Library starts program for youngsters

Guest animals, rodeo tickets and T-shirt decals will be some of the highlights of the Howard County Library Summer Reading Program, which begins tomorrow and will continue until July 11.

Children who have completed first grade may register any time during the program.

"Animal Antics" is this summer's theme, and animals such as dogs, cats, a horse and a monkey will be featured, according to Donna Jackson, Children's Librarian.

Children participating in the program can receive several rewards for the number of books they read.

The first 100 children to read 10 books will earn rodeo tickets or T-shirt decals donated by the Big Spring Rodeo Association and the Friends of the Library. The Ritz Theater has also donated 30 tickets which children will be able to earn through the program.

There is a separate "Read-To-Me Club" for younger children who are not yet reading independently. These children may earn a certificate if they have ten or more books read to them during the six-week program.

Thursdays will be Activity Day and will feature arts and crafts, movies and speakers related to the "Animal Antics" theme.

Animals will be featured weekly, along with tips on the care and feeding of the animals. Margaret Lloyd, president of the Humane Society will provide instruction on pet care.

Saragosa likely to rebuild better

SARAGOSA (AP) — Jose Candelas showed the yellowed, creased newspaper clipping about his general store.

Published in 1963 with a photograph of the business, it detailed how the store had served Saragosa for more than a decade.

Twenty-four years after that story appeared, Candelas, 67, sat in his car on a hot Tuesday afternoon in front of where his store used to be. He also showed a new photograph taken last Saturday as he stood in the rubble of the small business.

Last weekend's killer tornado obliterated much of this small, poor and predominantly Hispanic hamlet in West Texas. Survivors now are organizing to rebuild their lives and the town, but in so many ways it can never be the same.

Candelas said he wanted to rebuild his store but he was uncertain that he could get the money to do it.

When the twister dipped from the sky without warning May 22, it razed more than 70 percent of Saragosa, destroying the Catholic church, Candelas' store and more than 55 mostly hand-made adobe and concrete-block homes.

It left 29 people dead and more than 162 injured. Damage was estimated at about $3 million.

The tornado also thrust this close-knit community out of its isolation and into the national spotlight.

The 250 or so residents of pre-tornado Saragosa had a simple life by modern standards. Mostly farmworkers, their days were long and filled with hard, manual labor.

"Most of these people don't know how to read or write," said Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez, who during part of his 31-year career with the sheriff's department was deputy for Saragosa's end of the county.

"If they had any kind of legal matters, they would bring it to me to look at."

Most residents owned their homes, but few if any could afford insurance. And their economic status might preclude their receiving certain types of government rebuilding aid.

"These people are so poor that I don't think many can qualify for low-interest loans," offered by the U.S. Small Business Administration as part of federal disaster relief, said state Rep. Larry Shaw, D-Big Spring, whose district includes Saragosa.

Many Saragosans are second and third generation Americans; others are Mexicans. But almost all have retained their Mexican heritage and culture — a tradition

Chairman favors a private service

The Herald has scheduled a number of stories that examine the issues involved with ambulance service in Big Spring. This is another in that series.

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Although Maxwell Green strongly favors a private ambulance service, he acknowledges that it's not the perfect choice.

Green is chairman of the Big Spring/Howard County Ambulance Operations Advisory Committee.

"The truth is, it's a no-answer situation; that's what you're looking at. It's not going to matter what Green's reasons for favoring a private service over a public service seem to stem primarily from his belief in the free enterprise system.

"The first thing is, I think you'll gain a more efficient operation. Free enterprise will always search out the most economical way to do a job — because of the profit motive. That's where you gain your efficiency."

"If we set the ambulance service as a public entity, history proves the expenditures will continue to increase and the entire operation will become a burden on the public," Green said.

He added: "It's your money, because if you go public, your taxes are going to go up and your living expenses are going to go down. And they are taking away your right to save your money and take care of yourself."

Green was reminded of an incident in August that involved a Big Spring man who needed ambulance transfer to Lubbock. The man was in debt to Lee Ambulance owner Charles Ginn as a result of a previous transfer, and Ginn initially refused to transport the man.

Green was asked if it was a private individual's duty to absorb the costs of transporting indigents. "They're forcing him (Ginn) to be charitable, and that's one of the problems you're faced with," Green said, adding, "I wish you hadn't asked that."

Green said the way to solve the you do, some future event is going to make you look foolish," said Green, a Big Spring accountant.

Green's committee is expected to recommend the city and county award the ambulance contract to Rural Metro, a private ambulance operator out of Scottsdale, Ariz. Rural Metro was the low bidder at $101,149.

City and county officials are scheduled to meet with the ambulance committee at 10 a.m. Monday in the Courthouse.

Rural Metro, the low bidder for Howard County ambulance service, has been operating in Pampa for about five years, and officials there are pleased with the service, Pampa City Manager Bob Hart said.

The Gray County city of approximately 23,500 residents has not experienced any problems with the service, Hart said.

The Big Spring Ambulance Operations Advisory Committee named Rural Metro its first choice from among the six submitted to the city/county committee.

Rural Metro's bid calls for an annual subsidy of $101,149.

The service receives a $106,000 subsidy for its service at Pampa, where both Gray County and the city contribute $53,000, Hart said.

The service has three ambulances and it responds to calls in Miami in Roberts County and White Deer in Carson County, he Saragosa residents and family and friends pick through the rubble of what was one of many adobe homes destroyed by a tornado May 23. The town's residents now look to rebuilding their homes.

Local institutions open Saragosa relief account

The Big Spring Herald, in cooperation with State National Bank and area churches, has launched a Saragosa Relief Fund to aid victims of the tornado that struck last weekend.

On May 22, a tornado leveled the town and killed 29 people.

Many relief organizations have rushed much-needed food and clothing to Saragosa. Now, more than anything else, the survivors need money to rebuild, said Richard White, Herald advertising manager.

The survivors lack even enough money to pay funeral expenses, not to mention the hospital costs, noted Catholic bishop Raymond Pena of the El Paso Diocese.

B.Y. "Bud" Butler, executive vice president of State National, said all contributions to the Saragosa Relief Fund will be sent to the El Paso Diocese, which guaranteed the money would be used only for the Saragosa citizens.

White, Butler and two Big Spring ministers will oversee the fund. The ministers are Rev. Stephen White of Immaculate Heart of Mary Church and Rev. Victor M. Sedinger of First Christian Church.

"This is truly a non-denominational effort," Rev. White said.

After a meeting to create the fund, the four board members emphasized that all church denominations, service clubs, businesses and area residents are invited to contribute to the fund established at State National Bank.

Butler said the donations would be tax-deductible, and anybody wishing to contribute could give a donation to any teller at the bank.

He said donations may be mailed to Saragosa Relief Fund, c/o State National Bank, Big Spring, 79720. Contributors may include a self-addressed envelope for the bank to mail a receipt, Butler said.

Richard White noted all contributions would be published in the Herald during the relief effort, scheduled through July 31. But White added that contributions would be accepted after that date.

Another collider bill approved by Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved another "super collider" bill Saturday.

Senators, working on the final Saturday of the 140-day regular legislative session, welcomed with a standing ovation the return of Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, to the Senate.

Truan, who turns 52 on June 9, suffered a heart attack — his third — three weeks ago.

"I'm very pleased to be here with you and very thankful that my health allows me to return," Truan said.

The super collider bill would allow the state land commissioner to trade interests in state-owned real estate in order to acquire a suitable site for the high-energy research accelerator.

No site has been selected for the proposed federal project, but several states, including Texas, are bidding for it.

The project would include a 16,000-acre campus and a tunnel 10 feet in diameter and 52 miles in circumference. It would cost $6 billion to construct and $270 million a year to operate.

The bill approved by the Senate on Saturday was sent to the governor on a 31-0 vote.

Bid offers non-profit alternative

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

One ambulance service is offering an alternative to the public or private choice.

First Responder Medical Inc. has submitted a bid to create a non-profit ambulance service corporation for Big Spring and Howard County.

According to Glenn Pratt of First Responder, that company would establish the service and sell it to a "public trust."

First Responder would provide three new ambulances, all the necessary equipment, and would train personnel and supervise the new non-profit service, Pratt said.

He explained that the public trust would be incorporated as a non-profit organization. City and county officials, hospital representatives, lay representatives, and a representative from First Responder would act as a board of trustees.

Pratt said his company offers "expertise, equipment, evaluation and low-interest financing."

Essentially, he said, the local public trust would own the ambulance service.

AMBULANCE

Private or Public?

Pratt said he would move to Big Spring for approximately six weeks to supervise the start of operations. Paul Sidener, who works for the company, would move to Big Spring and become the administrator of a 16-member staff, he added.

Pratt said it would take the public trust three years to pay for all the equipment. During those three years, the city and county would be expected to pay a monthly subsidy of $21,936, which equals $263,233 annually.

After three years, the proposal calls for the subsidy to decrease to $15,500 per month — $186,000 annually, he said.

Pratt said that subsidy is based on a projected 50 percent collection rate and 210 calls monthly.

Under the agreement, Pratt would evaluate the entire service periodically during the first year, after which the service could operate by itself.

A non-profit emergency service makes sense, Pratt said, because "you can't make money running an emergency ambulance service."

Big Spring City Manager Mack Wofford said the city is seriously considering all the proposals, including the one from First Responder.

Wofford said the creating of a non-profit corporation is "a very complex thing." He said he believes it's possible, but the biggest difficulty would be purchasing the equipment.

"For the first three years, it would be a substantial outlay," Wofford said.

Maxwell Green, a Big Spring accountant and chairman of the Ambulance Operations Advisory Committee, sees some advantages to First Responder's proposal.

"It would be a compromise between people advocating a public unit and people like ourselves advocating a private unit."

"The reason I could go along with it — you still have a contractual obligation. And if it proved unworkable, the city and county could get out of it in three years," Green said.

But Green, like Wofford, had one problem with the non-profit plan.

"We couldn't quite understand how it would be financed," he said.

Pratt said it would be financed by a base rate charge of $125 per call, plus fees for supplies used.

He also reported the First Responder bid was based on having two ready-to-roll ambulances round the clock — each staffed with a paramedic and a driver trained as an emergency medical technician.

Pratt added that the low bid by Rural Metro — an annual subsidy of $101,149 — would provide only one ambulance ready to roll at all times. When that unit responds to a call, the second crew be called out under the Rural Metro plan, Pratt said.

In addition, First Responder would reduce its bid by $1500 monthly if the city provides housing for the ambulances, Pratt said.

The city and county each pay an equal portion of the service's monthly deficit, which this year is expected to total $146,325 each, he said.

Residents are charged a flat rate fee of $85 for basic life support service and $100 for advanced life support, Voskamp said. Mileage and costs of major medical supplies are not included in the flat rate, he said.

The service has three ambulances that are considered operational and one in reserve, Voskamp said.

In Hobbs, N.M., Fire Chief Ken Fulcher boasted, "We have one of the best ambulance services in the state." It's operated out of the city's fire stations.

