Permian Basin nears 200-rig mark

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

Another week, another rise in the rig count for the Permian, this time marking 10 straight for the nation's most-active basin.

The Permian raised its tally to 189 after adding 12 rigs this week, according to data from Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes. The basin, which straddles West Texas and southeast New Mexico, is 11 shy of the 200 mark, a total not seen since recording 202 the week ending Jan. 15.

The Permian's lowest mark of 134 was twice recorded, first on April 29 and again on May 13. Since then, the rig count has risen 41 percent, nearly offsetting its steep fall since the beginning of the year.

Midland County continues to see gains. The nation's most-active county added one rig for a total of 36, the highest recorded this year. Midland has only ventured below 20 rigs twice, the first on April 15 and again on April 22. Baker Hughes reported 19 rigs on both dates, and the count has since risen 89 percent. The rig count on Jan. 8, the first full week of the year, was 30; thus, Midland is up six rigs year-to-date.

Most of the Permian's gains came from District 8, which added 11 rigs for a total of 125. Counties of note were Andrews, which added four rigs to end the week at five; Glasscock, which closed the reporting period at six rigs, up three; and Mitchell and Sterling, which each saw new activity. Mitchell hasn't had a rig since May 20; Sterling last saw activity July 22.

Eddy County, New Mexico, re-entered double-digit territory for the first time since Jan. 22. Eddy added two rigs for a total of 10 this week. Its Delaware Basin counterpart Lea idled one rig for a total of 21.

District 7B had three rigs in the Permian, unchanged an all in Stonewall County. District 7C had 21 rigs in the Permian, down one. One added rig in Reagan County was offset by ceased activity in Crockett and Tom Green.

District 8A saw new activity in Crosby County but ceased activity in Dawson. Still, the district, which is in the northern Midland Basin, saw a gain this week, after the

Man charged in MPD squad truck theft also charged in Odessa

From staff reports

The man charged last week in the theft of a Midland Fire Department squad truck has also been charged in Odessa in conjunction with the incident.

Odessa Police Department charged Estaban Pando, 29, with impersonating a public servant, a third-degree felony, and two counts of theft of property with at least two prior convictions, a state jail felony, according to a press release from OPD.

Pando

Odessa police responded to the Wal-Mart store on Loop 338 early morning on Aug. 2 in reference to a theft. Store employees said a man wearing the distinct yellow vest identifying himself as a firefighter took an employee's Apple IPhone and merchandise valued at $719, according to the release.

The man later identified as Pando got in a fire truck and turned on the lights and sirens before speeding away. The investigation revealed that Pando also used the emergency vehicle while committing a theft at a Flying J Truck Stop on the same day, according to the release.

The vehicle that Pando drove was a Midland Fire Department squad truck, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article. He was arrested Aug. 4 at a Midland residence and is being held in the Midland County jail on a $500,000 bond for a first-degree felony theft of property over $300,000, according to the Midland County Sheriff's Office website. While Midland police believe Pando was living at the home where he was arrested, city spokeswoman Sara Bustilloz said Friday morning, the MCSO website lists an Odessa home address for Pando.

Pando and another person allegedly took the Chevrolet Silverado 3500 from outside the Fire Station 6 during the early morning hours of Aug. 2 before abandoning it in east Midland, according to the previous article. The truck sustained significant damage and had equipment taken from it. Police recovered at Pando's residence the truck's equipment, which is valued at more than $60,000, according to the article. The investigation revealed that Pando had multiple previous convictions for theft out of Midland, according to the release.

Officers are still looking for the second suspect believed to have been involved in the incident. At the time of the theft, the person was wearing a black baseball cap and black sleeveless shirt in surveillance photos released by MPD. Anyone with information on the second suspect is asked to call Midland Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

Hostess launches 'Deep Fried Twinkies'

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The deep-fried Twinkie is jumping from the state fair to the home freezer.

Hostess Brands, the maker of lunchbox treats like Ho Hos, is launching packaged "Deep Fried Twinkies" starting Friday that mark its first foray into frozen foods. The cream-filled snack in vanilla or chocolate is the result of a yearlong collaboration between Hostess and Wal-Mart, as both companies look to spark food sales with innovative products.

Battered and partially fried before being frozen, the Twinkies need to be finished for a short time in the oven, toaster oven or frying pan. They'll cost $4.76 for a box of seven and for the first three months are available only at Wal-Mart.

It has a "retro cool factor," says Ellen Copaken, Hostess' vice president of marketing. "It plays into the comfort food trend. And it's fun."

The Twinkie, long one of Hostess' largest sellers, is a bigger business now than even right before the company filed for bankruptcy in 2012, Copaken said. Executives had considered developing a deep-fried version, like those seen at local fairs, but put the plans on hold until Wal-Mart approached them last summer.

For Wal-Mart, which gets more than half of its sales from food and other groceries, the partnership is part of a strategy of working closely with suppliers to come up with new twists on existing foods or developing new ones, and getting them to the shelves faster. The company opened a food lab in June for that teamwork, a process that can cut costs and shave several months off a product launch, says Charles Redfield, executive vice president of food at Wal-Mart. The food lab at the company's Bentonville, Arkansas, headquarters has 10 test kitchens and space to accommodate 12 individual taste tests at a time. Specific feedback from customers gathered there gets shared with suppliers to determine if an item needs more work. Being tested now: new flavors for its store brand sparkling water, frozen stuffed doughnut bites, and vacuum-packed Paleo meals.

"Most of our customers have a desire to eat healthier," Redfield said. "But at the end of the day, it has to taste good. Great healthy things that don't taste good don't do well."

Hostess has given a nod to the healthier options, reformulating its Mini Muffins with fruit, no artificial flavors and more whole grains. But the Deep Fried Twinkies and candy-topped brownies are among several new treats it hopes will excite shoppers.

Benita Ann Powers Gibson

Benita Ann Powers Gibson passed peacefully at home, Wednesday, August 10, 2016.

She is preceded in death by her husband, Tommy Gibson, Jr.; her parents, Leslie Otis and Vestiann Powers; sisters, Dorothy Fern Powers, Fleta Ledbetter, and Manila Turner; and brothers, Leslie Powers, Jake Powers and David Powers.

She is survived by her sister, C.J. Roberts of Humble, Texas; her children, Jim and Katie Gibson of Goessel, Kansas, Carol and Roy Darden of Spring, Texas, Benjamin and Brandi Gibson of Euless, Texas, and June Gibson of Midland; grandchildren Christi Elrod, Jacob Darden, Melissa Kemper, James Darden, Wesley Gibson, Zachary Gibson, Becca Gibson, Molly Thomas, Dalton Lacy, and Madison Hicks; and by great-grandchildren, Splendyd, Asher, Jordyn, Reagan, Olivya, Addison, Caleb, Kaidance, Jackson, Lane, Caliber, and Mason.

Benita was born September 1, 1933 in Hillsboro, Texas. She was the baby of eight children growing up during the Depression. In 1951, she graduated Hillsboro High School and the next day, June 3, she married the love of her life, Tommy Gibson. They moved to Midland and have lived there since. They owned Tommy's Supermarket until they retired.

Benita was an avid bowler and was a life member in the Midland Women's Bowling Association. Over the years, she served as Director, Treasurer, and President of the association. She was awarded the Bowling Bertha Merit Award in 1987. Benita participated in more than 30 Texas Women's Bowling Association State, and more than 15 WIBC National Tournaments. She and her partner, Pat Dawson, won first place in doubles in the City Tournament in 1981. In 1982, she rolled a 679 series, which at the time, was one of the highest ever rolled by a woman at Air Park Center. She bowled over 42 years on the same team. During her active years, she was said to be a guiding light to new members of the league and helped show them the ropes.

She opened her heart to many. Every friend, classmate, or college roommate brought home was welcomed with open arms. Her motto was, "The first time you visit, you're company, the next time, you're family." She was "my other mom" to many of her children's friends.

Benita was lovingly called "Pill" by her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was the perfect example of a 'hands-on' grandmother. She could be found sitting in the floor playing dolls or cars, or at the table playing games for hours. Her love for them knew no bounds.

Her positive outlook on life was refreshing and will be missed. She lived a full life and requests that anyone attending her service dress in colorful, casual clothes to celebrate the life she lived.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice of Midland.

The family will receive friends from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday, August 15, 2016 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in Midland.

Funeral services will be held at 10:00 a.m., Tuesday, August 16, 2016 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel in Midland. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences may be made at www.npwelch.com .

Joe Henderson

Joe Henderson passed away on August 5, 2016.

He was born September 26, 1927 to Hazel and R.P. Henderson in Port Arthur, Texas. The family moved to San Benito, Texas in 1930 and from there to Kilgore, Texas in 1933. He graduated from Kilgore High School in January 1945.

He entered the United States Navy on March 10, 1945 and served in the South Pacific. He was honorably discharged at the Naval Separation Center in Norman, Oklahoma in August of 1946. He enrolled into the University of Oklahoma in September of the same year where he played freshman football and was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity. He moved to Tyler, Texas in 1947 and played football for his old high school coach, Floyd Flagstaff. During this period, he was majoring in Physical Education.

He moved back to O.U. in 1949 and changed his major to Petroleum Engineering. He graduated in January of 1952 with his degree. He was hired his senior year by Magnolia Petroleum Company and was sent to Midland in February of 1952. After one year, he resigned and was employed by Milwhite Mudsales. He was transferred to Brownfield, Texas in early 1953.

After one year, he resigned and formed Dixie Drilling Mud. He moved back to Midland in 1960 and formed Southwestern Universal Drilling Mud. He operated as an independent for 38 years and sold the company to Newpark Resources in 1998. Since then, he operated under contract to Newpark.

Joe married Pat Maples on September 11, 1966 and together they made their home in Midland. He was affectionately known as "the go-to man," "the fixer," "super sales," and "King of the one liners." He didn't suffer fools well, but if they listened, they learned and understood the oil patch better. He taught his engineers to take care of every small detail or it might come back to bite them. There was only one way to do things, the right way, which he thought was his way.

With over 60 years of experience in the oilfield, Joe taught many to be good engineers. He would awaken from a deep sleep in the middle of the night to figure out, in his head, how many sacks of a product it would take to make 10 lb. mud. He walked the mud pits for 40 years, eating out of the trunk of his car - vienna sausages, spam, bologna, and candy bars when he could afford it. He always said being in the drilling fluids business with its booms and busts was the perfect equalizer.

Joe appreciated those that worked hard for a living and liked to tip big those who he thought saw the value of work. They could be waiters, someone picking up cans, or working for a trash disposal; Joe wanted to reward them. He loved his family and friends, even the four legged ones, and anyone who loved dogs and football.

Joe loved sports, especially football supporting O.U., Texas Tech, Midland High, and Lee High. He was a big supporter of the Old Houston Oilers with the great Earl Campbell and, of course, the Dallas Cowboys, especially the years with Tony Dorsett.

As a longtime supporter of the Lee High School Football Booster Club, he was recognized for his contributions and was awarded the Rebel for Life award in 2003. He was on the Board of Directors of Western State Bank and a longtime member of the Ranchland Hills Country Club and Midland Country Club, and the Petroleum Club.

Joe supported many charitable programs over the years; MARC, Community and Senior Services, and High Sky Children's Ranch. He especially loved the Crystal Ball's live auction and loved to bid. He also supported many animal shelters, MSPCA, Grand Companions Humane Society, and was very involved with Midland Humane Coalition to find "furr"ever homes for homeless animals.

He loved all non-profits, but would be honored if, in lieu of flowers, you would help build the Wellness and Treatment Center. Please send donations to Midland Humane Coalition Capital Campaign, P.O. Box 53213, Midland Texas 79710.

He is survived by his wife, Pat; children, Terri Henderson Balkey and husband Bill; daughter-in-law, Barbara Henderson; son-in-law, Hank Mast; daughter, Sonya Henderson Buehler; son, Vince Henderson; grandchildren, Cameron, Breann, Katie, Dakota and Devin Balkey, Jennifer and Rob Taylor, Justin and Ashley Yarborough, Chandler and Ashleigh Buehler, and Nick Henderson; and by his great-grandchildren, Lillian Balkey and Olivia and Emily Taylor.

He is preceded in death by his mother, Hazel Book Henderson; father, Roy Prentice Henderson; son, Joe Henderson, Jr.; daughter, Dayna Yarborough Mast; and grandchildren Jordan and Taylor Yarborough.

The memorial service for Joe will take place at 1:00 p.m. on Tuesday, August 16, 2016 at True Lite Christian Fellowship with a reception to follow at The Petroleum Club.

Richard Bryan "Buster" Berry

Born on June 4, 1957 in Midland, Texas, Bryan passed away on Tuesday, July 12, 2016 at the age of 59. At the time of his death, Bryan was living in Austin, Texas with his sister and their mother. Bryan had also lived in Houston, Texas where he graduated from Robert E. Lee High School, but he always considered Midland his home.

During his many happy years in Midland, Bryan volunteered his time and considerable energy to the Midland Community Theater and the MCT Summer Mummers, helping backstage at MCT and in front of the house with the Mummers each summer. Bryan also supported the Midland High School Football Booster Club, and his boundless enthusiasm as a volunteer and supporter received special recognition from both the MHS Football Booster Club and the Summer Mummers.

He took great pleasure in all sporting events and attended them at every opportunity, including working for the Midland Rock Hound in their visiting team's locker room.

Bryan was preceded in death by his father, William T. Berry.

He is survived by his mother, Ellen A. "Patsy" Berry of Austin, previously of Midland; his sister, Melissa Ann Berry of Austin; and his uncle, Richard A. Berry of Round Rock.

The family would like to thank Emily Haire for the friendship and encouragement shown to Bryan during his stay in Austin.

Bryan never met a stranger and never forgot a friend. His loving personality and generous spirit will be greatly missed by family and friends.

A memorial service and interment of his ashes will take place at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, Midland, TX on Sunday, August 14, 2016 at 12 noon.

The family requests, in lieu of flowers, memorial donations be made in Bryan's name to either the MCT benefitting the Summer Mummers or the Midland High School Football Booster Club.

Wilbourne Dale Ivie

Wilbourne Dale Ivie passed away on August 11, 2016 surrounded by family members.

Dale, as he was known, was born in Cisco, Texas on March 20, 1924. He was the son of Reverend W.R."Papa" Ivie, a Baptist minister, and Edna Viola (Frye) Ivie. His brothers were Cecil, Marvin, Walter, Elton G. "Mutt" Ivie, Paul, and Marshall Ivie.

He attended Cisco High School, where he also played football and served in the armed forces as an airplane mechanic during World War II. After the war, Dale Ivie attended business classes at Cisco Junior College and Brownwood Business College. He would later use his business skills and knowledge of mechanics to work on automobiles, eventually running a shop in Midland.

He married Eva Jean Nichols in 1946 and fathered three children, Louis Dale, Linda Jean, and Judy Kaye. The marriage ended, but contact with the children was maintained over the years through Dale's youngest daughter, Judy Kaye.

In the late 1960s, Dale Ivie met Wynojoe Duckworth, who was the love of his life and he soon remarried. Dale and Wynojoe had three kids, Christi Gayle, Samuel Leon, and DeeAnn Carol. He valued education and instilled that in these children - all three are high school graduates and all have gone to college.

Mr. Ivie became a devoted member of the Masonic Lodge and was active in many other organizations associated with it. Beginning in 1958, he worked his way up in the Masonic organization, and remained actively involved in Masonry for the rest of his life. Later, he was appointed Worshipful Master of the Midland Lodge No. 623 in 1987-1988 and Worshipful Master of Midland Acacia Lodge No. 1414 in 1996-1997. He made a trip to Dallas in 2008 to receive one of the highest honors bestowed on a Mason, which is the "white cap" or 33rd Degree Mason. He served as treasurer of the Midland organization several times and was widely consulted by other Masons. In 1994, he received the Golden Trowel Award and in 2009, he received the 50 Year Service Award. A popular and highly respected teacher (District Instructor) for the group, he was often sought after and recommended to those seeking membership in the local Masonic organization. He was also a member of the Midland VFW and was Commander of that organization during the early 1980s.

He will be remembered as a devoted husband and loving father, who provided for his family, always giving what was needed for his wife and children. Dale Ivie was a serious, intellectual man, who also showed kindness, wisdom and an unforgettable sense of humor that never failed to get a laugh at family gatherings or friendly occasions. A man of deep spirituality and faith, he often saw his Masonic work as a way of giving back to the community, as well as a way of living a meaningful life in the service of others.

Five brothers, Cecil, Marvin, Walter, Paul, and Marshall precede him in death, as well as his daughter, Judy Kaye Cook.

Dale is survived by his wife of 50 years, Wynojoe, of Midland; Dee Ivie - his daughter, of San Antonio; his son - Sam Ivie, of Denton; Christi Brabec - his daughter, of Arizona and her children, Jade and Natalie (granddaughters); his daughter - Linda Johnson of Joshua; his son - Lou Ivie of Abilene; Elton G. "Mutt" Ivie, his brother, of Knox City; Jason Cook (grandson) and his son, Tyler; Catrina Gernand (granddaughter) and her children, Jessica and John; and Jeffrey Burns and his daughter, Jenna.

