MIKE JACOBS IS BEST OF ALL FIGHT PROMOTERS

MAX KNEW HE COULD BEAT JOE

NEW YORK, June 26 (AP)—You've got to take your hat off to Promoter Mike Jacobs. He can handle just about any situation. Mike had planned a little buffet luncheon for the gentlemen of the press the day following the Louis-Schmeling fight. Naturally, the way things were planned, Joe Louis was to be guest of honor. But when Max Schmeling stepped in and spoiled what was to have been the Bomber's party with a few well-placed, right-hand punches, he knocked Louis clear out of an invitation to the luncheon. It is extremely doubtful if Joe would have been in the mood to accept had such an invitation been extended. Or that he could have chewed much good food with the badly swollen jaw he sported after the battle. Schmeling appeared at the festive board wearing a pair of smoked glasses to hide the souvenirs he collected in the battle. Between sips of ginger ale Max talked shop.

"I knew I could beat him," said Schmeling. "You see, I came over here for the Louis-Paulino bout and what I saw convinced me that he could be beaten. I had seen the pictures of Louis' fight with Max Baer, and I had an idea that he could be reached with a short right. What I saw with my own eyes in the Paulino fight made me feel certain that I could beat him."

"Louis has a way of sticking out his left so that he is an open target for a right-hand punch. I had him figured out exactly right. Maybe, now you fellows will not kid me about being a movie fan. The movies helped me figure out how to bomb the Bomber."

Can Louis Hit? Sure! Just take a look at this eye. I had to get in close to land the punch I wanted to get over, so I had to take some punishment. But that was all right—I had planned on that. It got results. What was a black eye when it meant victory? "Your Mr. Louis is no 'dead-pan.' He flinched in the third round when I hit him on the cheek. That was what you call the tipoff. And after the eighth I knew I had him. He got tired when I was just beginning to come on. When the other fellow gets tired that is my time. Louis has never fought more than 10 rounds. Often I have fought 15-rounders."

When someone commented on the German fighter's courage in climbing into the ring and tossing right-handers at the supposedly invincible Louis, Max chuckled. "Why should I have been scared? Or why should any professional fighter be scared? A fighter who gets scared should be in some other business—not fighting."

Heart Set On Title The German has his heart set on becoming the first heavyweight champion to regain the title. He insists the possibility of earning the title bout with Braddock and not the opportunity of picking up a fair-sized purse was his motive for coming over and fighting Louis.

"I have plenty of money—at least as much as I need to live in comfort," said Max. "It is because I am filled with the thought of being the first man to regain the championship in the heavyweight division that I come back. That is my reason."

Lash Tops U.S. Distance Stars In Title Chase

FINLAND'S TEAM WEAK THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, June 26 (AP)—There has been only one break in each string of conquests achieved by Finland's foot-racers in the Olympic distance running track events, the 5,000 and 10,000 meters.

At the shorter distance, slightly over three miles, Josef Guillemot of France outran Paavo Nurmi, then just breaking into fast company. Four years ago, at Los Angeles, with Nurmi on the sidelines and a freshman crop carrying "the land" banner, Janusz Kusocinski of Poland raced off with victory and a new Olympic record in the 10,000 meters, while Ralph Hill, a 35-year-old American, lost a close, bitterly disputed decision in a record-breaking 5,000 meters final to Lauri Lehtinen, the Finnish ace.

Having thus shown Finland's grip on supremacy in the sphere of distance running, challengers at Berlin this August will suffer from no inferiority complex. From America's viewpoint, there is now real hope of conquest for the first time, not only because of the encouragement given to our runners by Hill's gallant bid but also due to the sensational performances this spring of Donald Ray Lash, 22-year-old Indiana collegian.

Lash Doubles Up
Lash electrified the foot racing world June 13 by smashing Nurmi's world 10-mile record on a rain-soaked track at Princeton. He was clocked in eight minutes 58.3 seconds as he whipped the strongest field that could be gathered to oppose him, and knocked one and three-tenths seconds off the mark set by the great Paavo in 1921.

The belief Lash can carry his speed over the longer Olympic distances is well founded. He has won the national cross-country championship for the past two years, at 10,000 meters. He has been doubling up in mile and two-mile races all spring in college competition, contributing a 4:10.8 mile and a 9:13.8 two-mile record. There is no doubt he will be primed to run both Olympic distance races.

Until Lash reeled off his phenomenal race at Princeton most Olympic experts were looking to Norman Bright, the California school master, to pick up where Hill left off for the U. S. A. four years ago. Bright lowered the American two-mile mark to 9:13 last year and may be a factor in the 5,000 meters at Berlin but right now he does not seem in a class with Lash. Nor is there any other American who seems capable of causing any Olympic excitement at either distance. The former Michigan State barrier, Tom Otley, is aiming for the 10,000, but he does not have standout ability.

America Second Best
Lash has a chance to do as well if not better than all our previous distance runners combined. The best America can show is one second place in each Olympic fixture. Lewis Tewanian, the Indian runner, placed second to Finland's great Hannes Kolehmainen in the 10,000 in 1912. We had to wait 20 years to find another runner-up in Ralph Hill.

Both 1932 Olympic champions probably will defend their titles, although there is some doubt about Kusocinski's condition. The Polish star was put out of competition for a while with a leg injury.

Finland has two newcomers for the 5,000 in Gunnar Hockert and Taisto Maki, both of whom have taken Lehtinen's measure. Lehtinen, now 27, has not returned to his record-breaking form of four years ago. Volmari Iso-Hollo, Olympic steeplechase champion and runner-up in the 10,000 meters at Los Angeles, probably will run the longer distance again, with Urmari Salminen and Paavo Koskela as probable team mates. Salminen was European champion at the distance in 1934.

The possibility that New Zealand's Jack Lovelock, former world record holder, will shift from the 1,500 to the 5,000 meters have added color to the Berlin prospects. Lovelock recently won a three-mile race in such fast time as to indicate he can carry his feathery form and speed over the equivalent Olympic route.

Causes and Cures
This brings up the question, what causes one to top the others? 1. Pulling up as the clubhead nears the ball. This pulls the club out of the direct arc to the ball. The cure: Make sure that your head remains absolutely stationary throughout the swing.

2. Gripping the club too tightly with the right hand is another cause for topping the ball. As the right arm has to reach about four inches further than the left, because of the grip, it is naturally under a little more tension than the left. If it has any undue amount of strain or tension, it might force the left or guide arm to buckle and become shorter, thus pulling the club up from the ball. Cure: Be sure to have a light, relaxed grip on the club with the right hand throughout the swing.

3. Standing too far from the ball may make a topped shot. If the player stands far away from the ball, there is a good chance that he will not be able to reach his mark on the downswing. His club and arms are just not long enough for the clubhead to get down to the ball.

Pacific Boxing Association To Urge Greater Safety For Amateurs

Failure To Concentrate On Shot Causes Topping, Lawson Says

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 26 (UP)—The 1937 national collegiate boxing tournament will be held in Sacramento next April 2 and 3, according to tentative plans made by the Pacific Intercollegiate Boxing association.

