Snow blows from Panhandle to Dakotas

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A powerful blizzard stormed into the Plains with winds gusting as high as 100 mph Saturday, spreading snow from the Texas Panhandle to the Dakotas and halting travel across parts of the Midwest with chest-high drifts.

Blizzard warnings remained in effect Saturday night into Sunday across north-central and northeast Nebraska, southeast South Dakota, southwest Minnesota and extreme northwest Iowa, and many highways were impassable.

Snow, much of it very heavy and wet, continued to fall through the evening from northeast Nebraska into west-central Wisconsin, with winds gusting to more than 40 mph causing considerable blowing and drifting, the National Weather Service reported, adding that the storm was expected to begin weakening early Sunday as it headed northeast to Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

"It could well be the strongest snowstorm of the winter in the Midwest," said Hugh Crowther of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "It certainly ranks at the top."

Thousands of stranded travelers packed motels and truck stops as the storm swept out of the Rockies, where it had deposited up to 2 feet of snow earlier, and pushed toward the Great Lakes, fanning up to a foot and a half of snow with winds gusting up to 60 mph across Kansas and Nebraska into Iowa and Minnesota.

Meteorologist Steve Byrd in Omaha, Neb., noting that 17 inches of snow already had fallen in parts of that state, said, "The bad area is going to be northeast Nebraska tonight, where they'll have 20 inches on the ground."

In southwestern Minnesota, 10 inches of snow had fallen in some areas by Saturday evening, and the snow and gusty winds were expected to spread across the entire southern part of the state by morning.

"We're expecting winds gusting in the 30 to 40 mph range and there'll be a lot of blowing snow later on tonight," Les Coleman, a meteorologist for the weather service in Minneapolis, said. By late afternoon, Luverne in the extreme southwest had 10 inches of snow and zero visibility because of strong winds, he said.

In the Texas Panhandle town of Stratford, the snow was hurled by winds gusting between 75 and 100 mph.

Wind gusts of 75 mph also were clocked at Boise City, Okla., where U.S. 287 was closed in both directions. Ben Harris, an employee at the Shamrock Truck Stop said, "You couldn't find a parking spot here if you wanted to. We're packed, with about 300 to 400 truckers."

At Oberlin in northwestern Kansas, police dispatcher Jeanne Pachner said, "There's people stranded at the church, at the schoolhouse, and I'd imagine all the motels are filled up."

In eastern Colorado, road crews had managed to reopen most of the highways between Denver and the Kansas border by Saturday night. But Interstate 70 remained closed from Limon, 65 miles southeast of Denver, to the Kansas line. Between Limon and Denver, only the westbound lane was open, the Colorado State Patrol said.

Limon Police Chief Jim Trahern said all roads into town were closed with drifts of 4 to 5 feet."Unless someone went around the roadblocks, the roads are cleared of motorists," he said before access to the outside was restored.

In the northeastern Nebraska town of Norfolk, where 14 inches of snow had fallen by noon, mail carriers couldn't make their rounds.

"People are getting stuck all over," said Earl Meisinger, delivery and collections supervisor for the Norfolk Post Office. "Once they would get off on side streets, there would be no way to get them back in this heavy, wet snow."

With blowing snow making it impossible for drivers to see, Jack Billings, district superintendent of the Nebraska Department of Roads in Norfolk, said he might have to pull the snowplows off the streets.

Security, trade will play role in export ruling

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — National security, a record trade deficit and jobs will be weighed when the U.S. Senate considers legislation to permit the export of 200,000 barrels a day of Alaska oil to Japan.

Exports of Alaska oil were banned under the law that allowed construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline to the Prudhoe Bay oil field in the 1970s, shortly after the Arab oil embargo.

The House has approved an extension of the Export Administration Act, with the ban intact. But Sen. Frank Murkowksi, R-Alaska, is offering an amendment that would permit the exports and, he says, help Alaska, the rest of the nation, Japan and Mexico.

It is an issue that has arisen periodically since the Prudhoe Bay oil began flowing, and one that has stirred the emotions of Alaskans, who note that oil states in the Southwest are free to export.

The senator and others propose selling the oil to Japan and replacing it with Mexican oil, which would be cheaper to transport to the U.S. Midwest and East Coasts.

Murkowski says the export of Alaska oil would increase tax revenues, decrease the United States' trade deficit with Japan, reduce the dependence of the Japanese on Mideast oil and offer Mexico a way to help retire its huge foreign debt.

Opponents, led by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., argue that exporting oil would hurt national security and could put U.S. maritime workers out of work.

Howard Marlowe, who heads the Washington, D.C,-based Coalition to Keep Alaska Oil, says the law already permits the export of oil, but only after a number of criteria are met — including a showing that it would benefit thbenefit the U.S. consumer."Consumers would still pay the same for Alaska oil" if the ban were lifted, he says.

Murkowski and his supporters acknowledge their chances are slim, at best, but maintain it is just a matter of time before the rest of the nation agrees with them.

"The economics of it really make a lot of sense," says Juneau lawyer Jim Clark, who has led the lobbying effort to lift the ban. "It's inevitable that this is going to happen."

Decline in cancer treatments symptom or disease?

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A decline in the number of patients and treatments at the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Center is blamed by Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson on the opening of a private office for chemotherapy treatments here and new radiation machinery in Odessa.

But MMH Vice President of Operations A.C. Buchanan cites changes in the treatment of breast cancer, the slowing population growth and cancer patients being referred elsewhere for treatment as likely causes for the decline in radiation treatments at the almost three-year-old center.

Splitting chemotherapy treatments between the center and the private office was mandated by the federal government, some maintain. But possibilities for other alternatives are expected to be heard at Thursday's hospital board meetings.

"WE'RE SEEING what appears to be about half of what we were seeing before" the opening of a private office by medical oncologists Dr. David Snyder and Dr. David Watkins in November, Buchanan told the Reporter-Telegram last week. "But the revenue is a little more than half of what we saw before because of the higher number of complicated treatments we have."

All inpatient cancer services, or those requiring a patient to remain hospitalized, are conducted at the cancer center. Outpatient treatments, however, make up 80 percent of all cancer treatments, according to Buchanan.

■ Midland, Odessa cancer centers, the history — Page 4A

When the Tax Equity and Responsibility Act of 1982 was enacted, reimbursements for Medicare patients receiving outpatient care in a hospital-based facility such as the Allison Center were cut drastically. For example, a patient receiving a $138 service normally was reimbursed $130, explained Snyder, director of medical oncology at the center. Under TEFRA, the reimbursement is now $13.50.

"Because of TEFRA, it is financially to the patients' advantage to have the services rendered in a private office setting rather than a hospital-based setting," he said. "If the treatment is unaffordable to patients, they cannot take advantage of that service."

MEDICAL ONCOLOGISTS would not directly be affected by the implementation of TEFRA other than through the loss of patients due to high costs and low reimbursements, he said.

"We continue to fully support the cancer center and we continue to see a large number of patients there.We continue to use it not only for inpatient use but for patient education," Snyder said. "Also, we continue to be impressed by the support the cancer program has had from the medical staff and the community."

About half the outpatients recently seen by Snyder have been equally divided between the private office and the center.

"But patients fluctuate," said Snyder, who began serving Midland once a week in September 1981 on a rotating basis with Baylor University Medical Center's Sammons Cancer Center in Dallas. "They may go to one or the other (depending on their needs).

"Their conditions may change during the course of their disease and they may be seen here once and at the center next. We see our private office as an extension of the cancer center service. We don't see it as competing."

Snyder located in Midland on a permanent basis in June 1982. According to Buchanan, the number of chemotherapy inpatients quadrupled with the arrival of the board certified oncologist.

"THERE WERE people here doing chemotherapy in their offices but when Snyder and the team came, the numbers skyrocketed," Buchanan said.

The year he located in Midland, 150 new cases of cancer were seen, Snyder said. The following year (1983), there were 350 new cases.

Deafness stalls but doesn't crash man's lifelong dream of flight

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Stanley Davis has been fascinated by flight since he was a boy. He and his younger brother Leeon designed and built model airplanes in their native Indiana and dreamed of days when they would be flying.

Their dreams came to pass. Leeon, an aeronautical engineering genius, designs, builds and flies aircraft. Stanley, a superb salesman, was into aircraft sales, gave flying lessons, taught ground school and flew a charter service. He had flown politicians and representatives of such businesses as Life magazine, RCA Radio Corp., Combustion Engineering and the Dallas Cowboys.

He taught Leeon to fly and encouraged him to study aeronautics.

But Stanley Davis' fascination turned into dispair in 1978 when he went "totally deaf." His flying days, his joy of life, were over.

He traced the source of his affliction to World War II when he was a combat glider pilot.

"They (medical science) know less about hearing than any of man's physical features," he said. His hopes of regaining his hearing and of flying again were nil.

"To me, flying is everything," Davis, 61, said. "It is my occupation, my hobby. I worked at it seven days a week and half the night."

Today, despite his deafness, he is flying and giving lessons once again.

HIS RETURN TO flight was gradual.

Southwest GTE seeks $84 million rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — General Telephone of the Southwest wants to add up to $5.85 to monthly residential bills as part of an $84.8 million rate hike.

The request filed Friday at the Public Utility Commission also asks for $1.75 per month in "additives" to residential bills.

The San Angelo-based company says $62 million of the overall rate hike is needed to continue making improvements demanded by customers. GTE serves over 800,000 Texans, including residents of rapidly growing Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth suburbs. The other $22.1 million would cover revised depreciation rates.

"In each of our previous requests for new revenues, our customers and the commission have strongly voiced their support of improved service levels," said E.L. Langley, GTE president.

GTE rate cases at the PUC traditionally have opened with complaints from customers. Last year, when GTE sought an $85.5 million hike, Plano Mayor Jack Harvard testified that 69 percent of his constituents rated GTE service as "poor or unsatisfactory."

The company later settled for a $32.5 million increase that added up to $1.10 to residential bills.

GTE's latest package includes increased service connection fees. For example, the fee for connecting residential service in a prewired home would go up to $104.50. That service now costs $59.

The "additives" on monthly bills for residential customers include, in effect, a $1.30 charge towards buying phones now in customers' homes. The second additive would be a 45-cent monthly charge as a "depreciation update." Business customers would pay additives adding up to $4.55.

No hearing date has been set, PUC spokeswoman Ronna Martin said Friday.

Here are the proposed rates.

In the smallest cities (such as Goldthwaite and Muleshoe) served by GTE, basic residential service would increase from the current $8.55 per month to $14.10. Business service would jump from the current $22.15 to $36.55.

In somewhat larger cities (such as Fredericksburg and Gonzales), basic residential service would go from $8.80 to $14.50. Business rates would increase from the current $22.85 to $37.70.

In the largest cities served by GTE (including College Station and several Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth suburbs), residential service would increase from the current $9.05 to $14.90.

Residents worry about rains

DALLAS (AP) — Residents of the hills above the new Joe Pool Lake in southwest Dallas County say that raw sewage spills into their neighborhood because the ground is saturated with waste from septic tanks.

One resident, Karen Aruda, said she dreads the coming spring rains because she knows that with them comes the threat of raw sewage runoff in her neighborhood in western Cedar Hill.

"It's a health hazard," said C.M. Brashear, a builder who lives nearby.

He and others said they are afraid problems in the area will worsen because the City Council voted recently to allow septic tanks in two nearby housing additions, overturning a Planning and Zoning Commission decision requiring the developers to install hookups to the city sewage treatment system.

Mayor Archie Hall said requiring installation of sewer connections in the rugged, hilly terrain near Joe Pool Lake would be so expensive it would inhibit building in the area.

The new subdivisions, which are being developed by Cedar Hill council member Joe Potter and former Grand Prairie council member Harry Englert, comply with the city's one-acre lot minimum for septic tank use and shouldn't create a problem, he said.

But zoning commission member Mark Bielamowicz, a former mayor, said the hills in western Cedar Hill can't hold any more septic tanks. Developers should bear the cost of installing sewer lines during construction, he said.

"Some of these lots are selling for $45,000 or $46,000 out there, and they're turning them into cesspools," said Bielamowicz. "It's just like a sponge — there's only so much water that can go in there; then it's got to go somewhere."

Texas Governor Mark White gives Bishop Rene Gracida of the Corpus Christi diocese a warm handshake at a media reception feting honor guests of the 87th annual George Washington's Birthday Celebration in Laredo this weekend. More than 150,000 people are expected to enjoy parades, balls, pageants and a jalapeno-eating contest.

Mattox urges new nursing home laws

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says meddling legislators and nursing home owners intent on making a profit are among the problems facing such homes in Texas, which has 1,000, more than any other state.

Mattox on Friday mentioned legislators "meddling in the process" when the state tries to close nursing homes but offered no details.

He also told a legislative committee there is "something inconsistent" about a profit-making nursing home that also should be providing "compassionate, qualified care." He said residents get better care at non-profit facilities, particularly nursing homes run by religious organizations.

Asked about possible deregulation of nursing homes, Mattox said, "It may be that certain businesses require state regulation."

Another witness before the House Joint Interim Study Committee on Nursing Home Reform, state health commissioner Robert Bernstein, said when corporations "take over a nursing home, they normally bring the staff down to the bare minimum."

Mattox said — in urging lawmakers to adopt new laws to protect nursing home residents — that everybody gets older, and he added, "We ought to prepare for ourselves, if nothing else."

Mattox told the committee, however, "I don't think we need a long-term investigation (of nursing homes). I don't think that would be particularly helpful."

Mattox said 75,000 Texans live in approximately 1,000 nursing homes, which he described as a "matter of life or death to their residents."

In 1983, Bernstein said, 71 nursing homes were decertified, two had their licenses revoked or were denied a license, and there was one emergency closing.

"We don't like to close homes, because we have to move people and that can be traumatic," Bernstein said.

To protect residents, Mattox said applicants for a license should be more carefully screened and there should be better grading system to let "the public know about the bad" nursing homes.

Mattox suggested that penalties should be handled by state agencies, which would be faster than having to go to court to levy civil penalties.

He and Bernstein agreed that legislation is needed to withhold Medicaid payments permanently from nursing homes that do not live up to their contracts. Currently, if a home corrects a deficiency, it receives the payment, just later than it normally would.

Mattox proposed legislation that would allow prosecution in state courts for Medicaid fraud, rather than having to go to federal court.

Explosion, fire leave infant dead

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A 9-month-old girl died Friday morning in an explosion and fire in a bedroom of her grandmother's home, authorities said.

Stormy Brooke Beggs was trapped in the burning bedroom, her grandmother, Jovina Rangel, 57, told officials.

The girl, her two brothers and two cousins were staying at Mrs. Rangel's house while their parents were at work, a relative said.

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP

THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK

Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.

The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment...to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.

1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one-half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.

2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.

3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.

Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.

The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains 42 easy-to-use packets that make weight control a science, not a challenge for your will power.

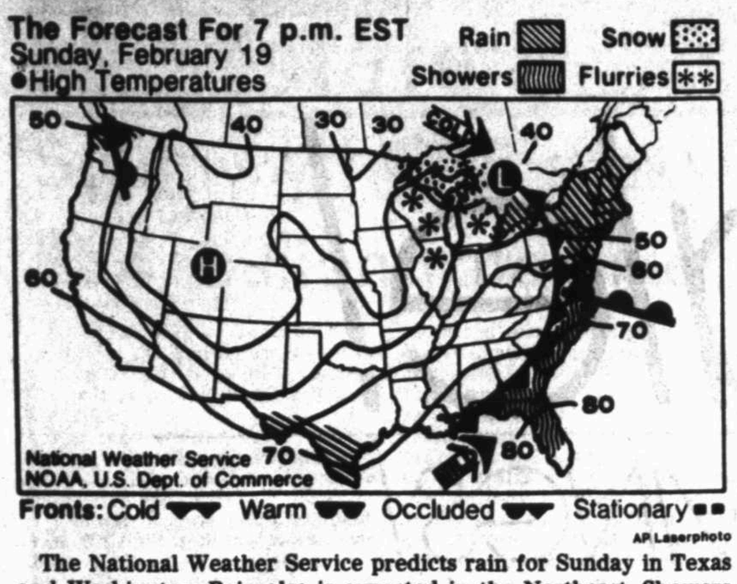
WEATHER SUMMARY



The National Weather Service predicts rain for Sunday in Texas and Washington. Rain also is expected in the Northeast. Showers are forecast throughout the Southeast. Flurries are predicted for Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. Snow is expected in parts of Minnesota and Michigan.

Oil exportation to be considered

Because of a glut of crude oil on the West Coast, and the fact there are no pipelines to carry the surplus to the East and Gulf coasts, Alaska oil is shipped by supertankers to Panama. From there it travels to the Atlantic via a pipeline and then is carried by smaller ships to refineries along the Gulf and eastern seaboards.

"We, in effect, export the oil now," Clark says.

The round-about transportation adds about $5.50 a barrel to the cost of Alaska oil. The wellhead price, on which state and federal taxes are calculated, is determined by subtracting transportation costs from the market value. Thus, the higher the transportation cost, the lower the tax revenue for the state and federal governments.

Analysts estimate that exporting 200,000 barrels of Alaska oil a day would increase federal revenues by $175 million a year, and as much as $2.4 billion over the next decade. Alaska would net an additional $70 million a year.

Besides the tax benefits, proponents say exporting oil to Japan could reduce the trade deficit between the two countries by $2 billion a year. In 1983, that deficit was $21 billion — accounting for a large share of the United States' record $69.4 billion trade deficit overall.

Under Murkowski's scenario, Mexico would benefit by replacing the 200,000 barrels and getting some much-needed revenue to help pay off its foreign bank loans.

But an aide to Hatfield says this is not the time to be considering oil exports.

"Domestic oil production is on a decline, including a decline in Alaska," says the aide, who spoke on the condition he not be identified. He says since 1973, there has been a 25 percent decline in oil production in the lower 48 states. And Alaska's production is expected to begin declining later in this decade.

Murkowski says allowing the export of oil would spur domestic exploration. But Hatfield's aide disagrees. "Even under the most optimistic predictions — regardless of price — there will be a decline in production in the next five years," he contends.

To alleviate national security concerns, Murkowski has included a provision to suspend oil exports in the event of a national emergency. But Clark says the clause is meaningless because under the International Energy Act the United States is committed to providing Japan with at least 500,000 barrels a day in case of another worldwide oil embargo.

FEC pushing proceedings against Panhandle operators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission says it will expedite proceedings against 37 operators of about 200 oil wells in the Texas Panhandle in connection with possible illegal sales of natural gas produced from the wells.

The commission said Friday that it had ordered the operators to show why they should not be found in violation of the Natural Gas Act and the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

The Dorchester Gas Producing Co. of Dallas had dedicated the gas reserves in Carson and Gray counties to interstate commerce in 1952, the commission said.

But it said that a preliminary investigation had raised "the possibility that inexpensive dedicated gas reserves have been and are being irrevocably drained from the interstate market and sold at unlawfully high rates."

About 8.6 billion cubic feet of the gas reserves have already been drained through such practices, it said.

A commission spokeswoman said a hearing on the issue would be held "very soon" before an administrative law judge.

Midland sunny, but chilly; Weak front lingers on coast

There should be sunny skies today, but the temperatures will be just a wee bit chilly.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast a high temperature today in the low 50s and westerly winds at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight is to be clear and cold with a low near 30 degrees.

For Monday, the weatherman is predicting sunny weather and a high in the mid-50s.

The high temperature reading Saturday was 58, while the record high for a Feb. 18 is 82 degrees in 1947. The overnight low was 37 degree. The record low for a Feb. 19 is 19 degrees in 1936.

STATE

A weak cold front lingered along the Texas coast Saturday, producing patches of light rain and drizzle along the southern part of the line and scattered showers and thunderstorms from Houston north.

The front stretched from Corpus Christi to Houston and into northern Louisiana, the National Weather Service said.

Winds along the upper coast ahead of the front were southerly at 10 to 15 mph. Northerly winds of 5 to 10 mph were reported in Central and Southwest Texas, while cold air and tight pressure over the Panhandle produced northerly winds at 30 to 35 mph.

Temperatures were in the 40s in the Panhandle. Readings in the 50s and 60s in were reported in West, Central and North Texas. Far South Texas reported 70s and 80s, the weather service said.

Forecasters said the showers and thunderstorms would be gone by Sunday morning, with fair skies expected statewide throughout the day. Temperatures were predicted to dip into the teens in the Panhandle overnight.

Highs Sunday were expected to range from the 40s in the Panhandle to the low 70s in South Texas. Sunday night lows were expected to range from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 30s in South Texas.

NATION

A winter storm that dumped heavy snow on the mountains of Utah and Colorado moved onto the Plains on Saturday, producing high wind and heavy snow across eastern Colorado and into Nebraska.

More than a foot of snow fell in some places and wind gusted to 60 mph in Colorado, closing some highways with snowdrifts.

By afternoon snow extended from eastern Wyoming and northeastern Colorado into southern Minnesota.

Ahead of the storm, winter storm warnings were issued for eastern Nebraska, south-central and southeastern South Dakota and southwestern and south-central Minnesota. Storm watches were issued for parts of Iowa and Wisconsin.

The storm also produced rain and drizzle across the central Mississippi Valley.

Cancer centers longtime competitors

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite the establishment of cancer treatment in Odessa some 10 years before, the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Center opened in 1981 to serve the entire 17-county region, which includes Ector County.

While Odessa Medical Center Hospital provided its services on a Cobalt 80 radiation therapy unit, Allison Center patients received treatments on 2 Million Electron Volt (MEV) linear accelerators.

But when MCH's cobalt machine became outdated and was replaced with a linear accelerator of the same intensity as one at the Allison Center, it was the Midland facility that suffered a loss in patients, according to Ray Branson, Midland Memorial Hospital president.

"We were treating in the 25-30 (patients a day) range before Odessa opened their linear accelerator," Branson said. "There were days we got into the 30 to 35 range. Subsequently, we average in the 15-20 treatments per day range."

In operation for about a year, MCH's 6 MEV linear accelerator patient load has increased some — but perhaps not as dramatically as MMH's has decreased.

"IT SEEMS like we were treating 16-18 patients a day and we've gone up to 20-22 a day now," said Greg Craig, MCH assistant administrator. "We've grown, but maybe its not as spectacular (as MCH's growth in chemotherapy treatments)."

During 1983, 7,523 radiation treatments were given on the Odessa linear accelerator. With fiscal year 1984 already showing 3,389 treatments, Craig said one could project 13,536 treatments for the year, "a workload almost double."

MCH's chemotherapy treatment center opened in September 1979, with 93 patients per month. In September of the following year, an average of 171 patients were seen per month and by September 1981, 226 patients were seen.

When medical oncologist Dr. Bob Kirby moved to Odessa fulltime in July 1982, the figure had risen to 265 patients, Craig said.

By July 1983, with the addition of medical oncologist Dr. David Watkins, who fluctuates between Odessa and Midland, the load had increased to an average of 299 patients per month, Craig said. Projections in 1984 call for a monthly average of only 273 patients, however.

The number of chemotherapy patient visits per month at the Allison Cancer Center averaged in the 380-450 low and high range, but the figures have dropped to 169-200 since the opening of a private medical oncologist office in Midland last November, said Branson.

"WE NEED TO improve marketing of the Allison Center," he said. "We need to make it more visible to the physicians and residents outside of Midland. We're doing it now, but we just have to do more of it and perhaps in different ways.

"The Allison Cancer Center was approved to be a regional cancer center," he added. "And Odessa is in our market."

Following a statewide study during the late 1970s, recommendations called for the availability of Type 1 and Type 2 services for each Health Service Area in the state, MMH Vice President of Operations A.C. Buchanan said.

Odessa's cobalt unit was considered a Type 1, as was a 6 MEV linear accelerator. Type 2 services included 20 MEV linear accelerators.

Because Odessa only had the low-energy treatment, Buchanan said Midland hospital officials decided to request the high energy, Type 2 services, as recommended in rounding out health services for the region.

However, MMH's original request was for a cobalt or 4-6 MEV linear accelerator, which was promptly opposed by Odessa officials as a duplication of services, Buchanan said.

"WE REWROTE the certificate of need so we'd have low and high energy equipment and Odessa withdrew opposition," Buchanan said, adding it is not unusual for Type 2 equipment to include Type 1.

The Allison Cancer Center got its 6 and 20 MEV linear accelerators.

But when Medical Center Hospital submitted a request to replace its 10-year-old cobalt machine with a 6 MEV linear accelerator, it was the turn of MMH officials to voice opposition.

Many felt MMH would lose area patients who would prefer to seek similar treatment in Odessa if it were closer, Buchanan said.

In September 1981, legislation changed to make it no longer necessary to submit a certificate of need for capital equipment costing less than $400,000. Odessa's 6 MEV linear accelerator was purchased for $358,000.

Cooperation does exist between the two medical communities to an extent, Buchanan stressed. During the period that MCH's unit was in transition, many Odessa patients were referred to Midland. Also, some Odessa physicians send their head and neck cancer patients to Midland for treatment on the 20 MEV linear accelerator, he said.

THE ALLISON Cancer Center is not overbuilt, Buchanan said, despite the present lag in patients. "The center was built to accommodate the number of patients we expected to see in the fifth through 10th year of service. It would be terrible to open something up and, two years later, be under an expansion project.

"Inflation hits construction companies like everyone else."

Most hospitals plan in the 5-10 year range, he said. The figures are calculated by taking the projected total population, figuring out the incidence of cancer in that area and what the percentage of the market share will be.

National data on the accepted incident rate shows 270 new cancer cases per year per 100,000 people under the age of 50 will occur. Some 325 new cases per year per 100,000 people are projected for those over the age of 50.

"Out of our 17-county area, about 975 new cancer cases per year are projected," Buchanan said. "And 50 percent of those are expected as new cancer patient treatments.

"We saw 160 new radiation cancer patients and my guess is Odessa Medical Center saw about 200-225.

"But you have to assume that there are some who are not diagnosed, those that choose not to have treatments here and those that choose not to have treatments at all."

Doctors link changes to 1982 TEFRA ruling

Changes in Medicare reimbursements occurred in October 1982. "It wasn't implemented until the summer of '83. But we were fully aware of the change and the problems in November 1982 and began working with the hospital administration at that time to work out alternative arrangements," he said.

Watkins joined Snyder at the cancer center in July 1983. Their private office opened in November at the corner of Ohio Avenue and N Street.

"The way we see it is the changes are unfortunate, and we regret that we have to operate between two offices," Snyder said. "We have always been open to equitable arrangements with the cancer center and we've worked with the hospital for a year on the problem and explored several possibilities. But so far, none has been workable."

Because the center is donated space, tax and financial problems arose with the possibility of leasing the center to the medical oncologists, he said. But other options still are being considered, according to hospital officials.

"The Allison Cancer Center committee and staff are evaluating alternatives for the medical oncology area for the Allison Center due to the decreased workload resulting from the medical oncologists opening their private office," Branson said.

A SURVEY questioning the need to continue chemotherapy treatments at the Allison Center was sent to 10 of the 35-40 doctors who refer patients there, according to Buchanan. Of the 10 whose referrals account for more than 50 percent of the patient load, nine responded favorably. They also indicated they would continue to refer patients to both locations.

A recommendation from the cancer center study committee to continue oncology services is expected to be reported Thursday during the MMH Board of Trustees meeting, Buchanan added. "But you'll continue to hear us talk about other programs that could be offered at the cancer center."

Meanwhile, the number of patients receiving radiation treatments on the center's 2 Million Electron Volt (MV) linear accelerators has decreased by 40 or 50 patients from 1982 to 1983, Buchanan said.

During 1982, 210 patients were seen with only 160 treated in 1983. Although Branson attributes the loss in patients to Odessa's installation of a 6 MV linear accelerator, Buchanan said that wasn't a major factor.

Only 10-12 patients from Odessa received treatments in Midland during an interim period between the change from a cobalt machine to a linear accelerator at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, Buchanan said. "If you pull out the Odessans at that time, you'd still have between 185-190 patients receiving treatment, compared with 160 the next year."

Buchanan, instead, points to changes in breast cancer treatment, population growth and referrals to outside institutions made by local physicians.

For many years, breast cancer was treated with radiation. However, in the late '70s the trend turned toward chemotherapy treatment.

"IT TAKES A WHILE for these trends to be accepted by the medical community, but it seems to have been in the last year to 18 months that it's very common for a breast cancer patient to be seen in medical oncology," Buchanan said.

More than 20 percent of the cancer in females is breast cancer, "so that can amount to a fair number of patients."

Other reasons cited by Buchanan for the reduction of patients is the possibility that the population growth has leveled off or decreased. "And still, there may be one or two local physicians that will send patients somewhere else."

About 15 percent of radiation patients seen at the Allison Center last year were referred back from hospitals such as Scott and White in Temple, M.D. Anderson in Houston and two major Dallas facilities, he said.

"Frequently, patients will have surgery and be referred back here for follow-up treatment. If this wasn't a quality service, there wouldn't be that amount of referrals."

Deaf man returns to lifelong love of flight

After his hearing loss, "I became depressed and suicidal," said Davis. "It was a shock.

"I've gone to all kinds of specialists, had head scans, gone to the VA (Veterans Administration) hospital. They said nothing could be done for me."

After the deafness set in, he and his wife Mary lost the flying service and the Piper Aircraft Corp. dealership. Often, he had been honored as a leading Piper airplane salesman, and in 1959 he was the biggest volume Piper dealer in the Midwest.

"I love people," he explained. "I communicate. I sold many, many airplanes without demonstrations because people had faith in me.... They used to say I sold airplanes like candy bars."

He operated Davis Flying Service at Lake Village, Ind., from 1946 until 1971, when he relocated it to DeMotte, Ind. He had the Piper dealership from 1949 to 1978.

"You can't imagine all I went through," Davis said. "For three years, I was very suicidal, extremely depressed. Didn't want anybody to come see me — friend or enemy.

"I've read," he said, "some people who lose their hearing are more depressed than those who go blind.... I felt lower than a peon when I lost my hearing. It was pretty humbling."

After his flying career toppled, Davis went into the grocery business; he worked in the produce department of a supermarket.

In 1982, Davis moved to Midland to be with his brother and to work with his brother's second son, Brian, cleaning airliners at Midland Regional Airport.

SINCE THEN, he was encouraged to get back into flying.

"The FFA (Federal Aviation Administration) in Indiana discouraged me from flying," Davis said. "The FFA in Lubbock was mad. They thought I should be flying."

Davis' license was re-issued in 1983. Today, he is teaching about 20 students, flying out of Harold Vroman's Sky Ranch Airport and smaller airports. "I can't do anything that involves radio." He avoids the busy, larger airports where radio communication is required.

Davis said he teaches his students slowly and thoroughly. His students' final check ride is given by another instructor, Gene Beggs, who also gave Davis his re-validation check ride for re-issuance of his flying license.

"I want them (students) to be alive and to die of old age — not to die in an airplane accident," Davis said of his meticulous teaching methods.

In instructing, Davis said he can tell what the student is asking because of the routine and his familiarity with the student pilots. Otherwise, comments and questions to him are in writing.

Texas is a haven for pilots.

"In Indiana, airplanes are considered a nuisance," he said. "Out here, they are considered a way of life."

He recalled that a Confederate Air Force pilot had landed an aircraft on a Midland street in publicizing an air show.

"That poor pilot in Indiana would still be in jail," he said.

In his 31,000 flying hours, Davis said he has "never had any type of aircraft accident."

"I've gone to so many pilots' funerals it's a shame," Davis said, giving the "Good Lord" credit for bailing him out of precarious situations.

From his youth, he recalled the instruction of his parents.

"In the Depression, my folks had virtually nothing," he said. His father was a farmer. "My folks told Leeon and me, 'Where there's a will there's a way.'"

He's tested the advice.

"I just wanted to prove I can do it (flying) without hearing," he said.

While he's flying, instructing and occasionally selling an airplane, his brother Leeon, 53, is in San Antonio where he is working on his seventh airplane and is "hoping to get venture capital" to put the aircraft into production.

"Leeon and I are just alike," Davis said. "We try harder.... I'm just thrilled when I can teach somebody to fly."

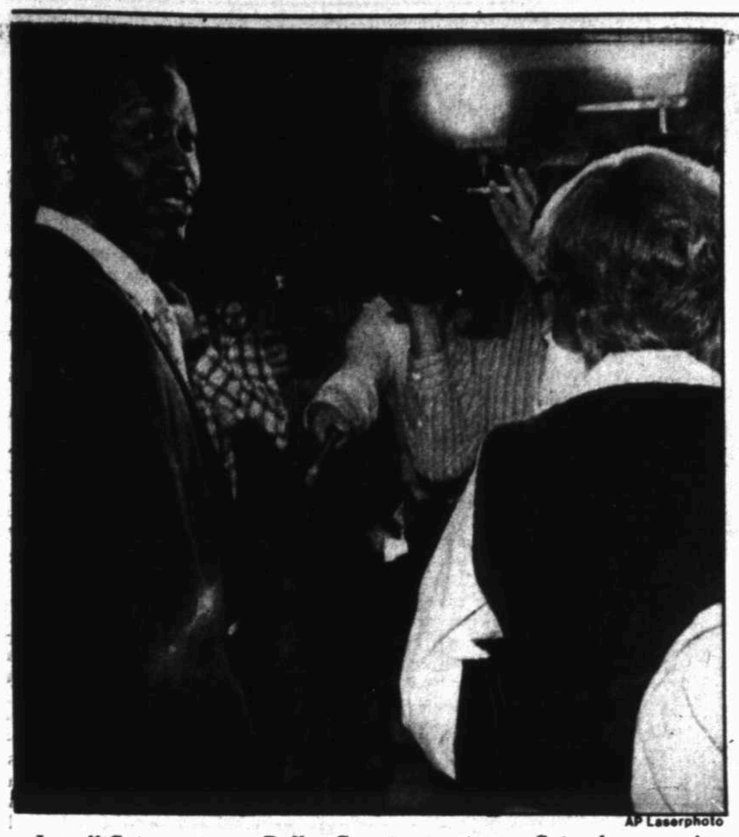
Judge says he can't dismiss Geter case; Trial in April



AP Laserphoto

Lenell Geter enters a Dallas County courtroom Saturday morning to hear a state district judge's decision after five days of testimony during which defense attorneys tried to paint a picture of a police conspiracy to tag the South Carolina native with a series of Dallas-area robberies. The judge set an April retrial and rejected the defense arguments that the case should be dismissed.

DALLAS (AP) — A judge said Saturday he was unable to dismiss robbery charges against Lenell Geter, clearing the way for an April retrial of the black engineer who defense lawyers say was arrested only because of police overzealousness and racism.

State District Judge John Ovard said the case raised constitutional questions, but he denied Geter's motion to throw out the case in what defense lawyers called "the interest of justice."

Ovard said he had no authority under Texas law to grant the motion.

Ovard had heard five days of pretrial testimony on whether Geter should be retried.

"I'm disappointed and I felt that this could be the end of my trials and tribulations," Geter said after Ovard's ruling. "But I understand he was acting within his powers. I was just hoping and praying I wouldn't have to go to trial."

Geter, 26, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison after being convicted in the Aug. 23, 1982, robbery of a Balch Springs fast-food restaurant. But then, after news media reports questioned his conviction and blacks protested the case, Geter was released in December, after nearly 16 months in prison.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade agreed to a new trial, scheduled for April 9, conceding that news reports, including a lengthy CBS News "60 Minutes" segment, had raised doubts about the validity of the conviction.

The judge said the case raised two important constitutional questions.

"After hearing the evidence and researching the law, I have concluded that under current Texas law this particular court does not have the authority to grant this motion," Ovard said.

The judge also deferred a ruling on a motion questioning the validity of photographic lineups used to convict Geter of armed robbery in October 1982.

"Both (issues) really reach significant constitutional questions and we'll carry them in that light," said Ovard, who earlier in the week of the pre-trial hearing said he thought the questions may require U.S. Supreme Court rulings.

Legislature faces tough questions on higher education

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — During a discussion of higher education, a legislator once complained that the only thing he noticed that was higher about it was the cost. That complaint about cost is likely to be renewed in the 1985 legislative session.

Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education, notes that the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, has recommended funding formulas which could increase the cost of higher education by over $1 billion for the next biennium.

Total requests by institutions may exceed $7 billion, Ashworth says, although it's unlikely the Legislature will give blanket approval to them.

But Ashworth notes that additional money isn't the only problem facing higher education. The problems of higher education are related, he comments. "We've got to get a better relationship between the high schools and the universities on getting students better prepared," Ashworth contends. "We need to send a very clear message to high school students that they have to work harder to get into college.

"The message that's been sent in recent years is that you can play while you're in high school and still get into college. I think that's got to change.

"Our biggest problem right now in higher education is how to increase standards...to get a proper curriculum on what needs to be taught."

And, Ashworth notes, "the teacher education area is a really difficult area. We have got to get brighter people into the teaching of science and math in our schools. One of our biggest shortages is still science and mathteachers."

Ashworth agrees that salary levels have been a factor in that shortage.

"The salary situation is crucial," he says. "Society needs to indicate once again that we hold teaching in high regard. High pay is one indication."

Ashworth feels that higher education needs will face stiff competition in the 1985 session from other areas, including increasing teachers' salaries.

Continued growth at state-supported colleges and universities is part of thr reason for the growth in budget requests, he says. "We had a four percent increase in students last year and it looks like we'll have about the same this year."

And with the growth in Texas' population, that increase is expected to continue. "We're going to have a lot more students," Ashworth predicts.

Another reason is that schools are trying to make up for past years when appropriations didn't keep up with inflation. And, he comments, "one of those things that doesn't ever seem to go away is the pressure to expand."

"There appears to be no end to the ambition of the schools to build more buildings," Ashworth adds.

Since last year, he reports, state institutions have added over one million square-feet of space, space which has to be heated, cooled, maintained and protected.

"Utility costs," he says, "are eating up more of the piece of the pie allocated to higher education...competing with faculty salaries, research funds, library funds, and other needs."

Then there's the pressure to add new academic programs, and to expand upper level institutions into four-year schools, Ashworth comments.

"I think," he says, "the Legislature is going to face some difficult questions, and the coordinating board is, too."

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, who chairs the Higher Education Committee, says the proposed constitutional amendment (HJR 19) to be voted on in November could help control higher education construction costs.

That proposal would allocate $100 million annually for schools not under the Permanent University Fund, and would bring all components of the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems under the PUF.

"I think the big advantage of HJR 19 is that we will be forcing institutions to live within a budget," Delco argues. If the amendment passes, she says, there will be a formula for funding, and "clearly defined purposes for using the money."

While the Legislature could allocate additional funds to a school by a two-thirds vote, Delco says she feels "that does tend to sober up the people who think that if they can't get the money out of the formula, they can waltz up here and get it out of the Legislature."

Delco agrees with Ashworth that higher education will come in close attention in 1985: "I think all education will...I think the Legislature is going to have to look at the entire process. I think there's no question on that."

Datapoint tries to secure future after rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Datapoint Corp. is recovering from its financial fiasco in 1982, but the computer maker still faces hurdles in ensuring its future growth.

Still, the renewed perception by some people on Wall Street that Datapoint will remain a long-term player in the computer industry is itself a victory for the San Antonio-based concern.

Back in April 1982, after 10 years of fast growth, Datapoint dropped the bombshell that it lost $23 million in its fiscal third quarter, $18.5 million of which came from operations.

While that was unsettling enough, the public largely focused on the $4.4 million loss that reflected the erasure of $15 million in earlier revenue — a reversal reportedly tied to questionable sales practices, such as sales that were recorded but not completed or not restated when products were returned.

The disclosures sent Datapoint's stock plunging to $14 a share from $67 in 1981. Datapoint's credibility reached a low ebb, and the losses indicated to many analysts that the company's customer base was losing its loyalty.

It appears most of that base stuck with Datapoint, however, and the company's health has improved.

After earning only $2.41 million in the fiscal year ended July 31, 1982, profit rose to $8.07 million in fiscal 1983 and some analysts estimate fiscal 1984 earnings will hit $25 million. Datapoint's best year came in fiscal 1981, when it earned $48.8 million.

Datapoint's order backlog has been steady, and its balance sheet has remained strong. Cost controls have been implemented and its management ranks bolstered with recruits from such companies as Data General Corp. and Motorola Inc.

Industry watchers also applaud Datapoint's decision last year to sell its Communications Management Products Division, a producer of telephone switching systems.

Court reverses convictions of men

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An appeals court has reversed the convictions of three men, each of whom accused the other in the theft of $1 million from a Houston airport cargo office.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declared Friday that Gerald Thomas Vertucci, 44, Anthony John Romanello, 45 and Victor Antonio Mendez, 33, were wrongly convicted in February 1983.

The three had been convicted of theft of property in foreign commerce, interstate shipment of stolen property, conspiracy and customs violations.

The men contended in their appeal that U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue of Houston should have granted their requests for separate trials.

Federal prosecutors charged that Vertucci — an Air France employee for 19 years before being fired after the robbery — passed information about the shipment to Romanello, of Almont, N.Y. and Mendez, of Deer Park, N.J.

Vertucci was found handcuffed to a tree in Chambers County on Dec. 4, 1981. He told law officers he had been kidnapped by two men as he took the gold shipment between two airport terminals.

He said two men had taken the jewelry, mostly 14- and 18-carat gold chains, that was supposed to be held by Air France for two Italian couriers who were to transport it to Mexico on Dec. 3.

'Crime links rape, violence'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vanessa Renee Brown never wanted her men friends to know where her parents lived. She was afraid they might show up at the door, and that would inevitably start another argument between her and her folks.

So on many nights, Ms. Brown would ask to be dropped off a couple of blocks away. Then she would walk home. She was often dropped off near a vacant lot down a hill and across the railroad tracks from her parents' stone and brick row house in Overbrook, one of Philadelphia's 14 neighborhoods.

That vacant lot was where the body of the 23-year-old woman was found on Tuesday, mutilated and decomposing among the weeds and rubble. She had been stabbed and strangled, and the words "GOOD RAPE" were carved into her back.

Renee Brown — her family and friends called her by her middle name — was an unmarried welfare mother, a high school dropout, a young woman who lavished gifts on her 5-year-old son but who loved to dance and party and stay out all night.

She was also a reported rape victim who was scheduled to testify against her alleged attacker when she disappeared three weeks ago.

Police are worried about media coverage hampering their search for the killer or killers. Defense attorneys fear that the man accused of raping Renee Brown last year won't get a fair trial. Prosecutors are afraid other rape victims won't want to testify.

And women's groups say the murder — police are awaiting tests to determine whether Ms. Brown was sexually assaulted immediately before she was killed — shows that rape is an act of violence, not of lust.

"This crime is the perfect illustration of the link between rape and violence," Lynn Marks, executive director of the Women's Organization Against Rape, said in her downtown office. "To me, it says that a good rape is a dead woman."

Detective Ernest Gilbert said William Kemp, the cab driver accused of raping Ms. Brown last May, was not a primary suspect in her murder. "It would have been foolish for him to do it and then sign his autograph like that, wouldn't it?" said Gilbert.

Gilbert said police wished that the report about the carving on Ms. Brown's back had not been made public: it would be easier for authorities to know if they had the right person if the killer was the only one who could have known about the carving.

Despite war against narcotics, cocaine smuggling up drastically

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a multimillion-dollar campaign against narcotics, the United States was inundated last year by a tidal wave of smuggled cocaine and federal drug enforcers are digging in for a long battle in the war on drugs.

Federal officials concede that the amount of cocaine reaching this country from Latin America last year was substantially higher than in 1982 and that the final estimates may approach twice as much as the 45 metric tons to 54 metric tons smuggled in during 1982.

Aside from cocaine, the war on drugs achieved some substantial victories during 1983, including a reduction in the supply of heroin and a leveling off of the marijuana supply. In addition, arrests and convictions were up, seizures of heroin and cocaine were up, and seizures and forfeitures of drug traffickers' money and assets were up.

But the major federal law enforcement thrust is shifting to the Reagan administration's 12 drug task forces — inter-agency teams blanketing the country and aimed at the kingpins, financiers and lawyers who organize the smuggling and launder its profits.

In the past, breaking up a smuggling operation meant seizing the drugs and arresting the low-level operatives who ferried them. But the organizers viewed these setbacks "as just the cost of doing business," says Jack Lawn, deputy administrator of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. "When an operation was shut down, the traffickers could just take the money from that operation and put it in another one."

The task forces only reached full staff last August, adding nearly 1,000 new agents from six agencies and nearly 200 new prosecutors to the battle. Some $245.5 million has been appropriated for them last year and this year, and Reagan has asked for another $92 million for next yar.

Last month, in Operation Southern Comfort, the task forces broke up what they called the largest U.S. cocaine ring in history. Thirty people were indicted in Atlanta for smuggling five tons of cocaine since June 1982.

But these cases require sophisticated financial investigations, the use of federal wiretaps that tie up manpower, and a lot of time.

"This is a marathon, not a 100-yard dash, and you can't measure it this early because it hasn't had a chance to get up to full speed yet," Attorney General William French Smith said in a recent interview.

And increasingly, federal officials share Lawn's view that "this war is not going to be won within the continental United States. It's going to require cooperation from the source countries."

The full impact of the cocaine flood is still to come. DEA spokesman Bob Feldkamp said the supply is so great that the wholesale price in south Florida, where most of it arrives, dropped last year from $60,000 a pound to $30,000 now, but this has not yet shown up in the street price. Meantime, the purity of cocaine on the street has risen.

This comes despite an enormous interdiction effort, begun in 1981 and expanded since then. With the approval of Congress, the Reagan administration has begun using military ships and planes to help intercept smugglers headed for the southern border. Cocaine seizures last year amounted to more than 7,500 kilograms, a 53 percent increase over 1982.

And Lawn says the records seized and interviews conducted in the Southern Comfort case strongly suggest that that ring alone brought in 50 metric tons of cocaine over a 16-month period — almost equal to the previous annual estimate for cocaine smuggling for the entire country.

Smith's decision to bring the FBI into drug cases for the first time has added significant expertise for such financial investigations and manpower for the wiretaps they require. The number of court-approved federal wiretaps for narcotics cases has risen from 37 in 1981 to 292 last year.

