Airpark staff halved due to resignations

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Another resignation was handed in by a city airpark employee, which makes three resignations and a retirement in two weeks. That's half the staff and none are commenting.

At least one former city employee at the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark did say she contacted an attorney but declined comment for now because of possible legal ramifications.

"I want to tell you everything that's going on," said Margaret Churchwell, who resigned as airpark office manager Sept. 15, the same day Ben Douglas resigned as maintenance superintendent and John Ramey, facility supervisor, filed for retirement.

City officials as of this morning have not received any type of legal notification, required before a suit can be filed, said City Manager Lanny Lambert. However, he did say that Churchwell has not yet signed resignation papers.

"She told us she did (resign) but she's not signing anything," Lambert said.

Resigning Friday with no reason given was Adolph Garcia, a heavy equipment operator. He couldn't be reached for comment this morning or over the weekend.

"Morale is real low right now," Lambert said.

Concerning rumors that employees complained to the Federal Aviation Administration about city use of airpark funds - which can only be used for the airpark - Lambert said city officials have no knowledge of it. FAA officials could not be reached for comment this morning.

Employees weren't forced to resign because of whistleblowing, Lambert assured. "That's absolutely not true."

Garcia worked at the airpark since April 1987, Churchwell since August 1989, Ramey since January 1981 and Douglas since May 1982.

Jury absolves city in rights violation suit

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Police officers Tony Everett, Jim Rider and former officer Tom Hain were found by an Abilene federal court not to have violated rights of a man they arrested in September 1990.

Prospero Yanez of Big Spring claimed his rights against unreasonable search and seizure were violated when arrested during the Fiesta del Diez y Seis de Septiembre at Comanche Trail Park. Yanez, asking compensation for lost earnings and medical expenses, said his left elbow was injured during handcuffing.

"Mr. Yanez had quit his job the week before the arrest, but claimed at trial that his injuries prevented him from working," states a release from Midland attorney Terry Rhoads, representing the city.

"However, the evidence revealed that Mr. Yanez had a prior injury to the elbow and that he was actively resisting arrest when the alleged injury occurred," says Rhoads in the release, given to local media today. "There was also evidence that Mr. Yanez had been able to work as a roofer since the incident."

After two hours of deliberation three weeks ago, a six person jury unanimously found the officers did not violate Yanez's rights and did not use excessive force during the arrest. Yanez was ordered to pay court costs incurred by the city and the officers.

Yanez's lawyer, Eric Augeson of Odessa, declined comment and Yanez could not be reached for comment this morning.

The city and police department had earlier won cases based on briefs presented to the court. The suit then proceeded against the officers.

In too deep

Two Big Spring men were uninjured when their car fell into this hole in the 1400 block of Lancaster. The driver reportedly drove past traffic barricades and, after spotting the hole, tried to stop. Slipping in the mud, the car did not stop before falling into the hole where construction of water lines is being done.

Original design a winner

By DD TURNER
Managing Editor

It starts with an idea, a conception of a piece of jewelry. Or it might start with a unique stone, stirring the creative process.

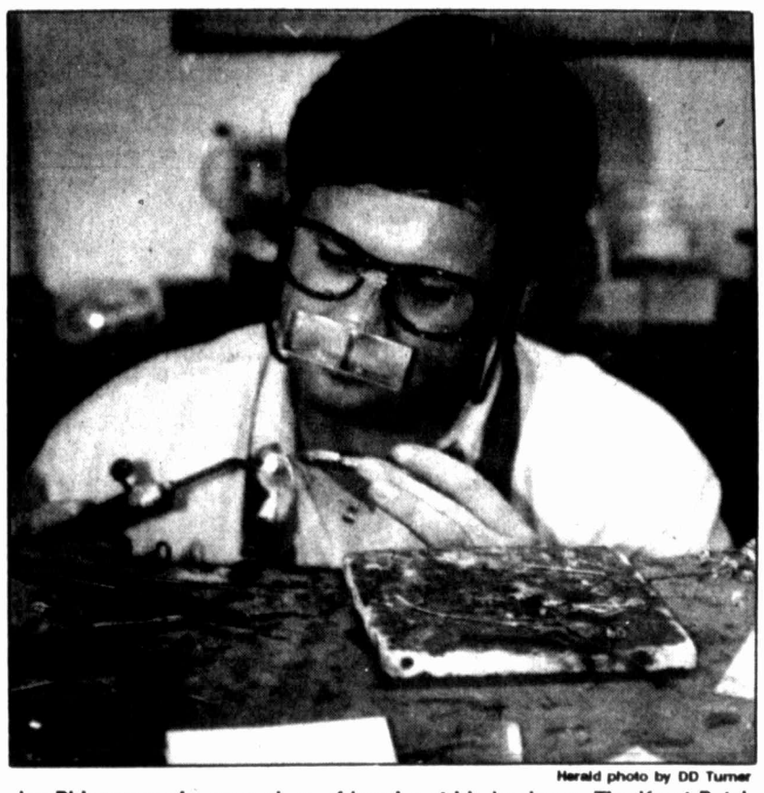

But, whatever the source of inspiration, Jay Phinney, owner of The Karat Patch, is able to bring to life unique creations in jewelry.

One of those creations, a blue topaz nestled in a 14-karat yellow gold band with a sprinkling of diamonds, recently took first place in the creative arts division at the Permian Basin Fair and Expo. Phinney has won other top awards at the Howard County Fair, which he began entering three years ago.

Focusing on an interest in creative arts, the Big Spring native enrolled in classes at Howard College. In February 1992, he and his wife, Kim, opened the Karat Patch.

The store offers a variety of jewelry, but the centerpiece is the original jewelry created by Phinney.

Jay Phinney works on a piece of jewelry at his business, The Karat Patch. Phinney recently won a first place in his division at the Permian Basin Fair and Expo with an original design ring of yellow gold, blue topaz and diamonds.

"From idea to having the piece in hand takes about 20-30 hours. It varies," he said.

The main thing about designing a piece of jewelry, Phinney explained, is to not have it overpower the stone, the focus of the piece.

Delia Barraza proves the truth of old axiom

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

BARRAZA

It can be said Delia Barraza lives by the old axiom "Give a man a fish, he will eat for a day. Teach him how to fish, he will eat a lifetime."

As a Hispanic Women for Progress officer, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce Minority Involvement Committee member and the administrative assistant for Howard College Business Development Center, Barraza offers people the tools they need to build their future.

Barraza, current HWP treasurer and last year's secretary, is involved in developing and implementing seminars and workshops, assisting minorities with their education. The organization offers tutoring for elementary students and financial workshops for college-bound students.

As a chamber committee member, she is helping lay the groundwork to a stronger relationship between the minority community and the chamber, as well as promoting increased minority involvement in business and civic affairs.

Aside from her civic obligations, Barraza has a job allowing her the opportunity to help minority and small business owners get ahead or stay ahead. She has developed the center's Minority and Small Business Breakfast. The monthly meetings brings together local business owners with corporations. From the contacts made at the breakfast, contracts are awarded to the business owners.

"I want people, particularly Hispanics, to get every opportunity to advance and this is one way," she said. "I hope to see more Hispanics educated with college degrees and more Hispanics with businesses."

The commitment Barraza puts into her work and community involvement, she also puts into her family and her education.

A high school drop out at age 15, Barraza received her GED in 1987, but it was not until her daughter, Dianna, was born in 1989 that Barraza began thinking about going to college.

"I was crazy in love, dropped out of school and mar-

Community center continues to provide help

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

Beginning its second decade, the Northside Community Center continues to tackle the problems of families needing assistance because of a streak of bad luck and a sluggish economy.

Established in 1983 by current director Marianne Brown-Esquilin and her then-husband Chestnut Brown, the center is partially funded by the United Way, which gives $14,000, 16 percent of the center's funding, according to Brown. It is dependent on donations from civic groups, churches and a few grants.

"Most of our funding is in donations," she said. "We have fundraisers, like the walk-a-thon and mail-out campaigns."

The Browns' plan was for the center to be a referral service and a center for information gathering. Today, it provides legal assistance twice a week, food for families, daily sack lunches for those living on the street, clothing, baby supplies, utility bill help, rent assistance, household items, gasoline for job searches and doctor's appointments and the Sponsor-A-Child program.

The annual August program brings together a child and someone who is willing to sponsor them by purchasing school clothes. Brown suggests two outfits and a pair of shoes be purchased. Last year, 219 children were sponsored.

Brown says 300-350 are served by the center a month. "We are getting more people with different needs," she said. "Many people ask for housing assistance. We do a lot of rent assistance. Lately, we are getting a lot of people for food. Utility assistance is the most common."

Brown has been the director of the center since its inception. Her husband moved to Florida after they divorced.

She became the center's first paid employee. Presently, the center has two paid employees, Brown and an assistant, Wally Moreno.

Briefs

Hispanic faculty sought by college

DALLAS (AP) — Advocates of more minority teachers say having professors with similar ethnic ties can be as important to a student as the quality of the teaching.

Critics of affirmative action disagree, saying that qualification, not race, should be the key factor in hiring.

Freddy Carrillo, who is studying journalism at Mountain View College — part of the Dallas County Community College District — said he never connected with other teachers the way he does with government instructor Edith Cardenas-Alvarado.

"She told us her name ... and I said, 'Wow! She's Mexican,'" recalled Carrillo, 21. "I've never had a Mexican teacher before."

Of the 681 full-time faculty members on Dallas County Community College District campuses, 39 — less than 6 percent — are Hispanic. The vast majority, 82 percent, is white.

Carswell AFB to close this week

FORT WORTH (AP) — After more than a half century as an active military base, Carswell Air Force Base will convert this week into a school for reservists.

On Thursday, the Air Force, in a private noon ceremony, will rename the base "Naval Air Station Fort Worth — Joint Reserve Base," to be operated by the U.S. Navy.

Former House Speaker Jim Wright, who lives in Fort Worth, is a longtime supporter of the once formidable military facility, but says he's unsure if he'll attend Thursday's festivities.

"It's a nostalgic place for me," he said. "It may be too sad."

Wright went to Congress in 1954, and over the next 35 years he fought for money to build the base hospital, base housing and even the golf course. He personally dedicated the chapel.

Biosphere's funder pleased with project

FORT WORTH (AP) — The billionaire businessman who has funded the bulk of the Biosphere experiment in Arizona says he is pleased with the project in spite of criticisms and questions of its scientific validity.

In particular, Ed Bass of Fort Worth said, the project has lived up to its educational expectations.

One goal of the self-contained, glass-domed world that has been on public display for the past two years is to give people a chance to see how different elements of the world interact.

"We've had some criticism that this is just an amusement thing, that it is like Disneyland," Bass told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for its editions Sunday, the same day the project's crew emerged.