Divisional winners from all sections of the nation will come here to trade punches for titles.

Pacific coast college fighters will hold their elimination tournament here a month in advance of the national event.

I. F. (Crip) Toomey, of the University of California's college of agriculture, who has directed the Pacific coast tournament for the past several years, said an effort would be made to change collegiate boxing rules before next spring, in an endeavor to give greater safety to young fighters who cannot get themselves in the best of condition during only a few months of training.

Attention was drawn to the need of changes when Judson Hobart, welterweight from the University of California at Los Angeles, died as the result of injuries suffered the second night of the coast tournament here two months ago.

One suggested change would require a ring mat at least two inches thick instead of the one-inch mat in standard use. Another would force each victim of a knockdown, whether hurt seriously or not, to take a long count of at least seven without loss of points before going on with the fight.

The Pacific coast intercollegiate boxing tournament annually draws capacity crowds in Sacramento, and the national event next spring will be successful financially, sports followers here believe.

NEW YORK, June 26 (AP)—By all cinderpath rules Forrest (Spec) Towns, slim, graceful University of Georgia high hurdler, should not be an "Olympic hopeful."

He has not had the experience of at least seven of the nation's ranking hurdlers. As late as a few months ago he had not shown the natural ability that makes an athlete a leader in one of the most trying track events—the high hurdles. Towns may get there because of his indomitable spirit and a firm belief that he can get over the tall timber—in front of any competitor.

Towns first put on spiked shoes as a freshman. After having made something of a name for himself on the yearling football squad, Towns reported for track. He was a high jumper and his prospects looked none too bright. Weems Baskin, an assistant track coach at Georgia, singled Towns out as a hurdling prospect.

When Towns was a high school student at Richmond academy he got his early training. If one could call it that. There were a few exceptionally tall garbage cans that rested on the curb along streets near his home. Often Towns, a lanky lad ideally suited to the sport, would follow so audaciously today, was seen dashing along skimming the ash cans. The fact that they were ill-spaced meant nothing, for Towns had no aspirations of becoming a track athlete.

First Race Slow
Towns had no great desire to learn the art of clearing the high sticks even after Coach Baskin had singled him out. His first race over the 120-yard hurdles was anything but impressive. He was timed in 18 seconds flat. But by the end of his freshman year he had cut down to 16.1 seconds. As a sophomore he won the Southeastern A. A. U. high hurdles title, when he led the field across the finish line in 14.5.

It was not until this winter that Forrest really blossomed out as a first-flight hurdler. On the boards he lowered the world mark for the 60-yard hurdles, a record formerly held by his coach. Towns was timed at 7.3 seconds and cut one-tenth of a second off Baskin's mark. This spring Towns skipped over the 120-yard high in 14.1 in his heat at the Southeastern conference meet and repeated the time in the final. Several days later he equaled that time over the 110-meter high hurdles in the A. A. U. sectional meet. Three times in one week he bettered Percy Beard's world record of 14.2.

His temperament—his will to win—brought about the rapid improvement. Towns has a great heart and is a rare competitor. He hates to lose. He is the driving type of athlete—one who works hard all the way. In action he looks very much like Coach Baskin.

May Break 14 Seconds
"Towns has the ideal temperament for a hurdler," Baskin says, "I believe it's even better than that of Percy Beard, nationally known Auburn star."

Baskin once worked with Beard. In Baskin's opinion, Towns has the ability to break 14 seconds over the high sticks and Baskin expects him to do so before he winds up his track career.

"Spec" is a modest lad. In New Orleans, where he ran in the Sugar Bowl event on New Year's Day, a photographer asked him where the high hurdlers were. Towns pointed to one against whom he was to run.

"There's the best one," he said. Later the cameraman returned, saying: "You knew all the time you were the one I wanted to photograph. That's Towns' manner. He beat several top hurdlers in the race, including Sam Allen, Al Mourau and Johnny Morris."

Towns defeated a select field of high hurdlers in the recent invitation meet. His amazing late rush left the leaders as though they were standing still—a typical example of his powerful driving finish and his unwillingness to accept defeat when it is staring him in the face.

Kitty Carlisle, born in New Orleans, was educated in Europe.

The Sportsman

By LARRY BAUER

Old Whiskers seldom breaks in to the sporting pages although he provides thousands with recreation. There are places where the catfish is about the only large species available when the inhabitants get the urge to wet a line. His name is whispered—if mentioned at all—in the presence of scientific anglers despite the fact that the first fish caught by many of them was a bullhead or a fish-dier cat. Old Whiskers was an early day companion of numerous sportsmen who have since scaled the piscatorial heights. One member of the tribe—the channel cat—was classed as a game fish in some states. This fellow is built along more racy lines than his cousins and usually is found in clear streams with a good current. We recall a fight staged by a six-pounder.

The fish was taken with a fly rod on a small under-water artificial wiggler, while the angler was fishing swift riffles on the Big Piney river, once a noted bass stream. This particular channel cat lit out for deep water below the riffles and put on quite a show before being brought to net.

Later, we saw an angler take one of the common, or lake-colored variety of catfish while trolling a spinner-minnow rig for wall-eye pike. Although this fish weighed as much as the blue channel mentioned above, and struggled a bit, it certainly lacked the sporting qualities of the channel cat.

Surreptitious Noodling Catfish run to large size in the Mississippi, Missouri and their tributaries. Some taken by commercial fishermen weigh 60, 80 and up to 100 pounds. There is a ready market for these fish, caught mostly by rivermen who make their living by netting, jugging and trotting cats and other rough fish such as carp, buffalo and sturgeon. By the way, jugging for catfish on the big rivers is not a bad way to spend a day if you're looking for something new and are not afraid of work. About a dozen airtight cans or jugs, a boat and a good pal are necessary.

To each jug or can attach a length of strong line and a heavy sinker. Munks of liver on the single hook are good bait. Toss the jugs into the current and follow in a light, motor-driven craft. Try to keep all the jugs in sight all the time and be ready with a boat hook when one starts bobbing violently. Then there is night time "noodling." This is a very primitive method and is frowned upon by the law. The "noodler" strips, goes into the water and feels around logs and under rocks until he finds a catfish.

Getting his arm into the gills up to the elbow, he "rattles" the fish to an anchorage. Some "noodlers" have their technique, such as gently tickling the belly of the fish with the fingertips until they get the gill grip. They say it sort of mesmerizes 'em.

Another old American custom is the trot-line party. The participants spend the night "running" the lines every two or three hours and cleaning the catch. In the early dawn all hands turn to a breakfast of fried catfish served with hot cornbread.

Still another method of night fishing is to tie baited lines to branches overhanging the stream. Then go to sleep. Nature will provide the "rod action" if a fish is hooked.

However, the great majority of catfish addicts pick a shady spot at their favorite hole, stick their poles in the bank, and laze away with an eye on the corks.

Just fishin' in the good old summertime!

TREASURY CUTS ITS BORROWING
WASHINGTON, June 26 (UP)—Secretary Morgenthau said today the treasury was reducing its weekly borrowing on bills from $100,000,000 to $50,000,000. He said the department was returning to the practice of borrowing only $50,000,000 each week, on bills maturing in nine months, to retire similar issues.