Both fire and ambulance services have been contained in one budget since 1968, he said. The budget now is nearly $2.5 million, City Finance Director Lawrence Jones reported.

Hobbs, a city of about 30,000 people, is located near the Texas-New Mexico border, about 115 miles west of Big Spring.

Fulcher said residents are charged a flat rate of $50 for the first mile and are charged $2.50 for each additional mile.

Collections for the service are managed by city hall, Fulcher said. "We have about an 80 percent plus collection rate," he said.

The service operates six ambulances with four ambulance crews, he said. Each crew consists of three people.

He estimated response time to be three to five minutes within city limits.

Firefighters want ambulance service

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Local firefighters want a local public ambulance service to be operated out of Big Spring fire stations, and they say the service could be operated cheaper than proposals submitted by Fire Chief Carl Dorton.

Some plan to convey that message at a meeting Monday, when the local ambulance service issue may be decided.

Fire Chief Carl Dorton, although favoring the idea of a public ambulance service, has indicated that a public service probably would be too costly to operate in Big Spring. In addition, he's indicated opposition to the service being operated by the fire department.

The Big Spring Professional Firefighters Association apparently believes differently.

John Branham, association president, said members believe that the best quality ambulance service is one operated through the fire department. He said the association represents 80 percent of local firefighters.

The Association also thinks Fire Chief Dorton's proposals for a city/county operated service were overestimated. Dorton submitted bids of $467,800 and $344,835 — the two highest bids received by the city/county ambulance committee.

Branham contended that Dorton's proposals "are overstated in our estimation," but Branham did not have specific figures to dispute Dorton's.

Branham said Dorton's salary calculations are not based on the firefighter wage scale — as Dorton claimed.

Dorton said shift workers would earn $21,000 annually plus benefits.

Firefighter Association Secretary/Treasurer Paul Brown said, however, that a "basic one" firefighter receives a base salary of $15,264.

The Ambulance Operations Advisory Committee is expected to recommend a private ambulance service to county commissioners and city council members at a 10 a.m. meeting Monday in the Courthouse.

City and county officials could decide the issue at that meeting. Rural Metro of Scottsdale, Ariz., the low bidder, is expected to be recommended by the committee as its choice of six bids.

Brown said he believes City Manager Mack Wofford and Fire Chief Carl Dorton are pushing for Rural Metro.

Brown contends, however, that Rural Metro doesn't meet the ambulance service specifications set by city officials.

The service would have only one advance life support ambulance in operation 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, instead of two, Brown said.

"It might be the lowest cost service, but it's not the best," Brown said.

"We'd rather see it run out of the fire stations and keep money here in town rather than have it go to Arizona."

The cost of ambulance calls by Rural Metro, which would nearly double the Lee Ambulance base rate, has Branham concerned.

"Those people with a fixed income will really be affected" by the $175 fee, he said.

Other cities

Residents are charged a $117 flat rate for basic life support service and $195 for advanced life support, according to Pampa City records.

An annual fee or subscription program is increasing in popularity, Hart said. Residents can pay a $49 family rate or $35 individual rate, and they aren't charged the base fee for ambulance service, said Hart, who added that he pays the annual fee.

"They haven't pushed it, but it's picking up" in popularity, he said of the annual fee.

The service has a good working relationship with police and fire department personnel, Hart said.

Meanwhile, in the East Texas city of Huntsville, with a population of approximately 31,000, a quasi-independent ambulance service has been operating since 1981, Huntsville Finance Director Patricia Allen said.

The service, called the Huntsville/Walker County Emergency Medical Service, is operated by a private citizen but governed by a board that includes city council members, county commissioners, a doctor and a Huntsville resident, Allen said.

It's not affiliated in any way with a commercial ambulance service, she said.

EMS Director Carl Voskamp refers to the company as "a municipal agency operated jointly by the city and county."

The service's budget for fiscal 1987 is $458,994, and revenues have been estimated at $128,550, Allen said.

Maxwell

problem of indigents is with charity — to "get the charities to reimburse the ambulance companies for the indigents."

"I don't feel the taxpayer should be responsible for hauling someone from Big Spring to Amarillo. A charity should do that; they have enough money," Green said.

"I have reached the conclusion that the county and city should only be responsible for getting the patient from the site of the emergency to the nearest hospital.

"I'm advocating that the county and city get completely out of the transfer business, let it be just a regular competitive business," he said.

At the same time, Green admitted that no one has the right to tell a charity what to do. Still, he insisted that charities should play a role in paying for the transfer of indigents.

"If you place the responsibility of filling that gap on the charities, they will fill that gap," he said.

Green cited another reason for his support of a private service. He said a private service can be fired, and a public service cannot.

"If these people fail to render a quality service, the city and county can cancel the contract through the escape clauses in the contract. This will enable the city and county to maintain a high quality service."

"If it's a public deal, they cannot do that," he added.

Green added one condition to his choice of a private service. He thinks the next ambulance service here shouldn't rely entirely on Big Spring for its business. He cited Lee Ambulance as an example.

"It's like Ginn — his operation is profitable, but it's really not profitable enough to make a living."

"The market here in Big Spring is a limited market. There's just so much of this business that's going to be available. Any ambulance service in Big Spring is going to be limited in its growth, and is going to have to go to other towns," he explained.

The top two recommendations from Green's committee were Rural Metro and Texas EMS — the lowest and third lowest bidders, and both have headquarters and operations elsewhere.

"The reason why we selected these companies is they have the ability to stay in Big Spring because their livelihood would not solely depend on one market," Green said.

Green said he's happy with his committee's choices, though he believes it's a no-win situation.

"All you can do is try to pick out what you think will provide the best service for the patient and the best deal for the taxpayer," he said.

Officials seek killer of East Texas driver

GILMER (AP) — An intense manhunt was under way Saturday night in East Texas after a hit-chucker shot and killed a motorist who stopped to pick him up, police said.

David Ryan, 29, of Pittsburg was shot about 10 a.m. Saturday by a man he had picked up on Texas Highway 300 during a drive from Pittsburg to Longview, Upshur County Sheriff Dale Jewkes said.

The shooting occurred about a quarter of a mile after Ryan and his 25-year-old brother Billy picked the man up, Jewkes said.

"The suspect ordered the two brothers out of the pickup truck, then fired two shots at them — the first one missing and the second one striking (David) Ryan in the head," Jewkes said.

Billy Ryan dove into a ditch and was not hurt, Jewkes said.

The sheriff described the assailant as a black man about 5-feet, 11-inches tall and weighing 190 pounds, with a beard and mustache. He wore a western shirt with the sleeves rolled up, brown pants and carried a brown leather jacket.

The man drove Ryan's truck south on Texas 300, turning off on an old oil road, apparently not knowing it was a dead end. He abandoned the truck about two

Highway to Lubbock closed

Recent rains in the area forced the closing of a section of Highway 37 north of Lamesa, requiring Lubbock-bound travelers to re-route through Brownfield, according to the Howard County Sheriff's office.

City Manager Mack Wofford reported that high water levels on the highway forced him to detour through Brownfield at approximately 3 p.m. Saturday.

He also said that high water levels on the detour made the route treacherous at times. Three times during his trip, he said, the water almost reached his automobile.

The spokesman for the sheriff's office did not have an estimate on when the highway section would be re-opened.

C-City senior permitted to join ceremony

COLORADO CITY — A Colorado City High School senior was allowed to participate in graduation ceremonies Friday night following a ruling by 32nd District Judge Weldon Kirk.

Wylie Dakan, 18, had been sentenced to in-school suspension for 20 days after allegedly sniffing air freshener at school. In addition to suspension, he was barred from extra-curricular activities, including graduation, for 20 days.

Kirk noted that the school's discipline management plan states that suspension is for 20 school days but that a student may participate in extra-curricular activities after 20 consecutive days.

Dakan and his mother, Carol Sue Dakan, had appealed the suspension to the school board and later asked Kirk for a restraining order to be issued against the school in order for Dakan to participate in graduation ceremonies. Kirk denied the restraining order.

Rebuilding

that has family and church at its center. It was on this tradition — family and church — that the survivors fell back on in the first days after the tornado. And it likely is this tradition that will be the cornerstone on which Saragosa rebuilds.

The church was there in the form of the Rev. Ralph Barranger, the Saragosa pastor who has worked since the tornado to help and console his parishioners, and Bishop Raymond Pena, who has pledged the resources of his diocese to help the town rebuild.

The family was there, too. By the end of the first day only a couple of families of survivors were staying in the Red Cross shelter at nearby Balmorhea. The rest had found refuge with families or friends.

After two days of being harried by reporters toting notebooks, tape recorders and mini-cams, the survivors, their families and friends decided it was too much. At their request, the sheriff's department kept reporters away from them.

"They just want to be with each other in their grief," said Kelly Davis, a deputy who covers Saragosa.

But after Tuesday, when 17 of the dead were buried after an outdoor funeral Mass that drew thousands, Saragosa began rebuilding.

The community faces more than the usual problems. As an unincorporated town, Saragosa had no elected mayor or city council. Some of its leaders died in the storm.

And as the debris was being cleared, county officials discovered that their property records of Saragosa were useless. The town plat had Saragosa sitting a mile away from its present site.

But residents this weekend were hoping to resolve these problems. They are having a community meeting to choose representatives.

They plan to redraw property lines, resettle survivors in temporary housing at Saragosa, and choose contractors to replace houses and buildings.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency and the SBA were to open a disaster service center Saturday to accept applications for loans and grants.

Grants for as much as $5,000 will be distributed within two weeks, a government spokeswoman said.

Private help has been overwhelming, said Susan Clowe, Red Cross spokeswoman in Saragosa. Almost $500,000 had been pledged to the Saragosa relief effort earlier this week, and inquiries continue, she said.

Earlier shipments of food, clothing and household items have been replaced by building supplies donated by lumber companies from across the state.

Experts with the Institute of Disaster Research at Texas Tech University report that communities hit by tornadoes usually rebuild in much better fashion.

By Friday, Jose Candelas agreed with that.

"Everybody's going to come back to Saragosa," he said — "everybody who's alive."

"It's going to be nicer, too."

House approves 'Buy North American'

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Saturday approved Senate changes that turned a "Buy American" bill into a Buy North American bill.

The measure, which now goes to Gov. Bill Clements, requires state agencies to give preference to purchase of Texas-made products, when available.

Under the original House bill, if no Texas bidder is involved, a preference would be given to products made in the United States. The Senate amended that portion of the bill to include products made in Canada and Mexico.

"I'm going to tell you about mistruth in labeling," said Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, who wanted to reject the Senate changes. "Here the American product was changed by the Senate to say that it's a product manufactured or assembled in the United States or in a country contiguous to the United States.

"So that means a Mexican product is an American product. It means a Canadian product is an American product," he said.

The House voted 48-85 against Geistweidt's motion to reject the Senate version. A voice vote then approved the Senate amendments.

