House Orders Lobby Probe In Labor Bill

AUSTIN, March 13—The House of Representatives today by an overwhelming vote ordered an investigation of alleged lobbying practices both for and against pending closed shop legislation.

Rep. Ennis Favors of Pampa, speaking for the resolution he offered calling for the investigation said that rumors in connection with efforts to influence the opinion of House members were widespread, impugning "the motives of the House."

He obtained consent to permit immediate consideration of the resolution by a vote of 118 to 17, and the resolution itself was approved 111 to 14. Speaker Claud Gilmer said he would name the five-member committee tomorrow.

Call Witnesses, Records

Under terms of the resolution, it is empowered to subpoena witnesses and take possession of records of organizations named in the resolution. It was directed to report not later than March 31.

While the House was ordering the investigation, one of the measures upon which it hinges remained near the top of the calendar and due for additional debate. This was HB12, by Reps. Marshall Bell of San Antonio and C. E. Nicholson of Port Neches, making closed shop provisions in labor contracts unlawful. Also pending is House joint resolution 1, proposing a constitutional amendment along the same line.

Fair Trade Practice

In the Senate, Weaver Moore of Houston renewed his fight against passage of a so-called fair trade practice law by raising a point of order against a committee recommendation that it pass the bill, under which manufacturers and retailers could enter into contracts stipulating minimum prices at which trademarked goods could be sold at retail, was approved last night by the committee on commerce and manufacturing. Moore's point of order was that he had not been notified of the public hearing. Lieut. Gov. John Lee Smith said that the question was one of "such gravity" that he wanted time to consider it fully before ruling.

Rep. H. A. Hull of Fort Worth said this against the resolution:

"I speak not because of adoption of the amendment, but because I am opposed to the whole proposition. It is foolish to create an investigating committee and stir up a controversy. If Vance Muse, alleged leader of the Christian Americans, is a promoter—and I do not know that he is—there is nothing that he would like better than to be investigated."

Youths Held In Car Theft Probe

Officers sought Tuesday night to link theft of an automobile in New Mexico with activities of two Littlefield youths, who early yesterday led Sheriff H. H. Courtney of Motley county a wild chase in and near Matador in a car reported Monday as stolen from J. H. Hayhurst of Littlefield.

The pair and a third Littlefield youth, an army private, were arrested by Courtney after their car leaped a tall fence and rolled over twice four miles southeast of Matador.

Flee Into Pasture

They fled from the wrecked car into a mesquite pasture, but the sheriff located them at 9 o'clock yesterday morning six miles east of Matador as they were attempting to flag a ride.

The youths were brought to Lubbock where some of them made written statements to Texas Rangers. A local official said that the two civilian youths in custody of Ranger Orville Redwine and Deputy Sid Hopping of Lamb county, had been taken "to New Mexico" for investigation into another car theft. The soldier was returned to Matador for a check to determine whether he is AWOL.

It was conjectured that at least two of the youths may have been involved in the theft Friday of a car from near Clovis which was found abandoned yesterday afternoon in a pasture near Lubbcok. Raymond Land, chief deputy sheriff, said the car belonged to Mrs. T. L. Love of Clovis route 3.

According to Douglas Meador of the Matador Tribune, Sheriff Courtney noticed an out-of-county license on a car parked at 1:15 o'clock Tuesday morning at a Matador filling station. When he investigated, the three occupants drove the car away and, followed by the sheriff, sped a zig-zag course over Matador streets and into the country.

Osaka, Japan's Second City Turned Into "Pit Of Fire"

B-29s Put Aerial Torch To Crowded Small-Plant Area

By RAY CRONIN
Associated Press War Editor

AT least four square miles of the industrial heart of populous Osaka, Japan's second city, were turned into a solid sheet of fire today by a huge force of B-29s dropping more than 2,000 tons of incendiary bombs.

The devastating followup to Monday's attack on Nagoya, where 47,600,000 square feet of factory area were burned out, left the entire city of Osaka "burning like a huge pit of fire," reported one of the first returning pilots.

It was the third B-29 incendiary strike into Japan's major industrial centers in five days. The earlier raids over the week-end left great destruction in Tokyo and Nagoya.

Ground Troops Advance

While the B-29s were putting their aerial torch to Osaka, American ground forces scored new successes in the Philippines, the Chinese recaptured an abandoned Yank air base in that country, and British troops pressed their bloody campaign inside Burma's city of Mandalay. Japanese resistance continued on northern Iwo Jima.

The 300 or more Superfortresses striking Osaka's thousands of "invisible" small-type home industries, flew from bases in the Marianas. They showered bombs into the heart of Japan's second city for an hour and a half, hitting a highly inflammable sector from low altitude. Within the 10-mile square target area are electrical metal, bearing, machine tool and airplane propeller plants as well as an estimated 15,000 home or family factories.

Big Shipbuilding Center

Osaka also is one of Japan's greatest shipbuilding centers.

The Japanese radio said single night flying B-29s visited the Tokyo area and two other points on Honshu island. It reported the emperor received a confidential report from the imperial chamberlain on Superfort damage in Tokyo and disclosed that the Japanese Army at home went through three days of anti-landing practice.

With two airfields and Zamboanga already in their hands, the doughboy invaders of Mindanao in the southern Philippines captured four additional villages and pushed north toward Japanese hill positions against mounting resistance. Behind the Nipponese are strong Filipino guerrilla forces.

On Luzon island the Yanks captured Antipolo, east of Manila, after 16 days of bitter fighting. To the south of the metropolis the Americans took Los Banos and pressed on to seize Batangas, a provincial capital, and its airdrome.

The Japanese radio acknowledged reverses in the Philippines and alibied that the "rapidity and surprise" of the American advance on Luzon kept the Nipponese from organizing their defenses.

Front lines on bloody Iwo were unchanged as the Japanese, pocketed on the northern end of the island, resisted Yank Marines with small arms, machinegun and mortar fire. Other sectors were being mopped up. The Marines made unopposed landings on Kama and Kangoku rocks immediately west of Iwo.

Rape Attempt Made On Ill Woman Here

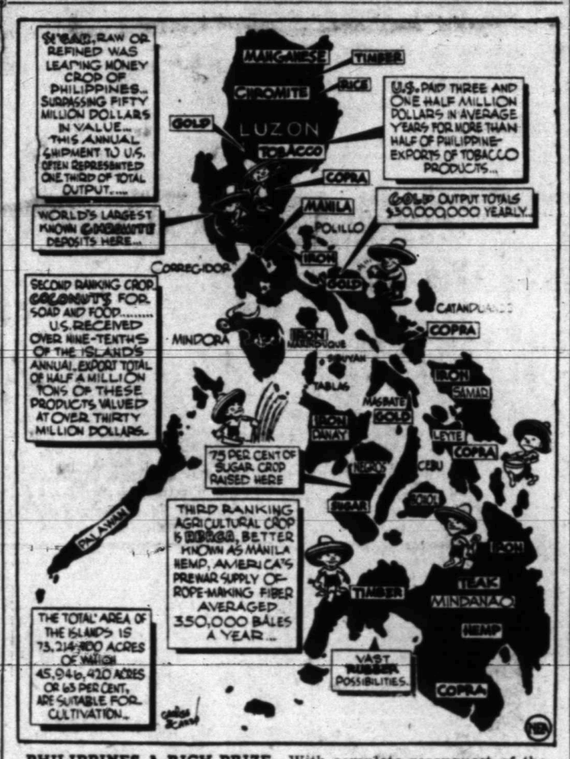

A 66-year-old woman told police that a strange man attempted to rape her Tuesday afternoon as she lay sick in bed at her home.

The woman, who lives in a northwest section of the city, was alone when the man walked into her room, kissed her and fell across her bed.

She told Capt. Lewis Kittrell and Charles Lackey of the police that the man was about 35 years of age.

When she made attempts to ward off the attack, the intruder fled.

A man answering the same description appeared a brief time later at another house in the neighborhood and asked for a drink of water, a woman told police. She said the man left hurriedly when she told him, "I don't know whether to trust you or not; some man just tried to rape a woman down the street."

PHILIPPINES A RICH PRIZE—With complete reconquest of the Philippines by the Allies, production of its many natural products will be speeded up and they will play an important part in the war effort. Map above indicates the riches of the islands, lost to the Japs when Americans recaptured some of the main islands. Rapid progress is now being made on Mindanao, southernmost of the group, where the 41st American Infantry landed last week-end.

WFA Food "Split" Brings Up Scrap

By OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Farm Writer

WASHINGTON, March 13—A War Food administration move to halt shipments of meats to Great Britain and liberated areas and to trim military demands has precipitated a bitter inter-agency controversy.

President Roosevelt may be called upon to settle the issue because of its possible impact upon international relations and upon home-front psychology.

Home Front Supplies

Fundamentally, the issue is whether civilain food supplies should be reduced further to meet international commitments and obligations. With food production now on the downgrade, total demands being made upon this country are considerably greater than the supply, particularly in the case of meats, fats and vegetable oils, sugar, and some kinds of dairy products.

The issue came to a head late last week in a WFA effort to allocate supplies for the April-June quarter among various claimant groups — the military, civilians, lend-lease, foreign relief, and other export demands.

In the case of meats, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones proposed to take Great Britain and liberated areas off the receiving list during the three-month period and to cut military supplies below Army requests. This action was described as necessary if civilian shortages were not to be aggravated.

Agencies representing foreign claimants—the Foreign Economic administration and the State department—protested. So did the

Slaton Drive Off To Good Start

Four of Slaton's 15 teams of volunteer workers had reported at the end of the first day of the Red Cross War Fund drive there yesterday with a total of $2,013. This sum does not include special gifts or the Santa Fe employee division, both expected to bring in a large percentage of the complete total.

Give To The Red Cross

Approximately 65 workers attended the kick-off breakfast at the Slaton clubhouse yesterday morning and from there began their solicitation work. The work will continue until every house and every business in the city has been contacted, W. R. Sewell, campaign chairman, said.

Theater Solicitation

Beginning Monday, women volunteer workers wearing their Red Cross uniforms pass collection plates at the two theaters in Slaton at the end of each complete show. Friday booths will be opened in the postoffice and the bank for the convenience of contributors.

Chairmen of the drive are J. B. Stevens, chairman of the men's solicitation, M. S. Kavanaugh, chairman of the Slaton public schools committee, and Mrs. W. T. Cherry, chairman of the women's committee who will work in the residential area. H. P. Swanner is chairman of the Slaton branch of the Lubbock chapter.

Allies Said Planning Rhine Leap In Force

LONDON, March 13. (AP)—War Secretary Sir James Grigg said today that Allied forces "are preparing for the task of crossing the Rhine in force."

Grigg told Commons that American troops outnumber the British in Europe by probably more than two to one.

"Although to start with the British empire and United States land forces were roughly equal," he said, "it was not long before the latter exceeded our forces, and at present they probably are more than twice those of the empire operating in this theater."

House Votes Extension Of Lend-Lease "For War Only"

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP)—The House voted overwhelmingly today to give another year's life to the lend-lease program but labeled it "for war use only."

