Fat patties sell

NEW YORK — Hamburger eaters remain loyal to a fatty patty, say several fast-food chains that haven't followed McDonald's into the lean burger business. "After spending millions on research, we found, just by listening to the consumer, that people are talking nutrition, but they buy on taste," said Maurice Bridges, director of public affairs for the Hardee's chain./6B

NFL, players agree

NEW YORK — The National Football League and its players agreed on a tentative contract Tuesday that could end a five-year dispute. The NFL Players Association went on strike during the 1987 season shortly after its contract expired. But the players returned after 24 days and took the dispute to court. Neither the owners nor the union would give details, but it is believed the agreement will give players a form of unrestricted free agency for the first time, impose a salary cap and cut the draft from 12 rounds to seven./1C

'Dress-a-Live Doll'

The Salvation Army's "Dress-a-Live-Doll" project is in the home stretch with Christmas Eve just around the corner. Fifteen of the 1,556 children registered with the program, remain without gifts, according to Brenda Turner, wife of local Salvation Army Major Dan. Turner. The names and sizes of those final few school-age and pre-school children in need of a new outfit of clothing are available at the customer service desk at JCPenney's at Midland Park Mall. Sponsors for the more than 1,500 children who have been provided for have spent an average of about $125 per child, she said.

Economy breaks from rut

National group declares recession formally over

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy broke out of its slow-growth rut in the July-September quarter, the government said Tuesday, prompting a national group of economists to declare the recession formally over.

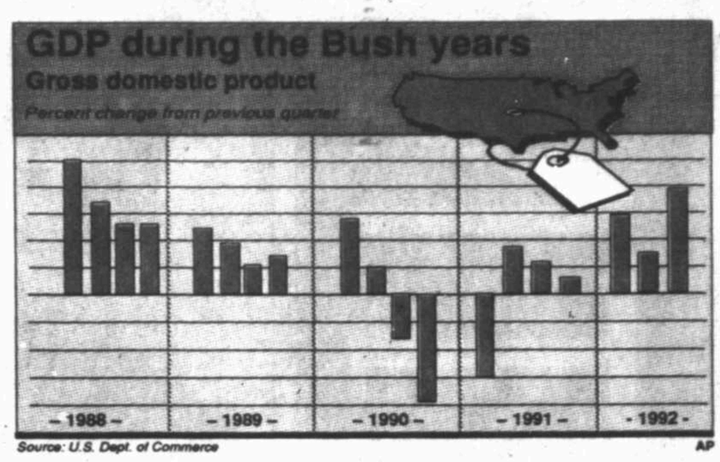

Meanwhile, in an encouraging sign for next year, businesses told the government they plan the strongest increase in investment spending in four years.

"All the evidence now points to the fact that a genuine economic revival is under way. The recession has ended," said economist Norman Robertson of Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh.

The Commerce Department said the gross domestic product grew at a seasonally adjusted 3.4 percent annual rate in the third quarter, not quite so strong as an earlier estimate but still the best of George Bush's presidency.

N.Y. Times News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton selected Warren M. Christopher as secretary of state and Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin as secretary of defense Tuesday, making them the two anchors of a foreign policy team that draws heavily from the last Democratic administration.

In a news conference Tuesday, Clinton also nominated R. James Woolsey Jr., a 51-year-old former undersecretary of the Navy and arms negotiator to be director of Central Intelligence; Anthony Lake, 53, a professor at Mount Holyoke College, as his national security adviser; and Madeleine Albright, 55, a political scientist, to be the U.S. chief delegate to the United Nations.

In his comments Tuesday, as in the appointments themselves, Clinton shed little new light on his foreign policy views.

"We must act to curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction, to counter terrorism and to prevent the degradation of our global environment," he said in a voice rendered hoarse from seasonal allergies.

"The world is no longer a simple place with clear choices. As we enter the 21st century, American foreign policy will require steady hands, bold new thinking and the strength and courage to advance our American values."

Except for Aspin, 54, all of the major appointees Clinton announced Tuesday served in President Jimmy Carter's administration.

Desire for diversity may dictate selections

By Adam Clymer
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Under heavy pressure to add more women and members of minorities to his Cabinet, President-elect Bill Clinton appears to have replaced the leading candidate for interior secretary, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, with Rep. Bill Richardson of New Mexico, who is of Hispanic descent.

The shift seems to have been dictated by Clinton's desire to name a second Hispanic-American to his Cabinet, according to officials of the transition team.

If selected, Richardson would join former Mayor Henry G. Cisneros of San Antonio, whose selection as secretary of housing and urban development was announced last week.

Babbitt is now considered likely to be named the U.S. trade representative. But leaders of environmental organizations were seeking last night to forestall the decision, telling Clinton they want Babbitt at Interior, the department that most affects their interests.

A high-ranking transition official said Tuesday night in Little Rock, Ark., that because of the intense pressure from both sides, the decision could go either way. An announcement is likely to come on Thursday.

The reports about Interior came a day after Clinton bypassed Sen. Tim Wirth of Colorado, who is believed to have been promised the position as secretary of en-

Bush plans Somalia visit

WASHINGTON — In a final foreign mission, President Bush will go to Somalia on New Year's Eve to spend the holiday with American troops fighting starvation in the stricken East African country.

"The president's visit will demonstrate United States concern for the people of Somalia, our commitment to humanitarian assistance and our support for American and United Nations forces," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Telegraphing their punches, U.S. Marines and French Foreign Legionnaires said Tuesday they planned to take two more central Somalia towns on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

Their targets: Bardera, held by the warlord son-in-law of former dictator Mohammed Siad Barre, and Hoddur, until recent days one of the most peaceful towns in this chaotic, famished land.

Foundation announces fall grants for 12 area projects

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The Permian Basin Area Foundation announced fall grants for 12 area non-profit organization projects and named new board officers, during a news conference on Tuesday.

"This year we will end up making about $150,000 in distributions," said Jack Swallow, executive director of the foundation.

The foundation appropriates grants in the spring and fall, with more dollars distributed in the fall due to more funds available.

During the presentation, Swallow expressed optimism for the continued growth of the foundation.

The foundation will continue to raise their monetary base which stood at about $1.5 million this time last year,

Court reduces sentence for televangelist Bakker

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A judge cut 10 years off the prison sentence of Jim Bakker, the television evangelist who bilked followers out of more than $150 million, and his attorney said the PTL founder could be free by next Christmas.

Bakker was sentenced to 45 years in prison after he was convicted of fraud in 1989, but U.S. District Judge Graham Mullen had reduced the term to 18 years.

Mullen decided Tuesday that "on further reflection the sentence seems unduly harsh." He cut it to eight years.

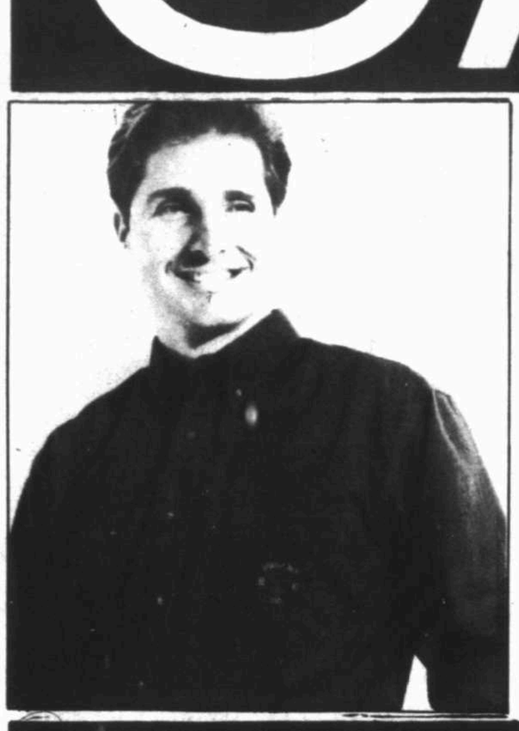

Bakker's attorneys last month requested the second reduction. They argued that Bakker was a model prisoner at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., and had expressed remorse in a letter read to the court.

In a statement from the medium-security prison, Bakker said he is "deeply overwhelmed and thankful to God and thankful

Principal members will exit Russian Parliament

MOSCOW (NYT) — As negotiations over the formation of Russia's new government continued in secret, the foreign trade minister handed in his resignation Tuesday, becoming the first major member of former Prime Minister Yegor T. Gaidar's team of young, reform-minded economists to leave the Cabinet.

But according to several reports, other principal members of the Gaidar Cabinet are expected to stay in office, assuring some continuity in Russia's yearlong attempt to introduce a market economy.

The official who resigned, Pyotr Aven, had been targeted by those in the Russian Parliament who look to the new prime minister, Viktor S. Chernomyrdin, to slow the pace of economic change.

As Russia's principal negotiator at talks on the rescheduling of $80 billion in debts to Western governments and banks, Aven's departure will add new uncertainty to negotiations that have already tested the West's patience with Russia's financial difficulties.

It also opens up a job at the head of a ministry that oversees the issuing of coveted export licenses for raw materials, and the distribution of preferential import credits for companies buying goods and equipment from abroad.

A spokesman said Tuesday that Aven, who is 37, decided to leave once it was clear that his name was not on the new prime minister's list.

"He does not see a place for himself in the Chernomyrdin government," said Aven's spokesman, Pavel Karikov. "His exit is tied to Gaidar's own departure."

Chernomyrdin assembled his new Cabinet Tuesday, but the full list of appointees must be approved by President Boris N. Yeltsin before it is made public Wednesday.

The formation of a new government has turned into a litmus test of Chernomyrdin's commitment to the economic policies of Gaidar. On Saturday, Yeltsin rushed home from China a day early, explaining that his presence was necessary to keep the "inner core" of Gaidar's old team in place.

Besides Aven, the only minister to offer to resign during the selection process was Ella Pamfilova, minister of social welfare. Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, heavily criticized by the oppositon for policies regarded as too pro-Western, is also expected to leave government, since his reappointment would require the approval of the Parliament.

Plane crash claims 157, agency says

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A Libyan airliner crashed Tuesday during a domestic flight, killing all 157 people aboard, Libya's news agency JANA said.

The Boeing 727, which carried foreigners as well as Libyans, went down on a flight from Benghazi to Tripoli, Libya's capital, JANA said. The agency did not say where the crash occurred, but a JANA reporter in Tunisia said it was near Souk-es-Sebt, a town 30 miles from Tripoli.

Earlier reports said the plane may have collided with another aircraft, but the reporter said there was no evidence of this. The reporter also said Libya's ministers of health, justice and transportation had gone to the crash site to open an investigation.

The Libyan government declared a three-day mourning period for the victims of the crash, JANA said.

In Seattle, Boeing spokesman Mark Hooper said the company was trying to learn more about the crash but had had no direct contact with Libya.

Hooper said Boeing had not decided whether to try to send investigators to Libya because it was unclear if doing so would violate international sanctions against Libya.

Under U.N. sanctions, Boeing has been banned from providing airplane parts to Libya, Hooper said.

The sanctions were imposed in April to punish Libya for refusing to hand over two Libyans suspected in the Dec. 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, which killed 270 people.

Libyan flights have been functioning only inside the country because an international air travel ban is part of the U.N. sanctions.

The plane that crashed was making Flight 1103, a number some called suspicious.

"I think the coincidence of the two flight numbers on the fourth anniversary of the Lockerbie disaster is a bit sinister," said Jim Swire, whose daughter Flora was killed in the 1988 bombing.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect high near 60, low in 20s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high near 60 and northwest winds at 10-15 mph, shifting to the northeast at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-40s.

After an overnight low of 44, Tuesday's high reached 68, compared to the record high for that date of 79 set in 1933. The record low was minus 1 degree in 1989.

STATE

Cloudy, muggy conditions dominated most of Texas with mild temperatures in most regions Tuesday.

Patches of light showers formed over portions of North Texas, and skies were overcast region-wide. Temperatures were slightly higher than normal, rising to 72 degrees in Lufkin.

The dense fog and drizzle that plagued South Texas in the morning cleared in most areas during the day, but in Galveston visibility remained near zero.

Temperatures rose to the 70s along the coast, 60s elsewhere.

The skies across West Texas were generally partly cloudy to mostly cloudy. Temperatures were in the 40s in the Panhandle, the upper 60s and lower 70s south.

The forecast for North Texas is mostly cloudy with scattered showers. Lows are predicted in lower 30s to the upper 50s. Highs in the mid-60s.

Forecasters call for continued murky weather today in South Texas, with a chance of showers and mostly cloudy skies.

Low temperatures in the should be in the 40s, highs in the 70s and 80s.

Cloudy skies also are predicted for West Texas, with temperatures dropping somewhat. Highs are forecast in the 40s and 50s in the Panhandle, 60s elsewhere.

NATION

Wintry wind chilled parts of the West, bringing record below-zero cold in Utah, while much of the Southeast had rain Tuesday.

Residents of the northern and southeast mountains of Wyoming were told to watch for high wind.

The arctic blast brought temperatures reminiscent of midwinter to the central portion of the nation.

A wind chill advisory was posted for the Bethel, Ark., area. A low temperature of minus 5 with winds to 25 mph could make it feel like 50 degrees below zero.

In Utah, readings of 9 below in Monticello and minus 12 in Richfield were records for the date.

The lowest temperatures this season were expected in the northern Plains Tuesday night and today, the central Plains today and northern Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle by Christmas Eve.

A winter storm watch was posted today across Upper Michigan.

Tuesday evening, snow showers were scattered over Upper Michigan, northeast Minnesota and the northern Rockies. Rain reached across the Carolinas and the Tennessee Valley as well as over the northern half of Georgia and inland portions of the central Gulf of Mexico states.

An inch of snow fell on Mullen, Idaho, by midafternoon Tuesday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

GRANTS: Basin foundation to fund 12 projects

(From 1A)

Swallow said. Grant money is derived from investments of that principle base.

"We have seen a quadrupling of our assets since our foundation's creation 3½ years ago," Swallow said. "The first 3½ years have been marked with success,"

The foundation was independently chartered in 1989 and for seven years prior was a trust operated under the United Way.

The goal of the foundation is to "build permanent assets into significant amounts" to increase grants to agencies in the 22 county Permian Basin area, Swallow said.

At times, the foundation has received six to 10 times as many grant requests than money available, Swallow said.

"It's a difficult process that the grants committee goes through because we have some many wonderful requests," he said.

Monetary gifts to the foundation come from individuals, families, corporations and other foundations.

Swallow attributed part of the success of the foundation to outgoing board chairman Deane Stoltz, who was presented an award for his work.

"We're really in the embryonic stage of growth and looking to (considerable) growth in years to come," said Stoltz, who will remain on the board after the beginning of the year.

Board officers were announced for 1993. They are: M. Elizabeth Locker, chairman; Steve Davidson, vice-chairman; Joanie Holt, secretary; and James M. Alsup, treasurer.

Fall grant awards were as follows:

■ Art Institute for the Permian Basin — $1,500 for the Adventures in Art program that involves children 6-12 years old and their parents.

■ Ballet Midland — $600 for presentation of Tulsa Ballet Theatre's "The Nutcracker."

■ Community and Senior Services — $3,000 for a staff handyman to supplement volunteer efforts in minor home repairs for the elderly.

■ Confederate Air Force — $1,500 to provide experience-based learning opportunities for area students in communicating a history of World War II and aviation-related experiences in math and science.

■ High Sky Children's Ranch, Inc. — $1,800 to purchase office furniture and therapy equipment for the Noel Therapy Center to provide a positive child-oriented environment conducive to counseling, healing and training.

■ Multiple Sclerosis Society — $1,000 for Moving Forward, a structured, educational course designed to make the diagnosis less threatening and more manageable for people diagnosed with multiple sclerosis within the last two years.

■ Odessa Rape Crisis Center — $2,000 toward the Sexual Awareness For Educating Teens & Youth (SAFETY) program designed to create an awareness of sexual victimization.

■ Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation — $2,000 to facilitate dental care for mentally retarded individuals.

■ Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse — $1,500 to purchase a computer and laser printer for the council's Big Spring outreach office.

■ Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee — $2,000 toward the construction of the plaza to commemorate those killed or missing in action from the Permian Basin.

■ Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas — $1,600 for assistance in the replacement cost of two heating/air conditioning units.

■ Upward Bound (Snyder) — $1,000 for start-up costs for a program of Scurry Community Services to identify and meet human service needs within that county.

The grants announced exclude those earmarked for specific projects specified by donors.

REVIVAL: Economy breaks from slow-growth rut

(From 1A)

Committee of the National Bureau of Economic Research said the economy's slump ended in March 1991, eight months after it began in July 1990.

The panel of leading university economists is regarded by the government as the official arbiter of the beginning and ending of recessions.

The economists said they delayed their decision until economic output surpassed its pre-recession peak and sustained that level, so that any future slump would be considered a new recession rather than a continuation of the old one. Those conditions were finally met in Tuesday's GDP report, the second revision of the strong July-September figures, they said.

During the presidential campaign, President Bush was derided repeatedly by Democrat Bill Clinton for saying that the recession had ended.

Although the 1990-'91 downturn proved to be shorter than the average 11-month recession since World War II, the recovery that followed was the slowest since then.

The economy stalled twice — once late in 1991 and again this past spring — leading many economists at the time to say the recession was continuing.

"We now have a more meaningful upturn than when we had the false starts earlier. There's something broader and deeper at work this time," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The revised third quarter growth rate of 3.4 percent is half a percentage point lower than an estimate issued last month. But analysts weren't overly concerned, noting that the bulk of the revision came because the buildup in inventories was less than previously thought.

That actually is a good sign for future growth, because it means increases in buying demand will be more likely to produce increased factory production and hiring.

The economy grew at a 1.5 percent rate in the second quarter and a 2.9 percent rate in the first. The various changes have raised the GDP to an annual rate of $4.93 trillion.

Separately, the Commerce Department said insurance company losses from hurricanes Andrew and Iniki pushed overall, after-tax corporate profits down 4.5 percent in the third quarter to $222.2 billion.

It was the biggest drop in three years but came after two strong quarters. Last month, the department had estimated the third quarter decline at 6 percent.

Profits had soared 10.8 percent in the first quarter and advanced 1.3 percent on top of that in the second quarter.

The biggest factor behind third quarter GDP growth was a robust 3.7 percent increase in the rate of consumer spending, particularly for big-ticket durable goods

Housing construction advanced at a 0.2 percent annual rate after four much stronger increases, and government purchases rose at a 3.8 percent rate. Part of that was driven by a fluky 8.3 percent jump in defense expenditures, the strongest since the first quarter of 1991 during the Persian Gulf War.

Economists predicted that the economy would finish the final quarter of this year at a 2 percent annual rate of growth.

BUSH: President sets New Year's visit to Somalia

(From 1A)

Bush will begin the 17-hour flight from Washington on Dec. 30, after returning from a three-day hunting trip in Texas. He will arrive in Somalia mid-afternoon on Dec. 31, Mogadishu time, and spend the rest of the day and that evening with the troops.

He will remain overnight at an unannounced site and plans to spend New year's Day visiting relief centers. The White House left open the possibility Bush might stop somewhere else on the way home.

Bush has been trying to wrap up a second major Strategic Arms Treaty with Russian president Boris Yeltsin in the short time remaining before he leaves office.

Bush has spoken emotionally of the troops in Somalia who are opening routes so that relief supplies can get to the starving populace. Some 350,000 Somalis have died since January of 1991 when the country's ruler was deposed.

On Monday, he sent holiday greetings to the U.S. forces in Somalia, saying they have "proved the wisdom of America's policy of peace through strength" and "also shown Americans' deep sense of compassion."

Under current plans, the troop buildup in Somalia will continue until it has reached 28,000 serving in a military humanitarian mission of unprecedented scale. The first U.S. troops landed in Mogadishu on Dec. 9.

They are in the vanguard of U.N. forces now spreading across the impoverished country.

Bush made a similar trip in 1990, spending Thanksgiving with U.S. troops in the Saudi Arabian desert as they readied for the Persian Gulf War.

His mission this time might be compared with the dramatic visit that French President Francois Mitterrand paid to besieged Sarajevo in the former Yugoslavia last June.

The president will be accompanied on Air Force One by a small pool of reporters, photographers and cameramen, but not by news media in a separate press plane.

Bush's Christmas plans are unchanged. He intends to be at Camp David, Md., from Thursday afternoon through Sunday and to begin a three-day hunting trip in Texas on Monday.

Fitzwater said Bush is expected to stop in Washington on Dec. 30 before heading to Africa, possibly just long enough to pick up aides, including Fitzwater and National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

Mrs. Bush is not expected to make the Somalia trip.

Bush, who relinquishes the presidency to Bill Clinton on Jan. 20, has let his Democratic successor have the spotlight since the election.

BAKKER: Court cuts sentence for televangelist for the compassion and mercy of Judge Mullen, and my children and family who stood by me and all the people who prayed for me through this long ordeal.

"This is the greatest Christmas present aside from the birth of my son, that I have ever had. I am very, very happy."

Bakker is not giving interviews, said Bob McFadden, executive assistant to the warden.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller said prosecutors are considering an appeal.

"We are disappointed in such a lenient sentence for such a massive fraud, especially in light of the heavier sentences for David and James Taggart who provided substantial assistance to the United States in the prosecution of Bakker and others," Miller said in a statement. The Taggarts were Bakker aides.

Jim Toms, another Bakker attorney, said Bakker is eligible for parole now but is unlikely to get a parole hearing until at least March.

"We don't know the particulars of when Jim might be let out of prison. We think it is reasonable to say by next Christmas, he will be home," Toms said.

Bakker's original 45-year sentence was reduced last year after an appeals court dismissed it, saying remarks by the trial judge, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter, about "money-grubbing preachers" were "too intemperate to be ignored."

Bakker then was eligible for parole Aug. 30, 1995, after he served a third of his 18-year sentence.

Bakker was convicted on a 24-count indictment that charged him with overselling lodging guarantees, called "lifetime partnerships."

Prosecutors said 116,000 supporters contributed more than $160 million, which Bakker diverted to buy expensive homes, cars, jewelry and vacations even while knowing the ministry was sinking financially.

PUNCHES: Forces to take 2 more Somali towns

news briefing by Col. Fred Peck, the Marine spokesman. "There's no reason to hide the obvious," he said.

Peck said no opposition was expected in either town. Both are important distribution points for aid to Somalia's starving people. The famine has taken up to 350,000 lives and threatens 2 million more.

He denied that the mission was timed to generate publicity on Christmas.

"I think it's more coincidence than anything else," Peck said. "We're going because we're ready to go.

"In my mind, it would be unconscionable to sit back and celebrate Christmas, as important as it is to most people, when people are starving to death," he said.

President Bush will visit Somalia for New Year's. The White House announced Tuesday that Bush will arrive on Dec. 31 in time to spend the holiday with U.S. troops.

