder case is expected to result this week either in the appointment of a special prosecutor or an aide to C. B. McClintock, Stark county prosecutor.

Joseph R. Roach, Chicago vice smashing lawyer, who is developing cases in both the murder and liquor conspiracy inquiries, insists that a competent prosecutor be put in charge of the murder evidence he has prepared for the grand jury.

Several weeks ago McClintock refused to permit Roach's appointment as his assistant.

The effort to break down Mazer's alibi that he was not near the Mellett home the night of July 16, is expected to involve still more intimately City Detective Floyd Streitenberger, whose stories in support of Mazer's alibi do not satisfy the investigators. Streitenberger may be called before either Roach or Assistant District Attorney Howell Leuck, who will return here from Cleveland tomorrow. The detective claims Mazer was with him, discussing the purchase of a police dog at the hour the slaying occurred.

Krishnamurti, Protege Of Mrs. Beasant to "Sweep America For Christ"

By Central Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—Out of the east, by way of Europe, a slim, active young man is coming to America, coming as the embodiment of him who offers salvation.

After prolonged search Mrs. Annie Besant, leader of world Theosophists, found Jiddu Krishnamurti in India. He was a very young man, then, but the Theosophist enthusiast found in him those qualities of humility, simplicity, unassuming leadership and wisdom which she believed would of necessary characterized the New Messiah for whom she looked. She took him under her protection and came increasingly to believe n his divine inspiration.

In presenting him to an international meeting of Theosophists in Europe this summer Mrs. Besant faced the great test of "proving" her protege's heaven-sent authority. And, with an almost startling lack of dramatics, the slim young Hindu completely captured those who were eager to believe in him.

His American tour is expected to be a repetition of his European "triumph."

What sort of man-god, then, is Krisnamurti, just turned 30, who has been sent from India to save our souls from the mammons of a jazz-delirious age and ease the heavy-laden? His devotees describe him uncritically as "beautiful," "radiant," "heavenly" and the like. James Montgomery Flagg, the artist and a convert, sketched him and waxed lyrical.

In the Flagg drawing and photographs Krishnamurti is shown as a narrow-faced young Oriental. His facial characteristic is a thin Roman nose. Straight, glistening black hair covers a long head. Lids flare and droop haughtily over eyes embrasured in deep wide sockets. His lips carved in voluptuous patterns and fine, almost feminine, chin bespeak ardent receptivity.

Krishnamurti's body appears lithe and sinewy, as is appropriate to a golfer and tennis player and a pupil of the late Professor Sandow. He wears tweeds and dinner jackets tailored in Saville Row, partly because upon his dedication to divinity 18 years ago rich Englishwomen endowed him, but partly also because he esteems correct clothes one of life's graces.

In appearance, Krishnamurti will be made manifest to New York as a good-looking, somewhat athletic young man, acquainted with good form in clothing, a mystic, perhaps, but not an ascetic figure. In short, a slender olive-skinned Messiah in plus fours.

What gospel, then, does Krishnamurti bear to stimulate our imagery and guide our conduct? In the main, a study of his four bound tracts discloses a negative set of doctrines ex-

Charles W. Eliot Dies

GRAND OLD MAN PASSES DIVIDE AT AGE OF 92

End Comes Quietly to Harvard's President Emeritus

WAS PREXY 40 YEARS

NORTHEAST HARBOR, Me. Aug. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, died at his summer home here today. He was 92 years of age.

Doctor Eliot had been in delicate health since he came here early in the summer and had been confined to the house of late. He had spent his summers at Northeast Harbor since the early 80's. The end came peacefully late today.

Funeral Tuesday.

Funeral services will be held in the Union church here on Tuesday at noon, and services will be held also in Appleton chapel at Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass., on Wednesday.

Dr. Eliot's son, Rev. Samuel A Eliot of Cambridge, Mass., also has his summer residence here, and was present at the end.

Dr. Eliot was president of Harvard for 40 years, from 1869 to 1909. A notable event of his carer after his retirement as an active educator was the celebration of his 90th birthday when he received felicitations and tributes of educators and Harvard men from all parts of the world.

Was "Teetotalar."

Even after passing his 90th birthday, Dr. Eliot appeared occasionally as a speaker at public meetings and frequently expressed his opinions on subjects of public interest. In April, 1924, he led a group of Cambridge home-owners in a successful protest against the erection of apartment houses in the quiet neighborhood where he lived. The following month he took issue with President Nicholas Murray Butlar of Columbia university on the subject of prohibition, expressing his belief that the volstead act was working efficiently. In the course of the debate he disclosed that he himself had become a teetotalar at 83.

In June, 1924, with Elihu Root and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, he received the Roosevelt medal conferred for "leadership of youth and development of American character."

Dr. Eliot aroused wide discussion in 1924, when he disputed the "melting pot" theory of the assimilation of aliens in America, asserting that the actual workings of such theory would be a misfortune, and that it was better for American citizens of all origins to retain their distinctive racial heritages and to eschew inter-racial marriages. His choice of the ten greatest educators of all time which he prepared and published in 1925, also was the subject of wide comment.

Dual Tragedy Enacted In Domestic Embroglio North of Breckenridge

Husband Fires Three Shots Point Blank Into Body of His Bride, Then Turns Gun on Himself.

BRECKENRIDGE, Tex., Aug. 22.—(AP)—After firing three shots point blank into the body of his bride of a few months, Frank L. Adams, tool dresser for the Texas and Pacific Oil company, turned the pistol on himself with fatal results at Woodson, several miles north of this place Saturday night.

The double tragedy took place in the presence of Mrs. Adams' 5-year-old child by a former marriage and in the home of R. B. Daws, where the couple had been living the past few days.

Adams and his wife, with the exception of the child, were alone in the house at the time of the shooting and no cause is given for the slaying other than that of family trouble.

Mrs. Adams died instantly from her wounds. As she fell her husband fired a trio of shots into his own body in the region of the heart. He was alive when neighbors reached the place, but died a few minutes later.

7 KILLED IN TRAIN SMASH

Runaway Freight Piles Up In Heart of Illinois Town

WINANET, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Grinding down Buda Hill at a mile a minute, an eastbound fast freight train of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy piled up in the heart of town at 10:30 o'clock this morning, killing seven persons and injuring four others.

A broken arch bar connecting the trucks of a car is believed to have caused the wreck. Eighten cars carrying perishable fruit, were thrown from the tracks in front of the depot and overturned.

The men killed and injured were tramps riding in one car. The four taken to a hospitrl were said to be near death.

More than 1,200 feet of double tracked right-of-ay was ripped up.

None of the men had been identified tonight.

The engine was thrown off the track but did not overturn and the crew escaped injury.

The wreck was the fourth to occur at the spot within two years.

One of the dead was believed identified as Wilbur Ward of Robertsville, Minn. A card found in his clothing, bore this name. He and four others of those killed are white and two are negroes.

All of the four injured were declared in serious condition by physicians at a hospital in Princeton. One of them, known to his companions as Richard Squires, an employe of the Burlington road, was said to be on his way to Chicago to gain a legacy of $5,000.

The watchmen told the police the robbers worked with an apparently intimate knowledge of the plant.

Some of the housewives fell back on lobster or other sea food, but even then there were more buyers than provisions.

The market officials say, however, that the experiment promises good results because today's arrivals were below normal in everything but vegetables.

QUICK REVOLT IN GREECE IS SUCCESSFUL

Former Minister of War Stages Bloodless Camp With Army and Navy

TO PROVIDE ELECTIONS

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The dictatorship of Gen. Theodorus Pangalos has been overthrown in a quick and bloodless revolution headed by General Condylis, former minister of war. President Pangalos was taking a holiday at the time on the Island of Spetsae.

The "Greek Mussolini" himself, was arrested this morning and placed aboard the destroyer Pergamos for conveyance to Athens, but up to this evening nothing further had been heard of the Pergamos. The suspicion developed that she might have called at some foreign port.

Another fast destroyer and seaplanes searched for the Pergamos throughout the day, while the battleship Kilkish guarded the Cornish canal.

Tried Plane Escape.

One report had it that Pengalos tried to escape in an airplane, but was stopped by another plane. Mme. Pangalos, who was with her husband, disappeared, although the revolutionists have not indicated that they are interested in her whereabouts.

The coup was engineered without disturbances early today, both army and navy rallying to the Condylis standard. General Condylis today was master of the situation and complete calm was reported in all sections of the country. The general public in Athens is exhibiting general satisfaction at the turn of events.

Messages from Spetsae stated that President Pangalos had been arrested on telegraphic orders from General Condylis and was being taken on the Pergamos to the capital over which he had ruled with an iron hand since he forcibly seized power a year ago. If he has not escaped, he, together with the members of the eutaxias government, all of whom have been arrested, will have to answer for alleged tyrannical misrule.

Condylis "Lawful" Prexy.

General Condylis announced that Admiral Coundouriotis, former provisional president of Greece, was the "lawful president" and had been invited to resume the presidency.

In his announcement, Condylis promises "free elections within eight months at the latest in order to confer power upon th echosen representatives of the people." Thus it is his intention to organize a government of "national confidence."

All the political leaders and officers arrested under the Pangalos regime already have been set free. Proclamations have been posted in the city inviting the population to celebrate its deliverance from "tyranny."

The machinery for the dramatic coup began to turn shortly after midnight, and so quickly did it operate that by 8 o'clock this morning the streets of Athens had their usual appearance.

All the military establishments, the telegraph offices and the government department, including the palace of council of the presidency, were taken over with a rapidity that gave evidence of how well General Condylis had laid his plans.

Battle In East Part of City Is Halted by Death

Excitement Believed to Have Been Cause; One Man Put Under Bond of $500 After His Arrest.

A free-for-all melee between buddies in which the provocation, it is believed, was no greater than one man's sarcasm to another ended in death for Jess Harris, Wichita Falls brick worker Sunday afternoon. Jack Abel, a resident of east Wichita Falls, surrendered to Deputy Constable Wade Taylor immediately after the affray, and after spending an hour in the county jail was released on $500 bond.

According to the story told Constable C. L. Bradford, the dead man and three others had, following the remark of one of the men to another, become engaged in a fist-fight. Harris soon fell, apparently knocked out. Examination a few minutes later by a bystander showed the man dead to all appearance. The fight was stopped.

Bradford stated there was little to indicate that a blow or anything other than the excitement of the occasion had caused the man's death. While the face shows several bruises and marks from blows, the skin is not broken in a single place.

Harris' body was taken to the Burris-Dalton undertaking establishment and was being held there last night pending advice from relatives in Oklahoma. He is about 35 years of age and has a wife and several children living in Wichita Falls.

Formal charges against Abel were withheld Sunday pending further medical examination of the dead man.

THE PETTER

Author of "Love Bound" "Her Man"

Illustrated and Copyrighted by Johnson Features, Inc., 1819 Broadway, New York City

READ THIS FIRST.

Merry Locke, pretty and gay as her nickname, has been a flirt all her life. Even during her high school days, Moms, her mother, called her "boy crazy."

At 20, Merry falls in her stenography course, and when her father suddenly dies she takes a job in Lillie Dale's beauty shop. At that time she is having the first real love affair of her giddy young life. She is deeply in love with Anthony Gaines, a young lawyer who wants to marry her. During the period of their engagement Tony breaks a date with her one night, and to "get even," Merry lets Derrick Jones, who lives next door, make love to her. Then she goes out with another man friend, and brazenly tells Tony about it. The engagement is broken, and Tony goes out to Montana to practise law there, and for a time Merry is utterly miserable. But she is the kind of person who forgets her troubles, and after a time she almost forgets Tony.

Merry's oldest sister, Helen, marries Bill Hepworth. Cassie, the second oldest, marries her former employer, Morley Kaufman, a wealthy broker. Through Cassie, Merry meets Bill Erskine, a bachelor of the catch me if-you-can type. Bill makes her many expensive presents, lends her a thousand dollars to buy a share in the beauty shop, and gives her her first drink. It makes her violently sick, and she is unhappy because she promised her mother never to take a drink of liquor.

Jinny, the youngest of the Locke sisters, takes Derrick Jones away from Merry under her very nose. On New Year's Eve she goes to a college party with Derrick, and retuns home early in the morning, much the worse for some cocktails she has drunk. Her mother is horrified and heartsick when she lets her into the house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

The first white fingers of the cold January dawn showed in the eastern sky before they got Jinny into bed.

And then it was all they could do to make her stay there.

She wanted to get up and tinker with the home-made radio set that had never worked. She wanted to sit up in bed and chant "Ring out, wild bells," at the top of her unsteady little voice.

Finally she decided to telephone to Derrick Jones.

I've got to talk to him, right away," she whimpered, "I've got to tell him something!"

"You'll tell him nothing!" Moms said grimly, as she shoved her back on her tumbled pillows. "I'll do all the talking to that young man myself!"

And, true to her word, after she and Merry finished their morning coffee, she put on her shawl and stalked over to the Jones house.

She was gone about fifteen minutes and when she came back she was crying.

She dropped down on her chair beside the littered breakfast table and hid her face in her roughened hands. Her big, square shoulders heaved under the black dress of her widowhood.

"I'm sure I don't know what I've done to deserve this!" she moaned, rocking herself back and forth, "to have my baby come home to me so drunk she doesn't know her own name! And to have the Joneses know about it, too, so they can publish it from one end of the street to the other!"

Merry put her arms around her.