It wrote into the act a prohibition against using lend-lease in any post-war relief, reconstruction or rehabilitation programs, then voted 354 to 28 to renew the program which administrationists called the No. 1 economic weapon of the Allies.

The extension now goes to the Senate. Without its enactment lend-lease will expire June 30. The renewal gives it life to June 30, 1946 and legalizes lend-lease contracts running to June 30, 1949.

Only a handful of members spoke against the bill, and most of them struck at administration spending policies in general, rather than at the lend-lease program in particular.

The bill as it passed the House represented a compromise to erase Republican-expressed fears that the administration would ease lend-lease into the post-war era, using it to make agreements for relief and reconstruction in liberated areas.

The administration agreed to an amendment which says the act does not "authorize the President to enter into or carry out any contract or agreement with a foreign government for post-war relief, post-war rehabilitation or post-war reconstruction" except for items specifically intended for defense or combat.

Bringing the bill to the floor for its third war-time renewal, Rep. Luther Johnson (D-Tex) called lend-lease "the greatest war measure" and declared "it has brought us as close to victory as we now are."

Allied Chiefs See V-E Day This Summer

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WITH the U. S. NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY, March 13 — Many Allied military men now believe the European war will end early next summer, rather than next fall, after a gradual destruction of the enemy's remaining forces.

This opinion appears to be shared by German civilians interviewed behind the Allied lines. The idea of a sudden wholesale collapse, as a result of recent Nazi disasters, is generally discounted. However, military men do not expect a repetition of the violent warfare and stubborn defenses that characterized west front fighting in November, December and January.

German Attitude Changes

There has been a definite change in the mental attitude of German troops, consistently demonstrated by the character of their resistance during the Allied drive to —and across—the Rhine. German morale has deteriorated, but seemingly not to the point where Nazi soldiers are ready to give up the fighting entirely.

Rather, as one American who was in the thick of the recent offensive put it, they appear to be quite willing to fight as long as there is not too much danger of getting killed.

"They aren't ready to give up without a fight, but once we bypass or reach their positions they are perfectly willing to give up," he said. "They are quite happy to surrender with 'honor.' They shoot like hell until you reach them, then they appear content to be taken prisoner."

Contrast To November

He contrasted this to the fierce November fighting along the Roer and the bulge battles, where many Germans fought to the last or else tried desperately to get away to fight again.

Almost every American officer believes that the Allied armies will have to fight all the way across Germany before ending major German resistance. As long as there is a free area with Nazis or SS men in control, the soldiers in it probably will fight, they say.

Allied military men expect a stubborn defense along the Rhine, but once it is broken they see a fast-moving, fluid war something like the last rapid advance from the Roer to the Rhine, with comparatively few casualties and great numbers of prisoners.

Some Violent Battles Yet

This, of course, does not mean that some violent battles will not have to be fought in sectors where SS armies or crack Nazi parachute units are encountered, but these struggles are expected to be the exception rather than the rule.

Moving all the way across Germany, over many natural obstacles and blown bridges, would take time, military men point out, even without opposition.

Encouraging the hope that the war will not run far into the summer is the attitude of German civilians. From all appearances, among the 500,000 or more who have been overrun by the U. S. First and Ninth armies, Hitler's appeal to fight in every house and every street has fallen on deaf ears. The civilians have been a surprisingly docile lot and nothing like Russian guerrilla warfare has been seen.

"They are so used to taking orders that they will take them from anybody," one field officer explained. "If we just have someone on hand to go into these towns and lay down the law when we have taken them, I don't think we will have any trouble."

This does not mean the Germans are welcoming the Allies with open arms. They aren't. But it does mean that German civilians and ordinary soldiers believe the war is hopelessly lost and once they are overrun they feel they might as well make the best of it instead of struggling on in a hopeless cause. Heavy Allied bombings have also played their part, undoubtedly, in taking the starch out of the German civilian's will to resist.

System Of Trusteeships May Replace Territory Mandates

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 13—A system of trusteeships to replace one-nation mandates for the control of former enemy territories will be proposed at the forthcoming San Francisco security conference.

This was learned today as Secretary of State Stettinnius began preliminary conferences with the United States delegation to the meeting, which starts April 25. Stettinius, who is chairman of the group, predicted its members would be able to "work as one team," but at the same time be free to pursue their "personal views and convictions."

The trusteeship proposal was not provided in the Dumbarton Oaks security plan which will chart the San Francisco parleys. Evidently discussed among the Big Three representatives at Yalta, it is intended as a formula for the disposition of territories such as the Japanese-mandated islands which now are a part of the Pacific battleground, through joint control of two or more powers.

Officials here expected the San Francisco conference to last at least a month, but that it might stretch for some weeks beyond that if the additional time is needed for all represented nations to air their views on world organization.

Six of the delegates met with Stettinius at the State department and were later received briefly by President Roosevelt at the White House. Only Secretary Hull, who is still recuperating from his long illness at Bethesda Naval hospital, was absent. Hull hopes that he will regain sufficient strength within the next month that he can go to San Francisco as senior advisor for the United States group.

Stettinius announced that there would be other meetings "from time to time," evidently with a view to reconciling possible conflicting elements within the delegation or at least producing understanding of the various viewpoints.

Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and one of the Republican members of the delegation, said prior to the meeting that he believed the security organization "should have flexibility" to allow it to deal with future threats to the peace which cannot now be foreseen.

"I don't think we ought to set up a rigid organization at San Francisco," Stassen told a reporter. He indicated support, at least partially, for the view of Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) also a member of the delegation, that the league designed to maintain peace should have authority to review some wartime political agreements.

Fading Luftwaffe Out But Fails To Halt U. S. Smash

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, Wednesday, March 14—The Germans attacked the American Remagen-Erpel bridgehead with at least 60 planes yesterday and fought stubbornly in the hills east of the Rhine river, but U. S. First Army troops pushed relentlessly deeper and reached within two miles of the great six-lane superhighway linking Frankfurt-on-Main and the industrial Ruhr.

Gains made by American infantry were measured in yards, but it was pointed out that the advances gave the doughboys control of important heights controlling the bridgehead, which was now being speedily built up with the help of a newly-erected pontoon bridge.

Bridgehead Expanded

The bridgehead, into which the Germans said five to six divisions of American troops already had been poured, now was about five miles deep and perhaps 12 miles long. The German radio said Americans had crossed the Rhine in assault boats to extend the bridgehead into Koenigswinter on on the north, two miles beyond Honnef.

Throughout the day the skies were filled with dogfights as the enemy made frequent raids and fighters of the Ninth Air force labored to keep them away from the bridgehead area.

Half a dozen or more lightning-fast jet-propelled planes were among the enemy attackers in the Germans' strongest air effort since the Rhine crossing March 7.

Ten Are Shot Down

American planes shot down ten, claimed five probables and damaged six while losing four of their own. Anti-aircraft gunners destroyed others, but no tabulation of their score was yet available. Monday, when the German raids were lighter, ack-ack batteries shot down 19 enemy planes.

While fighting flared over and around the bridgehead, the U. S. Third Army lashed out in a new attack on a nine-mile front in the Saarburg area and advanced up to 2½ miles.

A field dispatch tonight from Don Whitehead of the Associated Press disclosed for the first time that Lt. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army engineers had succeeded in throwing a temporary bridge across the wide, swift river to share the burden with the shell-scarred rail structure captured in dramatic fashion last Wednesday.

Reds Pouring Into Oder Breakthrough

By ROMNEY WHEELER
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Wednesday, March 14—Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, achieving a breakthrough in a frontal assault toward Berlin, has pushed nearly 100,000 Russian troops across the Oder river between Frankfurt and newly-captured Kuestrin and has sent spearheads within 33 miles of the Reich capital, the Germans said last night.

The German DNB agency contended the breakthrough was only temporary but said nine Russian divisions now were fighting on the west side of the river on the 16-mile-wide, Kuestrin - Frankfurt front.

While the broadcast Soviet communique made no mention of any crossings in that critical area, Moscow dispatches told of preparatory artillary fire by heavy Russian guns wheeled into positions in battered Kuestrin. Reports from the Russian capital indicated that three Russian armies were expected to make the massive assault on Berlin.

According to the Germans, Russian task forces are attempting to force open the fortified defenses of Berlin in these three areas:

Westward from Kletz on the Oder's west bank opposite Kuestrin.

In the bridgehead opposite Goeritz, six miles below Kuestrin.

In the Lebus bridgehead, six miles north of Frankfurt.

The Russians' breakthrough was secured in the Lebus bridgehead area, a Nazi commentator said, adding that fighting on the high ground commanding the Frankfurt-Berlin highway was heavy and fluctuating.

Nazis Whittled Down

Sixty miles north of Kuestrin, Zhukov's armored and storm units steadily whittled down German positions east of the Oder in Stettin's eastern suburbs of Altdamm, Finkenwalde and Podjuch. The Germans claimed that counterattacks had thrown the Russians back near Greifenhagen, 11 miles south of Stettin.

The Second White Russian Army on the Bay of Danzig tightened its seige ring around the ports of Danzig and Gdynia. Midnight Soviet supplementary communique declared "fierce fighting was raging on the rim of that fortified area.

Northwest of Gdynia the Russians cleaned out a 14-mile coastal area from the road junction of Rheba, four miles east of Wejherowo (Neustadt), northward to Chlapau, Moscow announced in a broadcast communique.

Capture of Chlapau put the Russians at the base of the Zatoka Pucka, a narrow neck of land jutting out 21 miles into Danzig bay north of both Gdynia and Danzig.

Advances of up to five miles

Lines Tighten In Film Deadlock

HOLLYWOOD, March 13 (AP)—Deadlock in the two-day-old film studio strike grew tighter tonight as major producers sent a warning to screen office employes guild members to abide by a no-strike clause in their contracts and to return to work.

A neutral ten-man committee from the three talent guilds—the writers, directors and actors — meanwhile sat for more than three hours drafting peace proposals of an undisclosed nature which will be offered in an attempt to break the strike between the producers and two rival unions.

No Producer Relaxation

Giving evidence there is no trend toward relaxing their stand, the producers group reminded the office workers, numbering about 3,000, that their contract stipulated no work stoppage without usual prescribed procedure. An estimated 50 per cent of office help voluntarily quit work the first day to support the strike.

As an estimated 7,500 movie employes remained idle, and rivals in the jurisdictional union-producer battle continued adamant in their positions, the "brain committee" convened "hoping to decide upon some approach to the warring parties."

Interim Agreement

The committee's statement added that it hoped "to bring about at least an interim agreement which will halt the strike until the issues can be settled formally by the National Labor Relations board."

Once agreed on an "approach", the special committee will lay its proposals before union and producer leaders, possibly tomorrow.

Krueger Promotion Hints Of Bigger Pacific Job For Him

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP)—Selection of Lt. Gen. Walter Krueger for promotion to the four-star rank stirred speculation today that he is slated for a bigger job—possibly as an Army group commander.

The German-born leader of the Sixth Army in the Philippines was the only Army commander among nine lieutenant generals nominated today by President Roosevelt for the temporary rank of full general.

