Joint defense efforts by U.S., Japan urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning of a dangerous buildup of Soviet forces in Northeast Asia and of Japanese defenses that "fall short," a panel of prominent Japanese and American advisers today urged their governments to start developing high-tech weapons together.

The U.S.-Japan Advisory Commission, ending a 16-month study ordered by the leaders of both countries, cited Soviet missile strength that is expected to increase dramatically matched against "inadequate" Japanese defenses, in its recommendations to President Reagan and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

The group also urged Japan to devise a more positive, long-term strategy for easing U.S.-Japanese economic tensions.

"An unacceptable level of friction is eroding good will and mutual trust between the two countries," the commission said in a 109-page report being presented to Reagan and Cabinet officials at the White House.

The 15-member commission, formed after a 1983 Reagan-Nakasone summit meeting in Washington, was headed by David Packard, chairman of Hewlett-Packard Inc., a leading computer firm, and Nobuhiko Ushiba, former Japanese state minister for external economic affairs.

Their report said that "in an era when technology can make decisive contributions to the development of new defense systems, Japan and the United States — as the world's two technological leaders — should vigorously pursue research and development collaboration."

"It makes sense to combine such Japanese strengths as state-of-the-art electronics, telecommunications, and maintenance and production techniques with such American skills as systems engineering and (computer) software," the report said.

It said, "Soviet air, naval and ground forces in East Asia have been modernized; 135 late-model SS-20 intermediate-range missiles (expected to increase dramatically by 1990) have been deployed; and over 70 Backfire bombers and a new generation of fighters are stationed in the Asian theater."

The Soviet Pacific fleet, it said, has become the largest unit in the Soviet navy, totalling more than 800 ships — including 89 major surface combatants and at least 125 submarines, about 30 of them armed with ballistic missiles.

In the face of this potential threat, "Japanese capabilities fall short of the missions it has undertaken" in protecting Japan's territory and airspace as well as defense of Western Pacific sea lanes.

On economic issues, the advisory commission found that although Japan has made unilateral trade concessions in recent years, the difficulties that American firms still find in marketing goods in Japan, "call into question Japan's commitment to free or fair trade."

"Japan needs to develop stronger mechanisms to ensure that (trade) commitments are given, they are implemented fully and on schedule."

Among the other members of the commission were Donald Rumsfeld, former defense secretary, Douglas A. Fraser, former president of the United Auto Workers, former Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita and Akio Morita, chairman of Sony Corp.

Chamber elects directors

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce has announced the election of seven new directors to serve three-year terms beginning Oct. 1.

The ballots were canvassed Friday by the Canvassing Committee of the Chamber.

The following were elected: Bob Chambers, manager of Alco Discount Store; Bill Duncan, manager of the Pampa office of Security Federal Savings and Loan Co.; Louise Fletcher, publisher of The Pampa News; Ronald Hess, owner of W. B. Pump and Supply Co.; Doug Lockwood, manager of the Pampa plant of Cabot Corp.; Brent Stephens, maintenance and engineering manager of Celanese Chemical Corp.; and Richard Stowers, sales manager of Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet Co.

The above newly elected directors and three directors appointed to a one-year term by the incoming president will join with the 14 directors who have one or more years left on their term to form the new board of directors for the chamber.

The new officers and directors will be installed at a banquet in early October. The gavel will be passed to the new president at the annual meeting on Thursday, Oct. 18.

Committee chairmen will be selected in November, with committee members selected in November and December. The new committees will begin their terms on Jan. 1, 1985.

Interest rates going down?

WASHINGTON (AP) — High interest rates, one of the few economic negatives President Reagan has to worry about in this election year, could be headed lower soon, many economists are predicting.

The reason: a string of business barometers showing the economy is slowing and various indications that the Federal Reserve Board is loosening its grip on the money supply.

The administration has worried since the beginning of the year that the nation's central bank and its chairman, Paul Volcker, would clamp down too hard on the money supply because of the robust expansion the country has been enjoying.

During the first six months of this year, there were indeed signs that the nation's economy was threatening to overheat and rekindle inflation as growth spurred ahead at an annual rate of 8.9 percent — far above anyone's expectations.

But last week, new statistics showed that this growth has slowed substantially and inflation is remaining well in check.

The government reported Friday that retail sales fell in August for the second month in a row and the nation's industrial output registered its smallest gain in nine months. On the inflation front, prices at the wholesale level actually declined 0.1 percent in August and were rising for the year at a rate of only 2.4 percent.

Because of these and earlier signs of a slowdown, analysts are now saying the Fed has probably already loosened credit conditions somewhat and further easing is expected.

"The Fed has been somewhat more accommodating in the last 10 days, correcting an overtight policy that occurred in midsummer," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American Express.

Jack Carlson, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, said the Fed was "suddenly shifting gears again. While over the spring and summer the concern was of an overheating economy, the concern now is that the economy is cooling too quickly."

To bolster their view that the Fed has eased, analysts point to statistics released Thursday showing that borrowings by banks and savings institutions from the Fed declined significantly in the last two weeks. The easier the Fed policy, the less banks have to borrow from the central bank to meet reserve requirements.

"The Fed is more accommodative," said Donald Ratajczak, forecaster at Georgia State University, who predicted further easing based on the latest economic statistics.

Carlson noted that the average three-month Treasury bill rate fell to 10.31 percent last week, down 32 percentage points since Sept. 4 with Treasury bond rates showing similar slight declines.

MISS YOUR PAPER?

Call The Pampa News office, 669-2525, between 5 and 7 p.m. weekdays, 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. on Sunday.

In the early morning hours of July 23, 1980, at the residence of 220 North Gillespie, a fire of unknown origin broke out. The fire spread quickly, trapping Jewel Hawthorne, a 74-year-old citizen, inside the house. She lost her life.

Police investigation has determined that the fire was an arson. Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 to anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for the murder of Jewel Hawthorne.

Anyone having information regarding this arson and murder, or any other crime, please call Pampa Crime Stoppers at 669-2222. Rewards are available for other crimes not in this announcement.

City meetings

City commission slates two meetings

The Pampa City Commission will have two special called meetings this week on ordinances setting the property tax rate and amending water, sewer and waste collection rates.

The commissioners will meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday to consider on first reading an ordinance setting the property tax rate at 65 cents per $100 valuation. Also to be considered on first reading is an ordinance amending water service rates.

The commission will meet again at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday to consider both ordinances on second reading.

The commissioners also will give second readings to ordinances amending water service tapping fees, sanitary sewer fees, and residential and commercial solid waste collection fees.

Also on second reading will be an ordinance amending Section V of Ordinance 935 on water service rates and an ordinance adopting the operating budget for fiscal year 1984-1985.

The proposed tax rate and a $1 raise each for the water, sewer and waste collection fees are designed to raise an additional $687,000 in revenues toward the operating budget.

The new budget will increase from $7.7 million to $8.3 million.

School board to hold tax hearing

The trustees of the Pampa Independent School District will meet twice Tuesday evening, once for a public hearing on a proposed property tax increase and then for its regular meeting.

The public hearing on a proposed 12.8 percent tax hike will begin at 5 p.m. at the Carver Educational Services Center. The proposed rate is 70 cents per $100 valuation, an 8 cents increase over last year's rate. After the public hearing is closed, the school board will reconvene at 5:30 p.m.

Agenda items include a budget report, the appointment of an authorized representative for the national school lunch and child nutrition programs, first reading of revised policies, a possible personnel executive session and payment of due bills and invoices.

