DAV to hold annual fund-raiser this weekend

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

Members of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) will be out Friday and Saturday in front of Walmart for the organization's annual Forget-Me-Not Drive.

"We will be at the front doors beginning at 8 a.m. until late," said Ed Meiser, DAV Chapter 47 commander. "Members will be accepting donations, and we will be handing out plastic blue, Forget-Me-Not flowers."

The drive is an annual fund-raiser for the veterans group with the proceeds used to help area veterans, Meiser said.

"For the DAV Forget-Me-Not drive, it's mandated by the national organization that all donations are used for service to veterans," he said. "Those donations accepted here are used 100 percent locally for veterans in the area.

"We provide help to veterans such as rent, mortgage and utilities," Meiser said. "In the past we've helped with education for veterans to be able to adapt to a new career field. We also have a few veterans who were traveling through and their car breaks down in the Big Spring area. We help them

U.S steps up response as Ebola worries grow

JIM KUHNHENN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The revelation that a second Dallas nurse who is ill with Ebola was cleared to fly the day before her diagnosis raised new alarms as leaders of the nation's public health system prepared to defend their efforts to contain the deadly virus before a congressional hearing Thursday.

President Barack Obama directed his administration to respond in a "much more aggressive way" to oversee the Dallas cases and ensure the lessons learned there are transmitted to hospitals and clinics across the country. For the second day in a row he canceled out-of-town trips Thursday to stay in Washington and monitor the Ebola response.

Federal health officials who say they know how to shut down the disease within the U.S. were being called to testify in what was looming as a combative hearing by a House oversight panel on Capitol Hill.

In prepared testimony, Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases of NIH, said that the death of a Liberian man in Dallas and the subsequent infections of the two Dallas nurses as well as

Dallas County could declare Ebola disaster

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County commissioners will consider issuing a disaster declaration after Ebola has left a man from Liberia dead and two nurses infected.

Commissioners scheduled an emergency meeting Thursday afternoon. The proposal says Dallas County "has the potential to suffer widespread or severe damage, injury, loss or threat of life resulting from the Ebola virus."

County Judge Clay Jenkins says the declaration could include public travel restrictions on medical personnel exposed to Ebola. The measure could also mean more government assistance.

Thomas Eric Duncan was diagnosed while visiting Dallas. He died Oct. 8 at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital.

Two nurses who treated Duncan contracted Ebola and remained hospitalized Thursday. One flew to Ohio last weekend via commercial jet and returned to Dallas on Monday. She was confirmed with the virus Wednesday.

EBOLA

an Ebola diagnosis of a nursing assistant in Spain "intensify our concerns about this global health threat." He said two Ebola vaccine candidates were undergoing a first phase of human clinical testing this fall. But he cautioned that scientists were still in the early stages of understanding how Ebola infection can be treated and prevented.

Spain's government is wrestling with similar questions. The condition of the nursing assistant, who was infected at a Madrid hospital, appeared to be improving. But a person who came in contact with her before she was hospitalized developed a fever and was being tested for the virus Thursday.

That person is not a health care worker, a Spanish Health Ministry spokesman said.

To this point, only hospital workers — the Madrid nursing assistant and the two nurses in Dallas — are known to have contracted Ebola outside West Africa in this outbreak, which is spreading out of control in Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea.

A nurse at the Dallas hospital, Texas Health Presbyterian, on Thursday described a "chaotic scene" when the hospital faced its first Ebola patient, Liberian traveler Thomas Eric Duncan.

Briana Aguirre, who has helped treat the first nurse who was infected, told NBC's "Today" show she felt exposed in the protective gear the hospital provided.

"In the second week of an Ebola crisis at my hospital, the only gear they were offering us at that time, and up until that time, is gear that is allowing our necks to be uncovered?" Aguirre said, adding that she piled on gloves and booties in triplicate and wore a plastic suit up to her neck.

The hospital said it used the protective gear recommended by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and updated the equipment as CDC guidelines changed. Because nurses complained that their necks were exposed, the hospital ordered hoods for them, according to a statement from Texas Health Presbyterian.

CDC Director Tom Frieden said that nurse Amber Joy Vinson never should have been allowed to fly on a commercial jetliner because she had been exposed to the virus while caring for the Ebola patient who traveled from Liberia.

Vinson was being monitored more closely since another nurse, Nina Pham, also involved in Duncan's care was diagnosed with Ebola.

Still, a CDC official cleared Vinson to board the Frontier Airlines flight from Cleveland to the Dallas area. Her reported temperature — 99.5 degrees — was below the threshold set by the agency and she had no symptoms, according to agency spokesman David Daigle.

Ebola patients are not considered contagious until they have symptoms.

Vinson was diagnosed with Ebola a day after the flight, news that sent airline stocks falling amid fears it could dissuade people from flying. Losses between 5 percent and 8 percent were recorded before shares recovered in afternoon trading.

Frontier has taken the aircraft out of service. The plane was flown Wednesday without passengers from Cleveland to Denver, where the airline said it will undergo a fourth cleaning, including replacement of seat covers, carpeting and air filters.

Amid increasing anxiety over Ebola, Customs and health officials at airports in Chicago, Atlanta, the Washington suburbs and Newark, New Jersey, were scheduled Thursday to start taking the temperatures of passengers from the three hardest-hit West African countries Thursday. The screenings, using no-touch thermometers, started Saturday at New York's Kennedy International Airport.