The list, however, included the three Army group commanders in the European and Mediterranean theaters—Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley of the 12th, Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers of the 6th and Lt. Gen. Mark Clark of the 15th.

Krueger's elevation suggested that he is being readied for a comparable post and that a new Army group either has or will be created in the Southwest Pacific. At present, there are at least two armies but no Army group in that theater, where Gen. MacArthur is the supreme commander.

Kreuger has come up through the ranks to attain his present position. He enlisted during the Spanish-American war and was appointed a second lieutenant in 1901. He served in France during the first World war.

Senate approval of the nominations will give the Army 11 four-star generals in active service, aside from four five-star generals of the Army. The two present four-star generals are Joseph W. Stilwell, chief of the Army ground forces, and Malin Craig, chairman

British Air Pacific War Views And Post-War Shipping Situation

By DON DOANE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 13—War Secretary Sir James Grigg told the House of Commons today that after the final victory over Germany a substantial number of men in the British armed forces would be released and men now in civilian "reserved occupations" would be called up.

Sir James declared Britain's participation in the Pacific war was "not only right but inescapable," but said it would call for a "very complicated and difficult process of re-deployment" of troops.

"We are fighting this war for the establishment and maintenance of a principle," the war secretary said. "The elimination of the greater plague spot in Europe cannot assure even the establishment of that principle, let alone its maintenance for all time, so long as the present Japan exists."

Wants Only "Fair Share"

Wing Comdr. Archibald James, a conservative member, expressed the hope the British Army "will not be called upon to bear more then its fair share in relation to the United States in the Pacific war."

The conservative said he had sought from the minister of labor figures on the extent of the manpower mobilization in Britain as compared with that of the United Nations and had received an "impertinent and arrogant" reply that there was no advantage in comparing the war efforts of the United Nations.

Sir James declared that although the European land forces of the British empire and the United States were roughly equal on D-day "it was not long before the latter exceeded our forces and at present they are probably more than twice those of the empire operating in this theater."

Situation In Italy

In Italy, Sir James said, Allied forces "are even now containing enemy formations whose strength numerically we reckon to be upwards of one-third of the German forces in Europe other than those engaged against the Russians."

Turning to the problem of feeding the people of liberated lands, the war secretary expressed fear that the demands in the coming months "may become almost overpowering." He said that in occupied Holland alone the population was "in desperate straits" with little prospect of help from local sources after liberation.

Sir James said that Allied resources would be "strained to the utmost to prevent starvation among the millions of displaced persons in Germany, "especially if our victory comes before the new harvest is gathered."

Ship Scrapping—Again

In the House of Lords meanwhile Lord Winster predicted that the United States "may have to break up many of the ships she has built" when the war's end creates a surplus.

Forecasting that the bulk of the world's cargo tonnage would be owned by the United States he said "the uncertainty over the disposal of American utility ships" was one of the main difficulties confronting shipping industry.

Lord Leathers, minister of war transport, replied that he had no official intimation of what the American government's intentions were, but said it seemed "probable they would sell to private owners a large number of government-owned ships," with faster specialized craft sold mainly or wholly to American nations and Liberty ships "likely to be sold abroad."

Governor Names Two To Board At A & M

AUSTIN, March 13 (AP)— Gov. Coke Stevenson today asked Senate confirmation of Roy C. Potts, Belton merchant, and J. Ruthledge Hill, Dallas engineer, as members of the Texas A. & M. college board of directors.

These men were named by Stevenson for positions formerly held by R. W. Briggs of San Antonio and Neth Leachman of Dallas whose reappointments were rejected by the Senate.

Named on the state prison board by the governor were:

Claude K. McCan of Victoria, Lindsey T. Murray of Waco and J. W. Keeland of Houston, re-appointed for six-year terms; E. B. Chapman of Sherman, business man, (appointed for the unexpired term ending in 1947 of Gaylord J. Stone, resigned); Joe C. Carrington, Austin businessman and farmer (appointed for the term of the late George Sealy whose term ends in February, 1949).

Col. E. V. Spence of Big Spring was appointed by Stevenson to the state board of water engineers for a term expiring in August 1947. He succeeds the late A. H. Dunlap of Austin.

Class At LAAF To Finish Today

With six weeks of gruelling training in "all weather" instrument flying behind them, another class of combat veterans graduates at Lubbock Army Air field today and soon will return to their respective base stations over the nationwide AAF Training command to train other fliers in the latest methods of instrument flying.

The class is the second to be trained at the big AAF Instructors school under LAAF's new program of training veteran combat fliers who have flown under weather conditions in virtually every theater in the war.

Fourth Class Due

Meanwhile, the fourth class of student officers will arrive at LAAF the next three days and start their part of the program next week-end.

The graduation of the class today marks the halfway period for the third group of student officers who started their training three weeks ago.

The graduates, those in training and those to follow are being given a course of instruction covering ground school problems, weather study, radio work instrument instruction with the use of mock-ups, and actual flight line training in modified AT-6s—all of this training based on the latest experiences of the AAF veterans in combat. This information is then handed down to these veterans at LAAF who in turn train cadets just receiving their wings, other fliers who have not had the opportunity for instrument instruction and pilots in transition work who may be ready for combat and need "all weather" training.

Included in the class which finishes today are 14 Texans who have served in the European Theater, in Italy, North Africa, India, China and the Pacific.

Those from Texas include 1st Lt. Jack D. Hoover, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Hoover of Post, Route 3, Capt. Robert C. Flynt of Tulia, 1st Lt. Willard E. Richter and 1st Lt. Walter C. Roberts, both of San Antonio, Capt. Linus J. Box, jr., and 1st Lt. William A. Tiefenback, both of Fort Worth, 1st Lt. Luther L. Smith of Kosse, 2nd Lt. Thomas P. Shepherd of Centerville, 2nd Lt. Stanley C Odom of Edcouch, Capt. Clem B. McKennon of Schulenburg, 1st Lt. Henry W. Kingsbery of Santa Anna, Capt. Marshall F. Crispen of San Benito, Capt. Wilbur A. Ballentine of Seabrook, and 1st Lt. David C. Arnett of Lufkin.

The Woman's Angle
By Margaret Turner

V-MAIL to and from our men in the European theater has been speeded up by the opening in France of the largest V-mail processing station, with the V-letters now flown directly to France, instead of to England and then to France as formerly.

FOR TEEN-AGERS

Three reading favorites of teen-agers at the youth centers at Sixteenth and Ave. J and Sixth and Ave. B are funny books and the magazines "Look" and "Life."

The main trouble, according to A. C. Hamilton, superintendent of city recreation, is that not enough of the comic and pictorial magazines are available and he has been wondering if readers of this column would not like to donate their magazines to the centers.

If you are interested, telephone 9364 and some one will call for the magazines.

WILSON

HAILED as one of the greatest events in 50 years of motion picture history, Darryl F. Zanuck's "Wilson," showing currently at the Midway theater, likely will receive favorable comment from judges of the Academy Awards to be announced after Thursday night.

The Woman's Angle isn't sure how historically correct the picture is and we remember Drew Pearson said Mrs. Wilson wasn't pleased with her portrayal by beautiful Geraldine Fitzgerald, but we think it is the most exquisite technicolor movie we have seen. The Wilson family is revealed with skill and restraint. And the picture certainly mirrors the best and the worst in America's political life from 1909 until 1918.

In the blue we'd say are the scenes in the Oval room, the East room with its golden piano, the Lincoln room, all pictured to the life from sketches made by Thomas Little, head of Twentieth Century Fox property department while spending three weeks in the White House. And the costumes worn by both the first and second Mesdames Wilson and the Wilson girls, picture hats, flowing skirts, tight waists, all direct from Paris in an era before women effected slacks, shorts and overalls for every occasion except formal balls, are really something to see.

ACCORDING to press releases, Lamar Trotti, who wrote the screen play, spent nearly a year learning everything about Woodrow Wilson, reading every word he wrote or said publicly and afterward spent nearly a year writing the script. If that be so, we'd wager Alexander Knox, who plays the title role, spent almost that much time in learning dialogue really spoken by the man he was portraying. He does a remarkable job and as far as we were concerned he gave a human quality to the first World War president we had not gotten from history.

In the red we'd put the length of the picture, well over two hours and that's a bit too long, especially when you cope with people trying to climb past you or grinding pop corn to the right and left of you. (As an aside we'd venture it's hard to get away from reality in picture shows in Lubbock!)

One of the most interesting aspects to us was the comparison with those days and the present hour, when America and her Allies once more are fighting the same enemy and the problem of a just and lasting peace again confronts world leaders.

GRATEFUL CORPORAL

SOMEWHERE along the way between Lubbock and Pittsburgh, Pa., there rides a grateful soldier, one Cpl. Shirley Ray Simon of Lubbock Army Air field, homeward bound on furlough. And he is carrying a memory of several generous girls, even if he had no idea who they are and has asked us through this column to convey his thanks. It happened this way:

Several nights ago Cpl. Simon went to the picture show. When he started home his wallet was missing. Since it contained only a two dollar bill, he decided against advertising for it, although he was sorry about losing his identification cards and especially regretted loss of a news clipping about his brother Gerald who is overseas. He decided to check it up as a loss and thought little about it.

Imagine Cpl. Simon's surprise and pleasure the other day upon receiving a huge package containing the billfold intact and enough cookies, candy and cigarettes for his squadron and to share with the soldiers who guard the German POWs. There were several pipes, also, and a clever note signed "Some Southerners Wishing a Yank Lots of Good Luck" and suggesting, in part, "Shirley Ray, maybe this will teach you when you go to a show to sit still. If you are the guy sitting in front of us, no wonder you lost your billfold. You squirmed all the time you were there.

WE hate to see you break a two dollar bill so we are enclosing a dollar for you to take your best girl to the show. If you are afraid this candy might be poison give it to your superior officers, but we ate some of it ourselves and guarantee it to be all right.

Laying all jokes aside we hope you and your brother Gerald come through this thing okeh and will soon be back in North Braddock, Pa."

Congress Urged To Loosen Purse Strings To Aid State Department

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 13. — The House Appropriations committee recommended today that Congress loosen its purse strings and give the State department more money to achieve its foreign policy objectives.

The recommendation was made in a bill to provide $259,109,700 for the State, Justice and Commerce departments and the federal judiciary during the 1946 fiscal year.

State Gets Increase

The figure represented an increase of $23,225,608 over appropriations for the current fiscal year, and the State department alone received an increase of approximately that amount. The committee cut $13,620,100 from the total approved by the budget bureau.

The committee endorsed the department's foreign policy objectives and said it was disinclined "to restrict or delay their attainment because of insufficient appropriations."

An appropriation of $71,878,400 was recommended for the State department for the fiscal year, exclusive of overtime pay for employes, compared with a corresponding figure of $47,070,588 for the current year.

Justice Department

In its justice department recommendations, the committee departed from usual practice and increased the amount approved by the budget bureau. The bureau had approved an estimate of $92,322,500, compared with $103,546,282 this year, but the committee raised the total to $93,468,900.