"The Joneses won't dare to open their mouths about it, Moms," she soothed her. "They know that it was Derrick who gave her what she had to drink. And he was drunk, too—"

"That's just it He wasn't!" Moms broke in, her voice muffled by her tears, "He was as sober as a judge! He said he tried to make Jinny stop drinking, but she would not—and, of course, his mother believes him! She thinks he's a regular white woolly lamb, but I'll never let my Jinny go out with him again, and I told them all so!"

She threw a wrathful glance in the direction of the Jones' neat, white Colonial house on the other side of the leafless hedge.

For years Moms had been reading about all the disgraceful doings of modern flappers. She had read that they smoked cigarets, drank hard liquor, and indulged in "mugging parties."

And like a good many mothers these days, she had refused to believe what she read.

"It's just stuff that they fill up the newspapers with!" she had declared scornfully, time after time. "If such things were going on in the world I'd be sure to know it. I have four daughters of my own."

Never once had it occurred to her that her own daughters might be doing things behind her back that she knew nothing about. She had brought them up to be nice girls—and so she was sure that they were nice girls—none nicer.

So now that the bitter truth was brought home to her by Jinny, she was not only heartbroken, but stunned.

All that gloomy New Year's day she went around the house with a dazed look on her long, fresh-colored face.

She would tiptoe upstairs to the door of the darkened room where Jinny lay "sleeping it off," shake her head and turn away crying.

Merry was dreadfully sorry for her.

She hated to leave her when Bill Erskine called for her to take her to Cassie's "open house" at four that afternoon.

"Jinny celebrated the New Year with wine and song last night, and Moms just can't get over it," she told Bill as they started along toward Cortelyou street, under the gray wintery sky. "I guess Jinny's like me—not much of a drinker. She's still dead to the world, upstairs in bed."

Bill shot her a sidewise glance.

"You do look pretty seedy," he said.

It was the first time he had seen her since Christmas Eve. Under the wide brim of her black lace hat her face was almost as white as the gardenias pinned on her coat, fresh white gardenias that Bill had brought to her.

"I feel shaky, too," she answered. "That drink you gave me the other night was the first one I ever had, and it's going to be my last one, too."

As she spoke she held up her right hand as if she were taking the solemn oath.

But Bill only laughed—a rather nasty laugh.

"Don't pull that you-made-me-what-I-am-today line on me, Little Sister," he said, twirling his cane briskly. "That wasn't anything like your first drink, and you know it. Why, you tossed it down like an old hand at the game!"

Merry flushed angrily ,and her green eyes flashed between the thick black lashes.

There was no address on it. Nothing but the scrawled words, "For Moms."

"No matter what you say, Bill, that was my first taste of whisky," she told him sharply, "the very first taste I've ever had! And that's the truth."

She knew that he knew it was, too, but for some deep, hidden reason of his own he wasn't going to admit it.

They walked on in silence.

But Merry never could be silent for very long. It was as natural for her to chatter as it is for a brook to chatter between its grassy banks.

And by the time they reached the corner of Cortelyou street she was telling Bill about Lillie Dale and the thousand-dollar check.

"She has it now, and I own part of the beauty shop!" she said, happily. "I had to send for her one day this week because I was sick in bed, you know. And you should have seen Moms' face when she saw her! Of course, Lillie is pretty wild looking with that sky-blue-pink hair of hers—and the way she paints! She just smears her face with rouge and powder and eyebrow pencil—" She broke off, for all at once she saw that he was not listening to her.

There was a crooked little smile on his florid face, and he was staring down at the point of his twirling cane.

"You know, Little Sister, you have the wrong slant on this business of taking a drink," he said, thoughtfully. "You think it makes an awful fool of a man to pretend that you're just out of kindergarten, but it doesn't."

"Is that so?" Merry asked.

Her eyes were grave and questioning as they met his—she felt that she could take Bill's advice in matters like this. He was such a man of the world. As he often said himself, he "knew his onions."

"Why, sure, it's so," he replied in that hearty way of his. "Look around and you'll see that it isn't the prettiest girl who wins out with the men, nowadays. It's the peppiest one—the jolly-good-fellow girl who's never a bum sport!"

He made Merry feel, somehow, that she had been what he called "a bum sport" the other night when his liquor made her sick and dizzy.

But she didn't know what to think an hour later when something happened that filled her with puzzlement and wonder.

She was sitting on a sofa of flowered damask in Cassie's crowded living room, talking to Muriel Kaufman.

"I wonder if I'll ever be able to look the way she does?" Merry was thinking to herself about Muriel as she chattered along.

Everything about Muriel was so finished. Her ivory skin was flawless under its coating of cream colored powder. Her lips looked like red Chinese lacquer. Her hair ,with its thick dark waves, was as smooth as polished ebony, and her nails were rose-colored jewels.

You had only to look at her, from the crown of her head to the cut-steel buckles on her slim satin slippers to see that money had done everything for her that money can do—and there is little that money cannot do.

Merry felt shabby and second-rate as she looked at Muriel's simple white chiffon dress with its narrow silver girdle and the silver necklace that circled her soft, slender neck.

"I'm prettier than she'll ever be," she thought, "but she has the clothes. Nobody would look at me when she's around!"

As if to prove it, Bill Erskine suddenly pushed his way through the crowd of dancers in the room and stopped before Muriel.

"Dance?" he asked her, out of breath.

He had just been dancing, and his forehead was glistening with beads of perspiration. His collar was wilted a little, too.

But his smile was just as fresh as ever, as he bent over to Muriel.

She shook her dainty little head.

"No thanks, Bill," she said, making room for him on the flowered sofa, "but you can sit here, next to me."

She stretched out one of her lovely hands to lift a glass of egg-nog from the big silver tray that Cassie's maid was passing.

Merry took one, too. But Bill did not seem to notice that.

He was frowning down at Muriel as she raised the egg-nog to her scarlet lips.

"Do you know that stuff has whisky in it?" he asked her sternly.

She widened her lustrous eyes at him and laughed.

"Why of course there's whisky in it!" she answered in her laughing, husky voice. "What good would egg-nog be without whisky in it, I ask to know?"

She raised the glass again, but Bill took it out of her hand.

"Look here, Muriel," he said, "I don't believe your mother would let you touch this stuff if she were here, and I'm not going to let you, either!"

He drained it himself, to the last sweet creamy drop, while the two girls watched him with astonished eyes.

"Don't you love his cheek?" Muriel asked Merry. "You'd think he was my caretaker or something, wouldn't you? Well, I'll just go find me another egg-nog. That's easy!"

She swayed to her feet and floated out of the packed room.

"Bill," Merry began slowly, "why is it all right for me to drink and all wrong for Muriel to? I wish you'd tell me."

She had finished her egg-nog and she held out the empty glass to him. He held it in his pudgy hands and looked at it as if he were a crystal-gazer.

"Well, I don't know." He seemed to muse. "I've always been sort of a big brother to little Muriel."

"Little Muriel!" repeated Merry. "She's every bit as old as I am, I'd like you to know! If you're her big brother, you might be mine, too. If it's wrong for her to drink, it's just as bad for me to, isn't it?"

She couldn't figure it out. And Bill did not help her.

He got up and walked away, and later she saw him dancing with Muriel. Her little white figure swayed against his huge one like a windflower against a rock.

* * *

Merry did not see Bill Erskine again until April of that year.

He telephoned her by long distance, once or twice a week, however. He sent her perfume and powder that delighted her, and books that she never opened. He telegraphed flowers to her every Sunday morning and wrote to her every day.

"I suppose you'll marry him next time he comes to town, won't you?" Jinny asked her one morning while they were dressing.

Before Merry had time to think up an answer, she added wistfully: "Derrick and I'd get married when he comes home for Easter vacation, ourselves, if only I were old enough. I wonder if you can get married when you're sixteen?"

"You wild child, of course you can't!" Merry told her, laughing at her love-lorn look.

A week later she remembered that conversation.

It was one evening, when she and Moms were waiting for Jinny to come home for supper. She had been out riding all afternoon with Derrick Jones, who was home for Easter vacation, so Moms said.

"I wonder where they can be? It's after six o'clock." She looked up at the hall clock and then walked out on the front porch to look for the belated pair.

A second afterward Merry heard her call, and she hurried out to her. Moms was standing beside the mail box holding a big white envelope in her hand.

"Look here," she said, "This is Jinny's note paper. I gave it to her for Christmas."

Merry took it. There was no address on the envelope, and no stamp, just the words, "For Moms" scrawled across it in Jinny's childish handwriting.

(To Be Continued.)

"Derrick and I are going to be married," wrote Jinny—but—Jinny has the surprise of her life which lands Derrick in jail, in Chapter 29 of "The Petter."

Thought Malaria Still in System

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. thers believe they never fully gt the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whiteson says: "For 50 years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deathly feeling associated with what we believe to be malaria.

Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a Godsend.! In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food and bracked up and haven't had a sick spell since. Whenever I feel a little bilious or the stomach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

OVER AGAIN!

LONDON—On July 25, 1909, Louis Bleroit flew his tiny, fragile monoplane from Calais to Dover, startling the world with what was considered—and was—a magnificent achievement in aviation. Since that day Bleroit has prospered and his planes are now among the most prominent in France. But not until recently has Bleroit repeated his cross-channel flight. He arrived at Croyden, London's air port, the other day as a passenger in one of the regular air liners. Where once he had made the trip as a daring pioneer he now rode in safety and comfort as prosaic as any swift motor car.car.

"Fight For Honor" At The Palace

"A Fight for Honor," the thrilling railroad story hich will come to the Palace theatre today has enough in it to keep you out of your seat during the whole performance. It deals with the choice that a girl has to make between her sister's honor and the life of her lover who was engineer on the limited as it came thundering on its way to destruction over the blown up bridge.

Eva Novak and William Fairbanks with a large and excellent supporting cast give a performance that ranks up with the best in their careers. The picture is the third of a series of eight high powered features known as "Perfection Pictures." The direction is under the eye of Henry MacRae who understands the technique of putting action where it belongs. It is predicted that this picture will be long remembered.

UNNECESSARY.

OXFORD.—While Oxford dons have known of the fact for years, the story is just going around that H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, never took an examination while a student at Oxford. Not that he wasn't a good student. but those who watch over the divine right of kings considered ti unsafe to enter the Prince in a competition which might, possibly, reveal that there were better men than he. That would never do.

Not only is Colvert's Ice Cream a good food for the healthy growing child, but it is also a good food for the sick and convalescence.—Adv.

Bond Prices Are Cut In Past Week

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Bond prices were marked down last week in keeping with the traditional loss of buying interest which follows the establishment of rediscount and money rates at higher levels. The underlying soundness of the credit situation prevented any general liquidation of bonds but with all forms of money accomodation better rates, banks found little incentive to place their funds in the investment market and withdrew many of their standing orders for high grade securities.

Despite the gradual downward drift of prices, special considerations prompted bidding for miscellaneous issues which enlivened trading at times. Convertible railroad and oil lines were conspicuously active.

Foreign bonds suffered less than domestic issues in the week's slump although trading in this group was colorless.

The most important bond offerings of the week were in the foreign field. These included a $16,000,000 loan for the republic of Peru, to be devoted mainly to the establishment of a national agricultural bank.

With new financing totaling approximately $47,000,000 compared with $35,000,000 in the preceding week, conditions remained relatively quiet in the investment field.

Price movements elsewhere lacked uniformity. Alternating periods of strength and weakness characterized dealings in bonds. Refining issues were bought on the prospects of higher prices, but obligations of the Cuban producing companies were adversedly effected by the estimates of a crop in excess of the legal maximum and by the reduction in the common dividend of the Cuban American company.

A PROBLEM.

ROME—Mussolini has raised an intricate and serious problem. A recent edict prohibits all parades save those that are "useful." A committee is to busy itself with making decisions as to whether proposed parades are useful or merely—parades. Naturally, here is a matter which demands consummate tact and displomacy. Is a parade in honor of the Dictator useful? Is a circus parade useful Is a debt protest parade useful?..... The outlook for parades is pretty dismal, any way you look at it.

THEY STOP TRAFFIC

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Sophisticated Broadway ran true to form at 5 today. One of its hard boiled members stopped, gazed into a window of the Hotel Astor dining room, and announced to another: "Say, there's Browning and 'Peaches' eating at that table." Five minutes later traffic was disrupted at Broadway and Forty-fifth street and reserves were on the way to untangle it. A patrolman begged Edward W. Browning, the "Cinderella man" and his 16-year-old bride to take a less conspicious table, which they did, and the sophisticated moved on into the other streets.

EACH PEARL A TEAR.

PHILADELPHIA. — Dentists in convention learned, not without mingled emotions, that "every lollypop of childhood costs a tooth." Or so, at least, said Dr. E. S. Butler, professor of Operative Dentistry in the Dental college of Tokio. More every adult who spoils himself with soft, mushy food simply is "selling out" as far as his teeth are concerned ..... But this matter of lollypops is worthy of serious consideration. Statistics show that last year 87,984,006 1-2 lollypops were made and consumed. Dray your own conclusions—or teeth, as the case may be.

The Morning Advertisement

ONE woman carries the word to another. Over the back fence, through the mansion on the hill "word of mouth" messages reinforce and reproduce the original buying impulse.

Woman is the point of concentration in every retail merchandising effort. Not onlyfor her fecundity in suggestion, repetition, and inuendo; but, also, because of her importance as the spending power in this country.

Economic surveys show that eighty-five cents out of every dollar spent at retail are laid on the counter by a woman!