A visitation will be held on Sunday, August 14, 2016 at Ellis Funeral Home from 5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. The funeral service will be at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel on Monday, August 15, 2016 at 1:00 p.m. with Brother Bob Porterfield officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park North.

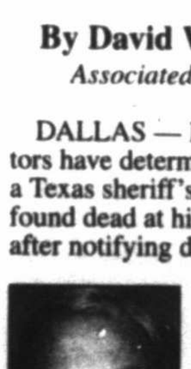
Police: Texas deputy found dead at his home killed himself

By David Warren
Associated Press

DALLAS — Investigators have determined that a Texas sheriff's deputy found dead at his home after notifying dispatchers of prowlers in his yard killed himself.



Hutchinson

Travis County sheriff's Sgt. Craig Hutchinson was suffering from depression and facing foreclosure on his home and other financial pressures, authorities announced at a news conference Friday.

Round Rock police Chief Allen Banks had announced last week that the gunshot that killed Hutchinson came from his own service weapon, but investigators couldn't conclusively say whether he killed himself. Developments in the case this week, including signs that Hutchinson was suffering from stress and anxiety, led authorities to rule out that others were responsible for his death, according to Round Rock police Cmdr. Willie Richards.

The gunshot that killed Hutchinson, 54, went through the palm of his hand and struck him in the head. He was weeks away from retirement following a 32-year career with the sheriff's office.

"We're going to put something in place to prevent something like this from happening again," Travis County Sheriff Greg Hamilton said.

Hamilton, who struggled Friday to compose himself, pledged to put measures in place that identify sheriff's personnel who may be suicidal and provide help.

"We're going to put something in place to prevent something like this from happening again."

Greg Hamilton, Travis County Sheriff

Hutchinson's death July 25 prompted a flurry of speculation as it came amid the fatal shootings of five police officers in Dallas and the ambush and killing of three law enforcement officers in Louisiana. His memorial service drew thousands and prompted officials to close several avenues for a long procession of vehicles to the service.

The case has similarities to the death last September of Fox Lake, Illinois, police Lt. Charles Joseph Gliniewicz. In both cases, the officers told dispatchers about suspicious characters before they were found shot and each incident led to broad police responses. In the case of Gliniewicz, authorities allege that he had been embezzling funds from a youth program he ran and that, fearing it would be exposed, he killed himself and tried to make it look like someone else killed him.

No one has alleged any wrongdoing by Hutchinson, who was remembered as a "gentle giant" and man of his word.

Richards said Hutchinson previously had two vehicles repossessed and faced foreclosure proceedings on his Round Rock home, north of Austin, beginning in 2011. It appears he and his wife were able to retain the home but foreclosure warnings continued, including just weeks before his death.

Hamilton said Hutchinson's death left his department stunned. Hutchinson had told the sheriff earlier in the month how excited he was for retirement and how he wanted to move to a ranch and purchase cattle.

Detectives investigating his death processed more than 150 pieces of evidence, canvassed some 250 homes and chased down more than 100 tips. Hutchinson had notified dispatchers in the early hours of July 25 that two suspects were trying to break into a backyard shed. But officials said Friday there didn't appear to be anything taken from the shed or any indication of forced entry.

"I want to apologize to the citizens of Williamson County to have to use that many resources to address this particular issue," Hamilton said.

Williamson County Justice of the Peace Bill Gravell Jr., the official who certified that the sergeant killed himself, said suicide is one of the leading manners of death he investigates.

"We need to be more aggressive and open in talking about this topic," he said.

Judge overturns conviction of nephew in 'Making a Murderer'

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — A judge on Friday overturned the conviction of a Wisconsin man found guilty of helping his uncle kill a woman in a case profiled in the Netflix documentary series "Making a Murderer," ruling that investigators coerced a confession using deceptive tactics.

U.S. Magistrate William Duffin in Milwaukee ordered Brendan Dassey freed within 90 days unless prosecutors decide to retry him. The state Department of Justice, which handled the case, declined to comment Friday.

Dassey's case burst into the public's consciousness with the popularity of the "Making a Murderer" series that debuted in December. The filmmakers cast doubt on the legal process used to convict Dassey and his uncle Steven Avery in the death of Teresa Halbach, and their work sparked national interest and conjecture. Authorities involved in the case have called the 10-hour series biased, while the filmmakers have stood by their work.

Dassey confessed to helping Avery carry out the rape and killing of Halbach, but his attorneys argued that his constitutional rights were violated throughout the investigation. Dassey's confession wasn't presented as evidence in Avery's trial. Both men are serving life sentences.

Duffin said in his ruling that investigators made false promises to Dassey by assuring him "he had nothing to worry about."

"These repeated false promises, when considered in conjunction with all relevant factors, most especially Dassey's age, intellectual deficits, and the absence of a supportive adult, rendered Dassey's confession involuntary under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments (of the U.S. Constitution)," Duffin wrote.

Dassey, who is now 26, was 16 when Halbach, a photographer, was killed in 2005 after she went to the Avery family auto salvage yard to take pictures of some vehicles. Court papers describe Dassey as a slow learner with poor grades, with difficulty understanding some aspects of language and expressing himself verbally. He was also described as extremely introverted and poor at picking up on communications such as body language and tone.

Dassey was convicted of first-degree intentional homicide, second-degree sexual assault, and mutilation of a corpse in Halbach's killing. Avery was tried and convicted separately in the homicide.

Avery made headlines in 2003 when he was released from prison after spending 18 years behind bars for a rape he didn't commit. After being freed, he had a $36 million lawsuit pending against public officials when Halbach disappeared on Halloween 2005.

Friday's ruling came after Dassey's appeal was rejected by state courts. The judge said that Dassey's confession to police in 2006 was "so clearly involuntary" that a state appeals court ruling to the contrary was an unreasonable application of established federal law.

"The court does not reach this conclusion lightly," Duffin wrote.

The investigators did not have any ill motive, the judge wrote, but rather "an intentional and concerted effort to trick Dassey into confessing."

The error was not harmless because Dassey's confession was the entirety of the case against him, the judge said.

Attorneys for Dassey did not immediately return messages seeking comment. A brother who has acted as a Halbach family spokesman did not immediately respond to phone messages and an email.

Kathleen Zellner, an attorney for Avery, said in a statement that Avery was thrilled for his nephew. Avery is pursuing his own appeal.

"We know when an unbiased court reviews all of the new evidence we have, Steven will have his conviction overturned as well," Zellner said.

Joe Friedberg, a defense attorney in Minnesota who was not involved in the case but is familiar with it and participated in a forum on it with Avery's first defense attorney, said he doesn't believe the decision will have any bearing on Avery's case.

"The kid's confession was not entered into evidence against Avery, and I don't think it impacted Avery's trial at all," Friedberg said.

Netflix last month announced new episodes were in production to follow appeals by both Avery and Dassey.

Mississippi gay marriage law remains blocked during appeal

By Emily Wagster Pettus
Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi's law on religious objections to same-sex marriage will remain blocked while the governor appeals a judge's ruling that the law is unconstitutional.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Friday that it would not immediately remove the block that U.S. District Judge Carlton Reeves put on House Bill 1523 moments before it was to become law July 1. The Republican-led Legislature passed the bill this year in response to the 2015 Supreme Court ruling that legalized gay marriage nationwide. It sought to protect three beliefs: That marriage is only between a man and a woman; that sex should only take place in such a marriage; and that a person's gender is determined at birth and cannot be altered. Republican Gov. Phil Bryant is seeking to overturn Reeves' ruling, and he had asked the 5th Circuit to let the law take effect during the appeals process.

The New Orleans-based 5th Circuit — which handles appeals from Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas — on Friday also said it would not grant Bryant's request for a speedy appeal of Reeves' ruling.

Police: At least 2 dead after plane crashes in Virginia

Associated Press

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. — A small plane aborted its landing and crashed into trees Friday at the edge of a northern Virginia airport, killing at least two people, state police said.

Shocked witnesses on a train going by the crash site described the plane in flames and said it had been completely destroyed. Police are still working to confirm how many people were on board the aircraft and where it originated. Authorities have not identified the victims.

The plane came to the end of the runway at the Shannon Airport near Fredericksburg and then pulled back up, flying to the end of the airport property, State Police Spokeswoman Corinne Geller said in an email. It struck the tree line, crashed and immediately caught fire.

Tanya Aquino of Washington was on an Amtrak train to Richmond when the train stopped. A conductor first said there was a fire, then said there had been a plane crash.

The train rode past the crash site and Aquino said she saw flames, smoke, several rescue vehicles and the remains of the plane just beyond the tree line.

"When I heard there was a fire, it was such a hot day, I was hoping it was just a brush fire," Aquino said. "It looked so terrible the way the plane had landed."

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating.

Shari Acree, who was also on the train, said she saw white smoke and the crash.

"The plane was completely decimated and there was still some flame coming from it," Acree said in an email.

The airport has an average of 85 flights per day, mostly local general aviation. Ninety-one aircraft are based there, most of them are single-engine

Soldier: I hid evidence, but teen girlfriend killed her mom

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — A soldier accused of killing his 14-year-old girlfriend's mother placed the blame squarely on the teen Friday, telling jurors that she committed the murder and his only role was helping dispose of evidence because she claimed to be pregnant.

Army Spc. Caleb Barnes' testimony came after Jamie Silvonek, now 15, took the stand for the defense but told a wildly different story that implicated him in the slaying.

Barnes, who's from El Paso, is accused of first-degree murder in the stabbing of Cheryl Silvonek in March 2015 in Pennsylvania because she disapproved of his relationship with her daughter because of their age difference. Barnes, now 22, was 21 at the time of the killing.

Jamie Silvonek had agreed to testify against Barnes as part of a plea deal, but prosecutors rested their case Thursday without calling her. Silvonek, who was tried as an adult, pleaded guilty in February to first-degree murder and criminal conspiracy and is serving 35 years to life.

On Friday, in a twist, the defense called her to the stand, where she told the court she was "inexorably, ineffably in love" with Barnes, The Morning Call of Allentown reported.

The teen admitted urging Barnes via text to carry out the slaying so they could continue their relationship.

"I believe what I did was just as bad or worse than the physical act," she said. "I realized that I had to do the right thing. That's taking accountability for my actions, something your client has yet to do."

Silvonek described Barnes reaching for her mother's throat from the back seat of her SUV as the woman parked in the driveway of her home after driving the couple to a concert in Scranton.

Silvonek, wearing a beige jumpsuit and shackles, wiped away tears as she talked about her mother, her voice cracking with emotion. She stared at her lap, her long blond hair covering her face.

USGS reports magnitude 4.0 earthquake in Oklahoma

Associated Press

HELENA, Okla. — The US Geological Survey reports a 4.0 magnitude earthquake has stuck north-western Oklahoma.

The USGS says the quake was recorded at 12:27 a.m., 12 miles northeast of Helena, about 85 miles northwest of Oklahoma City.

There have been no reports of injury or damage.

The USGS says the earthquake was widely felt in central Oklahoma and as far north as Junction City, Kansas.

The number of magnitude 3.0 or greater earthquakes has skyrocketed in Oklahoma, from a few dozen in 2012 to more than 900 last year. Scientists have linked the increase to the underground disposal of wastewater from oil and gas production and state regulators have asked producers to reduce wastewater

Obituaries

Benita Ann Powers Gibson

Benita Ann Powers Gibson passed peacefully at home, Wednesday, August 10, 2016.

She is preceded in death by her husband, Tommy Gibson, Jr.; her parents, Leslie Otis and Vestiann Powers; sisters, Dorothy Fern Powers, Fleta Ledbetter, and Manila Turner; and brothers, Leslie Powers, Jake Powers and David Powers.

She is survived by her sister, C.J. Roberts of Humble, Texas; her children, Jim and Katie Gibson of Goessel, Kansas, Carol and Roy Darden of Spring, Texas, Benjamin and Brandi Gibson of Euless, Texas, and June Gibson of Midland; grandchildren Christi Elrod, Jacob Darden, Melissa Kemper, James Darden, Wesley Gibson, Zachary Gibson, Becca Gibson, Molly Thomas, Dalton Lacy, and Madison Hicks; and by great-grandchildren, Splendyd, Asher, Jordyn, Reagan, Olivya, Addison, Caleb, Kaidance, Jackson, Lane, Caliber, and Mason.

Benita was born September 1, 1933 in Hillsboro, Texas. She was the baby of eight children growing up during the Depression. In 1951, she graduated Hillsboro High School and the next day, June 3, she married the love of her life, Tommy Gibson. They moved to Midland and have lived there since. They owned Tommy's Supermarket until they retired.

Benita was an avid bowler and was a life member in the Midland Women's Bowling Association. Over the years, she served as Director, Treasurer, and President of the association. She was awarded the Bowling Bertha Merit Award in 1987. Benita participated in more than 30 Texas Women's Bowling Association State, and more than 15 WIBC National Tournaments. She and her partner, Pat Dawson, won first place in doubles in the City Tournament in 1981. In 1982, she rolled a 679 series which at the time, was one of the highest ever rolled by a woman at Air Park Center. She bowled over 42 years on the same team. During her active years, she was said to be a guiding light to new members of the league and helped show them the ropes.

She opened her heart to many. Every friend, classmate, or college roommate brought home was welcomed with open arms. Her motto was, "The first time you visit, you're company; the next time, you're family." She was "my other mom" to many of her children's friends.

Benita was lovingly called "Pill" by her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was the perfect example of a 'hands-on' grandmother. She could be found sitting in the floor playing dolls or cars, or at the table playing games for hours. Her love for them knew no bounds.

Her positive outlook on life was refreshing and will be missed. She lived a full life and requests that anyone attending her service dress in colorful, casual clothes to celebrate the life she lived.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice of Midland.

The family will receive friends from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday, August 15, 2016 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in Midland.

Funeral services will be held at 10:00 a.m., Tuesday, August 16, 2016 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel in Midland. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences may be made at www.npwelch.com.

Joe Henderson

Joe Henderson passed away on August 5, 2016.

He was born September 26, 1927 to Hazel and R.P. Henderson in Port Arthur, Texas. The family moved to San Benito, Texas in 1930 and from there to Kilgore, Texas in 1933. He graduated from Kilgore High School in January 1945.

He entered the United States Navy on March 10, 1945 and served in the South Pacific. He was honorably discharged at the Naval Separation Center in Norman, Oklahoma in August of 1946. He enrolled into the University of Oklahoma in September of the same year where he played freshman football and was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity. He moved to Tyler, Texas in 1947 and played football for his old high school coach, Floyd Flagstaff. During this period, he was majoring in Physical Education.

He moved back to O.U. in 1949 and changed his major to Petroleum Engineering. He graduated in January of 1952 with his degree. He was hired his senior year by Magnolia Petroleum Company and was sent to Midland in February of 1952. After one year, he resigned and was employed by Milwhite Mudsales. He was transferred to Brownfield, Texas in early 1953.

After one year, he resigned and formed Dixie Drilling Mud. He moved back to Midland in 1960 and formed Southwestern Universal Drilling Mud. He operated as an independent for 38 years and sold the company to Newpark Resources in 1998. Since then, he operated under contract to Newpark.

Joe married Pat Maples on September 11, 1966 and together they made their home in Midland. He was affectionately known as "the go-to man," "the fixer," "super sales," and "King of the one liners." He didn't suffer fools well, but if they listened, they learned and understood the oil patch better. He taught his engineers to take care of every small detail or it might come back to bite them. There was only one way to do things, the right way, which he thought was his way.

With over 60 years of experience in the oilfield, Joe taught many to be good engineers. He would awaken from a deep sleep in the middle of the night to figure out, in his head, how many sacks of a product it would take to make 10 lb. mud. He walked the mud pits for 40 years, eating out of the trunk of his car - vienna sausages, spam, bologna, and candy bars when he could afford it. He always said being in the drilling fluids business with its booms and busts was the perfect equalizer.

Joe appreciated those that worked hard for a living and liked to tip big those who he thought saw the value of work. They could be waiters, someone picking up cans, or working for a trash disposal; Joe wanted to reward them. He loved his family and friends, even the four legged ones, and anyone who loved dogs and football.

Joe loved sports, especially football supporting O.U., Texas Tech, Midland High, and Lee High. He was a big supporter of the Old Houston Oilers with the great Earl Campbell and, of course, the Dallas Cowboys, especially the years with Tony Dorsett.

As a longtime supporter of the Lee High School Football Booster Club, he was recognized for his contributions and was awarded the Rebel for Life award in 2003. He was on the Board of Directors of Western State Bank and a longtime member of the Ranchland Hills Country Club and Midland Country Club, and the Petroleum Club.

Joe supported many charitabie programs over the years; MARC, Community and Senior Services, and High Sky Children's Ranch. He especially loved the Crystal Ball's live auction and loved to bid. He also supported many animal shelters, MSPCA, Grand Companions Humane Society, and was very involved with Midland Humane Coalition to find "furr"ever homes for homeless animals.