The bureau's estimate would have forced the FBI to close five field offices and drop 400 agents and 200 clerks. However, the committee said it was unwilling to jeopardize the nation's internal security program. It said it had confidence in FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and believed he would not spend all of the money unless he needed it.

For the Commerce department, the committee recommended $79,422,000 compared with $73,567,524 in the current year. For the federal courts, it suggested $14,390,400 compared with this year's appropriation of $12,699,698.

Sudden Back Slap Proves Effective Against Nosebleed

AMARILLO, March 13. (Special) —Johnny Simpson, Lubbock soldier, was standing at Sixth Avenue and Tyler Street suffering of nosebleed. He was merely leaning, he said, and otherwise minding his own business, hoping the bleeding would stop.

Suddenly someone whacked him across the back with steam-roller strength. His nose stopped bleeding. Looking up he recognized Sgt. Frank Dyer, a friend formerly of Slaton, whom he had not seen since the sergeant's enlistment three days after Pearl Harbor. "That's the way we stopped 'em from bleeding at Salpan," his friend explains.

Simpson says he doesn't know which hurt the most—the nosebleed or the cure.

Col. Daniel Cooper To Boss Randolph

SAN ANTONIO, March 13 (AP) —Col. Daniel A. Cooper, 38, a veteran of "over the hump" operations in the China-Burma-India theater, has been named commanding officer of Randolph Field, San Antonio, succeeding Col. Walter C. White who has been assigned to temporary duty in Washington, it was reported today.

Cooper has been commanding officer of Perrin field since July, 1941, and will be succeeded in that post by Col. Ross F. Cole.

Liberator Endurance Champ To Go On Tour

FORT WORTH, March 13 (AP)—Fresh from final triumphs in the central and western Pacific theaters, "Little Audrey," B-24 Liberator bomber known as the 7th Air force's endurance champ, will open a tour of Lt. Gen. Barton W. Yount's AAF training command in the near future, headquarters here said today.

Having closed a record-breaking run of 100 combat missions with a bow toward the Japs in Iwo Jima, February 2, 1945, the plane arrived yesterday at Fort Worth Army Air field, transition school for Liberator pilots.

"Little Audrey" has amassed a total of 225,000 combat miles, mostly over water; has dropped 416,900 pounds of bombs on the Japanese.

She has carried one crew through to the completion of its 40 missions and another to 30 missions. She has been hit by enemy flak more than 75 times but has never lost a crew member.

Her tour of training command stations will be with her present crew, which has flown its alloted 40 missions, together with the crew chief, who served "Little Audrey" on all her 100 missions.

Soldier Won't Hate 'K' Rations Anymore; They Saved His Life

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

COLOGNE.—Most soldiers hate "K" rations after eating them months on end.

But Pvt. Joseph I. Gobel of Cincinnati, O., never will complain again.

Last October, fighting in the Siegfried line, he was hit in the chest by a shell fragment. A surgeon probing for the fragment found pieces of cardboard, cheese and tin. A box of "K" rations in Gobel's pocket had broken its force and saved his life.

Thirtieth division patches make bad eating. Ask Pfc. William G. Bryant of Roxboro, N. C., Jumping across the Roer river in a night attack, Bryant found he had a patch in his pocket and, remembering orders that the division was on the secret list, the soldier chewed and swallowed the cloth patch. A few minutes later he learned that just before the jump off the division had been informed it could wear patches.

Nothing stops First Sgt. Joseph Shtumbel of the Bronx, N. Y., once he sets out to rejoin Co. K of the 120 infantry, 30th division, after a leave. Just back from Paris, he found his company had gone into battle and was surrounded. So the sergeant went up front, fought his way through to his outfit and reported to his commanding officer.

Once-Mighty Luftwaffe, On Last Legs, Now Flies 'Suicide' Trips'

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
United Press War Writer

REMAGEN BRIDGEHEAD, Germany, March 13. (U.P.) — The Germans are flying what the Americans call "suicide missions" against the First Army bridges across the Rhine in desperate efforts to cut the lifelines to the Remagen bridgehead.

Today it can be revealed that in the last five days 135 German planes have made "suicide" attacks on the bridges. Sixty-six were shot down. Fourteen others disappeared in the clouds trailing comet-like tails of smoke and flame.

Must Be On Last Legs

The First Army men say the German Air force must be on its last legs. That is the only way they can explain its failure to go all out to destroy the railway bridge over which the Yanks crossed the Rhine last week.

Between 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. yesterday, 35 German planes—Messerschmitt 109's and Focke-Wolf 190's — made 350 attacks. They tried hard to bomb and shoot up the bridges.

(Front dispatches referring to "bridges" over the Rhine at the bridgehead tended to bear out German reports that the First Army had two pontoon bridges across the Rhine to supplement the captured Ludendorff bridge).

Ack Ack Is Heavy

They had to fly through one of the greatest concentrations of anti aircraft fire in history. Getting tangled up in it, even when it is on your side, drives home the idea of calling the Germans suicide airmen.

It was just 1 p.m. when I observed, as our jeep reached the east bank of the Rhine, that the trip "was easy enough." The words were hardly out of my mouth when the whole world seemed to cave in.

Anti-aircraft guns, machine guns, artillery — everything cut loose around us. We dived out and hugged the ground. I thought: "this is it. Nobody can come out of this alive." The bullets ripped into the dirt beside us as a diving plane roared past.

Gunner Misses Him

As half a dozen of us picked ourselves up, I heard an anti-aircraft gunner a few yards away calling the German airman some harsh names and lamenting:

"I saw him coming, but I couldn't nail him. I got a few slugs into him, but he got back in those damned clouds."

All the rest of the afternoon was an unbroken series of schambles for shelter to avoid bombings, strafings, or shelling.

POLITICAL LEADER DIES

CAPETON, Union of South Africa, March 13. (AP)—Louis Esselen, the "Harry Hopkins of South Africa," died today. Esselen, a life-long friend and confidant of Premier Jan Christiaan Smuts, played an important role behind the scenes in South African politics.

Isis, most famous Egyptian goddess, wore the horns of a cow for a headdress.

Route Boy Finds Part Of Trouble With His 'Kicks'

At least one route carrier of newspapers here—20-year-old Joe Irvin, a sophomore student of Texas Tech—knows what to do when he is sure he has delivered a paper at a place where a "kick" is phoned from.

Moreover, he'd like to announce that he will prosecute any unauthorized person he has reason to believe appropriates such a paper to his own use.

Joe has been delivering Avalanche and Journal papers only two weeks, but already he has started an investigation file in permanent records of the police department.

It started when he noticed that "kicks" were being called in from subscribers he knew he had delivered papers to.

Set Up Watch

So, Sunday morning, he made his delivery a full hour early—then set up a watch.

He saw an aged man and his wife walking around and "eyeing up" papers here and there.

The woman allegedly took one and went to her home, on west Main street. The man came along about the same time, and Irvin questioned him.

The man admitted he had been taking other persons' papers here and there several months, but said he "just looked over the headlines and let my wife look at them, then I took the paper back where it belonged."

Irvin called police. The man was taken to the police station, where he made a statement to detectives.

Irvin did not file a formal charge, but warned he would if such an episode occurs again—"anywhere on my delivery route."

And he added:

"I have the names of several other suspects, and they're being watched."

Beaty Child Is To Be Buried This Afternoon

Funeral services for Vicki Lynn Beaty, one-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Beaty of Ropesville, will be conducted this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Ropesville Methodist church with Rev. Ollie Apple, pastor, officiating, assisted by Rev. Doyle Wilson, Ropesville Nazarene pastor.

Burial will be in the Ropesville cemetery, Bryan McDonald and Son Funeral home announced.

The baby died of pneumonia early Tuesday morning in Lubbock General hospital.

Besides the parents, the child is survived by grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Beaty of Ropesville and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Turner of Levelland.

Spirit Of Clarence Darrow Still Mum

CHICAGO, March 13 (AP) — Claude D. Noble, Detroit magician, made his seventh annual attempt today to communicate with the spirit of the late Clarence Darrow, but as usual found himself plugged in on a dead line to the spirit world.

He knelt on a bridge above the lagoon, into which Darrow's ashes had been scattered, holding an autographed photograph of a mutual friend, Ed Sullivan, broadway columnist.

Noble recited the Lord's prayer and then entoned:

"Clarence Darrow, I am here in fulfillment of our pact. If you can manifest yourself to me, do it now."

Nothing happened.

For six years Noble's effort has been futile and he said he hoped his failures would explode the claims by so-called mediums, whose business, he estimated netted 80 million dollars a year.

Many scientists deny that the eagle will attack man.

Houston Still In Population Lead

DALLAS, March 13. (U.P.) — A population estimate made by the chambers of commerce of eight Texas counties as of Jan. 1, 1945, showed Houston and Harris county still in the lead as the state's largest city and county.

Harris county's estimated population was 626,800, up 25,681 from the 601,119 estimated by the federad census bureau in 1943. Houston was credited with 471,230 for its corporate city limits of 73.89 square miles.

Dallas Gain Largest

Dallas county, ranking second in the state, claimed the greatest population increase for the period. The present estimated population of the county was 506,000, up 63,033 from the estimated 442,967 in 1943. The city showed a population of 370,414 in its 50.54 square mile corporate city limits.

Bexar county and San Antonio were third. The county showed 400,000 population, up 35,725 from the estimated 364,275 in 1943, and the city's population was placed at 345,000. San Antonio has the largest city limits in area—80 square miles.

Tarrant In Fourth

Tarrant county and Fort Worth trailed along in fourth place. The county population was estimated at 297,000 as compared with 267,856 in 1943. The city claimed a population of 215,000 for its 65.18 square miles.

Other counties participating in the survey:

Jefferson (Beaumont and Port Arthur), 191,942 from 178,214 in 1943.

El Paso, 141,902 from 136,175 in 1943.

Galveston, 102,000 from 100,000 in 1943.

Potter (Amarillo), 70,000 from 58,042 in 1943.

Tax records, utility connections and other similar indexes were the basis of the estimates. Military personnel were not counted except where they maintained residences in the cities and counties.

Wallace Says He Plans To Learn To Fly To Learn About Aviation

WASHINGTON, March 13. (AP)—Secretary of Commerce Wallace told Senators today he intends to learn how to fly "to find out what the private airplane business will amount to."

The former vice president, making his first appearance on Capitol Hill since he was sworn in as a cabinet member, told the Senate commerce committee the aviation industry ought to produce annual revenues of $1,700,000,000 and a "possible 400,000 workers "eight to ten years after V-J day." He urged a federal aid program for building airports.

Testifying in a crowded committee room, Wallace asked Senators grouped around him at a large table if any of them knew how to fly. Senator Brewster (R-Me) grinned assent.

Wallace created a stir among spectators when he said:

"To indicate how important I conside: this program will be to the department of Commerce, I intend to learn to fly just to find out what this private airplane business will amount to."

Wallace testified on two bills, one of which would authorize federal airport expenditures of $800,000 in the next ten years. The other would authorize a $500,000,000 outlay in five years.

Million Gardens Goal For Texans In 1945

AUSTIN, March 13. (AP)—A million victory gardens is Texas' 1945 goal.

