DISTRICT CONVENTION MEETS

BAPTISTS GATHER FOR BIG THREE DAY MEETING IN PERRYTON; OPENS LAST NIGHT

Representatives from fifteen North Panhandle counties were gathered in Perryton last night at the opening session of the Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. convention of Texas District No. 10 of the Baptist church. The opening meeting of the convention was held at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

While the exact registration was not known, it was thought that a goodly portion of the two hundred and fifty delegates prepared for would be present for the three day meeting.

In addition to the delegates from the fifteen counties in the tenth district, a number of prominent men and women representing the state organizations were reported to be present.

An interesting program will be presented during the meeting with morning, afternoon and evening meetings scheduled.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES RE-ELECTED ANOTHER TERM

The election for school trustees of the Perryton Independent School District on last Saturday turned out to be a very quiet affair, very few votes being cast. Slightly over a hundred votes were polled in the Perryton box. There was no contests, G. R. Wilson, J. H. Neufeld and G. I. Horne, being re-elected for another term. Superintendent Irvin reports that no votes at all were cast at Waka and that the vote at Farnsworth, Lone Tree and New Hope was low. The Herald believes that the people of the district have made a very wise move in retaining Wilson, Horne and Neufeld on the board. The construction of the new building is now before the people, the present members are familiar with the plans, etc., and are the logical ones to go ahead and complete the structure.

PAVING JOB IS NOW COMPLETED

FINISH ON SOUTH END OF MAIN STREET TUESDAY; LACY DOING REPAIR WORK

Perryton's paving work is all finished with the opening of the south end of the Main street paving on Tuesday noon of this week, making a total of seven and one-half miles of paved streets within the city limits.

The Lacy Paving company is now at work doing some repair work on the gutters of the Main street paving put in on the original contract and at the alley crossings which were torn out when the gas mains were installed. Some of these crossings were low and would not permit proper drainage, while the crossings cut for the gas mains were never properly replaced.

The Lacy Paving company is doing this repair work for the city without cost and of their own initiative, replacing the torn out sections with new brick.

LEGION TO SPONSOR CLEAN-UP AT OCHILTREE CEMETERY

The Legionnaires also voted to foster a clean-up day at the cemetery; some day prior to Memorial Day being designated and all interested requested to meet and improve the burial grounds. A meeting of the executive committee of the Host will be held within the next few days at which time plans will be completed for both days.

15c OFF GOOD FIRE RECORD

ENGINEER INSPECTS CITY FOR STATE INSURANCE COMMISSION LAST SATURDAY

Information was received Monday morning that Perryton had again been allowed a fifteen cent credit on the city's insurance key rate on account of a good 1930 fire record. Perryton has received this credit every year since the establishment of the fire marshal's office, with the exception of one year and a nine cent credit was given on that occasion.

The city was given a rigid inspection last Saturday by J. H. Schwab, engineer for the State Insurance commission. All of the fire plugs were opened and inspected, the entire water plant inspected, the booster pumps and wells tested, as were the water mains and reservoir.

The new five hundred gallon pumper truck and the chemical truck and all of the hose was given a thorough inspection, the fire department being called out to operate them. The city paving was also inspected.

Perryton at present has a forty-two cent key rate but is due for sevefal reductions. It is thought that following Saturday's inspection the new key rate will be substantially below forty cents which will put the city in a first class rating.

COOK RE-ELECTED MAYOR AT SPEARMAN TUES.

In a campaign full of personal accusations, charges of untruth, etc., Mayor Cooke of Spearman was relected over R. M. Morton. From all reports, it was "plenty hot." Now that it is all over, both in Spearman and Perryton, all hands will join in making the North Plains the best part of the Southwest, and Spearman and Perryton the two best towns on the North Plains.

MUCH INTEREST IN BOY SCOUTS

PLAN FOR PERRYTON TO JOIN ADOBE WALLS COUNSIL AT ONCE; DRIVE TO BE MADE FOR FUNDS

C. A. Clark, Panhandle executive of the Adobe Walls Council of the Boy Scouts, is in Perryton this week making arrangements for the registration of the troops of this county in the Adobe Walls Council. Perryton was formerly a part of the Tex-Okla Council but since the financial burden was too great for a few towns to carry, the greater part of the area is being attached to the above region.

The present plans call for the raising of a budget of $300.00 per year for the purpose of supporting the movement in Perryton. Officers selected at a meeting Wednesday afternoon were as follows: L. C. Hartman, deputy commissioner; Van W. Stewart, district chairman; Finance Chairman, Carl Ellis; Court of Honor Chairman, Judge Oscar C. Flowers; Educational Publicity, Leadership Training and Reading chairman, Rev. L. O. Byerly; Civic Service, Camping and Health History chairman, Clyde Cofer.

A drive is now being made for subscriptions to this fund. A deficit of $125.00 which Ochiltree county owes to the now defunct Tex-Okla Council exists, and this will have to be taken care of first. The $300 a year budget can be divided into quarterly payments if desired.

Fire Call Monday

Department Makes Fast Run But Fire in Bed Clothes is Out Before Arrival

A fire in some bed clothing at the J. B. Harris home, two blocks east of the courthouse, brought the fire department out at 2:05 last Monday afternoon. Although the department made a quick run and were at the Harris home a few minutes after the alarm was sounded, it was unnecessary to turn on the water. Neighbors carried the bedding, including a mattress, out of the house into the yard and had the blaze extinguished before the fire trucks arrived. The loss was slight. It is understood that children in the Harris home were playing with matches and set the fire.

SENATE PASSES ROAD BOND BILL

WOULD AUTHORIZE PEOPLE TO VOTE ON TWO SEPARATE PROPOSITIONS FOR STATE HIGHWAYS

AUSTIN, Tex., April 8—Voting 22 to 8, the senate this afternoon passed finally the Woodul bond issue substitute. The vote on adoption of the substitute was 25 to 5.

Bond issue proponents in the senate swept to victory this morning with one vote to spare. It required a two-third majority on both adoption of the substitute and its final passage.

On final passage proponents drew the votes of Senators Parrish of Lubbock, Hardin of Stephenville and DeBerry of Bogata. They had previously voted against submission of the bond resolution to the people. Senator Greer of Athens, who voted for the resolution on engrossment, was absent today.

Senator Woodul of Houston, floor leader of the bond issue, had changed his original proposal. His new resolution provided that the people might vote on two amendments, one to permit the issuance of $100,000,000 in bonds for new construction and the other to allow a $112,000,000 issue to reimburse counties for funds spent on state roads. The electorate might accept one and reject the other—Borger Daily Herald.

CLEAN-UP WEEK IS UNDER WAY

ORGANIZATIONS OF CITY IN JOINT MOVE TO PUT CAMPAIGN OVER IN GOOD SHAPE

This is clean-up week and reports from all sections of the city indicate that considerable interest is being manifested in cleaning up yards and around buildings, preparing lawns for sowing to grass and planting trees and shrubs.

Several of the Perryton clubs and organizations including the Lions club, the American Legion and Auxiliary, as well as others are behind the movement, sponsoring the clean-up campaign.

Those who have not already done so are urged to clean-up their yards, as well as their basements and other store rooms and pile all rubbish on the back of their lots, adjoining the alleys. The city is furnishing wagons to make the rounds of the city removing all trash and cleaning up the alleys. As soon as the clean-up work is finished, the city grader will be put in the alleys to smooth them down.

On Monday night at Amarillo, B. L. Rogers of Farnsworth, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, was one of twenty who became members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at a special meeting held at the Auditorium Veterans Hall commemorating Army Day. After the initiation, the Ladies Auxiliary joined the veterans in a very enjoyable program including dancing, games, and an excellent feed. B. L. says that all eligibles should join the V. F. W.

THE WEED TEST SHOWS SOIL GOOD FOR GARDENS

Small gardens will look larger this year than ever before, particularly in cities where many are unemployed, says Dr. William A. Taylor of the United States Department of Agriculture. A good garden will supply a large part of the food the family will need in the summer and will produce a good surplus for home canning, says Doctor Taylor who is Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Good soil, of course, if of first importance in gardening. Ordinarily the gardener will have a fairly definite idea as to how good the soil in his back yard may be, but only too often the back yard is undesirable for one or more reasons. It may not be big enough. There may be too much shade, since most of the vegetables require at least five hours of direct sunlight a day to do well. It may not be fertile. Many gardeners would get more profit and more satisfaction and more reaction from gardening on a near-by vacant lot.

In looking around for a desirable lot of gardening it is wise to remember one of the simplest and most effective soil tests, says Doctor Taylor. This is the weed test. If the lot last season was covered with a rank growth of unsightly weeds, the gardener may be fairly certain that it will grow most of the common vegetables. It is true that weedy lots require more cultivation and more hoeing than will be required on plots that have been cultivated for years, because weeds usually bear heavy seed crops, and the seeds will sprout and compete with the vegetables. But rank growth of weeds is good evidence of fertility.

VACUUM PROGRESS RETAINS EGG QUALITY IN STORAGE

The United States Department of Agriculture has discovered how to seal up the pores in the sheel of an egg so it will retain much of its fresh quality when in cold storage.

In recent investigations the food research division of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils found that fresh eggs dipped in oil and subjected to carbondioxide gas in a vacuum will retain practically all of their original moisture and carbon dioxide. Impairment of quality generally results when these two constitutents are lost.

T. L. Swenson, bacteriologist, who devised the new process, dips the eggs in oil in an air-tight chamber, then pumps out some of the air to create a partial vacuum. Some air escapes from the eggs also. Mr. Swenson then turns carbon dioxide into the vessel. The eggs, once more surrounded by gases of normal pressure, draw some of the oil into the pores of the shell to form a complete seal. Carbon dioxide probably is carried in with the oil, which accounts for the marked improvement in quality which follows its use.

Some western egg handlers recently have been treating large numbers of eggs for storage by dipping them in oil in open vessels. In comparative tests, Mr. Swenson found that vacuum-dipped and carbonated eggs lost only one-tenth of one per cent of weight during ten months in storage, while the open-dipped eggs lost sixteen times as much. Untreated eggs lost nearly seventy-seven times as much weight as the vacuum-treated eggs. This loss is moisture and carbon dioxide chiefly.

When the eggs were taken out of storage an expert grader classed them on the basis of standard market grades. None of the unoiled eggs were good enough for the two top classes and only 30 per cent of the open-dipped eggs were so classed. But 46 per cent of the vacuum-oiled eggs came within these special and extra grades.

Colorless, odorless, and tasteless mineral oil, which in no way impairs the egg's quality is used in the process. The appearance of the vacuum-dipped egg when opened after ten months in storage compares favorably with that of a two-day-old egg.

Anthony Mierczjewski of New Britian, Conn., was fined $10 for re-enacting with his wife a moving picture scene in which the wife couldn't get along with her husband.

Dr. Inge of London told banquet guests recently that he had received an anonymous letter saying: "I am praying for your death. I have been successful in two other instances."