He loved all non-profits, but would be honored if, in lieu of flowers, you would help build the Wellness and Treatment Center. Please send donations to Midland Humane Coalition Capital Campaign, P.O. Box 53213, Midland Texas 79710.

He is survived by his wife, Pat; children, Terri Henderson Balkey and husband Bill; daughter-in-law, Barbara Henderson; son-in-law, Hank Mast; daughter, Sonya Henderson Buehler; son, Vince Henderson; grandchildren, Cameron, Breann, Katie, Dakota and Devin Balkey, Jennifer and Rob Taylor, Justin and Ashley Yarborough, Chandler and Ashleigh Buehler, and Nick Henderson; and by his great-grandchildren, Lillian Balkey and Olivia and Emily Taylor.

He is preceded in death by his mother, Hazel Book Henderson; father, Roy Prentice Henderson; son, Joe Henderson, Jr.; daughter, Dayna Yarborough Mast; and grandchildren Jordan and Taylor Yarborough.

The memorial service for Joe will take place at 1:00 p.m. on Tuesday, August 16, 2016 at True Lite Christian Fellowship with a reception to follow at The Petroleum Club.

Richard Bryan "Buster" Berry

Born on June 4, 1957 in Midland, Texas, Bryan passed away on Tuesday, July 12, 2016 at the age of 59. At the time of his death, Bryan was living in Austin, Texas with his sister and their mother. Bryan had also lived in Houston, Texas where he graduated from Robert E. Lee High School, but he always considered Midland his home.

During his many happy years in Midland, Bryan volunteered his time and considerable energy to the Midland Community Theater and the MCT Summer Mummers, helping backstage at MCT and in front of the house with the Mummers each summer. Bryan also supported the Midland High School Football Booster Club, and his boundless enthusiasm as a volunteer and supporter received special recognition from both the MHS Football Booster Club and the Summer Mummers.

He took great pleasure in all sporting events and attended them at every opportunity, including working for the Midland Rock Hound in their visiting team's locker room.

Bryan was preceded in death by his father, William T. Berry.

He is survived by his mother, Ellen A. "Patsy" Berry of Austin, previously of Midland; his sister, Melissa Ann Berry of Austin; and his uncle, Richard A. Berry of Round Rock.

The family would like to thank Emily Haire for the friendship and encouragement shown to Bryan during his stay in Austin.

Bryan never met a stranger and never forgot a friend. His loving personality and generous spirit will be greatly missed by family and friends.

A memorial service and interment of his ashes will take place at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, Midland, TX on Sunday, August 14, 2016 at 12 noon.

The family requests, in lieu of flowers, memorial donations be made in Bryan's name to either the MCT benefitting the Summer Mummers or the Midland High School Football Booster Club.

Wilbourne Dale Ivie

Wilbourne Dale Ivie passed away on August 11, 2016 surrounded by family members.

Dale, as he was known, was born in Cisco, Texas on March 20, 1924. He was the son of Reverend W.R."Papa" Ivie, a Baptist minister, and Edna Viola (Frye) Ivie. His brothers were Cecil, Marvin, Walter, Elton G. "Mutt" Ivie, Paul, and Marshall Ivie.

He attended Cisco High School, where he also played football and served in the armed forces as an airplane mechanic during World War II. After the war, Dale Ivie attended business classes at Cisco Junior College and Brownwood Business College. He would later use his business skills and knowledge of mechanics to work on automobiles, eventually running a shop in Midland.

He married Eva Jean Nichols in 1946 and fatnered three children, Louis Dale, Linda Jean, and Judy Kaye. The marriage ended, but contact with the children was maintained over the years through Dale's youngest daughter, Judy Kaye.

In the late 1960s, Dale Ivie met Wynojoe Duckworth, who was the love of his life and he soon remarried. Dale and Wynojoe had three kids, Christi Gayle, Samuel Leon, and DeeAnn Carol. He valued education and instilled that in these children - all three are high school graduates and all have gone to college.

Mr. Ivie became a devoted member of the Masonic Lodge and was active in many other organizations associated with it. Beginning in 1958, he worked his way up in the Masonic organization, and remained actively involved in Masonry for the rest of his life. Later, he was appointed Worshipful Master of the Midland Lodge No. 623 in 1987-1988 and Worshipful Master of Midland Acacia Lodge No. 1414 in 1996-1997. He made a trip to Dallas in 2008 to receive one of the highest honors bestowed on a Mason, which is the "white cap" or 33rd Degree Mason. He served as treasurer of the Midland organization several times and was widely consulted by other Masons. In 1994, he received the Golden Trowel Award and in 2009, he received the 50 Year Service Award. A popular and highly respected teacher (District Instructor) for the group, he was often sought after and recommended to those seeking membership in the local Masonic organization. He was also a member of the Midland VFW and was Commander of that organization during the early 1980s.

He will be remembered as a devoted husband and loving father, who provided for his family, always giving what was needed for his wife and children. Dale Ivie was a serious, intellectual man, who also showed kindness, wisdom and an unforgettable sense of humor that never failed to get a laugh at family gatherings or friendly occasions. A man of deep spirituality and faith, he often saw his Masonic work as a way of giving back to the community, as well as a way of living a meaningful life in the service of others.

Five brothers, Cecil, Marvin, Walter, Paul, and Marshall precede him in death, as well as his daughter, Judy Kaye Cook.

Dale is survived by his wife of 50 years, Wynojoe, of Midland; Dee Ivie - his daughter, of San Antonio; his son - Sam Ivie, of Denton; Christi Brabec - his daughter, of Arizona and her children, Jade and Natalie (granddaughters); his daughter - Linda Johnson of Joshua; his son - Lou Ivie of Abilene; Elton G. "Mutt" Ivie, his brother, of Knox City; Jason Cook (grandson) and his son, Tyler; Catrina Gernand (granddaughter) and her children, Jessica and John; and Jeffrey Burns and his daughter, Jenna.

A visitation will be held on Sunday, August 14, 2016 at Ellis Funeral Home from 5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. The funeral service will be at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel on Monday, August 15, 2016 at 1:00 p.m. with Brother Bob Porterfield officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park North.

Police: Texas deputy found dead at his home killed himself

By David Warren
Associated Press

DALLAS — Investigators have determined that a Texas sheriff's deputy found dead at his home after notifying dispatchers of prowlers in his yard killed himself.

Hutchinson

Travis County sheriff's Sgt. Craig Hutchinson was suffering from depression and facing foreclosure on his home and other financial pressures, authorities announced at a news conference Friday.

Round Rock police Chief Allen Banks had announced last week that the gunshot that killed Hutchinson came from his own service weapon, but investigators couldn't conclusively say whether he killed himself. Developments in the case this week, including signs that Hutchinson was suffering from stress and anxiety, led authorities to rule out that others were responsible for his death, according to Round Rock police Cmdr. Willie Richards.

The gunshot that killed Hutchinson, 54, went through the palm of his hand and struck him in the head. He was weeks away from retirement following a 32-year career with the sheriff's office.

"We're going to put something in place to prevent something like this from happening again," Travis County Sheriff Greg Hamilton said.

Hamilton, who struggled Friday to compose himself, pledged to put measures in place that identify sheriff's personnel who may be suicidal and provide help.

"We're going to put something in place to prevent something like this from happening again."

Greg Hamilton, Travis County Sheriff

Hutchinson's death July 25 prompted a flurry of speculation as it came amid the fatal shootings of five police officers in Dallas and the ambush and killing of three law enforcement officers in Louisiana. His memorial service drew thousands and prompted officials to close several avenues for a long procession of vehicles to the service.

The case has similarities to the death last September of Fox Lake, Illinois, police Lt. Charles Joseph Gliniewicz. In both cases, the officers told dispatchers about suspicious characters before they were found shot and each incident led to broad police responses. In the case of Gliniewicz, authorities allege that he had been embezzling funds from a youth program he ran and that, fearing it would be exposed, he killed himself and tried to make it look like someone else killed him.

No one has alleged any wrongdoing by Hutchinson, who was remembered as a "gentle giant" and man of his word.

Richards said Hutchinson previously had two vehicles repossessed and faced foreclosure proceedings on his Round Rock home, north of Austin, beginning in 2011. It appears he and his wife were able to retain the home but foreclosure warnings continued, including just weeks before his death.

Hamilton said Hutchinson's death left his department stunned. Hutchinson had told the sheriff earlier in the month how excited he was for retirement and how he wanted to move to a ranch and purchase cattle.

Detectives investigating his death processed more than 150 pieces of evidence, canvassed some 250 homes and chased down more than 100 tips. Hutchinson had notified dispatchers in the early hours of July 25 that two suspects were trying to break into a backyard shed. But officials said Friday there didn't appear to be anything taken from the shed or any indication of forced entry.

"I want to apologize to the citizens of Williamson County to have to use that many resources to address this particular issue," Hamilton said.

Williamson County Justice of the Peace Bill Gravell Jr., the official who certified that the sergeant killed himself, said suicide is one of the leading manners of death he investigates.

"We need to be more aggressive and open in talking about this topic," he said.

A federal court in Wisconsin on Friday overturned the conviction of Dassey, a man found guilty of helping his uncle kill Teresa Halbach in a case profiled in the Netflix documentary "Making a Murderer."

Judge overturns conviction of nephew in 'Making a Murderer'

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — A judge on Friday overturned the conviction of a Wisconsin man found guilty of helping his uncle kill a woman in a case profiled in the Netflix documentary series "Making a Murderer," ruling that investigators coerced a confession using deceptive tactics.

U.S. Magistrate William Duffin in Milwaukee ordered Brendan Dassey freed within 90 days unless prosecutors decide to retry him. The state Department of Justice, which handled the case, declined to comment Friday.

Dassey's case burst into the public's consciousness with the popularity of the "Making a Murderer" series that debuted in December. The filmmakers cast doubt on the legal process used to convict Dassey and his uncle Steven Avery in the death of Teresa Halbach, and their work sparked national interest and conjecture. Authorities involved in the case have called the 10-hour series biased, while the filmmakers have stood by their work.

Dassey confessed to helping Avery carry out the rape and killing of Halbach, but his attorneys argued that his constitutional rights were violated throughout the investigation. Dassey's confession wasn't presented as evidence in Avery's trial. Both men are serving life sentences.

Duffin said in his ruling that investigators made false promises to Dassey by assuring him "he had nothing to worry about."

"These repeated false promises, when considered in conjunction with all relevant factors, most especially Dassey's age, intellectual deficits, and the absence of a supportive adult, rendered Dassey's confession involuntary under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments (of the U.S. Constitution)," Duffin wrote.

Dassey, who is now 26, was 16 when Halbach, a photographer, was killed in 2005 after she went to the Avery family auto salvage yard to take pictures of some vehicles. Court papers describe Dassey as a slow learner with poor grades, with difficulty understanding some aspects of language and expressing himself verbally. He was also described as extremely introverted and poor at picking up on communications such as body language and tone.

Dassey was convicted of first-degree intentional homicide, second-degree sexual assault, and mutilation of a corpse in Halbach's killing. Avery was tried and convicted separately in the homicide.

Avery made headlines in 2003 when he was released from prison after spending 18 years behind bars for a rape he didn't commit. After being freed, he had a $36 million lawsuit pending against public officials when Halbach disappeared on Halloween 2005.

Friday's ruling came after Dassey's appeal was rejected by state courts. The judge said that Dassey's confession to police in 2006 was "so clearly involuntary" that a state appeals court ruling to the contrary was an unreasonable application of established federal law.

"The court does not reach this conclusion lightly," Duffin wrote.

The investigators did not have any ill motive, the judge wrote, but rather "an intentional and concerted effort to trick Dassey into confessing."

The error was not harmless because Dassey's confession was the entirety of the case against him, the judge said.

Attorneys for Dassey did not immediately return messages seeking comment. A brother who has acted as a Halbach family spokesman did not immediately respond to phone messages and an email.

Kathleen Zellner, an attorney for Avery, said in a statement that Avery was thrilled for his nephew. Avery is pursuing his own appeal.

"We know when an unbiased court reviews all of the new evidence we have, Steven will have his conviction overturned as well," Zellner said.

Joe Friedberg, a defense attorney in Minnesota who was not involved in the case but is familiar with it and participated in a forum on it with Avery's first defense attorney, said he doesn't believe the decision will have any bearing on Avery's case.

"The kid's confession was not entered into evidence against Avery, and I don't think it impacted Avery's trial at all," Friedberg said.

Netflix last month announced new episodes were in production to follow appeals by both Avery and Dassey.

Mississippi gay marriage law remains blocked during appeal

By Emily Wagster Pettus

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi's law on religious objections to same-sex marriage will remain blocked while the governor appeals a judge's ruling that the law is unconstitutional.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Friday that it would not immediately remove the block that U.S. District Judge Carlton Reeves put on House Bill 1523 moments before it was to become law July 1. The Republican-led Legislature passed the bill this year in response to the 2015 Supreme Court ruling that legalized gay marriage nationwide. It sought to protect three beliefs: That marriage is only between a man and a woman; that sex should only take place in such a marriage; and that a person's gender is determined at birth and cannot be altered. Republican Gov. Phil Bryant is seeking to overturn Reeves' ruling, and he had asked the 5th Circuit to let the law take effect during the appeals process.

The New Orleans-based 5th Circuit — which handles appeals from Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas — on Friday also said it would not grant Bryant's request for a speedy appeal of Reeves' ruling.

Police: At least 2 dead after plane crashes in Virginia

Associated Press

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. — A small plane aborted its landing and crashed into trees Friday at the edge of a northern Virginia airport, killing at least two people, state police said.

Shocked witnesses on a train going by the crash site described the plane in flames and said it had been completely destroyed. Police are still working to confirm how many people were on board the aircraft and where it originated. Authorities have not identified the victims.

The plane came to the end of the runway at the Shannon Airport near Fredericksburg and then pulled back up, flying to the end of the airport property, State Police Spokeswoman Corinne Geller said in an email. It struck the tree line, crashed and immediately caught fire.

Tanya Aquino of Washington was on an Amtrak train to Richmond when the train stopped. A conductor first said there was a fire, then said there had been a plane crash.

The train rode past the crash site and Aquino said she saw flames, smoke, several rescue vehicles and the remains of the plane just beyond the tree line.

"When I heard there was a fire, it was such a hot day, I was hoping it was just a brush fire," Aquino said. "It looked so terrible the way the plane had landed."

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating.

Shari Acree, who was also on the train, said she saw white smoke and the crash.

"The plane was completely decimated and there was still some flame coming from it," Acree said in an email.

The airport has an average of 85 flights per day, mostly local general aviation. Ninety-one aircraft are based there, most of them are single-engine

Soldier: I hid evidence, but teen girlfriend killed her mom

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — A soldier accused of killing his 14-year-old girlfriend's mother placed the blame squarely on the teen Friday, telling jurors that she committed the murder and his only role was helping dispose of evidence because she claimed to be pregnant.

Army Spc. Caleb Barnes' testimony came after Jamie Silvonek, now 15, took the stand for the defense but told a wildly different story that implicated him in the slaying.

Barnes, who's from El Paso, is accused of first-degree murder in the stabbing of Cheryl Silvonek in March 2015 in Pennsylvania because she disapproved of his relationship with her daughter because of their age difference. Barnes, now 22, was 21 at the time of the killing.

Jamie Silvonek had agreed to testify against Barnes as part of a plea deal, but prosecutors rested their case Thursday without calling her. Silvonek, who was tried as an adult, pleaded guilty in February to first-degree murder and criminal conspiracy and is serving 35 years to life.

On Friday, in a twist, the defense called her to the stand, where she told the court she was "inexorably, ineffably in love" with Barnes, The Morning Call of Allentown reported.

The teen admitted urging Barnes via text to carry out the slaying so they could continue their relationship.

"I believe what I did was just as bad or worse than the physical act," she said. "I realized that I had to do the right thing. That's taking accountability for my actions, something your client has yet to do."

Silvonek described Barnes reaching for her mother's throat from the back seat of her SUV as the woman parked in the driveway of her home after driving the couple to a concert in Scranton.

Silvonek, wearing a beige jumpsuit and shackles, wiped away tears as she talked about her mother, her voice cracking with emotion. She stared at her lap, her long blond hair covering her face.

USGS reports magnitude 4.0 earthquake in Oklahoma

Associated Press

HELENA, Okla. — The US Geological Survey reports a 4.0 magnitude earthquake has stuck northwestern Oklahoma.

The USGS says the quake was recorded at 12:27 a.m., 12 miles northeast of Helena, about 85 miles northwest of Oklahoma City.

There have been no reports of injury or damage.

The USGS says the earthquake was widely felt in central Oklahoma and as far north as Junction City, Kansas.