Differences remain as auto talks recess

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. bargained for 19 hours before recessing contract talks this morning to take a one-day break, with the union reporting progress but saying that "significant" differences remain.

Twelve UAW locals, 11 of them at final assembly plants, remained on strike today over local issues. GM officials feared the strikes would leave parts plants with nowhere to ship their products.

The union issued a statement at 5 a.m. saying "significant differences remain between the parties on the principal issues." Chief among those are job security and wages.

The local strikes put 62,000 workers on the street in nine states at midnight Friday. That number fell to 58,000 Sunday when a California plant settled its strike.

The lengthy bargaining session — which began at 10 a.m. Sunday and ran through the night with only a few breaks for meals — suggested the two sides were making progress toward a tentative agreement covering 350,000 UAW workers at GM.

The union statement, issued by UAW President Owen Bieber and chief bargainer Donald Ephlin, said, "We made some progress during that period."

A source close to the negotiations said much still was unresolved on job security — the UAW's demand that its workers jobs be protected from GM moves to shift production of components and cars to non-union or foreign shops.

Big tentative national agreement would go to union members for ratification after approval by the UAW's 300-member GM Council. The national contract would replace one that expired Friday.

The UAW has agreed to keep working without a contract during negotiations, except for strikes over local issues.

Balloonist near coast

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Joe W. Kittinger neared the French coast today in his quest to be the first man to cross the Atlantic alone in a balloon, and spokesmen said he might take advantage of good weather to "head on down" to the Mediterranean.

The 56-year-old decorated Vietnam War pilot was floating about 300 miles from the coast of France at about 35 mph at 5:30 a.m. EDT today, said Jim Serna, a weatherman at the backup team's headquarters at Weather Services Corp. here.

"He's about 380 miles northwest of Bordeaux (France)," Serna said, estimating it would take the helium-filled Rosie O'Grady Balloon of Peace eight or nine more hours to reach France.

Earlier today, the tracking team had reported the 10-story balloon was only 100 miles from Brest, France.

Write-in bid re-ignites Hemphill County race

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — One vote kept Joe Ann Halliburton from winning re-election in the final returns of the June run-off for Hemphill County tax assessor-collector.

Now she says that wasn't enough.

Halliburton is again campaigning for re-election, this time as a write-in candidate in the November general election. She announced her re-candidacy Monday by filing her declaration of intention with Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober.

Halliburton and bank employee Gladene Woodside were involved the closest race of the June run-off election. In first returns, Halliburton defeated the challenger by two votes: 324 to 322. Woodside called for a recount. The results reversed themselves by giving Woodside the one-vote victory: 324 to 323.

The incumbent did not contest the results at the time.

She did express dismay at the small turn-out at the run-off that was held June 6, the same day of the annual cow-calling contest in nearby Miami.

It is the slim margin by the small turn-out that is motivating Halliburton's write-in campaign.

"I felt there was only 25 percent of the voters and a margin of only one vote," she said, declaring that she wants a "majority" opinion.

"I had quite a few citizens talk to me about running again," she added. "They seem to feel I had put an awful lot of time in my work."

"I thought of it and on about it. And my family and I discussed it before I made my final decision last week-end," she said.

Despite her run-off bump by Woodside, Halliburton said she is continuing to keep up with current changes in tax laws and other matters. Whoever wins the election will take the oath of office in January.

"I will take my Class III exam (a state test required for certification) whether I win or lose," she said, admitting "you don't ever feel confident about an election."

Woodside said she's "already begun hitting the streets" to make sure her victory will hold up in November.

"I really wasn't surprised. I figured she would," Woodside said of Halliburton's renewed campaign.

Woodside said she will be taking a tax class this month to help in her certification.

Bishop speech tells of plan to deceive the United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it will soon release selected documents captured on Grenada last fall, including a secret speech by the late Prime Minister Maurice Bishop in which he outlined his plan for deceiving the United States into thinking his revolution was non-Marxist.

The speech, stamped "Confidential" by Grenadan authorities, was delivered by Bishop to a closed meeting of his New Jewel Movement on Sept. 13, 1982.

He said that the revolution had established a temporary tactical alliance with bourgeois elements "so that imperialism (the U.S.) won't get too excited and say 'well, they have some nice fellas...everything all right.' And as a result, they wouldn't think about sending in troops."

Bishop said the Grenadan revolution had "more sense" than leftists in Gambia, who staged a coup earlier in 1982 and immediately announced their intention to set up a Marxist-Leninist state.

"The same day, they (the bourgeoisie) overthrew them... They didn't even give them three days," Bishop said.

U.S. officials said the speech, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, is the first item in a long compendium of Grenadan party, state and police papers that the administration plans to release soon. No date has been set as yet.

Bishop led the Grenadan revolution from 1979 until he was executed by leftist opponents on Oct. 19, 1983. Six days later the United States, saying it was worried about the safety of the 700 or so Americans on the island, joined with other friendly Caribbean nations in an invasion that led to the ouster of the post-Bishop government.

The administration described the invasion as a "rescue mission" but officials have acknowledged that the defeat of the Cuban-backed regime was a clear strategic bonus for the United States as well.

Despite Bishop's plan to conceal the revolution's Marxist direction from the United States, the Reagan administration always treated him as a pro-Cuban Marxist.

In Bishop's speech, he emphasized that the alliance with bourgeois elements was tactical.

"They are not part of our dictatorship," he said. "They are not part of our rule and control. We bring them in for what we want to bring them in for."

Mexican oil prices won't rise until 1986

HOUSTON (AP) — Mexico does not plan to change its prices for exported oil to compete with Canada's near deregulation of crude prices, an executive with Mexico's national oil company said.

"The price of gas in Mexico is fairly low. Prices are now at a level we feel is appropriate for the level of production we have achieved now," Mario Ramon Beteta, general director of the Pemex oil company, said Saturday.

Canada recently initiated a system that will allow oil buyers and sellers to negotiate prices for national gas exported to the United States, the only buyer of Mexico's natural gas.

Mexico, which is the United States' largest foreign crude supplier, exported an average of 720,000 barrels of oil per day to the U.S., or 13.3 percent of Mexico's daily imports.

The United States, which is Mexico's largest single customer, receives almost half of Mexico's daily oil exports.

Beteta said Pemex plans to keep producing oil at its current level of 2.75 million barrels a day — a level it has maintained for almost two years.

"That's important not only for us but for the entire world market,"

France and Libya plan to withdraw troops from Chad

PARIS (AP) — France and Libya are to begin a mutual withdrawal of troops from the war-torn central African nation of Chad on Sept. 25, a spokesman for the French Foreign Ministry announced today.

At the request of President Hissene Habre, France sent 3,000 troops to Chad in the summer of 1983 to prevent a military takeover of its former African colony by Libyan and Libyan-backed forces, which began an offensive earlier that year.

Since the French intervention, Chad has

Clerk found after 38 hours

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Authorities say they are looking into a possible connection between two youths who allegedly threatened a 21-year-old clerk and the abduction and assault of the clerk.

Tracy Busker of Seguin was found at 8 p.m. Saturday night lying face down in a gravel parking lot behind a motel in downtown San Antonio.

The woman was abducted early Friday morning after opening the store at about 5:30 a.m. Mrs. Busker — who told police she was beaten — had worked for about five months at the Short Stop convenience store in Seguin, 35 miles northeast of San Antonio, and was responsible for opening each morning.

Authorities said Mrs. Busker was found manacled at her wrists and ankles and was "hysterical and probably in shock" 38 hours after her ordeal began.

The woman said she was blindfolded by her abductors and could only give a brief description of the pair, said police Sgt. Tom Foote.