Several months ago the treasury began borrowing an additional $50,000,000 on bills to mature next December 15. Morgenthau said he now considered the cash on hand adequate to meet all requirements.

CONSTIPATION* MAY SLOW YOU DOWN
Correct It by Eating the Right Meals

The most common type of constipation is due to insufficient "bulk" in the diet. When you continue to eat poorly balanced meals, over a period of weeks and months, faulty elimination often develops. You feel uncomfortable, lack your accustomed vigor.

Eat a balanced diet. Include milk, fruits and vegetables as protective foods. Also sufficient "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a convenient source of "bulk." Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the intestinal tract.

Fruits and vegetables contain some "bulk," of course. But scientific tests show that, with certain people, this "bulk" is largely broken down within the body. This does not happen to the same extent with bran. When you eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, you can be sure of obtaining effective "bulk."

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two table-spoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN often. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as a natural laxative food for constipation.* Eat it regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

NEW PROCESS ENABLES ITALIAN FILM FANS TO HEAR 'VOICES' OF HOLLYWOOD STARS

Creating familiar Italian voices for American screen stars is the job of Rome's "dubs," as they call themselves.

ROME, June 26. (UP)—"It's hard work," said Greta Garbo's "voice" and Fredric March's nodded in agreement.

Resting in the grove outside the studio, with Marlene Dietrich's and Victor McLaglen's "voices," they were discussing the troubles of the "dubs," as they label themselves. Garbo's "voice" rattled on, with March's finding room for an occasional word.

"Anna Sten has had a hard day," he said, indicating Marlene Dietrich's voice. "She's been doing the same scene now for two hours."
"Garbo" A Chatterbox
"Anna Sten and I Dietrich are the same person, you know," explained the talkative Garbo voice. Commandatore Arminio Conte, Italian film importer, came to the rescue.

"Perhaps I'd better present these actors by their real instead of their reel names," he said.
"This is Signorina Tina Latanzi. Greta Garbo's voice to Italy's movie fans. Fredric March there, who is also Franchot Tone, Robert Montgomery, Nelson Eddy and a half dozen other Hollywood players, is Giulio Panicali. Anna Sten here, who also is Marlene Dietrich professionally, is Lidia Simoneschi. Victor McLaglen (indicating a husky Italian actor) is Camillo Pilotto."

Intricate System Used
Italians are proud of their "dopplaggio," as they call the process of putting English spoken films into Italian. The best of modern equipment is combined with the talents of writers who not only translate the words, but write script requiring the same or similar lip movements as the American dialogue.

When this has been done, Italian actors read the parts under guidance of an exacting director. Eight hours is an average day's work for a "voice." It takes about three weeks to turn out a film. The pay ranges from $5 to $20 a day.

The directors first tried having the "dubbers" imitate the original voice. But a mishap showed the danger. An Italian actress was endeavoring to draw Garbo's lines in the deep voice known to Americans. At a serious moment in one of the romances she said huskily: "Da-a-a mi un cigare-e-e-e-cette." ("Give me a cigarette.") Italian audiences howled and ever since vaudeville comedians have been getting laughs with basso profundo requests for cigarettes. Garbo's voice now is the pleasant tinkle of a Latin signorina, only a shade deeper than the average here.

BETTER HOMES SEEN THROUGH BONUS MONEY

CHICAGO, June 26 (UP)—With a recent survey showing more than 34 per cent of the soldiers' bonus earmarked for home building and home furnishings, business leaders here predict that the mid-summer wholesale markets to be held July 6-18 will set new records for commitments since 1929.

Concentrating displays of home equipment, the value of which will run into $500,000,000, the markets represent an ambitious effort of 600 leading American manufacturers in this country's challenge to the European trade fairs. Covering more than 1,500,000 square feet of floor space in the Merchandise Mart, largest building in the world, the displays will include furniture, glassware, china, rugs, draperies, electrical and general household equipment.

Timed for a period when steadily increasing home building and buying is expected to reach its summer peak, the exposition will pre-

Colorful Salad Starts Or Finishes Meal According To Modern Menu

DEBTON, June 26—Originally a salad was a leafy vegetable dressed with an oil and acid seasoning. It was often garnished with fruit, meat, shellfish, or cheese. Later this has changed so that often the original garnish becomes the salad and the original green salad becomes the garnish. In fact, salads now may be so selected that they may be served as appetizer, main course, or even to take the place of dessert.

Salads must be of pleasing color and texture combinations. They should contain something crisp, they should be rather highly flavored, and if possible should contain contrasting flavors and contrasting colors. Materials should not be made to appear scrappy by using too many kinds or by cutting too finely.

Breakfast: Grapes, puffed wheat, crisp bacon, buttered toast, coffee. Lunch: Creamed, chipped beef, creamed peas, rice croquettes, spinach salad, bread and butter, watermelon, iced tea.

Potato Salad: Dice cold boiled potatoes into half-inch cubes. To each cup of potato add half-cup of chopped cucumber or sliced radishes, one teaspoon onion juice, two tablespoons bacon fat, and one tablespoon of vinegar. Season with Mrs. Waters scored highest among the members present.

Crops Badly Damaged By Severe Heat

Temperature Readings As High As 110; Drouth Situation Acute

CHICAGO, June 26, (AP)—Intense heat hastened the destruction of crops in drouth scourged sections of the West today.

Concern grew apace as the federal forecaster of Chicago described the current month as the second driest June on record. No relief was sighted. Meteorologists cited the "likelihood of a few scattered thunderstorms in the northern third of the north central states" but predicted generally fair weather accompanied by "abnormally high" temperatures.

In North Dakota—where officials reckoned half the state's 87,000 farm families were in need of assistance—readings of 107 degrees at Bismarck, 106 at Jamestown, and 101 at Fargo were recorded. Napoleon and Dickinson reported unofficial highs of 110 and 109 respectively. Aberdeen, S. D., reported a seasonal peak of 106 and Miles City, Mont., 103.

Cattle Shipped Out
"Conditions are the worst I ever encountered," stated M. A. Kennedy, South Dakota's WPA administrator. He said cattle were being shipped out by the trainload in some ravaged areas. Short harvests of oats and barley were in

Travel By Air Heads Toward Million In '36

6-Months' Passenger Total Estimated At 400,000, Substantial Rise

NEW YORK, June 26 (UP)—By July 1, approximately 400,000 Americans will have taken to the air during the first six months of 1936 in one of the largest passenger increases of any system of transportation, a United Press survey of the "Big Five" airlines indicates.

With the hot dry months still ahead to boost business, the aeronautical chamber of commerce announced that the number of passengers carried during this year should exceed the million mark. Air line traffic will run 25 per cent over 1935, the chamber said.

Transcontinental & Western Air, Pan-American Airways, United Air Lines, American Air Lines and Eastern Air Lines reported huge gains, new sections added, installation of the latest super airliners, smashing of speed records and capacity loads carried heralding aviation's greatest flying year.