"But come on, look at education, especially public education," he said. "You aren't going to educate people by saying, 'Come sit at a bunch of desks.' To interest people, you arouse their curiosity."

Miracles awaited in center's parking lot

HOUSTON (AP) — It's just a slab of concrete surrounded by a chain-link fence, but it's home to some.

In the midst of the Texas Medical Center is the South Extension Parking Lot, the temporary home to a handful of mostly cancer patients and their loved ones.

Instead of renting apartments or hotel rooms, they park their recreational vehicles in the lot while they go to the renowned medical center for treatment, and, in some cases, miracles.

Some stay up to a year; others live there just a few weeks.

For $32.45 a week, they get electricity, water and access to clean bathrooms, clean showers, a pay telephone and curbside bus service.

Artifacts unearthed at plantation

BRAZORIA (AP) — Archaeology students at the University of Houston have unearthed hundreds of 19th century artifacts in a long-term excavation of a slave plantation in southwest Brazoria County.

'Killing field'

Search still on for women's killer

The Associated Press

LEAGUE CITY — It's been called the killing field.

Down a lonely dirty road, in the thick brush and grass of an abandoned oilfield, the lives of four young women ended, apparently at the hands of a serial killer.

The last victim was found two years ago this month, but police have yet to catch the killer.

League City police have examined national computer files and talked to forensic experts in their search for leads. And on Tuesday, they will meet in nearby Houston with FBI special agents from Quantico, Va. to discuss the cases.

Investigators hope FBI agents can form a psychological profile of the person responsible for the Calder Road murders.

"These are homicides," said League City Sgt. Pat Bittner. "Those women definitely did not just crawl out there and die on their own."

"We have girls with similar appearances, and similar hair color. The area where the bodies are being left (is similar). The girls are all left nude," Bittner said last week.

"It gives you the idea that this is an organized serial killer," he said. "We don't know what sets the killer off, or what makes him kill."

The victims were all white women with brownish-colored hair. Three were around the same height and weight, while one was somewhat taller.

Their nude bodies, lying face up, were found relatively close to each other in the pasture next to a rutted stretch of Calder Road that is closed now because it is virtually impassable.

Police don't know if the women were sexually assaulted because their bodies were so decomposed. Some body parts were dragged away by animals.

It began in April 1984, when a dog carried home a human skull. Police later found the body of Heidi Villareal Fye, a 25-year-old League City resident who had been missing about six months.

Laura Ann Miller, a 16-year-old repeated runaway from League City, was next. She disappeared in September 1984, but her body wasn't discovered until February 1986.

While officers were in the pasture investigating her case, they stumbled upon the third victim's remains.

That woman and the fourth victim, who was found on Sept. 8, 1991, have never been identified. Police believe they were transients.

The third victim is the only one whose cause of death has been revealed by police. She died of a small caliber bullet wound apparently to the back.

Police said they have no explanation for why the fourth murder occurred years after the others.

"And you've got to wonder what happened, why so much time went by before we found our next one," Bittner said. "Did the killer move out of the area, did the killer end up going to prison? Did he just get out?"

FBI officials wouldn't discuss the murders. But Les Davis, a FBI spokesman in Quantico, said specially trained FBI agents can determine the killer's approximate age, height, sex, weight, occupation and social habits with information provided by local investigators.

"This is then used for the benefit of the law enforcement department to try and determine if they have a suspect, or to find a suspect," he said.

Meanwhile, the field now is part of a horseback-riding and picnic area. Owner Robert Abel said he bought the land in 1987 and cleared out the thick brush and cleaned up the trash in 1991.

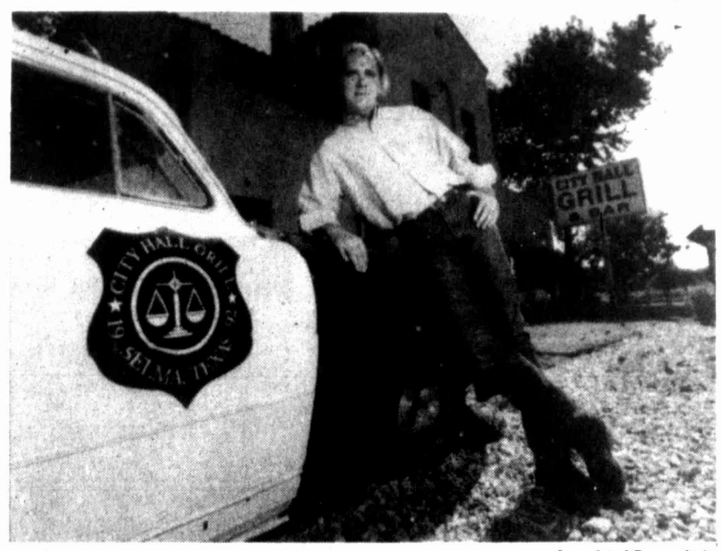

"It's a different place now. It's not the kind of place where people would come today and dump a body," Abel said.

But he noted that there still is a painful reminder of the violence that once occurred there — a wooden cross erected at the site where one victim was found.

The only fines here are for the food and drink

The Associated Press

SELMA — You still have to pay your ticket at the old Selma City Hall.

But these days, it most likely will be a bill for a cheeseburger or a chicken-fried steak — not a traffic fine from the town with the speed-trap reputation on Interstate 35.

The old municipal building and police station now are the City Hall Grill, a cafe that teasingly plays up the community's widely known law enforcement image.

"It was a funny thing," said co-owner Ken Lawrence. "We're trying to incorporate all that speed trap stuff. ... We're trying to do it slowly. We don't want to offend anybody too badly."

When the city of Selma moved into new digs, Lawrence and his sister Pat Brown seized the opportunity. Lawrence gave up his job as a Luby's Cafeteria manager in Houston, and they bought the old city building in 1992 and turned it into a restaurant.

A quick glance at the City Hall Grill menu might give any motorist, or law officer, a chuckle.

Appetizers are listed as "Opening Statements," light meals are "Minor Offenses," children's plates are in the "School Zone" and main entrees are considered "Body of Evidence."

It's all topped off with "Behind Bars" alcoholic beverages and the "Closing Arguments" desserts.

The two-story, 1920s building, which originally was the home of WOAI radio, is decorated with a mix of southwestern tones and law enforcement memorabilia.

Police badges and patches adorn the walls. Old mug shots display pictures of criminals wanted for assault or bootlegging. A 1950 Hudson painted to like an old police car sits out front.

Restaurant customers can buy a T-shirt that says, "I made it by the speed trap," or a similar version but with a slash mark indicating "I didn't make it by the speed trap."

Selma, with a population of about 700, is located on the interstate just northeast of San Antonio.

All sorts of stories have circulated through the years about the methods Selma police have used for stopping motorists. One had an officer sitting upstairs in the Selma City Hall and pointing a radar gun out the window, then calling ahead to another with the reading, Lawrence said.

Selma's traffic-ticket renown remains intact.

"If you're speeding, they're going to get you," Lawrence said. "They know where to sit."

City Manager Margie Lubianski said she believes the town is known less as a speed trap today than in years past.

"I think the only reputation we had was due to press coverage," she said.

City leaders view the City Hall Grill as good for the local economy and "amusing," Ms. Lubianski said.

"I just come and enjoy the food. It's very good," she said.

Selma Police Chief Mark Riffe and his handful of officers also stop in for an occasional meal — and a laugh.

"They'd have called it the Speed Trap Bar," Lawrence said.

The restaurant opened its doors last December, and so far business has met projections, Lawrence said. Crowds are biggest on weekends, when live music is featured on the patio.

Lawrence is looking forward to more patrons after a Class I horse race track opens in Selma and a new golf course is completed nearby.

"I think we got pretty lucky," Lawrence said.

Group works to cut back frivolous suits

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Enough is enough, says a group that opposes frivolous lawsuits.

San Antonians Against Lawsuit Abuse, which formed last January, wants to cut down on the growing number of silly personal injury lawsuits.

They cite the case of e man who sued organizers of a safety seminar because they didn't warn him that tilting his chair backward could lead to a fall.

Members include small business owners, physicians, attorneys and private citizens who maintain that frivolous litigation clogs the court system, leads to higher insurance premiums and sometimes leads to bankruptcy.

Executive Director Winter D. Prosapio said her group kicked off Lawsuit Abuse Awareness week Saturday at a comedy club because some litigation is outrageously amusing.

Prosapio's favorite example is a lawsuit filed by a new father against an obstetrician who delivered a healthy child in a problem-free procedure. The father was upset because the doctor touched the new mother in intimate areas during the delivery.

"How can a doctor avoid touching a woman who's having a baby?" Prosapio asked.

As part of Lawsuit Abuse Awareness Week, the group has released two TV commercials citing examples of what the group believes are spurious legal actions.

New form of AZT being tested

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Individuals who have tested positive for HIV in Austin and San Antonio will be targeted to partake in a nationwide testing of a new formulation of the drug AZT.

An Austin medical research company is seeking HIV patients to participate in the 18-week study of the new drug, Aztec. The study, which will include 210 patients, will be conducted by CLINICOR Inc. at medical centers throughout the United States.

Eighty participants are being sought in the Texas cities for the study. They will receive free medical assessments, medication and laboratory evaluations.

Zidovudine, or AZT, is the oldest and most commonly used anti-viral treatment known to slow, but not stop, the progress of the virus that causes AIDS. It is sold as Retrovir by Burroughs Wellcome Co., which has a disputed patent on the drug.

"Unfortunately, however, up to 50 percent of patients experience toxicity or intolerable side effects with the currently available formulation," said Tom O'Donnell, president of CLINICOR.

Aztec, which stands for AZT efficiency controlled, is a sustained-release formulation that has produced no side effects in preliminary patient trials, said Dr. James Dunn.

Clinton hears about insurance inadequacies

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — With tears in her eyes, Marcia Callender told President Clinton about her fight with the health care system that ended Dec. 3, 1992, when her son died peacefully in his father's arms.

Sitting knee-to-knee with her at the cramped counter of the Future Diner on Sunday, Clinton put his hand on Callender's shoulder and gently rubbed her neck.

"No family should have their grief compounded and their economic misery reinforced by this kind of problem," he said later, holding a portable microphone in his left hand, Callender's quivering hands in his right.

Callender's son Matthew suffered from Hurlers Syndrome, a developmental disease requiring continuing medical treatment.

But the Queens family lost their insurance when Callender's husband lost his job. Because her son's condition was "pre-existing," Mrs. Callender could not get her health insurance to cover it. She eventually resigned to care for her boy.

Her husband then took a low paying job, so the family could qualify for medical and Social Security disability for their son.