The task forces have already produced indictments of 1,300 people. And Smith wants to add a 13th task force, covering south Florida, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The availability of marijuana stayed the same last year after increasing the year before, but heroin declined. Seizures of heroin were up 32 percent and the price rose from $2.17 per milligram in 1982 to $2.30 in 1983.

Caucus facts listed

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Here, at a glance, are the facts and figures on Monday night's Iowa precinct caucuses that kick off the Democratic presidential nomination season in earnest.

HOW MANY? — Two caucuses will be held in each of the state's 2,497 precincts, one for the Republicans and one for the Democrats.

WHERE? — Caucuses will be held wherever there is space — town halls, schools, churches, living rooms and even fire houses.

WHEN? — The caucuses start at 8 p.m. CST Monday and are expected to last anywhere from one hour to well into the night.

WHO? — Out of the 1.5 million registered voters, about a third are Democrats, a third Republicans and a third independents. Democrats are expecting anywhere from 90,000 to 125,000 people to attend their caucuses, about the same as in 1980. The GOP, without a contest for the presidency, is looking for perhaps 40,000. In 1980, with a hot presidential nomination fight, more than 100,000 showed up for the Republican caucuses.

WHY? — The caucuses are part of both parties' process for selecting delegates to their respective national political conventions this summer, as well as picking delegates to the parties' state conventions later this year. For each party, the precincts will elect delegates to 99 county conventions. Those conventions will in turn elected delegates to the congressional district and state conventions.

PICKING DELEGATES — While both parties will be picking delegates, they do it in somewhat different ways.

The Democrats will first divide into groups at each precinct, according to whom they support for president or an uncommitted group. If a candidate does not have the backing of at last 15 percent of those present, his supporters must join another group. Then county delegates are allocated according to their preference.

A similar process is used at every level of the process.

The GOP will not divide up by presidential preference in order to select county delegates.

For both parties, actual national convention delegates will be chosen at the congressional district and state conventions.

Police mourn slain NYC cop

DOBBS FERRY, N.Y. (AP) — More than 1,000 police officers lined the street five deep Saturday for the funeral of a New York City policeman killed last week, allegedly by a convict on parole.

"I've been to too many of these funerals," Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward said outside Sacred Heart Church. "We have to stop it. It's madness."

Officers came from as far away as Bridgeport, Conn., and from the city correction and fire departments. There was room in the 440-seat church only for top police officials and members of Ruotolo's 41st Precinct, often called "Fort Apache."

Officer Thomas P. Ruotolo, one week away from a transfer to a desk job, was gunned down Tuesday in the South Bronx while investigating a report of a stolen moped. Two other police officers were wounded, and a wounded suspect later was arrested and charged with murder.

The suspect, George Agosto, 24, of New York City, had been free on parole after serving 41 months of a five-to-15 year manslaughter sentence. He had been rearrested twice without having his parole revoked.

Ward said the state parole system should be abolished and prisoners should serve their full terms, minus credit for good behavior.

The pastor of the church, Monsignor Gerard A. Green, said during the service: "We need to have the bitterness and resentment taken from our hearts because these are wasted emotions."

But some of the officers standing outside felt differently.

"These guys can't go around killing cops. They should definitely use the death penalty in New York," said Officer Vincent Aiello of Ridgefield, N.J.

The police department's Emerald Society Pipe and Drum Band marched past the church, playing a funeral dirge, before Ruotolo's wife Mary-Beth followed his coffin inside.

Behind Mrs. Ruotolo and immediate relatives were New York Mayor Edward Koch, Ward and Lt. Gov. Alfred DelBello.

Ruotolo, who held a master's degree in criminal justice, joined the police department in January 1981. He received two awards for meritorious service and six for exceptional police duty and was preparing to transfer to the Management Information System Division at police headquarters in Manhattan.

Agosto, who was arrested after he sought treatment at Lincoln Hospital, was in stable condition Saturday in the prison ward of Bellevue Hospital, said Administrator Peter Robinson.

The two officers who were wounded were reported in stable condition and improving Saturday at Lincoln Hospital.

Five armed inmates escape

FORT PILLOW, Tenn. (AP) — Five members of an inmate work crew pulled overpowered their guards with pistols on Saturday, then fled Fort Pillow State Prison after shooting the windows out of a pursuing car, authorities said.

Three of the five prisoners used pistols to force guards Ricky Long and Norman Hopper to surrender their weapons while the crew was on a work detail on one of the remote prison's farm fields, said state Correction Department spokesman Dick Baumbach.

They then forced Hopper to disrobe and fled in a car they had obtained, taking the officers' guns, Hopper's uniform and a walkie-talkie radio, Baumbach said.

Another prison guard, Wayne Douglas, gave chase in a prison vehicle, but the escapees shot out the windows. Officials do not know where the escapees got their getaway vehicle.

Baumbach said the escapees stole at least three cars and fired shots at another civilian car. The Tennessee Highway Patrol and members of the Lauderdale County Sheriffs Department set up roadblocks in the Fort Pillow area, about 40 miles north of Memphis.

Among the escapees was Randolph Oliver, 33, of Memphis, who was serving six life sentences plus 35 to 40 years for the murder of an elderly man and a series of rapes and robberies involving elderly women.

Other escapees were Sylvester Alexander, 33, Shelby County, serving 40 years for robbery with deadly weapon; Ronald Freeman, 41, Knox County, serving 198 years for two counts of murder; Riley Arzeneaux, 26, Shelby County, serving 25 years for second-degree murder; James Clegg, 30, Sullivan County, serving life for being a habitual criminal.

Truck show blast kills one

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — A high performance truck engine exploded during a truck pull exhibition on Saturday, killing a youth and injuring three other people in the crowd of 500, police said.

"The show, a mini-ride, was running down the track and the engine blew up and parts of the engine blew everywhere," said Patrick Fitzgerald, manager of the Prairie Capital Convention Center, where the exhibition was held.

Killed was Eric Savage, 16, of Bluffs, Ill. All of the injured were treated and released at St. John's Hospital.

The driver of the truck, Ray McIntosh, 36, of Shelbyville, Ky., was questioned by police but not charged, Mike Walton, police field commander, said.

"The driver of the tractor was revving his engine, getting prepared for the pull of the truck sled," Walton said. "He informed us it was 6,500 rpm when the clutch and the flywheel came apart, broke through the engine and threw pieces of the clutch and flywheel into the crowd."

They injured were identified by police as Thomas Powers, 33, of Springfield, Raphael Paton, 6, of Springfield, and Scott Brayton, 24, of Coldwater, Mich.

Police were treating the death as "a freak accident" that occurred during "a safe event," Walton said.

Westinghouse to close plant

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. says it will close its Offshore Power Systems nuclear power plant operation in Jacksonville permanently by Sept. 1.

Westinghouse officials on Friday cited a lack of demand for OPS' "unique product" — floating nuclear power plants — as a reason for the closing.

Westinghouse spokesman James P. Daley said OPS had only one customer, Public Service Electric & Gas of New Jersey, which canceled its contract in 1978.

Tribe receives government funds

CRANDON, Wis. (AP) — The Potawatomi tribe has received $2.22 million from the federal government as part of a settlement of a 30-year-old claim for land in five states that was taken under a 1921 treaty.

In 1981, the Potawatomi were paid $2.29 million for land in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin that was "purchased" by the government — although it never actually made any payment for it.

Tribal chairman Ken George said Friday that 20 percent of the latest payment, or $425,000, would be used for economic development projects. He said payments of $3,198 each would go to 32 elderly tribal members, and 554 who are under age 60 would get $2,558 each.

Keepers home after bites

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two San Diego Zoo reptile keepers who became "miserably ill" after being bitten by venomous Gila monsters have been released from a hospital.

Robin Greenlee, 54, and Susan Schafer, 34, were released Friday from Mercy Hospital, said zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett. The two were bitten last Wednesday while giving checkups to two of the reptiles, which inhabit desert areas in the Southwest and in northern Mexico.

Gila monsters' venom is not generally fatal but can cause vomiting, nausea, thirst, weakness and fainting, said to Dr. James Bacon, the zoo's curator of reptiles.

"The immediate after-effects were pretty agonizing," Jouett said.

Leaders meet to remove symbol

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — United in their stand against racial and religious prejudice, Sioux City religious leaders gathered Friday to remove a swastika from Mount Sinai Temple.

The anti-Semitic symbol was painted on a wall of the synagogue the night of Feb. 10, Rabbi Albert A. Gordon said.

Some 35 people, including Catholic and Protestant clergymen and two students from Roman Catholic-run Heelan High School, helped cover the swastika with white paint.

"I had hoped for this type of reaction, but this has gone beyond my fondest expectations," said Gordon.

Photographer gets $800,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A photographer who lost two fingers in a car accident has been awarded $320,000 because a negligently timed street light changed before her car cleared the intersection.

Jurors on Friday awarded Lori Sklar, 29, of New York City, a total of $800,000, ordering the city to pay 40 percent of the damages and the driver who struck her to pay 60 percent.

Ms. Sklar was waiting to make a left turn on June 8, 1978, and was struck by another car when the light turned red before she cleared the intersection, said her attorney, Thomas V. Girardi.

Assistant City Attorney Thomas Hokinson said the street light was changed last fall.

Bilandic unqualified candidate

CHICAGO (AP) — Former mayor Michael Bilandic was among three candidates seeking an Illinois Appellate Court seat who were rated as unqualified by the Chicago Council of Lawyers.

Bilandic, a lawyer, assumed the mayoralty after the death of Richard J. Daley in December 1976, and was elected to a two-year term in 1977.

But the one-time alderman, who epresented Daley's 11th Ward, lost to Jane Byrne in the February 1979 Democratic primary and disapperared from politics soon after, returning to his private law practice.

Bilandic was one of two Democrats rated unqualified for the office. Also rated unqualified were fellow Democrat Robert Burns and Republican Hugh Matchett.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Contains ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. T93, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Express OK. UMW president blames agencies for explosion

COMMODORE, Pa. (AP) — United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka charged Saturday that stricter enforcement of safety regulations would have prevented the mine explosion here that killed three workers and injured 10 others.

"We're tired of our members getting slaughtered one, two and three at a time," Trumka told a news conference in nearby Barnesboro.

"If the laws had been strictly enforced by the federal agencies and state agencies, this wouldn't have happened," he said.

Rescue teams carried the three bodies to the surface just after midnight, more than 43 hours after the apparent methane explosion, said Barry Novotny, mine manager for administration at the Greenwich Collieries No. 1 mine.

Two rescue teams of eight miners worked all day Friday to ventilate poisonous, explosive gas from a tunnel in the mine, where about 120 miners were working when the gas apparently exploded Thursday.

The bodies of Walter S. Depto, 47, and Stephen M. Parzatka, 31, both of Hastings, and Gary L. Miller, 34, of Glasgow, were found by rescue teams early Friday but could not be brought up until the mine was ventilated.

Indiana County Coroner Thomas Streams said the bodies were taken to Indiana Hospital, where autopsies showed all three men died instantly.

Parzatka and Depto died of flash burns, smoke inhalation and suffocation, Streams said. Depto also suffered a fractured skull. Miller died of flash burns, a fractured skull and a fractured left leg, he said.

Three of those injured were still hospitalized Saturday, one in serious condition, one listed as fair and one stable. One man was released Saturday, while the other six were treated after the accident and sent home.

Trumka, who flew to Pittsburgh late Friday and drove to the Allegheny Mountains site to meet with officials of UMW Local 1609, made only a brief statement to reporters and refused to answer questions.

"This is the third time in less than eight months that I've had to come to the site of an explosion," he said. "The state agencies are not enforcing pre-shift examination laws," he alleged.

Trumka also blamed the National Mine Safety and Health Adminstration for establishing an automatic $20 fine for safety violations that are not deemed "substantial and serious."

"Substantial and serious" violations are those that "almost certainly" would cause accidents leading to death or serious injury, said Frank O'Gorman, spokesman for the National Mine Safety and Health Administration in Arlington, Va.

"We can't afford to be careless in making accusations like this," he said when told of Trumka's comments. "We do not know who, if anybody should be charged in this accident. We must investigate ... thoroughly, and we will do so."

Three inmates still loose

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Deputies have recaptured six of nine prisoners who climbed down a homemade rope from a fourth-floor jail cell, and a search was on for the three who were still loose, officials said Saturday.

Deputies said they learned about the escape when they caught a man allegedly trying to crack a safe Friday night, asked where he was from, and were told, "The Rapides Parish jail."

Larry O. Jackson, the first inmate to be captured, told deputies that he escaped "about dusk" Friday with eight other men. Steven M. Beech was recaptured later Friday night and Lee Credeur, Jerry Lee Hampton, Leonard Erving and Edward D. Kirts were caught Saturday, deputies said.

The prisoners got out by sawing through cell bars and climbing down from the fourth floor on a rope made of sheets and towels, deputies said.

Details about the arrests weren't available, said Detective Ronnie Sellers.

"It's kind of mixed up, since we've got so many of them," he said.

Hampton is serving a life term for the August 1982 second-degree murder of James King. He also was convicted of manslaughter in 1973 and served six years of an 18-year term.

Among those still free Saturday were Bryan L. Brown and Richard Dennard, both 19 and charged with murder. Also free was Bruce L. Oxner.

Jackson wins mock convention

NORTH SUTTON, N.H. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson won the Democratic nomination on the second round of balloting while President Reagan easily won the GOP nomination during mock conventioins at Kearsarge Regional High School.

The pupil-delegates Friday nominated Jackson with 364 votes, exactly the number needed to win, after former Vice President Walter Mondale received only 213 votes in the first round. Jackson had 162 votes in the first round.

Mondale was second with 301 votes in the second round, followed by Colorado Sen. Gary Gart with seven votes and Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina with one vote.

Jackson got a boost when 53 votes cast in the first round by the New York State delegates for Gov. Mario Cuomo as a favorite son switched to Jackson in the second round. Other states also switched to help Jackson win.

In the first round, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio had 72 votes and Sen. Alan Cranston of California 11.

In the GOP convention, Reagan had 549 votes, Harold Stassen 62.

Beirut residents prepare for new round of war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Many of the people of west Beirut are homeless from recent artillery shellings, others are without electricity and water. But they are making it through the latest round of civil war with survival tactics finely honed by nearly nine years of practice.

"It's not like we've never been through this before," said a woman who identified herself only as Samia as she shopped for food. "People here have learned to adapt, learned to survive."

Survival in many west Beirut neighborhoods these days means doing without services most city dwellers take for granted — electricity, water and telephones. It means uncollected garbage piling up on street corners and the sound of shattered glass clattering onto the sidewalks as families sweep the remains of broken windows from their balconies.

It also can mean ducking for cover when a sniper or militiaman lets go with an automatic rifle or rocket launcher.

"It's OK if I stay close to the wall," said a young boy as he carried a plastic bag full of bread home to his family in Haret Hreik as sniper fire echoed through surrounding streets.

"If it's not OK, I run," he added.

Gerard Baladi, assistant manager at a grocery store in the Hamra neighborhood, said he hasn't had too much trouble getting goods into west Beirut since French soldiers began guarding the "Museum crossing" between east and west Beirut about a week and a half ago.

Still, prices are up. For example, a half dozen eggs, which sold for about 72 cents before the recent fighting now cost about a dollar. Produce prices at some of the corner vendors have doubled.

Greens call for prince's sterilization

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's anti-NATO Greens Party has called for Great Britain's Prince Charles to be sterilized to "take a burden" from his wife, Lady Diana, and spare her a third pregnancy.

In a statement distributed in Bonn on Friday, the Greens parliamentary faction said Prince Charles could also save money by having a vasectomy.

The British royal family announced recently that Lady Diana was pregnant with the couple's second child.

Fighting erupts in central Beirut; Syria knocks plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting erupted in central Beirut and in the hills above the U.S. Marine base early today as Syria criticized a Lebanese peace plan embraced by embattled President Amin Gemayel. Syria also put forth a counter-proposal, a Saudi official said.

Government troops used tanks and mortars to fire from mid-city positions around the Sodeco intersection against rebel militiamen firing small arms and rocket-propelled grenades from west Beirut, police reported.

They said the night-long clashes, which forced hundreds of families to flee to basements and bomb shelters, were the heaviest since Shiite Moslem militiamen wrested control of the capital's Moslem half from Gemayel's army two weeks ago.

Police said 15 people, including two soldiers, were killed and 27 wounded at the Sodeco crossing of the "green line" that splits Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors.

Fighting later tapered off, and the nearby Museum intersection, the only remaining crossing point between east and west Beirut, was reopened. French troops directed traffic as small arms fire crackled in the distance.

On the mountain ridge east of the capital, the army's hard-pressed 8th Brigade held off assaults through the night by Syrian-backed Druse insurgents on the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the American Marine base at Beirut International Airport, police said.

Western and Lebanese military sources have been anticipating a Druse onslaught on Souk el-Gharb, the army's last outpost in the central mountains. The town controls mountain routes to Gemayel's government palace in suburban Baabda.

None of the fighting involved the 1,200 Marines. President Reagan said Friday he had issued orders to start pulling them back to 6th Fleet ships near Beirut, starting this weekend. The pullout, to be finished within 30 days, is to leave 500 U.S. military trainers, guards and other personnel in Beirut.

A spokesman, Army Col. Ed McDonald, said no evacuation orders had reached the Marines by this morning.

Light arms fire also was directed early today at an Israeli position in Lebanon's eastern sector, causing no casualties, the Israeli military command said. The incident near Kfar Kouk was the first attack along the Israeli line with Syria in the Bekaa Valley in more than a month.

The military command said it did not know who was responsible for the shooting, but in the past Israel has accused the Syrians of aiding Palestinian and Moslem Shiite guerrillas wishing to strike at Israeli troops in Lebanon.

The Syrian government today criticized the eight-point plan embraced by Gemayel, saying the new plan would implement the old May 17 Lebanon-Israel troop withdrawal agreement rather than scrapping it, as Gemayel's foes have insisted.

In a statement distributed by the official Syrian news agency, the government said the eight-point plan would "provide for security arrangements guaranteeing Israel's security and a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli forces...There are the highlights of the May 17 agreement which has been rejected by all (Lebanese) nationalists and Arab forces."

The Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, met in Damascus today with Syrian President Hafez Assad and said the Syrians had presented some counter-proposals to the Gemeyal-backed plan.

"We did not get the approval of the Syrian authorities to the ideas put forward by the Lebanese president," the prince said after the meeting. "But we did reach new proposals which we will relay to the Lebanese authorities."

The prince then left Damascus for home, sending Saudi mediator Rafik Hariri to Beirut to relay the new proposals to the Lebanese government.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, asked by reporters to spell out the new proposals, said, "There is one proposal only — to abrogate the May 17 Lebanese-Israeli agreement by deeds...in reality."

Both Walid Jumblatt, the Druse leader, and Nabih Berri, head of the Shiite Amal militia, have demanded Gemayel's resignation and have rejected the Lebanese plan, which also calls for a coalition government involving the opposition and for talks to revamp Lebanon's political structure.

The current system gives the minority Christians a disproportionate share of power.

A U.S. Navy team prepares to load logistical equipment onto a landing craft at Greenbeach, south of Beirut, Lebanon, Friday. Syrian-backed Druse insurgents have driven the Lebanese army from a strategic corridor in the Chouf Mountains, leaving the Marine base surrounded by anti-government Druse and Shiite Moslem fighters.

U.S. officials admit Lebanese policies failed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, while publicly clinging to a slim hope that all is not lost in Lebanon, admit that U.S. policies there have failed, and from the president on down they are conducting a damage control operation to minimize the loss.

Reagan has downplayed the importance of Lebanon since the Lebanese army was routed by Syrian-backed Moslem militias and the administration decided to withdraw the 1,600 Marines in the multinational peackeeping force stationed at the Beirut airport.

Reagan said Friday it was "unfair" for critics to contend that U.S. efforts to negotiate peace in Lebanon have collapsed. "Lebanon's troubles are just a part of the overall problem in the Middle East and her internal strife has only made it worse," Reagan said.

But on Oct. 24, Reagan painted the stakes in more apocalyptic terms: "If Lebanon ends up under the tyranny of forces hostile to the West, not only will our strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean be threatened, but also the stability of the entire Middle East, including the vast resource areas of the Arabian peninsula."

American forces suffered 265 dead during their 17-month stay for a mission that polls showed most Americans never understood.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, the administration official most responsible for developing U.S. policy in Lebanon, went to the Bahamas for a vacation weekend. He was there Friday when Syria rejected a peace plan that may have represented the last hope of American-backed President Amin Gemayel to keep his office.

At least one of Shultz's senior State Department colleagues was known to have registered disbelief that Shultz would leave Washington "while Lebanon was going to hell." Other officials said Shultz was tired and needed the rest.

Yet another official said Shultz appeared to be "washing his hands" of Lebanon, disappointed that his recommendations to maintain the American military presence in Lebanon had been overruled.

Administration officials said privately that Jordan's King Hussein and Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak, who met with Reagan last week, voiced frustration that the administration had ignored the broader Middle East peace while focusing its attention on Lebanon.

Not any of a half-dozen State Department officials would argue that the administration's policy hadn't failed in Lebanon. They refused to be quoted by name.

"It is a serious diplomatic defeat," said Robert E. Hunter, a senior fellow at the Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies, who served in the Carter administration. "Our credibility is very seriously jeopardized. It is not a disaster, but it is bad."

Chernenko inherits Andropov's problems

By ROXINNE ERVASTI

An Analysis

MOSCOW (AP) — When Konstantin U. Chernenko took the Kremlin helm last Monday, he pointed out that his late predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov, had been striving to "overcome the difficulties which our country encountered at the turn of the '80s."

Now those difficulties, inherited from the Brezhnev era, are Chernenko's. And a few new ones have been added, most notably the challenge of finding a way to resume arms-control talks with the United States.

The Soviet Union's thorniest problems are deep-rooted:

— A huge technology gap with the West drags down Soviet productivity and stunts earnings from exports.

— Demographic trends mean the labor force is shrinking while the population is "graying."

— Vast amounts of food still must be imported.

— Mineral resources are being exhausted in the western Soviet Union, requiring much costlier extraction projects in the remote east.

Ordinary Soviet citizens — or at least the more candid among them — express cynicism about the party and its tired propaganda slogans.

After Chernenko, 72, was selected as party general secretary succeeding Andropov, who died Feb. 9 at age 69, the reaction of Muscovites indicated they expect no improvements in their lot and no change in the Kremlin leadership's image as a weary gerontocracy.

The common man's search for ways to beat the system — to stock up on food, to find decent-quality clothing, to track down other scarce consumer goods — taxes the people so much that they have little energy or initiative left at the workplace.

Andropov, in power just 15 months, had launched a "labor discipline" campaign to boost productivity, but the Soviet economy rebounded only slightly in 1983 — though the policy could still have great impact in the long term.

Deteriorating relations with the West, lack of progress toward normalizing relations with China, and the four-year-old Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan's guerrilla war further strain the economy, by boosting military spending.

These strains also detract from the Soviets' ability to exert influence in the developing world, where such Soviet-backed states as Mozambique and Angola are making overtures to the West.

If Reagan offers no major concessions in the arms talks, the Kremlin under Chernenko may be kept busy trying to decide whether and how to resume the negotiations in the next few months without losing face.

Chernenko, as a longtime Brezhnev protege, must be considered a champion of 1970s-style detente. Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, after a meeting with the new Soviet chief Wednesday, said Chernenko repeatedly used the word "detente."

In his acceptance speech to the party Central Committee last Monday, Chernenko said the Soviet Union favors "serious, equal, constructive talks" and would participate in "full measure with all states that are prepared to help by practical deeds (to) lessen international tension."

These were Andropov themes — that the Soviet Union would not be bullied into concessions at the negotiating table and the United States had to demonstrate through actions that it was serious in wanting to reach accords.

Chernenko also has pledged a continuation of Andropov policies focusing on the economy.

The late party leader adopted a carrot-and-stick approach on economic matters, telling managers and bureaucrats they would be held more accountable for failures, and laying down a mixture of incentives and penalties aimed at improving performance.

According to Soviet statistics, labor productivity in 1983 rose 3.5 percent over 1982, industrial output was up 4 percent and agricultural production up 3.6 percent — modest improvements considering that 1982 was one of the worst years for the Soviet economy since World War II.

Farmers, cattlemen protest Spanish government's policies

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Thousands of farmers and cattlemen, preceded by tractors and some lambs, demonstrated in central Madrid on Saturday to protest farm policies of the socialist government.

Police estimated the protesters numbered 30,000 while organizers said the figure was 50,000.

Protesters said they wanted the government to consult them about the policies, including setting prices. "We do want to be heard and respected," said one of the placards.

Spain's Agrarian Federations Union called for the demonstration.

France to send aid to Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — France signed agreements Saturday to give $67.5 million worth of wheat and credit to Tunisia, where an estimated 200 people died in bread riots last month.

Tunisia, in northern Africa, is a former French colony.

France agreed to provide 40,000 tons of wheat, valued at nearly $5 million, $48 million worth of credit to purchase French farm products and $14.5 million worth of loans payable at 3 percent interest over 25 years.

After a week of rioting in Tunis and other cities, the Tunisian government rescinded price hikes on bread and other staples.

Protesters penetrate air base

WOENSDRECHT, Netherlands (AP) — About 150 anti-nuclear demonstrators on Saturday penetrated the Dutch air force base at Woensdrecht, where the goverment is considering putting NATO missiles, an air force spokesman said.

They were arrested and released, said the spokesman, Col. D. Van Muilwijk. He said no injuries or damage to the base were reported.

Facing broad public opposition, Premier Ruud Lubbers' center-right government has put off saying if it would definitely accept 48 nuclear cruise missiles in the Netherlands. The missiles are among 572 U.S.-made rockets NATO is deploying in Western Europe.

Van Muilwijk said the demonstrators were discovered after local police noticed an unusual number of cars parked in the vicinity of the base, much of which is open pastureland surrounded by chest-high barbed wire fencing.

Ethnic Chinese flee Cambodia

NONG SAMET, Cambodia (AP) — At 6:30 one recent day, Khim Chhun Heng, a 31-year-old medical student and son of an ethnic Chinese businesman in Phnom Penh, packed up some clothes and medical instruments and hopped onto the back of a truck with his wife and 6-year-old child.

The truck let them off at Sisophon in northwest Cambodia and after a few days of walking they were here in a major refugee camp near the Thai frontier.

They found themselves in familiar company.

Many refugees and international aid officials at Nong Samet say hundreds of ethnic Chinese from trading families have streamed here in recent months to escape what they describe as a growing crackdown on private traders in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

Government workers disaffected with communist strictures have been trickling out of the capital for years, but increasingly large numbers of professionals and low-level officials from Phnom Penh are also making the journey of more than 300 miles.

While the extent of the exodus is unclear, any outpouring of the educated and the skilled could weaken the Cambodian government that was installed in Phnom Penh by the invading Vietnamese in early 1979 after ousting the communist Khmer Rouge. Cambodia's middle and upper class was decimated during the Khmer Rouge reign of terror after the communist victory in Indochina in 1975 and the pro-Vietnamese government has tried to attact the survivors.

REFUGEE STORIES suggest an attempt by Vietnam and the Cambodian regime to control what

Touton
Civilian chief of refugee camp

apparently has become a freewheeling economy in Phnom Penh through the imposition of new taxes on private trade and by increasing Vietnamese dominance in administrative ranks.

Nong Samet's civilian chief, a man who goes by the name Touton, says about 60 percent of the 2,712 refugees who arrived here between November and the end of January are from Phnom Penh; a quarter of them are ethnic Chinese.

Officials of the United Nations Border Relief Operation said they found that last October, when the exodus apparently began, about 15 percent of the new arrivals here came from Phnom Penh. They described that as "significantly higher" that before.

Some diplomats in Bangkok, Thailand's capital, said a Vietnamese-style crackdown may be under way against the city's non-socialist economy.

Until recently, Cambodian peasants made up the bulk of refugee arrivals here. They mainly were fleeing famine and war in the northwestern provinces of Siem Reap, Battambang and Oddar Meanchey, which border on Thailand.

REFUGEE OFFICIALS say the only previous occasion in recent years in which Cambodians fled specific political or economic campaigns was a crackdown in the middle of last year on Cambodian-resistance sympathizers in the northwest provinces.

Nong Samet, which now houses about 45,000 civilians and several thousand anti-government guerrilla fighters, is controlled by the new Khmer People's National Liberation Front, which opposes Vietnam's presence in Cambodia. Khmer is the name of the native people of Cambodia.

Refugees say the taxes on trading in Phnom Penh were imposed in early 1983 or even earlier, and gradually were increased so much that some businesses had to be abandoned.

One such refugee, Sing Chung, a 27-year-old ethnic Chinese trader in Phnom Penh, said he paid new taxes of 90 riel ($30) on his monthly receipts of 1,000 riel ($330), leaving nothing for him after he paid his rent and utilities.

A senior international aid official who visited Phnom Penh in mid-January said the government now demands a 50 percent share of private business.

BUT HE AND other sources said they had not heard of any drive aimed specifically at the Chinese.

There are no independent, reliable figures on the numbers of ethnic Chinese or traders in Phnom Penh.

Last September, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in Hanoi said many ethnic Chinese who fled into Vietnam during the Khmer Rouge years returned later to Cambodia and that they numbered 61,400 in five provinces and cities, including 40,000 in Phnom Penh. The capital's overall population is officially given as about 500,000.

Refugees and diplomats also say that Hanoi, impatient over what it sees as the Cambodian government's slow pace in creating a party and state organization to run the country, has recently been taking more and more responsibilities away from Cambodian workers. Among Nong Samet's new refugee residents are doctors, medical students, teachers and other professionals.

Refugees from Phnom Penh also cite a recent large influx of Vietnamese settlers as a reason for their flight.

SEVERAL AID officials also theorize that word may have filtered back to Phnom Penh that the United States, under newly relaxed guidelines, is now resettling larger numbers of Cambodian refugees.

Many recent refugees from Phnom Penh stayed only briefly at Nong Samet, then slipped into Thailand in hopes of joining relatives abroad.

Large numbers of Phnom Penh residents have relatives who were resettled abroad just after the Khmer Rouge takeover of Cambodia at the end of the Indochina War in 1975.

Sudanese troops kill 30 rebels

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — A military commander says Sudanese troops chased and killed 30 rebels who had attacked a Nile River passenger steamer earlier this week, the official news agency reported today.

The army "is now in full control of all areas in south Sudan which outlaws infiltrate to carry out their criminal sabotage activities," the agency quoted Gen. Abdel-Rahman Sewar-el-Dahab as saying Friday.

The Transport and Communications Ministry said 720 of the passengers aboard the Hegliga and the six barges it was towing at the time of the attack last Monday were accounted for and 80 were still missing.

But the Sudan news agency, quoting what it called an authoritative source, reported this afternoon that everyone but 14 passengers and two crew members had been accounted for.

The ministry statement said investigations were underway to determine whether the missing people had been killed or had managed to escape from the steamer and barges during the attack.

Delegation seeks facts on MIAs

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The highest-level U.S. government delegation to visit Vietnam since the end of the war heads to Hanoi on Sunday in an effort to resolve the fates of some 2,500 Americans servicemen who did not return.

The five-member team will be led by U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage and will include Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families, a private lobby group concerned with the issue, said the Vietnam News Agency.

It is the highest-level team to travel to Vietnam since the war in Vietnam ended in 1975, U.S. officials said. Armitage visited Hanoi in February 1982 when he was a deputy assistant secretary.

The U.S. government said in a statement the trip was not related to reports that Vietnam was prepared to hand over the remains of three Americans to the Vietnam Veterans of America. But it said the visit was "mutually agreed on by the two sides," and the U.S. government hoped any remains would be handed over on a "government-to-government" basis.

Both Armitage and Mrs. Griffiths, who arrived in Bangkok aboard a special aircraft, declined to talk to journalists. They are to return to Bangkok from Hanoi next Wednesday.

The other members of the team would be Richard Childress of the National Security Council and two officials from the U.S. State Department, the Vietnam News Agency said.

"The governments of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the United States of America have expressed their belief that the issue of Americans missing in Vietnam is a humanitarian issue which would be settled through cooperation and the good will of both sides," the agency said.

Last month the three communist Indochinese nations of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos agreed to pool any knowledge they may have of Americans missing in Indochina and to work with American non-governmental organizations in the search for them.

The three countries, however, have insisted that no Americans are left alive in Indochina — contrary to the belief of some Americans who have charged Washington with failing to make a proper MIA accounting.

U.S. picks up silver

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Katarina Witt of East Germany, a Brooke Shields look-alike, won the gold medal in women's figure skating at the Winter Olympics Saturday. American Rosalynn Sumners, with one perfect 6.0 for style, settled for silver.

The bronze went to Kira Ivanova of the Soviet Union, and in fourth place was Tiffany Chin, of Toluca Lake, Calif. Elaine Zayak of Paramus, N.J., was in sixth.

The 1984 Winter Olympics was just a day from ending, and now the United States was pinning its only other hope for a medal on twins on skiis.

Meanwhile, a Finnish woman, cross-country skier Marja-Liisa Hamalainen, became the first three-gold medalist of the Games.

THE UNITED States moved into sole possession of fifth place in the medals race with Sumners' silver. It now has six, three gold and three silver. And its last chance for a seventh medal, a very outside chance, fell to the Mahre brothers, Phil and Steve, in the slalom.

In Washington, President Reagan, answering questions posed by the newspaper Oslo Bodjenje of Yugoslavia, called the Winter Olympics "exciting and inspirational" no matter who wins.

Witt, wearing a raspberry dress with matching berets in her swept-back brown hair, is the second East German woman to win the gold medal in figures. Annett Poetzsch did it in 1980.

"It's the happiest moment of my life," the 18-year-old Witt said. "I saw Roslynn skate and did not think I could win."

SUMNERS, DRESSED in white with sequined "V's" in front and back, presented a lively, swan-like program in the free-style that pleased the judges artistically. The Italian judge gave her the 6.0, while the Yugoslav judge gave her a 5.6. She also got four 5.9s and three 5.8s.

In technicals, however, she got two 5.6s, one 5.7, four 5.8s and one 5.9.

Witt misstepped near the beginning of her program, but it did not seem to hurt her scores. In technicals, she had one 5.9, seven 5.8s and one 5.7. For artistic, she had four 5.9s, four 5.8s and one 5.7.

Sumners' second-place finish erased any chance of Americans sweeping the gold medals in figures. Scott Hamilton had won the men's gold.

"I'm very pleased with the 6.0," said Sumners. "It was nice to end a career having won a 6.0. I was really excited about that.

"It was not my best performance. It was a real challenge to go out there tonight. I'm proud of myself, that I went out and faced the challenge."

Sumners, of Edmonds, Wash., held the lead after the compulsories, but Witt won the short program and moved into first, where she remained.

Chin showed again why she beat both Sumners and Zayak in the free-style part of the World Championships last month in Salt Lake City. The 16-year-old now becomes a prime contender for gold in 1988 at Calgary.

She started with a triple flip, but two-footed on landing. She then completed three other triples in her program and a host of "Chin Spins."

"I was out there having a good time," Chin said. "I have many areas where I have to improve. I'm still young, yet I still have to skate more like a senior lady, and I have to become faster and more aggressive.

"That will come. I will work on it."

Zayak, who was 12th after the short program, skated one of her best programs, opening with a difficult split triple loop-double loop-double loop combination jump.

Her marks ranged from 5.6s to 5.8s for technical merit, but her marks for style — mostly 5.5s — pulled her down.

THE MAHRES, in their last Olympics, have been skiing poorly, and a win by either of them would almost be a shock.

Palo Duro eliminates Lee in bi-district battle, 60-50

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It was labeled a bi-district basketball game. It featured Amarillo Palo Duro's girls in the blue trunks and Midland Lee in the maroon trunks at the Lee gym Saturday night. It could have passed for a main event boxing match.

The 60-50 victory by Palo Duro will go down in the basketball history books, but the knockout punch may have come in the first quarter when Lee's Tunya Mayberry went out with a broken nose. Folks, this was shots to the face kind of stuff.

"Well, it was a physical game on both parts, especially in the latter stages of the game," said Palo Duro coach Pearle Trimble, evidently forgetting that Mayberry's nose was sprayed across her face in the first period. "You really can't blame the girls for going at it like this because it was an intense game from start to finish."

IN ALL, 56 fouls were called in the two hour and 15 minute marathon. Not only did Lee lose Mayberry by the right hook, but also lost four other players to fouls. Palo Duro lost two players to fouls. Toss in 33 turnovers by Lee and another 29 by Palo Duro and you see that this was not a game of beauty. It was a game of survival.

The Lady Dons proved on this night to be the best at survival and at throwing the best punches in the clutch while raising its impressive record to 21-2. Lee leaves the playoff picture quickly with a 23-8 season mark and now stand at 1-5 in the playoff experience over the last seven years.

Lee's hopes probably fell with Mayberry in the first period. It's tough to lose your second leading scorer and top rebounder in such an important game. Mayberry, who was averaging over 12 points a game, scored four in the first period.

That put a lot of pressure on leading scorer Felicia Farias, who responded with 23 points before fouling out with 3:33 left in the game. Lee was dead at that point with no big scoring punch to take up the slack. Farias hit eight of 14 shots from the field and seven of 11 from the charity line.

"After Tunya went down, we gave it our best shot," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "Anytime you take one of your top scorers and rebounders out of the game, you can expect some trouble against a good team. And Palo Duro is a good team. Physical, but good. Kids were going down like flies out there."

LEE'S STACY Harmon was the only other Reb in double figures, finishing with 13 points, but she did not have a good shooting night. She hit only three of eight shots from the field. Lee was playing almost like a crippled race horse before it was all over.

The big problem Lee couldn't handle was the Dons' Vanessa Wells, who canned 26 points on a nine of 17 shooting eye from the field and seven of 11 from the line.

On top of that, Katrina Hardy added 16 points, despite hitting only six of 15 from the field.

Palo Duro held a 16-14 lead at the end of the first period as Hardy canned eight of her 16 points. The game was tied seven times in that period and Palo Duro led six times to Lee's two.

But with Mayberry travelling to the hospital, the Dons outscored Lee by a 12-2 margin to open the second quarter and led 30-23 at the half as Farias scored seven of Lee's nine points in the period.

The first half ended with 25 fouls being called and 33 turnovers committed by both teams.

With Palo Duro working itself into foul trouble in the third period, Lee made a run to pull out the victory. Lee outscored Palo Duro 16-10 in the period and with nine seconds left in the third stanza, Lee had tied the game at 39 as Harmon scored six of her 13 points to go with six more from Farias.

BUT NOW Lee was beginning to feel the foul pinch after the spurt and Palo Duro erupted for 11 unanswered points early in the fourth period to put the game out of reach. When the dust cleared, Lee had five players out of the game with smashed faces or five fouls.

Palo Duro owned the final period with a 20-11 advantage over Lee and the final 10-point margin.

"There were a lot of turnovers and some were unforced," said Trimble. "But most of the turnovers can be attributed to the intensity on the floor. Lee is a physical team too.

"We had the game in hand, but foul trouble may have helped us lose our momemtum in the third period. It was a game of see-saw momentum. I told our girls in the fourth quarter that we had come too far to fold now and we went out took control of the game."

Palo Duro now moves to the area round of the playoffs against El Paso Parkland at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Midland's Chaparral Center. That game will be part of a doubleheader area playoff as Amarillo High will take on El Paso Eastwood at 8 p.m. The two winners will advance to Friday and Saturday's Region I girls tournament, which will also be held at Chaparral Center.

MHS hoping for warmup game

Bi-district to be played Friday or Saturday

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Now that Midland High's Bulldogs have survived a nerve testing District 4-5A race, MHS coach Jack Stephenson and his troops will have a little time to think about its first playoff test of 1983.

The Bulldogs, 27-7 on the year, will square off against 24-3 Amarillo High either Friday or Saturday in Levelland. The exact date has not been nailed down due to the fact that Levelland's girls are in the playoffs and they want to keep their facility open in case they need it.

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, worked out the details with Amarillo officials Saturday morning.

"We should know early in the week which night we will play on, but we have their new gym locked up for either Friday or Saturday night, whichever is free to us," said Bartosh.

"Levelland seems like a perfect site. They have a new facility and will handle anything we expect for the game. Both schools felt like the neutral site was the best since the distance between the two communities is so great."

Tickets for the game may be purchased at the door in Levelland. Ticket prices for the bi-district contest will be $3 for adults and $2 for students. All season passes will be suspended for this contest.

STEPHENSON IS hoping that the game will be played Friday. "Midland High is having its Catoico event Saturday and I don't see how we can play then. I don't think that conflict will work to the benefit of the game."

Amarillo High, a team that had an 18-game winning streak during the season, won the District 3-5A title last Tuesday with a victory over second place Lubbock Monterey. Monterey will face Odessa Permian, the 4-5A champs, in a bi-district game this week at a time still to be decided.

Amarillo High has already set up a warmup contest with Class 4A power Pampa. That contest will take place Monday in Borger at 7:45 p.m.

Stephenson wants to schedule a warmup contest also, but no arrangements have been made with another team as of Saturday.

"I would like to schedule a game with Permian. I think it would draw a good crowd and do both teams a lot of good," said Stephenson, who would like a warmup contest Tuesday night.

THE BI-DISTRICT winner between Amarillo and Midland will advance to the area round of the state playoffs. The winner will face either El Paso Jefferson (27-3) or El Paso Eastwood (14-17). Those two teams meet Friday in a bi-district doubleheader on the UTEP campus Friday.

The winner of the Monterey-Permian bi-district playoff will advance against the winner of the El Paso Riverside (24-5) and El Paso Burges (22-9) bi-district game. The El Paso games will take place at 6 and 8 p.m. MST Friday.

The two winners coming out of the area contests will advance to the Region I playoff tournament, which is set for Friday and Saturday, March 2-3, at Midland's Chaparral Center. Two Region I teams will also come out of the Fort Worth area to complete the four-team Region I playoff field. The winner of the Region I tournament becomes a member of the Final Four and will advance to Austin for the final two rounds of the state tournament.

It has been a good year athletically for Amarillo High. The Sandies won the District 3-5A football championship, but was eliminated in bi-district in a 30-3 loss to Midland Lee, a state finalist. AHS has now won the 3-5A basketball championship and this time faces Midland High, another second place team from 4-5A.

THE BULLDOGS posted a 10-4 district record to win second place outright Friday with a 58-44 win over Lee. The Bulldogs captured second place without a district playoff when Abilene High booted a 20-point halftime lead against Abilene Cooper on the last night of regular season play Friday.

"It's really nice to win the district championship, but ever since the UIL made it possible for two teams to go to the playoffs, getting into the playoffs is the No. 1 goal," said Stephenson. "Every coach I've talked with the last two years, say the important thing is to make the playoffs and go on. We've done that and now have a chance to rise to the occassion."

Lee's football team went to the state finals as a second place district team and now the Bulldogs have a chance to keep Midland in the playoff picture. Second place seems to be the place to be for Midland teams this year.

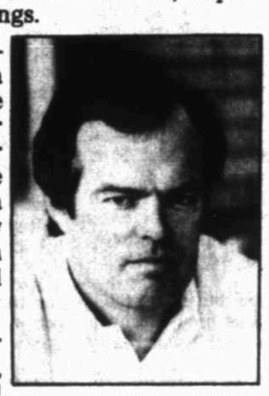
Purgatory

It's not the end of the earth

Purgatory ski area is in the midst of a $250 million development program and it may surprise a lot of people to learn that Midlanders are actively involved in a project that may land the resort near Durango among the top five ski areas in Colorado...right up there with Vail, Aspen and Steamboat Springs.



Joseph I. O'Neill, III

While the southwest Colorado area may be a favorite winter or summer vacation haunt for West Texans, one may wonder, how a Midland family became involved in a ski operation, and why Purgatory?

"When my father (Joseph I. O'Neill, Jr.) came to Midland as an independent landman in 1948 and went into partnership with Billy Castleman, it was Walter Duncan of LaSalle, Ill., who provided the capitol for the oil business," explains Joseph I. O'Neill, III.

"We participated in a lot of exploration with Ray Duncan, who lived in Durango and was to become the founder of Purgatory." In fact, two of the O'Neill boys settled there. Kevin operated a restaurant and Michael is still a Quarter Horse rancher outside Durango.

"No oil production was found in the southwest Colorado area, but when Ray decided to open a ski area, he asked us (now, O'Neill Associates), to join in."

The elder O'Neill went from Philadelphia's Mainline to play end for Notre Dame in the mid-1930s, where he was a teammate of William Shakespeare, not the original, but a tailback for the Irish.

He also played on the first College All-Star team to beat the pro champions (Chicago Bears), in 1937. Among his teammates were Sammy Baugh, Vince Lombardi and Bud Wilkinson.

In the summers between semesters at law school, he played semipro baseball in the Philadelphia area and eventually went into the FBI. Joe, Jr., was in Los Angeles and had run out of room for adherence to Horace Greeley's famed counsel, so he decided to head east to seek his fortune in Midland in '48.

PURGATORY GOT its start back in 1965, but why Purgatory, sequestered deep and inaccessible in the San Juans?

"For the obvious reasons," explains young Joe O'Neill, who represents the family on the Purgatory board of directors. "It was a great mountain and beautiful area."

Unlike Vail and Aspen, which opened for business as virtually full-blown resort areas, Purgatory began modestly, adding a lift every few years. Not too many people were aware that it was there, even though the Rio Grande-Silverton narrow gauge was a big summer tourist attraction. Purgatory...it was 26 miles from town and, if you were a skier, you had to go look for it.

"Over the years, cash was generated internally for the development of the mountain," O'Neill explains, "There was no borrowing."

The ghostly remains of the mining-camps that scar the high country, give the majestic San Juans an aura of mystery. One of the modern day mysteries is, how come, in the face of an economic downcycle, did anyone feel bold enough to embark upon $250 million of expansion-development?

According to O'Neill, it's a matter of good business, good organization and letting nature take its course, so to speak.

"Over the years, we have assembled a first class organization and we feel now we can support the growth. It's simply a case of natural progression."

"Our goal from the beginning has been not to dilute the value of the stock or sell land at the base of the mountain, as so many areas have been forced to do." Consequently, Purgatory's development has been slow, but sure.