Opinion

Ambulance workers voice opinion

To the editor:

This letter is in reference to the emergency ambulance service situation now facing the County Commissioners, City Council and people of Howard County.

We the undersigned, all trained and state certified in emergency medical procedures, are employed by the Big Spring ambulance service. Who better than we to voice our opinion on the service that provides the best offer or bid for Big Spring?

The service with the lowest bid does not always mean the best, most people would agree that you get what you pay for.

We all feel that the service that cost $101,150 for the first three years, and then drops by $77,232 a year, offers more in the way of quality service than some other options.

We are offering three new, full-equipped advance life support ambulances that eventually would be the property of Big Spring and Howard County. In addition, the offer includes more personnel, plus excellent continued medical and service training for meeting the standards for continuing education.

What continued service and training are the other bidders willing to provide? The funds and classes now available for service and training are rather limited.

We feel that the quality of the incoming service is what is important — more so than the almighty dollar.

We realize the City of Big Spring and Howard County have limited funds, and are sincerely working out a difficult situation in the best way they know how — by looking at the money required to obtain the service.

The service that the committee is favoring wants to charge a base rate of $175 for each run, plus mileage and supplies used. The base rate charged by Lee Ambulance is only $90 and supplies.

Does the city believe that the people are willing to accept a service that is going to charge more and possibly offer less?

The current service is operating with a subsidy of $98,000. It also has a transfer contract with the VA Medical Center and performs private transfers for other hospitals and citizens. This firm already has made it public that it is having problems making ends meet.

How can a proposed bid of $101,150 meet the needs of a service when the $98,000 subsidy and transfer contract does not?

We feel that the citizens of Big Spring and Howard County must be aware of the options available since the citizens eventually will pay for services rendered and should have a choice of who they want. We also want to stress that we should be looking for a service that will be here today, tomorrow and in the future.

Under the terms of the proposal of the low bidder, which the ambulance committee apparently is recommending, only one ambulance crew would be "on duty" at the station while a second crew will be "on call" with a one-way pager in the event of a second ambulance emergency.

From our experience, we know that when a second crew must be contacted at home, perhaps late at night, the actual ambulance response time is increased by at least 8 to 10 minutes. Response time often is critical and that time period could be too long — a factor we're trying to change.

We would like to emphasize that we will continue to give you, the people of Big Spring and Howard County, the best emergency medical care that we can give. We all feel obligated to our jobs and the community where we have chosen to work — to give no less than our all, and to give it unconditionally.

Golfer sees injustice in cart fees

To the editor:

Golfers do not play golf 365 days a year. Most of them work at least 5 days a week. Golf courses are not lighted as softball fields are. The fact is, I pay the city $550 per year to play golf at the Comanche Trail Golf Course.

The ordinance passed by the city council in May 1986 — establishing trail fees for private golf carts — was not enforced until March 1987.

Some honest individuals who rent a golf cart shed from the city paid the trail fee, effective June 1, 1986 for 1 year — expiration date May 31, 1987.

The free-loaders who also rent a golf cart shed from the city finally paid the trail fee — beginning in January, February and March 1987 — each for 1 year. They expire in December, 1987, and January and February, 1988, respectively. They get seven to nine months free trail fees.

City council refuses to give any compensation to the honest individuals who paid as the trail fee ordinance directed.

The moral of this injustice is that honest individuals are penalized and the free-loaders are rewarded.

I guess that's par for the course.

Band teacher's skills appreciated

To the editor:

I'm taking this opportunity to express appreciation and give a pat on the back — for a job well done — to Mr. Daniels for his hard work and extreme patience and success in training and teaching the kids of Goliad how to handle, play and perform with their instruments.

A statement was made at the Christmas program that the Runnels band knew very little when they started their training there. That statement has been on my nerves since the time I heard it.

Credit is due to a man or woman who has the patience to sit and have kids start out with sour notes and banging and turn them into musicians.

The band does play well and the other kids did play well before going to the other schools. My sixth grade daughter is looking forward to her seventh grade year at Goliad in Mr. Daniels' class. Thank you Mr. Daniels. Good teachers are appreciated!

Organizations issue veterans invite

To the editor:

At this time of year I think it fitting that the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2013 and Disabled American Veterans Chapter 47 have proper recognition.

We invite all veterans in either category to come to the VFW Post on Driver Road the first Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. There will be people there to answer your questions and help fill out your applications. You will need to bring a copy of your discharge papers.

We especially wish to invite Vietnam veterans both male and female. We need their youth and talents. Veterans from WWI, WWII, Korea and Vietnam, the VFW aim is to help veterans and foster camaraderie among its members.

I am the only active female member of VFW Post 2013 and the men treat me with the utmost respect, of which I am grateful and honored.

The DAV meets the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. All veterans who are designated disabled from service-connected disabilities of any kind are urged to join this organization. I can tell you from experience that the DAV will come through for you in time of need. Just designate this organization your power of attorney in dealing with the federal government, Veterans Administration, etc.

Each post also has a ladies' auxiliary.

Decades of struggle yield writer-son's tale of tribute

By JESSE TREVINO

He has lived almost all the time Texas has existed in this century. He has seen Texas change and lived through the episodes that have formed the Mexican-American in Texas.

As such, on his 80th birthday, the life of Evaristo Lopez Trevino is a living lesson in Texas' history and a study of part of its future.

The most dramatic point of my father's story came, actually, late in life. An ancient sewing box my grandmother surrendered at her deathbed — no one knew how old she was, the best guess surpassed 100 — revealed he was born not in Mexico as assumed, but in San Marcos, Texas.

But the real surprise was that abuelita had been born a Texan, too. Only 33 years before she was born, the Alamo had fallen. Overnight, our family became third-generation Texans.

That leap did not erase the man that had been formed. Though born in Texas, he thought of himself as an immigrant. But as a "foreigner," he traveled widely throughout the Southwest as a young man with five brothers in a Model-T they had salvaged.

Those early travels revealed ugly times in Texas. It was on a summer Friday night that the five came upon the Ku Klux Klan. Despite having grown up in the Mexican countryside halfway between Laredo and Monterrey, Mexico, he knew exactly what the Klan represented.

That night in 1922, at the age of 15, he and his brothers made their way quietly by moonlight around the crosses flaring into the sky. He can describe that night and the cities they visited in their travels — especially the ones where Mexicans could buy food only through the windows of restaurants.

It was in these cities and towns that he worked odd jobs, because the oil fields — where the big money was — were not open to him or his brothers.

Work became a labor of love, and he learned how to make do with the barest of resources. Texas' booming highway construction programs and the labor shortages after Hitler invaded Poland provided steady work and put food on the table for the family.

The family was about to explode — part of the demographic wave that is now a factor in the state's future. It would grow to nine kids.

As fortune would have it, the Legislature filled the classrooms of Texas with these very kids with passage of the Gilmer-Aiken Act in 1949, which brought droves of Mexican-Americans into schools for the first time. The more students a school district claimed, the more money from the state.

But the family needed a home. The Model-T mentality of salvaging and making do swung into action.

Thus, one day, a truck arrived loaded with surplus, blackened railroad ties he had latched onto from the Southern & Pacific Railroad. A-la-Lincoln, he would build, not a log cabin, but a house that, when going up, rose grotesquely. The family was chagrined.

But the builder-craftsman went to work, smoothing cement and brick over the rough, hacked ties. A rather pleasant house took shape with insulation the thickness of which 40 years later would have earned a fat tax deduction.

That resourcefulness begotten from field work, from love of the land and from simple hard times gave way to ingenious applications.

Thus a heavy iron barrel with a two-inch thick metal lid became a barbecue pit with a series of chains and pulleys that closed and opened with the slightest effort.

The driveway was paved with cement left over from construction sites. Brick rescued after the demolition of part of a school building became three new rooms, added on, of course, by father and sons.

By this time, Texas had moved ahead into John Kennedy's administration and the stage was set for the civil rights fights of Lyndon Johnson. My father, naturally, became the plaintiff in one of the first lawsuits that fought to keep the local Mexican school from being closed.

Those Johnson years gave his family their opportunity, and five went on to capture college degrees. All have smaller numbers of children, reflecting the movement towards the emergence of a Mexican-American middle class.

Through it all, he provided a home, sometimes not without the pressures of raising nine kids. But his greatest challenge lay before him — cancer.

It struck at the age of 75. Of all the things he had faced in life — discrimination, prejudice, the unrelenting demand to work — none would threaten his life as the malignant tumor the doctors found around his spleen.

A year after his diagnosis, the doctors and he had wiped the cancer from his body.

No one was really surprised.

Feliz cumpleaños, Dad.

Date helps in files search

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

Occasionally we receive requests from area residents seeking to obtain copies of articles that appeared in the Herald perhaps as long as 15 or 25 years ago.

Often, people think that all they need to do is tell us what the story was about, and then we can go to our files and find it within minutes.

That just isn't so. Our files aren't that sophisticated.

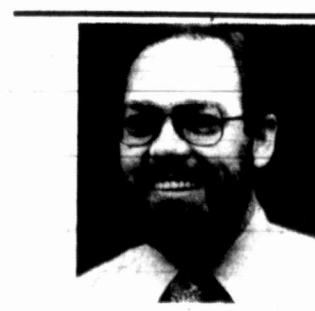

Yes, we have bound volumes of old newspapers — month by month — back into the 1950s. But without knowing at least the month and year that a particular story appeared in the newspaper, we could spend hours, days, perhaps even weeks hunting for that story.

One caller said she wanted to find a story printed "about 25 to 30 years ago."

I don't remember the topic of the story, but I explained that we don't have subject files on everything we publish in the newspaper.

Our clipping files only go back a few years, and they're rather limited to local subjects such as county industries and businesses, local governmental agencies, community organizations and prominent community leaders.

We only file clippings of articles that we think we may need to refer to in future stories. Otherwise, we face the same problem others would face in finding a story printed several years ago — we would need to know the month and year to locate it.

In addition, we have a problem with inconsistencies in our files as a result of the different library clerks and varied filing procedures established by those clerks and the editors they worked for.

We also have a microfilm file, but our microfilm viewer needs to be repaired, and we have no means of making copies from the microfilm.

That's why we often advise callers to go to the Howard County Library to locate stories published years ago in the Herald.

Research at the library often will reveal approximately when the event happened. In addition, the library has old copies of the Herald on microfilm, plus the equipment needed to make copies from the microfilm.

We have a small staff in our news room, but if it doesn't take more than a few minutes to find a story for a reader, we will do it.

We might be able to locate the story within a few minutes if the article was published recently, and if we know or can determine the approximate date.

During the late morning hours, however, when we're working under the pressure of deadlines for that day's paper, we can't afford to lose time hunting stories for other people. In that situation, we may be forced to simply take a name and phone number and check later, or advise a call to the library.

In general, readers will need to provide the approximate date, within a week or so, in order for us to help them locate an article.

Berkheimer is managing editor of the Herald.