She was treated for a stab wound below the left shoulder and abdomen pains, and was in fair condition at Medical Center Hospital, he said.

The woman told police her abductors beat her during the ordeal.

Guadalupe County Sheriff Pete Kallies said the woman had complained that two youths threatened on Sept. 5 to assault her. His office was investigating the possibility of a connection between the two incidents, Kallies said.

"I personally feel that this has something to do with the two men that pushed her around last Wednesday after Tracy called the sheriff about their young relatives who stole her billfold," said Kenny Busker, the woman's husband.

Busker said he made his regular "check call" to his wife shortly after 6 a.m. before he left for work, but got no answer.

Busker's mother, Leona Busker, who is also an employee at the convenience store, said when she went to the store about 6:30 a.m., "I saw the door was locked and her car was not there, so I called the manager from the pay phone to have him come out."

Investigator Laverne Taft said Mrs. Busker's purse, cigarettes, and other personal belongings were found inside the store where they are usually kept.

Corrections chief says he can't change prisons alone

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Widespread changes in the Texas prison system will come only with the support of corrections officials at all levels, Texas corrections chief Ray Procnier says.

"It's not my (prison) system," he told about 250 people attending the annual convention of Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants. "I'm just a hired gun they brought in here."

"If there are going to be any permanent and lasting changes in the Texas system it's not going to be just because I want it. It's going to be because every warden, every guard, every prison worker wants it," said Procnier, who took over running Texas prisons in May.

"There are some really fine people in the department," he said at the Saturday convention. "And they don't even know it. I end up being a cheerleader."

Procnier said he is not disturbed at the amount of violence in Texas prisons, where 13 inmates have died and scores more have been stabbed this year.

"I don't like to see it," he said, "but I'm not alarmed at the amount of violence we have. What I'm worried about is what caused a stabbing."

"People getting in fights for normal things in prison don't bother me," he said.

"I would prefer they don't use weapons," he said. "I want to get the weapons out of there. We are going to get more staff and I think it's going to be reduced."

Asked by one conferee how so many weapons make their way into prisons, Procnier said, "The materials are there."

"Looking out in the audience now I can see at least 50 (potential) weapons," he said.

Procnier, in a lengthy question-and-answer session with members of the inmate advocacy group, said he thinks a newly proposed prisoner classification system will reduce violence.

"We're going to try to get those who are going to hurt somebody where they belong," he said. "If you've got all the same type people together you've got a lot less violence."

The prison system has proposed grouping inmates according to size and tendency to violence, with the most belligerent housed in six facilities.

The proposal has yet to be approved by attorneys and federal officials monitoring court-ordered supervision of Texas prisons.

Currently, inmates are classified by age and if they are repeat offenders.

Procnier, who came to Texas from the California corrections department, said the classification of inmates should reduce homosexual rapes in prisons.

"I don't mind sexual molestations if both are 5-foot-2 and weigh 130 pounds. It's when one is 6-foot-5 and weighs 230 and the other is 5-foot-2."

"I don't like this at all. I've known more super violent men that have had that happen to them," he said.

"That's why we want to classify people and put them where they belong. I'm not saying we're going to stop it but it's going to be a rarer thing," he said.

But Procnier cautioned against labeling prisoners as violent.

NAACP is having trouble getting delegates to Cowtown convention

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Some delegates to the NAACP state convention don't want to come to Fort Worth where blacks are not on membership rolls in the city's six private country clubs.

Bert Williams, a black city councilman who represents the city's south side, blames racial discrimination for rejection of his attempts at membership at Woodhaven Country Club.

Williams, an insurance executive, recently was turned down for the second time in 13 months.

"It's disturbing that Fort Worth still has discrimination," Robert Starr, vice president of the Fort Worth and state NAACP, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"We're trying to get people to Fort Worth for the convention. When this (Woodhaven incident) goes out, it hurts our chances. People don't want to come here," Starr said.

After being vetoed for membership in July 1983, Williams tried again this summer. The club's bylaws provide for automatic rejection if five members protest an application. Several of Williams' friends inside the club forced a change in the provision by banding together and opposing other membership applications.

The number of "no" votes required to blackball a potential member was raised to 20.

But Williams was rejected again in August, this time by the 20 or more required votes, according to a letter he received last week.

Starr said "it's extremely interesting" to note the discrimination of the "so-called leaders, your upper crust, your better educated" that make up Fort Worth's country clubs.

The NAACP would involve itself in the matter only upon a vote of its board of directors and only if Williams asks the body to intervene, Starr said.

So far, Williams has led his own battle.

"The NAACP is not out of the question, but we're trying to do something without getting them involved," Williams said. He declined to elaborate.

Last week, Williams called on members of any club that discriminates to resign, and he asked the city to boycott memberships and meetings at any such club.

Williams also asked the city attorney to research a city policy that would prohibit the city from doing business with any company that pays employee or company dues to such clubs.

The owner and manager of Woodhaven Country Club did not return repeated telephone calls in the past week, the Star-Telegram said. Club officials could not be reached Sunday by the Associated Press.

In the past, the newspaper said, they and the club's board of governors absolved themselves of any responsibility for Williams' rejection.

Woman wants $13,800 in back child support, but says $20 fee unfair

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman who wants the state to force her ex-husband to pay $13,800 in back child support payments, but says having to pay a $20 application fee is unfair.

"My children are saying, 'Momma, I'm hungry,' and I've got to pay (Attorney General) Jim Mattox $20 to get my ex-husband to pay me and my kids what he owes us. Why should I have to pay any fee at all? There's no food in the house," Marlene Aylor asked.

The 31-year-old unemployed woman said she collects food stamps, her three children eat free meals at elementary school, and she does not have $20 to spare.

Stan Clements, a spokesman for the attorney general's office, said the woman is required to pay the fee because she is not on welfare, only food stamps.

If contempt-of-court charges are filed against her ex-husband, she could owe the state an additional $225 in legal fees.

Few people gripe about the application fee and the possibility of legal fees because it's still much cheaper than the alternative — "which is hiring your own lawyer,"

Clements said. "We don't ask for anything up front except the $20. And we don't ask for the legal fees unless we win."

Her ex-husband, who she said has not paid child support since 1980, is not required by law to pay anything except his past child support payments.

"If you're talking about fairness, no, it's not really fair that the mother has to pay," Clements said. "But there's no funding for it otherwise."

After giving delinquent parents one month to pay off back child support payments or face court action, Mattox announced earlier this month the beginning of a statewide crackdown to gather overdue child support from negligent spouses.

Tom Laramie, general counsel for the child support enforcement division, said the department is asking judges to force negligent spouses to pay all legal fees and court costs.

If the judge does not award the costs, the attorney general takes 25 percent out of each monthly child support payment the parent receives until the court costs are paid in full.

Mrs. Aylor said paying even $20 is too much for her. Since she knows her former husband is living in the Dallas area, she does not need the attorney general to find him, she said — only to make him pay child support.

"I'm tired of not having what I need to have to support my kids," she told the Austin American-Statesman. "I want to be one of those people Mattox helps. I feel like they should get him to pay what he owes us, and I don't think I should have to pay them to get started on it."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

With these kind of friends....?

It is not difficult to understand why many people (as well as governments) in Latin America might be upset with the policies the United States has applied in the region, though some may be upset for the wrong reasons.

For a quarter of a century, the U.S. government has pumped aid, loans and academic experts into Latin America. The result: debt, inflation and slow growth. By way of contrast, the U.S. government has rather conspicuously not sent foreign aid of late to Japan, Taiwan and some other Asian nations. The result: booming economies.