"The highest return in a ski operation is the rentals at the base of the mountain," informs the 38-year-old O'Neill. "The lowest return is from the ski lift."

So, if you sell off your base property to raise capitol, you are cutting your own throat as far as future profits go.

Part of the base pedestrian village was completed last summer, and, in fact, was dedicated by Gov. Richard Lamm last month.

EACH PHASE of development begins with the sale of proposed condominiums, again a case of internally generated funds. "It means we no longer own the residences above, but we do retain the commercial property on the ground floor of each new edifice."

So far, the economic climate hasn't seemed to penetrate the Colorado mountains. "Last summer, our first, we pre-sold 28 condos in 53 days. In the second building 40 of 44 condos were sold and now we are selling in the third building," due for construction this summer.

Although Durango does its heaviest tourist business in the summer, Purgatory is thought of as primarily a winter resort.

"Our intention is to establish Purgatory as a year-round destination. With each condominium sale, there is an escrow fund of $4,000 designated for the building of an 18-hole golf course, to be located on what is considered the backside of the mountain at the foot of chairlifts 3 and 5." O'Neill, a graduate of Notre Dame who took his masters at the University of Michigan, explains.

"If the course isn't constructed by 1993, then the money will be returned."

THE EXPANSION of the ski area will coincide with the growth of the village. A new lift, No. 8, will provide access to 20 per cent more skiable slopes. The opening is scheduled for the summer of 1985.

In fact, the number of beds available are directly related to the skiable area. Allowable slope expansion permitted by the Forestry Dept. is related directly to the number of beds in an area.

Right now, Purgatory has a "comfortable capacity" of 5,300 skiers per day. "During the holidays we handle over 6,000 a day, which creates lift lines of 15 to 30 minutes. We have maybe 20 days like that a season."

"An addition such as a new lift, condominium, or Dante's restaurant on top of the mountain suffers a one-year lag. That is, it won't be reflected in figures for a year. For example, Dante's was added for last season, but the increase hasn't been reflected until this year. In 1983, total attendance was 121,389 skiers at this time of the year. This year it is 135,174 for the same period, so I think we are well on our way to reaching our budgeted goal of 200,000 for the year," said O'Neill.

The initial phase of the $250 million Purgatory expansion, completed last summer, is visible from the brink of Lower Hades. The maintenance building and parking lot eventually will be all part of pedestrian village. Before the present program, the building on the right was it.

Best snow months, in order, at Purgatory are January, February and March in that order, although December was exceptionally good this winter. Purgatory hopes to give Mother Nature a helping hand to lengthen the good-skiing season. "There is always sufficient snow at the top of the mountain in November and December for skiing. With the addition of snow-making machine, we hope it assures us that the mountain will be as good in November as in January."

DESPITE THE ambitious expansion program, how can Purgatory, tucked away in the remote southwest corner of Colorado, expect to compete with the more accessible, better-known places like Vail, Aspen, Steamboat, Crested Butte, etc...?

For O'Neill, those are fighting words, "It's true we are a long way from Denver, compared to other Colorado ski areas, but our market really is the southwest—Phoenix, Tucson and Los Angeles. People can reach Purgatory without the hazard of crossing any mountain passes in the winter.

"We have another advantage. Purgatory is the closest ski resort to a jet port in the United States. LaPlata Airport outside of Durango is just 30 miles away. Frontier provides commercial jet service right into Durango, non-stop from Dallas and Denver. If Frontier, ever gets a direct line to Durango from Texas cities like Midland, we'll have everybody licked."

Even with less than ideal transportation by air to Durango, Purgatory is flexing its muscles. "Right now we are right behind Crested Butte, the No. 8 ski area in Colorado, I don't think it will be too long before we are in the top five."

Some mornings Olson feels half a century old

AN AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — There are mornings when Billy Olson feels a half century old.

A lifetime of catapulting oneself over objects almost as tall as three Kareem Abdul Jabbars can make a person feel twice 25.

"It's hurting me," Olson said recently before yet another meet on the long road to the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. "I know a guy 25 shouldn't have trouble sleeping because his back is out of whack.

"It's not normal to tear your body up. Pole vaulting is an event that leads itself to physical destruction. It puts a strain on all parts of your body."

He should know.

He's been participating in the sport since the 11th grade. That's a lot of tough tumbles into vaulting pits.

OLSON SWEARS he'll strongly consider putting away his poles if he can accomplish two things this summer:

— Establish a world outdoor record.

— Win the gold medal in the Olympics in Los Angeles in August.

"If I do those two things there would be a 99 per cent chance I'd retire," he said. "I don't want to turn into a skid row, pole vaulting hobo."

Olson also doesn't want to be a physical wreck.

"I've got a 1976 junker (car) that's in better shape than my body is," Olson jokes.

Even minor hurts can cause big problems in a sport where the goal is to reach an object 19 feet above the ground.

An example would be the 1983 season when Olson suffered a severely pulled hip muscle in a collision at the Abilene Christian University track.

"It was a tiny thing but to a pole vaulter it was devastating," Olson said.

He never vaulted up to form the rest of the season.

"I'm just lucky it didn't happen this year," Olson said. "Now I'm on the verge of being back. I'm in good enough shape to break world records."

Olson owned the world indoor best until Russian Sergei Bubka vaulted 19 feet, ¾ inches several weeks ago, beating Billy's old indoor mark by a half inch.

But look out for charmin' Billy in 1984.

"I've got some new equipment (a cata-pole) that is really helping my confidence factor," he said. "The pole is pre-bent and it is yellow. It sort of looks like a banana."

Olson said "With the right jump on the right day I feel I could get into the 19-feet, 6-inches range."

He recently vaulted 18-8¼ for a meet record in the Millrose Games at New York to officially signal his return.

"I'm in good enough shape right now to set a world record," said Olson, who is sporting a beard he promises to shave if he reaches his twin goals.

Olson, a public relations major when he was at Abilene Christian, has made some commercials and that, plus appearance money, has kept him in training and away from the employment office. He also receives warmups, shoes and plane fares from a shoe company.

"I guess you can say I've made a living off pole vaulting but my body is telling me it's not fun any more," Olson said. "I'm excited about this season. If things break right it will be my last one."

Connors, Noah meet in finals

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and second-seeded Yannick Noah both needed three sets to win their semifinal matches Saturday in the $255,000 Congoleum Classic men's tennis tournament.

The pair will meet in Sunday's championship singles match. The winner will collect $34,000 while the runner-up will earn $17,000.

Connors struggled against fourth-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain, but regrouped at the end in winning a 6-7, 6-0, 7-6 marathon. The score of the third-set tie-breaker was 7-5.

Noah, of France, also had a difficult time against third-seeded Jimmy Arias before escaping with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 triumph.

Noah will be looking for his first-ever victory over Connors, who has won the four previous matches between the players.

In his match against Higueras, Connors was forced to play a slowdown, baseline game. The match lasted three hours, 15 minutes, with the first set taking 90 minutes to play.

In the opening set, Connors broke Higueras and then held service to take a 4-2 lead. At that point, it seemed that Connors was in control, but Higueras broke Connors to tie the set at 5-5 after fighting off three set points.

Each player then held service, setting up a tie-breaker, which Higueras, the tournament's defending champion, won 7-3.

The second set, however, was quite different as Connors breezed to his one-sided victory.

Connors then took a 2-0 lead in the third set, but Higueras then broke Connors' service and the players traded games until they were tied 4-4. The two broke service in each of the next four games to set up the tie-breaker.

Noah won his match from Arias by breaking service in the ninth game of the third set, the only service break of the set. That made it 5-4 before Noah held service to end the match.

Arias, who defeated Noah at the U.S. Open in the last match between the two, has had some trouble with his right arm, but he said that wasn't why he lost Saturday.

Bulldogs use strong finish to claim 4-5A swim title

Midland High's breast stroke, 400 free relay leaves Bobcats in wake

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Midland High's boys came through in the late going Saturday, and then held on to win the District 4-5A swimming championship at the City of Midland's Mabee Memorial pool.

With two events remaining, MHS held only a slim 65-62 lead over second-place San Angelo.

In the next to last race, the 100 breast stroke, Angelo's John Murray took first, but it was by the slimmest of margins. Murray edged Bulldog David Hartman by two-hundreths of a second, but Hartman's second place coupled with a solid third from Paul Harris of MHS made the difference.

Harris and Hartman's placings gave MHS an eight-point bulge entering the final event, the 400 free relay. But, MHS raced to a three-second win over San Angelo to settle any doubts.

And as a result, Bulldog coach Jesse Marsh got thrown in the COM pool. But Marsh has two weeks to dry off before MHS goes at it again. With the district win wrapped up, MHS moves on to regional competition March 2-3 at Texas Tech in Lubbock.

In the girls competition, Abilene Cooper lost the 400 free relay to San Angelo, but still managed a 75-71 win to take the district title. MHS finished a distant third with 55 points, but 10 individual girls and two relay teams from MHS will advance to Lubbock.

BASICALLY, IT was a good day for the purple and gold.

"It feels good," Marsh said, still dripping from his pool excursion after the meet when exuberant MHS swimmers gave the coach the heave. "We came up a long way. At the end of yesterday, on paper we were 10 points down to San Angelo. Today they just got fired up."

MHS again got help from several unexpected sources, and the net result is the surprise won't linger. MHS is finally starting to build depth, and it comes at an excellent time for the Bulldogs. The regionals provide MHS with two weeks of rest, and at the time MHS seems primed to start peaking.

"THIS WAS nice," said Marsh, "The reason is because last year, although our girls won our boys lost by one point, and one race by seven-thousandths of a second to Abilene Cooper."

MHS boys took firsts in the 200 I.M. (Hartman), the 50 and 100 free (Andrew Jordan), the 100 fly (Mike Seay) and in the 100 back (John Brenner). Brenner's win was truly exceptional and important. He wasn't counted on to score heavily entering the meet, but his job Saturday was instrumental in the MHS win.

Perhaps for the first time all year, MHS posted a real team victory. Everyone in the water for MHS met expectations. Many exceeded them and thus Marsh's squad had a victory most satisfying.

"It was very, very close. Paul Harris came from seventh place all the way to second," said Marsh. "Brenner, we knew he could do it. He took it to them right from the start. We had Ricky Perkins come up. Mike Seay ran a super race."

In the boys competition, MHS totaled 88 points to San Angelo's 76. Cooper finished third with 65 and Midland Lee took fourth with 23 points. Lee also nabbed fourth in the girls half with 38 points.

AT THE regionals, Midland High will be one of four teams shooting for the state meet at the University of Texas at Austin next month. Regional defending champ El Paso Eastwood awaits the Bulldogs in Lubbock along with El Paso Coronado and Amarillo High. The Sandies provided MHS with tough competition in January at the MHS Invitational, the Bulldog's last event prior to the district meet.

"We've had some good teams, back in the early and middle '70's," said Marsh. "Our last regional champ was in 1975. These are the same type swimmers. They are tough mentally. They just took it to them. I'm very pleased."

Nance, Davis team up to rip Rockets, 126-104

NBA

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Nance scored 27 points and Walter Davis added 24 as the Phoenix Suns buried the Houston Rockets 126-104 in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

The Suns, who broke a three-game losing streak, held a 74-64 lead with 4:53 left in the third period when Davis and Nance took over.

Davis scored eight points and Nance six in a 16-4 surge that gave 24-30 Phoenix a comfortable 90-68 bulge at the end of the third quarter.

Houston coach Bill Fitch and rookie center Ralph Sampson each received two technical fouls during the Phoenix run and were ejected. It was the first ejection of the season for both Sampson and Fitch.

Pacers 118, Cavaliers 93

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Clark Kellogg scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half and Jerry Sichting and George Johnson each scored 18 points as the Indiana Pacers routed the Cleveland Cavaliers 118-93.

Indiana, 15-37, snapped a four-game losing streak and also ended Cleveland's winning streak at five games. The Cavaliers fell to 20-32.

Knicks 112, Nets 102

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard King scored 19 of his game-high 32 points in the second half and New York staved off a New Jersey comeback to beat the Nets 112-102.

The victory, New York's fifth in a row and 11th in its last 12 games, pulled the Knicks back into a second-place tie with Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

Pistons 120, Nuggets 115

DALLAS (AP) — Center Bill Laimbeer scored five of his 23 points in the last 1:39 to lift the Detroit Pistons to a 120-115 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

Laimbeer, who also had 13 rebounds, grabbed a Kelly Tripucka miss, scored and hit a free throw to put the Pistons up 116-112 with 1:39 to play. He added a 15-foot jump shot with 1:07 left that sealed the win for Detroit

The win pulled Detroit to within a half game of Central Division-leading Milwaukee.

Kings 111, Hawks 106

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Forward Billy Knight scored 27 points and guard Reggie Theus added 16 in his Kansas City debut to lead the Kings to a 111-106 win over the Atlanta Hawks.

The Hawks held an 88-87 lead with 8:12 left in the game, but the Kings outscored Atlanta 14-1 to take a 101-89 lead with 4:55 remaining.

Saints pick up Todd, give up No. 1 pick

AP Laserphoto

Richard Todd

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Jets traded Richard Todd, their starting quarterback, to New Orleans today for the Saints' No. 1 choice in the May 1 National Football League draft.

With the departure of Todd, who had a frustrating season in 1983 as the Jets staggered from preseason predictions as a Super Bowl contender to a 7-9 finish, the starting job will go either to Ken O'Brien, the Jets' No. 1 draft pick last year, or Pat Ryan, a reserve for six seasons.

The trade is the most recent in a housecleaning following the disaapointing tie for fourth-place in the American Conference East in Joe Walton's first year as head coach.

"We think think it will be better for the Jets at this point in time and for Richard Todd," Walton said in a statement from Puerto Rico, where he was vacationing. "A change in scenery would help Richard in his career. We committed ourselves to Ken O'Brien in the future and this will speed up his progress.

"Richard has been a fine quarterback for us and did take us to the playoffs twice, but we think he needs the change of scenery. I plan to talk to both Ken and Pat Ryan as soon as I return," Walton said in hijs statement, issued by the club.

THE SAINTS, who finished 8-8 last season and barely missed the playoffs, owned the 15th pick in the first round of the draft. The trade gives the Jets four of the first 39 picks.

They also own their own in the first round, No. 10, their own in the second round, No. 37, and San Diego's in the second round, No. 39, following the trade of defensive linemen Abdul Salaam and Kenny Neil to the Chargers. Also this week, the Jets traded reserve linebacker Stan Blinka to Denver for a conditional sixth-round pick in the 1985 draft.

The acqusition by the Saints of Todd, New York's No. 1 draft choice out of Alabama in 1976, gives New Orleans four quarterbacks, the other three being 14-year veteran Ken Stabler, two-year pro Dave Wilson and six-year reserve Guido Merkens.

"I've never had a football team that had too many good players at one position," Saints Coach Bum Phillips said in a statement released by the team. "Quarterback and running back are two areas where you especially need depth. To build a team, you have to build depth. If your quarterback goes down, it's hard to do anything offensively.

"Also, we're in a situation where Kenny may not play but one or two more years. I expect him to play next year. Kenny doesn't need a lot of practice. We will have the opportunity to give Richard and Dave (Wilson) most of the work."

After excellent seasons in 1981 (25 touchdown passes, 13 interceptions) and strike-abbreviated 1982 (14 TDs, 8 interceptions), both of which the Jets made the playoffs, Todd had a poor 1983. He started all 16 games, throwing 18 TD passes and 26 interceptions.

Pittsburgh after DeBerg

DENVER (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have started preliminary talks with the Denver Broncos about obtaining veteran quarterback Steve DeBerg in a trade, general managers for both National Football League teams have confirmed.

DeBerg, demoted to backup last season behind Bronco rookie John Elway, became a free agent Feb. 1.

"The fact that we've talked means it's more than just casual," Steeler General Manager Dan Rooney told The Denver Post on Friday.

Broncos General Manager Hein Poulus agreed.

The Steelers need a qualified quarterback since starter Cliff Stoudt moved to the United States Football League.

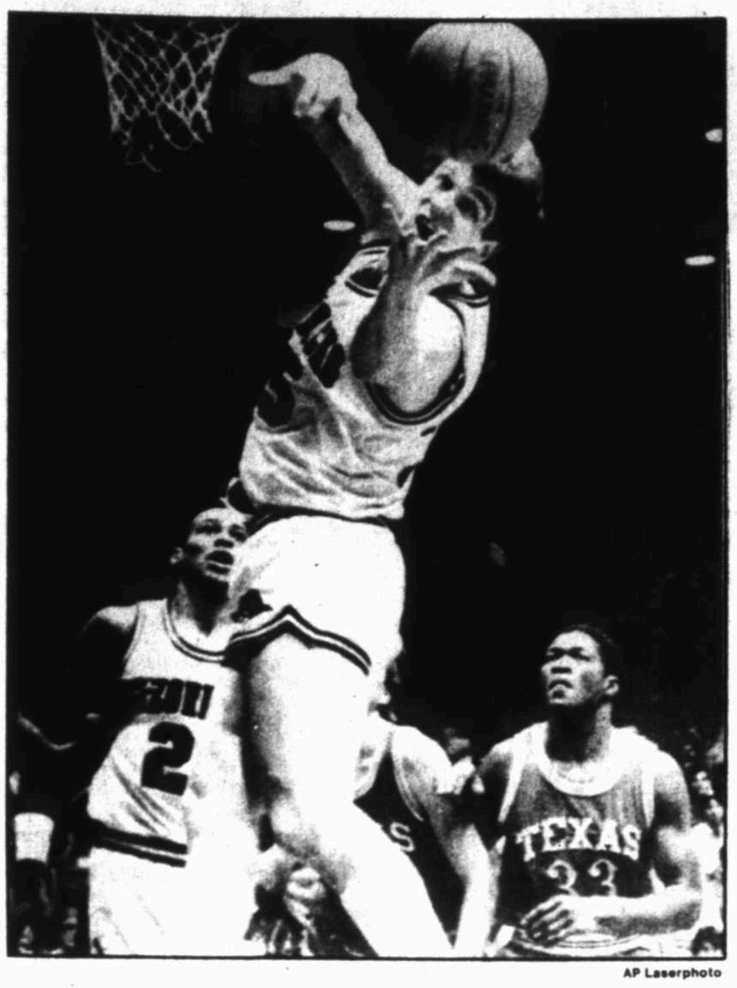
Young's 22 points lead Cougars past Cavs, 74-65



AP Laserphoto

Arkansas' Joe Kleine (35) stretches for a rebound over teammate Alvin Robertson (21) and Texas' Carlton Cooper (33) during Saturday's SWC game at Barnhill Arena.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's unsung Michael Young, who is never there unless Coach Guy Lewis needs him, finally got his wish — a good performance before a national television audience.

Young poured in 22 points and helped blunt a late second-half Virginia surge Saturday to lead the fourth ranked Cougars to a 74-65 victory.

"Nobody appreciates him, maybe, except me," Lewis said. "I'll tell you this, I appreciate him a lot. We're getting down toward the end of the season and I'm already getting pangs of regret that he's not gonna be there next year."

Young is the No. 3 all-time Houston scorer and leads the Southwest Conference with a 20.8 average. But he lamented two nights earlier that he'd never had a big game before the television lights.

"It was pretty obvious that Houston's play early in the game gave them control of the game," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "They shot very well from the perimeter and their defense made it tough for us to get easy shots."

Despite Young's 11 for 17 shooting performance from the field, the Cougars had to hold off the fast-finishing Cavaliers in the closing minutes.

Houston, 23-3, was leading by 14 points at 61-47 midway in the second half when the Cavaliers started a charge led by guard Othell Wilson, who scored 11 of his 13 points over the final 10 minutes of the game.

Tempers flared in the final minutes when Houston's Akeem Olajuwon elbowed Virginia's Olden Polynice in the face as the two players ran down court. Polynice fell to the floor and left the game for good after shouting and pointing a finger at Olajuwon.

"Obviously, he didn't hit himself," Holland said.

Polynice said Olajuwon hit him in the throat intentionally.

"He looked at me and then elbowed me," Polynice said. "The next thing I knew I was on the floor. All I heard was footsteps and I knew it wasn't good for us."

Olajuwon said Polynice was trying to run in front of him to draw a charge. "I took it as long as I could," Olajuwon said. "Yeah, I threw the elbow. He was playing defense like a football player on the break."

Wilson's late shooting display helped the Cavaliers cut Houston's lead to 69-64 with 2:28 to play. But Houston, despite poor free throw shooting in the final minutes, held on for the victory and a 23-3 record this season.

Houston missed eight free throws over the final three minutes of the game but free throws by Eric Dickens and Derek Giles kept Virginia at a distance.

The Cavaliers, 14-9, had three turnovers in the first three minutes of the game as the Cougars took a 10-2 lead and held a 36-28 margin at halftime.

Jim Miller led the Virginia scorers with 16 points and Polynice finished with 10. Olajuwon finished with 12 points and guard Alvin Franklin added 13.

Hogs defeat Texas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Junior center Joe Kleine scored 27 points Saturday as the 14th-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks defeated Texas 59-41.

Kleine was the only Razorback in double figures for Arkansas, which moves to 21-4 overall and 11-1 in the league. The Longhorns drop to 6-17 and 2-10 with the loss.

Arkansas led Texas 25-21 at the half and limited the Longhorns to 10 points in the final 11 minutes to pull away to the comfortable victory margin. In the first half, Texas built an early 11-6 lead but Arkansas took over on the strength of 15 turnovers by the Longhorns.

Guard Karl Whillock led Texas with 12 points.

Coach Eddie Sutton said the key to the victory for Arkansas was reducing its turnovers in the second half. "We had 12 turnovers at halftime and had only four in the second half. Overall our defense was outstanding."

SMU nips A&M in OT

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Larry Davis dropped in two free throws with one second remaining in overtime to lift Southern Methodist University to a 60-58 win over Texas A&M.

Davis, who led the Mustangs with 17 points, scored all of his team's overtime points with six free throws.

Carl Wright had 15 points and Jon Koncak had 13 for SMU. Kenny Brown led A&M with 18, while Todd Holloway had 12 and Winston Crite had 11.

The victory raised SMU's records to 21-6 overall and 9-4 in SWC play. A&M fell to 12-12 on the year and 5-8 in league play.

The win also evened the all-time series between the two schools at 74-74 and provided SMU coach Dave Bliss with his first win at College Station in his sixth year at the Mustangs' helm.

Crite almost won it for the Aggies in regulation time, but his last-second shot from 12 feet out went in and out of the basket as the regulation game ended at 54-54.

Frogs rally past Bears

FORT WORTH (AP) — Junior guard Dennis Nutt scored on a 20-foot baseline jumper with six seconds left in overtime and then sank two technical foul free throws as Texas Christian fought from behind in the second half and beat Baylor 73-67.

Baylor drew the technical foul by calling a time out after having used all its time outs.

Baylor led by as many as 14 points, 57-43, at one point in the second half. But an 18-4 spurt by the Horned Frogs in the final 7:41 of regulation forced the overtime.

Nutt sent the game into the extra period as he hit a 21-foot jumper with 51 seconds left in regulation to tie it at 61-61.

TCU raised its record to 3-10 in the SWC and 10-14 overall. Baylor fell to 5-18 for the season and 1-11 in the SWC to remain in the league cellar. A loss by TCU would have dropped the Horned Frogs into last place.

Nutt finished with a game-high 24 points.

James Stern, in his second game back from missing over a month with a broken foot, led Baylor with 19 points.

Tech holds off Rice

LUBBOCK (AP) — Junior guard Bubba Jennings hit a season high 28 points to lead Texas Tech to a 74-71 victory over the pesky Rice Owls.

The victory improved Tech's overall record to 14-9 and keeps the Red Raiders in fourth place in the conference standings at 8-4, a half game behind third-place SMU. Rice drops to 9-13 overall and 5-7 in the SWC.

UTEP's Quintan Gates attempts to block a pass from Wyoming's Jamal Hosey in WAC action Saturday night.

EL PASO (AP) — Fred Reynolds hit two free throws with 20 seconds left in overtime and then tipped in a missed shot to help 10th-ranked Texas-El Paso defeat Wyoming 73-66 in a Western Athletic Conference victory Saturday.

The 6-4 senior forward scored four of his game-high 27 points in the overtime period. The victory improved UTEP's record to 22-2 overall and 10-2 in WAC play. Wyoming fell to 13-11 and 6-6.

Troy Washpun was the high scorer for Wyoming with 20 points. Rodney Gowens added 19 and Jamal Hosey had 14 to help the Cowboy attack. Luster Goodwin backed Reynolds with 10 points and was the only other Miner in double figures.

Washpun's layup tied the game at 61-61 and sent the game into an extra period. Hosey's jump shot then gave Wyoming an early lead in overtime.

The Miners, however, then rallied, hitting four buckets and four free throws.

SFA downs Howard Payne

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Kevin Sumuel led Stephen F. Austin to a 77-64 Lone Star Conference win over Howard Payne, clinching a home-court berth for SFA in the first-round of the LSC playoffs.

Johnny Taylor also scored 19 points and had 13 rebounds for SFA. Marty Akins led Howard Payne with 20 points. SFA is 18-8 and 8-5 in the LSC, while HPU falls to 5-21 and 0-13 in the LSC.

Free throws give NTSU win

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Guard Todd Warren made two free throws in the last two seconds to help North Texas State defeat Arkansas State University in Southland Conference basketball.

The win raised North Texas' record to 3-6 in the conference and 9-15 overall. Arkansas State fell to 3-7 and 11-11 overall.

ASU took a 44-33 halftime lead, but North Texas outscored the Indians 34-19 in the second half.

Other high scorers for North Texas were Bill Nelson with 17, Javan Dupree with 14 and Warren with 12. For ASU, Scott Horrell scored 17 and Todd Cooper added 10.

Lamar clinches SLC tie, 94-73

ARLINGTON (AP) — Tom Sewell's 23 points led Lamar University to a 94-73 victory over Texas-Arlington to clinch at least a tie for the Southland Conference championship for the Cardinals with two games remaining.

Lamar raised its record to 9-1 in SLC play and 20-3 overall. UTA dropped to 1-8 and 5-19.

Ike Mitchell made 10 of 15 shots in leading UTA with 20 points. Charles Harris added 19. For Lamar, Jerry Everett scored 16 points in a backup role to Sewell.

Roadrunners blow out Eagles

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Center Rick Doyle scored 23 points and led five other Texas-San Antonio players in double figures as the Roadrunners demolished Eastern Washington 107-70.

UTSA took a 49-28 halftime lead on Doyle's 11 first-half points and the 5-7 outside shooting of junior guard Ike Thornton, who also had 11. The Roadrunners shot 45-74 from the field for 61 percent and outrebounded the Eagles 48-23. The Eagles shot 28-62 from the field for 45 percent.

Rams edge Javelinas, 61-60

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Junior Guard Kenny Smith scored 19 points to lead the Angelo State Rams to a 61-60 Lone Star Conference victory over the Texas A&I Javelinas.

The Rams' record improves to 18-7 overall and 8-5 in conference. A&I falls to 7-19 and 4-9.

Also scoring in double figures for the Rams were Scott Wisniewski with 14 and Greg Wolff with 10. For A&I, James Gross scored 18 points.

ETSU clinches Lone Star title

COMMERCE (AP) — East Texas State clinched the Lone Star Conference basketball championship by beating Sam Houston State 88-85 Saturday night on Tony Coger's 31 points, including a free throw with seven seconds to play.

ETSU trailed 57-50 early in the second half, but Coger and Julius Pointsette led a 10-2 spurt that regained the lead, and the Lions led by as much as eight, at 83-75, with 5:17 remaining.

When East Texas missed a pair of easy layups, the Bearkats cut the lead to 87-85 seconds left when Yommi Sangodeyi hit on a 28-foot jumper. But Coger iced the game by hitting one of two free shots in the closing seconds.

Reggie Harris led Sam Houston with 21.

ETSU raised its record to 13-12 for the season and 11-2 in league play. Sam Houston fell to 16-9 and 8-5.

WTSU slips by SIU, 88-84

AMARILLO (AP) — James Jackson scored 26 of his 29 points in the second half to lift West Texas State to a 88-84 win over Southern Illinois in a Missouri Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Buffaloes trailed 45-31 at the half, but outscored Southern Illinois 29-15 over the firsty 8:48 of the second half. Jackson scored 10 points during the spurt and Marvin Satterfield hit eight.

Ranchland pro Bobbitt aiming for net expansion

Tennis blitz headed for Tall City

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When Ranchland Hills Country Club hired tennis pro Terry Bobbitt to head its program last October, the management probably didn't know what it was getting.

Now, Ranchland brass are watching as Bobbitt heads an aggressive pro-tennis blitz. Bobbitt brought vitality and 10 years of experience to Ranchland, and in 1984 he plans to shake up the Midland tennis community.

Bobbitt, 33, grew up in Tampa, Fla., and started playing tennis as a teen. After two years of JUCO tennis, Bobbitt played one year at Stetson in Deland, Fla. After college came a brief fling in the pro ranks, and then a more stable teaching career as a pro. "I had had enough of the circuit and knew I wasn't going to be in the top 100," Bobbitt said.

From there, Bobbitt taught with tennis pros like John Newcombe, Owen Davidson, Bob Lutz, Arthur Ashe. Then Bobbitt landed a prime job as assistant director at the Woodlands near Houston. After three years there and almost a year at the West Side Tennis Club in Phoenix, Bobbitt wound up in Midland.

AT RHCC, Bobbitt has found a situation that frees him to develop a program his way. "I have full control of the program - the lessons, the social activities are all my responsibilities. I want to see Ranchland Hills Country Club take a leadership role. I want us to be aggressive and have new programs that will benefit the members of the club as well as the community."

And in his view, that means enlargement. "The number one rule is that you have a lot of different types of people, with different ability levels, different competitive beliefs. You have to try to appeal to everybody. Competitive players want competitive programs, others love to just play socially."

Increasing the sport's visibility is a key to Bobbitt's plans. "There are a lot of people who play tennis, but we still have to generate interest. I think the first priority is that tennis has to be fun."

One thing immediately in the works is a program to develop young talent. Bobbitt hopes for a type of program that would appeal to the game's future players. Not only would there be teaching, but competition as well to give Midland a solid tennis base.

Bobbitt and Ranchland could very easily have not gotten together were it not for Bobbitt's wife Lana, an Odessa native. While working in Houston, Bobbitt met Lana. The rest, as they say, is history.

"WHEN I was growing up I played a lot of team sports," said Bobbitt. "I still enjoy team sports but when you won or lost you shared that with someone else. If you lost sometimes you had no control over it.

"With tennis I liked the individuality, the idea of doing it yourself when you won or lost. You had direct control over what your opponent was able to do. A golfer or a bowler doesn't have that. They do their thing and the best score wins. But if I have a great serve or hit a great backhand, it has a direct effect. On a poor shot, I'll pay for that, too."

Now, he has his sights set on the tennis community in the Tall City. "We're trying to build lines of communication and competition between the other clubs and tennis facilities. We're formulating a concept for a junior league and the town's ripe for it. it hasn't had an organized program, it's all been catch as catch can. I don't like surprises. I try to see what's coming."

Yarborough holds Daytona 500 pole position

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Defending champion Cale Yarborough will carry the heavy burden of being the odds-on favorite today in the 26th annual Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race at Daytona International Speedway.

Yarborough, who will start from the pole position in the $1.1 million race after qualifying at a track record speed of 201.848 mph, solidified his favorite status by posting an easy victory in one of Thursday's twin 125-mile qualifying races.

"I guess I would have to be the favorite," said Yarborough, a three-time Daytona 500 winner. "Waddell (crew chief and engine builder Waddell Wilson) is a step ahead of everybody else.

"It doesn't bother me. But I won't take anything for granted. There's a lot of good cars out there, guys capable of winning if we slip up.

"We still have to make the car go 500 miles and stay out of trouble."

Trouble has been on everyone's mind this week, with three wild crashes — all of them in virtually the same place on the 2.5-mile track — punctuating preliminary events.

"The fourth turn has become kind of a scary place," said Bobby Allison, who won the other qualifying race and will start behind outside pole qualifier Terry Labonte and alongside Bill Elliott in the second row of the 42-car field.

"But everybody is aware of the problem and, hopefully, we can avoid trouble," added Allison, the defending Winston Cup champion.

The problem, which caused the virtual demolition of cars belonging to Ricky Rudd, Randy LaJoie, Natz Peters and Jim Hurlbert, appears to be a combination of factors, including a worsening dip over the infield tunnel entrance in the middle of Turn 4, a contuing loss of traction because the track has not been repaved since 1979 and escalating speeds at a spot where a narrow patch of infield grass is hemmed in by an 10-foot high wall protecting the garage area.

Rudd, who will start in his team's backup car in the seventh row Sunday, slid off the fourth turn banking during last Sunday's Busch Clash and spun wildly through the air, narrowly missing the wall which juts out toward the entrance to the pit wall.

LaJoie, in his first Grand National event, lost control at virtually the same spot in one of Thursday's qualifying races, skidded across the grass, became airborne and smashed into the wall.

Rudd, who will wear a flak jacket Sunday to protect his sore abdomen, and LaJoie were fortunate, escaping the crashes with bumps and bruises.

Peters and Hurlbert collided in a fiery crash after Peters bounced off the same infield wall. Peters suffered first and second degree burns on his face, and Hurlbert sustained first and second degree burns on his face and left arm, a broken right ankle, a fractured jaw, broken teeth and facial cuts.

"You can't help but think about what's been happening," said Richard Petty, a seven-time winner of this race. "You have to keep your eyes open and try to see as far ahead into the turn as you can, to see if anything is going on that you want to avoid.

Stallions rally to beat Gunslingers, 23-15

USFL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Scott Norwood kicked three field goals and quarterback Bobby Lane threw for one touchdown to lead the Birmingham Stallions to a come-from-behind 23-15 win over the San Antonio Gunslingers in a United States Football League exhibition game Saturday.

San Antonio led 9-3 at the half on field goals of 33, 39 and 48 yards by Nick Mike-Mayer.

But the Stallions scored on their first four possessions of the second half to raise their preseason record to 2-0.

Norwood, who kicked a 26-yard field goal in the first half, opened scoring in the third quarter with a 27-yard field goal. Lane tossed a 1-yard pass to tight end Jay Repko with four minutes left in the third period.

Ken Talton opened the fourth quarter with a 1-yard touchdown run and Norwood followed with a 44-yard field goal to give the Stallions a 23-9 lead.

San Antonio's Karl Douglas threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Marcus Bonner to narrow the score to 23-15.

The Gunslingers, who finished preseason with a 1-2 record, will host the New Orleans Breakers in their first regular season game on Feb. 26.

The Stallions will host the New Jersey Generals on the same day.

Breakers win, 20-0

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Quarterback Johnnie Walton threw for 133 yards and a touchdown Saturday to lead the New Orleans Breakers to a 20-0 victory over the Memphis Showboats in a controlled scrimmage between the USFL teams.

Rules of the scrimmage were that there would be no punts or kickoffs, no sacking the quarterback and no running by the quarterback. It was the last of the preseason scrimmages for both teams.

Walton's touchdown pass was an 11-yarder to wide receiver Frank Lockett in the second quarter. Walton set it up with a 48-yard completion to Lockett that put the ball on the Memphis 11.

The two receptions by Lockett were his only catches of the game.

Second-round draft choice Mark Schellen scored on a 1-yard plunge in the fourth quarter and Tim Mazzetti kicked field goals of 41 yards in the final period.

MHS takes sixth in San Felipe Invite

DEL RIO— The Midland High golf team stroked its way to a sixth-place finish in Del Rio at the San Felipe Invitational Saturday.

Abilene Cooper won the Invitational with a 597 combined total, followed by Odessa Permian in second at 626.

Host Del Rio nabbed third with a 640 count and Eagle Pass netted 649 for fourth. Abilene High finished fifth, 11 strokes better than the Bulldog total of 661.

Henderson loses bid at salary arbitration

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Rickey Henderson, who was shooting for a $1.2 million contract through salary arbitration, lost his case and will have to settle for $950,000 from the Oakland A's this season, the American League club announced Saturday.

Tom Roberts, the arbitrator who heard the case Friday in Los Angeles, announced his decision less than 24 hours later.

"My reaction is the same as it would have been if Rickey won," A's President Roy Eisenhardt said. "We went through the process according to the rules."

Two years ago, Eisenhardt congratulated Henderson after the outfielder, baseball's premier base stealer, went to arbitration and won a $600,000 salary.

Henderson set a major league single-season record by stealing 130 bases in 1982. Last year, he reached 100 for the third time in his career, with 108, and hit .292.

No medals expected for U.S. athletes in final events

But the United States is not expected to get any medals in the final day's events, which include the slalom, the men's 50-kilometer cross country race, and the hockey game for gold between Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

The athletes will then gather at the Zetra Arena, Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, will make closing remarks and the Olympic flag will be transferred to officials from Calgary, site of the 1988 Winter Games.

The total number of medals won by Americans when the Games are over Sunday will not be as high as expected or predicted by the team itself, but when near-misses are counted, the picture is not as bleak.

Six U.S. athletes have finished in fourth place, a breath away from a bronze. If they had won, the total would have been nine or 10.

In addition to Chin in women's figures, Jeff Hastings just missed a medal in the 90-meter ski jump. After a medicore first jump of 336 feet he was in 12th place. But he jumped 351 feet on his second and finished with 201.2 points, losing the bronze by a mere 1.7 points.

"That last one, I'll take it any way, any day," the Norwich, Vt., skiier said. "It was a high one. It was great."

EAST GERMANY and the Soviet Union were tied with 24 medals each, followed by Finland with 12, Norway with nine and the United States with six.

Finland's Matti Nykaenen, called "The Flying Finn," lived up to his nicknamename this time after an off-season in which he had finished in second place five times.

He had jumps of 381 and 364 feet, accumulating 231.2 points.

The silver went to Jens Weissflog of East Germany, the gold medalist in the 70-meter competition, while Pavel Ploc of Czechoslovakia took the bronze.

It was a fine day for the Finns, who have four gold medals, including two won on Saturday.

Hamalainen became the first triple-gold medalist of the Games, winning the 20-kilometer cross-country race in a time of 1 hour, 1 minute, 45 seconds. She finished 47.1 seconds ahead of Raisa Smetanina of the Soviet Union and 1:28.6 better than bronze medalist Anne Jahren of Norway.

It was Hamalainen's fourth medal, an Olympic record in Nordic.

"Last night, my fiance (Harri Kirvesniemi of the Finnish men's team) tried to convince me that I could win," Hamalainen said. "He told me it was the last Olympic race and that I could do it."

Hamalainen won the 10-kilometer race, the 5K and now the 20K. She also helped her team win the bronze in the 4x5-kilometer relay.

The Americans failed to place a woman in the top 20 in any of the individual races. Judy Rabinowitz-Edenstad of Fairbanks, Alaska, finished in 27th place. Sue Long of Manchester, Vt., was in 28th, Lynn Spencer-Galanes of Brattleboro, Vt. was 33rd, while Kelly Milligan of Moose, Wyo., was 37th of the 39 finishers.

IN THE final speed skating event of the Games, the men's 10,000-meter, Igor Malkov of the Soviet Union edged Tomas Guystafson of Sweden by five-hundredeths of a second. Rene Schoefisch of East Germany took the bronze, his second of the Games.

The victory avenged an even closer defeat Malkov suffered to Guystafson in the 5,000-meter last week, when he lost by two one-hundredeths of a second.

Dr. Michael W[illegible] of Wisconsin, Wis., finished second in the 5,000.

It was the first time the United States has not [illegible] speed skating since [illegible].

In four-man [illegible], Wolfgang Hoppe of East Germany won the second gold medal for [illegible] teammate Is[illegible] Sidvio Grabschied [illegible] Germany [illegible] was the same 1:2[illegible] they had last week in the two-man event.

Samaranch gave his state of the union speech the day before the games ended.

In it, he strongly hinted that future Olympics could be open to all athletes, professional or amateur by today's standards.

He said the IOC's eligibility rules are constantly changing and that he hopes they change more.

The IOC charter bans professionals — those who have played or are playing under a sports contract. A conflict comes because Olympic rules allow "state athletes" from communist countries to participate, while banning professionals from the West.

Tar Heels defeat Wolfpack despite Spud's efforts

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Michael Jordan scored a season-high 32 points to lead top-ranked North Carolina to a 95-71 Atlantic Coast Conference rout of North Carolina State.

The Tar Heels, whose 21-game winning streak was broken last Sunday by Arkansas, broke quickly and left the Wolfpack in a hole it never could recover from.

N.C. State's turnovers combined with North Carolina's pressure defense gave the Tar Heels a 20-6 lead in the first six minutes. Jordan had six of those points.

The Wolfpack battled back to within 30-24 on a jumper by former Midland College guard Anthony "Spud" Webb, who led N.C. State with 22 points. A 10-4 run in which Jordan scored four points extended North Carolina's lead to 40-28 at the 3:49 mark of the first half.

North Carolina held a 46-36 halftime lead and started to gain momentum at the start of the second half. The Tar Heels outscored the Wolfpack 10-2 to take a 56-38 advantage with 16:27 left to play. N.C. State retaliated with eight straight points — six by Webb — to pull to within 56-46 with 14:35 left.

Jordan led the final surge which put the game out of reach for N.C. State. He poured in eight of the next 12 Tar Heel points for a 68-52 margin with 11:11 left.

Lorenzo Charles added 19 points for N.C. State, 19-8 and 4-6. Terry Gannon had 10 for the Wolfpack, which saw a nine-game winning streak come to an end.

Cards end Tiger roll

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Louisville Cardinals, behind Milt Wagner's 34 points, stopped eighth-ranked Memphis State's 12-game winning streak 85-78 in a Metro Conference basketball game Saturday.

It was the highest point total scored by a Cardinal player this year. Wagner took control of the game in the second half, when, following a 18-point performance in the first period, he led his team to an eight-point start that gave Louisville a 46-40 lead.

Haynes led the Tigers with 18 points while Becton and Andre Turner each scored 16. Turner, however, committed eight turnovers.

Memphis State now is 19-4 overall and 9-1 in the Metro while Louisville dropped to 17-8 and 9-2.

Dayton stuns DePaul

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Ed Young hit a twisting bank shot with one second left to give the University of Dayton a come-from-behind 72-71 upset of No. 3 DePaul.

DePaul, 19-2, saw an 11-point lead fade away in the last 6:13 of the game, and missed three free throws in the closing minute that could have secured the lead. Dayton improved to 15-8 with its second straight home-court victory over DePaul.

Guard Larry Schellenberg hit two free throws with 13 seconds left to bring Dayton within 71-70. DePaul's Raymond McCoy was fouled, but missed his first free throw with 11 seconds left. Schellenberg rebounded and passed to Roosevelt Chapman, who fed Young for the winning shot and Dayton's only lead of the second half.

Duke claims an upset

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mark Alarie hit a layup with three seconds left in overtime to lift 19th-ranked Duke to a 79-77 victory over No. 13 Wake Forest in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

The victory gave Duke sole possession of second place in the ACC with a record of 21-5 and 6-4 in the conference. Wake Forest fell to third at 18-5 and 6-5.

Duke, which won its fifth straight game, saw a 20-point halftime lead evaporate when when Delaney Rudd's jumper with three seconds left in regulation tied the score at 73-73 and sent the game into overtime.

Tisdale carries OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — All-America center Wayman Tisdale scored 28 points and pulled down 15 rebounds as ninth-ranked Oklahoma cruised to a 93-80 Big Eight Conference basketball victory over Colorado.

Freshman forward Darryl Kennedy added a career-high 24 points and Shawn Clark chipped in 20 for the Sooners, who improved to 22-3 overall and 9-1 in the conference, two games ahead of Kansas. Oklahoma and Kansas meet Wednesday in Lawrence.

Mike Reid led a balanced Colorado attack with 18 points. Vince Kelley added 17, Jay Humphries 16 and Randy Downs 14 for the Buffs, who fell to 13-10 and 4-6.

Hoyas rip Providence

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 23 points to lead second-ranked Georgetown to a 59-38 Big East Conference basketball victory over Providence College.

Georgetown's smothering defense held the Friars to seven field goals in each half and a dismal 29 percent shooting from the floor. Georgetown, in breezing to its 10th straight victory shot 53 percent.

Ewing, a 7-foot center, had eight rebounds. Michael Graham had 12 points and eight rebounds for the Hoyas, who dominated the boards 42-24.

Georgetown led 32-19 at halftime and scored the first four points of the second half. Providence never got closer than 11 points thereafter.

Cats shock Indiana

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — John Peterson and Art Aaron led a balanced attack and Northwestern used a stiff defense Saturday night to upset 17th-ranked Indiana 63-51 and knock the Hoosiers out of a share of the Big Ten basketball lead.

Breaking an early 18-18 tie, Northwestern took the lead and never trailed thereafter. The Wildcats held leads of up to 10 points in the second half.

Indiana fell to 10-3 in the Big Ten and 17-6 overall while Northwestern climbed to 4-9 and 11-12.

Farias, Rebs, 'Dogs named All-District

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Midland Lee senior Felicia Farias was named the District 4-5A Most Valuable Player for the 1983-84 girls' basketball season.

The All-District 4-5A basketball team features members from every school except lowly Odessa High, and besides Farias, Lee placed Stacy Harmon and Tunya Mayberry on the squad. Rebel guard Faye Oudems was tabbed an honorable mention selection.

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs also placed a pair on the team in senior Orvetta Johnson and Denise Lanz. Lanz and Shawn Sweeten of district champion San Angelo are the only two junior choices on the All-District list.

Other selections rounding out the squad were Bonnie Smith and Monica Bradley from Angelo, Monette Wise of Big Spring, Laura Bartlett of Odessa Permian, and Tracy Scott of Abilene Cooper.

Honorable mention honors were gained by Debra Rubio and Paula Spears of Big Spring, Carolyn Gibbs of Permian, and Angela Riggins of Cooper.

Abilene High's Trena Jackson was chosen Sophomore of the Year, succeeding Lanz.

LANZ AVERAGED 12.9 points per outing for the 18-10 Lady Bulldogs, who narrowly missed a post season berth at 9-5. Johnson, known as "OJ" to Bulldog devotees, scored at a 12.5 clip and was one of only two upperclassmen on coach Jane Young's team.