Chamber bulletins

Congratulations to all graduating seniors at area high schools and colleges.

The Big Spring Chamber of Commerce Education Committee presented certificates and thesauruses to valedictorians and salutatorians at area schools, Howard College and the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

The Transportation Committee met with county officials last month to suggest a new west entrance for the Industrial Park as a joint city-county project. It would provide access through the Interstate 20 underpass at the west edge of the Industrial Park.

The Cultural Affairs Council is planning for the fall ArtsFest '87. The month-long festival will highlight the various types of arts in the community.

Demonstrations will be provided by artists from Howard College and the local public schools. The Big Spring Symphony's fall concert will be included.

The celebration also will include the Crossroads Fine Arts Association show and the annual Arts and Crafts Festival at Howard College.

A Halloween costume ball is scheduled for Oct. 31 at the Big Spring Country Club as a celebration of the arts and as a fund-raiser for the council. More details will be released later.

The Convention & Visitors Bureau Committee is working on a couple of projects to create more awareness of the hospitality and tourism industry in Big Spring and Howard County. One idea is the creation of a hospitality awards program.

The program will allow anyone who receives good service at a restaurant, motel, service station or other business to nominate someone for an award.

Awards, to be given in the fall at a drawing, will include incentive items to encourage employees in the hospitality industry to smile that extra smile and really sell Big Spring.

If you think about it, that's what sells Big Spring — the people and how friendly we are to travelers and visitors who stop in our town.

The Convention & Visitors Bureau also is planning a Mayor's Circle of Honor.

This program involves a challenge to all residents and organizations to invite their professional association or club to bring a meeting to Big Spring. These meetings can be district, regional or even state meetings.

The idea is to bring more small meeting business into Big Spring. Each meeting delegate who stays overnight can be expected to spend at least $65 per night. These dollars turn over at least seven times before they leave the community.

By multiplying $65 by the number of meeting delegates and the number of nights stayed we can see the economic impact that these meetings have on Big Spring.

The annual Strategic Planning Retreat drew attention to many topics that should be addressed by the county, city and the school districts. The ideas and suggestions now are being discussed those entities.

These annual retreats are good to emphasize mutual needs that can be handled to benefit the entire community. The ideas discussed covered areas that concern several Chamber committees — beautification, convention and visitors, transportation, education, industrial development and downtown development, to name a few.

These committees will be watching to see what solutions result from the planning retreat.

Former lawmaker dies

CONCORDIA, Kan. — Former U.S. Sen. Frank Carlson, whose 40-year political career also included terms as Kansas governor and as a congressman, died Saturday. He was 94.

Carlson, the only Kansas politician to hold all three offices, died at St. Joseph's Hospital in Concordia at 6:30 a.m., a family member said. He had been hospitalized in poor health for a long time.

Carlson, a Republican, was the epitome of the grass roots politician, a homespun farmer whose unassuming style and close rapport with ordinary people carried him to 13 election victories in 13 tries from 1928 to 1962.

Frank says he's gay

BOSTON — U.S. Rep. Barney Frank said Friday that he is homosexual, becoming only the second member of Congress to openly discuss his homosexuality.

"If you ask the direct question 'Are you gay?' the answer is 'Yes. So what,'" Frank told The Boston Globe.

Frank, a 47-year-old, four-term congressman from Newton, said recent media scrutiny of the private lives of former presidential candidate Gary Hart and the late U.S. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney of Connecticut prompted him to make the acknowledgement.

"I don't think my sex life is relevant to my job," said Frank, who is not married.

Syrian to stand trial

FORT WORTH — A Syrian national accused of holding a 10-year-old boy hostage at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport has been judged competent to stand trial on federal hostage taking charges.

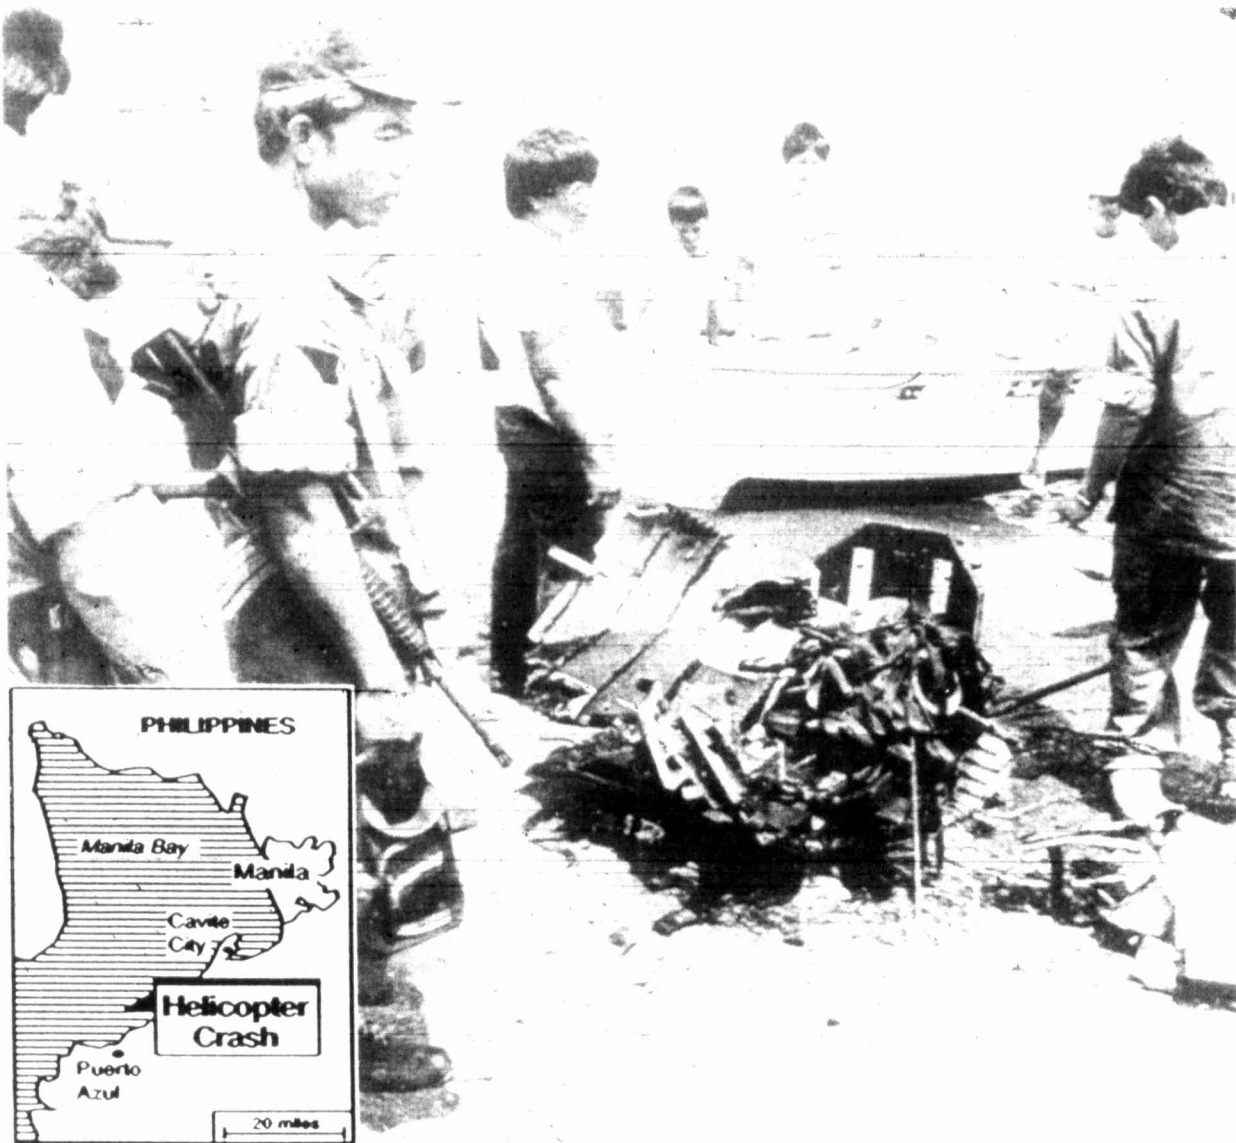

Attorneys for both sides agreed Friday that Solah Kassem Abou Kassem, 26, is capable of understanding the charges against him and assisting in his defense. U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon set a formal arraignment for next Friday.

Michael Caruso of Phoenix, Ariz., was held hostage for almost eight hours at a Delta Air Lines terminal at the airport Jan. 5 before negotiators got him released unharmed. Police said Abou Kassem demanded a flight to Egypt.

Woman kills husband

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss. — A woman convicted of stabbing two husbands to death in less than a year has received a 20-year prison sentence for manslaughter in the latest slaying.

Circuit Judge W. B. Brown gave Mary Lou Martin, 28, the maximum sentence for manslaughter Friday in the 1986 death of her husband, Charles Martin of Byhalia.

'Copter crash Four dead in movie tragedy

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Philippine air force helicopter on loan to a U.S. movie crew crashed into Manila Bay on Saturday, killing four people and injuring five. Except for an injured West German, all aboard were Filipinos.

A Philippine air force statement said the S-26 Sikorsky aircraft was bound for Puerto Azul, a resort about 50 miles southwest of Manila, when it plunged into the bay off the town of Naic.

Fishermen rescued the survivors, who were taken to a hospital in Manila.

All on board were Philippine military personnel, except for film crew member Max Motchmann, the air force said.

A nurse on duty at Manila's Makati Medical Center said Motchmann underwent surgery late Saturday, and she had no information on his condition.

The statement said the reason for the crash was undetermined. Filming for the movie "Missing in Action, Part III," starring American actor Chuck Norris, was under way in Puerto Azul.

Air force spokesman Col. Pablo Gonzales said the helicopter took off around dawn Saturday from Villamor Air Base, adjacent to Manila International Airport, and was airborne for about an hour before it crashed.

Military authorities authorized use of the helicopter for the film.

The crash occurred one day after a jury in Los Angeles acquitted "Twilight Zone" movie director John Landis and four associates of manslaughter charges for the film location deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children in a helicopter accident nearly five years ago.

Soviets replace chief

MOSCOW — Defense Minister Sergei L. Sokolov and the chief of air defenses were removed Saturday after the Politburo blasted the military for letting a foreign plane enter Soviet airspace and fly all the way to Moscow's Red Square.

The official Tass news agency said Sokolov, 75, was relieved of his duties in "connection with his retirement" and replaced by General of the Army Dmitri Yazov, 64, also a World War II veteran.

The head of the air defense forces, Chief Marshal Alexander Koldunov, 63, was accused of negligence and lack of control over his units, and fired.

1,400 battle new blaze

BEIJING — More than 1,400 firefighters on Saturday battled a new fire in northeastern China just south of where a huge forest fire that killed nearly 200 people was extinguished last week, the Forestry Ministry said.

Meanwhile, a United Nations agency and Hong Kong's government announced a total of more than $2 million in assistance to victims of the mammoth blaze.