Your morning advertisement lives ten hours during the day with the woman during the time she is planning her buying; and during the time you are ready to receive her in your store.

By its influence with the woman of this community and entire trade area, your morning newspaper aids in reducing selling costs. Women are your MAJOR prospects. One woman carries the word to another. The most valuable, wide-spreading advertising in the world is "word-of-mouth" advertising; and your morning newspaper taps it at its source.

Your Last Word to Buyers

Morning newspaper advertising reduces to minimum the great human hazard in retail buying—forgetfulness. The impulse to buy is fleeting, elusive. Inspired by apt suggestion it cools quickly if there is an enforced delay in obeying.

There is no "closed-door" period" between accepting a buy-suggestion from the morning newspaper and following it through.

Your morning newspaper advertisement is your last word to buyers.

"The newspaper published in the morning and remaining in the home during daylight hours is the logical medium to carry messages to thoughtful women of America."

M. ESTHER ROGERS,
State Supervisor
Mississippi Home Economics Education.

POLITICAL SIGNS OF THE TIMES

ACCORDING to well posted democratic correspondents and political leaders the democratic managers of the county will not cast aside the two-thirds rule or the unit rule. They continue to cling to their idols. This will precipitate another deadlock in the convention of 1928 and no doubt another dark horse will win the presidential nomination.

All the indications are that the friends of Governor Smith of New York will submit his name to the convention. All the signs of the times are that William Gibbs McAdoo will be another contender for the nomination and Smith and McAdoo will go to the mat as they did at the Madison Square Garden convention in 1924.

It is certain that Smith will be renominated for governor by the democrats of New York and it is just as certain that he will be re-elected governor of New York if the stars have been correctly interpreted. However, there is a waterloo in the life of every man and Smith may meet his waterloo in November of this year.

He is the most powerful leader of the democrats of New York have had since the passing of Grover Cleveland. He is the most popular leader that the democrats of the empire state have ever known. There is a bitter row in the ranks of the California democracy. McAdoo and his friends are in one camp and his opponents, the democrats who do not love McAdoo are in the other and they are said to be very numerous in the northern half of the golden coast state.

There is a primary coming in California for the nomination for a candidate for United States senator and all the major and minor state officers. McAdoo has a candidate in the field for senator and the candidate in the field for governor. As for the other faction they are well organized.

They held a state convention and placed in the field as their primary nominee two of the most influential democrats in California. Isadore Dockweiler is their candidate for United States senator. He is the national committeeman of the party. He backed McAdoo to a finish in the Madison Square Garden fight.

Behind Dockweiler is James B. Phelan, the man who nominated McAdoo for president in the Madison Square Garden convention. These men spent their time and money for the nomination of McAdoo in 1920 and again in 1924. Now he has placed primary candidates in the field against them and there is a bitter fight on for supremacy in the golden coast state.

McAdoo is said to be very strong down state; Dockweiler strong in central California upstate. California is the home state of Hiram Johnson. He was governor three times running. Then the progressive republicans sent him to the senate where he has fought the league of nations and the world court proposal to the bitter end.

There are two republican parties in California. Hiram has his candidate for United States senator and governor. Of course, the other faction has a program. They are backing for re-nomination Senator Samuel Shortridge, a reactionady republican of the finest pattern and for governor Friend W. Richardson, running for a third term.

If Hiram carries his state through he will be the republican boss of a republican state. If McAdoo carries his state through on primary election day he will be the democratic leader for the time being at least, in a state that has never been shown any disposition to land in the democratic column in presidential years.

But back to the signs of the times: why should the two-thirds nominating rule and the unit rule be reclaimed by the safe and sane democrats of the United Statets who insist that the party of Jefferson is the party of home rule and local-self government.

A NEW DAY COMING

REVERENDDR. JOHN McDOWLL, secretary of the Presbyterian board of national missions, says the time has come to get rid of industrial quacks and to go directly to the greatest of all doctors on industrial ills, Jesus Christ. In Italy Mussolini has voted himself the greatest of all doctors on industrial ills and will brook no rivals here on earth or in that world invisible. Mussolini uses the sword if necessary to back up his arguments. Thus far, he has won. How long will he last?

COOLIDGE AND HIS CRITICS

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is the most cautious American statesmen. He is the most cautious of all American politicians. With him silence is golden and speech is silver. Not long ago newspaper correspondents spread the story that New York bankers at the instance of the president were planning $100,000,000 pool for loan purposes for farm property.

This to still farm relief agitation in certain corn growing and wheat growing states.

They spread another story that the president had issued orders to the prohibition enforcement unit in Washington against adopting a plan to put harmless poisons in intoxicating liquors intended for beverage use.

Cautious Cal read the stories and in a roundabout way he mad emphatic denial.

Just now the wheat proposition looks good to the grain growers of the west. Kansas farmers produced the largest crop of wheat in history this year and the wheat growing sections of the north west report the yield very great.

There is a very slight carry over of the yield of 1925. The Canadian wheat growers report a lesser yield than last year. Foreign wheat growing countries are not so fortunate as the wheat growers of American states.

All the indications are that there will be a heavy foreign demand for wheat and that a golden tide of prosperity will exhibit itself in the American wheat growing states where American farmers have been rampant on account of low prices for their produce and high prices for everything else, for the necessities of farm life.

Whenever there is a demand, a foreign demand for American wheat, the prices is appealing. Should that demand come this year the Republicans farmers of the west will be found on the Republican reservations.

They are thoroughly organized. They may continue to demand the aid that is given in a tariff sense to the manufacturers but they are not going to desert the Republican reservation.

This is the history of politics in the West and the northwest.

Minnesota is a wheat growing state but the Minnesota wheat farmers are not on the war path in this campaign. They are looking for high prices for the golden grain and should the high prices come, it will be the political finish of Magnus Johnson who is the farm labor candidate for governor in Minnesota.

WHERE FLEECY STAPLE GROWS

TWENTY-FIVE thousand cotton pickers and farm laborers could be given employment if they were available, according to agents of United States farm and labor bureau. One of these agents have supplied 8,000 cotton pickers for the territory between Corpus Christi and San Antonio.

Another federal agent has received requests for laborers from Mississippi and other states, he having supplied them with pickers last season. This year thus far, the federal labor bureau or its agents stationed in Texas, has imported laborers from Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas and Ohio.

If the federal government would suspend the head tax, thousands of Mexicans could be imported for the busy season on the farms and plantations of the southwest.

Pickers are needed. Farm laborers who are not pickers are needed. Mexico is a labor reservoir. It is futile to talk of invading the cities and towns of the southwest for cotton pickers.

Noble sons and daughters of the Caucasian race, who are city bred or city adopted, cannot be drafted for the cotton picking trade. It is their proud privilege to pick their own jobs or to pass their days in idle pleasure.

This may not appeal to the political bosses who insist that the growers of cotton in the magic valley and the coast country should do their own picking or let the fleecy staple remain on the stalk.

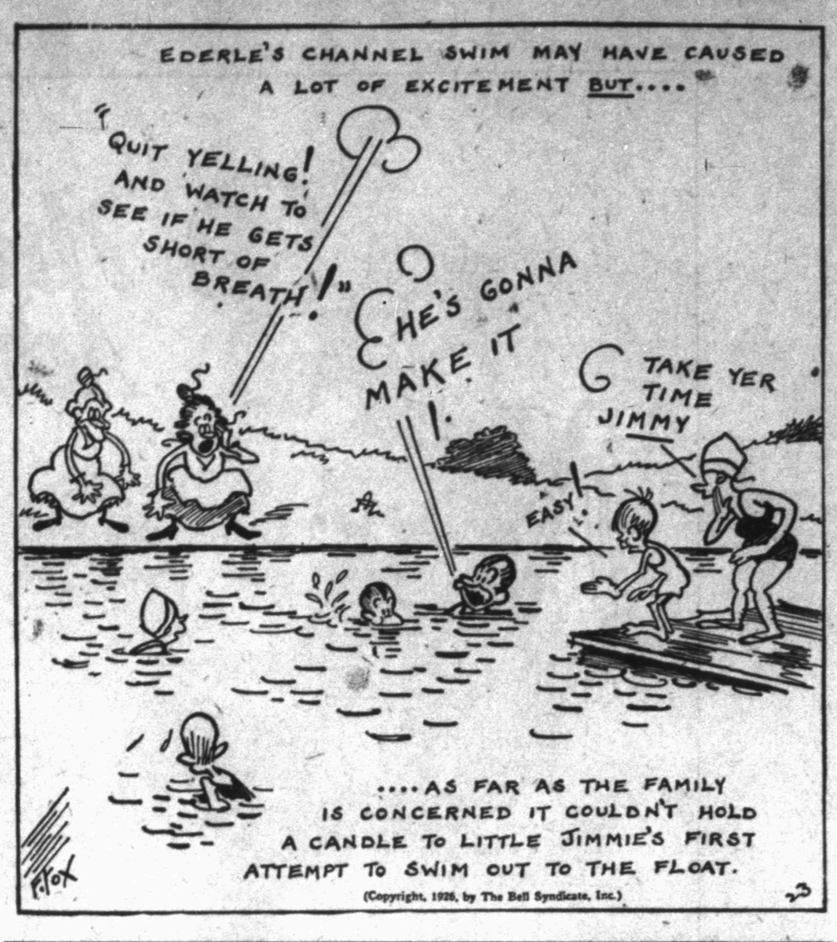

AMERICAN RAIL EARNINGS

ACCORDING to the New York World in 1925 railway earnings crossed the billion dollar mark, broke all previous records and so far during the current year, the showing has been even better.

Then the busses and the trucks are not forcing into bankruptcy the American railways.

There are many prophets in this free land of ours who are successful liers. They predict one year and the very next year, to quote from the vocabulary of a Texas politician, "they are blowed up suckers."

SPEAKING OF OSTRICHES

By Frederick Arnold Kummer

Fresh as the dew on a cobwebbed rose, Mary Ellen paused before the door of the office and glanced once more at the letter she held in her hand.

"My Dear Miss Harwood," it said. "You will be glad to learn that the farm left you by your father out in Arizona, and which we have hitherto considered of little or no value has suddenly become worth a great deal of money, owing to discoveries of oil on the adjoining property. Please arrange to leave New York and come to Planeville for an interview with me at once. I am enclosing a check for $1000 to cover immediate expenses. With kindest regards, believe me, sincerely your,

"Daniel Willcox."

From the letter Mary Ellen's glance wandered to the sign on the ancient mahogany door. The law firm of Carter & Willcox was itself ancient, and still clung to an old office in an old building. Mr. Carter, who was also old, had very sensibly retired. But Mr. Willcox, in spite of his 75 years, continued to regard himself as a mere youngster, which as a point of view was equally sensible. Very sweet and demure in her tan sport suit, Mary Ellen pushed open the door.

A tall young man with a shock of hair, so red as to be almost incandescent, rose from a desk and, putting down the book he had been reading, stared at her as though he found her loveliness too perfect to quite real.

"I would like to see Mr. Willcox," she said, observing with interest his fierry hair, his freckled nose, his warily whimsical smile.

"He's over at the courthouse, miss. Won't you wait?" The young man indicated a chair.

"I'm awfully sorry," Mary Ellen murmured, with a rueful shake of her head, "but would you mind writing down what you said?"

For an instant the young man stared at her with so shocked an expression that it made his nose wrinkle above his half-open mouth, and Mary Ellen almost laughed.

"What a rotten shame!" he muttered, turning to his desk. A moment later he thrust a bit of paper into her hand.

"Mr Willcox out," she read. "Back any moment. Please wait." The "please" she noticed, had been heavily underscored.

With a nod Mary Ellen disposed herself gracefully in a chair.

The freckled young man sat with his back to her, delligently reading his book. It was a thick book, bound in worn calf, and Mary Ellen concluded that the problems in it must be knotty ones, since for five minutes he did not turn a single page. When she glanced for a moment into the ancient and somewhat fly-specked mirror which hung over his desk, however, her conclusions underwent a change. A pair of gray eyes met hers for the fraction of an instant. The eyes were friendly and a smile glimmered through the friendliness. After that, save for the wariest of glances, Mary Ellen looked the other way.

Presently the young man rose, passed her with a nod of apology and went into an adjoining office. From within came the rustle of papers. Mary Ellen closed her eyes and reflected agreeably upon the fact that from that moment her own days in stuffy offices were over. Suddenly a familiar sound smote her ears—the "br-r-r" of an elec buzzer, and her head clicked automatically to the left in response to it. Again she found herself gazing into the mirror, in which was reflected the young man of the law book, his back to her sorting a mass of papers on Mr. Willcox's desk. He returned at once to the outer office and took up the telephone just as a silver-haired old gentleman with the kindliest of smiles appeared in the doorway.

"Why—bless my soul, child—I'm glad to see you!" he exclaimed, taking Mary Ellen's two hands in his. "How charming you look! Come in! I've a lot to talk to you about." He swept her into the private office.

Mary Ellen closed the door and stood with her back to it.

"Uncle Dan," she whispered, squeezing the hands that still held hers in a fatherly grip, "I want you to promise me something. Will you?"

"That depends, my dear. As a lawyer I make it a practice never to answer hypothetical questions. What do you want me to promise?"

"That you won't tell anbody I'm not deaf."

"Deaf? Bless my soul, child—are you losing your mind?"

"Not a bit of it. Wait till I explain. Now that I'm going to be rich I'll never be able to tell as long as I live who of my friends like me for myself and who are just thinking of my money. But when a person is supposed to be deaf, she sometimes hears things about herself that—Well, do you see what I mean now?" She beamed at him like some fascinating imp.