Johnson had a pair of 22-point nights last year for MHS, team highs for the season. Lanz was a model of consistency, scoring in double figures in 75 percent of the 'Dogs games. MHS lost four of the seven games Lanz was held under 10.

Lee's Farias, one of the most decorated letterwinners in LHS history, led the Rebs to a 23-8 mark before Lee bowed from the playoffs in a 60-50 loss to Palo Duro. Farias was held below ten points on two occasions last year, and turned in 20-plus efforts 10 times for Lee. Farias averaged 18.3 in her final high school season. The Rebs ended the year on a down note with two consecutive losses, but coach Shirley Stephenson's squad boasted more talent per player than many previous Lee units.

Mayberry came on late in the season and finished as Lee's number two scorer averaging 12.2, with a season-high 23 coming in Lee's last win over Big Spring. Harmon, Farias' running mate at the forward slot, hit at a 10.9 clip and provided the Rebs with some outside punch.

Oudems ran Lee's floor attack at point guard and averaged 4.4. Her contributions came away from the scoring column.

Islanders rally to beat Rangers, 4-3

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Brent Sutter's 26th goal of the season with six seconds left in the third period Saturday night capped a two-goal rally in the final 7½ minutes and gave the New York Islanders a 4-3 victory over the New York Rangers.

Sutter, who has five goals in four games since returning from a hand injury, deflected Denis Potvin's wrist shot from the top of the left faceoff circle to spoil the unbeaten National Hockey League record of Ron Scott, the Rangers' rookie goalkeeper, who had two victories and two ties in his four previous starts.

The Islanders had blown a 2-0 lead and trailed 3-2 when Greg Gilbert tied the score with his 20th goal of the season at 12:30 of the third period.

NHL

Nordiques 7, North Stars 2

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Peter Stastny and Michel Goulet accounted for two goals and two assists each to spark the Quebec Nordiques to a 7-2 victory over the Minnesota North Stars.

The goals put Goulet and Stastny in second and third place among NHL scoring leaders, with 91 and 90 points, respectively. The leader is Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky with 158.

Whalers 8, Maple Leafs 2

TORONTO (AP) — Tony Currie scored twice to trigger a string of seven consecutive Hartford goals as the Whalers routed the Toronto Maple Leafs 8-2.

Currie's sixth goal of the season tied the score at 5:04 of the second period and he added a power-play tally at 9:40 with Toronto's Dan Daoust in the penalty box that put the Whalers in front 3-2.

Goals by Doug Sulliman at 10:22 and Torrie Robertson at 11:32 made it 5-2 and chased Allan Bester, Toronto's rookie goalkeeper, with Robertson's goal deflecting off the netminder. However, the Whalers fired three third-period goals past Rick St. Croix, Bester's replacement, including another one by Robertson, who doubled his previous output.

Bruins 5, Flames 5

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Jim Nill banged in a rebound with 3:54 left in the third period after Keith Crowder's shot hit the goalpost, lifting the Boston Bruins to a 5-5 tie with the Calgary Flames.

Mike Gilles also assisted on the play and Rick Middleton almost won it for Boston in the five-minute overtime when he hit the goalpost.

Steve Tambellini's goal at 12:15 of the third period on a pass from Jim Peplinski gave Calgary a 5-4 lead.Eddy Beers, Colin Patterson, Hakan Loob and Dan Quinn also scored for Calgary.

Amarillo ousts San Angelo, 45-42

From Staff Reports

AMARILLO— The Amarillo High Sandies made a defensive switch in the third quarter, then went on to overcome a San Angelo lead and hold the Lady Bobcats to six points in the fourth quarter en route to a 45-42 girls bi-district basketball win.

Amarillo went from a zone to a man defense in the third quarter as coach Rosemary Jackson inserted Betty Collins to hold Angelo star Bonnie Smith to 14 points.

In the fourth, 6-1 Amarillo senior post Amy Tollefson and senior Veronica Thrash came off the bench to shut down the Bobcat offense. Tollefson went on to grab four rebounds and score six of her game high 16 points in the final stanza.

Amarillo moves to 19-5 on the year, while District 4-5A loses its top representative for the year at 19-9.

Amarillo and District 3-5A cohort Palo Duro, winners over Midland Lee, advance to the nest round against El Paso Eastland and El Paso Parkland, respectively. Both games are scheduled for Tuesday night at Midland's Chaparral Center.

Palo Duro and Parkland are slated for a 6 p.m. tipoff, and AHS and Eastland follow at 7:45.

SAN ANGELO (42): Shawn Sweeten, 1-5-7; Bonnie Smith, 6-2-14; Monica Bradley, 0-2-2; Ulinda Young, 1-1-3; Bambi Lopez, 0-0-0; Val Schlaudt, 5-2-12; Anita Allgood 1-2-4. Totals: 14-14-18-42.

AMARILLO HIGH (45): Darcy Dupriest, 3-4-10; Betty Collins, 1-1-3; Lori Bolk, 4-0-8; Veronica Thrash, 2-1-5; Becky Boxwell, 1-1-3; Eve Posey, 0-0-0; Amy Tollefson, 6-4-16. Totals: 17-11-20-45.

New Mexico defeats Colorado State, 61-50

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Forwards Tim Garrett and Alan Dolensky scored 14 points each and Coach Gary Colson picked up his 400th career victory as New Mexico downed Colorado State 61-50 in Western Athletic Conference basketball action Saturday night.

The victory also gave New Mexico its first 20-win season since 1978. The Lobos are now 20-7 overall and 8-4 in the WAC. Colorado State dropped to 12-11 and 6-5.

The Rams were led by sophomore forward Rich Strong with 12 points and guard John Dudley with 11. Dudley scored seven of his points in the opening three minutes when Colorado State held brief leads.

New Mexico outscored Colorado State 14-2 over a 7½minute stretch in the first half en route to a 26-19 halftime lead. The Lobos steadily increased the margin in the final 20 minutes and led by as many as 16 points in the second half.

New Mexico took the lead for good on a layup by Dolensky off a steal by freshman guard Kelvin Scarborough. That gave the Lobos a 16-15 advantage with 8:42 left in the opening half and the Rams were to score only six points during the next 15 minutes.

Guard Phil Smith added 11 points for New Mexico.

Utah State downs NMSU

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Guard Vince Washington had a game-high 23 points and six assists, while forward Greg Grant scored 21 points to lift Utah State to a 95-88 victory over New Mexico State in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball game Saturday.

Utah State shot a season-high 69.7 percent from the field in the first half and took a 52-39 lead at halftime. New Mexico State scored the first basket and then Utah State hit seven of its next eight shots to take control of the game.

New Mexico State closed to within three at 83-80, but Vince Washington on an assist from Reid Newey gave USU an 85-80 lead on a layup.

Utah State is 10-5 in conference and 16-8 overall, while New Mexico State fell to 7-7 in the league and 11-12 overall.

Chris McMullin had 12 points and Newey 11 points for Utah State. Wendell Wright had 21 points to lead New Mexico State, while Steve Colter added 20 points and Andre Patterson, 16, Frank Rodriguez had 12 and a game-high 10 rebounds.

Utah State finished the game with 65 percent shooting from the field compared to 48 percent by New Mexico State.

On the Road Again

with Allen and Jackie Cason

Your Recreational Vehicle will have a Federal Vehicle Identification Number Sticker near the left front on the trailer or pick up camper and inside on a motorhome. Information on these stickers includes the front and rear axle weight rating and the GVWR (Gross Vehicle Weight Rating). This refers to the fully loaded weight of the vehicle. The dry or empty weight is listed on your title. Determine if you are within your GVWR by weighing fully loaded (water, butane, and all), on public truck scales. Avoid overloading, because you then exceed the carrying capacity of the tires, axles and suspension — resulting in an unsafe condition. For safety, load heavier items on the floor. A lower center of gravity make the vehicle more stable and controllable.

'Orphans' steal show from adult actors in 'Annie'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Shaking her head as she reaches into her pocket for her best friend — her bottle — Miss Hannigan says to herself, "Why any kid'd want to be an orphan, I don't know."

Anyone who has seen "Annie" knows.

From the moment this musical opens until it closes, it's their show. That was true on Broadway when this highly successful production opened in 1977 and received seven Tony Awards, including Best Musical, seven Drama Desk awards, Theatre World Award, New York Critics' Circle Award for Best Musical, Outer Critics' Circle Award and Cue's Golden Apple Award (and in 1978, a Grammy for Best Show Cast Album).

The adult roles are necessary but secondary to the spunky, tough, young urchins clad in their orphanage sad rags who must steal the audience's hearts in the play's opening scene. Anyone who is not captured, captivated and battened down tightly under their charm by the end of "It's a Hard Knock Life" may be praying more earnestly for tomorrow than Annie.

For those who are, the rest of the evening skates along on easy street.

Both casts of orphans and the two Annies occupying (of course, on different nights) center stage in Midland Community Theatre's production of this optimist romp through Depression America headed for Roosevelt's New Deal successfully bathe their audiences with fresh, uninhibited innocence.

Orphans are played by Rachael Radcliff and Amanda Connally as Molly; Megan Burleson and Alyson Aldridge as Pepper; Heather Reynolds and Kim Brice as Duffy; Dana Boes and Carrie Johnson as July; Martha Sherrod (an adult playing a child with all the spontaneity of the kids) as Kate; Jamie Dodson and Suzy Castle as Tessie; and, Jerri Looper and Wendy Watson as the child of indomitable spirit, Annie.

Most of the adults in this play could learn from the children. Without exception, all are genuine onstage. Not a one appears to be acting; none is uncomfortable in the role.

Loree Fitzgerald comes the closest to stealing the limelight from the orphans. Her Miss Hannigan moves the audience to tears from laughter. A shaved Tim Ryan plays a convincingly stiff Oliver "Daddy" Warbucks. Jim Martin shines as the crooning talk show host, Bert Healy.

Jerry Watson must have served time as a butler. His portrayal of Drake is flawless. Janet Considine plays the perfect private secretary with a proper amount of deference. Andy Salcedo and Mona Gale Gibson make a perfect twosome as crowing Rooster Hannigan and his none-too-bright, brassy girlfriend.

The production is directed by Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director, and Tom Roberts, musical director. The orchestra does a complimentary job with the cast, but some of the singers don't have the projecting power required for their roles.

The sets, created to achieve a cartoon look, are effective, especially the library scene in Warbucks' home.

Minor problems exist in costuming and dialogue:

— All the orphans are dressed shabbily except one girl who has on a red dress with a white pinafore, which looks clean and fairly new.

— One of the women in the Hooverville scene has on earrings.

— Warbucks goes to get a brandy for Annie at a critical moment, but when he returns he doesn't have it with him.

When lyricist Martin Charnin, author Thomas Meehan and composer Charles Strouse began creating "Annie," the purpose, Meehan writes, was to use Annie as a metaphor for "courage, morality, innocence and optimism in the face of cynicism and pessimism."

The metaphor can be seen in Annie vs. the dismal environment of the orphanage made more unbearable through the intentional efforts of the vindictive, two-faced Miss Hannigan; Annie's serendipity attitude vs. the no-hope attitude of the down-and-out Americans living in a Hooverville under the 59th Street Bridge; and Annie's optimism pitted against the pessimism-pocked Roosevelt advisers.

The idea for "Annie" came to Charnin when he was browsing for a book and found a comic strip collection of "Little Orphan Annie: Her Life and Hard Times." Meehan and Strouse's initial reaction to Charnin's idea was almost the same. Meehan said, "Ughhh, I hate it."

The play can inspire the same reaction for those who go expecting something other than what they see. It can seem saccharin-coated when not viewed in a satirical vein.

But perhaps the most interesting aspect of this production is the reflection of the real world that one gains from seeing it presented live. Most adults can't compete with children when it comes to being genuine.

'Broadway Danny Rose' tells unfunny story

By BEULAH CASEY

"Broadway Danny Rose" is a black and white movie by Woody Allen starring Allen, Mia Farrow and Nick Apollo Forte that starts with an interesting premise — a group of comics sitting around a New York deli telling their favorite "Danny Rose" story.

Everybody has one because Rose is a theatrical agent who started as a comic and never quite made it out of the Catskills. So, from there he turned to promoting the "talents" of others — big talents, like a stuttering ventriloquist and blind xylophonist.

And the comics, who include Jackie Gayle, Corbett Monica and Sandy Baron as themselves, laugh away the afternoon at Rose's expense. In fact, one of the stories becomes the movie, as Baron tells about the time Broadway Danny Rose tried to revitalize the career of his has-been crooning client Lou Canova (Nick Apollo Forte).

From there we go back to the deli and the comics occasionally, almost thankfully, but most of the action follows Allen, Miss Farrow as Canova's mob-tied, bleached blonde, sunglass-bespeckled Italian girlfriend, and Forte as Canova. All of them are played for comic effect, Allen overgesturing Rose, Miss Farrow overdressed and overpadded but a perfect blend of accent and lower-class manners, and Forte grotesque as the bulging, bellied, by-gone entertainer.

But do we care about Danny Rose and his predicament? Not really. It is not funny, unless it is the humor that comes from irony, and even at his most poignant, Rose is not a sympathetic figure.

Rated PG, "Broadway Danny Rose" is something of a dedication to Allen's past as a comic and to other comics. But if Allen tells us anything about it in this movie, he tells us being funny isn't necessarily funny.

One exception to that statement is a scene in which Allen and Miss Farrow get tied together by some Italian mobsters. As they struggle to get free, tied face to face as they are and on top of a table, Rose remembers an act he once managed for an escape artist and suggests they "wriggle" free. It is an obvious laugh but one that is so obviously needed there.

Written and directed by Allen, with photography by Gordon Willis (that makes the Italian faces into caricatures), "Broadway Danny Rose" is a disappointment when compared with his best ("Manhattan" and "Annie Hall") but consistent with his recent filming style and intent in "Zelig" — narratives that take on a life of their own.

Violinist Benny Kim

Symphony to host guest violinist

Benny Kim will join the Midland-Odessa Symphony for its fifth subscription concert of the season in a performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Performances will be Friday at Odessa's Permian High School Auditorium and Saturday at Midland's Lee High School Auditorium. Both concerts begin at 8 p.m. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door. For more information call 563-5269.

At 21, Kim has a remarkable number of honors to his credit. He won the Young Concert Artists International Audition in Spring 1983 and opened the Young Concert Artists 1983-84 New York Series with a recital which was called "dazzling" by the New York Times.

In 1980, he won the Chicago Symphony Youth Auditions and performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the age of 18. He has also appeared with, among others, the St. Louis Symphony, the Aspen Philharmonic and the Cosomopolitan Symphony of New York.

In addition to Kim's performance, local talent Marilyn Allen will be featured as narrator on the program in Sir William Walton's "Facade Suite." Ms. Allen is a co-founder and past president of the Texas Non-Profit Theatres and Texas Theatre Council.

The symphony program will also offer Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony," Milhaud's "Creation of the World" and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives.

Museum of Southwest hosting showing of Maine artist's works

The Museum of the Southwest is hosting the first major retrospective exhibition of works by Alfred Gwynne Morang in the Thomas Gallery today through April 8.

Consisting of more than 100 paintings, prints and drawings, "Alfred Morang: A Retrospective Exhibition" traces Morang's artistic development from his earliest seascapes painted in his native Maine to the landscapes, still lifes and bar room scenes of his Santa Fe years.

"This exhibit is a premiere exhibit in many ways," says Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the Museum. "First, it is the largest exhibition of Alfred Morang's work ever put together. Since it is a retrospective, the viewer is confronted with a powerful visual documentation of the development and changes in Morang's style. It is an extremely provocative exhibit because you can see how he experimented and then finally perfected certain techniques.

"Secondly, the exhibit provides a great opportunity for the Museum to make a major contribution in the study and documentation of art in the Southwest. Most of our 'blockbuster' exhibits have either been pre-packaged traveling exhibits or of specific local interest. The Morang exhibit has given us the chance to be the first institution to research, document and exhibit works by this nationally significant artist. We've had support and encouragement from galleries, collectors and museums across the country."

Hours at the Museum are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. No charge for admission.

Celebrities honor Grace Kelly

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and many of the nation's top celebrities join this weekend in honoring the memory and the commitment of Grace Kelly, the Philadelphia beauty who became an Oscar-winning Hollywood star and then princess of Monaco.

The occasion is the launching of the Princess Grace Foundation, established to support talented young students and professionals in dance and theater arts — a project to which she dedicated much of her time prior to her death two years ago.

Beginning with a Friday evening reception in the White House, where Prince Rainier, Princess Caroline, Prince Albert and Princess Stephanie were house guests of the Reagans, the events included a Saturday luncheon and fashion show and a gala ball.

'Terms of Endearment' rates three handkerchiefs

A Review

"Terms of Endearment," written and directed by James L. Brooks, is a heartfelt, three-hander-kerchief, Oscar-contending movie that shows Debra Winger at her unstudied best as Emma Horton, daughter, wife, and mother.

Her mother, Aurora (Shirley MacLaine), is a confectionery-pink widowed Houstonian, who lives next door to boozing ex-astronaut, Garrett Breedlove (Jack Nicholson), and is content to host proper dinner parties for adoring suitors whose sexual intentions resemble the puff pastry.

Inevitable as it is, the relationship between Aurora and Garrett is, nevertheless, slow to develop, with casual pronoucements over the hedge, laced with sexual innuendo Aurora at first finds offensive. But like the ritual dancing of fighters in the ring, these two go through the paces that result in a charming and tender courtship, fraught with the complexities of adults falling in love again.

For Emma, life is growing up with a critical mother, marrying out of school and rearing three children while her husband, Flap, pursues academic credentials and graduate students. It's not perfect, living in paint-chipped clapboard houses, scraping for the food and avoiding fights with Aurora over Flap, but Emma manages an uneasy peace. In fact, she keeps it all together for everyone until what happens to her forces the others to finally grow up themselves.

"Terms of Endearment," rated PG, is shot (photography by Andrzej Bartkowiak) in a parallelism that shows the two women in the transitional stages of life — with the mother and daughter moving freely between their roles. Though this style works well in preserving both story lines, at times it makes the action jumpy as we go back and forth. And the over-use of the close-up makes "Terms" claustrophobic as the actors wrangle nose to nose.

Obviously, this intended style provokes the confrontation between the characters, but the viewer may find the effect smothering, especially in the early scenes.

All these techniques aside, we are gradually pulled in by the outstanding performances and the plot and are involved almost without our knowledge. For "Terms" wrenches from us the feelings we'd just as soon deny like Aurora tries to do.

"Terms" also has a superb supporting cast in John Lithgow as Emma's one indiscretion, in Troy Bishop as Emma's oldest son whose silence speaks louder than words about Emma's failing marriage, and in Jeff Daniels as Flap.

Though calculated for melodrama (not unlike "On Golden Pond"), "Terms" is not maudlin. And the performances by Jack Nicholson and Miss MacLaine serve to stabilize the emotional high seas. But technically, "Terms" keeps me at a distance and, unlike the lion's share of critical praise "Terms" has received, is not my favorite movie this year.

Beulah Casey is movie critic for the Reporter-Telegram.

For "Terms" wrenches from us the feelings we'd just as soon deny like Aurora tries to do.

Drawing in students

Students at Travis Elementary, one of the Ector County Independent School District's three magnets instituted in 1983-1984, work on their Environmental Study Center. They have the option of a full range of special programs in addition to regular courses as part of the extended-day magnet system.

Ector County still in court battle

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In 1970, Midland and Ector County independent school districts were told by the federal government to integrate their schools.

While Midland has instituted its cluster concept to the satisfaction of the courts and minorities, ECISD remains in a struggle with several groups opposing the desegregation program.

A May 9 hearing is scheduled in federal court at Midland — with the Justice Department, ECISD, Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund, West Side Parents for Quality Education and Texas State Teacher's Association involved.

All these groups, with the exception of the teacher's association, will be allowed to participate in the proceedings, presenting evidence and cross-examining witnesses brought by the others. The teacher's association cannot present evidence, but can cross-examine witnesses.

The years of disagreement have left the issue for resolution by the courts, with little chance all those involved ever coming to a consensus.

"WHAT ONE GROUP thinks is appropriate, the other doesn't," said ECISD Superintendent Bill Holm. "You have different people coming at you with different interests."

Because there is an existing court order, the school district feels inclined to support the plan the court has prescribed. "We don't have any choice but to enforce what is in place," said Holm.

But the decision by a New Orleans appeals court to call another hearing leaves this issue in doubt.

Meanwhile, MALDEF — the legal group defending the interests of a the local Committee for Redress, Unity, Concern and Integrity at All Levels — insists the plan ECISD supports is unacceptable.

Norma Cantu, MALDEF attorney, stressed what she called "the bad track record" of magnet schools in other parts of the country. She also opposes the voluntary approach of the magnet program.

"THE MAGNET SCHOOL approach is one where the responsibility to volunteer is on the parents," said Ms. Cantu. "The parents that don't believe in integration don't have to volunteer. Those parents are rewarded for wanting to stay segregated."

Holm disputes the charge that magnets have a bad record. He referred to a recent court ruling in Bakersfield, Ca., in which that system's magnet school concept for elementary and junior high schools was acceptable when coupled with some busing.

"I don't think the implication is there that they're going to change the minds of certain people," said Holm in disagreement with Ms. Cantu's suggestion that parents against integration would be able to avoid changing with the magnet program. "If that was true, you could have one magnet and everyone could take it and get away from the integration."

"It causes people to think and then make a change," said Holm of the magnet philosophy. Rather than forcing the integration, ECISD has decided to use the voluntary approach.

"THE ORIGINAL motivating factor was a positive approach," he said. "That change, in all likelihood, comes about a lot faster and certainly with more quality to it."

"How long are these parents expected to volunteer?" wondered Ms. Cantu.

The integration ratios sent by the court call for at least 40 percent minority in each school. ECISD's plan keeps the levels very close to this minimum level, another sore point for MALDEF.

"You can still tell a black school or a brown school by looking at it," said Ms. Cantu. "That's still segregated."

"Our attitude is we'd like to have better than 40 percent minorities," said Holm. "Philosophically, we would like to to exceed minimum standards."

The programs' quality is expected to keep the parents volunteering their children, said Holm.

THE SCHOOLS were naturally segregated before the court order, said Holm, because they served the surrounding neighborhoods.

Magnet schools extend day, program

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — "An attractive choice for your child" is the motto of the Ector County Independent School District's magnet school program.

Phase II of the program, outlined in a federal court order aimed at desegregation of the school district, offers elementary students a variety of specialized areas of study as incentives for traveling away from their usual school to another neighborhood.

Eight magnet schools offer the different programs — from an academic academy to a concentration on the performing arts. Five will present the "extended-day" possibilities to its student body.

By adding hours to students' schooldays, the basic curriculum can be developed along with the special programs. The schoolday runs from 7:45 a.m. to 5:15 p.m.

Three magnet schools, Blackshear, Hays and Ireland, opened during Phase I last fall. Blackshear buses children interested in its programs in from north Oessa, which is primarily Anglo-Saxon. Hays draws northsiders to its school near I-20, while Ireland brings southside minorities to the northside school.

THE THREE, along with regular course offerings, have extended-day programs (One of the five new schools, Noel, will also be extended day).

Parents will decide each semester which program their kindergarten-through-sixth-grade child will take. Choices include arts and crafts, science, choral music, instrumental music, drama, computers, nutrition and foods, sports skills and tutoring.

Except at Noel, these programs are entering their second year. Five more magnets will join them for the next school year, each offering different specialized programs.

Reagan Elementary's "Academic Academy" will feature a back-to-basics structured education in the core courses of reading, writing and arithmetic — along with social studies, science, physical education and fine arts. Parents will be expected to grade these assignments four nights a week.

Reagan — located near the commercial center of Odessa — will be entirely magnet students with all neighborhood students bused out unless they qualify for the academy.

"THIS IS OPEN only to children that are at or above grade level," said Dorothy Prince, director of elementary education. "Reagan is really a school you'll have to qualify for."

Rather than accelerating the study of the academy's enrollment, Mrs. Prince said the object would be to broaden their education in each area. "It will probably mean students will be at an accelerated level," she said, although accelerated courses are not offered until the seventh grade.

Visual and performing arts will be stressed at Milam Elementary, located in south Odessa. Neighborhood students and others bused in will have their choice of visual arts, theater, singing and instrumental music. Specific offerings will include handbells, classical guitar, piano, Suzuki violin, arts and crafts and advanced gymnastics.

Travis will be the math/science magnet. It will also feature its three-year-old Environmental Study Center. Travis students will study math and science in depth, with an emphasis on the laboratory and discovery.

Self-paced Computer Assisted Instruction will be available for the elementary students at Travis. This program calls for the teacher to monitor the student's progress by consulting a computer print-out. The day will be extended to 4:15 p.m. to accomodate these studies.

Foreign languages, remedial reading labs and computers will be concentrated on at Zavala during regular-length schooldays in 1984-1985. Conversational French and Spanish will be taught to the youngsters in small doses, along with studies of the two cultures. "We want to teach them to use it," said Mrs. Prince.

WEAK READERS will be "pulled out" of regular classes and placed in remedial classes for one class period each day. High-intensity tutoring, corrective reading, computer-assisted instruction and "A Room of Fifteen" will be used to give the remedial readers individual attention.

Fourth graders will begin studying computers, their languages and operations, and careers available in related fields. "This is for children that are interested in getting into it in more depth," Mrs. Prince explained.

Testing in math, reading, science and music will keep the district abreast of the student's progress in their specialized areas and regular course work. "They may not have the ability," said Mrs. Prince, so the tests would be used to make appropriate changes.

Counselors will not be added, so each one will serve two schools. Teachers will be hired for the after-school instruction and specialized programs, which means more expense by the school district.

"There is a cost factor," she said, although the exact impact is unknown.

WHILE THE DISTRICT must be prepared to abandon these plans should the federal courts rule against their magnet-school approach, they are encouraged by applications made for Phase II programs and second-year interest shown for the three extended day programs.

More than 1,000 people from all 25 schools, as far away as Goldsmith (23 miles from Odessa), applied for Phase I in 1983 — 685 the first day of registration, March 1.

This year's registration includes 814 wanting to be considered for the Phase II programs, 176 new applications for Phase I schools and 600 of 678 that were in the Phase I program this year applying to continue next year.

The program stresses giving parents and their children "a choice." But failure of the community to react to the program would almost certainly mean forced busing ordered by the courts.

"If we can't do it successfully, the judge can go back and rule again," said Mrs. Prince. An appeals court has ordered a new hearing on the concept, which minority groups are opposing, and is scheduled for March 9 in Midland's federal court.

In the face of pressure to integrate their schools, the ECISD has developed this voluntary alternative to encourage students to ride buses across town to school.

Correction

In a story Wednesday, Feb. 15, it was stated that Lee Roy Jackson, convicted slayer of Midland grocer William Isaac "Bill" Dennis, had testified during his trial that "Dennis struck him with a club" prior to the fatal shooting.

That is not the testimony Jackson had given. Instead, Jackson said Dennis "leaned over the counter to strike me" with what Jackson thought was a club, not stating that he had been hit.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Have we made an error? Call us at 682-5311, Ext. 130, and a correction will be published.

Statistics say Midland's income third highest

From Staff and Wire Reports

Even though 1982 was the beginning of the end of the oil boom, figures released Friday by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics show Midlanders had the third highest income in the nation.

The average annual salary of Midland employees in 1982 was $21,171 — behind Anchorage, Alaska, with $26,791 and Flint, Mich., with $21,468.

"I would attribute it to, first, the concentration of administrative personnel in the Midland area and, second, a carryover from the boom-type period experienced in 1981," said Grant Billingsley, executive director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

"I'd be surprised if it's that high now," he added. "We have had a change in our own employment. We still have high employment, but it's in more of a moderate portion of the salary scale. We have experienced some stabilization in salary ranges in the last 18 months, plus we have experienced broadening of our local economic base in the service and retail sector."

Billingsley pointed out that Midland ranks very high statewide in the education level of its population and in the amount of office space available. "That's a reflection of the concentration of administrative/white-collar personnel," he said.

The average salary in Midland in 1982 was nearly $4,000 more than the average salaries of all metropolitan areas combined.

That nationwide average was up 6.8 percent over 1981, according to BLS statistics.

In its annual survey of pay levels in various cities and adjoining suburbs, the Labor Department bureau found that salaries and wages rose in all but a half-dozen areas where heavy manufacturing industries were hard hit by the recession.

The lowest annual pay figures were recorded by Jacksonville, N.C., $11,152; McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, Texas, $11,336; and Lewiston-Auburn, Maine, $11,950.

The figures are based on a federal-state information sharing program in which payroll data for the 88.3 million people covered by the unemployment insurance compensation program are reported to the BLS.

GARY OTT

My pledge: Strongest drive is avoiding rejection

At first glance, the mission seemed relatively simple.

Go collect pledges for a fund drive being conducted by a reputable organization here in Midland. I was given a list of local businesses and instructed to make personal contact with each. I would be expected to return within 48 hours with cash (or completed pledge cards) in hand.

Now, for some of you longtime pillers of the community this sort of thing is old hat. After all, you've had experience. You know the people you are calling upon. You deal in large sums of money on a daily basis in your jobs. In short, fund-raising is one of those community services that has become expected of you...and one you have graciously accepted.

But for others of us, this constitutes a traumatic experience. It is something new. We do not feel comfortable soliciting money from others. In fact, we often feel guilty just asking for a loan, and that's with us being charged 18 percent interest (meaning, of course, it is the bank that should feel badly, not us.) Still, our guilt feelings persist. Somehow, we feel silly asking for money. Like a teen-ager begging for the family car.

You can take this line of thinking even further. When requesting a loan — and you are both willing and capable of paying the interest — the bank can be most corperative. After all, they are making money by doing business with you.

But when soliciting funds for a local organization, the donor gets nothing tangible in return...just a feeling of helping others. And since the donor can't put that "feeling" on the dinner table, the solicitor (in this case, me) often finds himself being rejected.

Indeed, it was that feeling of rejection that bothered me most. In most cases, the people wouldn't even let me begin my spiel. And that's a pity because it would have been a very professional presentation. I had carefully studied the background material provided me and was armed with every conceiveable fact and figure about the organization anyone could possibly want.

Unfortunately, no one wanted them. Oh, the people were nice enough, I suppose. But they were equally emphatic in their decision. "Sorry, young man," they would say, "But I think I'll pass this time." And, with that, I would reply, "Thanks anyway," tuck my tail between my legs and scurry off to the next rejection point.

This continued for what seemed like an eternity (actually I was only given four businesses). But each time the feeling was the same. Rejection.

Of all the human emotions, perhaps rejection cuts the deepest. It is as though someone is labeling you a failure. You attempt something and it gets refuted. You seek praise and receive nothing. You may try and hide the pain, but inside it hurts just the same.

You may try and tell yourself the original mission was not all that important to begin with, but even that bit of rationale really doesn't help. It is the fact that you or your work was rejected that matters. What it was is not important. Acceptance is the key.

So you four businessmen I contacted please send in those pledge cards so I can get on with my life.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Douglas Barker

Douglas Wesley Barker, 39, of 3117 Roosevelt Ave. died at his home Friday.

Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Pioneer Cemetery in Graham. Services will be directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Barker was born July 21, 1944, in Graham and was reared in Midland, where he attended public schools. He was a graduate of Tarrant County Junior College and majored in drafting. He was a drafting engineer for Midland Plumbing Co.

Barker was a veteran of the U.S. Army.

Survivors include his mother, Lona B. Barker of Midland; his father, Elbert W. Barker of Mineral Wells; two brothers, John Barker of Odessa and Tracy Barker of Mineral Wells; and a stepsister, Janice Kruger of Oldsmar, Fla.

C.E. Staples Sr.

Clarence Eugene Staples Sr., 77, of Midland died Friday at an Odessa hospital.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at McMikle Funeral Home in Charleston, Mo. Burial will be in Griggs Cemetery in Wyatt, Mo. Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home of Odessa is in charge of local arrangements.

Staples was born Feb. 28, 1906, in Wyatt. He was a building contractor.

Survivors include his wife, Ruby Staples of Memphis, Tenn.; a son, Clarence Staples Jr. of Midland; two daughters, Gloria Lee Spencer of Orlando, Fla., and Frances Braden of Knoxville, Tenn.; four brothers, Edwin Staples of Daytona Beach, Fla., Shirley Staples, George Staples and Sidney Staples, all of Charleston; eight grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Gearold Noland

HEMPHILL — Gearold Leo Noland, 70, of Hemphill died at his home Thursday. He was the father of Thurman Noland of Midland.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday at Richard W. Box Funeral Home in Crane. Burial will be in Crane County Cemetery.

Noland was born Sept. 10, 1913, in St. Mary's, W.Va. He was an oilfield worker.

Other survivors include his wife, three sons, two brothers, two sisters and six grandchildren.

Higher starting pay for teachers suggested

AUSTIN (AP) — Public schools in Texas will have to offer teachers starting salaries of $15,200 a year if they want to compete with other professions for top college graduates, a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Public Education was told Satuday.

Currently the minimum salary for a beginning teacher in Texas public schools is $11,110 a year, and the average salary for a new teacher is $14,400 a year.

Subcommittee chairman Rep. Bill Haley said no estimate has been made on how much a proposal to raise the recommended minimum to $15,200 would cost the state or school districts.

The subcommittee took no action Saturday, but it is scheduled to make a recommendation by March 5 to the entire committee, which is studying Texas schools.

The proposal to raise salaries for beginning teachers was made to accompany a proposed "career ladder" for teachers that the sucommittee is considering.

The proposed promotion system would include four steps that would rank teachers on classroom performance, job-related education after college, years of experience and at least one exam on subject matter and teaching methods.

Consultants who studied teacher salaries suggested to the subcommittee that the new salaries take effect in September.

They also suggested that the new promotion system be phased in during the next two years.

Subcommittee member Will Davis of Austin proposed a method of evaluating teachers for promotion from step to step of the career ladder. Davis' proposed system would have inlcuded a written test as well as evaluation of classroom performance.

"We're going to have to have some kind of testing or we won't be able to get the salary increase through the Legislature," said Haley, D-Center.

Ed Small of Austin cautioned against putting too much emphasis on the written test instead of evaluation of teaching skills.

"We're hurrying through something here that could destroy morale in a minute," Dean Corrigan of Texas A&M said.

Davis withdrew his proposal when other board members suggested it would be better to have the consultants outline a method of teacher evaluation.

The consultants told the subcommittee that by fall of 1986, beginning teachers should be paid $17,000 a year and so-called master teachers with a minimum of nine years experience and outstanding records should make a minimum of $25,970.

The salary figures were based on a 10-month work year.

Subcommittee member Elizabeth McNaughton of Houston asked the consultants to make recommendations based on a 12-month work year. "Let's make teaching a full time job," she said.

Ed Small of Austin said the 10-month proposal gave new graduates a choice of "working 12 months in another profession for $18,000 or go into teaching and work 10 months for $15,000."

Some committee members were upset that the consultants, from the Dallas consulting firm of Waters, Trego & Davis, made no recommendations for salaries of teachers beyond the first year of teaching who had not reached the master teacher level.

Consultant John Davis promised to have those recommendations ready for the next subcommittee meeting, scheduled for March 2.

Davis said he arrived at the recommended minimum salary after studying beginning pay among new graduates in the humanities, economics, accounting, business and marketing. He said those fields would tend to attract the same students as teaching.

Ruling also affects secondary students

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Elementary school students weren't the only ones affected by the desegregation ruling in August 1982. Secondary students in the junior high and high schools also felt the changes.

Within three weeks of the court order, Ector High students were bused to Permian and Odessa High, with Ector (the lone southside high school) changed to a junior high.

"They did quite a bit of shifting and they only had three weeks to do it," said Dorothy Prince, director of elementary education. "We've had a lot of people unhappy, but most have accepted it."

Ector had housed ninth through 12th grade students, with Blackshear feeding it seventh and eighth graders. Ector had a smaller capacity than the two northside high schools, making it the logical choice for the change.

"They expect you to have a knockdown, drag-out when you put kids together, but that just hasn't happened," said Mrs. Prince.

Much of the criticism of ECISD's plan is over what opponents, specifically the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, call the "one-way busing" of high school students from the south to the north, with none displaced in the other direction.

But Superintendent Bill Holm points out that Ector could only accommodate 1,400, with Permian and Odessa highs able to house up to 2,400. He suggests that Ector was the best alternative.

MALDEF's attorney, Norma Cantu, says that northside minority high schoolers were bused south before the court order. Holm recalls that one development, North El Rancho, petitioned to be bused, rather than go to predominantly Anglo-Saxon northside schools in 1973.

The federal courts will be asked to decide the fate of ECISD's plan March 9 in Midland federal court. Until a change is ordered, the school district will continue the current plan.

Program issues date to desegregation order

Holm recalled that some northside Hispanics were bused, at their request, to southside schools after they petitioned the school district. He went on to defend the district on this point by referring to busing of vocational students between north and southside high schools, depending on which program they sought, before the court order was issued.

The reversal leaves all those involved in a bad situation. Ms. Cantu asked, "What kind of a waste of time are we looking at?"

"WHAT WE'RE arguing is 'what are you going to do in the future?' " she said. "We waste money and waste time."

She welcomed an out-of-court settlement that would leave the system "unitary" — meaning the courts would not get involved as long as the system followed the agreement reached between all the parties involved. "The courts have pulled us apart," she said.

But Ms. Cantu disputes the success when 40 percent integration has been accomplished. "That's their goal to keep the school minority."

"We think we have sufficient evidence to show that the plan we have is a good plan," said Holm.

Only capital expenditures, at least $500,000 to modify the schools, have been held up, with registration for next year's magnets continuing.

"If this didn't work we'd have to go to a system that is forced," he said. "We're going to go with what we've got," said Holm. "We think they (the system's more than 25,000 students) are very well satisfied with it and they're receiving the kind of education they've been asking for all along."

It will be up to Federal District Court Judge Harry Hudspeth to sort out the different views March 9. April 1 is the deadline set for his ruling.

"It kept the district separate," said Ms. Cantu, "It's called a dual school system."

The MALDEF attorney charged the district with "busing for desegregation" as recently as 1982 when northside Hispanics were bused to the southside.

Speaker views Latin American policy, needs

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — America's military aid to El Salvador is a way of safeguarding our massive economic aid to the region just as NATO protects our Western European investment, a foreign service official told an audience at Corpus Christi State University.

Melville E. Blake Jr., minister-couselor in the U.S. Foreign Service, was one of four speakers at a conference at the university, "Latin American Turmoil, United States Response."

Blake has been working on a bill that implements and funds recommendations made by the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America. The legislation provides $7.9 billion to thm0region between 1985-89, he said.

"Many people ask why the United States should dedicate such resources to the problems of Central America at a time of such massive national deficits," Blake said.

But America has a security interest in Central America, in the "southern frontier" and in the Caribbean through which pass half America's petroleum imports.

"In 1942 the German submarine fleet sank more maritime ships in the Caribbean than they did in the Atlantic," said Blake.

"It seems hysterical to mention this, but we must remember that Cuba is only 90 miles from our coast."

Others on the conference program disputed Blake's claim that Cuba poses a legitimate threat to U.S. security.

Dr. Franklin Knight of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Richard Adams of the University of Texas at Austin and Jose Luis Restrepo, chief of staff of the Organization of American States all advocated non-interference by the United States.

Knight said America's founding fathers first proposed the notion that "whenever a form of government becomes destructive it is the right of the people to change it to one that is likely to promote safety and happiness."

The "contagious and intoxicating spirit released on the world" by the American Revolution of 1776 has reverberated through 20th century revolutions in Mexico, Russia, Peru, China, Argentina and now Central America.

"This turmoil isn't so surprising and we shouldn't be so suddenly upset about it," he said. "Whether we like it or not, we can't control it."

Knight, a history professor with special expertise in Cuba and Caribbean nations, argued against the idea that Cuban influence is behind all revolutions.

In Barbados, Suriname, Jamaica, Angola and elsewhere, Cuban influence has declined since 1980, he said. He said this decline should be reflected in U.S. foreign policy.

Restrepo said change is needed in Latin America and that change always arrives with some form of turmoil.

Pat Estes seeks re-election to hospital board post

From Staff Reports

Pat Estes, a member of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors, filed Friday as a candidate in the April 7 hospital district election.

Only two positions on the five-member board come up for re-election this year. Board President Tevis Herd also announced his decision to seek re-election.

Mrs. Estes, who was appointed to the hospital board in September 1979, has served as secretary of the board since October 1979.

She was elected to two-year terms as a director in April 1980 and April 1982.

"I want to strive to keep our hospital a first-class institution for Midland County and area citizens with the highest quality medical care," Mrs. Estes said. "With the economy as it is at this time, we must operate the hospital in a conservative and an efficient manner."

Pat Estes

Mrs. Estes and her husband, Button, reside at 2000 W. Tennessee. They have two children.

Sign-up time extended

The administration announced Saturday it has extended for three weeks the sign-up deadline for this year's crop program (acreage reduction and loan program).

The new March 16 deadline applies to cotton, feed grains, rice and wheat. In addition, the Department of Agriculture has changed the summer fallow rules to make them the same as they were before last year's Payment In Kind program.

Worker sues Aramco over alcohol sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — A U.S. oil worker sentenced to 200 lashes and two years in a Saudi prison for running an illegal whiskey still has filed a $60 million lawsuit against Aramco, claiming his employer was responsible for his plight.

Alcohol is barred in Saudi Arabia, a strict Moslem nation, but Robert Taggart claims that the Arabian American Oil Co. provided instructions and supplies to make alcoholic beverages to workers there.

In his suit, filed last week in federal court here, Taggart alleges the company then told police in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, that he was running a still at his home. He was arrested and remains in jail.

Taggart also charged that Aramco turned against him so his job as division manager could be filled by a Saudi citizen under the company's program to replace Americans with native employees. Aramco also fired his wife, who worked as a computer programmer, the suit said.

Jim Knight, an Aramco spokesman in Washington, D.C., declined to comment on the suit. "It's inappropriate to discuss this case in view of the pending litigation," he said.

The couple has asked U.S. District Judge George Cire to order Aramco to pay $60 million in compensation and punitive damages. Aramco, a consortium of major American oil companies, employs about 61,000 people. About half the employees are Saudi natives.

The couple's attorney, Bruce Locke of Houston, said Taggart is appealing his sentence, which he received in December, and the 200 lashes will not be administered until the matter is settled. Mrs. Taggart is under house arrest, Locke said.

An unnamed spokesman for the State Department said the case is being monitored, but the U.S. government has not lodged a protest with the Saudi government.

Taggart went to work for Aramco in Houston in 1978. He was transferred to the Middle East two years later.

Use of alcohol is forbidden by the Islamic faith.

Transplant patient progresses

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 6½-year-old Texas girl who underwent the world's first simultaneous heart and liver transplant operation began taking oral medications and fluids Saturday.

"Her heart continues to function as expected," said Dr. Basil Zitelli, staff pediatrician at Children's Hospital.

Stormie Jones of Cumby, Texas, was listed in critical but stable condition, considered normal after transplant surgery. No complications had been reported, Zitelli said.

Doctors said before Stormie underwent the history-making operation that she had less than a year to live.

Two teams of surgeons implanted first a donor heart, then a liver in a 16-hour operation that began Monday evening.

The organs had been donated by Katie Rebstock, 4, of Macedon, N.Y., who died Monday afternoon following an automobile accident.

Stormie, a brown-eyed blonde, was born with a rare genetic disease that elevated her blood cholesterol to dangerous levels, damaging both her heart and liver.

Doctors hope the new liver will correct the cholesterol imbalance, according to hospital spokesman Dick Riebling.

Local history book timed to roll before centennial

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Progress is being made on the Midland County History Book, a project which will detail the county's history from 1880 to 1926.

Final manuscript must be in the hands of the publisher, Taylor Publishing Co. with main headquarters in Dallas, by May 30. A limited edition of about 1,000 copies may roll off the presses as soon as next Christmas, but definitely in time for the celebration of Midland's centennial in 1985.

The book is being sponsored by Midland County Historical Society. More than 50 persons in committees composed of members of the Society and Midland County Historical Commission are involved in the project.

"It's been on our books for a good while," said Society president Nancy McKinley. "We've known the urgency of recording the early history of Midland, the part that really isn't on record, the part that you have to dig for, that's in the minds and hearts of the people who lived it, who came here and who stayed and who have left us this heritage."

The book will not detail the oil era, however.

"The reason that we shut it off at 1926," said Ken Dawson, "is that this was just prior to the oil business hitting Midland. Most of that history from 1926 on is pretty well documented and is going to be retrievable. But it was this early history that we were afraid if we didn't get it now it was going to be lost and gone forever."

The book marks a first for Midland County, which never before has been the subject of an extensive published history.

The reason for doing this, according to Mrs. McKinley, "is that this record does not exist, the record of the pioneers who came here from 1880 on. Those are just scattered records that have never been put together and we would like to pay this tribute to our pioneers."

Different chapters of the volume will be devoted to a general history of the county, which is being worked on in sections by committee members; a history of pioneer families provided by family members; banking; churches; schools; and humorous vignettes. Numerous photos will be included.

Committee members are still soliciting information.

"We want to be especially attentive to any families we have overlooked or who we don't know about," said Mrs. McKinley. "We are particularly anxious to contact some members of all of the early families."

The project officially got under way a couple of years ago, and with the assigning of committees and projects "we're really getting firmed up and know where we want to go and what we want to include," said Mrs. McKinley. "And we've had some great, great response from our early families."

Dawson noted that much work remains to be done on the book and that persons who would like to assist need to contact Society or Commission members. Specific needs are in the areas of transcribing oral history tapes, professional copying of historic photographs, editing, promoting and selling.

Book committee members hope to have Midland's centennial logo emblazoned on the book's cover. That logo is being designed by artist-sculptor-historian-author Bill Leftwich of Fort Davis.

Donations from individuals and businesses are being accepted, as are pre-publication orders. Mailing address of Midland County Historical Society is Box 11405, Midland 79702.

The history book is the Society's most ambitious project in its 28 years of existence, rivaled only by its restoration of the Taylor Brown-Sarah Dorsey Home at 213 N. Weatherford. And yet Mrs. McKinley is convinced of the volume's importance.