The problems of debtor nations are compounded by the policies of the International Monetary Fund and other agencies that are supposed to help these nations. The IMF's idea of "fiscal stabilization" usually translates into tax increases. Debtor government under pressure from the IMF to reform in order to be "worthy" of more bailouts generally apply austerity to their people rather than to themselves. Thus the lot of the average persons is made worse.

The best medicine for most Latin American countries would be tax cuts and several cutbacks in government meddling in local economies. Many authorities believe that with such policies Central America could become a model of economic prosperity that would make Hong Kong look like a slum.

Yet the IMF, in designing bailout packages for Jamaica, Argentina, Mexico, and Brazil did not suggest tax cuts. Instead, in the case of Jamaica, it has called for higher taxes on imports and basic consumption items—some of which are already taxed at more than 50 percent.

Worse yet, when Jamaica balked at signing an IMF austerity agreement recently, the U.S. threatened to cut off aid and made plans to train Jamaican bureaucrats in tax enforcement. A more perverse policy—and one virtually guaranteed to enshrine economic backwardness—can hardly be imagined.

If the United States really wants to help the countries of Latin America, perhaps its best policy — short of eliminating its own tariff barriers — would be one of "benign neglect." Countries that face the dubious benefits of U.S. government experts seem to do much better than those upon whom such planners are imposed.

Catholic Church draws line

NEW YORK - One may be pleased or disappointed, according to one's lights, by the Vatican's crisp denunciation of "liberation theology," but there is no excuse for surprise.

Liberation theology was simply a strenuous effort to politicize the Christian faith and harness its resources to the wagon of Marxism. That, it is now clear, the Roman Catholic Church has no intention of permitting. It could not possibly have done so.

I have never heard the fundamental difference between Christ's message and Marx's stated better than it was by the Bishop (then Monsignor) Fulton Sheen, in the course of a sermon on "The Catholic Hour" just before Easter in 1946. At the conclusion of his sermon, Sheen summed up its central point in two pithy sentences: "Basically only two revolutions are possible: a revolution in the nature of society for the benefit of man, and a revolution in the nature of man for the benefit of society. The symbol of the first is the clenched fist, and the symbol of the second is the clasped hands."

Marx, discovering and analyzing what he took to be the "laws of history," saw human life as an unending struggle between rival economic classes, and devised a proposal for ending that struggle and creating in its stead a "classless society" in which social peace would at last prevail. But Jesus, two millennia earlier, understood the nature of man far better. No mere tinkering with society would bring men peace: They would have to tame their own rebellious souls.

It was, and is, a very large order indeed. Fortunately, however, none of us is called upon to deliver all of it: We are each responsible only for our own immortal soul, and there have been many examples to remind us that personal salvation is by no means impossible.

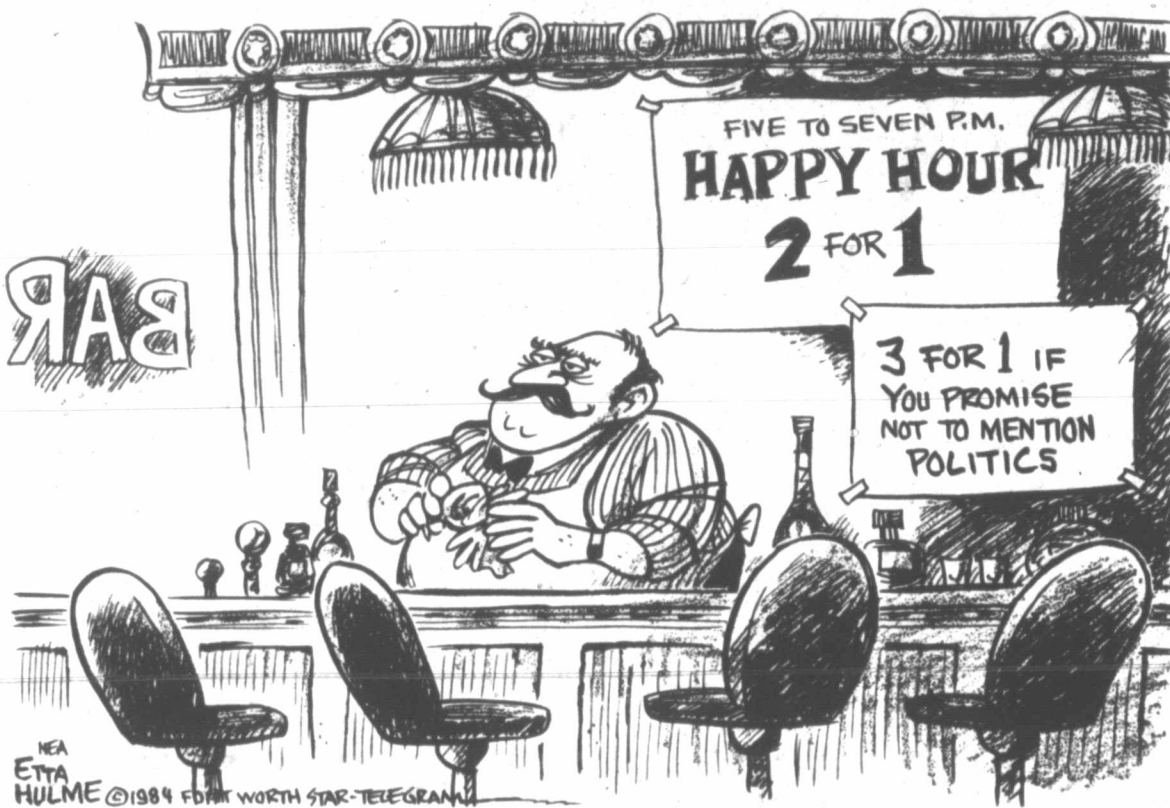

The liberation theologians, humanly preoccupied with the spectacle of grinding poverty, lost sight of this. They knew that Marx's materialism and atheism could not be countenanced by the church, but how about his "tools of analysis" — above all, his concept of a "class struggle"? Wasn't the class struggle simply a fact?

In many areas of the world, something that might be called a class struggle is indeed a fact; but what remains to be determined is how that struggle shall be ended: by the "victory" of one "side" over the other (which solves nothing, and merely sets the stage for future struggles), or by a genuine transformation in the purposes and character of the combatants? For Roman Catholics, the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith has now made unmistakably clear the answer to that question.

It is always dangerous to try to draw narrow political conclusions from explicitly religious positions, but I think it is fair to point out that the doctrine of modern American conservatism is wholly congruent with this outlook. As Paul Johnson pointed out in his splendid book "Modern Times," it was the loss of religious faith, in and following the Enlightenment, that prompted many well-intentioned people to turn to radical politics as an alternative means of improving the human condition. But conservatives understand that political processes, while useful and indeed indispensable as a means of bringing about necessary political change, are useless and often downright harmful if we attempt too much through them.

Almost worse is the leftists' rhetorical trick of co-opting essentially Christian concepts to the service of leftist purposes: extracting taxes from one voting bloc, turning over the proceeds to another, and calling the transaction "compassion," or justifying what amounts to unilateral disarmament in the name of "peace." The message of the gospels is not the San Francisco Democratic platform rewritten in Elizabethan English.

Bert Lance a political victim

When history compiles a category of victims of the "bum rap," high on that list will be Bert Lance.

Caught in political crossfire, he was shot down in 1979. This time he's been shot in the back.

This time he's out as chairman of the Mondale-Ferraro campaign because too many Mondale people who don't even know him don't like him.