Even as Obama sought to calm new fears about Ebola in the U.S., he cautioned against letting them overshadow the far more urgent crisis unfolding in West Africa, where Ebola has killed more than 4,000.

Underscoring his emphasis on international action, Obama called European leaders Wednesday to discuss better coordination in the fight against Ebola in the countries of Sierra Leone, Liberia and Guinea and to issue a call for more money and personnel to "to bend the curve of the epidemic." British Prime Minister David Cameron's office said he offered to consult with the Italians to add treatment beds in Sierra Leone.

On Thursday, Chinese President Xi Jinping pledged continued support for the fight against Ebola in West Africa, but made no specific new aid offers. China last month pledged $33 million in assistance and dispatched doctors and medical supplies.

And France said that on Saturday, it will begin screening passengers who arrive at Paris' Charles de Gaulle airport on the once-daily flight from Guinea's capital.

But it was Wednesday's development in Dallas that captured political and public attention in the United States.

Duncan originally was sent home when he went to the Dallas hospital's emergency room, only to return much sicker two days later. He died of Ebola on Oct. 8.

Frieden has said breaches of protocols led to the infection of the two nurses. More than 70 other health care workers involved in Duncan's care were being monitored.

Medical records provided to The Associated Press by Duncan's family showed Vinson inserted catheters, drew blood and dealt with Duncan's body fluids. Late Wednesday, she arrived in Atlanta to be treated at Emory University Hospital, which has already treated three Americans diagnosed with the virus.

Daily Prayer

May we strive to see others in the best light, oh Lord.

Amen

We've never had it so good?

Ebola continues to spread around the world; the Islamic State pushes closer to Baghdad; the Secret Service can't prevent a guy with a knife from running into the White House; sea levels are rising; fighting continues in Ukraine; extreme partisanship eats away at our democracy; thousands of American businesses have been subject to cyberattacks; 1 in 9 American bridges are rated structurally deficient; we are undergoing the most dramatic die-off of species since the extinction of the dinosaurs 65 million years ago; and I think I'm getting a cold.

Roger Simon

Our get-up-and-go appears to have gotten up and gone, the protestations of our leaders notwithstanding.

In preparation for World War II, the British government came up with the slogan "Keep Calm and Carry On" to urge its citizens to show resolve in the face of a global crisis.

Our government has come up with a somewhat more pugnacious slogan for our times: We are "indispensable," and everybody ought to thank their lucky stars for us.

In his State of the Union address on Jan. 24, 2012, President Barack Obama said: "Yes, the world is changing; no, we can't control every event. But America remains the one indispensable nation in world affairs, and as long as I am president, I intend to keep it that way."

In a presidential debate in Boca Raton, Florida, on Oct. 22, 2012, he said, "America remains the one indispensable nation, and the world needs a strong America, and it is stronger now than when I came into office."

And on Aug. 26, 2014, to the American Legion in North Carolina, Obama reaffirmed, "The United States is and will remain the one indispensable nation in the world."

The concept was not exactly original.

In a speech explaining his intervention in Bosnia, President Bill Clinton said in 1996: "The fact is America remains the indispensable nation. There are times when America — and only America — can make a difference between war and peace, between freedom and repression, between hope and fear."

And one potential president is squarely in that camp. On Feb. 1, 2013, as she stepped down as secretary of state, Hillary Clinton told the Council on Foreign Relations: "We are the indispensable nation. We are the force for progress, prosperity and peace."

My only problem with all this is that I have no idea what these people are talking about.

We are indispensable to peace, hope, progress and prosperity? So how come we aren't seeing more of it?

OK, OK, there are still a bunch of countries out there that we don't actually control, even though we have spent trillions of dollars and lost thousands of lives fighting their wars for them.

But how about America itself?

At home, citizens are offered a different theme: You never had it so good.

"It is indisputable that our economy is stronger today than when I took office," President Obama said in a speech at Northwestern University on Oct.

2. "By every economic measure, we are better off now than we were when I took office.

"At the same time, it's also true that not enough Americans feel the benefits of the economy in their own lives. This progress has been hard, but it's been steady and been real."

But if it's been "steady" and "real," how come not enough Americans "feel the benefits"?

I do not dispute the blizzard of statistics that the White House has to back up the president's claims.

But Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., also has some statistics on his website:

"The average middle class American family made less in 2012 than it did ... in 1989.

"One family, the Walton family of Wal-Mart, is worth more than the bottom 40 percent of Americans.

"The richest 400 Americans are worth more than the poorest 150 million Americans combined and those in the bottom 60 percent only hold 1.7 percent of the nation's wealth."

And when CNN's Candy Crowley asked Sanders on Sunday about the Islamic State and the U.S. response, he said: "We are here today because of the disastrous blunder of the Bush-Cheney era, which got us into this war in Iraq in the first place, which then developed the can of worms that we're trying to deal with right now. ... We have been at war for 12 years. We have spent trillions of dollars. ... What I do not want and I fear very much is the United States getting sucked into a quagmire and being involved in perpetual warfare year after year after year."

So are you feeling as if happy days are here again? No? That's hard to believe, considering we are so indispensable abroad and prosperous at home.

But I am trying to stay positive. And I call to mind an old adage:

The pessimist says, "Things are so terrible they can't get any worse."

The optimist says, "Oh, yes, they can."