Floods Boost Total
The aeronautical chamber predicted 1,079 extra sections for the first six months, 20 per cent of which were due to flood conditions in March. Increase in passengers was expected to exceed by 19 per cent the six-month period in 1935. Passenger miles were estimated at 171,000,000 up to July 1 as compared with 139,458,311 for the first half of last year.

TWA expected to carry 9,000 prospect for parts of Iowa. Chicago grain traders received private advice that 75 per cent of North Dakota's wheat was imperiled. The situation was "growing worse hourly" in southeastern Montana, declared Governor Holt.

Distressed North Dakota farmers went to Bismarck to hear Governor Welford's report on a $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 program drafted in Washington for the relief of agriculturists in the Northwest.

Millions of Hoppers
Millions of grasshoppers migrated through eastern Nebraska and western Iowa. Professor M. H.

more passengers and fly 10,000,000 more miles during the period ending June 30 than during the same period of 1935. May alone showed a 51 per cent increase in passengers over May, 1935. Load factor or amount of space filled increased to 74.09 per cent, highest in history. Mail and baggage also gained.

TWA began showing results of its campaign to lower as many records as possible by slicing the New York-Chicago time to three hours, 48 minutes and installing a regular flight of 15 hours, 23 minutes between Los Angeles and New York. The Newark-Chicago non-stop flight was lowered four times in eight days while the east-bound record of two hours, 54 minutes still stands.

Pan-American predicted a new high of 82,960 passengers for the first six months as compared with 69,133 for the 1935 half-year. Passenger miles were expected to jump 6,000,000 miles to 31,788,944. Addition of the giant Clipper mail service between San Francisco and Manila featured the period. Service also was added to regular Colombia, Cuba, Peru and Mexico routes. American Airlines reported general all-round gains. On June 25, four new "American Flagships," 21-passenger Douglases, will be installed between New York and Chicago. Sixteen more ships will be serviced this summer for use as sleepers particularly in the country-wide sightseeing tour. Providence, R. I., was added to regular schedules.

United Air Lines, with the other systems, saw increased business in the republican and democratic conventions and the Louis-Schmeling fight. It reported 49,160 passengers carried during the first four months as compared with 44,798 during the same 1935 period. Ten of the Douglas giants will be added to their fleet of 80 10-passenger Boeings.

Eastern Air Lines will carry 45,465 passengers and fly 19,422,920 miles before July, it is predicted. Passenger increase over 1935 for the first six months was 13 1-2 per cent and mileage increase 20 per cent. Eastern now has 15 round trips daily to Washington to handle summer traffic. The political campaigns are expected to boost flying on all lines.

IF YOU'VE GOT A SCOTCH STREAK—LISTEN!

WE'RE not one to suggest that you can run a Buick for nothing—we don't subscribe to the school of selling that makes believe even this great car can run on its reputation.

So you'll never hear us talking in terms of how many drums of fuel you'll save in a year, because such promises simply don't fit in with every driver and every driving condition.

But we do know, and do not hesitate to say, that on miles-per-gallon this Buick SPECIAL Series 40 will match or beat many a six in your experience.

We can safely promise you fewer fillings per trip—you'll have more uniform gas consumption over the whole range of the speedometer needle, with a mighty thrifty average over any service period you want to name.

And we know, from certified records, that when you count repair bills and overhauling along with the cost of fuel, you'll find you have in Buick a car that's as easy to take from the money angle as it is from the angles of style, comfort, safety and performance.

It's smooth, it's brilliant, it's swift—we're constantly hearing pleasant things about its easy ride and featherweight handling. But page Buick owners generally, and their stand-out comment is surprise at the frugality of its habits.

Price can't be keeping you from enjoying a Buick, since the figures begin at $765* list at the factory. If lack of knowledge about upkeep has been the drawback, come in now and let us show you a few things that will gratify your Scotch streak!

Join the Buick Safety Legion. More than 300,000 safe drivers already enrolled. See your Buick dealer for details.

$765 is the list price of the new Buick at Flint, Mich., subject to change without notice. Standard and special accessories group on all models at extra cost. Italy To Keep War Cost As State Secret

Expenditure Omitted In New Budget As 'Incalculable Factor' Now

ROME, June 26 (UP)—Sanctions have taught Italy that economic self-sufficiency, which hitherto has been considered absurd and anti-economic, is "a fatal political necessity," according to Count Thaon di Revel, Italian finance minister. Speaking in the chamber and senate on the 1936-37 estimates of his ministry, Count di Revel also announced that currency and trade restrictions would not be lifted now that the Ethiopian war was ended.

This last announcement meant to Italians that it is not yet possible for the government to allow its citizens to dispose freely of their reserves of foreign currency abroad for private purposes or for personal profit. It follows also that foreign trade must continue to be regulated and controlled by the government.

Minister di Revel's speeches admitted that the 1934-35 budget has closed with an effective deficit of $160,000,000, but almost in the same breath he added that Italy's total war bill in East Africa would be kept secret for the time being at least.

Banking Control Defended
He also justified Fascism's control of banking and key industries. He revealed that state intervention dominating "fresh blood" to toppling industrial and banking concerns during the "conclusive years of the economic crisis" had drained the treasury considerably more than was necessary for the conquest of Ethiopia. At a certain moment the state found on its hands nearly one-half of the total stock capital of the nation.

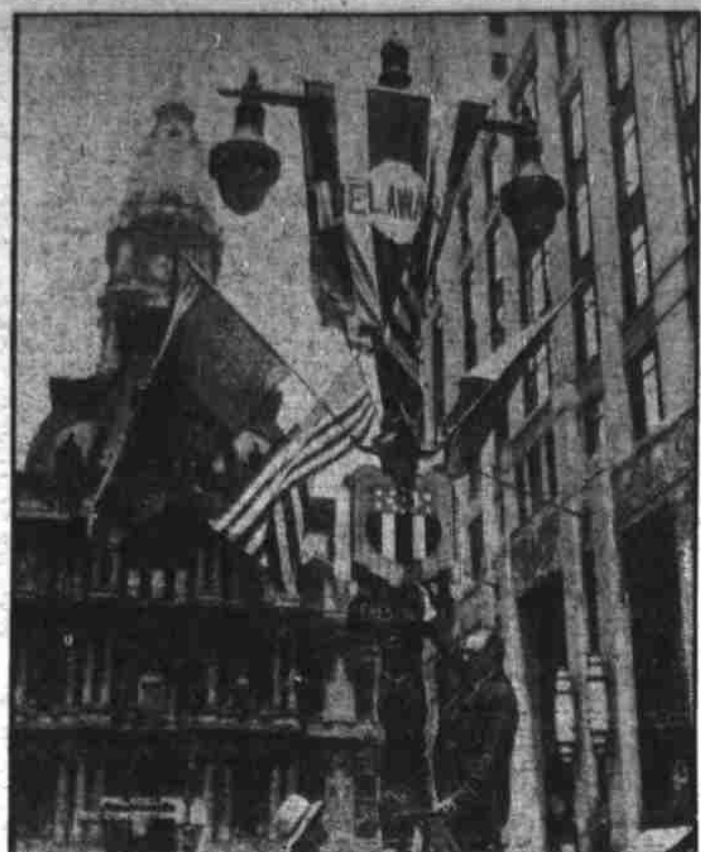

Official figures and statements internecinely issued have convinced Italians that sanctions have hurt the nations applying them, and have been without profit to the league.