Bert Lance was a longtime personal and professional friend of the Jimmy Carters — logical appointee for Budget Director in the Carter administration.

In 1979 he was indicted on 12 charges of bank fraud — dating back to his "loans to friends" during his pre-government years as an Atlanta banker.

Every Southern banker who read the bill of particulars recognized that Bert Lance was guilty of nothing beyond what was "standard banking practice" in those days in that region.

Those practices have since been limited by law — but at the time Bert Lance was practicing "good ol' boy banking" the court agreed that he was guilty of no crime.

Some stigma stuck. You can't unring a bell.

But Bert Lance was unpalatable to Mondale campaigners, not because of any long-ago accusation; he is overtly "guilty of being a Southerner."

Fritz Mondale recognizes his political weakness in the South. That's why, on the advice of Jimmy Carter, he selected Calhoun, Georgia's Bert Lance as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Within hours, under pressure, Mondale modified that title to "General Campaign Chairman."

But within days it was obvious that Lance was not to have even that authority. As campaign chairman he was subservient to Robert Beckel.

Bert Lance, politically keenly astute, when he realized that he was meant to be nothing more than window-trimming for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket, asked to be excused.

Now the Mondale camp is trying to put the best face possible on a very awkward situation.

Aside from the immediate political implications...

Aside from Mr. Mondale's unbecoming ineptness in anticipating his own party...

Aside from accumulating evidence that Mondale flinches when Tip O'Neill says "boo"...

Bert Lance, according to opinion surveys, has a lesser public image than he deserves.

The Lance family, in this generation, will not be out of debt to all the lawyers it took to prove his innocence.

And he will never be out from under the shadow of unerasable headlines. There is no such thing as "not guilty."

What does 'society owe?'

I have in hand a fine epistle, written by a Florida reader, who took me to task because of a recent column I produced on the subject of money. From my critic's point of view, it was not so much what I said but what I did not say that irritated him.

I had explained that money is valuable to the person who has it only because other people will accept it when he wishes to spend it. Thus, if a person had "all the money he wanted, he wouldn't want any more."

Let me quote from my adversary's letter: "The wealthiest people in society want more money, but their want is significantly different from people who are destitute. It is not that the wants of the wealthy are legitimate, but that the wants of the destitute are closer to needs...people having all the money they want is not the point. People having what they 'need' is."

One of the great conceits of our time is the assumption that we know what other people need. This is particularly in evidence among politicians. The term "want," like the term "need," is subjective and relates exclusively to what a given individual is trying to achieve.

If I am trying to swim away from a shipwreck, I may need a raft, a boat, or better skills than I possess. My wants then are virtually identical to my needs. I want to be rescued by others. But is society obligated to save me because of my need?

I'm sure I would be ecstatic if, because of my need, society would come to my rescue. But is society obligated? How about the others in the water? If they cannot save themselves how can they save me? Do they owe me something?

This is precisely the point of my previous column. I was trying to show that many people are indifferent to the reality of their situation.

Of course those with "much" money have different "wants" and "needs" from those with little or none. But how big is "much"? Again, it's a subjective term.

If the man my friend calls wealthy wants and needs more money to build or enlarge the industry he heads, is society obligated to see that he gets it? Here my friend would, I presume, issue a resounding negative.

But wait. What if that individual with no worries about his next meal, can't get the money he needs to enlarge or build the industry, and some 500 jobs will not exist? And that many persons will not become self-supporting?

Is it better to reduce our well-to-do industrial executive to a place where he is also worried about his next meal, so that 500 persons in that predicament may have their wants — needs handled for a few years at his expense? Or would it be better for him to get the money he needs for his investment, so that 500 can become self-supporting?

Perhaps the executive was once destitute. Through his willingness to work and to handle his money well (and, perhaps, luck), he improved his situation. Now if you (acting for society) take it away, the opportunity for any of us to succeed becomes bleak, indeed.

If a person is to move from the ranks of the destitute to the ranks of those well-off, the only reasonable course of action is to permit it. If not, no one will be well-off.

Like the passengers on the ill-fated ship that sank, who will save us all when we are equally in over our heads?

My friend included this statement: "Are you suggesting nothing can be done about the destitute, that they should accept their lot in life?"

I am strongly in favor of having each individual make maximum effort to improve his lot in life. I believe that my friend shares this view. But if that is the case, we do wrong when we encourage government to take (in the form of taxes) from those who have, to give to those who have not.

Those who have, in the main, earned it by voluntary (and fortunate) effort and action. If the rewards they amass are taken by force, because of the needs — wants of others, why should anyone make such an effort again?

If my friend is truly concerned about the destitute, I have a suggestion. I suspect that within a few miles of his domicile are those who are needy by his standards. Let him take from his plenty and ease their burden. No one will prevent it.

The greatest kindness is to realize that true obligations are made by individuals on a voluntary basis, and that "society" owes nothing to anyone.

Understanding life's rhythms key to basic human functions

EDITOR'S NOTE — One scientist describes it as like a fine Swiss watch, an inner clock that synchronizes itself to outside cues and controls the body's cycles. Some students of this concept, called chronobiology, say a better understanding of how it works could help solve a number of problems from cancer to jet lag and even improve the performance of Olympic athletes.

NEW YORK (AP) — The sun rises and sets, tides ebb and flow, years come and go. Life on Earth evolves among these rhythms of the planet.

Some scientists today believe that understanding such ancient, natural rhythms is the key to understanding basic human function — and to making improvements in such diverse areas as athletics, factory shift work and treatment of cancer and other diseases.

Scientists studying "chronobiology" say life forms — from one-celled animals to man — adopted the natural cycles of Earth long ago to control a wide range of bodily functions.

"Anything that is alive has a rhythm," says Erna Halberg, a researcher at the Chronobiology Laboratories of the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. Even flies and giant algae show cycles about a week long in their physiology, says her husband, Dr. Franz Halberg, laboratory director. Far from being a human invention, "The week is built into you and me," he says.

Chronobiology differs from "biorhythms," which are supposed to reveal physical, emotional and intellectual cycles based on date of birth. Instead, chronobiology is based on four basic cycles — lasting about a day, week, month and year — that co-exist in a complicated but synchronized pattern. Natural origins have been proposed for all but the week-long cycle, whose beginnings remain a mystery.

In humans, the cycles show up in "just about every single physiological thing that can be measured," says John Pauly, an anatomy professor at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. Chronobiologists cite cycles of about 24 hours in body temperature, blood pressure, alertness, blood cell counts and other bodily characteristics.

Whatever the inner mechanism is, it synchronizes itself to outside cues, like a watch being reset each day. A major cue is the daylight-darkness cycle, another is societal routine.

When the timing of cues is abruptly changed — as when a traveler crosses several time zones in a single flight — the inner rhythms can get out of whack, like an out-of-tune engine. That produces jet lag, Pauly said. Though the environmental cues for a population are about the same, people do respond differently. Some do their best work early in the morning and others peak at night. Chronobiologists haven't figured out why yet, Pauly says, but further study might help people find work appropriate to their cycles.

Czeisler also is trying to find out how athletes can best preserve their abilities for competition in vastly different time zones, a common experience for world-class athletes.

Another application of chronobiological studies may come in cancer treatment. At the University of Minnesota, cancer specialist Dr. William Hrushesky is investigating how the performance of powerful cancer drugs varies with the time they are given.

Cancer drugs have serious side effects, including damage to the heart, bone marrow, kidneys, gut and nerves, and vomiting and loss of hair. Hrushesky wants to find ways to get the best benefit from them while minimizing those drawbacks.

