Lubbock's pulse

LUBBOCK — President Bush's handling of the Persian Gulf War draws rave reviews. But his popularity drops considerably when it comes to domestic problems. That is according to the latest Pulse of America survey of 400 residents polled randomly in Lubbock, Bush's adopted sounding board. Eighty-five percent of those polled say Bush has made the right decisions concerning the Middle East. But 50 percent of those surveyed say Bush is doing a fair-to-poor job of handling domestic affairs like the economy, civil rights and taxes. The poll has a 5 percent margin of error.

America West pulls out

Airline cancels its Midland, Lubbock routes

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials expressed shock and dismay Thursday over word that America West Airlines no longer will serve Midland International Airport as of April 7.

America West routes through Midland and Lubbock will be canceled as part of an effort to reach customers in new markets, said Dik Shimizu, airline spokesman.

"From the company's standpoint it's never an easy decision to do this," Shimizu said. "But through our research and ongoing studies, we've made a decision to realign the route system. It provides us an opportunity to explore."

The announcement came at time when city officials are planning millions of dollars in renovations at Midland International, considered a key to economic diversification here.

The America West pullout will leave Southwest and American as the only commercial airlines serving the airport. American Eagle, a commuter airline, offers flights between here and Dallas.

"We hate to see America West leave the West Texas market," said Marcy Blauvelt, airport spokeswoman. "But I don't want come across as gloom and doom. We have to remain positive in the face of a decline in our air service."

But Ms. Blauvelt said America West's departure could mean putting some planned expansion projects on ice.

More than $33.5 million in improvements to the terminal, runways, parking lot and gateway area have been proposed for the coming year. The proposed terminal replacement is part of a $20 million facility improvement plan.

Land war 'inevitable'

Allies plan intensification of air assault

Forces mass for WWII-size ground battle

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Along the border with Iraq and Kuwait, allied forces are massing forces in a complex choreography of armor, artillery, infantry, and aircraft in preparation for the largest land battle since World War II.

Saudi and Qatari forces repelled Iraqi border raids from Kuwait last week with heavy support from American Marines, but if the war sticks to the coalition's plan, an allied invasion would start hundreds of miles to the west, where the heaviest armored columns are concentrated.

Nearly 2,000 allied tanks, led by the American M-1A1, the British Challenger 2, and other allied armor, have squared off against Iraq's 5,000 largely Soviet-made tanks, led by the T-72. Thousands of other armored vehicles and artillery pieces bristle in supporting roles.

From the start of the gulf war, there was hope that air power alone might defeat Iraq's forces and keep coalition casualties to a minimum. But Pentagon officials said on Tuesday that Iraq's best-trained ground forces remained formidable despite three weeks of heavy bombing.

The operation's frantic tempo in the early days of the war seem to auger an imminent offensive. But the White House and Pentagon have been careful to say that a final decision on a ground war is still several days away.

That buys more time for fighter-

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Declaring that a ground war with Iraq is now inevitable, the British commander in the Persian Gulf said on Thursday that the allies planned to greatly intensify their already fierce air assault on President Saddam Hussein's forces in the coming weeks.

In Paris, President Francois Mitterrand told television journalists that an allied ground offensive "promises to take place in the coming days, a little more perhaps, in any case, sometime this month."

Although a defector described life in Iraq this week as "bombs, bombs, not a moment without bombs," the Briton, Lt. Gen. Sir Peter de la Billiere, said the coalition's aerial bombardment to date was "minor, compared to what they've got coming."

An American official agreed that the number of missions, now about 2,500 a day, could increase soon, with a growing number of bombing runs concentrated on Iraqi troop positions.

As debate continued here and in allied capitals over whether Saddam's crack Republican Guards had been hurt badly enough yet to permit an early ground attack, the British commander said he would not commit British land forces until "we've thrown everything we have" at the enemy. An aide said it could take a week, two weeks, or three weeks to accomplish that.

The timing of an offensive will be a main subject when Defense

IRA launches mortar attack on prime minister's office

LONDON (AP) — A mortar shell fired by the Irish Republican Army from an abandoned van exploded Thursday within 50 feet of Prime Minister John Major as he met with his War Cabinet, Scotland Yard said.

Major and his colleagues were not injured in the attack near 10 Downing St., his office said. Three police officers and a civil servant were treated for minor injuries, a spokeswoman at Westminster Hospital said.

It was the IRA's first mortar attack in Britain, though it has often used the weapon in Northern Ireland.

The IRA had not struck so close to the government since 1984, when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher narrowly escaped injury in a Brighton hotel bombing that killed five people.

Major, who lives and works at 10 Downing Sy., simply moved the War Cabinet meeting to another room and stuck to his daily schedule. He said in the House of Commons that the attack was deliberately timed "to kill the Cabinet and to do damage to our system of

Richards is frustrated, insurance official says

LUBBOCK (AP) — A leading insurance industry official agrees with Gov. Ann Richards that the insurance business needs cleaning up.

But Dr. Rogers Coleman, president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas, disagrees with her attack on the State Board of Insurance.

Coleman said Richards is frustrated like everyone else.

"Ann Richards is a conscientious lady," Coleman said at an insurance luncheon Thursday. "She is as frustrated as everybody else is about the dilemma and a remark like that is made simply to underline her frustration."

In her State of the State address Wednesday, Richards chastised the State Board of Insurance for rubber-stamping unnecessary rate increases.

Richards urged board chairman James Saxton and board member Richard Reynolds to step down.

Albuquerque bans sidewalk sales

■ Forty-year-old Indian Old Town tradition comes to an end.

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A tradition that began 40 years ago when Indians spread turquoise jewelry on blankets in the city's Old Town grew lucrative enough to draw non-Indians and rancorous enough to be banned.

The Indians, non-Indians, shop owners and officials involved in the 20-year battle over sidewalk vending in the historic district said abolishing it was the only solution, even though no one was happy with the decision.

The colorful streetside sales end next month.

"There were issues of race, of culture, of taxes, of bigger businesses versus the small entrepreneur. Every issue was touched upon," said Albuquerque City Councilor Steve Gallegos, whose district includes Old Town. "It was impossible."

Indians began laying out blankets on Old Town sidewalks about four decades ago, and non-Indians joined them when the area blossomed as a tourist attraction in the 1970s, said Victoria Prinz, an Albuquerque city planner.

For the past 10 to 15 years, selling has been limited to a blocklong strip of sidewalk beneath a wooden awning on Old Town Plaza. Old Town itself encompasses more than 100 shops and restaurants on and around the plaza, many in historic adobe

Sunny skies to stay around

Staff Report

Today's forecast is for sunny skies, a high near 70 and south winds 5-10 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be fair with a low in the mid-30s.

Saturday should be sunny with a high in the upper 60s, the NWS said.

Sunday is predicted to be sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 30, Thursday's high was 65, compared to the record high for the date of 83, set in 1932. The record low for today's date is -11, set in 1933.

STATE

Surface high pressure that dominated much of the United States brought unseasonably warm temperatures Thursday to Texas.

Southerly breezes in the northern plains states put Texas readings in the 60s and 70s.

Winds in North Texas gusted to 20 mph in spots, and temperatures were in the mid-60s. Elsewhere, skies were clear and temperatures were in the upper 50s in the Panhandle, mid-60s in the west, and upper 60s and lower 70s across South Texas.

NATION

Rain was scattered over a large part of the East on Thursday as a weeklong winter heat wave began to cool somewhat although several upper Midwest cities still reported record highs.

More than an inch of rain fell from Wednesday afternoon into Thursday morning across sections of southern Ohio. Rain over southern and central New England changed to snow over central and northern Maine.

Heaviest snowfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. EST included 2 inches at Caribou, Maine, and 1 inch at Augusta, Augusta, Maine.

Elsewhere, rain fell over the northern coast of Washington state.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WAR: Iraqi troops move into civilian areas

(From 1A)

Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrive in Saudi Arabia today to meet with Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the American commander here, and Saudi leaders. They are expected to make visits to a number of American units in the field.

In testimony before the House Armed Services Committee before leaving Washington, Cheney said of the war: "Our hope is that we can wrap it up as soon as possible, to minimize the loss of life on all sides."

Preparation for ground fighting mounted, with a second American battleship, the Wisconsin, pounding the coastline where a Marine amphibious force might land. American pilots began firing a large number of Maverick antitank missiles over the potential battlefield in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait. And a senior allied officer said "the aim of the air campaign now is to disrupt the enemy's front-line troops."

American pilots reported that the Iraqis, who have shifted some of their command and communications installations into schools to protect them from attack, were moving anti-aircraft artillery onto rooftops in residential areas, probably seeking similar protection.

Air activity continued to be intense. The American command announced that a Navy F/A-18 fighter-bomber was lost as it returned to its carrier, disappearing suddenly over the gulf, apparently without having been hit by hostile fire. A Huey medical evacuation helicopter went down over Saudi Arabia, also for unknown reasons, killing one and injuring four.

Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal, an American military spokesman, said at the command briefing in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, that American fliers had shot down three enemy helicopters in two days, their first such kills of the war. He also disclosed that United States Air Force F-15C Eagle interceptors had bagged two Soviet-built Iraqi Su-22 fighters that were trying to reach haven in Iran, and probably also downed a third that was with them.

One of the helicopters was an Alouette, manufactured in France, of a type usually used for transporting senior officers in the Iraqi army.

The Iranian president, Hojatoslislam Hashemi Rafsanjani, said he would continue his efforts to find a formula for ending the war bombers to pound Iraq's entrenched army, particularly the crack Republican Guard.

The timing of the ground battle will be a key topic when Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin L. Powell, arrive later this week to consult with the commander of American forces in the gulf, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

Doctors at field hospitals are being told to prepare for more than 1,000 casualties a day once heavy fighting begins. "In the busiest emergency rooms, 120 patients a day is considered a lot," Capt. Eric Tunell, a doctor with the 201st Forward Support Battalion, told reporters. "We will probably see that in just a few hours."

Arab forces have been assigned sectors of responsibility near the border to avoid mix-ups with Western forces. But with disparate armies fighting side by side, speaking different languages and using different arms and tactics, confusion and "friendly fire" casualties are risks.

United States Marines reported that nervous Saudi and Qatari gunners fired wildly and inadvertently at both American and Iraqi troops in what amounted to a firefight in the Saudi border town of Khafji.

For now though, the final preparations for battle continue. The main two-lane road to the north, as well as the entire eastern desert, is clogged with a steady stream of supply convoys trucking food, water, ammunition, medical supplies, and communication equipment to the front.

The last howitzers, M-1A1 tanks, and armored personnel carriers from the 1st Armored Division, one of the last United States units sent to Saudi Arabia from Germany, rumbled into position last weekend to bolster the Army's VII Corps.

Combat engineers are building mock battlefields — complete with Iraqi-style trenches, sand mounds and simulated mine fields.

In 1989 the City Council passed an ordinance written by Prinz that allowed only members of federally recognized American Indian tribes in the state or members of the Navajo Nation living in New Mexico or Arizona to sell on the block. The ordinance also said vendors could sell only items they made.

Opponents contended that Old Town's peddling tradition had always been multiracial.

U.S. District Judge Santiago Campos declared the ordinance unconstitutional in October, saying the city couldn't treat Indians differently from other groups.

The City Council voted last month to ban all sidewalk vending in Old Town when the current vending permits expire March 31. Two compromise bills that would have regulated the quality of goods and placed some controls on vending didn't pass the council. The last compromise bid failed on Tuesday.

Some vendors wanted controls on the quality and origin of jewelry; others wanted no controls. Some shopkeepers wanted Indian-only vending; others believed Indians and non-Indians could coexist under the awning.

"It got really ugly. It got really emotional," Gallegos said.

PULLOUT: Departure could freeze expansion

(From 1A)

Two additional gates, a remodeled gateway area, an expanded security check area, an extra baggage carousel and a reconstructed driveway and parking area also are in the blueprints.

Officials said construction could start by the year's end and be completed within 2½ years.

In addition to possibly putting those plans on hold, Mayor Carroll Thomas said losing America West will set back a recently launched campaign to lure new customers and airlines to Midland International.

"We want additional service. We don't want to lose what we've got," Thomas said.

Thomas and other city and airport officials met Thursday night to plan strategies for a meeting with America West executives on Feb. 22 in Phoenix to convince them to continue service.

City of Lubbock officials and the Odessa mayor will be asked to join the group for that meeting, Ms. Blauvelt said.

"We're going to try and see if we can get them to reconsider their decision," she said. "We think the market is there."

Thomas said the America West announcement, although discouraging, was not a complete surprise.

"It's economics," Thomas said. "That company has expanded rapidly. They also compete with Southwest in this market. It's been tough. Our load factors are really not what they should be."

America West descended into Midland International in 1987, when there were 26,756 enplanements here, airport figures show.

The airline had its best year in Midland in 1988, when 58,733 passengers boarded America West flights. But enplanements decreased the next two years, hitting 49,454 in 1989 and 46,883 in 1990.

"We have been losing money as an airline as a whole," Shimizu said. "It's a difficult operational environment that the industry is going through."

America West, which accounts for between 8 percent and 10 percent of Midland International enplanements, announced last Friday that it was cutting flights temporarily until March 1.

The airline cut its daily round trips to Phoenix from three to one in order to meet the demands of expanded routes in California, Ms. Blauvelt said.

The midday and evening round-trip flights were axed. Similar cuts were made at the Lubbock, Palm Springs, Calif., and San Jose, Calif., airports.

Ms. Blauvelt said America West needed to pull jets from the affected cities in order to use them for new routes inside California. Delivery of new aircraft for those routes has been delayed, she said.

However, she said America West probably will not resume full service here between March 1 and April 6, the airline's last day of flights here.

The airline announced two weeks ago that it was pulling all service out of Lincoln, Neb., Boise, Idaho, and Sioux City, Iowa, Ms. Blauvelt said.

Probably the biggest loss for Midland International due to the America West pullout will be service to West Coast cities such as Los Angeles, San Francisco and Las Vegas, she said.

"All of our West Coast destinations have all increased in popularity," Ms. Blauvelt said. "We have to attribute part of that to America West Airlines.

"Even though we hate to lose America West, there's a chance other airlines will increase their service or other airlines will start up operations here."

Shimizu would not elaborate on how America West routes will be realigned, but he did express sorrow over losing West Texas customers.

"It affects the customers and passengers who have been loyal over the years," he said. "But it's basically something we felt we needed to do to make the best of the current situation that we're caught up in."

Shimizu said the pullout will displace 11 employees here and 11 in Lubbock. The airline will work to find those employees jobs in other cities served by America West.

"But we're not guaranteeing anybody any positions," he said.

He said the airline is trying to find other accommodations for ticket holders who booked flights after April 6. That might involve refunds or booking passengers on other airlines, he said.

Gregg Owens, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Board, said the chamber will remain undaunted in its efforts to spur the growth of Midland International.

"The chamber is concerned about maintaining the best air service possible," Owens said. "It will remain heavily involved in the expansion of the airport and services."

City's airline history spotty

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland International has lost more airlines than it has gained during the past decade.

Braniff International service stopped in 1982, when the airline went bankrupt.

The San Angelo-based Wise Airlines discontinued flights to Midland in 1984. The company also served Austin, Brownwood, San Antonio and Dallas Love Field.

TranStar Airlines Corp, formerly Muse Air, dropped its Midland service in April 1986. The airline offered four daily flights between Midland and Love Field in Dallas but had to compete with Southwest Airlines.

Frontier Airlines, which had four flights daily from Midland to Denver and Albuquerque, N.M., was not far behind TranStar in leaving.

After operating here only six months, United Express Airlines abandoned Midland in April 1987. United Express offered service between here and Denver, with stops in Lubbock and Amarillo, but officials said there were not enough customers.

About a year later, Atlantic Southeast Airlines, a commuter connection for Delta Airlines flights, picked up its aeronautical marbles and left. Atlantic Southeast officials said the airline pulled out for economic reasons.

Continental Airlines in October 1988 ceased its service to Midland as well as Amarillo and six other airports. Continental officials said they were trying to cut costs.

Air Midwest and Emerald Airlines, two other commuter services, also packed up and left Midland in the 1980s.

COLEMAN: Cleanup necessary

(From 1A)

the board resignations may be off the mark.

"Don't blame the State Board of Insurance altogether for a bad job," he said. "It is an impossible job right now. They don't have all the tools they need. The rules are going to have to change."

Coleman said the insurance board can not streamline the industry until it receives more information on the financial solvency of new companies entering the marketplace.

Start-up companies he called "fly-by-nights" are dropping their premiums well below the industry average to attract business, but end up going under because they don't have the capital to survive.

"Sometimes you have to have a rule that people must have a certain amount of capital to get into the business," he said. "In Texas we have fairly low entrance requirements."

Coleman said the "fly-by-nights" hurt the industry two ways.

"First they undercut the competition and then six to eight months later they fail and the rest of the industry ends up covering their costs."

Coleman faulted Richards' campaign promise to provide Medicare to all Texans who fall below the federal poverty line at a price of $400 million. He said such a plan would likely cause turmoil in the industry and drive rates up across the board.

"Insurance is an economic discipline," he said. "If you play games with the rules, you are likely to wind up with the same scenario we have with the savings and loans and banks.

"I am not saying it can't be done. But taking everybody in would change the price and drive up everyone's rates."

Coleman said the insurance industry as a whole is in a downward spiral.

"I think the insurance industry is going to be the next savings and loan dilemma of America," he said. "I don't know if there is anything that can be done to avert it.

"What will happen is that a lot of the little bitty players will no longer be able to afford to compete with the big guys and the big guys will merge and cut down the scale of their administrative costs.

"There always be a good industry and good insurance companies. But they will be bigger and stronger and more attentive to the daily business than the little guy.

"The shakeout will be hard just like the S&L and bank shakeout has been hard."

ATTACK: Prime minister, colleagues escape injury

(From 1A)

government."

"It is about time they learned that democracy cannot be intimidated by terrorism and we rightly treat them with contempt," said Major.

Queen Elizabeth II, who seldom speaks on current events, mentioned the attackers while opening a London Hospital. "I would like to take this opportunity to remind them that they will not succeed," the monarch said.

The IRA attackers penetrated security that has been tightened because of Iraqi threats of terrorism. Commander George Churchill-Coleman, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist unit, ruled out any connection to the Gulf War.

