JAPS SHELL PORT CITY DURING CHINESE RIOT

Second Negro Goes On Trial At Graham Monday In Nodurft Death Case

STATE EXPECTS TO SECURE JURY TODAY

Brown to Answer Charge of Robbery in Connection With Outrage

DEFENSE HIDES PLANS

Motion to Quash Indictment Exected as First Move In Trial

Completion of a jury at Graham Monday to try Richard Brown, negro, on a charge of robbery with firearms, and submission of the case to the jury not later than Wednesday evening was predicted Sunday afternoon by District Attorney Sam Spence.

Trial of the negro in Young county on a charge of venue from this county is scheduled to open in Graham Monday morning before Judge Allan D. Montgomery. Mr. Spence will be assisted in the prosecution of Brown by George W. Anderson and Mike Anglin. The defendant will be represented by Cedric Taylor of this city who was appointed by the court to that service.

DEFENSE TO CLAIM COURT TERM ILLEGAL

Cedric Taylor, defense council for Richard Brown, negro, said Sunday night that he would object to the holding of a special term of the 30th district court, scheduled to open at Graham Monday to try the negro, on the grounds that such a special term is illegal. Mr. Taylor declared that Judge Allan Montgomery held a regular session of the court in Archer county last week and had not adjourned it.

Questioned on the move to be made by Mr. Taylor, Sam Spence, district attorney and chief prosecutor in the Brown case, said that he believed both terms could be held at the same time. He said that he would oppose the defense motion.

If the defense motion is sustained, a delay is expected in trying Brown on the robbery charge, which arises out of the fatal shooting of Ted Nodurft here the night of Sept. 9.

Partner Given Death

Brown also faces charges of murder and criminal assault in connection with the killing of A. N. Nodurft of Fort Worth, and the robbery and assaulting of his fiancee, in this city on the night of Sept. 9. The change of venue, argued by Mr. Taylor, was granted after Richard Johnson had been convicted and given the death penalty here last month on a murder charge in a companion case.

Mr. Taylor told The Record News Sunday evening that the defense will be ready at Graham Monday morning subject to certain motions which probably will be presented to the court. It was generally expected that he will move again that the indictment be quashed on the grounds that the grand jury commission violated the 14th amendment to the federal constitution by discriminating against negroes in selecting the grand jury which returned the bills against Brown and Johnson. This motion was presented before Judge Montgomery here when the trial of Johnson opened, but was overruled.

Nodurft was shot through the neck by one of two negroes who approached the car in which he and his fiancee, a Wichita Falls young woman, were sitting near the intersection of Dayton avenue and Brook. The young man had attempted to drive away as the blacks were seen bearing down on the car. After the shot, Nodurft slumped in his seat and lapsed into unconsciousness.

Girl Assaulted

The young woman was taken to a spot near the Wichita Falls & Southern railway tracks and was assaulted by both negroes. She then was commanded under threat of death to remain there. She returned to the car, however, moved the wounded man from beneath the wheel and drove at once to a hospital, where the offense first was reported. Nodurft died two days later from the gunshot wound.

Johnson's trial was completed speedily. Less than one day was required for the selection of a jury after the defense attorney's arguments on motions had been completed. About a day and a half was consumed in the taking of testimony and the jury returned a verdict after about 37 minutes deliberation.

Brown will be taken to Graham early Monday morning by Sheriff Perry Browning and Deputy Ben Howle. A special venire of 200 Young county men has been summoned for the trial.

Funeral Plans for Crash Victim Delayed

HOUSTON, Nov. 8. (AP)—Funeral arrangements had not been completed late Sunday for A. T. Vick, 53, president of the Vick Electrical company here who was killed Saturday night in an automobile-wagon collision 15 miles from Houston on the Houston-Shreveport highway.

Mr. Vick died almost instantly.

Alfred C. Finn and J. Russ Baty, associated architects, were in the automobile with Mr. Vick and suffered minor injuries.

Apology To Hoover Unlikely

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Despite the verdict of the president's special committee, exonerating him from the "abysmal ignorance" charges by President William H. Gardiner of the navy league, the league will continue its fight for an adequate navy, without compromise, it was made known tonight.

Further, it was not expected here that Mr. Gardiner will tender an apology for his charges which the president recently said he "expects." Gardiner's statement accused the president of a policy to "restrict, reduce and starve the United States navy."

In navy league circles today it was stated no word had been receive from Mr. Gardiner, who is in New York, indicating what reply he will make to the committee's verdict. Nothing in the nature of an apology however was expected.

It was pointed out that Mr. Gardiner had the staunch backing of the executive committee of the league which by a 7 to 1 vote had upheld his statement, regardless of White House criticism.

While nothing further came from the White House today, following issuance last night of the committee report, it was represented that Mr. Hoover is satisfied with the voluminous findings of the committee, and considers the matter closed in so far as the administration is concerned.

FARMER KNIFED BY ADVERSARY

Thornberry Man in Hospital With Three Wounds

T. A. Corley, 30, Thornberry farmer, is at the Wichita General hospital here with severe knife wounds received late Sunday afternoon at the home of a neighbor. His condition is not serious.

A man known only as "Oklahoma Jack," and said to have been released only a few days ago from the state penitentiary was sought following the fight by Barney McGee, Petrolia deputy sheriff. The man, a transient, had escaped.

Corley received a knife wound in the abdomen, another in the side and a third on the thigh. None penetrated vital organs.

The cutting, according to Mr. McGee's investigation, occurred when "Oklahoma Jack" intervened in an argument between Corley and Rex Doyle, at whose place the fight occurred. In the course of the affray, it was said, Corley was pursued some distance through a pasture. Doyle is a cripple.

A number of residents of the Thornberry community were present at Doyle's home, including Corley's wife. They had gathered there to witness or participate in a Sunday afternoon enterainment of steer and horse riding.

Following the cutting, Corley was brought in an automobile to the hospital here by his wife and Louie Ferris. After an investigation by both city and county authorities here, the case was turned over to Mr. McGee, a Clay county officer.

Leaving lonely Cocos island behind them, the three cast-aways of the wrecked yawl West Wind and pictured here as they took a last look at the tropic spot in the Pacific which was their home for six months. Shown aboard the U. S. S. Sacramento which rescued them are, left to right, Gordon Brawner of Springfield, Ill., Paul Stachwick of Huron, S. D., and Earl Palliser of San Diego, Calif. They lived the lives of Robinson Crusoes existing on a diet of fish, wild hogs, fowl and cocoanuts, after they were wrecked on the isolated island last April.

They knew help was on the way, did the three castaways of the yawl West Wind, when they found this sign and box of supplies on their lonely Cocos island home in the Pacific. The sign and provisions had been left by Julius Fleischmann's yacht Camargo, which found traces of the marooned trio but unable to locate them, sailed away to get help. The castaways later were rescued by the gunboat U. S. S. Sacramento. The three were in good health despite six months lived on the isolated island.

A home for modern Robinson Crusoes was this rickety-looking shack in which the three castaways of the wrecked yawl West Wind lived for half a year on Cocos island, in the Pacific. The trio was rescued by the gunboat Sacramento and brought to Balboa, in the Canal Zone. The marooned men had salvaged rifles and fishing tackle from their beached craft and lived mainly on the wild hogs which they shot and ocean fish they caught.

Garner Silent on Speakership Prospects on Way to Washington

West Texas Congressman Leaves for Capitol Sure That Democrats Will Organize House; Tongue-Tied About Himself

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 8. (UP)—Congressman John N. Garner was up with the chickens on his son's Uvalde farm-ranch this morning; drove 90 miles to San Antonio and boarded a 9 o'clock train for Washington and, barring accidents, the speakership of the house of representatives.

"From the close of one sitting of congress to the opening of the next, the president alone directs the affairs of the nation," said Garner. "I shall keep my lips sealed politically until President Hoover delivers his message to congress. It is his duty to advise congress on the state of the nation."

None less than the president himself has tried without success to draw out the wily Democratic leader. "Isn't this unusual," Garner asked the president when called to the White House for a conference.

Misses Funeral

"Trying to pledge us to a course in advance," chuckled Garner as he recalled the (to him) trap that he escaped.

Garner did not remain in San Antonio for the funeral today of Republican Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, good personal friends though they were. "I am sorry I could not remain," he said. "But I made definite appointments to meet congressmen along the way to Washington and some of them are coming considerable distances for the purpose."

Many private citizens, too, who think the Texan has only to push a button now to make things happen at Washington, besieged him on the way. Garner will be at his capitol office Tuesday. Then things will really begin to hum toward securing congressional control for the Democratic party.

Senate Dreams

"If Texas were divided into five states, as she has a right to be under her treaty of annexation, and as she has the population to justify, we would have control of the senate, too," said the Democratic leader wistfully. "There are five Republican states with 10 senators that have not the combined population of Texas with only two senators. Some of these Republican states with two senators are not as big as my congressional district."

This district, incidentally, was the subject of a hurried conference here before the train left. Texas state senators assured Garner that if Texas redistricts, his district will be left exactly as he wants it to be. The district has 23 counties with a population of more than 370,000. It takes in a third of the gulf coast of Texas, a half of the Texas-Mexican border and extends north almost to the middle of the state. At one time it had 33 counties.

The district first elected Garner to congress in 1902. It has sent him back unbrokenly since, usually without a race.

Recalls Race

"The first race was the hardest" he mused today. "I made 53 speeches" that is more than he has made in all his subsequent races combined. But 28 years in congress have not made him over-con-

PARTY CHIEFS TO LAY PLANS

Congressional 'Big Guns' to Hold Conferences

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. (US)—"Big guns" in the Republican and Democratic parties begin a series of conferences this week to map their strategy for the session of congress which convenes Dec. 7.

Informal conferences to mobilize sentiment on major issues will be first in order, followed by secret party caucuses just before congress meets.

House Republicans have selected Nov. 30 for their party conference, while the Democrats will caucus Dec. 5.

Flushed by their sweeping victories in last Tuesday's elections, after the Democratic landslide of last November, the Democrats have hopes of making a record they can point to in the 1932 presidential race.

Representative John N. Garner of Texas, the Democrats' choice for house speaker, indicated he will be here Tuesday or Wednesday, while Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, is scheduled to arrive this week.

SILVER PACES WHEAT PRICES IN BIG GAINS

50-Cent Marks Near for Metal, Many Bulls Proclaim

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. (AP)—Silver and wheat, stellar performers in many market dramas, have again taken the spot light on the commodity stage during the past week and inspired sanguine hopes they may be able to show the way to better times.

Most of the other commodities, although considerably under their price range of a year ago, also apparently reflected the growing optimistic sentiments of their average quotations for the past week were up over the previous seven days.

Bulls Increase

Some of the bulls, and their number seemed to be growing, are basing their hopes of future fair weather stock market days on action of silver and the grains. Some old traders claim that "as go silver and wheat, so goes the market."

Silver closed the week at 24¾ cents an ounce, the highest price for 1931 and an ascent from the low of all time last February of 25¾ cents an ounce. May wheat, down to 40 some odd cents per bushel a few weeks ago, closed a gala week of booming prices at 71⅞ cents a bushel and operators on the long side are loudly proclaiming 80-cent wheat before the upswing is halted.

Bears Chased

The silver bulls, supposedly led by the wiley Chinese, took a firm group on the market and the bears from London to Bombay, including such important way points as New York, Shanghai and Hong Kong, were chased to their holes. Enthusiastic silverities see the metal hitting the 50-cent mark before many days. But there are sober traders who believe that a reaction is coming soon, both to silver and wheat.

The meteoric movement of wheat prices in America tended somewhat to obscure the rising silver quotations. But the movement of the metal was watched closely because of the experience of many, who have observed markets, both good and bad, for many years. In the past, it is claimed, the action of silver has often forecast the general trend of the market several months ahead.

STREET BATTLE RESULTS FROM BOMB ATTEMPT

Japanese Plot Blamed for Attack on Police by Chinese Horde

U. S. ARMY ON GUARD

American, Italian Forces Act to Protect Lives Of Foreigners

PEIPING, China, Nov. 9. (Monday) (US)—Furious street fighting broke out at midnight in Tientsin's native quarter and still raged this morning as an aftermath of Friday's attempt to assassinate China's deposed "boy emperor" Henry Pu-Yi.

At 7:20 this morning Mayor Chang Hsueh-Ming, of Tientsin, telephoned Pieping that the Japanese artillery had begun shelling Chinese combatants in the city's streets.

The firing from the Japanese concession opened at 6:20 this morning. By 7 o'clock 14 shells had landed from the Japanese guns, one of the shells dropping inside the gates of the distant Chinese barracks.

At 10:15 a. m. (Monday) the shelling by the Japanese had stopped. More than 40 shells landed at various points in Chinese territory and two landed in the former Austrian concession just over the Italian concession.

Prisoners Tell of Plot

The Chinese casualties during the night were 10 wounded. Twelve plainclothes Chinese were captured armed with Japanese pistols and they stated that the Japanese troops escorted them from the concession to the border of Chinese territory, instructing them to cause trouble. These men said the recruits were organized in squads of 30 men and received $40 each.

Colonel Breckenridge informed Universal Servcie that he has ordered routine defense plans, instructing his men to keep close watch against possible rioting and mobs that might harm the foreign populations.

The U. S. S. Tulsa, anchored down the river from Tientsin wirelessed Peiping officials that she was unaware of Tientsin fighting.

The American and Italian garrisons stood under arms, ready to defend foreign lives.

Both Chinese and Japanese troops here were held to their barracks, commanders of each fearing the political implications behind Friday's attempt on Pu-Yi's life would lead to an open clash, should they meet.

Armored Train En Route

A Chinese armored train is en route from Peiping to the embattled city.

The Japanese garrison commander served the Hopei provincial government with an ultimatum to withdraw the native combatants beyond a point 100 yards from the Japanese concession. The chairman of the provincial government refused to recognize the ultimatum because it was delivered orally.

Before the Japanese commander acted at 4 a. m. he consulted with Colonel Taylor, commander of the American 15th infantry garrison. Colonel Taylor's attitude toward the ultimatum is not known.

Japanese Blamed

Chinese circles accuse the Japanese of sending 3,000 Chinese plainclothesmen into the native quarter to attack Chinese police posts, allegedly for the purpose of finding an excuse to occupy Tientsin similarly as Manchuria. They charge the attempt on Pu-Yi's life was a Japanese "plant" to frighten the former emperor into becoming a Japanese "puppet" emperor of Manchura.