In a proclamation Governor Coke R. Stevenson asked Texans to think during Victory Garden week, March 12-17, of the increasing need of agricultural products by our armed forces abroad and of added demands from our allies and liberated nations.

"Texas as the greatest farming state in the nation has a major re-sponsibility in attaining maximum food production which is one of our strongest weapons in this worldwide fight for freedom," the governor said.

FDR Comes Out In Favor Of Baseball

WASHINGTON, March 13. (AP)—President Roosevelt made plain today that he wants to see baseball carry on this season, despite its war-time difficulties.

In the strongest words yet used by Mr. Roosevelt on this question, he told a news conference that he is all in favor of baseball as long as it does not require perfectly healthy people who could be doing more useful war work.

A reporter quickly asked if the President thought it possible, under that theory, for the leagues to operate this year.

Mr. Roosevelt asked right back, why not?

He said he would go to see sandlot games himself and so would most people.

Baseball people were elated over the President's remarks today. It was the third time he has gone to bat for the game during wartime . . . first in 1942 to keep the sport alive, again recently and now today.

There still remains, however, the thorny problem of baseball's manpower, which apparently hinges on provisions in legislation now before Congress.

In the last two months, numerous players who were previously classified as 4-F have been called for re-examination and inducted into service.

While the President's remarks today were not a directive, they may turn out to be almost that since Mr. Roosevelt's wishes have a way of coming true.

Their effect upon government officials certainly will be to give baseball every conceivable break, it was felt.

"We'll take our chances on the manpower problem," said Griffith, who probably is closer to the situation than any other man.

"What the President said shows that baseball has done a good job in the war effort, and we'll scrape up enough players to keep going under any conditions."

The President's remarks also came at an opportune-to-baseball time in view of the contemplated visit here this week by baseball's official representatives, Ford Frick and Will Harridge.

REDS ROOKIE CALLED

BALTIMORE, March 13. (AP)—Howard Moss, who led the International League in home runs and runs batted in last year, was notified today to report for induction into the armed forces Monday—the day he was to have joined the Cincinnati Reds.

PAIR IS HONORED

NEW YORK, March 13. (AP)—James Rafferty, winner of seven straight mile races this winter, and Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National A.A.U., were voted awards today by the New York Track Writers association.

Most Browns Signed As Squad Shapes Up

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Mar. 13 (AP)—Just a wee bit of salary dickering is all that stands between the management and a few of th St. Louis Browns' mainstays to put the 1944 American League pennant winning team together again.

Club Secretary Charley DeWitt is among those worried very little, if at all, about the contract negotiations. There are no holdout problems, he said.

In contrast with last year, when club officials weren't sure they even could assemble a team by the start of the season, the Browns now have a growing pitching staff, and only two of the 1944 regular infielders unsigned or absent. The biggest gap is in the outfield, for which only Milt Byrnes and Rookie Pete Gray are on hand.

Nelson Potter, the team's ace right hander last year, Tex Shirley, also on last year's staff, and Rookie Al Lamacchia from the Browns' Toledo club of the American Association, were added today to the mound corps.

Still missing from last year's pitchers as the squad enjoyed another day of good weather for outdoor drill are Jack Kramer, Denny Galehouse, Bob Muncrief, and relief George Caster.

DeWitt said, however, that Kramer was in St. Louis a few days ago, discussing terms and probably would arrive in camp by the end of the week.

Only George McQuinn, the league's leading first baseman last year, and Catcher Myron Hayworth, are missing from the regular 1944 infield which helped the team to its first American League pennant.

Mainstays of the outer patrol still unsigned—or at least absent—are Mike Kreevich, centerfield, Chet Laabs, left field, and Gene Moore, right field.

The club had 12 players in camp today for the second day of training.

Bible Maps Out P-T Formation

AUSTIN, March 13. (AP)—And now comes the P-T formation—a combination of the punt and the T. It will be seen in the Southwest Conference next fall.

The P-T is the brain child of Dana X. Bible, who for more than 30 years has successfully followed one general offensive pattern. But he's ready for some football shenanigans this year although not with any idea that he will revolutionize football.

In fact, the University of Texas coach isn't sure his new idea will work. He also wonders if it's a new formation. He just hasn't heard of anybody using it in his 33 years of tutoring college teams and more than two decades of serving on the National Rules committee.

"It is conceded that the T formation is not the best for passing," Bible explains. "However, the punt formation, which I have always used some, and the T call for the same type lines—balanced with detached ends. I plan to use the T formation sparingly next season. Suppose the defense is loaded to stop the T and we shift the backfield into the punt formation. There we have a good passing formation and we also may be able to spread the defense, at least loosen it up.

"Now, the defense may be able to adjust itslf to meet the situation and my P-T formation may not be an advantage at all, but I am going to experiment anyway. It won't be our bread and butter; just the desert. But I believe one formation will complement the other and that we may get some good out of it."

New York Giants Get In Outdoor Workout

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 13. (AP)—Under a warm sun and a temperature of 50 degrees, the New York Giants worked out for two hours and 40 minutes today, indulging in a lively infield drill.

Phil Weintraub, regular first-baseman, reported today, and the arrival of Bobby Barthelson boosted the number of pitchers now in camp to 13.

American League Maps Out Usual 154 Game Schedule

CHICAGO, March 13. (AP)—The American League will play a customary 154-game schedule for its fourth wartime season, but expects to wind up with a "considerable saving of man-miles" over 1944, President Will Harridge said today.

The league season will open April 16 as New York faces Washington in the traditional curtain-raiser in the nation's capital and will close Sept. 30 with 77 road games and 77 home games for each club.

In addition the great travel saving from cancellation of the major league All-Star game, Harridge said, the American League hopes to conserve numerous man-miles by having individual clubs use skeletonized squads on short jumps.

It also plans to keep umpires in each city longer than the usual maximum stay of two series per appearance. As has been the practice since 1943, the league will have only three complete East-West pivots instead of the customary four.

The schedule includes 120 night games, compared with the 1944 total of 133.

"As the season progresses," Harridge said, "we may be able to drop games here and there with the aim of saving mileage."

Another bulletin will be sent to the clubs before the season starts, he said, asking them to keep transportation conservation records which will be sent to Washington after the season.

All clubs will have 12 home Sunday dates excepting Washington which will have 11.

WTSTC Cagers Come From Behind To Win

KANSAS CITY, March 13. (AP)—Remarkable goal shooting by Clark Johnson, 6-foot, 4-inch center, and speedy floor work by his mates gave West Texas State Teachers of Canyon a 54-43 victory over Wichita (Kas.) university in the National Intercollegiate basketball tournament here tonight.

The Texans' triumph came after they had played listlessly in the first half which ended with Wichita leading 28-24.

'While Johnson's 21-point barrage was largely responsible for the Buffaloes' win, he had able assistance from Rufus Graves, forward and J. W. Malone, a clever, 5-foot 9-inch guard.

Vic Elliott, elongated Wichita pivot man, gave even a better individual performance than Johnson. The Wheat Shocker center scored 22 points, 14 of which came in the first half.

The fast-driving Texans took the lead three minutes after the half and held Wichita scoreless until 5½ minutes had elapsed.

The 1939-40 University of Minnesota hockey team won 18 straight games to win the Big Ten ice title.

First Show Carded At Boys Club Ring

Leather will start flying in the ring at the Lubbock Boys club tonight at 7:30 o'clock with eight bouts on the card for the opening show, it was announced Tuesday night by John Wilson.

Officials for the first club elimination program were also named Tuesday. Dell Morgan, coach at Texas Tech, will be the third man in the ring. Judges will be K. N. Clapp, veteran Golden Glove judge, Bo Sexton, well known fight referee of this area, and Earl Ince, jr., a local man who is now serving as a physical education instructor at Randolph field.

There will be no admission charge.

The opening bout on the card, in the 78-pound class, will match Bo Sexton, jr., and Buster McRae. In the 80-pound class will be Charles Wright and Don Stewart. The third fight, in the 102-pound class, will be Wendell Conditt and Leon Stewart. Jack Smith and Norman Lindsey will fight in the 105-pound class.

Bob Griffin and John Williams fight the fifth battle, and are in the 110-pound class. In the 138-pound class will be J. R. Bridges and Glen Wall. The semi-final bout on the card will be in the 145-pound class, pairing Bobby Baber and Bill Echols. In the finale of the card, in the 165-pound class, will be Russell Lee and Bob Donnell.

PITCHER SIGNS CONTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, March 13. (AP)—Connie Mack and holdout Russ Christopher reached a contract agreement today, shortly after the Athletics manager arrived home. The lean righthander won 14 and lost 14 with the fifth place Mackmen last season.

Ussery Sets Pace In Junior Track Events

With J. D. Ussery setting a fast pace, the Lubbock Junior High school Reds rolled over the Whites in the intra-squad track meet Tuesday afternoon at Chapman field, 37 to 20½.

Ussery was the individual star of the meet, romping to first places in the 50-yard dash, broad jump and chinning and running second in the 100-yard dash. His outstanding performance of the meet was his leap of 14 feet, 7 inches in the broad jump.

Another fine performance was turned in by Hubert Allen in the high jump, taking first place with a leap of four feet.

TWO STARS REPORT

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP)—Joe Kuhel, 38-year-old first baseman, and Alfred Ross, 18-year-old Trenton, N. J., semi-pro pitcher, joined the Washington Senators today.

Buses are overburdened as never before. A crisis is near. With more men, tires and gas going to war, present service can barely be maintained. Each day brings greater loads. When you must travel locally, let this be your creed:

1. Do Not Ride in Rush Hours, except to and from your job.
2. Have Exact Fare Ready, saves time and fuss.
3. Move Back When Driver Asks, speeds your ride.

Congress Ponders Bretton Woods

THE fact that in many important instances the American people have to rely upon the wisdom, the fairness and the honesty of their representatives in Congress is highlighted by current consideration in the national House of Representatives of the so-called "Bretton Woods proposal."

Agreed upon by representatives of 44 nations meeting in Bretton Woods, N. H., last summer, the proposal seeks to stabilize world economics in the postwar era. Because the proposal is so technical, and its structure so puzzling to the average citizen who is totally ignorant of global finance, the rank and file of the American people have no idea whether the Bretton Woods plan is good, bad, or indifferent. Most of us could get as much out of an essay written in Sanskrit as we could out of perusal of the Bretton Woods plan. Therefore, we must be inarticulate, devoid of any background upon which to base a plea for support or opposition on the part of our representatives in Congress.

There is a sharp difference of opinion regarding the feasibility of the Bretton Woods plan, and both extremes of this divergent opinion are subject to suspicion on the part of the average American. The wildest-eyed of the New Dealers are loud in their acclaim for it; the Wall Street bankers are just as loud in the opposition to it. Since the Man in the Street has reason to suspect both those extremes of selfishness and/or false pretenses, he is at sea in his own consideration of the whole idea.

All we rank-and-filers can do, therefore, is to hope that the members of the Congress —especially those on committees directly having to do with the problem—will study it carefully and then act for the best interests of the people of the U.S.A. If the solons will do that, we have no doubt that everything will turn out all right in the end.