"There is no doubt in my mind ... that this is the work of the Irish republican terrorist groups and you should discount from your minds any connection whatsoever with any Arab terrorist organizations," Churchill-Coleman told a news conference before the IRA claimed responsibility.

Two other shells fired from the van fell near the Foreign Office and caught fire but did not fully explode, Churchill-Coleman said.

He said the improvised mortar tubes were bolted to the floor of the van and the top had been cut away above. The van was in a no-parking zone just off busy Whitehall, the wide avenue between Trafalgar Square and the Houses of Parliament.

"The witnesses we have interviewed so far say the driver of the van locked the door, ran to a waiting motorcycle being ridden by a second person, and they both then made off," Churchill-Coleman said.

"A police officer was about to approach the vehicle when the mortars were discharged," apparently detonated by a timer, he said. The van caught fire and burned furiously.

Churchill-Coleman said police were seeking information about the van, which had been purchased for cash in July.

The attack, an example of the "versatility of Irish terrorists," seemed intended to take advantage of a rare snowstorm in the capital, Churchill-Coleman said.

The mortar shell, which landed in Major's back garden, scorched the rear of the 17th-century residence and broke windows there and at two neighboring houses, said Stewart Goodwin, a spokesman for Scotland Yard.

Windows rattled in Buckingham Palace, three-quarters of a mile away, a palace spokesman said.

The van was abandoned on Horseguards Avenue, opposite the gate where tourists throng to snap pictures of red-coated members of the queen's Household Cavalry.

Clarification

In Thursday's edition Midland School Superintendent Joe Baressi was quoted as saying he was "aware that a series of meetings have gone on between Citizens for Positive Change, led by Cheryl Franklin and the LHS boosters, led by Ernest Angelo."

Thursday, Angelo issued this statement: "Those involved consistently have stated that they were acting as individuals and not in any way as representatives of any organizations in which they may be an officer or member."

Israelis push deeper into Lebanon to attack guerrillas

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Israel pushed deeper into southern Lebanon on Thursday to attack Palestinian guerrilla bases, and warned that such strikes would continue unless the Lebanese army ejected "terrorist organizations" from the region.

In a predawn raid, Israeli commandos attacked a training base of the Palestine Liberation Organization and artillery batteries in Iqlim Toffah, a hilly district that lies a few miles north of Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in southern Lebanon.

It was the first time since the Persian Gulf war began on Jan. 17 that Israeli troops had ventured north of the security zone, which Israel says it maintains to protect its northern border. Military analysts here have suggested that the Israeli army's fierce reaction to the Palestinians results partly from frustration over being constrained from responding to Iraqi missile attacks on Israel.

The attacks and counterattacks in southern Lebanon have continued for 10 days, with Palestinians firing Katushya rockets at Israeli targets and the Israelis shelling and bombing Palestinian positions.

Officers in Israel's northern command said on Thursday that the army was attacking Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon every night.

Progress report to be inexact mix of facts

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The progress report on the war against Iraq awaiting Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell is based upon an inexact blend of facts, figures and subjective judgments, senior U.S. military officers said Thursday.

The results of the assessment are expected to contribute to the Bush administration's decision on the timing of any ground offensive by the U.S.-led coalition of 708,000 armed forces to retake Kuwait from Iraqi occupation forces.

The 21-day bombing campaign of more than 52,000 sorties across the Persian Gulf region — about 25,000 of them combat missions over Iraq and Kuwait — shows no sign of dislodging 545,000 Iraqi troops from fortified positions across an area barely the size of Rhode Island.

Allied commanders are expressing resignation.

"I believe the land war is inevitable," said Lt. Gen. Sir Peter de la Billiere, the British forces' commander. "There is no indication that the Iraqi army is going to crack in the immediate future. ...We're now moving on to the next phase in this battle, which is going to be the ground war."

U.S. Marine Brig. Gen. Richard Neal, a spokesman for U.S. headquarters, said that while he would not "attach the word 'inevitable'" to prospects for a ground war, he conceded that the air campaign has shifted to concentrate on "isolating the battlefield" within Kuwait in preparation for combat.

Senior military officers at allied headquarters who will be briefing Cheney and Powell cite a variety of developments that may affect the timing of a ground offensive:

■ Continued Iraqi resistance. Anti-aircraft artillery is increasing; guns are being moved to rooftops in civilian areas. Military headquarters are moving into schools. Surface-to-air missiles are being fired in salvos. Iraqi ground units make nightly probes of allied front lines. Iraqi warplanes continue to escape to Iran, totalling 134 aircraft, including 109 top-grade fighters.

■ Continued problems with determining the effect of allied bombing. Iraqi units use decoys to thwart targeting and "bomb damage assessment." Damage to dug-in units of the 150,000-strong Republican Guards remains hard to spot. Reports vary on the combat stores hidden inside Kuwait, from 15 days to six months' worth of supplies.

■ The allied air campaign is continuing to work through a check list of targets without regard to how long it takes. U.S. forces continue to move into position along the 500-mile frontier between Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait.

Airports reflect fear of terrorism

By Isabel Wilkerson
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — These days, you can find a parking space at O'Hare International Airport right by the elevators.

You can walk the terminals without your bag bumping into somebody else's. You can find a seat at the gate.

You can have the souvenir shops, taverns, rental car vans and just about anything else you want all to yourself.

O'Hare, the nation's busiest airport, where on any given day tens of thousands of people routinely pass through the gates, is nearly empty.

Since the outbreak of war in the Persian Gulf three weeks ago, O'Hare and other airports, already hurt by a slumping economy, have become barometers of Americans' fear of terrorism, ghost towns abandoned by all but the most determined travelers who often find themselves outnumbered by airport personnel.

Many airports say they have not yet compiled statistics to document the decline in passengers in the last few weeks.

But estimates by airline analysts range from 10 to 50 percent, and some gate personnel at O'Hare say they have sent off 727's with just six people aboard.

American Airlines, which has a hub at O'Hare, has reported that 9 percent fewer passengers boarded its planes at the airport in January than in the previous January.

"We have a recession of unknown depth and duration and fears of possible terrorism, and there you are," said Edward Starkman, an airline analyst at Paine Webber.

U.S. readies 'fuel air' bomb

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — The U.S. Air Force in the Persian Gulf is stocking up on a controversial bomb, called a fuel air weapon, that spreads a cloud of flammable mist in the air and ignites it, creating a huge explosion.

The blast is described as comparable to a small nuclear explosion.

The bomb, which was first used during the Vietnam War, is designed to kill enemy soldiers by sucking the oxygen out of their bunkers.

Maj. James McClain said fuel air explosives have not been used in the war against Iraq thus far. "We have the ability to use all kinds of weapons and that's just one of them," he said.

There are two potential uses for this weapon:

The first is to defend fortifications against Iraqi forces along the Saudi Arabia border.

The second is retaliation if Iraq uses chemical weapons against U.S. ground troops. President Bush has hinted that he will ratchet up the violence if that happens, but he hasn't said exactly what he'd do. Tactical nuclear weapons is one option; fuel air bombs stockpiled at an air base in the Persian Gulf would be another.

In any conversation between reporters and senior officers, the subject of the last war — Vietnam — soon comes up.

Two Marine pilots assessed the Vietnam War and the Persian Gulf War and concluded that many of the problems from Vietnam were not present in this one.

Col. Manfred Rietsch, a native of Germany who lives in Laguna Beach, Calif., said the Vietnam War was "considerably more frustrating. You had a hard time finding the enemy. . . . Iraq is "a more target-rich environment."

Reitsch also said political support for this war was making a difference. "With a just purpose, it's better for the country to get behind it. The liberation of Kuwait is a very justified purpose."

U.S. Soldiers Talk About Life at the Front:

■ Gulf notebook

■ Sgt. Dale Coggins, of Rocky Mount, N.C., whose honeymoon was interrupted when his unit was sent to Saudi Arabia last August: "If there was a mission to kill (Saddam Hussein), I'd do it right now. That's six months of my life lost. I'm prepared to go to war. The quickest way home is north. I'm sick and tired of waiting."

■ Air Force 1st Lt. Carlos Honesty, 25, of Valley Forge, Pa., explaining why he really goes after any Iraqi anti-aircraft site that has shot at him: "It's personal."

Parents promise God not to cut son's hair

PHARR (AP) — Four-year-old Joshua Garcia's parents say they made a promise to God that as a sign of faith they would not cut his hair until his cancer is gone.

Joshua

Their faith, however, brought them into conflict with the grooming and dress code at Pharr-San Juan-Alamo Independent School District. The district suspended Joshua from a pre-kindergarten program Tuesday because his shoulder-length hair falls beneath his collar, a violation of district policy for boys.

Joshua returned Thursday to his class at Carnahan Elementary School in Pharr with the help of a court's temporary restraining order. He can attend class until Feb. 15, when a hearing on the case is set in state district court in Edinburg.

"He seemed happy to be back in school," said Manuel Garcia, the boy's father.

Garcia said he and his wife promised not to cut the boy's hair in November 1987. That was when doctors feared that cancer removed from one of Joshua's testicles had spread to his lymph nodes.

"We made our vow to God that we would have more faith and asked that he would heal Joshua," Garcia said Thursday.

Garcia said the "masses" that showed up on Joshua's lymph nodes in a previous examination disappeared after they made the "promesa" at the Virgen de San Juan del Valle Shrine in the nearby city of San Juan.

School Superintendent Ernesto Alvarado said he respects their faith, but that the district has to enforce its policies.

"Our position as administrators is we have a board policy and we will continue to enforce it," Alvarado said Thursday.

After school officials told the mother, Sandra Garcia, that Joshua would have to cut his hair, Mrs. Garcia wrote a letter explaining the family's position.

"As part of our prayers, we made a promise or promesa that if he was healed I would keep his hair length long as a symbol of our faith in God," she wrote to Principal Sophia Valdez. "In that Joshua's health dramatically improved I do feel bound to abide by my promise."

Many Hispanic Catholics in South Texas make regular pilgrimages to the shrine and make "promesas" to the Virgin of San Juan. Promises to grow hair used to be more common than they are now, but some people still continue with the practice, the Rev. Pete Cortez, shrine director, said.

Should the court rule against the family, Garcia said they will look for another district in which to enroll Joshua.

The father said a series of blood tests probably will be finished around Joshua's fifth birthday in June. If doctors detect no cancer, they probably will declare him free of the disease. The parents say they then will cut the boy's hair.

Vets without college can seek police jobs

HOUSTON (AP) — Veterans who have an honorable discharge will now be able to seek jobs as Houston police officers without the 60 hours of college credit required of other applicants.

The 10-4 City Council vote Wednesday came after hours of debate and over the objections of Police Chief Elizabeth Watson, whose community-oriented policing program has focused on higher education for law enforcement officers.

Councilman Ben Reyes sponsored the ordinance, which waives a requirement that academy cadets have 60 hours of college credit if the candidate has an honorable discharge from military service.

Reyes initially described the measure as a way to increase minorities on the force. In the last couple of weeks, the Persian Gulf War helped turn it into a patriotic way to help returning troops searching for jobs. Finally, on Wednesday it was also perceived as a way to enlarge the pool of applicants for HPD's faltering recruitment effort.

"I do have to tell you that I have to reflect on what the message is here that council is sending me," Mrs. Watson said after the vote.

The chief said Wednesday's defeat meant that a basic tenet of her community-oriented policing program — college education — could be missing for many veterans who join the force.

Mrs. Watson said renewed patriotism contributed to her defeat.

Hall of Fame upholds honor

A decision by baseball's Hall of Fame directors making former Cincinnati Reds player and manager Pete Rose ineligible for induction into the hall this year likely will not keep Rose from being enshrined in the hall someday. Nor should it.

As the all-time hits leader, Rose fully deserves to be in the hall along with shortstop Luis Aparicio, pitcher Don Drysdale, first baseman Willie McCovey, catcher Rick Ferrell and other recent inductees.

Supporters of Rose's inclusion correctly note that the hall is an honor for baseball's greatest players and Rose definitely has the statistics to put him there.

Yet it's also difficult to argue with the Hall of Fame's directors who point out that no individual — regardless of ability — is bigger than the game of baseball. Through the statement released — which noted that "it would be incongruous to have a person who has been declared ineligible by baseball to be eligible for baseball's highest honor" — the directors are saying, in effect, that playing the game is elemental to being considered for the hall, but it is not the sole factor to be considered. Rose or other players later ruled ineligible can be considered for inclusion in the hall at a later time.

Players — or in this instance former players — have an unwritten responsibility to the institution of baseball to hold the sport up to the highest ideals of our society. If a sport's only justification is in the raw numbers — the number of hits or runs — then there is no glory in sport and it will lose its attraction for many fans who see in the competition the fulfillment of man's greatest attributes.

Of course, there are others now honored in the hall whose personality quirks and wayward ways would get close scrutiny today although adding spice to the game of life. Ty Cobb is routinely cited as one of the most obvious examples of such a personality.

Pete Rose — long known as "Charlie Hustle" for his vigor for the sport as well as his exceptional ability — committed a serious error when he gambled on baseball games. Although not convicted on gambling charges, he was convicted of income tax evasion and sentenced to jail. He's now in a Cincinnati halfway house.

Even at that, keeping Rose out of the Hall of Fame permanently would not do justice to the talent he displayed. A few years down the road, after his incarceration, public service sentence and sessions with Gamblers Anonymous have been completed, Rose's misdeeds will be largely forgotten and at that point he should be a prime candidate.

The vote by hall directors is a signal that the Hall of Fame is an institution of honor. Acting as though Rose's dishonor is no significant matter to baseball would have been a mistake.

EPA keeps deadly information to itself

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency's habit of keeping dirty secrets to itself could prove deadly in several communities across the nation.

Anderson

Government investigative reports we have obtained show widespread lapses in the EPA's handling of the banned herbicide Dinoseb. There are huge stockpiles of the chemical stashed around the country waiting for the EPA to dispose of them. And some of those stockpiles are leaking, unbeknownst to the emergency planners in the cities and states where the chemical is stored.

In Goldsboro, N.C., nearly 32,000 gallons of Dinoseb are stored at a warehouse near the Neuse River. In 1989, the EPA inspector general checked the site and found some containers were rusted and leaking, taking the risk of poisoning the groundwater that feeds the Neuse, a source of drinking water for more than 70,000 people. City officials, including firefighters who would have been exposed to toxic fumes if the storage site caught on fire, didn't know it was there.

Dinoseb was first partially banned by the EPA in 1986, but some states were allowed to continue using it through the 1989 growing season. Farmers and chemical companies with stocks of Dinoseb were told to store it until the EPA got around to destroying the leftovers.

Dinoseb is dangerous. Laboratory animals exposed to it had offspring with serious birth defects. Researchers found increased incidence of sterility among farm workers using it.

There is no evidence that the water in Goldsboro has been tainted by Dinoseb. But it appears that the EPA isn't interested in assuring that it won't be tainted in the future.

The EPA inspector general team — the watchdog over the EPA — says it found leaking containers there, and put that in writing last year. But an EPA spokeswoman in Washington now tells us there were no leaks, only rust. And a regional EPA official told our reporter Paul Parkinson, "Our records don't indicate there was a leak, so there is not a reason for us to test that area."

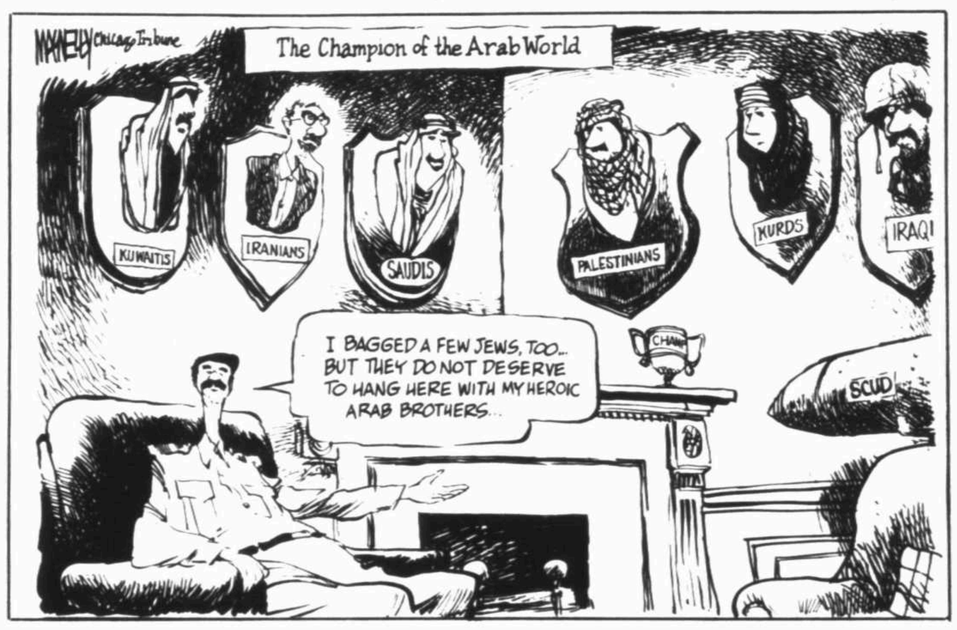
The inspector general also said local authorities were not notified about the Dinoseb as they should have been. But EPA headquarters says it's not their job to tell the local authorities, nor is the EPA responsible for making sure the storage site is safe until the EPA officially takes over the site to handle the disposal.

We asked firefighters in Goldsboro, whose jurisdiction covers the storage site, if they knew the Dinoseb was there. They said no. Then we asked the fire chief, and he refused to talk about it.

Goldsboro is not the only place where the EPA has mishandled Dinoseb. In Bakersfield, Calif., 17,987 gallons of Dinoseb were stored in containers, some of which corroded and leaked into the soil. The owner of the warehouse said he told EPA officials about the leaking cans, but he got no response to his warnings, and the soil around the warehouse has not been tested.

A farmer in Corvalis, Ore., stored 505 gallons of Dinoseb in a silo 100 feet from his drinking well and within 400 feet of three wells he used for irrigation. State and regional officials didn't know about the storage site because the EPA didn't tell them.

In fact, the inspector general found that emergency planners in many states didn't know they had large stocks of Dinoseb under their jurisdiction.



UNEXPECTED SUPPORT — Democrats never thought they would be rooting for Dan Quayle, but that's exactly what some will find themselves doing before the 1992 election. The talk all over Capitol Hill is that President Bush may dump Quayle from the ticket in 1992 and run with Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, instead. If the Gulf war goes well, a Bush and Powell team would be unbeatable.