"H—m." Mr. Willcox stroked his carefully shaved chin. "I see!"

"So you've simply got to promise me not to tell anyone—not even that young man outside with the funny pink hair."

"Mary Ellen, don't be disrespectful That is my assistant, Mr. Terernce McCoy. Terry is a very bright young man."

"His head certainly is. Positively brilliant."

"And before he gets through I predict he will be one of the ablest lawyers in the state. Am I not giving him the benefit of my own vast experience?" Mr. Willcox chuckled over his little joke.

"Just the same you don't have to tell him if I ask you not to," Mary Ellen insisted. "Or anyone else. You see, there are three men in this town who once said they were in love with me. So, just for fun, I'd like to find out."

"Enough said. But the fact still remains that you're worth half a million."

"Then why say anything about the money for the present? People don't know, do they?"

"Not yet. As your father's executor I have not found it necessary to take the public into my confidence—not even Mr. Terence McCoy," he added mischieviously, and drew some papers from a drawer of the desk. "And now about this farm of yours—"

"Please don't tell me I've got to go out to Arizona, or wherever it is!"

"No. It's much simpler than that. All you have to do at present is to sign a few papers. Leases. I think that method better than selling outright." He placed some documents before her. "I shall, however, be obliged to call in Terry. He is, among other things, a notary public."

"What do you want him for?"

"To witness our signature. He need not know what you are signing. When he comes in I will introduce him to you—in writing." He pressed a button.

"Is that really all I have to do?" she asked, when Mr. McCoy had come and gone.

"Every blessed thing, except to try to spend sensibly a great deal more money than any young woman of 21 has a right to possess. Where are you stopping."

"At the Sherman House."

"Good. I will have Terry bring copies of the leases to your hotel this afternoon—sealed of course. He shall never know from me of your good fortune. As he is a very independent young man, I fear it would turn him against you. And now tell me about New York, and how many men your are in love with—and all the rest of it. I can spare you just half an hour. Later on we'll have a real visit."

While Mary Ellen talked, Mr. Terrence McCoy, in the outer office, continued his study of Blackstone—more or less complicated by visions of the most adorable pair of silk stockings it had ever been his good fortune to behold.

Mr. James Cartwright was just lighting his after-luncheon cigar when Marry Ellen was announced.

She had paused for a few melancholy moments outside the door because the sign which decorated it, and which now read "James Cartwright, Realtor," had once been plain "John Harwood, Real Estate." Jimmy Cartwright had been her father's aggressive young clerk. He had also been, in thos far off days, one of Mary Ellen's most devoted admirers, and had declared, on the night before her departure for New York, that he loved her, and wanted to marry her as soon as his financial circumstances would permit. Mary Ellen smiled as she went in.

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

Women Eternlly Wail That Their Husbands Never Show Them Affection and Appreciation—But How About Wives?—Do They Remain Sweethearts?—Or Do They Take Their Husband's Toil for Granted and Regard Him As the Children's Cash-Register Father?

Every year women shed enough tears over losing their husbands' affections to float the Leviathan. When you ask one of those heart-broken sisters what makes her think that this calamity has befallen her, if her husband is cruel to her; if she has told her he no longer cares for her; if he has chased off some flapper, she sobs out:

"Oh, no, John is the best and kindest of men. He's generous to me and he works so hard, but he is too tired at night to do anything but subside into his slippers and the evening paper. He never tells me that he loves me; he never pays me a compliment; he never notices what I have on and when I do my hair a new way. And he never gives me a kiss that isn't an insult, he is such a peck of duty, with no more warmth in it than a cold flapjack!"

It doesn' comfort these women to tell them that their husbands' conduct is no indication of the way they feel and that because a man doesn't tell his wife that he considers her the most beautiful and wonderful creature in the world is no sign that he doesn't really think her the paragon of her sex. Many a man who never does anything but knocks his wife's faults at home spends his time bragging about her abroad Furthermore, many a husband who never mentions the state of his heart to his wife after their wedding day dumbly adores her as long as he lives.

Nor does it assuage the hunger of these wives who are starred for tenderness to tell them that American men say it with checks instead of with fine speeches. That American men are not temperamental that they are awkward and embarrassed when they try to express their emotions; that they feel like fools when they are sentimental and that they refuse to do it, I feel that the only home that they marriage as being a time when they can quit telling a girl that they love her and have her take it for granted that they never would have assumed the burdens of domesticity unless they had been hard hit for keeps.

Nor does it avail to call these women's attention to the fact that actions speak louder than words and that as long as their husbands toil like galley slaves to support them and stick as close to their hearthstone as the house cat it is a proof of devotion strong enough to draw money on at the bank. They still wail: "Our husbands don't love us! We know it because they never tell us so!"

Now, I hold no brief for men who are so asinine and stupid as to refuse to hand out a little soft talk to their wives when they could have their wives eating out of their hands if they would do so.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

DON'T GET DAD WRONG

Don't get Dad wrong: he works each day
At the same old job in the same old way,
And he gets ahead, but he won't advance
Like he would, perhaps, if he took a chance.
But the house is ours, though the house is small,
It's a little place, but we own it all;
We haven't as much, perhaps, as some,
But there's always a home to which to come.

Don't get Dad wrong: we wguld like to get
A lot of things that we haven't yet,
A lot of things that we really need,
But Dad's old-fashioned in word and deed.
Yet he never hurries across the street
To dodge some man that he hates to meet;
He has the cash when he comes to buy,
And he looks the whole world in the eye.

Don't get Dad wrong: he works each day,
And spends a little, puts some away,
He buys a bond, or a bit of land,
But the kids don't always understand.
For he looks ahead with the eyes of love,
And it isn't himself he's thinking of
When he saves a bit as he goes along,
So, whatever you do, don't get Dad wrong.

CROW BOUNTIES

The question of the value of a crow has long been argued. It is generally supposed that the crow is a grain-eater and hence very harmful. Certainly crows are intelligent enough to know the difference between a scare-crow and a real man, and between a man with a gun and an unarmed man, and probably they do steal some grain. But they are of great benefit as eaters of grubs and beetles that hurt crops. Still, in the early part of last century, so numerous were the crows of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia that those states put a bounty of several cents on every crow carcass, and men and boys slaughtered tens of thousands. Not only did the states find that they were running up a huge bill for bounties, but crows got so scarce that insect pests, ordinarily kept down by crows, were increasing dangerously, and the states had to turn around and repeal their bounties.

Now what do you know about that?

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

LEO.

Today's planetary aspects are propitious and denote advantages in travel, and assure success for all initiative work and concentrated effort. It would appear from the signs, that work of practical utility, as distinguished from that of an artistic nature, is more liable to be benefitted by today's favorable influences. There will be present a very clear sense of proportion, and courage and indomitable will-power will be generated. In the evening, the condtions undergo a very decided change and become adverse. It will be advisable, at this time, to seek relaxation in harmless amusements or congenial companionship, and forget, as far as possible, the tasks of the day.

Children born today, will, during infancy, give every evidence of physical robusticity, although they will not be immune to all the various ailments of early childhood. None of these, however, will cause complications of alarm. These children must be watched very carefully during the adolescent stage as, at that time, they will demand skilful attention. Their characters will be pliable and they will be very susceptible to persuasion—either for evil or for good. All that they become in their mature years will depend on the environment with which they are surrounded in their childhood.

If today is your birthday, you have a very inquisitive mind — not with a view to "butting-in" or satisfying an idle curiosity—but with the avowed object of acquiring information. You are very observant and take a great deal of interest in details, and what others may deem, trifles. This knowledge is well card-indexed in a mental manner, and you are thereby enabled to call on your reserve of useful data whenever and wherever it may be needed.

You are very energetic, and never disposed to "loaf." Idling away time is particularly distasteful to you and, even in your recreations, you always have some specific aim in view. You are robust and vigorous and highly strung; so much so, in fact, that it is very difficult for you to keep still—to the discomfiture and, sometimes, annoyance of your friends.

You are resourceful and very happy in always finding the "way out," and are rarely, if ever, discouraged to the point of pessimism. Your courage in the face of difficulty or hardship always serves as a stimulant to those associated with you.

Mrs. Barry: I don't like the scenery in this room—let's eat in the other room.

Barry: We've got the fire going in here, now. Tommy, stamp it out a little around the edges—if it burns the library table it'll be too hot. Whew!

I'M THE GINK

I am the wealthy gink who has moral troubles and claims persecution. When I am connected with some unsavory affair I always announce that I am brought into it because of my wealth. Of course I don't fool anyone. It is an old plea with me and I think it gets me by. I manage to work up a certain amount of self-sympathy. I continue to go the pace because I know I will get out by paying and will excuse myself to the public by saying I am persecuted because of my wealth.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

A SORT OF CIRCULATING MEDIUM, AS IT WERE

This story has the merit of being applicable to these piping prohibition days although, to the best of my knowledge and belief, it originated back in the wicked days prior to January, 1920.

An auctioneer's man had been sent to a household to list its contents. Nothing of especial interest, either to himself or to others, marked the course of his labors until he had progressed so far as the dining room. Here following his routine, he proceeded to enumerate the furnishings in proper order, item by item.

In his flowing professional script he set down the tally in his book:

One mahogany dining room table.
Six mahogany dining chairs.
One mahogany sideboard.
One bottle Scotch whisky, full.

Seemingly, then, ensued a period when the appraiser was otherwise engaged and made no entries whatsoever. Then, in a somewhat straggling and uncertain handwriting, he scratched out the last item and concluded his labors for the day with the following notations:

One bottle Scotch whisky, partially full.
One revolving Turkish rug.

Bears Turn On Spuds, Win Two, 2 to 1, 3 to 1

MITZE'S MEN FLASH GOOD MOUND WORK

Wichita Falls Bats Are Silenced in Both Ends Of Bill

The hitherto staccato pounding of the Spudder machine gun attack was silenced Sunday at the Gardner pavilion when behind high and fancy heaving by the veterans Bob Couchman, Long Tom Hughes and Tiny Owens, Mitze's merry macemen enacted a sudden about face and shaded the home guard in both ends of a double header.

The ancient Couchman gave up a scattered three bingles and bested Harlem Joe Kiefer, 2 to 1, in the nine-inning opener.

Hughes held the Spudders to a run in six innings of the seven-round after piece, then gave way to a pinch walloper in the seventh. Tiny Owens hurled the last stanza for San Antonio and by a comical Texas league pitcher's ruling, gets credit for the victory in league statistics. The score was 3 to 1.

Shovel Loses Control.

Shovel Hodge, big Spudder starboarder, returned to the mound after nearly two weeks' absence and chunked shutout ball during six innings of the second game. But in the final round, Shovel lost control. He walked Klein who advanced to second on Segrist's sacrifice but. Then the great Pizzola, known in other sections as Ping Bodie, was injected into the affray disguised as a pinch hitter. Pizzola came through with a burning rift at third that caught Rabbit Benton on the shoulder, nearly knocking the Spudder infielder down. Bodie was safe and Klein scurried to third. Siglin replaced Mitze at the plate and coaxed Shovel out of a base on-balls, filling the bases. Wirts strode to the platter, swinging for Hughes. The assiduously working and heavily perspiring Hodge was not equal to the occasion.

He hurled one strike and then his control departed again. Truant tosses put Wirts on first and forced Klein home. Freddy Fussell, the eminent southpaw, charged to the rescue and promptly struck out Gonzales. But the base-on-balls disease apparently was contagious, for Fred's chunks suddenly become wild and untrammeled. He passed Flashkamper, shoving Bodie home with the winning run. Babbitt followed with a single to left, scoring Siglin. Phipps popped to third. DeFate greeted Owens with a double to left in the Spudder half of the seventh but the next three batters were retired with no further casualty.