Ultimatum to nurses: One mistake and you die

On Sunday, health officials announced that a nurse who had treated Thomas Eric Duncan, the Ebola-infected Liberian, has the virus and is in isolation at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas, the same hospital where Duncan died. This news exposes the falsehood behind the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's repeated assurances for months that "U.S. hospitals can safely manage patients with Ebola." That's a whopper.

Betsy McCaughey

Dr. Dan Varga, the Dallas hospital's chief clinical officer, confirmed that the nurse became infected — despite wearing CDC-prescribed protective gear, including waterproof gown, gloves, goggles and a plastic face shield — when caring for Duncan. Eighteen other hospital staff members are being watched for symptoms.

No wonder. Treating Ebola patients is a deadly job. More than 233 doctors and nurses have caught Ebola and died in Africa this year. Many had limited equipment and training, but the fatalities also include renowned epidemiologist John Taban Dada, medical director of the two largest hospitals in Liberia, U.N. doctors, and two health-care workers from the highly trained Doctors Without Borders team.

There is no room for error, explains Anja Wolz, a Doctors Without Borders nurse. To put on and take off protective gear, "we use a buddy system — we're responsible for ourselves but must also put our lives in the hands of colleagues: One mistake can lead to infection."

That is what happened to a Spanish nurse's aide, Maria Teresa Romero Ramos. She wore a protective "space suit" on the two occasions she came close to an Ebola patient in a Madrid hospital, but she inadvertently touched her cheek with her gloved hand while removing the suit. Now she has Ebola and is clinging to life.

Professor Peter Piot, who discovered the Ebola virus in 1976, isn't surprised that even in modern, equipped hospitals caregivers get infected. "The smallest mistake can be fatal."

Explaining the Texas nurse's infection, CDC Director Dr. Tom Frieden said, "At some point there was a breach of protocol, and that breach in protocol resulted in this infection." Outrageously, he's blaming the nurse.

Frieden predicts more health-care workers will get Ebola if they, too, make mistakes. Doctors and nurses shouldn't face an ultimatum: Make a mistake and you die.

U.S. hospitals are ridden with mistakes. Common infections like C. diff and staph rage through hospitals because doctors and nurses sometimes forget even the basic protocol: washing hands. I've been an advocate for patient safety for over a decade, and I know that hospitals unable to stop these infections can't stop Ebola. To claim they can is a lie.

Many hospitals also lack equipment. Texas Health nurses relied on facemasks, which is what the CDC prescribes. But other experts say they should have respirators. Epidemiologists at the University of Illinois explain that Ebola "has the potential to be transmitted through aerosol particles both near and at a distance from infected patients, which means that health-care workers should be wearing respirators, not facemasks." CDC and Emory University staff wore respirators when they cared for two health-care workers evacuated from Africa.

National Nurses United is protesting the lack of equipment and training. Eighty-five percent of nurses surveyed by NNU said they hadn't received Ebola training. Then, there's the lack of staff. It takes 20 full-time medical staff to care for one Ebola patient. Texas Health cordoned off its ICU for Ebola and is diverting emergency patients to other hospitals. Not all communities have several hospitals.

Frieden is falsely claiming hospitals are ready in order to bolster the policy of his boss, President Obama, who refuses to suspend travel visas from affected countries.

But how many American lives should be put at risk for the sake of political correctness? Frieden says Ebola won't spread "widely" here. That's a weasel word. Even one nurse facing death is too many.

BSHS Speech & Debate team shines

By CLINT ADAMS
Special to the Herald

The Big Spring High School Speech and Debate team recently completed a two-tournament stint at El Paso Coronado High School and El Paso Americas High School.

Taking a small crew of seven to El Paso Coronado, the Steers managed to bring home a second place sweepstakes award. Leading the charge for the Steers was junior Ethan Morelion. Morelion placed first in Student Congress, Foreign Extemporaneous Speaking, second in Domestic Extemporaneous Speaking and fourth in Original Oratory. Morelion was also named Top Speaker at the tournament.

The team of Aliscia Brorman and Amber Monks placed first in Cross-Examination Debate.

Senior Kaci Marvin placed eighth in Domestic Extemporaneous Speaking as well as being a quarterfinalist in Public Forum Debate with her partner, Andi Armstrong.

Rounding out the placings were Ashlan Armstrong, who reached the quarterfinals of Lincoln-Douglas Debate.

An even smaller crew of five traveled to the El Paso Americas' tournament this past weekend and had some impressive results.

Morelion continued his winning ways by placing first in Student Congress, Original Oratory, and Lincoln-Douglas Debate. He also placed second in Foreign Extemporaneous Speaking, Domestic Extemporaneous Speaking and Prose Interpretation. With the placings, Morelion earned qualifications to the Texas Forensic Association State Meet in Student Congress, Foreign Extemporaneous and Domestic Extemporaneous.

Others placing include the team of Armstrong and Armstrong who placed third in Cross-Examination Debate. Kaci Marvin placed sixth in Foreign Extemporaneous. The team brought home a third place sweepstakes trophy.