It is contended that although sanctions have reduced Italian exports, counter-sanctions have enabled it in a greater degree to reduce imports. During the sanctionist months of December, January, February and March the adverse trade balance grew steadily.

Italian economists assert that the figure would have been still more unfavorable if statistics for commerce with the colonies were omitted, and moreover, the improvement was the more significant if the quality of the goods imported is taken into account.

War Materials Imported
For example, Italian officials point out, in March, 1936, as against a reduction in all other items, there was an increase of more than $2,000,000 for imports of maize, iron, copper, lead, machinery, coal, oil and other materials useful in war.

Stirring Tale Of Captain Blood Opens For 2 Days At Ritz Friday

Another of those stirring Rafael Sabatini tales has been filmed into a masterpiece of modern production and will be shown as "Captain Blood" at the Ritz theater Friday and Saturday.

Filmed on a gigantic scale, this tale of the seventeenth century sea pirates is said to be one of the most elaborate and pretentious productions in screen history. Settings include great sailing vessels of the period, massive and full-battered, parts of a village in England, most of the old city of Port Royal, King James II's palace, a governor's mansion and costumes adapted to everyone from a king to a slave.

Still it is not the settings which make the show one of the most enjoyable of the current cinema season. It is the thrilling story of Minister di Revel in the chamber announced that the year 1934-35 closed with an effective deficit of $160,000,000, including $75,000,000 spent on East Africa and $85,000,000 on balancing the deficit on the railways. If these items are subtracted, government officials stress that the budget would show a deficit of only $20,000,000.

Italian experts recall that for the current financial year 1936-37, preliminary estimates had anticipated a deficit of approximately $120,000,000.

Some of the government men will admit that sanctions and counter-sanctions have cut notably into certain sources of revenue, but, they all agree, the voluntary contributions of gold and silver have brought in hundreds of millions and the finances of the Italian state "have remained sound and healthy." All believe that it is permissible to state now, subject to strict discipline and control, that Italy will find the means to equip its economy, develop her colonies and defend its future.

War Expenditure Secret
It is interesting to note that discussing the budget for 1936-37, Minister di Revel justified the omission of expenditure on the war as an incalculable factor. He pointed out that whereas "indispensable police operations" would demand extraordinary expenditure during the coming year, it would be much less than that necessitated by the continuance of war.

Minister di Revel himself has admitted that all estimates of revenue compiled by the government have left out of account the "inevitable repercussions of sanctions on receipts." However, the consequent balancing of the budget for 1936-37, he revealed, was not due to "accountancy expedients" but to notable demands on the taxpayer.

No matter how hard an impartial observer might try, it is impossible to get Italian officials to divulge the war price Italy had to pay for Ethiopia. Minister di Revel told parliament that it was impossible to do so because "the moment was not ripe."

Economists estimate, however, that expenditures for the Ethiopian campaign has been kept within the limits foreseen by the government.

All told, however, quest for economic news in official quarters today invariably ends with a eulogy of the East African campaign, the cost of which, it is affirmed, was relatively small in proportion to the great results obtained.

Roaring Yarn Of Texas In Queen Show

Peter B. Kyne's Adventure Novel Is Brought To Local Screen

A roaring yarn of the Lone Star state is vehicle which carries Charles Starrett and Joan Perry through Peter B. Kyne's latest adventure, "The Mysterious Avenger," showing Friday and Saturday at the Queen.

Starrett is cast as a Texas ranger sent to solve the mysterious disappearance of cattle from ranges. While engaged in the solution of the crime, his father is killed, and the father of the girl he loves is suspected.

No archaic western, the show is pitched to the key of modern times and it is primarily a story of cattle rustling on a modern scale.

Peter B. Kyne, author of many picturesque novels, wrote the original story of the "Mysterious Avenger," which was adapted to the screen.

FASHION, ASSISTING THE LUGGAGE-TOTER, OFFERS CONVERTIBLE WRAPS FOR MILADY

By ADELAIDE KERN
NEW YORK, (AP)—"Jekyll and Hyde" evening wraps are the latest chapter added to the book of summer fashions.

Some serve both as a cape and train in the same evening, others walk out as sports togs by day and evening wraps to top casual dance frocks by night. But all are convertible, to more uses than one and are designed as boons to the week-end guest who dislikes to carry much luggage.

One American designer has launched a glamorous gown of sapphire chiffon whose full flowing skirt is topped by a long apron train which ties about the waist and sweeps out in the back. When the wearer wishes it may be untied, rolled about the neck and used as a diaphanous wrap for warm summer evenings.

Swagger coats of black velvet with unpressed pleats breaking into soft fullness below a round yoke are ready to top cocktail frocks of sheer black chiffon or silk mouseline on cool afternoons and step out the same evening to dance on a star-lit roof. One of the smartest two-way wraps is designed for debutantes—a short, swaggering coat of white sharkskin which can be worn with day sports clothes and informal pique evening gown.

Besides the convertible models, there are hundreds of new evening wraps which are frankly "glorified." Crisp silk organza swaggar coats striped with velvet bars, velvet swaggar coats, some plain, some pleated in sunburst effect and affeta coats based on flared tunic lines with elbow-length puffed sleeves are among the favorites.

One of the most glamorous is a short full coat of chiffon, whose big bishop sleeves are marked by bands of several contrasting colors stitched with silver threads. Short puffed sleeved jackets of pebbled satin, whose color matches that of the gown, are often shown with filmy mouseline frocks.

Velvet makes one of the coolest, coolest wraps shown this season. It is a hip-length cape of black net covered with three tiered flounces of black velvet splashed with big colored chenille dots.

White is a color often seen in the seasons new evening wraps, since it can be worn with many frocks. Vivid cherry red and pastel shades are other favorites.

Porcupine Captured By Boys Near Here

Jerry and James Mancill, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Marie Mancill, Thursday caused the capture of a porcupine they found on the farm of Earnest Hull, eight miles north of here.

Using Hull's big bulldog to help them in their search for rabbits, they chanced upon the strange animal.

Remembering a story their mother had read them about porcupines only recently, they knew

Sheer cherry red organza barred in velvet checks of the same hue makes this cool evening wrap for summer festivities. It is designed with a scarf neckline and three-quarter length puffed sleeves. Ruby and diamond ear clips and bracelet recall its vivid color. Note the new summer coiffure rolled softly back from the face without a single set marcel wave.

what they had cornered. The dog was not so wise and fearlessly tackled the new game.

After several attacks, he stood off, bleeding and puzzled while the boys cornered the porcupine and shouted for Hull to assist in its capture.

Discovery of the animal in this area is considered unusual since the nearest regions to which the porcupine is native are northwestern United States and South and Central America. Only other porcupine known to have roamed wild in this section was one caught recently near Menard.

The animal is slightly larger than a skunk, has long black and gray hair. When touched, he bristles a perfect mass of spines. Mancill brought the porcupine here Friday and presented it to the city as an addition to its growing "zoo."