Saddam may have surprise for Israel, Saudi

WASHINGTON — The White House has been formally notified that the banned Soviet SS-12 Scaleboard missile, delivering more clout with far greater accuracy than the Scud, is at the top of a new intelligence list of Gulf War "surprises" President Saddam Hussein may be waiting to spring on Israel and Saudi Arabia.

Evans and Novak

Making this intelligence report particularly sinister is a similar but unrelated finding just delivered to the Bush administration by the German government. Bonn has informed President Bush that 24 treaty-banned SS-23 missiles, without their nuclear warheads, were illegally turned over to East Germany in 1984 or 1985. Bonn acquired them after German unification late last year.

The link between these two dreaded intermediate-range missiles is the solemn pledge by the Soviet Union to destroy all SS-12s and SS-23s under terms of the 1988 INF Treaty. This agreement imposed an outright ban on the entire class of intermediate-range nuclear missiles and decreed their destruction. Key officials here believe these reported treaty violations by the Soviet military may have played a role in former Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's resignation.

If not that, continuing U.S. suspicions suggest at the very least that the Soviet general staff carefully calculated various ways to maneuver around Shevardnadze's treaty by sending SS-12 missiles to Iraq, its closest Arab ally before the Gulf War, and SS-23 missiles to Eastern Europe.

This betrays a uniformed conspiracy against civilian decision-making that may have been in vogue at the top of the Soviet military throughout the entire period of Mikhail Gorbachev's rule, not just in the aftermath of his reform era. Reneging by the general staff in the last two months on vital parts of both the Conventional Forces Europe treaty and the START strategic-arms treaty, following Gorbachev's abandonment of reform, has infuriated the Bush administration. But it is left with few options. Likewise, officials suspect secret Soviet military help for Saddam in the Gulf War but cannot prove it.

The list of unpleasant "surprises" that Saddam Hussein may be planning was prepared with help from both the CIA and its Pentagon partner, the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA). In addition to SS-12 attacks, the report contained several other dire possibilities: the arming of Scud and SS-12 warheads with chemical and biological agents and the firing of Scud missiles at Saudi Arabia from Yemen, an Iraqi ally.

Higher certainty on violations exists within the U.S. intelligence community with respect to the SS-23. However, long-standing White House reluctance to hit the beleaguered Gorbachev with accusations of treaty cheating has kept Bush and his men quiet.

The White House has also been given explicit "documentation," dated after the June 1988 INF Treaty, that clearly established Soviet control over the East German missiles and their nuclear warheads. Bonn retrieved this documentation from East Germany and passed it on to Washington two weeks ago. It is frightening, showing that in addition to the 24 missiles, Moscow also transferred nuclear "adapters" essential to affix a nuclear warhead. But warheads were kept in Soviet custody.

Under past White House practice, the entire compliance report on Soviet adherence to its treaty obligations is never given to Congress, which receives only a short, terse paper entitled "Findings." Now that Gorbachev appears to have joined forces so completely with anti-reform hard-liners, delaying the report makes no more sense than watering down Soviet shenanigans in complying with its U.N. Security Council obligations in the Persian Gulf.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Will America sink or swim in the gulf?

The "instant gratification" society is supposed to sustain a war that could last — ohmigosh, weeks? We shall see. We might turn out to be better people than we think. We might turn out, alternatively, to be just what we feared.

Lack of stick-to-it-iveness is no modern trait, born of consumerism and the Vietnam experience. It is a fearfully human trait. Tom Paine, on the threshold of the American Revolution, spoke scornfully of "summer soldiers and sunshine patriots." When the going got tough, the weak got going — homeward.

Murchison

We are miles and months from that kind of despondency. Saddam Hussein, Gen. Colin Powell says flatly, "will be defeated." In the meantime we are kicking hell out of him.

Caution and wariness, nonetheless, are starting to creep into war coverage. You mean this thing is still going on? You mean the Iraqi air force hasn't been reduced to mangled steel?

Expectations were unrealistically high when the war commenced. Like the French troops who, in August 1914, expected to occupy Berlin by Christmas, some of us may have hoped American military technology had only to be unleashed against Iraq, and up would flutter the white flags.

How nice if that had been so, but it wasn't. What's more, it hardly ever happens that way. Even Hitler, with his monumental disregard for civilian lives, needed a month, and Soviet help, to mop up his weak next-door neighbor, Poland. In the Middle East we are up against the world's fourth or fifth largest military force, equipped by the second-ranking military power, the Soviet Union.

Inevitably, with the war in its, ohmigosh, second week, talk turns to Vietnam, as in what-if-this-turns-out-to-be-another-one?

This isn't going to be another Vietnam in the agonizing, long-drawn-out sense. The main reason is, we can't afford another Vietnam, and everyone knows it. Memories of the first one are too graphic, too painful.

For all that, Vietnam hangs over us. We can't get it out of our minds. We remember too well what happened. Equally to the point, Saddam Hussein remembers.

What is he thinking right now — that, by staying on the defensive, he'll wear down our will, until we break off and go home? That would be no illogical assumption. It happened so in the '70s. War protesters thronged the streets, and congressmen introduced legislation cutting off military aid. The war was lost, not in the jungles of Southeast Asia but in the streets of America.

Saddam knows antiwar protests have broken out already, and that Congress is sharply divided over the president's decision to fight. "Forty-five Democratic senators," writes Ben Wattenberg, a Democrat, "voted to hamstring the president."

What do we need? We need patience. And, when that's exhausted, more patience. Patience is, in the end, a more crucial weapon than the Patriot anti-missile system.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

That's the ticket to more airport security

I drove up to the Orlando airport to pick up a passenger. I was in my new car I had driven down from Atlanta.

My passenger wasn't at the curbside. I parked my new car and went inside to look for her.

Grizzard

"The plane's late," the man at Delta said.

So I went back out to the curb to sit in my car and wait. I had been gone for five minutes, tops.

Two Orlando policemen and two airport security guards and one guy in a tow truck were there to greet me.

"This your car?" one of the policemen asked me.

I said it was.

"Can't you read?" he asked.

"University of Georgia, ABJ," I answered.

"I said, 'Can't you read?'" the policeman asked again.

Obviously I was dealing with a Florida man here. But he had a badge and a gun, so I didn't push it.

The policeman went on, "The sign says you can't leave your car unattended. We were about to have you towed away."

The other policeman and the two security guards were standing behind my new car.

"Where's your tag?" the other policeman asked me.

"I just got the car yesterday," I said, "and drove it down from Atlanta. I don't have a tag yet."

He asked for my driver's license and proof I had just bought the car yesterday. The driver's license, I had. The proof, I couldn't find amongst all the documents in the glove compartment of my new car.

"You're in violation of Florida law," the second policeman said. "I'm going to run a check on you."

There I stood.

"Why are you wearing those sunglasses?" one of the airport security people asked me. "It's eight o'clock at night. Most people don't wear their sunglasses at night."

I explained I had driven from the golf course — then it hit me.

"This got to do with the war?" I asked.

"We're under strict orders," said the security person. "You can't be too careful at an airport in these times."

I had heard about it on Orlando television. Because of Disney World and all those tourists baits, the area had been deemed a possible target for terrorists in the wake of the war with Iraq.

"My God," I said to the security person, "you don't think I'm a terrorist, do you?"

He squinted at me and didn't answer. "Can I call a lawyer?" I asked next.

Before he could answer the policeman running the check came back.

"What we could do," he said, "is impound your car for no proof of ownership and no tag and give you a citation. But we're not going to do that. You check out. I'm giving you a traffic ticket and you'd better get a tag on that thing. You copy?"

"I do," I said, "and I promise you nobody from the University of Georgia is planning any terrorist acts in Florida until next year's game."

The policeman looked at me funny. The airport security man was still squinting. I took off my glasses, got back in my new car and drove away. A free man again. My passenger could take a cab.

Praise Allah and Herschel Walker.

EPA urges firms to cut emissions

■ More nation stories / 8C

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency appealed Thursday to more than 600 companies nationwide to make voluntary cuts in emissions of 17 toxic chemicals.

"Pollution prevention can be the most cost-effective alternative to after-the-fact treatment of pollution," EPA Administrator William K. Reilly said in a statement. "Companies can save on waste management, reduce the use of raw materials and minimize liability."

The companies asked to participate in EPA's Industrial Toxic Project are the largest contributors to the estimated 1.4 billion pounds of toxic wastes released into the air, ground and water each year, the agency said.

But it said that being put on the list did not suggest that a company was out of compliance with any pollution control regulations.

The 17 chemicals were chosen because they are among the most toxic and most common substances, and because recognized ways exist to reduce the quantity of releases, EPA said.

The chemicals involved are: benzene, cadmium and its compounds, carbon tetrachloride chloroform, cyanides, dichloromethane, lead and its compounds, mercury and its compounds, methyl ethyl ketone, methyl isobutyl ketone, nickel and its compounds, tetrachloroethylene, toluene, trichloromethane, trichlorethylene and xylenes.

EPA said they are used in such industrial applications as metal working, metal plating, machinery degreasing, petroleum refining and the manufacture of chemicals, rubber, plastics, electric equipment, pulp and paper products, furniture and instruments.

Reilly said he expected a positive response from industry.

Survey shows support for Prohibition II

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One in five Americans supports a new Prohibition against the sale of alcoholic beverages, according to a survey by the Wine Spectator.

The San Francisco-based magazine's survey of 1,500 American adults was conducted in June 1990.

Support for a new Prohibition on the sale of all alcoholic beverages was strongest in the South and weakest in the West, according to Jay Morris, senior vice president for marketing at Wine Spectator.

Overall, 20 percent of respondents said they favored such a ban as a way to address the problem of alcohol abuse, while 66 percent said they opposed it, Morris said. Another 9 percent said they didn't care, and 5 percent said they didn't know.

Southerners were most strongly in favor of such a proposal, with 24 percent approving of a ban, while 17 percent of residents of the Northeast expressed support. Only 13 percent of respondents in the West favored a new Prohibition.

Of women polled, 22 percent favored Prohibition, while 17 percent of men approved of the idea, Morris said.

Support for Prohibition was strongest among older age groups, rising from 15 percent of those aged 30 to 44 to 23 percent among those 60 years or older.

WORLD in brief

Aristide takes oath in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a fiery champion of the poor, was sworn in Thursday as Haiti's first democratically elected president.

Thousands of Haitians poured into the streets, singing and dancing, after Aristide was presented the red and blue presidential sash from a peasant woman and four homeless boys.

His inauguration, televised nationally from the Chamber of Deputies of the Legislative Palace, came five years to the day after the fall of the brutal, 29-year-old Duvalier family dictatorship.

The 37-year-old leftist Roman Catholic priest assumes leadership of the poorest and most politically unstable nation in the Western Hemisphere, a country ravaged by decades of corrupt and repressive rule.

He began his five-year term with outpourings of adoration from Haiti's impoverished masses, whose banner he carried in the Dec. 16 election — the first truly democratic election in Haiti's 187-year history. Aristide won in a landslide.

Troops guard Bogata

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The government has called out the army in most of Colombia in an effort to halt what is being called the biggest rebel offensive in 30 years, officials said Thursday.

Troops backed by armor were guarding approaches to Bogota after rebel attempts to blow up several bridges along highways near the capital.

The government's National Security Council intensified intelligence operations and protection for oil and coal companies, government minister Humberto de la Calle Lombana told reporters.

Since late Monday, rebels of the National Liberation Army and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia have been attacking towns and police posts and blowing up oil industry installations, high tension electric towers and bridges.

About 50 rebels, security troops and civilians have died in the fighting so far, according to army and police reports.

Israelis pound PLO base

SHOMERA, Israel (AP) — Israeli ground forces launched their first deep-penetration raid in Lebanon since the Gulf War began, hitting a PLO base to stem a resurgence of Iraqi-inspired guerrilla actions, the army said Thursday.

The overnight raid preceded the deployment of the Lebanese Army in the southern port of Tyre, in a move by the Beirut government to reassert control over guerrillas in the area north of Israel's self-proclaimed security zone.

Military analysts drew a link between the events and the war in the Persian Gulf, as pro- and anti-Iraqi forces jockey for power in a Lebanese proxy war.

But the Israelis said the Lebanese Army was not displacing Palestinian fighters in sensitive areas.

DPS, Police Department to test breath analyzer

■ Manufacturer of passive alcohol senors loans two of the devices to Midland chapter of MADD.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Suspected drunken drivers may be subjected to more than walking a straight line and reciting the alphabet while being videotaped in the near future.

They may be tested with a portable breath analyzer which can help patrol officers screen for alcohol use.

The Midland chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) has made arrangements with the Department of Public Safety and the Midland Police Department for each to test a passive alcohol sensor for 30 days, said Faye Higgins, president of the local MADD chapter.

The analyzers are on loan from the manufacturer to see if the tool is useful, Mrs. Higgins said.

The devices, which cost about $750 each, are made by Life Loc Inc., of Wheat Ridge, Colo., Mrs. Higgins said.

"We want to try them out and see if they are worth what we pay for them," Mrs. Higgins said.

"If the officers like the sensors then I will probably order six or seven," she said.

The hand-held devices can be used in a passive or direct sample mode, although the passive mode may be the preferred use because of legal implications and general purpose usage.

In the passive mode, the device samples breath at a range of 5 to 7½ inches from the driver's face.

The digital, computerized sensors record the date, time and results.

Currently, about 250 sensors are in use by law enforcement agencies nationwide, Jock Waldo, vice president of sales with Life Loc Inc., said.

Waldo said the sensor is intended for use in addition to field sobriety tests, not in place of them.

"It allows an officer to make a quick and accurate determination of whether someone is intoxicated," Waldo said.

"It also helps identify people who are not drunk, but have been drinking. It makes it easier and more efficient to determine. If the officer finds this then he can continue investigating," Waldo said.

This is especially helpful in cases where a driver who has been drinking doesn't appear outright drunk, Waldo said.

The device is intended only to extend the personal senses of a peace officer.

"It's not used as an evidentiary tool but only as a method to determine probable cause," Waldo stressed.

Mrs. Higgins said the sensor "is another tool to enable an officer to see if the person they pull over is intoxicated."

MADD has been instrumental in equipping local law enforcement agencies with aids in fighting DWI. Last year, the Midland chapter donated five video cameras — four to the Police Department and one to the Department of Public Safety — to record field sobriety tests.

Mike Cox, Department of Public Safety spokesman in Austin, agreed that anything that helps officers accomplish their job is welcome.

"We are always interested in tools of the trade to help arrest and prosecute DWIs," Cox said.

Communication falters when cultures clash, expert says

■ Communications consultant addressing audience at UTPB discussed negative and positive terms connotating race and culture.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Although global communication brings diverse cultures together, communication breaks down when cultures clash, according to Joyce Duncan of New York City.

Ms. Duncan, a communications consultant, spoke to an audience of approximately 80 Wednesday evening at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The specialist involved the audience in discussions of negative and positive terms connotating race.

"What offends me may not offend you," she said. "What I view as a conflict may not be a conflict to you."

Ms. Duncan asked audience members to raise their hands when she named the religion they were raised in. "Notice how the Methodists don't look all alike, yet they have commonalities," she said.

The consultant also had audience members raise their hands if they had younger or older siblings. "Look at each other," she said. "You all have something in common."

Ms. Duncan said that to avoid conflict between cultures people must "recognize where they come from and what they bring to a situation."

"They must also recognize similarities or commonalities," she said.

She said that differences between individuals which seem insignificant may be profound and cause conflicts to escalate.

"We should also look at the language we use," she said. "My father is comfortable with being called colored while I go up the wall when I hear it. It is derogatory to me."

Ms. Duncan said she preferred to be described as an African American, "and I don't mean Afro-American," she added.

Audience members discussed terms they liked which described their particular races. Some said they preferred to be American, while others said denying specific races denies people of their heritage.

"Differences should not be obstacles," one woman offered. "We should not see differences as negative, but should be enriched by

For Thomas Manley, lifting weights at the Alamo YMCA beats doing nothing in Saudi Arabia.

Manley, a U.S. Navy pilot, is taking advantage of the YMCA's offer of a free membership for any active duty serviceperson on leave from Operation Desert Storm.

"We wanted to show our support for the boys and girls stationed in the gulf," said Genie McCartney, the Midland YMCA's marketing and membership director.

"If they're home on leave they can tell us and we'll let them use any of the four Ys in town."

Ms. McCartney said that three servicepeople have taken advantage of the membership offer since it began this week.

"It's more than just a place to work out," she said. "They'll be able to renew old friendships with people who come here and they can get acquainted with other people in different branches of the service."

For Manley, returning to the Alamo YMCA is like coming home. He was a lifeguard there seven years ago, before going to Texas Tech, where he got a math degree.

He's been in the Navy since November 1987 and was deployed to Japan early last year. After Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990, Manley's squadron was sent to the Middle East to patrol the Indian Ocean and the Red Sea for merchant shipping attempting to break the trade embargo.

The squadron of Lockheed P-3 four-engine turboprops also supported the USS Midway and provided electronic countermeasures, he said.

"If we weren't flying 10- to 12-hour missions, there wasn't anything to do," Manley said.

"One of the guys had some plastic weights but they weren't much."

The squadron picked up mail for the base, making the Navy fliers popular with the rest of the troops, he said.

"We just loved getting that mail," Manley said. "It was good to see the people back home supporting us."

Although the rest of Manley's squadron is just now finishing its rotation and returning to Moffett Field in Mountain View, Calif., Manley's tour ended early because of the illness of his

Police identify Beaumont murder victim as son of Midland man

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The body of a Beaumont murder victim has been identified as that of a Midland man's son, the Beaumont Police Department confirmed Thursday.

Police identified the victim Wednesday as 18-year-old William T. Karpinski, son of Midlander Donald Karpinski. The elder Karpinski could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Karpinski's partially decomposed body was found Jan. 31 in a trash bin, BPD Sgt. Don Bailey said.

Police arrested 26-year-old Lance Kennedy Brown of Beaumont in connection with Karpinski's death on Feb. 1. He is being held in the Jefferson County Jail on murder charges in lieu of $100,000 bond, Bailey said.

Bailey said Brown, a convicted burglar, was on parole from state prison at the time of his arrest.