"We like competing against El Paso schools," Coach Jennifer Adams stated. "It's a good mixture of 4A and 6A schools and it gives us a look at some different competition."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Storytelling Moon

HOLIDAY MATHIS

The Cancer moon encouraged such an outpouring of feeling that some will feel slightly drained and drawn to the sort of practical tasks that don't require emotional investment. For those who care to recount the details of the past few days, the Leo moon favors the storytellers, embellishments encouraged.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You used to get more help to do the workload you're currently managing alone. You've become stronger. Acknowledge how far you've come -- and this is only the beginning.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Your personal life is shifting. You'll think about who you really care about and adjust your priorities so that you're not frittering your energy away doing things that really don't matter to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You wouldn't put shoes in the refrigerator. Everything has its place. Social and emotional matters also require organization, and you'll be noticing how you really feel about a person and where they fit into your life.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). What you think is cool, they might not. Try to see things the way they do. It doesn't mean you have to agree with them, but you'll deal more effectively if you understand them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You weren't exactly working toward a leadership position, and yet this is really best for everyone -- a happy outcome of the situation. You are in charge now, and it's good to be king.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Considering that when history repeats itself it is usually giving you an opportunity to do something different this time around, you'll make a novel choice. You'll try a new door. You'll choose surprisingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your five senses are not the only perceivers you have. Evocative thoughts will tingle your mind as if to let you know that your cerebral matter is working to help you understand and operate better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). When you match up your life with the life of another -- work when the other person is working and play when the other person is playing -- it will bring harmony and good luck to the relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Faith is a muscle strengthened through use. So in what and whom do you believe? Today gives you the chance to prove or disprove the theory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're the one with the long view. Look to the horizon and tell your crew what's coming, because they depend on your vision, not to mention your organizational powers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Enthusiasm is catching. Right now it's coming from someone else. You'll take the energy and amplify it for everyone who is involved with what you're doing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Where does your mind go when you engage with things? That's the question your loved one is intrigued with now, and any questions along those lines should be flattering. It's good to be cared about.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 16). You won't fail to delight people. That's why they keep calling, inviting themselves over and inhabiting your life in the most interesting ways. The next three months are filled with social activity, and then it quiets down in February, when you'll get a good chunk of work accomplished. You'll cash in around March. Capricorn and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 45, 2, 11, 24 and 18.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I'm only 39, but when I look back on my life, it's been mostly idiot moves: the time I drunkenly ran over that guy's fence because of the thing the girl said; the time I fell out of the boat without a life jacket; the time I narrowly escaped the dogs. You get the idea. Even the bigger moves seem pretty stupid. Buying a house that in retrospect was much more than I could afford and then watching the market plummet. Anyway, the reason I bring it up is, I'm not blaming the universe for my stupidity, and I don't know whether my judgment or personality has much of a chance of changing, either. But could my luck possibly change? I'm a Sagittarius."

You were born under the sign of good fortune itself. Ruled by Jupiter, Sagittarius is one of the luckiest signs of the zodiac. If I were you, I wouldn't will my luck to change, because you actually have had excellent luck in your life thus far. You survived the mad guy whose fence you ruined. You made it through the boating incident. You even gathered enough duckets to buy a house in the up-market. The way to add to those blessings is to count them first.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Does Taylor Swift reference ex-beau John Mayer in her recent hit Shake It Off? Libran Mayer was born under the sign of harmony and has Mercury and Pluto in Libra, too. As the sign of lovers, partnerships and relationships, Librans crave companionship to balance their experience of life. His natal moon and Neptune in Sagittarius suggests a restless spirit and a love of adventure.

Annie's Mailbox ®

Dear Annie: My grown son is an alcoholic. It has not interfered with his job so far, but it seems to be getting worse. His father drank himself to death, and I'm so worried he will go down the same path. He absolutely won't discuss it.

Last Mother's Day, he promised to give up drinking, but a month later, I saw him guzzle two beers at a family picnic, and I remarked on it. He said he never wanted to speak to me again, and since then, he hasn't.

I'm not getting any younger, and I miss my son. I will be attending Al-Anon meetings, but is there anything else I can do? -- Suffering in Illinois

Dear Suffering: We're so sorry your son has chosen not to deal with his alcoholism, but this is not something you can change for him. He must do it himself. You have made a wise decision to attend Al-Anon meetings. This is a wonderful organization for people whose lives are affected by a loved one's drinking. The members there will give you coping strategies and a shoulder to cry on, as well as advice for dealing specifically with your son. We hope he contacts you soon.

Dear Annie: My dearest girlfriend insists on putting a dessert spoon at the top of the dinner plates when she hosts a formal dinner. She says that's what etiquette demands.

I think a dessert spoon should be served with dessert instead of sitting out on the table during the entire dinner. Who's right? -- Etiquette Challenged in Dallas

Dear Dallas: In a formal setting, dessert forks and spoons are brought out with the dessert. For an informal setting, however, it is perfectly OK to place dessert utensils above the plate or with the rest of the forks and spoons (the fork on the left, closest to the plate, and the spoon on the right, closest to the plate, because those will be the last utensils used).

Dear Annie: I usually agree with your advice, but I think you missed the mark with "Disappointed," the frustrated bridesmaid. She said the bride ordered hideous dresses, and when the bridesmaids tried to get her to find another, she didn't like any of them. When "Disappointed" found her own dress, the bride didn't like it. She then offered to drop out of the wedding party. At the rehearsal dinner, the bride announced that she had a new maid of honor because the other one didn't want to give a speech.

When a woman agrees to be a bridesmaid, she agrees to the bride's choice of dress. If they are ugly, no one attending the wedding blames the bridesmaids. "Disappointed" complained that she bought three dresses she could "ill afford." However, one of them was because the bride was trying to please her bridesmaids, and the last one was because "Disappointed" thought she had better taste than the bride. The bride was kind enough to allow her out of the maid-of-honor role, while keeping her in the wedding party.