The body's response to such drugs varies through the day because of cycles in processes such as cell division and elimination of the drugs from the bloodstream, Hrushesky says. So far, his tests indicate that properly scheduled chemotherapy can minimize side effects while maintaining effectiveness against cancer, he says.

Standard chemotherapy is not based on the time of day, and Hrushesky believes most hospitals couldn't handle many cancer patients under precise timetables if timing turns out to be critical. But rather than increasing health care costs by hiring more hospital staff, he says, the best solution would be automatic pumps that can be worn or implanted. The pumps could be programmed to administer the drug at the best times, he said.

Drug therapy for many other illnesses probably will be affected by chronobiology, says Dr. Donald R. Bennett of Chicago, associate director of the drug division of the American Medical Association.

Hrushesky also says diagnosis of breast and prostate cancer follows year-long cycles, with prostate cancer found more frequently in winter and spring, and breast cancer in the spring.

It's not that body cells suddenly become malignant and rapidly grow into tumors at such times, he says. Instead, he believes some sort of balance between cancer stimulators and suppressors is more likely to slip during certain times of the year.

But Lawrence Garfinkel, vice president for statistics of the American Cancer Society, says time of diagnosis "almost seems like a random event" in the decades-long process of developing cancer. Two people could be diagnosed at different times simply because one waits longer to see a doctor, he says.

Chronobiology has met skepticism in other quarters of traditional medicine too.

Chronobiology differs from the traditional belief in a relatively constant level of activity in the body, Pauly says. "You can't get complete acceptance from a scientific or medical community for a complete change of concept."

To Erna Halberg, chronobiology is "nothing but common sense applied."

The internal workings of life must repeatedly work and rest, she says. Chronobiology simply recognizes that and shows that the internal workings follow what she calls a network of rhythm.

"It's like a fine Swiss watch," she said. "Every little wheel turns another wheel."

DEAR ABBY: The letter about finding a suitcase with no identification in the middle of the road reminded me of something I will never forget.

Several years ago, my husband, a cross-country truck driver, saw a small suitcase in the middle of the highway, so he pulled off and got it before it was run over. It had no identification, but it contained some pictures of a beautiful little boy, from the time of his birth until approximately 6 years old. On some large colored pictures was the name of a photographer's studio in a small Wyoming town, so we called the studio (we live in Oklahoma) and described the pictures. We were told the pictures belonged to the John Brown family (made-up name), and they gave us the family's address and phone number in Wyoming.

We called their home and were told the little boy and his parents had gone to visit the grandparents in Colorado, and they gave us their number. I called the grandparents and told them about the suitcase. They thanked me nicely, said the Browns had not arrived yet and asked me to please send the suitcase to them in Colorado.

I packed up the suitcase, insured it and sent it to Colorado with my name and address.

I heard nothing for three months. Then a letter from Mrs. Brown came, accusing me of finding a second suitcase that was lost at the same time! She said it contained some expensive jewelry, and she practically called me a thief! That ungrateful woman never even thanked me for shipping the suitcase with those precious pictures. Nor did she offer to reimburse me for the phone calls and postage.

That sure taught me a lesson!

MARY C., OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR MARY: And what was the "lesson"? I hope it didn't sour you on the whole human race. Don't stop doing good deeds for strangers; for every lemon like Mrs. Brown, there are 100 peaches like you, Mary C.

DEAR ABBY: Since when, and who gave you permission to change God's law? A woman is still supposed to be pure at marriage, and a white wedding gown is, was and always will be a symbol of that purity.

When you say that a woman has the right to wear a white wedding gown if it is her first wedding, are you saying that she can have two or three kids, shack up or sleep around, but she is still entitled to a church wedding in a white gown?

If that's true, why should a woman want to save her virginity for marriage?

To have a church wedding is a mockery, and I dare you to print this to see how many out there will agree with me.

CELESTE, TEXAS

DEAR CELESTE: No one can change God's law. True, a woman is supposed to be a virgin until she marries. But nowhere in the Bible does it state that only virgins may wear white and be married in church.

DEAR ABBY: I've seen many references in your column concerning how doctors, dentists and their nurses should address elderly patients. (Many resent being called by their first names.)

I am a physician, and in 20 years of primarily a geriatric practice (urology), I have never called a patient by his first name unless requested to do so.

My patients, in turn, are welcome to call me "Doctor Pat" if they wish, but call me "Doc" and my blood boils at this uncouth familiarity. Wyatt Earp is dead!

More opportunities than you can comfortably handle may be dumped into your lap this coming year. Your best judgment will be required to separate the wheat from the chaff.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, do not bank too heavily upon what other people can do for you, rather than what you can do for yourself. There's no substitute for self-reliance. Major changes are in store for Virgos in the coming year. Send for your year-ahead predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Important goals are reachable today, but they must not be taken as a foregone conclusion. If you let down at the last minute, victory will elude you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you are more interested in listening to the sound of your own voice than what others have to say today, value information could escape you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely selective today as to whom you let manage a situation for you that could cost you money. If it goes wrong, you will pay, not the other guy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When making important decisions today, don't predicate your judgment upon the way you'd like things to be. Base them upon conditions as they actually exist.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Take your duties and responsibilities seriously today. Trying to rationalize them away or palm them off on others will make matters worse.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Things will be more pleasant for you today if you surround yourself with old friends with whom you have much in common. Strangers could make you feel uneasy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are hazy about your goals today, there's a strong possibility you may let opportunities slip past you unnoticed. Be ever-watchful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In your eagerness to promote your plans today, you could make hasty moves without fully weighing their consequences. Don't trip yourself up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Just to be on the safe side today, look gift horses in the mouth. Offerings that appear to be too good to be true probably are.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Self-confidence is essential if you hope to succeed today. Don't enter into situations thinking the other guy holds all the aces.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not be lax about sensible health habits today. Eat and drink moderately and involve yourself in stimulating activities that exercise your mind and body.

Landry trick lifts Dallas

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry will take 'em any way he can get 'em.

The cunning fox of 25 National Football League seasons dusted off one of his favorite trick plays Sunday to ambush the Philadelphia Eagles.

It took a 49-yard pass from flanker Mike Renfro to split end Doug Donley on a third period "flea-flicker" to put away the Eagles 23-17.

Renfro, obtained from Houston in an off-season trade for Butch Johnson, took a lateral pass from quarterback Gary Hogeboom before he launched the wobbly, but on target, scoring strike.

It was his first NFL pass.

Drew Pearson used to run the play to perfection but retired after a near-fatal automobile accident this spring. His target was always Tony Hill, who is currently on the disabled list with a shoulder separation.

"I felt we had to try to open up our offense," said Landry. "It was tight. So I decided to try everything I could to get some points on the board."

"It's a play we used with Drew Pearson before he retired. It was setup good. Drew used to throw that pass good."

Eagles Coach Marion Campbell said, "Needless to say it was a tough way to take a loss. Dallas made some big plays but that pass by Renfro really hurt."

Renfro said, "We worked on it in practice but I wasn't expecting Coach Landry to call it today."

Cowboy players praised the play as keeping them fired up in the game.

Offensive lineman Howard Richards said, "If you can keep a team off balance it will wreck a defense. We need those kind of plays. I think they spark us."

With Dallas ahead 16-10, Hogeboom, making his first start in Texas Stadium, lateraled the ball across the field to Renfro, who saw Donley running clear behind the Eagle secondary.

Donley caught the ball in stride at the Eagle 5 and scored untouched for a 23-10 Dallas lead.