The number of magnitude 3.0 or greater earthquakes has skyrocketed in Oklahoma, from a few dozen in 2012 to more than 900 last year. Scientists have linked the increase to the underground disposal of wastewater from oil and gas production and state regulators have asked producers to reduce wastewater

UN approves robust South Sudan peace force

By Michael Astor
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — United Nations peacekeepers in South Sudan have a robust new mandate and thousands of additional troops despite government opposition to the move, raising the possibility of clashes between blue helmets and the country's armed forces.

The Security Council on Friday approved a U.S.-drafted resolution granting expanded powers to peacekeepers requiring them to use "all necessary means" to protect U.N. personnel and installations and to take "proactive" measures to protect civilians from threats. The resolution also adds an additional 4,000 soldiers from Africa nations, bringing the peacekeeping force's troops to around 17,000

The United Nations Mission in South Sudan, or UNMISS, has been criticized for failing to protect civilians when U.N. sites came under attack last month. It has also been accused of failing to intervene in cases where government forces allegedly committed rapes outside U.N. camps.

The vote was 11 in favor with Russia, China, Venezuela and Egypt abstaining. Those abstaining cited concerns over the Security Council's failure to obtain South Sudan's consent for the regional protection force that would patrol around Juba, the capital.

South Sudan's Ambassador Akuei Bona Malwal told the council his country rejected the resolution because it failed to consider his country's views.

"The adoption of this resolution goes against the basic principle of U.N. peacekeeping operations which is the consent of the main parties to the conflict and also goes against the U.N. Charter," Malwal said. "Consent of South Sudan to the mandate and operational modalities of the protection force outlined in the resolution would have been important as it would have given the force all the necessary freedoms to carry out the outlined mandated tasks."

U.S. deputy ambassador David Pressman said he was aware of South Sudan's reservations.

"We recognize the importance of government cooperation, but the United States would point to the actions of the government. For while we expect the South Sudanese government to treat the United Nations like the partner that it is, that is simply not is happening on the ground in South Sudan today. Instead, as we all know, the Government of South Sudan's troops are actively blocking United Nations personnel from carrying out their life saving work, which in some cases has led to the deaths of U.N. peacekeepers," Pressman said. In South Sudan, Presidential Spokesman Ateny Wek Ateny said his country was not prepared to accept the 4,000 troops unless their mandate was limited to the protection of peace monitors, humanitarian agencies and internally displaced persons.

"Unless they are coming to invade South Sudan, we are a sovereign country. If the whole world has decided to make us a protectorate, we will see from there," Ateny said. "If we do not cooperate they cannot come."

The resolution does not impose an arms embargo as many, including more than a dozen U.S. lawmakers, have demanded but instead threatens a possible arms embargo if South Sudan does not cooperate.

Ambassadors from Britain and Spain expressed disappointment an arms embargo was not included in the resolution.

"We are disappointed that there is not an immediate arms embargo on South Sudan. We think that the time for introducing an arms embargo is now," deputy British ambassador to the U.N. Peter Wilson said ahead of the vote. He said that while a number of countries supported the embargo others argued that it disadvantages one side in the fighting.

South Sudan, the world's youngest country, has been riven by ethnic violence nearly since it was founded in 2011, with civil war breaking out in 2013 between the Dinka and Nuer peoples. A peace agreement was signed in August, but fighting continues.

The civil war began in December 2013 when government forces loyal to President Salva Kiir, an ethnic Dinka, battled rebels led by his former deputy Riek Machar, a Nuer. Tens of thousands of people were killed in the fighting and over 2 million people were displaced.

Rig Count

From 1A

dition of a rig in Scurry County brought 8A's tally to nine.

In total, there were 158 rigs operating in Texas, up 11.

Counties with double-digit rig counts in the Permian were Midland, Reeves (23), Lea, Loving (16), Martin (12), Eddy and Reagan (10).

Texas & New Mexico

The Lone Star State's rig count rose 13 to 230, far from the year-ago tally of 389, but the most since March 4, when 227 rigs were recorded.

The Eagle Ford idled one rig, leaving 36 in the South Texas basin. Over in the east, the Haynesville ended the week with 14 rigs, down one. Up in the Panhandle, the Granite Wash gained a rig for a total of 10. The Barnett in North Texas was unchanged at four.

The offshore rig count held steady at one. There weren't any rigs listed in inland waters.

All of New Mexico's activity was in the Permian, which rose one to 31. The Land of Enchantment had 52 rigs a year ago this week.

United States

The U.S. added 17 rigs this week, most of it oil. Of the nation's 481 rigs, 396 were searching for oil, up 15. Natural gas rigs rose two to 83. Miscellaneous rigs were unchanged at two.

All new rigs were on land, which rose 18 to 461. Rigs in inland waters fell one to three. Offshore rigs — all of which were in the Gulf of Mexico — were unchanged at 17.

By drilling trajectory, there were 375 horizontal rigs, up 13; 62 vertical rigs, up four; and 44 directional rigs, unchanged.

The U.S. had 884 rigs at this time last year.

Most-active

Basins with the most activity were the Permian, the Eagle Ford, the Cana Woodford (29), the Williston (29) and the Marcellus (21).

States with the highest rig counts were Texas, Oklahoma (61), Louisiana (42), New Mexico and North Dakota (29).

Canada & North America

Canada ended this week with 126 rigs, up four. The nation had 65 oil rigs, up five; 60 natural gas rigs, unchanged; and one miscellaneous rig, down one. Canada had 211 rigs a year ago this week.

The total number of rigs in the North America region rose 21 to 607. At this time last year, there were 1,095 rigs in North America.

This June 8 photo shows electric cars parked atop the Los Angeles Police Department parking lot, in Los Angeles. A California lawmaker told The Associated Press on Friday, that she's introducing legislation to require that 15 percent of new vehicles be emission-free in less than a decade, a significant escalation in the state's efforts to speed the evolution of new car technology.

California may beef up electric vehicle mandate

By Jonathan J. Cooper
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — With the extension of California's landmark climate change law stalled, a legislative plan is emerging to significantly up the ante on California's commitment to electric vehicles by requiring that 15 percent of all new automobiles be emission-free within a decade.

Assemblywoman Autumn Burke, D-Los Angeles, told The Associated Press on Friday that she'll introduce legislation next week to ramp up the pressure on carmakers.

Automakers that fail to sell enough electric vehicles would be required to make payments to rivals that do or pay a fine to the state.

"If we create more competition in the market, that automatically will trigger a more affordable vehicle," Burke said in an interview.

The legislation comes as an effort to extend the state's landmark climate change law until 2030 falters in the state Assembly and sets up a showdown between powerful environmental advocates and automakers in the frenzied final weeks of California's legislative session.

Burke's proposal would beef up California's existing vehicle mandates, which require automakers to gradually introduce cleaner vehicle technology.

Under current law, automakers accumulate credits for selling vehicles with cleaner technology and must hit annual targets. Vehicles with longer range get extra credit.

Because longer-range technology has advanced faster than expected, environmental advocates say, automakers have stockpiled credits for future use and won't have sufficient incentive to sell electric vehicles at affordable prices, preventing the state from meeting its goals for greenhouse-gas reduction.

"The current credit program just does not appear to be working," said Kish Rajan, a spokesman for CalInnovates, an industry group for the technology sector, and a former Brown appointee. "At least it's not working fast enough to get toward the goals that the governor has laid out and that CARB is seeking to enforce," he said, referring to the California Air Resources Board.

Vehicles that now get credits toward complying with the environmental mandates, such as plug-in hybrids, would not be eligible to meet the 15-percent mandate.

Electric and plug-in hybrid vehicles now account for about 3 percent of California new-car sales, according to the Air Resources Board, which administers California's climate laws.

Wade Newton, a spokesman for the Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers, characterized the legislation as a giveaway to Tesla Motors, which was the largest seller of electric vehicles in the United States last year. The Palo Alto, California-based company, which has never made a full-year profit, wants to grow from a niche maker of luxury vehicles to a full-line producer of affordable vehicles.

"Automakers are striving to meet California's long-term (zero-emission vehicle) program by providing consumers with innovative vehicles, so we oppose this last-minute, fundamental change to the program," Newton said in an email. "Tesla shouldn't be able to rig the market for their own purposes."

Tesla did not respond to a request for comment Friday.

Another industry group, Global Automakers, which represents 12 foreign brands, said lawmakers should focus on shoring up incentives — including tax credits and access to restricted highway lanes — to spur consumer demand. Sales of zero-emission vehicles are lagging in part due to low gas prices and improved efficiency of gasoline engines.

"The proposal would cut consumers out of the equation," Damon Shelby Porter, director of state government affairs for Global Automakers, wrote in a letter to lawmakers.

Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown issued an executive order in 2012 calling for 1.5 million zero-emission vehicles on the road by 2025; 192,000 have been sold since 2010, according to the air board.

Brown supports Burke's proposal, spokesman Gareth Lacy said in an email.

It "will lead to more zero emissions vehicles and more Californians able to purchase them — and that's a smart investment in cleaner air," he wrote.

Brown has traveled the world promoting California's ambitious agenda to fight climate-changing emissions. But he has struggled to advance legislation to continue the programs for another decade and set more stringent goals.

Moderate Democrats in the state Assembly, some backed by the oil industry and hailing from less-affluent inland districts, have been reluctant to bless the most strident emission standards for fear of raising energy prices. The coalition of lawmakers blocked previous Brown-endorsed legislation that aimed to cut petroleum use in half by 2030.

Burke said she believes her electric vehicle legislation is more likely to succeed in the Assembly than the overall climate package because it would encourage the sale of lower-priced electric vehicles that would be available to larger swaths of the middle class.

Week in oil: WTI up more than 6 percent

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

Modest gains last week turned into significant gains this week as oil prices rose more than 6 percent.

West Texas Intermediate futures for September delivery rose $2.69 (6.44 percent) this week after closing Friday at $44.49 a barrel. Friday's settlement was the highest price this week and gained $1 (2.30 percent) on the day.

WTI has been in the $40s for eight days after Aug. 2's close of $39.51 snapped 73 straight days above the $30s. The week-low was $41.71 on Wednesday.

In 155 trading days this year, WTI has settled positive 71 times and negative 84 times. It's been in the $50s four times.

WTI is up $7.73 (21.03 percent) on the year. The year-high is $51.23, and the low is $26.21.

Plains Marketing posted prices were also up this week. WTI posted rose $2.75 (7.19 percent), and West Texas sour was up $2.75 (7.96 percent). On Friday, WTI fetched $41 a barrel, up $1 (2.50 percent), while sour cost $37.30, up $1 (2.75 percent).

Wednesday marked week-lows for WTI ($38.25) and sour ($34.55). Friday's prices were week-highs.

WTI posted is up $7.75 (23.21 percent) this year. Sour is up $5.30 (16.56). WTI has gained 69 times, lost 74 and was unchanged 12. Sour has risen 70 times, fallen 73 and was unchanged 12. Sour's year-high is $44.25, while the low is $19.55. WTI has fallen as low as $22.75 and has risen as high as $47.75.

In other futures trading Friday, October contracts rose 95 cents to $45.18, November jumped 90 cents to $45.89 and December gained 86 cents to $46.57. The nearest contract above $50 is November 2017 at $50.08, up 69 cents.

Judge upholds Oregon denial of coal export permit

By Gillian Flaccus
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — An administrative law judge in Oregon on Friday found that state regulators acted within their authority when they rejected a proposed coal terminal on the Columbia River that would funnel millions of tons of American coal to power-hungry Asia each year.

The Oregon Department of State Lands did not overstep when they blocked the proposal for the Coyote Island Terminal project at the Port of Morrow because of potential impacts on tribal fishing grounds, Administrative Law Judge Alison Greene Webster said. The ruling is a blow for Montana and Wyoming, both of which had appealed the 2014 decision on grounds that state laws protecting the environment do not take precedence over federal commerce protections enshrined in the U.S. Constitution.

"This is a huge, huge decision," said Brett Vanden-Heuvel, executive director of Columbia Riverkeeper, said of Friday's action. "If you look back at some of their statements previously, these have been their No. 1 talking points."

The ruling does not end the case, however. Next up is a November hearing on appeals related to the environmental questions about the impacts on state water resources, including potential damage to fishing grounds guaranteed to Northwest tribes by treaty.

The Port of Morrow and Coyote Island Terminal LLC also have appealed and the Umatilla, Warm Springs, Yakama and Nez Perce tribes have all intervened.

Neither Wyoming Attorney General Peter K. Michael nor Portland attorney James Mountain Jr., who represents Montana in the case, immediately returned a request for comment late Friday.

Pressuring Trump, Clinton releases 2015 tax returns

By Lisa Lerer and Ken Thomas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hillary and Bill Clinton earned $10.6 million last year, according to a tax filing released by her campaign Friday that sought to pressure presidential rival Donald Trump to disclose his tax returns.

The filing shows that the Clintons paid a federal tax rate of 34.2 percent in 2015. The bulk of their income — more than $6 million — came from speaking fees for appearances made largely before Hillary Clinton launched her campaign in April 2015. They gave more than $1,042,000 to charity, with $1 million going to the Clinton family foundation. That is the financial vehicle the family uses to give money to museums, schools, churches and other charitable causes. It is not the same organization as the better-known Clinton Foundation.

The Clintons' income puts them well within the ranks of the top 0.1 percent of Americans, though they pay a higher tax rate than many of their elite peers, according to an analysis by the nonpartisan Tax Foundation, based on 2013 data.

The release is part of an effort to undercut Trump's character by questioning the celebrity businessman's record. Trump has refused to make his filings public, saying they're under audit by the Internal Revenue Service and he'll release them only once that review is complete. All major U.S. presidential candidates in modern history have released their returns.

Trump steered clear of mentioning his personal taxes Friday. A spokesman pointed to Clinton's move to delete tens of thousands of personal emails from her private account as secretary of state and questions about whether she used her government post to benefit the Clinton Foundation.

"Hillary Clinton has turned over the only records nobody wants to see from her - the American public wants to see the 33,000 emails she deleted to obstruct an FBI investigation," said Trump spokesman Jason Miller.

The Clintons have disclosed tax returns for every year since 1977, in part due to laws requiring public officials release returns. She put out her most recent eight years of tax filings last summer and several years during her first presidential bid.

Seeking common ground with blue-collar workers who have been attracted to Trump, Clinton frequently mentions his returns as a way of underscoring how his economic plans would benefit his personal interests and questioning whether he's as wealthy as he claims.

Democrats believe Trump's returns could be a trove of politically damaging information. They want to see his tax rate, charitable giving, and business dealings with foreign governments.

"Here's a pretty incredible fact: There is a non-zero chance that Donald Trump isn't paying (asterisk) any(asterisk) taxes," Clinton tweeted, after releasing her own returns.

Protesters at Trump afternoon rally in Erie, Pennsylvania, held up signs reading "Tax Forms" before being escorted out by security.

Clinton's strategy borrows from President Barack Obama's winning playbook against Mitt Romney in 2012. Obama repeatedly used Romney's business dealings against him and seized upon his reluctance to release certain tax records.

Clinton's campaign also released 10 years of returns from running mate Tim Kaine and his wife, Anne Holton. Over the last decade, the couple has donated 7.5 percent of their income to charity, the campaign said, and paid an effective tax rate of 25.6 percent last year.

Kaine, the Virginia senator who's spent much of his life in public service, reported a far lower income than the Clintons. Over the past decade, he and his wife earned the most in 2014, more than $314,000 in adjusted gross income. The Clintons made about 90 times more, reporting nearly $28 million for the same year.

Trump's running mate, Mike Pence, has yet to say if he will release his taxes, which he has not done as governor of Indiana. A spokesman for the governor's office referred all tax-related questions to his vice presidential campaign. The campaign did not respond to messages.

Clinton has tried to paint Trump as an out-of-touch business mogul. But her substantial wealth has caused headaches. Republicans have seized upon the millions in speaking fees and a tone-deaf comment by Clinton in a 2014 interview that she was "dead broke" after leaving the White House in 2001. The couple owed millions in legal fees, but quickly generated far more from book deals, paid appearances and consulting fees.

In total, the Clintons earned than $139 million between 2007 and 2014, according to eight years of federal income tax returns released by her campaign last July.

The bulk of their income came from speeches delivered to corporate and interest groups, which paid Bill Clinton and later Hillary Clinton after she resigned as secretary of state in early 2013.

Clinton delivered six paid speeches in 2015, including one to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. She commanded her highest rate from EBay, which paid her $315,000 for a March 2015 address in San Jose.

Bill Clinton's consulting work for GEMS Education, a global network of for-profit schools based in Dubai in the United Arab Emirates, earned him more than $5.6 million in fees between 2010 and 2015, according to the tax returns.

He also earned more than $17 million over the same period for consulting work for Laureate Education, Inc., another for-profit education system based in Baltimore that makes most of its profits from overseas operations. Several former students have sued a school operated by the company, alleging fraud.

Bill Clinton's office previously said he had ended his consulting work with Laureate last year. On Friday, his office confirmed that Clinton also halted his business dealings with GEMS Education last year. His office said he had "engaged with GEMS students and faculty around the world and assisted the Varkey GEMS Foundation in its efforts to increase access to education to underprivileged children."