As for the "lie" that the bride told at the rehearsal dinner? My guess is the bride thought it sounded better than "my best friend is too selfish to honor my choice of bridesmaid dress." Personally, I think "Disappointed" sounds like a bridesmaidzilla. -- Should Have Eloped

Dear Should Have: We appreciate your spin on the situation, but brides need to take their attendants' financial situations into consideration when choosing a dress. And a thoughtful bride will ask her bridesmaids to help select the dress to begin with, preventing exactly this type of rancor. As for the lie at the rehearsal dinner, we don't understand why the bride felt it was necessary to make a public announcement altogether, surprising (and embarrassing) her friend. We will say, however, that an apology -- on either side -- can go a long way toward repairing a friendship. We hope they can do it.

News in brief

Hong Kong leader says government is ready to start talks with student protesters

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong's leader said Thursday he is ready to start talks with student pro-democracy protest leaders as soon as next week, suggesting a breakthrough in a political crisis that has seen activists taking over the city's key business districts for almost three weeks.

But Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying reiterated that Beijing will not retract election restrictions that protesters oppose, raising questions whether the proposed meeting can overcome the vast differences between the two sides.

"As long as students or other sectors in Hong Kong are prepared to focus on this issue, yes we are ready, we are prepared to start the dialogue," he told reporters. "This is why over the past few days ... we expressed the wish to students that we'd like to start the dialogue to discuss universal suffrage as soon as we can, and hopefully within the following week."

Leung did not directly respond to questions about when police will move in to clear out protesters, who have taken over major roads and streets in the city's business districts since Sept. 28 to press for a greater say in choosing the city's leader in the territory's first direct elections.

He said authorities have tolerated the civil disobedience movement until now but it "cannot go on indefinitely."

Ballots already coming in, with Florida leading early tallies for midterms

ATLANTA (AP) — Midterm elections are almost three weeks away, yet more than 904,000 Americans already have cast their ballots, with almost 60 percent of those early votes in Florida, according to data compiled by The Associated Press from election officials in 11 states.

Those numbers are climbing daily as more states begin their advance voting periods and more voters return mail-in ballots ahead of Nov. 4.

Early voting doesn't predict electoral outcomes, but both major parties emphasized the opportunity in recent elections as they try to lock in core supporters. Thirty-three states and the District of Columbia allow some form of advance voting other than traditional absentee voting requiring an excuse.

A spokesman for national Democrats, Justin Barasky, said the party is especially focused on encouraging early voting by Democrats who usually don't participate in midterms. Returns show that, historically, casual voters who support Democrats in presidential elections are more likely to stay home than average Republican voters.

In the 2010 midterms, when Republicans regained control of the House and won sweeping victories in statehouses around the country, advance voting accounted for almost 27 million ballots out of more than 89 million, meaning about 3 out of 10 voters cast early ballots. Almost 129 million people voted in the 2012 presidential election, 35.8 percent of them before Election Day.

Pistorius sentencing: Reeva Steenkamp's cousin says athlete must 'pay for what he's done'

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Oscar Pistorius must "pay for what he's done" and his apology to the family of the girlfriend he killed was not sincere, a cousin of Reeva Steenkamp testified Thursday.

Kim Martin spoke on the fourth day of the sentencing portion of the double-amputee Olympian's trial. Following the testimony, which is expected to end this week, Judge Thokozile Masipa will rule on what punishment Pistorius must serve after convicting him of culpable homicide for shooting Steenkamp through a toilet door in his home.

"My lady, I really believe the accused, Mr. Pistorius, needs to pay for what he's done," Martin testified before the red-robed judge.

"My family are not seeking revenge," Martin said. "We just feel to take somebody's life, to shoot somebody behind the door who is unarmed, who is harmless, needs sufficient punishment."

Pistorius was acquitted of murder for the Feb. 14, 2013 killing and found guilty of the lesser crime of negligent killing. Masipa has wide latitude when deciding on a sentence for culpable homicide, and could order a suspended sentence and a fine, house arrest, or send him to prison for up to 15 years.

Kurdish official appeals for weapons for Kobani fighters, says airstrikes are not enough

MURSITPINAR, Turkey (AP) — A Syrian Kurdish official is calling on the international community to allow weapons into the border town of Kobani for the fight against Islamic State militants.

Idriss Nassan, deputy head of Kobani's foreign relations committee, says the Islamic State group can bring in reinforcements and weapons at any time and endanger the town near Turkey. He said airstrikes by the U.S.-led coalition are not enough.

Nassan's comments on Thursday came a day after the Pentagon spokesman said Kobani remains in danger of falling to the Islamic State fighters.

Kirby said two weeks of airstrikes have killed hundreds of Islamic State fighters, and have stiffened Kobani's defenders.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the death toll since the Islamic State offensive began in mid-September has reached more than 660.

Avalanches, blizzard leave at least 25 dead in Nepal but dozens more missing

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Search and rescue teams flying on army helicopters spotted the bodies of eight more trekkers killed in a series of blizzards and avalanches that have hit central Nepal in recent days, raising the death toll in the region to 25, officials said Thursday.

About 70 people were still missing along or near the popular Annapurna trail, said Ganga Sagar Pant of the Trekking Agencies Association of Nepal, and the death toll there was expected to rise.

The route, 160 kilometers (100 miles) northwest of the capital, Katmandu, was filled with international hikers because October is peak trekking season, when the air is clear and the weather is cool. There were also many Nepalese on the trails because of local festivals.