Clinton heard hers and other stories during a visit to the Future Diner, an old campaign haunt in the New York City borough of Queens.

Later that evening, the president attended two fund-raisers for New York Mayor David Dinkins in an effort to stave off an embarrassing Democratic defeat.

The first, at the townhouse of Seagrams heir Edgar Bronfman Jr., included about 70 guests. Among them were New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Following, at a $1,000-a-plate gala that was expected to raise $1 million, Clinton suggested that one reason Dinkins is in a tough campaign with former federal prosecutor Rudolph Giuliana is that some whites are reluctant to vote for blacks.

"Too many of us are still too unwilling to vote for people who are different than we are. This is not as simple as overt racism. ... It is this deep-seated reluctance we have against all our best judgment to reach out across these lines."

Clinton told New Yorkers that a Democratic mayor is even more important when there is a Democrat in the White House. "You really want ... someone who will be doing things that fit with what we're doing in Washington. Otherwise, why'd you vote for me in the first place."

Earlier, Clinton told those who had gathered to talk about health at the diner, "I just do not believe we have to go on for another year, or five years or 10 years being the only nation in the world that can't figure out how to get health care reform."

It was the second time this month that the president met with people who wrote the White House with their health care tragedies, a strategy designed to win sympathy for his proposed overhaul.

The diner, site of a economic policy visit by Clinton during the heat of the New York primary last year, was packed with journalists and about 50 invited guests, mostly people who have written the White House.

Josephine Angevine of Manhasset told Clinton that her health care premiums will be $12,747 this year, a heavy burden on her and her employer. Reading from her letter, she said, "I am afraid of losing my job."

Clinton dropped the microphone in his lap and sighed. "Wow," he said. "Takes your breath away, doesn't it?"

New dictionary helps to understand Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's confirmation of what many citizens have long suspected: A dictionary can be helpful in understanding what Congress is saying.

So one has been written. "The Congress Dictionary: The Ways and Meanings of Capitol Hill," by Washington writers Paul Dickson and Paul Clancy, tells what a 500-pound gorilla is and what a congressman does when he goes "against the mail." It reveals why a senator might be called a "seatwarmer" and what SCCSIAMRNASNPWPPPPPP stood for.

It stood for the Select Committee to Conduct a Study and Investigation of All Matters Relating to the Need for Adequate Supplies of Newsprint, Printing and Wrapping Paper, Paper Products, Paper, Pulp and Plywood.

The committee, with perhaps in the greatest accumulation of initials in congressional history, sat just after World War II.

A "500-pound gorilla" sits where it wants to and becomes a problem that can't be ignored. Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-S.D., back when he was a congressman, told the House, "This is a 500-pound gorilla. We are talking about deficits of enormous proportions."

Members of Congress who go "against the mail" may be brave, or foolhardy. They vote against the apparent wishes of constituents.

But "seatwarmers" can vote as they like. They are senators appointed by a governor to fill vacancies with the understanding they will not run in the next election.

Sometimes they get "Potomac fever" and run anyway.

Clinton addresses U.N. on policy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Criticized for his policies on Bosnia and Somalia, President Clinton is using an appearance at the United Nations to spell out his foreign policy priorities and urge more caution in sending peacekeeping forces to global trouble spots.

The president planned to warn Libya that he will push for new sanctions unless it meets an Oct. 1 deadline for turning over two suspects in the 1988 downing of Pan Am flight 103 which killed 270 people. Relatives of the victims were expected to be at the U.N. today.

Clinton also was to propose new steps to discourage the spread of nuclear weapons by barring the production of fissionable material for bomb making. His proposal calls for putting highly enriched uranium and reprocessed plutonium under international inspection when withdrawn from old weapons.

And, in remarks aimed at China, he was to urge all nations to refrain from nuclear testing.

Dinkins facing re-election battle

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor David Dinkins is facing a tough re-election battle partly because some whites are still reluctant to vote for a black candidate, President Clinton said.

"Too many of us are still too unwilling to vote for people who are different than we are," Clinton said Sunday at a $1 million fund-raiser for Dinkins, New York's first black mayor.

Although registered Democrats outnumber Republicans by more than 5 to 1 in New York City, polls show the Democratic incumbent in a dead heat with his GOP opponent, former U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, who is white.

Clinton said he asked himself on the way to New York, "Why does this guy have a hard race?" He said one reason is that the gentlemanly Dinkins may not always be flashy enough "in an age that values self-promotion."

The second reason "is not as simple as overt racism," he said. "Racism is not anything I would charge anybody who doesn't vote for David Dinkins or Bill Clinton or anybody else. It is this deep-seated reluctance we have against all our best judgments to reach out across these lines."

Noxious fumes ignites a riot

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Hundreds of employees of a chemical factory fought with local residents enraged by the plant's noxious emissions, killing two of them, an official newspaper has reported.

After the Aug. 14 incident, hundreds of riot police took over the plant in Lanzhou, in northwest China's Gansu province, the Southern Weekend reported in its Friday editions.

AP

The incident exemplifies the lack of regard for the environment in China's headlong pursuit of economic gains. It also illustrates the environmental protection agency's powerlessness to stop violators.

The conflict began last November, when a plant manufacturing sulfuric acid and carbon disulfide started production.

The plant was just upriver from a water treatment plant for another factory, the China Nuclear Industrial Co.'s Factory No. 471, and its employees and families who lived nearby. The waste water contaminated their water supply.

The plant also discharged gases that smelled like rotten eggs, causing residents to experience dizziness, shortness of breath, rapid heartbeats and loss of strength. The smell was so strong that some children began wearing gas masks.

Factory No. 471 repeatedly complained to local officials, and the city Environmental Protection Bureau in July ordered the chemical plant to shut down.

When the plant ignored the orders, No. 471's employees set up a roadblock using to prevent trucks from delivering raw materials.

Russian army urged to revolt to oust Yeltsin

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Demoralized lawmakers appealed today to the Russian armed forces to revolt and oust Boris Yeltsin, but their support continued to dwindle as the military stood firm behind the president.

Yeltsin was cheered by thousands of people in Red Square and more marched through the Russian capital Sunday in a major show of support for the president, who dissolved parliament six days ago and ordered new elections.

The jittery lawmakers claimed early today that Yeltsin ordered riot police to storm parliament where they have been holed up since Tuesday. But there was no attack and what panic there was was reportedly set off by a backfiring truck.

Guards used chairs and tables to set up barricades in the corridors after rumors of the imminent government attack swept the building. Such rumors have repeatedly gripped parliament, but Yeltsin has said he will not use force.

Later, police ringing parliament stopped people from entering the grounds; people inside would be allowed to leave freely, they said. Police attempted a similar move last week, but later restored access.

Lawmakers claimed to have received telegrams of support from some army and navy units, but there was no sign of any military support for the hard-liners. The mood in the building, called the White House, was increasingly despondent as about 100 lawmakers morosely deliberated what to do next.

Some 300 supporters, many of them elderly, slept on carpets in the corridors of parliament. A small group of volunteers, armed with rifles and dressed in military fatigues, stood guard.

There was no sign of trouble today in Moscow as people headed for work and businesses and shops opened as normal. Commuter traffic streamed past the White House.

The lawmakers, headed by Vice President Alexander Rutskoi and parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, have been camped out in parliament since Yeltsin ordered the legislature dissolved.

Rutskoi claimed Monday he would defend parliament to "the last bullet," but some lawmakers and aides complained privately that parliament's leaders did not know what to do and were increasingly desperate.

Flimsy barricades were erected around parliament by anti-Yeltsin supporters last Tuesday, but police have allowed lawmakers and their supporters to come and go freely most of the time. Lawmakers leave the building to go home to wash, eat and rest.

Yeltsin appeared unperturbed by parliament's increasingly shrill attacks on him. Accompanied by Defense Minister Pavel Grachev and Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov, he waded into surging crowds on Red Square for a free concert by the Washington-based National Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, former dissident Mstislav Rostropovich.

A concert announcer urged "faith in the president and in Russia's future," and the crowd responded "Hurrah! Hurrah!"

"Yeltsin is one of us and he must succeed," said Nina Shtanina, a 69-year-old pensioner. "I took part in the Second World War, and if we won that fight, we can win this one," she said of the political crisis.

"It is a great nation," he said. "Look how many people have come here.

Third Miami visitor killed this month

The Associated Press

MIAMI — A New York City man visiting family was killed in what police called an apparently random, drive-by shooting. It was the third slaying of a traveler on Florida's highways in a month and another blow for the state's vital tourist industry.

The 40-year-old victim was going to dinner with two relatives when another car pulled up beside theirs Sunday night on a highway just north of downtown Miami, said Metro-Dade Detective Juan Del Castillo.

The driver — who was apparently alone in his car — rolled down the car window and fired one shot, striking the victim in the head.

"It's a typical incident that's giving Miami a bad name," Del Castillo said. "It is a drive-by (shooting) with the vehicle just coming up alongside and shooting for no reason."

There was no indication of any traffic dispute or interaction between the two vehicles before the shooting, he added. The gunman — described as in his early 30s — sped off afterward.

The name of the victim, who lived in the New York City borough of the Bronx, was not immediately released. He was a passenger in a car with his cousin and his cousin's wife, whom he was visiting, Del Castillo said. They drove him to a hospital, where he died.

The shooting occurred shortly after 8 p.m. on the Palmetto Expressway, also known as State Road 826.

The shooting is the latest in a string of visitor killings that have rocked the Sunshine State and its $31 billion-a-year tourism industry, prompting official efforts to make the highways safer. Ten foreign visitors have been slain in Florida in less than a year.

Road safety received renewed scrutiny in the wake of the Sept. 8 slaying of a German tourist, Uwe-Wilhelm Rakebrand, after his rental car was bumped on a Miami highway in a robbery attempt. At the time of the attack, his wife was reading a pamphlet advising tourists what to do when bumped in traffic.

Three people have been charged in Rakebrand's death.

Days later, Gov. Lawton Chiles ordered an extra 30 state troopers and 20 Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents to help patrol the expressways.

Then on Sept. 14, British tourist Gary Colley was fatally shot at an Interstate 10 rest stop

State party wins in tainted election

The Associated Press

SALTILLO, Mexico — Opposition candidates in a bitterly contested state election accused Mexico's official party of fraud, and said they hoped the charges would influence U.S. lawmakers' decision on creating the world's largest trade zone.

"The United States is supposed to have commercial relations only with countries who respect human rights and the will of the people," said Jesus Gonzales Schmal, one of seven opposition candidates running for governor of the border state of Coahuila.

Early unofficial results in the election Sunday showed the official Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) candidate, economist Rogelio Montemayor, ahead with 52,199 votes.