Mother Advised Ailing Daughter To Take CARDUI

Many women have taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers who had been helped by it.

"I would have severe cramping spells," writes Mrs. F. C. Allen, of Smithdale, Miss. "I would get nauseated, and feel faint and would go to bed. I would be very nervous for two or three days. I was afraid to go away from home, for fear I would faint and fall. My mother, having used Cardui, with good results, advised me to try it. 'I am so glad I took Cardui and got relief, for it had done wonders for me.'"

If you suffer this way, send to the drug store for a bottle of Cardui and begin taking it today. Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.—adv.

LAND TAX WILL CONTINUE

Texas voters have made up their minds on one policy which will find expression when the state automatic tax board meets July 15. This policy is that they have rejected the abandonment of property taxes as one phase of state government and school support, even though the question of revising such property taxation is prominent in the political campaign.

Voters took the step several years ago of exempting the first $3000 assessed valuation of homesteads from state taxes. In effect, that exempted the average home entirely.
So far, the exemption has not been extended to county and city and district taxes, and the question of its ultimate limit is still before the people.

But the proposal, even though advocated by more than one candidate for governor, of lifting the property tax entirely from valuable land and buildings, industrial and business establishments, the great ranches and huge tracts of undivided ownership, has been vetoed in principle, and made impossible of achievement in Texas.

Indeed, in the past three and a half years the innate wisdom of the single-tax idea, that of concentrating taxation upon real property, more precisely upon land itself, has made a deeper impression than in the long period since Henry George proposed it. This idea is based upon the fact that such a taxing policy will first tend to break up large land holdings, and second, to force improvements and productivity upon the more valuable land.

In Texas, there will be an extension of the policy of levying license fees for the cost of supervising utility and public-interest services. The production and gross receipts levies will be extended. Various principles of reaching earnings, without going to a full-fledged state income tax, may be followed. The sales tax now in effect on cigarettes, gasoline and liquor, may be extended to other specific commodities, with virtually no prospect at least for years, of becoming a general sales tax. Emergency conditions such as force a general sales tax, have passed.

Juggling of taxation, shifting the subjects of taxation and the allocation of the tax load is a permanent element of politics. But Texas has moved definitely out of reach now of abandoning physical property, real estate and improvements, as one of its major sources of tax revenue for support of the government, its institutions and educational system.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

NEW YORK — At last bobs up the reason why most celebrities are easily annoyed. Columnists are to blame.
Lured by the siren voices of their own typewriters, they sometimes grow delirious and misspell the names of those they write about. And if there is anything that infuriates a celebrity, it is to have his name misspelled.

Eddy Duchin is such a one, and happen-chance you were to spell it with an i-e, like this: Eddie, it is a verity that his manager would have you on the phone in less time than it takes to dial the number. He no hit you, but all else same he no like. This department fell into such an error once and Mr. Duchin's representative was some annoyed.

Then there is Katharine Cornell. When Mr. Ray Henderson, who is her director of public relations (when he isn't writing musical shows of his own) sends out copy he always underscores the second A in Miss Cornell's name. This, he feels, is important, and in Ned York a show of impatience on the part of those whose names have been maltreated is entirely pardonable. Their names are their trade-marks.

There is, however, one lass on Broadway who doesn't even flinch when her name is misspelled. This is Vi Mele, and the reason she is so resigned to misrepresentation is that practically nobody ever spells her name correctly. Miss Mele is the songstress who warbles so tastefully for Johnny Johnson's orchestra, and her fan mail daily includes such misspellings as "Wine Meal" to "Fi Nally."

"Angry?" she inquires philosophically. "There are 500 variations to Shakespeare's name and everything from Jakenbier to Shaxpur is acceptable. Who am I to get a mad on?"

Paquita, the Spanish concert pianist, is the sister of Enrico Madriguera, the orchestra leader. She is married to Andres Segovia, one of the most eminent concert guitarists in the world. . . . An address that has always intrigued me is Norman Rockwell's, which is Lord Kitchener road, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Capt. Henry G. Andrews, who indulged in many a cat-fight, or maybe they call them dog-fights, over the German lines in France during the war, has set another record. Recently he whanged a big TWA liner from Newark to Chicago in 9 hours and 48 minutes. That's the fourth time the record has been lowered in the space of two weeks. But of more interest is the fact that those three hours lifted his total of flying hours to 12,000, nearly a year and three months in the air.

They tell me Peter Arno, the artist, used to be a band leader, and that one of his sax players was Rudy Vallee. . . .
There's a place in England which stutterers should avoid, at least in conversation. It's Skutterkelp Wormslowtump.
. . . Stuart Churchill is authority for the statement that beets burn calories. . . . That is, a slow walk makes the latter lose 250 calories, but a hot swing number steps the expenditure up to 1,500.

The Daily Washington
Merry-Go-RoundBy DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

PHILADELPHIA — A subject very much on the lips of the crowds that mill through the hotel lobbies and the convention hall this week is Big Jim Farley.

"The Three-Man Job," as he has been nicknamed by republican sharpshooters, is the ringmaster of the show. Everything revolves about beaming, gladhanding Jim.
But that is not the reason he is such an ardent subject of conversation.

What's on the minds of the boys from back home, who will have to drum up the voters, is what Jim and the president are going to do about those three jobs he is holding down: postmaster general, national chairman of the party, and New York state chairman.

Jim has become a major issue in the campaign, and nobody knows it better than the local leaders.
The republicans, among others, have not let them forget it. They are concentrating a raking fire on Big Jim—on his three-job role, his patronage operations, his Tammany connection, and his recent inept crack about London being just the governor of a "typical prairie state."

Republican Precedents Jim is not the first man to be simultaneously postmaster general and national chairman of a political party. He has a long line of republican and democratic predecessors.
And the patronage operations of Walter F. Brown, Hoover's postmaster general and campaign manager, were as blatant as anything Farley has pulled.

Brown, addressing a convention of postmasters early in 1932, bluntly warned them that if they didn't get out and work for Hoover, they would be replaced by others who would. But the voting public is notoriously short-memory, and all that's now forgotten.

Worried
The republican strategy of making Big Jim a major issue in the campaign is worrying administration generalissimos.

Privately they consider Farley a necessary party adjunct, and say bitterly that if Landon should gain the White House, John Hamilton would soon be negotiating Jim, down to the last detail. But they recognize that Jim is not a feature of the new deal parade before the country.

Farley is very popular personally among the democrats, a d most of them think he has done a swell party job. But they don't want his big, bald gum-chewing visage as an issue.

Two years ago, when the president forced various high democrats from the national committee because of their lobbying activities, he also indicated that Farley would be shortly undergo a change in status.
But the weeks ran into months and the months into years, and Jim has continued to wield his triple scepter.

There are two reasons for this:
(1) Jim is proud of his cabinet post and hates to give it up; (2) the president has had difficulty finding another man of the kind he wants to fill the place.

Administration insiders are predicting privately that by the time the campaign gets under full blast, Farley will be out of the cabinet, retaining his national chairmanship.

Jim, asked about this, merely smiles amiably and says: "No objection to anybody guessing. How you coming?"