At least 12 people died when they were caught in a sudden blizzard Tuesday in the Thorong La pass area.

As the weather improved, rescue workers recovered the bodies of four hikers — two Poles, an Israeli and a Nepali — from around Thorong La. Two trekkers from Hong Kong and 12 Israelis were airlifted Wednesday to Katmandu, where they were being treated at Shree Birendra Hospital.

Rape and romance: Thailand soap operas' long-successful mix draws fire after real-life crimes

BANGKOK (AP) — In a famous scene from Thailand's award-winning soap opera "The Power of Shadows," the handsome protagonist gets drunk and rapes the leading lady. He later begs her forgiveness, and the producers say they will live happily ever after in the sequel.

Boy Meets Girl, Boy Rapes Girl, Boy Marries Girl. The premise is so common in Thailand's popular primetime melodramas it could be called a national twist on the universal romantic plotline. But calls for change are growing.

The recent real-life rape and murder of a girl on an overnight train in Thailand has focused national outrage on messages in popular culture that trivialize — and some say even encourage — rape. Even the powerful general who took over the country in a coup this year had to apologize after suggesting that women who wear bikinis on the beach are vulnerable to sexual assault.

Many in the soap opera industry continue to defend sexual violence, in part, as a key to high ratings in a fiercely competitive industry that draws more than 18 million viewers a night to network television, nearly a quarter of Thailand's population.

Award-winning director Sitthiwat Tappan even describes some rape scenes as a sort of public service.

Apple likely to unveil new iPads, Mac system, details on Apple Pay at Thursday event

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — Apple Inc. is expected to unveil new iPads at an event Thursday, as the company tries to drive excitement amid slowing demand for tablet computers. Apple may also announce a new Mac operating system and possibly new Mac computers. Watchers also await a possible launch date for Apple Pay, the company's new system for using iPhones to make credit and debit card payments at retail stores.

As usual, Apple isn't disclosing what it plans to reveal at its headquarters in Cupertino, California, Thursday. Invites to its event carried the cryptic message, "It's been way too long." CEO Tim Cook is expected to preside over the event, which begins at 10 a.m. PDT (1 p.m. EDT).

With foxes scarce, hunting clubs target coyotes

BRIDGEWATER, Conn. (AP) — American fox-hunting is a sport so steeped in tradition that riders still wear ties and blazers and cry out "Tally ho!" at the sight of prey. But it is adapting to one dramatic change: Coyotes have displaced foxes in the wild and become the hunters' new quarry.

The bigger, stronger animals pose challenges to the existence of some of the clubs carrying on the hunts introduced from England in the 1600s.

The coyotes that have overtaken much of the country in recent decades run so much farther that they enter areas where hounds and riders on horseback cannot follow. It is a strain particularly on the few remaining fox-hunting clubs in the densely populated area surrounding New York City, where encroaching development is leaving hunters with less room to roam.

"Those territories are mapped out or delegated. What the coyote has done is made it more difficult because the fox didn't run into other areas," said Dennis Foster, executive director of the Virginia-based Masters of Foxhounds Association, which oversees some 155 clubs in 37 U.S. states and Canada.

It has been three years since the last fox sighting for Fairfield County Hounds, a hunting club in Bridgewater, 75 miles north of New York, that is the last fox-hunting club in Connecticut.

The coyotes receive mixed reviews as substitute targets. Club members say the coyotes have not changed the essence of the experience — the braying of the hounds, the vistas seen from horseback — but they are less sly and playful. The coyotes also run so fast and through such rugged terrain they are effectively impossible to catch.

"When you do find one, the chase is so fast you've really got to hang on," said Mary Huribal, a 51-year-old former show rider and nurse from Easton.

