YOUNG'S DEATH MEANS PEACE FOR HERRIN

Lockwood To Start Tuesday Noon On Long Auto Grind

C-C TO LAUNCH A LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM SOON

Committee May Be Named And Go to Austin Tuesday

HAVE FOUR POINTS

Funds for Farm, Free Bridge Road and Zone Law Included

An aggressive campaign at Austin in the interests of legislative matters important to Wichita Falls will probably be started this week after a meeting Tuesday of the directors of the chamber of commerce. The legislative committee of the chamber for 1925 will be named by President J. T. Harrell, it is believed, and there is a possibility of its members leaving the same day. No indication has been given as to its personnel.

In its legislative program for 1925 the chamber of commerce has outlined four major plans it proposes to push. These have not been formally presented to and ratified by the directors, but they will come up Tuesday morning and there is no reason to believe that they will not be adopted.

Funds For Farm.

First in line is the securing of an adequate appropriation to carry on the work of the new state experimental farm recently located here. At least $40,000 or $50,000 it is thought, will be needed for the two-year program of the farm and the legislative committee will endeavor to make possible the appropriation of this amount. The state board of control has recommended a reduction in the fund available for the farm, but rescinding of the resolution order is believed possible. Directors of the irrigation project are joining the chamber of commerce in its efforts in behalf of the experimental farm.

No less important is the matter of free bridges across Red River—a project in which the chambers of commerce of Wichita Falls, Burkburnett, Vernon and other points are vitally interested. The constitution now prohibits the expending of county funds for interstate bridges, but the legislative committee proposes to seek a revision of these laws and thus clear the way for the building of a free bridge or bridges into Oklahoma. Specifically, the chambers of commerce of this city, Vernon and Burkburnett propose to ask for Wichita and Wilbarger county commissioners the right to defray part of the cost of such a bridge. It is thought that specific permission may be obtained for such work.

Want Right-of-Way.

A third point on which the committee will work at Austin is that of crossing of the state insane asylum lands near Lake Wichita by the new hard road it is proposed to build past the municipal park and golf club. To carry out the most feasible route, the road builders must cut through a corner of the asylum grounds. It will join the Holiday road on one side, pass the new park and connect with the present lake road near Lake Wichita. Permission to cross the state land will be sought from the board of control, should it have power to grant such permission.

Co-operation with other cities in Texas to secure a zoning law permitting communities to regulate the erection of business houses in residential districts is the fourth point in the program, while a fifth, primarily the troubles of the school board but in which the chamber of commerce is also interested, involves extension of the independent school district limits to include some additional territory.

The directors meeting is scheduled to start at 10 o'clock.

FISHERMEN STILL MISSING.

Skiffs Still Unheard From Off Newfoundland; Bodies Recovered.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Jan. 25.—The five fishing skiffs, which with 30 fishermen were swept to sea Friday night in a storm off Rose Blanche bay on the southwest coast, had not been heard from tonight. Wireless reports from the mail steamer Kyle, which turned from her course between North Sydney, N. S., and Port Aux Basques, to cobb the sea for the missing craft, said she found no trace of them. The coastal steamer Prospero has been directed to join in the search.

20 INCHES OF SNOW.

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Jan. 25.—Twenty inches of snow covered the city today, the heaviest snowfall here since 1910. The storm, which started Friday morning, abated last night.

THE WEATHER

As observed by the Wichita Falls Electric company: Maximum 69, minimum 43, at 5 p. m. 65; precipitation 0; cloudy, southwest breeze; average wind velocity 10 miles per hour; maximum wind velocity 18 miles per hour; barometer 28.96.

Oklahoma: Monday rain turning to snow, colder with a cold wave; Tuesday fair, colder in east portion.

East Texas: Monday and Tuesday unsettled, colder; cold wave in the interior Monday night.

West Texas: Monday unsettled and probably snow in north portion, colder with a cold wave; Tuesday fair, colder in southeast portion.