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump speaks during a campaign rally on Friday in Erie, Pa

After verbal missteps, Trump blames others

By Josh Lederman
Associated Press

ERIE, Pa. — It's the media's fault. That's out of context. Never said it in the first place.

Donald Trump's claim Friday that he was merely being "sarcastic" in accusing President Barack Obama of establishing a terrorist group was his latest attempt to blame others for the uproar over what he says. It's an instinct that Trump's opponents say a president can't possess. Some Republicans seem to have the same concern.

This time, it followed two days of critical headlines and Democratic outrage over Trump's claim that Obama was the "founder" of the Islamic State group. As Trump repeated the claim more than a dozen times, interviewers sought to ensure Trump wasn't being misconstrued. Surely, they offered, he meant Obama's policies had enabled the extremist group's rise.

"No, I meant he's the founder of ISIS. I do," Trump said, using one acronym for the group. (His remark comes at 15:26 of the interview.)

Then an about-face Friday. "THEY DON'T GET SARCASM?" he tweeted.

Or was he being sarcastic about the sarcasm? Hours later, he told a rally in Pennsylvania he was "obviously being sarcastic — but not that sarcastic, to be honest with you."

That it took Trump two days to walk back his widely debunked remark — and then walk back the walk-back — was worrying for Republicans who see such missteps as playing to Democrat Hillary Clinton's advantage. Equally worrying for some was the fact that he again would not take responsibility for his words.

Ryan Williams, a Republican strategist who advised Mitt Romney's 2012 campaign, said there's a common-sense playbook for dealing with political slip-ups: "Stop the bleeding and put it behind you by apologizing.

"That's what normal candidates do," he went on. "However, normal candidates don't careen from one self-inflicted wound to another on an hourly basis."

It was only two days earlier that Trump blamed the media for making much ado about nothing after he suggested during a rally that gun rights enthusiasts might find a way to stop Clinton if elected.

Clinton, whose lead over Trump has widened in recent polls of the most competitive states, has seized on those and other eye-brow-raising comments to portray the reality TV star as lacking the temperament to run the nation — Trump has his own argument for why she's unfit to do so. She's hammered him for avoiding accountability for his actions.

To that end, Clinton's campaign on Friday intensified pressure on Trump to release his tax returns, while disclosing her 2015 filings and a decade of returns from her running mate. The filing shows that the Clintons earned $10.6 million and paid a federal tax rate of 34.2 percent last year.

Trump has refused to make his filings public, saying they're under audit by the Internal Revenue Service and he'll release them only once that review is complete. All major U.S. presidential candidates in modern history have released their returns.

Minutes after releasing her returns, Clinton tweeted that it's possible Trump paid no tax at all.

Trump worked to profit on the fuss over his Islamic State remark. In an email to supporters asking them to donate, Trump accused the "liberal media" of telling "outrageous lies about me."

It's no surprise that the media are Trump's go-to scapegoat. Just 6 percent of Americans said they have a great deal of confidence in the media in a Media Insight Project poll earlier this year.

Almost never does Trump admit error. One exception came this month when he acknowledged a video he said showed a plane carrying U.S. cash to Iran was actually a plane carrying U.S. hostages who were being released.

Most of the time, Trump casts blame elsewhere.

Star of David

In July, Trump's campaign tweeted an anti-Clinton message that seemed to show the Star of David atop a pile of cash, raising questions about anti-Semitism. When Clinton's campaign cried foul, Trump blamed her for trying to "divert attention from the dishonest behavior of herself and her husband." Also, the media.

Paging Moscow

Last month Trump caused a stir in a news conference by saying "Russia, if you're listening, I hope you're able to find the 30,000 emails" missing from Clinton. Even some Republicans questioned whether he was encouraging a foreign government to interfere in the election. Trump's response later? "Of course, I'm being sarcastic."

Crimea River

Heads spun in the foreign policy world when Trump said this month that Russia wouldn't enter Ukraine, seemingly unaware it already had. When an interviewer pointed out Russia had annexed Crimea, Trump said he meant Russia wouldn't dare go farther if he were president. He insisted he'd said nothing incorrect.

About Saddam

In July, Trump said former Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein was "so good" at killing terrorists. He also suggested the Mideast would be more stable were Saddam still in power. He took offence that his comments were interpreted as praise for Saddam.

CREDIT UNION / HOME MORTGAGE CO.

My Community Federal Credit Union

My Community Federal Credit Union — Credit Union and Home Mortgage Company

Above all else, My Community Federal Credit Union is committed to the community by providing financial services and education.

"The core of what we do is provide financial education throughout the community for all, and improve the financial lives of members and potential members," said CEO and President Donna Neal. "We want to make every member's story a financial success story. We're here for everything you need."

The federally-chartered credit union prides itself on taking care of each of its 28,700 members individually, and listening to their situation before determining the best solution.

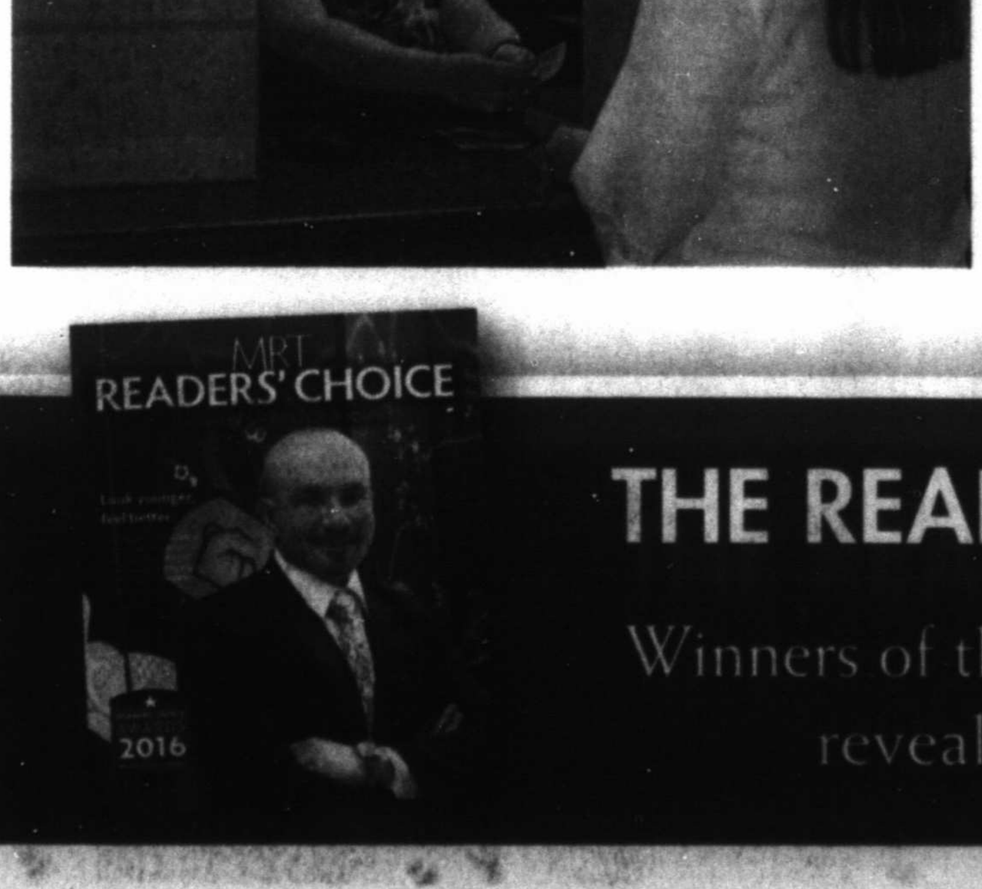
"We don't just want to be an order taker and quickly resolve the transaction, but to listen hard for opportunities to improve their lives," Neal said. "If we hear a need, we try to address that."

In addition to lending money, operating checking accounts and providing a savings place for members, My Community's six Midland and Odessa locations provide West Texans with the best in service and products including direct deposit, credit and debit cards and mortgage, personal and vehicle loans.

"Credit unions differ from banks because they are not-for-profit institutions; our profits go back to our members who are the owners," Neal said. "The profits are used to reduce loan rates, increase deposit rates and create products and services that are beneficial to our member-owners."

MCFCU is constantly adding products and services meant to make members' lives easier to its portfolio.

The credit union now offers remote deposit check capture and the Kasasa Cash rewards programs, which pays 2.5 percent on your checking account up to $10,000. Current members can complete the entire loan process online without ever entering a branch, and by the end of 2016, new members will be able to sign up for an account online.



"We're here to meet your financial needs, participate in the community, offer quality products at great prices and to get you on the road," Neal said.

Continually winning MRT Readers' Choice Gold Awards is meaningful to MCFCU.

"We are so excited to win Gold Awards again. We want to be known in the community as the business who cares, not just the one trying to do business," Neal said.

In addition to winning for Midland's favorite credit union, MCFCU was named best mortgage company. With a direct link to the secondary market, MCFCU is unlike any other financial institution in West Texas. MCFCU employees, not brokers, can immediately determine whether mortgages are approved or not.

Additionally, MCFCU does not sell mortgage loans, so homebuyers never have to worry about their loans changing hands frequently.

"We don't sell our loans, and you know it's always going to be here," Neal said.

Membership at MCFCU is open to anyone who lives, works, worships or goes to school in Midland or Ector county.

MHS' Garcia happy to be back as DL

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Midland High defensive tackle Keoni Garcia is happy to be back in his comfort zone.

Garcia is playing his natural position of defensive lineman again after spending the entire 2015 season at right offensive tackle.

Garcia

The 5-foot-10, 246-pound senior has shined on defense this preseason, as he brings brute strength and athleticism to the middle of the Bulldogs defense.

"He's kind of the anchor of that group right now," MHS defensive coordinator Tim Anuszkiewicz said. "He plays with a great motor. He plays really fast. He's just a real coachable kid. Keoni, he's a Midland Bulldog. That's what's important to him. That's how he carries himself."

"He's interested in making the Midland Bulldogs a better team," Anuszkiewicz added.

That was the case in 2015 when the MHS coaching staff moved Garcia, a natural defensive lineman, to the offensive line not long before the season began because of need.

Bulldogs head coach Craig Yenzer said Garcia is a "team first" player, in the mold of recently graduated Raekwon Anderson, who voluntarily played multiple roles in his three years with MHS before heading to McMurry University in Abilene to play football.

"It was pretty hard," Garcia said of playing offensive tackle. "They had pretty high standards for me. I had to step in and do the job, make the sacrifice for the team."

Garcia had a baptism by fire in his first offensive line assignment , as he had to block Keller defensive end Houston Miller, a current Texas Tech freshman, in last season's opening game.

"I tried to hold my ground, that's about it," Garcia said. "I knew that he was bigger than me, he was stronger than me. I knew I just had to out-work him. That's how my mentality was."

One place where Garcia doesn't get outworked is the weight room.

Garcia is a two-time state meet qualifier in powerlifting. He was Region I, Division I powerlifting champion in the 242-pound weight class this past spring.

"He spends countless hours in there," Anuszkiewicz said. "He's a kid in the winter and the spring, you kind of have to run him out of there at night because he's a machine in there."

Garcia says he loves the weight room because that's where he goes to relieve the stress of school and life. Garcia said the MHS offseason program, run by assistant coach Rodney Sims, is so exhausting that it makes football practice feel fun.

The Midland High senior loves the grind. While many football players prefer the less taxing bench press, Garcia's favorite lift is the energy-consuming powerclean.

"I like the powerclean, it's more of an explosive movement," Garcia said. "It just helps me out, especially over here, starting on the line. As the ball is hiked, I get a good push on them."

Now back on the defensive line, Garcia believes the position that he's played since the seventh grade suits his strengths and his mentality more, which is to use his explosion off the ball and attack.

"On the o-line, you have to be more based, you have to hold your ground more, but on the d-line, you just go get the ball," Garcia said.

Defense solid; QB a question for Texas A&M

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M's defense should be fine with Myles Garrett and Daeshon Hall teaming up to form perhaps the best defensive end duo in the country.

Things are much less sure on offense where graduate transfer Trevor Knight takes over at quarterback after both Kyler Murray and Kyle Allen transferred in December.

Knight started 10 games and threw for 2,300 yards and 15 touchdowns for Oklahoma in 2014 before being benched in favor of Texas Tech transfer Baker Mayfield before last season.

But coach Kevin Sumlin saw enough from him this spring to name him starter and is confident he's the right guy to lead his high-powered offense.

"He filled a void for us as a quarterback who was not just a transfer quarterback but a guy who had real game experience and had some success," Sumlin said. "So, for us, it was a great match."

Knight had a reputation as a risk-taker at Oklahoma and his gun-slinging ways often led to turnovers. It was those miscues which contributed to his being benched last year.

However, Sumlin is quick to point out that he's matured since then and he believes that losing his job helped Knight become a better player because it gave him time to evaluate his strengths and weaknesses.

"His ability since he came into the first team meeting and sitting there in the front row with his beard, and all of the 17- (and) 18-year-old guys are going: 'Who is that old man? Didn't I see him on TV playing for Oklahoma,'" Sumlin said. "And his ability to be humble and still be able to share his experiences and talk to our guys, it's been fabulous."

Some things to know about the Aggies:

Big test early

The Aggies don't get a warm-up against a small school as many teams do. They start by hosting UCLA on Sept. 3. The Bruins were picked to win the Pac-12 South in a preseason media poll. UCLA had the best pass defense in the Pac-12 last season, which will be a good test to see where Knight is at in his first game as an Aggie.

About those defensive ends

Garrett was a Lombardi Award finalist last season after leading the SEC with 12 1/2 sacks, 19 1/2 tackles for loss and five forced fumbles. Hall added seven sacks and 14 1/2 tackles for losses. Though Garrett is the bigger name of the two, both agree that a large part of their success comes from working together.

US ousted, Sweden wins 4-3 on penalties after 1-1 draw

By Anne M. Peterson
Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — For the first time, the United States won't win an Olympic medal in women's soccer.

The three-time defending champions were ousted by Sweden on penalties following a 1-1 draw in the quarterfinals on Friday.

Tied after three rounds in the shoot-out, Sweden captain Caroline Seger beat Hope Solo and Christen Press' attempt against Hedvig Lindhal went over the net. With the next kick, Lisa Dahlkvist beat an outstretched Solo for the 4-3 win.

As Sweden celebrated, U.S. captain Carli Lloyd crouched on the field at Mane Garrincha Stadium. It was the first time that an Olympic women's match had gone to penalties.

It was the earliest the United States had ever been eliminated from the Olympics since women's soccer became a sport in 1996.

"I thought we played a courageous game. I thought we had many opportunities on goal," Solo said. "I think we showed a lot of heart. We came back from a goal down. I'm very proud of this team.

"I also think we played a bunch of cowards. The best team did not win today. I strongly and firmly believe that."

Solo was criticizing Sweden's style of play, which was defensive throughout the match.

When told about Solo's comments, Sweden coach Pia Sundhage said: "It's OK to be a coward if you win."

Sundhage coached the U.S. team for five years and led the squad to gold medals in both Beijing and London.

After a scoreless first half, Stina Blackstenius scored in the 61st minute to give Sweden a 1-0 lead. Alex Morgan scored the equalizer in the 78th and the match

Rams play homecoming game in preseason opener with Cowboys

By Andrew Dalton
Associated Press

IRVINE, Calif. — Technically, the Los Angeles Rams' game Saturday with the Dallas Cowboys is just a preseason opener at a temporary home for a relocating team that hasn't made the playoffs in 11 years.

But that temporary home is also the team's traditional home, the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, where they'll play as the host team for the first time in 36 years, giving the day huge sentimental and symbolic importance for fans.

"I'm really ecstatic to see my team back on the field in LA," said longtime fan and local native Dan Salcedo.

For now fans have to watch a rebuilding Rams team, though with reasons for excitement including explosive young running back Todd Gurley and No. 1 overall draft pick quarterback Jared Goff, who for now will back up starter Case Keenum.

The young players have been getting the Hollywood treatment already.

The team's training camp is the focus of this year's "Hard Knocks" on HBO, which had its red-carpet premiere this week.

Hip stars like rapper Kendrick Lamar visited the team at training camp, and their games are likely to become a new version of the Lakers' sideline for celebrities.

Their jerseys, hats and stickers have begun flourishing on store shelves and car bumpers alongside Lakers and Dodgers gear, and tens of thousands have already watched the team at camp.

Unlike Brooklyn when it lost its Dodgers, or Cleveland when it lost its original Browns, LA's famously relaxed fans didn't shed many public tears when the Rams skipped town for St. Louis.

But that doesn't mean the Rams didn't leave a hole that they've now begun to refill.

"I was heartbroken when they left," said Salcedo, 40, who wore an old-school Rams Jack Youngblood jersey as he attended a team scrimmage at the Coliseum last week. "When they announced they were coming back I was ecstatic."

There are also plenty of young fans who never knew the LA Rams, many of whom are just as excited as the old-timers at the new-old franchise coming to town.