The National Action Party's Rosendo Villareal, mayor of the colonial state capital of Saltillo, trailed with 19,155 votes, according to State Electoral Commission projections.

The race is one of the last before the administration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari leaves office in 1994. It was seen by many as a test of his resolve to clean up a system ruled by the same party for 64 years.

Recycle and celebrate with coalition for the environment

As the Howard County Coalition for the Environment celebrates its second anniversary during October, they will be giving away pine tree seedlings as their gift to the community.

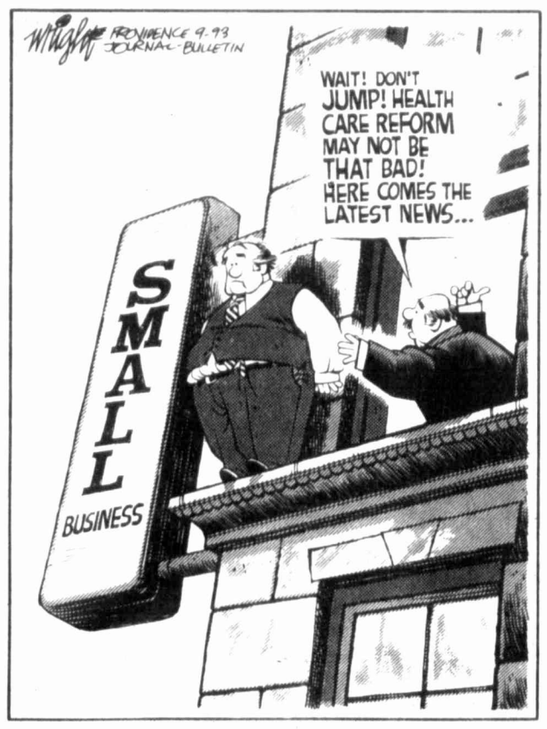

But, this group of dedicated volunteers is giving to the community the first Saturday of each month by collecting recyclables and selling them, thus saving space in the city landfill.

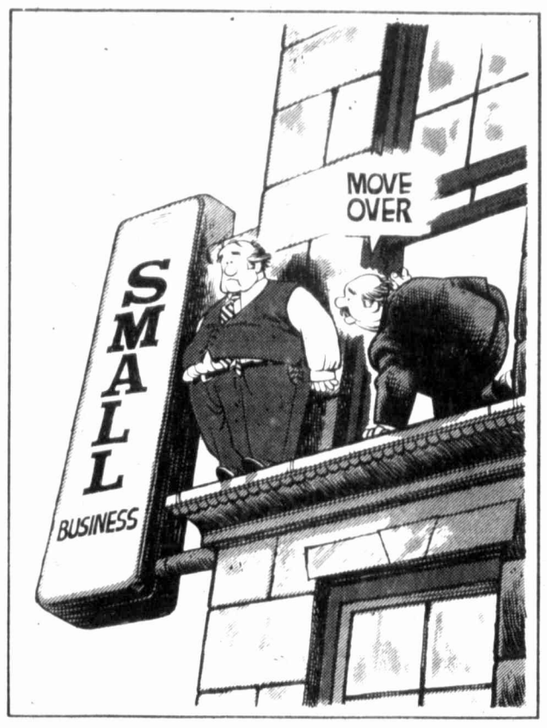

The group will be collecting steel and aluminum cans (smashed and clean), bagged or boxed newspaper, clear and green soft drink containers and milk and water jugs Oct. 2 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Big Spring Herald parking lot. The regular collection day is usually the first Saturday of each month.

And, as the second anniversary of this group rolls around, we should be reminded of what it is going to take - from all of us - to make our world clean again for our children. It doesn't take much time to sort the trash for items that can be recycled and then toss the rest.

And, by simply taking that time, we are helping to preserve our land, water and space.

Recycling has been around now for several years. Each of us needs to make it a way of life.

Scrambled up syntax

I've always been terribly picky when I order breakfast in a restaurant, especially when it comes to my eggs. I like fried eggs.

I don't want the yellow in my fried eggs to run. I want it to crawl. I insist it crawl.

I've been known to complain loudly when my eggs aren't served correctly. I've sent more eggs back than most people have eaten. I've berated cooks and brought waitresses to tears.

But the customer is always right.

I walked into an Original Pancake House in Atlanta the other morning. A waitress was talking to a customer, a man, seated in a booth.

"Is this the original pancake house?" he asked her.

"Yes, it is," the waitress said.

"I mean, is this THE original pancake house?" he went on.

The waitress seemed puzzled.

"What do you mean?" she asked, to get some hint of what the man was talking about.

"I mean, I want to know is this THE original pancake house?"

"I just work here," said the waitress. "But I think what this is, is a franchise."

"So, there are more than just one of these?"

"There's lots of them."

"Where was the first one?"

"Oregon, I think."

"That was THE original pancake house?"

"Yeah, and then they started franchising."

"So, the original pancake house in Oregon is THE Original Pancake House."

"You need anymore syrup?" asked the waitress.

The man seemed agitated. "What I'm trying to ask you is, Was the first original pancake house in Oregon THE Original Pancake House?"

"I already told you that."

"Please, listen. Were there any other pancake houses before that first Original Pancake House in Oregon?"

"Oh I see now," said the waitress. "You want to know if the Original Pancake House in Oregon was the first ever pancake house there ever was?"

"That's what I'm trying to figure out," said the man. "And it couldn't be. Not if you count my grandfather's place."

"He had a pancake house?" said the waitress.

"He did."

"What did he call it?"

" 'Pancakes.' So this isn't THE original pancake house. This is just a franchise of the first Original Pancake House in Oregon that really wasn't the original pancake house either."

"Want me to warm up that coffee?" asked the waitress.

"I was just trying to get an answer to my question," the man continued.

"Your eggs OK?"

"My eggs are fine, but I don't know how they can call this the Original Pancake House."

"That's just our name."

"Well, it's the wrong name. If it's not THE original pancake house, I don't think they ought to be able to call it that."

The waitress walked away and came over to where I was sitting.

"What would you like?" she asked me.

"Eggs," I said.

"How many?"

"Two."

"How would you like those cooked?"

"Scrambled," I said.

She smiled.

The customer isn't always right. Sometimes, we're just original jerks.

Get out and be safe

Fire Safety Tips

This year Fire Prevention Week will be observed on Sunday, October 3rd thru Saturday, October 9th. This year's theme: Get out, stay our. Your fire safe response.

Among some of the topics of concern, changing the battery in your smoke detector, fire extinguisher,, and E.D.I.T.H. (Exit Drills In The Home.)

Your first line of defense is your smoke detector, so wouldn't it make sense to have the battery in top condition? We recommend that when you move your clocks forward in spring or move them back in the fall, that you put in a fresh battery in your detector to insure proper operation year round.

Your second line of defense is your fire extinguisher. Hopefully you will never have the need to use one but every one should have one in case they need it. It can be used to extinguish or knock down a fire enough to provide a path way out of the house.

The third item is the most important when considering one's safety. Once you have exited the house you must stay out. All our children, and grandchildren need to be taught about E.D.I.T.H. (Exit Drills In The Home). They need to know how to get out of the house, i.e. doors and windows. Parents need to answer all questions their children may ask. Children need to know, once out of the house, where should they go. A meeting place is so important.

If they are home alone what should they do? Where do they go? From where do they report the fire? They should know when they leave the house they DO NOT return for anything left behind. The firemen will be on the scene within a very short time after notification. Being properly outfitted they will make the required rescue of anyone else that may not have gotten out including pets.

The Big Spring Fire Marshal's office has pamphlets to assist you in conducting exit drills in the home. You can obtain them by calling 264-2305 and asking for them.

You all need to remember that our Fire Safe Response is to GET OUT AND STAY OUT!

His truth is better than fiction

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

Hunter James can write, has a good memory, something to say and doesn't take himself too seriously. That makes his books different and better than most nonfiction for sale these days.

"Smile Pretty and Say Jesus. The Last Great Days of PTL" will be in stores this November, but only if you, the reading customer, shake a fist and tell the manager, "Hey, how about ordering some copies of a book by somebody other than Grisham or Grizzard for a change?" Tell them the University of Georgia is publisher.

Hunter is part of his own compelling, funny, Altmanesque story, a tired, veteran reporter, no longer eager for front-page bylines, annoyed, not flattered, when his Atlanta editor awakens him in the middle of the March night with an urgent assignment. He packs a bag, pops some tranquilizers and is off, bumbling about his native Southern landscape with the grace of a blind ox.

"... Again the younger reporters trampled me into the dirt, scurrying around and over me as they raced for their cars. Newsweek shouldered me aside and left me for dead in a prickly pyracantha. I still might have made it (deadline) if I hadn't crashed into a guardrail on my way back to the hotel. Easily a thousand dollars' worth of damage or more. The insurance would pay. But what was I to do about another car?"

You start to care more about Hunter James's woes, his unrelenting editors, his bent fender, than you do about the fleeced lifetime members of the PTL Club, or Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker. But, then, maybe he's more of a worthy risk for your consideration.

It's Hunter's self-effacing style and his Columbo approach that make his books work so well, that make one more account of the mother of all televangical downfalls something special even after the scandal is moldy and overdone by most news standards.

The old reporter — his own assessment — can turn a phrase, can with words render a Rembrandt of a charlatan. He writes of Tammy Faye: "Through it all Tammy Faye stood looking out at us ... from behind her bars of melted mascara, her whole face a smear of tearful penitence and her flywhisker eyelids coming apart as she pled for the tithes and offerings that would redound ten thousand times on their donors ..."

About Jim Bakker he says: "Like a flash he vanished behind the barred walls of his holiday condo and stayed there for more than three months, hunkering down fetal-like (so his wife always described it) and brooding, no doubt, on that most ancient of theological questions: Why must the righteous suffer?"

Did I mention wry?

Nor does Hunter James always make his profession, my profession, look so noble, freely pointing out the absurdities in observing news, even life, jostling for position in a hungry pack held behind a barricade across a residential driveway.

"... You would amuse yourself, thinking of ways to exaggerate your importance as you squatted by the sawbucks and stared down the long drive at the hole in the trees, waiting for whatever you were supposed to be waiting for. On this night you would wait until long after the others had left, knowing that if perchance Bakker were to slip out for a midnight visit to a massage parlor and somebody else found out about it you'd never be able to explain why you weren't there to report the story."

And Hunter James doesn't hate preachers, either, which is why Jerry Falwell emerges an unlikely hero, once a smart, bad kid from the wrong side of the Lynchburg tracks who lost his chance to deliver the class valedictory address when the school learned he had been stealing lunchroom tickets all that year.

"'Tell me, Jerry, how do you think if would look if we allowed a petty thief to deliver our honors address? Sorry, Jerry.'"