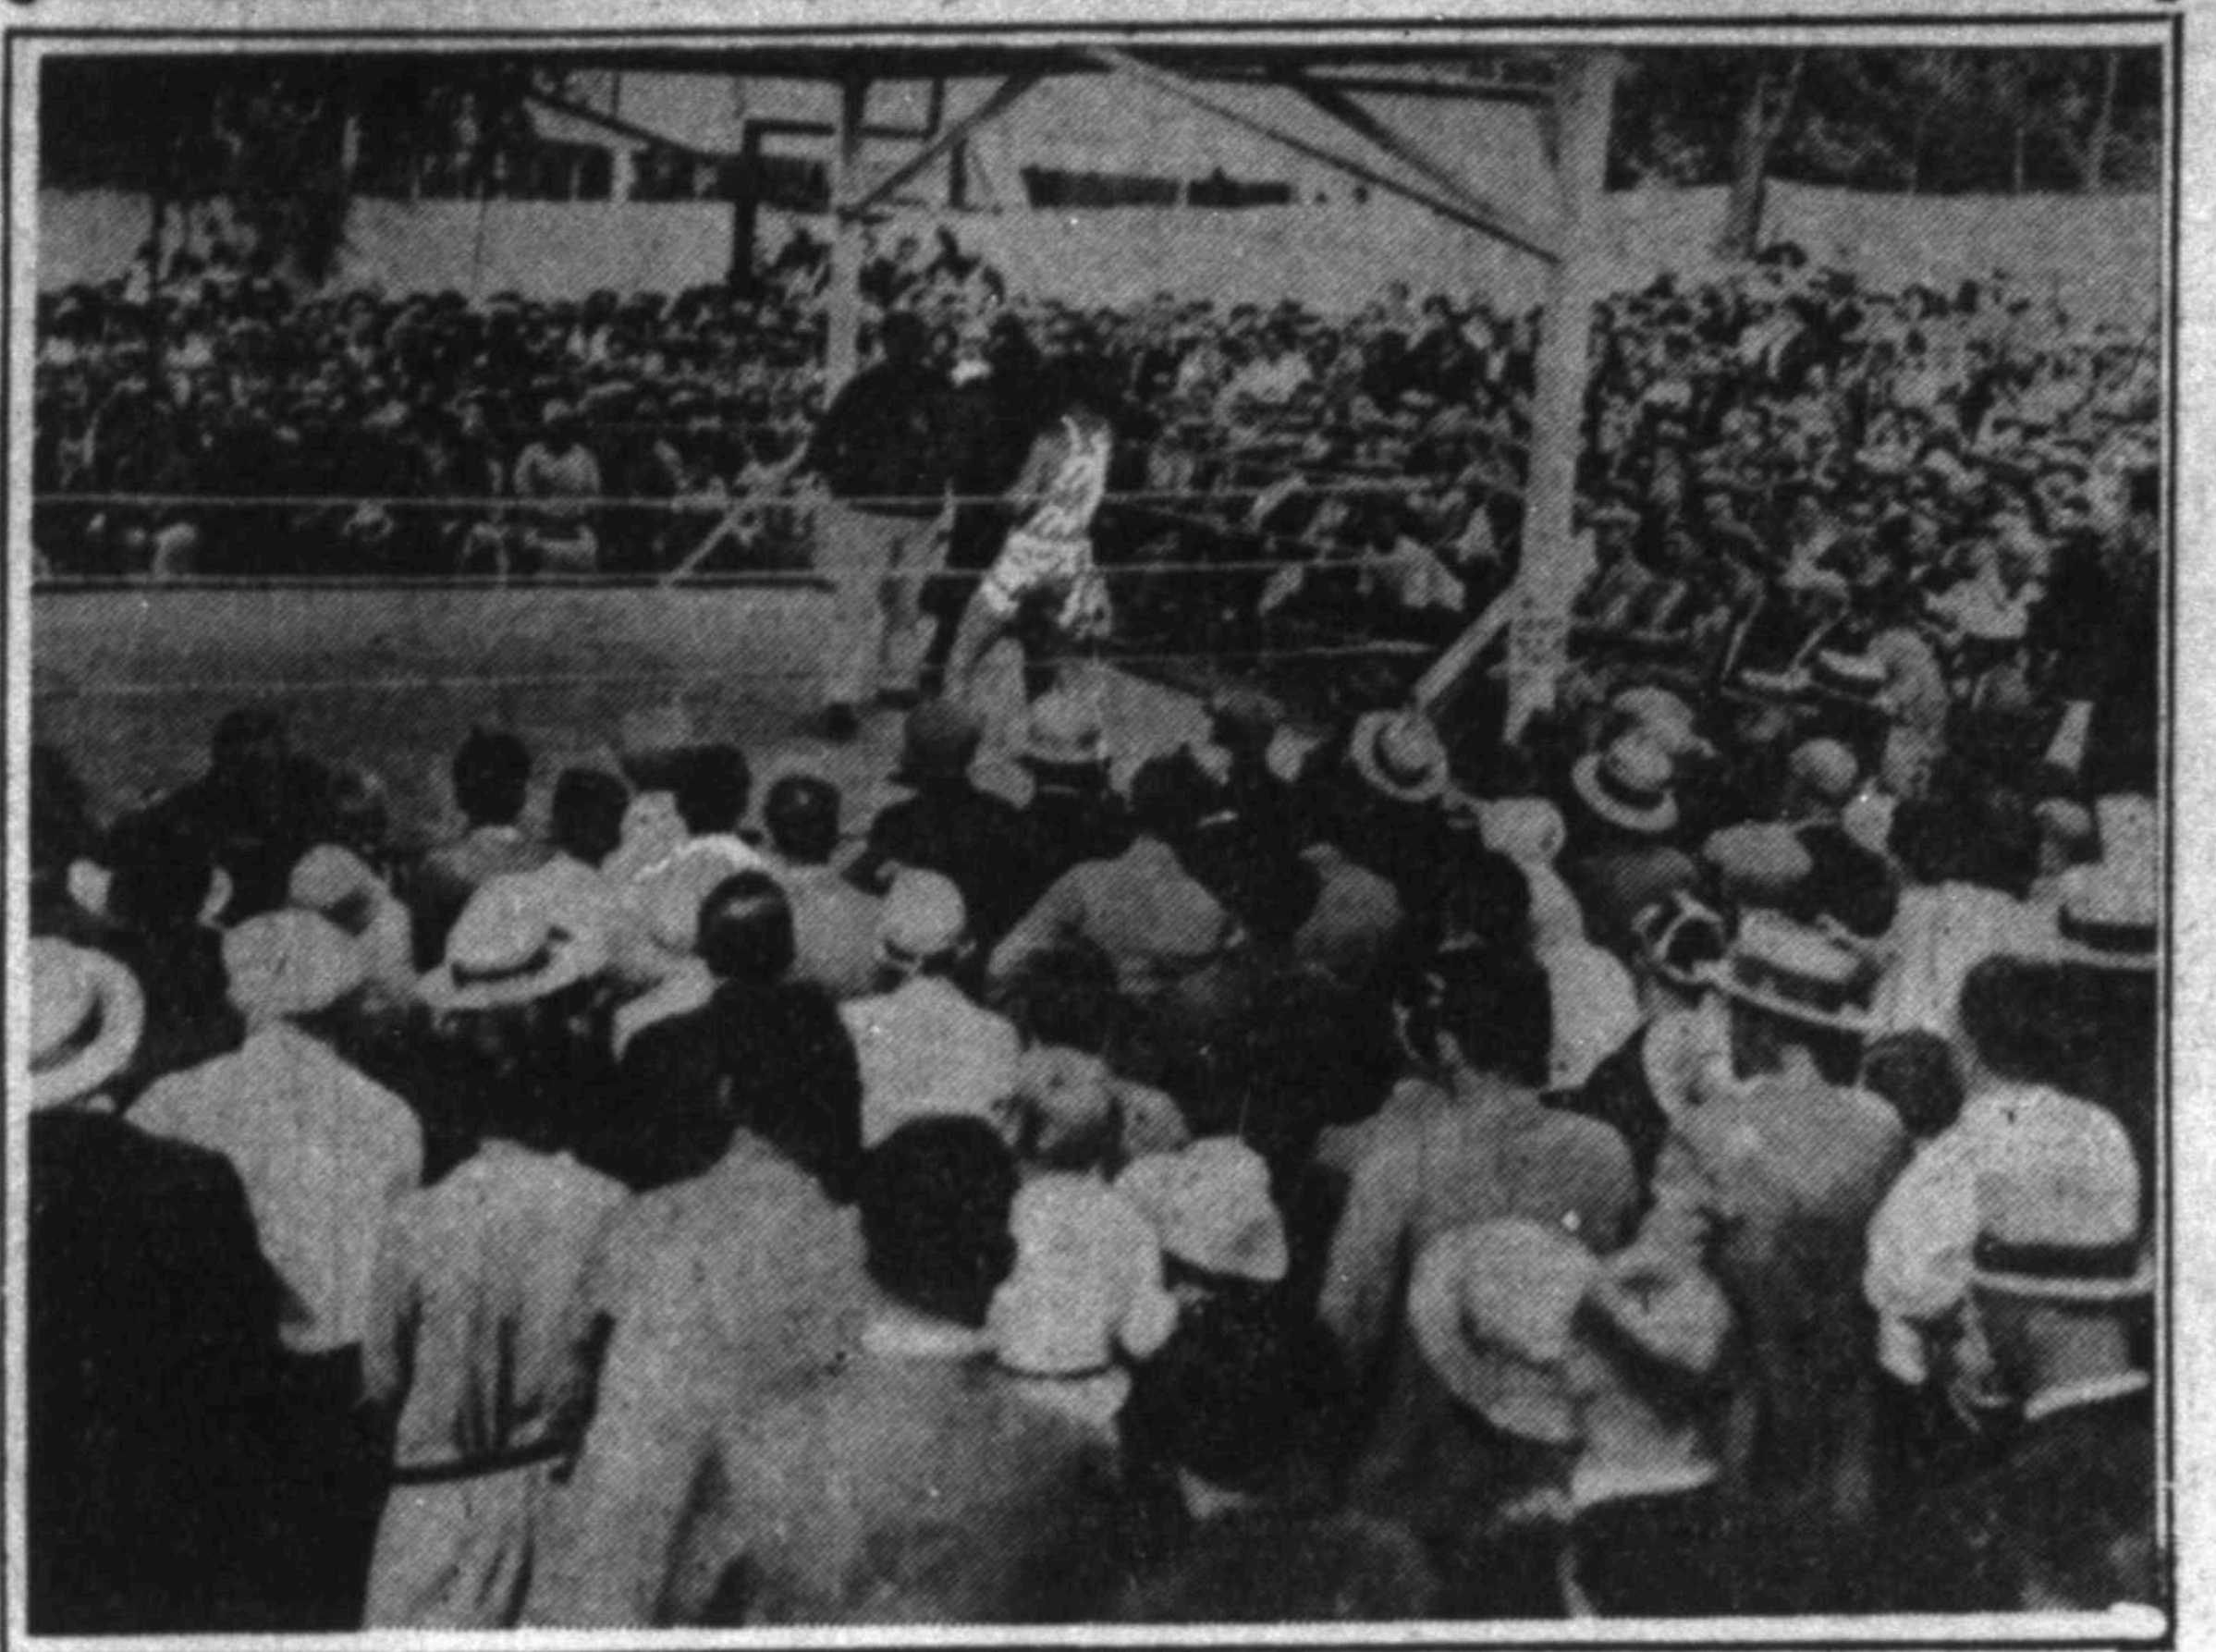

LaFayette Paves Way

The Spudders scored their opening game run in the sixth inning. It was technically unearned. LaFayette outfooted a bunt down third base and was forced at second by Turgeon. With Jenkins at bat, Turgeon stole second and continued to third on Wirts' low throw. Couchman purposely passed Jenkins. Lamb forced Jenkins at second on a bullet bounder to Segrist, Turgeon scoring.

Singles by Golvin and Couchman coupled with Wirts' sacrifice bunt and an infield forceout gave San Antonio a marker in the seventh. The bears pushed over the winning run in the eighth. Rabbitt led off with a double and was bunted to third by Phipps. Klein walked and Segrist squeezed Rabbitt home.

DeFate and Turgeon, Spudder infield midgets, fielded fluently. Sharp defense work by this pair staved off a number of Bear advances. Rabbitt came in for several pieces of lofty outfield acrobatics on near base blows walloped to the mid sector.

Dempsey Slams Into Form as Thousands Watch

He's at it again. At last, with the Tunney match seemingly assured, Jack Dempsey settles down to training at White Sulphur Springs, N. Y. And there are always crowds from the near-by and fashionable Saratoga ready and eager to pay money to see Jack smear his boxing partners. Above is a glimpse of the ring and the 4,000 who paid to see Jack granulate Jimmy Roberts.

St. Louis Wins Eighth In A Row and Nears Leadership

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals today won their eighth consecutive victory and advanced within a fraction of a percentage point of the league leadership when they took the third of the series from the New York Giants 4 to 2. Giant errors accounted for the Cardinal runs with the exception of a home run by Bell. Score:

Work with the pulleys, the light and heavy bags, shodow boxing and calisthenics served for the preliminary warming up today and then Dempsey took on five of his sparring partners for a round apiece. They were Frank Garcia, Johnny Faxon, Jimmy Brown, Joe Kurp and Big Bill Tate.

Jack sent Tate sprawling flat and when Tate jumped up, he caught three more terrific hooks on the chin. Tate has the reputation of being a remarkably hard man to floor, even for Dempsey.

FRISCH DRAWS SUSPENSION

Truant Second Sacker Of Giants Draws Ire Of McGraw

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Capt. Frank Frisch of the New York Giants, who disappeared from his club mates without making known his intentions in St. Louis yesterday, arrived in New York late today and declared that his reason for absenting himself from the team was due to poor health, which was chiefly due to trouble with his legs.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Captain Frank Frisch, truant second sacker of the New York Giants, has been suspended indefinitely, Manager John L. McGraw announced this afternoon. Frisch left the club yesterday without permission.

"The indefinite suspension may last a week or a month or a day," McGraw said. "It all depends on developments. Frisch always has been a well-behaved player. He has an excellent record and this is the first time he has ever done anything to draw a penalty. I am going to take his record into account and do not intend to be harsh with him."

REDS WIN TWO

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Cincinnati took two extra inning games from Boston today and made it a clean sweep of the series by winning the first game 6 to 3, in ten innings and the second, 7 to 6 in 12 innings. The Braves batted Donohue out of the box in the first game and took a one-run lead but Lucas held them safe while the Reds tied the count in the fourth inning and scored the winning tally with one out in the tenth.

The second game was a stubbornly fought battle which the Reds won in the 12th round by scoring two runs when Burrus muffed Critz's pop fly.

PHILLY TAKES SUNDAY BASEBALL LIKE A HABIT.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP) Armed with a court injunction that prevented police interference, the Philadelphia Athletics played their first Sunday baseball game in this city today, and won from the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 2.