Although police were unsure of Karpinski's hometown, a spokeswoman for the funeral home to which Karpinski's body was sent said he lived in Midland. The woman from Broussard's Mortuary in Beaumont, gave Karpinski's age as 17.

Bailey said an investigation showed that Karpinski traveled to Beaumont by bus from Houston on Jan. 26 or 27. The time and cause of Karpinski's death remains under investigation, however.

"He did have some blows to the head," said Bailey, who added that the man had been dead several days when the was discovered. A property owner found the body stuffed into a 60-gallon, city-owned garbage can in a yard in central Beaumont, Bailey said.

He said clues led investigators to Brown's apartment, where they found blood stains and other evidence linking Brown to the murder.

Neither Bailey nor the funeral home had any information about Karpinski's background or reason for traveling to Beaumont.

Hispanic population grows, according to census

■ Midland's Hispanic population grew by 84 percent, to 22,780, while the Hispanic total in Ector County grew 50 percent, to 37,315.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland and Ector counties grew increasingly Hispanic during the 1980s, according to census figures released Thursday.

Midland County's 1990 population of 106,611 was 69.9 percent white, 21.4 percent Hispanic and 7.8 percent black, in totals the U.S. Census Bureau released for use in redrawing legislative and congressional district lines.

Ector County's population of 118,934 was 62.9 percent white, 31.4 percent Hispanic and 4.7 percent black.

Midland's Hispanic population grew by 84 percent over the past decade, to 22,780, while the Hispanic total in Ector County grew 50 percent, to 37,315.

Over the same period, the white population in Midland grew by 8.8 percent while Ector County's white population declined by 24 percent.

The number of blacks in Midland County is 16.3 percent higher than in 1980, while black population in Ector County grew by 7.8 percent.

While total population figures are used for reapportionment purposes, the census showed whites formed a larger percentage of the voting-age population (18 and over).

In Midland County, for example, 73.7 percent of the county's 73,168 residents are white, compared with 69.9 percent of the general population, while 18 percent of the voting-age population was Hispanic and 7.3 percent was black.

In Ector County, 68.3 percent of the county's 81,223 voting-age population was white, compared with 26.2 percent Hispanic and 4.4 percent black.

Statewide, 64.4 percent of the 12.15 million voting-age population was white, compared with 60.6 percent of the general population.

While the Texas House and Senate prepared to apply the numbers to the redistricting process, the census has numerous critics and the latest challenge came from the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund and the Texas Civil Rights Project, which Thursday filed lawsuits in state and federal courts in South Texas to stop the state from using 1990 census figures until the federal government adjusts for undercounted minorities.

The lawsuits, filed in federal district court in Brownsville and state district court in Edinburg, claim the census data is flawed because it undercounted blacks and Mexican-Americans and those communities would receive less representation than they were entitled to in federal, state and local governments.

MALDEF spokeswoman Judith Sanders-Castro said "probably hundreds of thousands" of Texans were left uncounted, but she said only the bureau has any idea how many may have been missed. "We want to see an effort made to accomplish the adjustment," she said.

The census was designed to survey populations that are educated and live in single-family dwellings in middle-income areas, she said.

Parker introduces new bill to equalize school financing

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The search for a way to equalize public school financing took a new twist Thursday when Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, introduced a second bill that would compete with his earlier bill calling for a statewide property tax.

Parker said he still believes a statewide tax is the cleanest, simplest and least expensive way to achieve court-ordered equalization, but he was concerned that the Legislature might not vote for the bill because of "misinformation" being spread by the Texas Association of School Boards.

He said the association had sent a "red alert" to small, rich school districts, "telling them how they will be devasted by it; they're not notifying the poor districts, telling them how they would be helped by it."

The new bill is similar to a plan favored by the State Board of Education. It would consolidate the tax bases of the 1,047 school districts into 20 regional tax bases, with a minimum tax of 70 cents per $100 evaluation tax, rising to $1 by 1995. It would allow a second local tax tier for debt service and a third tier for local enrichment.

Parker said the new bill would accomplish the same thing as a statewide tax, "except it will be more expensive."

The bill was assigned to the Senate Education Committee, of which Parker is chairman, for hearings that will begin Wednesday. Parker's statewide tax bill will remain in the Finance Committee, which postponed continued hearings on the bill that were scheduled for Monday.

Parker said he would not be surprised, after all the options are heard, if some opponents to a statewide property tax begin looking at the idea again.

He said he believed that if the people of Texas could vote on a statewide tax, they would approve it because it would cut property taxes or freeze them at their current $1 level for 60 percent of the people. The problem is "getting through the level of lobbyists and defenders of the status quo to the people," he said. "It is difficult to sell the idea on the floor of the House and Senate."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said the new bill is another viable option for senators to consider.

Local/Area Reports

Firefighters injured

Staff Reports

Two firefighters were injured while battling a house fire early Thursday.

While fighting a residential blaze at 500 Watson St. just before 6 a.m. Thursday, two firefighters were injured when they came into contact with an electric wire.

Jeff White and Charles Hare were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where they were treated and released.

Heavy damage was sustained to the dining room and attic area of the home.

Cause of the fire was undetermined but remained under investigation, fire marshal officials said Thursday.

The furnished home was not occupied at the time of the blaze, officials said.

Baby dies

ODESSA — The death of a 9-month-old girl Thursday was being investigated by the Ector County Sheriff's Office, officials said.

Sheriff's deputies found the infant at her south Ector County home following a call to 911.

Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

Buses collide

ODESSA — Two girls, ages 8 and 11, sustained minor injuries as a result of a two-bus accident Thursday morning, police officials said.

The children were transported to Medical Center Hospital.

According to police reports, the accident occurred about 7:30 a.m. when a bus traveling south on Andrews Highway attempted to make a left turn onto University Boulevard and collided with a bus going northbound on Andrews Highway.

Carol Ann Jones, driver of the southbound bus, was cited for failure to yield the right of way, police said.

Which bus the injured children were on was not reported by police.

Suspect jailed

ODESSA — A 34-year-old Odessa man remained in jail Thursday in connection with a convenience store robbery late Wednesday, police officials said.

Bond for Rickie Lee Rumford was set at $7,500, police said.

According to reports, about 10:35 p.m. a man walked into the 7-Eleven, 801 N. Harless Ave., told the clerk he had a gun and demanded money. After the clerk complied, the robbery fled the scene with an undermined amount of cash.

The clerk promptly called police and gave a description of the robber and his get-away vehicle.

Rumford was arrested about five minutes later by patrol officers near the intersection of 1st Street and Kelly Avenue, police said.

Store robbery

ODESSA — An aggravated robbery reportedly occurred at a convenience store about 6:45 a.m. Wednesday, police officials said.

A man walked into the 7-Eleven, 1231 S. Crane St., displayed a small-caliber weapon and demanded money from the clerk, according to reports.

The robber fled the scene on foot with an unknown amount of cash, police said.

Deaths

Darrell Wright

Services for Darrell Wright, 87, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at First Christian Church with the Revs. Ray Bristol, pastor, and Brent Cantrell, associate pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Special week set for sprayer tune-ups

Kiker

A week in February has been designated to emphasize the importance of tuning up spraying equipment and to remind producers to apply chemicals in a manner that is safe, accurante and environmentally sound.

February 18-22 has been set for observances of National Sprayer Tune-Up Week. Producers need to get their sprayers calibrated accurately, brush up on safety measures and follow the correct chemical mix, rinse and fill procedures.

Cooperating in the effort are Spraying Systems Co., the Alliance for a Clean Rural Encironment (ACRE), the National AgriChemical Retailers Association, the Cooperative Extension System, the National Future Farmers of America and many agricultural companies.

Each aspect of spraying carries equal importance in the safe and accurate application of pesticides.

With the development of high-activity pesticides and concerns about groundwater protection, farmers have good reason to accurately apply pesticides and keep sprayer maintenance and calibration "Right on the money."

The planting season varies across Texas, with the southern part of the state several weeks ahead of areas to the north. San Patricio County will launch its Sprayer Tune-Up Week at the Edroy Co-op, between Sinton and Mathis, Feb. 6-8. A number of other counties also will get a head start on the week.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Federal agency seeks to fine prison system

HOUSTON (AP) — The Justice Department says Texas is taking too long to comply with a 1977 consent decree to integrate its two-person prison cells and is seeking contempt fines that could total millions of dollars.

"It is necessary to impose sanctions upon (the state) in order that they correct the unconstitutional, intentional segregation presently practiced at TDCJ (Texas Department of Criminal Justice) and to prod them into finally coming into compliance with the requirements of the consent decree," a Justice memo said.

Unless 20 percent of the system's 12,300 two-person cells are integrated within two years, the state should pay a $5,000-per-day fine for each cell needing integration to meet the requirement, Justice Department lawyers said in a brief filed in Houston federal court.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice's failure to comply with the ruling from a 1977 prison desegregation case and "has resulted in the steady erosion of actual (prison) integration," the brief said.

A December report of the state prisons system filed with the Justice Department said only 2.03 percent of the eligible cells were integrated.

Several prison officials said in depositions last May that two-person cells are now integrated only when inmates request it, a policy they said is dictated by security concerns.

Officials in the governor's and attorney general's offices said the Justice Department motion would be contested.

Bush plan has less for richer growers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal subsidies to wealthier farmers would be reduced, crop insurance premiums raised and food programs for needy families sharply expanded under President Bush's budget plan sent to Congress.

There would be some additions here, some snipping there, but no great remodeling, said Stephen B. Dewhurst, the Agriculture Department's budget director.

Overall, department spending would be about $55.7 billion in the 1992 fiscal year, up less than 1 percent from $55.4 billion in 1991.

Less than $100 million of the proposed 1992 budget for USDA would depend on Congress enacting new legislation, he said.

That is a far cry from a year ago. Bush's budget proposals for 1991 left huge gaps of up to $2 billion in price support operations, for example, to be worked out with Congress in writing a new farm bill.

The new five-year farm law, signed by Bush on Nov. 28, reduced subsidies for major commodities and gave farmers more flexibility in choosing what to plant each year.

Despite the cutbacks, spending on commodity price support operations in 1992 would increase to more than $11 billion from $10.8 billion estimated for this year and $6.47 billion in 1990.

But the relatively low costs in 1990 — compared to a record $25.8 billion in 1986 — was the result of high commodity prices following drought and rising market prices. That reduced the need for federal "deficiency" payments to crop producers.

The budget seeks to reduce subsidies to wealthier farmers by $36 million in the 1992 fiscal year. Thereafter, through 1996, the annual savings would be $90 million.

According to the Bush proposal, the department's Commodity Credit Corp. would seek congressional authority to "reduce subsidies to those with off-farm incomes over $125,000" a year.

In the case of federal crop insurance, the 1992 savings would be $77 million because reduced subsidies would force up premiums paid by farmers. Those savings would vary but were shown to be at least $147 million a year through 1996.

One of the fastest growing programs — and USDA's costliest — is the food and nutrition package, which includes food stamps, school lunches and WIC assistance for women and infants.

Those programs will cost about $30 billion in 1992, making up more than half of total USDA spending for the year.

Food stamp outlays are projected at $19.6 billion, up from $18.1 billion in 1991 and $15 billion in 1990.

Department officials said an average of almost 22.4 million people are expected to participate in the 1992 food stamp program, up from about 21.8 million this year and 20 million in 1990.

Maximum food stamp benefits for a family of our will rise to $370 a month in 1992 from $352 this year and $331 in 1990.

Assistant Secretary Catherine Bertini, who oversees USDA food and consumer services, said she is proud that the Bush budget seeks "full funding for our programs" in 1992.

Bertini said in a telephone interview that an additional $200 million is being sought to boost WIC to $2.6 billion in 1992 and serve 4.9 million women, infants and children each month, compared with an estimated monthly participation of 4.7 million this year.

Asked about the rise in food stamp recipients, she said part of the increase can be attributed to economics in some parts of the country, and to the general recession.

Expanded Medicaid eligibility also has brought more people into welfare offices, and some of those have opted for food stamps, Bertini said. Also, children born in the United States to illegal aliens are eligible and have added to the rolls.

Woman sentenced for collecting brother's Social Security

WACO (AP) — A woman who collected her disabled brother's Social Security checks without his knowledge for 23 years has been sentenced to federal prison.

Emma J. Brinkman, 60, was sentenced Thursday by a U.S. district judge to four years and four months in prison on one charge of lying to Social Security Administration investigators and three counts of converting Social Security benefits.

Prosecutors said Ms. Brinkman collected $87,000 worth of Social Security intended for her 68-year-old brother Claude Ender.

She also was fined $30,000 and ordered to make $7,940 in restitution to her brother.

Social Security officials intend to file a civil lawsuit against Ms. Brinkman in her brother's behalf to try to recover the remainder of the $86,905 she is charged with converting for her own use from 1965 through 1988, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Frazier.

CENSUS: MALDEF criticizes 1990 census figures

(From 1B)

In Texas, she said, the census had trouble counting inner-city populations and Hispanic residents of the Rio Grande Valley, particularly those in unincorporated "colonias."

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales also has called on the U.S. Commerce Department to adjust the figures. He said the undercount of minorities and rural residents could cost Texas more than $300 million in federal aid as well as affect the state's congressional representation.

Texas already has qualified for three new congressional districts, giving the state 30 congressmen in 1992, but some critics believe the uncounted residents could qualify the state for another congressional seat.

The Census Bureau attached a disclaimer to the census reports that the population counts are "subject to possible correction for undercount or overcount."

The Commerce Department will decide whether to correct the counts by July 15, the disclaimer said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said the Legislature should continue working on redistricting plans while it awaits an update from the U.S. Commerce Department or the courts. But he said the state should not count on the federal government making an adjustment.

"I'd say you're really gambling on something that might not take place," he said.

knowing people who are different."

Ms. Duncan agreed and encouraged people to make an effort to understand other races before judging them.

Veronica Walker, UTPB program director, said engaging Ms. Duncan to speak on crosscultural communications was "a statement being made by the university."

She said Ms. Duncan — who was selected to speak by the program board in September — was not chosen in response to a particular issue.

"We chose her because there are some crosscultural problems in West Texas which need to be addressed," Ms. Walker said.

"We have a lot of entertainers come to UTPB," Ms. Walker said. "But there is a time when we need to get down and get serious."

Ms. Duncan said "getting serious" is something she is called upon to do often.

When not speaking to groups, she often acts as troubleshooter or mediator for organizations or institutions dealing with conflicts between races or cultures.

"Frederick Douglass said: 'If there is no struggle, there is no progress,'" Ms. Duncan said. "I'd like to say that relations between races are improving, but I'll just say that there is much work for us to do."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Romance is on a sensitive course. Travel will enhance both marriage and business. Outstanding career success is possible if you read between the lines in April. A last-minute decision will improve your finances in May. Although old contacts often prove more useful than new ones, keep your eyes open next summer. You could decide to make a temporary alliance permanent! A real estate venture deserves another look in early winter.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Jack Lemmon, James Dean and Nick Nolte, actress Lana Turner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An influential person is receptive to your ideas or special request. Keep your ears open at social events and you could hear of a great job opportunity. A friend makes a helpful introduction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Being a team player is what higher-ups want most from you now. The people you wish to convince will be receptive only if a power play is set aside. Abandon an earlier maneuver.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial matters are in the spotlight. An old debt is repaid or missing valuables turn up. Make a bold new start at school or work. An influential contact could be a powerful ally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Faraway places capture your attention. You and a partner may be making plans for a trip with exciting possibilities. Once you reach a milestone in your work, a celebration is in order.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Go ahead and let other people in on a career secret. Once you open up, someone will work overtime to help out. Buying top-quality items will save you money in the long run.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A conflict could arise between your business and domestic duties. Compromise is necessary. A newcomer shows a strong interest in you. Be charming but protect your privacy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work closely with those who share your goals and success is certain! An investment turns out to be a big winner. Friends propose social plans that sound appealing. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial transactions are favored today. Play your cards close to your vest. Give a loved one some breathing space. Too much togetherness is counterproductive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A misunderstanding could start a business or marital partnership on a downhill slide. Clear things up before they get blown out of proportion. A recent investment looks even better now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Beware of financial ventures proposed by friends. A platonic relationship is slowly turning romantic. You are both surprised and delighted. Go slow. Heed your intuition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be prepared to make intelligent concessions in order to gain an influential person's support. Once you have this individual's blessing, your efforts will be seen in a positive light.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good time for arranging for a loan or asking for a raise. A lost object is recovered. Put your family's security above all else. A phone message causes temporary confusion. Ask questions.

TODAY'S CHILDREN love to spin yarns and may find it difficult to distinguish between fact and fiction. Luckily, they are more discerning when making friends. Look for these trend-setting Aquarians to come up with the new and fashionable. They want their clothes and cars to make "a statement." Inventive and persistent, they should find particular success in the art world. Their strong sense of style will attract many admirers and imitators.

Every bridge club has its Hapless Harry. Harry would give anything in the world to be a great bridge player. He subscribes to every bridge magazine, buys every new book on the game the moment it hits the shelves, but nothing helps. If anything, his game seems to get worse as the years roll by.

When Harry picked up this hand in a rubber bridge game, he knew his moment had arrived. Almost every book on play and defense Harry possessed carried the famous hand defended by his idol, the late Howard Schenken. Against a spade contract, Schenken had led the nine of trumps from just such a holding as Harry's. Declarer, who held A Q 8 x x x in hand opposite J x x in dummy, lost a trump trick by covering with dummy's jack to protect against a possible K 10 x with East, and the contract was no longer makable.

Without further ado, Harry shot out the nine of spades. He was rather disappointed when declarer played low from dummy and won the trick with the jack. Next, South cashed the ace of spades, fetching the king from East. After playing off the ace of diamonds, declarer crossed to the queen of spades, in the process drawing Harry's last trump, discarded two clubs on the king and queen of diamonds, then led the jack of hearts. With the king onside, declarer brought in the whole suit and scored 13 tricks!

What was it Alexander Pope wrote about a little learning? Had Harry simply led from one of his four-card suits, declarer would probably have gone down unless the defense offered some aid. If South tries to get to dummy by leading a low trump to the queen, the defenders can lock declarer in hand and eventually will collect two club tricks and one in each major.

'Cute monk' Ted Danson leaves hairpiece on set

NEW YORK — There's one thing Ted Danson doesn't like about his "Cheers" character, skirt-chasing Sam Malone: his hairpiece.