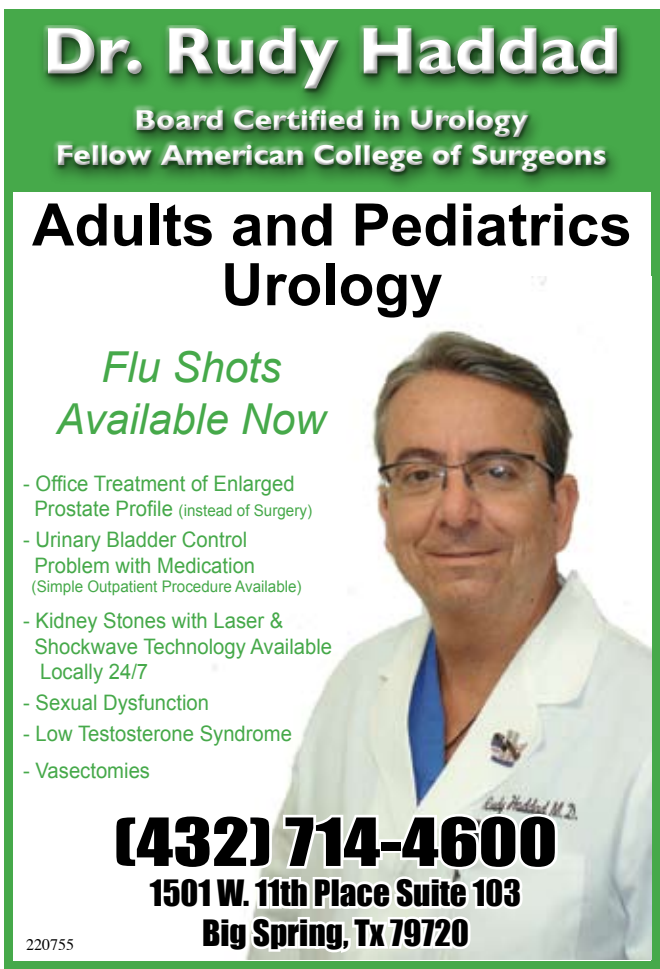

A hunt began with the blast of a horn last week on a Bridgewater field as 18 American foxhounds were released from the back of a truck, fed treats and directed toward the woods. As the hounds followed a scent up and over Wolf Pit Mountain, the riders, who are not armed, gave chase by circling around on a more manageable path for the horses. The hunts are faster with coyotes and within three hours the riders had returned in time for lunch — without catching their prey.

Coyotes moved into Connecticut around the middle of the last century and have outcompeted foxes for territory, according to Paul Rego, a state wildlife biologist. There are still some foxes in the area, he said, but state officials receive a large number of complaints about coyotes attacking pets and livestock.

The hunts require vast expanses of undeveloped land — meaning property owners must give hunters permission to pass through. The Bridgewater club, which was founded 90 years ago, relocated from nearby Newtown in the 1980s as rural property changed hands and some new owners refused to allow access. Several other clubs in the Northeast have closed over the last couple decades due to development.

Buffs focus on game, not playoffs

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

Like everyone else in West Texas, Forsan High School head coach Jason Phillips knows the playoffs are looming on the horizon. He also knows his team has good chance of qualifying for the postseason ... maybe punching a ticket as soon as this Friday in McCamey.

Jesse Cervantes

Unlike most fans, however, Phillips isn't looking down the road. He wants his team to keep its attention focused on the job at hand – which means prepare for McCamey as it would prepare for anyone else.

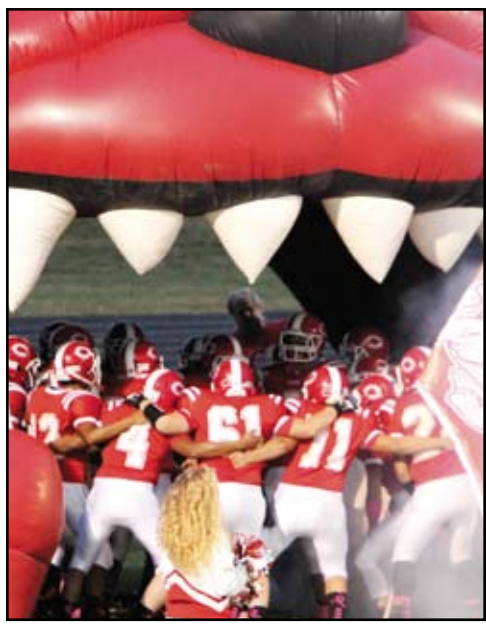

Walker Park

"We know we have to win at least one more game to reach the playoffs, but that doesn't anything. Every game is important to us. We want to win them all, and that means we have to stay focused on each game."

That approach has worked well for the Buffaloes thus far. Forsan heads

Coahoma faces Stanton with playoffs on line

By TOMMY WELLS

The Coahoma High School Bulldogs are off to their best start in more than a decade, and are within striking distance of earning a return to the state playoffs.

All of those things will take a backseat on Friday night when they take to the field in Stanton. Make no mistake nothing would be sweeter for them than to clinch one of the four postseason berths in District 3-3A with a win over their biggest rival.

Coahoma can make their dreams come true this weekend when they face off with the Buffaloes. The two

Sands looks to inch closer to postseason

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

The Sands Mustangs will attempt to move a step closer to the state six-man football playoffs on Friday when they host the Dawson Dragons in Ackerly.

The Mustangs and Dragons enter the 7:30 p.m. showdown tied atop the District 6-A standings with 1-0 records.

Sands, now 2-5 for the year, heads into the game with plenty of momentum. The Mustangs routed Loop last Friday in their district opener by a 103-76 margin. The game is the second-highest scoring performance in the Mustangs' long football history.

Dawson, 3-4 for the year, also owns a full head of steam. The Dragons have won their last two games, including a 39-33 victory over the Grandfalls-Royalty last week.

The Dragons can generate points with the best of them. Dawson has averaged better than 40 points per game this fall.

Taking aim ...

The Sands Mustangs can move a step closer to the playoffs this Friday with a win against Dawson. Sands is 25-6-1 all-time against the Dragons.

Dawson got off to a slow start to the season. After dropping an 88-43 decision in Week 1 to Klondike, the Dragons managed to win just one of their next four games – a 66-59 decision over O'Donnell in Week 2.

Dawson got back on track two weeks ao with a narrow 68-64 decision against Westbrook.

Stopping opponents from scoring has been Dawson's bigest issue this fall. Through their first six games, the Dragons have given up a 403 points.

That could be bad news against a Sands offense that is getting healthy. The Mustangs got two starters back from injuries last week, including spreadback Dayton Eddleman.

All Eddleman did against Loop was account for more than 350 yards and 10 touchdowns – four rushing and six passing.

Defensively, Sands finds itself in the same boat as Dawson. They have given up a lot of points this fall. Through the first seven games of the year, the Mustangs have allowed 426 points.