"The president's visit will demonstrate United States' concern for the people of Somalia, our commitment to humanitarian assistance and our support for American and United Nations forces," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali also plans to visit Somalia. Officials said Tuesday he would go early in January, either before or after he attends a meeting of Somali political factions in Ethiopia on Jan. 4.

At the United Nations, Boutros-Ghali insisted Tuesday that the U.S.-led force stay until it disarms all Somalia's roving gunmen. Bush favors a more limited mission and said he would like to pull out American troops next month.

The two rival warlords who control the divided halves of the capital, Mogadishu, were continuing Tuesday to move their heavy weaponry out of the shattered seaside city.

Peck, the Marine spokesman, said four U.S. Air Force vehicles and one Marine vehicle happened into a firefight between rival clan forces near the former U.S. Embassy on Tuesday, but there were no injuries to American personnel.

"Our guys just stumbled onto it and everybody split. No harm, no foul on our part. Nobody was hit," Peck said.

Peck said each side had moved about 40 tanks, armored vehicles and so-called "technicals" — cars and trucks mounted with machine guns or light cannons — to holding areas outside the capital.

After the Marines and Legionnaires take Bardera and Hoddur, they will move into Belet Huen near the Ethiopian border in western Somalia, and remote Gailalassi, on Sunday and Monday.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said an Italian army contingent would arrive in Gailalassi and a Canadian force would take Belet Huen.

That will complete the list of eight target towns the coalition set for itself before Marines arrived in Somalia on Dec. 9.

More than 900 Turkish troops were expected to arrive in late December to join Operation Restore Hope, said a statement from the Turkish embassy in Nairobi, Kenya.

The United States now has 8,400 troops on the ground and 9,000 sailors and Marines at sea off Somalia, Williams said.

Peck said the force was about two weeks ahead of schedule, largely because it has met no opposition and has been able to commit smaller units than planned to the taking of the towns of Beli Dogle, Baidoa and Kismayu after Mogadishu.

But the Marines were not taking any chances, and planned to move into Bardera with a reinforced battalion of 1,000 troops. Bardera is held by Gen. Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan, one of the most ruthless commanders in Siad Barre's former army.

Morgan planned and executed the bombing raids that reduced the northern Somalia town of Hargeisa to rubble in the civil war that preceded the dictator's downfall in January 1991.

Peck said U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley would visit Bardera today, the day before the Marines move in.

With one exception, Oakley also visited Mogadishu, Beli Dogle, Baidoa and Kismayu before coalition forces moved in.

APPOINT: President-elect taps Christopher, Aspin for state, defense

governor who during his campaign sought to shed a reputation as being a lightweight on foreign affairs, seemed to signal a preference for experienced professionals over the younger generation of foreign policy intellectuals.

Indeed, in contrast to these intellectuals, who have produced a growing body of philosophical writings on the world after the Cold War, those on Clinton's national security team have revealed little of their views on the major foreign policy issues facing the United States.

Instead, Clinton seemed to choose the group more out of a sense that it would work together as a team, avoiding clashes that have often characterized relations between the Departments of State and Defense, or between the secretary of state and the national security adviser.

In selecting Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Clinton turned once again to Congress to fill a critical position in his administration.

Aspin said his primary challenges will be coping with reducing the size of the military while maintaining readiness in a changing global environment.

"The Clinton team faces a big job with a big payoff for America and I am proud to be part of it," Aspin said.

Clinton has already selected Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the Finance Committee chairman, and Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D- Calif., who heads the House Budget Committee, to major economic posts.

Rep. Mike Espy, D-Miss., is still considered the leading contender to become secretary of agriculture.

Christopher, 67, is a Los Angeles lawyer who was deputy secretary of state under Carter and has become a close Clinton adviser as well as his transition director.

He said his appointment Tuesday was a "dream come true" and said Clinton was right when he said that domestic and foreign policy concerns must hold equal sway now that the Cold War has ended.

"In confronting these new challenges, we must remain cognizant that a great power requires not only military might but a powerful economy at home, an economy prepared for global competition," Christopher said. "In today's world, that means that foreign policy and domestic policy must be addressed simultaneously, not sequentially, or else neither will be successful for very long."

Clinton also used his national security appointments to demonstrate his commitment to what Vice President-elect Albert Gore Jr. called the need "to build a bipartisan base of support for diplomacy through strength and for an activist U.S. role in the world."

Woolsey is a conservative Democrat and confidant of both President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. A retired army captain, Woolsey worked as Scowcroft's chief aide on a commission he headed in the early 1980s that recommended development of the mobile, single-warhead intercontinental ballistic missile known as the Midgetman.

If he is to meet his self-imposed Christmas deadline for announcing all of his major Cabinet selections, Clinton must still appoint an attorney general, an interior secretary, an agriculture secretary and a transportation secretary.

Clinton said Tuesday that there was a "good chance" he could meet that deadline but that some other administration jobs, presumably White House staff, would not be filled until after the New Year.

A new possibility for either attorney general or White House counsel might be Zoe Baird, the general counsel for Aetna Life Insurance in Connecticut, who met with Clinton in Little Rock earlier this week.

Vernon Jordan, the transition chairman and the only man who had been thought to be under consideration for attorney general at one time, has taken himself out of the running for any administration job, a senior transition official said.

Clinton said Tuesday that Berger's national security deputies would be Nancy Soderberg, who advised him during the campaign, and Leon Fuerth, who advised Gore.

PICKS: Desire might dictate appointments.

ergy by Vice President-elect Al Gore.

On Monday, Clinton chose Hazel R. O'Leary, a black woman who worked in the Carter and Ford administrations, to head the Energy Department.

"He's casting aside people he knows very well and had planned to choose in favor of people he knows much less well who will help him reach his diversity goals," a top campaign adviser to Clinton said Tuesday.

The disappointment felt by Wirth, who is retiring from the Senate, was deepened by the fact that the Interior Department had been his first choice, but he had been persuaded to take the Energy post after campaigning hard for the Clinton-Gore ticket.

His friends have blamed a variety of outside pressures for his omission from the Cabinet, from hostility by Republican senators to pressure being exerted by leading Democrats with different energy interests from his.

But some Democrats or their spokesmen denied they had sought to block his appointment to a Cabinet post.

"That is bunk," Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, whose state produces coal, said through his press secretary. And Sen. J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, whose state is a leading oil producer, called Wirth his friend and said he had recommended to Thomas F. McLarty, the president-elect's chief of staff, that he be named interior secretary or energy secretary.

Clinton and Gore both denied on Monday that they had any fears that Wirth could be confirmed by the Democratic-controlled Senate, which acts on all Cabinet nominations, but the two all but acknowledged that pressure for more women in the Cabinet was a factor in the Energy Department decision.

Even so, Clinton has shown resentment over complaints about the number of women in his Cabinet. At one point during his news conference on Monday, he denounced feminist "bean counters," saying, "They are playing quota games."

The likely selection of Babbitt as trade representative would do more for Clinton than just help him approach his campaign promise to provide "a government that looks like America." Because of the high respect in which the Arizonan is held, it would probably quell weeks of bitter struggling between Washington's rival camps of free trade advocates and managed trade defenders.

"There are these incredible wars going on around here," said a congressional aide who has been on Capitol Hill since the mid-1970s. "It's just completely unprecedented in my time here."

The selection of Babbitt also would reflect a concern for overcoming congressional obstacles to agreement on the North American Free Trade Agreement and a new world trade agreement.

Some Clinton advisers recommended this approach, even though a politician might take a long time to learn the minutiae of trade and might not be well suited to negotiating further trade agreements.

The 45-year-old Richardson was elected to a sixth term in November and named a chief deputy whip by Speaker Thomas S. Foley this month.

Jim Maddy, the league's executive director, said that by his group's ratings, Richardson "has scored regularly 80 percent or higher, and that is a very good record."

But Maddy's group and three or four others sent a letter to Clinton on Tuesday saying they wanted someone devoted to their cause and urging him to give the Interior Department position to Babbitt or Wirth.

Peace on earth may be eluding our time

Peace on earth, good will towards men may be the sentiment of the season, but the fact that U.S. military troops were sent to Somalia earlier this month and remain there today as part of a United Nations Unified Task Force working to prevent mass starvations does not favor a peaceful holiday.

Neither do the divisions of Iraqi troops massed at the border of the Kurds' safe-haven enclave in Iraq, 700 to 800 miles north of Somalia. The Iraqi troops are supposedly there for "exercises," but it doesn't look that way judging from past hostilities directed at the Kurds by Saddam Hussein's forces. It looks a lot more like he plans to take advantage of the change of administrations to dispose of one of his nation's "internal" problems.

Then, of course, there's the Yugoslavian problem. Should the United States or other nations stick their noses in matters that, except for the humanitarian concerns, are domestic in nature?

On more Christmases than not war, hunger, poverty, disease, and hatred stalk much of the world. In actuality, there is little peace or good will on earth. The poor, the Scripture notes, will always be with us. And there will be wars and rumors of wars. Earthly trials will multiply.

That does not mean there is no point in attempting to alleviate suffering or to fail to do what is correct and good in this world. If anything, there is more cause to do what is good and just.

In that regard, it's good that the United States is heavily involved in the Somalian relief effort. In the event Saddam Hussein launches an "ethnic cleansing" mission against the Kurds, the U.N. forces now in Somalia might could be utilized to quickly provide protection for the Kurds in Iraq.

While finding the answer to possible intervention in Bosnia appears less likely, it's another hotspot that will no doubt keep peace at a distance for the next few months.

It looks at though there will be little peace during this Christmas season and little rest for President-elect Bill Clinton after he takes office next month.

OTHER VIEWS

Clinton's 'honeymoon' hides economic hope

President-elect Bill Clinton, at . . . his economic conference . . ., rightly told participants that "our national debt is a ball and chain dragging us down. . . . We must stop this cycle of borrow and spend economics."

Unfortunately, many in Congress have ready excuses for deficit spending. The latest: cutting spending would be bad for a sluggish economy.

Bankruptcy 1995, a new book by industrialist Harry Figgie, effectively argues that deficit spending has increased debt to the point that compounding of huge interest costs will make the nation unable to pay its bills by 1995. If present policies continue, Figgie says interest charges in 1994 will eat up 66 percent of federal revenue. He says lenders will stop loaning to the government when interest begins to devour virtually all revenues.

This warning stands in stark contrast to those who feel the economy is perking up and can rock along without major overhaul.

The new president has a critical honeymoon period with which to work with a new Congress — perhaps the first 100 days.

After that time, we'll soon see if we're headed toward unshackling ourselves from that $4 trillion "ball and chain."

Augusta, Ga.

George leaves goodbye gift of more regulations

The "regulation president" did it again. Not content with presiding over an 18 percent increase in regulation since taking office, George Bush is leaving the nation with a going-away present.

The administration is requiring the relabeling of nearly 300,000 food products. The change will require consistent nutrition information on labels for nearly all processed foods.

The question is, what will we know when we know what the new labels will tell us? Current labels already specify fat and cholesterol data.

To make full use of the labels, each person will need to translate the information into an appropriate diet for his or her weight, size, age, sex and general health, and then keep track of how much of everything is consumed in a day.

The cost of relabeling is estimated to be between $2 billion and $4 billion. However, Secretary of Health and Human Service Louis Sullivan claims that these expenditures will be offset by "multiple billions of dollars" in reduced health costs brought about by better nutrition.

Really? We've heard some pretty ridiculous statements from Washington over the years, but Sullivan's claim gets star billing.

Never mind that he didn't offer any proof to back up the assertion. He didn't have to. That the statement wasn't even challenged by the national media indicates how easily nonsense passes for science.

Even if most consumers read the labels — an unlikely supposition — it doesn't mean that more healthful behavior will automatically follow.

It apparently never occurred to anyone in Washington that if there really were a demand for the kind of detailed information that has been mandated, food companies would fall over each other to provide it.

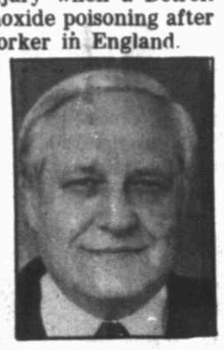

No. Consumers cannot expect to see the national health care bill tumble "multiple billions" of dollars. What we can expect is higher food prices, and more regulations.

Workers' comp claims drain business

WASHINGTON — Several years ago, a Michigan judge ruled that it was a work-related injury when a Detroit man died of carbon-monoxide poisoning after having sex with a co-worker in England.

Anderson

Domenico Signorelli, 37, was a project engineer for a Michigan automotive plant when he was asked to fly to England to visit a sister plant. One spring evening, the married man accompanied the 33-year-old secretary from the British plant to her Birmingham flat. They made love next to an apparently faulty gas heater. Both were overcome by the fumes. She recovered; he died a week later, having never regained consciousness.

The man's widow and two children collected on a $170,000 life insurance policy and then applied for workers' comp benefits. State Administrative Law Judge Leo LaPorte awarded the widow $167 a week for 10 years, ruling the fatal tryst was work-related with these words: "The deceased's work assignment in England exposed him to situations and hazards that were different in nature and degree than those found in Michigan. Man is by nature a social creature. It is not reasonable to expect that an employee who is on assignment to a distant land will simply stare at the walls of his hotel room after work." Another four years passed before a higher appeals court overruled the judge's decision and cut off the benefits.

The Signorelli case is a symbol of the ever-expanding parameters of what is considered a work-related injury and is deemed compensable. It's one example of what is driving the $60 billion-a-year workmen's comp system — a system bankrupting businesses, and state and local governments. The consensus of dozens of experts we interviewed suggests that at least 15 percent of the system is plagued by waste, which amounted to more than $9 billion in 1991.

For insurance investigators across the country, the examples abound — sometimes it takes sleuthing, other times a simple subscription to the local newspaper suffices. A New Jersey fisherman, for example, was collecting disability for a back injury. He'd been told by his doctor not to lift anything heavy. But he couldn't resist hoisting a 34-pound striped bass in a jubilant pose for a photographer from the local sports pages. An alert claims representative for his insurance company saw the picture and reeled in the man's benefits.

Insurance investigators interviewed by our associate Dale Van Atta also cite chutzpah in many of the cases. A Rhode Island employee got inebriated at a Christmas office party and fell out of a third-story window. The state Supreme Court ruled that the festivity was a work-related event because it was held on company time and property, and designed to benefit the employer by enhancing good labor-management relations. So the employee was awarded workers' comp benefits.

Then there's the case of Barbara Moran, a topless dancer in Pompano Beach, Fla. During a break from a double shift of drinking and dancing in April 1991, she drove into a concrete pillar. Paralyzed from the chin down, she won a $1.6 million settlement from the club's insurer. The workers' comp settlement was proper, in the view of Florida officials, because drinking was part of her job.

Investigators are also finding a new trend in workers' comp claims: emotional injuries. A jail guard in Massachusetts recently retired with disability checks for on-the-job stress. He had to retire, he argued, because fellow employees drew a face and a pair of glasses on an onion and put it where he could see it. The officer said the harassment, plus denial of a promotion, was too much to tolerate.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

President-elect practices safe politics

WASHINGTON — When Ed Koch was mayor of New York, he would plunge into the subways to ask riders "How'm I doin'?" (His Beijing look-alike, Zhu Rongji, is doin' fine.)

Safire

How does Bill Clinton after two-thirds of the interregnum? My criteria are his Cabinet choices, his economic outreach and last week's news conference.

1. Thirteen Yes-Persons and a Multiculturalist. Eisenhower's Cabinet was called "Eight Millionaires and a Plumber"; Lord Grenville's star-studded government, after the death in 1806 of William Pitt, was dubbed "the Ministry of All the Talents" (changed within a year to "all the hacks"). What conclusions can we draw about the coming Clinton administration from the Cabinet choices so far?

"I didn't want a Cabinet of strangers," he says. In a sense, that's a pity; the stranger in the Nixon Cabinet was George Shultz at Labor, who turned out to be the best of the bunch. Clinton's Labor choice, Robert Reich, abandoned his intrusive idea of mandatory job-training spending by business within a week of his nomination, a sensible if gutless retreat; we can hope he is more stalwart about espousing free trade. (Organized labor got its feeble payoff with a protectionist Council of Economic Advisers.)

The Bentsen-Altman team at Treasury along with the Panetta-Rivlin duo at Budget and Ron Brown at Commerce offer a clear indication that Ross Perot's message got through: working with Congress to reduce the deficit is the top priority, which is a good thing. To appear to offer economic stimulus, Clinton will spread about some roads-and-bridges pork under the name of "infrastructure investment," but that is only to get credit for the recovery that is taking place on its own; it will hardly offset the $15 billion in tax refunds that George Bush handed out a year early.

Democratic lefties will get their share of rhetoric and symbolism, more important to them than real money. The sop to the liberal Cerberus is Donna Shalala, reputed high priestess of political correctness, whose multicultural passion will be harmless enough if accompanied by the promised health and welfare reforms.

The leaked intention of nominating a woman (preferably with a law degree) to be attorney general is blatantly sexist; I hope it is offset by nominating a man to be treasurer of the U.S., which would be a modern first. (Hang the cost of putting in a men's room at the Mint.) The only group not given its quota so far is Republicans; I'd like to see Carla Hills at the State Department, but that, along with the NSC, is supposedly set for Carter II.

Will the Senate's prim Tower Rule be applied to the Clinton choices? The first Republican to drag sex practice or preference into the confirmation hearings will get a zap from us partisans of privacy, but at least a couple of the newcomers can expect to be roughed up; Clinton properly warned of going "beyond the Pale."

2. The Little Rock Economic Seminar. The object was to show "the presidency is in the details," like God and the Devil; the televised wonkmanship was an exercise in public involvement, and the president-elect succeeded in showing the world he can stay awake through a morning meeting.

3. News Conference Preparation. In last week's introduction of Henry Cisneros, Clinton quietly launched his '96 campaign against Jack Kemp, describing HUD as "an agency that badly needs reform and revitalization."

Asked about the murder of Israeli soldiers followed by the two-year expulsion of members of the Hamas terrorist group, Clinton avoided the standard State Department Arabism. He said: "I share the anger and the frustration and the outrage of the Israeli people . . . on the other hand, I am concerned that this deportation may go too far . . ."

To an astute question about the wisdom of appointing a veterans' advocate to head Veterans Affairs, Clinton argued that with a couple of veterans lobbyists in charge, he will be better able to get "a serious attempt at eligibility reform." That means he expects the former lobbyists to sell out their constituency by denying expected health benefits. Either Clinton is kidding himself or us.

How's he doing? Our next president is practicing safe politics. He runs the risk of running no risk.

Aspen resorts might miss the non-skiers

I've just returned from Aspen even though I am not a skier. I haven't skied in some of the greatest winter resorts in the world. I know that this is a terrible thing to admit. It's like saying, "I'm in sales but I don't play golf." But that's the way it is.

Buchwald

I go to places like Aspen because I enjoy sitting in hotel lobbies in front of large fireplaces, drinking hot chocolate and talking about weather conditions on the various mountains that I haven't been on.

I also like to go into town and try on ski clothes and buy Briko's snow goggles to wear over my wool cap.

Occasionally I'll meet another person who doesn't ski, and then we'll throw snowballs at each other.

But this year Barbra Streisand spoiled my non-skiing vacation because the citizens of Colorado voted on Election Day for something called Amendment 2. It voids and prevents the adoption of legislation that protects homosexuals from discrimination. In other words, towns in Colorado may no longer pass any laws protecting gay people.

Aspen voted down Amendment 2, by a margin of three to one, yet Ms. Streisand has urged her fellow movie stars to boycott the town to teach Colorado a lesson.

Since I don't ski, I had time to find out what was going on. It turns out that the good citizens of Aspen were being punished for something that the more conservative Coloradans had done.

"We didn't do it," said Bertha Braddock, who sold me a pair of earmuffs. "Barbra Streisand is just mad because her former boyfriend has a house here."

The bartender at Little Nell's said, "Hollywood is divided. It's a little easier to boycott Aspen if you stay in a hotel than it is if you own a $4 million house on the side of the mountain. The reason the Hollywood boycotters are picking on Aspen is that the press will write about us. The networks sure as heck aren't going to send Tom Brokaw or Mike Wallace to Grand Junction."

What bothered me the most was that the Streisand boycott was aimed at skiers and non-skiers alike. As one of the latter I didn't want to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. On the other hand, when you use up all your free airline mileage to go to a resort that Barbra doesn't approve of, you have to take sides. If I had known how she felt I might easily have chosen not to ski somewhere else — like Sun Valley or Sundance.

I tried to fax Ms. Streisand for further instructions, but her fax is unlisted as is her boycott number. I decided to leave word on her answering machine. I asked her to tell me where everyone was going so that I wouldn't be stuck with a bunch of lift tickets which non-skiers use to go up the gondola for lunch.

Most of the people who struggle to earn a living in Aspen are talking about boycotting Streisand's films.

A ski equipment store owner told me, "If we don't eat — she doesn't eat. The rich folks have to use some common sense when it comes to dumping on the working stiffs."

I now have a mission since returning from Aspen. I am here to speak for the non-skiers who, in most ski resorts, are more of a minority than gay people.

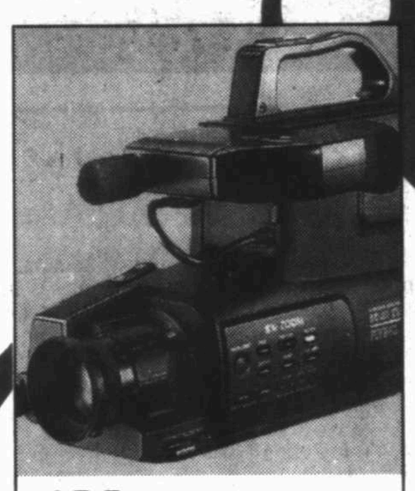

I'm not saying that Barbra Streisand doesn't have a right to tell people to stay away from Aspen, but she would be doing a much better service if she asked her Hollywood friends to avoid the Rocky Mountain nuclear waste's ski trails.

Palestinians remain in 'no man's land' as courts uphold deportations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's highest court on Tuesday upheld the deportation of 415 Palestinians and rejected appeals that the men stranded in southern Lebanon should be returned because their lives are in danger.

The seven judges accepted the military's assurances the Palestinians were safe and said they are on Lebanese soil and are Lebanon's responsibility.

It was the second time in six days that the court rejected appeals by civil rights lawyers to bring back the deportees. The rulings gave Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government a domestic boost in the midst of the international criticism the expulsion has provoked.

The ruling is not the court's final word. Last week, it gave the government 30 days to prove it acted legally in expelling the Palestinians immediately and bypassing normal appeals procedures.

The Supreme Court has never overturned a deportation order.

Faisal Husseini, the leader of the Palestinian delegation to the Middle East peace talks, said on Israel television the court took a "mistaken political decision" that "has buried the peace process."

Israel expelled the men, alleged activists of the Hamas and Islamic Jihad groups, after six Israeli troopers were killed earlier this month in incidents blamed on fundamentalists.