Danson

Danson, in an interview upcoming in Sunday's Parade magazine, said he leaves Sam's hairpiece on the set when he heads home these days — a welcome change from the days when he wore the wig both on-and off-screen.

"Putting the hairpiece on was a hassle. It's a huge relief to no longer walk around in other people's image of who I am," said Danson, 43. "I only have to be sexy for one person (wife Cassandra) these days, and she thinks I look like a cute monk."

Nevertheless, Danson said, playing the sex-obsessed Boston bar owner on the top-rated television show opened a lot of doors which might have remained closed to a nice guy like him.

"Thank God for Sam. I would have been this sweet, sensitive guy until I died if I hadn't played Sam Malone," he said.

LOS ANGELES — Burt Reynolds, star of the CBS-TV series "Evening Shade," says he was never the womanizer he portrayed in his early movies.

In fact, the real Burt Reynolds is closer to the warmhearted football-star-turned-high-school-coach he plays on his show, Reynolds said in the current issue of Entertainment Weekly.

In the 1970s and 1980s, Reynolds played the role of freewheeling, macho rogues in such films as "The Longest Yard," "Smokey and the Bandit," "Semi-Tough" and "Hooper." But the actor said he was never a "cocky, womanizing jerk" in his personal life.

"I wasn't married for a long time, and I dated some well-known women (Dinah Shore, Sally Field), but I wasn't dating five at a time. If people think that's what I was, it's because I played those characters very, very well," Reynolds said.

Reynolds is now married to actress Loni Anderson, and they have a 2½-year-old son, Quinton. Reynolds, 54, is thrilled Quinton is already a football fan, and he intends to encourage his son to become "anything he wants to be."

"I hope he's not an actor. It's a field with so much rejection," Reynolds said.

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. — Comedian Bob Hope and award-winning country groups Alabama and the Oak Ridge Boys will share the spotlight with Dolly Parton in benefit concerts opening the season at the Dollywood theme park.

The four concerts April 27-28 are the primary source of financing for the Dollywood Foundation, a non-profit organization Ms. Parton founded in 1988 to improve public education in her native Sevier County.

Ms. Parton, the Oak Ridge Boys and Hope will perform at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Saturday, April 27, at the 1,700-seat Dollywood Celebrity Theater.

NEW YORK — Sure, the pay's better, but movie-making has a lot more in common with many people's workaday jobs than you'd think, says Oscar-winning actress Jodie Foster.

Foster

"You get up at six in the morning, and it's like a blue-collar job — all the idiots that sit at the Polo Lounge don't mean anything," Foster said in the March issue of Premiere magazine. "That's what fascinates me when people talk about the film business — they're talking about people who sit in suits and go to lunch, but that's not what it is."

Foster also said that playing the hero in her new film, "Silence of the Lambs," was a nice change from her Oscar-winning role as the rape victim in "The Accused."

"What's great about this character is that her lot in life, as the hero, is to save the underdog. . . . I feel like there's never been a female hero who uses femininity as a warrior thing, and not like Rambo — Rambette — in underwear," she said.

NEW YORK — Donald Trump's MTV debut will have to wait.

The real estate magnate has nixed his appearance in a video with an all-female heavy metal band after the two sides argued over Trump's fee — which his spokesman said was targeted for charity.

Trump initially accepted $10,000 to be given as a donation from Precious Metal for a cameo appearance in the band's remake of the '70s soul smash "Mr. Big Stuff." He taped his spot three months ago, portraying a record company executive.

But the final version of the video featured Trump throughout, said spokesman Dan Klores, and the developer thought his expanded role deserved a bigger donation.

Precious Metal lead singer Leslie Knauer said the larger figure was $250,000, and the relatively unknown band couldn't afford such a large payoff and Trump was replaced by a double in the video.

FAMILY MATTERS

Alcoholic drinks should not be part of teens' lives

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I need you to settle an argument between my husband and myself. We have a 16-year-old son who we both know drinks beer when he can. He has come home drunk twice already. I get very upset and I think this is very serious. My husband doesn't think that it's a problem. He just says that boys are like that and that he did the same thing when he was a kid. He says we should be grateful that he's not on drugs.

May

This is causing a real problem in our house. I was raised a Southern Baptist and I believe that it's wrong to drink alcohol. My husband was raised Methodist and he doesn't think that it's wrong. Over the years I have compromised myself on this and don't say anything anymore when my husband has a few beers.

Now I think that all of this is coming back to haunt me. I'm most sorry that I didn't make a bigger fuss over his drinking. If I had, maybe I wouldn't have this problem with my son now.

What do you think about a 16-year-old drinking? We also have a 12-year-old daughter and my husband says that it's not all right for her to drink! I just don't understand him. Don't you think that it's wrong for both of them? ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: Yes, yes, yes. I strongly feel it is wrong for teenagers to drink. As parents, we must do all that we can do to protect our children, while they are children, from the dangers of alcohol. Daily, I see tragic results of excessive alcohol use in the lives of good people. No one starts out in life to be a drunk, but it does happen. Alcoholism is a life-time disease.

Relative to the dangers of "turning a blind eye" to teenagers' drinking, the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse has these facts:

- Alcohol is the number one drug of abuse in the United States. The costs of alcohol use/abuse are about three times the costs of all illegal drugs combined.
- The use/abuse of alcohol is closely tied to the two leading causes of death among adolescents — suicide and motor vehicle accidents.
- The average age for first experimentation with alcohol is 12 years.
- It takes less alcohol to produce intoxication in youth than in adults.
- Adolescents can become addicted to alcohol faster than adults. Addiction can occur within one to two years of regular use by adolescents, as compared to five to 20 years in adults.
- Research shows increasing evidence that heredity is a major contributing factor in alcoholism. Children from alcoholic families are two to four times more likely to develop alcohol dependency.

Another common comment is "I only drink beer." Somehow, people assume that beer is not a problem. But the alcohol content of a 12-ounce beer is the about the same as a five-ounce glass of wine or one-and-one-half ounces of 86-proof liquor. So, in spite of the beer companies' attempts to paint beer as the "liquid of friendship," it is just as dangerous as any other alcoholic beverage. Occasionally even the beer advertisements now acknowledge its intoxicating potential.

The bottom line is that alcohol in any form is a drug. As parents, we must do all that we can to help our children "Just Say No" to all drugs — and that includes beer. They are not old enough to make such decisions. Don't give up — our children are too precious to lose to a bottle.

DEAR READERS: I receive so many letters raising issues associated with marital problems that I want to mention an opportunity for marriage enrichment. Today and Saturday, starting at 7 p.m., Dr. Brecheen and Faulkner of the Marriage and Family Institute at Abilene Christian University will present their "Marriage Enrichment Seminar." This widely acclaimed seminar focuses on God's design for enriching your marriage. Call Golf Course Road Church of Christ (694-8836) for registration information. I feel that it is important for us to take advantage of every opportunity to enhance and expand the spirit of marriage.

Trash problems create answers

Associated Press

Since the late 1970s more than two thirds of U.S. landfills and town dumps have closed.

About 80 percent of the solid waste in this country is dumped into the remaining 7,000-plus landfills, many of which will be filled to capacity by as early as 1995. Disposal at the remaining sites will cost communities a king's ransom. In a few places, it costs more than $100 a ton just to get rid of garbage.

What's the solution to trash troubles? Follow the R's of conservation: recycle, reuse, repair and reduce, as suggested by Country America magazine.

- Recycling: People are already separating their garbage and taking the recyclable objects — glass bottles, aluminum and tin cans, plastic containers and paper products — to centrally located recycling bins. A few communities pick up separated trash at curbside.

No matter how it's done, recycling saves precious natural resources. For example, to produce glass from recycled bottles — rather than from raw materials — requires half the water and 68 percent of the energy. Recycling glass cuts air pollution by 20 percent and mining wastes by 80 percent.

Twenty-seven states have recycling policies on the books, and more are sure to follow in the coming decade. The United States now recycles about 10 percent of its solid waste; the EPA's goal is 25 percent by 1992.

- Reducing: Most people buy disposable items and products in convenience packaging; the minutes they save are costly. Packaging accounts for 10 percent of consumer grocery bills. And, the packaging ends in a landfill.

A better way? Buy in bulk, and stay away from disposables when there are durable alternatives. There are 65,000 man-made chemicals used today that didn't exist 50 years ago. The challenge is to use only those that are necessary and use them sparingly.

- Repairing and reusing: Practice old-fashioned economy at home. Repair toasters, radios and other small appliances instead of buying new.

Mend clothing. When those old cotton clothes no longer hold together, cut them up for rags.

Flag decals offered

Staff Report

American flag car window decals can help motorists show support for the troops stationed in the Middle East. These decals are about 6x7½-inches in size and made from static cling vinyl that sticks to glass or other smooth surface without adhesive. The decals are transparent so they can be seen from either side.

DEAR ABBY

Some siblings can't resist criticizing

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady whose older sister had criticized her all her life inspired me to write. I know how she feels. I am 74 and my sister is 86. She's the oldest in the family and I'm the youngest, and she never criticized any of our other siblings the way she criticized me.

Van Buren

After being a widow for eight years, I recently remarried, and when I chose my 4-year-old great-granddaughter for my flower girl, Sis criticized me by saying, "Older couples do not have flower girls at their second wedding."

She also criticized the write-up of my recent wedding in the local newspaper. She said I should not have named all the out-of-town guests, told where they came from and how they were related to the bride or groom — the list was too long and boring.

Abby, I never criticized any of her weddings, and she has been married six times. (Three times before she was 45, and three times after.)

I am enclosing the write-up of my wedding that she criticized. Please give me your honest opinion of it. — SICK OF SISTER'S CRITICISM

DEAR SICK: I think the write-up is lovely. Perhaps your sister isn't aware that it is customary to list all the out-of-town guests, where they came from and their relationship to the bride or groom.

Don't be too hard on your sister, dear. Some older siblings tend to criticize their younger siblings out of habit.

DEAR ABBY: If you can spare the space in your column, I would like to offer some advice to anyone contemplating marriage or living with someone.

Before you move into the house or apartment, divide ALL of the storage space equitably: that drawer is yours, this drawer is mine; that shelf is yours, this shelf is mine; that closet is yours, this closet is mine, etc. If you don't, you might wake up one day and discover you have been living with a pack rat.

By then it will be too late. Every drawer, every shelf, every closet, space beneath the bed, every nook and cranny will be filled with her or his valued possessions, memorabilia, souvenirs, etc. Mopping, vacuuming and dusting will become a memory.

I learned too late. I've tried pleading, compromising and even threatening to leave. All to no avail. The accumulating goes on and on.

Establish the ground rules at the beginning. It prevents problems later on. Remember, pack rats are not easy to identify. They come in all shapes, sizes, colors and sexes.

Please don't indicate where this came from. Let the pack rats of the world wonder if this letter was written by their spouses or live-in companions. Sign me ... OUT OF SPACE, OUT OF PATIENCE AND ABOUT TO BE OUT OF HERE

DEAR ABBY: Much has been written about daughter-in-law-/mother-in-law relationships. I had a wonderful relationship with my mother-in-law until she passed away two years ago.

I am writing to you now as a mother-in-law who, unfortunately, has not been as successful with my own daughter-in-law. If these tips will help just one daughter-in-law to improve her relationship with her mother-in-law, it will be well worth the time it took to write them.

HOW TO GET ALONG WITH YOUR HUSBAND'S MOTHER

1. Invite your in-laws over once in a while. (Once a year is better than never.)

2. When you are invited to your in-laws' home for dinner, offer to bring something, and also offer to help with the serving and cleaning up afterward. Don't act like a guest — you're family.

3. Phone your mother-in-law to ask, "How are you feeling?" and make a little small talk. This shows that you are interested in her, which will help build a warm, closer relationship.

4. If she has given you a gift, such as a sweater or a purse, be sure that she sees you wearing or carrying it at least once.

5. If your mother-in-law has given your children clothing, make sure they wear those clothes to her home while they are still new and look nice.

6. If per chance she has hurt your feelings, don't complain to your husband, and don't let it fester. Say, "Mom, you hurt me —" then tell her why, so you can put it to rest.

7. If she has a daughter, don't compete with her. Accept the fact that she's apt to favor her own daughter. (You will, too, if you have one someday.)

8. Never repeat family gossip. And try not to listen to any.

9. Make it a point to ask her for something, a recipe or her opinion about something. (You don't have to take it, but it will indicate that you respect her judgment, which is sure to make her feel great.)

10. Love her son and take good care of him.

Abby, this was written primarily for women who live in the same city as their mother-in-law, but the bottom line is to be considerate, kind and generous.

Now, if some daughter-in-law wants to write 10 tips for mothers-in-law, I'll welcome them. Maybe there are some ways I haven't thought of to encourage my daughter-in-law to love me. — MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: Your tips are tops. Now, let's see what daughters-in-law have to say. Readers?

CONFIDENTIAL TO "UNMARRIED, PREGNANT AND TORN BETWEEN THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP BLUE SEA": Since you are morally opposed to abortion, and your only problem is whether to keep your baby or give it up for adoption, I urge you to go to an organization called Birthright. It is very much concerned about women in your plight and will help you to make a decision you can live with. God bless you. I wish you well.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. Canola oil consumption shows increase

Copley News Service

In the last two years, consumption of canola oil has nearly doubled in the United States, where it now surpasses olive, peanut and sunflower oils. Soybean oil remains the leading oil. This relative newcomer has a heart-healthy profile — lowest in saturated fat of all oils and second highest in monounsaturated fat, after olive oil.

Motorcyclist ends Latin American trek

By Mary D'Ambrosio
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — When Catharine Rambeau faced the unemployment, she rented her house, bought a used motorcycle and set off on a 27,000-mile solo trek through Latin America.

"My older brother called me up and said I couldn't do it," Rambeau, a 55-year-old resident of Lantana, Fla., said recently as she ended her trip in Caracas, after two years. "He and his friends had visions of my being shot by the Sendero Luminoso."

There are plenty of dangers for a woman traveling alone in Latin America, though attacks by Peruvian guerrillas are among the least likely. There is sexism, official suspicion, and dislike of Americans. There are bad roads, long deserts, contaminated water and tropical illnesses.

But Rambeau, long attracted both by the region and the idea of a difficult motorcycle journey, saw her opportunity when the video magazine she edited folded.

An experienced biker, she picked out a used 260-pound red Honda, dieted off 86 pounds, traced her route on sometimes-inaccurate maps and, on Dec. 11, 1988, set out for Ushuaia, a cold and forlorn village at the southernmost tip of Argentine Patagonia.

She calculated that she and her bike, Mojo, would be there in six months. But the road had its own time line; it took a year and eight days, and an additional year — including a five-week break to fly to Detroit to earn emergency money — to ride north to Caracas and the trip's end.

In black riding boots, sunglasses, a multicolored African bead necklace and often a black Jorge Amado T-shirt — in honor of the Brazilian author — Rambeau rode 27,185 miles through Central and South America. She spent about $11,000, sleeping in $5 hotels and persuading mechanics to sell her bike parts at cost.

Optimistic and sympathetic, she handed out money when she could, upset by poverty. She viewed suspicious soldiers as nothing but poor boys, and said she disarmed them by shaking hands.

"I got stopped by plenty of guns," she said. "I'd stick out my hand and say hello. How can you hurt someone whose hand you touch?"

Braving desert wind and jungle heat, and forever cleaning and repairing the bike, she kept asking herself what she was accomplishing. As she noticed little girls staring at her from the edges of the roads, she began to find the answer.

"Somebody doing something difficult and scary and unusual will give a push to somebody else," she said. "When I was growing up, there were no women playing baseball, there were no women cops, there were almost no women in politics. I never had anybody to look at."

If the adventure was large, the little moments impressed her most.

Rambeau celebrated with small-town Chileans their first democratic election in 16 years, had a brief romance with a fellow biker in Brazil, and was mesmerized by the singing of the owner of a desert cafe.

"I got much more than I gave," she said.

The worst thing to happen was the snatching of a $45 watch from her wrist in Salvador, Brazil.

She liked best the coastal deserts of Peru and Chile, where she rode for 44 days and met few people. "You are so solitary. There's no room for error," she said.

She kept a journal, and fiddled with ideas for a novel involving women and adventure.

Finally, in Caracas, she arranged passage on a ship to Florida, but she seemed permanently attracted to this new sort of life. She flipped through an atlas and paused at a map of Africa.

"I've got to go back and earn some money," she said, tracing the outline of the continent with her finger. "Because someday, I'm going to do this."

Modern day driving far from horse, wagon

By Dr. Henry F. Page

Long ago, when you were just a twinkle in your father's eye, he sped down the highway in a shay, powered by one horse. If a horseless carriage spooked his rig he might careen into a fence and suffer considerable bruising. He usually had plenty of time to see, hear and react appropriately to avoid most travel difficulties. Why, he could even saunter happily home on a moon-lit evening without even one hand on the reins — oh happy swain!

Page

But now-a-days one travels down the highway behind 100 horses, more or less, at the rate of E=MC2 and any slight deviation in course, perhaps on encountering a mammoth 18 wheeler, can result in ugly disaster and gruesome death for all involved.

The requirements for driving in today's world include sharp eyes with wide peripheral vision; a neck, limber enough to turn your head both right and left; adequate hearing; reflexes that respond quickly and appropriately; a mind capable of concentrating on driving conditions and unblurred by medication, alcohol or other drugs; a radio turned low, if on at all; and finally both hands on the wheel — oh unhappy modern Lothario!

The Germans have a word (something like "besserwustergefungen") that means an improvement that makes things worse. An illustration of this is the wonderous improvement in automobile technology that actually makes life worse for the senior driver.

High speed, crowded roads and powerful machines in the hands of hare-brained persons, create an atmosphere in which many older souls cannot cope. They actually become a menace both to themselves and to others and hence must be removed from the scene. This fact constitutes a tragic hardship because of our present-day lifestyle that requires an automobile for the life and safety of all.

Age, per se, is not the guiding factor in applying the cut-off of licensure, but rather the physical and mental state of the potential driver as outlined above. The way to evaluate this is by annual exams, by or for the state licensing authorities — a costly but necessary procedure.

The transition can be eased in part by privilege modifications, some of which are already in place, such as glasses and night driving. Family pressures, either directly or indirectly, via the police (who have proven cooperative and discreet in this matter) provides the best approach.

Why wait for an accident to create a crisis situation. It takes a big man to know when to hold and to know when to fold — and bigger one to make sure he does it.