Refugio Gonzalez, 26, who lives in nearby Pomona, is feeling especially lucky as he adopted the team based solely on their merits back in 1999 while they were in St. Louis.

"I turned on the TV one day and they were playing the Titans in the Super Bowl," Gonzalez said at the scrimmage. "They won, and the next season I started following them and fell in love with the team and the players. Marshall Faulk, Kurt Warner, Tory Holt, Isaac Holt. The Greatest Show on Turf. Ever since then I started following them, became a big fan, can't miss the games on TV and now they are here in Los Angeles. Having the opportunity to come see them in person, it's an awesome experience."

Los Angeles Rams fans take a guided tour at Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum in Los Angeles on Friday. The Rams are about to make their return to Los Angeles a reality in what might be called their homecoming game. Technically, Saturday's NFL football game with the Dallas Cowboys is just a preseason opener at a temporary home for a relocating team that hasn't made the playoffs in 11 years.

The Houston Astros' Teoscar Hernandez is doused by teammates at the end of a baseball game against the Blue Jays in Toronto on Friday.

Musgrove gets first career win, Astros beat Blue Jays 5-3

By Ian Harrison
Associated Press

TORONTO — Joe Musgrove pitched seven innings for his first major league win, Teoscar Hernandez homered for his first big league hit and the Houston Astros beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3 on Friday night.

Astros DH Evan Gattis had four hits, including two doubles. Hernandez had two hits and reached base three times while George Springer singled and walked three times.

Carlos Correa and Jose Altuve had two RBIs each as Houston extended its winning streak to four.

Edwin Encarnacion hit his 300th home run and Michael Saunders hit his career-high 20th, but the Blue Jays lost for the first time in four meetings with the Astros.

Encarnacion's 32nd home run tied him with Baltimore's Mark Trumbo for the major league lead.

Making his second career start, and facing the team that drafted him in 2011, Musgrove (1-0) allowed two runs and six hits.

The Blue Jays traded Musgrove to the Astros in July 2012, as part of a nine-player deal that sent left-hander J.A. Happ to Toronto.

Pat Neshek handled the eighth and Will Harris worked around Encarnacion's homer in the ninth for his 12th save.

Blue Jays left-hander Francisco Liriano (6-12) took the loss in his home debut with Toronto, allowing five runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

ROCKHOUNDS 3, CARDINALS 1
at Hammons Field, Springfield, Missouri

TOP HITTERS: Midland designated hitter Tyler Marincov went 1-for-3 with the game-winning, two-RBI single in the ninth. ... Springfield first baseman Luke Voit finished 2-for-4 with the Cardinals' only RBI of the night — a solo home run to left-center field in the bottom of the ninth.

TOP PITCHERS: Midland pitchers Ben Bracewell and Corey Walter combined to allow just three hits in seven scoreless innings, while striking out a total of six and walking none. ... Cardinals starter Johnny Walter tossed eight innings and yielded two earned runs on two hits while fanning eight and walking three. He took the loss.

HIGHLIGHTS: After eight quick and scoreless innings, Midland grabbed a 2-0 lead in the top of the ninth on Marincov's single right field ... Yairo Munoz then reached base on catcher's interference, scoring Beau Taylor for the RockHounds' third run of the game. ... Voit's solo blast in the bottom of the ninth capped the scoring at 3-1.

NOTES: Midland has now won four consecutive games, is 66-52 overall this season and is 33-27 on the road. ... The RockHounds maintained their eight-game lead over the San Antonio Missions for first place in the Texas League South's second half division race. ... Midland continues its weekend series with the Cardinals at 6:05 p.m. today.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

American League

INDIANS 13
ANGELS 3

CLEVELAND — Rajai Davis and Jose Ramirez each stole three bases to help Cleveland tie the franchise record with eight, and Brandon Guyton drove in five runs against Los Angeles.

Jason Kipnis and Francisco Lindor added steals for Cleveland to match the record that was first accomplished on Aug. 27, 1917, against the Washington Senators. The eight steals allowed also are the most in club history for the Angels.

Guyton homered in the second and had two-run singles in the fifth and eighth. Ramirez was 3 for 5 with a home run — extending his hitting streak to 16 games — and Kipnis was 4 for 5 for the AL Central leaders.

Carlos Carrasco (8-6) won for the first time since July 20. Tyler Skaggs (1-1) gave up seven runs in five innings for the Angels. Albert Pujols drove in two runs and Kole Calhoun homered.

Los Angeles has lost eight in a row, its longest losing streak since 1999.

PADRES 8
METS 6

NEW YORK — Rookie Ryan Schimpf hit a grand slam and added a two-run shot in San Diego's victory over New York.

Jabari Blash and Christian Bethancourt also homered early to help the Padres hand the Mets their fourth straight loss and sixth in seven games. The defending NL champions (57-58) fell below .500 for the first time since April 17.

One day after getting swept at home by last-place Arizona, the Mets again failed to look like legitimate wild-card contenders. San Diego, which has alternated wins and losses since July 26, jumped out to a 5-0 six batters into the game — including Schimpf's grand slam. Logan Verrett (3-8) was the loser.

BRAVES 8
NATIONALS 5

WASHINGTON — Jace Peterson, Freddie Freeman and Anthony Recker homered and Atalnta beat Washington to snap a 14-game losing streak in the nation's capital.

Atlanta hadn't won in Washington since Sept. 10, 2014, and was 0-8 against the NL East leaders this season.

Mike Foltynewicz (6-5) allowed four runs over 5 2-3 innings to help Atlanta win for the 11th time in 17 games. Jim Johnson pitched the ninth for his 10th save in 13 tries. Nationals starter Stephen Strasburg (15-3) struggled at home again, surrendering six runs in 5 1/3 innings.

CUBS 13
CARDINALS 2

CHICAGO — Matt Szczur hit two home runs and the Chicago Cubs won their 11th straight game, backing Jake Arrieta and battering Adam Wainwright to rout the St. Louis Cardinals 13-2 on Friday.

Willson Contreras launched a three-run shot to cap a five-run second inning, and Javier Baez and Jorge Soler also went deep to make things easy for Arrieta (14-5).

The Cubs' winning streak is their longest since a 12-game run in 2001. They pulled 14 games ahead of scuffling St. Louis in the NL Central and improved the best record in the majors to 73-41.

Szczur and Kris Bryant each had three hits. The Cubs roughed up Wainwright (9-7) for seven runs and chased him after two innings, tying his shortest outing in 245 career starts.

Arrieta pitched one-run ball into the sixth inning and gave up four hits overall.

Stephen Piscotty and Jedd Gyorko homered for the Cardinals.

Interleague

RED SOX 9
DIAMONDBACKS 4

BOSTON — Hanley Ramirez hit two three-run homers, and David Ortiz also homered to help Boston rout Arizona.

Boston scored four runs in each of the first two innings, ending a streak of 14 scoreless innings by the Diamondbacks' starting pitchers. Arizona committed two first-inning errors.

Ortiz had three hits, including his 1,000th extra-base hit with Boston. It was all the run support needed for David Price (10-8), who struck out eight in eight innings to pick up the win.

Patrick Corbin (4-12) lasted only 1 2/3 innings, allowing eight runs and nine hits, including both of Ramirez's homers. Rickie Weeks homered for Arizona.

WHITE SOX 4
MARLINS 2

MIAMI — Carlos Rodon pitched six innings to record his first victory since May as the Chicago White Sox beat the Miami Marlins 4-2 on Friday night.

Adam Eaton tied a career-high with four hits for the White Sox, who had four players drive in a run in their first game in Miami since 2004.

Rodon (3-8) had been winless in his previous nine starts following a win against Kansas City on May 22. Rodon, who spent his early childhood in Miami, allowed one run and three hits while striking out four and walking three in a 122-pitch outing.

David Robertson pitched the ninth for his 28th save in 34 chances.

Andrew Cashner (4-9) allowed four runs, nine hits and five walks over five innings for the Marlins, who have lost three of four.

Streaks of DiMaggio: Minor leaguer Mejia hits in 49 straight

By Stephen Whyno
Associated Press

WOODBRIDGE, Va. — Francisco Mejia stepped out of the clubhouse and into the dugout with little fanfare. He did his usual turns in the batting cage, and the 5-foot-10, 175-pound catcher looked like just another 20-year-old in the minors.

Yet Mejia is something of a modern-day Joe DiMaggio, plying his trade for the Lynchburg Hillcats of the high Class A Carolina League. The Cleveland Indians prospect now has a 49-game hitting streak that's tied for the sixth-longest in pro baseball history and the best in 62 years.

Mejia has gotten a hit in every game he has played since May 25, a string that dates to his time with the Lake County Captains of the low Class A Midwest League. He extended it Friday night with a sixth-inning single against Winston-Salem — that tied him for the longest hitting streak by a catcher, set by Harry Chozen in the Southern Association in 1954.

Neither Lynchburg manager Mark Budzinski nor hitting coach Larry Day has had a single conversation with him about the accomplishment, which stands out because of Mejia's age, his role as a catcher and the distractions he has faced along the way.

As one of Cleveland's top 10 prospects, he took part in the MLB All-Star Futures Game in San Diego and would have gone to the Milwaukee Brewers at the trade deadline last month had the deal for Jonathan Lucroy occurred.

"It has not been easy for him," said Carter Hawkins, the Indians' director of player development. "This has not been put on a silver platter. He's moved levels, he's traveled around to different All-Star Games, he's been a name that came up in trade rumors. There have certainly been a lot of different reasons or potential excuses to end this streak, but I think just focusing on his work and focusing on what he can do and what he can control has really helped him out."

In the meantime, Mejia has moved closer to the record 69-game hit streak by Joe Wilhoit of the Western League in 1919.

DiMaggio owns the streak that most fans know about, the major league mark of 56 games in 1941 for the New York Yankees. Many fans don't realize Joe D also owns the second-longest hitting streak ever in pro ball — as a teenager in 1933. DiMaggio hit in 61 straight for the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast League.

Mejia, who signed out of the Dominican Republic at 16, reminds Budzinski of a young switch-hitting Vladimir Guerrero without the power because of his ability to hit the ball so effectively out of the strike zone. "An aggressive hitter he doesn't walk much.

It's no coincidence that after the organization decided to make him repeat a year in the Midwest League, like a student who gets held back a grade, Mejia changed everything from his body language to his preparation.

"This year I got a better approach, better routines," Mejia said. "I got routines this year."

Last season, he said, it was simply "come to the stadium, let's go play. This year everything is different."

It has paid off. Mejia improved his batting average from .243 in 2015 to .348 this season, which Day credits to an improved all-field approach, especially left-handed. Before, the right-handed-throwing Mejia would pull from that side of the plate and cut off half the field.

Now he's hitting the ball everywhere, early and often.

"It's his gifted hand-eye coordination ability to put the barrel of the bat on the ball," Budzinski said Thursday before a game at the Potomac Nationals. "The guys that are a little more aggressive and can hit the ball out of the zone hard, which he can do, that's where you tend to see guys that can extend those hit streaks longer."

The streak is even more remarkable because of Mejia's catching responsibilities.

When Mejia arrives at the park, he first works with pitching coach Rigo Beltran and the day's starter to prepare, then focuses on his defense and finally works on his hitting. It's working out pretty well.

"You're dealing with not only calling a game from a mental standpoint, working with a pitching staff, blocking balls, you've got all the gear on in the hot weather, foul tips off of you, you've got to make 100-some throws a night," Budzinski said. "It is impressive to see a guy that can kind of maintain that through the course of a season and stay strong physically, mentally, emotionally."

A stunner in Rio: Phelps beaten by 21-year-old in 100 fly

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — A stunner at the Rio Olympics: Michael Phelps was beaten.

Rather handily at that.

The most decorated athlete in Olympic history couldn't pull off one of his patented comebacks in the 100-meter butterfly, easily held off by a swimmer a decade younger than Phelps.

Twenty-one-year-old Joseph Schooling of Singapore got off to a blistering start, building a lead that not even Phelps could overcome.

After winning four gold medals at these games and looking unbeatable, Phelps finally ran out of steam in what was the final individual race of his career unless he decides to come out of retirement again.

Phelps still has a chance to leave Rio with 23 golds in his career. But he'll have to do with some help from his teammates, swimming in the butterfly leg of the 400 medley relay on the final night of swimming on Saturday.

Phelps settled for silver along with two longtime rivals, Chad le Clos of South Africa and Laszlo Cseh of Hungary. They all touched in 51.14 — a half-body length behind Schooling's winning time of 50.39.

While Phelps' loss left the crowd in shock, Katie Ledecky restored some normalcy at the pool with another dominating performance, handily break the world record in the 800 freestyle.

Ledecky joined Debbie Meyer as the only women to sweep the three longer freestyle events at the same Olympics. Meyer took the 200, 400 and 800 at the 1968 Mexico Games, and Ledecky matched that performance with a couple of world records as well.

Ledecky was merely racing the clock as she powered away from the field to touch in 8 minutes, 4.79 seconds, eclipsing the mark 8:06.68 that she set at a grand prix meet in Texas back in January.

Then, Ledecky played the waiting game, hanging on the rope for a while to let the rest of the field finish.

Jazz Karlin finally touched in 8:16.17 to claim the silver, just ahead of Hungary's Boglarka Kapas grabbing the silver in 8:16.37.

Some 23 seconds after Ledecky touched the wall, the last of the eight finalists finally got to the end of the grueling race.

Ledecky also became only the third American woman to win four gold medals in a single Olympics, following fellow swimmers Amy Van Dyken and Missy Franklin.

Maya DiRado gave the Americans another gold, pulling off a furious rally on the final lap to upset "Iron Lady" Katinka Hosszu of Hungary.

Hosszu settled for silver, denied in her bid for a fourth gold in Rio. The bronze went to Canada's Hilary Caldwell.

went to extra time.

Lloyd had a header called back for offside in the 115th minute, and Lotta Schelin was offside on her attempt against Solo a minute later — although replays appeared to show otherwise.

The reigning World Cup champions, who are also four-time Olympic champions, had not dropped a match this year. But it is Sweden that will play either Australia or host Brazil in the semifinals.

Blackstenius, who came in as a substitute in the first half, broke away and shook off defender Julie Johnston to beat Solo and give Sweden the lead. It was just her second international goal, and Sundhage reacted by high-fiving her assistants on the bench.

The United States got the equalizer with a shot from Morgan that bounced off a Sweden defender. It was Morgan's team-leading 13th goal of the year.

Lloyd nearly put the United States ahead in the 85th but her kick to the far corner went just wide.

"They played more attacking football then we did. We defended very well," Sundhage said. "And the fact that there were only two goals and it went to penalty kicks said something about our defending. The U.S. played better in the attack, we played better in the defense."

The Americans won their first two matches in Brazil before a surprising 2-2 draw in Manaus against Colombia, which had already been eliminated.

Johnston returned to the starting lineup after missing the last two games with a groin injury and coach Jill Ellis played all her regular starters after rotating and resting many against Colombia in the heat and humidity of the Amazon. Megan Rapinoe, who started against Colombia after missing more than eight months following right knee surgery, was on the bench but came on as a substitute in the second half.

Press replaced Rapinoe in the extra period.

Sweden had won only five matches against the United States. At last year's World Cup, the two teams played to a scoreless draw. The last time the two teams met in the Olympics was at the 1996 Atlanta Games. Sundhage was a player on the Sweden team that fell 2-1 to the Americans.

Ranked sixth in the world, Sweden had struggled in its Olympic group with a 5-1 loss to host Brazil and finished 1-1-1.

Lloyd buried her head in her hands early in the second half after her free kick was off the mark. Just moments later, she had another that was off-target, too, as the United States struggled to finish throughout the match.

Another scare: US men's basketball team barely edges Serbia 94-91

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — Written in Portuguese on one wall above center court at Carioca Arena 3 is the phrase "Um mundo novo." Translation: A new world.

It didn't seem that way in men's basketball to start the Rio Games, but it's getting closer.

Threatened by Australia in its previous game, the U.S. men's team started fast but had to survive a heart-racing final seconds to beat Serbia 94-91 on Friday, the 49th consecutive international tournament win for the Americans.

This one, though, took everything the U.S. team had.

They couldn't put away the Serbs, who had a chance to tie it in the final seconds but guard Bogdan Bogdanovic's 3-pointer from the left wing was a little long and Kevin Durant secured the rebound to keep the relieved Americans' streak intact.

Kyrie Irving scored 15 points and Durant and Carmelo Anthony had 12 apiece for the U.S. team, which arrived in Brazil being lauded as another American super squad and gold-medal lock. However, after a close call against Australia earlier this week and now another against Serbia, the rest of the field might be starting to believe the Americans can be taken.

"We got in our own heads," Durant said. "We had a great start, great start. We were up almost 20 points. We should have held the lead and we just got sidetracked by stupid stuff, from the calls to the physicality, the extra plays. We got to stay with it. That's the way it's going to be out here."

Nikola Jokic scored 25, Milos Teodosic 18 and Miloslav Raduljica 18 before fouling out for the Serbs, who fell to 1-3 but left Carioca Arena feeling confident after taking the Americans down to the final ticks.