The Palestinians, all from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, have been stuck in a tent camp in southern Lebanon since the Lebanese government refused them passage north.

The Palestinians have nowhere to go unless permitted to cross through Lebanon to neighboring countries, but the government is refusing them entry into territory it controls, and the Israeli army will not let it past the "security zone" it occupies in southern Lebanon.

On Tuesday, the Lebanese government banned all relief agencies from delivering supplies to the deportees.

U.N. chief Boutros Boutros-Ghali said he was planning to send one of his top envoys to Jerusalem to try to resolve the deportee issue.

The departure date of Undersecretary-General James Jonah, a Senegalese, has not been announced, but Israel Radio reported that the Israeli government agreed to his visit.

At least five deportees were wounded Monday when they tried to march back into Israeli-held territory in Lebanon, according to reporters at the encampment.

Rabin told a parliamentary committee that he personally gave approval to lob "several mortar shells and one tank shell" 500-to 1,000 yards from the marchers, Israel radio said.

The Israeli army concluded no one was injured in the shelling, the radio quoted him as saying. But Associated Press reporters at the scene saw four wounded deportees.

Rabin insists he acted to defend the U.S.-sponsored peace process from extreme provocations by Muslim groups that reject Israel's right to exist.

Yossi Sarid of the Meretz bloc, Rabin's leftist coalition partner, said the deportations made no sense unless Israel followed up by ending its longstanding refusal to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"The deportation was only half the job," he said. "If there's no other half, it will have been a blunder. The other half is first and foremost to talk to the PLO."

Civil rights lawyers told the court that since Lebanon refused to accept the men, the deportation was incomplete and the deportees remained Israel's responsibility.

Israel must return the men because it cannot guarantee their safety in a no man's land, the lawyers said.

But Israel's military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, told the court: "In my opinion, there is no danger to the health or safety of the deportees as long as they do nothing unreasonable."

However, Barak warned that if they again tried to march toward Israel, "if they get near the transit point, warning shots will be fired again."

A state attorney, Nili Arad, said the deportations were completed because the Palestinians were on sovereign Lebanese soil and not in a no man's land.

Lawyer Avigdor Feldman, acting for one of the deportees, said that faced with an uncertain situation, the Supreme Court opted for the argument that the deported men are safe. "Let's hope they are right," he said.

Milosevic leads Serbian election; opposition claims race is rigged

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — In a vote foreign observers called fraudulent, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic appeared certain Tuesday of re-election as sanctions cripple the nation and Milosevic faces accusations of war crimes.

The re-election of Milosevic, widely blamed for fomenting war in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia, could further isolate Yugoslavia and hasten foreign military intervention against ethnic Serbs fighting in Bosnia.

With about 40 percent of the vote from Sunday's polling counted, Milosevic led with 55 percent, while his challenger moderate federal Premier Milan Panic had about 35 percent, the state news agency Tanjug reported.

Panic, a California millionaire, said the absence of any turnout figures showed the vote was rigged.

Turnout levels were being withheld "so that the numbers of votes won by each candidate will not exceed the total turnout," said Panic in a statement carried by Tanjug.

Milosevic has been named, along with other Serbian and Croatian figures, as a possible war criminal by Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger.

Still, Milosevic, a former Communist, is admired by many Serbs as a strong leader willing to protect Serbs outside Serbia, the larger of the two remaining Yugoslav republics, and stand up to the international community. He has bolstered his support by dominating state electronic media, the only source of news for many villagers.

Opposition leaders were considering boycotting parliament to protest the alleged vote-rigging, said Vuk Draskovic, a leader of an opposition coalition called DEPOS.

Foreign observers said Sunday's balloting was riddled with flaws and irregularities, including the absence of likely opposition supporters from voter lists.

A statement from the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, a 51-member alliance that sent observers to oversee the elections, called the balloting "seriously flawed."

Lady Olga Maitland, a British observer, said one apartment block in a middle-class area thought to be pro-Panic had been wiped from electoral lists.

Draskovic charged that Milosevic supporters had stolen the election by stuffing ballot boxes after polls closed. There also were many reports of polls running out of ballots.

Journalist proposes women to entertain troops

By Elaine Kurtenbach
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — A proposal to send women to entertain Japanese soldiers in Cambodia has angered activists working to help Asian women forced to have sex with Japanese troops during World War II.

Writing in "Katei no Tomo" (Family Companion), a magazine published by the Society of St. Paul, free-lance journalist Takao Tokuoka suggested Japan send women to Cambodia to help prevent its soldiers from contracting AIDS.

"It is cruel to order such healthy, young men to spend six months (there)," Tokuoka wrote in the Catholic group's magazine. "I'm not joking when I propose sending 'comfort women.'"

The term "comfort women" is a euphemism in Japanese to describe the 75,000 to 200,000 women forced to have sex with Japanese soldiers during World War II.

Confronted with historical evidence of government involvement in running the wartime brothels, Japan began acknowledging that role only this January. Since then, hundreds of Asian women have demanded apologies and compensation for their suffering.

Keiko Usui, spokeswoman for the activist Group to Clarify Japan's Postwar Responsibilities, said the article was evidence that men still view sex as a service in Japan.

"Although many of these 'comfort women' have testified about their hardships, this is still part of the basic mentality among Japanese men," Usui said.

Tokuoka, who was not available for comment, apparently was proposing that Tokyo send Japanese women to entertain the 600 troops it has sent to Cambodia for U.N. peacekeeping operations.

"They wouldn't necessarily have to have sex with the men. They can play music, pour tea and just make the atmosphere more gentle," the 62-year-old former reporter for the newspaper Mainichi wrote.

Michiharu Yamaguchi, editor of "Katei No Tomo," said he felt it was "careless" to have published the article.

"Since we do not want this controversy to spread any further, we hope you understand we have stopped supplying copies of the November issue," Yamaguchi said.

Controversy surrounds sex-education flyer

Council to present report to Legislature

Staff report

The Adolescent Pregnancy and Parenthood Advisory Council (APPAC) will be presenting a report to the 73rd Texas Legislature in January.

The committee has released a report explaining the meaning of some language used in the report which has caused controversy.

APPAC has stated it is recommending "a multi-programmed approach to sex education to include the family, church and schools in the provision of mandated, age-appropriate, comprehensive, scientifically valid human sexuality education for all children/youth.

The committee defines that statement as:

■ In relation to schools, APPAC supports "mandated," as opposed to the current situation of "recommended" sex education with local school districts continuing to determine content and curriculum choice.

■ Age-appropriate means that the content is suitable to the development level of the child or youth.

■ Comprehensive means a curriculum which includes both abstinence and contraception information and creates the opportunity for integrated, developmental education with sexual behaviors considered along with other components of sexuality, such as self-esteem, sexual responsibility, values, relationships and decision making.

■ Scientifically valid means that the content is based on sound research conducted by trained, competent and well-qualified individuals, subjected to peer review, and published in respected professional journals.

■ Document allegedly contains misinformation about state-mandated curriculum.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Sex education. The very words strike terror in the hearts of parents who say a parental duty may be taken away from them by the schools.

However, health professionals across the United States say too many parents aren't doing their jobs informing their children about sex and AIDS, and what teen-agers don't know may kill them.

In Midland, flyers are being distributed describing an alleged state-mandated sex curriculum and a legislative bill that will demand children be taught "explicit" and inappropriate information such as teaching about sex acts to kindergarteners.

The explicit curriculum is being wrongly attributed to have come from APPAC (the Adolescent Pregnancy and Parenthood Advisory Council), The Texas Legislature, and SIECUS (Sex Information and Education Council of the United States).

On Monday, a flyer with misinformation was distributed at BTA Oil Producers, according to employee Eileen Wilks. The flyer was purported to have belonged to a Fannin fifth-grade teacher who said the two-page document was given to all teachers in Midland Independent School District.

That information about possible radical state-mandated sex education was distributed to all MISD teachers is "absolutely untrue," according to Ted Miller, MISD spokesman.

Miller said, "We put in an employee newsletter that we do have a packet of information from APPAC — which is supposed to have met again Dec. 18 — and some teachers have called to receive the packet."

Similar flyers were distributed at a local Baptist church on Monday night, according to some callers to the Reporter-Telegram.

The flyer distributed at BTA Oil listed addresses for parents to write to protest sex education, including the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers in Austin.

Youth to show livestock

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

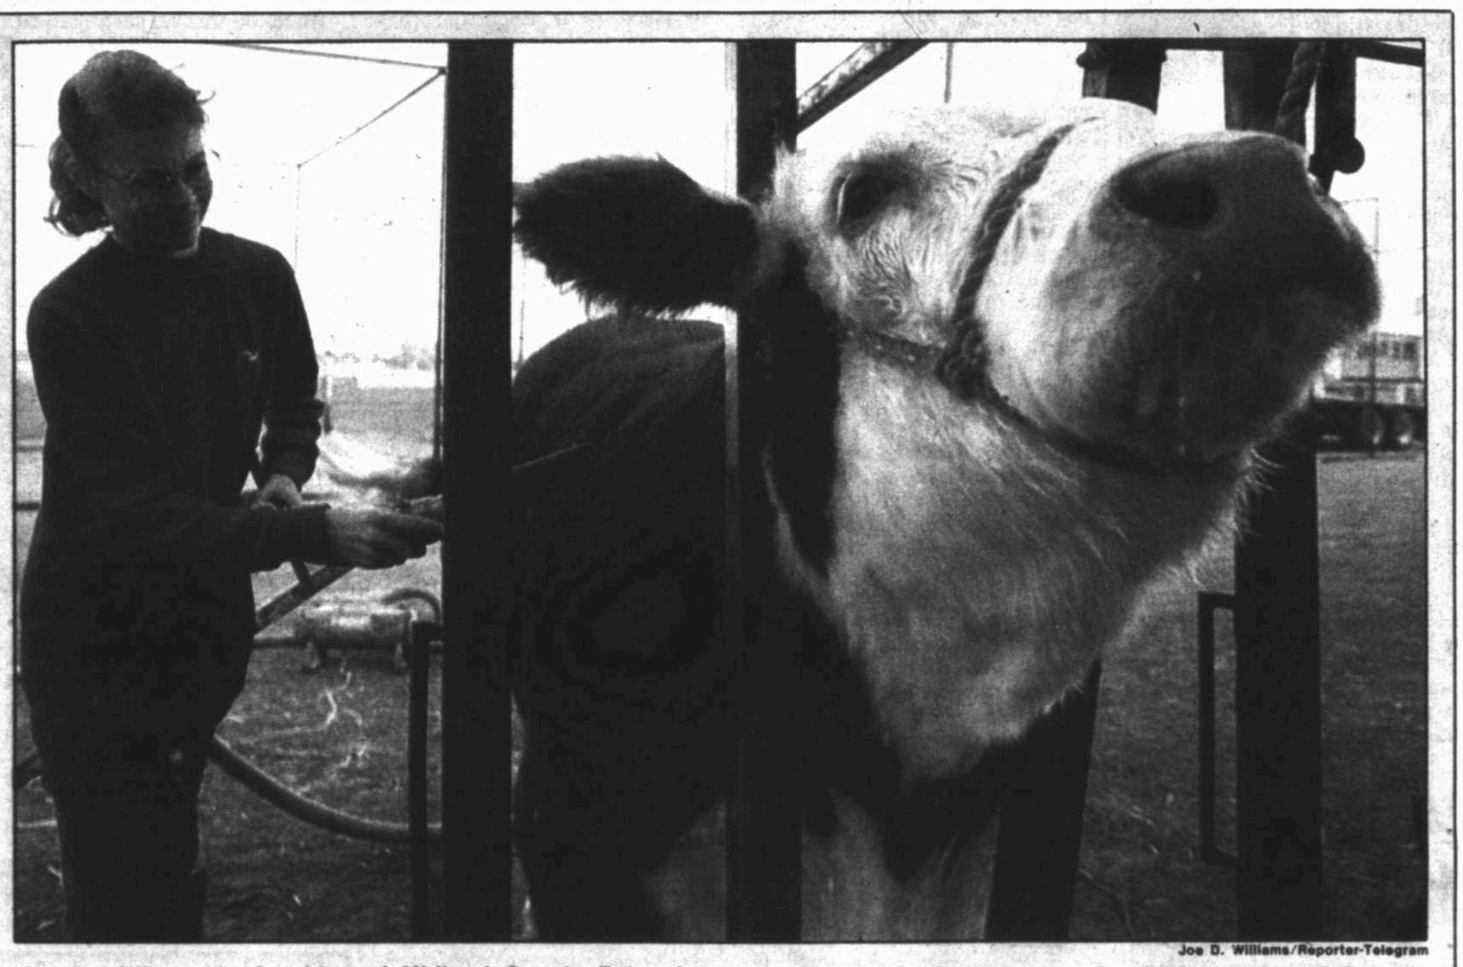

Animals large and small will be shown by young exhibitors at the Midland County Livestock Show Jan. 6 through Jan. 9 at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

In the meantime, 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America members are feeding, watering and grooming their show calves, lambs, swine, goats, chickens and rabbits for the four-day show.

"We've got a large number of families and kids involved in the show," said Earnest Kiker, Midland County's agricultural agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "The quality (of livestock) is real good."

Before the Midland show, some youngsters, including Kiker's 12-year-old daughter, Jessica, are grooming their Hereford stock to show at the Sand Hills Hereford & Quarter Horse Show that begins Dec. 31 at the Ector County Coliseum in Odessa.

"I'm taking them everywhere (to other livestock show across Texas)," said Jessica, who lives in the Greenwood area. "Hopefully, I'll sell two in Odessa."

Jessica Kiker, 12, daughter of Midland County Extension Agent Earnest Kiker, grooms Mister Sid, a Hereford steer she will enter in the upcoming Sandhills Hereford & Quarter Horse Show and PRCA Rodeo.

Jessica, who started showing calves at age 9, said her father "really didn't make me start" working with livestock.

■ Midland Arts Assembly board awards grant for nose art restoration.

By Katherine Poteet

The Confederate Air Force/American Airpower Heritage Museum will be able to restore part of its World War II aircraft nose art thanks to a grant from the Midland Arts Assembly Board of Trustees.

The board awarded the museum's preservation project, called "Save the Girls," $3,000 on Nov. 23.

"We have a very large collection, but only five pieces are on display," said Barbi Woods, public relations coordinator for the Confederate Air Force Headquarters. "Most of the pieces are stored in crates and waiting to be restored."

A small number of the museum's 33 pieces, taken from World War II aircraft, have been renovated, but Ms. Woods said the museum is looking for more money to finish the project.

Local unemployment rate jumps sharply

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Midland's unemployment rate took a sharp turn upward in November, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission Tuesday.

The TEC reported the city's unemployment rate rose to 8 percent from 7.3 percent during November, and is up sharply from 5.8 percent in November 1991.

One hundred Midlanders joined the civilian labor force during November, boosting it to 49,700 from 49,600, the same level it was at a year earlier.

However, total employment fell by 300 during the month, to 45,700 from 46,000; total employment a year ago was 46,700.

The gains in the civilian labor force, in addition to the loss of 300 jobs during the month, resulted in an increase in total unemployment of 400, to 4,000 from 3,600; total unemployment last year was 2,900.

The TEC said that "it is not unusual for unemployment to increase in November as those seeking to re-enter the labor force for seasonal work swell the labor force ranks. In addition, it appears employers delayed seasonal hiring as they waited to see what direction the economy would take."

Odessa's unemployment rate also took a sharp increase in No-

Daydreams, fantasies are not just for children

In a way it is probably good — indeed healthy — that reality eventually settles in; still, every once in awhile a tiny part of us wishes our adolescent dreams could go on forever.

Ott

It's normal. As children we see a TV program about cowboys and Indians, and immediately our minds conjure up vivid images of us riding side-by-side with Roy Rogers and his band of good guys.

Or maybe we attend a James Bond movie. By closing our eyes and letting our imagination run wild we are able to become super spies, single-handedly defeating evil and, at the same time, winning the hearts — and bodies — of gorgeous women.

Or perhaps it is a televised college football game that catches our attention. Amid the glamor and pageantry, we fantasize about scoring the winning touchdown and becoming "big man on campus."

Ahh, to be a child again when the sky is the limit and nothing, no matter how bizarre it might seem, is beyond our reach. If we want something bad enough, all we have to do is dream a bit more extravagantly.

Life is grand when you are 8 years old.

But then something dreadful happens.

We begin to age. Suddenly, our dreams become more realistic . . . and boring. Instead of gunning down a gang of outlaws, we are content to merely survive another day without having something really terrible happen, like, for example, finding a new wrinkle on our face.

Actually, it is more than that. We come to the realization that, despite all our childhood dreams, we will never be a gun-totin' cowboy, a 007 clone or even a football hero.

While we weren't looking, those dreams passed us by.

It doesn't seem fair. Why do children get to have all the fun? I mean, it's not like we're over the hill.

I might be 40 years old, but it's a young 40. Besides, who determined that middle-aged men can't dream, anyway? Not me, that's for sure.

There are plenty of things out there I can still fantasize about.

Here are just a few of them:

■ Gladys Knight and the Pips will make a dramatic comeback and I will be the smooth-moving Pip in the middle. So step aside, my man, and watch Mr. Cool strut his stuff. Today the Pips, tomorrow the Temptations.

■ I will spend 25 years living in southern California and not once will I wear a flowery shirt that is unbuttoned to the navel. It's not that I don't have the chest for it, mind you, I just happen to be one of those painfully shy people who believes certain body parts should only be revealed in the privacy of one's home.

■ Hollywood will do a remake of "Casablanca" with me starring in the Humphrey Bogart role. "Here's looking at you, kid."

■ Taking all the knowledge I have absorbed over the years, I will become a guru of sorts, sitting cross-legged on a mountaintop entertaining questions from the masses regarding the meaning of life. With my long flowing white hair and beard, I will spend days in quiet meditation pondering the paradoxical dilemmas facing modern-day society, such as, "Why are innocent children allowed to die when evil adults seem to live forever?" Or, "If AIDS is God's way of punishing homosexuals, why aren't lesbians also affected?" And, finally, "Why don't more people consider 'My Mother the Car' a TV classic?"

■ Following that unsuccessful stint as a guru, I will become a TV preacher . . . but one with a new twist. After ranting and raving — and sweating profusely — for 45 minutes, I will abruptly turn to my electronic flock and say unto them, "Keep your money. I don't need it." My followers will look on in horror, and then burst out laughing.

■ Bullfighting will become the most popular sport in America and I will be this country's most magnificent matador. But after the battle has been fought, and I have reigned supreme, instead of killing the bull I will buy him a drink and the two of us will retire to Sloppy Joe's in Key West where we will spend the next several hours swapping Ernest Hemingway stories.

If you're going to dream, you might as well do it with gusto. And, it doesn't get any better than whiskey-drinking bulls who have an appreciation for American literature.

"The Far Side" has nothing on me.

SEX: Flyer contains misinformation of the TCPT, said flyers of this type have caused his office to receive "an average of about 15 letters a day damning us for having a representative on APPAC."

"People say it's the worse thing we have ever done," he said. "The Texas PTA has served on the committee. However, we don't necessarily agree with nor support everything being recommended."

In a statement at a recent PTA convention, then-president Shirley Igo said that the Texas PTA served on APPAC because the organization "takes seriously its commitment to children, and equally its responsibility to work for parent involvement in all areas that affect the health, welfare and education of those children."

Some parents who are incensed about the purported sex education curriculum "are very, very concerned and very loving," Synder said. "They just are not getting all of the information."

Ms. Wilks, who took the time to acquire an actual 1990 APPAC report, said "much of their recommendations have been distorted" (in the flyer being distributed at her office). "It's upsetting to have people just plain passing out propaganda," she said.

The flyer Ms. Wilks had listed the names and addresses of "APPAC members and steering committee members" for concerned citizens to contact. With the exception of Shirley Igo — past president of the Texas PTA who is no longer with the PTA — none of the names on the flyer were listed as members of APPAC, or were ever involved with APPAC, according to that organization.

"Good heavens, whoever is preparing those flyers is going by information from 1990," said a spokesman from the Texas Department of Human Services. TDHS has a complete list of APPAC former and present members.

"Most of those people were honorary steering committee members who remained inactive and never attended a single meeting, with the exception of Shirley Igo, and the Rev. Weston Ware, who was very active in the Texas Summit."

"We used to see flyers with misinformation about what APPAC is about. Now we are seeing flyers with SIECUS guidelines being attributed to APPAC," the TDHS spokesman said.

"There is a fear that parental authority is going to be usurped. And there is a fear that sex education recommendations will become law as an overnight decision. The truth is: APPAC's report is liable to be put on the back burner during the 73rd legislative session."

"There are a few things (in the flyer) which resemble the truth, and one that is accurate, but most things have been distorted," Ms. Wilks said. "The good thing about this is that everybody — all over the place — is discussing this. They are worked up enough to find out the truth."

In an interim report issued in October, APPAC said that some parents and organizations "have alleged that APPAC has not given sufficient priority to abstinence as an appropriate strategy to reducing teen pregnancy.

"In fact, in our 1990 report, we explicitly called for sexuality education curricula that 'will promote postponement of sexual activity.' We also called for education addressing the needs of teens that are sexually active in Texas resulting in one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in the nation and placing thousands more at high risk to sexually transmitted diseases."

"APPAC believes that age-appropriate and developmentally appropriate information about the human person and human sexuality is constructive and wholesome," the report said.

"If parents were doing their jobs, we wouldn't have to do this (develop sex education)," Snyder said. "But, teen pregnancy has reached epidemic proportions in Texas. We have the highest rate of teen pregnancies under age 14 in the nation. We have the fourth highest rate of teen pregnancies for ages 15-19," he said.

"It's too bad this has to happen," Snyder said. "Some parents are doing an excellent job of informing their children, but others are not, and the Texas PTA has to stand for all kids."

State Rep. Tom Craddick, contacted at his Midland office Tuesday, said he has received several hundred letters against having state-mandated sex education.

He noted that no such mandate exists at this time and that APPAC is slated to give a report on its recommendations during the next legislative session.

"Most people seem to think this is already in effect, when what APPAC is presenting is a report. The Legislature has not voted on it," he said.

In order for the report to become law, a bill would have to be drafted and successfully voted on. "Then we could make changes on that report or it would stay the same," Craddick said.

The state representative from Midland said he thinks it is likely that a bill will be introduced based on APPAC's recommendations. "Whether it will pass or not, I can't say. I would guess it won't pass."

Craddick said he has not seen the APPAC report. "We have no idea what will be in the report, but I wouldn't be voting on the report. I would be voting on the bill."

He said APPAC was charged with recommending what should and shouldn't be taught in Texas schools concerning sexuality curriculum.

He also said Midlanders were heartily against their schools teaching sex education. "I haven't received one letter in favor of it," he said.