It was the first professional ball game ever played in Philadelphia on Sunday and while a steady light rain kept the attendance down to between 10,000 and 12,000. Connie Mack, veteran manager o fthe Athletics, said he was more than satisfied and that "everything went off fine."

There was nothing visible to indicate that Sunday baseball in Philadelphia was not the usual thing. The fans applauded and decried players with equal enthusiasm.

DALLAS SPLITS WITH SHIPPERS

Beaumont Takes Opener, 3 to 2; Loses Second 7 to 9

DALLAS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Ten thousand fans alternately wept and yelled with delight as the Dallas Herd lost a game, 3 to 0, and won a game, 9 to 7, in a double card with Beaumont Sunday.

Scott Perry, husky hurler, recently acquired from Philadelphia after five years' suspension from organized baseball, staged in the first game a remarkable comeback, holding the Exporters to three scattered hits. Yet he lost the game, largely through his own error in fielding a bunted ball and overthrowing third base.

SPORTS COP COUPLE

SHREVEPORT, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The Sports scored a double victory over the Cubs this afternoon winning the first 3 to 2 in 11 innings and the second 5 to 1 in six innings. The second game was called account darkness. Cannon, who pitched good ball for ten innings, walked Bonowitz to force in the winning run in the tenth after Gulley had singled. Hoffman was purposely walked and Woehrs was hit by a pitched ball. The Sports bunched hits off Tuero in the second game and the Cubs gove him poor support.

Tyler Slugger Sets World's Record With 62 Home Run Drives

TYLER, Texas, Aug. 22.—(AP)—"Big Moose" Calbaugh, left fielder for the Tyler club, East Texas league, broke his own world's record for home runs here Sunday by knocking his 62nd big drive of the season in the game with Paris. He broke the former record of 61 homers, held by Tony Lazerri of the New York Yankees, in yesterday's game with Paris. The season closed with today's game.

The Brooklyn National league club has purchased Clabaugh. The big fellow will report immediately. He is 24 years old and stands six feet, four and weighs 178 pounds. He is a Missourian by birth and has been in professional baseball three years, coming to Texas from Ardmore, Western association. Last year Clabaugh knocked 45 homers while playing on the Paris team, East Texas league.

The former record, held by Lazerri was made in a total of 191 games played in the Pacific coast league while Tony was with Salt Lake. Clabaugh's remarkable county was hung up in around 125 games, although many of the drives were clouted in small parks.

CARDS FORGE NEAR THE TOP

St. Louis Men Proving Sensation of National League

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Three teams in the major baseball leagues went through the week just closed with defeat, St. Louis and Cincinnati in the National and Washington in the American.

By far the outstanding achievement was that of the Cardinals fighting bitterly for St. Louis's first pennant. Rogers Horgsby sent his youngsters Rhem, Keen, Reinhart and Sherfel to the mound and they were victorious. And the veterans, Jess Haines and Grover Alexander, gave him well pitched victories. The Cardinals won seven contests and were not beaten during the seven days.

Out Score Foe

They scored twice as many runs as their opponents, they hit harder than any team in the circuit except Brooklyn, which destroyed its splendid offensive at the plate with poor fielding. They committed only five errors. The result was that the Cards locked with Pittsburgh at the top of the standing, only to fall a half game in the rear when the Pirates won twice Saturday.

The heated race in the National, which now bids fair to extend into the last days of the season, has caused dissention to crop out on various clubs and several changes have been made. Frank Frisch of the Giants considered one of the second base stars, failed to appear with his team Saturday in St. Louis and Max Carey of the Pittsburgh Pirates went to Brooklyn after being cleared by the league president on charges of interfering with the management of his team. Rabbit Maranville, veteran shotstop who gained fame in the Boston Braves' pennant race of 1914, was released by Brooklyn.

Reds Go Well.

Cincinnati won four games without a loss and fought Boston to fourteen inning 2-2 tie on Saturday. The New York Giants' hopes for a pennant have been abandoned. They won only one of five starts.

Little happened to arouse interest in the American League, Saturday finding the Yankees again in possession of a ten-game lead. Philadelphia rushed into a battle with Cleveland for second place, but fell a game behind. Ted Lyons furnished something for history when he pitched a no-hit no-run game against the Boston Red Sox Saturday the only performance of its kind in the major leagues this season.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

A glance at baseball's official directory will start a fanning bee in the of the minor league clubs this season reads like nothing short of a blue book of former major league celebrities, old timers and recent timers. It indicates the general trend of the boys who step out of the majors.

Take the American association for instance. Every manager in that circuit once cavorted before big league fans. George McQuillan, old National league hurler, runs the Columbi club; Donie Bush, former Detroit infielder, runs Indianapolis; Case Stengel, star of several major league clubs who wound up his career in a blaze of glory as a world's series hero with the Giants, is managing Toledo. Spencer Abbott, old time catcher who wasted his chance in the majors and then did a comeback from the depths, is bossing Kansas City. Mike Kelly, hero of the days of McGraw and the other "old boys," is managing Minneapolis. Jack Lelivelt, managing Milwaukee, is given credit for developing Schulte, latest star to be bought by the majors. Bill Meyer, who relieved Joe McCarthy at Louisville, is managing the club successfully. And Nick Allen whose active service with the Reds did not indicate his real worth, is bossing St. Paul, now virtually a Yankee "farm."

In the Southern Bert Niehoff, Kid Elberfeld (there's a real old boy), Pongo Joe Cantillon (a sprightly young octogenarian), Clyde Milan and Milton Stock are keeping their names before the public.

In the International, the league usually ruled by Jack Dunn, are George Stallings, Bert Shotton, Dan Hawley, George Wiltse, Fred Burchell, and Paddy Donovan at least.

In the Pacific Coast league are Wade Killefer, Ernie Johnson, Ivan Howard, Walter Schmidt, Marty Krug, Oscar Vitt, Buddy Ryan.

In the Eastern league, Gene McCann, Rube Marquard are among those present.

In the Piedmont league, Lew McCarty.

In the Three-Eye league are Tiny Goodbread, Punch Knoll, Oscar Stanage, Bill Rodgers, Alex McCarthy, Harold Irelan, Buz Wetzel.

In the New England, Jean Dubuc, King Bader, Walter Keating.

In the South Atlantic (Sally league), Gabby Street, Frank Walker, Larry Gardner, Bernard Mike Kelly.

In the Virginia league, Davey Robertson, Troy Agnew and Bunn Hearn.

In the Western league, John Shano Collins, Dutch Zwilling, Barney Burch, Fred Luderus, Marty Berghammer and Joe Kelly.

In the Western association, George Whitman and Mart Purtell.

In the New York-Pennsylvania league, Rankin Johnson, Jack Egan, Glenn Killinger (whose debut was auspicious at least) and Harry Hinchman.

In the Southeastern league, Sumpter Clarke, Carlyle Smith and Fred Graff.

In the Cotton States league, Bunny Fabrique and Walter Barbare.

In the Middle Atlantic league, Mike Mowrey and John Hummel.

In the Michigan league, Charlie Schmidt and Leslie Nunamaker.

In the Texas league, Derrill Pratt and Art Phelan.

In the Florida State league, Tommy Leach.

Houston Takes Both Ends of Double Header 4 to 0, 8 to 5

FORT WORTH, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Fort Worth's pennant hopes received a severe setback at the hands of the Houston Buffs Sunday afternoon at Panther park. The Buffs blanked the Cats 4 to 0 in the first game and rallied in the final innings to win the second contest 8 to 5 after the Panthers had gotten off to a five-run lead in the second inning. Pipkin allowed the Cats only four hits in the first and Littlejohn went the route for the winners in the second.

Deposed Bucs Wish Gang Flag Success

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Max Carey, claimed by Brooklyn after waivers had been asked by the Pittsburgh Pirates, and Carson Bigbee and Babe Adams, given unconditional release, "wish the Pirates all the success to be had and that they may finish on top."

This expression was contained in a statement issued by the three players who were removed from the club two weeks ago following charges they had sponsored a movement to have Assistant Manager Fred C. Clarke ousted from the players' bench.

The players have been exonerated by President John Heydler of the National league as having acted without "maliciousness."

The New Ordeal of Choosing "Miss America"

Why the Experts Have Decided That the Prize Beauty Selected at This Year's Pageant Will Be of the "Love-Mate," Rather Than the "Play-Mate," Type---and Must Wear Stockings.

Beautiful Fay Lanphier, Last Year's Winner of the Great Atlantic City Beauty Pageant and Present Holder of the Title of Miss America, Who Will Act as Queen of the 1926 Contest for National Beauty Honors.

By GERTRUDE EPPERSON MacLEOD.

A BRAND new idea as to what beauty really is will govern the judges this year in the choice of Miss America at the great annual Atlantic City Beauty Pageant.

The champion charmer of 1926 will not be picked for sheer prettiness alone, as heretofore. Instead the judges will endeavor to award the national championship to the girl most nearly approaching that intangible ideal of beauty that sways the heart of mankind in search of a wife.

For the beauty experts of the nation have come to the decision that there are really two kinds of feminine beauty, the play-mate type and the love-mate type.

The play-mate type is the more dazzling, perhaps, and includes the girls of spectacular prettiness, the girls who scintillate from the stage and screen, the girls that a man is always proud to escort in a public place, and the girls that provoke a second glance from passing men. It is girls of this obvious and striking type of beauty that have always in the past carried off the laurels at the pageant.

The second kind of beauty that is recognized is the love-mate type. It is of a more spiritual cast. It is this type, experts claim, that has really inspired, and that is found reflected in the great works of art of all times. This is the kind that represents mankind's highest ideals of womanhood and this is the kind that men aspire to make their wives. Therefore it is this second type of beauty that the directors of the national contest have finally decided is the most worthy on which to base their choice of Miss America of 1926.

To this end there have been a number of revisions in the rules of the contest and the standards to be maintained. The most noteworthy departure from former years is the rule that all bare legs will be banned and the one-piece bathing suit will be abolished. The girls during their stay at Atlantic City will be under the strictest of chaperonage. Married women and divorcees are not permitted entrance in the contest. For it is to be one that will this year pick a champion reflecting all the qualities that the average man could desire in the girl he hopes to find for his wife.

America has been called the melting pot of the world. Every race practically is represented in our citizenry. Every type is found reflected in our nation. And intermarriage has shuffled up dozens of nationalities, bringing forth an individual called an American, who has separate and distinct characteristics unlike those of any other nation.

It is to find Miss America, the beautiful girl who best stands for the new race of Americans, that the Beauty Pageant is annually held. France has her beauty contests in which a typical French beauty is each year picked. So does Spain, so does Italy, Germany and England. Each nation yearly picks its most beautiful woman, and each year the winner is typical of the particular type of beauty most prized in that country.

But America, the product of all of these nationalities, has produced a new and striking type of beauty. It is different from that of the older countries. It is distinctively that of a new race. And it is constantly changing, developing as the standards and the nation itself change.

It is therefore natural that all the great business interests that depend or hinge on the charm of womanhood should further a movement that helps to crystallize the ever developing standards of American beauty. It is important business for them to know just what kind of person the present most beautiful woman in America is, and whether opinion has changed from the year before. The great annual Atlantic City Beauty Pagent with its entrants from all over the country helps to answer this question.

For instance, the reigning question as to whether the men of the nation really do prefer blondes is an important one to the beauty specialists, cosmetic manufacturers, transformation interests and above all to the moving picture and theatrical interests. Will Miss America of 1926 be a blonde or a brunette? Whichever is chosen will, in a measure, reflect the national choice.

Above: Panoramic Bathing Group Picture of Contestants from Every Section of the United States to the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant, Where They Were the Feted Guests of the City.

And business men who cater to the nation's opinion as to what really is beautiful womanhood, in the coming year, will, with the contest in mind, be able to go ahead and make their plans accordingly.

Another question which is of supreme importance to the style designers as well as the theatrical interests is whether the boyish figure will remain or whether a plumper form will replace women's present ideal as to beauty. Will Miss America of 1926 be slim or plump? Is the tendency of the nation toward straight lines or curves?

For a year or more the slim, mannish mode has held sway. But recently doctors from all over the country have raised the cry that the women of the nation are starving themselves to remake their figures. A campaign has been instituted to show women that they are undermining their health for the sake of their figure and that they should satisfy their appetites and let the curves take care of themselves. The question is, has the health campaign affected women at all? Will Miss America of 1926, the reigning beauty ideal of the nation, stay slim or run to plumpness? Millions of women as well as hundreds of style experts and fashion designers are waiting for the judges' verdict.

Still another question that scientists and artists, as well as theatrical producers and modistes, are keenly interested in, and which is answered for a year by the annual pageant, is, at what age is a woman most beautiful? Are the charms of twenty-five simply the development of those of sweet sixteen? Does the flower begin to fade with each year past the twenties, or is the maturer beauty more real than the unsophistication of youth? It is a question of importance for women to decide when making their matrimonial plans. Something of the answer will be found at Atlantic City when the judges finally decide between flappers and womanhood.