Arrested after a chase by police and patrons of a restaurant which he had held up, obtaining $4.75, George Russell of Hartford, Conn., told police he would "rather go to state prison than to the poorhouse."

ELECTRIFIED FARMS

In spite of the depression, the extension of electric service to farms of the United States went forward in 1930 with practically normal rapidity, 90,806 additional farms being provided with electricity during the year, an increase of 16.3 per cent.

According to survey recently completed, California and New York lead in the number of farms now served, as well as in the number of newly electrified farms added last year. Among the states adding 3,000 or more farms in 1930, Alabama showed the highest percentage of increase, 40 per cent.

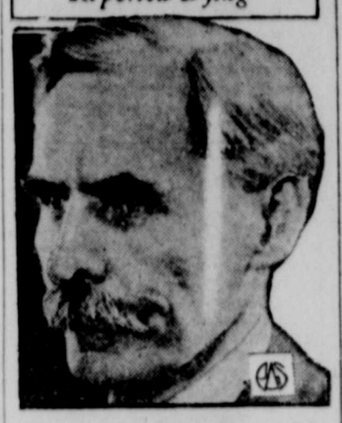

The number of electrified farms in the United States has risen from 166,140 in 1923 to 647,677 in 1930, a gain of 290 per cent in seven years.

That there is still a wide field for the future expansion of rural electrification is seen in the fact that in spite of the rapid progress made, only 10 per cent of American farms now have this service.

With continued cooperation in this movement by farm organizations, agricultural colleges, electric companies and the farmers themselves, progress will doubtless be even more swift in the next decade than it has been in the past, and the drudgery of farm life will be correspondingly reduced.

CHEMICAL JUGGLERS MADE MARKET FOR COTTON WASTE

Farmers may anticipate that in future the farm by-products or crop wastes such as cornstalks, straw, and cotton stalks may be made to help pay for their production, Dr. W. W. Skinner, of the United States Department of Agriculture, believes. But he does not think that developments in the utilization of these by-products as the raw materials for chemical and manufacturing industries will come as a sudden change. He points out that the advances that have been made have been the result of steady and persistent research which has uncovered, step by step, some of the possibilities latent in these by-products which are composed chiefly of cellulose, lignin, and carbohydrates.

Doctor Skinner, who is assistant cheif of the unit in charge of chemical and technological research in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, says that the utilization of cottonseed has been on of the most spectacular examples of progress in the disposal of what was once a crop waste. "At the time of the Civil War," he says, "cottonseed was a waste product and disposal was a real problam. By 1870 it was recognized as a fertilizer. By 1880 the value of the cottonseed meal as a cattle feed had been recognized. By 1890, thanks to the ingenuity of the chemist, methods had been developed whereby the unsightly, ill smelling, offensive, crude cottonseed oil was converted into a snow white, sweet smelling, pleasant tasting, hard fat or shortening material.

"This latest development was made possible by the efforts of a research chemist, hidden away in his cloistered laboratry, juggling his molecules and his atoms, cutting out an atom from a molecule, much as you would cut an eye out of a potato, or hanging an atom onto a molecule, much as you would hang your hat on a rack. The hard, white pastry shortening made from cottonseed oil is known chemically as a hydrogenated fat; that is, a hydrogen atom by chemical legerdemain has been hung onto a molecule of vegetable oil, and thereby changes the physical properties of the original product to better suit the purposes of man."

WILL ROGERS PLAYS IN "CONNECTICUT YANKEE"

America's two greatest laugh makers are united for the first time in Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee" in which Will Rogers is starred by Fox Film.

Mark Twain, one of the world's greatest humorists in his day, has his modern counterpart in Rogers, who ranks as the greatest living American humorists and comedian.

"A Cannecticut Yankee," which will be seen and heard soon at the Ellis Theatre, has long been considered one of the world's greatest satires. In the new version of the famous Mark Twain classic, Rogers starts out as a small town radio dealer. He delivers a battery to a mysterious mansion on the hill one stormy night. The owner of the house hopes to tune his huge radio set in on sound waves which have been batting around in the ether since the beginning of time. He tunes in on what appears to be King Arthur's Court. There is a terrific flash of lightning, and Rogers wakes up in the sixth century, right in the middle of the Round Table.

He narrowly escapes burning at the stake and then, through his native Yankee sagacity, becomes the Prime Minister. He introduces many novel improvements in the scheme of life of the ancients, including a service station for armored knights where they may be washed, polished, oiled and their rivets checked in a mintue's time. Efficiency. That's the word. Other novel improvements, too numerous to mention, enliven the kingdom and Rogers soon becomes the Big Shot of Camelot.

His many improvements bring many screamingly funny situations and finally, Sir Sagramor, jealous of Rogers' popularity, challenges him to joust in the big tournament. How Rogers overcomes the burly knight is entirely too funny to spoil by revealing here.

Then Rogers becomes the unwilling hero selected to rescue the fair Princess Alisande from the wicked Queen Morgan Le Fay. He becomes involved in another series of adventures that climaxes in the most side-splitting laugh of the picture.

Rogers is surrounded by a capable supporting cost which includes Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Albertson, Myrna Loy, William Farnum, Mitchell Harris and Brandon Hurst.

The direction by David Butler is the best he ever has done, and far exceeds his work on "Sunny Side Up" and "Just Imagine."

BLONDES PREDOMINATE

Buster Keaton must be a gentleman because he prefers blondes in his latest comedy, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath."

Of the fice featured feminine players in the new Metro-Golwyn-Mayer laugh fest, three are blondes and two are brunettes. There are no recheads. The blondes include the platinum-haired Natalie Moorhead, Dorothy Christy and Charlotte Greenwood, while in the ranks of the dark-haired are Joan Peers and Sally Eilers.

The new comedy, which will open April 8-9 at the Ellis Theatre, is a screen adaption of the riotous stage farce with Keaton in the role of a gay Lothario. Others in the cast are Reginald Denny, Cliff Edwards, Edward Brophy, Walter Merrill and Sidney Bracy.

WOMEN RULE IN QUEER MALAY TRIBES, TROPICS

Believe it or not, there is a country where husbands are homeless and woman's rul is supreme!

Ernest Schoedsack, camerman-adventurer-dramatist who was co-maker of "Chang," "Grass" and "The Four Feathers" and who has just finished "Rango", for Paramount found such am atriarchal order of things existing in a tribe called the Menangkabaus, deep in the jungle regions of Sumatra, where "Rango" was made.

"This Malay tribe reduces the husband to a place of absolute unimportance," asserts Schoedsack. "He is tolorated as a visitor in his wife's house and is forced by the pressure of public opinion to work in her rice fields as well as those of his mother and sisters.

"The daughters do not leave the family dwelling after marriage, and when the sons enter the bonds of matrimony they are forced to remain boarders in their mothers' homes."

Schoedsack experienced some difficulty in keeping the family relationship of the Menangkabaus of his camp in order, since the men refer to the children of their sisters as "my children," claiming no kinship to their own offspring.

Schoedsack was fortunate enough to be invited to a Menangkabau wedding during his Sumarta adjuorn. The women were arrayed in gold and silver cloth and their heavy necklaces an dearrings were created with United States $20 gold pieces and English sovereigns.

The bridegroom was only in evidence during the rites of the Mohammedan ceremony, after that it was the bride and her bridesmaids that enjoyed the party. The bride was so weighted with precious jewels and metal cloth garments that she could hardly move, but Schoedsack noted that the groom was wearing ordinary work sargons, freshly washed in honor of the occasion.

A relative of the bridegroom informed Schoedsack that a feast lasting six days would follow during which time the new husband would sit on the floor utterly ignored by his bride. After the festivities ceased he could go home to his mother.

Divorce evils trouble this matriarchal tribe not at all, for according to Schoedsack, a marriage is annulled by a man or wife saying in the presence of two witnesses, "I divorce you."

Although the women receive all the property, children and family wealth, the male Menangkabau is not discouraged by his plight, for under the existing Mohammedan rules he can and does marry as many wives as he fancies.

BULLET HOLE IN ARMOR LED TO TWAIN'S STORY

Inspiration of authors always has been a fascinating subject with the lay public. Millions think they could write as entertainingly as some of the great masters if they only could get a clue to their thought processes. If they could discover just how the idea for a great story came to them.

Althought Mark Twain never confided to anyone just how he got his idea for his greatest comedy satire, "A Connecticut Yankee", he gives a pretty good hint in a foreword to his masterpiece. He tells of a visit to a British museum. Among other relics of the past, were many suits of armor.

One breastplate, supposed to have dated back to the sixth century and to have been worn by a "Sir Sagramor," especially interested him because of a bullet-hole right over the heart.

Immediately, the imagination of the great writer was stirred. Also his curiosity was aroused, and he asked an attendant for an explanation.

"That was far before the invention of gunpowder," Twain said, "and I can't understand how a knight of the sixth century could have been killed by a bullet."

The phlegmatic attendant smiled. "Of course we don't know, sir," he said, "but it is supposed to have been the work of vandals in the time of Oliver Cromwell. They took the greatest delight in destroying historic relics and it is probable that one of his soldiers saw the armor displayed in a museum and put a bullet hole through it."

"The explanation," remarked Twain, "lacks considerable in imagination."

The incident of the bullet hole in the armor set a whole chain of thought to running through his head and Twain finally reached an explanation entirely satisfactory to himself and one which has proved eminently satisfactory to millions who have read his famous book.

"A Connecticut Yankee," directed by David Butler, is the latest Fox starring vehicle for Will Rogers, and will be shown soon at the Ellis Theatre. Rogers has added much of his own humor to the interpretation of Twain's story and with the advantage of the many mechanical developments since the great writer's day, has made the talking picture version even funniers than the original book.

NEW FILM SETTLES BUSINESS PROBLEM

Should wives pick their husband's secretaries?

Business men will say "no", most emphatically, yet there are some wives and fiancees who think their domestic duties extend to their husband's offices.

But this isn't good business, according to Robert Ames, who plays the role of a busy office executive in Radio Pictures' "Behind Office Doors," showing at the Ellis Theatre April 15-16.

"A good looking private secretary," says the actor, "is a distinct asset to a paying business and a great attraction to new trade."

And when the private secretary is as charming and capable as Mary Astor, who plays a leading role, who is there to dispute his keeping her on ever though an apprehensive fiancee objects?

STAR FOOLS 'EM!

Will Rogers is still loyal to the old home town of Claremore, Oklahoma, and gives it a boost on every possible occasion.

"In "They Had To See Paris," "So This is London" and "Lightnin'," Fox pictures, he worked in complimentary references to Claremore.

When it was decided to star him in "A Connecticut Yankee," Mark Twain's masterpiece of satire and comedy, it was thought that Rogers was stumped for the first time. But he fooled them again, and when he had the privilege of officially naming "Clarence" as a Knight, he chose the title of "Sir Roger de Claremore."