If they don't—well, the economics of the world most likely will suffer, which means that most of the people in the world will be adversely affected.

Looking At The Facts

MANY economists who never met a payroll or managed a business announce glibly that the postwar national income will be stabilized between $150,000,000,000 and $200,000,000,000 a year. This compares with a swollen income of $157,000,000,000 last year and less than $90,000,000,000 in any peacetime year.

Now comes Dr. Rufus S. Tucker, economist of the General Motors corporation, with the prediction that the national income will drop sharply during the first two postwar years and then will rise to a point below $100,000,000,000 in the next three years. These figures are based on the prewar dollar, Dr. Tucker says. Gauged by the postwar dollar, which is expected to be inflated, the national income will be somewhat higher.

Dr. Tucker says prophets of a huge national income after the war permit themselves to be fooled by three factors. There will be fewer than 60,000,000 postwar jobs, there will be several millions of unemployed, and production per worker will not be as large as has been predicted.

People are wise to save money, advises Dr. Tucker, because the postwar period will not be the rosy-hued era that some of the starry-eyed planners envision.

A word to the wise should be sufficient—Mr. Wallace's grandiose views to the contrary notwithstanding.

The World Knows The Score

AMONG the other nightmares confronting Germany will be collapse of its currency immediately after the last Nazi has been disarmed. After World War I, inflation set in in crushed Germany, but it was five years before the mark became entirely worthless. Financiers today say that the reichsmark will be rejected everywhere on the money markets this time without delay.

A rumor has reached London that full-scale inflation has already begun in Germany, with commodities climbing in price and money slipping in value. In neutral capitals, where there have been dealings in reichsmark, there are no buyers at any price.

Thus the world knows what the German high command still refuses to admit—that the Nazis are "washed up—and done."

Men active in the international money mart have to be hard-headed and practical; have to see things as they are, or perish financially. That they have "called the turn" on the reichsmark's lack of value is important.

to define "ultimate consumer." But it still didn't carry the definition to the final analysis. It didn't say the "ultimate consumer" is a worm.

A "righteously indignant" person is one in whom is seething high internal pressure which he doesn't allow to blow off normally through the safety-valve of profanity.

CHICAGO—THE YOUNG GIANT

VI

The fire burned itself out around midnight on Monday. The houses in more than three square miles of the city—about 17,000 houses in all—were completely destroyed. On the South Side everything was burned as far south as East Eighth street. From there an unbroken area of destruction ran on the North Side up to Fullerton Parkway. The conflagration on the West Side ran from around West Twelfth street up to Randolph street, but not farther west than Sangamon street. The strong wind blowing from the southwest drove the fire steadily toward the north and east. There it burned its way to the edge of the city. Late Monday afternoon a little rain fell and that helped extinguish the fire here and there.

About 100,000 people, or one-third of the city's population, were rendered homeless. The number of persons who lost their lives is unknown; only 250 bodies were found, but the heat was so intense that many others may have been burned without leaving a trace. The value of the property destroyed has been estimated at $200,000,000. The face value of the insurance policies on property in the burnt area was about $88,000,000; but many insurance companies failed, and it is believed that the amount of the losses actually recovered was under $50,000,000.

The Hendersons had forgotten to bring chairs to the Park, so they had to sit on the grass whenever they sat down at all. They had just finished their picnic-like breakfast on Tuesday morning and were talking about the one subject which held all Chicago's attention that morning, when Charles Henderson rose to his reet, and said, "We might talk about the fire from now until judgment day, but it would get us nowhere. It's all over and belongs to history. This is going to be a busy day for me. I intend to rent a store, or a warehouse, or something of the kind over on the West Side, as a temporary home for the Bully Bargain House."

"Do you think there's a future for Chicago, after this overwhelming disaster?" This came from Jeff Martin.

"Future! Why, a new Chicago was born this morning. A new Chicago, stronger, finer, richer than the old one.

"We've lost miles and miles of shanties," Henderson went on "Rickety wooden buildings that should have been torn down years ago. But the people are still here, and people make cities. These people are going to make a finer and better Chicago. Come on, Jeff, if you want to take a long walk through the ruins and over to the West Side."

Before they returned, late in the afternoon, Henderson had rented a store on West Lake street, and had sent telegrams to four Eastern clothing manufacturers to forward at once by fast freight, to Chicago, duplicates of the last orders he had sent them. "These goods will get here in about 10 days," he said to Jeff, "and by that time I'll have that lousy store cleaned up a bit, the windows washed and signs painted. It will keep us going until we can get into a new building. Well, what about you, Jeff? Have you decided what you're going to do?"

Jeff laughed. "You decided for me this morning, Charlie, when you said a new Chicago was born today. I'm going to stay right here and grow up with the baby. I'm going to sell furniture. I know more about furniture than anything else—I mean what it's worth, the different kinds, and where to buy it. I have only a little money, as you know, but I'll get along on it. I want to build up a business of my own."

Henderson slapped him on the back. "Now you're talking. Get a business of your own as soon as you can. But let's get moving. I must rent a house—if I can find one—for the family to live in, and you with us, if you have no other plans."

"No, I'm homeless," Jeff said, "and haven't a stitch of clothes but these I'm wearing. I'll be glad to go in with you and pay my part of the expenses."

They did not find a house that day, although they traversed miles of streets in a hack hired by the hour. It looked as if the entire burnt-out population of Chicago was out in the West Side looking for living quarters. On Wednesday morning they resumed the search, and before the day was over they had rented a falling-down mansion on Chicago Avenue. It was much too large, and the roof leaked, and some of the floors were rotten, and the plumbing was out of order, and gas had not yet been put in. It had a spacious lawn, which at the time was litterred with weeds and trash. "We'll fix it up," Henderson said cheerfully, and when Mrs. Henderson saw it she remarked that it was lots better than sitting out in the park.

By nxt June they were in their new home on Willow street, and the Bully Bargain House was going strong in a building on East Washington street, which was so new when the Henderson outfit moved in that the paint was hardly dry.

Jeff Martin, in his furniture venture, was astonished by his own success. He developed a time-payment business that eventually attained huge proportions and is well-remembered today, though under another name, by the older generation of Chicago.

Looking At Life - - - - - By Erich Brandeis

TWO years ago Henry O. Larson, a Chicago policeman, was left $125,000 by Mrs. Florine C. Mix, who liked the way he patrolled his beat which included her home.

Soon after receiving the legacy he joined the Navy, but recently received a medical discharge.

According to news dispatches, he has applied for reinstatement in the Chicago police force and, if possible, would like to have his old beat back.

BRANDEIS

When asked why, with $125,000 to his name, he wanted to be a pavement-pounding cop, he simply said "I like it."

That's about all there is to it, isn't it?

What more can you get out of $125,000 or $125,000,000 than to like what you're doing?

You have probably talked about what you would do if you had a million. I know I have done it and I guess everybody else has.

So what would you do?

I am sure it isn't at all what you think you'd like to do.

I'm not a fortune teller or a learned psychologist, but I bet you I know what you think you would like to do if you had a million.

First of all you'd stop doing all the things you have to do now and do exactly what you want to do which, in nine cases out of ten, is to be a first-class loafer.

You'd take it easy, wouldn't you? You'd have a lot of clothes and you'd travel and see all the good shows and have servants and live the so-called life of Riley.

All right. Let us say you'd get that million.

You'd sleep till ten every morning and you'd get a lot of mail from people who are trying to sell you something and from Mr. Morgenthau about not having paid enough taxes and from all kinds of schemers and crack-pots who love you all of a sudden because you have a million dollars.

Then you'd have a row with the servants—that is the ones who show up for work —and you'd find out that you couldn't get any drawing room on the Florida Limited and that the Hotel Goldisocks is completely booked and that the only tickets for "Harvey" are available for three months from now at $12.50 a seat.

WELL, this is war, you'd say, but it is different in peace times. Is that so?

Ask the expensive doctor who has all the heart trouble and the ulcers and the arthritis. Ask the lawyers who their most profitable clients are.

I'll tell you—not the people who are just wishing for the million, but the ones who have it.

Oh, go ahead and keep on wishing. It's lots of fun—much more than having it.

Personally, I'm on my second million now. I've found out I'll never have the first one, so I am wishing for the second.

In the meantime I'll keep on pounding out a living on my typewriter and I hope Officer Larson gets his old beat back.

Economy Bloc Eyes War Spending

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

THE War department's contemplated expenditure of several hundred million dollars on new plants to equip the Army with fresh weapons for the Japanese conflict has bumped into serious opposition from economically minded men on Capitol Hill. They demand further proof that the proposed elaborate outlay is necessary.

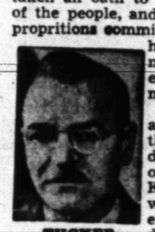

Secretary Henry L. Stimson has held several private conferences with key men of the House Appropriations committee, including influential minority members, but so far he has not sold them his idea. Nevertheless, he will advance the scheme again when that body opens hearings on the 1946 military budget on April 1.

Despite Stimson's partial denial that our forces in the Far East will be entirely re-equipped, leaving behind vast stores of armor in Europe, it is generally accepted that this program will be followed, if Congress okays it.

It has been formally approved by WPB-ers J. A. Krug and William L. Batt, as well as by Under Secretary Robert P. Patterson. They have not clashed directly with the Secretary of War, but they have intimated that he is merely trying to break the news of the vast rearmament schedule in a gentle manner.

When Rep. Albert J. Engel expressed strong disapproval of this policy at a behind-the-scenes talk, Patterson characterized him as "obstreperous."

"No," retorted the short, stocky man from Michigan, "I am not obstreperous! But I have taken an oath to look after the financial interests of the people, and, as a member of the House Appropritions committee, I am going to do that. You have got to show me why you need brand-new weapons and equipment for six or nine million men."

TUCKER

Engel, who is acknowledged as about the best informed man on the War department in the House, does not believe that time, money or lives will be saved under the Krug-Batt-Patterson program. He will vote for it if it will prevent even a few casualties, but his studies convince him of the contrary.

He points out that new barrels can be manufactured for rifles, machine guns, light and heavy artillery. In fact, extra and interchangeable mechanisms have been produced in abundance for wear-and tear emergencies. Trucks, tanks, armored cars and other mobile vehicles, he insists, can be refitted witht new parts in less time than will be required to replace them. The same considerations apply to the renovation of planes.

Batt stresses that different uniforms will be required for the Far Eastern climate. But the "obstreperous" legislators reply that both heavy and light clothting was turned out for wear in all kands of weather and in every section of the globe. Moreover, they add that conditions in Japan or on the Manchurian mainland, where the final scenes of the global drama may be staged, approximate those on European battle grounds.

Factories now making weapons for the German war, they continue, cannot be converted to manufacture of anti-Japanese materiel until after the surrender of Hitler, anyway. It will take many months to build other plants now contemplated. In either instance it is believed that there would be great delay in providing new equipment.

The critics suspect that the expanded rearmament schedule is designed largely to support the economic system by maintaining high employment. They regard the whole idea as in the nature of another "inspired critis." They are willing to go along if the plan will shorten the war even by a week, but they are skeptical. So are their Democratic colleagues, but they prefer to let the GOP-ers make the fight for economy in the open.