A win on Friday would leave Sands needing just one win heading into their final two games against Grandfalls-Royalty (Oct. 24) and Buena Vista (Oct. 31) to secure a postseason berth.

longtime rivals are scheduled to kick off at 7:30 p.m. at Buffalo Stadium in Stanton.

A win would also help the Bulldogs erase the memories of the past few seasons. Coahoma has lost a pair of nail-biters in each of the past two years, including a 16-14 decision last year and a 26-24 battle in 2012.

Coahoma, which owns a 29-25-2 advantage in the series, staged its last victory over Stanton in 2011 – taking a 20-16 decision.

Rivalry time ...

The Coahoma Bulldogs own a 29-25-2 all-time record against Stanton. The series dates back to 1936. Stanton has won the last two matchups, taking a 16-14 win in 2013 and a 26-24 win in 2012.

The Bulldogs pretty much controlled the rivalry in the early 2000s, winning six of the 10 games, including streak of three in a row from 2001-2003 and 2005-2007.

Prior to that, Stanton owned the series. The Buffaloes won eight straight games from 1993 to 2000, including a 51-7 decision in 1997 that stands as the largest margin of victory in the series, which began in 1936.

The Bulldogs appear to own the edge in this year's showdown. Coahoma enters the game with a 5-1 record. Stanton, which has been hit by a barrage of injuroes in the past few weeks, is 2-4.

Coahoma is coming off a 19-14 victory over Ballinger last Friday in the opening week of district play. In that game, CHS picked up 100-yard rushing efforts from Joe Melendez and Kyler Franks.

As a team, the Bulldogs rolled up more than 300 yards rushing in the game – the third time this season the Bulldogs have surpassed the 300-yard plteau in a game this fall.

K.J. Glaspie will lead Stanton into the game. The SHS quarterback has completed 67 of his 146 attempts for 813 yards and four touchdowns.

Stanton has struggled to right its running game since it lost its top running back, Estevan Chavez, to a season-ending injury against Forsan in Week 3. Chavez rushed for more than 300 yards in the Buffaloes' two wins over Kermit and Wink to open the year.

For the year, the Buffaloes have averaged 139 yards rushing per game, rolling up 834 yards and 10 TDs on 216 attempts.

Since its back-to-back wins, the Buffaloes have dropped their last four games. In that span, Stanton has been outscored by a 139-36.

For the year, the Buffalo defense has given up 191 points – the most of any team in District 3-3A.

Defensively, the Bulldogs are among the best units in West Texas. Through its first six games, Coahoma has limited its opponents to an average of 11 points per game.

FORSAN

into Friday's District 3-2A showdown with the Badgers sporting a 6-1 record, and a 1-0 mark in district play.

Much of the team's success has come from its ability to dominate the line of scrimmage, said Phillips. That aspect of the game is vital for Forsan – especially against McCamey, he added.

"We are going to have to continue controlling the line of scrimmage, and executing," said Phillips. "They (McCamey) are a big, physical team. They're going to be a tough test with us. They've been playing pretty well over the last few weeks. It is going to be important for us that our defense keeps flying to the ball and our offense has to keep going."

The Badgers head into the game with some momentum. McCamey has won two of its last three games, including wins over Wink and Crane, and improved to 2-5 overall.

The Badgers turned in a solid performance last week, Phillips said, in a 43-28 loss to Christoval.

"They playing much better than earlier in the year," he said. "We can't take them for granted. Any time we have faced them in the past, they have played us tough, and we have to expect they will do that again on Friday."

Big game ...

Forsan owns a 5-1 record against McCamey all-time, including wins in their last four matchups. McCamey's lone win in the series came in a 34-10 decision in 1994.

McCamey can also expect to see plenty of offense from the FHS side of the field. The Buffaloes have outscored their past six opponents by a 235-48 margin en route to reeling off six straight wins. As a team, Forsan is averaging better than 40 points per night.

Quarterback Jeremy Cervantes leads the Buffalo offense.

The bidding:

Pass	1 ♣	1 ♦	1 ♥
Pass	1 NT	Pass	4 ♥

Opening lead — four of diamonds.

In duplicate bridge, making the maximum number of tricks can be as important as making the contract itself, sometimes even more so. A player should never relax after he has assured the contract unless he thinks no one else will bid the game or slam his side has reached.

Take this case from a regional pairs tournament where North-South reached four hearts on the bidding shown. East won the opening diamond lead with the ten and correctly concluded that, given the bidding, declarer was much more likely to hold a singleton diamond than West was.

East therefore shifted to a trump, and South made the normal play of taking the ace and cashing the king, catching West's queen. This might have satisfied many declarers, who would sooner or later have crossed to dummy, led a spade to the jack and wound up making five, losing a spade to East's king at the end.

But at one table, South was unwilling to settle for 11 tricks, which were a certainty even if the spade finesse lost. He saw a way to try for a second overtrick, and he went for it.

Given East's overcall, South felt that East was more likely to hold the king of spades than West. So at trick four, declarer crossed to the king of clubs and led the queen of spades. East had to cover, and South took the king with the ace. Declarer then ran the rest of his hearts.

When the last heart was cashed, West, who was down to the Q-J of clubs and 10-8 of spades, could not find an effective discard in front of dummy's 9-3 of spades and A-8 of clubs. He tried discarding a spade in the forlorn hope that his partner had the jack, but it did him no good. South discarded the club eight from dummy, cashed the jack of spades, felling West's ten, and scored the last two tricks with the nine of spades and ace of clubs to earn a top score.