"A Connecticut Yankee," which will be seen and heard soon at the Ellis Theatre, is regarded as Rogers' greatest comedy. He is surrounded by an excellent cast which includes Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Albertson, Myrna Loy and William Farnum. David Butler directed.

UNUSUAL FACTS!

Will Rogers never smoked a cigar in his life until he made "A Connecticut Yankee."

Maureen O'Sullivan was punished for running away from school by being forced to take care of a flock of chickens.

Myrna Loy, one of the most exotic actresses on the screen, is a native American and was born in Helena, Mont.

Will Rogers was destined for the Methodist ministry but became a cowboy instead.

William Farnum was the star of nearly fifty feature photoplays.

Will Rogers' daily newspaper paragraphs are telegraphed to more than 300 newspapers six days a week.

Frank Albertson began his screen career while attending Hollywood High School.

Will Rogers rode to his first vaudeville engagement on horseback, the same horse he used in his act.

Brandon Hurst was the original "Charlie" in "Charlie's Aunt."

BUS COMPETITION HITS RAILROADS

Bankers Association President for Even Treatment for Rail and Motor Transport—Favors Mergers

NEW YORK.—Fair treatment for the railroads in respect to highway motor competition was called for by Rome C. Stephenson, President American Bankers Association, in a recent address here. He also strongly endorsed "sound economic railway consolidation" and praised President Hoover for his initiative in this respect.

"I am very strongly of the opinion that one of the measures which would help materially to put back business where it ought to be is the Eastern four-system plan of railroad consolidation as announced recently following negotiations instituted by President Hoover," said Mr. Stephenson. "Its adoption by the Interstate Commerce Commission would tend to stabilize the transportation industry, facilitate operation and exert a favorable influence on business.

"It is a fact well known to business leaders that our railroads are now facing a crisis. Not only do they need protective laws to meet competitive situations arising from increased use of our highways and waterways by other carriers, but they need unification such as the proposed four-system plan."

Mr. Stephenson declared that the past, present and future progress of the United States is inseparably bound up in railway welfare. In neglecting just consideration for them we are even more neglectful of the public's best interests.

A Question of Public Interest

"We are confronted with the question as to how much more the public economic interest will stand an invasion of the welfare of the railroads by forces and difficulties not of their own creating and not within the scope of their own unaided powers to combat," said Mr. Stephenson. "I refer especially to new competitions that are undermining the hard-earned position of the railroads, not only with the aid of natural economic forces but also through the aid of government policies which give competitors undue advantages over the railroads.

"It goes without saying that the railroads have no right, nor claim any, so far as I have been able to discern, to complain at legitimate competition in the field of transportation, for the public is entitled to the best possible transportation at the lowest practical cost. But equally does it go without saying that this cannot be fairly brought about by using, or by failing to use, the taxing powers of government to enable competitive methods of transportation to do things they could not otherwise do as unaided private enterprises, particularly when this impairs vested rights held by great masses of our people in enterprises now serving the public well."

Mr. Stephenson said it was not his purpose to argue against such competitive transportation as the highway passenger motorbus and motor truck as such when conducted under proper conditions and in keeping with public welfare and benefit. He declared, however, there is need for serious consideration whether such competition is being developed under conditions that are unfair to the railroads.

Would Investigate Bus Traffic

Railroad rights of way, he declared, represent tremendous capital investments, on which the railroads have also heavy current costs to meet. "They pay every day a million dollars in taxes and most of this is on their rights of way," he said. "Also they spend daily over two million dollars additional for the proper maintenance of way." He asserted that the motorbuses have not had to pay for their rights of way in any sense that the railroads paid for theirs.

"They have simply taken possession of public highways built by public funds, both state and national," he continued, "and they have extensively made those highways vastly less comfortable, less safe and less serviceable for private motorists and others who are contributing chiefly to their creation and maintenance."

Mr. Stephenson declared that all these matters should be thoroughly inquired into by competent public bodies, both state and national, with a view of determining the equities and basic public economic interests involved, "particularly in respect to their effects upon the nation's railroads.

"I venture to say," he added, "that such inquiries would show whether it is to the public interest to let things remain as they are, whether the situation calls for a new basis of motorbus and truck taxes to satisfy the equities of the case or whether it would call for such drastic action as the exclusion of this traffic from our public general highways, and the requirement that, even as the railways, it provide as a part of its own private capital investment its own rights of way and for its own maintenance of way out of operating income."

More Than Million in Twenty States Fed by Red Cross Volunteers

Hot School Lunches and Balanced Rations Given to Drought Victims — Seed Programs Instituted on Wide Scale

More than 1,000,000 persons in 862 drought-stricken counties of 20 States came under the care of the American Red Cross in what developed into the most extensive relief operations in half a century of ministering to stricken humanity.

Measures to lessen the severity of the blow inflicted by drought were taken as early as last September, when seed was distributed to more than 58,000 families for the planting of rye and other pastures, and to more than 27,000 families for the planting of kitchen gardens. The expenditure for this purpose amounted to $326,800. Green vegetables were made available up to January.

Early in February another Red Cross garden program got under way and 507,000 packages of seed were distributed in 15 States. Quarter-acre plots were planted to beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, sweet corn, kale, lettuce, mustard, onions, peas, spinach, squash, tomatoes and turnips. Once again were farm families given the opportunity to participate in their own salvation.

A comparatively mild winter contributed to the success of the Spring and Fall seed campaigns. Many habitual single-croppers were introduced to the advantages of kitchen gardens, balanced cropping and balanced diet. Numerous land-owners have expressed the opinion that this constitutes the one apparent blessing to come out of the drought catastrophe. The United States Department of Agriculture and the local county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents cooperated in making this part of the relief operations successful.

Balanced Meals Served

Red Cross feeding was aimed at adequacy and scientific correctness. In large numbers of schools, where children were found to be attending with little or nothing in their lunch boxes, hot meals were served at noon. A typical menu consisted of vegetable soup and bread one day; thick beef soup or stew with vegetables another day; cocoa or milk and cheese, peanut butter, or jam sandwiches, a third day.

In some places where lunches were not served in the schools, but were provided for in the regular food orders, each family having school children received extra staples for school lunches including peanut butter, raisins, prunes and tomatoes. Red Cross nutritionists instructed mothers in the preparation of lunches.

County health officers and private physicians commended the adequacy of rations procured on orders issued by Red Cross chapters. Besides the usual staples, such as corn meal, flour, lard, meat, beans and potatoes, such items as canned salmon, cabbage, tomatoes, vegetables and milk were provided, each order being adapted to the special needs of the family from whom it was issued. Where pellagra threatened, eggs, yeast and other preventives were given.

Thousands of Volunteer Workers

Many thousands of volunteers, through their local Red Cross chapters, gave freely of their time, experience and efforts, as in other Red Cross disaster operations. They searched out needy cases in their communities. Chapter committees investigated circumstances, distributed food and clothing.

More than 500 carloads of foodstuffs were contributed. These were given free haulage by railroads. Farmers of more fortunate sections embraced the opportunity to help their pastoral cousins of the affected area. Shipments ranged from live poultry to fish, from grain to grapefruit. Carloads of flour, eggs, beans, vegetables, onions, rice, corn and mixed vegetables were included.

As the result of co-ordinated Red Cross chapter efficiency, no authenticated case of starvation as a result of drought has been uncovered.

Large quantities of new and used clothing were distributed. In direct consequence many school children resumed their studies, who had been kept at home for lack of sufficient protection from the elements. In some instances, rural schools that had been closed were enabled to reopen as a result of Red Cross relief.

States involved were: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia.

Many of these States had been hard hit by a succession of floods, crop failures, low prices and economic depression, and drought constituted a climax to the cycle of distress.

"Wherever I went," wrote one observer, "I made a point of asking what would have happened if the Red Cross had not been able to respond. In widely scattered points, from leading citizens, came the answer that undoubtedly there would have been many deaths directly from starvation, with epidemics preying upon the undernourished."

Hints for the Home

Potato Salad

Potato salad is occasionally delicious. It can be made in various ways. One way is to slice the new potatoes, boiled just until done, very thin, and to flavor them slightly with onion, then to dress them with mayonnaise on lettuce. Another way is to mix the potatoes, spiced, with half their quantity of diced celery and plenty of mayonnaise. Diced green pepper, about a cup to four cups of diced potatoes, make another good addition to potato salad. One hard-boiled egg for each potato, mixed with French dressing, and served on crisp variety of potato salad.

Sardine salad can be temptingly combined with potato salad. Get the boned and skinned fishes, and arrange three on each plate, in a big, crisp, white lettuce leaf. Squeeze some lemon juice over each and in a small lettuce leaf at the side of the big one serve a big spoon of mayonnaise with a stuffed olive on top. Add a spoon of potato salad.

Veal and Ham Shape

Since any small piece of veal and ham you may have available (about half to three-quarters of a pound). Also grate four tablespoons of breadcrumbs and the rind of half a lemon. Mix with these a teaspoon of finely chopped parsley, a little pepper and salt, and a pinch of nutmeg.

Bind with one egg, and if necessary a little gravy or extract. Grease a mould and cover it with browned breadcrumbs; press the mixture in, and bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour, or steam for a little longer time. Serve with potato balls. To make them, boil the potatoes, then mash with a little butter and milk, and season with pepper and salt. Roll into small balls, cover them with egg and breadcrumbs, and fry in hot fat until light brown. Drain well. When the veal mould is ready, turn it out in the center of a large hot dish and garnish with the potato balls and sprigs of parsley.

Serve thick brown gravy in a separate tureen.

Meat Loaf

Cover with boiling water one and one-half pounds of pot roast, soup bone meat or the tough end of a steak, add seasoning of salt and pepper to taste, one chopped onion or one-half teaspoon celery salt, and boil slowly, covered, until tender. Remove from fire and chop or run through grinder. Measure one pint of broth into a double boiler and add two heaping tablespoons tapioca. Cook for ten minutes. Then add two cups of the meat chopped and boil five minutes more. Then add two tablespoons of gelatine which has been dissolved in two tablespoons of hot broth and stir thoroughly. Add quickly one tablespoon minced parsley. Pour into oblong mould. Serve very cold in slices.

Orchestra Broadcasts

Two Hundred Piece Orchestra To Be Heard Over Air Thursday Night, April 9

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Truax received a letter from their son, Glenn, who is music supervisor of the high school in Clarkston, Wash., telling them to tune in on San Francisco or Los Angeles on Thursday, April 9, at 9:30 p. m., if they wanted to hear a really good orchestra of over two hundred pieces.

This Northwest High school orchestra is composed of the best players of the high schools of the state of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho.

They met at Spokane to practice together under the direction of Glenn Woods of Oakland, Calif., and to play for the teachers and music supervision of the above named states.

The Standard Oil company of California is giving up their broadcasting hour April 9, 9:30 to 10:30 p. m., Central time, so the Northwest High school orchestra can broadcast over the Pacific coast network of the National Broadcasting company.

Glenn has eight pupils ready for this orchestra and he has again been chosen to direct the bass section at Spokane.