Falwell's mother, unable to roust her son for church, would always leave the radio blaring a Charles E. Fuller radio sermon, "and he would lie there half asleep listening to Fuller's message of sin, conviction, penitence and redemption ... . America's first documented experiment in subliminal conversion ... ."

What Americans know

Scripps Howard News Service

The news about what Americans know, and are being taught, stays bad. Like a one-two punch to the national ego, a pair of reports issued late last week cast serious doubt on America's ability to remain atop a high-tech world.

About half the nation's 191 million adults are unable to write a simple note to a repairman describing how an appliance malfunctions or to compare the costs of seeing two different downtown plays — practical skills that require a bit of cogitating besides knowing how to add, subtract and spell words. The Education Department, which released such dismal data in a four-year study, "Adult Literacy in America," urges a society-wide offensive against so-called functional illiteracy.

Our hunch is that things aren't so grim. First, the federal survey included a healthy sampling of immigrants troubled by English, the test language. Most of the newcomers' children will become English-literate, some on the road to Stanford or Yale. Also, certain questions had little relevance to respondents' daily lives. One wouldn't expect perennial renters to be whizzes at computing mortgage rates. Mental functions are like muscles: Only the ones that get used stay strong.

But, if the study is even half-true, Education Secretary Richard Riley was clearly right to exhort schools to improve. Unfortunately, a second report, issued by the American Legislative Exchange Council, shows that decades of such pleading have yielded few gains.

National surveys can usefully point out Americans' shortcomings in knowledge. But the cure must come locally, where parents should replace school boards that confuse the cup of learning with a mush bowl.

Leaders missed opportunity to learn

Martha E. Flores

"Some of us have been here for three hundred years, some for three days.' This comment, often repeated by Mexican Americans, affirms their status as one of America's oldest ethnic groups, as well as one of its newest and fastest growing." Peter Skerry in "Mexican Americans - The Ambivalent Minority"

Skerry's book examines how Mexican Americans will join the American mainstream in politics, business and social circles. He explores movements in the last 25 years in cities such as Los Angeles and San Antonio.

But the Mexican-American and Hispanic population is not just growing in numbers or increasing its presence politically, economically and socially in large metropolitan areas in South Texas or California. It is happening in West Texas in Big Spring. In the next five years, the Hispanic population is expected to reach at least 33 percent, according U.S. Census data.

For years - maybe as far back as the late 1880s - the second largest local population could be described as ambivalent and silent. After more than 100 years and as the millennium approaches change has taken hold of the once silent, ambivalent minority.

Names like Trevino, Lopez, DeAnda, Gutierrez, Barraza, Gonzales, Marquez and Salazar are associated with politics, business and education. Committees to increase minority involvement are established. Minority input is requested. Minority issues are community concerns. And the once silent, ambivalent minority speaks out, takes charge of their destiny and takes crucial steps to join the American mainstream.

Now that Mexican-Americans and other Hispanics are beginning to be represented in politics and business, what frontiers are left? Social circles and historical validation.

With the same drive and determination given to the other efforts, Hispanic organizations are taking what is yet to be conquered. The Hispanic Women for Progress joined forces with the Heritage Museum Saturday, bringing to the community an opportunity to indulge in the culture and heritage of a people whose roots are deep and tangled with the history of Big Spring and Mexico. The organization sought and achieved historical validation.

The cultural journey began with the baile folklorico performed by children from Immaculate Heart of Mary and under the direction of Velia Marmolejo and Lupe Ortiz.

The first troupe was made up of 7 and 8 year-old boys and girls performing dances more than a 100 years and originating in the northern part of Mexico.

The second troupe was made up of four 13-year-old girls dancing "El Son de La Negra," a waltz with a feminine flair.

As the dancers made their way across the floor, the predominately Hispanic audience was hypnotized by the tradition in the music.

Throughout the day, bits and pieces of Mexican and Hispanic heritage were presented gracefully and proudly for everyone to enjoy. The Hispanic population took advantage of the opportunity with a 300 plus crowd. Boy Scouts, Corral members, a few African-American families and others also indulged in the festivities, ranging from breaking pinatas to viewing a traditional Mexican-American Catholic wedding.

It was unfortunate that most city officials and community leaders did not. Howard College President Cheri Sparks and Big Spring High School educators attended. Neither Mayor Tim Blackshear nor any member of the city council took advantage of the wonderful opportunity to learn more about the Hispanic culture and socialize with some of their Hispanic constituency.

It is also unfortunate that the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce leadership who has committed so much time and effort to increase minority involvement overlooked the opportunity laid before them.

But it is truly sad that the Hispanic community's own leaders were not present in full force to show support. Chamber Minority Involvement Committee co-chairs Rudy Gutierrez and Ester Lopez were there. But past and present minority leaders were few and far in between.

ried," Barraza said. "My parents wanted me to continue going to school, but I was stubborn.

"It was not until Dianna was born that I realized how important an education was. You want them to have everything they want and do everything. It was right after she was born that I started going to school."

Barraza with the help and support of her parents and Raymond, her husband, began taking classes at Howard College. She received her associates in 1992. She is currently enrolled at the college with hopes of transferring to the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

With a full-time job, family, school and community commitments, Barraza says her schedule is often hectic, but she believes in what she is doing and she puts her family first.

"I like working with colored stones, really odd-shaped and unusual stones. I don't really like diamonds that much," he said, adding he likes to get his wife's opinion on different things he has come up with.

"Colored stones lend themselves to a higher level of creativity," he expounded.

What is the favorite piece he has created? His wife's wedding ring. It's hexagonal shaped using a beaded channel set connecting a series of small diamonds leading up to the main stone.

"It is a very intricate setting. You use one post to hold four stones. Not many people use it," explained Phinney.

Looking for a piece of jewelry that no one else will have? Phinney said his pieces are one of a kinds, exclusive.

"There is only one of it, it is not a limited series. It is one piece and comes in a special box I had made for them," he noted.

Unique, exclusive, special for the special customer. "These pieces are for a special type of customer, the off the regular beaten path customer," explained Phinney.

Briefs

City council to meet Tuesday

Several appointments to city boards will be considered by the Big Spring City Council when they meet Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. in Building 1106 in the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Volunteers to serve are always being sought, said City Manager Lanny Lambert.

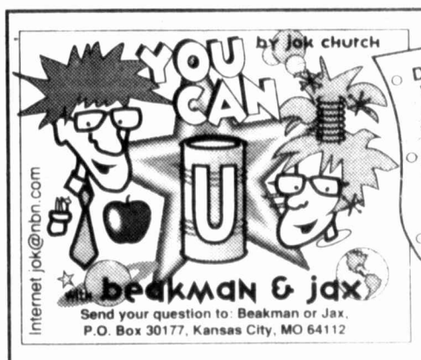

"Anyone's interested, be sure to contact my office and we'll give them an application," Lambert said.

Other council business includes negotiation with the state to take over the health department from the city and county, which could cut local costs for it in half, to $50,000.

Also on the agenda is approval of annual funding for local agencies supported by the city.

Dear Damien,

Now that's a really big word – coniferous. So it looks like already you know a lot. You know that coniferous (ko-NIF-ur-us) trees are the ones that have their seeds in cones and usually have needles.

Here's a news flash for you: Some conifers do lose their needles in the fall. Trees like the Dawn Redwood turn color and drop needles every autumn.

But I think you're asking about most pines and evergreens. The reason they stay green is their chemical factories don't need that much power to make food. If that doesn't make sense, read on.

Beakman

Beakman Place

experiment #1
Leaf Collecting

WHAT YOU NEED: An active imagination - patience

WHAT TO DO: Soon, the leaves will begin to change from green to lots of other colors. Before that happens, pick different kinds of leaves. Pick green needles, too. Hang them up in your classroom. Just about the time you forget they're there, the leaves still on the trees will start changing color. Collect the same kinds of leaves and needles. Compare them with the older dried leaves.

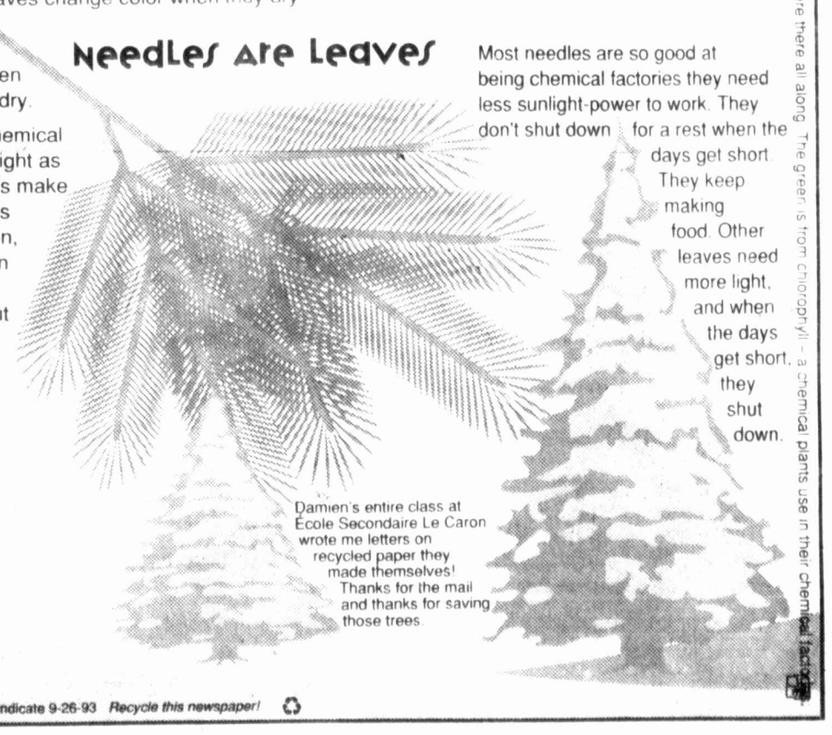

GLUCOSE FACTORY

SO WHAT:
Lots of people think that leaves change color when they dry out. But that's not true. The leaves and needles you picked first are still green even though they are very dry.

Imagine your leaves are chemical factories. They all use sunlight as their power. What they do is make glucose, a kind of sugar. It's food. When the factory is on, the leaves are green. When the factory shuts down, the color green is pulled out of the leaf, and the other colors can then be seen.

Needles are Leaves

Most needles are so good at being chemical factories they need less sunlight-power to work. They don't shut down for a rest when the days get short. They keep making food. Other leaves need more light, and when the days get short, they shut down.

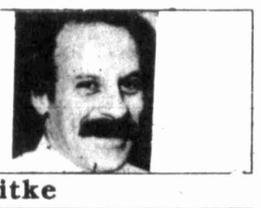

Damien's entire class at École Secondaire Le Caron wrote me letters on recycled paper they made themselves! Thanks for the mail and thanks for saving those trees.