Japanese official quarters declare the fighting is between the 29th Chinese infantry brigade and Chinese police. They declare Pu-Yi's assassin was a Chinaman and that he sent the former emperor bombs concealed in fruit and tea at the instigation of Chinese circles trying to draw international blame on Japan for Pu-Yi's death. The latter is a resident of the Japanese concession.

Complications Feared

Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, governor of Manchuria, dispatched an armored train from Peiping to Tientsin when informed that if the battle does not end by dawn se-

Tourists Invade Coast Art Center For View of Nudists in the Flesh

CARMEL, Calif., Nov. 8. (AP)—Tourists swarmed into Carmel today. The invasion, local authorities said, was the result of a desire to witness a nudist colony in the flesh.

So huge was the horde that Police Chief Gus Englund, who is alone responsible for law and order in Carmel, was forced to deputize two citizens to keep the crowd away from Carmel hospital, where the colony is located.

But the tourists were disappointed. The nudists weren't nuding, at least not where anybody could see them.

In the midst of the excitement, City Attorney Argyll Campbell handed down an opinion concerning the complaint of the nudists that airplanes were flying over their temple of the sun.

Campbell said airplane sightseers might be charged with interfering with the nudist's personal liberty. But on the other hand, he said the law permits sightseers who might see the nudists working at it to prefer charges of indecent exposure.

Maj. H. L. Watson, operator of the sightseeing airplane, isn't worried. He says he'll carry passengers until there's an injunction to stop him.

"I can't see anything illegal in it," the major said. "None of my passengers have seen anything—yet."

JAPS BOMBARD CHINESE CITY

Furious Rioting Blamed on Japanese Plot

rious international complications may result.

Mayor Chang Hseuh-Ming of Tientsin, told the marshal, his brother, over the telephone that fighting was between Chinese policemen and 3,000 Chinese plainclothesmen, allegedly armed with Japanese weapons. He said all Chinese troops were confined to barracks to avoid a clash with Japanese forces. One Japanese soldier was killed by a bomb, he added.

Secretary Nakayama of the Japanese legation at Tientsin informed Universal Service over the telephone, however, that the embroiled forces were Chinese policemen and 29th brigade of Chinese troops.

No Immediate Danger

Nakayama stated that no immediate danger to Japanese nationals or other foreigners is foreseen. Colonel Breckenridge, U. S. M. C., senior commandant of all legation guards, concurred in this opinion.

Nevertheless, American and Italian troops were drawn up on the bridge leading to the French concession, ready to intervene should the fighting endanger foreign residents. The foreign commandants have notified their respective consuls of the situation.

Nakayama said that the advisability of concentrating all Japanese nationals in the area in the Japanese concession as a measure of protection is being considered. He denied Japanese troops were in any way involved in the street battling.

According to Chinese advices from Tientsin, the plainclothes men poured out of the Japanese concession shortly before midnight, attacking the scattered Chinese police posts with rifle and machine gun fire.

Chinese Troops Stand By

Chinese troops stationed in Tientsin are reported not engaged in the conflict, but are said awaiting orders to act.

Mayor Chang Hsueh-Ming of Tientsin, in a telephone conversation with his brother, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, governor of Manchuria, said that the plainclothes men began their attack by seizing Chinese police posts on the border of the native quarter, and that serious casualties are believed to have resulted in this first fighting.

The initial attack was launched close to the Japanese barracks, housing several hundred troops. The attackers, said the mayor, had three main objectives, the police station and the civil governor's residence, at both of which points they were repulsed, and the railroad station, the fate of which is unknown.

Renewed onslaughts were expected.

Marshal Chang fears that the plainclothes men are actually a rebel army recruited by Gen. Sun Chaun Fang. It is also charged the movement is directed by Chang-Pi, former chief of Peking police, inspired by Japanese seeking a pretext to occupy Tientsin just as they have Manchuria.

CHINESE CONCENTRATE

TOKYO, Nov. 9, (Monday)—(AP)—A war office report today indicated, officials said, that Chinese forces are concentrating south of Anganchi, northwestern Manchuria, near the scene of last week's three-day battle in which Japan troops routed General Mah Chang-Shan' army.

The war office estimated the Chinese forces total about 8,000, of which 5,600 are infantry, 2,400 cavalry and 300 artillery.

The concentration is about 10 miles south of Anganchi, the war office said, which places it only a few miles north of the Nonni river brigehead, where about 120 Chinese and 15 Japanese were killed in fierce fighting last week.

Japan forces in the area number about 1,000.

JAPAN UNMOVED BY BOYCOTT THREATS

TOKYO, Nov. 8. (AP)—Reports the powers might impose a "diplomatic boycott" to back up the League of Nations against Japan were characterized in official circles today as "diplomatic intimidation" which has not caused Tokyo to budge an inch from its original stand.

It was authoritatively stated if the league persisted in attempting to dictate concerning Manchuria, Tokyo would be compelled to withdraw from the league. Japan already has contended the Manchurian situation was an affair concerning Japan and China and should be settled between themselves.

Serious Complications

As viewed here the diplomatic boycott would amount virtually to a severance of relations with the countries involved and cause serious complications from every angle. In Japan's eyes, the league is assuming a role of a "superstate" which Tokyo views with greatest dissatisfaction.

Authoritative sources said today Japan aimed to secure from China a solemn signed agreement with the League of Nations as witness covering Foreign Minister Shidehara's five fundamental points.

It was stressed such new agreement would take the shape of a protocol if the present tense situation was to be eased and which would make possible the evacuation of Japanese troops from occupied Manchurian territory.

Treaties Disputed

This again brings China up against the knotty issue of the validity of the 1915 treaties which Aristide Briand, chairman of the league council, in his note of Oct. 29, contends is covered by the Chinese proposal to submit the treaties to the league.

To this viewpoint Japan utterly refuses to accede. It is contended that at the root of Tokyo's refusal to compromise with China is the feeling that China's word cannot be trusted. Japan claims that contention is well grounded in view of the past record of Chinese repudiation of treaty commitments. Therefore Japan aims to secure China's solemn pledge.

Particularly irritating to Japan was the question of the salt revenue from Newchang, the subject of a note from M. Briand. In this connection the foreign office spokesman said Tokyo was drafting a protest to the league in which it will be made clear that the league secretariat has shown undue activity on a question which has nothing to do with the league convenant or the Kellogg anti-war pact.

Meanwhile but little news had been received from Manchuria, Japanese engineers, under protection of troops which dispersed the army of Mah Chang-Shan last week after a three-day engagement, have started repairs to the Nonni river bridge.

Telephone messages to Harbin, the Rengo news agency reported, said Anganchi and Tsitsihar were alive with military activity. Gen. Mah Chan-Shan is remaining at Tsitsihar.

A Rengo dispatch, from Harbin, later confirmed by the war department here, said the Japanese consul there had received a telegram from Consul Shimizu at Tsitsihar Saturday night saying all was quiet now although a number of Koreans had been murdered near the consulate within the last few days.

A Picture Story of Tragedy

The camera has recorded the story of grim tragedy in this picture. Charles Nathan had retuned to his home in Philadelphia after a fruitless hunt for a job. And as you see him here, on the arm of a sympathetic neighbor, he is learning from the lips of a police sergeant that his wife has just killed their three children and herself because of worry over a lack of money and food.

Tientsin, Scene of New Strife, Important Base for Foreigners

Tientsin, scene of Monday's fighting in China, a large commercial city with an estimated population of 900,000, is the port for Peiping, with which it is connected by rail, as well as with Manchuria.

It is situated at the junction of the Peiho and Hunho rivers and the river front of the Peiho is governed by foreign powers, which have various concessions.

These concessions were obtained by treaty after the city was occupied by English and French troops in 1858.

The foreign quarters suffered severely in the Boxer rebellion of 1900.

Since then, foreign troops have had the right, by a protocol signed in 1901, to defend the legation quarter in Peiping and to occupy selected points between Peiping and the sea. Foreign garrisons were strongly reinforced in 1927 during the conflict between the rival factions of North and South China, but since have been reduced.

The American force was reduced to 39 officers and 768 men, the garrison consisting of the 15th United States infantry regiment under command of Col. James D. Taylor.

The total number of foreign troops in Tientsin at the last census two years ago was 4,442, including the following: British, 1,213; French, 1,476; Italian, 353; Japanese, 593.

Hsuan Tung (Pu-Yi) was dethroned at the age of 5 by the Chinese revolution of 1911. He was restored to the throne in 1917 for seven days, then was finally ousted by military action which re-established the republic.

Ordered to leave the palace at Peiping in 1924, he fled to the Japanese legation and eventually escaped the Chinese republicans by going to Tientsin disguised as a coolie.

Now 26 years old, he is known as "Mr. Henry Pu-Yi" and lives in retirement in the Japanese section of Tientsin, taking slight interest in politics, preferring instead to sing Chinese operas and tinker with mechanical contraptions.

His second wife, daughter of a Manchu noble, recently demanded a divorce on grounds of ill treatment.

GARNER GOES TO CAPITOL

Congressman Silent About Speakership

cident. "You can't tell what might happen, if the interests get after me," he said.

A native Texan, born in the traditional log cabin on a Red river county farm, the 63-year-old congressman is typically West Texan. He moved to Uvalde for his health 33 years ago. "I got well, liked it and stayed," he said.

When he was 12, the family moved from the log cabin to a "painted white house" in Lamar county. There Garner saw his first train. It was when he attended a picnic given by the conductors of the Texas transcontinental line.

"I remember I thought how straight it tracked," Garner said reminiscently. "You know on the farm when a wagon was built right and had true wheels, it made a straight track instead of a wobbly one. That straight train track fascinated me."

Studies Law

Studying law in the office fashion of those days in Texas, Garner hung out his shingle at Clarksville. His first political experience was in the rough and ready battles of the Texas house of representatives.

In congressional recesses he potters about the farm-ranch at Uvalde. He has entirely recovered from an accident this summer due to his fondness for working around the place. "That's the only time my pocket-book was ever of any use," he said with his contagious chuckle. "A Mexican was sawing dead limbs off an oak tree. I was holding the ladder. The limb twisted round in falling and hit me right on the pocketbook."

Sure of Victory

Garner has no doubt that the Democrats will organize the house. He is also positive that a Democrat will succeed the late Republican Congressman Harry Wurbach and does not think the Republicans will make any serious fight to name another Republican here. In the speakership race, he does not believe that the Republicans will switch from Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut or Bertrand Snell of New York to a western candidate. That would be good strategy, he admitted, but pointed out that a defeated candidate for speaker becomes the minority leader. He does not believe the eastern Republicans are willing to give up party leadership on the slim chance of electing the speaker.

Newspaper headlines met him here saying that he is being boosted for president by former Congressman Charles O'Connor of Oklahoma.

"He is a Republican," said Garner, "I had an opportunity to do him a favor, once. He naturally feels kindly toward me." With that he dismissed the topic.

The only political forecast he would make was:

Mrs. Garner will be my secretary as long as I am in congress. She has been since I first went there."

Across the Pullman aisle, Mrs. Garner accepted the appointment.

number of floral tributes received. The stage in the auditorium at the rear of the casket was a mass of floral pieces, which overflowed later to the floor on either side of the bier. Likewise the altar at St. Mark's church was banked with flowers, and every available space at the sides of the altar was occupied by floral pieces. No actual count was made, but it is estimated that there were at least 1,000 bouquets, floral designs and wreaths ranging from modest bunches of flowers plucked from private gardens to huge, expensive pieces in which the figures and messages had been woven.

Connally Present

United States Senator Tom Connally of Marlin represented the senate, other members of the delegation appointed Saturday by Vice President Curtis to attend the funeral having been unable to reach here in time. Senator Conally, four congressmen and Gov. Ross S. Sterling's secretary, Pat Dougherty, filed past the casket in a body at the auditorium. The congressmen were Ewing Thomason of El Paso, J. P. Buchanan of Brenham, O. H. Cross of Waco and Marvin Jones of Amarillo. Dougherty represented Governor Sterling.

Senator Connaily made a brief statement, declaring that the late Congressman Wurzbach was "a useful and able public servant" and that while differing from him in politics he had always entertained for him a high personal regard.

Mayor Speaks

Mayor C. M. Chambers, all four city commissioners and the county commissioners were in another party which paid their last respect to Wurzbach at the auditorium. High ranking army officers were in another group.

Several touching incidents occurred while the body lay in state. One was when an old veteran, walking with the aid of a cane, laid a pitifully small bunch of flowers on the casket—two roses and a piece of fern, insignificant beside the magnificent pieces surrounding it—and stood for a moment looking down at the face of the man who had been his friend in life. Tears streamed down his withered old cheeks as he moved away.

Many men, among them staid old German farmers, business men of the city and other patiently from the ranks of labor wiped their eyes unashamedly as they turned away from the bier.

A white haired old negro stood for a moment in front of the casket, then burst into tears. "He was my friend," he said between sobs as he turned down the aisle. This sentiment was echoed by hundreds of others from every walk of life, all expressing great sorrow at his passing.

Members of the board of inquiry have not revealed any of their findings in connection with the investigation, but it was learned they would take testimony from gun crews, watch officers and other men who witnessed the explosion or might advance some reason for the accident.

The woman was attacked shortly after the noon hour Friday as she was alone at her home in the Cason community. Ross was captured by possemen within a few minutes after the alarm was spread. He was lodged in the Morris county jail at Daingerfield. Incensed citizens threatened summary justice and officers spirited him away.

A radio broadcasting station also was installed recently within the Vatican.

CHURCH HOLDS SPECIAL RITES

'Family Day' Observed at First Christian

Sunday was "Family Day" at the First Christian church, and the spirit of the occasion was attested by the fact that a large audience responded in the manner of bygone days when families attended public worship in a body and sat together during the services. There were two families tied for first honors, both having 10 in number present. One was the family of W. C. Heath who is a charter member of the First church and who also served on its first board of elders in 1890. The other family was that of Judge W. H. Penix who is chairman of the stewardship committee of the church. The family of H. M. Campbell, numbering seven, was the next largest.

A Bible was given to the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Campbell, being the youngest in attendance. The Bible awarded to the oldest person present was presented to W. P. Marshall whose age was given as 85.

The evening service was in honor of the American Legion, and it was noted that a large number of legionnaires were present to hear R. E. Shepherd lead in a singsong of familiar songs of war days.

Dr. Howard T. Wood, pastor, spoke Sunday morning on "Our Family." At night, his subject was "Lest We Forget" in which he paid a beautiful tribute to the ex-service men.

Al Smith Repudiates Commercial Supporters

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. (US)—Former Governor Smith today repudiated two organizations which, purportedly, have been advancing him for the presidential nomination.