NATIONAL OFFICER OF GRANGE

E. P. WATERS, DEAN OF ALL NATIONAL DEPUTIES, AT FARNSWORTH MEETING TUESDAY NIGHT

An address by F. P. Waters, Dean of Deputies, Washington State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, during the Lecturer's hour of Lone Star Grange, was listened to by members and many visitors Tuesday night. Waters told of the long list of accomplishments of the Grange, during its 64 years of uninterrupted activity as the oldest farm organization in America, including direct election of U. S. Senators, rural free delivery of mail, parcel post and many other benefits to farmers that are today taken for granted.

The following statement of the executive committee of the National Grange, recently released from the Washington office was referred to and commented upon by the speaker:

"The statement of the Federal Farm Board that it will not attempt to stabilize the 1931 wheat crop, clearly emphasizes the need for additional machinery if the announced purposes of the Agricultural Marketing Act are to be made effective. Although definite figures are not available, it is altogether probable that if a moderate rate of export debenture had been in effect during the past year, the returns to the farmer would have been greater, the cost to the treasury would have been less, and we would not now be burdened with such a price depressing carry-over.

"The National Grange, therefore, reaffirms its advocacy of the export debenture program as an amendment to the Marketing Act. The volume of wheat on hand, and the certainty of continuing surplus, indicate the imperative need of providing adequate machinery to make possible orderly marketing of farm products.

"The National Grange has given the Federal Farm Board its heartiest support in its efforts to develop cooperative marketing agencies, and will continue to do so, but believes that recent experience has demonstrated that in the marketing of our farm surplus, the export debenture or similar machinery is essential."

A letter or bulletin sent out to all Granges in thirty-four states by Louis J. Taber, National Master, was also read, which contained this paragraph:

"The most thrilling Grange news of the week, however, was the organization of Lone Star Grange No. 1, at Farnsworth, Texas, organized by Homer Holden, Lecturer of the Oklahoma State Grange. Other Granges are in prospect in the Lone Star State, again indicating that the American farmer is calling for the Grange."

B. L. Rogers, who was a member of and worker in the Grange in Washington State many years ago, drove Monday to Amarillo with Waters and Holden to call on Marvin Jones, U. S. Representative for this district. Mr. Jones has been a leader on the Democratic side in supporting the Debenture Plan, favored by the Grange.

The Debenture will be one of the livest issues in the coming session of Congress and as is the practice of the Grange the matter will be kept before the members of the organization, with bulletins from the Washington Office keeping them advised of every development. There are now over 900,000 members of the Grange with new Granges being organized at an increased rate.

Edith G. Pritchard of Paulet, Vt., University of Vermont senior, scored 595 out of a possible 600 to win the National Intercollegiate Women's Rifle championship.

Ruth Leddy, aged 14, of London, won the first prize at a whist contest in which 2,000 people competed.

DUAL BANK SYSTEM FAVORED BY BANKER

State and National Institutions Supplement Each Other in Serving Financial Needs

RECENT suggestions that all banks in the United States be under Federal jurisdiction, doing away with the chartering of banks by the various states recalls the opposition to this plan presented at the recent convention of the American Bankers Association by R. S. Hecht of New Orleans, Chairman of its Economic Policy Commission. Mr. Hecht said:

"There are just as good reasons why there should be state as well as national banks, as that there should be state as well as a national government. I do not think that analogy is far-fetched. The states should not surrender all political jurisdiction to the central government, and the local business life of the states should not be made to surrender all control over financial functions to national financial instrumentalities. There are many variations of business conditions from state to state and there are special fiscal requirements of the various states.

"It is entirely logical, therefore, that the states should retain the right to charter banks so as to mold and direct their affairs in accordance with the states' governmental and business requirements and keep them adapted to localized sentiment and conditions.

Federal Reserve System

"The argument is sometimes advanced that the dual system jeopardizes the life of the Federal Reserve System because under it there is a large group of banks that are free to remain out of or to withdraw from the system. Facts and figures prove that this is a specious argument.

"It is true that there has been some shifting from national to state charters especially in cases of mergers of large national banks with banks operating under state charters. However, the Federal Reserve System was not weakened in this process because the merged institutions almost universally retained their membership in the system on a voluntary basis. Moreover, the records show that state bank members are just as good members of the system as national banks and the ratio of state bank resources in the Federal Reserve System is constantly growing. In 1922, national banks held about 65 per cent of the resources of reserve members, and state banks about 35 per cent, while in 1929, the nationals held only 60 per cent and state banks 40 per cent.

"Reciprocally the state and national banks systems have helped each other. If the national banking law has served in some respects as something of a model code toward which state banking laws more and more have approached year by year, so have the state codes developed valuable reforms which have suggested improvements for the national laws. A great many undesirable competitive inequalities have been wiped out by this mutual evolutionary process and further progress along the line of uniformity so far as is desirable is anticipated.

Two Systems Desirable

"However, I do not believe that it is a disadvantage to have two banking codes that differ in some respects. It is quite probable that the state banking code in many instances represents a closer adjustment to local conditions than could be had under the national banking laws, and this is a situation that should be retained. There should, however, not be competition between the two banking codes. Competition should be between banks themselves and not between the laws under which they operate. The effort to offer too great allurements in one code as against the other could lead only to weak banking laws. But I do think that there should be the alternative opportunities that now exist which banking institutions and local business interests may choose, so that they can function or conduct their business relationships under that banking code which best meets the conditions of the times and of the place as they see them.

"This has been illustrated in both directions. In states where such unsound measures as the guarantee of deposits were operative state banks had the opportunity to escape the baleful effect of such laws. On the other hand, when a court decision was handed down in Worcester, Massachusetts, which rendered uncertain the position of trust assets acquired by a national bank through a merger with a state bank, it was a real advantage for national banks affected to take out and operate under a state charter, either on a temporary or a permanent basis, as circumstances make expedient.

"In my opinion, bankers, national as well as state, should combat the thought that conceives of depriving us of the vitalizing benefits of our dual system."

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Health and Dancing

The family physician should, above all things, be a normal man. He has, it seems to me, opportunity to make his influence felt in many ways, not inconsistent with the practice of medicine, to make his youthful patrons better men and women. I am afraid many times the doctor doesn't speak out, in the fear of offending some of his most prominent clients; particularly so it has been in the matter of the dance. So many of our very best pay patient sanction it.

Nevertheless, if an act or deed contains a strong element of hidden vice, the physician should be outspoken against it; for no one should know better than he, the damage often done by indulgence in things that are pleasing, but hold dangerous poison.

In this letter, I shall fortify myself behind know authorities; I shall confide myself to opinions of other men, rather than assume any dictatorship on my own part. I have no desire to attain a point of notoriety in this matter of grave concern, but I may say that I endorse the authorities quoted.

Dancing and purity are not incompatible—there are too many proofs of that, to be denied; but, in these scurrying days, a warning is not out of place, it seems to me. So here they are:

"Those churches in recent times which resolutely set themselves against the pastime are wiser in their generation than is commonly supposed."

"ALL dancing excites the passions—those modern creations known as glides, two-steps, waltzes and ragtime patter . . . have as their ultimate tendency, the breaking down of religious restraint, and the free exercise of sexual liberty . . ."

Mind you this is not propaganda—it is medically recorded as scientific fact. It would not be printable here, the history of the dance as indulged by races of men from time immemorial; the early Albigenses of Languedoc, called dancing "the devil's procession." I could quote from many volumes here—space forbids; let me say, concluding, that there are many forms of exercise for our young peoples' health. This without prejudice.

LUTHERAN CHURCH NOTES

Slogan: "A Changeless Christ For a Changing World."

The subject of next Sunday morning's sermon will be, "The Folly of Demanding Signs Before Believing." This sermon is based on Mat. 12, 38-42. It promises to be a message both interesting and timely.

Beginning Sunday and continuing throughout the summer months our morning services will start half an hour earlier, namely at 10 o'clock. Remember the time and be punctual. "A woman who regularly attended public worship with great punctuality and always took care to be on time, being asked how it was she could always come so early, answered that it was part of her religion never to disturb the religion of others." A fine example to follow.

We had fine attendances at our Good Friday and Easter services. A number of visitors worshipped with us. Faithful attendance at God's House is inspiring and God-pleasing. May it continue!

The pastor preached to a large and appreciative audience on Good Friday night in the high school auditorium at Hooker, Okla. Our sister congregation and its pastor deserves to be commended for their hospitality and progressiveness in carrying on the Lord's work. Several families of the local Lutheran Church showed a similar spirit by accompanying their pastor to Hooker.

A fine church bulletin board, six feet tall with removable lettering enclosed in glass, has been erected in front of our temporary church building, five miles north of town. It can easily be read from the highway, even in swiftly moving cars. Our church believes in advertising—dignified advertising, which is in keeping with the high and lofty purposes and aims of a Christian church.

A special Easter broadcast of the Lutheran Hour was presented over the Columbia chain system last Sunday night. We are sorry that the notice of this broadcast reached us too late to be published in the Herald. Due to the special broadcost last Sunday, there will be no program this week. The regular Thursday night Lutheran Hour (9 p. m.) will be resumed on April 16th.

H. W. Hartenberger, pastor.

When Rev. William C. Sister of Macon, Ga., discovered thieves had stolen a heater from his church he advertised for them to return and get the heater door and other attachments.

"Equipment Necessary to Give City Milk"—headline. A dependable water system would probably help.

BY-PRODUCTS FROM FARM CHALLENGE U. S. CHEMISTS

Describing them as "by-products" of the farm, rather than by the more common term, "farm wastes," Dr. W. W. Skinner, of the United States Department of Agriculture, said in a recent address that according to a careful estimate the United States produces annually more than 250,000,000 tons of these by-products, divided about as follows: Cornstalks, 100,000,000 tons; cereal straws, 115,000,000 tons; corncobs, 20,000,000 tons; cotton stalks, 18,000,000 tons; oat hulls, 3,000,000 tons; flax straw, 2,200,000 tons; cottonseed hulls, 1,800,000 tons; sugarcane bagasse, 500,000 tons; and peanuts hulls, 70,000 tons.

Doctor Skinner, who is assistant chief of the chemical and technological activities of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, says that these by-products of the important crops are composed approximately of cellulose, 40 per cent; lignin, 30 per cent; and hemicellulose, or carbohydrates, 30 per cent.

Cellulose is the material from which paper, rayon, and many other products are manufactured. It is possible at present to make paper pulp from a wide variety of crop by-products now wasted. But Doctor Skinner, who is thoroughly familiar with recent developments, says frankly that he does not know whether at present it is possible to make profitable use of cornstalks and straw.

These materials all have a certain basic value on the farm for fertilization and to provide organic matter for the soil. To this base cost the manufacturer must add the expense of collection, transportation, concentration, and usually storage. Increasing the size of a plant usually tends to reduce manufacturing costs, but it also tends to increase the average of the transportation costs for the bulky raw materials.