REPUBLICANS: James S. Kemper, Chicago insurance mogul and chairman of the Finance committee of the Republican National committee, has won his fight for establishment of a thoroughly organized and well financed party that will operate on an all-year-round basis rather than only during a few months before a Congressional or Presidential election.

At the insistence of the former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the GOP has hired Edward L. Bacher at $20,000 a year under a four-year contract. For years he has been the money-raiser for the chamber, and he is regarded as one of the best in the business. Kemper persuaded the C. of C. to give him a leave of absence so that he could collect funds during the Roosevelt-Dewey battle.

"I am sick of trying to raise money at the last minute for a sporadic campaign," Kemper told National Chairman Herbert Brownell. "If we are going to win, we must be in there fighting every day. And that takes cash. Otherwise, I quit!"

Bacher is also an expert on foreign affairs as they affect business and industry. Inasmuch as those problems may provide the political battleground for the next few years, especially in the 1948 struggle for the White House, the opposition believes in forming its lines now.

The GOP has never entered an interim period in such a confident mood. The leaders do not minimize President Roosevelt's popularity, the political strength innate in the Democrats' tie-up with labor and other popular groups or the hard row they have to hoe in the next four years. But they think that the cycle is changing, and they mean to be ready to take advantage of it.

WINNING THE WAR
By Albert Leman

THE greatest anxiety of the French people today is not over food and shelter—although lack of both is causing intense suffering—but the fate of more than two million captives held by the Nazis.

Scarcely a family is without a relative as prisoner of war, forced laborer or inmate of a concentration camp in the Reigh. Friends are apprehensive of what will happen to the exiles as Germany breaks up.

Will they try to revolt and escape? Or will the Gestapo murder them as it has so often before butchered hostages? The blood of parents, wives and sweethearts runs cold when they think about their absent loved ones.

LEMAN

This grim report on the secret agony of France is made by Lt. Philippe de Croisset, son of the late Francis de Croisset, famous playwright, who has just flown to New York from Paris. He has been fighting the Germans since 1939, and until a few days ago when aide-de-camp to Admiral Nomy, commander of the French Naval force and liaison officer at the United States Navy headquarters in Paris.

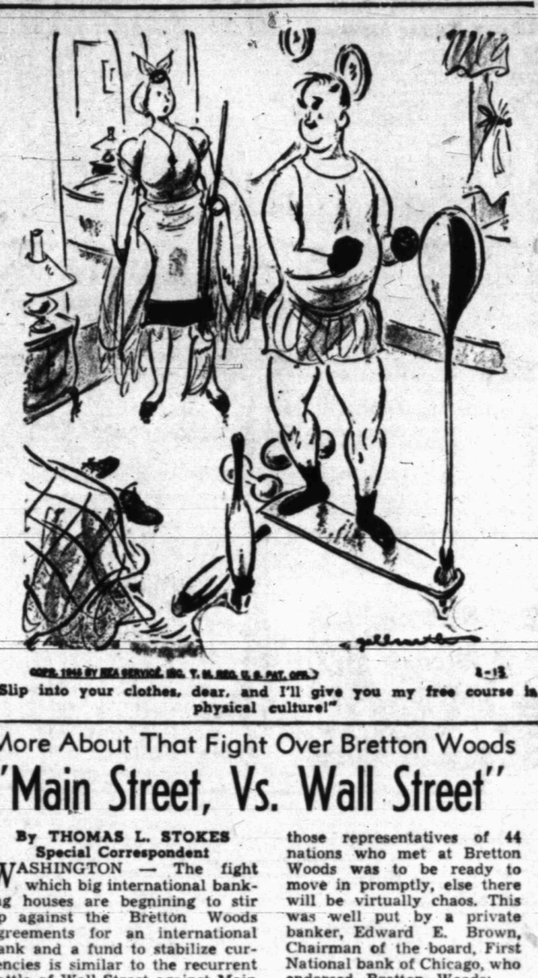

Lieutenant de Croisse discloses that, when France was defeated, 1,500,000 soldiers and sailors were taken by the Nazis. Subsequently men with large families, veterans of World War I, the seriously ill and wounded were repatriated. Nine hundred fifteen thousand military prisoners are still beyond the Rhine.

So far they do not appear to have been abused. Their food is not adequate and word comes by way of Switzerland that Red Cross packages are not always delivered to them. The feeling abroad is that, because General Eisenhower holds hundreds of the thousands of German soldiers, Reichswehr guards will not dare to maltreat French prisoners of war for fear of retaliation.

Unhappy civilians in bondage are in a different category; they have no Geneva convention to protect them. De Gaulle officials reckon that approximately 120,000 French Jews were carried off. Eyewitnesses of their removal swear that they suffered unspeakable cruelties.

The Gestapo deliberately broke up families, sending the father to one place, the mother to another and the little ones to a third. Affidavits prove that the Germans slaughtered many of the grownups. Grief-stricken survivors have never heard from their missing children.

More About That Fight Over Bretton Woods

"Main Street, Vs. Wall Street"

By THOMAS L. STOKES
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The fight which big international banking houses are begnining to stir up against the Bretton Woods agreements for an international bank and a fund to stabilize currencies is similar to the recurrent battle of Wall Street against Main Street ever since the New Deal began.

In the background, operating behind the cover of opposition raised by American Bankers association, are the same big New York City banking interests which fought through the years against nomerous domestic reforms, banking and otherwise, created by the New Deal.

STOKES

Gradually they have lost the power they once welded in Washington with removal of the financial capital from New York to this city. But they don't give up easily. They have had a big stake in international finance. They fear that the Bretton Woods proposals, now being considered in Congress, will bring their international operations too much under control of this and other governments, just as the banking, stock exchange and other New Deal regulatory measures curbed the control they once exercised domestically.

A Battle for Power

Make no mistake about it. This is a basic fight. The stakesare high. It is a battle for power.

It represents, on the one hand, an effort by the people of the world, in keeping with the issues of this war, to have some control through agencies created by their governments of those financial interests which hitherto have operated beyond the pale of government. On the other hand, it represents the fight of those international financial interests to retain control.

THE Bretton Woods proposals would give governments more control over credit needed to rebuild the devastated areas and to promote trade, though they represent nothing in any way revolutionary since private bankers still would have a vast field of operation, probably larger than ever before.

The committees of the American Bankers association, in which the big international bankers were influential, would accept the international bank with some modification but they are for elimination of the monetary fund for stabilization of currencies.

They say—wait; wait five years, perhaps, before setting up such a stabilization fund. Their argument is that things in war-torn countries are too unsettled. The purpose of those representatives of 44 nations who met at Bretton Woods was to be ready to move in promptly, else there will be virtually chaos. This was well put by a private banker, Edward E. Brown, Chairman of the board, First National bank of Chicago, who endorsed Bretton Woods:

"If the nations of Europe are to get on their feet and are not to fall into chaos, it is necessary that at the earliest possible date they have currencies with some degree of stability and which can be recognized and used as a basis for international trade . . . Reconstruction and currency confidence go together. To say that one must precede the other is like saying the egg must precede the hen. To say that currency staballization must be preceded by economic reconstruction, balanced foreign trade and balanced budgets is to put off the possibility of all these for at least a generation."

THE bankers fighting Bretton Woods make a point of the mistakes after the last war, both by governments and by private bankers. Their mistakes are a matter of voluminous record in documents of public hearings by the Senate Banking committee in 1933 and 1934 — the German bonds, Peruvian bonds, Cuban bonds, City of Rio de Janeiro bonds, which filled bank vaults in this country and, when they went sour, contributed to the banking collapse.

On behalf of the Bretton Woods agreements, it is argued that an international bank, on which are represented all the nations, would check such improvident and reckless loans.

It is argued further that such an international bank, supported by the governments, will be essential to help provide credit. Private bankers will hesitate to make large loans at reasonable interest rates because of the experience of the 1920's and the 1930's, unless there is adequate government guarantee, such as is possible under the international bank plan, where the risk is shared widely.

Man Tried Too Hard To Visit Girl Friend

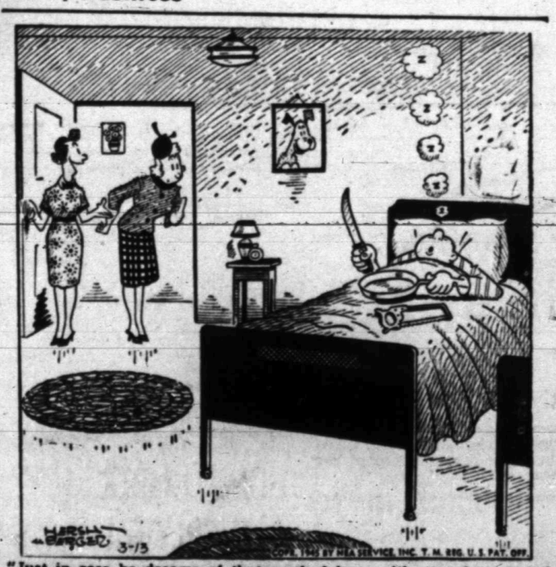

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 13. (U.P.) — Earl Clifton Stanley began serving a year in the Jackson county jail today because he tried too hard to see a girl friend.

The 24-year-old former soldier went calling on Mary Stark early yesterday. She didn't answer the door so he leaped through a closed window and landed in the bedroom of her landlord, Jake Ladinsky, aviation machinist's mate 1/c. Ladinsky worked him over and tossed him out through another window, which also was shattered.

Stanley was sentenced to a year in jail for malicious destruction of property.

Miss Stark, it developed, wasn't even at home.

resolution he said that while he had voted for the bill outlawing the closed shop, he would not continue to do so until an investigation of lobbying was made. The measure was before the House yesterday on second reading.

Rep. F. G. Swanson of Tyler urged the House not to rush into an investigation. He spoke in favor of referring the resolution to committee in regular order. He said he did not oppose an investigation, but he did oppose "an emotional stampede."

The House also killed by a vote of 121 to 9, one of the many proposed constitutional amendments before it. This one, by Rep. J. R. STOCKS RECOVER LOSSES

NEW YORK, March 13 (AP)—Stocks generally wilted in the early part of today's market but late buying support stiffened many leaders and closing prices were no worse than slightly uneven.

Transfers of 760,000 shares compared with 920,000 Monday and were the smallest for a full stretch since Nov. 7—and this tended to alleviate to some extent fears of threatened government steps to stem speculation.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was off .1 of a point at 61. The market lacked breadth. Of 890 issues registering 362 were down against 328 up or unchanged.

Ending with modest plus signs were Santa Fe, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and Standard Oil (NJ). Moderate losses were posted for U. S. Steel, North American and International Harvester.

Bonds were narrowly mixed.

Cotton..

NEW YORK, March 13 (AP)—Cotton future were narrow and irregular today as traders awaited clarification of the government cotton program next season. Following opening gains of 30 cents a bale the trend was generally lower although near months held firm on mill buying against textile awards and covering in March. Final prices were 25 cents a bale higher to 15 cents lower.