Lindsey Dingmore, the spokesman in State Sen. Teel Bivin's office, said they have received about 150 letters against state-mandated sex education. "The lion's share is from Midland," he said. "We have letters mostly from Midland and some from Andrews. We have not seen one letter in favor of it yet.

Dingmore said the "biggest piece of misinformation is that people think we are considering legislation on this issue right now. It's not like we are debating this on the floor. The Legislature is not even in session."

Craddick said Midlanders are not overreacting due to information or alleged information from APPAC. "People need to be concerned now," he said. "It's better to be informed now than after the fact."

Donations to charities down, Salvation Army says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Salvation Army officials are blaming the sluggish economy, natural disasters and negative attitudes about charities for a drop this year in holiday donations around the state.

Maj. Henry Gonzalez, the San Antonio area commander, said he has seen a 20 percent drop in donations this year, although the need for services has increased 35 percent since 1991.

"We only have so much to give to charity," Gonzalez said Monday. "And now at Christmas time, the Salvation Army is having a hard time generating donations."

Salvation Army contributions also are reported down in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth for the same reasons.

"It really puts us in a dilemma — trying to make a decision of whether to provide services or reduce items," Gonzalez said. "We're leaning toward providing services. But we're being more selective of the people we serve."

About 4,500 San Antonio area families signed up for Christmas assistance this year. Gonzalez said more would have signed up if the Salvation Army had not stopped taking applications in late November.

"If you add all those up, and you have four to five in a family, that's a lot of people," Gonzalez said.

Because of the economy, Gonzalez said, people are out of work or worried about the future and "holding on to whatever they have." Others may be employed but are having trouble paying their bills, he said.

Other factors are natural disasters and negative feelings about charities, he said.

GRANT: CAF to restore nose art

who make donations strictly for the project," she said, adding that an exact dollar amount for the entire project would not be figured until March 1993.

The museum's collection is the largest authentic collection of World War II nose art and was obtained from a museum in Harlingen last year.

However, the pieces almost didn't make it to any museum. The World War II aircraft the art was taken from were scheduled to be destroyed and melted down at an aircraft conversion company in Walnut Ridge, Ark. The company owner, Minot Pratt, decided not to destroy the artwork and had his workers cut out the paintings that decorated the bombers.

Pratt originally wanted to make a fence out of the art, but his son talked him into sending it to Harlingen.

YOUTH: Livestock show set for Jan. 6-9 shows, and I wanted to be part of my daddy's life. When he goes off, I want to go with him," she said.

Last year, one of her calves placed 12th in its class at the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo.

"I enjoy working with them (the calves) — combing, blow-drying," feeding, watering and caring for the animals.

This year, Jessica is raising four head of livestock: three Hereford steers and a Simmental calf called Rojo. One of the big Hereford calves is Mister Sid.

Her father, who works with youth and their animal projects in livestock shows, said that 240 pigs, 180 lambs, and more than 50 steers have been validated.

Working with livestock projects teaches youth responsibility, Kiker said.

"And you just can't put a value to the learning experience that the kids obtain from working with livestock projects (such as) the experience that they gain and the bonding between the animals and the child."

"The whole family can work together and (have) fellowship and enjoy the activities" associated with caring for and showing livestock, Kiker said.

Greg Jones, the Martin County agricultural agent who is working with Kiker and Jessica in helping groom the calves, is also getting ready for the Martin County Livestock Show on Jan. 15 and 16 in Stanton.

"It teaches kids (about agriculture) and responsibility," Jones said of livestock projects.

And even if boys and girls, who are exposed to 4-H and FFA livestock projects, never make a career out of agribusiness, "their attitude toward farming and ranching will benefit agriculture."

The livestock program teaches youth "how to select quality livestock and how to get along with other people and how to win and how to lose (gracefully)," Jones said.

The Midland County show will begin with check-in from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Jan. 6.

Steers will be judged in the exhibit building's main ring at 6:30 p.m. on Jan. 7.

Lamb judging at 8:30 a.m. on Jan. 8 will be followed by judging of goats exhibited by 6-, 7- and 8-year-olds and by the judging of swine.

The judging of rabbits will be at 9 a.m. and will be followed by the judging of fryers.

The auction of 120 premium head of livestock will be directed by Snyder auctioneer Tommy Marricle at 1:20 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 9, in the main ring.

Before the livestock auction there is to be a barbecue luncheon at 11:30 a.m. The judging of goats exhibited by children 5 and under is to be at 12:45 p.m. and the awards presentation is to be at 1 p.m.

TEC: Unemployment rate up

vember, to 10.3 percent from 9.4 percent.

Of the TEC's 28 metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked 17th, tied with Brazoria and Killeen-Temple. Odessa ranked 24th.

Bryan-College Station had the state's lowest unemployment rate, 4 percent, followed by Austin with 5.2 percent, Amarillo with 5.7 percent, San Angelo with 6.1 percent and Victoria with 6.4 percent. McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the state's highest unemployment rate, 17 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate rose to 7.7 percent from 6.9 percent in October, despite the creation of 27,100 new jobs during the month of November.

Labor market analysts said Tuesday that an increase in the number of people looking for work resulted in the nearly 1 percent higher rate, which officials said does not account for economic changes caused by seasonal employment.

"Unemployed workers who had taken a reprieve from the job-hunting force rejoined the crowd, thinking many holiday seasonal jobs would be created," said Dianne Dobie, a supervising labor market analyst with the TEC. "But what happened was there were more workers searching for work than there were new jobs created."

"Many employers also wanted to wait and see what type of economic climate there would be for the holiday season before they began employing new help," Ms. Dobie said. "We're optimistic that things will look better in December."

The number of jobs created in November was double the number created a year ago, pushing the state's total labor force to 8.72 million workers.

Morales not interested in filling Bentsen's seat

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards, still looking for someone to appoint to the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Lloyd Bentsen, interviewed more prospects Tuesday amid reports that her list was growing shorter.

But one interviewee, Attorney General Dan Morales, has taken himself out of the running and another Republican has joined the fray.

Morales told the governor during an afternoon meeting that he is not interested in the job, according to Morales spokesman Ron Dusek.

"He said that he is running for attorney general and he is not a candidate for the Senate," Dusek said.

Richards said she was moving "very quickly" but denied having a short list of finalists.

"I really encourage you not to think that some decision is made, because it isn't," Richards said.

She again ruled out appointing herself. "I have no interest in making this race," she said.

Some news reports Tuesday suggested that U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston was high on Richards' list.

Asked about him, she described Andrews, 48, as "personable ... attractive. I think he has a constituency."

But then she immediately mentioned several more names: U.S. Reps. John Bryant and Martin Frost, both of Dallas, U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger and Morales.

Bryant met with Richards Tuesday. He said he didn't believe Richards had made up her mind, adding, "I'm not aware that I'm on a list or not on a list."

Frost and Krueger met with her on Monday. She also has talked with former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and his son Paul, 32, a Houston businessman.

With Bentsen becoming U.S. Treasury secretary, the Democratic governor will appoint an interim replacement to serve until a special election, probably in May. The winner will complete Bentsen's term, which runs through 1994.

Meanwhile, another Republican tossed his hat into the ring.

U.S. Rep. Jack Fields of Humble filed a statement of candidacy Tuesday, saying that expressions of support from friends and family have convinced him that he can win the race.

"Serving in the Senate will provide me with a larger forum in which to work for a better economic future for the state of Texas and all its citizens," Fields said.

Fields, 40, has served in Congress since 1981. He joins U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, as the second announced candidate in the race.

Barton declared his special election candidacy last week. Another Republican, state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, says her decision will be made soon.

Richards said she hoped to finish interviewing Senate prospects Tuesday, and perhaps make a decision before Christmas.

"I'd like to do it this week. I'd like to get it done ... It's occupying a tremendous amount of time," she said.

While not saying who she might appoint, Richards indicated that it could be a congressman. She said experience in a statewide election wasn't essential.

Andrews raised money for Richards' 1990 gubernatorial bid and has a sizeable support base in Houston that could boost his chances in a multi-candidate special election.

However, some Democrats noted, Andrews also was named as writing overdrafts on the U.S. House bank. That issue was raised by his Republican opponent in last month's elections, but Andrews was re-elected with 56 percent of the vote.

"I don't' think it makes much difference," Richards said. "I've looked at other races around the country where people had overdrafts ... and many of them were elected. Any human being is going to have negatives."

Without being specific, the governor hinted at the pressure she's getting from Democrats anxious to retain Bentsen's seat. The state's other senator is a Republican, Phil Gramm.

"You cannot satisfy everyone with one candidate," Richards said. "So the question is whether or not other candidates are going to get in (to an election race)."

An aide to Krueger said the Railroad Commissioner laid out his strengths in his meeting with Richards.

"Bob Krueger in 1990 got over 2 million votes — that's more than Kay Bailey Hutchison, that's more than Dan Morales, that's more than Ann Richards. It's more than Joe Barton has gotten in his whole career," said aide Roy Mullins.

He said Krueger also has indicated he might run regardless of whether he gets the appointment. "I don't think he would rule out taking a hard look at the race."

Houston transit authority to buy railroad land

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Metropolitan Transit Authority plans to buy 158 miles of railroad right of way for as much as $160 million to provide commuter rail, toll roads or hike and bike trails.

Metro chairman Billy Burge said a special board meeting has been called for Thursday to consider the deal, potentially the largest land deal ever made by the transit group.

Burge said the freight lines, now mostly unused, could be converted into commuter rail lines, a high-speed rail corridor, toll roads or hike and bike trails.

The plan is expected to include stretches to Missouri City, Eagle Lake and Navasota and would set aside some right of way for future needs.

Bullet ends life of preacher described as 'fine, gentle man'

ARLINGTON (AP) — Kenny Rose had it all. He had his own business, a loving family and a host of neighbors and friends who respected him.

But in a matter of seconds, the blissful life he had struggled to obtain was shattered by a murderer's bullet.

On Sunday night Rose, owner of an auto glass shop in east Fort Worth, died on the floor of his southwest Arlington home after a bullet punctured his chest.

Police investigating the homicide Tuesday said they had no leads.

"He never harmed anyone," said Rose's sister-in-law, Stephanie Armstrong. "He was a family man. Everything he did was strictly for and with his family."

The couple and their daughters, La Kenya 10, and La Kendra, 8, were sitting at their dining room table when a vehicle pulled into the drive.

Kenny Rose stepped outside to see who it was. Seconds later, La Tanya Rose, saw her husband stumble inside and collapse in the hallway.

The family caught a glimpse of a truck backing out of the drive.

"He said, 'I've been shot,' and fell," his mother, Dorothy Rose, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "La Tanya was calling 911 and his oldest girl was holding him in her arms."

La Kenya Rose tried to stop the bleeding by applying pressure to her father's chest. He died moments later.

Arlington police Sgt. Dixie Stout said police have interviewed neighbors, but no witnesses have been found.

Friends said Rose was a devout Christian who went out of his way to help others.

Three years ago, Rose took over the auto glass business his family has owned since 1973. The telephone at the shop rang continuously Monday and several teary-eyed customers dropped by to confirm reports of his death.

John Gray, 25, said Rose hired him to work in the shop after his business failed.

"When I lost my business about a year ago, he said come on down here and work," Gray said. "He helped me out when he didn't have to, but he just that kind of guy."

Trail of lights brings tourists to four cities

MARSHALL (AP) — A first-time alliance of Texas and Louisiana cities for a holiday tour of lights has boosted the number of visitors to them, officials said Tuesday.

And at least one other town is eager to join the tour.

"All of our numbers are up this year," said Janise McPherson, director of the Marshall Chamber of Commerce.

"Right now traffic is so bad, you can't hardly walk downtown," said Charles Powell, finance director for the city of Natchitoches, La., which has been putting on a big holiday lights display for 66 years.

The two cities, along with Jefferson, Texas, and Shreveport-Bossier City, La., jointly marketed their displays as the "Holiday Trail of Lights," targeting tour groups in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Each town boasts lights around hundreds of buildings and homes. Marshall and Jefferson are about 20 miles from Shreveport and Bossier City, which are on the Texas-Louisiana border. Natchitoches is about 70 miles southeast of Shreveport.

Many tours have set up two- or three-day trips.

Since the lights were turned on at Thanksgiving time, Marshall has hosted about 500 tour buses and provided guides for 275, Ms. McPherson said. Visitors represented 42 states and 18 foreign countries.

The tour had a $12 million economic impact on the community a year ago. It will be several months before a precise effect is measured for this year, Ms. McPherson said.

Business leaders in Kilgore, Texas, 20 miles west of Marshall, are exploring the possibility of joining the tour next year.

Kilgore, in the center of the East Texas Field, became nationally known for having hundreds of oil derricks in the 1930s and 1940s. During the holidays, many of the derricks were topped by lighted stars.

The Kilgore Historical Preservation Foundation, which has sponsored restoration of the derricks, and the local Chamber of Commerce are touting the lighted replicas.

"What we have is most unusual because what we are giving back to people are the memories of the past," said Sue Brown, president of the foundation.

"Even though we don't have the number of lights, it's a beautiful sight," she said. "It's nostalgic to the old-timers here because Kilgore has an identity of being a city of derricks."

Ms. McPherson of the Marshall chamber said Kilgore planners will meet other leaders of the lights tour in the spring.

"I'm sure the more, the merrier," said Natchitoches' Powell.

Airline official blames wind shear for plane crash in Portugal

By Christopher McDougall
Associated Press Writer

FARO, Portugal — Survivors of a Dutch charter plane crash gathered Tuesday to recount the terrifying last moments aboard the aircraft, which an official said was swept from the sky by a sudden gust of powerful wind.

At least 54 of the 340 people on board were killed when the Martinair DC-10 broke apart and burst into flames while trying to land at Faro, a southern beach resort.

Martinair President Martin Schroeder told a news conference in Amsterdam, Netherlands, that wind shear threw the plane out of control when it was about 150 feet off the ground.

"The plane fell sharply ... It couldn't be maneuvered, corrected or controled," Schroeder said.

"The crew couldn't have been prepared for this. You can't see wind shear on the radar screen ... In those few seconds the tower had no opportunity to warn the plane," he said.

Wind shear is a sudden shift in wind speed and direction due to a rapid downward rush of cooled air. A plane flying through such a phenomenon at low altitude would first experience a strong headwind and increased lift then a tailwind and a sharp drop in lift.

Schroeder's said his conclusion was preliminary, but he said he was confident it would be corroborated by data from the cockpit recorders. Experts at the crash site have not given any reports on the cause of the crash.

The badly damaged flight voice and data recorders were recovered Monday and are being examined in Britain and the United States.

Dutch television quoted the plane's co-pilot, H.W. van Staveren, as saying: "I felt a gust of wind, heard an explosion and lost control of the plane."

The last four missing people from the plane were found Tuesday, mostly at the homes of relatives in the area, said regional Civil Gov. Joaquim Cabrita.

Some of the survivors sat in a hotel bar Tuesday and recalled the terror of seeing the plane engulfed in flames and dense smoke after it slammed into the runway.

Wim Kodman, a 27-year-old botanist from Utrecht, said he tried to calm a friend as the jet flew through turbulence before the accident.

"I told him, 'I'm a scientist — we're objective,'" Kodman said. "I told him a crash was improbable. I was trying to remember the exact probability when we smashed into the ground."

Most of the passengers were Dutch people who were coming to vacation along Portugal's southern coast. At least two Americans were aboard, and both survived. The identity of one was not available immediately.

Holes in the wreckage of the DC-10, the proximity of fire-fighting equipment and plain luck contributed to the high number of survivors, officials said. Wreckage was strewn across 400 yards of the airport.

Azerbaijani refugees prepare to face winter

AKJABEDI, Azerbaijan (AP) — In winters past, Nurshabel Huseynova and her family burrowed holes in the mud to protect sheep wintering in the pasture.

They are living in those hovels now, with scarcely more protection — no clothing or medicine and only handouts to eat.

Huseynova and thousands of other Azerbaijanis were forced to flee into the Akjabedi grasslands from their home in Lachin, a border outpost in southern Azerbaijan that had witnessed heavy fighting with Armenia.

Mostly Christian Armenia and Muslim Azerbaijan have been battling since 1988. The conflict, which began in Nagorno-Karabakh, an Armenian enclave that sought independence from Azerbaijan, has forced some 450,000 Azerbaijanis and 300,000 Armenians to flee villages and cities.

Some of the refugees live in houses abandoned by other refugees.

But at Akjabedi, the former occupants of Lachin since May have occupied 86,000 acres of land granted to them for grazing by the former Soviet government eight years ago.

During a recent visit, children trudged barefoot through the mud as the adults, hugging at threadbare, tattered clothes, pointed out their underground dwellings.

"We are living in underground holes that used to shelter our animals," said Mehtioglu Gulmamedov, a school teacher, as a crowd of women and children pressed around him. "There is no running water or clinic. This is an impossible place to live in."

"It was raining the day we left. Now it rains here and conditions are getting worse every day."

Nurshabeh Huseynova, her father, husband and three daughters made their way to Akjabedi in a 200-mile, three-day trek to skirt fighting.

Mrs. Huseynova's 7-year-old daughter, Kheiransa, appeared to have mumps, with a swollen neck and face, but there was no doctor to make a diagnosis. Kheiransa's little sister, Sayeda, had infected scratches on her face.

"We have no water, no soap," Mrs. Huseynova said. "Some people in nearby villages helped us, the government gave us 500 rubles (about $1) each with which I bought some sugar.

"We sleep in this hole," she said, pointing to a slanting entrance covered with straw leading to a tiny mud chamber a few feet underground.

The refugees have enough food, said Jean-Louis Jacot, a Red Cross representative who was distributing blankets and plastic sheeting to 500 people. The biggest problem, he said, is protecting people from the freezing temperatures.

"People can cope but with great difficulty," said Jacot.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees has set up a $2 million program to aid 53,000 Azerbaijani refugees, and has provided $4 million for 92,000 Armenian refugees.

Germany outlaws fourth neo-Nazi organization

By Terrence Petty
Associated Press Writer

BONN, Germany — The government banned a neo-Nazi group Tuesday allegedly involved in attacks on foreigners, the fourth such group outlawed this month.

In Frankfurt, meanwhile, nearly 100,000 Germans lined the streets in an hour-long candlelight protest against radical rightists, organizers of the demonstration reported.

More than 500,000 people took part in anti-rightist candlelight parades in cities throughout Germany over the weekend.

Right-wing radicals have carried out more than 2,100 acts of violence this year, most of them against foreigners, leaving 17 people dead and hundreds injured.

Federal Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters said police raided apartments Tuesday in seven of Germany's 16 states to search of evidence against members of the National Offensive, the recently banned group.

He said explosives and weapons were found in raids conducted on Dec. 11 on members' apartments.

Seiters said the organization had adopted many of the principles that were followed by Adolf Hitler's Nazi party, including creation of a racially pure Germany. The group also has claimed the Holocaust never occurred.

Seiters said several members have been convicted of attacking foreigners, illegally possessing weapons and other crimes.

Seiters also said the National Offensive — which is believed to have about 140 members — has distributed anti-Semitic propaganda.

Other neo-Nazi groups outlawed earlier this month are the Nationalistic Offensive, the German Alternative.

■ Driver shoots man, bullet falls out of his nose

CHANDLER, Ariz.— A Phoenix-area man who was shot in the head during a traffic dispute went home hours later with some scratches and a sore eye after the bullet dropped out of his nose in the emergency room, police said.

"The guy was really fortunate," said Sgt. Steve Spraggins, a spokesman for the suburban Chandler Police Department.

"It didn't affect his brain," he said.

The incident occurred about 1:30 a.m. Sunday as James Janecke, 25, of Chandler was riding in the front seat of a Chevrolet Camaro driven by his fiance, Betty Lou Dudding, also of Chandler, Spraggins said.

A man who was driving a Chevrolet Blazer behind them flashed his lights and apparently became angry when they wouldn't get out of his way, Spraggins said.

The Blazer pulled around to right side of the Camaro, and the driver pointed a .22 caliber revolver at Janecke and pulled the trigger.

The bullet pierced the window and entered the right side of Janecke's head above his right eye and apparently lodged somewhere in the nasal cavity, Spraggins said.

Dudding then pulled into a service station and called police. Janecke, who remained conscious, was taken to an area hospital's emergency room for treatment.

Spraggins said officers watched as Janecke blew his nose and the bullet came out through the nasal passage.

■ Klan receives permit to erect another cross

CINCINNATI — A cross erected by the Ku Klux Klan on a public square and wrecked just hours later will be replaced, the group said Tuesday.

The Klan received a city permit to erect the cross on the downtown Fountain Square by using the same religious freedom argument that a Jewish group used to get permission to display an 18-foot Hanukkah menorah on the square.

"We will put a cross back up," Ron Lee, vice president of the U.S. Knights of the KKK in nearby Hamilton, told The Cincinnati Post. He declined to say when the new cross would be put up.

Four or five Klansmen put up the 8-foot wooden cross before dawn Monday. Less than five hours later, a man toppled it, and city workers hauled away the splintered remains as a public nuisance.

Police Chief Michael Snowden said the Klan had arranged with police to put up the cross Monday to avoid protests that took place Sunday, the first day the Klan could erect the cross under terms of the permit.

The permit is good through Dec. 30.

■ Officials find cigarette butts at explosion site

WASHINGTON — Cigarette butts were found and a methane gas monitor may have been disabled in a Virginia coal mine that was the site of a deadly explosion earlier this month, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

"It just takes no logic at all to know you shouldn't smoke in a mine," Assistant Labor Secretary Bill Tattersall said after announcing the findings at a news conference.

Officials were quick to say they had not linked the cigarette butts or the damaged methane monitor directly to the underground explosion, in which eight miners were killed 45 minutes before their shift was to end. The investigation into the accident is continuing and it is highly unusual for federal officials to comment on such matters with an inquiry in progress.

But Tattersall said the "critical nature" of the early findings necessitated breaking with usual procedures. He said federal officials also wanted to send a warning to other mine operators and workers.

"This is a rule that to be broken we don't take very lightly," he said. "This is very, very bad."

He said the Labor Department would be "looking at the mining industry very closely" as a result of the findings.

Robert Kyle, vice president of Southmountain Coal, would not comment on Tattersall's announcement. "The investigation is not complete," Kyle said.

AIDS makes orphans of U.S. children

By Brenda C. Coleman
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — The number of healthy American youngsters orphaned by AIDS will double by 1996 and reach more than 80,000 by the turn of the century, threatening to cause a social catastrophe, researchers say.

Thirteen percent of the 21,000 children under age 13 who became parentless last year, and 9 percent of the 28,000 ages 13-17, were newly orphaned because of AIDS, researchers estimated.

By the year 2000, those proportions will rise to 30 percent and 22 percent, respectively, the researchers reported in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Even if we were able to stop all new infections tomorrow, through some magic wand, almost all the children we're projecting to be orphans would still be orphaned," said the chief author, David Michaels.