100 Hours Without A Stop, Aim

Thousands will be interested this week in watching the most unique test of human endurance and mechanical reliability undertaken in Wichita Falls in recent years. Tomorrow at 12:30 noon, "Daredevil" Lockwood will leave from in front of the Zale Jewelry Co., Eighth and Ohio, shackled to the steering wheel of a new stock Reo touring automobile on a drive of 100 consecutive hours without a stop for food or sleep, and with the hood of the engine locked and sealed. Every automobile owner will watch the Reo to see if this car, a stock model, can be run continuously for four days and four hours without adjustment. Fuel will be supplied while the car is in motion. Every man loves athletics (and who doesn't like to see a man test his strength and nerve?) will watch Lockwood's attempt to pilot a car around Wichita Falls roads and through its city traffic, night and day without a stop for 100 hours. Lockwood says he can do it and no one who knows his

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 25.— Nine persons were injured, three so seriously that they may not recover, when St. Louis-San Francisco passenger train No. 11 ran into a battered switch at Roff, Okla., at 1 o'clock this afternoon and four cars turned over, according to word received here by Frisco officials.

BOND PRICES MOVE UPWARD.

General Trend of Market During Past Week Regarded As Satisfactory.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Bond prices maintained their upward trend last week, but made only moderate progress. Net gains predominated in all sections of the market at the close of the week, reflecting a firm undertone and demand for securities, although trading diminished in volume and advances, except in a few instances, were limited to a narrow range.

New financing after falling to $23,000,000 in the preceding week expanded to about $117,000,000 and probably furnished an outlet for a large portion of the week's investment buying.

NEW RECORD FOR U. S. LOANS

More Money Sent Away By Investors In 1924 Than In Any Previous Time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—More money was loaned abroad by American investors and institutions during 1924 than in any previous period outside of war years.

The commerce department reported today that tabulations by T. R. Goldsmith, chief of the finance and investment division, placed the total of foreign securities publicly offered in the United States for the year at $1,208,458,394 as compared with $538,315,500 in 1923 and $841,335,000 in 1922.

BURGLARS IN EVERY STORE

Cookville, Texas, Looted Saturday Night By Yeggs

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 25.—Burglars entered every store in the town of Cookville, near here, last night, including the depot and the postoffice, and escaped with several thousand dollars in property and money. Several hundred dollars in cash, jewelry, merchandise, drugs, pistols, cartridges and other articles were taken in the wholesale looting of the town. Local officers are following several clues but have made no arrests.

WANTS WAR ON TICK.

Compulsory Eradication is Aim of Bill to Be Introduced in House.

AUSTIN, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Cattle tick eradication would be systematic and compulsory in unclean territory west of the Brazos river and north of a line running from the northwest corner of Robertson county to the southeast corner of Harrison county, according to a bill which will be introduced in both houses of the legislature Monday, according to a statement by interested cattlemen.

PAPER PRICE TO INCREASE.

PARIS, Jan. 25.—Beginning February 1 the price of daily newspapers will be 20 centimes instead of 15 centimes. Owners of the newspapers assert that the increase in price is due to the high cost of print paper and big salaries paid to

OIL, STEELS, GRAIN, RAILS MOVE UPWARD

Business Basically Sound, Is General View After Record Week

OIL ADVANCE IS BEST

Petroleum Industry Now Due For Better Days, Leaders Assert

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Indisputable evidences of the strong underlying position of trade and industry were supplied last week by general advances in crude oil and gasoline prices, by the remarkable recuperative earning power of larger independent steel companies as shown in reports for the last quarter of 1924, by the establishment of a seasonable record for freight traffic and by new peak prices for grain.

Although some moderation in new buying of basic commodities was reported, this was offset by renewed activity in other lines, notably an increased demand for clothing, textiles, shoes and other products in anticipation of spring requirements. The trend of prices, while uneven, was mainly toward higher levels.

Oil Prices Up.

The most significant development perhaps in the week's budget of favorable news was the widespread increase in gasoline and crude oil prices, attesting to the improved conditions in the oil industry. The second general revision of prices within the past fortnight carried gasoline from 1 to 3 cents a gallon higher and crude oil up 15 to 35 cents a barrel.

As evidence that the advance in raw and refined production was based on a solid foundation it was pointed out that consumption, according to government figures, was exceeding production and stocks of both crude oil and the refined output were being heavily drawn upon. No new fields with the possible exception of Wortham appeared to offer promise of increased production. For the past several years a balancing of oil consumption and production invariably has been the signal for an increase in prices, automatically encouraging a resumption of intensive drilling, followed by another price reaction.