LAMESA — After 17 years as an assistant coach, Lamesa defensive coordinator Gary Yoder is becoming a head coach.

Yoder, the brother of Midland resident Carlen Campbell, was hired Thursday as the Golden Tornadoes' new head coach, and it's only fitting that he succeeds Earl Overton. Yoder has spent 10 seasons as an Overton assistant at Kermit and Lamesa.

Yoder, a graduate of Phillips High School and West Texas State University, spent his first 13 years of coaching at Kermit — finishing up as offensive coordinator and head boys basketball coach. He joined Overton in Lamesa for the 1989 season, and the Tors have been 10-7-3 ever since.

King to start

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard King of the Washington Bullets and Joe Dumars of the Detroit Pistons will be starters for the East team in Sunday's NBA All-Star game.

King, a forward, replaces Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics, and Dumars, a guard, replaces Detroit teammate Isiah Thomas.

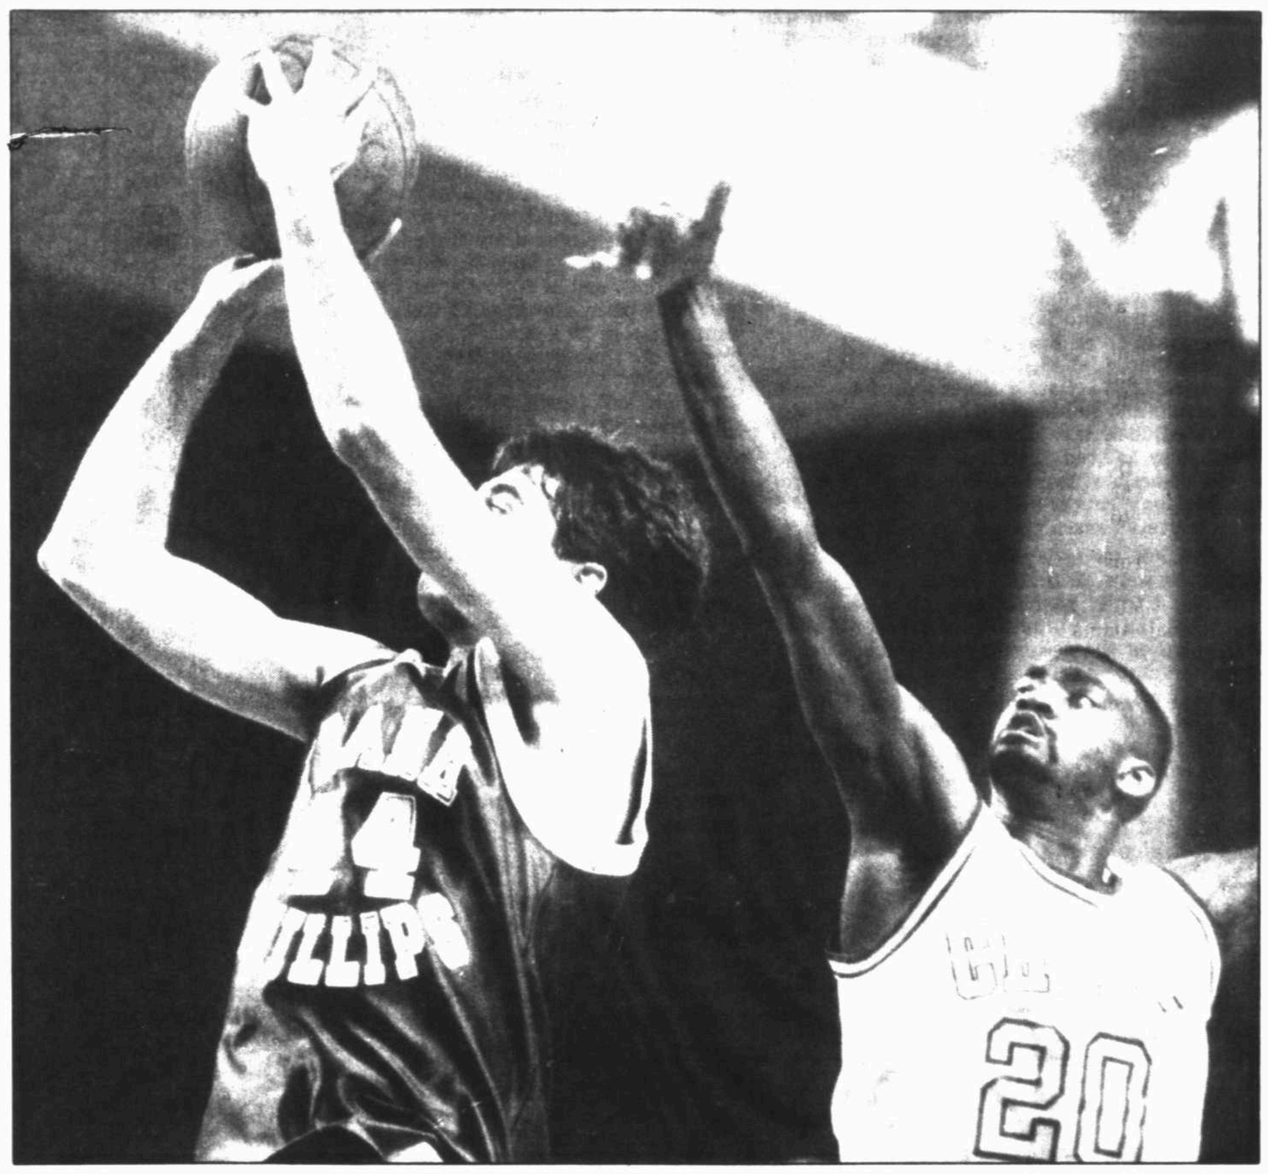
MC hammers Frank Phillips

■ FPC head coach Kelly Green raps his own team for dismal play while Midland College slam dances to a fourth-place spot in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland College's Eric Walker defends against Frank Phillips' Eduardo Abreu.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College hit 61 percent from the field and stepped into fourth place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race with a convincing 111-95 win over Frank Phillips College Thursday night at Chaparral Center.

Chaparral sophomore post Carroll Boudreaux had 27 points, 10 rebounds and five steals — highs in all categories — and Eugene Witherspoon and Charles Sanders combined for an additional 40 points and 14 rebounds as MC took advantage of its height advantage underneath the basket.

The MC win, combined with New Mexico Junior College's 102-92 loss to No. 5 Howard College, gives the Chaps sole possession of fourth place, and keeps alive the team's chances of landing a berth in the Region V tournament.

Elsewhere in WJCAC action, after leading 61-29 at halftime, No. 2 ranked South Plains rolled to an easy 100-79 win over Western Texas, and New Mexico Military sneaked by Clarendon 71-69; Odessa College was open.

MC tore through FPC's defense, whether it was the Plainsmen zone, utilized most of the game, or their occasional full court pressure. MC guards Steve Armstrong (13) and Tom Brown (12) both broke the double figure barrier as a result of the Chaps' ability to break the zone.

Fourteen of the 17 combined rebounds for Boudreaux and Witherspoon were on defense, and the Chaps forced 14 second-half FPC turnovers, both figures crucial to the outcome.

"We gave it away in the first half, and we gave it away in the second half," FPC head coach Kelly Green said. "And they took it. I can say all I want, but they (MC) shot the heck out of the ball."

The dejected and bitter second-year coach said the loss appeared to be a sign of a team on the downswing.

"That was the worst display ..." Green said. "In two years I've been here, it's the most disappointed I've been. I'm really disappointed in the way we acted. Everybody wants to point fingers, and nobody wants to accept responsibility. That sounds to me like a team on the way down."

Starter Robert Torrence — the highest percentage field goal shooter in the league — lost his starting position against MC due to pregame discplinary action; off-guard Zach Herring was benched the entire second half, also for disciplinary reasons.

MC's Sanders, who had five assists, came into Thursday night's game fresh off a triple double — 10 points, 11 rebounds, 10 assists — Monday against NMMI. The 6-5 freshmen from Houston Worthing says he has turned up the intensity of late — and for a reason.

"I'm just trying to play hard, trying to get us to the regional tournament," Sanders said.

And will the Chaps make it to Waco for the March tourney?

"Absolutely, defintely. That's a promise," Sanders assured.

For Green, the tables turned in a hurry. Now on a two-game losing streak, and having lost three of their last four, Green said the Plainsmen must win four of their last five to have a chance at making the tournament.

"This one killed us," Green said. "This could've been the playoffs for us. We had to win this game."

Midland College, 14-10, 5-5, travels to Clarendon Monday. Other road games remaining for the Chaps are Howard and New Mexico Junior College; home games remaining for MC include next Thursday against South Plains, Western Texas (Feb. 21), and Odessa (Feb. 28).

FPC, now 13-10, 5-6, is one-half game out of the fourth and final playoff spot.

'Dogs push toward playoffs

■ Odessa Permian stands as the next possible roadblock to a district championship for the Midland High boys, while both local girls teams end their seasons tonight.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

While the Midland High boys continue their quest for a District 4-5A basketball title tonight, the Midland Lee boys hope to gain added respect while the season comes to a close for the Lee and MHS girls.

Locally, Lee's boys will host Odessa High at 8 p.m. at the Chaparral Center, and the MHS girls play their season finale against Odessa Permian at 8 p.m. in the MHS gymnasium.

Meanwhile in Odessa, the MHS boys play an 8 p.m. game at Permian's Fieldhouse against the Panthers, while the Lady Rebels close at Odessa High's gymnasium at the same time. The other 4-5A games have the San Angelo boys playing at Abilene Cooper, while the Cooper and San Angelo girls face off in San Angelo. Abilene High's teams take the night off.

Even though the MHS boys clinched no worse than a tie for 4-5A's second playoff berth with a 90-78 win at San Angelo Tuesday, the Bulldogs have their sights set on the district title. However, MHS must rely on outside help from either Cooper, Permian or Lee — San Angelo's final three opponents.

MHS (17-10, 8-2 in district) must win out against Permian and Cooper next Tuesday at the Chaparral Center, then hope San Angelo (25-5, 8-1) loses one of its last three to force a co-championship. If that did happen, a district playoff would be scheduled to determine the No. 1 and 2 seeds from the league.

At worst, the Bulldogs would lose their last two while third-place Abilene High (15-13, 6-4) could win its final two against Lee and and Odessa High. That would force a playoff between AHS and MHS for the No. 2 seed, unless San Angelo loses two or more of its final three games.

Any MHS win or AHS loss would clinch the playoffs for the Bulldogs.

And, if Tuesday's win over San Angelo is an indicator, the prospect of a Bulldog loss is slim. MHS had four players score in double figures against the Bobcats, with Antwan Goodley sinking 25 points, Skeet Bowers 21, Earl McDonald 17 and Scott Allen 12.

"Our two goals going into that game were to outrebound them and rely on team work. I know we outrebounded them (unofficially MHS led 40-28 in rebounds) and I think it was the best team work we've had all season," said MHS head coach Jack Stephenson.

For the Lee boys, 9-18 and 2-7, tonight's games presents the Rebels a chance to make amends for a 71-62 loss Jan. 15 at OHS.

The Rebels are coming off an open date after falling 77-69 at Permian a week ago. However, Lee did drub Cooper 90-63 in the game preceding the Permian affair. The Rebels sank eight three-pointers in that win, with six coming off the finger tips of Martin Lattibeaudiere.

The Bronchos are coming off a 62-60 loss to Cooper Tuesday, and are 10-17 and 2-8 for the season.

In girls play, where Abilene High and Permian have sewn up the playoff bids, the Lady Bulldogs (14-13, 5-6) will close against a tough Permian outfit. The Lady Panthers are 22-6 and 10-1, including a 66-50 win over Abilene Tuesday. AHS had previously been undefeated in 4-5A play.

The Lee girls will try to turn around from a 45-43 non-district loss to Class A Sterling City Tuesday. The Lady Rebels are 10-18 and 4-7 this season, and hope to end a two-game skein after winning two straight. OHS is 13-14 and 2-9, and lost a 62-58 double overtime game at Lee's gym earlier this season.

MC netters open season in Lubbock

Staff Report

Two matches in Lubbock open the spring tennis season for the Midland College men's squad this weekend. The Chaparrals play Colorado State University on Friday and Pan American University on Saturday.

"After a month of practice, we're ready to face some outside opposition and these universities should give us some strong competition," said MC coach Joe Williams.

Currently ranked third among the nation's junior college programs, Williams thinks two mid-term additions may provide what the Chaparrals need to contend for another national title.

"We were 2-0 in the fall, playing team matches against Odessa College and New Mexico State and winning both times by 8-1 scores. Most of our matches, however, were in individual tournaments and we had a number of good wins," Williams said.

Tonney van de Pietermann, who played the number one singles position when Midland College won its last men's national title in 1989, returned to MC after being gone for a year. He's expected to push freshman Greg Muller for the top spot in the spring line-up. Van de Pietermann is joined in the line-up by freshman Tom Erik Brun, one of Norway's finest young players.

Muller posted a 12-3 mark at the number one singles position during the fall. He won the Walmart Collegiate title and the Rolex ITCA Southwest Small College tournament. Muller had losses to Laurent Becouran of Anderson, SC, and Alberto Canzian of Tyler at the ITCA junior college indoor event, plus a loss to the number one player from the University of Texas.

Berthe beats 1st round foe in Rolex meet

Staff Report

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn — Midland College freshman Myriam Berthe made tennis history today by winning her first round match at the Rolex ITCA National Collegiate Indoor Tournament.

The tournament is being played at the 98th Street Racquet Club in Minneapolis.

Berthe defeated Dawn Martin of the University of Tennessee 6-3 2-6 6-0 and became the first junior college player ever to win a singles match in this event. The other 31 players in the field were ranked competitors from NCAA Division I schools.

A freshman from Dakar, Senegal, Berthe is the top-ranked junior college woman in the country right now. She entered the tournament with a record of 18-1. Berthe earned the right to play in the event by winning the Rolex Small College tournament in Corpus Christi last fall. In that tourney, she defeated junior college, Division II, Division III, and NAIA competitors.

At 10 a.m. today, Berthe is scheduled to play Shannan McCarthy, University of Georgia, who is the third seed in the tournament and the NCAA Division I's fourth-ranked player.

Martin was ranked 20th by the Volvo ITCA Intercollegiate system in Division I.

"I'm really not surprised that Myriam won, or that she needed to go three sets," said MC coach Joe Williams.

Two MC players last year also made history in the event by becoming the first junior college women's doubles team to win in the main draw of the tournament. MC sophomore Janneke Garos and partner Sharla Barone won two matches before a leg injury slowed Garos.

Barone now plays for the University of Utah.

Hoosiers cruise to win

Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — Calbert Cheaney scored 21 points and No. 4 Indiana celebrated coach Bob Knight's election into the basketball Hall of Fame with a 105-74 Big Ten victory over Northwestern on Thursday night.

Cheaney scored 14 points in the second half while teammate Eric Anderson scored all of his 16 in the first half. Damon Bailey had 13 for the Hoosiers and Pat Graham and Lyndon Jones had 11 each.

It was the fifth time this season the Hoosiers had gone over 100 points but fell short of the 109 they scored against Illinois.

Freshman Pat Baldwin led Northwestern with 17 points, while Todd Leslie had 13 and Don Brotz 12.

No. 1 UNLV 113, Fresno St. 64

LAS VEGAS — Larry Johnson scored 23 points to lead UNLV to its 30th straight victory over two seasons.

Travis Bice made five of six 3-pointers for UNLV (19-0, 11-0) to finish with 15 points. Anderson Hunt also had 15 points, while Elmore Spencer added 14 and Stacey Augmon 13.

Wilbert Hooker led Fresno State (10-11, 5-7) with 20 points, Dave Barnett had 17 and Doug Harris 14.

The victory left the defending national champions unbeaten heading into Sunday's showdown with No. 2 Arkansas (23-1) at Fayetteville.

Southern Cal 87, No. 5 Arizona 83

LOS ANGELES — Harold Miner scored a season-high 36 points and Southern Cal beat Arizona for the first time in their last 12 meetings.

The victory assured Southern Cal coach George Raveling of his best season at the school. The Trojans raised their Pacific-10 Conference record to 4-5 and their overall mark to 13-6.

Raveling is in his fifth year as USC's head coach. The Trojans were 12-16 last year.

No. 6 Duke 86, No. 11 Virginia 74

DURHAM, N.C. — Christian Laettner scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half as Duke rode its pressure defense.

The Blue Devils put Virginia in a deep hole by denying the pass inside for the easy basket. That helped Duke (19-4, 7-2) break away to an 11-point lead in the first 10 minutes of the Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Virginia (17-5, 5-3) didn't help itself in the first half, hitting just nine of 25 field goals, 36 percent.

Top 25 Roundup

No. 9 North Carolina 92, N. Carolina St. 70

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Rick Fox scored 16 points and North Carolina wore down a weary North Carolina State team in Atlantic Coast Conference action.

The Tar Heels (16-4, 5-3) led by six at halftime and widened the margin steadily in the second half, shutting the door when two N.C. State starters fouled out.

N.C. State (12-7, 5-4) lacked the shooting touch that helped it beat North Carolina 97-91 Wednesday, hitting only eight of 29 from 3-point range and 37 percent overall.

No. 12 Southern Miss. 91, Virginia Tech. 79

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Daron Jenkins scored a career-high 26 points and helped Southern Mississippi dominate inside.

Winning for the 19th time in its last 21 home games, Southern Mississippi (16-2) improved its Metro Conference-leading record to 8-1.

The Golden Eagles never trailed but needed a big second half from Jenkins — who had 11 points in an early run — and 15 from Darrin Chancellor to put away the pesky Hokies (8-12, 2-6), who lost for the ninth time in 10 games.

No. 13 E. Tennessee St. 110, Belmont Abbey 70

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — Rodney English scored 18 points and Calvin Talford had 15 to lead East Tennessee State.

East Tennessee State (20-2) led 55-38 at halftime and opened the second half with a 15-1 run to lead by 31 with 15:35 left.

No. 14 UCLA 64, Arizona St. 44

LOS ANGELES — Tracy Murray scored 17 points and had a hand in the two baskets that allowed UCLA to finally shake Arizona State en route to a Pacific-10 Conference victory.

No. 17 Utah 80, Hawaii 60

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah center Paul Afeaki scored 10 of his 14 points in the second half in Western Athletic Conference action.