P.S. from Jax: When leaves change color, they've really only lost the color green. The other colors were there all along. The green is from chloroplyll - a chemical plants use in their chemical factories.

A pair of anonymous heroes saves the Cup for America

Jim Litke

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — They know their names over here now, now that the Ryder Cup is somewhere else.

But by the time they get home with the Cup, guys like Chip Beck and Jim Gallagher Jr. will go back to being household names only in their own households. Well, maybe a few other households.

"Jim Gallagher played superbly;" said Raymond Floyd, Gallagher's much more famous American teammate. "I can't admire him more."

"Chip was an inspiration," said Paul Azinger, one of Beck's much more famous teammates. "Seeing what he did, when he did, took the load off the rest of us."

Because we like to think of ourselves as go-for-broke people, being represented by a team full of middling, middle-of-the-road golfers like Beck and Gallagher might not be most Americans' first choice. Especially since the defining moment of Beck's career, until Sunday at least, was losing a game of chicken to Bernhard Langer at the Masters.

But one thing Americans like more than seeing their heroes carried out on their shields is seeing their heroes win. And without the Becks and Gallaghers, it almost certainly would have been the former instead of the latter.

"Our team is getting stronger and stronger," Langer said, trying to salvage something from Europe's 15-13 defeat. "Clearly, there's more depth, which has always been the strength of the Americans."

And that was clear here as early as Saturday afternoon. Through the first three holes of his best-ball match against Nick Faldo and Colin Montgomerie, Beck had been less help to teammate John Cook than the headcover on Cook's driver. But after knocking down a 12-foot putt for par to halve the third hole, he grinned sheepishly at Cook, whose 3-foot putt would have been considerably easier, and explained himself this way:

"I figured I'd make one, partner," Beck said, nodding toward Faldo. "Just to let him know I'm going to be in this sooner or later."

At the time, Beck had no way of knowing that his meaningful contributions would come later that afternoon rather than sooner. But on the essential point — that he was going to contribute something sometime — Beck was dead-solid perfect.

Ditto Gallagher. He was lined up to play Scot Sam Torrance in singles, a considerably easier mark than the match he wound up in against Spaniard Seve Ballesteros. He neither complained nor backed down.

"We all know Seve and Nick are the toughest guys you can play," Floyd said, "and Jim played superbly."

As Langer said, there is more depth on the European side than ever before. But as the results of the dozen final-day singles matches proved — Americans 6, Europeans 3, three tied — it is still not deep enough.

Europe still is the stronger team at the top. It has Faldo, who has won five majors and is ranked No. 1 and who is unquestionably the steeliest player in the world. And it has Langer, who rebounded from the missed 6-footer at Kiawah Island, S.C., two years ago to win his second green jacket and climb all the way back to No. 3. And it has Ian Woosnam and Seve Ballesteros, who have another handful of majors between them.

But for all the noticeable failings of those four Sunday — they produced no wins and only two ties — they still combined to go 8-5-3 during the three days of competition.

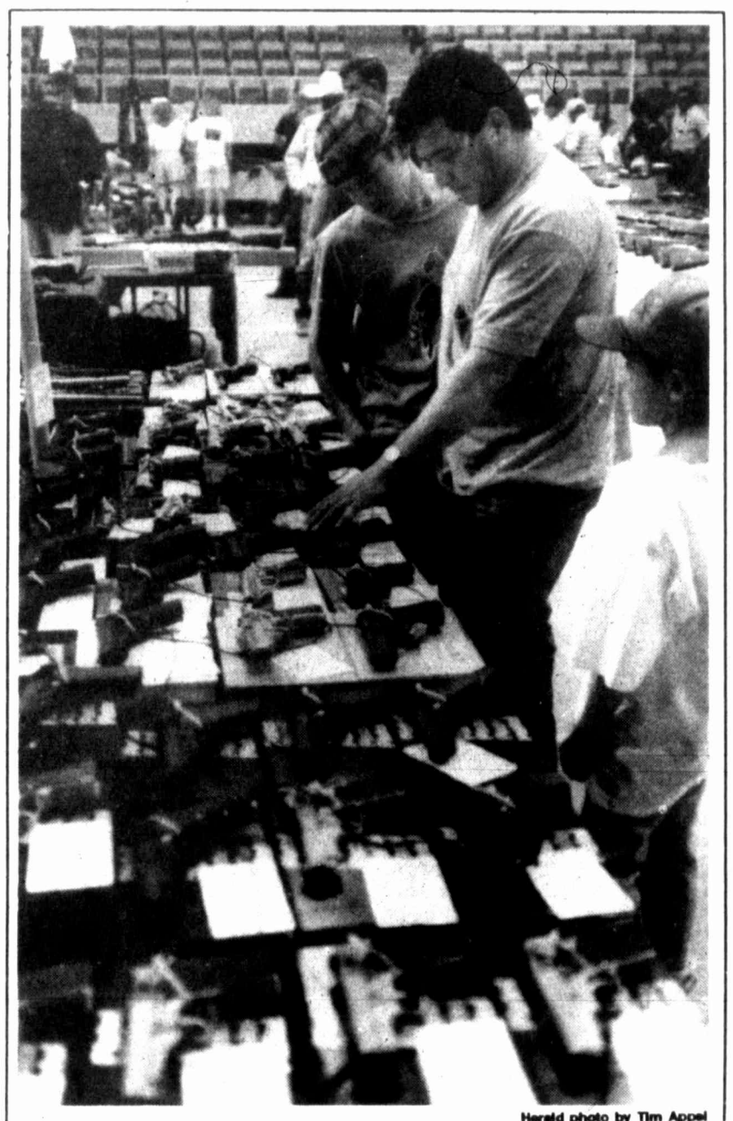

Their American counterparts — Paul Azinger, Fred Couples, Tom Kite and Payne Stewart — had much more impressive numbers Sunday: two wins and two ties. But over the three days, they were a much less impressive 3-8-4. And Azinger and Couples, the top-ranked U.S. players at Nos. 5 and 6, totaled zero wins and just four ties in nine matches.

European captain Bernard Gallacher did his best to cover his weak cards. After the loss, he was reluctant to put the blame anywhere.

But the fact remains that two European rookies folded faster than card tables down the stretch Sunday. Englishman Barry Lane squandered a 3-up lead by bogeying three of the last five holes in his loss to Beck. And Italian Constantino Rocca missed a 4-foot par putt on 17 and bogeyed 18 to lose what turned out to be the decisive match to Davis Love III.

After the glow of this Ryder Cup victory fades, remember guys like Gallagher and Beck.

"That match," U.S. captain Tom Watson recalled, "was the heart of our victory here."

Texan captures tourney crown

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Some of the best bowlers in the country were at Big Spring's Bowl-A-Rama this weekend. Many of them have been in the Professional Bowlers Association for years, but Sunday's winner is just a pup.

On the PBA circuit, that is.

Mike Shoemaker, 27, of San Antonio took home the $3,000 first-place prize after winning the third annual Big Spring Merchants Regional PBA Open. Shoemaker won his first PBA event in 11 tries.

"I just got all the breaks I needed going down the stretch," said Shoemaker. "I've reached the finals of three tournaments before this, but I came in sixth each time. With this caliber of bowlers, you just have to get some breaks."

Shoemaker has bowled in only weekend events, the regional events, so far. The bowlers that are seen on national television bowl in national tournaments that start in the middle of the week and usually end on Saturday.

This weekend's tournament in Big Spring brought in 96 pros from the PBA's Southwestern region, which includes seven states - Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado, Louisiana and Arkansas. Ron Williams of North Richland Hills, Texas, finished second and earned $2,000. Williams bowls in the national tournaments and earned a total of $111,745 in his first 15 tournaments this year.

Shoemaker's winning pin total was 5944, while Williams had 5878. Midland's Dennis Samsel, a non-PBA entry, was third at 5816.

Big Spring's two representatives - Philip Ringener and Chuck Carr - finished 17th and 53rd, respectively. Ringener bowls on the national tour.

The Bowl-A-Rama also hosted its Pro/Am Saturday, an event that attracted 81 amateur bowlers. Each amateur bowled three games, teaming with a different pro each game.

Big Spring's Randy Robertson won the Pro/Am with help from his three professional teammates - Williams, Mike Scroggins and Rick Minier. Robertson, who bowls left-handed, rolled a 752 for his three games and earned the first-place prize of $225.

"I had three good bowlers with me," Robertson said. "I've been bowling for 20 years. I had a four-year layoff, but I just started back last summer."

J.M. and Janie Ringener, owners of the Bowl-A-Rama, put together another fine tournament and invite everyone to come see the Bowl-A-Rama's next big event. The Special Olympics bowler will compete Saturday, Oct. 23.

"It would do everyone some good to come out and watch them bowl," J.M. said. "I know I feel good for a whole week after watching them."

J.M. said that without the help of local merchants, bringing the professionals to Big Spring would not be possible. His wife agreed.

"We had a few less entries this year, but we still had a really good turnout," Janie said. "We hope to get more people here next year."

Beck, Cook turn tide as U.S. keeps Cup

By The Associated Press

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — The inexorable momentum that carried the United States to a Ryder Cup triumph was started when captain Tom Watson went to his bench for a couple of pinch hitters.

Three points down to Europe and with his team's chances looking poor, Watson called on Chip Beck and John Cook to turn the tide in fourball play on Saturday.

"It all stems from Chip and John winning that fourball match," Watson said Sunday after his team had rolled to a 15-13 victory that kept the 27-inch trophy in American hands for another two years.

It takes nothing away from the Sunday heroics; 51-year-old Ray Floyd grinding away as only he can, the critical comeback win by Davis Love III, Jim Gallagher's singles victory over Seve Ballesteros, Beck's rally from 3-down with five holes to play.

The list is long.

But it was the 2-up victory of Cook and Beck over Europe's best, Nick Faldo and Colin Montgomerie, that got them started.

"We knew we needed that point, and we went out and got it," said Cook, who, like Beck, had been on the bench for the first three sets of matches.

And, in the end, there may have been a little help — unwitting help, to be sure — from European captain Bernard Gallacher.

Europe was up by three points and was in position to put the Americans away — put them in a position from which they could not recover — in those Saturday afternoon fourballs.

Gallacher, however, chose to bench two of his marquee players, Masters champion Bernhard Langer of Germany and the team's emotional and psychological leader, the mercurial Ballesteros.

It opened the door, both to an American rally and inevitable second-guessing of h s decision not to go for the knockout punch.

On the heels of the inspirational victory by Cook and Beck, the Americans charged through that opened door. They won three of four matches, pulled to within one point and set the stage for Sunday's continuing comeback.