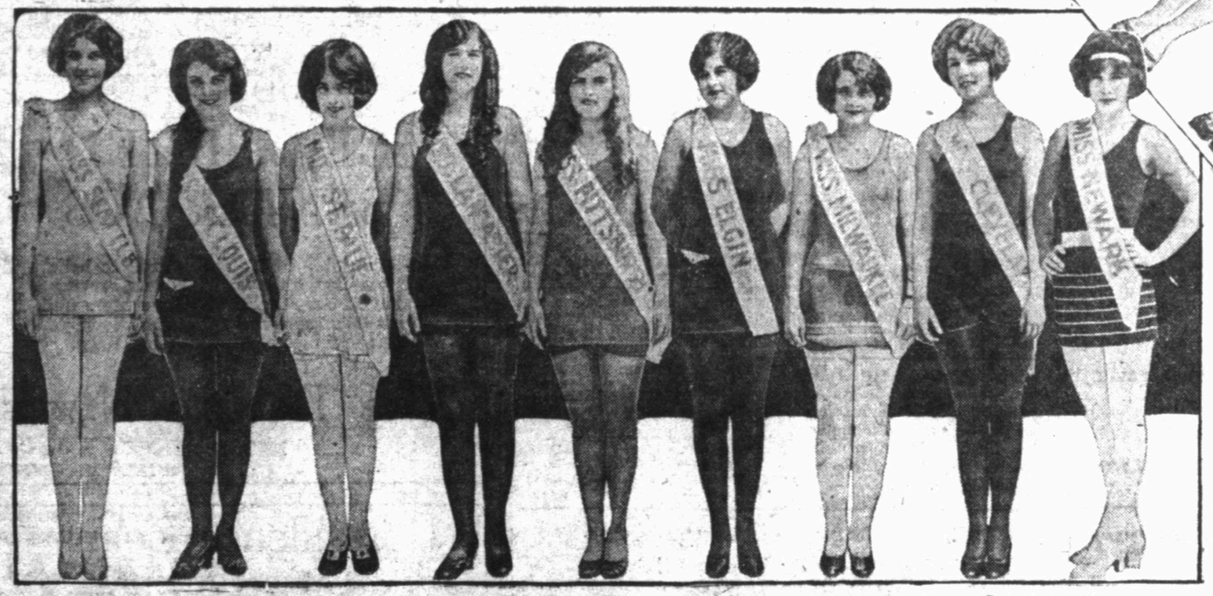

Annually, these and many other questions are decided for the coming year by the judges, who are representative of the entire nation and who attempt to pass judgment from the viewpoint of the nation as a whole. And from the results of the past years is gradually evolving a national ideal of beauty as clear cut and positive as that of the ancient Greeks or any of the older nations.

The new standards that will be used this year for the first time, are one of the results. The girls will be judged from the point of view of potential husbands rather than good-time-hunting boy friends. Bare legs and one-piece bathing suits will not be worn in public, and only once by the girls, during the private judging by the directors and representatives of the press. During the great public pageant and other outdoor revues silk stockings and silk skirts, provided by the Pageant Committee, will at all times be worn.

At the same time, however, this rule will not apply to the professional beauties who take part in the Industrial and Advertising features, the Rolling Chair Parade and the Bachers' Revue. These entries, drawn from the stage, the screen and the art studios, while they are not permitted to compete for the Golden Mermaid at the same time, form an important part of the celebration. For the great commercial interests which each year send their most beautiful models to the Pageant are permitted to costume them as scantily as the law allows.

But the girls who represent the cities of the nation and who compete for the crown of Miss America will this year travel under the strictest chaperonage of the Atlantic City Pageant Committee and must be above reproach in both appearance and behavior. In fact, with the exception of the photograph of Fay Lanphier, Miss America of 1925, and the panoramic bathing group picture reproduced on this page, the Director of the Pageant has refused to authorize the publication of any Beauty photograph in a one-piece bathing suit, as conflicting in spirit with the new ideals on which the contestants are to be judged.

For months now throughout the United States, various newspapers in dozens of great cities have been arduously conducting contests to select their prettiest native girl. From thousands of contestants the different sectional representatives will be picked. In each case it will be a new one from the preceding year, as no beauty who has ever competed for the crown of Miss America in the past can ever again be eligible. And even if this rule was inoperative, there would be few from the "old crop" as one rule forbids the entrance of married or divorced women.

Left: More Entrants in the Great Annual Beauty Contest, Which This Year Is to Be Governed by Entirely New Standards of Beauty in Choosing Miss America of 1926. One-Piece Suits and Bare Legs Are Banned for All Amateur Contestants.

FALL BUSINESS OUTLOOK GOOD

Financial Attention Turns To Suggestions For Farm Aid

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—Late summer has found the vitality of business unimpaired and a note of confidence marking the outlook for fall trade. On top of exceptional summer activity in all lines of industry have come indications that the autumn demand for goods would sustain the present high rate of buying and compare favorably with the corresponding seasons of recent years.

Considerable attention was devoted in financial circles to various suggestions for farm relief. In view of the satisfactory credit conditions prevailing in all parts of the country, talk of forming a $100,000,000 pool to extend loans to the farmers, as not taken seriously in banking quarters, although it was admitted that such a plan could usefully be put into execution if the need arose.

Operations in the steel industry proceeded on the high plane which has made this summer such a remarkable one for the industry.

Reassuring news affecting the railroads included prospects for an upward revision of class rates in the west following the recent denial of a general rate increase and the maintenance of freight traffic above a million cars a week through the early part of August.

Dangers which confronted the rubber industry through the inflation of crude rubber costs have been almost entirely eliminated. Most of the leading manufacturers in this field took occasion to point out in their semi-annual reports that normal operations were close at hand after a year or more of uncertainty.

Altus Rotarians To Make Survey

ALTUS, Aug. 22.—Members of the Altus Rotary club will make a survey of 115 high school boys within the next week in order to determine how many of them plan to continue their school carer. Each member of the club was given a list of several names to handle, and the results will be reported at the next weekly meeting.

The boys' scholarship fund, sponsored by the club at present amounts to $684, and all but $37 of this fund has been loaned. Notes on all the loans are due within the next 30 days. The Rotarians will attempt to increase the amount to $2,000 or $3,000.

A report made by Dr. E. A. Abernethy showed that 22 boys had been helped through school in the last three years through the efforts and with the help of the Rotary club.

THE NOBLE RED-SKIN.

PTARMIGAN LAKE, Canada.—Another illusion is herewith cracked and ruined. Who has not cherished the notion that the Indian, at least in his native haunts, is an unspoiled child of nature, a noble savage? Well, back from the north woods comes the news that an American Indian has been seen in the depths of the forest fastness, carrying—and using—vanity case. War paint is all very well. But he wasn't doing a war. He was plainly and obviously subjecting himself to the ignominy of "beautification." And when he had powdered his visage, he consulted the little mirror critically—and went his way, satisfied.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Duffy and children have returned from a two weeks' vacation trip in New Mexico and the west.

Cal Fishes and Forgets Dinner.
Who's World's Greatest Egotist?
Men Almost Lose Barber Shops.
Tobacco Habit Masculine No More.

By ROBERT T. SMALL.
Special Copyright, 1926, by the Consolidated Press.

The national capital is becoming worried about the fishing reports from White Pine camp in the Adirondacks. Some of the observers, official and otherwise, at Paul Smith's, insist that President Coolidge is becoming so addicting to rod and reel that he forgets when it is time to go home for dinner. Washington wonders what is going to happen after Mr. Coolidge returns to the White House. Of course there is plenty of good fishing about the capitol. There is good small mouth bass fishing up the Potomac and there is rock fishing down the river, to say nothing of the recently stocked Tidal Basin in Potomac park, not more than a good biscuit toss from the presidential mansion.

As a matter of fact, it was in connection upon the Tidal Basin fish stocking proposition that Mr. Coolidge is supposed to have made the nearly fatal remark that fishing was only fit for boys. It was denied that the president put it just that way—he indicated that fishing was more of a boy's sport than a man's. Even this explanation, however, didn't square things with the real devotees of Izaak Walton.

However, it makes no difference now what the president meant. He has taken up fishing with an avidity entirely against the Coolidge temperament of the past. He has shown he can become enthusiastic about a sport. Washington, truthfully, didn't think it was in him. The capitol wouldn't be surprised this fall to see the president in golf links. He perhaps could be induced to make the initial round of 18 holes he would take up that presidential sport as well.

There has been no true fisherman since Grover Cleveland. He was a real angler and he felt that nothing could bring greater surcease from official cares and worries than silent communion with the fishes of dashing brook or shimmering deep. President Harding had something of a penchant for deep sea fishing down off the Florida coast, but as with Presidents Taft and Wilson, golf was his favorite game.

President Coolidge is very fond of cruising down the Potomac on the yacht Mayflower. In the past he has found it somewhat difficult to amuse himself. It is easy in the future to picture the president putting off in a small boat and trying his hand at channel angling. Washington has been aching for Mr. Coolidge to get a hobby. If the fishing bug has bitten one-half as deeply as the Paul Smith's correspondents report, the problem of a presidential hobby is solved at last.

AND THAT'S WHAT JIM HAS TO SAY.

Now that Governor "Ma" Ferguson and Assistant Governor "Jim" Ferguson have renewed their faith with Attorney General Dan Moody in the run-off primary down in Texas, perhaps it is permissible to recall a remark made by "Jim" some months ago concerning two of his fellow Texans. It was at the time that Colonel E. M. House had just completed the publication of his "Memoirs," which seemed to detract a bit from the historical glory of Woodrow Wilson and add several degrees to the status of Colonel House, "assuming more than adviser." However, "that may have been," Jim Ferguson appeared to be particularly fed up with the way things were going, so he delivered himself of this epic:

"There are three great egotists in the world today. Dan Moody is one of them and Colonel House is the other two."

IT'S TOUGH ON MALE GENDER.

If it were not for the sideline of shaving the men of this country would be bereft of barbers, or be compelled more and more to share the old time shops with the ladies. There is one other deterrent which makes some of the master barbers hesitate about turning their tonsorial attentions entirely to the ladies. The styles might change. On the other hand, bobbed hair has become so general among women of all ages it is difficult to see how there ever can be a complete reversion to long tresses. Bobbed locks and bobbed skirts appear to be fixtures, as much as anything can be a fixture in feminine fancies.

The barbers would like to give their entire attention to the ladies because the financial returns are so much greater. If women can get what they call a becoming cut, they do not seem to care what it costs. Men have been more or less resentful of barber charges ever since the price of a haircut passed the 25 cent mark. When it reached 50 cents they got up on their legs and howled. Now in the better shops men have to pay 75 cents and occasionally a dollar.

Even at top prices, however, the men are pikers. The more fashionable "artists" among the barbers catering to women are charging as high as $5 today for an initial haircut and $3 for all subsequent trims. And instead of resenting these high charges, the women of New York and other large cities, fairly fight for the services of the "artists." When you pay $5 you are supposed to have your face studied from every artistic angle and to get the particular style or cut most becoming to your type of beauty. The price of feminine comeliness remains forever sky high.

TRY TO LAUGH THAT ONE OFF.

On the observation platform of the Congressional Limited, running from Washington to New York, a few afternoons ago, seven persons were seated. Four were women, three were men. Before the train reached the first of the Baltimore tunnels, four of the persons on the platform were smoking cigarets. They were the four members of the supposedly handicapped and downtrodden sex.

Wins Promotion At Local Bank

J. L. Randel of the City National bank staff has been promoted to the post of public relations manager of the bank, it was announced Saturday by F. P. Langford, president. He assumes the duties of R. Vaughn Ray who died recently.

Mr. Randel's promotion was made as a reward for several years of efficient and progressive work for the bank.

All Church Members At Union Services

The usual large crowd of church people were out at Bellevue park Sunday evening to attend the union services and band concert. Rev. Leslie Miller, pastor of the Grace Methodist church, conducted the services while the Municipal band gave one of their most enjoyable programs.

A rising check on the church membership present showed about an equal number from the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian churches, and about the same number for all other denominations combined; while the same kind of a check from non church members revealed that only about half a dozen people present were not members of any church or denomination.

Included in the program were two excellent selections rendered by the male quartet of the Grace Methodist church. Mr. Alva Wilgus substituted for Mr. Hunter, a regular member of the quartet. George Taylor also sang and played the guitar, giving two beautiful numbers.

BEG PARDON.

BRUSSELS, Belgium.—Albert King of the Belgians, is practising the economy he preaches. His several fine cars stand idle in the royal garage; food served at the royal table is as simple as that served in humble homes and King Albert rides to work on a motorcycle. He is certainly the busiest of present day kings and, usually, in a hurry. The other day two speed cops saw a motorcycle hurrying ust a little too fast. They did their duty.

BISHOPS AND CALLES MEET

Amicable Adjustment Of Religious Controversy Is Near

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Mexico's bitter religious controversy, which has so recently strained the business interests of the country, set the government and Roman Catholic church in strongly opposing positions and concentrated the anxious attention of the world on this republic appears to be in a fair way to amicable adjustment, through personal conferences between President Calles and the prelates. It is confidently hoped by the Episcopate that an agreement will be reached, unless unforeseen obstacles develop.

President Calles last night received two high dignitaries of the church, the most Rev. Leopoldo Ruiz y Florez, arch bishop of Michoacan, and Bishop Diaz of Tabasco, at the presidential palace, and a statement issued by the Episcopate after the conference described it as "truly satisfactory."

The president informed the prelates that registration of the priests as required by the new regulations was only for administrative purposes and that the government did not intend to interfere on the questions of dogma or religion.

The Episcopate accepted this declaration and announced that as soon as the churches had fulfilled these legal requirements, there would be no further objection to renewing church services. In the meantime the church will continue its efforts for constitutional amendment of the religious clauses through the medium of congress.

tolling love for all mankind, self-discipline and forbearance. When Krishnamurti was set apart as a vessel for the Great World Teacher at the age of 12 he a treatise purporting to contain precepts transmitted to him by the master. Therein he proclaimed the four qualifications for "the pathway" to be "discrimination, desirelessness, good conduct and Love."