Eagle quarterback Ron Jaworski, who threw two touchdown passes to Mike Quick, grudgingly praised Landry.

"Coach Landry always seems to find a way to have one trick play that ends up being the difference in the game," said Jaworski, who was intercepted three times.

The Cowboys improved their record to 2-1 and are tied with the New York Giants atop the National

Florida fires Charley Pell

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Less than 24 hours after telling reporters he planned to finish the season as Florida's head football coach, Charley Pell was relieved of his coaching duties by University President Marshall Criser.

The announcement Sunday came five days after the National Collegiate Athletic Association informed the university of 107 violations turned up in a 21-month investigation of the Gator football program.

Criser, saying "the program must rid itself of its manifest imperfections," dismissed Pell and named Offensive Coordinator Galen Hall as the interim head coach until the end of the season.

Hogeboom collared by Jody Schultz

Conference Eastern Division while Philadelphia dropped to 1-2.

Dallas' Rafael Septien kicked field goals of 47, 51, and 30 yards, but missed a 28 yarder while Hogeboom completed a 25-yard scoring pass to Ron Springs.

Rookie Paul McFadden kicked a 39-yard field goal but the Eagles had trouble getting their offense going.

"Dallas made some big plays, more than just the pass by Renfro," said Campbell. "We've got to get more offense."

For Dallas, it was an error-free game. The Cowboys had nine turnovers in their first two games before Sunday's game.

"We played pretty good and Donley and Renfro were outstanding," said Landry. "We just need to run the ball better."

Philadelphia held Dallas to only 95 yards rushing.

SWC in near sweep against outsiders

By DENNEH. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

It was almost a Southwest Conference sweep Saturday in six non-conference football openers with the Arkansas-Ole Miss 14-14 tie the only blemish.

Texas Christian rolled up its biggest score since 1932 with a 62-18 romp over Utah State; Texas outlasted Auburn 35-27; Southern Methodist lashed Louisville 44-7; Texas Tech mauled Texas-Arlington 44-7; and Houston downed Miami of Ohio 30-17.

Arkansas and Ole Miss couldn't score in the second half in a game of muffed field goal tries.

The SWC is now 6-2-1 against outside opposition.

Here's a game-by-game look:

FROGS HOP ON AGGIES

LOGAN, UTAH — "Did we ever need this," said TCU Coach Jim Wacker. "We've been losing for too stinking long."

Redshirt freshman Tony Jeffery rushed for 182 yards on 13 carries and scored on a 72-yard touchdown run against Utah State.

Teammate Kenneth Davis scored on runs of 32, 59, and 4 yards and had 145 yards on 13 carries.

"Now that's the way the Vee is supposed to look," said Wacker. "Davis and Jeffery ran as well as I've ever seen two backs run."

TEXAS UNVEILS 'AIR AKERS'

AUSTIN — Texas Coach Fred Akers discarded his conservative approach and turned quarterback Todd Dodge loose.

Dodge completed 15 of 24 passes for 215 yards to surprise the Auburn War Eagles.

Texas fans were somewhat surprised themselves. Dodge only passed for 205 yards the entire 1983 season.

"This game is going to help me tremendously," said Dodge. "Something like this is going to help me for the rest of the season."

Not only did Auburn lose the game but it may have lost standout running back Bo Jackson for the season with a separated shoulder.

MUSTANGS COAST BY CARDS

LOUISVILLE, KY — Cornerback Reggie Phillips' 100-yard touchdown interception return put Louisville on ice.

"I was just hanging back and the quarterback never saw me," said Phillips. His return gave SMU a 27-7 first half lead and the game was all over.

SMU has now won 26 of its last 28 games. Reggie Dupard and Jeff Atkins each scored two touchdowns.

RAIDERS MAUL THE MAVERICKS

LUBBOCK — Timmy Smith and Freddie Wells showed Southland Conference foe Texas-Arlington what happens when you step up in class.

Smith rushed 11 times for 118 yards and Wells ran 13 times for 133 yards against the hapless Mavericks.

"We're pleased," said Tech Coach Jerry Moore. "We were ready to play and showed it."

COOGS SURROUND REDSKINS

HOUSTON — Houston sophomore quarterback Gerald Landry was the big show. He ran for a touchdown and passed for two more in the victory over Miami of Ohio.

Houston lost the ball 45 times with turnovers last season and gave it away the first two times they had it against the Redskins before Landry got things rolling.

HOGS AND REBS IN DEADLOCK

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — With two seconds left in the first half, Arkansas quarterback Bard Taylor drilled an eight-yard scoring pass to Donnie Centers.

That was it. Final 14-14 tie as the Ole Miss Rebels and the Razorbacks played the next 30 minutes without a point.

Ole Miss placekicker Bill Smith, who ironically is from Little Rock, missed field goals attempts of 32, 33, and 54 yards in the second half.

Arkansas kicker Ernie Villarreal misfired on tries of 42 and 53 yards.

"We were nervous," admitted Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield in his debut.

It's still a race in the AL West

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

While the Tigers can switch on the cruise control, the race continues in earnest for the Twins, Royals and Angels.

Detroit all but eliminated Toronto with an 8-3 victory Sunday, reducing their magic number to two. Any combination of Tiger victories and Blue Jays defeats adding to two will clinch the East for Detroit.

Meanwhile, Minnesota and Kansas City stayed deadlocked in the West.

Frank Viola and Ron Davis put the brakes on the Texas Rangers as the Twins registered their second straight shutout, 2-0. Steve Balboni and Frank White stroked two-run doubles for the Royals as they beat the Seattle Mariners 4-2.

California remained a half-game back and tied in the loss column by downing the Chicago White Sox 4-2.

On Saturday, Mike Smithson pitched a six-hit, 1-0 victory for Minnesota.

"We have had two super-pitched games back-to-back," Twins Manager Billy Gardner said. "We haven't been hitting the ball but the pitching is fifth, tying him for the league lead in that department, and his 11th complete game, tying him for fourth. But baseball's winningest left-hander wasn't upset."

"I think in this day and time your job is to give your team your best for seven or eight innings," Viola said. "This is the year of the relief pitcher. They are being paid a lot of money to do their job."

Balboni didn't get the nickname "Bye-Bye" by hitting doubles, but didn't complain.

"I'm not trying to hit home runs," Balboni said. "It's worked out better for me, rather than worrying about how hard I'm going to hit it."

"I feel more confident I can make contact."

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston topped New York 5-3, Baltimore outscored Milwaukee 11-8 and Cleveland hammered Oakland 8-4.

Seattle starter Salome Barojas,

9-6, allowed just five hits and while surrendering the four runs and taking the loss. Charlie Leibrandt, 10-7, pitched the first six innings for the Royals and picked up the victory. Joe Beckwith earned his second save with three scoreless innings.

Ranger starter Dave Stewart, 5-14, scattered seven hits over 7 2-3 innings in a losing effort. The Twins scored only one earned run, that in the second when Gary Gaetti singled with one out, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Chris Speier's single.

Kent Hrbek hit a one-out double in the eighth, went to third on a groundout and scored when third baseman Buddy Bell erred on Gaetti's ground ball.

Angels 4, White Sox 2

Bobby Grich, batting .720 against the White Sox this year, lashed a double and a pair of singles and Daryl Sconiers had a homer and two RBI as the Angels took their fourth straight victory.

Grich walked in the eighth inning to reach base for the 11th straight plate appearance, setting a club record.

"My confidence is up and I'm starting to put it all together," said Grich, coming on strong after problems at the plate earlier this season. "The timing could not be better for me and the others to put it all together."

The White Sox scored their two runs on 12 hits.