A ministry spokesman said Saturday that the new fire in Inner Mongolia was still burning, but he had few details.

Pilot just wanted to talk

HAMBURG, West Germany — The daredevil West German teen-ager who piloted a plane from Scandinavia to Moscow's Red Square told Soviet police he just wanted to make friends with Russians, a newspaper report said Saturday.

In a police interrogation, the youth was asked why he had flown to Moscow, Bild said. "I just wanted to talk with Russians," it quoted Rust as replying.

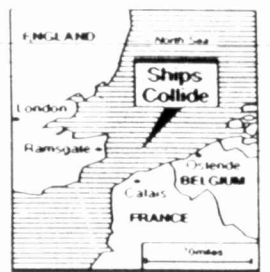

The wild and wonderful story of Rust's 420-mile odyssey from Scandinavia to Moscow in a Cessna 172 aircraft delighted the West German population and news media.

Tanker, ship collide

RAMSGATE, England — A tanker loaded with oil and a Polish cargo ship collided early Saturday in the English Channel and the tanker caught fire, the coast guard said.

There were no immediate reports of casualties, but "both captains say everybody is OK," said a coast guard official at Dover in southeast England.

The tanker's 41-member crew was rescued by a French cargo ship after jumping overboard, said the coast guard official, who commented on condition of anonymity.

"If everyone over 50 had checkups for colorectal cancer, the cure rate could be as high as 75%."

"If more people had colorectal cancer checkups, more people could be cured," says Dr. LaSalle D. Teffall, Jr., M.D., F.A.C.S., Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery, Howard University Hospital, Washington, D.C. "It's that simple. You can't cure it if you don't know you have it." But if it's detected early, the cure rate for colorectal cancer is very high. Your doctor can perform the digital and proctoscopic exams, and you take care of the simple stool blood test at home.

The present cure rate is 44%. We believe it could be at least 51% higher. Since men and women are equally affected by this disease, we urge everyone over 50 to get regular checkups at the intervals specified in the box on the right.

Fact is, there will be 130,000 new cases of colorectal cancer this year. You can help us cure 75% of them.

If you are not in the age group affected please pass this information on to someone you know who

The warning signs for colorectal cancer are: a change in bowel habits and blood in the stool.
People with a family history of colon or rectal cancer or ulcerative colitis are at higher risk and are urged to be doubly cautious.
Help us raise the cure rate.

Colorectal Cancer Checkup Guidelines for men and women over 50 without symptoms:

- digital exam annually
- stool blood test annually
- procto exam every 3 to 5 years after 2 initial negative tests 1 year apart

Old friend prompts memories of store

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
I ran into Earl Caudle the other day in Seminole. He used to work in my dad's grocery store in Fort Worth when I was in high school.

Earl was just 18 years old when he came to Fort Worth from Avoca. My father asked him what he could do, and Earl replied, "I'll work hard at anything you want me to do."

One of Earl's first assignments was to trim some cauliflower. Earl went to work on it, leaving just a little bit of the white showing.

My dad came by, picked up a head of the cauliflower and asked Earl, "Would you buy that?" Earl said he would not.

My dad took the knife, trimmed the head real nice so lots of the white was showing, then showed it to Earl and asked, "Now, would you buy that?"

Earl replied, "No, sir."

When my dad asked why, Earl said, "Heck, I don't even know what it is."

Another guy who worked in the store was Jimmy Majors. He used to sing Muleskinner Blues real loud. That was one of two songs he knew.

The other one had meaningful lyrics:

Tumbleweed Smith

"Two cents, three eggs and a postcard is nothing worth bragging about but one thing for sure and for certain I'd rather be with than without two cents, three eggs and a postcard...etc."

He sang those at full volume and, when he finished, people would applaud — more out of appreciation that he had quit than for his singing ability.

Leonard was a little red-headed boy about 6 years old. He would come into the store with his little sister, Linda.

Once the store was burglarized and some small items were taken. It was apparent that the burglar was young and wanted some candy, bubble gum and a kite or two. When Earl questioned Leonard about it, Leonard quickly said, "I didn't steal that kite."

The store had a bench in front of it. My dad referred to it as the mourners' bench.

When Earl asked him about the name, my dad said, "People come in here, spend lots of money; then they go out there, sit on that bench, and just moan and groan."

That bench had a special memory for me. One night my folks went to prayer meeting and asked me to close the store. I had the day's receipts in a money bag and, after locking, was sitting on the bench visiting with one of my friends.

Later I had a date. When I got home around midnight, Daddy asked me if I had brought the money home. I didn't say a word, but jumped in the car and drove as fast as I could back to the store. There was the sackful of money, still sitting on the bench.

Another time Vernon Filbert drove to the store on his tractor to get a few items for lunch. He

I was just getting into driving and I could not resist getting on the thing. I was going to back it into the street, but I put it in forward instead of reverse.

As the tractor went right for the front door, I turned it into the bench and demolished it. But at least it saved the tractor from going into the store's front door.

A man came in the store one day and asked to open a charge account. My dad asked him if he had any money. The man said he did. "Then you don't need to open a charge account," said my dad. So many memories.

Late one night the store blew up when two employees were putting in a hot water heater. About 60 percent of everything in the store was on the floor. Neighbors came in and helped, and by 6 a.m. the next day nearly everything had been cleaned.

Earl's salary was $50 a week, and he had to be in the store six days a week from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. In those days, there was no television and we had to entertain ourselves. And believe me, we had some entertainment.

Girl wins clapping contest

Fourth-grader Laura Elrod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dee Elrod, 415 Dallas, was the champion of the Bauer Magnet School Rhythm Clapping contest for 1986-87, according to Susan Dawes, music instructor for the school.

The contest was similar to a spelling bee, except that instead of spelling words, the participants clapped out rhythms.

Laura beat four other finalists for the championship, and was awarded a trophy for her efforts.

The other finalists, who each received a medal, were Joe Alvear, Elisa Hinojos, Joe Marion, and Ian McKenzie.

Other student participants in the contest were:

Roger Eddington, Joe Franklin, Melonie Molina, Tommy Olsen, Patsy Rodriguez and Michael Trevino.

Woman receives top award

A Snyder woman, a student at Texas Christian University, has earned one of the nation's most prestigious awards for ROTC excellence.

Cadet Jayne M. Jones, daughter of Charles E. Jones of Snyder, and Carolyn M. Jones of Fort Worth, received the 1987 George C. Marshall Award as one of over 300 college students from across the country recognized for their excellence in military science and leadership skills.

The award was presented at a recent ceremony conducted by the United States Army and the George C. Marshall Foundation, at the Virginia Military Institute.

The George C. Marshall Foundation has been honoring the nation's top ROTC cadets since 1977. The award was named in honor of George C. Marshall who served as the Army's chief of staff during World War II and later went on to serve as Secretaries of State and Defense during the Truman administration.

While attending Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Jones also has received the Distinguished Military Student Award.

Jones plans to receive a commission as a second lieutenant and become a recruiter at Texas Christian University.

Roman Catholic chosen as new SMU president

DALLAS (AP) — A Duke University professor hired to lead Southern Methodist University out of its scandal-marred mire says that his brand of scholarship and Texas' famed football mania may not be compatible.

"And if it is incompatible, then academics must prevail," A. Kenneth Pye declared Friday after SMU's Board of Trustees chose him to replace L. Donald Shields as the Southwest Conference school's ninth president.

Shields resigned from the president's post Nov. 21 after growing allegations of illicit payoffs to athletes. The scandal eventually cost SMU its 1987 football season and embarrassed officials all the way to the governor's mansion.

Pye, a 55-year-old Roman Catholic, quickly distanced himself from the payoffs mess and pledged to maintain athletic integrity and academic excellence at SMU.

"I accepted this post because I see it as a challenge in some senses and a remarkable opportunity in others," said Pye, who twice served as chancellor at Duke. "I'm not buying a pig in a poke and I'm not responsible for what happened here."

"The university faces challenges, but even greater opportunities. The football scandal is behind it. The future is before it," he said. "I am deeply honored by my selection as president of SMU."

Pye was selected from among the more than 225 candidates reviewed by the presidential search committee headed by Dallas oilman Ray Hunt, acting chairman of the board of trustees.

The Rev. Spurgeon M. Dunn III, editor and general manager of the United Methodist Reporter, said the appointment breaks with Methodist tradition because Pye is a Roman Catholic heading the Methodist university.

Dunn said it may be difficult initially for Methodists to accept Pye, but "it's not an insurmountable task."

Pye starts at SMU in the autumn, and his appointment comes at a time of upheaval as the school faces two years without football and an overhaul of its governing structure.

But "this is not a university that needs a miracle man. It is not a university that needs a general on a white horse. It is a strong university already with a good staff, a distinguished faculty, an able administration, a good library and good laboratories," he said. "If I did not believe that, I would not be here."

In the harshest penalty ever against a college football program, the National Collegiate Athletic Association suspended SMU football for 1987, citing $61,000 in illicit payments to 13 SMU players or former players. The school subsequently decided not to play football in 1988.

Pvt. Tommy E. Rawls, son of Carrol D. and Loyce K. Rawls of 500 Aylford, has completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the United States Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations.

Completion of this course qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect-fire crewman.

Soldiers were taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

Capt. C. David Ewing, son of Leatrice Ewing, 1700 Lancaster, commanding officer, Naval Station, San Diego, accepted the 1986 Commander-In-Chief's Installation Excellence Award for the United States Navy on behalf of Naval Station.

He received the award in ceremonies May 15 at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C.

The award is the highest a military installation can receive and was established by President Reagan in 1984 to recognize the efforts of the people operating and maintaining United States military installations worldwide.

"NavSta was runner-up for this award in 1984 and again in 1985 before winning this year," Capt. Ewing said.

Each of the four Military Services conducted its own competition and submitted nominations for its top installation, as well as runners-up, to the Secretary of Defense.

Spring training over; Steers prep for fall

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

This is the second year the Big Spring footballers haven't put on the pads in the spring. Steers head coach Quinn Eudy says he still hasn't gotten use to it.

The defending 2-4A champs recently finished their spring training and Eudy has 125 hopefuls to choose from next year. Eudy makes no bones about the disadvantage his players face by not being able to practice like Big Spring used to do when it competed in class AAAAA. The University Interscholastic League permits only AAAAA teams to put on the pads during the spring.

"If we could put on the pads in the spring, it would help find several kids that could play. It gives some of the kids a chance to step forward and make the varsity," said Eudy.

"We missed looking at some things offensively and defensively because we couldn't do them without putting on pads. You get a good look at the kids in the spring. You work on fundamentals in the spring with pads."

Nevertheless Eudy says the Black and Gold had a good spring season using a fairly new approach. The Steers concentrated hard on the weights, something they normally do. But a new addition was a swimming and water program, a new twist initiated last year.

We had the kids swimming and running in the water. We did it the year before and got excellent results. The water elongates the muscles and helps the athletes increase their strength.