He warned the Smith stickers of America he would bring legal action if the enterprise, which he classed as commercial, continued to offer for sale automobile and envelope stickers demanding his nomination.

The other organization is headed by Miles W. Lederer, editor of Plain Facts, Philadelphia. It has been soliciting petitions for Smith's nomination. Smith said he could not countenance the use of his name and photograph by the organization.

Judge Lehman said the spirit of Judaism "which kept alive the soul of Jewish people throughout the ages" must continue.

Indian Congress Asks Gandhi to Return

BOMBAY, India, Nov. 8. (AP)—Asserting the British government had failed to grant its demands for independence, the Indian national congress today cabled Mahatma Gandhi in London that his further attendance at the round-table conference was unnecessary and urged him to return to India at once.

While leaving the final decision to Gandhi, the congress' working committee adopted a resolution saying "the people of India should not allow themselves to be deflected from the right path, but should organize themselves and prepare for United effective action."

JUDD HEARING SLATED TODAY

Witnesses to Tell of Events Prior to Slaying

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 8. (US)—Winnie Ruth Judd, who came here a year ago to regain her health and who left three weeks ago for Los Angeles with the battered bodies of her two "girl friends" crammed in two trunks and a suitcase, faces Arizona justice tomorrow.

Circumstances surrounding the murders of Agnes A. Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson will be told for the first time tomorrow when an even dozen state witnesses take the stand against Mrs. Judd in her preliminary hearing on the double murder charge.

Although still hopeful that she will break down at the last minute and tell the story they believe to be true—that she had an accomplice in the murders—County Attorney L. J. Andrews and Sheriff J. R. McFadden late today declared themselves ready to proceed with the preliminary hearing.

In the tiny courtroom of Justice of the Peace Clarence E. Ice, the state will lay the foundation of the case which may send Mrs. Judd to the gallows.

Refused by Sweetheart, Divorcee Kills Herself

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8. (AP)—Mrs. Gertrude Merriken, 34, a divorcee, today shot and killed herself in a room in the Lord Baltimore hotel occupied by Huidreich Egli, a consulting engineer and her former employer, after he had refused her demand that they be instantly married.

The woman, a short time before, had left her 15-year-old son and her parents in another part of the city, telling them she was "going to church."

The engineer, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident several months ago, told the woman his health would not permit marriage. She then went into the bathroom, Egli told police, and a moment later he heard the report of the pistol.

FUND ASSURES ATOMIC TESTS

Hetty Green Millions to Aid Important Experiments

BOSTON, Nov. 8. (US)—Hetty Green's millions will make possible experiments which, technology experts hope may show scientists how to utilize the untrapped reservoirs of atomic energy.

These experiments, it is hoped, may teach the transmutation of metals, such as gold from dross, and make possible the production of 50,000,000 volts of direct electric current.

Col. E. H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, who was the richest woman in the world, has donated the use of his estate for the experiments.

President Carl T. Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, announced today that within a few months the experiments will begin under the direction of Dr. Robert J. Vande Graaf, whose production of 1,500,000 volts of "lightning current" was announced last night in New York to the amazement of scientists.

Tech experts said today that there is no question that Dr. Van de Graaf's apparatus will produce and store between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 volts of electric current.

Not only will this current be direct, like lightning, but, unlike lightning, it will flow steadily from the reservoirs which he will set up.

At Round Hill he will build towers, 20 feet high, and spheres, 15 feet in diameter, to manufacture and store this current.

"No one can be certain just what the apparatus will do, but we know that it opens up new fields for scientific research and there are a number of projects which have already been outlined for investigation," said President Compton today.

Other tech experts pointed out that the simple apparatus Dr. Van de Graaf built for producing 1,500,000 volts cost only $90, and consisted merely of two brass spheres two feet in diameter, two glass rods and two silk belts operated by a motor. The belts convey the electric charge to the spheres, where it is stored.

As an electric pressure of 1,500,000 volts is reached, sparks three feet long fly from the brass spherical terminals. At the green station, man-made lighting will dart when the 20,000,000 volt peak is attained.

The highest steady electric currents hitherto available for research work have not exceeded 600,000 volts.

Border Patrolman Slain by Brigands

ALPINE, Texas, Nov. 8. (AP)—James McGraw of Marfa, border patrolman, was wounded fatally when Mexican liquor runners ambushed officers above Presidio on the Rio Grande today.

McGraw was shot through the lungs.

The Mexicans fled into brush across the river when McGraw's three companions returned their fire.

Officers anticipated more trouble with the smugglers. They were believed to be members of the band which wounded Ware Hord, another partolman, recently.

At the time Hord was wounded, one Mexican was slain and another toppled into the Rio Grande, apparently wounded fatally.

S. S. CONTE GRANDE, at Sea, Nov. 8. (AP)—Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, en route to the United States, was occupied today in studying a mass of reports bearing on his approaching conversations with President Hoover relative to world problems.

He worked in a deck chair unmindful of the pitching of the liner which was skirting a storm and steaming in extremely rough waters for the ordinarily quiet mediterranean. He and Signora Grandi were pleased because they were proving good sailors in spite of wind and wave.

Husband Sentenced for Fighting the 'Other Man'

MODENA, Italy, Nov. 8. (US)—Asking another man's wife for a kiss is no crime but the husband's objection to it may be, the court here ruled.

The wife of Guilio Montanari, a wealthy landowner, called at Dr. Bizzochi's office for treatment. The doctor asked for a kiss which was refused. Signora Montanari told her husband of the incident and the latter attacked the doctor on the street.

The physician was exonerated while Montanari was given a suspended sentence of 30 days for disturbing the peace.

Party Leaders To Lay Strategy

is the economic situation, it is generally held. Most of the issues are linked with the problem of how to restore better business.

Both parties will wait until after President Hoover delivers his annual message to congress before taking definite positions on taxes, banking legislation, a public building program and other major problems. Sentiment however already has begun to shape up on these matters.

Both sides have been combing the internal revenue laws, with a view to ascertaining how they might jack up taxes to lower the treasury deficit. Many are of the opinion that a sales tax offers the best plan to increase revenues at this time with the least possible burden to the people.

On proposals for liberalizing the federal reserve act and otherwise assist banks with frozen assets, a bitter fight is foreshadowed. While both parties are desirous of doing something to help these banks, and release frozen assets, their views on what should be done are in conflict.

There will be a major fight for a vast public building program to relieve the unemployment situation.

Steps for further restriction of immigration and to deport more criminal aliens already are being made.

President Hoover will make an appeal for ratification of his one-year moratorium on allied war debts, but before congress gives its approval it was indicated the administration's foreign policy will be thoroughly debated.

Address On 'Foreign Aid' Features D.A.R. Meeting

Mrs. John Hampton, speaking on "Foreign Aid in the American Revolution," at the monthly luncheon program of Major Francis Grice chapter Daughters of the American Revolution held at the Forum clubhouse Saturday, gave a beautiful review of the Revolutionary period. "France," she stated, "was the first to stretch forth a helping hand to us." The aid from France secured through the mediation of Arthur Lee, living in London as a representative from Virginia and of Silas Doane, who later joined him, was vividly described. Due to their efforts, Mrs. Hampton said, French vessels landed in America 200 heavy guns, 4,000 tents, a large supply of small arms and clothing for 3,000 men.

Benjamin Franklin's fame, "more universal than that of Newton Voltaire or Frederic the Great," was eulogized by the speaker. Largely because of his efforts and through the interest of Vegennes, French foreign minister, France through her king acknowledged the independence of the United States directly after Burgoyne had surrendered.

Lafayette received a beautiful tribute because of the inborn love of liberty that made this nobelman fit out a ship at his own expense and come to America to serve until war was over. The Polish patriot Kosiusko and the other Polish nobleman, Count Pulaski; the German nobelman, Baron Steuber—all received praise.

"These are a few of the more prominent foreigners to whom America is indebted, Mrs. Hampton said in closing. "Many monuments over the country attest our gratitude. But these men need no monuments, for in the hearts of the American people, they are forever honored—not as aliens—but because of their identification in our war for freedom, as Americans in all save birth."

Mrs. Hampton apoke beautifully and without any notes.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Beauty is the sublimity that can raise common, every day existence to a high spiritual plane. And beauty may be found in phases too numerous to name.

Three singers enriching Wichita Falls in one week make one realize the beauty of a singing voice. I have known voices which in song could lift the soul to heaven but which in speaking, though beautifully modulated, had no divine essence of intonation.

A beautiful speaking voice is as wonderful a gift as a beautiful singing voice. Not that it may win fortune for its possessor, but that it is a heritage lost only in the grave and that remains in memory as a hauntingly beautiful thing.

To me, the things that clash on nerves, that drive me to rebellion, are put in the category describing that "other place" that is not heaven. And for heaven, I reserve peaceful quiet or sweet sounds; sunset evening and starlit nights; daffodils on cold spring days and crocus and snowdrops springing to life where snow has just melted.

Yes, heaven is all things beauti-ful. There may be a pipe organ playing strains of celestial music now and then; there may be a voice—such voices as I know—singing in mellow distances; everything will be harmony and every ear will be tuned to it.

On earth, voices are so often, ter-rible things. You answer the phone and hear a whining tone; so often such a tone is adopted after illness and kept for the bosom of one's family or for personal friends; the same voice in public becomes insipidly and tonelessly saccharine.

You hear a voice aggressively cheerful; a voice that rouses instinctive antagonism. For when you have toothache, what good does it do to hear of some one else who had it worse and got over it. So far as that goes, nothing is harder on a sufferer than when mentioning his suffering, some one immediately begins telling of a worse disease from which he suffers. One in pain, wants the monopoly on discussion of it.

Then, one hears on the phone, the brusque, impatient voice; I hear it sometimes addressed to P. B. X. operators and often when a gentleman—(or man) gets the wrong number—the receiver is slammed in place with a clash. My sympathy is with the operator, and I think the Lord will reserve a special punishment for such offenders. Perhaps they will tend the switchboards in Hades.

It comes back to where I started —the ineffable beauty of a throaty speaking voice, pitched in minor keys, carrying interest and sympathy in every chord.

Yes, beauty of face may fade with age and memory of vision does not last like that of sound. Do you not, at times, with the ringing of chimes or the tune of an old song or the sweep of a spring wind, feel yourself carried back to childhood?

So—in long, lonely years to come, a voice one loves will linger like music in memory; even when the grave has closed over the speaker, the sweet intonations of the voice that once warmed the heart will echo and warm it again.

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIDAY, Texas, Nov. 8.—Wichita Falls visitors assisted in an interesting benefit program given Friday evening in the Holliday school auditorium by the P.-T. A.

The program was opened with several pretty numbers on the saxophone and piano, Clifford Stegall and R. A. Brand playing saxophones and Miss Donchard accompanying.

G. A. Holloway, H. M. Simpson, Ted Mahan and Mr. Butts sang a beautiful quartet without accompaniment. Labitzky's lovely "Alpine Maid's Dream," was given as a violin solo by Miss Donchard with Miss Carney accompanying and Miss Carney followed with a brilliant number on the piano, "The Polish Dance," by Scharwenka.

Mrs. George Thorburn of Wichita Falls sang two numbers, "Where My Caravan Has Rested," and "Goin' Home," with Mrs. J. M. Hawley accompanist.

"Sun Up," dramatized in a charming manner by Mrs. Thomas Korn of Wichita Falls was the feature of the program. The scene of the three acts was a mountain cabin and Mrs. Korn's impersonation of each character in turn was marvelously realistic. Her acting and her lovely personality won the audience which filled the auditorium.

Mrs. C. A. Spragins To Give Review At Chinese Tea

Members of circle six of the Floral Heights Methodist W. M. S. will present artists of the city Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in one of the most interesting and unique programs of the season.

Helen Hunter, chairming in her Chinese costume, will open the program with readings.

Mrs. C. A. Spragins, whose addresses have been noted in the city for their vision and presentation, will give in two sections a review of Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth." During the interlude, Miss Harriett Bradley will sing.

A light refreshment plate will be served at the close of the program by members of the circle.

"The Good Earth," has probably been more discussed and more praised than any recent fiction. Pearl Buck, the author, has lived all her life in China except for the time she was in college in America; she has been a teacher in Nanking universities and still lives in that city. Through her vision of Chinese life, the saga of a peasant is given her readers. With Mrs. Spragin's sympathetic insight, an interesting afternoon is offered to the public. Only a small admission fee will be charged. The program will be given in the church parlors.

Elbert Hooper, assistant attorney general, left today for Lubbock to appear for the commission in a similar suit for injunction to restrain that agency from interfering with operation of trucks.

BURK RODEO DRAWS CROWD

Thousands Attend Trade Day Festival

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Nov. 8.—Thousands of visitors were guests of Burkburnett Saturday at the third monthly free rodeo and farmers trades day celebration.

One of the largest crowds ever seen in Burkburnett surrounded the rodeo grounds, entirely filling the bleachers, on the north and west sides and standing along the corral fences and on the tops of box cars standing on the siding of the Missourin-Kansas and Texas railroad adjacent to the arena.

Vernon to Set Date For Poultry Show In Meeting Friday

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, Nov. 8.—Detailed plans for the first annual poultry show to be held in Vernon since 1928 will be completed Friday, Nov. 13, at a meeting of Wilbarger County Poultry association committees at the chamber of commerce office. Members of the Vernon Rabbit and Cavy Breeders association are expected to cooperate in the plans for a joint showing.

Tentative dates have been fixed for Dec. 9-11, or Dec. 16-18, depending on arrangements with A. M. Stodel of Los Angeles, who is expected to judge the exhibition entries. Mr. Stodel will judge a poultry exhibition at Chicago early in December and is expected to return through Texas and may be available for the show here.

Motor trucks on Ohio farms have increased from 7,219 in 1920 to 39,201 in 1930.

The Republicans, the Democrats and Central Europe have attacked the Hoover-Laval debt plan. And Al Capone, with those federal liens against his property, probably wouldn't approve of it either.

Al Capone's bodyguard asked for mercy on the charge that he carried a loaded pistol into court during Al's trial. Maybe he just carried it as a plaything—a rattle.

Story of Two Boys

THE same editions of the newspapers that told how a 12-year-old boy in Washington had been sentenced to a life term in prison for murder also told of a year-old boy in Ohio who had just inherited upwards of one and three-quarter million dollars.

In that juxtaposition of two unrelated news items there is a volume of comment on the kind of civilization we have put together on the North American continent.

It is not necessary to go all the way with the determinists to realize that the chief villain in this Washington tragedy was a bad economic situation. As one of the court officials at the boy's trial remarked:

"His case is typical of the shattered home, diseased mind and poverty."