Talmadge-Hitler
The Georgia delegation, 100 per cent pro-Roosevelt, and 160 proof anti-Talmadge, brought to Philadelphia a new story about their red-galvanized state executive.

A visitor recently called on Talmadge, according to this story, and the talk turned to books. The governor said he wasn't much of a reader.

"I haven't the time," he explained. "I've been kept mighty busy.
But there is one book I did take time out to read. It's Hitler's autobiography, 'My Fight' (Mein Kampf). That's some book. Have you read it?"

"No, I haven't."
"Well, you ought to. It's something every man in the country ought to read. It's the story of one of the greatest living men in the world. I've read it seven times."

"Mein Kampf" in its original version tells of Hitler's plan to attack France, seize the Russian Ukraine and make Germany ruler of Europe. Since his rise to power, the book has been greatly moderated in its foreign translations.

Senator Norris' Re-election
Not more than one or two people know it, but there is one man at this convention who holds the political fate of George W. Norris, most liberal and crusading veteran of the senate, in his hands.

He is Terry Carpenter, a filling station proprietor in Scotts Bluff, Neb., former member of congress, and now democratic candidate for the senate to fill Norris' shoes.

Carpenter got the nomination after Norris declared he would not run for re-election. Since then, however, senate progressives and Roosevelt's friends have laid down a steady barrage of persuasion for him to enter the race. And although no one is advertising the fact, Norris finally has yielded.

Offset Coughlin
What finally persuaded him was the advent of the Coughlin-Lanka third party. Norris has decided to go to bat for the progressive principles he believes Roosevelt has stood for, in order to offset the Coughlin-Lanka appeal.

Naturally this is a great break for Roosevelt throughout the middle west. But there is a hitch. Norris will run on an independent ticket. He will shun both republican and democratic parties.

And in a three-cornered race, Terry Carpenter, the democratic contender, might easily pull enough votes from Norris to throw victory to the republican contender.

Congressman Robert Simmons.

A lot of pressure, therefore, is going to be put on Carpenter to get him to withdraw. Carpenter has always called himself a "Norris democrat," was elected to congress in 1932 by acquiescing his opponent of lacking Norris' endorsement.

Carpenter is going to Washington next week to talk to Norris, and the Roosevelt politicians are wondering just how good a "Norris democrat" that conference will prove him to be.

Chapter 33 ENIGMA

Dirk did not hear Devine go out. He had dismissed him in a measure with Mary's report that Hope would be glad to see him. Next morning, before having breakfast, he inquired of Timothy if Mr. Devine had spent the night, learned that he had not, and made further inquiries of Mary.

Mary's report was rather rose-colored. Mrs. Joris was much better since her father's visit. But he had been obliged to go back last night.

Dirk, still skeptical, knowing Mary's gift of credence, said: "Does she really seem better?"

"But she does, sir," Mary answered brightly, and with traces of amazement at what she had to announce. "She was playing her guitar this morning. An emphatic nod as Dirk stared. And singing, sir," she added.

"This was too much. 'I'm going in to see her,' said Dirk.

"Not now, sir," pleaded Mary. "I don't mean now. I mean during the afternoon. I expect to be home early."

Dirk stood thinking, and Mary asked: "Did you telephone Miss Isabel, sir? She called up again last night."

"I shall," Dirk said. "And do you know how Miss Rupert is, and if there's any chance of his being home soon? Mrs. Joris asked me this morning."

"No, I don't," Dirk answered. "Perhaps I'll know today, when Mr. Sanford Joris comes back. Say to Mrs. Joris that I'll be in to see her. This afternoon, about three o'clock."

Hope was up when Dirk came in. She sat in the big gilt and tapestry chair, mending a stocking. Her hair was smooth, the bruise-like shadows beneath her eyes were not so dark, and there was a trace of rouge on lips and cheek.

She wore the same pale yellow dress with the fur about the throat. Not far away the electric stove poured warmth from its fire-colored bowl, glowing like a great tropical flower.

"Too much!" she asked, indicating the stove.

And Dirk, who had come in tingling with cold, and full of fresh air, replied that he would get used to it. Mary, however, turned off the stove, and no one objected.

Dirk took the chair beside Hope's.

"Running up to Albany early tomorrow morning," he explained. "Be gone all day, and had to know about this sudden improvement. . . . You are better," he added, having looked her over.

The Rev. Devine, he had discovered, was actually on the way back home, having checked out of the Pennsylvania and taken a train shortly after midnight. That his visit had done Hope good, there was no question.

"So you forgive me for wiring him," he said, as if she had followed his thoughts. "For wanting to share my responsibility."

"All's well that ends well," she answered, as if she had indeed followed his thoughts. "Got my cigarettes?"

He laid them on the table beside her—between the darning egg and a little pin-cushion full of needles and shaped like a tomato. He lighted the cigarette she had extracted, and picked up the pin-cushion. She watched him examine it. Presently she laughed.

"You're funny," she said. "Funny?" asked Dirk. He was smiling, too. Her laughter was infectious.

"Curious," she explained. "There's not anything you miss."

"Oh, yes, there is. Lots."

"Well, perhaps there is. But I didn't think you knew it. That cushion, now. You look at it, and you see how worn it is, and all the needles. And you conclude, 'What a domestic female she is! Which is all very well, but your premise is wrong. The cushion is Mary's.'"

"I see," Dirk said, and put the cushion down. "I shouldn't have to start from wrong premises, however, if you would confide in me. If you would tell me, that is, just what sort of girl you really are."

His smile might have robbed the statement of any significance. She returned his smile.

"Confide in you? But why not?" She leaned toward him. "I don't even own a needle," she whispered. "And here's the way I darn. Well," as he stared. "What do you think of it?"

"I'd say," testified Dirk, "that you ride better than you sew."

"Horses," she admitted. "Yes, I know horses."

"You must miss them," he said. "We'll go for some rides when you get well."

"No," shaking her head. "I don't miss them."

"Why not?"

"Because I don't want to."

Demos Have 3,000 To Make Speeches

PHILADELPHIA, June 26 (AP)—Setting its big guns in place for the campaign oratory in August, the democratic national committee speakers bureau has announced 3,000 persons were listed to make speeches for the national ticket.

The list of speakers comprises senators, congressmen and governors, and Paul Aiken, director of the bureau, said more "are coming in all the time" to volunteer their services.

At present, he said, the bureau is merely filling requests for speakers for various political meetings. But in late August, itineraries will be made up and the speakers will take to the hustings in earnest.

He said that for several months James A. Farley, chairman of the national committee, had been writing to senators, congressmen and others asking assistance in the speaking campaign. A list of those who had accepted was not available but he said acceptances were sufficient "to cover every state."

FEDERAL LAND BANK INTEREST RATE TO STAY AT 3 1-2 PCT.

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—The Farm Credit administration said today that the 3 1-2 per cent interest rate would be continued for one year on $2,000,000,000 of outstanding federal land bank loans.

This was announced as the result of President Roosevelt's signing of a congressional resolution amending the farm credit act and the federal farm loan act.