"These numbers will just keep growing," he said from New York, where he is an associate professor at City University of New York Medical School-Sophie Davis School of Biomedical Education.

Since no data on U.S. orphans exist, the authors said they used related statistics to develop a mathematical model for estimating and projecting the number of AIDS orphans and their proportion in the orphan population.

"It's amazing. ... We do not keep track of children in the United States who lose their parents," Michaels said.

The researchers used statistics on the number of children born to women overall, the death rates among women from all causes and the rates of AIDS infection and deaths to generate their findings.

They estimated that 18,500 children and adolescents who are not infected with the AIDS virus themselves already have been orphaned by the disease. By 1996, the number is expected to rise to 45,600 and to 82,000 by the turn of the century, they wrote.

Most will be poor and black or Hispanic, living in communities least equipped to care for them, the authors said.

"Unless increased attention and resources are devoted to this vulnerable population, a social catastrophe is unavoidable," they wrote.

New York City, where AIDS is the leading killer of women of child-bearing age, accounted for 39 percent of U.S. AIDS orphans under 13 last year and 42 percent of adolescents orphaned by AIDS, the researchers estimated.

That city's proportion of the total is expected to decline slightly as the epidemic fans out across the country, the researchers said.

They defined orphans as youngsters whose mothers die of AIDS or of ailments related to AIDS-virus infections.

The possible presence of a male parent was not considered because most mothers with AIDS are injection-drug users or sexual partners of infected men, researchers said. Such women are usually single parents, or, if not, have partners with fatal AIDS infections themselves, Michaels said.

Men as sole caregivers were not considered because no statistics exist on how many there are, he said.

An editorial accompanying the journal report said its estimates are probably low.

Improved efforts are needed to prevent AIDS in mothers, as well as to support AIDS orphans, wrote the editorial's authors, Drs. Stephen W. Nicholas and Elaine J. Abrams of the Pediatrics Department at Harlem Hospital Center in New York. They did not participate in the study.

Another physician who was not involved, Dr. Robert Sege, co-director of the Family HIV Program at New England Medical Center, agreed with the warning about a potential social catastrophe.

"It's an important study," he said from Boston. "It's something we've been concerned about for a long time."

Consumers talk nutrition but fat burgers sell

NEW YORK (AP) — Hamburger eaters remain loyal to a fatty patty, say several fast-food chains that haven't followed McDonald's into the lean burger business.

"After spending millions on research, we found, just by listening to the consumer, that people are talking nutrition, but they buy on taste," said Maurice Bridges, director of public affairs for the Hardee's chain.

Hardee's introduced a reduced-fat hamburger in 1990, but took it off the menu because it didn't sell, Bridges said. Burger King, Wendy's and Carl's Jr. considered reduced-fat hamburgers but decided against them.

Today, most fast-food restaurants offer low-fat foods, including grilled chicken, salads and baked potatoes. In 1990, McDonald's introduced its McLean Deluxe with great fanfare, and won praise from consumer advocates and health authorities.

"We are all basically looking at the same products and technology at the same time," Burger King spokesman Michael Evans said from Miami.

"The whole industry has found there's a tradeoff in taste, so that's one of the problems of testing a leaner burger," said Patty Parks, spokeswoman at Carl's Jr. in Anaheim, Calif. "It seems the fattier the food, the better it tastes."

In experiments with lean hamburgers containing carrageenan, a seaweed-based additive intended to maintain moisture, Carl's Jr. found that consumers will try it but won't keep buying it, Parks said.

Lisa Young, a nutritionist at the University of Pennsylvania Obesity Research Clinic, said some people may not give a low-fat product a chance if they know in advance it's not "the real thing."

Fat does taste good, Young added. "Definitely, a higher fat cookie and lower-fat cookie taste different," she said.

"The consumer wants lower fat, lower sodium, lower calories. Oh, and by the way, it better taste great," Wendy's spokesman Denny Lynch said. His company, based in Dublin, Ohio, hasn't found a reduced-fat burger that tastes good enough, he said.

"The people who are more diet- and health-conscious, what we found was that even if their intention was to buy a low-fat hamburger, they opted for grilled chicken," Bridges said. "With all due respect, the way to go is not with a low-fat hamburger."

The McLean Deluxe is made with carrageenan. With 320 calories, 90 of them from fat, it has half the fat of and 90 fewer calories than a Quarter Pounder. Adding cheese adds 50 calories, 36 of them from fat.

"We're very pleased about it. It's got a permanent place on our menu board," said Rebecca Caruso, spokeswoman for McDonald's, based in Oak Brook, Ill.

She refused to provide any information, however, that would indicate just how popular the low-fat hamburger is. She also would not say whether more are sold with cheese than without.

McDonald's is by far the industry leader, with 1991 sales of $19.9 billion, according to the National Restaurant Association. Sales for Burger King were $6.2 billion, for Hardee's, $3.4 billion, and for Wendy's, $3.2 billion.

Evans said Burger King hasn't found a satisfactory low-fat hamburger.

"Customer research shows our consumers don't want a lower-fat burger at the cost of taste," he said. But he noted that by eating a Whopper without mayonnaise, a person could save 140 calories. With, the Whopper has 619 calories.

Prosecutors close case against Rodney King

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After nearly two years, prosecutors Tuesday closed the criminal case against Rodney King without charges for actions leading up to his beating by white police officers.

"The so-called Rodney King case and its aftermath have caused a deep wound in society," wrote Deputy District Attorney Richard Hecht. "Prosecuting Rodney King would tend to unnecessarily open that wound once again."

New Police Chief Willie Williams had asked Dec. 1 that District Attorney Gil Garcetti resolve the matter.

King, who is black, was beaten by white Los Angeles police officers March 3, 1991, after a high-speed chase.

A neighbor's videotape showed King on his hands and knees beside his car being clubbed, kicked and stomped, while up to 20 other officers looked on. He suffered a fractured eye socket, a broken cheek bone and leg, facial nerve damage, a severe concussion and burns from electric stun guns.

The acquittal of four officers April 29 on nearly all felony assault charges sparked three days of rioting in which 53 people were killed and hundreds of businesses were burned and looted.

Shortly after, then-District Attorney Ira Reiner said charges wouldn't be filed against King for allegedly evading an officer and driving under the influence. Reiner said the conduct of officers at the scene sabotaged any criminal case against King.

But no formal decision had been made. Reiner declined to run for re-election.

Williams didn't recommend whether charges should be filed.

In declining to file charges, prosecutors cited the statute of limitations and the interest of justice.

Garcetti said so much time has passed that it wouldn't be fair to King — or the city — to prosecute him.

"This case has caused so many problems, and I believe the healing process has begun," Garcetti said.

GM workers worry about jobs, future

AP Laserphoto

Milton Carroll, at home last week in Flint, Mich., is making plans for the future should his GM job be eliminated due to corporate cutbacks. Carroll, a 41-year-old autoworker for 17 years plans to take college courses to prepare himself for a mid-life career change.

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — At 41, Milton Carroll is looking into a new career as a drug counselor. His resume: 17 years as a riveter and spot welder at a General Motors truck plant in grave danger of folding.

Things only seem to get worse in this crumbling GM bulwark, and Carroll can't take the suspense anymore. "I want to have something so that if General Motors wants to fold, so be it," he said.

Flint, a city of 140,000, was shaken by a slew of GM closures in the 1980s that practically halved the automakers' work force, from 80,000 in 1980 to about 43,000.

Fear is rife, now that the remaining jobs won't last long.

When GM announced in February it was making drastic cuts in operations, the first round of closings included putting Flint on notice it would lose 4,000 jobs at a V-8 engine plant, which will close in 1997.

Another round of closing announcements Dec. 3 brought mixed news.

GM said a truck plant that employs about 4,450 people has no product assigned past the 1995 model year, when its current generation of vans expires. Workers are waiting to learn if that means the plant and their livelihoods will be expiring.

"It would be a lot easier if they just said they would close," said Mike Jabero, whose deli gets virtually all its business from GM engine and truck plants across the street. "Then we could get on with our lives."

Carroll isn't dawdling. He has decided to get a college education and become a counselor for recovering drug addicts like himself.

GM spared the Inland Fisher Guide plant just outside the city, despite fears it would be jettisoned. In addition, GM also said it would send 750 engineering jobs to Flint from the Detroit area and move some production to Flint's Buick City assembly plant from Wentzville, Mo.

"We always put on this continual face of optimism because if you lived here all your life you always thought that GM would solve some of their problems," said Kim Yecke, 40, a lifelong Flint resident and executive director of a food bank in Genesee County.

"General Motors will never be what it was in this town," she said. "You can sit back and accept it or you can move on."

Although many think of Flint as GM's birthplace, the automaker actually was founded in New Jersey in 1908.

Even if the truck plant doesn't figure in GM's future, there is a chance it could fit in Toyota Motor Co.'s plans. Toyota said Tuesday it is considering several options to build its new midsize pickups in the United States, and one option is using a closed GM plant. Whatever becomes of the truck plant, three of GM's carmaking plants are scheduled to close by 1995.

Neither Toyota nor GM would specify GM plants that might be considered for Toyota trucks.

Whatever happens, the city is putting its hopes in encouraging growth in jobs in high technology, research and medicine and is trying to lure businesses from across the border in Canada.

The city also hopes to find new uses for closed GM plants, as it did when the Fisher body plant shut down in the late 1980s.

The former Fisher factory is now a $90 million office complex with 3,000 employees, including 1,400 GM workers.

Crew faces charges for shipping refugees

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An Indonesian crew faced charges Tuesday of smuggling 180 Chinese refugees after their filthy ship was escorted into San Francisco Bay by officials responding to a radio plea for help.

Coast Guard vessels met the ship eight miles off the Golden Gate Bridge after the captain radioed that his vessel was out of drinking water. The ship left Taiwan Nov. 4, although circumstances of the voyage were unclear, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials said.

"It's abominable. They're living in their own filth," Coast Guard Petty Officer Gary Openshaw said. "There's vomit, urine and excrement strewn through the decks."

After health inspectors approved, INS agents began taking the 16 female and 164 male passengers off the ship and onto the Navy base at Treasure Island beneath the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

INS officials will interview the refugees and decide whether to initiate deportation proceedings, said Bill Tait, INS assistant deputy director for examination. All passengers are Chinese citizens.

Several women wore leather jackets and dark wool coats. INS agents wearing surgical masks stuffed the coats into plastic bags after frisking the women.

INS officials said they would seize the 165-foot Honduras-registered cargo ship, Manyoshi Maru. The nine crew members, who remained in shipboard quarters, faced likely criminal charges for smuggling refugees, Tait said.

The boat was bound for San Francisco, Tait said. The crew told officials they were headed for Canada, but that turned out to be false, Tait said.

Crew members radioed for help Monday night after passengers ran out of fresh water and complained of serious illness.

"They started to get a bit testy with the crew, and the crew feared for their personal safety," Tait said.

Experience, moderation govern Clinton's foreign policy picks

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press Writer

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton reached back to the Carter administration and to experienced and moderate figures to help him direct U.S. foreign and national security policy in the next four years.

Having served in the era of superpower confrontation, they must now adjust to ethnic warfare in Yugoslavia, anarchy and starvation in Somalia, budding democracy in the former Soviet sphere and the other twists and turns in what Anthony Lake, Clinton's choice for national security adviser, called the "extraordinary new world of turbulent change."

Their backgrounds and experience reflect a mixture of moderation and innovation. Lake showed his independence early, quitting the Nixon administration in 1970 to protest the invasion of Cambodia.

Warren Christopher, the incoming secretary of state, carried the banner for human rights during the Carter years and worked quietly to give women and blacks more of a chance in the staid foreign service.

Les Aspin, who was named secretary of defense, shed a lot of his "whiz kid" image after taking over the House Armed Services Committee in 1985. And he disappointed liberals by voting for the MX missile and aid to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

But his restless intellect also has led him to head the drive in Congress to overhaul and "downsize," as he put it, using proper Pentagon jargon, the armed forces.

Together, they cannot be described as radicals who will persuade Clinton to break with the past. But there is at least an inclination to do some things differently. Significantly, Aspin mentioned overpopulation — a largely overlooked problem in the Reagan-Bush years — first as he looked ahead in a brief speech.

Christopher will not need a map of the State Department to find his way to the seventh floor, where key decisions are taken. He was the deputy to Cyrus R. Vance and Edmund S. Muskie from 1977 until 1981, and played a leading role in shaping policy.

Best known for the tedious and frustrating negotiations that led to the release of 52 American hostages held by Iran, he also organized the boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and successfully lobbied Congress to ratify the Panama Canal treaties.

The fact that Christopher and Lake, who headed the policy planning staff at the State Department, are Carter administration alumni prompted reporters to ask Clinton if he had appointed retreads.

That, he said, was unfair. Besides, the president-elect insisted: "I don't think that you can make change in an area this important unless you know what also has to be maintained, unless you have people of real seasoning and judgment."

Most of the other choices also are old hands in Washington, and they have been effective.

In the last few years Aspin has played an influential role in determining what Congress said about defense spending. When he threw his weight behind killing the B-2 bomber the Bush administration had to scale down its request from 75 planes to 20.

James Woolsey, who will head the Central Intelligence Agency, is a far more quiet player, an expert on nuclear strategy who worked for both Democratic and Republican administrations. One of his accomplishments was concluding negotiations with the Warsaw Pact to reduce NATO and Soviet bloc tanks and other armaments in Europe.

Madeleine Albright, the only real outsider, will go to the United Nations as a Czech-born Georgetown University professor who was the principal foreign policy adviser to Michael Dukakis in his unsuccessful run for the presidency in 1988.

As they and Clifford Wharton and Samuel Berger, who are to be deputies to Christopher and Lake, took their turns at the microphones in Little Rock, virtually all of them alluded to a puzzling and changing post-Cold War world.

"We need bold new thinking," Christopher said, looking slightly uncomfortable in the bright television lights.

But with the measured balance that is a tipoff to years in the bureaucracy, the 67-year-old lawyer also noted that "American foreign policy is a continuum."

Texas has playoff power

■ The Dallas Cowboys celebrate without champagne while fans gobble up playoff tickets.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Cowboys don't drink champagne.

But the Dallas Cowboys did celebrate their first outright NFC East championship in 11 years on Tuesday with some back-slapping and T-shirt modeling.

"Champagne isn't coach Johnson's style," said quarterback Troy Aikman, who had three touchdown passes and completed 18 of 21 in Monday night's 41-17 victory over the Atlanta Falcons. "We did get some T-shirts."

Fans stormed the ticket windows at Texas Stadium to snap up the remaining 10,000 ducats at $31 each for the Cowboys second-round NFC playoff game on either Jan. 9 or Jan. 10.

Dallas will play the Minnesota Vikings if the NFC Central champions win their wild-card game. Should Minnesota lose, Dallas would play the winner of the other wild-card matchup.

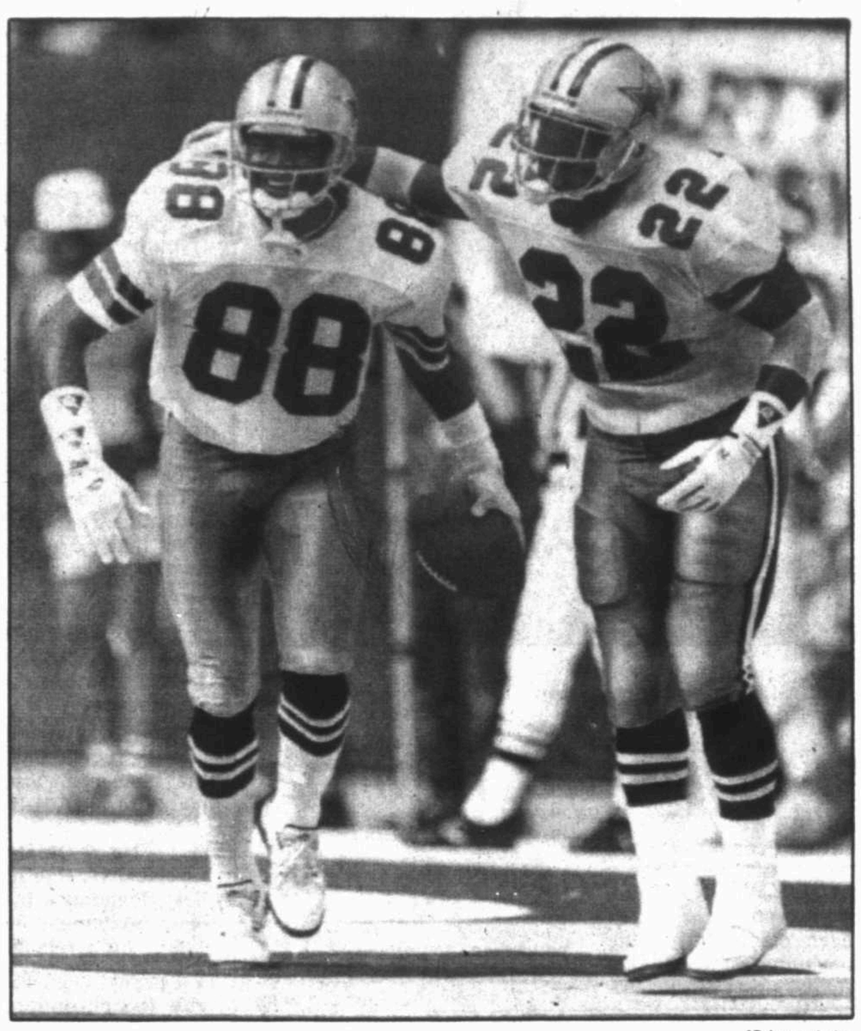

The Cowboys will be shooting for a club-record 13th victory when they host the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

"This is something we've been working for since I've been here," Aikman said. "I hope in the years ahead we grow accustomed to it."

The Cowboys tied the New York Giants for the NFC East title in 1985 and won the right to advance to the playoffs on a tiebreaker.

"This was the goal we set in training camp," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "Now

■ The Houston Oilers have a major predicament to solve this week as they decide if they really want to win or lose the last regular season game with Buffalo.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

You're the Houston Oilers. You're already in the playoffs and you play the Buffalo Bills at the Astrodome Sunday night. If you win, you might have to go to Buffalo next week for a playoff game — outdoors in weather that might be a tad chilly.

Do you really want to win?

Or you're the Washington Redskins and someone tells you that if you lose to the Raiders on Saturday, you still may make the playoffs. If you win, you may not.

"I'm not sure what's happening," says Washington coach Joe Gibbs. "I just know someone has to help us."

Call them final week flaws, the anomalies that crop up every season when games are played between teams that have incentives to win; teams that have no incentive to win, and ...

Teams that actually have disincentive — those like the Oilers, who might be better off losing than winning. If they win, they could go to Buffalo; if they lose, they may get a presumably easier opponent — like Denver, Kansas City, Miami, Pittsburgh or San Diego.

None of this is new, of course.

In 1984, for example, four of the five NFC East teams (yes, even the Cards) went into the final week with a chance

Foster injury

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers got some encouraging news for their offense when it was determined that the injury to running back Barry Foster was limited to a strained upper back.

The Steelers got a scare Sunday when Foster lay prone on the turf for several minutes after a collision. The Duncanville, Texas native injured his upper back and neck when he was tackled with less than six minutes remaining in the Steelers' 6-3 loss to Minnesota.

Foster, who rushed for 118 yards in his NFL-leading 11th 100-yard game of the season, did not return to an offense that hasn't scored a touchdown in two games.

X-rays taken after the game were negative, but Foster underwent a magnetic resonance imaging test Monday as a precaution because he briefly lost feeling in his back.

"I was pretty scared at first because there was some tingling going down my back and legs," Foster said. "I was scared to move at first because (the fear of paralysis) runs through your mind. I thought my career was over."

Moon rises

HOUSTON — It was still undecided Tuesday whether Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon will play in Sunday's game against the Buffalo Bills, a team spokesman said.

Moon likely will be listed as questionable for this weekend's game, Houston's regular-season ender, Oilers spokesman Bob Schranz said.

Moon broke his upper left arm Nov. 15 against Minnesota and has missed five straight games.

However, Moon will return to practice this week and an X-ray indicated his injury was "looking better," Schranz said.

Rebs blast Monahans, 106-44

■ Midland Lee's boys basketball team climbs to 13-2 for the season with a blowout win over the Loboes.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

By halftime of the Monahans-Midland Lee boys basketball game Tuesday night at the Lee gymnasium, the only suspense left for the crowd was whether the Rebels would tally their first 100-point game of the season.

They did. After building a 55-22 margin midway through the game, Lee came back with 51 second-half points for a 106-44 victory over the Loboes.

And while five Rebels scored in double digits, including 29 points from David Wilson and 24 from Martin Lattibeaudiere, the 62-point margin of victory left a sour taste in the mouth of Lobo head coach Cliff Gardner.

"I don't want to sound like we're making excuses, but we were without our top scorer in Joe Flores (out with hypoglycemia until the start of District 3-4A play). We're a better ball club than we showed, but they're an excellent ball club.

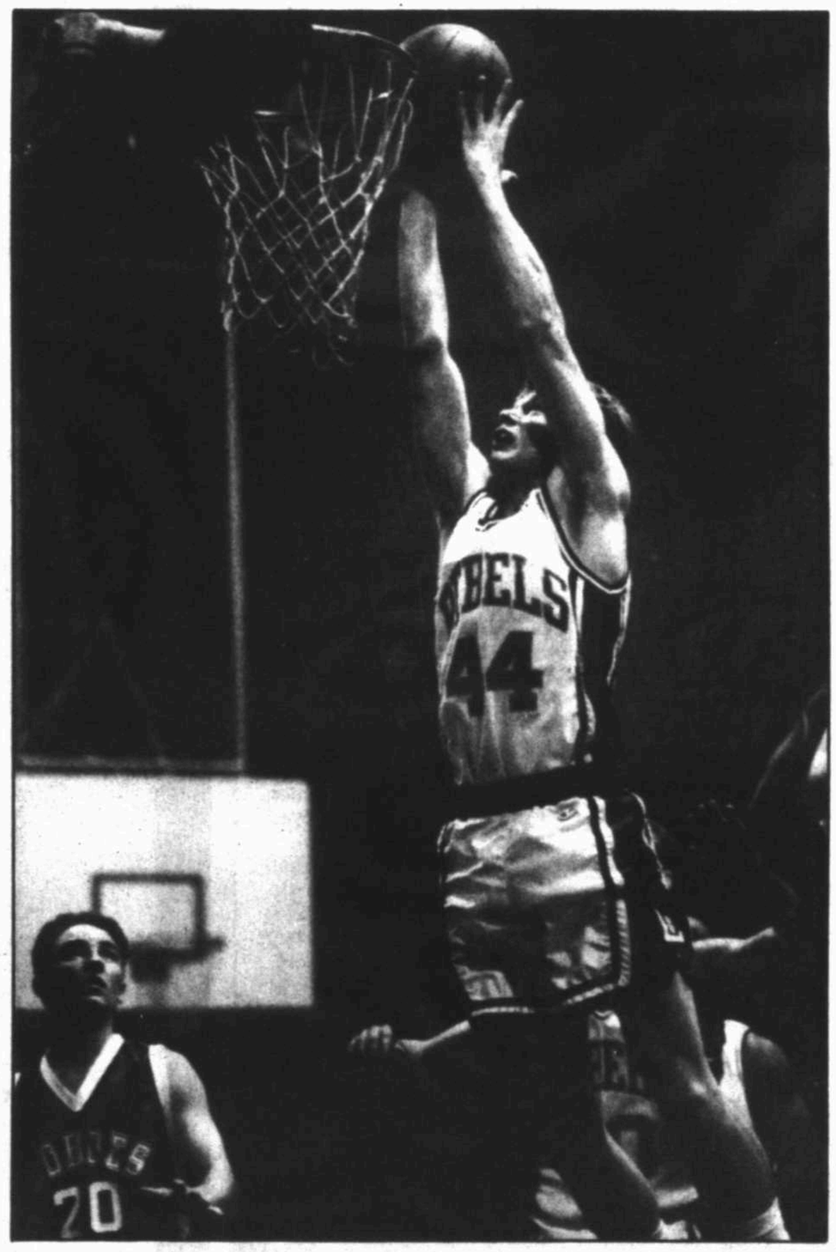

I just would like to have seen him (Lee head coach Jon House) show a little more class than what he did. He played his starters the whole game and pressed the whole game."