The youngster, in plain English, never had much of a chance in life. He missed his chance because of various things, but chiefly because the things that might have straightened him out would have cost more money than any one was able or cared to spend for him.

So, at 12, he is a murderer and a life-termer.

On the other hand, there is this fortunate little chap in Ohio. No one, certainly, will begrudge him his good luck; nor does his fortune make it in the least certain that he will turn out to be a first-class citizen. But the terribly impressive thing about it all is the fact that he starts with such an enormous advantage over the other boy. The cards have been stacked somehow. The odds are all in his favor; they were all against the Washington lad, from the moment that he drew his first breath of life.

Our society will be kind to the Ohio boy. It will have a good home for him, skillful teachers, a chance to play and grow and develop normally. It will be quick to nourish any divine possibilities he may display.

But for the other boy—a cell in a state penitentiary, for life.

No one person, no one group, is at fault. This dreadful contrast—it might rob you of a little sleep if you let yourself think about it—is simply part of American civilization. It is, furthermore, a fundamental part. How much longer are we going to be content with that kind of society?

"Fixing" Sports

THE autumn football season has not brought forward anything much funnier than the apparent revelation that someone has been trying to "fix" a big intercollegiate football game.

The gamblers have laid their filthy paws on many sports. Big league baseball once suffered from them. Wrestling has been under a shadow for years. There are plenty of unsavory rumors about boxing. Horse racing is in a similar class.

But no one who ever knew a college football player would dream of trying to corrupt a college football game. Those boys aren't playing for money or for fame. The spirit that sends them out on the field is intangible, hard to explain—and eternally beyond the reach of the fixer.

If someone really did try to promote crookedness in a college game, he must have been a singularly stupid sort of person.

Hoover's Navy Stand

THERE is probably little doube that the sentiment of the majority of Americans lines up with President Hoover in his argument with the officials of the navy league.

The league's desire to see the American navy made strong and kept at the highest pitch of efficiency is, of course, perfectly understandable and reasonable. But in its bitter attack on the president, the league seems to have revealed a brand of big-navyism that would make the navy a sacrosanct institution beyond the reach of budget chiefs or the president himself.

It might be fine for the United States to maintain the world's greatest navy. But funds are scarce this year, and every government department must take a cut. The navy must get along on less money, and there is little sense in accusing the president of "abysmal ignorance" simply because he insists on that fact.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Hmmm, I wonder . . . I mean, I wonder if I'll be able to handle it . . . Holy smokes! . . . Four broadcasts every week and the column every day! . . . Never saw so many lawyers in my life—or executives! . . . Some of them are still in my hair . . . How can anybody be so technical? . . . If an "and" is left out of a "whereas" or a "to-wit" isn't in the right place they go crazy . . . So what happens? . . . So you sit there for hours while they fix it . . . And then talk, talk, talk and talk until the stenog types the darn thing all over again! . . . Oh, well . . . I'd rather mingle with lawyers under those conditions—but they are all such argument-starters and headache-givers! . . . No wonder Jimmy Walker said that . . . I mean when he said he wished that he could be himself again . . . And go places without bothering about this and that . . . Look what happened at the Ed Wynn premiere . . . An army of autographounds surrounded him during the intermission, and to be a regular guy he jotted down his signature when all he wanted was a chance to puff a ciggie . . . Then along came a bunch of people who knew him when and he was liberal with his money . . . He didn't mind that, I know, but that's what he gets for being mayor . . . He once said he was fed up with it all . . . Mebbeso . . . But when the day comes and he is hidden in the crowd—he'll miss it all . . . It was Chesterfield's idea that no man deserves reputation who does not desire it, and Plutarch said, "Man's applause is but a transient dream."

Wonder if it is true that Jane Meager is secretly betrothed to that flier's brother? . . . She's an attractive person . . . I thought Woolworth Donahue was the steady . . . They tell me her tribe has more coin than all the governments now have in Europe . . . Her coming-out event will be the outstanding affair of the social season . . . It ought to be a swell party and I'm glad I'm not on the invitation list, for nothing is so phoney and so uncomfortable as a starched shirt . . . I see where that mind reader who was getting away with this and that several months ago in New York has finally met his waterloo . . . When I was kidding him in the paper I never mentioned his name . . . But he assumed (oh, those consciences) that I meant him . . . But now the society of American magicians wishes me to publish the fact that he was unanimously expelled on Oct. 21st! . . . Gee, I'm glad to hear that Ed Wynn's new show is that good . . . They tell me it went big at the opening . . . I couldn't make it, what with this and that to do . . . But Wynn deserves a hot break . . . He spent a mess of coin putting hundreds of people to work and overcame all the obstacles put in his way by all those experts . . . That refreshing and clean odor on West 45th St. is there only because Ed Wynn is the only guy in the business who refused to put one line, gag or sitch-ee-ay-shun in a show to make it foul.

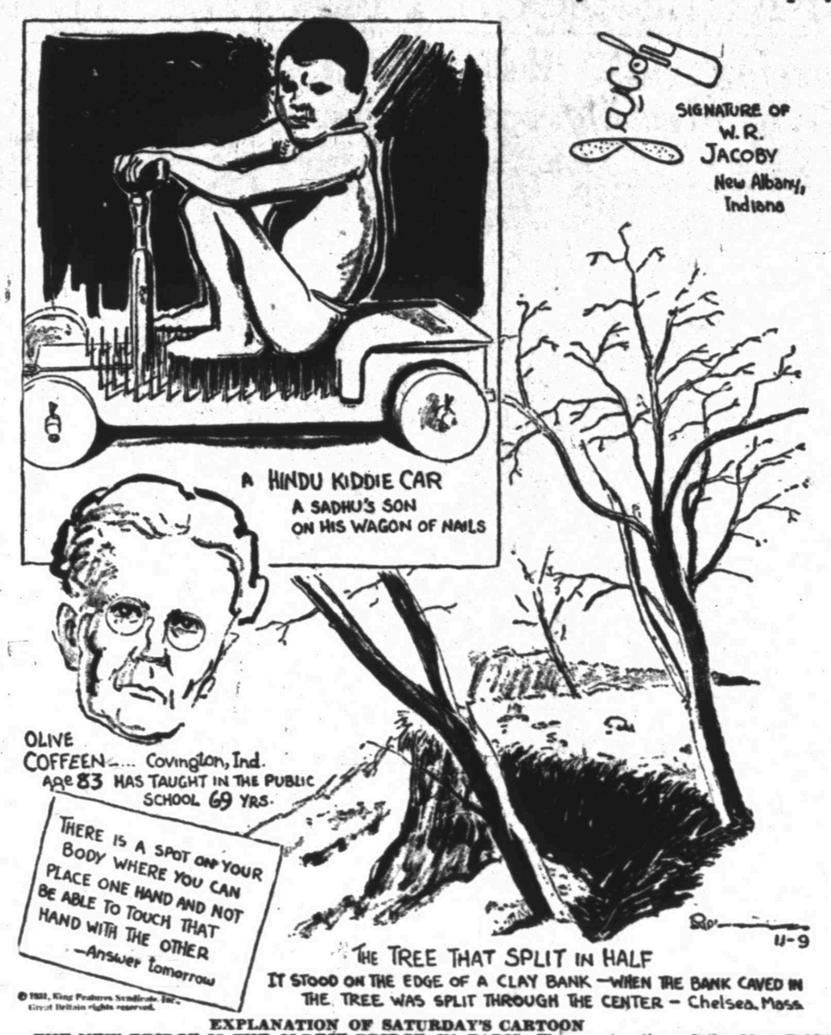

Funny about Peter Arno's break in the week-end theatrical sections . . . Peter, who is unquestionably a great artist and caricaturist, drew his own drawings on his new show for the papers . . . And he also drew second position because of a guy named Shakespeare, whose "Hamlet" arrives the same week . . . Well, if Stimson can make a blunder so can Mrs. Winchell's darling baby boy . . . I called him "President" Laval on the air last week—and how the mail came in reminding me that I did! . . . But Mr. Stimson ought to know better . . . He's the secretary of state and he's supposed to know all about foreign affairs and so forth . . . So what did he do in his talk at the Rivoli? . . . He fumbled, also, and instead of calling Laval a premier he called him president . . . So now I feel better . . . Well, hush mah mouth! . . . I never thought I'd live to see the day! . . . Bob Newcomb, who used to write such sophisticated verse for my col'm, now sits down at a teypewriter with a bottle of gin within reach and pounds out tales for tots, such as "Togo, the Teddy Bear" . . . And he's trying to keep it from his friends, haw!

That's probably what keeps me interested in Broadway . . . I mean hearing things like that about the Conkwrights . . . Marie and her husband, who parted after 12 years, and were seen in public with other companions, are now traipsing together again! . . . If you try to keep up with people and their erratic traits—you can go a little crazy . . . All I want from the Conkwrights, and the likes of them, is readable copy . . . Good old Walt Kingsley, Broadway's most interesting character at one time, would shudder if he saw Conky's address book . . . Walter had what was said to be the most complete and largest list of gal's names and addresses of anyone in the world . . . It was nothing compared to Conky's . . . It's the size of a phone book! . . . He says he jots them down so that when he needs a model he can call on them . . . I think I'll pass along the complete and simple explanation of the Einstein theory . . . If you were to live forever and had an infinitely powerful telescope and you kept looking forever, you eventually would see the back of your neck.

I like that about Martin, the Waffle Man . . . He takes care of and feeds broken down terpischorines who are out of work and get hungry . . . He accepts their I. O. U.'s—and the gals promise to pay when they can . . . I oughta print something about the crook who swiped that suitcase from Ward Arnold's car in front of the Chanin theater on the Sabbath . . . The valise contained every suit Arnold owned, and he is willing to reward the thief with more coin than he can possibly get for the goods in a hockshop . . . Besides, the clothes couldn't fit the average person—Arnold's only 6 feet tall! . . . Funny line of Charlie Butterworth's in the movie, "The Bargain" . . . Charlie wears such large and funny collars . . . He alibis that he wears such large collars because he is expecting a goitre! . . . Heheheh . . . And I'll bet that Al Schwartz contributer thinks he's kidding when he submits as a simile: "Peaceful as an insane asylum to a retired columnist."

Well, it's a relief now that Gloria is well again . . . I love it when people try to comfort you by saying not to worry when a child has a fever of one point less than 105 for days! . . . They tell you it means nothing to a youngster . . . Really? . . . Try and sleep, eat or gather paragraphs when something you adore is limp and in pain . . . Good old Dr. Kerley . . . He brought her around again—just the way he did when she was 3 months old and she was so sick . . . At the time June didn't tell me Gloria was seriously ill . . . So I wouldn't worry, she said later . . . It was a swell way I found it out, though . . . I'll never forget it so long as I live . . . It was about 8 bells and I was just coming home, all messy with the fumes of night clubs and dives and the people that frequent them . . . And as I walked into the apartment the day nurse was relieving the night one, who had her bag all packed in her hand . . . "What's the idea?" . . . the day nurse whispered to the other gal . . . "Shhh," she replied, "I don't think they'll need me any more." . . . That's one pain I hope I never experience again . . . But we all fooled that nurse, by golly! . . . That is, the greatest baby doctor in the world did! . . . I can see what would happen if I got sentimental and jotted all that down in the paper . . . The army of fooeys would anonymously write me: "He's bringing his kids on for bows!" . . . That would worry me a lot, that would . . . It always does.

EXPLANATION OF SATURDAY'S CARTOON

THE NEW BRIDGE IS THE OLDEST BRIDGE IN PARIS—The construction of the New Bridge (Pont Neuf) in Paris was begun May 31, 1578, in the presence of King Henry III, and it was completed in 1604 in the presence of King Henry VI. At the time of the construction, Paris had only two other bridges, the Pont au Change and the Petit Pont, both wooden structures which were destroyed by fire shortly after.

The Pont Neuf was the center of Paris gay life in the first centuries of its existence, and it was said in those days that "you can always see on the bridge a white horse, a lady, and a monk."

THE GIRL WHO WON

By May Christie

Young and vivacious Nollie Day, public stenographer at an exclusive New York hotel, is befriended by the wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. One evening, Nollie goes to the theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Later in the evening she refrains from repeating her explanation for fear that Tony would lose interest when he learned the truth. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Disbelieving the report, he comes to the hotel. He looks at Nollie without recognition but she believes it is because he has discovered her masquerade. Before Nollie can reach him, he disappears. Nollie secures a new position as secretary to Jack Brilling of Galbraith & Co. Miss Galbraith, Brilling's fiancee is jealous when Brilling takes Nollie to dinner and warns Nollie against overstepping. Brilling tells Nollie he loves her.

Miss Galbraith enters the office just as Nollie frees herself from Brilling's embrace. Nollie is discharged.

Mrs. Judson gives Nollie a letter Tony had written her abroad. Intending to help Nollie and set the matter straight, she phones Tony to learn he has left on a vacation.

Mrs. Judson asks Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch.

Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane.

"I think I begin to understand it all," gravely said Tony O'Brien.

They were sitting on the moonlit porch of Nollie's room. The fitful music of the orchestra came to them.

"I had no right to receive you so. I'm sorry. I'm sorry at the very heart of me," said Nollie Day, "and now you'll never believe me again."

Tony said nothing for a moment. He stared into space. Then he drew a long breath, and asked: "And what about Jack Brilling?"

Nollie had known that this would come.

"I worked in his office, as you know. One night, when I'd worked late, I did a foolish, an indiscreet thing—I took supper with him."

"Where?"

"In a little restaurant on the corner of Broad street. It came about quite casually. I didn't know he was engaged—or anything."

"So?"

"His fiancee heard about it. She came in the office next day. She was—angry with me."

"Without any reason?"

Nollie hesitated, flushed again.

Her thoughts reverted to Jack's offer—the 'little love nest.' . . .

"There was no reason—on my side. Please, Tony, believe me!"

He hesitated. He looked at the white, sweet purity of her face. Suddenly he felt he would be a cad not to trust Nollie.

"I know that Madeleine made a scene," he said, "I knew that for months and months she'd been jealous as the dickens of any woman who came within a mile of Brilling."

"There was no cause whatever to be jealous of me, Tony. I never had any designs upon him."

"But you resigned your job?"

"Well, call it that. She made it impossible for me to stay. But I do think—" Nollie smiled with a certain pathetic bravery, "I made my exit with flying colors."

That touched his heart. He said, on a quick impulsive note, "You're a brave little girl, and it strikes me we men are mostly a lot of rotters."

The guests had gone. Tony, Mrs. Judson and Nollie sat by the fireside.