At this point the investigations of economists and engineers must supplement the findings of the chemists. Doctor Skinner is of the opinion that the only way to answer the question is by actual mill-scale production extending over several years. He points out that whether paper making from crop by-products will be profitable under any given circumstances would depend on a complex balancing of many factors, a few of the more important being the cost of wood pulp, the cost of transportation of raw materials and finished product whether these are derived from wood or from crop wastes, efficiency of manufacture, and relative cost of labor.

When the 1931 legislature met in North Carolina, Mrs. E. L. McKee of Sylva, was seated as the state's first woman senator.

Mrs. Will F. Lake of Hot Springs, Ark., has been appointed by President Hoover to serve on the planning committee to study national home building and ownership.

Mrs. Opal Logan Kuntz, a well-known American aviatrix, has been chosen as the first commander of a group of women pilots who plan "to serve their country in national emergencies of peace or war."

Miss Natalie Hammond, inventor and artist, has established a factory in New York for making metalized products, using a process she devised.

Sheriff H. W. Culbertson failed to find anybody "at home" when he raided a big whiskey still at Speers Ferry, Va., because the bootleggers were warned of his approach when all the church bells in the vicinity were tolled.

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

Even the King Can't Get a Drink

In London we visited a fashionable restaurant called the Embassy Club.

It is a place where the hoity-toity dance, and my wife and I had the pleasure of feasting our middle class eyes on a large collection of young lords and ladies, with a sprinkling of multi-millionaires and even a couple of dukes.

A little after midnight a waiter stepped up to each table, according to the law and custom in England, and reminded the diners politely that the bar was about to close. A few minutes later he came again and asked each diner to finish his drink because the glasses must be removed.

A gay party had arrived only a little while before, headed by a younger son of His Majesty, King George. I watched with interest to see what would happen when the waiter visited that table. Would a prince of the blood be asked to give up his glass like any common man? Or would a polite evasion occur in the case of one exalted?

My question was quickly answered. The waiter did, indeed go to the Prince's table last. But when he arrived, the Prince took one last gulp and handed the glass with a smile.

A few hours we had sat in one of the English law courts. A young man had been arrested only two weeks before, charged with the heinous crime of murdering his mother. In the space of a few days he was brought to trial. The jury was chosen in a couple of hours, the case was heard fully, including the testimony of medical experts, the verdict was found, and the murderer sentenced.

In our country the crime would have been a newspaper sensation for months, while the trial dragged its dreary way through the maze of legal obstruction.

We are ahead of the English in many ways. We do business more quickly, with more flexibility, and more steam. But when it comes to respect for the law they have us lashed to the mast. We pass thousands of laws and disregard them. The English pass fewer, but they certainly respect and enforce them. If you kill your mother over there you're hung, and promptly.

And when the bar closes even the king can't get a drink.

The subtle fragrance of the morning coffee adds zest to the morning air, advance notice of the joy to come as you give the "cup test" to the coffee blend of your choice. Coffee roasting is important, of course, but the most skillful roaster cannot make a popular coffee from just one type of coffee bean.

The coffee connoisseur would not deign to drink coffee made from a single type of bean. Neither should the thoughtful motorist allow an unblended gasoline to go into his fuel tank. Gasoline must be blended if it is to possess all the vital properties contained in the three types of gasoline.

CONOCO Gasoline is blended, just as carefully as the finest coffee.

In CONOCO blended gasoline you'll find: Natural Gasoline, for quick starting; Straight-run Gasoline, for power and long mileage; Cracked Gasoline, for its anti-knock qualities. KING OF SIAM COMING hough the visit of King Praja k of Siam and his queen to United States this month will be an event of great interna- l significance, the country h he rules is perhaps more im- nt than is realized by the av- American.

m has an area of more than 00 square miles, situated in eastern Asia, with a popula- of approximately 12,000,000, a er number than the Dominion anada. Wages the general standard of living higher in Siam than in most Oriental countries, although more than 85 per cent of the people are illiterate.

Buddhism is the prevailing religion, but the Siamese are very tolerant of other faiths. They are a peaceful and easy-going people, and the status of women is much better than it is in most Asiatic states.

During the visit of the royal pair to the United States they will travel incognito as Prince and Princess Sukrodaya, so as to avoid official ceremonies as much as possible. They are expected to arrive on April 20 and will be met at the Canadian border by representatives of President Hoover and the State Department. They will later be received by the President at the White House.

CHILD WELFARE METHODS

It is being recognized that social science can contribute more to mankind by concentrating its attention on the children of the poor, who are too often sacrificed in the economic mill.

Some of our states and municipalities provide allowances for unfortunate families to care for their children in the home instead of sending them to institutions. The amounts allotted vary from two dollars up weekly for each child. As the number of children in the family increases, the allowance per child is slightly reduced.

Europe, also, has its systems of family allowances. A single French industry, the textile syndicate of Roubaix-Tourcoing, during 1930 paid the sum of $1,200,000 to a total of 58,000 families having all together 99,162 children under 13 years of age.

The plan differs from ours, however, in that the allotment per child increases with the number of children. The syndicate pays about 10 cents a day for one child,approximately 25 cents a day for two, 37.5 cents for three, 60 cents for four, and so on. It is felt that the benefits accruing to the families account for the surprising number of mothers who devote themselves exclusively to the home instead of following some other profession.

For ten years, the Department of the Seine, which includes Paris, has paid an annual allowance to mothers of French nationality, following the birth of a third child, provided the other two children are still living.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTICS WILL NOT CURE DISEASE

Medicines recommended as antiseptics or germicides, to be administered to farm livestock by way of the mouth, and represented as being effective in the treatment of any disease condition involving the digestive tract act, according to Dr. H. E. Moskey, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Doctor Moskey, who is a veterinarian of the Food and Drug Administration, cites one such preparation which recently came to his attention. It was labeled somewhat as follows: "Jones' Germicide is an intestinal remedy for poultry and other animals. Its properties render it an invaluable intestional antiseptic, purifying, cleansing, and healing the mucous membrane of intry and animal diseases * *." Claims flammation which causes many poul- of this character for any drug preparation administered in the feed or drinking water are considered by modern veterinary-medical authorities to be beyond therapeutic possibility, says Doctor Moskey.

"Considering the length of the digestive tract, the small quantity of drug taken, and the enormous dilution resulting from mixture with the contents of the intestine, it is easy to see that claims such as the above make promises beyond the therapeutic possibilities of any drug or drug mixture known to science," he says. "There is no evidence based on scientific tests to show that so-called intestional antiseptics or germicides have been found effective in the treatment of livestock or poultry diseases. Through the efforts of the Food and Drug Administration, exaggerated claims of this character have largely been removed from the labels of drug preparations."

He warns buyers not to put their faith in unwarranted "curative" represenations of this type which appear in circulars and other advertising matter not actually accompanying the drug products in interstate shipments. The administration has control only over labels on the bottle or package or statements made in circulars or other advertising material actually accompanying the container.

CATTLE TB DECLINES

More than one-third of all the counties in the United States have reduced bovine tuberculosis infection to less than one-half of 1 per cent. In these 1,096 counties there are 21,313,313 cattle, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. Since the cooperative campaign to eradicate bovine tuberculosis was begun in 1917 more than 75,000,000 animals have been tested and retested by county, State, and Federal veterinarians, and approximately 2,000,000 infected cattle have been slaughtered.

MISBRANDED MINERAL MIXTURES UNDER BAN

"When mineral mixtures are labeled as having power to increase egg, milk, and meat production above the level produced by normal, healthy poultry and other livestock, they are misbranded under the food and drugs act, if shipped in interstate commerce," Dr. H. E. Moskey, veterinarian, Federal Food and Drug Administration, declares. "Mineral mixtures are likewise misbranded if they are represented as preventivies or treatment for infectious diseases of farm stock, or as preventives of maladies caused by worms, or as efficient worm expellers. The administration is instituting vigorous action to prevent interstate trade in such mislabeled products."

Doctor Moskey explains that certain minerals may be added to the feed of animals to make up for possible mineral deficiencies in the ordinary ration. "The addition of minerals to the feed, however, can not truthfully be said to be effective in creating a resistance against contagious or infectious diseases," he states, "nor is there sound reason to believe that such use of minerals is effective in the treatment of these diseases. Some manufacturers claim that their mineral mixtures prevent or control worm infestation of poultry and other animals, but no scientific authority supports these assertions.

"The restoration of a proper mineral balance in the ration, through the addition of certain mineral elements, may result in normal egg, milk, or meat production when decreased yields are due to a lack of ...s in the feed," Doctor Moskey adds. "Decreased yields, however, may be due to many other factors. Claims that the use of minerals will stimulate the quantities of milk, eggs, and meat produced create an erroneous impression in the mind of the buyer."

The Federal Food and Drug Administration can, under the law, exercise cantrol only over claims on the labels of, or in circulars accompanying, food and rugs shipped in interstate commerce. Doctor Moskey pointed out that legal control does not extend to curative and preventive claims for mineral mixtures made in outside advertising—on billboards, in newspapers, farm papers, and other periodicals—and suggested that the prospective buyer compare these with the ncessarily more conservative statements printed on the labels themselves.

The McCormick-Deering TRACTRACTOR Is Always Sure of Good Traction

THE TracTracTor is an important unit in the famous McCormick-Deering line, which includes the 10-20, 15-30, and Farmall wheel-type tractors. It offers all of the dependable performance for which McCormick-Deering Tractors are well known, combined with crawler traction for successful operation in any kind of soil.

Many of the basic features are identical with those found in other McCormick-Deering Tractors. For example, the engine, with its removable cylinders, ball-bearing crankshaft, combination manifold, oil filter, air cleaner, fuel strainer, factory-sealed governor, and high-tension magneto. Unit construction is featured throughout, facilitating servicing operations.

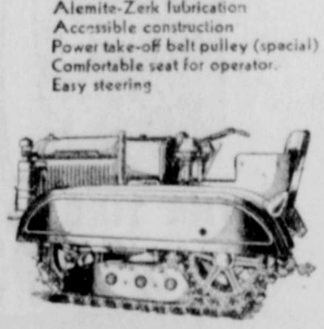

The very finest materials are employed in the construction of the tracks and their operating parts, thus reducing wear to the minimum.

Steering ease is an important feature of the TracTracTor. Ordinarily, light pressure on the steering clutches is sufficient to guide the tractor. When steering is not accomplished by the upper clutches alone, the pedals operating the foot brakes can be utilized in completing the steering operation.

These and many other features of the TracTracTor will be best understood and appreciated when you inspect the machine itself. We suggest that you visit our store at the first opportunity—or ask us to bring the TracTracTor to your place for a demonstration.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Health and Dancing

The family physician should, above all things, be a normal man. He has, it seems to me, opportunity to make his influence felt in many ways, not inconsistent with the practice of medicine, to make his youthful patrons better men and women. I am afraid many times the doctor doesn't speak out, in the fear of offending some of his most prominent clients; particularly so it has been in the matter of the dance. So many of our very best pay patient sanction it.