It was the first Olympic game between the nations, and a rematch of the 2014 Basketball World Cup championship won by the U.S. 129-92. However, this never resembled that track meet as the Serbs slowed the tempo and forced the Americans into turnovers and rushed possessions. The world's best team certainly didn't play like it for long stretches and just may not be the gold-medal lock many predicted.

The U.S., which will wrap up preliminary-round play against France on Sunday, led 94-87 with 2:11 left on a basket by Anthony. But the Serbs got a basket by Jokic and two free throws Teodosic to get within three.

Durant, who only attempted four shots, misfired with eight seconds left giving Serbia one last chance. After a timeout, the ball wound up with Bogdanovic, who had a great look from 22 feet but was just off the mark.

"We are that kind of a team that we never give up and we showed this today," Teodosic said. "This is third game in a row that we have a very bad beginning, and especially (against) the teams like the United States, it's very tough to get back in the game when you are losing by 10 or 15 in the beginning."

The 10-point win over Australia — just the fifth time the U.S. has won by 10 or fewer since 2006 — raised the possibility that this American team might not be as golden as previous ones.

Coach Mike Krzyzewski, though, insists there is more global balance in hoops.

"When people look at it like it's just supposed to be easy, whenever anyone says that, I kind of tune them out because they don't understand," he said Thursday. "They don't understand that other people are really good. We're going to get back to 2000 and 2006, where we're arrogant, we don't give people credit, we think it's all going to be easy and then we're not going to play well and we're not going to win.

"You can't fall into that."

Unlike in their matchup with the Aussies, the Americans were in attack mode from the start.

They were connected on defense and they put on an early offensive exhibition, flashing the firepower no other team can match.

After Durant made three throws, Paul George knocked down a 3-pointer and Cousins made a play that drew a huge roar from the crowd — and Serbia's bench.

Snagging a pass from George at mid-court, the 6-foot-10 Cousins spun away from Teodosic and went in for an uncontested dunk to make it 8-0. Serbia coach Sasa Djordjevic thought Cousins traveled on the play and was slapped with a technical foul.

Bomb squads, stray bullets: Incidents unnerve some in Rio

By Joshua Goodman and Peter Prengaman
Associated Press

Associated Press

Brazil's national security force officers aim their weapons during a police operation in search for criminals in Vila do Joao, part of the Mare complex of slums, during the Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro on Thursday.

RIO DE JANEIRO — The bomb squad rushed past crowds on Copacabana Beach to investigate a backpack abandoned near Rio's ritziest hotel. Despite the potential for danger, local diners sipped their beers, watched an Olympic swimming race on a big-screen television and took selfies with a disposal robot amid what turned out to be a false alarm.

Meantime, a table of eight American tourists asked for the bill and scurried away.

Suspicious packages, muggings, stray bullets flying at venues, shattered windows on a bus and an Olympic security officer fatally shot in a favela. A smattering of incidents since the Olympics began has unnerved visitors to Rio de Janeiro even as some Brazilians say typically crime-ridden streets in touristy areas seem more secure.

"I feel safer now than I ever have here," said Carlos Augusto, a military retiree who is a native of Rio.

Contrast that with the reaction of German tourist Cristina Van Hove, who was in line waiting to enter the basketball arena at Olympic Park Thursday night when an explosion startled her and a friend. The crowd grew quiet as an announcer said something in Portuguese that they couldn't understand. Turns out, security had blown up a backpack left near a bathroom. The boom reverberated even inside Carioca Arena 1, where the game between Spain and Nigeria began in front of a scant crowd.

"We didn't know what it was," Van Hove said, adding that the sound took her back to the November terror attacks in Paris, when suicide bombers blew themselves up outside of the Stade de France as part of a coordinated attack by the Islamic State group that left 130 people dead.

It's Van Hove's first Olympics, and despite all the social media chatter about alarming incidents here and there, she said she feels "relatively," though not entirely, safe.

Newton de Oliveira, an independent security expert in Rio, said it's impossible to gauge whether crime has gone up or down during the games because there is a lag in the gathering and releasing of statistics. Olympic organizers also haven't put a number to the incidents of violence or false alarms.

"At this point, all we can have are personal impressions," said De Oliveira. "Tourists might believe that crime is up because they are not used to living in a city with all the security and violence problems of Rio."

Pervasive crime is part of life here. In the first five months of 2016, homicides increased by 18 percent to 1,870 in greater Rio. And in the wealthier tourist districts, locals and visitors have long been targets of muggings. For the Olympics, more than 85,000 security forces have been deployed in Rio — double the number of London in 2012.

The most serious incident connected to the games so far happened Wednesday, when one Olympic security officer was fatally shot after he and two others got lost near a slum close to the international airport. No arrests have been made. The city's many favelas have not seen the stepped-up security present elsewhere.

In another harrowing episode, two Australian rowing coaches were assaulted Friday night walking back to their hotel in the posh Ipanema beach neighborhood. Two teens, one of them brandishing a knife, grabbed the coaches by their throats and pushed them against the wall. The visitors quickly handed over their wallets and mobile phones, a spokesman for the Australians said.

The next day, also near Ipanema beach, Portugal's education minister was robbed at knifepoint on a busy street. The thieves were caught by police.

Stray bullets have twice flown into the Olympic sports complex in Deodoro, a rough neighborhood that's playing host to events including equestrian and rugby. No one's been injured. And on Tuesday, two windows were shattered on a bus carrying journalists; Rio organizers blamed rocks, although one passenger, who identified herself as a former American military officer, insisted the cause was likely gunfire. No one was seriously injured.

And in what's starting to feel like a common occurrence at these games, bomb squads have set off several controlled explosions after finding unattended items such as the backpack near the basketball arena. Detonations also have happened near the finish line of a cycling race and, Tuesday night, outside of the Copacabana Palace hotel.

Authorities won't say how many calls they've responded to, and while the vast majority of cases are immediately discarded, many are investigated, taking a toll on already overworked officers.

"You have to run things down," said Matthew Levitt, director of the Washington Institute's Stein Program on Counterterrorism and Intelligence. "The fact that you find out later it was nothing doesn't mean that you didn't need to do that. This type of vigilance is going to continue."

Many tourists are only catching glimpses of the violence on TV or the internet, if at all.

"The risks were so exaggerated," said Byron Rivas, an accountant from Colombia walking around the downtown port area that until an Olympic cleanup had been a dangerous place. "We got here worrying about security, and now we don't even think about"

US boxing medal drought ends with Nico Hernandez's bronze

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — Nico Hernandez had a gnarly gash over his left eye that left him bloodied, with blurred vision and in need of stitches.

He has a better look in mind for Sunday.

Hernandez will leave the Rio Games with a bronze medal in the light flyweight division, ending a medal drought for the U.S. that stretched to 2008. He's also the first American light flyweight to medal since Michael Carbajal won silver in 1988.

Hernandez's chance for a gold medal ended Friday when he lost to Uzbekistan's Hasanboy Dusmatov by unanimous decision. He'll stay through Sunday's final and will then be decorated in bronze on the medal stand.

"We said when we get there, we're going to medal," Hernandez said. "We're finally here."

Andre Ward in 2004 was the last American male to win a gold medal in boxing. Deontay Wilder won the bronze in 2008 and the American men had an embarrassing medal-free trip to London four years ago.

Hernandez, 20 years old and out of Wichita, Kansas, tried to win one more shocker and advance to the gold-medal bout. Hernandez had pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the Olympics' first three days on Monday night with a unanimous decision over Russia's Vasilii Egorov, the European champion and runner-up at last year's world championships.

Dusmatov, a clever left-hander, got in enough shots over the first two rounds to win 30-27 and 29-28 on two cards.

"I should have been a little more wild instead of picking my shots from the outside," Hernandez said.

U.S coach Billy Walsh said he thought Hernandez could have done enough to steal a win.

"I thought we had a chance," Walsh said.

With good reason. The Americans had been one of the surprises of the tournament with a 6-1 record into Friday. The run stalled on Friday when Carlos Balderas followed Hernandez and lost to Cuban 2012 Olympic bronze medalist Lazaro Alvarez by unanimous decision in a lightweight bout.

Hernandez, who rooms with Balderas, had two friends and his mother and father in the stands.

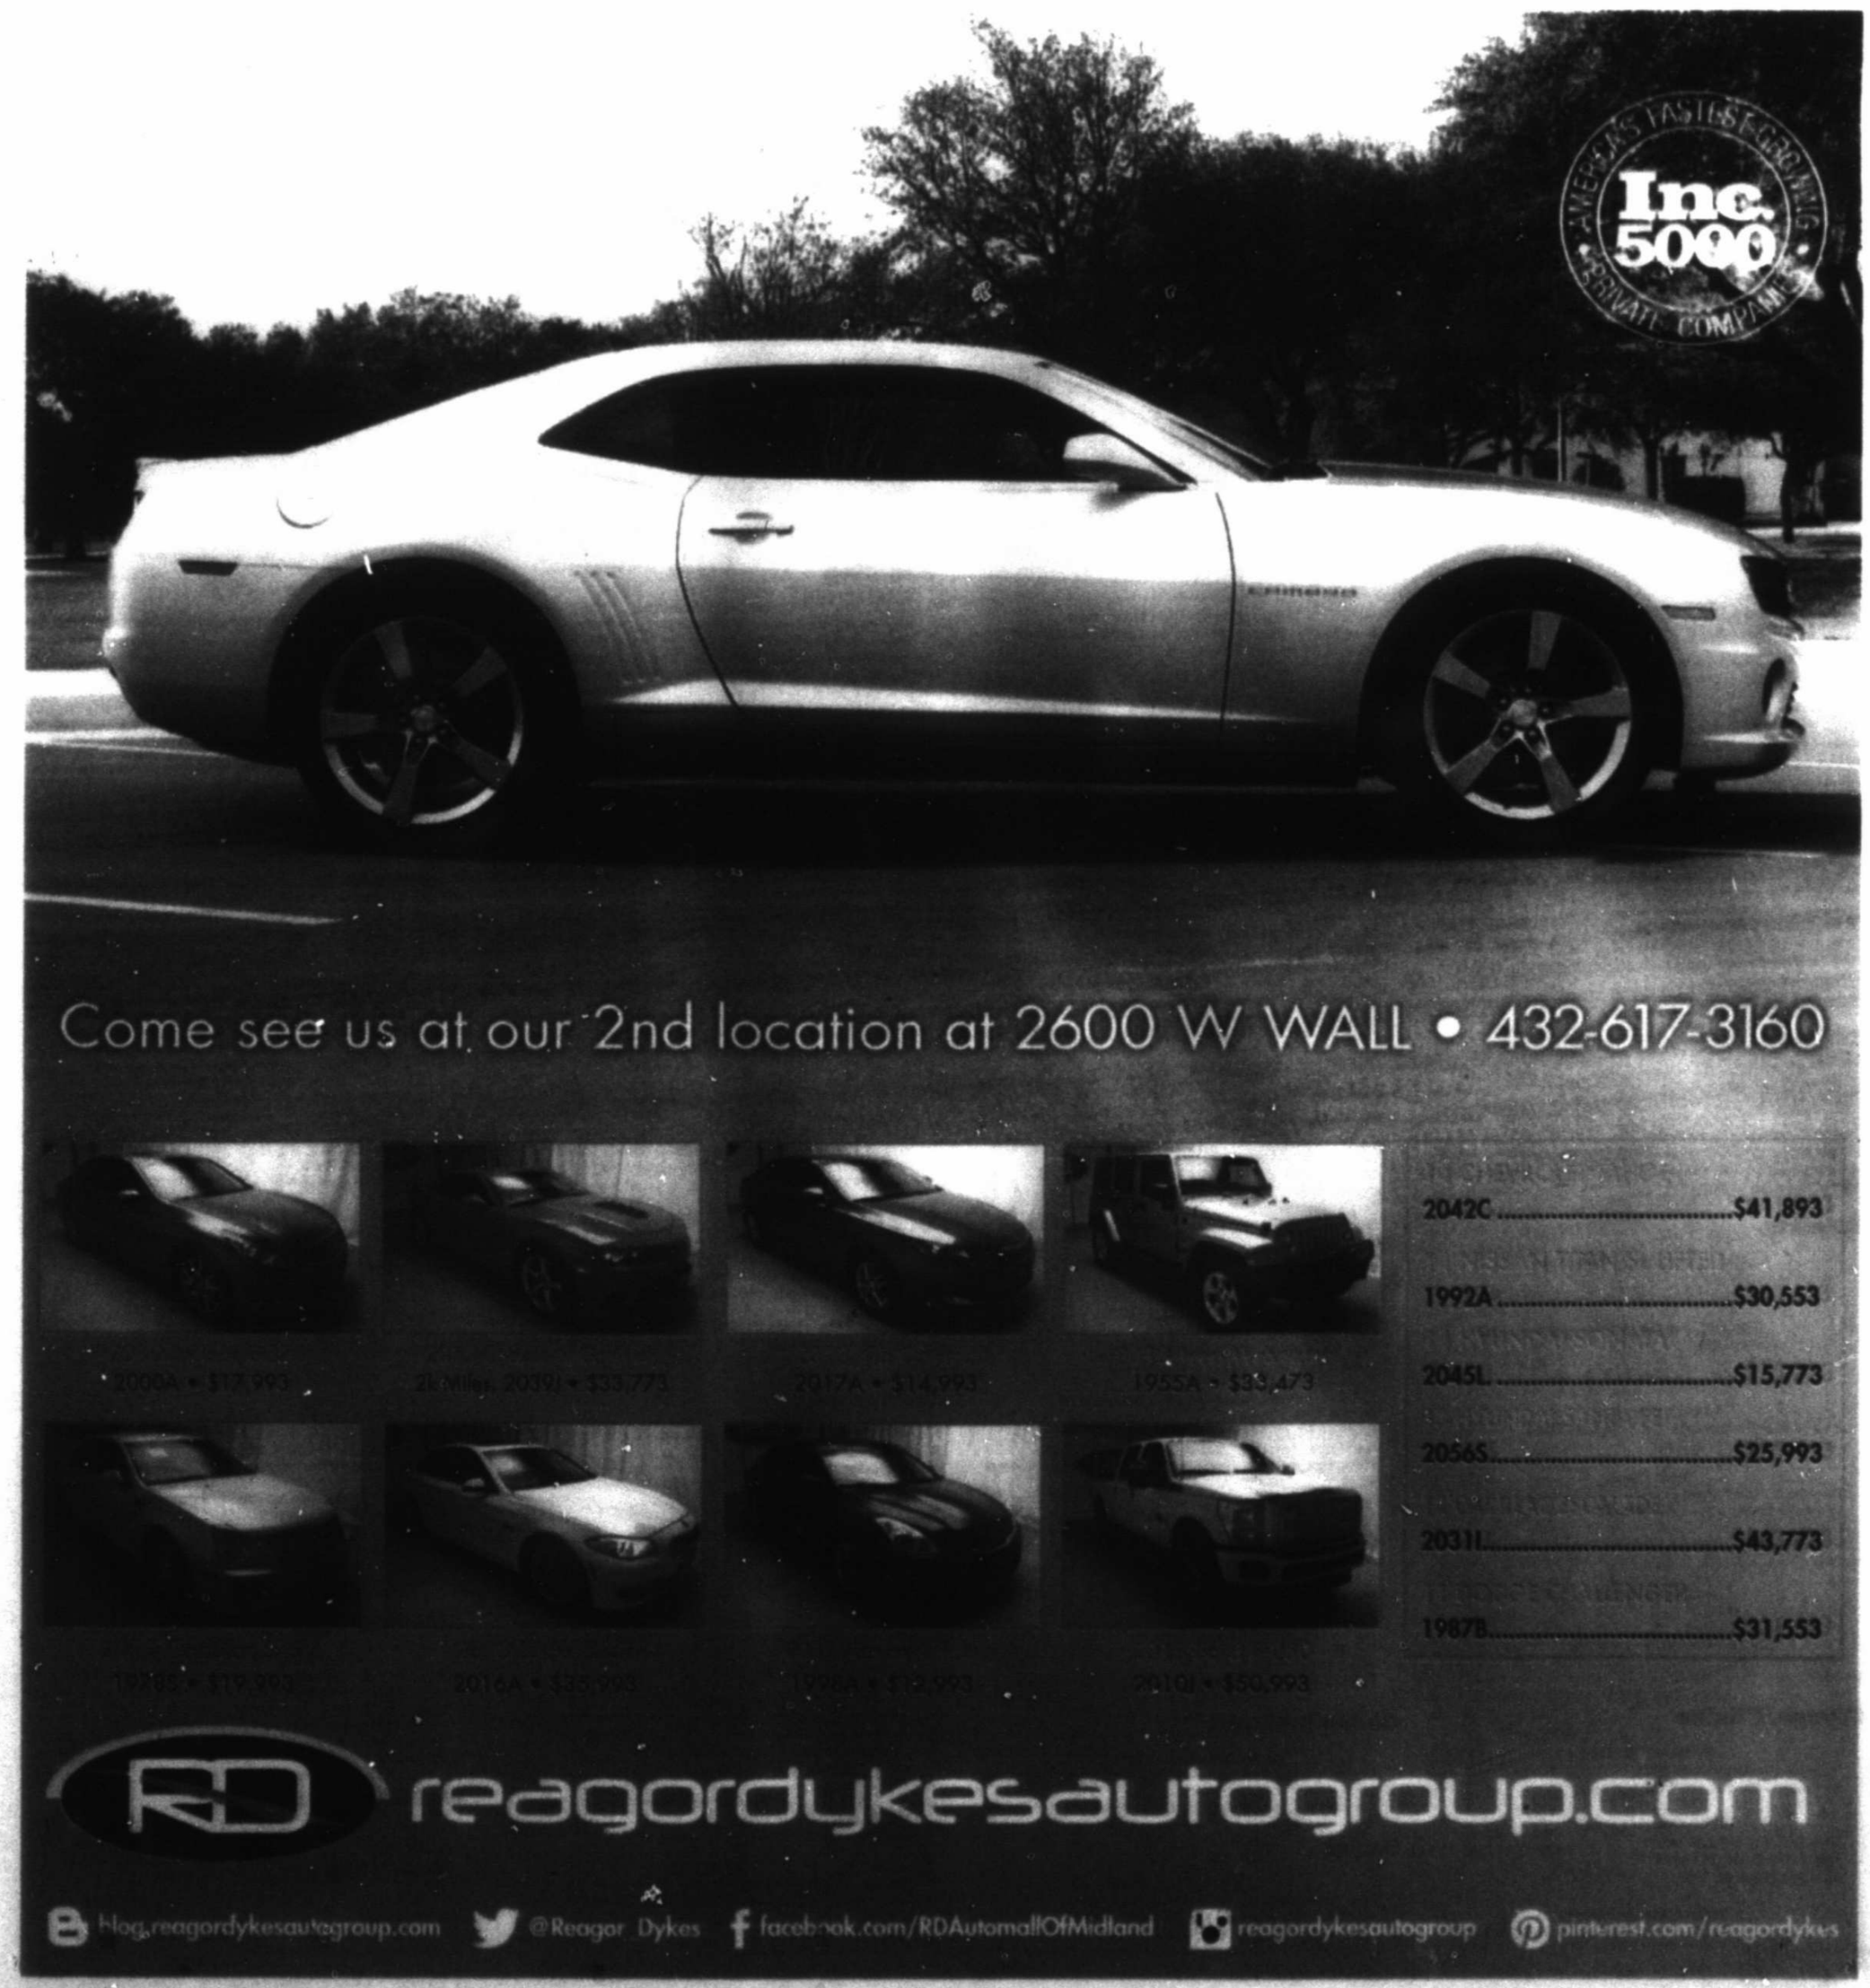
"It was motivation for me seeing them in the crowd and hearing their voices," he said, "but I didn't want to lose in front of them."