Rhoda had motored over to the Galbraith place with Madeleine. In making this departure, Rhoda had her own motive.

Save her face. Don't have the laugh on her. Tony had proposed to and been accepted by this little upstart of a secretary!

Ted White's plot had failed. Watever he had tried to do, he had been foiled. He had departed from the ball early in the evening.

Mrs. Judson had announced the news toward the conclusion of the ball. When Rhoda had shown intense surprise, Mrs. Judson had snubbed her.

"For the love of Mike, do try to be a sport. If you act otherwise, they'll only think that you are jealous."

That had gone home. It had been true. Rhoda wasn't a woman of the world for nothing.

"Sour grapes" everybody would think it, if she tried to make trouble for this girl and Tony O'Brien.

They all knew she'd had "a pash" for the young Irishman.

Best carry the matter off high-handedly.

Rhoda was nobody's fool, she told herself, and she wouldn't give the cats cause to say she had been "jilted."

"The wedding shall be from here," announced Mrs. Judson in her clear, determined voice, "and I shall invite everybody and we shall have a grand celebration."

"No, please. Let it be quiet," said Nollie earnestly.

Tony echoed her wish.

Their wedding day would be their own great day. Why should they have a lot of curious spectators?

Jinny Judson finally gave in . . . or rather, compromised.

She—and an old beau of her's who was arriving from Europe and would visit her ranch—would be the witnesses.

Nollie was in a marvelous dream of happiness.

Love! It had come to her at last! The greatest miracle in life had happened to her.

She would be worthy of that love. Highly and holy thoughts encompassed her.

Rhoda Vane had gone. With a proud smile on her face, and false congratulations.

"D'you know, she and Madeleine Galbraith had a plot against you in conjunction with that little rat of a Ted White?" said Jinny Judson.

Now Nollie hadn't said a word to any one about Ted White's intrusion in her room the night of the big party, nor of his exit from the same, considerably knocked about by Tony.

So why speak now? Let sleeping dogs lie! Wasn't that a sensible proverb?

Yvonne, Rhoda's French maid, had repaired the rip in the seam of the Du Barry gown.

Yvonne sewed well, and she was fond of Nollie.

"Whatever plot they had—if it is so—didn't come off—and so let's forget it all," said Nollie to Tony.

Tony and Nollie were married on a glorious, sunny day, with the light filigreeing down on them through the birch and pine tops.

Nollie listened in a wrapt, sweet dream to the clergyman's words.

Oh! beautiful the marriage service was! She would be worthy of it all—of this wonderful Tony!

The greatest thing in the world had come to her.

She was born anew, or—after still—she'd never lived before. Glorious vistas were opening before her.

"Do you take this woman for your lawful wife . . . to have and to hold, till death do you part?"

The words of the marriage service were a sanctimony.

"Nollie . . . my little wife!" Tony whispered when he had set the ring upon her finger.

"My husband!" breathed Nollie, very low.

And then they kissed each other.

Q.—How fast do ducks and geese fly?—T. R.

A.—Many conflicting reports have been made. Since the advent of the automobile and airplane, it is possible to time them more accurately. Ducks and geese do not usually travel at a rate of more than 40 miles an hour. A duck hawk has been timed, however, which flew at a speed of 165 to 180 miles an hour when chasing prey. Canada geese were timed at 44 miles an hour and a brant at 45 miles an hour.

Q.—Can any one procure postal savings bonds?—W. W.

A.—Any one over ten years of age may make postal savings deposits and in sums as low as one dollar, but no one may have on deposit more than $2,500. The deposit bears 2 per cent interest. On Jan. 1 and July 1 each year 20-year postal savings bonds that bear 2½ per cent interest are issued by the treasury for purchase by the postal savings certificate holders. Any holder may subscribe for the bonds but can pay for them only with postal savings certificates.

Q.—What is the significance of the organization known as the Society of the Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede?—W. C. C.

A.—The society was organized in 1915 by Mrs. Robert G. Hogan of Catonsville, Md., who conceived the idea of an organization for women similar to a men's organization the Baronial Order of Runnymede which was organized but undeveloped on account of our entry into the world war. The membership is limited to those who can trace their ancestry in a direct line to a baron who in the year 1215 A. D. compelled the signing of the Magna Charta by King John at Runnymede. The organization is American.

The Ingrowing Toe Nail

It is almost impossible to find an adult foot with normally shaped nails. Usually deformed nails cause no trouble but in the case of the big toe, an ingrowing nail may cause pain and annoyance all out of proportion to the size of the nail. An ingrowing nail, occurring as it frequently does on the big toe, interferes with walking. When you stop to consider that in an ordinary days work you may take over 18,000 steps, you can see why an ingrowing toe nail by pressing on the sensitive nerves at the root and side of the nail causes so much pain.

At first an ingrowing toe nail merely causes a slight tenderness. Next a definite pain occurs and every step is torture. If neglected for some space of time, the nail may cause the flesh to become so sore that proud flesh forms. The soft flesh at the side of the nail becomes swollen and ulcerated and may discharge a foul smelling fluid. When advanced to this stage it will take much time and treatment to get the toe back to normal.

When most people feel an ingrowing nail, they are inspired to perform exactly the wrong kind of treatment. They get the scissors and immediately cut away the edge of the nail, thinking that this will relieve the pressure of the edge of the nail on the sore flesh. This trimming away of the edges or corners of the nail is one thing which should never be done for as the edges grow back in again they are thrust into the flesh and cause more trouble than before. Nevertheless, there is a right way to trim the nails which will help give relief.

By ingrowing toe nail we mean that the corners of the nail are thrust into the flesh at the side, the flesh usually rising into a little ridge and becoming red, swollen, and sore.

The main cause of ingrowing toe nails is found in wearing the wrong kind of a shoe. A shoe with a narrow, pointed toe, or a shoe too tight and too short will press the delicate flesh over against the corner of the nail. Even wearing stockings too small will cause a tendency to this trouble. Another cause is cutting the edge of the toe nail in the wrong way. A toe nail should always be cut with an even curve across the top. It should not be pedicured down the edges as is the finger nail, but should be cut to form more of a straight line. You should be careful never to cut the toe nails too short. Keeping the big toe nail long enough and cutting evenly across prevents any gouging into the flesh at the corner. It is also important to wear shoes which are roomy enough so that the top of the shoe does not press down on the sore toe. If you will begin now to form the habit of cutting your toe nails right and wearing the correct shoes, you will save much foot misery in years to come.

Usually the proper trimming and the right shoes will do away with this extremely irritating form of foot trouble. In some cases it is advisable to place af ew strands of cotton under the edge of the nail. In severe cases where any sort of sore has formed you should consult a chiropodist. Severe cases may have to have the whole length of the nail including the root removed near the edge. Needless to state this should only be done by a foot specialist because of the danger of infection.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Powder or Oil for Itching

Question—Miss Viva S. asks: "Can you tell me any suggestions as to how to overcome a terrible itching I suffer from every time I take a bath? For one of two hours after a bath I can do nothing but scratch myself all over with both hands."

Answer—An itching sensation often follows the use of a hot bath which removes some of the natural oil from the skin. During cool weather an itching may come from not thoroughly drying the skin and it becomes chafed. Try using a rough turkish towel vigorously and when thoroughly dry, either dust yourself with talcum powder or rub some bland vegetable oil into the skin.

Licorice Root Candy

Question—Mrs. I. K. B. inquires: "Is there starch in the licorice root candy? I am very fond of it, but was wondering."

Answer: The black licorice sticks familiar to the consumer consist, when pure, of the condensed juice of the crushed, boiled roots of the licorice plant, mixed with a little starch to prevent it from melting in warm weather. The bulk of the licorice rolls and paste of domestic consumption is manufactured in this country from the imported dried root, the principal sources of which are Portugal, Spain, Italy Transcaucasia and Turkey.

How to Gain Weight

Question—Hal asks: "If starch, sugar and fat should be restricted, how can one gain weight without taking a milk diet.

Answer—The best way to gain weight is to get yourself in good health after which your weight will gradually adjust itself to the normal. I do not approve of any plan of stuffing to gain weight, as such diet treatment usually results in bad consequences.

DISTRICT 2 TEAMS PREPARE FOR ARMISTICE DAY BATTLES

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED THOMPSON

Coach Albert Acker of the Olney Cubs was very much a relieved man after the Crowell game last Friday. Even as it was, with his Cubs victors by a seven-point margin, Herr Acker had several strands of grey hair in his dome, for his Cubs had been treated mighty roughly by the Crowell clan.

Too much praise cannot be heaped upon the Cubs for having the scoring punch required to make a touchdown against Crowell; and too much praise cannot be showered upon the Crowell bunch for holding Olney's mighty offense to a one-touchdown victory.

Accurate figures on yardage gained from scrimmage by the backs of both teams, are not, unfortunately, available. But from the play-by-play account of the game we can get a rough estimate of what the main cogs in both teams did through the line of his opponent.

These figures, inaccurate as they are, indicate that A. J. Graves, the burly quarterback of the Cubs, was the big boy on the Olney side. The Crowell line, however, never did weaken enough to let him get off for a sensational long run, and Graves, as you know, is accustomed to making great long runs. The longest run he got off against Crowell was for 13 yards, and he was forced to skirt around end to do that. Graves amassed a total of about 60 yards from scrimmage, more than any other ball carrier in the game. He did it because he had the physical power to buck and plunge for one short gain after another. He had the power to make two-yard, four-yard and six-yard dents in the Crowell line. These gains eventually amounted to a great deal.

The longest run of the game from scrimmage was made by Duckworth. It was a 20-yard run, and was also made around end. Duckworth got off a 10-yard gain through the line, and that was about the best the Olney team could do against the Crowell forward wall. In all, Duckworth averaged approximately 44 yards from scrimmage.

Roy Mullins was the big ground gainer from scrimmage for the Crowell team. He got off one 10-yard dash through the Olney line and a succession of smaller runs to bring his total somewhere around 40 yards. Crews Cooper was not used on line bucks as much as had been anticipated. Apparently he was relied on to catch passes and return punts. He did both in a highly creditable manner. Dick Todd ranked next to Mullins in gains from scrimmage, with about 24 yards. He made one 10-yard gain through the line. Lorain Carter, substituting for Middleton in the backfield, carried the ball only twice so far as my records reveal. He lost a yard one time and gained it back the next time he got an assignment, so he at least came out even.

The figures of mine, which, we repeat, are not to be considered accurate, indicate that Olney gained a total of about 126 yards from scrimmage, while Crowell netted 78. Even if the figures are not accurate, they approximate the truth and show the power of the backs and the strength of the opposing lines. A total of 126 yards is not such a great deal of ground gained, considering Olney's strength. Crowell's 78 yards is rather meager. The importance of Mullins to the Crowell cause is clearly seen when it is realized that he gained more than half of Crowell's total yardage from scrimmage. When he went out, Crowell lost a mighty fine player.

The strength of both lines not only held the yardage from scrimmage to a low total for both teams, but resulted in both sides taking to the air. Most of the ground gaining was done by this method.

We considered the game a very ragged one, but reasons for the raggedness are not hard to find, with one exception. O'Brien, Olney center, got off several bad passes to his backfielders. That is not the way O'Brien usually plays.

The other fumbles on both sides are easily traced. Graves kept his Olney followers in a constant sweat by his inability to hold the ball. He fumbled many times. The reason was his injured wrist, which would not allow him a firm grasp of the leather. Rue and Elmore were guilty of one or two fumbles, due more to over-eagerness than anything else.

Middleton, Crowell center, had a bad day. His passes were atrocious in some cases. But Middleton had been playing in the backfield all year, and was not in practice. He was called upon to relieve Aliee only a few days before the game. He did about as well as could be expected.

Both teams were offside continually. This we also ascribe to over-eagerness. They were too anxious to get going.

Despite all these faults, it was a great game, and the Rambler, for one, wouldn't have missed it. Even the trip up there and back was great. But there was a special reason for that. The old man rode up with the Rev. W. H. Townsend, pastor of the First Baptist church at Olney. With us were Grace Stroud, last year a yell leader at Olney High; Hazel Ellis, sister of Clyde Ellis, Olney's right tackle; and Jewel Smith of Olney, who said after the game that Truman Elmore played a great game and maybe one or two other Olney boys did too, but she didn't have time to keep up with just everybody!

Olney's victory was witnessed by an array of former stars at Olney High. Present on the sidelines were Bert Dunnigan, quarterback of the Olney team of 1927; Barney Dees, who played tackle on the 1929 team; Bing Wells, guard on the 1928 team; Scott Wix, halfback on the 1929 team; Otto Ellis, tackle on the team of 1928; Lefty Greer, halfback on the 1929 eleven; Speedy Sullivan, guard on the 1929 team; and Ox West, who played end last year.

Of the whole crew, only the Olney team of which Dunnigan played has been defeated in district three in four years. (Dunnigan's outfit, then coached by Othello Herm, lost the last game of the 1927 season to Seymour (imagine that!). The score was 13 to 0.

TITLE SCRAP AT VERNON

Childress and Electra in Cellar Skirmish

While the Wichita Falls Coyotes were earning a ragged 26 to 19 victory over the district seven Gainesville High school Leopards last week, the other four members of district No. 2, class A, were pounding away in practice sessions in anticipation of crucial Armistic day battles.

There will be little peace in this district on the day the nation and the world celebrates the signing of a peace pact that ended another kind of war. Four scrapping elevens will be whaling away, two of them contending for the championship, and two of them battling to keep out of the cellar.

The game that bids fair to end the district race will be staged at Vernon, where the Lions meet the Quanah Indians. A Quanah victory would leave only Childress in the path to the throne, and the Childress Bobcats have yet to win a game.

The Bobcats, on the same day, will be fighting the Electra Tigers at Electra. Neither has scored a victory this season, and Wednesday's game will be a fight between the two elevens to stay out of the dungeon.

The Coyotes of Wichita Falls will be active Armistice day, but not within the conference. They are booked to play the powerful Northside High school eleven of Fort Worth on the local gridiron.

Quanah is the overwhelming favorite to give the Lions of Vernon a trimming in the battle between the two undefeated teams, but Coach Heine Weir and his Lions are determined to put up a scrap that may reverse the dope. As for the Electra-Childress game, the dope generally favors Electra.

INJURIES BESET VERNON TEAM

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, Nov. 8.—The Vernon High school Lions will go through a final hard scrimmage session Monday afternoon to be followed by a light workout Tuesday in preparation to stop the title drive of the Quanah Indians Wednesday. The game will be played at the City Park gridiron starting at 3 p. m. School officials are expecting an attendance of 3,000 basing their prediction on advance ticket sales and increasing interest in both camps.