Officials said that, in addition to outstanding obligations, all loans negotiated between now and June 30, 1937, will bear the 3 1-2 per cent rate. Loans will be written at four per cent, they added, but the new legislation provides an emergency rate of 3 1-2 per cent for the next fiscal year.

Under terms of the farm credit act the interest rate was to have been stepped up to 4 1-2 per cent at the end of the fiscal year and subsequently to five or six per cent. The decision to continue the 3 1-2 per cent rate was said to have been based on the contention that the emergency period still exists in farm financing.

WHEATLAND, Calif. (UP)—At least one branch of California agricultural life is not suffering from the present plague of grasshoppers that are devouring many crops. Turkey raisers say their fowls are working overtime getting fat on the hoppers.

AAA Leader Will Be A Speaker At A. M. Short Course

H. R. TOLLEY

COLLEGE STATION, June 26.—H. R. Tolley, newly appointed head of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, will be one of the chief speakers on the A. & M. Farmers' short course program to be held at College Station July 20 through 24.

Tolley was born on a farm in Howard county, Indiana; graduated from high school at Converse; attended Marion normal college; received his A. B. degree at Indiana university; and taught school for the first few years after graduation.

In the position of assistant administrator of AAA and director of the unit called the division of program planning, he developed the regional and land-use plans which are now being used in working out the programs under the new Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment act.

Tolley, who is director of the Giannini foundation of agricultural economics at the University of California, has done his AAA work on leave of absence from the foundation.

He will speak in Gulon hall at 11 o'clock on Friday, July 24, during the short course.

HOME EC TEACHERS ARE SELECTED FOR 2 HOWARD SCHOOLS

Vocational home economics teachers for two Howard county schools have been named for next year, according to a news dispatch from Texas Technological college at Lubbock, from which both teachers were graduated this month.

Fannie Brown Eaton of Decatur will teach at Ackery and Mildred Earhart of Combe will be at the Elbow school.

The two were among a group of nine Tech graduates receiving Smith-Hughes certificates in vocational home economics who have secured teaching assignments. Other teachers elected include:

Eileen Booker, an August graduate, who will teach at Ruler; Hazel Phillips of Vernon, Tahoka; Esther Smith of Tahoka, Graham school at Post; Mary Frances Self of Crowell; Mary Hazel Duncan of Lubbock, Hobbs school in Rotan; Pauline Hooser of Seymour, August graduate, junior high school at Lubbock.

Candidates File Expense

Expenditure of Roy Sanderford Is Shown To Be Largest

AUSTIN, June 26. (AP)—Candidates in the July 25 primary began filing expense accounts yesterday in accordance with law. The first statements may be filed between June 25 and July 1.

Each candidate in addition to certifying a statement of expenses swore that he had not violated "in letter or spirit" the statute of government election costs.

One of the first to file was Frank S. Morris of Dallas, candidate for the railroad commission. He said he had received $1,175 and spent $1,000.55, including traveling and advertising expense.

Others reporting, with expenditures: E. Harold Beck, Texas kana, candidate for a full term as state senator, $174.50; Morgan G. Sanders, Canton, congressional representative, $360; Eugene Worley Shamrock, state representative, $125; E. F. Harrell, Paris, editorial representative, $58.50.

Roy Sanderford of Belton, candidate for governor, reported contributions of $5,033.75, including $3,558.75 from former Governor James E. Ferguson, and expenses of $4,892.

Itemized expenditures included: traveling $371; stenographic $460; telephone, telephone and postage $880; printing and stationery, $1,345; newspaper and other advertising $115; renting halls, providing places for public meetings and other expenses incident to such meetings $1,566.

L'Stock Trading Brisk Throughout West Texas Area

SAN ANGELO, June 26. (AP)—Livestock trading continues brisk throughout West Texas and ranchmen say many yearling ewes are changing hands at $6 to $6.50 a head. Mixed lamb contracts are being made in restricted volume at $5 to $5.50 a head.

Approximately 2,500 head of steer yearlings have been shipped from the Midland section, the largest consignment going to the ranges near Hereford which, until a few weeks ago, was in the "dust bowl."

Grass in that section is the best in years and much demand for cattle is reported. One of the largest single recent deals in the Midland section was the sale by McElroy Ranch company to H. G. Conkright of Hereford of 500 head steer yearlings, immediate delivery.

It is estimated that 25,000 lambs have been contracted to date in the Del Rio country. Some of the fat lambs are moving from West Texas ranges direct to packers and many orders are out to buy mixed lambs for fall delivery, dealers say. Feeders made money on these lambs last year.

Blackstone Smith of Junction says it is the first time in his life he has known mutton goats to be worth more than mutton sheep. The mutton goats have been selling at $3 to $3.50 out of the hair. Offers of $3 for kids in the hair, fall delivery, have been made, and it is estimated 75,000 of them have been bought throughout the state at $2.50 to $3 a head. They will

Butter Cake Dependable Dessert

The thrifty homemaker always has a few never-fail recipes tucked up her sleeve which she can make in a jiffy.

A never-fail butter cake with delicious butter cream frosting, is one dessert that she can always depend upon. Good quality ingredients, butter for shortening for its added delicate flavor, fresh milk and eggs, fine sugar, pastry flour, a tried and proven recipe, accurate baking temperature; these are a few of her cake secrets which are responsible for the tender and light, velvety butter cake.

It is a satisfying sweet to serve for dinner, lunch, supper or tea refreshments. Baked in layers with creamy butter filling, it is a popular favorite for birthdays and holidays.

Standard equipment and level measurements are important. The standard method for mixing butter cake is used. The butter is left at room temperature before creaming. The sugar is added gradually, then the sifted and measured flour, baking powder and salt, which have been sifted together, alternately with the liquid, beginning and ending with the flour mixture. Finally, the stiffly beaten whites are folded into the mixture and the ingredients are thoroughly combined.

Eggs should not be over beaten until dry. They should be light and fluffy and peak when beater is removed. A continuous mixing process after the first portion of the flour is added is a good practice. Beating the cake batter 10 seconds after each addition of flour and 15 to 30 seconds beating time when the last flour is added, is recommended in making butter cakes. Cut and fold in quickly the stiffly beaten egg whites, until the batter is smooth and no egg white flakes show. Add flavoring and stir a few times to distribute evenly. Turn into a well-buttered pan.

Set your oven temperature at 350 degrees F. for the first 10 minutes to allow the layers to double in height, then 375 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes longer.

White Cake
3/4 cup butter.
1 3/4 cups sugar.
1 cup milk.
1 teaspoon lemon extract.
1 teaspoon vanilla extract.
3 cups pastry flour.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
5 egg whites.

The recipe calls for a tartaric or phosphate baking powder. In using a baking powder with phosphate-sulphate base, use three teaspoons instead of four.

Many prefer an uncooked chocolate icing or to add divinity, a mixture of ground nuts, raisins and sugar to the top of the butter cream icing.

Butter Cream Icing
4 tablespoons butter.
2 cups confectioner's sugar.
4 tablespoons cream.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
Cream soft butter; add sifted sugar alternately with cream, beating until light and fluffy. Add vanilla.