Nevertheless, if an act or deed contains a strong element of hidden vice, the physician should be outspoken against it; for no one should know better than he, the damage often done by indulgence in things that are pleasing, but hold dangerous poison.

In this letter, I shall fortify myself behind know authorities; I shall confide myself to opinions of other men, rather than assume any dictatorship on my own part. I have no desire to attain a point of notoriety in this matter of grave concern, but I may say that I endorse the authorities quoted.

Dancing and purity are not incompatible—there are too many proofs of that, to be denied; but, in these scurrying days, a warning is not out of place, it seems to me. So here they are:

"Those churches in recent times which resolutely set themselves against the pastime are wiser in their generation than is commonly supposed."

"ALL dancing excites the passions—those modern creations known as glides, two-steps, waltzes and ragtime patter . . . have as their ultimate tendency, the breaking down of religious restraint, and the free exercise of sexual liberty . . ."

Mind you this is not propaganda—it is medically recorded as scientific fact. It would not be printable here, the history of the dance as indulged by races of men from time immemorial; the early Albigenses of Languedoc, called dancing "the devil's procession." I could quote from many volumes here—space forbids; let me say, concluding, that there are many forms of exercise for our young peoples' health. This without prejudice.

LUTHERAN CHURCH NOTES

Slogan: "A Changeless Christ For a Changing World."

The subject of next Sunday morning's sermon will be, "The Folly of Demanding Signs Before Believing." This sermon is based on Mat. 12, 38-42. It promises to be a message both interesting and timely.

Beginning Sunday and continuing throughout the summer months our morning services will start half an hour earlier, namely at 10 o'clock. Remember the time and be punctual. "A woman who regularly attended public worship with great punctuality and always took care to be on time, being asked how it was she could always come so early, answered that it was part of her religion never to disturb the religion of others." A fine example to follow.

We had fine attendances at our Good Friday and Easter services. A number of visitors worshipped with us. Faithful attendance at God's House is inspiring and God-pleasing. May it continue!

The pastor preached to a large and appreciative audience on Good Friday night in the high school auditorium at Hooker, Okla. Our sister congregation and its pastor deserves to be commended for their hospitality and progressiveness in carrying on the Lord's work. Several families of the local Lutheran Church showed a similar spirit by accompanying their pastor to Hooker.

A fine church bulletin board, six feet tall with removable lettering enclosed in glass, has been erected in front of our temporary church building, five miles north of town. It can easily be read from the highway, even in swiftly moving cars. Our church believes in advertising—dignified advertising, which is in keeping with the high and lofty purposes and aims of a Christian church.

A special Easter broadcast of the Lutheran Hour was presented over the Columbia chain system last Sunday night. We are sorry that the notice of this broadcast reached us too late to be published in the Herald. Due to the special broadcast last Sunday, there will be no program this week. The regular Thursday night Lutheran Hour (9 p. m.) will be resumed on April 16th.

H. W. Hartenberger, pastor.

When Rev. William C. Sister of Macon, Ga., discovered thieves had stolen a heater from his church he advertised for them to return and get the heater door and other attachments.

"Equipment Necessary to Give City Milk"—headline. A dependable water system would probably help.

BY-PRODUCTS FROM FARM CHALLENGE U. S. CHEMISTS

Describing them as "by-products" of the farm, rather than by the more common term, "farm wastes," Dr. W. W. Skinner, of the United States Department of Agriculture, said in a recent address that according to a careful estimate the United States produces annually more than 250,000,000 tons of these by-products, divided about as follows: Cornstalks, 100,000,000 tons; cereal straws, 115,000,000 tons; corncobs, 20,000,000 tons, cotton stalks, 18,000,000 tons; oat hulls, 3,000,000 tons; flax straw, 2,200,000 tons; cottonseed hulls, 1,800,000 tons; sugarcane bagasse, 500,000 tons; and peanuts hulls, 70,000 tons.

Doctor Skinner, who is assistant chief of the chemical and technological activities of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, says that these by-products of the important crops are composed approximately of cellulose, 40 per cent; lignin, 30 per cent; and hemicellulose, or carbohydrates, 30 per cent.

Cellulose is the material from which paper, rayon, and many other products are manufactured. It is possible at present to make paper pulp from a wide variety of crop by-products now wasted. But Doctor Skinner, who is thoroughly familiar with recent developments, says frankly that he does not know whether at present it is possible to make profitable use of cornstalks and straw.

These materials all have a certain basic value on the farm for fertilization and to provide organic matter for the soil. To this base cost the manufacturer must add the expense of collection, transportation, concentration, and usually storage. Increasing the size of a plant usually tends to reduce manufacturing costs, but it also tends to increase the average of the transportation costs for the bulky raw materials.

At this point the investigations of economists and engineers must supplement the findings of the chemists. Doctor Skinner is of the opinion that the only way to answer the question is by actual mill-scale production extending over several years. He points out that whether paper making from crop by-products will be profitable under any given circumstances would depend on a complex balancing of many factors, a few of the more important being the cost of wood pulp, the cost of transportation of raw materials and finished product whether these are derived from wood or from crop wastes, efficiency of manufacture, and relative cost of labor.

ABOUT WOMEN

When the 1931 legislature met in North Carolina, Mrs. E. L. McKee of Sylva, was seated as the state's first woman senator.

Mrs. Will F. Lake of Hot Springs, Ark., has been appointed by President Hoover to serve on the planning committee to study national home building and ownership.

The first woman to become a member of either branch of Congress was Jeannette Rankin of Missoula, Mont., who was elected to the House of Representatives for the term of 1917-1919.

Mrs. Opal Logan Kuntz, a well-known American aviatrix, has been chosen as the first commander of a group of women pilots who plan "to serve their country in national emergencies of peace or war."

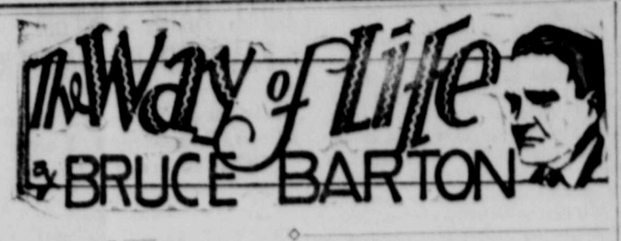

Bobbie Trout with her flying partner, Edna May Cooper, recently set a new woman's endurance flight record of 122 hours and 50 minutes.

Miss Natalie Hammond, inventor and artist, has established a factory in New York for making metalized products, using a process she devised.

Sheriff H. W. Culbertson failed to find anybody "at home" when he raided a big whiskey still at Speers Ferry, Va., because the bootleggers were warned of his approach when all the church bells in the vicinity were tolled.

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

Even the King Can't Get a Drink

In London we visited a fashionable restaurant called the Embassy Club.

It is a place where the hoity-toity dance, and my wife and I had the pleasure of feasting our middle class eyes on a large collection of young lords and ladies, with a sprinkling of multi-millionaires and even a couple of dukes.

A little after midnight a waiter stepped up to each table, according to the law and custom in England, and reminded the diners politely that the bar was about to close. A few minutes later he came again and asked each diner to finish his drink because the glasses must be removed.

A gay party had arrived only a little while before, headed by a younger son of His Majesty, King George. I watched with interest to see what would happen when the waiter visited that table. Would a prince of the blood be asked to give up his glass like any common man? Or would a polite evasion occur in the case of one exalted?

My question was quickly answered. The waiter did, indeed go to the Prince's table last. But when he arrived, the Prince took one last gulp and handed the glass with a smile.

A few hours we had sat in one of the English law courts. A young man had been arrested only two weeks before, charged with the heinous crime of murdering his mother. In the space of a few days he was brought to trial. The jury was chosen in a couple of hours, the case was heard fully, including the testimony of medical experts, the verdict was found, and the murderer sentenced.

In our country the crime would have been a newspaper sensation for months, while the trial dragged its dreary way through the maze of legal obstruction.

We are ahead of the English in many ways. We do business more quickly, with more flexibility, and more steam. But when it comes to respect for the law they have us lashed to the mast. We pass thousands of laws and disregard them. The English pass fewer, but they certainly respect and enforce them. If you kill your mother over there you're hung, and promptly.

And when the bar closes even the king can't get a drink.

Like Coffee . . . the best Gasoline is Blended

THE sun beams cheerfully through an eastern window. The subtle fragrance of the morning coffee adds zest to the morning air, advance notice of the joy to come as you give the "cup test" to the coffee blend of your choice. Coffee roasting is important, of course, but the most skillful roaster cannot make a popular coffee from just one type of coffee bean.

The coffee connoisseur would not deign to drink coffee made from a single type of bean. Neither should the thoughtful motorist allow an unblended gasoline to go into his fuel tank. Gasoline must be blended if it is to possess all the vital properties contained in the three types of gasoline.

CONOCO Gasoline is blended, just as carefully as the finest coffee.

In CONOCO blended gasoline you'll find: Natural Gasoline, for quick starting; Straight-run Gasoline, for power and long mileage; Cracked Gasoline, for its anti-knock qualities. Motorists are fast learning that this is so. The result is a fast increasing group of gasoline connoisseurs who have added to their knowledge of the good things of life the fact that good gasoline must be blended.

They are expected to arrive on April 20 and will be met at the Canadian border by representatives of President Hoover and the State Department. They will later be received by the President at the White House.

CHILD WELFARE METHODS

It is being recognized that social science can contribute more to mankind by concentrating its attention on the children of the poor, who are too often sacrificed in the economic mill.

Some of our states and municipalities provide allowances for unfortunate families to care for their children in the home instead of sending them to institutions. The amounts allotted vary from two dollars up weekly for each child. As the number of children in the family increases, the allowance per child is slightly reduced.

Europe, also, has its systems of family allowances. A single French industry, the textile syndicate of Roubaix-Tourcoing, during 1930 paid the sum of $1,200,000 to a total of 58,000 families having all together 99,162 children under 13 years of age.

The plan differs from ours, however, in that the allotment per child increases with the number of children. The syndicate pays about 10 cents a day for one child,approximately 25 cents a day for two, 37.5 cents for three, 60 cents for four, and so on. It is felt that the benefits accruing to the families account for the surprising number of mothers who devote themselves exclusively to the home instead of following some other profession.

For ten years, the Department of the Seine, which includes Paris, has paid an annual allowance to mothers of French nationality, following the birth of a third child, provided the other two children are still living.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTICS WILL NOT CURE DISEASE

Medicines recommended as antiseptics or germicides, to be administered to farm livestock by way of the mouth, and represented as being effective in the treatment of any disease condition involving the digestive tract act, according to Dr. H. E. Moskey, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Doctor Moskey, who is a veterinarian of the Food and Drug Administration, cites one such preparation which recently came to his attention. It was labeled somewhat as follows: "Jones' Germicide is an intestinal remedy for poultry and other animals. Its properties render it an invaluable intestional antiseptic, purifying, cleansing, and healing the mucous membrane of intry and animal diseases * *." Claims flammation which causes many poul- of this character for any drug preparation administered in the feed or drinking water are considered by modern veterinary-medical authorities to be beyond therapeutic possibility, says Doctor Moskey.