The Quanah Tribe is favored from every viewpoint, but there are some fans who believe the Indians have reached the zenith of the most meteoric season of wins in the Hardeman county school's history. The Lions are in a measure crippled for the game, with the first string quarterback, Jimmie Lutz, nursing a sprained ankle. If the injury does not heal by Wednesday the signal barking will be handled by Woodrow Smith, fullback, with Edwin Garner as a reserve.

In addition, Reed, reserve guard, and Parker, first string end, are likely to be on the bench. Reed with an arm sprain and Parker with an akle injury.

The game is attracting wide interest throughout district No. 2, with the Lions and Redskins as the only undefeated elevens in the sector. The contest is regarded as a possible classic with years of rivalry adding to the attraction. Ample color will be afforded with pep squads of both schools to be in uniform and accompanied by bands. Novelty stunts will be offered at the half by both squads.

Quanah school, city and chamber of commerce officials have been invited to attend the game by the Vernon Chamber of Commerce and every effort will be made by Vernon sportsmen to make the visit of Quanah fans to the city a pleasant one.

Kansas Aggies' Hopes Ruined

Iowa State Eliminates Title Contenders

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 8 (UP)—The Iowa State and Nebraska Cornhuskers were one step nearer the Big Six conference championship today after the Cyclone's upset victory Saturday aver the Kansas Aggies and Nebraska's defeat of Iowa in a non-titular game.

The margin of a kick, Iowa State winning, 7 to 6, defeated the Kansas Aggies and sent glimmering their well-founded early season hopes of winning the Big Six without a loss. Nebraska whipped Iowa, the Big Ten, 7 to 0. Oklahoma gave Kansas her third consecutive conference defeat, 10 to 0. Missouri defeated Drake in a non-conference game Friday night.

Games this week-end:

Nebraska vs. Kansas State, at Manhattan.

Kansas vs. Washington, at St. Louis, (x).

Missouri vs. Oklahoma, at Columbia.

Iowa State vs. Drake, at Ames, x. xDenotes non-conference.

If Nebraska can defeat the Aggies, the Cornhuskers and Iowa State will meet at Lincoln on Nov. 21 to decide the championship.

In winning, the Iowa State eleven thrust back numerous Aggie scoring threats and again relied on the toe of Dick Grefe. Grefe defeated Oklahoma only a week before with a place kick. Eldon Auker, giant Aggie back, ran the length of the field for the Kansan's touchdown—and then failed to kick the goal.

A 47-yard run by Bill Dunlap and a difficult field goal by Captain Guy Warren, both in the fourth quarter, gave Oklahoma here well-earned victory over Kansas. The teams battled on even terms for the first three periods.

The Nebraska line functioned with power and precision to best back the Iowa invasion. Nebraska made 15 first downs, the Iowans four. Nebraska scored in the third period and then was content to sit back and play defensive ball, keeping Iowa back in her own territory throughout the remainder of the game.

Altus And Hollis Scrap For Gridiron Crown Wednesday

Altus Gang Ready for Title Tilt With Hollis

The high school football race in the Southwest Oklahoma conference will reach a climax Armistice day when Hollis and Altus, both undefeated, clash at Altus. Above are a few huskies of the Altus team. Reading left to right, those standing are Coach Frank Crider, J. R. Harper, J. P. Hensley, Harry Ellis, James Troy Moore, Kenneth Blackstone, Kenneth Little, Owen Bryce, Buddy Creed, Dick Lawrence and Assistant Coach Clyde Flemming.

District 3 Leaders Draw 'Breathers' This Week; Burk Meets Archer City

Though thrills aplenty are yet in the offing, the class B race in district No. 3 this week will offer nothing to compars with last week's neck-and-neck battles, which will live for long in the memories of gridiron fans of this section.

The climax of this year's competition for district honors was reached Friday at Crowell, when Olney's Cubs eked out a 7 to 0 decision over Coach Grady Graves' Wildcats in a game that promises to go down in interscholastic league history as one of the class B classics of all time.

The greatness of both teams, indeed, was not realized until after the final gun had sounded. Over 2,000 people, the largest football crowd ever packed into Crowell's field, saw two determined elevens scrap and fight for every advantage, but the crowd was not aware that these same scrappers were giving everything they had under the worst of all possible physical conditions.

Wildcat Back Injured

Neither Coach Graves of Crowell nor Coach Albert Acker of Olney wishing to make any sort of alibi before the game, it was not learned until it was all over that some of the main plugs of both teams were badly crippled. It was a well-known fact that Mitchell Allee was not in the Crowell lineup because of injuries, but the fans did not know that Roy Mullins, star halfback of Crowell, played the greater part of the game in constant pain from a bad ankle. It was not until he was literally carried off the field that his condition was realized. When he finally was forced out late in the third period, it marked the first time he had failed to complete a game this season.

The Wildcats were further handicapped by the work of a center who was not in shape to handle the job. Middleton, Crowell fullback, took over Allee's job when the latter went out in the week, and although he played the position regularly all of last season, a few days remaining before the crucial game with Olney were not enough to round him into a center capable of doing his best. He made many bad passes to the backfielders. Had Allee not been injured, Middleton would have been available for his regular ball-carrying post, and doubtless would have given his team more scoring punch. As it was, Mullins caught the burden of the ball-carrying job, and when he went out of the game, Crowell lost much of its offensive as well as defensive strength.

Cubs Crippled Up

As for the Cubs, those stalwart victors stalked off the field ready candidates, several of them, for an ambulance ride to a hospital. A. J. Graves, chunky quarterback, was wrapped in tape from head to foot throughout the contest, although all the fans could see was a little smearing of tape on his left wrist. The fact is that Graves had a bum ankle and shoulder, and the wrist injury almost threatened to keep him from getting any kind of grip on the ball. As it was he made fumble after fumble, and kept the Olney gang of rooters in a constant sweat. His ankle injury detracted from his driving power. Still another Olney casualty at the start of the game was Captain Duckworth, whose right shoulder was encased in several pounds of rubber doughnuts and sponges as the result of a recent injury. And in spite of that he got off some of the prettiest passes many fans ever expect to see.

Both teams were, indeed, badly crippled, and in no shape for such a championship tussle. It so happened that the Olney bunch had the more stamina, and could stand a lot more punishment than the lighter Crowell boys. The Olney boys after the game were not exactly spry enough to jump over a housetop, but they were in much better shape than the Crowell players, most of whom were completely worn to a frazzle. But they went down fighting!

Last week was a tough week, indeed. Olney's close victory was not the only one. Burkburnett and Megargel mixed at Megargel last Tuesday to play off a postponed game from the week before. Burkburnett marched off with a 8 to 0 victory, the result of a touchdown and a safety, both of which came after Megargel punts had been blocked. Megargel came out even in the week's warfare, however, for they defeated Munday Friday by the close score of 6 to 0. The game was played at Munday, and was a real thriller from beginning to end.

Leaders Get Breathers

With only four days of rest, the boys will be called to go after it again Wednesday, Armistice day. Fortunately, both Crowell and Olney draw "breathers." Seymour will play at Olney and Munday will play at Crowell. Had either of the two teams been assigned more powerful opposition, they would have had a tough time, indeed, in their crippled condition.

The best Armistice day game promises to be Burkburnett's meeting with the Wildcats at Archer City. Burkburnett recently has shown plenty of stuff, and should give Cooper's men a real battle.

The standing:

Team—	G.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
Olney	4	4	0	0	1.000
Crowell	5	4	1	0	.800

MASONIC BOYS GET TOUGH

District 4 Class B Leader Ties Central High

Last week's conference race in district No. 4, class B, was marked by Weatherford's overwhelming 61 to 6 victory over Jacksboro, which landed the Weatherford boys in a four-way tie for second place, but the game that put fear in the hearts of other contenders was Masonic Home's feat in holding the powerful class A Central High school eleven of Fort Worth to a 13 to 13 tie.

The Masons thus demonstrated their strength after Bridgeport had held them to a one-touchdown victory the week before. While the battle with Central High had no bearing on the conference race, it gave other members of the district something to ponder over.

Two other games in the district last week offered good entertainment to the customers, Newcastle edged out a 13 to 0 victory over Saint Jo, while Decatur whipped Bellevue, 25 to 0.

Nocona's invasion of Graham on Armistice day will feature this week's card. There has long been a keen rivalry between the two towns. Masonic Home is scheduled to play Bowie, Bridgeport is pitted against Graford and Saint Jo is scheduled to meet Decatur. The place and dates of these games had not been announced.

Masonic Home remains the only undefeated team in the district, with four victories. Tied for second place are Weatherford, Graham, Nocona and Bowie. Of the four, Weatherford and Graham loom as the strongest, and from present indications one or the other will meet the Masons of Fort Worth for the championship.

The standing:

Teams—	G.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
Masonic Home	4	4	0	0	1.000
Weatherford	4	3	1	0	.750
Graham	4	3	1	0	.750

Graford	3	1	2	0	.333
Saint Jo	4	1	3	0	.250

This Week's Schedule

Nocona at Graham (Armistice day).
Masonic Home at Bowie.
Bridgeport vs. Graford.
Saint Jo vs. Decatur.

Last Week's Results

Weatherford 61, Jacksboro 6.

NATIONAL GRID RACE NARROWS

Only 10 Major Elevens Yet Unbeaten

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Standing out boldly in the national football pack today were two teams from the mid-West three from the South, three from the East and one each from the Southwest and Far West.

There will be few, if any, dissenters as to the top-flight ranking of Notre Dame and Northwestern; Tulane, Georgia and Tennessee; Harvard, Cornell and Syracuse; Southern Methodist and St. Mary's of Oakland, Calif. All are unbeaten, although Notre Dame and Northwestern fought to a scoreless tie earlier in the season.

Ramblers Go Wild

Notre Dame gave a convincing demonstration of power yesterday in romping through Penn's previously unbeaten arry, 49 to 0, and Northwestern, after trailing at 14 to 0 at one stage, came back with a rush to tumble Minnesota, 32 to 14, and virtually clinch the Big Ten championship.

Georgia invaded the East for the second time and nosed out New York university, 7 to 6, on Buster Mott's 97-yard run in the third period and a successful try for point by "Catfish" Smith. Tulane buried Auburn's strong eleven under a 27 to 0 count while Tennessee, third of the undefeated Southern conference teams, laced Carson Newman, 31 to 0.

Only Barry Wood's pass to Hageman with four minutes to play and his successful dropkick for extra point gave Harvard a 7 to 6 triumph over Dartmouth. Cornell and Syracuse, however, smacked down minor rivals easily, the former trouncing Alfred, 54 to 0 and the latter overwhelming Western Reserve, 33 to 0.

Southern Methodist, aiming at the Southwest conference championship, beat Texas A. & M. 8 to 0. St. Mary's playing a Sunday schedule in the main, already has counted six victories with Southern California and California among the victims.

Georgia Wins

Georgia's triumph over N. Y. U. was the exception to a general rule of eastern victory in intersectional combat yesterday. Fordham, another of the East's best, walloped Detroit, 39 to 9; Army turned back a stubborn Louisiana State outfit, 20 to 0; columbia whitewashed Virginia, 27 to 0.

With Northwestern practically assured of the title, other Big Ten elevens will have to content themselves with a race for second place. Michigan hung up another conference win at Indiana's expense, 22 to 0, and Wisconsin turned back Illinois, 7 to 6. Iowa went outside the conference to take a 7 to 0 beating from Nebraska. Of the intersectional games, Ohio State's victory over Navy, 20 to 0, was expected. Purdue whipped Centenary, 49 to 6, and Chicago tied Arkansas, 13 to 13.

Sooners Beat Kansas

Iowa State, the surprise of the Big Six, handed the Kansas Aggies their first defeat, 7 to 6 but Nebraska may be too big a hurdle for the Cyclones to vault Nov. 21. Oklahoma added to Kansas' woes with a 10 to 0 triumph.

Keeping pace with Southern Methodist in the Southwest conference was Texas Christian which eked out a 7 to 6 win over Rice. Texas walloped Baylor, 25 to 0.

In the Far West, Southern California virtually clinched the Pacific Coast conference title by trouncing Stanford, 19 to 0. California, improving as the season grows older, beat Washington, 13 to 0.

Utah continued its march through the Rocky Mountain conference, taking Colorado college over the jumps, 28 to 6, but their chief rivals, the Utah Aggies, bowed to Brigham Young, 6 to 0.

From a national viewpoint, perhaps, the biggest game of the coming week-end will pit Georgia against Tulane at Athens, Ga., a contest that may decide the Southern conference title.

Former Longhorn Stars Win 7-0 Game for Pros

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8. (AP)—A 45-yard pass from Dexter Shelley to Jack Rose, both of Texas, brought a 7 to 0 victory for the Providence National Professional Football league team over the Brooklyn Dodgers here today. Shelley kicked the point after touchdown. Providence threatened seven times to score, but a desperate defense halted their advances, twice inside the three-yard line.

The average price of Ohio farm products during the first six months of 1931 declined 26 per cent.

BOTH TEAMS UNDEFEATED

Southwest Okla. Race to Be Decided at Altus

Special to The Record News.

ALTUS, Okla., Nov. 8.—Altus Bulldogs and Hollis will meet in what is expected to be a furious battle on the local field Wednesday. The kickoff will be at 2:30 p. m.

Both Altus and Hollis will be fighting to uphold their conference standings, neither team having lost a game this season. This is Altus' last conference game. If the Bulldogs win they will have the conference championship won since Hollis is the only other undefeated team.

Big Crowd Expected

A record crowd is expected to witness the game. Business houses at both Hollis and Altus will be closed during the afternoon and both towns are expected to turn out for the game. Much interest is shown in this game throughout the conference and people are expected to come from other nearby towns.

A feature of the game will be the crowning of the football queen who is being selected in a contest among the high school classes. Coronation ceremonies will be between halves of the game. Identity of the queen will remain secret until time for the ceremony.

Coach Frank Crider witnessed the Erick-Hollis game the past week-end at Erick when Hollis added another feather to her cap by defeating the strong Erick team 13 to 0. "It is anybody's ball game. The teams are evenly matched and the team that shows the most fight will win," Crider commented.

Goal Line Uncrossed

Hollis defeated Frederick 25 to 7; Sayre 21 to 6; and Erick 13 to 0 in conference games played this season. Altus made 15 points against Mangum and 6 against Erick, without having their goal line crossed.