He complained of blurred vision after he was busted open late in the second round, blood streaming down his face, though the result was all but decided at that point.

"I let it get way too close," he said.

Hernandez restored some of the pride in the American program that was reeling following the London shutout. The nine-man American team won only five fights in London and failed to win any medals for the first time. This year's six-man U.S. team already has six wins with more bouts ahead.

In 2012, Errol Spence was the only American man even to reach the Olympic quarterfinals by winning two bouts.



C-USA coaches like where they're at in same 13-team league

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

IRVING — Conference USA goes into a new season with no changes in its lineup of teams for the first time since 2012.

The league has the same 13 teams that competed for the title last season, including defending champion Western Kentucky.

There will be at least one change in 2017 with UAB's return after a two-season hiatus, and who knows what happens if there is another national shift of teams. The Big 12, a Power Five conference headquartered just around the corner from the C-USA office, is considering expansion of its 10-team league.

"We're not blind to the fact that that's kind of what has been a hot topic the last couple of years ... and now it looks like it's going to pick back up," WKU coach Jeff Brohm said. "If we take care of our business and try to be a contender every year in the league, eventually good things will happen, but we like exactly where we're at right now."

Marshall coach Doc Holliday agrees, adding, "I'm not sure any of the other Group of Five is a better league than what we have right now."

C-USA had 12 teams from 2005-12, though some teams changed during that span. There were 14 teams in 2013 with a baker's dozen in 2014, and again last year when FBS newcomer Charlotte came in as UAB temporarily shut down its program.

In this April 23 file photo, Southern Mississippi coach Jay Hopson yells to his players during the NCAA college football team's Black and Gold spring game in Hattiesburg, Miss. The first-year coach walks into a situation that many of his peers would envy. The roster's loaded with experience and a senior quarterback. But with that luxury comes expectations and Hopson is expected to win a C-USA title in year one.

The favorites

East Division: With a 5,000-yard passer last season, WKU averaged 50 points without losing a C-USA game. The Hilltoppers return all five starting offensive linemen, a record-setting receiver and a 1,000-yard rusher, but quarterback Brandon Doughty was a seventh-round NFL pick. WKU's toughest league games are on the road, at the other East favorites — Middle Tennessee with its father-son coach-quarterback combo (Rick Stockstill is dean of C-USA coaches in his 11th season) and Marshall off three consecutive 10-win seasons — and Louisiana Tech.

West Division: Southern Miss, the alma mater of Hall of Fame quarterback Brett Favre, was the most-improved FBS team last season, six wins better at 9-5 while winning the West and going to its first bowl game since 2011. Coach Todd Monken left for the NFL as offensive coordinator in Tampa Bay, but USM's record-setting quarterback is back. Fourth-year Louisiana Tech coach Skip Holtz (13-3 in C-USA games the last two years) has created the kind of depth that could help the Bulldogs overcome the loss of running back Kenneth Dixon (26 total TDs) and their quarterback.

Top players

■ Southern Miss quarterback Nick Mullens. After 4,476 yards passing and 38 TDs last season, Mullens could emerge as a top NFL prospect as a senior.

■ WKU receiver Taywan Taylor. A nice target for the Hilltoppers' new quarterback after 86 catches for 1,467 yards and 17 TDs last season.

■ Florida Athletic defensive end Trey Hendrickson. The 6-foot-4, 270-pounder, C-USA's sack leader, had more than one sack in five games.

■ Louisiana Tech receiver Trent Taylor. Undersized at 5-8, he is big catching passes: 99 catches for 1,282 yards last year.

■ Middle Tennessee quarterback Brent Stockstill. The lefty completed two-thirds of his passes (4,005 yards, 30 TDs, nine interceptions) as a freshman starting for his dad.

New faces

■ Marshall linebacker Davon Durant. A top junior college player who first went to Arizona State and got dismissed there, Durant could be a key player for a defense that lost seven starters.

■ North Texas coach Seth Littrell. North Carolina's play-caller the past two seasons hopes to have the same kind of spread-out, high-scoring offense in his first head coaching job.

■ Southern Miss coach Jay Hopson. Twice a Golden Eagles assistant in the past, Hopson was Alcorn State's coach the past four years.

■ UTSA coach Frank Wilson. A first-time college coach after six seasons as LSU's recruiting coordinator.

On the hot seat

■ Ron Turner, FIU. The Panthers have gone from one to four to five wins under Turner. With a quarterback, running back and receiver among nine returning offensive starters, they need to be even better.

■ Charlie Partridge, Florida Atlantic. After consecutive 3-9 seasons, the Owls have 15 returning starters from a team that lost four games by a touchdown or less.

■ Brad Lambert, Charlotte. There are 19 fifth-year seniors who came as freshmen for the program's inception in 2012, a year before the first game. Could this be the last season as well for Lambert, 10-22 after a 2-10 FBS debut last year.

Picks

East: Middle Tennessee. West: Southern Miss. League champion: Middle Tennessee.

AGGIES

From 1B

"If he's doing really well and starts liding the line over to him, that would make openings for me so I could make some plays in the game or make a sack on the quarterback or get inside and make the tackle for loss. He's just as effective as me."

Myles Garrett, Texas A&M defensive end

sliding the line over to him, that would make openings for me so I could make some plays in the game or make a sack on the quarterback or get inside and make the tackle for loss," Garrett said. "He's just as effective as me."

Key games

After the UCLA game, the Aggies have just one game before they jump into Southeastern Conference play with a trip to Auburn followed by their annual Arlington, Texas meeting against Arkansas. They have a tough stretch in October where they host East division favorite Tennessee followed by a trip to Alabama, the West division favorite. They'll close out the regular season by hosting LSU on Thanksgiving, a game that will by tough with the Tigers expected to contend with Alabama for the SEC title.

Prediction

The Aggies will likely be in the middle of the pack in the SEC. They aren't one of the league's bottom feeders, but probably won't be able to keep pace with the elite teams in the league. If Knight is solid and the defense does what's expected they could win nine games, but it's unlikely they could do much better than that.

Wesley Bryan leads rain-delayed John Deere Classic

Associated Press

SILVIS, Ill. — Wesley Bryan took the lead in the rain-delayed John Deere Classic on Friday, five days after earning a PGA Tour card with his third Web.com Tour victory of the year.

Bryan played 26 holes in 10 under Friday at TPC Deere Run, birdieing three of the final holes to finish off a first-round 66 and shooting a 64 in the second round to reach 12-under 130.

"Been hitting the ball great all week, really the last couple weeks," Bryan said. "Struck it well, made the putts when I needed to, and here we are."

Area favorite Zach Johnson faced a long day Saturday after not even getting onto the course Friday.

Play resumed five hours late at noon after nearly 2.4 inches of rain overnight — on top of the inch Thursday morning that delayed play 3 1/2 hours Thursday morning and afternoon. Because of the wet conditions, the players were allowed use preferred lies in the fairways in the second round.

Wesley Bryan tees off on the 17th hole during the second round of the John Deere Classic golf tournament Friday at TPC Deere Run in Silvis, Ill.

Bryan has made a fast rise since focusing on tournament golf last year after working as a trick-shot artist with brother George. The 26-year-old former South Carolina player dominated the Web.com Tour this season, winning in Louisiana, Mexico and Kansas and earning $449,392 in 13 starts.

"Just knowing that I've been in contention and been able to hit the shots that I needed to on that level, I mean, there's a lot of really good players out there, and it's just as hard to win a golf tournament out there as it is out here, I presume," Bryan said. "Just knowing that I've been there and been able to hit the shots under pressure, I think should help me out moving forward."

In his bogey-free second round that began on No. 10, Bryan birdied five of the last seven holes in the on his opening nine, and added birdies on the par-5 second and par-3 seventh.

"The second round I was able to fire at a lot more flags just because we had ball in hand," Bryan said. "The course is not really that long, so got a lot of short and mid-irons into these greens, and the ball is just hitting and stopping, you don't really have to worry about it spinning back too much.

"They're soft enough to where they're just kind of hitting and reacting, really, really soft. So was able to fire at a few more flags that maybe I wouldn't have normally gone after."

Steve Marino was a stroke back after rounds of 66 and 65.

"I'm happy to be done," Marino said. "Can't wait to get out of this shirt. It's just so humid out there. ... I played really well today. I played really well yesterday. Finally, feel like I'm starting to come around. It's been a struggle all year. It's nice to kind of see things coming together."

Tom Gillis shot 64-68 to reach 10 under. Kyle Stanley was 9 under after rounds of 67 and 66.

Johnson opened with a 65 on Thursday. The 2012 tournament winner and two-time major champion is from nearby Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Playing partner Steve Stricker had a 70 on Thursday. The 49-year-old Stricker, a former University of Illinois player from Wisconsin, won the event in 2009, 2010 and 2011.

Local forecast

The rain should continue today with a 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. Otherwise, expect the lowest temperatures in weeks as the high and low temperatures are expected to remain below normal for this time of year, according to the National Weather Service. The next chance of rain is expected Thursday.

The record high for Aug. 12 is 107 set in 1936. The record low is 60 set in 1931. On Aug. 12 last year, the high was 101 and the low was 72.

Weather brief

Stormy weather in store for much of the country

A system of fronts will produce numerous showers and thunderstorms across the Northeast, the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the southern Plains. Isolated showers will be possible in the Southeast. High pressure will keep the West Coast dry.

Mother of the bride resists overtures from groom's mom

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am recently engaged, and both my fiance and his mother keep trying to set up "play dates" between his mom, my mom and me. I understand this may be a social norm so the mothers of an engaged couple can get to know each other during the engagement. However, my mom wants nothing to do with these dates.

Mom works long hours in the medical field. When she isn't working, she's frequently baby-sitting my sister's children. When she has free time, she enjoys being alone and reading a good book. This is her ideal way to spend her time, and she doesn't want to "hang out" with anyone but my dad. I have explained this more than once to my fiance, yet he and his mom still try to set up meetings.

In defense of my mom, she and my fiance's mother have known each other longer than my fiance and I have known each other. They live about a mile apart and have met many, many times. I don't understand why more meetups are necessary.

It's getting to the point where I wish they'd stop asking my mom to do things, because I always have to awkwardly say no. Must I drag Mom somewhere I know she'd rather not be, or should my fiance let this go? — TOO MUCH TOGETHERNESS

DEAR TOO MUCH: Marriage is supposed to be a blending of two families, which may be why your fiance and his mother are so persistent. However, you should not be a message carrier and feel stuck in the middle because it isn't fair to you.

Tell your fiance that if his mother wants to get together with yours, she should call your mother herself. That way your mom can explain directly that because of her busy schedule — and her short list of priorities — she is not available.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single father raising my four children alone. My problem may seem trivial and minor, but it's extremely taxing for me. My kids refuse to stop talking during my very brief television/movie time.

I work full time and take care of them by myself, and my two-hour escape via a movie or TV show is constantly interrupted. When I point out that what they are doing is rude and even disruptive, I am met with accusations that I "don't care about them" or "You love TV more than me." They somehow turn my anger around to their benefit. Please help. — ME TIME IN FLORIDA

DEAR ME TIME: Welcome to parenthood! It's a 24-hour-a-day job, seven days a week.

You didn't mention how old your children are, but if they are under the age of 13, they should have a regular bedtime. Once they are in bed, you can have your "me time." However, if they are older, then accept that teenagers may need to communicate with their dad about things that are important, and it is more important to be available to them than to watch television every night.

P.S. Suggestion: Perhaps you can record or stream your shows and watch them at a later time when your kids don't need you.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 13, 2016:

This year you head in a new direction. Your creativity energizes you in various environments. You could reverse a difficult situation involving a child or loved one. Your dynamic energy and willingness to let go of judgments mark your behavior. If you are single, you easily meet people through your interests. Someone you meet after summer could become important to your life's history. If you are attached, your dedication to each other becomes even more obvious. SAGITTARIUS has a lot of fun with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Reach out to someone at a distance. A conversation might be in order to catch up on each other's news. Deciding to meet at a halfway point will allow you to spend more time together. Let go of financial concerns for now. Tonight: Be more forthright about what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You could be in a whirlwind of living. Do not underestimate the effect that a special person has on your life. Refuse to get into a catty situation with a loved one; instead, just focus on how you feel. Tonight: Be responsive to someone whom you deeply care about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Instead of taking the lead, let someone else call the shots today. You could become quite distracted by all the admirers that surround you. Know that nothing can replace your feelings toward a key person, even if you would like him or her to fade away. Tonight: All smiles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You will be in the mood to take on a work project that might be overwhelming to those around you. Just smile and throw yourself into the task at hand. You will be all smiles and ready to socialize once you are done. Tonight: Join your friends at a favorite haunt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Your spirit and energy seem to be very appealing to others. You simply can't deny what is happening around you. If you are single, you might want to seize the moment. You could be a lot more tired than you realize. Start exploring your options. Tonight: Let the games continue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Understand what is motivating your interest in a situation involving a family matter or a domestic issue. You might be ready to establish a stronger connection with a special person in your life. Seize the moment. Tonight: Home is where the good times happen!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You might want to re-evaluate what is happening with you and a special person in your life. Reach out to a trusted friend for some feedback about this situation; you could become a lot closer as a result. Tonight: Meet some friends at a favorite neighborhood haunt.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Allow greater creativity to flow into your life. Your caring ways have a strong effect on others. Decide to be more open than you have been in the past, especially when dealing with a special someone. You will reach a new level of understanding. Tonight: Make it your treat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You will want to get past what you see as a limitation. You could be saddled with additional responsibilities, which might feel like even more weight on your shoulders. Communication soars as you open up to a new level of understanding. Tonight: Run errands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You might want to discuss an impending change. You could be in a situation that you feel intensely about. Reach out for new information. Detach and get a better perspective of what needs to happen. Tonight: Be willing to make it an early night, if need be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ A friendship means a lot more to the other party than you might realize. This person could surprise you. Keep communication open, and you will learn a lot more about what is happening around you. Tonight: Hang out where the crowds can be found.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You might make a strong impression on a boss or someone you care about. Honor a fast change, and know what is necessary to turn a situation around. Be sensitive to someone who could be a little sad. Try to help this person work through this issue. Tonight: In the limelight.