Tax Exempt Issues Go.

Further selling of tax exempt issues also was noted. In this connection figures were published to show the flight of capital into this type of security. Some offerings of $400,000,000 in tax exempt bonds in 1913 before the income tax law became operative, the total was swelled last year to $1,400,000,000. The value of such issues outstanding was estimated at more than $10,000,000,000. Prospects for a readjustment of taxation, bankers believe, will reduce the volume of tax exempt offerings this year.

The latest addition to the growing list of foreign borrowers in this country is the German General Electric company, which has arranged to float a $10,000,000 twenty-year, 7 per cent loan this week.

Mrs. Ida Chitwood Will Open Cooking School For Record News Today

Cooking can easily be called the most important subject known to man, for what else is as vital three times a day as cooking is? And during the week of January 26, cooking will be just as important between meals as it is when the dinner gong sounds—for all feminine Wichita Falls will be improving its biscuit style at The Record News Cooking School in the Kemp ballroom.

Mrs. Ida Chitwood, nationally known food expert, predicts the greatest school she has ever conducted, in Wichita Falls this week. With her miniature white enamel-and-procelain kitchen erected like a pretty stage setting and operating like a bungalow food manufactory and with hundreds of inquiries preceding the first lesson Monday afternoon, Mrs. Chitwood was highly delighted with her decision to pay Wichita Falls a visit, during her schedule of engagements in the larger cities of the United States.

Culinary Artist.

With her reputation already established as one of America's foremost culinary artists, the women of Wichita Falls have responded enthusiastically to the visit of Mrs. Chitwood. Rarely has the opportunity for practical food study ever been offered in such an ideal manner, and the feminine population of the city is threatening to break down the burdened elevators that lead from the streets right up to the most savory spot in Wichita Falls today.

"Women are always interested in cooking, everywhere," Mrs. Chitwood said, as she estimated the capacity of the spacious hotel ballroom to accommodate those who will assemble this week, every afternoon from 2:30 until 4:30, until and including Friday. "I only hope that standing room will be left for those who are a tiny bit late, for I do so want to help every housewife in this beautiful city to make her household burdens and her kitchen problems easier."

The subject f Mrs. Chitwood first lecture will be cake—and the audience will be surprised to hear that in all the world and all the pantries, there are only two kinds of cake: Shortening cake, and sponge cake. Every cake is a variation of those two, and every one begins with being a shortening or a sponge cake. The angel's food and Satanic confections and all the big family of sweet breads, simply are children of these two parents.

Mrs. Chitwood's program contains only the most practical and most useful ideas. Cooking as an art should also be an applied science, Mrs. Chitwood believes, and a recipe that is useless in ordinary households is best left for the caterer. However, Mrs. Chitwood will select from her wide store of culinary knowledge the best fancy and Parisian named delicacies, and will show that after all, there is not so much in a name as there is in the good old flour and eggs from which the French nom-de-plumed dishes all must come.

Wives Interested.

Every wife is interested in bettering her knowledge of cooking, for it is said that the path to a man's heart is through his palate. And every woman will some day be a wife, with leap year coming so often, so that even the unmarried women will have something valuable to learn from Mrs. Chitwood.

Aprons are being donned by hundreds of Wichita Falls women who are delighted that they may avail themselves of this rare opportunity. Rice puddings are threatened with extinction; and after the Better Cooking Week at the Kemp hotel ballroom, there will be much truth in her claim to being a good cook—she will be, if she is a student of The Record News' great school.

For that is the combined purpose of The Record News and of Mrs. Ida Chitwood, and where there is a series of practical, interesting demonstrations each day for five days, there surely should be some latent talent awakened and much exciting genius aided.

LYNCH, JIM, DAN OR T. W. IN 27? TEXAS WONDERS

Whit Davidson's Rejection Of Regent Clears Way For More Politics

MOODY MAY BE FACTOR

Lynch Davidson Already A Candidate and Ferguson May Come Out

By S. RAYMOND BROOKS, Record News Staff.

AUSTIN, Jan. 25.—In the husks of an innocent-looking statement by T. W. Davidson lies the nubbin of the political field two years hence.