"It's just that pretty soon," she said, "the record will be lost and we won't have anybody who lived the day and who really knew."

She's 'the Dear Abby of dogs'

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

June Dotson is known in Midland for her efforts on behalf of the animal world.

Midlander in Profile

She is called the dog lady.

In Midland, her name is synonymous with animals. People who have a question about or a problem with animals call her at all hours. They send her donations. They write her c/o the local animal shelter. They bring her injured or unwanted pets.

"It's kinda like I'm the Dear Abby of dogs," June Dotson said in a raspy, barely-audible voice. She had come down with laryngitis from chasing after a stray dog. "For whatever reason, people have singled me out. I'm glad they feel they have someone to turn to."

Mrs. Dotson's goal is to raise public consciousness about animals, and she does this through letters to the editor and private and public efforts. "I'd like to get people to do something about it (animal neglect and abuse) rather than just look the other way."

Each week Dotson Datsun runs an advertisement in the newspaper — not with a photo of a 280 Z or a King Cab, but with an adorable, adoptable Dotson Dog from the animal shelter.

"That's created some problems because people think I'm a dog lover and not a cat lover. Really, I'm an animal lover," she explained. But she says she doesn't have any cats because they don't get along well with her five dogs.

"I always say that God knew man needed a better friend than man and that's why he created dogs."

Mrs. Dotson is a member of the National Humane Society, an informal local group calling itself "Friends of the Animals" and the now-disbanded Humane Society for the Permian Basin.

Dalton Byerly, director of Midland Animal Control, said he has a great deal of respect for Mrs. Dotson.

"A lot of people have tagged her as an animal fanatic. That's far from true. What she is is a concerned person with a love for animals. She spends a lot of time and probably a lot of money in her efforts to find homes for animals."

Unlike animal fanatics, Byerly said, Mrs. Dotson recognizes a need for euthanasia. She and animal control workers realize it is better to humanely destroy animals than allow them to breed, starve, get injured or be abused.

"If anybody has ever seen a poor animal lay in the street and die they'd know it's better," she said staunchly.

Last year Mrs. Dotson paid $190 for two dogs that had been confiscated and auctioned off after law enforcement officers raided a pit bulldog fighting arena. She bought them because she didn't want someone else to use them for the same purpose. Then she had the animals destroyed.

"People have said, 'I'd rather be put in the ring and be allowed to fight for my life than have you own me.' But once they've been trained to fight, those dogs really aren't good for anything else. I understand the sight of blood will trigger them off again."

While her efforts are applauded by some and snickered at by others, some people resent them. She has received threatening phone calls from some who feel she interferes.

And she's been chastised for having such a strong interest in animals rather than issues such as abortion or child abuse.

"If each person would choose one cause and stay with it, I think these problems wouldn't exist," she said. "If everyone cared, no one would have a job to do."

Inaction problem

To say the United States has an immigration problem isn't exactly accurate. Just about everyone in government today knows full well that this country definitely has a problem with immigration. It doesn't control its borders and that's foolish.

Recent figures on illegal entry into the United States revealed that in the last year, the Immigration and Naturalization Service's agents apprehended thousands upon thousands of illegal aliens. Those statistics reveal that an estimated 3,288 aliens enter the nation illegally each day — over two each minute.

Those illegal aliens aggravate this nation's stifling problems of crime and all too frequently end up on welfare rolls even though efforts are being made to minimize that burden.

Congressman Phil Gramm, on a stopover in Midland Friday promoting his candidacy for the Republican nomination for U.S. senator from Texas, confirmed that the illegal immigration situation causes numerous problems. They're not going to be solved overnight because if a man is living just over the river in Mexico and has two children who are starving, that man's going to come to this country if he can find work here, said Gramm.

The congressman was using that argument in an explanation of how an expansion of the Caribbean Basin Initiatives could benefit both Mexico and the United States. It could make Mexico a wealthier neighbor and it could reduce the communist menace so close to the United States.

An expansion of the Caribbean Basin Initiatives certainly can be argued as one way to address the illegal alien problem. Fact is, there are any number of ways that could help the situation, including President Reagan's proposed increase in the number of Border Patrol agents.

But changing the nation's immigration policy has been on the Congressional cookstove for a number of year's now and continually ends up on a back burner. Last year, revising the policy was stymied when House Speaker Tip O'Neill would not schedule it for action. He felt there wasn't time. This session O'Neill has given immigration priority status, but guess what? This is an election year and, consequently, nothing may come of the immigration bill while the congressmen and congresswomen tried to get re-elected.

This country doesn't have an immigration problem. This country has an inaction problem.

Reagan, a young 73

The old saying has it that "you are as young as you feel." In that case, President Ronald Reagan is a young 73, for he still enjoys chopping wood and riding horses on his ranch, not to mention joyfully jousting with reporters at his press conferences.

On the occasion of his celebrating his three score and thirteenth anniversary the other day, he quipped that he was simply marking the 34th anniversary of his 39th birthday, which would put him in the age group of the late Jack Benny, more or less.

No president in American history, with the exception of President Eisenhower, during the final few weeks in the White House has been 70 years old. But that does not mean it is unique for national leaders to hit that peak and go beyond, and while still clear of mind and strong of heart.

Both West Germany's Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Yugoslavia's President Josip Broz Tito were leaders of their nations until they turned 87. Great Britain's redoubtable Prime Minister Winston Churchill was still growling menacingly at the opposition at the age of 80. And France's venerable soldier and politician, Charles De Gaulle, passed the three-score-ten mark without blinking an eyelash or missing a step.

So Ronald Reagan is following in the path of these challenging patterns of longevity. Americans wish him many more years of the good health his doctors say he now enjoys.

Another View:

Call it expendable

One of the longest, loudest and most confused wrangles in contemporary politics — the debate over "defense spending vs. spending for human needs" — achieved remarkable clarity in an instant when William F. Buckley asked defense critics:

"Then you do not consider freedom a human need?"

That will not end the debate, or squabble, although it should. But does it not put it in a valuable new light? It is a potent question.

The brawl over "defense spending vs. spending for human needs" began in earnest with the start of the war on poverty and has gone on ever since.

The "human needs" people generally talk in terms of reducing defense spending by 25 percent or more and using the money thus saved to provide more food, clothing, housing, education, medical care and perhaps travel and entertainment and recreation for "the needy."

The "human needs" people do not have what President Jimmy Carter called "an inordinate fear of communism." On the contrary, they appear content to let the Soviet Union expand its overseas empire, unhindered, with a growing array of "client states" in the Middle East, the Far East, Africa, the Americas and elsewhere.

Some of the "human needs" people believe not a cent should be "wasted" on defense because they do not believe that freedom is a human need.

But those who do not believe that freedom is a human need will not raise much of a fuss when it is taken away from the people by any government — their own or that of a foreign power whose troops could enter, once all defenses were replaced by giveaways, with little more resistance than Soviet troops encountered in invading Afghanistan.

Those who do not believe that freedom is a human need cannot be trusted to protect it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Senator faces down dictator

WASHINGTON — This is the story of a U.S. senator who went eyeball-to-eyeball with a dictator. The dictator blinked.

Jack Anderson

The three-year, behind-the-scenes contest of wills between Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the president of Pakistan, concerned a political prisoner. She is Benazir Bhutto, the charismatic, strong-willed daughter of the late Pakistani president, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Zia had him executed in 1979 on questionable charges of murder.

After the execution, Benazir and her mother, Nusrat, assumed leadership of the political opposition. The daughter's outspoken courage and obvious popularity worried Zia, who had her imprisoned.

In 1982, after international pressure, Zia allowed Bhutto's seriously ill widow to leave Pakistan. But he kept Benazir under one form of arrest or another, and also refused to let her younger sister leave the country.

Despite the difficulty of her position — and her own deteriorating health in confinement — Benazir remained the leading opponent to Zia's harsh military rule. Intelligence analysts believe she would be Zia's likely successor if he were to die or be overthrown.

Thus, even as a hostage, Benazir posed a threat to Zia. Reliable sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that Zia's intended solution to his dilemma was to have Benazir murdered and make it look like suicide. Though ill, she was placed in a small, solitary cell in the grim Sukkur jail, where the heat reached 120 degrees in summer.

The U.S. government interceded in Benazir's behalf, and she was moved to more humane confinement. This aborted the alleged murder plan, according to knowledgeable sources.

On Dec. 6, 1982, Zia met behind closed doors with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington. Those who were present recall that the general was cool and confident — until Pell handed him a letter expressing the committee's concern about a number of Pakistani political prisoners.

Heading the list was Benazir Bhutto.

The letter noted her incarceration "under extremely difficult conditions," and said: "We ask that Miss Bhutto be freed."

The general blew up. "I can tell you this, senator," he snapped. "This young lady has broken our laws." He then rudely told the senator: "She lives in a better house than any senator."

Zia went on to assure the committee that Benazir was allowed visits from relatives and friends. He said she even had the use of a telephone.

Deciding to check out the general's claim, a committee aide tried to call Benazir that same day. The phone was answered by a policeman, who told the Senate aide Benazir could not talk to him. "Your president said I could talk with her," the aide protested. Nothing doing.

Six months later, the Pakistani government made a formal reply to the Senate committee's letter. It repeated Zia's assurances to the senators.

When Pakistan's foreign minister, Yakub Khan, visited Washington later, Pell met privately with him and urged that the government "consider releasing Miss Bhutto, as she has been confined now for 2½ years."

Months passed with no progress. There were reports that Benazir's health was deteriorating.

Pell and the committee chairman, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., then called Zia's bluff last month. They decided to send one of Benazir's old friends, committee staffer Peter Galbraith, to Pakistan to see if he could visit her.

In a letter recalling Zia's assurance that friends could visit, the senators wrote:

"Mr. Galbraith is a personal friend of Miss Benazir Bhutto, dating back to their days as classmates at Harvard University, and would very much like to see her ... Granting persmission to Mr. Galbraith to visit his friend would be deeply appreciated by us and would be seen as a kind and generous gesture."

Galbraith arrived in Pakistan and learned that no decision had been made on his proposed visit to Benazir. He was to be in Karachi, where she was under house arrest, on Jan. 10.

Zia was cornered. Two senators who had the power to block U.S. aid dollars had put their prestige on the line: Let our staff aide see firsthand the conditions under which Benazir is being confined.

At 12:30 a.m. on Jan. 10, Benazir was awakened and told to pack her bags; she was leaving Pakistan. The police located her sister at a party and told her she could leave, too. The young women were flown out of the country within the hour.

All the Bhuttos are now beyond Zia's reach, and Benazir is determined to continue her opposition to the general from exile. One thing she will do is come to this country and tell her story to her friends on the Foreign Relations Committee.

GEORGE F. WILL

Campaign '84: Quest for a few

WASHINGTON — As the Democratic candidates, exhausted by the warm-up calisthenics, stagger to the starting line in Iowa, it seems that both parties are representing the national mood with maddening fidelity. They suffer the same disability. They can not propose policies proportionate to means, or means commensurate with policies.

George F. Will

The Democratic Party is committed to programs of distributive justice — enhanced equality of condition — that it is not prepared to ask the country to pay for. It has made itself hostage to Soviet intransigence by making arms control the centerpiece of U.S.-Soviet relations. And having made the achievement of agreements the test of any administration's facility in foreign policy, it is constantly tempted by unilateralism.

To tranquilize turbulent areas such as Central America, Democrats are committed to reliance on an exported New Deal — economic development and the sort of negotiations that pacified labor-management relations in the auto industry in the 1930s. They will not recognize that some disputes can not be brokered, and some negotiations presuppose a prior use of force.

The Republican Party is committed to more rearmament than it is prepared to ask the country to pay for. Its instincts are for an active world role involving costs, human and material, that public opinion will not sustain. Republicans define justice more in terms of equality of opportunity than of result, yet seem uninterested in the complexities of equal opportunity and the government's indispensable role in guaranteeing it.

There hangs about the Democratic Party an aura of moral overreaching. A symptom is the use of words like "decent" and "sane," as in "a decent society requires" this or that, and "we promise a sane arms-control policy." Reagan's record is open to criticism, but not on the grounds that since 1980 America has become indecent in dealing with domestic needs: Real domestic spending is approximately at 1980 levels. And not because America has become insane regarding arms control: The deployment of the NATO missiles implements President Carter's policy. Reagan is observing SALT II and, in the START talks, is seeking force levels substantially below those allowed by SALT II.

The GOP still has the mentality of an opposition party. It has been said that the function of conservatism is to extract the truth contained in each succeeding heresy. That is an appropriately modest task for a political philosophy that turns on prudence. Since 1945, Republicans have performed it by accepting the premises, and resisting the excesses, of the post-New Deal role of government.

They have accepted the federal responsibility for civil rights (understood as access to political and economic opportunity), but have resisted "race-conscious" policies such as group entitlements. Republicans have accepted federal responsibility for the economy's performance, but have tempered liberal confidence in fine-tuning through demand-management. Republicans have accepted federal responsibility for a welfare "social minimum," but have punctured excessive confidence in government's ameliorative powers.

The conservative party's President has done what serious leaders do: He has forcefully put questions to the country. But he has not got exactly the answers he wanted. To the question: "What sort of federal role do you want?" the country has answered: "About what we have — no more, but not much less, either." Now conservatism's task is to come to terms with that answer, and finance it.

So far, the campaign is only partly focused. Reagan mistakenly emphasizes the words "standing tall," a phrase that is a cartoonist's delight and an incitement to opponents each time some event suggests a deviation from perfection at home or potency abroad. However, Reagan knows that when an incumbent runs, the incumbent is the issue, the key word is "leadership," and a test of leadership is a national confidence.

Mondale made a minor mistake when he said that "promises" are what America is about. His critics can say: What a difference an "s" makes. America is about promise. However, Theo Lippman of the Baltimore Sun makes a telling point when he imagines this conversation.

"Sen. John Glenn told Walter Mondale that he was going to tell voters Mondale was promising everything to the elderly, minorities, labor, teachers, women, small farmers and those with liberal defense and foreign policy views. And Mondale said: 'Go ahead. Make my day.'"

That is: Mondale is winning because seven important Democrats keep telling Democratic activists what a good Democrat Mondale is.

Usually, campaigns are waged to win the 20 percent of voters who are undecided after the conventions. This year the undecided vote may be only 15 percent, or less, because there is an incumbent who is known, clear and polarizing. Never will so much effort and treasure have been spent to seduce so few.

CHARLEY REESE

Crippling U.S. wounds self-inflicted

The lives and freedom of the American people are today threatened by the Soviet Union. Yet, in 1945, the United States was the most powerful and richest nation on the planet. The Soviet Union's eastern third of the nation had been devastated by war. It had lost some 18 million people. It had no nuclear weapons. It was broke.

Charley Reese

Any thinking person must be interested in how it came about that in 38 years, the Soviet Union has grown strong and the United States has declined in power.

I think you can trace our decline by a series of key decisions which hurt us and helped them.

The first decision was to allow the Red Army to push on into Eastern Europe. The American Army could have swept through Germany and into Eastern Europe, but it was ordered to wait.

Another key decision was to allow the Soviet Union to enter the war against Japan just weeks before Japan surrendered. The Soviets thereby gained North Korea, grabbed all of the Japanese arms in Northern China and turned them over to Mao Tse-tung, and occupied the northern islands of Japan.

Another key decision was the precipitate demobilization of the American armed forces after World War II.

Another decision was made to allow Eastern Europe to go Communist.

A decision was made to withdraw support from Chinag Kai-chek so that Mainland China became communist.

A decision was made, when the Soviet Union was weakest and in need of time to consolidate its strength, that U.S. policy would be containment but under no circumstances would we directly challenge the Soviet Union.

A decision was made to join the United Nations, thereby blurring America's foreign policy.

A decision was made to withdraw support from Batista in Cuba which allowed Fidel Castro to take power. After it became obvious that Castro was a Communist, a decision was made not to topple him.

A decision was made to withdraw all American aid and support from Laos which opened up the route of infiltration and supplies from North Vietnam to South Vietnam.

A decision was made to accept a stalemate in Korea and to grant Communist forces a sanctuary in Vietnam.

A decision was made to abandon not only civil defense but also continental defense against bombers so that today the American people sit naked before Soviet missiles, bombers, and cruise missiles.

Decisions were made to abolish Senate and House committees investigating subversive activities, to abolish the attorney general's subversive list, to prohibit members of the executive branch from cooperating with Congress on subversive investigations, to weaken the counter-intelligence capability of the FBI, to greatly weaken the CIA, to destroy local police intelligence capability, and to open files to subversives.

I do not believe that all of the bad decisions that have been made are the result of treachery. Some may have been made for the best of intentions. One should never underestimate the capacity of the high and the mighty to make honest but stupid mistakes.

But I also believe there are traitors in our government. We know that there were traitors there for some were exposed after World War II. Alger Hiss and Lauchlin Currie, for examples. Since then, however, not one Soviet agent has been found in American government although many have been found in the governments of Great Britain, France, West Germany, Sweden, and Norway.

You would have to be a fool and ignorant of history to believe that there are no traitors in Washington. There simply is no logical basis for assuming that the Soviets would have infiltrated West European governments but not the American government.

The Soviet technique for conquest has always been pressure from without combined with subversion from within. I do not think American liberty will survive unless we find the courage to clean up our own house. It takes courage because even a hint that you suspect treason and you will become the target of character assassination.

You might ask yourself why that is true — if, in fact, there are no traitors.

Syria clears path to power in partitioned Lebanon

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Pro-Syrian Moslem militias smashed Lebanese government strongholds south of the Beirut capital area, cutting off our Marines from land access. It left teetering Lebanese President Amin Gemayel with little choice except to approve an eight-point Saudi Arabian plan for settlement that includes abandonment of his agreement with Israel last spring. At the time of my deadline, Syria shows no inclination to accept even this Saudi plan and its Moslem allies have already rejected the idea. The Israelis have rejected the abrogation, which gives Syria a pretty clear path to partitioned power.

President Reagan has notified Congress of plans to remove most of our 1,400-man Marine contingent within 30 days to ships waiting offshore. The president would have 200 Marines guard our embassy and 300 train Lebanese troops. He specifically said that he doesn't want our men to become targets of rebels in an area no longer under Lebanese government control. His decision was applauded by many in the Congress although a clamor also arose to get them all out pronto and leave Lebanon to do its own fighting.

Editor's Report

THAT'S SIMPLER, I believe, than it sounds. The president seems determined to try to salvage the Christian-led government of Lebanese President Gemayel whose troops are presently hemmed into the Western enclave of divided Beirut. The pro-Soviet Syrian regime trumpets to the concerned Middle East that America is "on the run" — which it is not — but we certainly cannot anticipate any assistance from the new regime in Moscow under Konstantin Chernenko. The U.S.S.R. wants to test our resolve to the last Syrian.

In Washington King Hussein of Jordan and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt both urged our president to revive his 1982 peace plan for the Middle East. They also want President Reagan to persuade beleaguered President Gemayel to abandon his May 17th agreement with Israel for the withdrawal of Israeli forces.

Israel removed its units to a more manageable defense line in the south, awaiting Syrian withdrawal from the Bekaa valley. Yet President Assad hasn't moved a soldier from the occupied region, just stiffened it with freshly-supplied Soviet armor. Assad also arms and provisions Druse and other Moslem militias fighting Gemayel.

Israel, via its diplomats and sympathizers in this country, regards the Jordanian-Egyptian leverage on President Reagan with alarm. It makes no secret of the fact that should Lebanon abandon the May 17th deal, it will ignore the act and stand fast. The same goes for the disputed West Bank of the Jordan River, the Israeli government contends. It absolutely refuses to deal with the remnants of the PLO, either pro- or anti-Yasser Arafat, as West Bank independence would allow for the Palestinian organization.

IN THE MIDDLE of this hydra-headed problem France has been making goo-goo eyes at the Druse. France, as we all know by now, joined originally with Italy, Britain and us for an international peacekeeping force to keep Beirut calm. The Druse, a breakaway group from mainstream Moslems, have been leading shock troops trying to unseat President Gemayel. They are led by a wall-eyed radical, Walid Jumblatt, whose leftist ideologies are big.

France, which keeps her contingent of troops in Beirut, now hears praise by French President Francois Mitterrand for Jumblatt. They can only disturb our administration, as Hearst European correspondent Bernard D. Kaplan reports from Paris.

To try to soften the blow, France took the lead in sounding out the U.S.S.R. about approving a U.N. peacekeeping force. Normally, this would be something the international organization should try to do. The chances, as U.S. sources at the U.N. see them, aren't good. At the moment there are 6,000 assorted troops drawn from U.N. members scattered around the Middle East, mainly in Lebanon. Where there's fighting, they try to stay out of the way. The Soviets at the U.N. are already beginning to attach conditions if they should say "da" to a U.N. plan offered by the Security Council.

BUT DON'T hold your breath. The Soviets are obviously watching and waiting on their Syrian clients to goad the Moslem militias into riskier adventures. An outsized American embarrassment is the international prize the U.S.S.R. wants to hold up to the world at large, particularly the Middle East, to try to prove that America is a paper tiger.

Anticipating such moves, and thereby hand the new Soviet Secretary General Chernenko instant world stature, the president said that our Marines will stand by off Lebanon's shore as long as there remains hope for peace. The Marines, well dug in at the Beirut airport, are surrounded by the undisciplined Moslem rebels. Druse forces are 200 yards away from the Marines and the Shi'ites, in the past deadly enemies of the Druse, just linked up to cut land access of our units.

It's a highly touchy situation. The unruly Moslem auxiliaries can try to squeeze our Marines farther into their fortified bunkers or begin an all-out assault. The guns of the Sixth Fleet and our naval air strength can hardly attempt to rake attacking Moslem auxiliaries with admittedly massive firepower for fear of hitting our own people. From a military point of view, the scenario fairly can be described as most unpleasant.

IN A SURPRISE appearance before reporters at the State Department, Secretary of State Shultz apparently anticipated repudiation by the Lebanese government of the May 17th agreement with Israel. The secretary, incidentally, helped negotiate that pact with Israel. For some reason, the government of President Gemayel has never formally ratified the deal.

"Those who would dispense with this agreement must bear the responsibility to find alternative formulas for Israeli withdrawal," Secretary Shultz warned.

In Christian-held West Beirut, commanders of the Phalange urged President Gemayel to uphold the agreement with Israel. They said they were pressing for Israeli intervention to counteract the Moslem militias now fanning out to try to seal off Christian-run suburbs. They are known to have dispatched emissaries with messages first to Israeli field commanders inside Lebanon and also through couriers to Jerusalem to the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. The Israeli government keeps a grim silence.

BUT THE Christian militias, knowing from past experiences in the 1975-76 civil war and what followed, are also girding themselves for guerrilla warfare. They were able, up to a point, to prevent being overwhelmed by the Moslems, who constitute a slim majority in the country. When locked in combat, neither side shows any quarter for old people or children. It's civil war at its most ferocious religious intensity.

I had hoped originally to be able to write on another topic, but the news from Beirut poured in so constantly that I feel it merits this additional comment.

What I had wanted to do was to take you into aspects of the American defense outlays and see what they mean. The proposed defense budget is $925.5 billion (whew!). That's 27 percent of the whole national total as submitted to Congress. But, believe it or not, we're not getting any real defense at all. See this space soon for what I mean.

Chasing rabbits

To the Editor:
In 1980 when President Reagan took office, I started chasing rabbits with borrowed dogs. Jan. 1, 1984, Reagan is still president and I'm still chasing rabbits with borrowed dogs.

I just thank the good Lord my neighbors raise dogs. One of the best dogs died and if you overlook this, I'm as well off now as I was in 1980. But I still wouldn't trade places with some of my city friends. They don't have any dogs and can't borrow any.

No more lake

To the Editor:
On behalf of myself and my neighbors on County Road 1172 South, I would like to thank 3-Way Construction Company and Phillips Pipe Line Company for doing a job that was the responsibility of Midland County.

A pipeline was laid by Phillips under County Road 1172, between County Roads 130E and 135E and the workers filled in a low place with the dirt tunneled out for the pipeline. Prior to this we've had a lake in the road everytime it rained and had to go out of our way to get into our homes.

We'd like to thank 3-Way Construction and Phillips for their consideration.

Olympic-bound?

To the Editor
I have been watching the Olympics and was thinking it would be nice for people of Midland to have a chance to learn how to ice skate and try to be in the Olympics.

Maybe someone who reads this can be able to build a rink and maybe someone in this town can teach lessons so that someday someone from this town can be sent to the Olympics.

Disappointed

To the Editor:
I wish to express my disappointment and regret to the announcement that Councilman Tom Sloan has chosen not to run in the upcoming city election.

I have not always agreed with Councilman Sloan, but I have attended enough council meetings to know he has always impressed me with his compassion and fair play. Those that made degrading comments toward his decisions at times, did not want the facts or care for the rights of others. I pay my taxes in order for the Council to enforce the laws on the books, and show compassion when possible, but keep control of the laws protecting others of their rights.

I feel Councilman Tom Sloan has used my tax money wisely. Midland is a better city by having him on our council. I know his business is a compelling job within itself. I am one that was glad he took the time to be my councilman.

Family focus

To the Editor:
Families-In-Action Inc. is sponsoring Dr. James C. Dobson's film series "Focus on the Family" at 7 p.m. March 5th, 7th, 9th, 12th, 14th and 16th on KMID TV. This is the first time this film series has been on television, and we are so pleased Dr. Dobson agreed to do this project in Midland.

Dr. Dobson is one of the nation's leading psychologists and an expert in family counseling. He is the author of seven best-sellers including his latest "Straight Talk to Men and Their Wives." Dr. Dobson is associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and a member of the attending staff of Children's Hospital of Los Angeles in the division of medical genetics. His radio program, also entitled "Focus on the Family," is heard in almost every part of the United States through syndication to 200 stations.

Our purpose in sponsoring "Focus on the Family" is to effect a positive influence on families in our community. Families-In-Action will provide a follow-up to this film series. Experienced and trained volunteers are available to help. They will be answering the phone (56-FOCUS) from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. for a two-month period. These volunteers are informed concerning churches in the community that will provide follow-up discussion sessions. Ministers of different denominations will be available.

If non-church counsel is requested, helping agencies will be available. We hope you will tune in for this important family event!

Jaycee Women

To the Editor:
Recently many young men and women across the nation celebrated National Jaycee Women Week from Feb. 12-18, 1984. Midland is fortunate to possess one of the top Jaycee Women Chapters in the United States. Year in and year out these ladies consistently reach out and help people within our community who are less fortunate than most others.

The Midland Jaycee Women contribute regularly to the Battered Women's Shelter in an effort to relieve the pain from which those victims suffer. They also render financial assistance to the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, thereby helping those special people to develop and realize their potential in life. Furthermore, the Midland Jaycee Women contribute something very simple yet so precious to some of this city's most forgotten citizens — they give of their time in making numerous visits to the elderly in rest homes. These are just a few of their projects. Rest assured that there are many more.

The Midland Jaycee Women have no doubt made Midland a better place for us all to live. To be sure, the Midland Jaycees are proud to have them as an auxiliary; the support that they give Jaycee projects is commendable.

We wish them the best of luck in the future and we know that they have a bright one.

Protect yourself

To the Editor:
The Midland County Sheriff's Department now has a Crime Prevention Unit.

In this day and age crime is on the increase and as citizens there are a few things you can do to decrease the chances of crime happening to you. For example, there are:

(1) Neighborhood Watch groups — neighbors helping neighbors and reporting suspicious activity and crimes.

(2) Operation Identification — the marking of your property with your Texas driver's license number for easy identification by law enforcement officers.

(3) Home and Business Security Surveys — At your request a representative of the Crime Prevention Unit will come to your home or business and conduct a free security survey. The survey will point out weak areas of seurity and offer recommendations to better secure your homes and business.

We urge you to take advantage of the service as it is provided for you by the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

At this time we would like to also announce that the Midland Crime Stoppers is now in operation. Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information on felony crimes if the information leads to arrest and Grand Jury indictment. Crime Stoppers also will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of wanted felons. All callers can remain anonymous. We do not ask your name and we do not want your name. When you call in you will be assigned a Crime Stoppers code number.

If you are interested in the programs offered by the Crime Prevention Unit, please send a letter with your name, address, home and business phone or call Sgt. David M. Cobos, Midland County Crime Prevention Unit at 682-9774, or mail your letter to Sgt. David M. Cobos, Midland County Crime Prevention Unit, Midland County Sheriff's Department, P.O. Box 2355, Midland, Texas 79702.

If you are interested in the Crime Stoppers program you can call Sgt. David M. Cobos at 694-TIPS. Remember, we will not ask for your name!

Sgt. David M. Cobos

Readers' views on: Coy Stewart

Best interest?

To the Editor:
I am appalled at the irresponsible, unfair reporting about Coy Stewart on Feb. 9th's sports page. The reporter was wrong about his facts and very rude in writing about a family's private decisions.

I noticed the writer was from Fort Worth, but why did our local sports editor and our local newspaper print such malicious gossip? Can't our local newspaper be loyal to the best interest of its customers? I think the newspaper owes the Randy Stewart family an apology. As for the articles by Ted Battles on Friday and Saturday, they were no apology at all! As to his statement that the Fort Worth writer might deserve a writing prize for his original article, I think not.

Rather, the Fort Worth writer deserves to be fired from his job for irresponsible journalism and misquoting people.

Poor judgment

To the Editor:
On occasion, I must express my distaste for certain events.

Last night's article on Coy Stewart was a classic example of poor judgment. First, on the reporter's part, for writing such an article. Second, on the sports editor's part, for permitting such an article to be published.

The article itself is a gross betrayal of a young man's confidence; the publishing thereof is an invasion of privacy of the worst act.

R.W. Hintermaier
Midland

Irresponsible

To the Editor:
In regard to Canning's article of Feb. 9, about the Stewart's "Nightmare", the only "Nightmare" in their life is the irresponsibility of sports writers like Canning who fill articles with untruths and innuendos. Canning certainly has a vivid imagination when he came up with this article based on a short phone conversation with Coy Stewart after the signing. Mr. Canning might do better as a writer for a tabloid; they also have trouble distinguishing fact from fiction.

As for the Reporter-Telegram they should have checked the facts before the article was put into our local paper. As Ted Battles pointed out in his Saturday morning column, it does make a good story, and that's exactly what it was, "A Story."

Fine young man

To the Editor:
Midland is blessed with so many fine young men and women and Coy Stewart is among them. We, as parents, should never forget that our children are gifts from God, to care for and raise and protect until they are ready to be on their own. Our children are not our possessions. Our young people deserve our support and encouragement with their decisions, hard as it is at times. We must let them make their own way in life. How else are they to learn?

I know that Coy is a Christian and he loves his family. I know how agonizing this choice of schools must have been for him to make. How wonderful to see a man like him do what he feels is best for his future. I, among many, support and encourage him and am proud that he is one of Midland's citizens.

BILL MODISETT

Americans fond of quotes which lay blame elsewhere

Bill Modisett

A gentleman named Jack Smith is remembered in "Peter's Quotations" for having noted: "When someone has the wit to coin a useful phrase, it ought to be acclaimed and broadcast or it will perish."

Hmmm!

That's true and, what's more, we Americans are fond of quoting others, putting the blame on somebody else's shoulders if you want to call it that. Even President Reagan is not above calling on a well-turned phrase from time to time, particularly a predecessor — Calvin Coolidge.

Oh, well. We all have our favorites. Mine is Will Rogers, that Oklahoma humorist and jack-of-all-words. Will had something to say about everything, EVERYTHING!

Rogers was a talented philosopher and a great one because even today, nearly 50 years after his death, his remarks on life are as true, as revealing, as biting as they were in the 1930s.

For example, on the topic of America and Americans, Rogers once said: "We don't know what we want, but we are ready to bite somebody to get it."

About ancestry, the Oklahoma cowboy once noted, "My folks didn't come over on the Mayflower, but they were there to meet the boat."

Everyone has a favorite quote about the government. Rogers went as follows: "The business of government is to keep the government out of business — that is, unless business needs government aid."

On the topic of real estate, the cowboy philosopher said: "In a real estate man's eye, the most exclusive part of the city is wherever he has a house to sell."

Even war could take on an interesting twist in Rogers' words: "You can't say that civilization don't advance, for in every war they kill you a new way."

Part of the reason Rogers appeals to me is the phenomenal ability he possessed to put a complex subject into one short, sharp sentence capable of embarrassing people while at the same time making them laugh.

On the topic of government, Rogers was fond of saying that "the short memories of American voters is what keeps our politicians in office."

And on the subject of heroes, the humorist once noted, "We can't all be heroes because someone has to sit on the curb and clap as they go by."

I guess it's true that nothing original is being said — or thought — in the world today. All the novel ideas and earth-shattering concepts — all the quotable utterings — already have been thought and said.

But it's worthwhile remembering and quoting notable individuals such as Will Rogers. They give our language and our thought a special quality.

As W.I.E. Gates said, "Stronger than an army is a quotation whose time has come."

Newspapers not funded

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Although the State Board of Education is expected to give final approval in March to a pilot program providing newspapers for high school classrooms, a board official says there are no funds to implement the program.

"We'll have a plan, but if there aren't any funds there's nothing we can do with it," said Thomas Anderson, deputy commissioner for planning, research and curriculum for the board.

The newspaper program was outlined in a bill authored by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, which passed the Legislature last year. But Leroy Psencik, who works with curriculum development for the board, noted one problem. "The Legislature forgot to give the state board any funding" for the program, he said.

A legislative aide to Ms. Glossbrenner said the bill did not provide for an appropriation, but "allows the commissioner of education to provide funding for the establishment of one to 10 pilot programs."

But Anderson said all funds have been budgeted by the board. "There's no dollars anywhere," he added.

Original plans called for local school districts to apply to the board for funds to buy newspapers for high school use during the 1984-85 school year, with discretionary funds being used to finance the projects. "It's difficult to take applications without funds in sight," Anderson said. "Sometime in the future, the legislature may decide to fund it."

He said the chances of funds becoming available for the next school year are not good. There are no estimates on how much money would be needed to start a pilot program.

Nevertheless, Psencik said he did not expect to be flooded with applications from school districts to participate in the program, since schools selected to take part would have been required to evaluate the scholastic achievement levels of students using newspapers. "That's the purpose of the pilot programs," he said.

NOTICE OF INTENTION OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS TO INVITE BIDS FOR THE SALE OF LOT 3, BLOCK 3, "A" STREET COMMUNITY CENTER, SECTION 3
Pursuant to Article 5421c-12, V.A.T.S., sealed bids, addressed to he Mayor and the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the sale of Lot 3, Block 3, "A" Street Community Center, Section 3, will be received by the City Secretary in his office, Room 430 in the City Hall, 300 North Loraine Street, or mailed to P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas, 79702, until 2:00 p.m., on the 7th day of March, 1984 and then publicly opened and read aloud in the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, at that time. Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Lot 3, Block 3, "A" Street Community Center, Section 3".
A certified check or bank money order, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City, in the amount of 10% of the total amount of the bid, payable without recourse to the City of Midland, must accompany the bidder's proposal, as a guaranty that the bidder will accept a conveyance to said land from the City and pay the balance of the amount bid, if he is successful. Bids without the required check or money order will not be considered. All other checks will be promptly returned after the bid is awarded.
Take notice that prior to issuance of a building permit, the successful bidder will be required to furnish the City's Inspection Division with a copy of an FAA Determination of No Hazard to Air Navigation (an FAA form 7460-1, or any subsequent replacement form available in the City's Inspection Office), as described in a letter from the Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, to Mr. Wilson H. Banks, Aviation Director, dated January 13, 1981, and on file for informational purposes in the office of the City Secretary in the City Hall.
The City of Midland will issue a Special Warranty Deed and the bidder must satisfy himself as to title and acquire all desired abstracts and other title information or insurance solely at his own epxense, and all other costs of sale, if any, must be borne solely by the successful bidder.
The proposed sale and Special Warranty Deed will be subject to the following conditions and convenants which shall expressly be made a part of the deed, to wit:
PROVIDED, HOWEVER, that all the oil, gas and other minerals in and under said land are hereby expressly excepted from this conveyance, and it is also subject to any existing easements of record and/or on the ground of pipelines, utilities or other purposes, including drilling rights.
Grantor further reserves for the public and itself, its successors and assigns, a right of fight for the passage of aircraft in the airspace above the surface of said land together with the right to cause in said airspace such noise as may be inherent in the operation of aircraft now known or hereafter used for naviagtion of or flight in the air using said airspace and landing at, taking off from, or operation on the Midland Airpark.
The City of Midland reserves the right for itself and its assigns, the first option of purchase of this tract on the occasion that the successful bidder shall opt to sell said property to any bona fide purchaser which reservation shall be effective for 21 years from date of conveyance.
The City reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, to waive technicalities, to negotiate with any of the bidders, and to make any investigation deemed necessary as to a bidder's financial status.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

1- and 2- bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

Hair spun gold

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Cindi's attention-getting strawberry-blonde hair has been growing for 13 years.

Cindi Mladenka's head of hair is the classic mass of golden strands poets have written fairy-tales about since medieval times.

It's the kind of hair that turns people's heads; the kind many people say they wish they had. It's also the kind of hair that takes more time and care than most people want to spend.

For 13 years, Cindi's hair has been growing to reach its 30-inch length — half of her 5-foot frame.

People often ask what her trick is — what she uses on it; what kinds of vitamins she takes; what color she uses to dye it.

The simple answer is she takes care of the hair with which she was blessed.

She washes her hair everyday with a shampoo she buys in the grocery store — along with a regular conditioner. Her hair has been its strawberry-red color all her life and the golden streaks in it are just as natural. She doesn't brush it 100-strokes a day and she doesn't have a permanent. Not even a wave.

She doesn't use treatments of egg, mayonnaise or other homemade concoctions because "I'm afraid I'd never get it out."

Some of her special care includes a once a month conditioning of "Alberto VO5 hot oil treatment. I leave it on for five minutes and then rinse it out."

She has it trimmed "about once a month," and believes brushing hair 100 strokes a day will "cause more damage than good. I tried it for a week, and it was exhausting."

She alternates her store-shelf brands of shampoo and conditioners because she thinks hair becomes immune to a product and needs a change of pace about every six months or so.

Because of that, "I think I've invested in almost every brand there is."

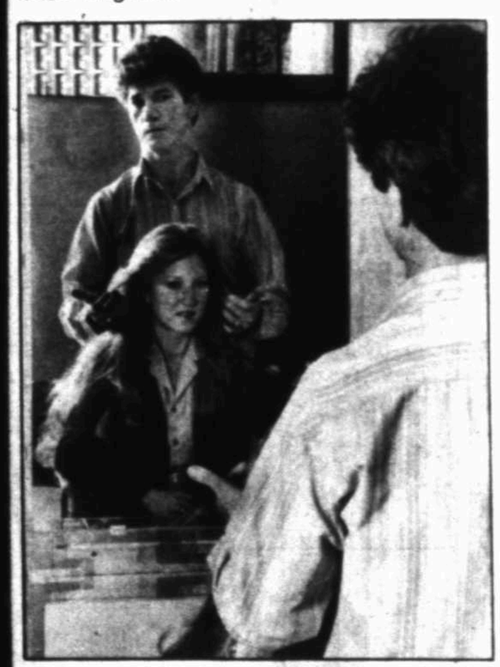
Her daily styling ritual consists of blow-drying her hair, spraying it with a setting conditioner and rolling it.

She doesn't use a conventional method to roll her hair because she can't reach the ends of it. So she lunges her head forward to gather all her hair, places it in a high ponytail on the crown of her head and uses about five rollers to curl it.

For outdoor sports, however, she has some tricks to keep it protected and to keep it out of her way. An avid skier, Cindi pulls her hair back in a braid, or pulls it into a ponytail and anchors it down with five coated rubber bands.

And the only vitamin she takes is an iron complex her doctor prescribed two years ago when she was pregnant with her daughter Jennifer.

Cindi attributes a big part of the length of her hair to her husband Mark, who resists any temptation she may have to cut it. "He likes long hair," she said. A Midlander for most of her life, she is the social news editor of the Midlander Magazine.



Hairdresser Chuck Wilcox discusses ways to styles for Cindi Mladenka's 30-inch length hair.

Show tells all

The Midland chapter of the Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetoligsts will present its Second Annual Spring Hair Show "Puttin' on the Ritz," the evening of April 13, at the Yucca Theatre. Tickets, $5-$8, are available at Christine Valmy Salon.

Head-turning hair demands attention

From Staff Reports

Full, lusterous locks start with healthy and well cared for hair. Even the most expert cut and style will be wasted on hair that is neglected or damaged by over exposure to the sun.

Help rid your hair of the winter doldrums and greet the new season with glorious gleaming tresses by adopting a spring hair shape-up regimen. Here are some quick and easy shape-up suggestions from General Electric Company and Revlon.

— Start by trimming off dead ends. Talk with your stylist about fresh new ideas that will work with your lifestyle — a curly style may only work if you have the time to set its daily.

— For styling, check into new electrical appliances that are more gentle on hair. New soft roller hair-setters with soft foam rollers are lighter than standard plastic ones and help prevent hair breakage and tangles. Some soft rollers also have a special steaming station that steams each roller before winding for gentle curling. Select a hair dryer with variable heat settings and use the low setting as often as possible. For smooth curls and waves, a tangle free heated curling brush has triangle-shaped bristles guaranteed to prevent tangles.

— Use ice cold water for the final rinse of the hair. This stimulates the scalp and closes pores.

— The 100-brush-strokes-a-night theory has been dispelled by many experts. In fact, over brushing can damage and break hair. Smooth out tangles by using a hard rubber comb, starting from the hair ends and working up to the roots. Wet hair loses much of its elasticity and resilience and should be treated like silk.

Hair tips may help weather the storm

By LISA GERLOCK
Lifestyle Editor

With modern methods of styling hair, keeping hair healthy and happy is a challenge. Hot blow dryers, curling irons, electric rollers and daily shampoos dry natural oils from the scalp. West Texas wind and dust storms add to the problem.

Chuck Wilcox, president of the local Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, says there are ways to help hair survive the test.

"The most important thing to remember is to start with a good shampoo."

Shampoos with a high Ph balance, 5.5 or higher, don't strip natural oils needed for hair to maintain its sheen, he said. Among his recommendations for shampoos are Ferma Caresse, "very good for the type of water we have in Midland," he said, Redken Amino Pon and Nexis.

"Many people over-shampoo," he said, "a shampoo twice a day is not needed."

Conditioning is the second most important. For hair treated by any chemical process, dyed, frosted, tinted or permed, it is important to find an appropriate moisturizer conditioner. Many conditioners are oil-based, which strips color faster, because the dyes too, are oil-based.

Wilcox stressed the difference between a creme rinse and a conditioner. "A creme rinse may not help hair at all. Some creme rinses have been known to contain chemicals that do not penetrate the hair, they just coat it," but "some conditioners also contain a wax or a synthetic wax that coats the hair."

Two types of conditioners are on the market today: a cosmetic conditioner, good only for short-term surface effect, and a penetrating conditioner, which is absorbed by the hair where it is needed.

Wilcox is not a big believer in home remedy conditioners, such as egg, mayonnaise or beer rinses. "Home remedies are just like remedies for getting over a cold — they work for some, not for others." He doesn't recommend lemon rinse for blondes, "because it doesn't do anything," but he added, a vinegar rinse for darker hair will eliminate excessive oil, add sheen and may even strengthen a permanent.

For long hair, he does believe in using peanut oil just on the very ends of long hair. "Leave it on for about 15 minutes and then shampoo." Olive oil is just as effective, he said, but "will strip the color of tinted hair," however.

Seasonal changes are perhaps what causes most hair damage, he said. During the summer, hair should be covered because the sun may bleach it and the wind will dry it out. "Especially keep tinted or permed hair covered."

Hair also needs to be washed immediately after a swim in the pool, he added, to get the chlorine out.

Length of hair should determine the frequency of having it trimmed, he said. Short hair should be trimmed about every four or six weeks to keep it in its style. Longer hair may only need to be trimmed every six or eight weeks.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

As Nancy (Mrs. Charles F. Jr.) Henderson approached her milestone 40th birthday, she decided to make the occasion a belated "coming out" party. Looking upon it as a time of new beginnings, she knew she didn't want it to be a somber affair — a la an Irish wake. Although her actual birthdate is February 10, she and Chuck chose to celebrate on a Saturday (the 11th) with a gala party at their home.

Bright colors, balloon bouquets and a profusion of fresh flowers flown in from Dallas were used to decorate. A sumptuous buffet was served, along with champagne and wine. Assisting with the party were the Hendersons' daughter Sarah and Chuck's mother Florence (Mrs. Charles F. Sr.) Henderson.

Among the approximately 70 guests were Nancy's parents Connie and Jack Robbins of San Antonio; her sisters Sarah (Mrs. Jim) Hulsebus of Huntington Beach, California, and Carolyn (Mrs. Kit) Thompson and family of Austin; Chuck's grandmother Mrs. Elsie Stephenson; Ralph Long of Houston, Douthea and Bill Shaner, Sherry and Noah Fishman, Linda George, Ramah and Chris Bosecker, Mary Rulla and Nancy's co-workers at Sipes Williamson & Associates.

RAMONA AND PAUL DRICKEY returned last Sunday from a marvelous month's vacation in Hawaii, where they never tired of the tropical weather and beautiful beaches. Their stay began on the Big Island of Hawaii, where they made the Hilton on the Kona coast their headquarters. The last week of their visit was spent at the Outrigger on Waikiki Beach in Honolulu.

Their leisurely pace included lots of sun, surf and sand, along with luaus, dinner boat cruises, sightseeing and shopping. An all-day snorkeling trip to Kealakekua Bay was one of the highlights.

"WE PAPERED AND painted and rearranged, too. Now all we lack is a visit from you." So began the clever invitiations to an open house at Jackie and Audra Cary's recently. The party served a dual purpose, not only giving neighbors who had watched the progress of the home's renovation an opportunity to see the results, but it also introduced three new families to the neighborhood.

A valentine theme was used in the party decor.