Iowa 71, No. 25 Michigan St. 67

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Acie Earl scored 24 points, including six in the final 2 minutes, as Iowa handed Michigan State its first home loss of the season.

Razorbacks rally to defeat Cougars

HOUSTON (AP) — Todd Day scored 30 points and Lee Mayberry's 3-pointer highlighted a 15-0 run to rally No. 2 Arkansas to its 20th consecutive victory, 81-74, over Houston on Thursday night.

Arkansas (23-1, 10-0) will step outside Southwest Conference play on Sunday and host top-ranked and unbeaten UNLV.

The Cougars (14-7, 6-4) took their biggest lead at 67-63 with 7:22 to play, but they didn't score for 6:48 while the Razorbacks ran off 15 straight points, taking the lead for good on Mayberry's second 3-pointer of the game with 5:23 to play.

Derrick Smith and Alvaro Teheran each scored 20 points for the Cougars and Oliver Miller added 16 for the Razorbacks, who snapped Houston's 18-game winning streak at home.

Arkansas hit six of its first seven shots.

Blackman paces surging Mavs

Associated Press

DALLAS — Rolando Blackman hit two free throws with 8.6 seconds remaining, leading the improving Dallas Mavericks to a 102-101 victory Thursday night over the Golden State Warriors.

Dallas, led by Derek Harper's 30 points, won for the fourth time in five games after losing seven of its previous eight.

The Warriors had two opportunities to win in the final seconds, but Chris Mullin's attempt to work a backdoor play with Rod Higgins glanced off the receiver's hands and out of bounds. Harper failed to inbound the ball with 1.4 seconds left, but Tim Hardaway's desperation 30-footer at the buzzer glanced off the rim.

Spurs 118, Pacers 108

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 35 points and 15 rebounds, and Sean Elliott added a career-high 30 points for San Antonio.

Detlef Schrempf led the Pacers with 21 points, while Reggie Miller had 20 and Michael Williams 17.

Rockets 96, Cavaliers 92

RICHFIELD, Ohio — David Wood hit a go-ahead 3-pointer with 19.7 seconds left and Buck Johnson sank a pair of clinching free throws with 1.1 seconds to go as Houston spoiled John Williams' return.

Williams, whose $5 million salary and bonus this year makes him the league's highest-paid player, returned from a sprained left foot sustained Nov. 16. He scored just four points for the Cavaliers, who got 23 from Larry Nance in losing for the 24th time in 29 games.

Bullets 124, Nets 117

LANDOVER, Md. — Bernard King scored 47 points for Washington, including five in a critical 12-3 fourth-quarter surge.

King, who learned earlier in the day that he would be a starter in Sunday's NBA All-Star game, made 19 of 35 field shots in topping the 40-point barrier for the ninth time this season.

Hawks 127, Hornets 114

ATLANTA — Moses Malone scored a season-high 25 points off the bench to lead Atlanta to its 16th victory in a row at home.

Kevin Willis and Dominique Wilkins added 18 points each as the Hawks built a 22-point lead in the first half and coasted to their first victory in three games against the Hornets this season.

Celtics 117, Knicks 101

NEW YORK — Kevin Gamble made 12 of 14 shots and scored 24 of his career-high 32 points as Boston opened a 22-point halftime lead.

Gamble, who took over the NBA lead in shooting percentage at .625 by finishing 16-for-20 for the game, surpassed his previous career-high of 31. He went into the season as a .482 career shooter.

Larry Bird, who had 18 points, 13 assists and nine rebounds on Wednesday after missing 14 games with a bad back, did not travel with the Celtics to New York. He also will miss Sunday's All-Star Game at Charlotte.

Bulls 95, Pistons 93

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Michael Jordan scored Chicago's final 10 points to finish with 30 as Chicago scored its first regular-season victory ever at The Palace.

The Bulls, who had lost six regular-season games at The Palace, now are 2-12 in the building, including playoff games. Chicago's 32-14 record equals the team's best after 46 games. The 1971-72 team got off to a 36-14 start.

Magic 108, Timberwolves 103

ORLANDO, Fla. — Scott Skiles scored 17 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter to tie a team record as Orlando rallied for its third straight victory.

Orlando overcame four deficits in the final period, the last 99-98 with 2:39 remaining. From there, the Magic outscored the Timberwolves 10-4.

Bulls 95, Pistons 93

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Michael Jordan scored Chicago's final 10 points to finish with 30 as Chicago posted its first regular-season victory ever at The Palace.

The Bulls, who had lost six regular-season games at The Palace, now are 2-12 in the building, including playoff games. Chicago's 32-14 record equals the team's best after 46 games. The 1971-72 team got off to a 36-14 start.

Six picked for cage Hall

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Indiana coach Bob Knight and late NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien were among six men elected Thursday to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Also elected were guard Tiny Archibald, centers Dave Cowens and Harry Gallatin and the late Larry Fleisher, who founded the NBA Players Association. The group will be inducted in May. A seventh member will be chosen by a new committee formed to recognize international basketball.

After he failed to win election in his first try in 1988, Knight reportedly called it a "slap in the face" and asked not to be considered for renomination.

Knight has never had a losing season in 26 years and is one of only three coaches to win Olympic, NCAA and NIT championships.

El Paso Coronado takes lead in ECISD golf tourney

Staff Report

ODESSA — El Paso Coronado used a 308 total to take a four-stroke team lead over Monahans at the Ector County Independent School District Invitational Thursday.

Big Spring sits in third place in the 19-team field with a 313 total, followed by Odessa Permian (319), Midland High (332) and Midland Lee (333).

Chad Pipkin of Monahans shot a one-under-par 71 at the Club at Mission Dorado to assume the individual lead, and Big Spring's David Garcia is second with a 72 at Odessa Country Club going into today's final round.

Natural gas pricing called predatory

■ Enron Chairman Kenneth Lay surprised some observers by saying large natural gas companies are using predatory pricing to drive smaller competitors out of business, a tactic some say Enron could well be guilty of.

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Enron Corp. Chairman Kenneth L. Lay says the nation's largest natural gas companies have flooded the country with cheap fuel, driving smaller competitors out of business.

In a speech to an energy conference in Houston Wednesday, Lay said even though "predatory pricing" in the natural gas industry has been "unintentional," it nevertheless has wiped out thousands of independent oil and gas companies since the Oil Patch bust five years ago.

"I think some serious questions need to be raised about this apparent economically irrational behavior," said Lay, the top executive at Houston's largest natural gas company.

Lay's comments, which come amid the most depressed natural gas market in recent memory, puzzled many industry observers, particularly since Enron would have to be included among the large companies that Lay accuses of undercutting competitors.

Analysts Wednesday cited Lay's speech as evidence of deeply rooted frustration in the natural gas industry, which has seen prices fall to their lowest level in five years as warm weather and an economic downturn have zapped demand.

"You're seeing here what you saw when oil prices went to $10 a barrel a few years ago," said Mike German, senior vice president of the American Gas Association, a Virginia-based industry trade group. "There's a real sense of helplessness."

Other experts struggled to refute Lay's claims without appearing to disagree with an executive who has become one of the most influential in the energy business.

"This does not appear to be vintage Ken Lay," said a close Lay associate who asked not to be named. "The whole process appears to him to be completely out of control. I get the sense that he's very frustrated."

According to Lay, the industry's largest players have for months been selling gas for less than it costs them to replace it, effectively glutting the market with cheap fuel.

He said these companies can afford to sell gas at a loss because their balance sheets are flexible enough to absorb a short-term decline in natural gas operations.

Smaller, independent producers, though, have no such luxury, Lay said.

Since these firms typically depend on natural gas sales for about 70 percent of their total revenue, if they sell gas cheaper than their costs, they eventually will

S&P lowers carmakers' ratings

■ The nation's Big Three automakers were not pleased with Standard & Poor's, which lowered their securities ratings because of the recession and competition.

Associated Press

The recession and concern over the Big Three automakers' strategies to deal with competition prompted Standard & Poor's Corp. to lower the companies' securities ratings.

S&P took the action Wednesday, lowering ratings of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. by two notches, but kept them in investment grade.

The agency, however, lowered its ratings of Chrysler Corp. and Chrysler Financial Corp. securities by one notch each, knocking them out of investment grade and into speculative grade.

Each of the automakers criticized S&P's moves.

"S&P's action, to say the least, is unfortunate and unwarranted by the facts," said a Chrysler statement read Wednesday by spokesman Tom Houston. "Standard & Poor's action toward Chrysler Financial Corporation is particularly disturbing because CFC has enjoyed six years of record earnings."

GM also called the rating agency's action unwarranted, especially in light of Monday's decisions by the board of directors to lower its dividend, cut capital spending and trim 15,000 white-collar jobs in the next two years.

Ford said it was disappointed in S&P's action and had in place programs to carry the automaker through the present downturn.

Debt downgrades are bad news for a company because they make it more dif-

Big retailers see sales declines

■ January sales were down at most major retailers as war and economic worries kept many shoppers home, but discounters like Wal-Mart and Kmart did better.

Associated Press

War in the Persian Gulf and a weaker economy at home kept consumers out of the stores again in January, giving many of the nation's biggest retailers a dismal end to an already disappointing fiscal year.

Several retailers said Thursday their January sales fell in comparison with year-earlier results: Sears, Roebuck and Co.; J.C. Penney Co. Inc.; May Department Stores Co.; Limited Inc. and Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc.

Discounters Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and Kmart Corp. fared somewhat better, an indication that budget-conscious consumers were searching for lower prices.

"The weakness was evident across the board ... and was geographically broad-based," said Jeffrey Feiner, a retail industry analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co.

The beginning of the Gulf War, while long anticipated, helped put a further dent in already lackluster business.

Store traffic "started off sluggishly, it died the first week of the war, and then it picked up to a sluggish trend," said Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst with the Barclays de Zoete Wedd Inc. investment company.

Penney, for example, reported last month that business fell slightly during the first few days of the war. But Chairman William Howell said in a statement Thursday that consumers also were held back by concerns about the economy.

January, the final month for the retailing fiscal year, is considered the least significant month on the calendar. Even in the best of years, consumers tread lightly after spending heavily on Christmas, while stores clear winter merchandise to make way for spring lines.

Nonetheless, the sales figures represented a further blow to the retail industry, which is suffering from a disappointing Christmas and a generally poor 1990.

With 1991 just over a month old, there has been a wave of bankruptcy court filings by retailers, including Hills Department Stores Inc. and Best Products Co. Bond rating companies downgraded their opinions of Carter Hawley Hale, and the company was also rumored to be on the verge of Chapter 11 filing.

Sears, struggling to reclaim its eroding market share, also saw some of its bond ratings fall, making it more expensive for that company to borrow money.

Mesa sells assets in two deals

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership, led by investor T. Boone Pickens, will sell about 11 percent of its proven natural gas reserves to two energy companies, the parties said Thursday.

Pickens

The transactions, valued at just over $300 million, will give Mesa cash to reduce its debt. A similar, slightly larger sale fell through in December when the buyer couldn't obtain financing.

That buyer, Seagull Energy Corp. of Houston, is making the larger of the two purchases announced Thursday. Seagull chairman Barry Galt said the company had obtained financing for its $201 million purchase of 168.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 4.6 million barrels of oil.

Seagull and a company that did not wish to be identified are buying Mesa properties in the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma.

Seagull will assume about $1 million in liabilities and may pay Mesa up to $25 million from natural gas sales, when the price is above $1.80 per thousand cubic feet, through 1993.

The other company will pay about $74 million in cash and assume $6 million in liabilities associated with Mesa properties. The transaction, expected to close next month, also gives Mesa a share in future gas sales of up to $10 million through 1993.

Mesa, led by investor T. Boone Pickens, has been eager to make the sales to raise money that would reduce a $1.5 billion debt. "This will allow us to repay about 18 percent of our total debt," Mesa spokesman Jay Rosser said.

Mesa's debt repayment has been pinched by low natural gas prices. The partnership is also nearing completion of a private placement of about $600 million of that debt.

When the deals are complete, Mesa's natural gas equivalent reserves will decline to about 2.215 trillion cubic feet.

Oil prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell Thursday, erasing early gains after a rally driven by the price of heating oil faded on forecasts of warmer European weather.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March closed at $21.22 per barrel, down 27 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline for March delivery closed at 60.58 cents per gallon, down 1.16 cents. Natural gas for delivery in March closed at $1.380 per 1,000 cubic feet, up .9 cent.

Dollar moves up

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar edged higher in domestic trading for the first time in more than a week Thursday after two central banks intervened to shore up the flagging U.S. currency, traders said.

Gold was up moderately in New York, rising $4.90 a troy ounce to $367.80 on the Commodity Exchange.

Traders said the Fed and the Bank of Canada stepped in to buy dollars in the early afternoon after the U.S. currency touched a new postwar low of 1.4460 German marks.

By late in the day, the dollar stood at 1.4553 German marks, up from 1.4483 marks late Wednesday.

Dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday, included: 1.2437 Swiss francs, up from 1.2316; 4.9535 French francs, up from 4.9325; 1,093.75 Italian lire, up from 1,088.50; and 1.1587 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1575.

Silver was up in New York, rising 2.9 cents a troy ounce to $3.799 on the Commodity Exchange.

Guilty plea

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas thrift president Edwin T. McBirney III Thursday pleaded guilty to fraud, misapplication of funds and other felonies.

McBirney

McBirney, who led Sunbelt Savings Association from 1984 to mid-1986, entered the plea before U.S. District Judge Robert B. Maloney under a plea bargain in which he agreed to testify against other savings and loan figures.

In the bargain, prosecutors agreed to limit McBirney's penalty to a maximum prison sentence of 15 years, a $7.5 million restitution payment and $8.5 million settlement of civil claims by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Put more down to lower monthly payments

By Bill Doyle

Q. My husband and I, both 60 years old, plan to retire at 62. We could sell our home, on which there is no mortgage, for $60,000 to $65,000. We own two new cars, one of which we will sell when we retire. We have $40,000 in certificates of deposit, a couple of hundred in a checking account and no debts.

Doyle

The little beach cottage on a large lot we have rented every summer is for sale. The owner will sell it to us for $50,000 — a steal. We will never get a deal like that again. We have always wanted to retire to that area, but never thought we could afford it.

We are thinking of getting a mortgage on our present home and buying the beach cottage now with a $10,000 down payment and making payments until we retire. At that time, we would sell our present home, pay off the mortgage and add a room to the cottage.

We have always lived very cautiously and modestly. Are we crazy for considering this now?

A. You come across as quite sensible. My advice is to go for it, assuming the beach cottage is as good a buy as you say. And you are probably a good judge of that.

But why mortgage your present home? It would be far more sensible to use some of the money you have in CDs as the $10,000 down payment. Better yet, put more money down so your monthly payments will be much lower. Under your plan, you would have two mortgages and a heavy debt load.

Q. My husband and I intend to buy, now, the house to which we will retire in two years. Will we be able to claim a tax break when we sell our present home, even though we will then have owned the retirement house for two years?

A. You'll have a tax advantage, if the retirement home will be your principal residence, if it costs more than the price at which you sell your present home — your principal residence — and if you buy and move into it within two years after or two years before the sale of your present home.

Meet those requirements and the profit from the sale of your present home will be deferred. Miss all or any one of those requirements and that profit will be taxable as a capital gain — unless you qualify for a different tax break.

If either you or your husband is 55 or older at the time you sell the principal residence you have owned and lived in for at least three of the five previous years, you're entitled to a once-in-a-lifetime exclusion from paying federal capital gains on up to $125,000 of the profit from that sale.

That once-in-a-lifetime exclusion comes in especially handy for older folks who buy less expensive homes or move into rental quarters at retirement time.

The deferral of tax when a more expensive home is purchased can be used many times, usually by younger people who need bigger houses as their children grow in size and number.

Q. My wife and I plan to sell our home and use the profit to start a business. Of course, because so much of that money will go into the business, this also means we will be buying a smaller, less expensive house.

Considering the fact that we will use the money to start a small business, can we defer or somehow avoid the capital gains tax even though we are both younger than 55?

A. Not unless you cheat on your income tax return. Try that and you most likely will be nabbed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Even though starting up a small business with the profit from the sale of your home is a worthwhile endeavor and the kind of thing that makes America great, there is no provision in the Internal Revenue Code allowing you to defer or escape tax on the profit from that sale.

Your profit will be the difference between the proceeds from the sale and your "basis" — cost for tax purposes. The basis is your original purchase price plus the cost of all additions and improvements.

Meridian Oil Inc. has completed two flowing wells in the Keystone, South (Penn) field. Both locations are eight miles east of Kermit.

The No. 412 Keystone Cattle Company is a 8,270 ft. well located at 8000 ft. from south and 5250 ft. from west lines of section 28, block B2, PSL survey.

The well was completed January 26, 1991 and potentialed five days later flowing 263 barrels of oil per day, 190 Mcf per day and 26 barrels of water per day at a gas/oil ration of 722:1. A 23/64 inch choke was used with the flowing tubing pressure at 160 psi. A 5 1/2 inch casing was set at 8270 feet with perforations at 7898 to 8220. 3,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL, 55,000 gals gel and 174,700 pounds of 20/40 sand were used on the well. Formation tops were: Rustler 1100, Mississippian 7780, Yates 2618, and top of pay was 7898.

The No. 418 Keystone Cattle Company is a 7,862 ft. well located at 8100 ft. from south and 6100 ft. from west lines of section 1, block B6, PSL survey.

This well was completed February 2, 1991 and potentialed two days later flowing 139 barrel of oil per day, 250 Mcf per day and 29 barrels of water per day at a gas/oil ration of 1800:1. A 10/64 inch choke was used with the flowing tubing pressure at 400 psi and API at 39.8. A 5 1/2 inch casing was set at 7862 with perforations at 6890 to 7266. 9,000 gals of 20 percent HCL was used and formation tops were: Rustler 1112, Wichita-Albany 6624, Yates 2595. PRICING: Speech said sign of frustration go out of business.

Lay said already about 3,000 independent producers have left the industry since 1985 and others are in peril if current pricing patterns continue.

"Independents historically have drilled 80 percent to 85 percent of exploratory wells in this country," Lay said. "For whatever reason – whether it's intentional or unintentional – the result is the same: The independent producers are going out of business."

Lay said he is convinced the pricing policies that are driving these companies out of business are not malicious.