The average weight of the two teams is almost identical and the teams seem to be evenly matched in every way. Average weight of Altus starting lineup is 155 pounds while Hollis average is 156 pounds.

Kenneth Little, 185-pound halfback, has completely recovered from injuries received to his shoulder during one of the first games of the season and for the first time is in A-1 shape. Cameron, end, has a wrenched knee but is expected to be able to play a part of the game. Other Bulldogs are in good shape.

HOLLIS PREPARES FOR BIG GAME

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., Nov. 8.—The Hollis Tigers marched back home Friday with another scalp tied to their belt after beating the Erick eleven by a score of 13 to 0 and it placed them one more step higher in the march to the conference flag. Their next game will be the annual Armistice day game with the Altus Bulldogs and the balance of their time will be devoted to practice behind closed doors. This annual affair is looked forward to each year as one of the hardest games for the Tigers.

Hollis fans prepare months ahead to meet the opposition of the Altus fans and in years past Hollis has chartered trains to see that the sidelines were evenly divided with fans from both towns. The Tigers going behind closed doors means that Coach Spann has something under his hat that has not been used in any of the games played to date and that he is fully aware of the fact that Altus scouts have carefully watched all games played by the Tigers. Not since 1924 has Hollis had a faster backfield than the one now, composed of Graham, Abernathy, Vanderford and Spradling and never in the history of football in Hollis have the yhad a line better than the one now composed of Newberry, Chapman, Curry, Burkett, Barefoot, Ivey and McCullough. Of this eleven, three are in line for all-state honors and no doubt either Abernethy, Ivey or Chapman will be listed in all-state honor roll of 1931. To show it's loyalty to the Tigers the business houses of Hollis will close, the pep-squad will head the school in a parade and the password for Hollis will be, "On to Altus."

Frogs and Ponies Again Hurdle Southwest Foes to Remain Unbeaten

By BILL PARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Nov. 8.—The Southern Methodist university Mustangs are in the semi-finals of their Southwest conference championship race with four consecutive victories and no defeats. The Texas Christian university Frogs have reached the quarter-final stage with three victories and no beatings. More and more it looks like the conference championship crown will be awarded Nov. 28 when Southern Methodist and Texas Christian battle at Fort Worth.

Such is the complexion of the marathon following Saturday's combats in which Southern Methodist blocked two punts to definitely eliminate Texas A. & M. with an 8 to 0 decision. Texas Christian erased Rice from the running with a narrow 7 to 6 squeeze out. With the exception of Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, every team in the conference has at least two championship defeats.

Ponies Meet Baylor

Next Saturday at Dallas, Southern Methodist takes on Baylor, a team that lost a 25 to 0 verdict to the University of Texas Saturday. While Southern Methodist and Baylor played a 14 to 14 tie last year, the Mustangs do not expect much trouble this week. Failing to score with a running and aerial attack Saturday at A. & M., Southern Methodist tried a new system—that of blocking punts. Delcambre, center, blocked one in the second period for a safety, and Willis Tate, tackle, blocked another in the fourth period that John Burleson fell on for a touchdown. It was Southern Methodist's seventh consecutive win, leaving the Mustangs one of the few undefeated and untied teams in the country.

It required a 62-yard run by Blanard Spearman and an accurate place kick by Capt. Harlon Green for Texas Christian to finish in front of the Rice Owls Saturday at Fort Worth, 7 to 6. Spearman split a broken field for his run in the first period. "Jap" Thrasher scored a touchdown for Rice in the fourth period but Dick Jamerson failed to kick goal to leave the Frogs with an unmarred conference record. Rice made a gallant effort to remain as a championship contender but failed.

Serious trouble is just around the corner for Texas Christian at Austin Saturday where the Frogs battle the University of Texas Longhorns. After losing conference games to Rice and Southern Methodist, the Longhorns grazed in the conference pasture Saturday with a 25 to 0 victory over Baylor. It was the first time this season that Texas has clicked. Koy, Stafford and Elkins, three 1930 stars who had failed to flame this year, hit their stride Saturday and completely smothed Baylor. If Texas Christian can get over the Texas hump without defeat, it will be favored to reach the conference finals with an undefeated record since Baylor will be played in the semifinals.

The Texas and Texas Christian game will be the headliner. It is sure to be a marvelous scrap between two powerful lines and two hard driving backfields. Texas appears to have the edge in power when backfields are ranked, but getting through, over or around the all powerful Texas Christian front wall is going to be troublesome to Texas.

Aggies vs. Owls

Out of the conference race but with the courage to carry on to the best of their ability, the Texas Aggies and Rice Owls clash Saturday at Houston. This game resembles a toss-up. The Aggies displayed a lot of defensive strength in the first period against Southern Methodist but wilted about mid-way in the second period. Rice virtually fought Texas Christian to a standstill and will be out to do the same against Texas A. & M.

The University of Arkansas got a 13 to 13 tie with the University of Chicago Saturday at Chicago. Homer Ledbetter scored two touchdowns to regain the Southwest conference lead with 42 points. Arkansas remains idle this week.

LEDBETTER REGAINS SCORING LEAD

DALLAS, Nov. 7. (AP)—Homer Ledbetter, University of Arkansas fullback, regained the Southwest conference scoring lead Saturday when he crashed through for two touchdowns against the University of Chicago. Ledbetter now has seven touchdowns for a season total of 42 points. He replaces "Baldy" Oliver, Southern Methodist university fullback, who led through last week with 36 points. The four Southwest conference scoring leaders follow:

PLAINS OUTPUT TO BE CURBED

All Panhandle Wells to Be Gauged by State

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, Texas, Nov. 8.—All oil wells in the Panhandle oil field are to be tested so their potential capacity may be known and considered in curtailing the daily output of the Plains area to 55,000 barrels a day, under the terms of the Texas Railroad Commission's new order, restoring proration to the Panhandle.

J. M. McDonald, deputy supervisor of the commission, has been given authority over the entire field and is to take a gauge of all wells for five days. After determining the capacity of the wells, McDonald is then to provide connections for all wells and to allocate to pipe lines the allowable output to be permitted.

Daily production has been way in excess of the tentative allowable fixed by the commission. The actual production figures for the past and previous weeks follow:

Area—	Nov. 6 Wells	Nov. 6 Output	Oct. 30 Wells	Oct. 30 Output
Carson	240	6,095	240	5,849
Gray	763	45,093	763	43,589
Hutchinson	890	13,925	890	13,295
Moore	23	1,900	23	1,484
Wheeler	43	461	43	449
Totals	1,959	67,474	1,959	64,666

Gas producers in the Panhandle were cheered by the new rule of the commission which requires that gas transmission lines be classified as common purchasers and forces them to take ratably of all gas wells within two miles of their lines. They must also connect to all gas wells where the producer lays a gas line to a point within two miles of the gathering system. The rule affects the five big purchasers of gas in Carson, Gray, Hutchinson, Moore and Potter counties.

Only exception to the rule is where the gas well is making less than 5,000,000 cubic feet a day, or from gas wells producing through a bradenhead. All gas acreage is to be divided into 160-acre tracts and but one well to a 160-acre unit is to be permitted to be drilled, except where smaller acreage is held.

Dixon Creek Oil and Refining company started No. 2 Horner, in the northeast corner of section 139, block 3, of I. & G. N. survey, in the dolomitic area of northwestern Gray county. It will be a south offset of the Pulse and Shell No. 1 Simpson, which was completed three months ago for 220 barrels daily.

There were three completions in the Panhandle the week just completed, two gas wells for 53,000,000 cubic feet and one oil well doing 210 barrels a day. They follow:

Carson County—Empire Gas and Fuel company No. 1 Polling, in the center of the southwest of section 28, block Y-2, of T. T. survey, in the northwest corner of the county. It found gas pay from 2540 to 2675 feet and drilled to 2725 feet was completed for 13,000,000 feet of gas.

Texhoma Natural Gas company No. 1 McLaughlin, in the center of the northwest of section 61, block 4, of I. & G. N. survey, in eastern Carson, found the gas at 2474 to 2575 feet and made 40,000,000 feet of gas.

Gray County—Gardner Bros. No. 1 Barrett, at 350 feet from the east and 1582 feet from the south lines of the northwest of section 128, block 3, of I. & G. N. survey, a mile west of Pampa, in the dolomitic area of Gray county, had the oil pay at 3217 to 3276 feet and made 210 barrels a day. It is a west offset of Danciger Oil and Refining company No. 1 Barrett, completed two months ago for 180 barrels a day.

There are in the Panhandle field today 54 casinghead gasoline plants, but all but four are operating and making approximately 700,000 gallons a day of natural gasoline. The Phillips Petroleum company makes more than 50 per cent of the entire production in the Panhandle.

Permanency of New Oil Prices Rests on Proration, Writer Says

By PAUL S. HEDRICK
Record News Correspondent

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 8.—Oil prices have gone up in the Mid-Continent before, but never was an advance so earnestly and so generally wanted and so generally appreciated as the one that swept the world's greatest light oil area last week.

The increase of 15 cents per barrel for crude oils in fields of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana, added approximately $300,000 a day of new purchasing power to oil producers and royalty owners, but bankers and others say that the psychological effect of the price increase was worth millions to the six states.

The advance was brought about when certain active concerns found it absolutely necessary to raise the price of oil if they continued in the business of purchasing and refining and selling oil and its by-products. The continuance of control by voluntary proration or military control developed an actual shortage for many units. It was these concerns that forced the industry to push oil prices up.

Leaders of conservative concerns, producers, purchasers and refiners, say that the permanency of the improved oil price structure depends wholly on the way that the industry holds the flush areas at their present levels, or possibly under current allowables. The necessity for this demand, the conservative oil leaders say, is the slackening demand that comes with winter weather. While some concerns are still begging for more crude connections, a few are starting to store oil.

The advance in crude prices was based to a degree on the steadily advancing gasoline market. The major units in marketing have not only resisted the crude advances, but the tendency of the independents to keep gasoline prices on the upward turn.

BIBLE CLASS HEARS DANIEL

War on National Evils Urged by Speaker

Determined war upon idleness, waste, indifference and bad government were urged by Roy J. Daniel, teacher of the Kay Bible class of the First Methodist church, in his address Sunday morning.

Referring to the armistice signed on Nov. 11, 1918, as having ended the greatest war ever fought on earth, Mr. Daniel declared that national evils should be made the object of equally determined warfare until forced themselves "to an armistice."

His address in part was as follows:

"On this day 13 years ago the world was worshipping at the shrine of Mars. The world war grimly impressed upon the nations the real character of Mars, the god of war. The world war was different in many respects from all previous earlier conflicts. It was by far the greatest war ever waged. Not a single one of the leading world powers remained neutral throughout the struggle. The central powers consisted of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, and Trukey, and ranged against them at the time the armistice was signed were the British empire, France, Italy, Japan, the United States, and 22 smaller nations. Russia fought on the side of the allies from 1914 until 1917, when she dropped out, and the nation which walked like a bear became a Bolshevik. Statistics show that the central powers mobilized in all during the world war 22,850,000 soldiers, and the allies mobilized 42,188,444 —an amazing grand total of over 65,000,000 men. Of those the United States mobilized about 4,000,000 men. At the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of the year 1918 was signed the Armistice —an armistice which we lovers of peace hope ended all wars.

War on Evil

"Thinking about peace, Charles Jefferson said, 'We must educate. We must plant the seed of peace. We must plant it in the hearts of our young people in our colleges, and in all the grammar schools, and in the kindergartens, and in all the homes. We are going to win the cause of peace, but we are not going to win it by any methods which are spectacular or any measures which make a noise. It is not by thunder or by lightning but by the still small voice of mothers and teachers that the world will at last come to think peace. The war wound is deep. Only God can heal it. Only sacrificial love can heal it.'

"William Allen White wrote: 'The child who does not go to Sunday school, who has no knowledge of the source out of which our civilization sprang, who is ignorant of the vast literature called the Bible which climaxes in the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, is not ready to do his part in our American democracy. He starts handicapped, a failure predestined. The Sunday school is the best preparation for peace and stability that the world can make.'

"Paul went to Ephesus to try to make the forces of evil in that wicked and powerful city sign an armistice. He fought them for about three months in the synagogue, but at the end of that period of time he left the synagogue on account of the opposition from the Jews who had hardened their hearts. He and his disciples then went to the school of Tyrannus where he fought daily for two years. He fought the forces of evil so well that during those two years all Asia heard the word of Jesus Christ. In Ephesus Paul through power from God wrought miracles. The miracle was that a handkerchief or apron from the body of Paul when applied to a sick person would cause the disease to depart from the sick person.

"A non-Christian priest by the name of Sceva and his seven sons, seeing how nicely Paul's miracles were working, decided that they could produce the same sort of results. And they set out to drive out evil spirits from a man by their trick process, which was a counterfeit of the genuine process of Paul. But what happened? Their trick miscarried. The evil spirits would not be driven out, and the afflicted man turned on them and tore their clothes off their backs and beat them out of the house.

"News of what happened to Sceva and his sons soon became known to all the Jews and Greeks living at Ephesus. The effect of the news was that fear fell on all the people, and the name of Jesus Christ through whose power Paul performed his miracles, was magnified. Many accepted Paul's teachings and became followers of Christ. Many magicians of that city which thought so much of magic gave up their curious arts and burned their books in public. It has been estimated that the value of their burned books of magic was $10,000.

"What are a few of the ills of the present day we can and should wage war against until they are defeated and compelled to sign armistices? Four that we might consider are idleness, waste, indifference, and bad government. Just recently we witnessed the passing of a great man, at the age of 84, who was an enemy of idleness. That was Edison. The labors of his mind and life gave labor to literally millions of men and women engaged in electrical industries and appliances alone. The greatest menace any country can face is idle money and widespread unemployment of its men and women. Hoarded money means idle money. Idle or hoarded money does not and can not supply men and women for labor so long as it is hoarded. Men and women who are not busy are not long contented. There is bound to be an outlet for the mental and physical energies they possess. If the outlet is not found in constructive effort, sooner or later it will be found in activity that is destructive. Mind and muscle were given for use, and when not used in one direction will be used in another. If all on our country who are able to work were forced to idleness for three months it is likely that riots and war would exist by the end of that time. And just in proportion as unemployment and idleness prevail throughout the land is the welfare of the people and the permanency of our country menaced. One of the saddest things one may see is a man, honest, industrious, capable and willing, wandering about seeking opportunity to work for the necessities of life for himself and those dependent upon him. He realizes the injustice of such a situation and wonders why it is that those possessed of extraordinary intellects, great power and authority, and, most of all those having immense wealth, can not see to it that he has continuous employment. The Bible says, 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.' Idleness, whether enforced or voluntary, is man's greatest curse.