All nine players on the Lee roster recorded considerable playing time against Monahans, and House explained the press as "just a part of our game."

"We played everybody. We weren't really trying to get 100 points. We always press. We didn't hurt them with the press that much anyway. It wasn't that hot of a press," House said.

But even if the Rebels' willingness to keep the score down was ques-

NFL reaches 'tentative' labor accord

AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — The NFL and its players reached a "tentative settlement agreement" on Tuesday that could end its bitter 5-year-old labor dispute and bring a form of unrestricted free agency to the league.

After 12 hours of meetings Monday and Tuesday, the two sides announced they had reached agreement in principle on the agreement, the first since the 24-day strike in 1987.

Neither side would give details, but it is believed the agreement will give players a form of unrestricted free agency for the first time, impose a salary cap and cut the draft from 12 rounds to seven.

"We've had two full days of discussion totaling 12 hours," the joint statement said. "We made progress on the remaining issues and have reached a tentative settlement agreement in principle. We will attempt to finalize on it Monday."

Details from the meetings of the last two days were sparse and participants indicated that the agreement was still a bit shaky.

"We're trying to get from here to next Monday," one participant said, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name.

"It's got to be a fair deal or we'll have to take our chances in court," said Cleveland owner Art Modell, one of the owners who prefers negotiated settlement to court action. He said there were still some points unresolved.

The agreement follows a period in which the league's labor relations were shifted from collective bargaining to court.

Last September, a jury in Minneapolis handed down a verdict throwing out Plan B, the league's limited free agency plan. Judge David Doty, who presided at that trial, subsequently let nine unsigned veterans become free agents this year, including All-Pro tight end Keith Jack-

SMU running, gunning toward respect

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Southern Methodist Mustangs are running-and-gunning their way toward respect.

Coach John Shumate is in his fifth year at SMU and his contract runs out this season. So he's trying to excite Mustangs fans and recruits with his new style of play.

"The days of slowdown basketball are over at SMU," Shumate said. "If a player passes up a shot he might find himself on the bench besides me."

SMU scored 121 and 99 points in two exhibition games then totaled 90, 92, and 112 in its first three games against Southwest Texas, Tulane and Oral Roberts. It was the first time since February of 1976 that the Mustangs had scored 90 points in three consecutive games.

With its 112-73 victory over Oral Roberts on Dec. 9, SMU had its first 100-point game in the regular season since Dec. 19, 1987, when the Ponies beat Alcorn State 116-85.

■ SWC Basketball Roundup/2C

SMU's 90-point streak ended on Dec. 12 with a 95-86 loss to Vanderbilt.

Going into Tuesday night's game against North Texas at Moody Coliseum, SMU was 2-2 and averaging 95 points per game. Shumate's previous squads at SMU averaged 66 points per game.

"It's fun running an offense like this one," said senior point guard Gerald Lewis, who had a career-high 23 points against Tulane. "It makes everyone excited just coming to practice."

The up-tempo style has found favor with senior guard Mike Wilson, who has become the 22nd SMU player in history to reach 1,000 career points. Wilson had 22 points against Southwest Texas on Dec. 1.

The Rebs (13-2) again showed their penchant for the three-pointer, going 11-of-33 on their treys to give them 100 scored in their 15 games to date. And while Lee's 46 percent field goal percentage was less than stellar, House was willing to take it.

"We were near 50 percent from the field and 33 percent on our three-pointers. That's considered acceptable. We're going to get our shots," he said.

After jumping to the 20-point first quarter lead, Lee rode the coattails of John Sullivan, who scored all eight of his points in the period. In the second half Lattibeaudiere tallied 15 points and four three-pointers to lead the Rebels.

Fabian Butler led Monahans (6-7) with 13 points while Tari Jesse scored nine.

Lee is now off until it begins play in the Caprock Tournament at Lubbock Dec. 28.

"We're not playing by any means as well as we can right now. But we're getting close to where we need to be. We're going to put on some stuff at the Caprock Tournament and look at what we need to work on," House said.

In junior varsity play, Lee defeated Monahans 85-49, as five Rebels scored in double figures. Joel Skaggs led Lee with 18 points, while Adolpho Garcia added 12, Daniel Hughes scored 11, and Michael Nunn and Ricky Tarango each had 10.

A&M upsets Florida

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Tony McGinnis scored Texas A&M's final seven points during the last three minutes Wednesday as the Aggies upset Florida, 57-54.

All five Aggie starters scored in double figures with Chuck Henderson's 12 leading the way. Damon Johnson had 11, while McGinnis, Brett Murry and David Edwards scored 10 each. The victory evened A&M's season record to 3-3.

Craig Brown led the Gators with 19 and Martti Kuisma added 15 as Florida lost its second game in six outings.

The Aggies threw up a two-three zone defense and it resulted in holding the Gators to a shooting percentage of 32, as they made only 18 of 56 attempts. They put up 28 3-point attempts and hit 11 for 33 of their total points.

Florida held a 34-28 lead at halftime, but the Aggies opened the second half with a 12-0 run for a 40-34 advantage. Kuisma's 3-pointer at the 13:42 mark broke the Aggie run. The Gators drew even at 47-47 and twice more until a free throw by Andrew Declerco gave them their only lead of the second half, at 54-53.

McGinnis then hit a driving layup with 1:21 left for a 55-54 A&M lead and tipped in Edwards' miss with 17 seconds left for a 57-54 reading. Stacey Poole's 3-point attempt with two seconds left bounced off the rim.

SWC Roundup

Texas 83, Stephen F. Austin 70

AUSTIN — Five Texas players scored in double figures as Texas surged back from an early deficit to beat Stephen F. Austin.

Senior guard Michael Richardson led the Texas attack with 18 points. Junior guard B.J. Tyler added 15 points, junior center Albert Burditt hit for 14 points and 17 rebounds, junior guard Tony Watson scored 11 points and sophomore guard Terrance Rencher poured in 10 points.

With the win Texas improved to 4-2 while the Lumberjacks dropped to 4-2. Stephen F. Austin of the Southland Conference was led by senior guard Jack Little with 28 points. Junior forward Nathan Dooley added 17 points and a team-high eight rebounds and freshman point guard Chris Brown hit for 10 points and dished out six assists.

Oklahoma St. 65, TCU 47

FORT WORTH — Seven-foot Bryant Reeves scored 19 points and hauled down 13 rebounds to carry Oklahoma State over Texas Christian.

OSU of the Big Eight Conference advanced its record to 5-1 while the Horned Frogs of the Southwest Conference dropped to a 2-5 ledger.

TCU gave the Cowboys a second-half scare, rallying from a 15-point deficit to close within four points at 51-47 on a bucket by Chris Ward with 5:15 to go.

But the taller Cowboys wore the Frogs down with the last 12 points of the game as Von Bennett and Randy Rutherford each finished with 17 points. Reeves went into the game averaging 22 points and nine rebounds per game.

Houston 84, Arkansas St. 82

JONESBORO, Ark. — Charles Outlaw's 26 points led Houston to a clipping of Arkansas State.

Free-throw shooting made the difference for Houston (4-1), which outscored the Indians from the foul line by a 31-2 margin. The Cougars shot 38 times from the stripe, ASU only four times.

But it was at the foul line that ASU (3-4) had a chance to tie with one second left. Sophomore Vernall Cole, however, missed the front end of a 1-and-1 and Houston rebounded to hold on to the victory.

The loss was the third in a row for ASU.

NFL: Free agency key

son, who left Philadelphia and signed with Miami.

Doty, who must approve this settlement, also had a behind-the-scenes role in the talks, urging the two sides to reach agreement on their own. He told both sides that neither might like any settlement he imposed.

Last week, the owners met in Dallas to consider the plan put forth in the agreement between Commissioner Paul Tagliabue and Jim Quinn, lawyer for the players in the Minnesota suit and chief negotiator for them in the contract talks.

But Tagliabue could get only three members of the seven-member negotiating committee to agree on the settlement and after a long session involving all 28 teams went back to work with Quinn.

One source familiar with the framework agreed upon two weeks ago said that he had spoken Monday night with negotiators, who told him the tentative agreement didn't differ much.

That would mean free agency for players with five years' experience and a salary cap kicking in when a team reached 67 percent of its gross revenue in player costs. It would include a seven-round draft with $2 million per team allocated for draft choices.

NEW YORK (AP) — Here are some of the key points believed to be in the new NFL labor agreement, for which a tentative settlement was agreed on Tuesday.

FREE AGENCY

NEW — Free agency after five years experience for all players except for one "franchise player." He will have to be designated as such at the time he signs and remain so for the life of the contract and his salary will have to be among the top five at his position at the time he signs.

In 1993, teams will also be allowed to match offer to two additional players and in 1994 they will able to match one. After that, there will be no matching.

SALARY CAP

NEW — A so-called "hard cap," which will become effective when 67 percent of team revenues go for player costs. At that point, the term for free agency will drop from five years to four.

OLD — No cap with team payrolls ranging from over $30 million (San Francisco) to around $17 million (Pittsburgh and New Orleans)

DRAFT

NEW — Seven rounds

OLD — 12 rounds.

ROOKIE SALARIES

NEW — Limit of $2 million total for draft choices, presumably to free more money for veterans.

OLD — Whatever the market will bear. High first-round choices in recent years, like Troy Aikman and Jeff George, have netted as much as $3 million in one year, including signing bonuses.

WHO WINS

NEW — Teams that treat players well and scout well — many key free agents, as under Plan B, will be role players.

OLD — Same as above.

WHO LOSES

NEW — The Philadelphia Eagles, who stand to lose Reggie White, Clyde Simmons and Seth Joyner in the next two years because all are plaintiffs in various lawsuits and can't be protected under the plan.

OLD — Teams like the Eagles in which management alienated free agents and made them anxious to leave.

Kentucky still unbeaten

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jamal Mashburn scored 11 of his 26 points during a 29-13 run as No. 3 Kentucky overcame a seven-point deficit in the first half and coasted to a 65-49 victory over Miami of Ohio on Tuesday night.

Travis Ford contributed 12 points, hitting three of five 3-point shots, and had seven assists as Kentucky defeated Miami for the 17th straight time.

No. 1 Duke 96, LSU 67

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Duke (6-0) cruised into the championship game of the Maui Invitational with a victory over previously unbeaten Louisiana State.

Duke will play the winner of the other semifinal between Memphis State and Brigham Young in Wednesday night's title game.

No. 5 N. Carolina 84, Ohio St. 64

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Eric Montross was 8-for-8 from the field and scored 20 points and No. 5 North Carolina hit 10 of its first 11 shots in the second half to pull away from Ohio State.

Brian Reese and Derrick Phelps each added 14 points, with George Lynch grabbing 16 rebounds to go with his 11 points for the Tar Heels (7-0).

No. 22 Connecticut 90, Fairfield 66

HARTFORD, Conn. — Scott Burrell scored 19 points, Donny Marshall had a career-high 17 and Connecticut's press overwhelmed Fairfield.

The Huskies (4-1), coming off a 11-day exam break, had little trouble with the Stags, forcing 29 turnovers that led to 29 points. Fairfield (4-2) had only five assists.

No. 8 Iowa 90, So. Illinois 70

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Val Barnes had a season-high 23 points and Chris Street added 20 as Iowa routed Southern Illinois to win the San Juan Shootout.

The Hawkeyes (8-0) outscored Southern Illinois 21-9 in the first 10 minutes of the second half to break the game open after needing Street's 15 first-half points to lead 44-41 at halftime.

No. 9 Oklahoma 105, Chaminade 88

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Ninth-ranked Oklahoma (6-1) beat Chaminade in the consolation bracket of the Maui Invitational, one day after losing to Brigham Young on a rebound basket at the buzzer.

That 76-75 loss was the first game since the 3-point rule was put into effect for the 1986-87 season — a span of 211 games — that Oklahoma didn't hit at least one shot from beyond 19 feet, 9 inches.

The first half against the Division II Silverswords (1-3) was more of the same as the host school hung tough while the Sooners missed all six 3-point attempts.

Top 25 Basketball

No. 13 Syracuse 102, LeMoyne 71

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lawrence Moten had 16 points and 12 rebounds in 20 minutes as Syracuse overpowered Division II crosstown rival LeMoyne.

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim played his starters sparingly, instead using the game prepare reserves for the start of the Big East Conference season on Dec. 30 against Boston College.

The Dolphins (5-1) stayed close for five minutes before Syracuse (8-0) put together runs of 19-3 and 17-2 en route to a 51-27 halftime lead.

Providence 81, No. 14 Arizona 66

PROVIDENCE — Trent Forbes scored 27 points, including seven 3-pointers, and Providence held off a second-half rally by Arizona.

The Friars (5-1) evoked memories of the Rick Pitino era by making 10 shots from 3-point range. The Wildcats (2-2) hurt themselves with poor free throw shooting, turnovers and early foul trouble on several players.

After taking control early with pinpoint outside shooting, the Friars closed the game with success at the foul line. Providence made 17 of its 26 foul shots in the second half, while Arizona made just 1 of its 5 free throws after the intermission.

No. 15 Purdue 48, SW Missouri St. 45

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Cuonzo Martin scored 20 points as Purdue outlasted Southwest Missouri State.

Purdue (6-0) didn't take the lead for good until Martin hit a turnaround jumper for a 32-31 lead with 10 minutes remaining. Jackie Crawford hit a free throw to pull Southwest Missouri to 37-36 with 4:03 left, but Purdue used a 7-0 spurt to take control.

No. 22 Georgia Tech 81, Tennessee-Chat. 74

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — James Forrest scored 21 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to lead Georgia Tech over Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Forrest hit 8 of 15 field goals and went 5 of 5 from the free throw line.

Tennessee-Chattanooga (4-4) scored 10 points while holding Georgia Tech (5-1) scoreless during a run in the first half. With 14:38 to go, the Moccasins' Gary Robb hit two free throws to begin it, then followed with a 3-pointer. Daymond Woods added a layup and Brandon Born ended the spurt 4 minutes later with another 3-point basket.

No. 18 Florida State. 95, Ark.-Little Rock 64

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Doug Edwards had 16 points as Florida State routed Arkansas-Little Rock.

Bob Sura added 15 points, Rodney Dobard 12 and Sam Cassell 11 as Florida State (6-3) won its third straight game.

Schott's lawyer happy with meeting

CINCINNATI (AP) — A civil rights leader and a lawyer for Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott said they were encouraged by a two-hour meeting Tuesday during which they discussed how to improve race relations.

"I think they'll be doing several constructive things, and I think you'll hear of one very soon," said Frank Allison, president of the Cincinnati chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He declined to be specific but said he was pleased with the recent hiring of Ferguson Jenkins as a minor league pitching coach and Darrell "Doc" Rogers as a front office assistant for baseball operations.

"I feel very good about the meeting, very comfortable," said Schott's lawyer, Robert Bennett. "We didn't agree on everything, but it was a very good and very constructive meeting.

"A lot of very legitimate concerns were raised. We emphasized the good faith of Marge Schott in this matter."

He said they planned to meet again Jan. 22.

Also represented at the meeting were the Jewish Community Relations Council, Urban League, Cincinnati Human Relations Commission, Black Male Coalition and the City Council.

Bennett said he advised Schott not to attend the meeting. She had attended a Nov. 20 meeting with representatives of the same groups.

Baseball is investigating allegations that Schott had referred to some players as "niggers" and used other terms such as "money-grubbing Jews," "Jew-bastards" and "Japs."

Douglas Danforth, operating partner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said a report by his committee will be presented to baseball's executive council in January. He said Schott would be the last person the panel talks to and that no date has been set for interviewing her.

Bennett declined to comment on the investigation by baseball owners, or his own investigation into the allegations.

"This is entirely separate, although obviously the issues overlap," Bennett said. "Everybody — this very representative group, baseball and Mrs. Schott — want a realistic and sensible resolution of this matter."

Allison said the meetings were not a ploy to buy time for Schott.

"We're by no means whitewashing or covering up anything, or going along with that. ... Emphatically not," Allison said. "I think these meetings are productive meetings, and we're trying to do it in a rational and intelligent manner."

City Councilman Tyrone Yates, who is black, said he would like to have seen more accomplished at Tuesday's meeting.

"Mr. Bennett is very able, but he was very much like the Texas rancher — all hat and no cow," Yates said. "At the next meeting, I think he'll bring a little more beef to the discussion."

Johnson rehired by NBC-TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Magic Johnson has been rehired by NBC-TV as an NBA commentator.

Johnson's first assignment will be the Christmas Day game between the Los Angeles Clippers and San Antonio Spurs at the Los Angeles Sports Arena, NBC's first telecast of the season, the network said Monday.

Johnson, who retired for the second and — he said — final time as a player on Nov. 3, will serve as a second analyst on nine of NBC's regular-season telecasts plus the All-Star game on Feb. 21 and the playoffs.

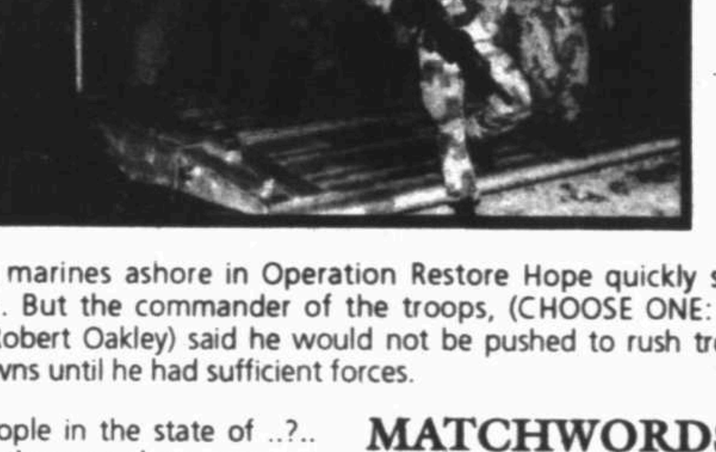

Johnson will be teamed with Jim Lampley and Steve Jones on Christmas Day.

Hot Pistons cool off Rockets

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 23 points and Isiah Thomas 22 as Detroit beat Houston in a matchup of two of the NBA's hottest teams.

The Pistons have now won 10 of 11 games, while the loss was just the second in eight outings for the Rockets.

Detroit led 42-34 at halftime, but had to hold off rookie Robert Horry in the third period. Horry scored just two points in the first half, then scored 12 while being guarded by Orlando Woolridge in the third quarter.

Houston, whose 84 points was its lowest this seasoh, got as close as 60-58 before trailing 66-62 at the end of the period.

NBA Roundup

Spurs 113, Nuggets 108

SAN ANTONIO — John Lucas made a successful NBA coaching debut thanks to the performance of one of the game's best centers.

David Robinson had 21 points, 18 rebounds and eight blocked shots, leading San Antonio to a decision that handed Denver its eighth consecutive loss.

Lucas was hired Friday night to replace Jerry Tarkanian, who was fired 20 games into the season. Lucas' only previous coaching experience as in the U.S. Basketball League.

Dale Ellis and Sean Elliott each scored 23 points for the Spurs, and reserve J.R. Reid had 15.

Gary Plummer led Denver with 20 points and Dikembe Mutombo had 15 points and 12 rebounds for the Nuggets, who beat the Spurs 125-121 in double overtime Nov. 7 in Denver.

The Spurs led 89-76 before Plummer scored five points in a 9-2 spurt that closed Denver to 91-85 at the end of three periods.

The Nuggets continued to rally in the fourth quarter as consecutive dunks by LaPhonso Ellis gave Denver its second lead of the game, 101-100, with 4:40 left.

But the Spurs regained the lead for good on two free throws by Elliott and a tip-in by Robinson, and then scored five points in the final 26 seconds to stay safely in front.

The Spurs led 67-53 at halftime, the most points they've scored in the first half this season. San Antonio led by as many as 15 points with 1:42 left.

Celtics 106, Nets 104

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Dee Brown's 20-foot jumper with 1.4 seconds left spoiled New Jersey's comeback from a 16-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

The Celtics, who had shot 36 percent from the field in their previous two games, seemingly took control by shooting 65 percent from the field in the third quarter to open a 13-point.

Magic 101, Jazz 98

ORLANDO, Fla. — Rookie Shaquille O'Neal had 28 points, 19 rebounds and five blocked shots and sparked a fourth-quarter rally that carried Orlando over Utah.

The 7-foot-1 center sat on the bench late in the third quarter and early in the fourth period with four fouls, but returned to bail out the faltering Magic with six points, six rebounds and three blocked shots in the final 10 minutes. It was the fourth consecutive win for Orlando following a six-game losing streak.

The Jazz, who lost for only the fourth time in 12 road games, got 30 points from Karl Malone and 20 from Jeff Malone. But the two Malones were a combined 3 of 11 in the final quarter.

Hornets 130, Hawks 114

ATLANTA — Former Odessa College star Larry Johnson scored 29 points, Dell Curry 28 and rookie Alonzo Mourning 20 as Charlotte never trailed in routing Atlanta.

The Hornets, leading 76-71 halfway through the third period, used a 14-0 run in a span of 2:04 to build a 19-point lead.

Suns 106, Warriors 104

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley's tip-in with 18 seconds left gave Phoenix the lead, and the Suns held on through two Golden State possessions, matching their single-season record of 10 straight victories.