"We did it last year on Saturdays

Members of the Big Spring Steers football team get set for the opening kickoff in a game this past season. The Steers recently after games. It got the soreness out and doesn't put as much stress on the muscles and joints."

Eudy's workout formula seems to be paying off. A number of the players can bench press over 300 pounds and run at least a 4.9 second 40-yard dash. "The younger kids were behind the people coming back, but I think they caught up by the end of the year. They've really been working hard," said Eudy.

The Steers will enter the 1987 season with some slim numbers, as far as veterans go. Unlike last year when Big Spring fielded 36 seniors and 17 lettermen. This year the Steers have 10 returning lettermen.

Eudy says he won't make many changes in his attack. His troops will still run the Veer option offense and a 50 defense, which is a five-man front.

Offensively, the reigning district champs, return five starters, including All-State tackle Burrow. He and tackle Kyle Carroll and tight end Kenneth Banks are the returnees on the line. The other two returners are running back Charles White and wide receiver Shawn Shellman, who may get a look at quarterback.

Eudy says there a chance some offense players will be switched to defense. "We may take some of our better athletes on offense and switch them to defense. We need to throw the ball better and we worked on it real hard. We have four quarterbacks who have the possibility of being good. They just have to make up their minds to compete."

Quarterback hopefuls include Steve Gill, Craig Knocke, Robert Rodriguez and Shellman.

There are plenty of spots open defensively. Only secondary players Byron McElreath and Danny Williams return as starters. "We've definitely got some holes to fill," said Eudy. "But we've got some good athletes. I'm confident we'll be strong because of the mobility of the players playing defense."

"We'll add more to our defense since this is the second year we'll be running it. We'll play it better just because we've been using it."

One change in the Big Spring coaching system will take place in the defensive line. Last year's DL coach, Allan Bollig, has resigned after five years on the staff. He will be replaced by Terry Benner, last year's freshmen coach.

San Jacinto fails to repeat

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Jimmy Rogers fired a two-hitter against the nation's top-ranked team Friday night to lead Seminole, Okla., to a 14-2 trouncing of San Jacinto, Texas, in the National Junior College World Series.

Rogers, 17-3, struck out seven and shut down the two-time defending national champions to give Seminole a shot at the title.

Eddie Toledo tapped an infield single that scored two runs in the third to give Seminole, 89-12, a 3-2 lead that the Trojans never lost.

Butch Harris lined a two-run single in the fifth for Seminole's insurance runs in a four-run inning. The Trojans rocked San Jacinto for six runs in the ninth to force a second championship game with the Gators.

San Jacinto got its two runs in the second when Bill Losa, who is batting 10-for-13 in the tournament, walked and Mike Taylor slammed a two-run homer.

From then on, Rogers shut down the previously powerful San Jacinto attack.

The Gators, 51-8, had been rolling through the tournament toward their third national title before Seminole stayed alive Friday night.

Earlier in the week, the Gators had dispatched Seminole to the loser's bracket with a 9-6 victory.

San Jacinto's defense let down Friday night by committing two errors against Seminole, which was the first team in the week-long tournament to play a game without a single fielding mishap.

It was the first loss in the national tournament for San Jacinto in two years.

Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini serves against South Africa's Karen Schimper whom she defeated 6-4, 6-1 in fourth round play of the French Open.

With Emilio Sanchez already in the fourth round of the men's singles and playing Sunday, sister Arantxa Sanchez, at 15 the youngest player in the women's draw, reached the last eight.

She beat Carina Karlsson of Sweden 6-1, 6-4 to become the first Spanish woman since 1931 to make the quarterfinals.

Wilander, the best clay court player in the world on current form, beat America's Aaron Krickstein for the second successive year.

The 22-year-old Swede, winner of Monte Carlo and Rome in the last month, stumbled in the middle but otherwise dominated as he won 6-1, 6-7, 6-0, 6-2, his 14th victory in a row.

Noah, the home favorite and champion in 1983, had no problems against Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Connors next plays Osterthun, who beat Damir Keretic 6-4, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4.

Carlsson, 15-3 on clay since coming back from a knee injury, continued his surge through the championships with another straight-sets victory, this time 7-5, 6-2, 6-1 over Francisco Yunis of Argentina.

Sabatini, who has twice beaten women's top seed Martina Navratilova this year, ended the run of South Africa's Karen Schimper, who was playing in her first Grand Slam event. The 17-year-old Argentine won 6-4, 6-1 and now meets Sanchez.

Stephanie Rehe, who beat 13th-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez in an earlier round, had chances to post another upset as she took Maleeva to a tiebreaker.

But once the Bulgarian had edged the first set, she ran out a comfortable 7-6, 6-1 winner.

Becker started with a rush against Sundstrom as he won the opening set in just 43 minutes.

But suddenly, his game began to come apart. He dropped his serve three times in a row and made countless errors with a poorly executed sliced backhand and an impatient attitude.

Sundstrom, once the world's sixth-ranked player but now No. 70 and making a comeback after two years of nagging injuries, squared the match by playing steadily from the back of the court.

Boston makes finals

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 37 points and Danny Ainge hit two key jumpers and four free throws down the stretch as the Celtics kept alive their hopes of a repeat NBA title with a 117-114 victory over Detroit in the seventh game of the Eastern Conference finals Saturday.

The Celtics, who have won 16 NBA championships, will meet the Los Angeles Lakers, who completed a four-game sweep of the Seattle SuperSonics last Monday, in the best of seven championship series starting Tuesday night at Inglewood, Calif.

With their heart-stopping victory in sweltering Boston Garden, where temperatures were in the upper 80s, the Celtics continued a tradition of home-court playoff success. They now are 13-2 in seventh games at home, with the only losses coming in 1973 against the New York Knicks and 1982 against Philadelphia, both times in Eastern Conference finals.

Joe Dumars, a second-year guard who scored a career-high 35 points, tied the score for the 16th time at 99 with 4:18 remaining. On their next possession, the Celtics missed five straight shots and got five rebounds before Ainge, who finished with 18 points, connected on a 3-pointer from the corner.

The teams traded baskets until the final minute, when Ainge hit another long jumper for a 108-105 margin with 25 seconds remaining. Detroit then desperately tried to catch up without their leading scorer in the series, Adrian Dantley, who left the game with 18 points late in the third quarter after colliding with a teammate and suffering a concussion.

Dantley was removed from the court by stretcher.

In the final 20 seconds, the Celtics hit nine free throws without a miss, four by Ainge, three by Dennis Johnson and two by Kevin McHale.

McHale finished with 22 points, Johnson 18 and Robert Parish 16 for the Celtics. Parish missed Game 6 when he was suspended for punching Bill Laimbeer in the fifth game. He also came back from an injured ankle and came up limping at least four times Saturday after falling to the floor.

The Pistons, who have made one other seventh-game appearance in the playoffs, losing to Chicago in 1974 in an early round, got 25 points from Isiah Thomas, 12 of them in the fourth period.

The Celtics appeared ready to take control late in the third quarter, which had nine lead changes and seven ties.

Bird hit three straight baskets, keying a 14-5 spurt that turned a 67-65 Detroit lead into a 79-72 Boston advantage with 2:24 left.

But the Pistons followed with an 8-0 run for an 80-79 lead and had possession when Dantley and Vinnie Johnson bumped heads when diving for a loose ball with eight seconds left. After John Salley missed two free throws, Sam Vincent's two foul shots with two seconds to go gave the Celtics an 81-80 edge.

The Pistons missed four of their first five shots in the first 3½ minutes and trailed 10-3. But their shooting soon matched the temperature as they outscored the Celtics 28-14 the rest of the period.

Detroit hit 14 of 17 field goal attempts during the spurt, which left the score 31-24 after one quarter.

Dumars, who was 9 for 11 from the field in the first half, had nine points in the first period, 12 more in the second and also had five assists. Eight of the points came in a span of 2:08 late in the half, giving the Pistons a 56-51 lead with 59 seconds remaining.

Sidekicks one victory away

DALLAS (AP) — Tatu and three other Sidekicks each had two goals as Dallas moved one game away from the MISL Eastern Conference Championship with a convincing 9-4 win over the Cleveland Force.

The win gives the Sidekicks a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and takes away Cleveland's homefield advantage for the remaining games.

Tatu, Doc Lawson, Kevin Smith and Eddie Radwanski outpaced the Cleveland offense with two goals each as the Sidekicks never trailed in a contest played before a sell-out crowd of 16,824.

It was the first sellout in Sidekick history.

The Sidekicks took advantage of Cleveland penalties to break the game open with four unanswered goals in the third period.

After leading 3-1 at halftime, Dallas capitalized on a two-man advantage situation when Doc Lawson beat Cleveland goalkeeper P.J. Johns to make it 4-1 just over a minute into the second half. A little over a minute later, Lawson fed Mark Karpun who scored to make it 5-1.

Smith and Tatu, who had first-half goals, each scored again before the quarter was out to make it 7-1.

Cleveland finally beat Sidekick goalkeeper Krys Sobieski for two goals in the fourth quarter by Carl Valentine and Andy Schmetzer, respectively to cut the lead to 7-3.

But Radwanski negated that comeback attempt by scoring two empty net goals to give Dallas a 9-3 lead.

Valentine scored again for Cleveland with just over a minute left to make the final score 9-4.

Texas bops Porkers in college baseball

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Brian Johnson's two-run double and Lenny Bell's two-run triple powered No. 1-ranked Texas to a 13-6 victory over No. 4 Arkansas in the first round of the NCAA College World Series Saturday.

Johnson's two-run double in the fifth inning sparked a four-run Texas rally and put the 59-9 Longhorns on top to stay.

Bell added his two-run triple in a four-run sixth, as Texas advanced to the second round Tuesday against the winner of Saturday night's Stanford-Georgia contest.

Mark Petkovsek, 14-2, came on in relief of Texas starter Kevin Garner in the second inning and allowed just two runs and seven hits in 7 1/3 innings. Three of those hits loaded the bases with two out in the ninth before Petkovsek got Rod Moore on a game-ending grounder.

Scott Bryant had three hits, and Brian Cisarik, Rusty Crockett and Johnson added two each in a 13-hit Texas attack.

Five Arkansas pitchers also aided the Texas cause with 13 walks. Tim Peters, 5-4, took the loss.

The Razorbacks wasted a five-RBI night by Jim Kreners in dropping to 50-15-1 on the season. Arkansas meets the Stanford-Georgia loser in an elimination game Sunday night.

Louisiana St. 6, Florida St. 2 (10 innings)

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Gregg Patterson won a pitching duel with Richie Lewis when Louisiana State scored five unearned runs in the 10th inning to beat Florida State 6-1 in the first round of the College World Series.

Florida State's Barry Blackwell tied the game with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning when he pulled a 2-1 pitch over the left field fence for his 11th home run.

The homer kept Patterson, 10-2, from becoming the first pitcher to throw a complete game shutout in the College World Series since 1983.