This statement is the most significant, looking to the men and the events after the short two-year span on which Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson has entered as the Texas governor, since the general election last November. It is the most significant of all developments affecting the next political line-up, the next governor's free-for-all, and the determination of Mrs. Ferguson's successor, except the announcement of its author's namesake, Lynch Davidson of Houston, previously made, of his intention to take another two-year running start for the primary hurdles of 1926.

T. W. Davidson was appointed by Governor Neff, on Neff's and Davidson's last day in office, as a member of the University of Texas board of regents, in the place of one of the four regents rejected by the senate Monday. It is noteworthy that Lynch Davidson, the other lieutenant governor of the first Neff administration, was also appointed at the same time, a director of Texas Tech, college at Lubbock. The names were sent to the senate.

T. W. Davidson has written to Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, declining to accept the nomination as a regent for the university. It was not known here what steps could be taken to get his name from before the senate. One governor apparently cannot withdraw the nominations of another governor. It seemed however, that Mrs. Ferguson might solve the question by sending Davidson's letter to the senate, and the senate dispose of it by disregarding his appointment. This would not involve a vote on confirming or rejecting him.

The significant statement in Davidson's letter declining the appointment as a regent was that an individual who may engage in a political campaign should not be on the board.

T. W. Licked Lynch.

Without disparaging the races made by any of the leaders in the democratic primary last summer, this writer expresses the opinion, which reflects that of many able political observers, that T. W. Davidson's entry into the race last year prevented Lynch Davidson from being governor, threw the leadership of the race from a middle-ground man to a decision between the two extremes of the list.

These observers are asking, is there

Like Your Room, Not You-E. d V.

BELFAST, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Eamonn de Valera, the republican leader, today protested against the proposed visit to Ireland of the Prince of Wales.

"If the Belgian king or the American president should come," said Mr. De Valera, "you can respect them as much as you please, because they are rulers of foreign states. But we don't want any foreign king coming to our country to claim rulership."

The belief was expressed today that should the projected visit of the Prince of Wales be dragged into the political arena the arrangement for his coming, which thus far are only tentative, will be cancelled.

Dave May, Chief, and John Boone Leave Police Force

Dave May, chief of city detectives, and John Boone, member of the city's detective force, have both tendered their resignation to Police Commissioner J. T. Young, effective at once, it was learned last night. No reasons were assigned.

The office of detective chief will be handled temporarily, it was announced last night, by Police Chief George Hodgins.

E. T. Reynolds Dies Sunday

Former Member of City Police Force Expires After Long Illness.

E. E. Reynolds, aged 38, formerly a member of the city police force, died at 3:45 Sunday morning at his home, 1915 Tenth street, after a long period of ill health. Leakage of the heart and complications brought on by it were assigned as the immediate cause of death. Mr. Reynold's health broke last spring, necessitating his giving up active work but not until a few days ago was his condition regarded as critical.

He had worked as an officer for about 14 months and had also been employed at the Saul Lebenson department store.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines undertaking parlors at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

COTTON TRADING IS DULL.

Market Past Week Held to Narrow Range of Prices; Sales Slow.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25.—Trading in cotton contracts during the past week has been on the whole very moderate, in fact the market would be described as exceedingly dull. The lack of disposition to trade was due mainly to fear the census report on ginnings, issued Friday morning, would show very large totals. It is probable that prices would have declined more than they did, but for the supporting influence of strong stock and grain markets and continued heavy exports.

KLAN AND ANTIS ACCUSE OTHERS OF DEATHS OF 4

One Deputy Sheriff, An Anti-Klansman, Gets Three of Foe

IS THEN KILLED

State Militia Sent to Preserve Order in Shot-Torn Town

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 25.—(AP)—The dawn of a new peace for Williamson county, the scene of bloody ku klux klan and anti-klan strife in recent months, was freely forecast by members of both factions tonight after a revolver battle here last night in which S. Glenn Young, klan liquor raider, deputy Sheriff Ora Thomas, his arch enemy, and two others were slain.

HERRIN, Ills., Jan. 25.—With militia again patrolling the streets of Herrin, order prevailed today after the latest outbreak of klan and anti-klan warfare last night in which four men were killed, including Glenn Young, klan liquor raider and Ora Thomas, deputy sheriff, recognized outstanding leaders of the two factions.