"One of the great Ryder Cups of all time," Watson said.

"My team performed with the guts that typify a team from America. You don't know how proud I am to be their captain."

Rangers on brink of elimination

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox talked about postseason excitement in the crowd. The Texas Rangers sounded like Yogi Berra.

"It's not over till it's over," said Rangers pitcher Roger Pavlik after the White Sox clinched a tie for their first AL West title since 1983 with a 5-3 victory over Texas in the opener of a doubleheader Sunday.

Texas prevented Chicago from clinching outright by winning the nightcap 3-2.

"You never know, we could win seven and they could lose seven," said Pavlik (11-6), the second-game winner.

But it's not likely.

The White Sox lead Texas by seven games with seven remaining, and are home against Seattle tonight, while the Rangers play Tuesday night at Oakland.

"It's not over till they clinch," said Julio Franco, the Rangers' hero of the second game. "We're not going to quit."

Juan Gonzalez, who leads the Rangers in home runs and RBIs, missed both games because of a strained back muscle. Gonzalez refused Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy's request to pinch-hit in the seventh and ninth innings of the opener.

"Damn right I thought about it," Kennedy said. "That was our season right there. All I can do is ask. The guy said he can't play, so I go on to the next-best guy."

With the score 1-1 in the eighth inning of the second game, Franco hit an RBI double off Alex Fernandez (17-9) and scored on Dean Palmer's grounder.

Season of the kicker continues in National Football League

By The Associated Press

In pro football, the operative word is "foot."

There were game-winning field goals Sunday and long field goals, but there weren't too many missed field goals.

And that seems the trend this season, with kickers converting 163 field goals in 202 attempts. The league-wide accuracy rate of 81 percent is up from last year's 73 percent.

There have been almost as many field goals as touchdowns — 163 to 178. That too is a big change from last year, when the ratio was 561 FGs to 958 TDs.

The game-winners:

— Morten Andersen made a 49-yarder with 5 seconds left, giving the New Orleans Saints a 16-13 victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

— Fuad Reveiz made a 22-yarder with 6 seconds left in Minnesota's 15-13 decision over Green Bay.

The long ones:

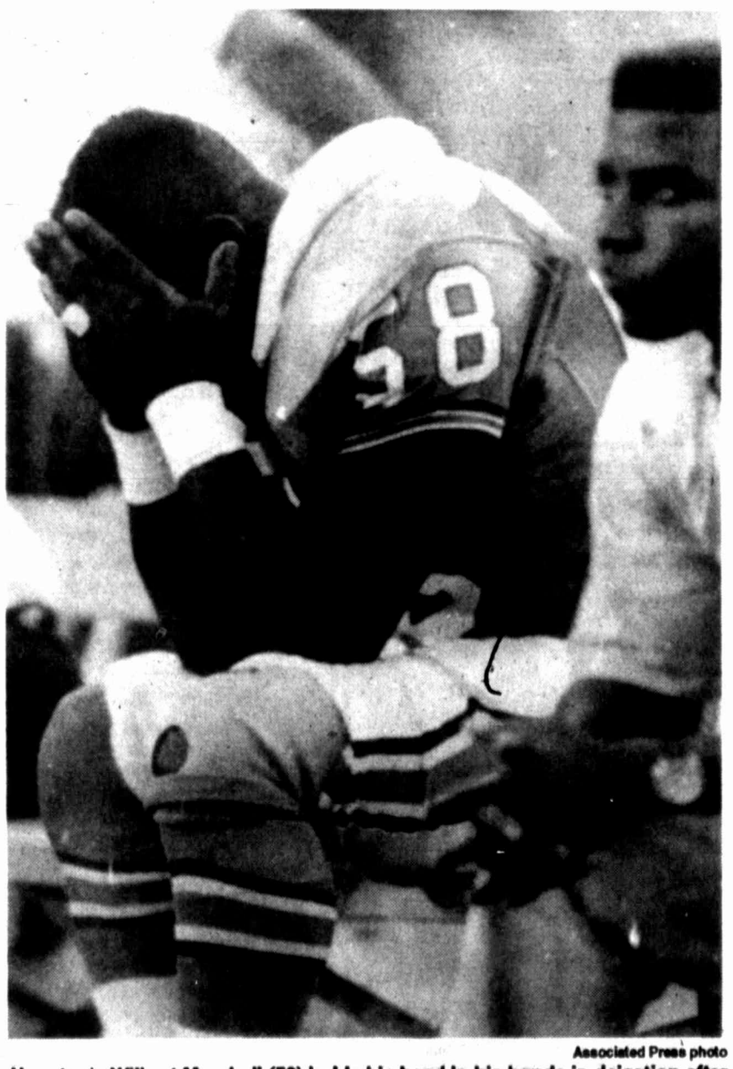

— Steve Christie of Buffalo kicked a 59-yarder, the third-longest in NFL history, in Buffalo's 22-13 loss to Miami. "When you've got the wind, you've got the confidence to say: 'Oh, why not,'" he said.

— Greg Davis of Phoenix connected from 54 yards in the Cardinals' 26-20 loss to Detroit.

In other games, Indianapolis beat Cleveland 23-10, the Los Angeles Rams downed Houston 28-13, Chicago routed Tampa Bay 47-17, the New York Jets ripped New England 45-7 and Seattle defeated Cincinnati 19-10.

Tonight, Pittsburgh plays at Atlanta.

Denver, Kansas City, the Los Angeles Raiders, San Diego, Dallas, the New York Giants, Philadelphia and Washington had the weekend off.

Houston's Wilbert Marshall (58) holds his head in his hands in dejection after the Oilers' upset loss to the Los Angeles Rams Sunday afternoon in Houston.

Rams 28, Oilers 13

At Houston, Warren Moon connected with Ernest Givens on an 80-yard TD pass midway through the third quarter to cut the Oilers' deficit to 14-13, but Jim Everett came back with touchdown passes of 22 yards to Travis McNeal and 48 yards to Henry Ellard.

"It's a very, very satisfying feeling to win in here, especially coming in a decided underdog," Los Angeles coach Chuck Knox said. The Rams are 2-2 and Houston 1-3.

Saints 16, 49ers 13

At New Orleans, Wade Wilson engineered a 45-yard drive in the final minute after Mike Cofer's 30-yard field goal had tied the score with 1:14 left.

"I never had any concern about Wade's ability to get the job done," Saints coach Jim Mora said. "He's proven he can do what we want to do. That last drive was a heck of a job."

Wilson started the drive with a shovel pass to Dalton Hilliard for 9 yards, then hit Eric Martin for 15 and scrambled for 7. He connected on another 9-yarder to Martin to set up Andersen's kick.

The 49ers (2-2) lost for only the third time in their last dozen games with the Saints (4-0).

Vikings 15, Packers 13

At Minneapolis, Reveiz's kick was set up by Jim McMahon's 45-yard pass to a wide-open Eric Guliford that put the ball at the Packers' 5.

Green Bay safety LeRoy Butler, responsible for deep coverage on the play, described his thoughts when he saw Guliford unguarded: "It was a mirage."

In its previous game, Green Bay (1-2) let Philadelphia pull even on a long pass and win on a field goal with 5 seconds left.

McMahon, signed by the Vikings (2-1) as a free agent in the offseason, has won his last nine starts against the Packers.

Dolphins 22, Bills 13

At Miami, the Dolphins scored the first four times they touched the ball, and suddenly it was 19-0 with the crowd of 79,635 awfully quiet.

The same thing happened last year as Miami handed Buffalo its first loss of the season on the Bills' home field. Both teams are 2-1 and in a four-way tie for first in the AFC East.

Dan Marino, who finished 20-of-32 for 282 yards, threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar and also ran 4 yards for a touchdown. Fryer had seven catches for 103 yards, and Terry Kirby had six catches for 91 yards.

Lions 26, Cardinals 20

At Pontiac, Mich., Andre Ware led his team past Phoenix (1-3) but is not happy with his coach. Wayne Fontes refused to name Ware the No. 1 starter after his 11-of-24, 194-yard afternoon.

"Wednesday will be our first day back at practice," Fontes said. "I'll look at the films and then I'll decide who will be our quarterback."

"What's he going to do?" Ware asked. "Try out a quarterback every week?"

Detroit (3-1) recovered a fumble by Steve Beuerlein with just under two minutes left, ending Phoenix's last chance for a tying score.

Colts 23, Browns 10

At Indianapolis, the Colts (2-1) kept Cleveland (3-1) from becoming the league's second 4-0 team.

Vinny Testaverde came off the bench again to attempt a fourth-quarter comeback. Unlike last week, he didn't succeed. Testaverde threw an interception and fumbled in the end zone on Cleveland's last two chances.

Jack Trudeau led the Colts on a 65-yard drive ending in a 6-yard TD run by Anthony Johnson to make it 16-10 with 3:14 left. Jeff Herrod fell on Testaverde's fumble in the end zone for the final touchdown with 1:19 to go.

Bears 47, Buccaneers 17

At Chicago, kicker Kevin Butler was perfect, hitting from 33, 40, 32 and 31 yards, and Jim Harbaugh passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in Dave Wannstedt's first victory as Bears coach.

"We're headed in the right direction. ... It's something to build on," Wannstedt said.

The Bears are 1-2. The Bucs (0-3) were out of this one by halftime.

Jets 45, Patriots 7

At East Rutherford, N.J., Bill Parcells' team didn't look anything like the teams he used to coach at Giants Stadium. The Patriots (0-4) gave up 35 straight points in a first half in which they were outgained 233 yards to 41.

"We were completely outclassed in every way," Parcells said. "That wasn't even a good scrimmage."

Seahawks 19, Bengals 10

At Cincinnati, Harold Green of the Bengals (0-4) fumbled in his own end zone with 4:26 left and Rod Stephens pounced on it for a touchdown, giving Seattle (2-2) the deciding points.

"That's a game that makes old men of coaches," Seattle coach Tom Flores said.

Youth roundup: Runnels spikers 3rd in tourney

BROWNFIELD - The Runnels Junior High volleyball team took third place at an eighth-grade tournament Saturday, winning two out of three matches.

In their first match, Runnels defeated Levelland 15-6, 1-15, 15-12. Jessica Cobos had an 11-point performance for Runnels, as did Mandy Lance. Kelly Hollar scored five points.

Runnels lost its second match to Brownfield's Red team, 15-9, 10-15, 15-7. Lance scored 12 points, and Melissa Martinez scored six.

Runnels beat Brownfield's White team in the third-place match, 15-1, 15-2. Marisa Smith led Runnels with seven points. Cobos scored six points, and Shakeesha Lott scored five.