FORMER MIDLANDER Betty (Mrs. Forrest) Spry was the honoree at a delightful party while in town with her husband for the Southwest Section meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. The fun event was held in the home of Grace (Mrs. William L. Jr.) Jordan, with Carolyn (Mrs. Raymond) Nicholas as co-hostess.

The guest list included members of Mimosa Garden Club, Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, Permian Basin Geological-Geophysical Auxiliary and Lee High Band Boosters.

The Sprys now make their home in Temple, although they continue to maintain a townhouse in Midland for visits here. Forrest is a retired geologist with Exxon.

FOLLOWING A HONEYMOON in Cozumel, Mexico, Debbie and David Floyd are at home in Midland. The bride, the former Debbie Dacus, is the daughter of Carol and Don McCarter. She is employed by the Texas Department of Human Resources. The groom, son of Faye and Hershel Floyd, is a geologist with Core Laboratories. They exchanged wedding vows February 4 in the Westside Church of Christ.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Zentner's Steak House, and the bridesmaids luncheon was given by Dannye (Mrs. John) Bristow. Other pre-nuptial festivities included a bridesmaids' shower at the home of Susie Melson, a miscellaneous shower hosted by the women of Westside Church of Christ in the home of Ruby (Mrs. Red) Weiss, a lingerie shower at the home of Tacoma (Mrs. W.J.) Boler and a "His and Hers" party given at Texas Tumbleweed by Debbie's co-workers.

FORTUNE MAGAZINE recently included former Midlander Clark J. Matthews II of Dallas, chief financial officer for Southland Corp., in a picture portfolio of outstanding corporate C.F.O.s. The six men featured in the article are all members of teams that engineered some of the year's biggest deals for their companies. Clark worked out the elaborate financial details when Southland acquired Citgo Petroleum. The article appears in the January 23 issue.

Clark, who was known as Jakie during his growing up years in Midland, is the son of Betty and Clark Matthews. He and his wife, the former Janice Hill, are both graduates of Midland High, where Clark was the MHS Band's drum major. He received both his undergraduate and law degrees at SMU.

Bone marrow transplants give cancer victims new hope

Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — A new bone marrow transplant technique is providing new hope for cancer patients.

Officials at Medical Center Hospital here said that the first patient to undergo the transplant, a 30-year-old woman, was released last week in complete remission from breast cancer that had spread to her skin, chest wall, bone, lungs, liver and brain.

Dr. Fred LeMaistre, medical director of the hospital's Hematology/Oncology Unit, said the experimental procedure involves removing some bone marrow from a patient and then reinjecting it after the patient has been treated with cancer-killing chemicals that normally would harm the marrow and destroy blood cells necessary to fight off infections.

The procedure can be used in cases where normal treatment with chemicals would not be strong enough to kill cancer without damaging the bone marrow and blood cells, LeMaistre said. "We have to investigate innovative procedures because we have many patients (normal) chemotherapy doesn't help," LeMaistre said.

In the operation performed Jan. 19, a portion of the breast cancer patient's bone marrow was taken from her pelvis and frozen. The woman then received high doses of chemotherapy that normally would have destroyed blood cells with lethal results. But after destroying the cancer, doctors were able to replace the bone marrow that had been taken out and restore the woman's defenses against infection.

LeMaistre said the procedure could have much wider applications, including colon, testicluar and ovarian cancers. "We don't know what the potential usefulness is until we have some experience with the procedure," LeMaistre said.

The marrow transplant using a patient's own marrow is called autologous, and LeMaistre said only 30 such transplants have been performed in the world. He added the procedure is considered experimental.

The procedure differs from marrow transplants from a separate donor, usually a close blood relative, for diseases such as leukemia or sickle-cell anemia. Transplants involving a separate donor are termed allogeneic.

LeMaistre said an allogeneic transplant would cost from $50,000 to $70,000, compared to one year of care for a leukemia patient, which costs about $80,000. The autologous procedure is not as complex and can be done for $20,000.

LeMaistre said the hospital hopes to have a complete bone marrow transplant program by the end of the year.

Following a wedding trip to San Diego, Calif., the couple will live in Palestine.

Romance lives between covers of paperbacks

Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Hearts and flowers are being edged aside by steamy sex between the covers — of contemporary romance novels, says a college lecturer who's written one.

"The sexual revolution has hit the romance industry," says Dr. Mary Arensberg of the State University of New York, whose red-hot prose under the pseudonym of Holly Blake throbs in a way her essays on poet Wallace Stevens do not.

"There's an incredible range from the chaste to the filthy," Arensberg said.

But cupid need not lay down his quiver. The girl-meets-boy, girl-loses-boy, girl-wins-boy-and-lives-happily-ever-after formula enshrined when Harlequin published its first romance novel in 1957 is still rigidly followed by romance authors, Arensberg says.

She should know. Before writing "Theater of Love" with a university colleague, she read 150 romance novels. Those 150 books represent about a month's output for the six major publishing houses cranking out contemporary romances for a lovestruck women's readership.

When the royalties are tallied, the author of a contemporary romance can expect about $20,000 for her labors, according to Alicia Condon, senior editor of Silhouette Books, a division of Simon and Schuster.

NOT BAD PAY, considering that Arensberg spent three months writing her novel, which is being considered by a major publisher.

The lovers in today's romantic novels are the rich, the young and the beautiful, Arensberg said.

"The ideal romantic heroine is a woman 28 to 33 years old. She's either a college professor or a doctor or a newspaper reporter. She can either be divorced, single or widowed. She is thin. She has gorgeous hair. The big trend is auburn hair.

"She is athletic, a tennis player or an equestrienne. Her parents have always been killed in a car crash, which gives her that orphan quality. She is extremely sensual, but she is not stupid," Arensberg said.

The romantic hero is 35 to 42. He may be a physician, a real estate mogul or a show business figure. "I haven't seen any lawyers," Arensberg said.

She continued: "There's an aura of excitement and charisma about him. The hero also seems to have some kind of mystery, and many times there is a cruel streak. He's not the nice guy."

In the last few years, though, the hero has mellowed, evolving from a macho type into a "more sensitive man," she said.

Both heroes and heroines "always wear gorgeous clothes, and they're always in wonderful restaurants," Arensberg said. "The thing you have to know about to write a romance is the good life. In this kind of novel, there are no hot dogs; you eat quiche. The setting is always incredibly romantic."

HERE'S WHAT happens when the hero and heroine meet:

"There is usually a conflict between her career and this man she wants, so that's where a lot of the plot lines are coming from. Or she doesn't trust men because she's been hurt before.

"The plots are all formulas. The magic formula is, you have a series of conflicts and then at the end all the conflicts are resolved — unlike in real life."

Authors are adhering to the "magic formula" in staggering numbers. With a stable of 150 authors, Silhouette's Condon estimated that 130 contemporary romances are published every month.

Why did Arensberg and her co-author write their book?

"We just looked at it as fun, a diversion and as a way to make money, frankly. We laughed the whole time, especially when we were writing the sex scenes. It kept us very amused last winter," she said.

THE READERS breathlessly turning pages as heroines discover their "untapped reservoirs of passion" are doing so "because there is no romance in their lives," she said. "It also is a way to fantasize. It usually takes two hours to read them. It's a great escape."

Arensberg admits to some qualms about perpetuating the sterotypes and happy-ending illusions which are the romance writer's stock in trade. Still, writing the books can be rewarding.

"I think you have to be truly a romantic at heart to write this slop. You have to be able to fantasize, imagine and draw on your own experiences."

Anniversary celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Rucker Butts celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with an open house Saturday. Hosts for the event were their children and spouses; Mr. and Mrs. Kayo Randolph of Beaumont, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Fowler of Long Beach, Calif., and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Butts of Midland.

The couple was married Feb. 15, 1944 in Martinez, Calif. They have six grandchildren.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Clarence Schrock of San Diego, Calif., and Dr. and Mrs. Kevin Gerhart of Houston.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Club names 'Woman of Year'

From Staff Reports

The Altrusa Club of Midland recently held its annual Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year Award banquet at Greentree Country Club. Approximately 60 people attended.

Winner of this year's award is Maxine Hannifin. She has been a caseworker for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; volunteer probation officer for the Probation Department and a volunteer art instructor at Third House program, Park Place, Halfway House. She is currently an executive board member "Community Affairs" for the American Association of University Women and serves as chairman of literature-world affairs. She is also an active member of First Presbyterian Church and supports the International Club at Midland College. Mrs. Hannifin was nominated for this award by AAUW.

Other nominees were Mrs. C.E. Bissell, nominated by the Midland Woman's Club; Mrs. Robert Hobbs, nominated by Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary Inc.; and Dr. Dorothy Wyvell, nominated by the Lt. Wm. Brewer and Col. Theunis Dey chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Midland Society of University Women.

The award was established in 1975 as a tribute to Lucy Mashburn's service to the community. Each year letters are sent to Midland civic and church organizations requesting nominations for women who are contributing exemplary long-standing volunteer service. Members of the Altrusa Club are not eligible.

Past recipients of the Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year Award are Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Jack Samples, Mrs. J.H. Mims, Mrs. E.A. Culbertson, Mrs. Jack D. Glenn, Mrs. Abbott B. Jenks, Mrs. Leslie Dunlap and Mrs. V.C. Maley.

Speaker for the evening was Joan Baskin. Mrs. Fred Hansler is president of the Altrusa Club of Midland. Mrs. Janis Petty was banquet chairman.

Exhibit on working women

While women have entered the American work force in record numbers in recent years, their role in American industry is not new. "Perfect in Her Place," a look at women at work in industrial America, will be displayed Feb. 26-March 23 at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee in Odessa, which is open free to the public.

The exhibition traces the contribution of women's labor from the 19th century through World War I in photographs, text and quotations from contemporary publications. Organized and circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Services, the Odessa showing is funded by a grant from Mrs. Bessye Cowden Ward. An opening reception will be held from 2-4 p.m. Feb. 26.

The exhibition offers views of the ammunitions industry, the U.S. Mint, the printing trades, the shoe industry and watchmaking, and demonstrates how women were excluded from profitable jobs and encouraged to supply the cheap labor needed by industries.

Author's new book tackles definitions of 'femininity'

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Wednesday, as the early-morning radio announcer might say, was the birthday of Susan Brownmiller. Wednesday, as the historian would say, was the birthday of Susan B. Anthony.

The two Susan B.'s share more than a birthday. Feminist and suffragist, they have analyzed what keeps women from being all they can be, and they have written and spoken and crusaded to change those conditions, one in the contemporary women's movement, one in the pioneer movement.

"I GOT THIS mystic sense that her name was Susan and my name was Susan, so I felt really close to her. We were somehow sisters. Or she was my godmother or whatever. But I had a little problem with how she looked because already at this age I felt there was a standard of feminine beauty out there and Susan B. didn't look like that. She wasn't smiling."

And it is "Femininity" that still preoccupies Brownmiller as she tours to promote her book of that title. She had been wrestling with the subject (to use a less-than-graceful metaphor) even before she strode onto the national scene with "Against Our Will," her 1975 book on rape. It helped change the dialogue on the subject from rape as a sexual act to rape as an act of violence aimed at the submission of women.

She wanted that book to help change laws and attitudes. It is not altogether clear what she wants from this new book. There is no call to arms at its conclusion. There is more a sense of wanting men and women to understand how women define themselves and why.

In her book, Brownmiller divides femininity into its elements — body, hair, clothes, voice, skin, movement, emotion, ambition — and how styles and practices developed.

SHE EXPLORES history to examine why blondes, "associated with the goodness of sunshine, the purity of the Madonna," are often judged prettier or luckier than dark-haired women. Or why independent-minded queens like Catherine de Medici of France or Elizabeth I of England forced themselves into elaborate corsets.

She talks about her own love-hate relationship with femininity. "This was a harder book to write because I was using myself, because I was trying to explore the dimensions of my own conflicts and confusions and ambivalences about femininity," Brownmiller said during a stop here. "I could hardly pretend to be objective writing a book about femininity. I could be objective about rape. It had not happened to me. There was an evil out there. It was very clear. I could document it. I could marshal the evidence.

"But femininity? Just catching hold of the subject is so complicated that it took five years to write a slender little book about it."

The conflicts are not all resolved. Brownmiller, 49 Wednesday, says that she has always had trouble with her hair. She acknowledges in her book that she touches it up despite deep thoughts that "artificial color is a shameful concession to the wrong values" and that she should fight against a double standard that gray-haired men look wise and gray-haired women look unkempt.

SHE IS NOT unusual. Everyone faces contradictions about what face to put on to society — or what hair style or dress style. Take the politics of clothing. A few years ago, wearing slacks made a statement that a woman was going to be independent and comfortable. Now many of those same women have switched back to skirts or at least vary their clothing.

Brownmiller, wearing a gray jump suit, said that she has not worn a dress in more than 12 years. She is the outsider, the self-employed woman, bemused by the current "dress for success" look of tailored suit and little tie at the neck.

The insider can give Brownmiller an argument that women dress as they do now because they are insisting that they want to be accepted professionally but unmistakably as women and because they want to wear whatever they want to wear. But she disagrees, arguing that this new-old look came in as women entered more conservative fields, such as banking and law, and found "there was a real confusion about what to do with the upper half of the body.

"Breasts, of course, were supposed to be too stimulating for men in the board room, which is one of the reasons you didn't want to have women there sitting at the table in the first place. You'd start thinking about her sex if she were wearing a sweater or a silk blouse. So the effort for the top half of the body was to show the seriousness and the credibility, to wear the dark clothes, the tailored masculine costume — and to hide the breasts.

"But in the lower half, you had to send out the semaphore signals that not only was this a woman but a woman that we all could feel safe with — not one of those new women wearing slacks." Thus, the skirts, nylons and heels.

BROWNMILLER LIKES many elements of femininity. "I'm impressed with the beauty of it. I mean, I've been conditioned to think that a certain look is just better. I like the niceness, the gentleness, the sensitivity, the concern for others."

So there are aspects of femininity she admires, yet she thinks femininity has played a significant role in women's insecurities. Isn't that a contradiction? And isn't being a feminist unfeminine?

"Yes. Because feminists are assertive. Because they demand their rights. They don't supplicate. They want to change the world instead of accommodating to it. That's very unfeminine. It's feminine to accommodate and make peace and not to confront, and we have engaged in a lot of confrontational politics as feminists."

Is "Femininity" the nonviolent equivalent of "Against Our Will"?

"In the sense that the work I have done in these two books is seeking an answer for why the condition of womanhood is what it is, why we are where we are, why we have not achieved equal rights, why we are afraid to claim equal rights — yes, those books deal with the same question.

"What is it that has kept women basically in the home as wives and mothers or wishing they were in the home as wives and mothers, afraid to be ambitious, afraid to seek out achievement, afraid to work hard in the interest of self?"

Whose definition of themselves have women accepted, Brownmiller is asking, their own or one imposed by custom and by men?

Sunflowers not only attractive, but also help feed birds

Hearst Feature Service

If there's a sunny, out-of-the-way corner of your lawn or garden, consider growing sunflowers this coming season. Not only will you enjoy watching their quick growth, but you can harvest seed heads to feed the birds through next winter.

Not all sunflowers are suitable. The dwarf varieties that grow a scant 5 feet tall seldom produce enough seeds to make this venture worthwhile. Instead, consider the varieties "Giganteus' or "Mammoth." Both grow an easy 10 feet and produce huge seed heads that can be clipped off when dry in late summer and stored to dole out to the birds during the winter.

Sunflowers are an especially good crop for children to grow. The seeds are inexpensive, easy to handle, sprout quickly and grow swiftly. Chances are you can grow all the seed you'll need to feed the birdss rom a single 50-cent packet. The plants, however, are not beautiful or shapely. That's why they're best grown out of sight.

Sunflower seeds are a staple in any wild bird mix. Chip Francke, a naturalist at Michigan's Chippewa Nature Center, suggests a mix of three parts sunflower seed to one part cracked corn. While birds prefer the so-called oiled, or black, sunflower seed, they'll gladly chow down on the seeds you've grown the season before. Francke said such a blend and a hanging bag of suet will attract most of the desirable birds that winter over or stop on either end of their migratory flights.

Harvesting the sunflower crop in early fall corresponds with preparations to attract birds to a home feeder. Gardeners can pluck the seeds from the head or leave the head intact and hang it from a tree or fasten it to a feeder. The birds can easily extract the seeds. It's often a good idea to cover the maturing sunflower head before cutting from the stalk (a grocery sack works well) to save it from eager birds. Be sure the covering is loose and lets lots of air through to prevent mold.

The heads will be dry and ready for seed harvesting or hanging by mid-October. If birds are to be attracted and kept nearby, feeding should begin by then and continue through May 1.

"Shirtwaister" originally referred quite literally to a shirt style with a collar and front button, long sleeves and cuffs. It was a conventional shirt as far as the waist. Below the waist, however, was attached a matching or contrasting skirt. Today the shirtwaist dress has become a classic garment that never really goes out of fashion. It may or may not have a waist join and other fashion elements such as slits. Pleats and strap openings can be added as appropriate. The shirtwaist may be short or long, and even worn over trousers. It may be made of any fabric, from the simplest cotton print to woven or jersey fabrics in all fibers and weights.

Woman tries to make preteens feel better about themselves

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — The seventh-graders have been sitting on hard wooden seats for more than an hour, but Ellen Rosenberg still has them eating out of her hand.

"How many of you feel close to your parents?" asks the perky New York educator, pacing across the front of the auditorium.

Most hands shoot up enthusiastically.

"How many feel closer to your fathers?"

Some hands.

Rosenberg pauses and lowers her voice.

"How many don't feel close to either parent?"

The kids laugh nervously and shift in their seats as, one after another, hands go up across the room.

This is Rosenberg's cue.

"Every parent that I have spoken with said they would like to be closer to their kids, but they don't always know how," Rosenberg tells the students. "If you want to feel closer, you've got to let them know about it. Turn your feelings into words."

That, in a nutshell, is what Rosenberg is about — turning feelings into words. She has been preaching the gospel of self-esteem to preteens since 1976 through Growing Up Feeling Good workshops held at schools throughout the country. Now she has written a handbook for kids called "Ellen Rosenberg's Growing Up Feeling Good." (Beaufort Books, $12.95).

The book, like the workshops, is aimed at kids 9 to 14 who worry about the mysterious terrain of adolescence. The chapters cover everything from sex and body changes to feelings about divorce, death and two-faced friends.

"What if you get your period in school?"

"Is it scary to have a wet dream? What can you do with your sheets?"

The book frames questions and answers from a kid's point of view, based on the thousands of written questions she has collected at her workshops.

The workshops grew out of Rosenberg's years as a teacher of health and human sexuality at Nassau Community College on Long Island. All too often, she said, her grown students would tell her how relieved they were to be able to discuss their secret questions and insecurities — and to know that their feelings were shared by their classmates.

Faced with several hundred antsy preteens, Rosenberg comes across as a blend of cheerleader, preacher and big sister.

"You, sitting in this room, every one of you has something special about you," she proclaims enthusiastically. "There are a lot of kids who think they aren't even worth bothering about."

She talks about peer pressure and the right to say no. About divorce. About grades. And the kids listen. When teachers distribute index cards for anonymous questions, the pencils fly.

"Most of my friends never talk to me," writes one student. "I try to talk to them, but I feel really stupid. I feel like everybody hates me and I almost hate myself."

Rosenberg assures the group she has heard that complaint many times. "Maybe you have to start looking for different friends," she said. "Start with one and feel comfortable with that one. Then you can look around for more."

A murmur of shock runs through the audience as the educator reads the next card.

"What could you do if a close family member asks you to have sex and he or she is real attractive and you want to say yes or no, but you're scared and afraid of getting pregnant?"

Rosenberg tells the kids that sex with family members is not considered acceptable or natural, and adds, "I can only tell you it's not a healthy situation. You must say no for your own good."

"Is it wrong to have sexual intercourse at this age?" The question comes up so often in the stack of cards that Rosenberg finally skips to other questions. But by now the audience knows her reaction.

"It's less a matter of right or wrong and more a matter of appropriateness. A seventh-grader is not ready for that."

Why do so many kids pour out their hearts to an adult they have known for only an hour? Maybe it's because Rosenberg acknowledges their feelings, refrains from judging, and actively draws them out. Parents, she said, need to do the same thing.

"It's absolutely not enough for a parent to say to a child, 'I love you, I care about you, I want to talk,' " Rosenberg said. "Even if a child does want to speak to them, he might not have the words."

Parents should try to read the unspoken signals their child is giving, and initiate the conversation. They should even notice such seemingly minor points as whether the child is taller or shorter than his friends, because such differences are important to the child.

Photographs can help advertise, sell goods

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

A friend's daughter wanted to sell her MGB. While a regular ad in a newspaper often works well, there are probably weekly papers where you live that specialize only in list automobiles for sale. While these publications will take regular ads, they do often encourage advertisers to submit photographs along with a verbal description.

Most newspapers use a 65-line screen on their photographs ... and, unfortunately, a 65-line screen just doesn't allow quality reproduction.

The "screen," in case you are unfamiliar with printing techniques, creates the dot pattern needed to produce a halftone for offset and letterpress printing. If you look at any printed picture through a loop or strong magnifying glass, you'll see that it's made up of a series of dots.

CNS Photo

Even if not used for advertising, taking photographs of a car is a good way to practice with a 35mm camera.

In newspapers, the dots are very easy to see because they use "large" 65-line screens. Look at the printed pictures in a quality magazine, and you'll find clearer, sharper pictures because the publication is using a screen in the 150- to 250-line range.

The point to that short blurb on printing is that in order to get a reasonably good photograph of your automobile into print, you need to start with a good original.

Many folks, an ad person in one of the papers told me, send in instant photos. Instant photos are nifty things to take and show to your friends, but they just don't stand up to screening — if you use instant photos in a personal newspaper ad, expect to be disappointed

Park the car in an attractive setting — by a lake, in front of a grove of trees or in front of a nice house. Just be certain you don't have a telegraph pole or a post light "growing" out of the car.

Next, move in close to frame your picture — that is, fill the frame with the automobile.

Now you'll want to plug in your strobe light (yes, even if there's bright sunlight) in order to eliminate any shadow areas. You can count on even faint shadows going completely dark in the newspaper, so even if the detail is visible on your print, it will be lost in the reproduction.

Finally, take at least a half a dozen shots using various f-stops — make exposures for at least two f-stops on either side of what your meter dictates.

Spa old Alaskan hot spot

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Visitors to the winter-frozen north are starting to discover Chena Hot Springs, where they can enjoy a soak in 110 F water while watching the chilly world outside their glass-enclosed shelter.

Chena Hot Springs, 60 miles northeast of Fairbanks, is an out-of-the-way, out-in-the-woods health spa that Alaskans have been using for nearly a century but tourists are just discovering.

"Tourists haven't really found out about us yet," explains Roger Cotting, a Fairbanks architect and partner in Chena Hot Springs.

"Four out of every five guests are still Alaskans. The miners knew about Chena Hot Springs more than 80 years ago. They'd come up here — often via dog sled — for their rheumatism and arthritis."

The springs, he adds, must have been a salve for those sore sourdoughs: the water comes out of the ground at a sizzling 156 degrees Fahrenheit.

It's now toned down to a more tolerable 110 F in the soaking pools, and to 90 F in the swimming areas.

"When people get off the ski slopes in winter, or finish on the cross-crountry trails, it's almost ritualistic that they take to the water," says Cotting. "There's something infinitely hedonistic about soaking and swimming when only a few feet away, outside, it can be snowing up a real blizzard."

When Cotting and his associates acquired Chena Hot Springs about eight years ago, the resort was pretty much down at the heels. In fact, some of the cabins had big holes in the floors where moose had wandered in and stomped around for a while.

But now — $3.5 million later — things are different. There are clean and comfortable accommodations for 160 people.

AT WIT'S END

Let them eat their words

By ERMA BOMBECK

It started out as a threat.

A mother who works outside the home told her children if they called her at the office one more time after school and whined, "There's nothing to eat!," she would do something drastic. (And possibly illegal.)

The threat materialized one afternoon after the fourth of her four children called to complain that all the snack boxes in the house were empty, the contents of the refrigerator had died, and the cookies left over from Christmas were "icky." A landmark decision was made. If the kids didn't like what she bought, let them do the shopping and find out for themselves how far the money went, and what the choices were.

Thus it came to be that at 10 a.m. one Saturday morning in February, four small children, ages five to 14, entered a supermarket with $60 and instructions to buy lunches and snacks for the entire week.

They fought over which cart to pick. They fought over who was going to push it. They fought over who would hold the money. They fought over which aisle to go down first. They fought over who was going to work the calculator.

Every purchase was a Supreme Court decision. Was the dog really worth the 25-cent can of dog food to feed him? Did they really need a clean sponge to wipe up around the sink for 89 cents or could they stand the pollution of the old one for another week? Could they tough it out on a small container of ice cream at $1.69 instead of the large one just under $4?

An hour later they were struck with panic when the kid operating the calculator reported the total was in excess of $1,040. When they discovered he was in error, they ordered him out of the store.

The three of them approached the check-out counter with severe apprehension. Also an assortment of soft drinks, chips and dips, crackers, cakes, gum and bananas. Another child abandoned ship when he argued that a bag of tortilla chips would put them over their $60 limit and the other two voted to "go for it."

The bill came to $45.97. They brought up from their jeans pockets $1.80 worth of coupons and ended up with $15.83 in change.

There was not a single phone call during the entire week to mother. Shopping by committee had worked.

I had a friend who did the same thing once with catsup. Sick of all the arguments at the table, she bought each one of her four boys a large bottle of catsup and put their names on it.

It's an old motherhood adage, but it still flies. Starve an ingrate . . . feed a responsibility.

Wineries seek national publicity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California wineries seeking a taste of free national publicity from the Democratic National Convention in June are bubbling with ideas.

"Wouldn't you like to have your brand hoisted on national television? I would," said Ed Everett, publisher of Wine Trade, an industry newsletter.

Convention officials said Wednesday they have been inundated with inquiries from wineries interested in everything from running wine country tours to issuing commemorative labels and providing wines for the party brass.

The convention host committee has named John DeLuca, president of the California Wine Institute, to coordinate the inquiries. The institute represents 415 of California's 430 wineries.

Andi Behlen of the host committee said it has received "42 million phone calls" aimed at mixing wine and politics.

"Of course, everybody's interested in promoting their own product," Behlen said.

Clowns have colorful history

Some historians say professional clowns appeared as early as 2500 B.C. in Egypt and in the classic theaters of ancient Greece.

Not till the 16th century in Italy, however, in the Commedia dell'Arte all'Improviso, did clowns as we know them today begin to emerge.

Hair expert: Beware lipids

Hearst Feature Service

Beware the internal lipids of the hair shaft.

On the beauty battlefront of itchy scalp, dry flakes, perm burns and grease, lipids are also threatening to invade Patricia Castay's idea of a perfect head.

Not just any lipids. Castay is talking about the internal lipids that get dissolved when one washes, rinses, conditions, moisturizers, gels or sets with a hair product too high in alcohol. "You have to keep a harmony in order to keep perfect hair," she explains. Hair is 90 percent protein and 10 percent water, trace elements, carbohydrates. And lipids — a scientific term for "fats."

"Hair doesn't have any feeling," Castay cautions. "No pain. You can persecute hair freely without knowing the damage."

At age 32, the French-born Castay is a biochemist who has made hair her life's work. She is one of only 40 trichologists, or hair experts, in this country.

Though trichology — which scientifically measures the hair's condition — is an old profession in Europe, the system arrived in America a decade ago. The European course, sponsored by the International Association of Trichologists is available through a two-year training program sponsored by the University of Southern California.

At her own clinic, the Washington Cosmetology Center in Washington, Castay microscopically analyzes a client's hair and scalp to determine her health. After the evaluation, which includes analyses of hair roots and mineral content, she recommends treatment.

Even doctors, she says, are beginning to realize the significance of hair in determining such things as a person's vitamin deficiency: "The hair is a diary, a biometer of your health."

To Castay, a brunet whose own hair is always washed in rainwater, hair must be treated case by case. She endorses only one product line from the south of France — a line she has personally used since childhood — and will not comment about the worth of general product groupings such as gels, conditions or cream rinses.

She does maintain, however, that no matter what the hair's condition, all heads should be treated naturally. Her clients may find themselves with a "prescription" of walnut leaves, in which the iodine acts as an antiseptic. For a scalp astringent, a mixture made of nettle weed provides, among other things, iron and vitamins A and C. Blonds might obtain some highlights through the goldish-yellow pigment in the camomile flower, more commonly associated with a soothing tea.

While Castay prefers to make her own products, the French line she recommends, Klorane, was developed by a French pharmacist who agrees with Castay's back-to-earth principles: "He has packaged nature in a bottle," she says.

Many American-made hair products contain the "harsh, high-tech chemicals" Castay urges her customers to stay away from, but their qualities depend on what the small writing on their labels state.

Yet, for some products and accompanying fads that come and go, Castay has some advice:

— Alcohol: Stay away from products with high alcohol contents. Alcohol dissolves the internal lipids of the air shaft.

— Mayonnaise: If you gooked mayonnaise instead of mineral oil on your tresses, you were better off. "Mayonnaise would be good because of the proteins in the egg," says Castay. But the treatment is nonetheless not recommended: "The egg's molecular weight is too heavy," meaning its protein won't "get inside" the hair.

— Detergent: Don't shampoo with a product high in soap or detergent content. "It will be alkaline," warns Castay, "thus stripping the natural oils out of hair."

— Vinegar: Vinegar in water as a cream rinse is also loaded with pectin. But make certain, Castay says, to use apple cider vinegar.

Even with such hair "naturals" in most household cupboards, Castay offers a final word of advice: Don't mix "homemade" concoctions yourself.

"One of my clients rubbed garlic all over her scalp," she recalls. The woman's scalp was very oily, and she reasoned that since an oily scalp is often due to too much cholesterol, the garlic, with its alleged natural properties to lower cholesterol, would be Mother Nature's answer to her grease.

"Garlic has been recommended for the hair because it is rich in sulphur and it is a natural product which is supposed to lower the cholesterol," Castay explains. "But she forgot one little thing. Garlic will blister your scalp like mad."

DEAR ABBY

Choice of wedding dress involves one mom too many

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from the 22-year-old bride-to-be who invited her future mother-in-law to go along and help pick out her bridal gown:

I don't know what kind of relationship the bride had with her own mother, but I can tell you that the day my daughter invites her future mother-in-law along to help pick out her bridal gown, I will be busy elsewhere. And the two of them can pay for whatever they purchase together! — MRS. A. IN PINCKNEY, MICH.

DEAR MRS. A.: So far, to my surprise, the mail is running 2-to-1 in favor of your point of view. But read on for a heartwarming letter for the opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: I was very proud of my daughter when she asked her future mother-in-law to come with us and help pick out her bridal gown. The three of us went shopping together and had a wonderful time!

Her future mother-in-law was thrilled because, since she had only sons, she thought she'd never know the joy of helping a daughter pick out a wedding gown. — IRENE IN ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked what you thought of a woman who would play cards in her home the same evening she buried one of her parents.

Thank you for saying it's not possible to make a fair judgment without knowing what was in that woman's heart.

Abby, people often laugh and carry on after a funeral to keep from breaking down, because if one breaks down, the rest would follow. — BEEN THROUGH IT

DEAR BEEN: It's true. But what's wrong with breaking down? It's appropriate for one who has lost a loved one to break down and weep — and even to cry out in anger, "God, why me?"

My advice to those who feel the pain of grief would be: Don't try to put on a show of "strength" — cry your heart out. Tears are healing.

DEAR ABBY: After 13 years of marriage, I am seriously considering calling it quits.

For the last three years, "Don" has worked away from home on various construction jobs. When our children aren't in school, we go to wherever he is to be with him. He is never on one job long enough for us to move there.

Don has always been overly jealous, even though I've never given him any reason to be. The problem is that it keeps getting worse. Abby, I have never fooled around and Don knows this, and in his more rational moments he says he loves me so much he's afraid someone might lure me away from him.

Last Sunday a car turned into our driveway, and Don said (right in front of the children), "That must have been Mommy's boyfriend, checking to see if I was home."

The phone is worse. He always answers. If it's a wrong number, he says, "Probably one of your boyfriends calling to see if I'm home."

How do I convince Don that I love him? Frankly, I am glad to see him leave. I want our marriage to work, but I don't know how much longer I can put up with his insulting accusations. — HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Persistent, excessive jealousy without provocation is a sickness. Tell your husband that if he really can't control it, he should see a shrink because you have had it with his groundless suspicions. And by the way, there's an old French saying, "A man rarely looks under the bed unless he's been there himself."

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Hayes speaks out for 'graying Americans'

From Staff Reports

"If you're a graying American, stand up and be counted," said Helen Hayes. "Even if you've been conditioned to think — in this youth-oriented society — that you're not important any more, fight back."

The First Lady of the American Theater made the plea in a recent broadcast. She said that too many older Americans have been taught to think that once they reach retirement age they should fold up their proverbial tents and steal quietly away.

"Not so," she insisted, "this is exactly the time to take hold of life, start living and be heard from."

The message is one she airs in many ways during her radio broadcast, "The Best Years," a daily commentary designed to give older Americans a pat on the back. She called them "Maturians," because it sounds positive, active.

Miss Hayes herself is 82. A walker and a swimmer, she said she finds "The Best Years" particularly stimulating because it keeps her in close touch with what is going on in the world.

The commentary, on the air since 1979, was initially hosted by Lowell Thomas. When he died in 1981 Mutual of Omaha, which funds the broadcast, invited Miss Hayes to take over.

"I was proud to do so," she said. "I admired Lowell and his work. I wanted a soap box to voice my opinion and counter the media's attitude towards gray America and I also wanted to inspire younger listeners to look ahead to their own aging."

Today the commentaries air on about 175 stations around the country and listeners tuning in daily hear Miss Hayes urge them to get more out of life

Curtis announces top 10 coiffure awards

From Staff Reports

Women with layered, short and softly curled hair are right in step with this year's trendsetters as evidenced by winners of the Helene Curtis 1983 10 Best Coiffured Women Awards. The women selected in the 28th annual voting by the Helene Curtis Guild of Professional Hairstylists include Sheena Easton, Pat Benatar, Melissa Manchester, Debbie Allen, Raquel Welch, Linda Gray, Morgan Fairchild, Nastassia Kinski, Joan Rivers and Diana, Princess of Wales.

While individuality is prominent in each winner's hair fashion choice, the clear trend is to hair that is easy to care for, with soft volume and natural or permed curl. Most of the women prefer a style that accents the eyes and bares the ears.

Even straight styles get 'the wave'

CHICAGO (AP) — Hairstyles that work — for the woman and her lifestyle — will take a prominent fashion role this spring and summer, industry experts predict.

Hair silhouettes will be simple and narrow, and the blunt-cut, one-length bob will be a favorite among women of all ages, according to the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board.

Perms are expected to provide the foundations for many of these styles.

"Bobs will be everywhere this spring, but there are so many possible variations that few women will look alike," comments board member Victor Figueroa of New York City.

Michael Marks, Elkins Park, Pa., agrees that "simplicity and efficiency in design are key to a workable hairstyle that's fashionable as well. Today's woman doesn't have the time to fuss with a lot of unruly hair.

"Versatility will come in many ways: partial perms in areas where volume and support are needed will be popular; evening styles will be created instantly with a dab of styling mousse to control and slick one side behind the ears; a comb, barrette or bright jewel can be placed in the crest of a wave for accent; slightly messy strands of hair that fall out of the sleek silhouette of the bob will create a natural, casual wind-blown feeling.

While women are looking for more dramatic looks in their hairstyles, men, who patronize beauty salons in ever-increasing numbers, favor a more conservative look. Mario Tricoci of Oak Brook, Ill., finds that his male clientele "want to look very corporate, but are willing to have a perm, or add subtle color changes as long as it looks natural."

And although many of the spring hair fashion looks are smoother than in past seasons, the perm remains one of the most popular services in the salon.

"I'm perming even the smoothest of bob looks," comments Douglas Marvaldi, Winter Park, Fla.

"My clients who had the wild and frizzy perms of the late '70s have come to depend on the support and fullness only a perm can give. But now they add one more quick step, using a hot styling brush, curling iron or electric rollers to smooth the curl while leaving the volume."

This cut is an "all girl" style for the woman who loves short hair but doesn't want to look boyish.

Communication counts

From Staff Reports

Getting a good or bad haircut or style doesn't depend solely on the stylists's artisitc abilities, according to Tom Davis, owner of six Mr. Tom's Salons in Texas. He believes it has more to do with the hairstylists ability to talk with his clients.

"Not idle chit chat, but really getting down to specifics. A haircut to one woman might mean a half-inch trim, while another envisions a chin length bob.

"Short can mean a boyish or gamine look, or a head full of waves or curls. Much also depends on the type of hair and the client's ability to handle it herself between appointments.

Short stylish

From Staff Reports

The scissors, razor and electric clippers are all important to the creation of shortly-sheared haircuts, according to HairAmerica, the fashion group of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

Filled with variety, the styling body's brief precision cuts feature verstaile styling length at the front of the head to accent and frame a multitude of facial shapes.

A powerful variation in the style is the diagonal look, which draws hair length to one side of the face, either with equal length on both sides of the head or with a closely-cropped side to contrast longer length. Other styles included edged bangs, with equal length on both sides or full throughout the front.

Sculpturing techniques make use of new salon products such as styling gels, foams, lotions and mousses.

Style variations include symmetrical shapes with edged bangs and a convertible cut on the sides.

Kathy Grella teaches expectant mothers during a session of the Junior League's Perinatal Clinic. Classes are from 9:30-11 a.m. every Thursday.

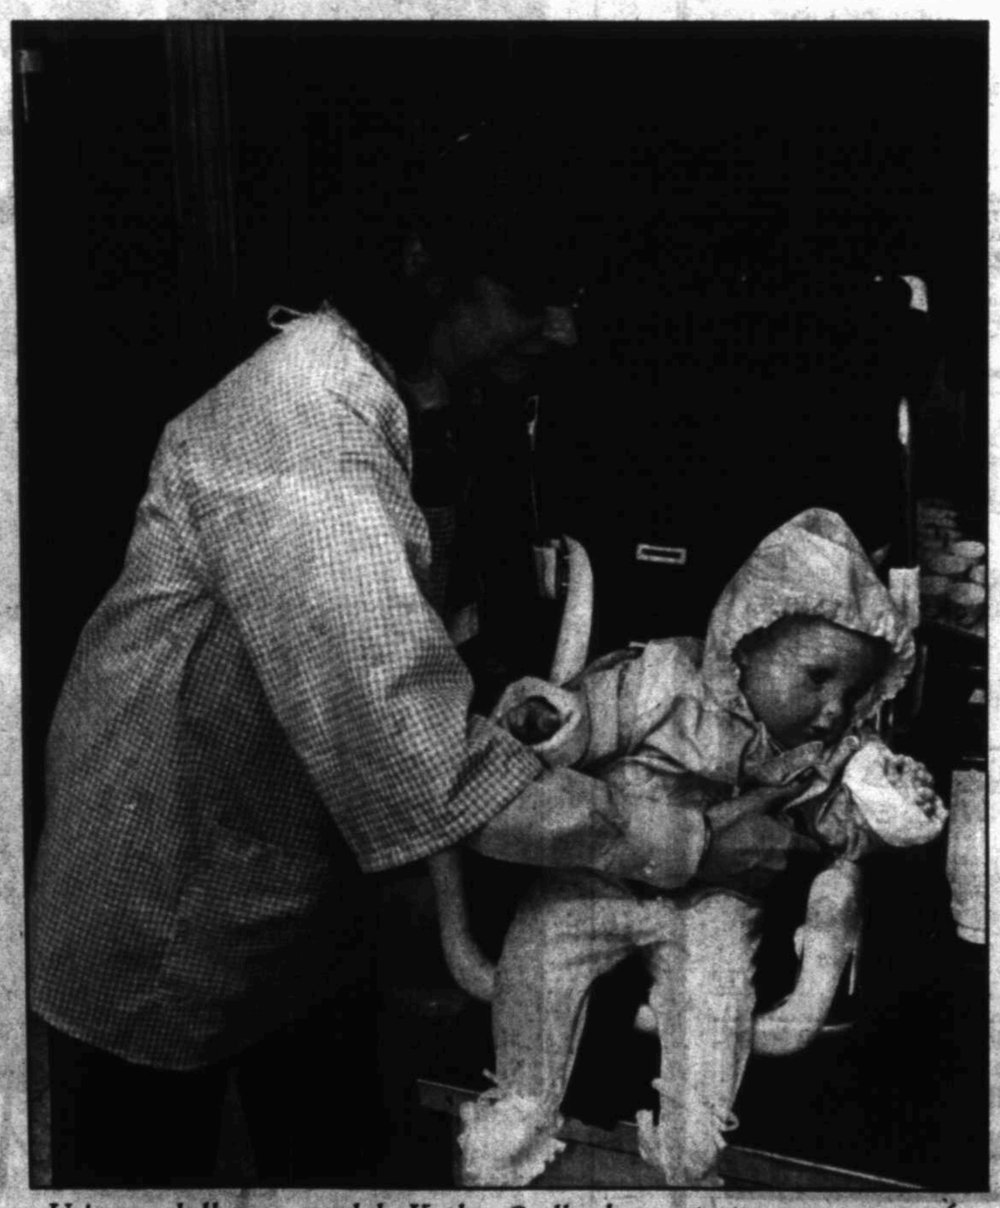
Ball goes Mardi Gras

"Mardi Gras," the theme for the Junior League of Midland, Inc.'s annual Charity Ball this year, will be Friday, from 8 p.m.-midnight at the Midland Center.

The evening, planned to be reminiscent of time spent in The Court of Two Sisters and Jackson Square in New Orleans, will feature the Levee Band and the North Texas One O'Clock Lab Band throughout the evening.

Proceeds of the ball are returned to the commmunty through 20 of the League's community projects.

Mrs. F. Ferrell Davis is president of the Junior League of Midland, Inc.; Mrs. C.D. Martin is Charity Ball chairman; Mrs. William Gau is decorations chairman; and Mrs. Darrell Smith is the assistant decorations chairman.



Using a doll as a model, Kathy Grella demonstrates proper use of a child's car seat.

Twenty-five expectant mothers arrive at for the regular Thursday morning sessions of the Junior League-sponsored Perinatal Clinic, at the Midland County Health Department, 501 Andrews Hwy.

"Perinatal" is the care of the mother and child before and after the birth of the baby, according to Mrs. Jack Reed, Junior League's chairman of the Perinatal Clinic. "The reason the clinic is called that is we have volunteers working with the patients after they have their babies," she said.

The Perinatal Clinic was established in 1978 by the Junior League of Midland Inc., "for the purpose of improving the quality of parenting by giving emotional support, health care instruction and parenting education to pregnant women who are unable to afford conventional prenatal care," said Mrs. Reed.

Mrs. Kelly Bell, community vice-president of Junior League of Midland Inc., said the clinic was founded after a community research committee conducted a Needs Assessment of Midland. "It was discovered in the research that this (clinic) was a need — we had no prenatal care for indigents."

When the clinic and its curriculum was being organized, said Mrs. Bell, the League was assisted by Midland's medical community. "We worked with the hospital at that time. We've always had close ties with the medical personnel in the city."

Patients who attend the Perinatal Clinic are given educational and supportive programs and instruction about physical and emotional changes of pregnancy, development of the fetus, nutrition and meal planning, effects of drugs on the fetus, methods of birth control, Lamaze techniques for labor and delivery, care for children including infant care and feeding, poison and accident prevention and medical treatment, and hospital procedures including a tour of the hospital's labor and postpartum areas, said Mrs. Reed.

"Most obstetricians in town rotate to see the patients at the Health Department," said Mrs. Bell. "The patients are there in the mornings for lab work and classes. The doctor and certified nurse midwife see the patients in the afternoons." The nurse midwife "does most of the deliveries of the patients who go to the Health Department (prenatal clinic). She's always backed by an obstetrician (if an emergency situation occurs). There seems to be a good feeling about having a woman there — the feeling is women will be more sympathetic and understanding."

The clinic is designed to help expectant mothers who receive their prenatal care and delivery through the Midland County Health Department. In order to attend the Perinatal Clinic, mothers-to-be "have to qualify with Health Department guidelines according to income," said Mrs. Bell.

In 1983, about 250 pregnant women, ages 14-42, attended the Perinatal Clinic, said Mrs. Reed.

Because many of the clinic's expectant women receive diagnosis of pregnancy later than many patients of private doctors, "the majority of the patients (in the clinic) are in the last trimester (last three month of pregnancy). Many of the Perinatal Clinic expectant mothers do not necessarily know or receive proper and complete information about how to care for themselves or how to prepare for the delivery of their babies," she added. "We do not see many patients in the clinic in the first few months of pregnancy."

Patients attend the Perinatal Clinic on the Thursdays when they regularly see the doctor, although the nurse often notifies them if something special is to take place on a day other than their regular visit.

"We teach nutrition every week and provide a nutritious snack each week. We teach food groups, using food wisely, what's good and what's not good for pregnant women, good nutrition for both mother and baby," said Mrs. Reed.

The women are also taught to use care with all medicines during pregnancy and to always check with the doctor about any medication.

A social worker is provided by the Perinatal Clinic, through Family Services of Midland, to counsel patients and visit them in the hospital after delivery. The social worker is a woman who is "at the clinic every week. She has to talk to each patient at least one time at the clinic. She also makes visits at the hospital several times a week," said Mrs. Reed.

The clinic provides each of its patients with a layette (supplies for babies), with many items provided by Church Women United, Mrs. Reed added.

Junior League of Midland Inc. evolved from the Junior Service League which was founded in 1949. The organization "became a member of the Association of Junior Leagues in 1964," said Mrs. Bell. The League in Midland is composed of about 40 provisional members who must complete a year's training and education about Junior League; 250 active members; and 275 sustaining members who are older than 40.

Junior League of Midland Inc. has two primary sources of income: the annual Charity Ball, this year to be Feb. 24 at Midland Center; and the Next-to-New Clothing Shop, 509 E. Illinois.