Spot cotton markets were quiet and steady. There was a fair amount of switching from March to later months.

Futures closed 25 cents a bale higher to 15 cents lower.

Food Argument

Army. At a meeting with Jones, Army officials threatened to take the matter to the White House.

Jones rushed to War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes for support. The latter took no sides in the matter, but set up a special committee to pass upon foreign shipments of food. The committee, headed by Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley, is, in effect, a super food allocations committee.

Represented on this committee are the same agencies which have representatives on a food allocations committee which has been functioning under Jones. At the WFA there was little hope that the new committee would meet with any greater success in dividing up the food supply than did the Jones committee.

Fear Foreign Reaction

Agenies speaking for foreign commitments expressing fear that failure to meet them might have far-reaching repercussions in London and other foreign capitals and weaken this country's influence at the forthcoming San Francisco world security conference.

Jones, on the other hand, believes that it is impossible to reduce civilian supplies further without endangering domestic morale and disrupting present food rationing programs.

In addition to Krueger and the three Army group commanders, the other lieutenant generals named for promotion included:

McNarney, deputy supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater; Carl Spaatz, commander of the U. S. Strategic Air force in Europe; and George C. Kenney, commander of the Far East Air force.

Russian Front

were scored by the Russians in this operation, but no new gains were reported in the frontal drive on Gdynia which already has carried to within eight miles of that Polish Baltic port.

Below Danzig in the canal-cut delta area east of the Vistula river, the Russians occupied seven towns including Neukrich, 14 miles southeast of the former free city. Soviet units previously had driven to within nine miles northwest and southwest of Danzig.

More than 1,000 prisoners were taken by the Russians in the fighting in the Gdynia-Danzig area.

3000 Germans Captured

Russian units which took Kuestrin Monday captured more than 3,000 German officers and men, including Col. Gen. Krueger, commandant of the Kuestrin fortress, the bulletin said.

Declaring that Soviet troops were attacking powerfully north of Frankfurt in an attempt to expand their Oder bridgeheads, the German high command said these assaults were being held.

Negro Hospital Dedicated Here

At the dedication service Tuesday night for Chatman Hospital and Clinic in Carver Heights for negroes, Chas. A. Guy, editor of the Avalanche-Journal, said the project marked the opening of a "new era in better living" for negroes of Lubbock and the South Plains.

Approximately 200 persons, including about 40 white people, taxed the capacity of Dunbar High school auditorium for the service. Others stood in the hall.

Civic Responsibility

Guy urged his negro listeners to remember that if Dr. J. A. Chatman, builder of the hospital, lives up to his responsibilities to them, then they must live up to their responsibilities to him. He asked that the colored populace cement relationships among themselves and pointed out this was necessary for civic progress.

Other speakers were T. W. Pratt, president of the Dallas negro chamber of commerce, and a former college teacher of Dr. Chatman, and Dr. C. H. Lyons, Carver Heights dentist. Pratt, a professor of mathematics at Prairie Lee, Tex., negro college while Dr. Chatman was a student there, spoke of the physician as a student. Dr. Lyons talked of his long acquaintance with Dr. Chatman.

Musical Numbers

Several musical numbers were presented by negroes, topped by two vocal solos by Catherine Oliver Hines of Amarillo, former member of the Fisk University Jubilee singers.

The invocation was said by Chilton Thomas, pastor of a Carver Heights Baptist church. The audience sang the national anthem and the negroes' national anthem.

Following the service an inspection tour was conducted through the hospital, a $55,000 building at 2305 East Ave. C.

Colored Boy Scouts assisted in seating of people at the dedication ceremony and helped show visitors through the hospital.

Lions Cavort Here In Ladies Night Fete

Members of the Lubbock Lions club engaged in an evening of fun and frivolities and then heard a distinguished former member, Judge E. L. Pitts of the circuit court of civil appeals at Amarillo, warn them of the seriousness of the problems of the post-war world in a ladies night program at the Hilton hotel Tuesday night.

A total of 210 persons attended the program.

Dr. J. William Davis was master of ceremonies and a score or more members appeared in various skits and stunts to the merriment of those present.

Out-of-town visitors included: Lois H. Vestal, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peeler, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde King of Levelland, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Finch of Morton; Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Birdsnog of Amherst, Mr. and Mrs. Will Houx and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lamar of Sundown; Pete Holam of Ysleta, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McAlister and Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Franklin of Clovis, N. M., and Mrs. Pitts.

furiously from street to street in Mandalay and virtually sealed main Japanese escape routes from Fort Dufferin, inside the famous city. Artillery fire smashed a Nippon truck column as it attempted to flee the fort.

Chinese recapture of Suichwan, former site of an American air base in central southeast China, was reported in field dispatches. The Chinese were attempting to cut a rail line and isolate the Japanese at Kanhsien, also in Kiangsi province, where American fliers were forced to abandon another air base less than two months ago.

The Japanese-sponsored separatist movement in French Indo-China brought an "independence" declaration from Cambodia, radio Tokyo said. Earlier the Japanese announced a similar step by Annam, also a French protectorate. Tokyo admitted continued French resistance in northern Indo-China.

Negro Youths Here Calmly Tell Of 93 Burglaries In City

Law enforcement officers blinked their eyes Tuesday as two negro boys, 14 and 15, calmly admitted dozens of burglaries and attempted burglaries which last night stood at 93, according to Aubrey Fawver, captain of detectives.

Fawver and Bill Mabray, chief of the detective bureau, said that even more burglaries might be confessed by the pair.

Every admission has been checked and found correct, Fawver said

"Possibly a third of the offenses had never been reported to police," he said, "because losses were small."

Some of the breakins date back to seven months ago. In none was much money taken, officers said, and very little property.

"I guess it was just our hard heads that made us do it," one said to county night Jailer A. L. Perkins.

Both boys have homes and are in school.

One of the boys was arrested late Sunday afternoon by C. H. Morrow, assistant manager of Forrest Lumber company. Working on his books, he heard someone attempting to break into an adjoining room. He hid himself and grabbed one of them. The other youth was arrested Sunday night.

On most of the jobs the boys worked together, according to Mabray and Fawver, who were joined in the investigations by Sheriff Grady Harrist and chief Deputy Sheriff Raymond Land.

Western Front

thrust, spearheaded by the 94th division, was made on the Third Army's right flank against the only sizeable salient still held by the Germans west of the Rhine. This drive extended from a point eight miles northeast of Saarburg to about six southeast. Resistance was said to be light to moderate.

On Patton's left flank Third Army troops north of the Moselle river cleared eight more towns as they compressed the enemy there to a pocket four miles square.

Prisoner Toll Mounts

The Third Army processed a record number of 6,446 Germans captured during the day, exceeding its previous high of 4,992 set Aug. 10, 1944. Together the First and Third armies have taken approximately 40,000 prisoners in eight days.

From the headquarters of Field Marshal Montgomery came an announcement that the final prisoner count for the Rhine operations of the U. S. Ninth and Canadian First armies was 50,477 and that American forces in the 21st Army group have taken 46,303 prisoners since the Germans' Ardennes breakthrough.

Berlin broadcasts declared that 70,000 American troops had been jammed into the bridgehead and were waging a "ferocious" battle with tremendous air support in an effort to break out of the Westerwald mountains and plunge on toward Berlin.

Downriver Crossing

One Nazi commentator said U. S. assault troops had crossed the Rhine in boats downriver from Remagen and had expanded the bridgehead to the north, being halted at Koenigswinter, two miles north of Honnef and about seven airline miles north of Remagen.

Bridgehead forces pressing south, he said, "penetrated into Hoenningen but were thrown back." Hoenningen is six miles southeast of Remagen, on the east bank of the Rhine. The enemy broadcasts thus indicated that American forces now hold some 13 miles along the east bank of the Rhine.

Situation Shapes Up To Confirm Reported Start Of Berlin Battle

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press War Analyst

Russian capture of the Kuestrin east-bank redoubt on the Oder tends to confirm Nazi broadcasts reporting that the battle of Berlin has been opened. They said nine or more Soviet divisions already are across the river between that point and Frankfurt, southern anchorage of the critical sector of the German Oder-Neisse defense front.

Moscow as usual withheld official information beyond announcement of the seizure of Kuestrin; but the time factor as well as the virtual Russian clean-up in Pomerania warrant the belief that Marshal Zhukov's First Ukrainian Army is again in motion westward.

SIMPSON

There have been no recent reports from the east front on weather conditions. It seems certain, however, that spring thaws starting in the Rhine valley in the west are also about due in the Oder watershed. The run-off of the southeastern Sudetens and the whole Oder valley passes down that river to the sea. Its imminence is an added reason for assuming that the Russians are already attempting to hurdle the Oder barrier before spring flood conditions.

West Front All Set

The situation on the Rhine also invites launching the long awaited Russian attack to invest and take or by-pass Berlin. With Allied troops over the Rhine via the Remagen crossing, expanding their bridgehead, and also lined up along the west bank of the river from Coblenz to Emmerich, it is obvious that no help can come from that front to bolster the eastern defenses. It also seems certain that as the Russian steam-roller gets into motion the eastern attack front is destined to expand both north and south from the middle Oder sector nearest Berlin and ultimately reach from the Sudeten foothills east of Dresden to the Oder estuary at Stettin, already under Red Army siege fire.

The final two-front Russian-Allied squeeze is beginning to take shape. Staff interchanges make possible a tactical as well as a strategic coordination destined to become constantly closer.

Reds Call Air Shots

It cannot be doubted that the Russians are already calling desired shots for Allied long-range bombers blasting at targets close behind the German east front. The long sustained night-and-day air attack on Berlin has that appearance. It is equivalent to a preliminary bombardment of the city by Russian guns of super range, and enables the Russian air force to concentrate exclusively on close tactical support of advancing ground troops, the mission for which Russian air power was designed and developed.

That intimate cooperation of Allied air and Russian ground operations should become even more strikingly apparent as the battle of Berlin progresses. A time is even now foreseeable when Russian-support aviation can strike effectively in aid of Allied ground forces as well as Russian and a virtual merging for operational purposes of the two air powers hasten the day of total German collapse.

Fala Passing Out Bones After Birth Of Twin Daughters

RHINEBECK, N. Y., March 13 (AP)—It's twin daughters—Meggy and Peggy—for Fala and Buttons. And all is serene in the Fala family.

President Roosevelt's widely traveled Scottie became a family man March 9, Dr. Thomas Sheldon, veterinarian, revealed today.

The puppies were taken home yesterday with their mother, owned by Miss Margaret Suckley of Rhinecliff.

"Fala and Buttons got along very well," said Miss Suckley, who is Dutchess county archivist in the Roosevelt library at Hyde park.

She denied published reports that Fala had his face scratched in an argument with "the Mrs."

Reliable sources said Fala became a parent through artificial insemination. Dr. Sheldon declined to confirm the report.

The artificial breeding method produces fewer puppies than the normal Scottie litter of a half-dozen. Dr. Sheldon has used it successfully with Sealyhams for years.

Miss Suckley declined to say what disposition would be made of Fala's offspring.