The two others killed in the revolver battle in a main street cigar shop were Ed Forbes and Homer Warner, both reputed klansmen and companions of Young.

Young died from a bullet wound through the heart, although he was shot in the right breast. These shots, according to reports, came from the two revolvers handled by Thomas.

Find Young Dead

When citizens entered the cigar shop a few minutes after an exchange of 40 or 50 shots they found Young dead and Warner unconscious. Thomas slumped to the floor with bullet wounds in his body and died on the way to the city hospital.

Forbes lay dead on the sidewalk outside, shot through the base of the skull. Warner died in the hospital about two hours later.

A company of militia headed by Major Robert Davis arrived at 2 o'clock a. m. from Carbondale and took charge of the situation.

Versions of the battle vary. It is known, however, that the shooting took place in the Canary cigar store and barber shop, operated in the front of the European hotel, a reputed rendezvous of anti-klan adherents.

Accounts agree that a shot was fired a few minutes before the outbreak from an alley adjacent to a restaurant operated by Young. The bullet lodged in a telephone pole. Ross Lizenby, Herrin policeman, said the shot was fired by Thomas and directed at him. They with others had just left the Herrin courthouse, sitting in night session. Spectators fled and Thomas is reported then to have gone to the European hotel, a block distant, as a call was sent out for Young sympathizers to mobilize. The anti-klan version is that Young and his companion thereupon went to the hotel to seek Thomas and "shoot it out."

The Klan Version

The klan account is that Young and the others were attacked as they passed by outside. Young adherents asserted Forbes was shot from above, because the bullet penetrated in his skull in a direction indicating it might have been fired from an upper window.

Thomas' body was removed to one undertaking establishment and the bodies of the three others to another undertaking place. It was announced the inquest into the killings will be made Tuesday, although Coroner McCowan indicated the investigation might be started tomorrow.

Crowds thronged the two undertaking places and the scene of the fight, viewing the shattered windows. Militiamen patrolled the streets and quiet prevailed.

Major Davis late today issued an order stopping the long procession of curious persons passing through the undertaking establishments to view the bodies.

The body of Young was wrapped in a purple robe, said to designate a "kleagle" of the ku klux klan.

Although first reports said several had been wounded in addition to those killed, none were taken to hospitals. Reports persisted late today that two standers-by had been grazed by bullets. These, however, could not be verified.

YOUNG'S DEATH MEANS PEACE FOR HERRIN

Lockwood To Start Tuesday Noon On Long Auto Grind

C-C TO LAUNCH A LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM SOON

Committee May Be Named And Go to Austin Tuesday

HAVE FOUR POINTS

Funds for Farm, Free Bridge Road and Zone Law Included

An aggressive campaign at Austin in the interests of legislative matters important to Wichita Falls will probably be started this week after a meeting Tuesday of the directors of the chamber of commerce. The legislative committee of the chamber for 1925 will be named by President J. T. Harrell, it is believed, and there is a possibility of its members leaving the same day. No indication has been given as to its personnel.

In its legislative program for 1925 the chamber of commerce has outlined four major plans it proposes to push. These have not been formally presented to and ratified by the directors, but they will come up Tuesday morning and there is no reason to believe that they will not be adopted.

Funds For Farm.

First in line is the securing of an adequate appropriation to carry on the work of the new state experimental farm recently located here. At least $40,000 or $50,000 it is thought, will be needed for the two-year program of the farm and the legislative committee will endeavor to make possible the appropriation of this amount. The state board of control has recommended a reduction in the fund available for the farm, but rescinding of the resolution order is believed possible. Directors of the irrigation project are joining the chamber of commerce in its efforts in behalf of the experimental farm.

No less important is the matter of free bridges across Red River—a project in which the chambers of commerce of Wichita Falls, Burkburnett, Vernon and other points are vitally interested. The constitution now prohibits the expending of county funds for interstate bridges, but the legislative committee proposes to seek a revision of these laws and thus clear the way for the building of a free bridge or bridges into Oklahoma. Specifically, the chambers of commerce of this city, Vernon and Burkburnett propose to ask for Wichita and Wilbarger county commissioners the right to defray part of the cost of such a bridge. It is thought that specific permission may be obtained for such work.