The junior left-hander gave up seven hits and no walks in 9 1/3 innings.

Reliever Barry Manuel got the final two outs for his ninth save.

Mike Papajohn drove in the winning run in the top of the 10th with a one-out squeeze bunt that scored Pete Bush. Andy Galy hit a two-run single one out later and Jack Voight added a two-run triple as LSU took advantage of errors by Richie Lewis, 15-3, gave up seven hits and struck out 12 to increase his career total to 507.

Louisiana State, 48-17, advances to a second-round game Monday against Oklahoma State, which beat Arizona State 8-3 Friday.

Florida State, 54-17, plays Arizona State in a loser's bracket game Sunday.

Rappelling Instructor Richard Galle takes the first step back — over the edge of the mountaintop — before rappelling down.

Over the edge

After practicing rappelling on a 10-foot rock for 15 minutes, Liz Wolter and Liz Taylor, both of Big Spring, graduated to a 280-foot mountain. After a 20-minute hike up, the two women took their turn at rappelling down. "It's something I've wanted to try it since 1979 because I had some friends who did it. It was thrilling," she said.

By CARLEEN EVERETT

It's not easy to step off a 280-foot mountain.

At least for Liz Taylor and Liz Wolter it wasn't.

The two local women, both 26, agree that stepping over the edge of the mountain was the scariest part of their rappelling adventure. The rest was downhill.

Taylor and Wolter had different reasons for wanting to learn to rappel — the method of descending from a mountain-side by means of a rope.

For Taylor, manager of the Convention and Visitor Bureau at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, it was dealing with her fear of heights.

"I can't say I'm still not afraid of heights, but I feel a sense of accomplishment."

Wolter, drama instructor at SWCID, wanted to "take a risk."

"I've wanted to try it since 1979 because I had some friends who did it. It was thrilling."

Richard Galle, superintendent of Parks and Recreation in Odessa, taught them the technique on a recent afternoon. The Big Spring women agree that it's easy to learn to rappel and credit him with providing support and making them feel at ease with the process.

After practicing on a 10-foot rock for 15 minutes, they graduated to a 280-foot mountain called Pointed Rocks, about 9 miles from Fort Davis.

"We hiked up the mountain first, which took about 20 minutes," Wolter said.

"Hiking up the mountain was the toughest part. I got more scrapes climbing up than rappelling," Taylor said, with a laugh.

Once they reached the mountaintop, Galle tied the rope around a boulder and tested the equipment by going down first.

When he returned to the top, Wolter took her turn at the rope.

She said stepping back was frightening, but re-attaching the rope also "was a suspenseful moment."

They re-attached a rope about halfway down, because one rope isn't long enough for the entire trip down the mountain.

It was Taylor's turn next.

"I went down fast the first half of the way. I moved fast, but I stopped a lot — to breathe." Not because she was short of breath during the descent.

Rather, "I kept holding my breath" out of fear, she said.

She explained that it felt a little uncomfortable going down because of the weight of the rope.

"As you get lower, it gets easier," Taylor said.

Galle said that it's important to have a rope that is designed for rappelling and cautioned, "never borrow one that you don't know about."

During a recent telephone interview, he suggested using a 9- or 11-millimeter rope, which translates into a 3/8- or 7/16-inch rope in American figures.

The women used an 11-millimeter rope for their adventure, which has a breaking strength of 4,900 pounds, Galle said.

In addition to a rope, at minimum, a rappeler must have a 1-inch tubular webbing harness, and one or two carabiners.

The harness goes around the person and the carabiners are used to thread the rope through.

"The idea in rappelling is to provide enough friction to go as fast or slow as you want to go," Galle said.

He emphasized that no one should ever go out and try to rappel with no more instruction than simply reading a book.

"Always get instruction before you go out on your own."

Galle, who has taught more than 500 people ranging in age from 7 to 68, says "rappelling can be learned in an afternoon. It doesn't require any upper body strength. It's so simple and so easy that the climbers become complacent — and that's how accidents happen. They forget to check the equipment."

"I've never had more than a scraped knuckle," Galle said, of his classes.

He says the reason people are so interested in the sport is because it's a thrill.

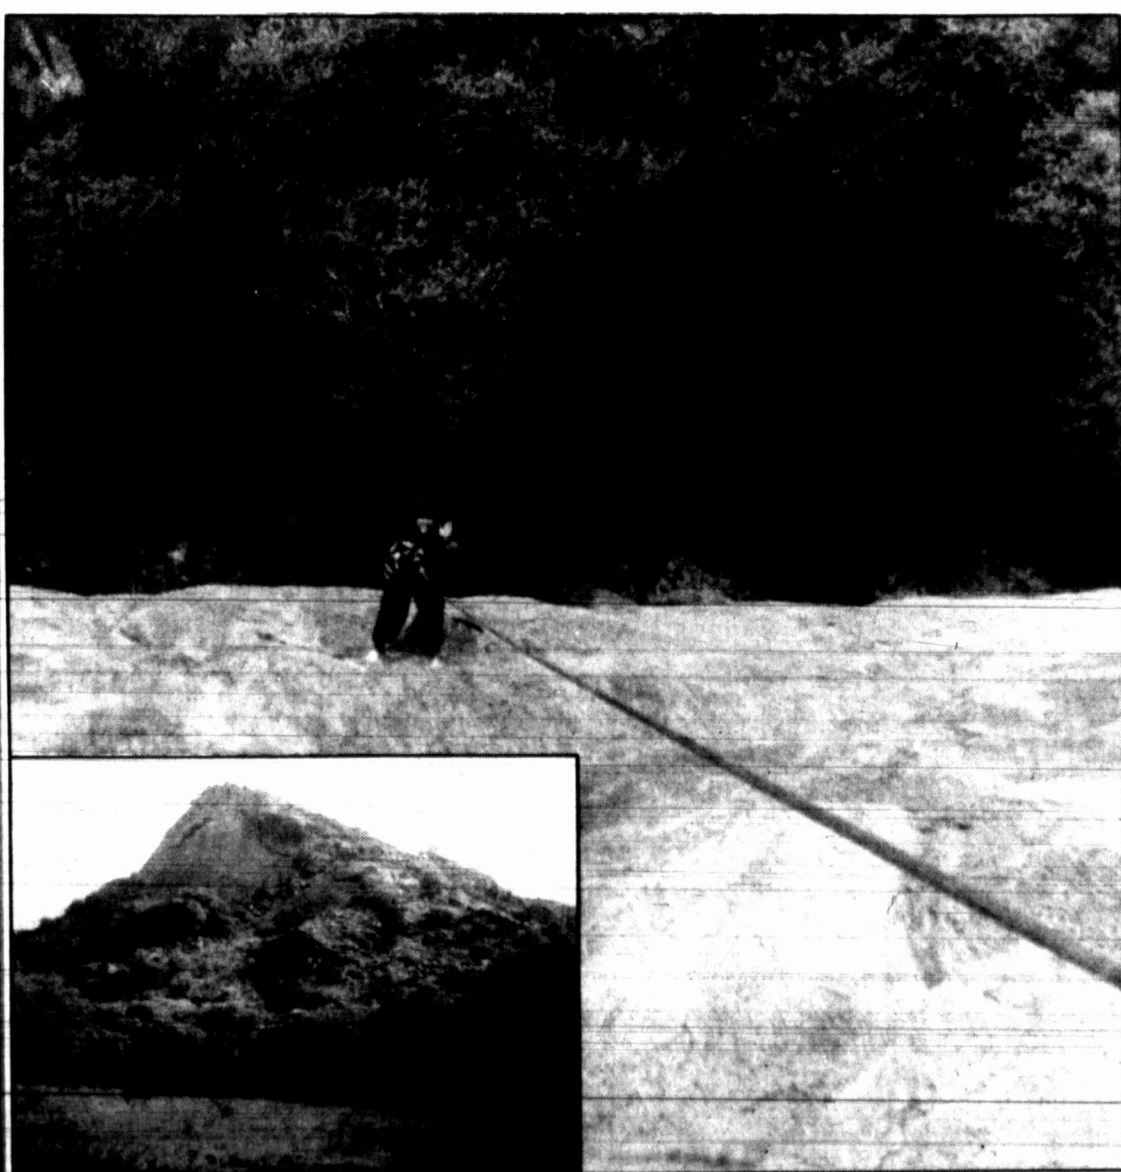

"They see it on TV. It's a natural thrill — a natural high."

Wolter and Taylor agree that it was a thrilling adventure and they want to do it again.

Taylor wants to try the same mountain again — "I feel like I know it now," she said, while Wolter says she's ready to try something higher.

Although there are rappelling classes offered at costs ranging from $25 to $40, Galle said that if he's not busy on a weekend, he'll teach without charging.

"I like to get out — and any excuse will do."

Liz Taylor stops to take a breath and wave. "I went down fast the first half of the way. I moved fast, but I stopped a lot — to breathe." Not because she was short of breath during the descent. Rather, "I kept holding my breath" out of fear, she said. Insert, The mountain the Big Spring women rappelled down was a 280-foot mountain called Pointed Rocks, near Fort Davis.

Recommendations to control weeds

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent
I have lawn weeds worse this year than any other year I can remember. What is the recommendation for control of weeds in yards?

One of the best means for controlling weeds in a home lawn is to maintain a dense, vigorous growing stand of turfgrass through proper fertilization, irrigation and mowing. Thin, weak turf encourages the incursion of weeds. However, even the best kept lawns will have some weeds. To effectively control "problem" weeds in a lawn, herbicides can be used.

Effective use of chemicals (herbicides or weed killers) to control weeds in a lawn depends on upon: proper weed identification, selecting the right herbicide, treating weeds when they are immature and actively growing, applying herbicides at proper rates, and observing labels for proper precautions. It is very important that only specific herbicides come in many trade names and not all trade names carry a label for home lawn use. Indiscriminate use of industrial strength weed killers often results in tree and shrub damage or death.

Herbicides used to control weeds

Ask the agent

in lawns can be grouped into three categories: nonselective contact sprays, selective postemergent sprays or granules and selective preemergent sprays and granules.

Glyphosate herbicides are an example of nonselective contact spray vegetation killers. Round Up, Doodson and Kleenup contain varying amounts of the active ingredient glyphosate. These herbicides are slow acting and require patience on the applicators part. Two to three weeks may be required to root kill some stubborn perennials. Hoeing or mowing top portions of the weed after applying glyphosate will negate the effect-tiveness of the product. Ironie as it may seem, the healthier the target weed the better the kill from glyphosate. Complete root-kill also depends on the material being applied to healthy leaves for translocation to the rootzone.

Postemergent selective materials are applied shortly after the weeds are visible and when used according to the label will not damage turf. Weeds such as henbit, chickweed, dandelion, wild onion and garlic, and plantain can be controlled by postemergent treatment with 2, 4-D, MCPP, dicamba, or a combination of these herbicides. Remember, for best results treat only when weeds are immature and/or actively growing. Do not use 2, 4-D MCPP or dicamba on St. Augustine in hot weather (above 85°F). Dicamba should not be sprayed next to shrubs or under the drip line of trees. Some caution should also be used when using these chemicals on hybrid bermudagrass such as Tifgreen and Tifdwarf.