Krishnamurti applauds democracy, mass production and the theory of prohibition. He uses the language of the go-getter when he speaks of American efficiency, which he examined during a lengthy sojourn in Hollywood in 1922. He contends for comfort, luxury even, and insists upon traveling first class if not de luxe.

Krisrnaji (an honorific diminutive applied by our subject's friends) is no cloistered saint. He is more like an abstemious good fellow whose job is to "sell" a better lief to his fellow men. He would be popular at a Tuesday luncheon of the Civitans. He confesses to being a "movie" fan; he believes in good, clean sport and announced in Paris recently that he hoped to see the world's series next October.

Steenrod escorted by the launch Sea Wolf, started his swim at midnight from point Diablo, expecting to finish the distance to the mainland in from 16 to 18 hours.

To Make Ten Commandments Real Force One Must Accept God of Today Not Yesterday

To make the Ten Commandments a real force in life today one must have a sense of a personal, present God. A belief that he was a God of one's ancestors is not sufficient. It is not enough He is accepted as the God who aided Houston at San Jacinto, nor is it enough to accept him merely as the God who guided the Pilgrim fathers, declared Hon. Roy Daniel, assistant teachers of the Kay Bible class, Sunday morning.

The meeting was attended by 2:15. It was announced that Judge John C. Kay, president of the class who is in Santa Fe at present, will return to Wichita Falls this week and will preside over the class session next Sunday.

Hon. Daniel's address in verbatim follows:

Mr. President, and Kay Bible Class:

"This world that we're a-livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
With every rose you get a thorn,
But ain't the roses sweet?"

This is a mighty fine world to live in after all. We are given no choice in the matter whether or not we want to come to this world but after we have been here a while we come to like it all right and have no desire to leave it in a hurry. Another poet has said:

"Art is long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts thought stout and brave,
Still like muffled drums are beating
Funeral marches to the grave."

Now that is true yet it is a great world to be in. If you take a huge telescope and search the heavens and behold the barrenness of some of the other planets you will be convinced that God knew what he was about and that He has placed us on the most pleasant planet of them all. Now one thing that has made this world a pleasant place to live is that God has surrounded us with so many beauties of nature—flowing streams, the sunshine, the trees, singing birds. Another reason is that we have the Ten Commandments.

The commandments, ten in number, are said to be a series of "Don'ts." But they are different because they are of God and from God. They can be divided into two groups. The first group consists of four and are designated as our duties toward God. The second group consists of the remaining six and are called our duties toward man. First, let's enumerate the whole ten. Then we will think for a little while on the four duties to God. The Ten Commandments are: 1. Thou shalt have no other gods before thee. 2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image. 3 Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. 4. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it Holy. 5. Honor thy father and mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. 6. Thou shalt not kill. 7. Thou shalt not commit adultery. 8. Thou shalt not steal. 9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. 10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house—nor anything that is thy neighbor's. Kipling says, "In Suez there ain't no Ten Commandments and a man can quench a thirst." But in America this morning we are proud that we have the Ten Commandments and have them embodied in our laws and statutes, and that a man can quench his thirst with ice water or grape juice!

Take No Other Gods.

Thou shalt have no other gods before thee. We hear much in this country about materialism and how Americans worship the dollar. What we place first in our hearts and worship is liable to be our God. Yet I believe that the great mass of the American people put God first and do not worship the dollar sign. Jesus tells us to love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. The ancient Greeks believed that their gods lived on the top of Mount Olympus the beautiful mount that towered above the clouds. They had only to go a little above the clouds of Mount Olympus to reach the real God, the everlasting God of the Infinite Blue

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image. Moses went away from the children of Israel for a short while and while he was away they fell by the wayside and began to worship idols. They erected the image of a molten calf and fel down and worshiped it. The molten calf was the emblem of the lustful Osiris and Isis—god and goddes of the Egyptians. So soon after their deliverance the children of Israel forgot the real God who had helped them in the hour of need.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. That means not to cuss. Most of us men have had the cussin' habit one time or other. If we still have some of it let's try hard to lose it. It has been said that when a sorry man has no other word to use he will use a cuss word. Profanity shows that a man is not sincere. Lord Byron in speaking of an acquaintance said of him, "He knew not what to say, and so he swore." There is always doubt about a person's patriotism when he has to use an oath to express that love of country.

Keep The Sabbath Holy.

Remember the Sabbath day to keep it hody. The present day Sabbath or the giving of the seventh day of the week to rest must be of divine origin. It is a matter of history that a great race of people once sought to make a week of eight days, having the day of rest to come on the eighth, but it failed. It is also a record of French history that after the French revolution the French sought to throw out God and establish a week of ten days, having the day of rest on the tenth day. But that failed too. Both man and beast broke down under the system without God. Man must not only take the seventh day for rest but he must make it holy by seeking to improve himself spiritually.

My friends, to make the Ten Commandments a real force in the life today we must have this sense of a personal, present God. A belief that he was the God of our fathers known of old is not sufficient. A belief that He was the God of our youth is not enough. He must be accepted as a present, personal living God—one that makes and keeps his covenants with us. It is not enough for the people of the United States to accept him as the God who guided the Pilgrim fathers and helped them lay the foundation of this republic. It is not enough for us here in Texas to accept him as the God who aided Houston at San Jacinto, and guided Texas in her struggles with Santa Anna. He must be recognized as still interested in us and stil ready to guide our destinies of today. The people must be wiling to be taught by Him. They must have a desire and purpose to folow his guidance. Let us ever be ready to hear and heed His commands.

Fail To Find A Trace of Girl

Investigation early Sunday morning revealed neither the identity nor extent of the injuris, if any, of the girl whom, it was alleged, was taken from two Wichita Falls youths at midnight on the Burkburnett road by four men, believed to have been intoxicated.

Officers stated that they did not believe any harm had come to the girl and that they believed that the partner she had deserted at the road-house dance on the grounds that "he was drunk" had merely taken that method of regaining his "date." Officers had neither name nor address with which to work in connection with the case.

Waltrip Ordained Baptist Minister

Hornburg Tells Him "Be A Man Among Your Flock"

Rev. Burroughs A. Waltrip, youthful evangelist., who recently conducted a successful young people's revival in the city, received his ordination into the Baptist ministry Sunday afternoon at an impressive service conducted at the Floral Heights Baptist church, of which he is a member.

Dr. W. R. Hornburg, pastor of the Coggin Avenue Baptist church of Brownwood, who is filling the pulpit at the First Baptist church here this month, conducted the questioning of the candidate after young Waltrip had told briefly a sketch of his life, and the experience of his call to the ministry. The young evangelist expressed views which were distinctive fundamental, and highly commended by his questioner. His acceptance was immediately moved and seconded first by the council, and later by the congregation.

The ordination sermon on the theme, "Preach the Word," was ably delivered by Rev. C. S. McClung, pastor of the Floral Heights Baptist church, and after a prayer by Rev. E. A. Owens, pastor of the First Baptist church of Meridian, Texas, came the impressive laying on of hands by the council, after which Dr. Hornburg delivered the charge of the ministry to the young evangelist.

"Be a man among your flock," Dr. Hornburg told the youthful candidate, "don't wear a frock tail coat and separate yourself from them; be just like other men love them and understand them. Keep your credit rating good for one hundred cents on the dollar, and teach your congregation to support your church and your family well. Lastly, remember that the biggest thing in all your life is to preach the gospel. It's all right to farm, or sell liet insurance, if you ever have to, to pay expenses, but don't get sidetracked, always hold preaching God's word higher than anything else in life."

Rev. W. H. Townsend of the Lamar Avenue Baptist church gave the charge to the congregation, urging their support and interest in the coming school year of the young candidate at Simmons university, and in his future evangelistic efforts. Rev. Furniss of the South Side Baptist church read the scripture, and prayers were offered by Rev. W. M. Hines and by Rev. Owens of Meridian. Mrs. Reeves and Troy Ogilvie sang a duet, "Man of Sorrows," accompanied at the piano by Miss Ruby Faye Myrick.

At the close of the services, throngs of friends came forward to offer their congratulations and good wishes, and the young pastor left immediately for Electra with his party where he is opening a revival campaign among the young people for the next few weeks.

COTTON GOES UP AND DOWN

Mart Swayed Past Week By Two Opposing Influences

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The cotton market the past week has been swayed by two opposing influences, the first distinctly bullish, namely the considerable crop scare caused by the rapid spread of the leaf worm and the activity of the boll weevil and boll worm. The other was reactionary or bearish causing rather liberal liquidations of the long interest because of fear that, notwithstanding the injury done to the crop by weather and insects the government is apt to forecast a yield in its report based on conditions prevailing August 16 at least is larger than given out August 1.

The covering of short interest due to the crop scare early in the week coupled with more or less trade and speculative buying advanced October to 17.17 and December 17.10 or 65 to 66 points above the closing level of the preceding Saturday and a little more than 100 points above the low levels of the preceding Friday.

The result of the liquidation was a drop of nearly fifty points from the high points of Tuesday and the final close Saturday showed a net gain for the week of only 16 to 19 points.

Owing to the widespread between the condition averages and estimated yields of private authorities that have issued reports in advance of the bureau, these estimates have been of no value as a guide to what the government will show. The estimates of these authorities ranged from 14,480,000 to 16,100,000 bales or an average guess of 15,327,000 bales.

For general expectation of the trade is for an indicated yield of about 15,500,000, even though the government may lower its condition averages. Should the government indicate a crop of 15,500,000 or better, the market will probably decline, but a yield of 15,300,000 or less, would probably stimulate values.

The following table shows the high, low and closing prices of the leading future months in the New Orleans cotton market the past week, compared with a year ago.

Month	High	Low	Close	L. Yr.
October	17.17	16.45	16.69	22.76
December	17.10	16.36	16.63	22.97
January	17.07	16.33	16.62	23.02

Style Bootleggers Now in Full Swing in Fashion Centers Of Paris; Many Seek New Designs

New York Buyers and Those from Other Centers Use Careful Tricks to Gain a Peek at Latest Creations from the World's Style Ruler.

B WILLIAM BIRD
Special Dispatch to the Record News
Copyright 1926 by the Consolidated Press Association

PARIS, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The bootlegging season is in full swing. Not bootlegging of liquor, of course, but of fashions.

Novel designs created by the fashion czars of the Champs Elysees and the Rue de la Paix, are appearing hourly in the carefully guarded salons where New York buyers are gathered to appraise and choose and to bargain for "exclusive American rights." But all the time, by devices almost diabolical in their cleverness, the fashion bootleggers, the style pirate, is working and scheming to pilfer the designs and rush his counterfeit reproductions off by the same boat.

Nobody knows the exact extent of this illicit traffic but it is vast. Hardly a day passes, during the season of "openings," but some new ruse is discovered, and new precautions have to be taken to circumvent it.

Catching Bootleggers

Viola Cross, the famous Viola who figured in the unsolved Elwell murder mystery in New York, and who is now sort of a prime ministress of the fashion of czarina, Jeane Lanvin, devotes much of her time at this season of the year to ferreting out the wily ways of the style bootlegger.

"There is a copyright law," she says, "which is supposed to protect us against imitations of our designs. But it doesn't do much good, unless, a complete dress is slavishly copied. In that case we can sue and obtain heavy damages. The pirates, however, are not so stupid as to be caught that way. They alter some detail—a sleeve, trimming—and maintain their design is a new one and not a copy.

"We have to contend with two kinds of piracy. One is that of the fashion pirate who makes a business of stealing designs, and does nothing but that. The other is the dishonest buyer, often American, who obtains the entree of our openings and then appropriates designs without paying for them.

"Out and out pirates has clever tricks. He has known our work people, during the previous weeks to an opening and often contrives to obtain sketches samples of materials and embroidery and occasionally complete patterns. Of course, we have a thorough system of surveillance in the workrooms and this avenue of pilfering is hard to penetrate.

Another Trick

"His ingenuity doesn't stop there, however. We discovered another one of his tricks a short time ago. A servant in one of the hotels where one of our biggest customers stop was found to be renting out our latest dresses which she borrowed for an hour or two at a time, just long enough to enable a bootlegger to sketch them in every detail. The dresses were taken while the purchaser was out and returned to their place before they were missed. The servant received 100 francs for every model thus pilferred."

Mrs. Cross smiled her satisfaction at the ingenious detective methods that had led to the discovery of this fraud.

"But where we have to look pretty sharply, is with certain classes of American buyers. It seems almost incredible, but one of the biggest men in the business was actually caught red-handed in our show-rooms snipping the labels out of dresses, with the purpose of using them in copies of his own fabrication. He actually came to our opening equipped with a fragment of razor blades attached to his finger. While he would examine the models he would deftly detach the labels. What aroused our suspicion was that he stooped down to adjust his shoelaces rather too frequently. We watched him closely and he was stuffing the labels into his shoes.

"We asked him to withdraw into another room, and withdraw his shoes. He protested indignantly, of course, but we explained if he preferred, we would have him searched at the nearest police station. He confessed and threw himself, so to speak, on our mercy."

"And were you merciful?" we inquired.

"In a way, yes; we did not prosecute—although we knew we could get a conviction and even a jail sentence for plain theft. We devised a punishment to fit the crime."

"What was it?"

Mrs. Cross smiled again.

"We made him buy direct from us many dresses as he had labels. He is one of our best customers today."