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 3

Four Detroit pitchers combined on a six-hitter, and Marty Castillo, Larry Herndon and Tom Brookens homered for Detroit.

"They know it's over with now," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson. "It's just a matter of patience."

Fertilize for wheat PROFIT!

You may be looking for ways to cut costs. Who isn't? But one thing all agronomists tell us is: "Don't cut back in areas that cause yields to decrease!"

They are talking about fertilizer. They encourage the wheat farmer to select varieties and apply fertilizer for optimum yields — that's your most profitable yield.

Yes, your cost per acre will increase as you move up toward your optimum yield. But your cost per bushel will be reduced.

You not only get more bushels per acre, you get more profit from every bushel you raise!

Base your fertilizer applications on soil test results and your yield goals. Let our Fertilizer Specialist help you.

We're ready when you are, with both anhydrous ammonia and dry blends.

News in brief

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Marvin Pancoast, sentenced to 26 years to life for the murder of model Vicki Morgan, is a chronic confessor whose statement admitting the slaying should not have been allowed, his attorney said.

Arthur Barens said Friday he would appeal on grounds that the trial judge erred by allowing the confession as evidence and that separate juries should have considered guilt and sanity.

Pancoast, 34, was convicted in July of beating the former mistress of Alfred Bloomingdale to death with her son's baseball bat on July 7, 1983. He told police he did it to stop her incessant complaints about financial problems.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP)—A roving band believed to be made up of former policemen fired for corruption is robbing Americans traveling on highways in remote areas of northern Mexico, said a Mexican official.

Several travelers have been beaten, but no one has been injured seriously, said Enrique Hubbard, Mexican consul in Brownsville.

The "banditos," posing as Mexican federal police and brandishing automatic rifles, have been blamed for an unusually large number of attacks in the last few weeks, authorities said.

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Anti-communist Afghan guerrillas hacked a Soviet military adviser to death in the Afghan capital Kabul last week, and Afghan security men retaliated by killing at least four civilians at the scene, an Afghan exile leader says.

Saed Mohammad Maiwand on Friday quoted a traveler arriving from Afghanistan as saying that the adviser, dressed in civilian clothes, was attacked when he "strayed" into the rebel stronghold of Taimani Watt last Wednesday. The kinds of weapons used by the assailants was not known.

Officials of the Afghan secret police, KHAD, rushed to the scene and "killed whomever they could lay their hands on," the traveler reportedly said. Among the dead were a taxi driver, a scooter rider and two handcart pullers. Maiwand quoted his source as saying:

There was no independent confirmation of the report. Maiwand, a former senior Kabul official, lives in the Indian capital. About 100,000 Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in 1979 to help the government put down a rebellion.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nearly $66 million in 1985 federal spending to improve health care services for American Indians and Alaska natives has been approved by the House and sent to the Senate.

The measure approved Friday also would raise spending authority for Indian health care programs to $68.5 million in fiscal 1986 and $71.6 million in 1987. And $38.2 million more would be authorized over the three years to extend health manpower programs.

Republican staff aides said President Reagan is expected to sign the bill. Among its supporters is Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Veterans Administration has awarded a $3.6 million contract for the first full-scale study of post-traumatic stress disorder, a psychiatric problem believed to have affected thousands of Vietnam combat veterans.

VA Administrator Harry N. Walters said findings of the study, awarded Friday to the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina, would help determine how many Vietnam veterans have the problems and evaluate the effectiveness of federal programs in coping with it.

Post-traumatic stress disorder, which has been recognized as a valid mental disorder and psychiatric syndrome by the American Psychiatric Association, is characterized by flashbacks of combat, anger, alienation, reduced involvement with the outside world, memory disturbances, anxiety and depression.

PRINCE HENRY—Proud father Prince Charles, left, looks down at his new son Prince Henry, being held in the arms of his mother Princess Diana. Pope says all Christians should help world's weak and oppressed

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Pope John Paul II met with Protestant church leaders after his arrival in Canada's oil-rich western prairies and urged Christians of all denominations to assist "the weak and the oppressed."

The pope's comments in a prayer meeting with Anglican, Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran and other church leaders in Edmonton appeared to be a preview of his scheduled homily at an outdoor Mass today on the topic of "Canada and the Third World."

The homily was the pope's only scheduled appearance today, the ninth day of a 12-day tour that has included five or six events a day. He was taking this afternoon off.

At Sunday evening's prayer meeting, the second inter-faith meeting of his trip, the pope spoke of the needs of "the poor and the dejected, the sorrowing and the lonely, the weak and the oppressed."

"Not only do we pray together and enter into theological dialogue, but we also engage in efforts of joint collaboration to promote a more just and peaceful world," he said.

The 64-year-old pontiff has borne up well on the exhaustive pilgrimage in the world's second-largest country, even though at times he has shown signs of fatigue.

He has appeared to tire in the afternoons, and has been seen rubbing his eyes, yawning, resting his chin in his palm or slowing his step.

His accented English, which he has used extensively since leaving mainly French-speaking Quebec, becomes more labored as the day wears on.

The strain is especially evident at afternoon Masses, which involve long periods on his feet on exposed, often windswept platforms.

Mondale meets with Gromyko, too; Bush attacks Mondale on religion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, while continuing to criticize President Reagan on arms control, says he will tell Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that "whatever our differences, Mr. Reagan has my support" when the president meets with Gromyko later this month.

Mondale on Sunday said that would be the message he will give Gromyko when the two meet Sept. 27 in New York. Their meeting, announced by the Democratic presidential candidate, will come one day before the Soviet leader sits down in the White House with Reagan.

President Reagan was continuing his break from the campaign today. But his running mate, Vice President George Bush, was on the attack Sunday, accusing Mondale of "outrageous demagoguery" for implying Reagan seeks to blur the separation of church and state.

"I think that, frankly, trying to infer that the president wants to merge church and state when he says 'oneness under God,' that's not true," Bush said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I'll say I think there is some relationship," the vice president said. "But that doesn't mean we're saying you know, this outrageous demagoguery of the Democrats, that we're saying God is a Republican. ... That's absolutely ridiculous."

Asked which Democrat made that accusation, Bush replied: "I'm afraid Mr. Mondale may have."

But Bush also said that, "I feel a little uncomfortable sometimes with the elevation of the religion thing" in this year's presidential campaign.

Mondale was meeting today with Jewish leaders to commemorate the anniversary of the Camp David accords, which led to a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel. The former vice president says those accords, reached with the personal assistance of President Carter, should remain the basis for any effort to reach a wider peace settlement in the Middle East.

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, stayed close to home Sunday and had no public events.

Two polls released Sunday showed Reagan-Bush maintaining a wide lead. An NBC News poll of 1,496 voters taken Sept. 9-11 showed Reagan leading 62 percent to 32 percent for Mondale. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 points.

A Gallup poll taken for Newsweek magazine showed Reagan leading 57-39; it was conducted Sept. 6-9 of 1,055 people, and had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 points.

Admission to Coronado Community Hospital will take longer-----

The government requires us to use a new uniform billing form which will be used in every hospital in the nation - the UB 82.

So much information is required that the admission process at Coronado Community Hospital, and all hospitals, will take longer.

We don't like that, but we have to obey the law.

YOU CAN HELP.....

When you know you're going to be a patient at Coronado Community Hospital, ask your physician for a PRE-ADMIT PACKET. You and your family can fill in the information at home at your convenience, and mail it in. Or call the admissions office at Coronado Community Hospital-665-3721, Ext. 127. We'll be glad to help you any way we can.

and we apologize!