Kara Hughes, Krissi McWherter, Maggie Haddad, Honey Belew and Crystal Flynn supplied Runnels with excellent play.

Runnels wins one, ties another

SNYDER - Runnels Junior High's "A" football team won 19-18 Thursday thanks to an incredible game-ending touchdown drive.

Snyder scored with 1 minute, 54 seconds left in the game to take an 18-13 lead. Runnels had no timeouts left but managed to put together a four-play, 75-yard scoring drive. Runnels quarterback Gabriel Mendoza hit Brock Gee with the game-winning touchdown pass as time expired.

Mendoza connected on two long pass plays to put the Yearlings in position to win. Charles Rodriguez caught a Mendoza screen pass and gained 30 yards, and on the next play Mendoza connected with Gee on a 35-yard pass.

Gee, Runnels' tight end, scored the first touchdown of the game in the second quarter on a 4-yard pass from Mendoza. The play came on fourth down. Runnels led 7-6 at the half.

In the third quarter, Luis Lopez got into the touchdown-throwing act by hitting Gee with a 20-yard touchdown pass.

Runnels received strong running from Robin Cisneros and Jeff Denton. Other stars for Runnels were Jason Brock, Gil Greywunder, James Newman, Val Torres, Luis Pena, Sammy Prince, James Smith, Bo Edridge and Josh Ferneau.

The Yearlings are 3-0 and will host Monahans Thursday at Blankenship Field, after the "B" game.

Speaking of the "B" team, Runnels tied Snyder 6-6.

Ricky Perez's 15-yard touchdown run was Runnels' only score. That came in the first quarter. Snyder scored on a 20-yard run in the third quarter.

Runnels had plenty of defensive standouts: Adrian Rodriguez, Chris Felty, Will Shoals, John Lawdermilk, Eddie Campos, Brady Patterson, Clayton Pate, Dylon Chambers, John Peters, Alex Gusman, Dusty Osborn and Chris Perry.

Crossroads league reports results

The Crossroads Little Football League played its second Saturday worth of games this past weekend, but first, here are the results from the league's Opening Day, Sept. 18.

Buffaloes I 28, Oilers 6

Zack Johnson and Caesar Rodriguez also scored touchdowns for the winners. Billy Kinsey and George Garcia were defensive stars for the Buffaloes.

Michael Smith scored the Oilers' touchdown, and Abel Guzman also played well on offense. Michael Sheldon and Jeramiah Baeza were defensive stars for the Oilers.

Longhorns 32, Cowboys 0

The Longhorns walked tall on Opening Day, and Lance Brock helped lead the way.

Brock scored two touchdowns for the winners, while Matt Green, Chris Jackson and Ricky Solis each scored one. Joseph Yanez, the Longhorns' center, played an excellent game.

Joseph Clark, Rene Herrera, Mario Yanez, Blake Gee and Jonathan Bagwell led the Longhorns' outstanding defensive effort.

Aaron Lattimore, Doug Tipton, Nick Valencia and Patrick Wiggington played well on defense for the Cowboys.

Lions 6, Bulldogs I 6

The Lions and Bulldogs battled to a tie on Opening Day, but the Lions were awarded the victory because they had the most first downs.

Brandon Mendoza scored the Lions' touchdown. John Lopez, Jerrod Simmons and Kyle Richards also starred on offense, while Jon Hays, Chris McBrayar, Mario Hernandez and Jimmy Wallace led the Lions' defense.

Chase Ward scored the Bulldogs' touchdown, and he had help on offense from Ivan Valasquez and Anthony Herrera. The Bulldogs' fine defensive effort was led by Paul Ruiz, Travis Hipp, Richard Rye and Chris Petree.

Buffaloes II 12, Packers 0

Chris Rios scored two touchdowns to help the Buffaloes pass the Packers on Opening Day.

Logan Stanley and Louis Mancha were also stars on offense. Four standouts among the Buffaloes' superb defensive effort were Kyle Newton, Chris King, Brandon Bingham and Daniel Whetzel.

Greg Grawunder, Joby Molina and Jordon Partee were the Packers' top players on offense. Defensive leaders for the Packers were Steven Valencia, Anthony Hernandez, Clifford Keith, Josh Arguello and Jason Choate.

Now for Week 2:

Longhorns 18, Buffaloes II 7

Lance Brock scored two touchdowns to help the Longhorns (2-0) beat the Buffaloes (1-1) Saturday.

Jonathan Bagwell caught a touchdown pass for the winners. Rene Herrera and Joseph Clark were the Longhorns' top defensive stars.

Kyle Newton scored the Buffaloes' touchdown, while Brandon Bingham and Chris King also had big games.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FOR TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Whatever you decide to do proves to be exciting today. Don't mince words; be clear about your choices and your direction. Communications from a partner or supervisor bring exciting news and new options. Keep your cool; stay mysterious and say little. Tonight: Remember, mum's the word. *****

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get some startling and troublesome news today and have to pinch yourself to see if it's true. Your next thought is, "What do I do now?" The answer: Worry little about changes and remain upbeat. Know that this, too, shall pass. Tonight: Count on fun and games. **

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A partner is there for you. Exciting news opens the door to adventure and business potential. State your desires clearly. A keen awareness and sense of clarity is especially important today. Accept added responsibility with a grin. Tonight: Lead the gang. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Excitement is on the horizon, and there's no reason not to go after it. Be clear as to where you are heading and what you want once you get there. A partner surprises you, opening up new options. Go with the flow. Tonight: Don't make a choice just yet. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fun and games surround a partnership. How you deal with it is a matter of your integrity. Be aware of how a partner sees you in a business dealing. A move in a new direction could end up feeling good. Tonight: Open your heart. ****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain a new perspective about a loved one and end up feeling far better than before about the relationship. Excitement follows, and new options as well. Be willing to take a risk. Tonight: It's up to your imagination. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Excitement surrounds a domestic situation and potential business partnership. Enjoy what's going on and maximize the opportunity. Allow another to do the talking. Listen closely and try to understand. Listen closely and try to understand an alternative point of view. Two heads work better than one today. Tonight: Lounge at home. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A loved one stuns you - or is that a new flirtation in your life? Whatever it is, you just stepped onto a roller-coaster. Maximize your creativity, go for the bottom line and be secure in knowing that you've got what it takes to succeed. Tonight: A loving approach goes far. ****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Listen closely to your inner needs. Be willing to take a risk and open up to new input. A loved one definitely does care. Look to a surprise business venture and increased knowledge. Tonight: Fluff up the pillows and prepare your pad for good times. **

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your unusual actions today trigger equally unusual reactions. Be aware of the implications of your words and deeds. A loving approach will get you far, but be willing to change choices quickly. Tonight: You call the shots. ****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Follow your gut and you'll like the reaction. Your instincts are on target in a financial matter; no one can outdo you right now. Be aware of just what another is asking of you, and how much you are willing to offer. Break past self-imposed restrictions. Tonight: Try to be generous. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Another is impressed with your accomplishments and lets you know in no uncertain terms. Look to the positive and be willing to flow through a change. A loved one shows a great deal of care. Tonight: Laugh. ****

IF SEPTEMBER 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Tune in to your many options this year, especially at work. You can build a stronger financial base; prepare for the influx of large sums of money. Be willing to open up to others.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Wrong number brings right marriage

DEAR ABBY: Here's how one telephone call changed my life: I was a 19-year-old fellow working late on a Saturday night at a service station. The telephone rang, and when I answered it, a young lady said, "Oops, sorry, I must have a wrong number — I was calling my aunt."

I don't know what got into me, but I said, "Please don't hang up — what's your name?"

She said, "It's Betty, but I don't talk to strangers ..."

I introduced myself, saying, "Well, Betty, my name is Frank." Then I asked her to give me her telephone number in case we got disconnected. I guess I fell in love with her voice, so I convinced her to meet me. When we met, it was love at first sight. She was only 16, but her parents approved of me, and three months later we were married.

Last July, we celebrated our 43rd wedding anniversary. We have three fine sons, ages 34, 37 and 42. The oldest is married and gave us two beautiful granddaughters — ages 11 and 8.

Betty is now an operating room technician at Crawford Long Hospital in Doraville, Ga., and I'm with General Motors with nearly enough years to retire. I guess you could say that our meeting is the story of how one wrong number turned out to be the right number for Betty and me. You may use our name. — THE FRANK WILLIAMSONS, AUSTELL, GA.

DEAR WILLIAMSONS: Congratulations on your anniversary, and thank you for a charming story. Alas, 43 years ago it may have been safe enough to give one's first name and telephone number to a stranger, but today, the risks are too great.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Your column on fateful phone calls prompted this letter: My husband died several years ago, after which a longtime female friend and I decided to share an apartment. One evening, on a lark, she tracked down an old boyfriend to whom I had been engaged 30 years ago, when I was 18.

She introduced herself, then handed me the phone. We talked for a while, and he asked where I worked, so I told him. A couple of days later, he showed up at my office with 30 roses — one for every year we had been apart. We hit it off immediately and have been together ever since. We are being married in November. — OREGONIANS

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Here's how one telephone call changed my life: I got a call at home from an anonymous person who thought I should know that my husband was having an affair with a young woman who worked for him. She told me that they went to a motel on the edge of town every Friday for a three-hour lunch.

Because my husband had several unexplained absences from work, I hired a private detective to follow him. Sure enough, he was meeting his secretary at the motel. After I told him that I knew what had been going on, he didn't deny it. We saw our lawyers and ended our marriage.

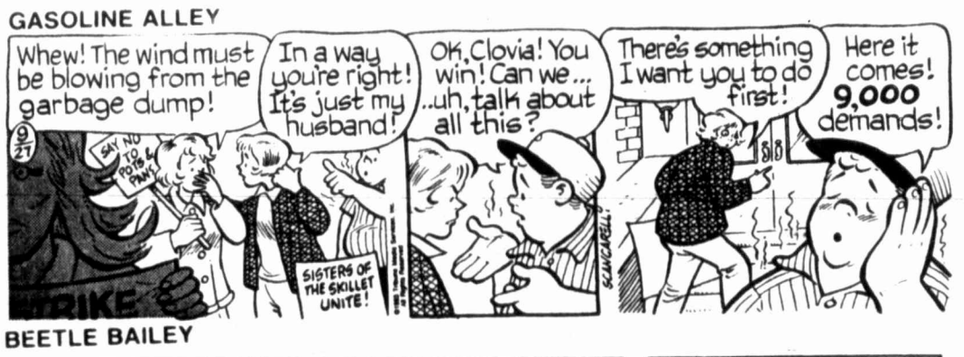

Now, I suspect that SHE was the anonymous caller who tipped me off about my husband's affair. No names or towns, please. Sign me ... BETTER OFF NOW

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