"Considering the length of the digestive tract, the small quantity of drug taken, and the enormous dilution resulting from mixture with the contents of the intestine, it is easy to see that claims such as the above make promises beyond the therapeutic possibilities of any drug or drug mixture known to science," he says. "There is no evidence based on scientific tests to show that so-called intestional antiseptics or germicides have been found effective in the treatment of livestock or poultry diseases. Through the efforts of the Food and Drug Administration, exaggerated claims of this character have largely been removed from the labels of drug preparations."

He warns buyers not to put their faith in unwarranted "curative" represenations of this type which appear in circulars and other advertising matter not actually accompanying the drug products in interstate shipments. The administration has control only over labels on the bottle or package or statements made in circulars or other advertising material actually accompanying the container.

CATTLE TB DECLINES

More than one-third of all the counties in the United States have reduced bovine tuberculosis infection to less than one-half of 1 per cent. In these 1,096 counties there are 21,313,313 cattle, reports the United States Department of Agrisulture. Since the cooperative campaign to eradicate bovine tuberculosis was begun in 1917 more than 75,000,000 animals have been tested and retested by county, State, and Federal veterinarians, and approximately 2,000,000 infected cattle have been slaughtered.

MISBRANDED MINERAL MIXTURES UNDER BAN

"When mineral mixtures are labeled as having power to increase egg, milk, and meat production above the level produced by normal, healthy poultry and other livestock, they are misbranded under the food and drugs act, if shipped in interstate commerce," Dr. H. E. Moskey, veterinarian, Federal Food and Drug Administration, declares. "Mineral mixtures are likewise misbranded if they are represented as preventivies or treatment for infectious diseases of farm stock, or as preventives of maladies caused by worms, or as efficient worm expellers. The administration is instituting vigorous action to prevent interstate trade in such mislabeled products."

Doctor Moskey explains that certain minerals may be added to the feed of animals to make up for possible mineral deficiencies in the ordinary ration. "The addition of minerals to the feed, however, can not truthfully be said to be effective in creating a resistance against contagious or infectious diseases," he states, "nor is there sound reason to believe that such use of minerals is effective in the treatment of these diseases. Some manufacturers claim that their mineral mixtures prevent or control worm infestation of poultry and other animals, but no scientific authority supports these assertions.

"The restoration of a proper mineral balance in the ration, through the addition of certain mineral elements, may result in normal egg, milk, or meat production when decreased yields are due to a lack of [illegible] in the feed," Doctor Moskey adds. "Decreased yields, however, may be due to many other factors. Claims that the use of minerals will stimulate the quantities of milk, eggs, and meat produced create an erroneous impression in the mind of the buyer."

The Federal Food and Drug Administration can, under the law, exercise cantrol only over claims on the labels of, or in circulars accompanying, food and rugs shipped in interstate commerce. Doctor Moskey pointed out that legal control does not extend to curative and preventive claims for mineral mixtures made in outside advertising—on billboards, in newspapers, farm papers, and other periodicals—and suggested that the prospective buyer compare these with the ncessarily more conservative statements printed on the labels themselves.

The McCormick-Deering TRACTRACTOR Is Always Sure of Good Traction

THE TracTracTor is an important unit in the famous McCormick-Deering line, which includes the 10-20, 15-30, and Farmall wheel-type tractors. It offers all of the dependable performance for which McCormick-Deering Tractors are well known, combined with crawler traction for successful operation in any kind of soil.

Many of the basic features are identical with those found in other McCormick-Deering Tractors. For example, the engine, with its removable cylinders, ball-bearing crankshaft, combination manifold, oil filter, air cleaner, fuel strainer, factory-sealed governor, and high-tension magneto. Unit construction is featured throughout, facilitating servicing operations.

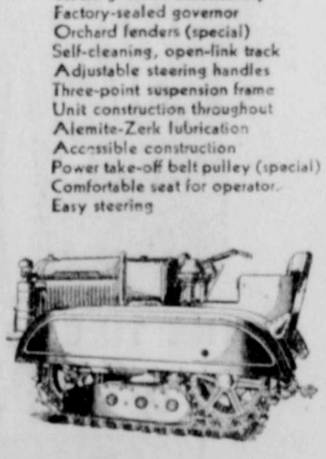

The very finest materials are employed in the construction of the tracks and their operating parts, thus reducing wear to the minimum.

Steering ease is an important feature of the TracTracTor. Ordinarily, light pressure on the steering clutches is sufficient to guide the tractor. When steering is not accomplished by the upper clutches alone, the pedals operating the foot brakes can be utilized in completing the steering operation.

These and many other features of the TracTracTor will be best understood and appreciated when you inspect the machine itself. We suggest that you visit our store at the first opportunity—or ask us to bring the TracTracTor to your place for a demonstration.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF FORD VALUE

Bright, enduring RUSTLESS STEEL is used for many exposed bright metal parts of the Ford

WHEN YOU BUY a Ford you buy enduring beauty. The body finish is made to last for the life of the car and practically all exposed bright metal parts except the bumpers are made of enduring Rustless Steel.

This Rustless Steel has great tensile strength. It is the same bright metal all the way through. A salt test equivalent to forty years' service under the severest weather conditions failed to have any effect on its brilliance. It never requires polishing. All you do is wipe it with a damp cloth, as you do your windshield.

This is just one of many features that show the substantial worth of the Ford. In speed, comfort, safety, economy and long life — in the richness of its finish and upholstery — it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

FOREWORD

The primary purpose in writing these memoirs of the American expeditionary forces in France is to record what I conceive to be an important service to my country. In the adventure there are many things useful to the American people, should they ever again be called to arms, and I felt it a duty to record them as I saw them.

The world war found us absorbed in the pursuits of peace and unconscious of possible changes in our security. We would not heed the warnings of danger. We made small preparation for defense and none for aggression. When war actually came upon us we had to change the habits of our lives and minds to meet its realities. The slow process by which we achieved victory and applied our energies to the problems of Europe, despite our numbers and our wealth, I have endeavored to describe. I have tried to point the lessons of which I think.

I wish to dedicate this modest volume to the men of all ranks who served with me in France, and especially to those who gave their lives in the cause for which we fought.

To the comrades of the allied armies I wish to say that I am not attempting to write a history of the great war or of the epic part played in it. I write of our own participation and for our own people. I have not consciously overstressed or minimized the effort of any ally or any people. There is glory enough for all of us in the final victory of our united arms. The heroism of the allies was much alike and their sacrifices very much the same as ours.

I am grateful to President Wilson and Secretary Baker for selecting me to command our armies and for the wholehearted and unstinted support they accorded me. No commander was ever privileged to lead a finer body of troops. No commander ever derived greater inspiration from the personal valor of his troops.

JOHN J. PERSHING.

CHAPTER I

On May 3, 1917, four weeks after the United States had declared war on Germany, I received the following telegram from my father-in-law, Senator F. E. Warren, Washington:

"Can be today whether and what you speak, read and write about."

At the time I was stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco, which adjoins the city of Houston, Texas, and was in command of the southern department with the rank of major-general. Naturally, Senator Warren's telegram suggested that I might be assigned to some duty in Texas, but as no intimation had been given out regarding the plans for our active participation in the war, the message was somewhat puzzling.

However, I telegraphed the following reply:

"Have been several months in France and am now studying language. Can not speak it fluently; could read and write it very well at that time. Would require satisfactory opportunity to reacquire satisfactory knowledge."

Senator Warren's Letter.

The reply, to be sure, was rather indefinite, yet it was comparatively clear and perhaps was justified by the possibilities to be inferred. Senator Warren's telegram of a few days later I received the following letter:

"Dear Pershing: This is what happened: Yesterday afternoon, about ten o'clock, Secretary of war rang me up and wanted to know if I would call in and see him this morning, and I responded that I would if I could reach him at nine o'clock. This is the first time he has ever asked me to call for a consultation.

"When I reached him he said in the most distant and careless way: 'Oh, by the way, before I discuss the matter about which I asked you to call—do you happen to know whether Pershing speaks French?' (This is the first time your name was ever mentioned between the secretary of war and me, direct.)

"I said I was not certain about that; that I knew he was a linguist along the lines of Spanish and, to some extent, Japanese, and all of the Philippine dialects (a pardonable exaggeration by one's father-in-law)—that perhaps my wife might know, as she speaks French a little and reads it readily:

"He said: 'Well, it is of no special consequence, only I happened to think of it at this moment.' I replied: 'Well, I'll ask my wife about it today and see whether she knows, and will let you know.' He then said: 'If you don't mind, do so.'

"And then he proceeded to discuss quite fully some appropriation matters on which I intended to go to work upon my arrival at the Capitol.

"I hope you will wire me promptly upon receipt of my telegram so that I may tell the secretary 'what my wife said about it (?).'

"Affectionately,
"F. E. WARREN."

Message Promises Command.

Shortly after the receipt of the private wire and before the above letter reached me, a telegram dated May 2, came from Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff, containing the opening words, "For your eye alone," followed by a message in code:

"Under plans under consideration is one which will require among other troops four infantry regiments and one artillery regiment from your department for service in France. If plans are carried out you will be in command. You will be in command of the entire force. Wire me at once designation of the regiments selected by you and their present stations."

I construed this message to mean that these troops were to form a division, which, together with such other troops as might be sent over at once, would be under my command.

Within a day or so after the receipt of Scott's telegram it was intimated to Col. M. H. Barnum, my chief of staff, that we might be called upon for a recommendation, and after consultation with him I selected the Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth regiments of infantry and the Sixth field artillery. These, together with two other artillery regiments and the necessary auxiliary units, were later organized as our first division.

Surprised by Developments.

I had scarcely given a thought to the possibility of my being selected to be in supreme command of our forces abroad, as afterward developed, although my old friend, Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, had written me that he thought my selection almost certain. After I left the Philippines, in 1913, where he was in command, he and I had kept up an intermittent correspondence in which we freely exchanged confidences on army matters.

In one of his letters early in April, 1917, General Bell spoke of the possibility of our sending an army to France and gave a list of the general officers who might be considered for the supreme command. Discussing the chances for and against each one, he predicted, much to my surprise, that all the others, including himself, would be passed over and that I would be selected.

I was the junior on the list of major generals, hence I could not fully accept General Bell's view, but he was so strongly convinced that he was right that he requested an assignment under my command.

The major generals senior to me at the time were, in order of rank: Leonard Wood, General Bell, Thomas H. Barry, Hugh L. Scott and Tasker H. Bliss.

CHAPTER II

I arrived in Washington May 9 and the next morning called at the office of the chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott. He spoke of my assignment, which, as had been my impression from his message of May 2, was to command a division, and told me that it had been made upon his recommendation.