Modern Waste

"One of the most melancholy words in our language is the word waste—waste of time, talent, skill, thought, means, opportunities, capacity, ability! Men are wasters of almost everything, particularly of things most essential to their happiness and well-being. Man not only wastes his life from the standpoint of negligence of duty and opportunity, but some do worse than waste life. Those are they who engage in occupations and enterprises which make for destructive ways of living, who rob others by cunning and craft. Ben Franklin said, 'Time is the stuff that life is made of.' When time is not properly used it is worse than wasted. What a tragedy it is for one who has plenty of time to sit idly, with no enterprise worthwhile in mind—not even sufficiently interested in life's affairs to read and improve his own mind thus qualifying himself to be helpful to others. When doing nothing a man not only wastes time but wastes talent as well. Endowed with natural ability, given talent, even genius perhaps, and then to refuse to use that talent in behalf of his fellow-man should and does condemn one to oblivion in the estimation of those who are worth something to the world. He who can be of service and is not, is guilty of a sin of omission, and he who has talents and uses them in efforts that are not constructive is guilty of sins both of omission and commission.

"The poet Burns once declared, 'Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn.' Indifference to the welfare of our fellowmen is almost the universal sin. Lack of consideration for others is breaking the heart of the world. Consideration for others is traceably to the promptings of love. But so absorbed are we with our own personal affairs that the misfortunes of our brothers receive scant attention, as compared with what they should receive. Duty demands the bearing of one another's burdens, yet there is such a din arising from the struggle for gain and the never-ceasing quest for amusement that the demands are not heard, or if heard are not obeyed. Many of the social conventions which characterize cultured society and wholesome citizenship are becoming more or less obsolete on account of ceaseless struggle and turmoil. The hurry and preoccupations of modern life are crowding out many of those beautiful little customs, friendly interchange of views and pleasures of conversation which formerly were quite a factor in social life. There is too much thought of how to get rid of our own burdens and too little as to how to take them off others. In sharing the sorrows and burdens of others our own are less hard to bear.

"One of the proverbs says, 'When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice, but when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn.' Whose fault is it when we have bad government? It is our own fault. Not one-half of the people who have the right to vote in national and state elections take the trouble to go to the polls and exercise their right. Indifference on the part of the people has resulted in corruption in public office, and poor administration of governmental affairs has destroyed more governments than enemy armies and navies. The good citizen takes the right sort of interest in politics. And what is politics? Webster defines politics as the science of government. It can be thus said that one who is familiar with the principles of government is a politician. The term politician should not be the term of odium that it is. In the minds of many good people the word "politician" is the same as 'demagogue.' The greatest men in the history of our country and of our government have been politicians. Their patriotism is not to be doubted nor their wisdom questioned.

"At this November the eleventh season of the year let us resolve and determine to fight these ills of the present day until they, like the militarism of 13 years ago, surrender and sign the armistice. And with it all let us remember:

'The shouting and the tumult dies,
The captains and the kings depart,
Still we have thine ancient sacrifice—
A penitent and contrite heart.

Lord, God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.'"

German Scientist Develops Plant Substitute for Cotton

BERLIN, Nov. 8. (US)—Development by a German scientist of a new plant that may make Germany independent of cotton imports within a few years is claimed here today.

It is a cross of the South American Yucca plants with other harder ones, thus enabling the resulant hybrid to be grown in German soil.

The discoverer has named the new plan "German cotton." It is said to yield nearly a pound of fiber yearly. According to the discoverer, the fiber has been proved to be well adapted to the weaving of cloth that will serve as a substitute for cotton cloth. It has the additional advantage of being 50 per cent cheaper than cloth woven from cotton imported from America and Egypt.

Germany's endeavors to cut down imports and attain economic independence as far as possible have met with considerable success in other fields.

The developer of "German cotton" has started a plantation near Frankfort-on-Main, which he states is a paying venture. He is attempting to popularize the growth of his plant among German farmers.

Big Turkey Crop Brings Money And Jobs to Nocona Section

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, Nov. 8.—Prosperity seems to have hit Nocona via the turkey route. Local dealers estimate there will be nearly twice as many birds shipped from here this season, as compared with last year. They think it safe to say that around 12,000 will go out from this market which ranks among the best produce markets in North Texas, considering the size of the town.

The four produce houses, Armour Creameries, Farmers Produce, Molsbee Produce and Wood & Co. will handle these fouls at Nocona and if prices continue as at present, around $27,000 should be distributed in this territory, for the turkeys alone, besides giving employment to 75 to 100 persons dressing and shipping. These workers will receive approximately $2,200 for their labors.

City Completes Marking Of New Traffic Lanes

The striping of a new system of downtown traffic lanes was completed early Sunday morning, according to Dick Morris, chief of police.

Two traffic lanes and a safety zone are provided on the right half of each street near the intersection. The lane nearest the center of the street is for use of machines going straight ahead or making a left turn. The second lane is for the use of automobiles going straight ahead or making a right turn. The safety zone, extending from the curb six feet into the street, is provided as a stop for buses, and to clear traffic near the end of the block in order that motorists may have a clear view of pedestrians crossing the street.

Later in the week similar stripings will be placed at the intersections of Brook with Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh streets, where signal lights are used.

FEE MUDDLE TO BE AIRED

Supreme Court Advances Collin Dispute

AUSTIN, Nov. 8. (AP)—In an effort to clarify the muddle surrounding the operation of Texas' antiquated fee system, the supreme court has agreed to advance on its docket a mandamus action brought by a former county official to compel Moore Lynn, state auditor, and George H. Sheppard, state comptroller, to approve a claim of a former county official for duplicate fees in criminal cases.

The action was brought by Fred S. Rogers, former Collin county prosecutor, and involves a claim for duplicate fees in habeas corpus cases against the same man. Rogers claims that under the law he is entitled to a separate fee in each case, even though it be against the same defendant.

Lynn Disapproves

Lynn, state auditor and efficiency expert, has declined to approve the account. The legislature at the last regular session passed a law requiring approval of the auditor to all claims of county and district officials for fees in felony cases. Lynn has refused to approve the account for fees in felony cases. Lynn has refused to approve the accounts until they have been audited by members of his department and in several instances has flatly refused to sign them after they have been audited.

The action of the supreme court in advancing the case on its docket indicated an early decision by the highest state tribunal, which will materially affect the claims of other officials for fees in felony cases.

Lynn has refused approval of numerous accounts, several of which have been reduced considerably.

The suit brought by Rogers contends that Lynn's approval or non-approval means nothing on claims filed or incurred in cases prior to the effective date of the law requiring the auditor to approve the accounts. Under the old law the approval of the district judge and the comptroller was all that was necessary to payment of the claims.

The law requiring the approval was passed after serious disclosures had been made by a special legislative committee investigating the fee system and claims filed by officers against the state treasury for services allegedly performed in criminal cases. The law does not require the auditor to audit the accounts but Lynn has taken the position that he would be foolish to approve them without knowing what they contained.

The investigation by the special legislative committee is being carried forward as swiftly as possible.

Four sheriffs have been indicted and one convicted on evidence brought to light by the committee. A district judge has been impeached but acquitted on charges of negligence and incompetency in connection with his approval of fee accounts filed by three of the sheriffs.

Plans have been made by the investigating body to proceed with dispatch in the inquiry into allegedly extortionate charges against the state with the view of recommending a complete revision of the system at the next session of the legislature.

The evils of the fee system have been denounced by numerous members of the legislature for the past several sessions but efforts aimed at its complete abolition have failed. The maximum fees allowed officers, however, have been greatly reduced.

Disclosures made by the investigating committee were expected to add impetus to the campaign for ultimate abolition of the fee system and adoption of a salary basis for the remuneration of public officials, the salary to be commensurate with the population of the county or district served by the official and the amount of time and effort that would be consumed normally in dispatching the state's business.

Observance of Armistice Day by Fasting and Prayer Urged by Martin

Little Need for Bragging of Nation's Power, Teacher Tells Floral Heights Class

Much of the religious activity and patriotism prevalent in this country since the close of the world war in 1918 was branded as spurious by Judge P. A. Martin in his address before the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning.

One of the principal handicaps under which the Christian movement works today, the speaker said, is that type of church member who uses such membership only to further his own political or financial or social interests. Many church members, including some ministers, "forget that the Christ they profess taught a gospel of love, rather than of hate," Judge Martin declared.

Warning that the Far East now is darkened by lowering clouds of war, Judge Martin urged that Armistice day should be celebrated as a season of fasting and prayer, rather than of "bragging and boasting about our national greatness, Wealth and power."

His address in part was as follows:

"Men have sought to counterfeit every good thing that was ever known in the world and it was but natural that when the name and fame of Paul was known to the people of Ephesus and his miraculous cures of the afflicted were noised about in the city there were those who undertook to do the things he did in the way he did and make capital out of his work. And so the sons of the chief priest, Sceva, conceived the idea that they would enter the curing business using the name of Jesus as Paul did and pretend to cast out the evil spirits of disease of the mind and body, setting up, as it were, a counterfeit religion in the name of the true thing. But when they undertook to cure a certain man of an evil spirit they met their Waterloo. They adjured the spirit to come out of the man in the name of 'that Jesus whom Paul preacheth.' And the evil spirit answered them saying, 'Jesus I know and Paul I know; but who are ye?' They had no satisfactory answer, so the man sprang upon them, game them a good thrashing, tore their clothes off them and cast them into the streets of the city naked and wounded.

Religion as Business

"These men went into religion as a business venture for their own personal profit or to satisfy a personal ambition and were typical hypocrites. They knew nothing of the saving power of that 'Jesus whom Paul preacheth' and cared nothing about it; they simply wanted to capitalize on the new religion which seemed to be a good thing. The record says the discomfiture of these men was known to all the Jews and Greeks dwelling in Ephesus, and so, their hypocrisy reaped a just reward.

"Spurious religion is like counterfeit money. It looks like the genuine article until the 'new' wears off and then it deceives nobody and is dishonored by all men everywhere. But we must not confuse a spurious religion with a weak religion or a mistaken religion. This is too often done. The world is quick to call attention to the weak and erring churchman, because he does not live up to the standard of his professions and men call him a hypocrite when the poor fellow is doing the best he can under his peculiar temptations and weaknesses. The Bible very clearly draws the distinction between such a man and the real hypocrite. The world does not exercise such charity but visits condemnation upon all who do not live the life the church demands.

"I have said that the sons of Scela were typical hypocrites because they sought to make capital out of a holy thing, the name of Jesus. Of course there are those in the church today who are in it for the same reason, but I think the percentage is small and I am glad to think so. Our fault in the main is not downright hypocrisy but we fail to square our lives with our professions through lack of faith and thoughtless neglect of the means of grace and through our failure to ascertain and follow the will of God; all human weaknesses, common to all mankind both in and out of the church. Most of us are trying in a weak and uncertain way to live the life and to be what we profess to be. 'The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak.' And the tragedy of it is that the world is judging our great religion by us, by the lives we lead and not by the standards laid down by the Christ we profess. Many of them are saying 'there are so many hypocrites in the church.' As a matter of fact there are far more outside than inside, for most of them will pretend a morality they do not try to possess.

"But we still have some of the sons of Scela with us to this good day. They are the men and women who use the church and their church affiliations to further their political or financial or social interest. There are men and women who join the church because it is respectable to do so. Some join because it will increase their trade or give them social prestige or gain votes for them or for the political parties they belong to. Now and then even a minister of the gospel has to be silenced by church authority because it is discovered that he is not what he pretends to be and now and then we find that the influence of a trusted servant of the Master is creating more discord than love. An instance of this was reported in the daily press not very long ago when on account of the rivalry of two preachers the governor of Arkansas had to order out the state militia to keep the peace in a congregation in that state. These brethren forgot, for the time at least, that the Christ they professed taught a gospel of love rather than hate.

Armistice Day

"On next Wednesday we will all celebrate the anniversary of the end of the world's greatest war. For our own nation at least, it was a war to end war and victory perched upon our banners. There sprang into the national consciousness, what we called the spirit of 'Americanism' and at the same time there came to the other victorious nations, our allies, a spirit of nationalism which they had not felt before. Thinking, speaking and writing in terms of national greatness alone, our nation went forward to its highest pinnacle of national wealth and greatness and for a decade lived in a sort of orgy or frenzy of wealth and extravagance. While we still held on to the forms of religion, built magnificent churches and schools, paid out liberally the money easily acquired, our spiritual growth was negligible. And now national disaster has thrown over six million Americans out of employment, brought financial panic throughout the nation and there is no Moses to lead us out of the wilderness. And over on the other side of the earth a war-cloud is rising which may engulf the world in another sea of blood. I think this anniversary should be a season of fasting and praying, rather than of bragging and boasting about our national greatness, wealth and power. There is such a thing as spurious patriotism, as well as spurious religion. There are danger signals up and it is not the time for boasting about our national greatness, in war or in peace; so in the celebration of this national holiday let us rather approach the throne of the God of nations with supplications for the peace of the world; the thing our brave boys fought and died for in that last memorable struggle.

ESCAPED MEN ELUDE PURSUIT

Nine of Ten Prisoners Still At Large

TYLER, Texas, Nov. 8. (AP)—Nine of the 10 prisoners who escaped from the Smith county jail here early last night were still at large today despite an organized search throughout this section.

The other prisoner, J. W. Rice, was captured under a warehouse shortly after the escape. He was unable to flee farther because he had suffered a broken leg in a fall from the roof of the jail.

The only trace of the nine fugitives came from a farmer on the outskirts of town. He told officers he ran from his home when he heard men or ghosts in the loft of his home. The house was formerly occupied by an aunt of Ray Knight. Knight was one of the prisoners, being charged with murder of Manuel Myers, suburban grocer, during a holdup here in June.

Officers advanced the theory that Knight had sought refuge in the loft with a companion jail breaker, ignorant of the fact that his relative had moved. The men apparently had been frightened away by the hasty flight of the farmer as officers could not locate them when they searched the building.

The 10 prisoners escaped by sawing holes in the top of their cells, climbing through an old ventilator to the roof and sliding down a drain pipe. The alarm was given by a 14-year-old boy, held in jail pending the arrival of his father. The prisoners obtained the start of a few minutes because the jailer paid no heed to the cries of the boy when he first called. He explained that the boy had been in the habit of making a disturbance.

THE BROAD HIGHWAY

NOT so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family's needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy, economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving you minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new, modern road . . . this broad highway paved with printer's ink. Read the advertisements.

Advertising is the highway to better buying.