The Warriors came from 13 points behind in the third quarter to take the lead on three occasions in the final period, the last time at 104-102 on Tim Hardaway's 3-pointer with 2:05 left.

Kings 102, Bucks 99 (OT)

MILWAUKEE — Lionel Simmons scored seven of his 23 points in overtime as Sacramento snapped an eight-game losing streak, sending Milwaukee to its 11th straight loss.

The Bucks' loss tied a club record for consecutive losses set in 1974-75 and tied last season. They have only won one of 12 games in December while the Kings have won two out of 10 games during the month.

Knicks' play defense in mid-'50s numbers

NEW YORK (AP) — The last time an NBA team was as stingy on defense as the New York Knicks, Wilt Chamberlain was in high school and Michael Jordan was eight years away from drawing his first breath.

The 1954-55 season, with no players to approach the offensive skills of a Jordan or Chamberlain, was a transition year for the NBA. The 24-second shot clock was new, the game was slow and teams were still defensive-minded.

The lowest defensive average that year was 89.7 points by Syracuse, which won the NBA championship despite scoring 91.1 points per game. Fort Wayne was second in fewest points allowed at 90.0, followed by Milwaukee's 90.4.

Those three defensive averages, in a season in which only one team in the entire league managed to score 100 points per game, still are in the record book as the lowest in league history.

This season's Knicks, however, are playing defense at 1954-55 levels against teams with 1990s offensive skills.

They will take a 91.6 defensive average into Friday night's game with defending champion Chicago, which scored 75 in the teams' only other meeting this season.

"The Knicks seem to enjoy playing defense," says Pistons assistant Don Chaney, a backcourt defensive stalwart in his playing years. "That is so rare nowadays. Those who do it well enjoy it, and you can see how hard they work at it."

The Knicks have been devastating defensively at home, where they are 12-1. The only loss was 110-103 in overtime against Charlotte, one of only three teams to score as many as 90 points at Madison Square Garden. New York's defensive average at home is 88.2.

"The defense they put out was unbelievable," Miami's Rony Seikaly said after the Heat lost 91-87 at New York. "They make you shoot every shot awkwardly. Defense is what gives them."

FLAWS: Final NFL week makes for tough decisions to make the playoffs. One of the four was the Giants, who played then-dismal New Orleans the final week knowing their playoff fate didn't depend on whether they won or lost.

(From 1C)

So they lost ...

And made the playoffs anyway when the Redskins beat the Cards and the Dolphins beat the Cowboys.

That comes full circle this weekend in the NFC East.

Washington, which has been battling Philadelphia all year for a playoff berth, may have to root for the Eagles this week against the Giants, who have long since been eliminated.

Why?

So the Eagles can stay ahead of them. Because if the Skins finish in a three-way tie with the Eagles and Packers, they miss the playoffs.

It works this way.

If the Eagles and Packers (both 9-6) lose, the Redskins are in.

If the Eagles and Packers win, the Packers get in if the Giants beat the Eagles; the Redskins get in if the Eagles beat the Giants.

The Packers are playing the Vikings, who have clinched the NFC Central and know that they'll have to play the first week at home, then go on the road if they win ... thus no incentive.

The Redskins are playing the Raiders, who already are out of the playoffs and seem to be disintegrating before Al Davis' eyes.

And the Giants?

They have the ultimate disincentive.

After they revived last week to beat the Chiefs 35-21, they hardly want to finish strong by beating the Eagles.

That might save Ray Handley's job.

DALLAS: Title big for Smith

Owner Jerry Jones, who bought the team four years ago then made an unpopular move by firing Tom Landry, said "We've grown as a club to this point. We had hoped to win the division again. This is going to be very special having that first playoff game in Texas Stadium."

Under Johnson, the Cowboys defeated Chicago on the road last year in a wild-card game then lost the next week to the Detroit Lions.

The Cowboys haven't played in a Super Bowl since 1979.

Johnson said the division title in "the toughest division in football" is another vindication for the budding dynasty which he and Jones have put together.

"Everybody figured we were in over our heads when we took over," Johnson said. "Maybe now they can see we know what we're doing."

Certainly Aikman knew what he was doing.

"Not enough can be said about No. 8," Jones said. "Aikman is having the type of year that can win championships."

"I didn't realize that I had that high of a completion percentage," Aikman said. "Everything was working. I didn't get knocked down all night and could throw on time. The receivers did a great job of getting open against a tough pressure defense."

Running back Emmitt Smith scored two touchdowns to reach a club-record 20. He is also only five yards behind Pittsburgh's Barry Foster for the NFL running title.

Smith had 174 yards against the Falcons and was taken out of the game in the fourth period.

"I have no earthly idea why I was taken out," Smith said "but I'm not going to argue with the decision. I did feel strong. Right now the NFC East title and the Super Bowl are the most important things."

Bowe selects Dokes for title try

NEW YORK (AP) — From their outfits, it was tough to tell who was the champion and who was the challenger for the announcement Tuesday of Riddick Bowe's first defense of his heavyweight championship against Michael Dokes.

Bowe showed up at Madison Square Garden in a blue warmup suit, looking for all the world set to go right into the gym. Dokes, back for another bid at the title he held for about 10 months in 1982-83, opted for a floor-length maybe-mink coat and a derby hat, including decorative feather, worn at a jaunty angle.

Is that real mink, Dokes was asked. "What do you think?" he said. "I paid plenty for it."

He can afford it after inheriting a major payday, somewhere between $750,000 and $1 million, as Bowe's opponent for the Feb. 6 fight. The bout, to be shown on HBO, is the first of Bowe's six-fight, $50 million deal with the cable network and its pay-per-view partner, TVKO.

The fight returns the heavyweight championship to the Garden, which has not hosted a match for boxing's most glamorous title since Bonecrusher Smith knocked out Tim Witherspoon, Dec. 12, 1986. The event was cause for celebration, with Mayor David Dinkins hailing Bowe's decision to make his first defense in his hometown.

For Dokes, 34, this is a chance at redemption. He knocked out Mike Weaver to win the WBA crown Dec. 10, 1982, defended it in a rematch against Weaver and then lost the crown to Gerrie Coetzee Sept. 23, 1983.

After that, drug and alcohol problems limited him to four fights over the next four years before he launched a comeback. His only losses since then were to Evander Holyfield in 1989 and to Razor Ruddock in 1990. Holyfield went on to win the title and Ruddock went on to fight Mike Tyson twice. Meanwhile, Dokes has won 14 straight fights, seven this year, and is 50-3-2 for his career.

"This is an opportunity most fighters don't get once," he said. "For me to get it for a second time, I have a lot of humility toward it."

That doesn't mean he's going in shy. He is not exactly in awe of Bowe.

"I don't think he's that great a fighter," Dokes said. "Styles make fights. His style accommodates me. He doesn't move. I don't have to chase him. I won't have to go looking for him."

"I can't miss the head," the champion said, nodding at his opponent. "That's a terribly large head. Evander Holfield whipped him. I whipped Holyfield. What makes him think he can whip me?"

Styles, the champion was told.

Sugar Bowl deal sours

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It looked like a great deal for Alabama fans. A New Orleans travel package that included a ticket to the national championship Sugar Bowl game between Alabama and Miami on Jan. 1.

Six hundred fans in Birmingham snapped up the bargain. There's a problem, though. The agency can't come up with the game tickets and probably won't.

"You don't know how serious this is," said Walt Adams, owner of Alabama Limousine in Birmingham which sold the packages. "People in Alabama live and die by their football program. There have been divorces over it.

"People who paid to see the biggest game of the year don't take it well when you tell them they can't."

Adams sold the packages counting on getting the tickets from Destination Management Inc., a New Orleans company that packages hotel rooms, tickets and sightseeing tours. An unidentified ticket supplier backed out, however, leaving them unable to meet their obligations.

"We apologize," Warren Reuther, president of Destination Management told the Times-Picayune on Monday. "We had commitments from a source we get them from out of Miami and they didn't come through because of the demand for the game."

Reuther did not return telephone calls Tuesday and would not be in his office a woman answering the telephone told The Associated Press.

Adams had made some headway by Tuesday toward getting tickets, but not much.

"I'm hopeful but if I thought I was going to get all of these tickets I'd change my name to Santa Claus," Adams said.

Spurs call on Gervin again

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former San Antonio Spurs star George Gervin is returning to the team's bench as an assistant coach.

Gervin will assist new Spurs coach John Lucas with the Spurs backcourt.

"I'm pretty excited," Gervin said Monday. "I'm not nervous, but it is new territory. It's another challenge."

Gervin, who works with the Spurs' public relations department, has been helping at each practice since Lucas was named head coach Friday night.

"I'm pleased to have George join the staff," Lucas said. "I need someone else to relate to the players as a player besides myself."

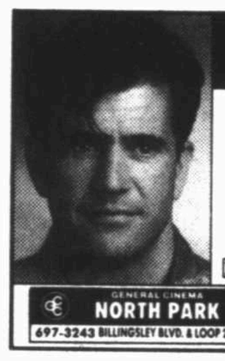

Lucas, who played for seven NBA teams including San Antonio, has battled cocaine addiction and most recently has devoted his life to fighting drug abuse. He was named to replace coach Jerry Tarkanian, who was fired Friday afternoon over an ongoing difference of opinion with Spurs owner Red McCombs.

Assistant coaches Rex Hughes, Ron Adams and Tom Thibodeau and volunteer coach Judas Prada remain with the Spurs.

A Holiday Gift Someone Can Use Every 60 Minutes.
60 Minutes 6035
Scheduled: Gulf War veterans who are returning home with a mysterious illness. Lesley Stahl, Andy Rooney.
This year, instead of a fondue pot, soap-on-a-rope or fruitcake, why not get those on your holiday list something they'll be sure to use – a VCR Plus+® Instant Programmer.™
It's the fastest, easiest way to tape 60 Minutes or every hour on the hour. Simply punch in the PlusCode™ number printed in this paper's TV listings, and you're done. VCR Plus+ Instant Programmer automatically turns on your VCR, changes the channel (even on your cable box), and starts taping.
So give someone you know a VCR Plus+ Instant Programmer this holiday season. After all, they can't tape 60 Minutes with a fruitcake.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.
5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell slightly Tuesday in light trading that can exaggerate otherwise minor moves in the market.

February-delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $19.84 per barrel, down 14 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The market had a void of news regarding supply and demand as most traders looked forward to inventory statistics released after the market closed.

After trading ended for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported that stocks of U.S. crude oil and gasoline rose in the latest week, while supplies of distillates, which include heating oil, fell.

Crude inventories rose 797,000 barrels and gasoline supplies rose 2.26 million barrels. Distillates fell 3.14 million barrels.

Metro bought

DALLAS — AMR Corp., parent of American Airlines, on Tuesday purchased most of the assets of its last independent regional affiliate, Metro Airlines, which operated American Eagle flights at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The deal was valued at $44 million, according to documents related to Metro's Chapter 11 restructuring. AMR did not disclose the value of the purchase, but a spokesman said it included ground equipment and plane leases.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose Tuesday against most key currencies, strengthened by a German central banker's prediction of lower interest rates in Germany.

In New York, the dollar closed at 1.5895 German marks, up sharply from 1.5690 marks late Monday.

The market wasn't much influenced by the latest U.S. economic reports which showed a gain in the gross domestic product for the third-quarter and survey predicting an increase in business investment spending. Those reports were in line with expectations.

At the close in New York, the British pound cost $1.5370, less expensive than $1.5580 late Monday.

Market rallies

NEW YORK — The stock market managed to put its year-end rally back on track Tuesday and closed higher after stumbling part way through the session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 8.64 to close at 3,321.10.

British Airways drops USAir purchase

■ Airline drops proposed $750 million investment when it became clear that U.S. would not sanction the deal without major concessions from Britain.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Facing a probable veto of the deal by the U.S. government, British Airways on Tuesday gave up its attempt to buy a major share of USAir.

The two airlines, however, said they would explore alternative relationships.

Other U.S. carriers had contended that the $750 million deal, which would have given British Airways a 44 percent stake in USAir, also would essentially have given it control over the American airline in violation of U.S. law.

U.S. law prohibits foreign control of U.S. airlines, and British Airways would have held veto power over major business decisions at USAir.

In addition, by using USAir as a "feeder" airline, British Airways would have gained access to customers in many American cities that it is not allowed to serve directly with its trans-Atlantic routes.

Transportation Secretary Andrew H. Card Jr., whose approval would have been required, said, "In the context of the existing bilateral agreement (with Britain), I would not have been able to approve the USAir-British Airways agreement."

But he told a news conference that "I am pleased that USAir and British Airways will continue to have a dialogue" on alternate relations.

"It is the policy of the Bush administration to encourage direct foreign investment in the United States — even in the airline industry," he said.

Card had sought unsuccessfully to persuade the British government to open London's Heathrow Airport to more landing rights for U.S. carriers.

"In the past," he asserted, "approval of foreign investments of this kind has been based in part on whether the investors' country provided an open market for U.S. airline services."

But he added, "regrettably we have not yet reached our mutual objective — an 'open skies' bilateral agreement" with Britain.

United Airlines Chairman and Chief Executive Stephen M. Wolf said in a statement that it was a shame that the bilateral agreement, "which could have truly benefited the traveling and shipping public," could not be reached.

But Delta Air Lines spokesman Neil Monroe said, "It's a good thing for the U.S. government to ensure that, as we grant access to the U.S. market, we ensure U.S. companies have equal rights abroad."

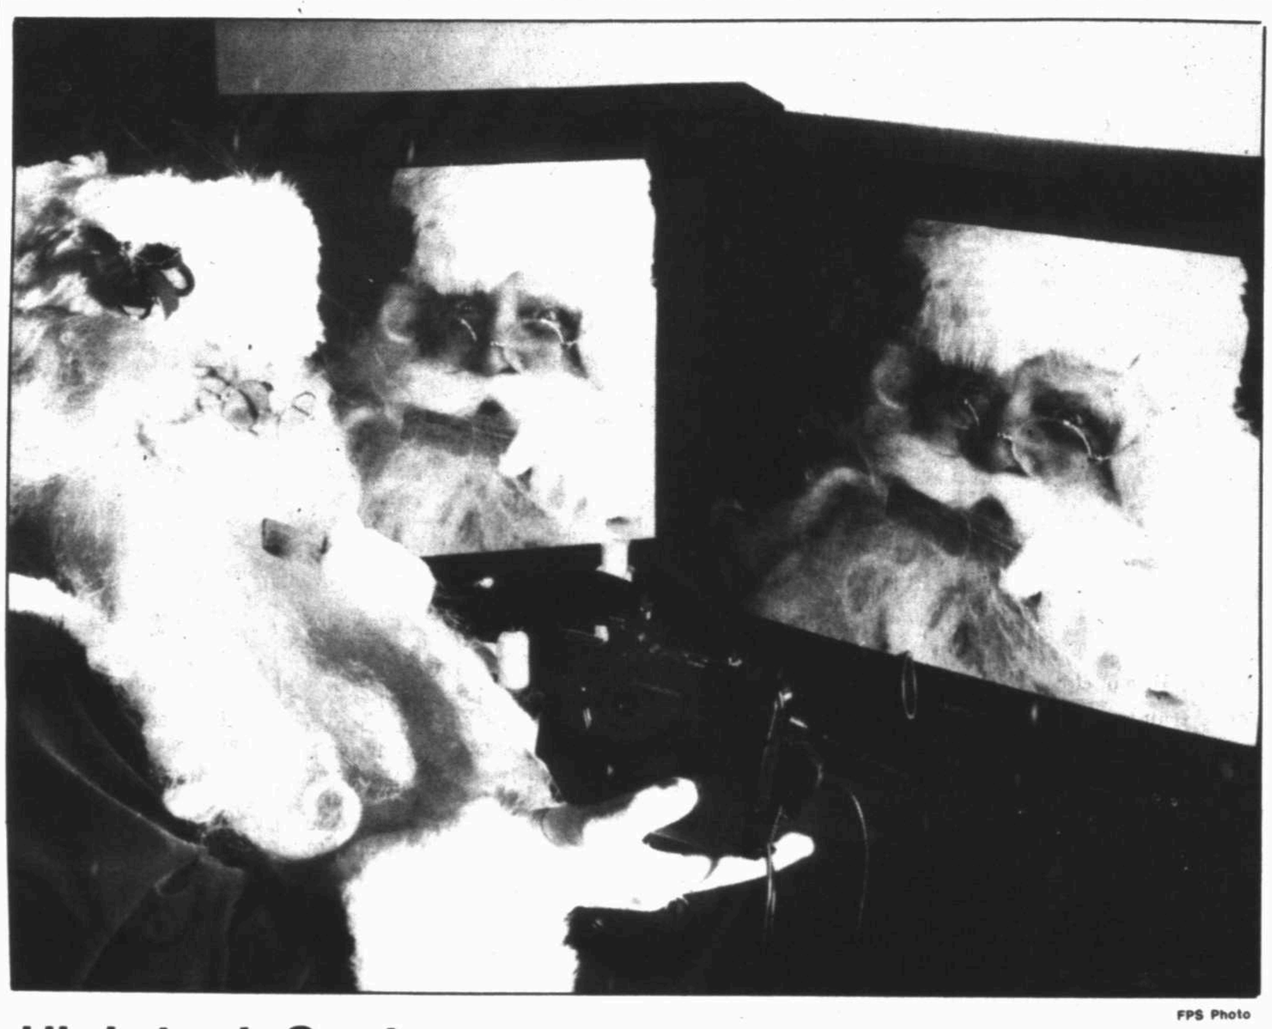

And American Airlines Chairman and President Robert L. Crandall said, "If at some time in the future British Air is prepared to give U.S. carriers equal access to all the markets it serves, ... then we will have no objection to their participation in U.S. markets."

American and United are the only U.S. carriers allowed to serve Heathrow, Britain's major airport, and British Airways did not want greater competition from U.S. carriers there.

American, United and Delta had opposed the deal, fearing it would give British Airways a foothold on their domestic turf without getting additional landing rights in Britain.

A British Airways spokesman called the linkage unfortunate and contended that its acquisition of USAir would have complied with U.S. law. He defended the proposed veto power, saying British Airways wanted a large say in the way USAir was run in return for its investment.

The spokesman, who did not want his name used, said British Airways was considering alternate relations with USAir, which had hoped to use the money from British Airways to strengthen its weakened financial position.

U.S. retailers post success going to wire

NEW YORK (AP) — Eleventh-hour shoppers hit stores and malls Tuesday amid growing signs that the Christmas shopping season will be an overall success for the nation's retailers.

Storeowners and industry analysts were upbeat, even ebullient about sales going into the last few days of the season. Others noted some weak spots, particularly Southern California.

Sales are "slightly better than most of us have been anticipating and closer to what the optimists have been saying," said Terence McEvoy, a retail industry analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc.

Wendell Kimbrough, marketing director of South DeKalb Mall in suburban Atlanta, said, "Things are going fantastic. We are having a Christmas year to beat all years."

Many stores and malls were packed over the weekend. At the Independence Mall in Kingston, Mass., south of Boston, traffic was so busy shoppers had to park their cars on neighboring streets.

Parking also was at a premium Monday in small strip malls in Clifton, N.J., outside New York City, and on Tuesday, stores in midtown Manhattan were jammed at lunchtime.

Business plans more building, equipment buys

WASHINGTON (AP) — American businesses plan to increase investment in new buildings and equipment 5.3 percent next year, which would be the biggest rise in four years, the government said Tuesday.

Businesses surveyed during October and November said they would spend $577 billion in 1993 on constructing new factory buildings, installing new computers and upgrading other equipment and machinery.

This year, they plan to spent $547 billion, up 3.6 percent from the recession year of 1991, when spending posted a rare decline of 0.8 percent.

The 1993 increase, if implemented, would be the largest since spending rose 11.4 percent in 1989. Many economists believe the 1993 rise could be even stronger than 5.3 percent, especially if the economic recovery gets rolling and Congress enacts an investment tax credit.

However, economists cautioned that companies can quickly reduce investment plans if the recovery falters. A year ago, firms said they would increase spending by 5.4 percent in 1992, but the actual increase is likely to be nearly two percentage points lower.

Another reason for the expected rise in investment is the strength of corporate profits this year. They took a temporary dip of 4.5 percent in the third quarter because of insurance losses on hurricanes Andrew and Iniki. But profits are expected to increase in the fourth quarter, and they had risen in the second quarter on top of a big jump in the first quarter.

Lower interest rates and close attention to controlling payrolls have kept earnings strong despite the lingering effects of the recession.

"The U.S. competes and is competing more every day in an international economy," said economist David Berson of the Federal National Mortgage Corp.

"The only way to be competitive is ... to have almost continual investment in new equipment. But knowing you need to do that and having the financial wherewithal to do that are two different things," he said. "This year firms are much healthier, and they now have the financial wherewithal to remain competitive."

The planned increase next year is about the same for manufacturing companies, 5.2 percent, and non-manufacturing companies, 5.4 percent. Companies making durable goods — big ticket items expected to last three or more years — forecast a spending increase of 2.7 percent, while non-durable goods manufacturers project a 7.1 percent rise.

MCI sues to end AT&T's patents

WASHINGTON (AP) — MCI Communications Corp. sued in federal court Tuesday to invalidate some AT&T patents on computer software used in long-distance telephone service.

The suit, which marks a new phase in MCI's competition with AT&T, seeks to make the patented software available to MCI without compensation to AT&T.

The suit was filed late Monday and assigned to U.S. District Judge Harold Greene, who presided over the breakup of the AT&T monopoly. Copies of the complaint were made available to reporters Tuesday.

The MCI suit challenges claims made by AT&T last month that MCI services unlawfully duplicate AT&T software.

AT&T spokesman Michael Granieri replied Tuesday, "This suit has no merit. We maintain MCI is violating our patents. We invest heavily in our technology, and we intend to protect it."

He said AT&T and MCI have been negotiating over the technology and that AT&T "only seeks reasonable compensation."

Perry's to open doors in Midland next month

By Mella McEwen

PERRY'S VARIETY STORE is set to open its doors in Midland Jan. 12. The store will be located in Westwood Village shopping center, Illinois Avenue and Midland Drive.

McEwen

Perry's will carry a variety of goods such as fabrics, pets and pet supplies and toys, much like an old-fashioned dime store.

The company has 150 stores throughout Texas, in New Mexico and on the borders with Oklahoma and with Louisiana.

The Lufkin-based company was founded over 70 years ago.

Just opened is MOLINAR'S BARBER SHOP, located at 1309-A N. Big Spring St. behind Royal Cleaners.

The business is owned by Gloria Molinar and operated by her and her sister Beatrice.

According to Beatrice, the shop offers haircuts for men, women and children for $5 — not including charges for permanents or coloring. Also available are basic barber cuts.

Combined, the sisters have 24 years experience in the business.