Rescuegrass (incorrectly called wild rye), goosegrass, dallisgrass and sandbar can be controlled in lawns with postemergent treatment of MSMA or DSMA. Spray when weeds are young and actively growing. Repeat applications may be needed at 7-10 day intervals if regrowth occurs. Do not use MSMA or DSMA on St. Augustine or Centipedegrass.

The annual grassy weeds can also be effectively controlled by preemergent treatment with Balan, Dacthal or Betasan. Check labels for specific weeds controlled by the herbicide. It is very important that these chemicals be applied prior to germination of the weed seed. September and February applications may be necessary. If you plan to do any reseeding of the lawn, do not use preemergent herbicides 90-120 days prior to seeding.

Most broadleaf weeds in St. Augustine lawns can be controlled with Simazine or Atrazine. However, only certain weed and feed formulations containing these chemicals have a label for use in home lawns. In general, weed and feed formulations with Simazine or Atrazine have caused more damage to desirable vegetation in west Texas than other herbicides combined. Our low soil organic matter makes the successful use of Simazine and Atrazine difficult. Never use weed and feed combinations to fertilize trees, shrubs or vegetable gardens.

Club woman of the year named

Kathy Pickett was presented with the club woman of the year award by the GFWC-TFWC Forsan Study Club May 27. Sylvie Dale, sophomore at Forsan High School, shared her experiences at the Hugh O'Brien Youth Leadership Conference. She said the motto was: "To be enthusiastic, you must act enthusiastic." The club received 13 awards at the Western District Convention in Odessa and one award at the TFWC State Convention in Waco. Melissa Griffin received a club scholarship to Howard College, where she will attend in the fall.

Eating disorders are on the rise

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) Eating disorders — mainly bulimia and anorexia nervosa — are on the increase among Americans, according to Internal Medicine News.

The medical journal says a recent report by the American College of Physicians indicates about 90 percent of those afflicted are female, with those at risk including models, dancers, actors, gymnasts and others who strive for unnaturally low body weight.

Bulimia is a syndrome characterized by secretive episodes of "binge" eating followed by self-induced purging. Health experts estimate up to 18 percent of adolescent and college-age females in the U.S. are affected.

Anorexia nervosa, a psychological and endocrine condition involving an inordinate fear of becoming overweight, affects roughly 10 percent of young American women, according to the report.

Eggs first, then chicken

NEW YORK (AP) — The egg comes before the chicken as far as supermarket shoppers are concerned, according to a New York marketing communications concern.

Based on a survey of some 4,000 consumers nationwide, the Howard Marlboro Group found that eggs are purchased by 14 of every 100 shoppers while chickens are bought by only 12.

But fresh chicken is listed as the No. 1 meat choice, edging out ground beef, which was the choice of 10 of every 100 shoppers.

Fresh milk topped the list of supermarket purchases, with 33 percent of the shoppers taking home a quart or two. Other choices included:

Packaged bread, 25 percent; crackers, 11 percent; cookies, 10 percent; luncheon meat and refrigerated orange juice, 8 percent; ice cream, bacon, and potato chips, 6 percent; concentrated orange juice and hot dogs, 5 percent; corn chips and snack nuts, 3 percent.

WHICH SPOUSE OWES THE TAX?

Which spouse is liable for the income tax on a jointly-filed tax return? Who is liable for additional tax assessed on a prior-year return? What if you are divorced? Are you liable for your spouse's income tax if you filed a separate tax return?

A husband and wife are both liable for the income tax on a jointly-filed tax return. That means the IRS may collect taxes, interest, and penalties on that tax return from either spouse. The IRS can collect the money from whichever spouse it is easiest to collect.

There is a provision in the tax law known as "innocent spouse" relief. A person filing a joint return may avoid liability for the omission of income caused by his or her spouse. The innocent spouse must establish that he or she was unaware of the unreported income. An innocent spouse may also be relieved of tax liabilities on a joint return if it can be shown that the tax return was signed under duress. Sizeable inequities can come about because of divorce if prior tax returns were filed jointly. Once a property settlement has been agreed to neither spouse would be pleased to pay a sizeable IRS claim on an ex's tax return. This contingent liability should be provided for in the divorce or separation agreement.

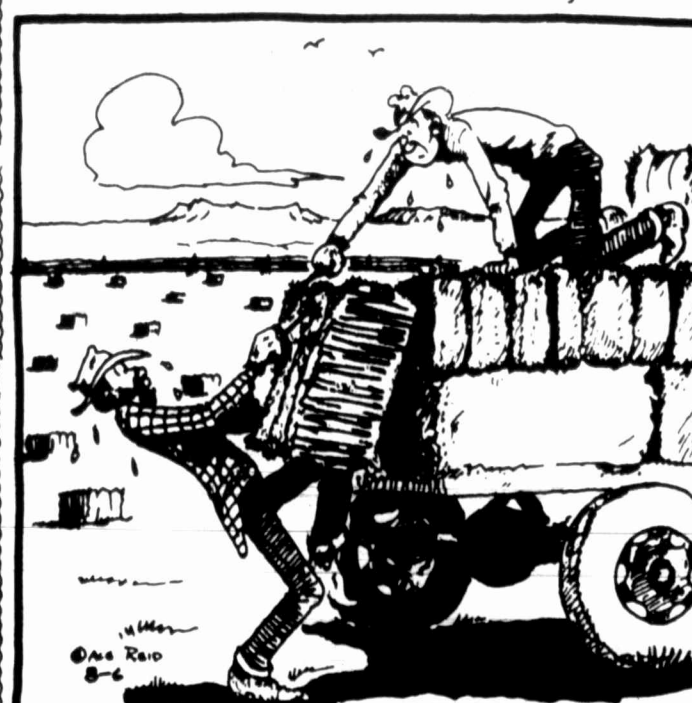

If you and your spouse file separate tax returns, you can change your mind and file a joint tax return for any of the previous three years. If, however, you file a joint return, you are not permitted to elect separate filing status once the due date for that year's tax return (April 15th) has passed. A divorced taxpayer may not elect to go back and file a separate return if he or she filed a joint return with an ex-spouse. One spouse may, however, claim a refund based on an amended tax return with respect to a jointly-filed return even though the amendment is signed by only one of the two original filers.

On the road to weight loss

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Dieting can be compared to taking a long trip by car. Your destination or goal is weight loss. And your eating plan is like a road map used to get to your destination of a desirable weight.

In both cases, you're in the driver's seat. And just as there's no one best route for all drivers, there's no one best guide for a reducing diet. Your route to a lower weight should take into account your lifestyle, schedule, budget and safeguards for your health.

Most people first think of calories as being all-important in a weight reduction program. But food is more than calories. It furnishes all of the essential nutrients we need for good health. A reducing diet should apply the proper balance of nutrients through a wide variety of wholesome foods at a controlled level of calorie intake.

Diets can be standardized, but people can't. Choose a guide you can live with and change it to fit your needs. Your diet, just like your trip, may require a few stops or detours along the way.

Nutritionists advise against reducing calories below 1,600 a day for men and 1,200 calories a day for women. Most people can lose 1 to 2 pounds per week at that level.

Focus on family

It isn't necessary to limit yourself to two or three special foods. A variety of foods is much wiser, no matter what's on your eating guide. A trip with several changes of scenery seems shorter and more pleasant. Likewise, you'll find a variety of foods will make it easier and more enjoyable to stick with the diet.

Most weight loss plans also recommend physical activity or exercise to burn extra calories. You may want to join a structured fitness program or increase activity in small ways during your daily routine.

ON THE ROAD TO WEIGHT LOSS

Before setting out on your trip — especially if it involves a vigorous exercise program, or if you have a special physical condition — get a check up and discuss your diet plans with your doctor.

EXERCISE WHAT DOES IT DO FOR YOU?

Exercise will do something for every body — young, old, male, female, in any shape and condition.

Exercise keeps muscles toned up by keeping them nourished with an ample supply of blood so they will be supple. Exercise also helps keep bones at proper strength by preventing the loss of calcium.

Aerobic exercises, such as brisk walking, running, dancing or climbing stairs will make you huff and puff a little. At the same time they strengthen your heart and lungs and increase the circulation of oxygen through your body.

Your state of mind — as well as your body — benefits from exercising. Many studies show that exercise reduces stress and tension.

Exercise need not be elaborate or require equipment and health club memberships. Simply walking on a regular basis will provide good exercise. If you have any questions about the kind of exercise that's right for you, check with a doctor.

Man who labors to balance books has wife on edge

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a "night person." He gets up at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and goes to sleep at 6 a.m. He won't even boil water for a pot of tea for himself, so I have to live according to his upside-down schedule, which I hate.

I get my room and board and $10 a month — and that's it. He honestly believes that's all I need — or deserve. (He pays all the bills.) He's far from poor. In a few years his investments will net him over a quarter of a million dollars, but he acts like we're headed for the poorhouse.

He will spend hours — all night if necessary — "balancing his books" until every penny is accounted for. He insists on knowing the menu for every day, and goes with me to buy groceries for the week to make sure I don't buy more than we need.

Is he crazy or am I? He retired three years ago and I haven't had a minute to myself ever since. I can't even go to the library without him. Abby, I've actually found myself wishing he would die. I've tried to get him into counseling, but he refuses. He's not mean or abusive; he's never raised his voice to me. He'd cut off his arm before he'd strike me, but I feel as though I'm being nibbled to death by a velvet mouse.

NIBBLED
DEAR NIBBLED: You're worse than "nibbled"; you're emotionally battered. Your husband is a possessive, selfish, controlling man who is obsessed with money and concerned only with his own needs. You need further counseling to either learn how to live with this miserable miser, or gather the gumption to leave him. Yours is no life for a free woman — you are a prisoner as surely as if you were behind bars. Yes, he is a little "crazy," and if you continue to live with this penny-pinching tyrant, you're as crazy as he is.

DEAR ABBY: My brother's wife wrote to our children, inviting them to visit her, saying the plane tickets would be her treat. This entails a 900-mile flight. The children are 4½ and 11 years old!

My husband and I are furious because we weren't asked how we felt about having our children make that kind of trip alone. Now they have been invited, and if we say they can't go, Mom and Dad are the "bad guys."

How should this be handled

Abby?

STEAMED
DEAR STEAMED: Write (or call) your brother's wife and tell her that when your children are of legal age, they can accept or reject all invitations, but until that time, they do not make those decisions — their parents do.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Hurling in Hartford": I am a 22-year-old male college senior. I am also a virgin. You are not weird; you are unusual. But the best always is. Be true to yourself. Some men still appreciate the bbyious goodness you possess. And lastly, it does not take experience to know that having sex is no substitute for making love.