Money raised from the two sources provides operating funds for community programs such as Adult Basic Education Aides through Casa de Amigos and Midland College which offers help in earning GED degrees; Audiometric and Visual Screening for private schools; Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation; Cultural Arts Program; Dental Clinic; Directory of Community Services; Exploratory Experiences, program provided for students in the gifted and talented program of MISD; Haley Library and History Center Docent Program; Hearthstone, a shelter for abused and neglected children, in conjunction with Baptist Children's Home; Hospice; Museum of the Southwest Docents; Petroleum Museum Docents; Theatre Arts Docents; Student Art Festival; Tape Lending Library; Visual Arts and Young People's University.

Las Vegas: Perfect vacation spot for non-gamblers

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Not many people see the sunrise in Las Vegas, and most who do are watching it through dark glasses, their eyes bleary from chip counting, too many cigarettes and too little sleep.

And that is a pity. Because Las Vegas, especially for non-gamblers, has some of the prettiest scenes and some of the most varied attractions in the United States.

You can, as I did recently, spend a few days in Las Vegas and have as much fun as you would in Orlando, Los Angeles or New Orleans — without dropping so much as a quarter in a slot machine.

Where else can you spend the morning plumbing the depths of one engineering marvel, Hoover Dam, and the evening watching more, the Las Vegas chorus girls?

You can tour an antique car museum, catch lunker striped bass, take an aerial tour of the Grand Canyon, touch one of Liberace's pianos, tour a ghost town, shop at a lavish shopping mall, ski on a 12,000-foot mountain, rent a houseboat, play tennis and golf, all without entering a casino.

EVEN IF YOU do enter a casino you don't have to spend a penny to see a lounge act, enjoy a circus or play video games. For only a few pennies you can watch classic old movies, eat a lavish buffet, watch an international star perform. Las Vegas is the best bargain in the United States — if you don't gamble.

But, of course, most people do, and that is why the casinos and hotels can afford to offer low-priced lures.

Most of the 12 million tourists who come here each year crowd into the four-mile Strip intent on making a killing. There are 15,489 nickel slot machines, 928 dime slots, 16,361 quarter slots, 8,599 dollar slots, 130 roulette tables, 1,628 blackjack tables, 62 keno games, 316 poker tables, 48 baccarat tables, 40 wheels of fortune, 51 sports pools and race books, 42 craps tables and 15 bingo rooms — all for the sole purpose of grabbing your money.

But, while the others gamble and gambol in the night, we will venture forth by day. Here are some of the things we can do:

HOOVER DAM, the highest concrete dam in North America, is one of the most impressive engineering sights in the world. It is about a 30-minute drive from Las Vegas. Spanning Black Canyon, Hoover Dam is as high as a 70-story building, as thick as two football fields. For $1 (50 cents for senior citizens), you can take an elevator 500 feet into the bowels of the dam for a 35-minute tour.

Hoover Dam holds Lake Mead, the largest man-made reservoir in America. Its 110-mile length, 500-foot depth and 500 miles of shoreline offer many activities — fishing (trout, bass, striped bass, crappie), camping (six campgrounds), boating (six marinas), swimming, dining (six restaurants).

You can rent a houseboat and spend a few days poking into the many coves jutting into the magnificent red sandstone canyons. A typical rental for three nights in the high season (May to September) is $527; $260 in the low season.

Las Vegas is known for its bright lights and lavish shows, but experienced visitors can sort out the real gems among all the glitter.

Las Vegas has always offered good (or at least fair) food at low prices. Buffets are the rage today. At Circus-Circus, for example, you can eat a 41-item breakfast for $1.99, a 35-item lunch buffet for $2.49, or a 35-item dinner buffet for $3.49. At Caesar's Palace they give you all you can eat and all the champagne you can drink at a Sunday brunch for $8.50, or you can try the less lavish champagne brunch at the Silver Nugget for $2.95. Don't expect gourmet fare, but adequate food at a very good price.

THE GRAND CANYON is about a six-hour drive from Las Vegas, too far for a comfortable day's car trip. But you can take an air tour of the canyon for $125, $99 for children. Scenic Airlines will pick you up at your hotel, take you to the airport and fly you over and into the canyon.

The Valley of Fire State Park, 50 miles from Las Vegas, offers brilliant red sandstone formations once worshiped by the Indians. In nearby Overton is the Lost City Museum, with archeological relics and full-sized models of abobe dwellings. If the Valley of Fire is too far for you, Red Rocks (only 15 miles from town) also has some stunning rock formations.

Circus-Circus is a mecca for children, who can play on the mezzanine while their parents lose their college tuition in the slot machines below. You can have your face painted like a clown for $3, have a poster-sized picture taken for $7.95, or play a game — basketball toss, football throw, etc. for a quarter. If you win, you get a stuffed toy. Circus acts are continuous from 11 a.m. to midnight.

You will notice that no Las Vegas cocktail waitress wears skirts more than three inches long. So, if girl-watching is on your agenda, this is the town.

FOR ADULTS who want to play adult games, newspaper racks offer publications advertising the girls (and boys in some cases) who apparently want nothing else but to spend time with you — for a fee, of course.

Adolf Hitler's 1939 Mercedes limousine is the most popular exhibit in the Imperial Palace's stunning automobile collection. For $3.75 you can see it and hundreds of other classic automobiles.

Howard Hughes' 1954 Chrysler New Yorker is here, with its special $15,000 air purification system and windows that are permanently sealed, and so is Al Capone's massive — and bulletproof — Cadillac.

Although Las Vegas show prices, especially for big-name entertainers, have risen dramatically, they are still a bargain when contrasted with Broadway prices. And some of the best shows don't feature the big names.

The hottest, and many think best, is the Siegfried and Roy magic show at the Frontier ($26.50). The Stardust's "Lido" (from $17.50) and the Tropicana's "Folies Bergere" (dinner show from $16.50, cocktail show from $13.95), will satisfy all who want to see a lavish Paris-type show. At the Desert Inn you can see a Broadway-like show, "Dream Street," for $15, and at the Union Plaza a musical version of "Some Like It Hot" called "Sugar" is a popular $7.50 cocktail show.

ALTHOUGH MOST visitors to Las Vegas appear to be allergic to health and a fine complexion, there are places for such.

In the Desert Inn's new $5 million spa you can join a group fitness class ($5), have a loofa scrub ($12), a herbal wrap ($12), a facial ($10), a 55-minute massage ($35), an underwater massage ($30) or just relax in a snooze room or run on the jogging track.

The half-day "spoiler" includes a massage, a private whirlpool, a facial, and a loofa scrub or a salt glow, all for $71.96. Book into the spa for four days and three nights for $363 and you will get three massages, one underwater massage, one loofa, one salt glow, a manicure and a pedicure, a shampoo and set (women), a shampoo and a shave (men), two half-hour facials, a skin analysis, unlimited group fitness classes, four private whirlpool baths, a fango treatment and herbal wraps.

At the stylish Fashion Show Mall in the middle of the Strip you can spend your new-won money at Goldwater's, Neiman-Marcus, Bullock's, Abercrombie & Fitch, and a dozen elegant jewelry stores.

Ex-New Yorkers run guest house in Scotland

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

KENTALLEN OF APPIN, Scotland — You have heard this story before. Part of it, anyway. It is the one about the couple who deserts the city — the brownstone in New York, the high-paying executive job, lifelong friends — and moves to the country to rediscover the simple life.

Well, that is what Bob and Jane Taylor did. Sort of. Seven years ago, while driving through Scotland on vacation, they saw a guest house for sale and stopped for tea. They weren't here to buy anything — and certainly not to get into the hotel business — so they wished the little old lady who owned the place a good day and drove on.

That could have been the end of it, but that night, in idle conversation, one of them asked, "What would happen if we bought it?" To make a complicated story undeservedly short, the Taylors went back to New York, quit their jobs, he as vice president of a bank, she as creative director of an advertising agency, sold the brownstone and, after friends questioned their sanity, bought what is now surely one of the finest country inns in all of Scotland.

The 13-room (nine with bath) Ardsheal House Hotel sits among 900 acres of woods and meadows on a peninsula overlooking Loch Linnhe, 30 miles north of Oban on Scotland's west coast. It is rustic elegance, full of antiques and oak paneling and open fires, and to stay there with the Taylors is to be a guest in a home.

My wife, Sandy, and I had stumbled on Ardsheal, which means "high lookout" in Gaelic, while wandering through the Scottish countryside, spending successive nights at excellent country inns that are both plentiful and delightful in Scotland.

If you have been to Scotland, you know there is no place quite like it. The grass is so green, the evenings so utterly quiet, the glens and lochs and mountains so beautiful that one feels transplanted into a fairy tale. The Rocky Mountain high has nothing on this underpopulated corner of the civilized world.

Let us note that it is not true it rains all the time in Scotland. Just most of the time. The wind blows so hard that the sheep's wool stands on end like a punk rocker's hairdo. Even in summer the mountain-fed lochs are too cold to swim in and water-skiers must wear wet suits. Rain is euphemistically called Scottish mist here but, I must admit, I never resented a drop.

What would become of the rainbows and the flowers without it?

The rain was falling gently as we turned off route A828 near Appin and headed up the long, wooded drive to Ardsheal House, built in 1760 by the Stewart clan. It was 4 p.m. and dusk was already gathering over the nearby mountains of Morvern. We walked inside, feeling strangely as if we had arrived home. Hot coffee and biscuits were waiting.

"It's funny," Jane Taylor said later that evening, sitting by a roaring fire with her husband, who in his tartan kilt looked not at all like your typical graduate of Princeton University, class of '53, "but we weren't in that group of people who hate New York.

"We loved it. We never intended to leave. It's not that we were running from anything. We were very happy there."

The Taylors never looked back, even though business was so slow the first season that they used to spend afternoons on the beach, leaving a note on the front door to inform any unexpected guests of their whereabouts.

Now they are booked solidly in the three peak summer months and reservations are advised the rest of the time. Ardsheal is open from the end of March to mid-October.

New Orleans prepares for 1984 Louisiana World Exposition

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW ORLEANS — "It's a treat to beat your feet in the Mississippi mud," an old jazz song assures us. If that's so, New Orleans will be treating a lot of people in the weeks to come, because there is enough mud now on the streets of the Crescent City to please a sow.

New Orleans, my friends, is a mess. It's a mess because it is undergoing the biggest street renovation ($50 million), hotel construction (10 new hotels) and spruce-up in the city's history.

The reason for all this frantic construction, destruction and reconstruction is the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition, which is scheduled to open hard on the banks of the Mississippi on May 12. Will the city be ready for the first of an anticipated 11 million visitors? Officials say yes; those of us who toured the site in late January have our doubts.

"We will be open on May 12, without question," says Petr Spurney, president and chief executive officer of the World Exposition. Given his track record as chief executive officer of the 1974 Spokane World's Fair, 1976 Bicentennial Freedom Trail, and 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, one feels comfortable in believing his word.

But still, a recent rainy-day tour of the World Exposition site, which is even messier than the torn-up streets in the French Quarter, made one pause. Trucks rumbled through a morass of mud, steel girders lay scattered about like monstrous Tinker Toys, half-completed pavilions had a bombed-out Dresden look, and puddles of water previewed the fair's theme: "The World of Fresh Water."

NEARBY, INSIDE the warmth of a converted riverside warehouse, Spurney and his staff exuded a Fantasy Island confidence — "Smiles Everyone, Smiles." They assure you that, yes, the Fair will open on schedule and that, yes, all will be ready when that first visitor steps into the 150-acre fairground to enjoy what should be the most entertaining World's Fair since the 1939 New York Exposition.

The heavy emphasis at the Louisiana World Exposition will be on fun, not on education as has been the case in so many dull World's Fairs in the past. It seems appropiate that New Orleans, a city boasting such slogans as "The city that care forgot" and "The city of celebrations," will host the ultimate celebration.

More than 40,000 hours of entertainment are scheduled throughout the 184-day Fair. There will be 17 stages, with seats enough for 60,000 visitors each day to watch such talents as Willie Nelson, the London Philharmonic, Linda Ronstadt and Bob Hope (who will celebrate his 81st birthday at the Fair in May with a two-hour television special).

There will be lots of jazz, of course, and gospel, and two daily Mardi Gras parades, a children's theater, eight amusement rides (including America's tallest ferris wheel, a 17-story behemoth), dozens of strolling entertainers, and 75 concessions and restaurants to fill your tummy.

Two of the most innovative displays will be the Aquacade, patterned after Billy Rose's Aquacade at the 1939 New York World's Fair, and the "Wonder Wall."

The Aquacade will feature a synchronized water ballet, high divers, and all sorts of water acts during each of its eight shows a day. The Wonder Wall, a bizarre half-mile-long structure called "our horizontal Eiffel Tower" by fair officials and "The Great Wall of China as designed by the Marx Brothers" by others, will be the focus of the Fair.

THROUGHOUT THE Wonder Wall there will be small stages for performers, food concessions, merchandise halls, video games, viewing platforms, art works, water sculptures and the like.

The Fair describes the wall as "an opportunity to transform 2,300 feet of ground into a continuous stream of magic with lights, water, music and other diversions using stucco, corrugated and sheet metal, wire mesh and papier-mache to create an illusionary atmosphere to delight the visitor." You might call it something else after seeing its unique construction.

The Wonder Wall, like much of the Fair, is today scattered about and disassembled. It, too, will be finished in plenty of time for the opening, insists Spurney.

In addition to the entertainment and the illusions of the Fair, there will be educational opportunities for those who insist on them. The Space Shuttle Enterprise, for example, will sit beside the United States Pavilion for those who want to explore the handsome ship; there will be a number of international pavilions — possibly as many as 30.

Tips on New Orleans travel provided

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

HOW TO GET THERE — New Orleans is served by 20 national and international airlines and three interstate highways: I-10, I-55 and I-59. Both major bus companies serve the city, as does Amtrak, which is putting on a special train for the World's Fair. In addition, two paddle-wheelers, the Mississippi Queen and the Delta Queen, make New Orleans their headquarters and will run regular trips to the Fair from cities all along the Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

WHERE TO STAY — Few are the cities that have as many first-class hotels as New Orleans. The Fairmont, Royal Orleans, Pontchartrain, and Royal Sonesta have been pleasing discriminating guests for years, and the handsome French Quarter Maisonettes offers the charm of living in an old (1825) house. A number of new hotels — Sheraton, Inter-Continental, Hilton, Hyatt Regency, Marriott, Ramada, Meridien, Trusthouse Forte, Holiday Inn, Windsor Court — have helped bring the first-class hotel room count in the city to 25,000, 19,000 of which are within walking distance of the World's Fair. For those of you who like bed and breakfast, Bed and Breakfast Inc. and New Orleans Bed and Breakfast will be able to help. Although World's Fair officials will not book rooms for you, they will tell you what is available if you call (504) 525-FAIR.

WHERE TO EAT — Anywhere. New Orleans is literally stuffed with fine dining establishments. Some of the best are Commander's Palace (especially for the great jazz brunch on Saturday and Sunday), Le Ruth's (in neighboring Gretna), Mosca's, K-Paul's (for real Cajun cooking), Galatoire's, Ruth Chris (for steaks), Joe Petrossi's (for an oyster po'boy), Felix' Oyster Bar, and, of course, the traditional breakfast at Brennan's. Even the fast food here — Popeye's spicey chicken is justly famous, and the sidewalk hot dog vendors offer up a splendid product — is great. And, of course, you must have coffee and beignet (which resembles a square donut without a hole, served hot and topped with powdered sugar) at the Cafe Du Monde.

WHEN TO GO — The Fair opens May 12 and closes Nov. 11. Although the summer in New Orleans is hot and muggy, it shouldn't bother Fair goers much, since about 75 percent of the Fair is air conditioned. Anytime, really, is a good time to be in New Orleans.

WHAT TO DO — In addition to the Fair, New Orleans has countless tourist attractions. Preservation Hall is the landmark for jazz. For $1 you will be able to enjoy some of the finest old-time jazz musicians in the world. Another good bet is Munster's, where the Louisiana Jazz Repertory Ensemble plays. There are a number of river-boat cruises offered each day.

THE FAIR: One-day admissions are $15, and it's $28 for two consecutive days. For children under 12 and adults over 55 the prices are $14 and $26. Children 3 and under are admitted free.

Many travel agencies, airlines and bus tours are offering special World's Fair packages, some of them including visits to Florida's Epcot nd Los Angeles' Summer Olympics. You can book tickets in advance and charge them to your Mastercard or Visa by calling (504) 525-FAIR.

The dazzle of Arizona's mile-high northland ranges from awesome Grand Canyon to cozy Oak Creek, were visitors find interesting hikes and an emerging art center.

Northern Arizona: Not all areas of state 'flat desert wasteland'

Copley News Service

SEDONA, Ariz. — The first Autumn Indian Days fiesta unfolded in this red-rock town, Indian artists set up their easels at a shopping center beside Oak Creek, Indian drummers and dancers performed in garb and kachina carvers whittled their wares.

Tour buses came up from Phoenix and Tucson, and it seemed clear that no matter how much the people of Sedona cherish their seclusion, they are becoming one of the new crafts centers of the Southwest.

We escaped on foot, up the west fork of Oak Creek, beside polished red cliffs where leaves of sycamore and maple and aspen swirled down in light whirls of wind. The west fork trail leads from Highway 89-A, about 10 miles north of Sedona on the Flagstaff road, past the burned-out ruins of a homesteader's house that became the Mayhew Lodge.

I stayed there one night in 1960, in a tiny upstairs bedroom with a log wall and tilting floor, at the end of the day when I discovered the snug canyon and learned that northern Arizona violates the images of Arizona as a flat desert wasteland.

Traces of the homesteader's prowess remain. The apple orchard, untended, bears a rich red crop this autumn. The icehouse, cut into the red rock cliff, is there, and a long, low henhouse that escaped the flames. Past all these the trail sweeps over the chatty, burbling creek, and up the side canyon along the west fork tributary. It is a family trail: water is nowhere more than a foot deep, and part of the joy is hopping on dry stones across its surface to pick up the trail again on the other side.

Our base, as it is for a few days each autumn, was Garland's Oak Creek Lodge, a civilized cluster of log cabins on a bluff beside the creek. Mary and Gary Garland tend its apple orchards and operate its cider press, mingle with their guests and oversee a kitchen that produces breakfasts and dinners that combine the best of urban and rural cooking. Exultant and affectionate praise is found in the guest book. This fall, an Australian couple from Sydney had just signed their pledge to return to Oak Creek next fall.

One of the guests at Garland's was Dr. Josh Grant, a young Tucson physician, who recalled that his parents brought him here when the resort was known as Todd's.

"We'd been up at Grand Canyon," he said over dinner, "and my parents had bought me a tomahawk and an Indian headdress. While we were out, the maid decided it would be neat to dress up my pillow with the headdress and tomahawk and stand it up in bed. I've been coming back ever since."

Those who drive to northern Arizona tend to hurry across the intervening desert, then climb to the mile-high Colorado Plateau that sweeps across northern Arizona. This time we spent our first night at Grand Canyon's South Rim, where El Tovar Lodge is pleasantly freshened and Bright Angel Lodge retains its rustic charm.

In the modern Thunderbird and Kachina lodges, spacious rooms look out across Grand Canyon ($63 double; reservations for all Grand Canyon facilities through 602-638-2401).

The South Rim remains open all year, and it seems always rewarding. The pine and juniper woodlands along West Rim Drive en route to Hermit's Rest offer intriguing viewpoints of the canyon; this route is not open to car traffic in summer.

We lingered in the Fred Harvey Co. museum at Bright Angel Lodge; those who love railroads and the West have it all here: the story of the brash young Harvey who went to the Santa Fe barons, convinced that railroad food needn't be so bad, and of the empire that he and Santa Fe forged across the West. Harvey opened the 100-room El Tovar Hotel here in 1905, when Santa Fe cars brought not only the guests but fresh water for the hotel from Del Rio, 120 miles distant.

It is about a two-hour drive from Grand Canyon to Flagstaff, a charming forest town with a superb museum; the admirable Northland Press, a regional book publisher and the handsome campus of Northern Arizona University.

Down Oak Creek Canyon from Flagstaff the palette of spring-fed, deciduous foliage unfolds, and a sprinkling of creek-side private homes and small resorts.

Sugar birds only non-paying guests at resort

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

BAIE LONGUE, St. Martin — They are called sugar birds. They probably have another, less intriguing name, but that doesn't matter this morning. They are wren-sized, yellow of breast, and, if they weren't birds, I would say they have a sweet tooth. Let me just say that they have an insatiable lust for sugar.

I'm writing about the sugar birds because there are 17 of them sitting on my terrace right now at La Samanna, St. Martin's most exclusive resort and, some say, the finest in the entire Caribbean. The sugar birds are sitting here because I have put a bowl of sugar out for them so they can share in my breakfast.

They are taking turns stuffing their beaks with the sweets. There are a few disagreements between the birds but, for the most part, they wait in line patiently as each has its turn at the sugar grains. Perhaps the relaxed life style of La Samanna has rubbed off on the sugar birds.

The lovely little birds are the only panhandlers at La Samanna, and the only non-paying guests at this exclusive enclave for the wealthy. With room prices beginning at $325 per day for a simple twin, and going as high as $990 a day for a three bedroom villa (not including any meals), La Samanna is easily one of the most expensive resorts in the Caribbean. You could buy a small foreign car for the money you will spend in a week at La Samanna.

Let's see what you get, in addition to breakfast with the sugar birds, for your money:

La Samanna is set in the midst of 55 acres of magnificently landscaped beachfront property. A forest of sea grape trees fronts on the island's most magnificent beach, a mile and a half crescent of sand the color and texture of baby powder. On the beach are scattered lounge chairs, a single sunfish sailboat, and a very few tourists. There is room for everyone on this beach.

At the end of the beach, cut deeply into sheer rock, is the main house, a Moorish castle of sorts with domes and turrets and a white facade awash with bougainvillea — orange, lavender, rose and red.

At the side of the main building is a large pool, its deep blue water rimmed by colorful Greek tiles. On three sides of the pool there are custom lounges of canvas that are, unlike most pool lounges, sinfully comfortable. White umbrellas are scattered amongst the lounges to protect white skin from the unforgiving Caribbean sun.

Overlooking the pool is a terrace, where guests the likes of Robert Redford sip rum punches as they sit at tiny red tables shaded by more white umbrellas. Just inside the terrace is a comfortable bar, where whimsical clay lions and rhinos stare from perches located under riotous bolts of colorful cloth suspended from the ceiling. When the bartender mixes a drink here, he doesn't spare the liquor.

Through the bar is a library and games room, where you can borrow a book or a game ("Clue," backgammon, checkers) to help while away a rare rainy day.

Next to the library is the dining room, a magnificent terrace overlooking the beach. Here, Chef Jean-Pierre Jury of Lyon, France, creates his masterpieces — food that rates with the very finest in the Caribbean. But beware, you won't escape for much less than a hundred dollars for dinner for two.

Although 14 of La Samanna's rooms are in the main building, most who visit here want to stay in one of the 24 one bedroom apartments, 16 two bedroom apartments or six three bedroom villas scattered along the beach.

They, like the main building, are Mediterranian in style: beautiful white villas surrounded by the green of sea grapes, the scarlet of hibiscus, the lavender of bougainvillea and the deepening blue of a winter's sky.

My one bedroom ocean front villa (a mere $420 a day, plus a 10 percent service charge) is typical of La Samanna's rooms. A small, fully equipped kitchen opens to the living room. The living room is almost stark in its simplicity.

The Petroplex Savings sign shines atop Dinero Plaza, the new home for one of Midland's fastest growing financial institutions.

Petroplex Savings makes home at Dinero Plaza

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Since opening in June of 1982, Petroplex Savings of Midland has been one of the pace-setting savings and loans in the country. It became the first U.S. savings and loan association in history to exceed $100 million in assets in its first year of operation — despite the downturn in the area's economy.

At the end of 1982, industry analysts called it the fastest growing S&L in its size category (savings and loans with assets of $100 million or less) in the nation and in 1984, is still growing.

Earlier this week, Petroplex officially cut the ribbon on its new home office on the first floor of Dinero Plaza located at 1004 N. Big Spring.

Formerly located in the Paragon Building at 600 N. Marienfeld, the move has enabled Petroplex to more than triple its space to 14,116 square feet.

It should come as no surprise that the main reason for Petroplex's move was because it had outgrown its office space in the Paragon Building, however, more importantly, its parking space. According to Jim Everett, president and chief executive officer of Petroplex, "We were out of parking."

EVERETT SAID Dinero Plaza was "by far" the company's first choice for relocating.

"It's a well constructed and beautiful building. It's got ample parking for now and for ever more."

Everett describes the S&L's new offices, decorated in rich shades of gray, forrest green, teal blue and deep purple, as contemporary with a warm relaxed atmosphere.

Upon entering the deep green-marbled lobby of Dinero Plaza with its low fountain, the eye is drawn toward a polished black marble teller area.

"We wanted people to feel like they were in a warm area and they were received well when they first walked in the door," he said. And since they couldn't walk into our building first, before they went into the lobby, we decided we would reach out into the lobby and draw people in to us."

ONE OF THE ways Petroplex draws people in to its offices is with its lighting scheme.

"Basically, every person is spotlighted. If you're not dealing with a particular person you're in kind of a shadowed area. Your eyes go to where the lights are and the lights are where the people are."

Everett said Petroplex chose Terry Harden of Geren Associates of Midland to do the architectural work and Rod Stephenson Construction Co. also of Midland was contracted to build the office interiors. Also included on the project were Ed Harris of Office Interiors Inc. of Midland who assisted with the furniture selection and Cheryl McCracken of Fort Worth who was the interior designer.

When Petroplex decided to move in addition to getting approval from the state's savings and loan department, it also had to find a buyer for its facilities in the Paragon Building. Petroplex was able to sell its space to City Savings of San Angelo, a subsidiary of Lamar Financial Savings of Austin. City Savings not only bought Petroplex's space but also it furnishing — "Everthing but the plants and paintings," Everett said.

PETROPLEX BEGAN planning its move in March of 1983. In September, the S&L went before the savings and loan department to request its proposed move be approved and was notified in October its request had been granted.

Petroplex has one branch in Midland located in the Plaza Center at Wadley and Garfield Streets. And the S&L is building another branch on Andrews Highway which is expected to be completed within the next 60-90 days Everett said.

Jim Everett, president and chief executive officer of Petroplex Savings talks about the company's new home office located on the first floor of Dinero Plaza.

"Part of our manifestation of our commitment to Midlanders is our Andrews Highway branch. People ask my why we're going in directly across the street from two other financial institutions and I say 'Well, they wouldn't be there if it wasn't a good location.' "

Petroplex has also been expanding its staff. When it opened, Petroplex had four employees, almost two years later the firm employs 31.

"I believe in keeping a lean staff. One of the reasons is because our industry is cyclical and tied directly to housing and that's one of the things we're trying to over come."

Because diversification is high on Petroplex's priority list, it recently opened Travel World, a travel agency also located in Dinero Plaza.

EVERETT EXPLAINED, "It (Travel World) is a business that is year round. It doesn't necessarily depend on the housing cycle."

Petroplex is also diversifying its financial services. In addition to offering savings accounts, Everett said Petroplex offers a varitey of other services.

"We offer just about every type of loan that's available. We make energy loans — you can't be in Midland and not make energy loans — but we are very selective and make them to our current customers. We're very retail in both the loan and the savings side."

Real estate loans make up about 90 percent of Petroplex's portfolio Everett said. Consumer and commercial loans comprise about 5 percent each of the total portfolio.

"We would like to increase both our consumer and commercial loan percentages. However, to date we haven't had the expertice, the staff or the room to do so. We now have the room to bring on additional personnel who will specialize in those two areas."

HOWEVER, REAL ESTATE lending is still the major concern at Petroplex.

"Houses normally are the largest single item a family will purchase and we feel like we know the families better than anybody else because we've been providing the funding for houses and shelters for them for a long time."

To continue to be competitive in the Permian Basin Everett believes Petroplex must further expand its financial services.

"We're trying to get more toward the financial service-type company primarily because the big companies, like Merrill Lynch, Sears and Bank of America are doing the same thing. We realize we can't compete with them on the same size but they can't compete with us on the responsiveness and flexibility. It takes them too long to react to changes in Midland or the Permian Basin — we can react almost overnight.

And in order to stay competitive with these financial institutions, Everett said, S&Ls have two options. They can either become a bank or a mortgage banker.

"It's real easy to become a mortgage banker. It's real difficult to become a bank primarily because even though we have the same liability powers, we don't have anywhere near the asset structure that we would like. Commercial bankers will probably say that the S&L now have all the advantages but what I'd like for them to do is swap me their commercial lending authority for whatever so called advantages they think I have."

PETROPLEX HAS 310 stockholders who are all from Midland Everett said. Its stock was originally capitalized at $12 per share. The latest stock transaction, (within the last quarter) Everett said, was reported at $31.40 per share.

"We feel like local ownership is a definite plus in our future. We have no intentions to go statewide or to go across state lines. We feel like somewhere down the line, it will become necessary to form a holding company to take advantage of some of the different types of deregulations that are being talked about," he said.

Petroplex's latest figures list gross assets at $125 million and net assets at about $102 million. Everett said he is satisfied with Petroplex's current growth structure of 20 percent compounded per year, but should the firms growth exceed it present structure, he said, it will be necessary to infuse more capital into the company through a stock offering or a subordinated debt issue.

"We're really concerned about how the public will accept a new stock offering from an S&L because it wasn't two years ago that the whole thrift industry was going down the tubes. And no one, I don't believe, could have estimated the industry would resurge like it has. And there's no question about it — the industry has resurged."

As of Dec. 31, 1983, Petroplex's net loan portfolio totaled almost $75 million and its deposits totaled more than $98 million.

"The way we're going, we will survive. We're taking that kind of an attitude. We don't borrow short and lend long."

YET, DESPITE ALL the numbers, Everett credits Petroplex's growth to its people and its services.

"We've got tremendous desire to go out and recruit and train and to develop the very best people we can find because when you're dealing with a customer that's the most important thing that you're going to do every day. In addition, we have so many tailor made services. We're trying so hard to customize our services to be exactly what Midlanders really want."

ASK THE FDIC

Many factors are considered before closing banks

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

How can it be correctly said: "...the agencies involved (with the closing of FNB) knew for a long time, that the bank was in trouble and gave the bank directors and the community an opportunity to do something and for quite a long time nothing was done."?

Did these agencies count as "nothing" the maximum efforts to meet the demands of the Comptroller of the Currency; or the complete vote of confidence shown at the 1983 annual stockholders' meeting; or the solid support shown at the community meeting for that purpose — as a few "things that were done"?

Did not the absolute disregard by the U.S. Treasury agencies of all such tangible and intangible assets of FNB create the depositors' panic that was the REAL cause of the bank's "insolvency?"

I don't think that's a fair assessment of the situation with First National Bank of Midland. I believe I have said on several occasions there are a lot of factors considered before a bank is closed. I believe I have also said before none of the agencies, whether it be the Comptroller or the state banking department, wants to close a bank. They don't receive any joy or personal gratification from a bank closing.

If FNB could have been salvaged it would have. All the efforts were well intended but fell short of the goal. And as I have also said, it is the Comptroller's decision to close a bank and I certainly am not privy to how or why the Comptroller makes his decisions.

The agencies you referred to certainly did not cause any panic. The depositors themselves cause panic when they've lost confidence in their bank — no one forced them to withdraw their deposits.

In my estimation, the real cause of the bank's insolvency was poor management and poor asset quality. I don't know what the Comptroller's reasons were but based on my experience with the FDIC as a liquidator in charge, it appears to me that was the major problem.

• • •

Is it proper for stockholders in First National Bank of Midland to write off their losses on their 1983 tax returns?

This is something you will need to discuss with your local Internal Revenue Service office. I am certainly no expert, but in my limited experience, I believe the IRS has let individuals in this situation take losses immediately. Should these shareholders ever recoup any money, after all the creditors of the bank have been paid off, they will have to claim that as income, I believe but as I said, this is a matter you need to check with the IRS.

• • •

In one of your past answers to a question you stated: "Banks are businesses. When people invest in them, they take the same risks that any other stockholder does who invests in any other company."

Aren't all national banks set up under the above proposition and the same measures of "risks" applied by the U.S. Treasury to ALL U.S. commercial banks?

If this is true, why do the stockholders of the large U.S. commercial banks that have loaned one-third to one-half of the more than $850 BILLION owed by foreign countries enjoy protection and profits of these "risks" through subsidization by the U.S. taxpayers?

Congress recently appropriated more than $8 billion of tax money to go to the International Monetary Fund (just one of the many agencies through which subsidization is funneled to pay the interest to the U.S. banks that carry these huge "dead-beat" loans.)

Why are the stockholders of these banks relieved of their obligation of "risks" with no equivalent assistance made available for bank stockholders who invest (with risks) in a local economy?

To assume that we know or even begin to know all the intricate factors that go into investing in foreign countries through the IMF or directly through loans made by U.S. banks is ludicrous.

Those decisions involve more than better creditor relationships and I have to differ with your assessment that risks are eliminated for the stockholders of these banks. I'm sure the stockholders of several of these large banks which have had publicity about their foreign loans, have suffered from a decrease in the value of their stock. These shareholders lost a lot of money when the stock's value decreased as a result of the disclosure of their problems with foreign loans.

In my own estimation, with full disclosure of what a bank does, who they loan to and the concentrations of risks by those banks would help me, as a stockholder and a depositor, to decide whether I want to stay with that bank — that's any stockholder's prerogative. However, I think it would be very naive to think that they're at no risk at all in those type of banks.

It is also naive to think the regulatory agencies or the chartering agencies would not close a bank just because it has loans to foreign countries. I cannot see why they wouldn't, especially if the loans were bad enough and there was no chance of recovery and the management of the bank was poor and they were indulging in inprudent and unsafe banking practices.

Franklin National Bank in New York was closed and it was heavy into loans to foreign countries — about $600 million worth. It didn't disrupt our economy or the foreign countires'. The FDIC took over the the reigns of the bank and continued collecting money from these foreign countries and made decisions to extend loans which could not be paid on time.

• • •

I understand that some FNB directors closed out their accounts at the bank right before the bank failed. What can or will the FDIC do in this situation?

I referred your question to Kenneth J. Marino, an attorney in our legal department and he said, "The FDIC has no information concerning the deposit activities of the directors prior to the failure of FNB.

"Further, assuming deposit withdrawals did take place prior to the bank's failure, the FDIC is not aware of any facts or circumstances which would have rendered such withdrawals as being unlawful. You can be assured, however, that the FDIC will conduct a thorough investigation to determine if the directors acted in a manner consistent with the fiduciary duties charged to them by law.

IBM introduces new portable, personal computer

(c) 1984, Los Angeles Times

International Business Machines Corp. Thursday took the wraps off a portable version of its Personal Computer, a move that analysts expect to heighten pressure in the fast-growing, but crowded portable personal computer market.

The computer-maker said that the 30-pound IBM Portable Personal Computer will be available March 1 in limited quantities. At $2,795, the new model is more expensive than many of its competitors, but less expensive than several others, including the strong-selling Compaq portable personal computer.

The new computer will run all but a handful of software programs written for the latest version of the Personal Computer's fundamental software, or operating system, the company said.

"From a function and performance standpoint, the IBM Portable Personal Computer has identical characteristics to an equivalently configured IBM Personal Computer, and can use most existing IBM Personal Computer hardware options," IBM said in a statement.

The introduction was long rumored, and analysts noted that it further fills out the less expensive end of the giant company's computer line, which was expanded last Nov. 1 with the addition of the PCjr home computer.

Like the desktop Personal Computer, they said that the new machine has a standard design that breaks no new ground.

Analysts said that the computer's introduction is likely to have its greatest effect on such computer makers as Houston-based Compaq Computer Corp. and Kaypro Corp. of Solana Beach, Calif., which have attracted customers in part because IBM has not offered a portable version of the top-selling PC.

Such companies "won't have a free ride anymore; they'll have to compete very strongly now," said Egil Juliussen, chairman of Future Computing Inc., a Richardson, Texas, market research company.

At the same time, however, he predicted that IBM's introduction would increase the interest of large corporate buyers and others in portables, and thus expand the market for all current participants.

Future Computing has forecast that revenues from retail sales of portable personal computers will reach $1.2 billion in 1984 — up from $700 million in 1983, Juliussen said.

Other leading portable manufacturers include Corona Data Systems, Los Angeles; Columbia Data Systems Inc.; Columbia, Md.; Televideo Systems, Sunnyvale, Calif.; and Texas Instruments Inc., Dallas, Juliussen said.

The portable comes with a built-in, nine-inch amber display, IBM said, and a single, 360,000-character disc drive that accepts a standard 5.25-inch floppy disc. A second disc drive can be purchased for $425 at IBM Product Centers.

Real estate developers Reagan argue

(c) 1984, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of real estate developers, in a rare dispute with the Reagan administration, are up in arms about a proposed rule that would sharply limit the future rent increases they could impose on subsidized housing.

The developers charge that the Housing and Urban Development Department is flouting a 1981 law that said the rent limits should not apply to any developer who got into the subsidized housing business before Oct. 1, 1981. Instead, HUD wants to make the limits retroactive to all subsidized developers-a technical change that could cost the builders milions of dollars.

"People are just plain angry because this is a pure welch," said Charles L. Edson, counsel to the National Leased Housing Association. The group, which represents more than 700 developers and financiers, is raising a $70,000 war chest to challenge the HUD rule in court.

"I've dealt with HUD for 15 years and I can usually see their side of the story," Edson said. "On this one I honestly can't."

"It is difficult for me to imagine a more direct affront to the authority of Congress or a clearer violation of the law ...," Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, said in a letter to HUD, which published the proposed rule in November.

A HUD spokesman said that Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. has asked the department not to comment until HUD officials testify on the issue next Wednesday before the House Banking subcommittee on housing and community development, which Gonzalez chairs.

But one administration official said that the new limits would produce "a significant budgetary savings" and that HUD always has had the legal authority to make the change.

"The present system is a windfall for the developers," this official said. "We believe there's plenty of legislative history ... to support making this retroactive."

The new rule would affect 750,000 new and repaired units subsidized under the "Section 8" housing program. The administration virtually has ended the 1974 program, although it must continue to pay the long-term rent subsidies committed over the last decade.

The administration has given developers many kinds of tax incentives, but it repeatedly has criticized the Section 8 program as a boondoggle. Some critics say the administration hopes the new limits will help wind down Section 8 much earlier by driving many landlords out of the program.

Southwest Airlines reports 20 percent income rise

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines (unaudited) net income for the year ended December 31, 1983 increased 20 percent over the $34,004,000 earned in 1982 to a record of $40,867,000.

Primary earnings per share, as adjusted for a 5-for-4 stock split announced in December, 1983, were a record $1.40, compared to last year's $1.28 (on 10 percent fewer shares outstanding) and the previous record of $1.35 per share established in 1981 (on 16 percent fewer shares outstanding).

Total revenues for 1983 increased 35 percet to $448,236,000, while operating expenses increased 30 percent.

Operating income for the year was a record $68,498,000, up 75 percent over the $39,225,000 of 1982. The effective annual tax rate was 36 percent in 1983 as compared to only 23 percent in 1982.

For three months ended December 31, 1983, net income increased 17 percent to $11,004,000, compared to the $9,435,000 earned in the foruth quarter of 1982, which included substantial profits from the sale of tax benefits. Primary earnings per share for the fourth quarter were $0.37 in 1983 versus $0.34 in 1982 (on 5 percent fewer shares outstanding) as adjusted for the announced stock split.

Herbert D. Kelleher, Chairman of the Board and President of Southwest Airlines, stated: "The results of the foruth quarter provided an appropriate climax to a great year. Our operating income increased from $6,094,000 in foruth quarter 1982 to $17,355,000 in fourth quarter 1983."

Long Beach to Midland pipeline step closer

The troubled Long Beach to Midland pipeline has moved one step closer.

South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) has informed Pacific Texas Pipeline Company that its operating emissions data is nearly complete, and SCAOMD will assist Pacific Texas in identifying enough selected offset credits to meet the stringent SCAQMD requirements.

The offset credit program was implemented in January, 1982 by Regulation 13 to preserve South Bay air quality. No new refining or oil producing facility can be constructed uless it absorbs emissions from a previous producing facility. In this method, air quality is preserved.

Pacific Texas Pipeline will transport crude oil through California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. The pipeline will be a common carrier with tariffs accepted by the Federal Energy Regulations Committee (FERC). Pacific Texas Pipeline will transport crude from Caifornia to Texas for less than 5¢ a gallon.

Permit application with the Federal Bureau of Land Management was approved in November, 1983 for (right-of-way through all Federal Lands). The Pacific Texas Pipeline follows existing pipeline corridors which have recent environmental impact information available.

Financing for the $1.6 billion project has been arranged. Some throughput agreements are conditionally in place; others are under consideration.

Williams Brothers Engineering Company in Tulsa are Pacific Texas Pipeline Company's engineers for this priject. Williams Brothers has already completed the total Pacific Texas Pipeline design, including the thermo-hydraulics, pump stations and emissions data. Negotiations with Morrison-Knudsen to be the general contractor are nearing completion.

The origin, destination, purpose, primary market, line size, cost estimates, design throughputs and construction schedule of the Pacific Texas Pipeline have been consistent since the project's inception.

Cecil R. Owens, President of Pacific Texas Pipeline Company, Inc., stated he is optimistic that construction will begin in late 1984 with completion in 1986. The project will provide more than 4,000 direct construction-related jobs, in addition to tens of thousands employed for support and supply-related jobs.

Pacific Texas Pipeline Company, privately held company which is in the process of building a 1,026 mile crude oil transportation system capable of pumping 900,000 barrels per day. Pacific Texas Pipeline Company's corporate office is located in Long Beach, California.

Tenneco

Tenneco Inc. today reported that its net income for 1983 was $716 million, compared to $819 million in 1982, primarily because of lower crude oil and condensate prices and volumes and lower natural gas volumes. Losses in construction and farm equipment operations also constributed to the decline. Earnings per common share were $4.75 in 1983 vs. $5.74 in 1982.

Sales and operating revenues of $14.4 billion in 1983 were down from the $15 billion reported a year earlier.

Shipbuidling and automotive parts achieved record income results for the second year in a row, with a combined increase of 35 percent over the previous yearand approximately 87 percent above 1981 levels.

The Newport News shipyard has a $7.5 billion backlog of business, includingcontracts to construct three Nimitz-class aircraft Carriers and a recently executed agreement to overhaul the Nimitz.

"Diversification gives Tenneco the ability to survive sharp downturns in individual segments of its operations and provides a strong financial resourco base that permits the company to take advantage of favorable business opportunities as they arise," Ketelsen said.

"We are optimistic for 1984 and beyond and are working hard to insure that we achieve long-term growth and profitability that is not only in the best interest of our employees and shareholders, but the many other publics that are dependent on us," Ketelsen concluded.

Superior

HOUSTON — The Superior Oil Company has reported that fouth-quarter 1983 net income more than doubled earnings of the same quarter of 1982, increasing full-year net income by 8 percent to $241.8 million from $223.4 million in 1982. Earnings per share were $1.91 in 1983 versus $1.75 the year before.

Superior's preliminary fourth-quarter net income was $63.8 million, of $.51 per common share, compared with $24 million or $.19 per share reported in the same quarter of 1982. A $7.2 million after-tax gain from debt restructuring was included in the 1983 quarter.

"The company's fourth-quarter earnings performance, coming on the heels of our third-quarter improvement, is very encouraging after disappointments dating from 1982," Chairman F. C. Ackman said. "The quarterly earnings increase reflects generally improved performance for most company operations. Operating expenses continued to decline. We incurred lower exploration expense, including dry hole costs; smaller impairments of oil and gas properties; and reduced depreciation, depletion and amortization expense. Both McIntyre Mines Limited and Falconbridge Limited reflected perofits in the foruth quarter of 1983 versus losses in the prior-year quarter."

Tipperary

At the January 24, 1984, annual shareholders' meeting in Midland, Texas, company reported earnings of $108,000 on revenues of $13,578,000 for the quarter ended December 31, 1984, a 5 percent stock dividend payable March 12, 1984, to shareholders of record on February 10, 1984, and a new $50,000,000 line of credit with the RepublicBank of Dallas. The initial $42,000,000 revolver increased the company's working capital to $11,180,000 as of December 31, 1983, and will facilitate the funding of its $15,000,000 oil and gas capital expenditure program.

Early in February, Tipperary acquired a 50 percent interest in Titan Exploration, Inc., a privately held oil and gas company, for cash and stock. Titan has extensive holdings in the Hardeman Basin, a high rate of return area that affords the company a new dimension for its oil and gas exploration program. The purchase resulted from the company's continuing evaluation of oil and gas reserve, gas processing plant, and gas transmission acquisition opportunities.

The company increased its equity in the Pasadena, Texas, cogeneration plant to 22 percent and has the right to acquire up to 52 percent under certain conditions. The joint venture is still seeking a steam contrast and permanent financing for the Bay Plant project.

Pennzoil

HOUSTON — The board of directors of Pennzoil Co. has declared quarterly dividend on its common stock ofs 55 cents per share, payable March 15, 1984, to stockholders of record on Feb. 29, 1984.

A dividend of $2.00 per share has also been declared on the company's $8.00 cumulative preferred stock, pyable May 1, 1984, to stockholders of record on April 13, 1984.

Pennzoil has paid quarterly dividends for 60 consecutive years.

Amoco

CHICAGO — Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has announced estimated consolidated net earnings of $459 million for the fourth quarter of 1983, an 11 percent increase over the $415 million earned in the fourth quarter of 1982. Fourth quarter earnings on a per-share basis incrased to $1.57 from $1.42 in 1982. Revenues for the foruth quarter were $7.4 billion, level with the corresponding 1982 period.

Richard M. Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the higher fourth quarter earnings to greater foreign liquids production, improved refined product margins, and higher earnings from chemicals operations which continue to benefit from stornger U. S. economic conditions. Partially offsetting were lower earnings from domestic exploration and production operations.

Moran

HOUSTON — Moran Energy Inc. has announced that its Board of Directors has declared a three cent (3¢) per share cash dividend, payable April 4, 1984, to shareholders of record on March 16, 1984.

Tidewater

Tidewater Inc. has reported consolidated net earnings of $13.2 million or 79 cents per share for the nine months ended December 31, 1983, a decline of 70.2 percent in net earnings and 70 percent in earnings per share compared with the same period a year ago.