Rather, he said, there is a lack of communication inside the industry's largest corporations.

Employees responsible for finding more gas reserves, and those charged with marketing that production, often do not talk to each other, Lay said.

As a result, major companies are continuing to aggressively sell gas at a time when the glut on the market is driving down prices.

Recently, the executive said, that trend has started to ease, as large companies have begun shutting in, or temporarily capping, gas wells until prices improve.

Lay said he is not calling for an investigation into cutthroat pricing, because any negative effects on the market have been unintentional.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Justice on Wednesday said the agency had no comment on Lay's remarks.

Mike Waters, a spokesman for the Natural Gas Supply Association, said the shakeout in the gas industry has been unfortunate, but is to be expected when an industry goes through such a wrenching decline.

"It's a cold, hard economic fact," Waters said. "The natural gas industry is in a depression."

RATINGS: Big 3 angered

ficult and expensive for the company to borrow money. S&P is one of two major credit-rating agencies. The other is Moody's Investors Service Inc.

S&P said it was concerned with the automakers' abilities to cope in what has become a difficult environment for the Big Three. Sales have sagged since early 1990, with the national recession and Persian Gulf War compounding their problems.

On Tuesday, the U.S. automakers reported that January sales of cars and trucks fell 29.9 percent. Sales of vehicles with Japanese nameplates fell 18.8 percent.

"Apart from the industrywide intensification of competition, we believe that each of the Big Three companies is also meeting with setbacks in carrying out strategies to cope with intensifying competition," S&P spokesman Scott Sprinzenat said.

The downturn in the industry, he said, "is particularly inopportune for Chrysler because Chrysler has relied heavily over the past few years on speciality products," mainly Jeeps and minivans, for profits.

"Both of these products," Sprinzenat said, "are subject now to intensified competition."

Wednesday's action follows Moody's decision Tuesday to put Ford securities on its "watch" list, where Chrysler has been since Jan. 28. Moody's auto analyst Carol Verschell said Wednesday she expected the agency would decide by the end of the month whether to change the company's ratings. GM, she said, is not under review.

More clues as to the automakers' health are due in coming days. Chrysler planned to issue 1990 fourth-quarter and year-end financial statements today, while GM and Ford were expected to report their results next week.

Combined, the Big Three were expected to report $1.7 billion in red ink for the final three-month period of last year. It would be the worst quarterly financial report in the automakers' history.

Consumer credit drop surprises some experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer credit fell at an annual rate of 2.3 percent in December, the steepest decline in nearly four years, the Federal Reserve said Thursday. The report surprised analysts, because December usually is a busy shopping month.

Economist Sandra Shaber of the Futures Group in Washington cited consumer fears about the economy. "We have lost a million jobs since June," she noted. "Wage rates are way behind inflation. In many areas, the values of homes are declining. People are worried about the banking situation."

As so, she continued, "people are not buying much of anything and therefore are not using their credit cards."

Economist Bill Wood of Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass., said the decline would not have been so unexpected in January, usually a slow time for retailers and other store owners.

"It does not bode well for January," he said, suggesting that month's credit report could be worse because of the added element of concern over the start of the Persian Gulf war.

The Fed said consumer installment debt dropped a seasonally adjusted $1.45 billion, the first decline since a 0.2 percent dip in February 1989 and the sharpest fall since a 5.2 percent drop in February 1987.

For the year, credit growth slowed to just 3.1 percent, down from 6 percent in 1989 and 8.5 percent in 1988. November's 4.5 percent growth was stronger than the 2.8 percent gain first reported, however.

Consumer credit includes all consumer loans except mortgages and home-equity debt. Total consumer spending represents about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Only automobile loans increased in December. All other types of consumer debt, including credit card debt, declined in the month that included the bulk of Christmas shopping.

Auto loans, which had fallen for six months until a slight 0.3 percent gain in November, rose another 3.3 percent, or a seasonally adjusted $786 million, in December.

Bank and credit card union loans not secured by real estate fell 1.2 percent, or $219 million, after a 7.3 percent advance a month earlier.

Home sales sink to six-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes sank 5.5 percent in the final three months of 1990 to the lowest quarterly level in six years, as potential buyers were deterred by worries over the economy and the Persian Gulf crisis, a real estate trade group said Wednesday.

Those concerns, combined with higher mortgage rates earlier in the year, depressed sales for all of 1990 to 3.61 million units, according to surveys by the National Association of Realtors.

That was a 4.5 percent drop from 1989 and the lowest number of sales since 3.49 million in 1985, the Realtors said.

The Realtors reported that sales in October, November and December totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.42 million units, the smallest since a 3.03 million rate in the same quarter of 1984.

New home sales suffered similarly last year, the Commerce Department reported earlier.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, struggling to extend the rally of the past several weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 25 points at midsession, was down 4.21 at 826.73 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 990 up, 585 down and 422 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were cashing in some of their gains after the sharp advance that has carried the Dow Jones industrials nearly 15 percent higher since early January.

The rally has begun to attract widespread publicity, prompting some Wall Streeters to conclude that it might be due for at least a temporary pause.

But the news about interest rates and the progress of the war in the Persian Gulf still seemed to be going generally in the bulls' favor.

Interest rates wavered uncertainly in the credit markets today as the Treasury neared completion of a quarterly auction of $34.5 billion in bonds and notes, which has been met with strong demand.

Waste Management gained ⅞ to 42. The company reported fourth-quarter earnings of 40 cents a share, up from 33 cents in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Among actively traded blue chips, Exxon rose 1⅜ to 54¼; General Motors gained ¾ to 36⅛; Philip Morris was unchanged at 59, and General Electric fell 1½ to 65⅛.

Volume on the Big Board came to 221.61 million shares with two hours to go.

California farmers desperate

By John Wildermuth
New York Times News Service

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — In parts of drought-ravaged Kern County, farmers have given up worrying about saving their crops. Now they're worried about saving their livelihoods.

"I don't know how it can get any worse," said Jim Crettol, whose family farms about 2,400 acres in the Shafter-Wasco area northwest of Bakersfield. "We've had a drought, a freeze, soaring energy costs and now a water cutoff. What else is left?"

Crettol, at least, knows he will be in business next year, because he and his neighbors can tap the region's dwindling groundwater supply to irrigate their crops.

But in the west end of the county, which has thousands of acres of fruit trees, nut trees and grapevines and no usable groundwater, the forecast is grim.

Kern County, with 850,000 acres of farmland, fears that it is about to become the first major economic casualty of the five-year drought.

The state's decision last Monday to cut off all water deliveries to growers is a disaster for one of the nation's richest farming areas.

The situation here is being monitored closely around the state. Other Central Valley counties have water this year, but if the drought continues, many believe that what is happening in Kern County will be a harbinger for water consumers for years to come.

No one knows for sure what the drought and cut in water supplies will cost Kern County, but some of the initial estimates are devastating.

In 1989, the most recent year the county agricultural commissioner has charted, farmers produced about $1.6 billion worth of crops, making it the state's third leading agricultural county.

A report prepared for the Kern County Water Agency by Robert McKusick, an agricultural economist, estimated that the county's direct crop revenue could drop by $393 million if the water situation does not improve.

In addition, the many businesses that support agriculture — farm machinery companies, crop dusters, pesticide firms and a host of others — could lose $188 million in sales and revenues.

The water cutbacks could cost the county 11,600 jobs, both on and off the farms, along with the $241 million in income those jobs bring in.

San Joaquin Valley grower Fred Starrh wonders how he will save his almond orchard now that the state water he had depended on has been cut off following five years of drought in California. Starrh has no access to well water for irrigation.

Five Kern County water districts serving more than 200,000 acres of farmland get all their water from the California Aqueduct. "One hundred percent of our water comes from the state," said Ron Khachigian, president of the Barrenda Mesa Water District.

"As of today, our allocation is zero."

Fred Starrh, who raises cotton in one of those districts, succinctly described the situation last week to the State Water Resources Control Board.

"If farmers in these districts receive no water in 1991," he warned, "they will be wiped out."

It was the State Water Project that transformed the sagebrush-dotted desert along Interstate 5 into lush, green farmland beginning with the first deliveries in 1968.

Land that was once fit only for jackrabbits and rattlesnakes now blooms with orchards and vineyards made possible by the promise of relatively cheap water from Northern California.

In Barrenda Mesa, west of Interstate 5, 30,000 of the district's 37,000 acres are planted in permanent crops, such as pistachios, almonds, pecans, apples and grapes. Without water, those orchards could die. It would take at least three years to replace them.

The state's decision last Monday to cut off all water deliveries to growers is a disaster for one of the nation's richest farming areas.

"We're not even talking about getting out a crop," said Khachigian. "We're beating the bushes to try and find enough water to keep (the trees) alive."

Farther south, near Wheeler Ridge at the foot of the Grapevine, Peter Pankey is drastically scaling back his crops. He plans to use any water he can get for the garlic and carrots he already planted and for his apple trees.

"Even before the water cutoff, I had figured on half my land being fallow this year," he said. "Now the numbers show that may not be enough."

Pankey will not be the only farmer taking land out of production. County agriculture experts estimate that as much as 200,000 acres of Kern County farmland might not be planted for at least part of the year.

Cotton, alfalfa hay and the summer vegetable crops, which require intense irrigation, are likely to take the biggest hits.

"One of our members went from 400 acres of alfalfa down to 20," said Truman Brown, general manager of the Kern County Hay Growers Association. "A lot of folks are just going to raise alfalfa until the water runs out and then let the fields go dormant."

Local banks also are forcing the farmers to cut back by putting tough restrictions on the crop loans that are the mainstay of the agriculture industry.

"Unless you can prove you've got the water supply, the banks don't even want to talk to you," said Pankey.

Not all farmers in the state or even the San Joaquin Valley are affected equally by the drought.

For example, San Joaquin farmers in Westlands, where cotton is the major crop, are not hurt by the state cuts because they get their irrigation water from a different source, the federal Central Valley Project.

Although farmers supplied by the Central Valley Project are also expecting huge reductions soon, most have wells that can see them through a fifth dry year.

Boy Scouts are short on leaders

N.Y. Times News Service

MOUNT VERNON, N.Y. — Douglas Gordon is an Eagle Scout who didn't know he was missing. Neither did Gordon Andrew. And Peter Ruhlin still doesn't know it. They have been living normally all these years, suspecting nothing.

But now authorities from their childhood have tracked down these men and hope that they, along with about 9,997 other missing Eagle Scouts in the area, will help solve an acute crisis in the New York region for the Boy Scouts of America.

The crisis in this venerable institution is not a shortage of boys willing to wear shorts, salute with three fingers and memorize the 12 points of Scout Law.

There are, in fact, too many who seek such a structured ladder of socially acceptable achievement these days, even in New York City, where to many minds the sight of a teen-ager's hand reaching out for an elderly woman's elbow at a crosswalk does not bring to mind a daily good deed.

The Boy Scout crisis is instead a shortage of adults willing to donate their own precious time to become troop leaders, assistant leaders, merit badge counselors and general role models.

The Boy Scouts have made adjustments. After at least one lawsuit, women can now be scoutmasters. Troop and pack meetings, once confined to immediate post-school hours, often convene at 8 p.m. or even on weekends. And there are lessons on drug and sexual abuse.

Still, several thousand New York-area youths are on Scout waiting lists eager to begin climbing the Tenderfoot achievement ladder but unable to because there are no adult leaders. With one adult needed for every eight youngsters, that makes for a lot of missing leaders.

Where better to look for Scout leaders than among former Scouts? More precisely from the 1.3 million American Scouts who have completed the 21 steps on the trail to Eagle rank, which include demonstrations of troop leadership.

So the Greater New York Councils of the Boy Scouts are in the midst of a hunt for the 10,000 Eagle Scouts they estimate live around here. They've been on radio.

They've written known Eagle Scouts urging them to turn in others. The councils got a notice in the newsletter for Metro-North's 100,000 train riders. The letter told Eagle Scouts to phone 1-800-3EAGLE-0.

So far, 4,236 have. The typical profile: a married college graduate between age 30 and 40 working as a professional in Manhattan but living in the suburbs. Like Gordon Andrew of Fairfield, Conn., and Douglas Gordon here.

Now a civil engineer selling custom air-conditioners, Gordon was once a leader of Troop 104 in Jefferson City, Mo. He found scouting invaluable in learning values in a structured environment, and he hopes his 18-month-old son will some day seek the same scouting satisfaction.

Andrew belonged to Troop 103 in West Hartford, Conn.

The owner of his own company, who still keeps his Eagle's certificate framed on the wall, he credits much of his self-confidence and goal-orientation to self-discipline and successes he learned in eight years of scouting.

NATION IN BRIEF

Airline fare war escalates

NEW YORK (AP) — Northwest Airlines scrapped a planned $15-per-ticket surcharge Thursday when rivals refused to go along amid an escalating fare war sparked by America West Airlines' half-price sale.

"It's been dropped," Northwest spokeswoman Christy Clapp said. "It would be difficult from a competitive standpoint for us to fill seats if our fares were $15 higher."

Northwest announced the surcharge Monday, saying it was needed to offset higher costs resulting from the Persian Gulf War. But Ms. Clapp said Northwest executives abandoned the idea when other airlines balked at doing the same. The surcharge was to have been effective Friday.

At the same time, American Airlines said Thursday evening it was expanding its own half-price sale beyond the territory where it competes with America West.

The America West promotion was branded a harmful fire sale by competitors. But by late Thursday nearly every major airline had matched it.

America West said it was trying to "jump start" the depressed air travel industry by selling half-price tickets through Saturday to any of its destinations, for travel good through Jan. 5. Some travel agents said their phones were ringing wildly Thursday, but analysts and competitors doubted the promotion would do much to help the sick industry.

FDIC funds dwindle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dwindling fund backing bank deposits may have to borrow $15 billion, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman suggested Thursday.

Testifying before the House Budget Committee, Seidman said the fund, which has handled more than 1,000 bank failures over the past six years, has enough cash to "handle losses through late 1991 without any new legislation."

After that, Congress may have to ease restrictions which limit the FDIC's borrowing authority, he said. Currently, the agency's borrowing from the public and banking industry is limited by its health and ability to repay.

An alternative, he said, is to increase the corporation's so-far-unused credit line at the Treasury. If used, this would amount to a loan from the taxpayers.

The agency is financed by premiums paid by banks according to the deposits they hold.

The bank insurance fund has lost money for three consecutive years, Seidman said.

Martin to fill labor post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, by a vote of 94-0, on Thursday confirmed Lynn Martin as secretary of labor, filling one of the four vacancies created by the midterm shuffle in President Bush's Cabinet.

Martin

Martin, 51, will probably be sworn in within the next few days and start her day-to-day duties at the Labor Department next week, said an aide.

Martin's quick confirmation, following a few brief moments of praise — not debate — on the Senate floor, again puts a woman in the Cabinet. Martin fills a post vacated by Elizabeth Dole, who resigned to head the American Red Cross.

A former five-term Republican congresswoman from Illinois, Martin was saluted as a street-smart politician who knew the ways of Congress and could hold her own at the White House.

Statehouse to close

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Rhode Island's state government will be shut down for one day every two weeks under an order issued Thursday by Gov. Bruce G. Sundlun, who is struggling to eliminate a $204 million budget deficit.

Residents in at least five other states have been warned statehouse doors could be shut as furloughs become a popular budget-balancing option for the 1990s.

State workers aren't especially fond of the idea, but the alternative is even less palatable.

"I just don't want to lose the job," Joe Monteiro, a 50-year-old janitor in a state office building, said as he smoked the last inch of a cigarette during his lunch break. "A cut in pay — at least you know you got security."

Rhode Island's plan would mean a 10 percent pay reduction for employees, who would lose a day of pay every two weeks.

Firm won't ship wastes

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Colorado power company that planned to ship radioactive waste to a federal laboratory in Idaho over the objections of Gov. Cecil Andrus said Thursday it had postponed the shipments.

The Denver-based utility, Public Service Co., wrote a letter to the Idaho State Police, saying the planned shipment had been postponed indefinitely.

The brief letter came just two hours after Andrus reiterated his plans to seek a court order blocking the shipments and deploy state police at the Idaho border to turn back any trucks carrying radioactive waste.

"It will never come into Idaho," Andrus said earlier. "I have a whole bunch of lawyers working to stop this legally. I have a whole fleet of black-and-whites to do it at the border if it becomes necessary."

The U.S. Energy Department had authorized the shipments and said the waste from the Fort St. Vrain nuclear reactor in Colorado could be sent to Idaho as early as Sunday.

2 defendants acquitted

NEW YORK (NYT — Two of the last three defendants in what has become known as the Bensonhurst murder case were acquitted Thursday in another blow to the prosecution in the racially charged case.

Plagued by problems, including uncooperative witnesses, the Brooklyn prosecutors have conducted a series of trials under intense scrutiny.

Of seven defendants who have been tried on charges stemming from the killing of Yusuf K. Hawkins in 1989, one was convicted of murder, three were convicted of lesser charges and three were acquitted of all charges.

Acquitted Thursday of all charges were Charles Stressler and Steven Curreri.

Stressler faced 12 charges, including murder, manslaughter, menacing, riot and possessing a baseball bat as a weapon. Curreri was charged with riot and weapons possession.

The case began on the evening of Aug. 23, 1989, when the 16-year-old black youth was surrounded by a group of bat-wielding whites and shot to death as he and three black friends walked through the Bensonhurst neighborhood to look at a used car for sale.

Hotel evicts honeybees

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Clues have been evident for weeks that the bees bugging guests at the Valley Hilton hotel in suburban Sherman Oaks were more than a nuisance.

A wall in the garage, for example, was hot to the touch and began to bulge from some unseen pressure.

When beekeeper Simon Sharf knocked a hole in the wall Thursday, he found a large beehive, weighing more than 100 pounds and oozing with thick, sweet honey.

"The honeycomb was in a 7-foot-by-36-inch section of the wall, and it's been there for over two years," Sharf said. "It takes that long to build and the honeycombs were very dark, meaning the bees reused it over and over."

While guests and hotel workers watched from a respectful distance, Sharf worked more than five hours to remove a queen and most of the 35,000 worker bees from the hive.

A hotel chef was standing by to claim the honey — about 40 pounds worth.

"It's the purest you can get. That's Mother Nature," said Rudy Garcia, chef of the hotel's Orion Cafe, where he planned to offer the honey to guests.