Operating under a new name is Quail Run Apartments at 3101 N. Midland Drive, now known as WEST CASTLE CONDOMINIUMS.

Under the new arrangement, the complex's 120 units are owned by a number of owners but operated by one management company. For example, an owner owns one building in the complex, another owns several buildings in the complex, and several own individual units.

Apartments in the complex are being rented out much as they were as Quail Run, but the management company said it is making the qualifying process stricter.

In addition to the new name, the complex will be getting an exterior facelift that includes a new paint job.

SUSIE'S SOUTH FORTY CONFECTIONS has begun selling Texas Toffee, featuring West Texas-grown pecans.

The company, owned and operated by Susie Hitchcock-Hall, also has opened the Western Display Room on Old Lamesa Road ½-mile south of Interstate 20.

The candy, in quarter-pound, half-pound or one-, two- or three-pound sizes, can be purchased at the location in a brown bag, gold gift box or a variety of gift bags or in one-, two- or three-pound gift tins decorated with a Texas or Western theme or bluebonnet. The toffee also can be shipped via UPS.

Store hours are Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A simple, tender and tasty alternative to a Crown Roast of Lamb is a holiday specialty such as this Stuffed Holiday Leg of Lamb.

American Christmas table is fit for a crown of lamb

By Molly O'Neill
N.Y. Times News Service

Most cultures have precise recipes for parlaying visions of sugar plums into Christmas dinner.

The French have buche de Noel, and the British have plum pudding with hard sauce. Northern Italians feast on cotechino, the salami-size sausage that is boiled, sliced and served with lentils or polenta, as well as panettone, the dome-shaped pound cake that is studded with raisins and candied fruit.

In most traditional Mexican households, walnut soup and turkey stuffed with a mixture of chilies, spices and dried fruit is synonymous with Christmas. In Ukraine, according to Anya von Bremzen and John Welchman's "Please to the Table" (Workman, 1991), kiujtia, a porridge of wheat berries, poppy seeds, nuts, dried fruits and honey, is eaten on Ukrainian Christmas and only on Ukrainian Christmas.

In America, the yuletide meal varies from family to family, region to region, ethnicity to ethnicity. For some, roast turkey is a must. Others find the Thanksgiving flashback too distracting and opt for a rib roast, a goose, a capon, a clove-studded ham.

Nothing, except maybe the holly on the table, has an engagement limited to the Christmas meal in the United States. Rather, the menu rambles like an old Cape Cod house, with courses added like new rooms when marriages expand the family.

When studying American traditions for their "Encyclopedia of Pop Culture," (HarperCollins, 1992), Jane and Michael Stern found some indigenous details of the American Christmas dinner: gingerbread houses and gingerbread men, eggnog and copious use of red and green food dyes, Jell-O molds and maraschino cherries. As for the main course, "it's mostly regional," Stern said.

But gingerbread can show up at birthday parties, and eggnog can lap into New Year's, so the cook in search of a seasonal statement languishes without role model or prototype. With Noel lacking a singular flavor, one naturally begins getting visions of ornamental food dancing in one's head.

What better than a crown roast?

The roast, usually formed by standing two eight-rib racks of pork or lamb on their meat ends and tying them into a circle so that the bone tips resemble the prongs of a crown, can be as handsome as an offering presented by the Magi.

Moreover, shaping the ribs in this fashion creates a self-insulating roast whose chops remain succulent.

Myriad stuffings can be cooked separately (to accommodate different cooking times from that of the roast) and heaped into the crown's center before the roast is served.

Visually, the stuffing creates a stately inner crown. It can also cover a wide range of tastes, allowing the cook to choose from recipes as straightforward as simple bread stuffing to something as exotic as cumin-scented couscous. Yet, the form remains traditional, elegant, show-stopping.

Lamb seems more festive than pork for the Christmas crown. And perhaps because it has a slightly gamier flavor, lamb appeals to the archaic appetite for the winter hunt that lurks beneath the surface of Christmas dinner.

Considering that Christmas is often the only time that the best linens are used, there is much to be said about how eminently carvable a crown roast of lamb is.

"Just cut between the bones — you get the perfect, neat little chop, no slop," said Jack Ubaldi, author of "Jack Ubaldi's Meat Book" (Macmillan, 1987), who teaches seminars in holiday crown roasts at both Peter Kump's New York Cooking School and the New School for Social Research.

"Your guests think you are a genius," he added. "Your wife thinks you are a saint."

CROWN ROAST OF LAMB

1 crown roast of lamb, prepared by butcher
6 to 8 cutlet frills (optional)

Total time to prepare: 1 hour 10 minutes. Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Place the roast crown-side down in a roasting pan. Bake for an hour. Turn the roast over and place on a serving platter. Decorate each rib bone with a paper cutlet frill, if desired). Serve immediately.

CROWN ROAST WITH VEGETABLES

FOR THE LAMB:
2 teaspoons black peppercorns, cracked
1 tablespoon celery seed
1¼ teaspoons salt
1 crown roast of lamb
FOR THE VEGETABLES:
2 medium celery roots, trimmed, peeled and cut into ¾-inch cubes
8 medium carrots, trimmed, peeled and cut into ½-inch lengths
4 medium baking potatoes, peeled and cut into ¾-inch cubes
1½ tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon salt, plus more to taste
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Total time: 1 hour 20 minutes. To make the lamb, preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine the cracked peppercorns, celery seed and salt and rub over the outside of the roast. Bake, using recipe for Basic Crown Roast of Lamb (see recipe).

To make the vegetables, toss the celery roots, carrots and potatoes with the olive oil, salt and pepper in a roasting pan. When the lamb has cooked for 15 minutes, place the roasting pan with vegetables in oven. Roast for 45 minutes, tossing the vegetables from time to time.

Remove roast and vegetables from oven. Turn roast over, place on a platter and fill the cavity with the vegetables. Place into a serving dish any vegetables that don't fit. Serve immediately.

THREE-PEPPERCORN CROWN ROAST

FOR THE LAMB:
2 teaspoons pink, green and black peppercorns, cracked
1 teaspoon salt
1 crown roast of lamb
FOR THE STUFFING:
1 ounce dried cepes
3 cups water
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
4 shallots, peeled and minced
5 cups stemmed and sliced shiitake mushrooms
5 cups stemmed and sliced domestic mushrooms
½ cup red wine
3 tablespoons minced parsley
1 teaspoon salt plus more to taste
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Total time: 1 hour 15 minutes. To make the lamb, preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine the peppercorns and salt, and rub over the outside of the roast, as above. Bake, using recipe for Basic Crown Roast of Lamb (see recipe).

While the roast is cooking, make the stuffing. Combine the cepes and water in a small saucepan. Simmer until mushrooms are soft, about 10 minutes. Drain, reserving liquid. Return the liquid to the pan and simmer until reduced to ¾ cup, about 15 minutes. Set aside. Coarsely chop the cepes and set aside.

Melt the butter in a large, deep skillet over medium heat. Add the shallots and cook until soft, about 2 minutes. Add the cepes, shiitakes and domestic mushrooms. Cook until soft, about 8 minutes. Add cepe broth, wine, parsley, salt and pepper. Cook for 10 minutes.

Remove roast from oven. Turn roast over, place on a platter, and fill the cavity with the stuffing. Place into a serving dish any stuffing that doesn't fit. Serve immediately.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma's wish for Christmas is gift of time

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: A faithful reader for more than 30 years — who requested anonymity — wrote the following:

DEAR ABBY: For Christmas, I don't want another crystal bud vase. I have four under my kitchen sink, and nobody brings me flowers anyway. I don't want a sausage and cheese tray — too much cholesterol for this old lady. I don't want another music box to find a place for. I have too many now. I don't want a silk nightgown, perfumed soap, a fancy bed jacket, dusting powder or a bird feeder.

Van Buren

What do I want? Ask me! I'm not shy. I have told you already what I really want for Christmas, but I never got it. Maybe this time I will.

I want you to give me a few hours. Take me and my cumbersome wheelchair to the mall; I'd love to see the lights and hear the music. I would also like to be driven around town so I can see the Christmas decorations — then maybe stop for a hot cocoa.

I would like a book of postage stamps, a writing tablet with lines and some plain envelopes. I would also appreciate a decent ballpoint pen that works, and some telephone coupons so I can make a few long-distance calls to people I will probably never see again.

I would really appreciate a visit from you and other family members — especially my grandchildren who call and say, "Hi, Grandma. How are you? I love you. Gotta go. See you later. Bye!"

I would like someone to offer to pay my heating bill for one month. (With five sons, six daughters and 42 grandchildren, that shouldn't be so hard to do.) And I sure wish someone would come over here and test my smoke alarm.

I really do love all of you; otherwise, why would I feel free to tell you what is on my mind? — GRANDMA

DEAR ABBY: Is it OK to keep an engagement ring after the engagement has been broken?

My boyfriend wants the ring back, and I feel that it was a gift that is mine to keep. I need an answer fast because he is fuming. — DISENGAGED

DEAR DISENGAGED: An engagement is more than a "gift" — it signifies that a proposal of marriage has been accepted.

If there has been a change of heart — or mind — the ring should be returned. With few exceptions, if the engagement has been broken by the woman, she willingly returns the ring.

If the gentleman breaks the engagement, he may be so relieved — or guilt-ridden — he may offer to let the woman keep the ring as a consolation prize. (If it's under a half-carat.)

In most cases of a "disengagement," the woman willingly surrenders the engagement ring — and the gentleman happily accepts it.

DEAR READERS: For folks who prefer brevity; more short poems:

Me?
Whee! and Hired Tired Fired! and Candy's dandy,
But liquor's quicker.

The first two are by Ogden Nash; the last one is Dorothy Parker's.

Recip-Ease packaging makes biggest difference in product

By Linda Anderson

Does anything taste better than homebaked breads? Does anything take more time (which many of us don't have anymore)?

Anderson

Martha White has recently introduced Recip-Ease, its "all-purpose baking mix" — you know, like that more famous baking mix that comes in a yellow box and that we have been using for years to make quick biscuits and pancakes for our families. You know the one I'm talking about.

These baking mixes contain flour, shortening, levening and other standard ingredients, so that home bakers can start recipes with the some of the ingredients already mixed. OK, so these mixes won't make recipes that are completely "from scratch," but they'll be close!

We bought a box — actually it's more like a barrel — of Recip-Ease to see if it is, in fact, any better than than other stuff.

A 48-ounce box of Recip-Ease cost $2.29, and, according to its label, contains one-half pound more than the other mix. We checked the label on the other mix, and sure enough, it contained only 40 ounces. It also cost about 40 cents less than the box of Recip-Ease.

Label advertising claims that Recip-Ease "makes light,fluffy pancakes and biscuits plus a variety of main meal casseroles and more. The resealable, easy-to-scoop canister keeps Recip-Ease Baking Mix fresh and is less messy than boxed baking mixes."

Then it has recipes for pancakes, waffles, chicken pie and, of course, biscuits.

So we took the easiest one and made biscuits. All the recipe calls for is Recip-Ease baking mix and milk. And to make it even quicker and easier, we made drop biscuits instead of the ones you roll out and cut.

What could be simpler?

Recip-Ease looks like the other stuff, measures like the other stuff, and its biscuits taste like the other stuff's. The only difference I could find (other than the fact that the two products are made by different companies) is that Recip-Ease comes in a round container with a plastic lid that can be taken on and off, making it easier to measure and easier to seal. In fact, that's the one difference that the Martha White company advertises on its Recip-Ease television commercials.

Well, all-purpose baking mix — whatever its brand name — is one of the things I like to keep around the house, so I imagine I'll buy Recip-Ease again. That resealable plastic lid is handy...

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your quest for knowledge leads you on some wonderful adventures. Seize an unusual business opportunity that comes your way in early 1993. In March, welcome a chance to resolve your differences with loved ones. The financial picture improves significantly next summer. Launch a pet project in early fall. Returning to school will sound more appealing than in the past. By this time next year, a new career dominates your thoughts.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Japan's Emperor Akihito, newscaster Floyd Kalber, actress Susan Lucci, actor Corey Haim.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although communication and travel are favored today, make important calls and trips before dark. This is not a good time to issue invitations to VIPs. Do some cooking or baking tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A large share of good fortune is headed your way. Favors and recognition come from influential people. Financial correspondence looks promising.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Alliances can be highly rewarding this week. Give credence to something you learn by accident; valuable information is coming your way. Expand your social calendar.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Greet the day with exuberance! A vigorous workout gets you psyched up to do great things. Take time to listen to a teen-ager with a problem. Give your mate more love pats.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check for sales and new investment opportunities; you could find a terrific bargain. Refusing to compromise could cause strife with a loved one; be more flexible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): On the job, choose your words carefully. Being too outspoken could turn potential allies into doubters. Diplomacy wins you friends. Open up the communication lines to your loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take advantage of a lull at work to catch up on paperwork. Return important calls and answer letters promptly. Keep your nose out of a co-worker's personal affairs. Mutual respect is vital.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Higher profits are featured when a hoped-for merger becomes a reality. Now is the ideal time to form new relationships. A night out with your co-workers can be fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Last-minute gift-buying occupies your thoughts. Try not to go overboard. Worries about expenses could mount. Devote the lion's share of your leisure time to children and teen-agers.

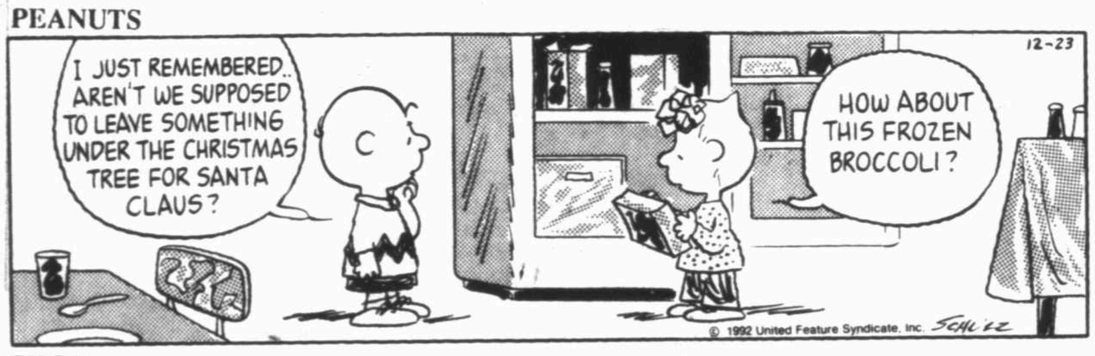

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Employment affairs may be difficult to handle now. Do not push too hard; patience is required. Your holiday plans could change at the last moment. Be prepared for all eventualities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business matters that seem bothersome can be handled with little fear of making serious mistakes. Someone influential could make a surprising offer. An older person offers sound advice; follow up a hunch.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone could try to pull a fast one. Be particularly cautious when dealing with new business contacts. Be careful not to do anything as a joke that could be misinterpreted.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are gentle, considerate and sometimes painfully shy. They want to make friends but are uneasy in the presence of strangers. Concerned parents will invite just one youngster at a time to play with their quiet offspring. A larger group could be overwhelming. Strong students, these Capricorns quickly win the respect of their teachers.

Who do we think is the greatest player in the history of the game? Among the men, there are many stars of today and yesterday who would be in contention, and for us to venture an opinion would do little more than alienate some very dear friends. We have no such qualms when it comes to the female of the species. As far as we are concerned, Helen Sobel stands head and shoulders above the rest and, indeed, above many of the males in the first category. The slim, attractive woman at the table did not look like she could hurt a fly, yet the strongest players of the day trembled when they had to match wits with her across the green baize. Here's an example of her ability.

The auction might not be everybody's cup of tea. Certainly, most experts today would raise spades with the East hand, some even jumping to game. And most would have supported clubs a round earlier with the South cards. Five clubs would have been a simple contract.

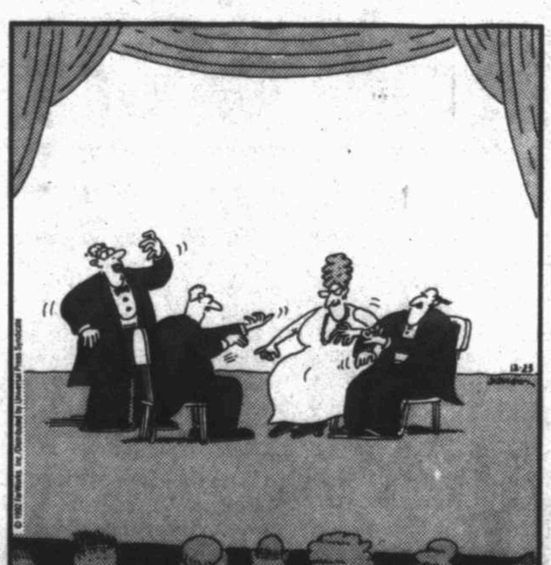

In four hearts our fair lady was put at risk by the 4-2 trump break. The king of spades lead and spade ace continuation forced South to ruff and come down to the same trump length as West. If declarer now drew three rounds of trumps, the contract would be defeated. Left with the high trump, West would have ruffed the third club and exited with a spade and declarer would have gone down two tricks.

However, without seeming to give the matter any thought, Helen made the winning play. After ruffing the second spade, she led the nine of trumps from hand! West won, but could not harm the contract. Another spade would be ruffed in dummy, and the other plain suits were controlled. No matter what the defenders did, declarer would be able to draw trumps and claim the rest, making an overtrick.

Paul Newman to help fund Fla. camp for seriously ill children

BRANCHPORT, N.Y. — Paul Newman will help pay for a special camp for seriously ill children to be built near Disney World.

The camp, called "The Children's Circle of Care," is a joint enterprise of Newman's Hole in the Wall Gang South, the Walt Disney Memorial Cancer Institute at Florida Hospital, and Camp Good Days and Special Times in Branchport in upstate New York.

Gary Mervis, founder and chairman of Camp Good Days, a camp for children with cancer, announced plans Monday for the 121-acre "supercamp" for children with chronic and terminal illnesses.

Camp Good Days will set up and run the program and recruit volunteers, Mervis said.

Florida Hospital donated the land outside Orlando and will provide medical services for the camp.

The Hole in the Wall Gang South will undertake a $7 million fund-raising campaign, headed by actor Burt Reynolds.

Newman's group also will be in charge of construction of the camp, which is expected to be completed in two years. The actor also runs the Hole in the Wall Gang camp in Ashford, Conn., for seriously ill children.

NEW YORK — The principality of Monaco needs an heir. German model Claudia Schiffer has been linked romantically with Prince Rainier III's son, Albert, so people are talking.

Schiffer

But not the putative princess.

"I prefer not to talk about that," Schiffer told Vanity Fair in an interview. "But one thing I can tell you is that I'm not getting married right now. I'm only 22."

She allowed, however, that "I do know Albert very well. I live in Monte Carlo, so it's only normal."

Now listen to fashion designer Karl Lagerfeld, who is rumored to have helped get Albert and Claudia together.

"She is a resident of Monte Carlo, so it's only normal that she would meet him. ... But having said that, I think there would be no one better for that role."

GALLATIN, Tenn. — A Florida man who says Conway Twitty is his father has been ordered to stop harassing the country singer.

Sumner County Chancellor Thomas Gray signed a temporary restraining order Monday barring Thomas James Fry of Jensen Beach, Fla., from contacting Twitty or members of his family.

Rose Palermo, Twitty's attorney, said the singer has offered to take a blood test to disprove Fry's claims. "He just won't accept it and believe it," she said.

Fry, believed to be 24, claims Twitty met his mother and fathered him during a drunken tryst. He has left numerous phone messages and notes at the singer's home and office since 1987, and the complaint said Fry followed Twitty around on a one-week cruise in December 1989.

Twitty, 58, is known for such hits as "It's Only Make Believe," "Hello Darlin'" and "She's Got a Single Thing in Mind."

TOKYO — Fiamalu Penitani doesn't like the groupies or the autograph seekers, but the perks of being one of the Hawaiian stars in sumo wrestling outweigh the drawbacks.

"Last week I got an invitation from the embassy to have dinner with Michael Jackson," he said. "Last year we got invited to see President Bush. So it's cool."

To millions of Japanese, the 21-year-old Penitani is known as Musashimaru, the third-ranking wrestler in Japan's ancient and tradition-conscious national sport.

"When I go out shopping, people want to touch me all the time or get an autograph," he said. "I don't like that."

United Press International is establishing an internship to honor Helen Thomas, who has been the news service's White House correspondent since 1961. Every spring a woman who is studying journalism will be chosen by the Washington Center for Politics and Journalism, an independent organization. The student will work in UPI's Washington bureau for a semester and receive a $1,000 stipend. The first intern, starting Feb. 1, will be Juliana Gruenwald, who graduates this month from the University of Minnesota. Ms. Thomas, 72, has covered the White House longer than any other reporter. She will mark her 50th anniversary with UPI in 1993. The news service, in financial straits for years, was sold last summer to Middle East Braodcasting Centre Ltd., an Arabic television network based in London.

LOS ANGELES — Jeff Margolis will direct the Academy Awards broadcast for a fifth year in a row.

The choice of director for the 65th annual Oscar presentation was announced Friday by producer Gilbert Cates.

James McVicars
PLAINTIFF
V.
Morrie Hamilton et. ux.
Donna Hamilton
DEFENDANTS

IN THE DISTRICT COURT of MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS
238th JUDICIAL DISTRICT

ORIGINAL PETITION TO QUIET TITLE

James McVicars brings suit against Morrie Hamilton and Donna Hamilton to quiet title to real property which he owns in Midland County, Texas.
1. James McVicars is an individual and a resident of Midland County, Texas
2. Morrie Hamilton and wife Donna Hamilton are individuals. Their whereabouts are unknown. They may be served by publication.
3. This court has jurisdiction because this is a suit affecting title to real property. Venue is proper in Midland County, Texas.
4. On April 25th, 1977 Morrie Hamilton and wife Donna Hamilton granted sold and conveyed to James McVicars by General Warranty Deed, recorded in volume 620, page 623 Deed records of Midland County, Texas, the following described real property located in Midland County, Texas, to wit: Lot 4, Block 121, West End Addition an addition to the city of Midland. Grantors retained a vendors lien to secure a promissory note of even date in the amount of $1500 attached to Exhibit "A".
5. Such note had been paid in full and plaintiff desired a release of the vendors lien however Grantors could not be located to secure the release.
6. Plaintiff wants the Court to declare that the note has been paid and that the vendors lien retained by Grantors is void vesting clear title in James McVicars.
Plaintiff prays that Defendants be cited to appear and answer and that upon final trial Plaintiff have the relief requested.

Respectfully submitted,
Matthew Blair

310 General Help Wanted

BURGER KING, 4805 N. Midkiff, now hiring day shift. Apply in person.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly AFTER EXPENSES, and in some cases ... even more!

➥ OK ... but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