General Scott outlined the general plans in so far as anything definite had been determined. Beginning with February 3, the war college division of the general staff presented a number of recommendations for action in the event of war with the central powers. One was for the enactment of a draft law and others referred to the size of the army to be organized and the necessity for the procurement of equipment and supplies.

Chagrined by Unpreparedness.

March 15, acting under instructions of the chief of staff, the war college division submitted a more detailed scheme for raising an army of 500,000 men. But these were all eleventh-hour suggestions and no definite action was taken on any of them until May 18, when congress passed the law authorizing the increase of military establishment through the application of the draft.

I was really more chagrined than astonished to realize that so little had been done when there were so many things that might have been done long before. It had been apparent to everybody for months that we were likely to be forced into the war and a state of war had actually existed for several weeks, yet scarcely a start had been made to prepare for it.

But the truth is that the general staff at Washington had never been organized along modern lines, its membership had been recently reduced by congress, and but few of its officers had the experience necessary fully to understand its functions. In this fact we no doubt find the basis of many of the difficulties that arose later in connection with the preparation of our army at home and its shipment and supply abroad.

Praise for Secretary Baker.

My next call was upon the secretary of war, Mr. Newton D. Baker. It was a much younger and considerably smaller man who greeted me than I had expected. He actually looked diminutive as he sat behind his desk, doubled up in a rather large office chair, but when he spoke my impression changed immediately. We talked of my recent experience in Mexico and of conditions on the border, which, fortunately, were quieter than they had been for several years.

Mr. Baker referred to my appointment and said that he had given the subject very careful thought and had made the choice solely upon my record. I expressed my deep appreciation of the honor, mentioned the responsibility of the position and said that I hoped he would have no reason to regret his action.

I left Mr. Baker's office with a distinctly favorable impression of the man upon whom, as head of the War department, would rest the burden of preparing for a great war to which the wholly unready nation was now committed.

Still proceeding under the assumption that I was to command only a division in France, my feelings may well be imagined when a few days later, the secretary of war called me in to say that it had been decided by the President to send me abroad as commander in chief, and that I should select my staff accordingly and prepare to sail as soon as possible.

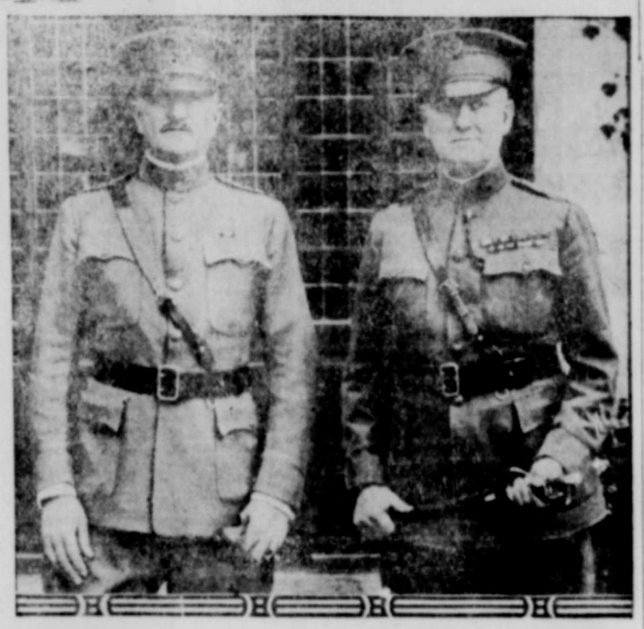

The thought of the responsibilities that this high position carried depressed me for the moment. Here in the face of a great war I had been placed in command of a theoretical army which had yet to be constituted, equipped, trained and sent abroad. Still, there was no doubt in my mind then or at any other time of my ability to do the job, provided the government would furnish men, equipment and supplies.

Harbord Chief of Staff.

Obviously it was advisable to choose my chief of staff as soon as practicable. After studying the records of several officers of my acquaintance and of others who were recommended for the position, I chose Maj. James G. Harbord. His efficiency in every grade from the day of his enlistment as a private in the army in January, 1889, was not only of record but was well known to those with whom he had served.

Throughout the war Harbord never hesitated a moment to express his opinion with the utmost frankness, no matter how radically it might differ from my own, nor did he ever fail to carry out instructions faithfully even when they were not in accord with his views. Entirely unselfish, he labored incessantly for what he believed to be the best interests of our armies. His ability, his resourcefulness, his faculty for organization, and, above all, his loyalty, were outstanding qualities, and these, together with a compelling personality, made him invaluable to the nation in this important position.

After consultation with the permanent heads of staff and supply departments, and with no little insistence on my part in more than one instance, the corresponding representatives to accompany me were designated, and they in turn chose their assistants. Although the list did not include all I would have selected, as some were not available, yet all rose to important places in the final organization, except one or two who failed in health.

General Pershing With Gen. James G. Harbord, His Chief of Staff.

The total number in my party that sailed on the Baltic was as follows:

Regular army officers	40
Marine corps officers	2
ORC officers in active service	17
Enlisted men	67
Field clerks	35
Civilian clerks	20
Civilian interpreters	5
Civilians (correspondents)	3
Total on Baltic	190

Draft Act Passed May 18.

The method of raising our armies by conscription was based on studies made by the war college under instructions from General Scott. President Wilson recommended the plan to congress April 7, 1917, but the draft act was not passed until May 18, forty-two days after the declaration of war.

Roosevelt Offer Rejected.

The appeal of Col. Theodore Roosevelt at this time for permission to raise a volunteer division aroused popular sentiment throughout the country in his favor, but approval would have opened the door for many other applications and the policy would have interfered materially with the orderly and businesslike application of the draft law.

Moreover, the regular establishment would have suffered from the loss of an undue proportion of the best officers, who inevitably would have been selected for important positions in these special units at a time when their services were urgently needed in building more largely.

Another important reason for disapproving Colonel Roosevelt's application was that in such a war it was necessary that officers, especially those in high command, should be thoroughly trained and disciplined. Furthermore, Colonel Roosevelt was not in the best of health and could not have withstood the hard work and exposure of training camps and trenches.

The secretary of war, much to the disappointment of Colonel Roosevelt, wisely made an adverse decision in his case, which was confirmed by the President. It was evident that both Mr. Wilson and Secretary Baker were looking for trained leaders and were determined to avoid the embarrassment President Lincoln experienced in the Civil war, when he was more or less driven to fill many high positions with political appointees who, in the end, had to be replaced by men trained in the military profession.

Roosevelt's Plea for Sons.

The following letter from Colonel Roosevelt, dated May 17, 1917, will show his own fine attitude:

"My Dear General Pershing:

"I very heartily congratulate you, and especially the people of the United States, upon your selection to lead the expeditionary force to the front. When I was endeavoring to persuade the secretary of war to permit me to raise a division or two of volunteers, I stated that if you, or some men like you, were to command the expeditionary force I could raise the divisions without trouble.

"I write you now to request that my two sons, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., aged twenty-seven, and Archibald B. Roosevelt, aged twenty-three, both of Harvard, be allowed to enlist as privates with you, to go over with the first troops. The former is a major and the latter a captain in the officers' reserve corps. They are at Plattsburg for their third summer.

"My own belief is that competent men of their standing and rank can gain very little from a third summer at Plattsburg and that they should be utilized as officers, even if only as second lieutenants. But they are keenly desirous to see service; and if they serve under you at the front, and are not killed, they will be far better able to instruct the draft army next fall or next winter, or whenever they are sent home, than they will be after spending the summer at Plattsburg.

"The President has announced that only regular officers are to go with you, and if this is to be the invariable rule then I apply on behalf of my two sons that they may serve under you as enlisted men, to go to the front with the first troops sent over.

"Trusting to hear that this request has been granted, I am, with great respect,

"Very sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

"P. S.—If I were physically fit, instead of old and heavy and stiff, I should myself ask to go under you in any capacity down to and including a sergeant; but at my age, and condition, I suppose that I could not do work you would consider worth while in the fighting line (my only line) in a lower grade than brigade commander."

COMPARE HEIFERS AND STEERS AS BEEF MAKERS

In comparing the meat-producing abilities of well-bred heifers and steers recently, the United States Department of Agriculture and seven State experiment stations disproved some of the arguments which have been advanced in support of the long-standing prejudice against heifer beef.

One of the most interesting and important facts discovered by the investigators is that the meat from well-finished heifers is equally as palatable as that from steers when the two are slaughtered at the same age. Moreover, in these experiments the dressing percentage of the heifers was fully as high as that of the steers.

In the course of their studies on the relative merits of the two sexes as meat producers, the investigators likewise found that yearling heifers ordinarily reach an acceptable market finish more quickly and at lighter weight than do steers of similar breeding and feeding. It follows, of course, that the heifers become overfinished sooner than the steers when the feeding is continued.

These research findings are significant in view of the present market demand for lighter-weight carcasses of good finish, the department says. The housewife likes to buy small but well-finished cuts of beef. She likes steaks thick, if not otherwise too large, and would buy roasts more often if she could always get them small enough. The well-finished light heifer, slaughtered before she becomes overfat, fulfills these requirements. This study has uncovered some facts which should be of marked benefit not only to the consuming public but also to the producer, the meat packer, and the retailer, the department says.

The agricultural experiment stations of Arkansas, Colorado, Michigan, Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio, and Illinois, in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture, fed out about 400 head of cattle, about half of which were heifers and half steers, during these experiments. The studies have been in progress about five years. In each instance the department with the cooperating station graded the cattle as feeders, slaughter cattle, and carcasses, with respect to conformation, finish, and quality. Standard rib cuts were taken from representative carcasses for the cooking and palatability studies. The roasts were judged by the department's cooked-meat grading committee.

Hazel Hurd Players

Popular Theatrical Troupe Back Here Monday and Tuesday Two Night Only

The Hazel Hurd Players, the Panhandle's favorite theatrical troupe and long favorites with the amusement seekers of Perryton, who enjoy a good clean play by real artists, will return to this city for a two day engagement at the American Theatre on Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 13-14.

Manager Fred Twyman announces the finest group of plays that they have ever been able to offer here. Their opening play, Geo. Crawley's New York success, "Dollar Power," is a play of the times of today. The story is realistic and well balanced with a good plot as well as an abundance of comedy. Pat Patterson, featured comedian, has one of his famous red-headed Toby characters, while Miss Hurd will be seen in a beautiful part as the country wife of a New York millionaire.

On Tuesday night, they will offer Robt. J. Sherman's new play, "Nice Girls Don't", which promises to be a real feature. It might be interesting to many to know that this popular company has been working eighty-seven consecutive weeks, having lost only three nights work in that time. While similar attractions have fallen by the wayside during these depressed times, manager Twyman, states that his company has suffered only eleven losing weeks during their record run.

There is only one answer to their phenomenal success and that is, they always please their patrons with their high class style of entertainment. No doubt they will enjoy the same capacity attendance here that they have always had in the past.

B. C. Hurn, Higgins, was in Perryton Monday night and Tuesday visiting with his brother, R. P. Hurn, and attending to business matters.