For the third quarter ended December 31, net earnings were $3.5 million of 21 cents per share, compared with $14.5 million or 86 cents per share last year, a decline of 76.0 percent in net earnings and 75.6 percent in earnings per share.

Third quarter marine revenues were down as a result of continued equipment overcapacity and low utilization rates. Revenues totaled $41.4 million compared with $61.1 million in the third fiscal quarter of 1983. Nine month revenues were $136.4 million versus $192.7 million last year. Pretax losses were $2 million for the quarter with pretax earnings of $3.5 million recorded for the nine months compared with year earlier earnings figures of $151.1 and $47.6 million, respectively.

Compression services results were adverselyaffected by an unforseen cost overrun on a major project during the quarter. Compression services' revenues were $26.3 million for the third fiscal quarter, an increase over the $22.6 million recorded a year earlier. Nine month revenue figures were $69.9 million for fiscal 1984 and $81.6 million for the previous year's period. Pretax losses were $138,000 for the quarter and $1.0 million for the nine months compared with last year's quarter and nine months pretax earnings totals of $31,000 and $3.2 million, respectively.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton said the Department of Banking may seek expanded powers from the 1985 Legislature to regulate bank holding company activities.

Sexton, addressing the House Financial Institution Committee, called the ability to regulate holding companies "essential to us" due to their expanded involvement in various areas of the economy.

He reported the State Finance Commission is looking at possible requests to the 1985 session, but said those requests are still in the "embryonic state."

Sexton said emergency of money market funds, along with inflation and the "erosion of savings" in recent years, has affected bank operatons.

Banks, he said, have been left with the options of economizing, increasing non-loan fees, increasing loan rates (which — he said is "not productive"), or creating new sources of income.

With expansion of activities and authority for banks, the Department of Banking requires additional powers as well, Sexton said.

He also reported the Legislature may be asked to change the law regarding examinations for State-chartered banks to allow more flexibility in timing examinations.

"We need some statutory changes that would allow us to lighten the regulatory burden on well managed banks and to concentrate on those that are not," he told the legislators.

Savings and Loan Commissioner L.L. Bowman III testified regarding operations of a subsidiary corporation by financial institutions, noting such subsidaries in the savings and loan industry came into use some 15 years ago, but proliferated during the 1975-80 period.

Around 1982, Bowman said, importance of the operations increased due to problems being experienced by the savings and loan industry, and the Savings and Loan Department is looking at expanding its "laundry list" of permitted activities for subsidiaries.

Past requests for subsidiaries have involved operations such as automobile dealerships, hotels, and funeral homes, he said.

Expansion of permitted activities has resulted in "some criticism" over the years, Bowman acknowledged, but said "we (the industry) were fighting for our lives."

Bowman also reported the Savings and Loan Department is working on changing its rules regarding investment in real estate by State-chartered savings and loan associations, due to plans by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of implementing a rule restricting investment by an association and its subsidiaries to 10 percent of assets.

He said the FHLBB proposal is in response to a California regulation allowing investment of up to 100 percent of assets.

Texas, Bowman said, allows investment of up to 5 percent of assets in subsidiaries, and 50 percent of net worth in direct real estate investments.

The department is proposing to double those figures, he said.

If the FHLBB rule were applied in Texas, Bowman said, some two to five percent of associations' assets could be "in jeopardy," with many being foced to reduce their real estate holdings.

Without sufficient time to do so, that could mean a "fire sale" on assets, he argued.

Bowman said the FHLBB seems to want associations to return to an emphasis on housing, particularly owner-occupied single-family homes.

"We need to recommit ourselves to housing," Bowman said. He also said if an association has committed 65 percent of its assets to housing, "what it does with the other 35 percent is its own business."

With the ability of financial conglomerates, such as Sears, Roebuck & Co., which has its own savings association, to move into Texas, it may be necessary to "redefine what is banking and what is savings and loan activity," he said.

Bowman also reported the FHLBB is looking at the use of brokered funds by savings and loan associations, and has proposed limiting use of such funds to $100,000 per broker.

Bowman commented that while he shares some of the concern over use of brokered funds, he believes it would be better to regulate the brokers.

Rep. Bill Coody, DI-Weatherford, committee chairman, said he was worried over the insurance-related activities of financial institutions, noting that Minyard Grocery Stores, in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, had offered free groceries to customers bringing in insurance policies for review.

"The grocery stores and the free chickens we can handle," Coody, who is an insurance agent, commented. "It's the banks and savings and loans we're worried about."

Volcker caught in middle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Volcker shies from public mention of politics, so it seems ironic the Federal Reserve chairman is being labeled a campaign ally of President Reagan in this election year.

Especially since the president's supporters are searching for signs he'll be a campaign saboteur instead.

Few Volcker-watchers on either side doubt he could have enormous impact on the economy and therefore on the 1984 election. After all, the Federal Reserve Board controls the flow of money into the U.S. economy, and the flow of money is crucial in pushing interest rates higher or lower.

Steady or lower rates would likely mean continuing economic revival, and that would be good news for any president. Higher rates could mean a slowdown or even a new recession and rising unemployment, potentially damaging to whoever's in the White House.

Such are the stakes, whether Volcker and his fellow Federal Reserve governors give any consideration to politics or not.

The chairman, first appointed by Democrat Jimmy Carter and then re-appointed by Republican Reagan, says what he's been saying for years: The Federal Reserve will try to let just enough money into the economy to fuel continued expansion but not so much as to rekindle inflation.

No politics.

But sevral congressional Democrats say they're not so sure.

In a House Banking Committee hearing last week, Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, told Volcker it was common knowledge that Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns helped President Nixon win re-election in 1972 with an easy money policy, "and I know you're consecrated to doing the same thing for the president this year."

And when Volcker appeared before the Senate Banking Committee, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said of Federal Reserve policies, "The question is often raised these days, whether they're yours or whether, despite your independence, there isn't pressure from higher sources."

Nothing personal, the two men indicated, it's just that everybody knows the Fed chairman helps the incumbent president.

That would be news to Carter, who lost his re-election bid after Federal Reserve monetary restraint sent interest rates rising during the 1980 campaign.

Aides to Reagan, an apparent beneficiary of that earlier action, haven't forgotten it — or ignored what it might say about Volcker's independence.

And they know that upward pressure on interest rates has been one of the Federal Reserve governors' main weapons in the long fight against inflation.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan warned last week that the recovery could falter if the Federal Reserve let too little money flow through the economy. Or too much. A formula that left little blame for the president if anything went wrong.

However, Regan was all smiles on Thursday as he described the Fed's current policies and the previous day's White House meeting between Volcker and Reagan.

The president, he said, assured Volcker "he had no desire or need" for any spurt in the money supply, which some analysts say could pull interest rates lower, though possibly at the cost of higher inflation later.

"If you're asking me are we turning the heat on the Fed, the answer is no," Regan said.

But the fact that the meeting was held at all — and wasn't even mentioned by officials until reporters spotted Volcker — was bound to keep Democrats' suspicions alive.

Volcker has taken some of the talk of favoritism with apparent chagrin, some with good humor. He said he wouldn't succumb to political pressure. And he agreed to report any attempts to the Senate committee.

To Gonzalez, who resurrected the old Burns accusation, he replied evenly, "I disagree with the implications of your comments about 1972 and certainly this year."

At one point in the hearings, he said: "It's a subject of deep frustration, the deeply held belief on the part of a lot of people that we're politically motivated."

"The only comfort I take," he said, is that Federal Reserve actions historically seem to help some presidents and hurt others.

Aminol to spend more this year

HOUSTON(SWN)——Aminol Inc. is planning capital spending of $399 million in 1984 for petroleum exploration, production and other energy related operations.

J.B. Coffman, Aminol's president and chief operating officer, said this year's planned spending represents nearly a 20 percent increase over the $344 million spent for energy operations in 1983.

Of the $399 million in planned capital spending, $208 million is scheduled for international and domestic production and $150 million for exploration. An additional $3 million is scheduled for capital spending projects related to marketing operations, and $38 million is planned for geothermal, natural gas processing and other projects.

Aminoil, the energy subsidiary of R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., is among the nation's largest independent petroleum exploration and production companies.

Mergers are sign of industrial upheaval

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The proposal by United States Steel Corp. to acquire National Steel Corp., combining the first- and seventh-ranking U.S. steel firms, is a sign of the tremendous upheaval that is cutting across the American industrial landscape.

Put that merger bid together with others that have occurred in the 1980s or are pending now, add the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the current period begins to look like the greatest restructuring of corporate America since the era of the trusts a century ago.

One who cautiously considers that possibility is Nobel laureate economist George J. Stigler of the University of Chicago. "We have constant change, but seldom do they pile up like this," Stigler said in an interview.

There is no common thread running through these changes, Stigler noted.

"AT&T is a case of a growing industry at the edge of an exploding technology. Steel is an industry in a deep and long-term slump, and the companies are trying to use mergers to keep a few plants viable" in the face of import competition," he said.

The rapid remaking of the banking industry is caused by the breakdown of old regulatory restrictions, intense competition for depositors' money and electronic banking. Other industries are being fundamentally altered in other ways by new technologies and governmental deregulation.

But these developments all represent an accelerating change in the structure of corporate America. And more than most, the U.S. Steel-National Steel proposal forces government officials to take a stand on how the federal government should respond.

In deciding whether to approve or oppose the merger, the Justice Department will apply the Reagan administration guidelines that are meant to measure the industry's concentration. If too much of an industry's business is in the hands of too few firms, then a merger that would add to that concentration would be opposed under the guidelines.

U.S. Steel and National will have to pass that test, and a clue to that outcome may come soon, when the Justice Department rules on the proposed merger of LTV Corp.'s Jones & Laughlin subsidiary with Republic Steel Corp., the nation's third- and fourth-largest steel makers.

A key new factor in the Justice Department's review is imported steel, according to those close to the case. Imported steel now accounts for 23 percent of steel products sold in the United States, and the way that steel is considered could affect the overall calculation of the industry's concentration.

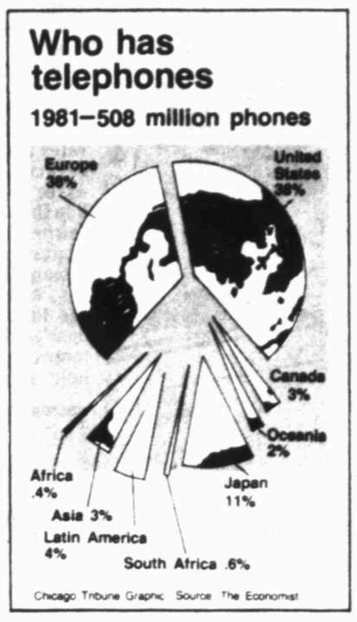
Because of the size of the two companies, it may be possible for the Justice Department to rule on the LTV-Republic proposal without making a dramatic break from current antitrust guidelines, said George Hay, a professor of law and economics at Cornell University and a former chief economist at the Justice Department in the 1970s.

"I don't see how that could happen with the U.S. Steel case," he said. A quick look at the numbers in that case suggests that Justice would have to count not only current imports as part of the American market, but also assume a growing volume of foreign steel to justify the merger.

"If the department lets that go through, it is saying we are really in a world market, and that would create a lot more (merger) opportunities for other industries," said Hay. "If you can argue there is a world market for steel, then you could do the same for autos, maybe aluminum and any number of other industrial products" threatened by imports.

The problem for governmental policy makers becomes even more complex because, in steel's case, the government also has the power to control the amount of imports that enters the United States.

If one branch of the government is keeping some steel imports out through trade policies, can another governmental branch approve a steel industry merger, citing the threat of growing steel imports as justification? Hay asks.



Major oil reservoirs of Texas defined in Atlas

AUSTIN — The major oil reservoirs in Texas, from the salt domes of the Gulf Basin to the carbonate pools of West Texas, have been defined geologically and categorized into families in an atlas compiled recently at The University of Texas.

The result of this broad research program by the Bureau of Economic Geology at UT is the "Atlas of Major Oil Reservoirs," issued as a UT Centennial publication.

About 450 reservoirs, each of which, the authors say, will produce more than 10 million barrels of oil, are classified into 48 geologicaly similar families of pools. Those reservoirs together accounted for 70 percent of the recorded oil production in Texas through 1981, according to the atlas.

Each family of reservoris, called plays, is defined and described based on similar production characteristics and other similarities such as the methods by which oil and gas becomes trapped and the depositional origin— that is, the original geological setting from which the reservoir formed, such as a river. Each play also is catalogued by geeographic region.

In addition to the description and volumetric data about reservoirs, the atlas contains five full-color plates that show the lithology (the kind of rock formation), the origin and the age of the reservoirs, and the kind of mechanisms by which oil is trapped or isolated and the pressure under which it lies.

By classifying the reservoirs into families, the authors think that characteristics of production for one reservoir in the play can be studied in other reservoirs within the same play.

This may aid expiration, because the production response of a reservoir to various methods of oil recovery may be studied and applied to other reservoirs in the play, says the bureau director, Dr. William L. Fisher.

He says that plays also can aid in increasing the amount of ultimate recovery the percentage of oil actually recovered) from individual reservoirs.

The authors say that of the 156 billion barrels of oil thus far discoered in Texas, ultimate recovery is estimated at 54 billion barrels, and less than 35 per cent will be recovered by current conventional means.They note that of the conventionally recoverable volume, 85 percent already has been produced.

"We know how much (oil) has been found," Dr. Fisher says. "What we're trying to find out is how much might ultimately be recovered."

Although estimates vary concerning how much oil in Texas is yet to be discovered, the authors conclude that the volume of oil now being discovered is relatively small, compared to earlier years.

Ike Lovelady Inc. reports losses in 1983, forecasts 1984 optimism

MIDLAND — Ike Lovelady, Inc., a Midland Exploration Company, reported results for Fiscal 1983, along with details about exchange offer and two agreements concerning mineral interests held by the Company.

I. W. Lovelady, President of the Company, reported the following audited results for Fiscal 1983, along with comparable results for the prior year:

Revenues of $5,210,402 with a net income loss of $5,636,789 or $3.11 per share.

Lovelady said that declining oil prices led to a decrease in total revenues for Fiscal 1983. Prices for oil averaged $30.68 per barrel during the year, compared to $32.88 for the prior year. Earnings were greatly impacted, according to Lovelady by additional depreciation, depletion and amortization charges of $5 million necessitated by a decrease in proved reserves of the Company. Proved reserves at the close of Fiscal 1983 included 403,000 barrels of oil and 2.2 billion cuibic feet of gas, compared to year-earlier totals of 615,000 barrels of oil and 2.8 billion cubic feet of gas. The additional charges were computed under the full-cost method of accounting in order to reduce net capitalized costs of oil and gas properties in relation to estimated future net revenues.

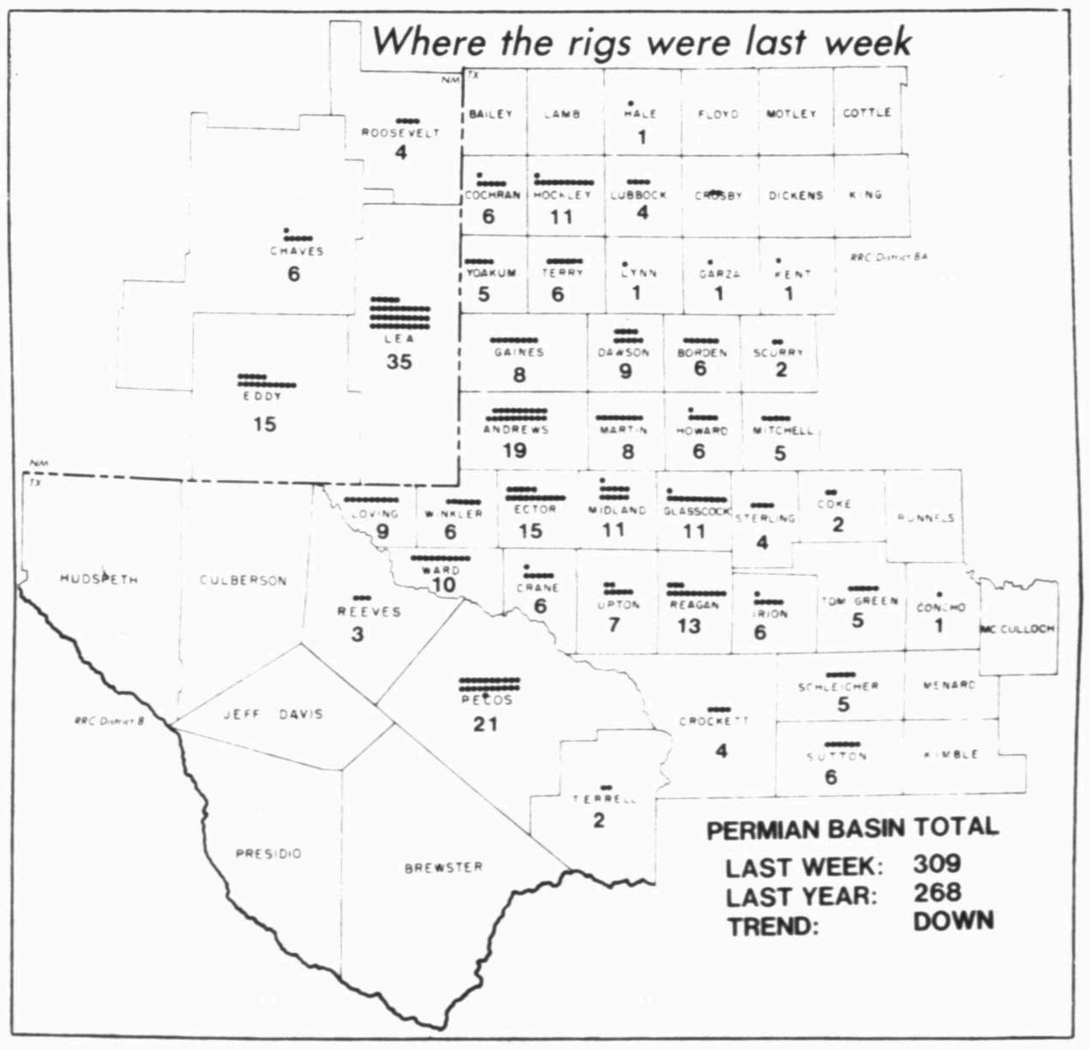
The Company president said that certain loans to partnerships, in which the Company is general partner, are currently past due and as a result $6.4 million of the company's long-term bank debt has been reclassified as a current liability due to "cross default" covenants in the Comany's loan agreement. "The Company has made all required principal and interest payments under its bank loan agreement and anticipates it will successfully restructure these obligations, he said.

Lovelady acknowledged that the company is currently oerating under difficult circumstances, however, he indicated that certain favorable developments have occurred recently. Three specific developments have all been designed to ease the current obligations of the Company and to provide cash for operations. He announced acceptance by trade creditors reprsenting 37 percent of the Company's offer to exchange cash and stock for a total of $3 million of current trade obligations. He is optimistic that a substatial majority may accept the offer in the near future.

According to Lovelady, the Company has recently sold a 2-year option to purchase the company's interest in two mineral development partnerships for a total of $2.5 million. $500,000 is to be received in three installments from December, 1983 to March 15, 1984. During the two-year option period, the purchasng company may exercise the option at a price of $2 million. The purchasng company also will provide funds for the exploration and development acrtivities of these partnerships during the option period on a non-recourse basis. This release Ike Lovelady of any responsibility to provide funds for development work.

Ike Lovelady, Inc also announced the conclusion of an agreement with a major international company 'to fund the exploration costs necessary to evaluate certain mineral deposits in a 3,000-acre project area. Mr. Lovelady did not identify the mineral, the major company or the project area. The agreement involves a 5-year period during which the major company will have an opportunity to define and develop the mineral deposits. If commercial quantities are present, Ike Lovelady, Inc. may receive up to $3 million in bonuses and advance rouyalties during the five year development period, as well as royalties payable from production.

Lovelady advised that the auditors for the Comapny provided a qualified opinion in conjunction with the annual audit for Fiscal 1983. He said that the opinion stated, "Future working capital requirements are dependent upon the company's ability to resume profitable operations, to resructure its loan agreements or to obtain capital from alternative sources." Mr. Lovelady indicated that he is optimistic about the future of the company, stating that every effort will continue to be expended to put the Company back on a profitable basis.



HNG, Coastal States reach accord

HOUSTON — Houston Natural Gas Corporation announced today that they have signed an agreement under which HNG has terminated its offer to acquire shares of Coastal and Coastal has terminated its offer to acquire shares of HNG.HNG also has terminated its self tender offer and all litigation between HNG and Coastal is being dismissed.

In resolving these matters, HNG has purchased the 2,075,500 shares of common stock owned by Coastal for $60 per share and has reimbursed Coastal $15 million for fees and expenses incurred by Coastal.

In addition, HNG and Coastal have signed an agreement pursuant to which Coastal will have the option to obtain firm and best efforts natural gas transportation services from HNG. HNG also has agreed to give Coastal the option to dedicate for sale to HNG certain quantities of natural gas.

Both Coastal and HNG have agreed not to purchase stock of the other or seek to influence the affairs of the other for five years.

Widows may be qualified for tax breaks

Widows, widowers and heads of household may qualify for tax breaks according to Commerce Clearing house, National reporting authority on tax and business law. For example, unmarried widows (and widowers) may continue to pay rates applicable to joint returns for two years after their spouse's death, as long as the taxpayer's household contains at least one dependent son, daughter, or stepchild and the taxpayer furnished over half of the cost of maintaining the household during the taxable year.

A person who qualifies as a head of household may use a rate schedule that falls midway between that of a single person filing a separate return and a married couple filing jointly. A head of household is a person, other than a nonresident alien, who is not a surviving spouse, and who maintains as his home a household which is the principal place of abode of a child, including a stepchild, grandchild, foster child, or an adopted child, even though the child, if unmarried, is not a dependent; or any other related person who may be claimed as a dependent, unless the deduction arises from a multiple support agreement. The taxpayer must also furnish more than 1/2 of the cost of maintaining the household for the entire tax year.

An unmarried taxpayer who mantains a household for either or both parents which is their home is also a head of household (but only if the taxpayer is entitled to a dependency exemption for the taxable year for such father or mother), even if the taxpayer resides elsewhere. Head-of-household status extends to married individuals living apart from his or her spouse during the entire tax year if he or she: 1) files a separate return; 2) maintains as his home a household which, for more than one-half of the taxable year, is the principal place of above of a dependent son or daughter (including stepson, stepdaughter or foster child) for whom the individual is entitled to a dependency deduction, and 3) furnishes more than 1/2 the cost of maintaining the household, CCH said

Although a married individual is generally not entitled to head-of-household benefits, one can be a head-of-household if married to a non-resident alien. An individual who is legally separated or divorced is not considered married.

SPE schedules infill drilling lecture

A. M. Sam Sarem will speak to the Permian Basin Section of the SPE in Midland, Texas on February 21, 1984. Sarem is an SPE Distinguished Lecturer for 1983-84. The Distinguished Lecturer program is funded by SPE and is Doherty Fund. From time to time, some of the expense is borne by the companies of the Lecturers.

Sarem wll speak on "Does Infill Drilling Increase Ultimate Oil Recovery?

The relative merits of infill drilling versus expensive enhanced oil recovery operations is the subject of continuing controversy in the petroleum industry.

In some reservoirs, infill drilling may increase ultimate recovery, in others, only EOR may accomplishs that goal, according to Sarem. The best solution may be a synergistic application of both methods, he says. Sarem reviws historical aspects of infill drilling, results of recent field case histories and theoretical analyses, and factors that may influence economics of the option chosen.

Sarem is coordinator of well testing and analysis with Union Oil Company of California's Science and technology Division in Grea, CA. His 28 years of experience includes research, field work, teaching, and supervision in many technical areas. He received BS and MS degrees in petroleum engineering from Tulsa U. and a PhD degree in engineering science from the University of Oklahoma.

Restructuring of oil & gas industry customer orientated

DALLAS — "The restructuring of the energy industry is resulting in a more customer-oriented market. As energy producers compete for consumer dollars, a new era in marketing innovations is emerging," Diamond Shamrock chairman William H. Bricker told a group of business leaders at the Dallas/Ft. Worth Economic Outlook Conference recently.

After five years of decline, worldwide demand for petroleum will increase about 3 percent this year, but that will still result in a 10 million barrel per day surplus of oil — and further restructuring of the energy industry, Bricker said.

"My assumption is that we will have ample supplies of oil, coal and gas for the next 10 years," Bricker said. "The name of the game today is no longer, supply, but demand — and that means marketing."

Bricker said that the "wraps and chains" are coming off the industry as "we shift our focus from contract to contact, from producer to consumer. Nowhere is this more clearly domenstrated than in the natural gas market."

He observed that while Washington debates over natural gas deregulation, the gas market is changing. This year, 6 percent of the natural gas produced in the U.S. may be sold on the spot market — the free market — with pipelines acting as common carriers.

"For decades, the natural gas industry was run by transportation experts and attorneys." No more, says Bricker. "Today the business is turning inside out. You've got to meet your customer face to face, find out what he wants, and bargain with him."

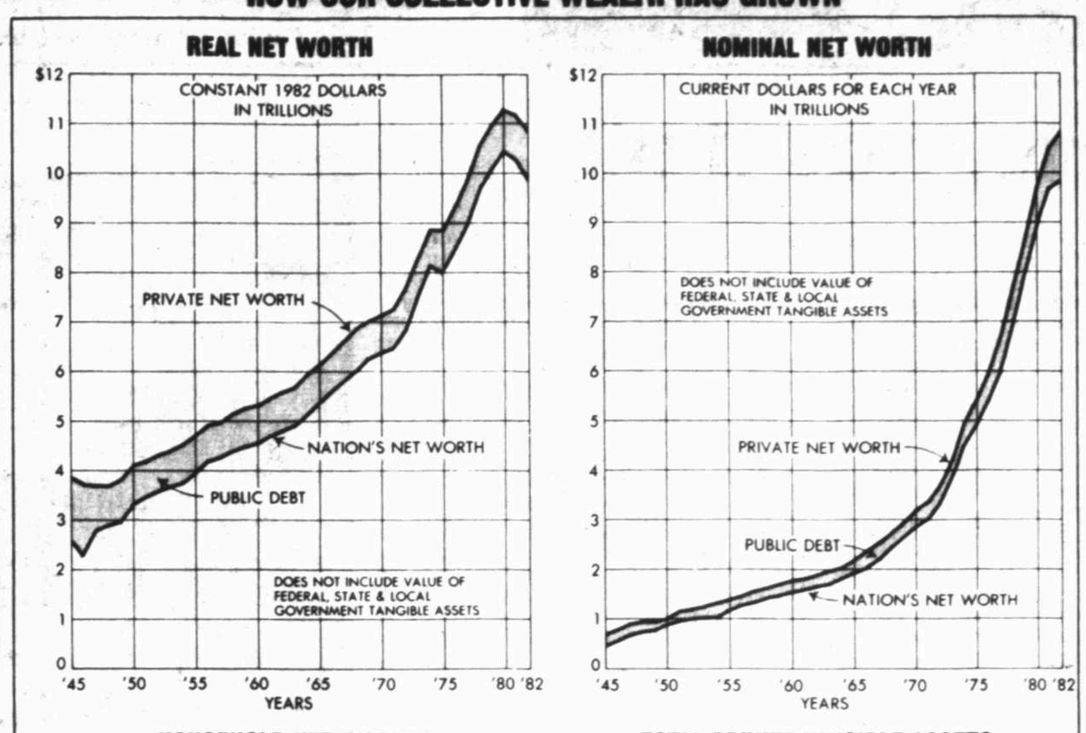
The competition between oil, gas and coal have "put the buyer in control." Bricker gave some examples of the kind of innovative changes that might be expected.

"Could we have a group of unregulated natural gas distributors competing with each other just as oil jobbers do, and using the local utility only as a delivery device? Could you drive your propane-powered automobile up to the convenience store and fill it up with natural gas?" he asked.

"The kinds of innovations that we are seeing in communications are the kinds of things that we will see happening in oil, gas and coal as the forces of competition intensify over the next decade," he continued. "It's going to be good for the economy, and good for consumers. I think it will be good for producers, too."

The conference, held at the Fairmont Hotel, was sponsored by the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and Cox School of Business at Southern Methodist Universuity.

HOW OUR COLLECTIVE WEALTH HAS GROWN



Fort Worth oil, gas co. has merged

FORT WORTH —(SWN)— Trade Exploration Corp. of Fort Worth has merged with Trade Oil and Gas Inc. of New York City according to Dick Gessinger, executive vice president of Trade Exploration Corp in an announcement released Thursday.

Gessinger said, "The merger more than doubles the size of Trade Exploration's proved reserves, allowing for increased exploitation of our underdeveloped properties."

Under terms signed Feb. 16 in New York City, the companies will operate under Trade Exploration's name and management, and all operations will consolidate to corporate headquarters in Fort Worth.

Trade Oil and Gas Inc. acquired and held leases primarily located in West Texas, South Texas and the Louisiana-Gulf Coast.

"In the past we enjoyed success in exploration," Gessinger said. "Now we are in a position to carefully balance development with continued sound exploration."

N.A.C.E. to meet March

The March meeting of 1983-84 Permian Basin National Association of Corrosion Engineers (N.A.C.E.) will be held March 6, 1984, at the Country Villa Holidlay Inn in Midland.

The speaker will be George Harris, Vice-President of technical sales and service for the Tapecoat Company of Evanston, Illinois. Harris will speak on the topic "Plant Applied Multiple-Layer Tape Coating Systems".

Harris is a graduate of Illinois Institute of Technology with a B. S. in chemical engineering. He has been employed in the corrosion field for thirty years and has been a member of N.A.C.E. for twenty-eight years. He is accredited by N.A.C.E. as a Corrosion Specialist.

Cocktails will begin at 6:30 p.m. and dinner will follow at 7:00 p.m.

Energas reports earnings

AMARILLO — Energas Company has reported unaudited earnings of $1.9 million, or $1.03 per share, for the period October 19, 1983 through December 31, 1983, on revenues of $67.5 million.

For the quarter ended December 31, 1982, Energas, operating as a division of Pioneer Corporation, had a loss of $1.9 million on revenues of $52.9 milion. After adjustments to reflect the spin-off of Energas from Pioneer and the effects of an accounting change in the method of recognizing gas revenues and expenses, the company's pro forma results for the quarter ended December 31, 1983 would have reflected a loss of $1.0 million (55 cents per share) on revenues of $68.0 million.

Dorm- inflation fighter

Imagine, in today's world of rising costs, an establishment has actually lowered it's prices. A year ago if you were to check into Midland Dorm it would have cost you $12.00 a night. Now it is only $7.50 a night.

It is hard to believe that a place which offers neat, well-kept rooms would lower it's prices, but it is true.

You may be thinking to yourself, that sounds too good to be true so there must be something wrong with it but there is not.

What does Midland Dorm offer singles that other places don't? The main advantage of staying at Midlnd Dorm is the price. After all, with the state of the economy, that has to be one of the major considerations when looking for a place to stay, be it a night, or a year. Midland Dorm is just the place you have been looking for. Midland Dorm is very comfortable, clean, convenient, and new, with plenty of extras to keep you busy in your spare time.

Does Midland Dorm offer you comfort? You bet! Each and every guest at Midland Dorm is given a private room which includes a long boy bed with storage underneath, a desk, and a closet. In addition, each room has a seperate air conditioner, a heater, flourescent lighting, and a smoke detector for extra safety. In fact, Midland Dorm has been constucted to very strict specifications making it one of the safest places not only in Midland, but in the entire West Texas area!

And though you may be single, you never have to worry about your safety. Men and women are given seperate accomodations at Midland Dorm. Each building includes well maintained restrooms and shower area, coke machines, and inside pay telephones. Each is carpeted throughout, well-lit inside as well as out, and has more than adequate parking for each and every guest. The grounds are patrolled on a regular basis for your safety.

Common grounds for men and women include a laundry area, game room with a pool table and video games, an outside picnic area with built in bar-b-que grills for the few days of warm weather left, and storage buildings which are available to the general public as well as each guest at the Dorm.

Midland Dorm also has a manager on the premises 24 hours a day for the safety and protection of the guests. Any questions regarding the comfort or condition of a room may be directed at any time to Mr. Grady Toney, the Dorm's manager. Each guest is given fresh towels and sheets when checking into the Dorm, and these may be exchanged for new ones at any time. We want your stay at the Dorm to be as pleasant as possible. After all, we are here to serve you.

So when you are looking for a quality place to stay that can fit into your budget remember the Midland Dorm. Their prices are lower than last year for the same rooms so take advantage of the price and save your money. Ionicron not only softens but conditions your water

If you haven't compared the difference between tap or well water and Ionicron conditioned water, you should make the comparison.

Water hardness is measured in grains per gallon(gpg). 10.5 gpg is considered hary hard water. In a test performed in the Ionicron office, a local water sample measured 56 gpg. The Ionicron conditioned water measured 0 gpg. The two samples mixed measured 30 gpg.

This test shows that even though half of the water was softened, once mixed with hard water, the softened water was nullified. It is important to keep this in mind when looking for a conditioning system. Some companies connect their softeners only to the home's hot water.

By softening only hot water you do save wear and tear on water heaters and will have spotless dishes but the major benefits of conditioned water are lost.

Ionicron conditioning systems are installed so that the entire home is served by soft and conditioned water.

By having totally softened water, a considerable savings in shampoo, bath soap and laundry is realized immediately. Clothes will also be noticably lighter.

Hard water, besides using more soap, shampoo and detergent, will leave soap scum on your tub as well as on your skin and in your hair. It will also leave stains and deposits on plumbing fixtures making household cleaning more difficult and time consuming than need be.

Mike Dahlheim, General Manager of Midland's Ionicron, explains that Ionicron conditioned water allows washing machines, ice makers and all water using appliances to perform efficiently while extending their life expectancy and reducing down time.

The city of Midland is in the planning stage of adding amonia to their water treatment procedure. By adding the amonia, a chemical known as chloramines will be produced. Chloramines, for example, will kill tropical fish. Ionicron's bacteriostatic water conditioning system will, by using silver impregnated activated carbon, absorb 90% or more of these harmful chloramines. This unit will also absorb 90% or more of the chlorination and it's accompaning trihalomethane (a known cancer causing agent) present in treated water currently used in the home.

Ionicron also offers reverse osmosis. The high quality system employs a prefilter to extend membrane life and a postfilter for final water polishing. The polishing leaves the water product without the flat distilled taste.

Reverse osmosis will remove 98% of virtually all harmful contaminants found in water including salt and sodium.

Special pricing on combination packages of conditioner, reverse osmosis or patented water distiller are available.

Ionicron, Inc. is located on County Road 125 West, in the Terminal area next to Duccomun Metal. Their phone number is 561-5355.

Diamontrigue has amethysts

The perfect selection for the February birthstone...Amethyst...from Brazil, the land of the Bosa Nova!

This popular gemstone has continued to rise as a favorite. It was long worn exclusively by royalty. Our amethysts are deep, rich purple, superior in value to the lighter stone. They are mined and faceted in Brazil; both unmounted and in 14K gold bezel pendants with an extra large loop.

A direct purchase of these gemstones was made, eliminating many middlemen, making it possible to price these stones at a tremendous savings.

Every women needs an exceptional piece of jewelry...what better time than now? These captivating, lively gemstones are extremely clean; meticulously faceted and polished. Choose a design of your own, combining these lustrous, durable amethysts with the Diamontrigue Gem. You'll capture everyone's eye with a stunning piece of jewelry, designed especially for you.

The Diamontrigue Gem, finest of the diamond simulants, is unsurpassed in beauty of cut, clarity and color. Gemologists select the top 7% of the best to be a Diamontrigue. Their expertise insures the continuing quality that has become synonymous with the name Diamontrigue.

Deep feelong require gifts of significance and your selection at Diamontrigue will seal this gift with a special memory for your lovely lady.

Regal purple is a fascinating, flattering color. you don't HAVE to have a February birthday to enjoy an amethyst! If you want one, get one!

You will find the Diamontrigue Salon in the front of the Market Place, University and Parkway, in Odessa.

Kelly Services will be in a new location March 1st

Have you ever wondered who are the temporaries that work for Kelly Services? They are professionals! Professionals who for some reason or another do not wish to work full time in just one place.

The temporaries come from a diversified background. Some are college students who can only work during school breaks. Others are homemakers who want to work only occasionally or a person whose spouse travels extensively and they want the freedom to accompany them when they choose. Still others are newcomers to Midland who want to get a feel for the business climate before entering the permanent work force.

What do these temporaries have in common besides being professionals? They are the cream of the crop.

Kelly Services tests their temporaries extensively. This assures the temporary a position that is within her skills yet challenging and the company gets a temporary that can do the job hired for.

Kelly Services is taking a giant step forward to better serve the electronic age. Beginning this summer they will initiate a word processor training program known as the KEE Computer Operator Assisted Program. This program will be nation wide and it entails actual hands on experience.

Kelly will be able to train right in their office on a computer keyboard. While training, the computer will stop when a mistake is made. This is to show the mistake and how to correct it. There is training time spent in the office but once the training is complete the person will be able to use a Wang, Lanier and an IBM Display Writer.

Kelly can also test with this new system. No other temporary service can give hands on testing. They will be able to test eleven different catagories. If a person does not score as high as necessary she can go into the Kelly office for more training.

Specific details as to when this system will be installed locally are tobe announced later. Be sure to watch their advertisements.

Another change is taking place at the Midland Kelly Services.They are moving. After March 1, 1984 you will no longer be able to find them in the Imperial Shopping Center. They will be moving to the Claydesta National Bank Building. Suite 2050. Their phone number will still be 689-9801.

Stop in and see the new Kelly Services office after March 1. While you are there you can have all of your questions answered. If you need your questions answered before then drop in at their present office in Imperial Shopping Center. They will be glad to help you.

Wilma and Pam of Kelly Service will be glad for you to come in and regester with them to join the professional temporaries at Kelly. Remember though, that after March 1 you will need to look for them in the Claydesta National Bank Building, Suite 2050.

Introduction to the page

The Business/Industry page is published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry pages (B/I): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month (26 weeks) contract, businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help the prospective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, the B/I pages are used by a wide variety of businesses that can provide many of the essential tasks that you desire.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business/Industry pages, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corporate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity

Glenn reminds Mondale of past position on Alaskan pipeline

(c) 1984, Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Seeking to establish "trust" as a campaign issue, Democratic presidential contender John Glenn escalated his attack on rival Walter F. Mondale, using a 1982 newspaper article that Glenn said illustrates Mondale's "multiple positions on a single issue."

At issue is Mondale's role in 1981 as a paid consultant to a company proposing to build a natural gas pipeline from Alaska to the lower 48 states and his position on the company's plan to charge consumers for construction costs before the line was built, a provision known as "pre-billing."

Saturday, during the Democrats' presidential debate in Des Moines, Iowa, Mondale said of pre-billing: "I was always opposed to that. I never did any lobbying on that." He added that he believed in "standing up for the consumer."

But at a news conference here Thursday, Glenn said, "That statement ... is untrue." He said that Mondale was paid $43,750 as a consultant to the company that was pushing pre-billing legislation in Congress and that Mondale had telephoned the chairman of the subcommittee handling the pipeline bill. The bill was passed in December 1981.

"In the halls of Congress," Glenn said, "it was no secret that Fritz Mondale and others were associated with the pipeline project — an association that would help influence members of Congress by letting them know the former vice president was 'on board.'"

Accusing Mondale of "misstatements," and linking them to his consistent campaign charge that Mondale promises everything to every pressure group, Glenn said that "the biggest issue in this campaign is trust."

He said that his attacks on Mondale address the question of "who's going to be best qualified to stand before the American people and say, 'the things I said in the primary campaign I meant.'"

In Cedar Rapids, front-runner Mondale called Glenn's charges "absolutely false" and an act of "desperation." He said, "The more desperate he gets, the more he feels he's in trouble, the harsher his rhetoric becomes." Opinion polls show Glenn losing support as rivals Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson gain.

Mondale, a former senator from Minnesota, denied that he ever lobbied for the pipeline. He said that he never favored the pre-billing provision and would have fought it if he had been in Congress. However, when asked what he would have done if faced with a vote on the legislation, Mondale said after a long pause, "I probably would have voted for it." He said that the pipeline's outweighed the controversial provision.

The heated exchange came amid persistent speculation that the two candidates' bickering could divide the party and give President Reagan ammunition against the Democratic nominee. Reflecting this concern, Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt sent all eight Democratic candidates a letter Thursday, warning against such attacks.

The Ohio senator's charges were similar to those he made Saturday after the Iowa debate, but he sharpened his attack Thursday by providing copies of an article from the Minneapolis Tribune of Jan. 10, 1982. The article said that Mondale "noted" his "consistent" support for the project, "dating to his days as a senator, when he was one of the sponsors of the original pipeline legislation."

Glenn's attacks seem to have chipped Mondale's armor a bit. The former vice president, bombarded with questions from reporters about his telephone call inquiring about the status of the pipeline legislation, said: "It turns out to have been a foolish call."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 252 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased by $989 million to $164.9 billion for the week ended February 15, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.72% from 8.70%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 8.73% from 8.74%. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 38 days for the fifth week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Assets of taxable money funds continued their upward trend this week as investors shifted more money from equity funds. The largest increase was in money funds available to individual investors. Tax-free money fund assets also rose this week, bringing their total to a record $19 billion."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Good help top business concern

(c) 1984, Los Angeles Times

You might think that the biggest concern of small businesses is whether they can compete with much larger companies. If you do, you're wrong. The top concern is finding competent help.

That is one of the findings of a nationwide survey of chief executive officers of 1,011 companies with 10 to 500 employees conducted by the Roper Organization for Heller International Corp.'s Institute for Small Business.

Finding competent help was the No. 1 concern of 74 percent of the respondents. But apparently the situation is improving because 83 percent had listed it as their top concern in a 1980 survey. Also, only 69 percent said motivating employees is a problem area today, compared to 70 percent in 1980.

Other top concerns, compared to 1980, include: federal tax forms and regulations, 71 percent versus 68 percent; state and local tax forms and regulations, 68 percent versus 65 percent; workmen's compensation, 57 percent versus 48 percent, and meeting the competition of much larger companies, 57 percent versus 47 percent.

Three questions that were added to the survey this year regarded concern over the availability of financing. Of the total, 32 percent said long-term financing was a problem, but only 19 percent felt the same way about the availability of venture capital and of short-term financing.

It's not often that a person works hard to reduce his own business, but that's exactly what Dr. Donald S. Pritt, a Parkersburg, W.Va., podiatrist, did.

Pritt, who has treated foot problems for the last 27 years, noted a sudden increase in business when jogging and running became a national pastime. Although serious runners are well aware of the pounding their feet take, Pritt observed that few make any effort to protect them until they are injured.

He decided that some preventive medicine was needed. For the last two years, Pritt has been working on a "shock absorber" that can be slipped into shoes to protect heels from the impact of running — or even walking. He recently came up with a solution and is marketing it for $9.95 a pair under the Sofstride label.

Sofstride is a soft plastic cushion that has a recessed center to spread shock away from a heel's center. It has pencil-thin tunnels across the lower edge so air can circulate, and is impregnated with talcum to act as a deodorant.

Pritt says he hopes his invention will get the public to care for their feet instead of "trying to repair them after a point of no return."

For years, businesses have used Census Bureau data for everything from deciding where to locate a plant to determining whether there was a sufficient market for a proposed product.

Now, in what it describes as "a first-ever experiment for any religious organization," the United Church of Christ Board for Homeland Ministries is offering each of its 6,400-plus local congregations a detailed profile of their neighborhood, based on a comparison of 1980 census figures with 1970's. The profiles were drawn by National Planning Data Corp. of Ithaca, N.Y.

Each 11-page computer printout provides a detailed picture, including age, sex, employment, education, racial or ethnic background, household composition, population trends, number living at poverty level and non-English-speaking residents.

The local churches have found the profiles invaluable, according to the Rev. William McKinney, secretary for research and evaluation for the Homeland Board.

Several congregations whose memberships were shrinking were able to reverse the trend by using the census profiles.

Continental rate hike causes jitters

(c) 1984, Los Angeles Times

Sparking renewed industry fears of an nationwide air fare war, Continental Airlines on Thursday announced fare cuts of 5 percent to 30 percent on 73 routes in the West, Midwest and Northeast.

Frontier Airlines immediately matched the cuts, which were announced two days after fare reductions were posted by United Airlines. United, American, Western and other airlines said that they were studying the latest cuts.

Houston-based Continental, which has offered low fares since filing for bankruptcy protection and sharply slashing employee wages last September, said that the new fares, effective Tuesday, are unrestricted and in some cases have no expiration date.

Continental said that it will charge $175 or less on all coach seats between Chicago and eight West Coast cities, including Los Angeles, Burbank, Calif., and San Diego, for tickets purchased by March 31 and travel completed by April 30. Current fares range from $150 to $225. The flights all stop in Denver, however.

The action was designed to undercut United, which Tuesday lowered some unrestricted fares to match those of Continental. It also extended cuts to other markets, including Chicago, a major hub for American Airlines, which so far has largely avoided the fare war.

Analysts said that the move alone is still not extensive enough to trigger a nationwide fare war, which most airlines have been trying to avoid as they recover from massive losses during the recession. Average fares are as much as 30 percent higher than at this time last year, analysts say.

Why An Independent Deserves An Independent Bank

QUICK RESPONSE

A hundred years ago you had to wait weeks to get something from Dallas or Houston- if you got it at all.

More often than not, that is still the case when it comes to banking.

But when you talk to your ClayDesta National banker, you get answers from Midland.

So our customers measure response time in days, not months. We know when you're ready to make a move, you need an answer now. And we're ready to give you one.

That's one reason why independents are saying they feel like winners just walking in our bank. If you've made it as an independent, you are a winner.

Talk to your friends about ClayDesta National. Ask other independents who've done business with us.

They'll tell you there isn't a bank in America that is more positive about the great energy industry. Or more positive about the independents who made it great.

Come see us. You'll love doing business with a bank that believes in you.

You've never seen a bank like ClayDesta.