Want Right-of-Way.

A third point on which the committee will work at Austin is that of crossing of the state insane asylum lands near Lake Wichita by the new hard road it is proposed to build past the municipal park and golf club. To carry out the most feasible route, the road builders must cut through a corner of the asylum grounds. It will join the Holiday road on one side, pass the new park and connect with the present lake road near Lake Wichita. Permission to cross the state land will be sought from the board of control, should it have power to grant such permission.

Co-operation with other cities in Texas to secure a zoning law permitting communities to regulate the erection of business houses in residential districts is the fourth point in the program, while a fifth, primarily the troubles of the school board but in which the chamber of commerce is also interested, involves extension of the independent school district limits to include some additional territory.

The directors meeting is scheduled to start at 10 o'clock.

FISHERMEN STILL MISSING.

Skiffs Still Unheard From Off Newfoundland: Bodies Recovered.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Jan. 25.—The five fishing skiffs, which with 30 fishermen were swept to sea Friday night in a storm off Rose Blanche bay on the southwest coast, had not been heard from tonight. Wireless reports from the mail steamer Kyle, which turned from her course between North Sydney, N. S., and Port Aux Basques, to comb the sea for the missing craft, said she found no trace of them. The coastal steamer Prospero has been directed to join in the search.

100 Hours Without A Stop, Aim

Thousands will be interested this week in watching the most unique test of human endurance and mechanical reliability undertaken in Wichita Falls in recent years. Tomorrow at 12:30 noon, "Daredevil" Lockwood will leave from in front of the Zale Jewelry Co., Eighth and Ohio, shackled to the steering wheel of a new stock Reo touring automobile on a drive of 100 consecutive hours without a stop for food or sleep, and with the hood of the engine locked and sealed. Every automobile owner will watch the Reo to see if this car, a stock model, can be run continuously for four days and four hours without adjustment. Fuel will be supplied while the car is in motion. Every man loves athletics (and who doesn't like to see a man test his strength and nerve?) will watch Lockwood's attempt to pilot a car around Wichita Falls roads and through its city traffic, night and day without a stop for 100 hours. Lockwood says he can do it and no one who knows his

BOND PRICES MOVE UPWARD.

General Trend of Market During Past Week Regarded As Satisfactory.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Bond prices maintained their upward trend last week, but made only moderate progress. Net gains predominated in all sections of the market at the close of the week, reflecting a firm undertone and demand for securities, although trading diminished in volume and advances, except in a few instances, were limited to a narrow range.

New financing after falling to $23,000,000 in the preceding week expanded to about $117,000,000 and probably furnished an outlet for a large portion of the week's investment buying.

NEW RECORD FOR U. S. LOANS

More Money Sent Away By Investors In 1924 Than in Any Previous Time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—More money was loaned abroad by American investors and institutions during 1924 than in any previous period outside of war years.

The commerce department reported today that tabulations by T. R. Goldsmith, chief of the finance and investment division, placed the total of foreign securities publicly offered in the United States for the year at $1,208,458,394 as compared with $538,315,500 in 1923 and $841,335,000 in 1922.

BURGLARS IN EVERY STORE

Several hundred dollars in cash, jewelry merchandise, drugs, pistols, cartridges and other articles were taken in the wholesale looting of the town. Local officers are following several clues but have made no arrests.

OIL, STEELS, GRAIN, RAILS MOVE UPWARD

Business Basically Sound, Is General View After Record Week

OIL ADVANCE IS BEST

Petroleum Industry Now Due For Better Days, Leaders Assert

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Indisputable evidences of the strong underlying position of trade and industry were supplied last week by general advances in crude oil and gasoline prices, by the remarkable recuperative earning power of larger independent steel companies as shown in reports for the last quarter of 1924, by the establishment of a seasonable record for freight traffic and by new peak prices for grain.

Although some moderation in new buying of basic commodities was reported, this was offset by renewed activity in other lines, notably an increased demand for clothing, textiles, shoes and other products in anticipation of spring requirements. The trend of prices, while uneven, was mainly toward higher levels.

Oil Prices Up.

The most significant development perhaps in the week's budget of favorable news was the widespread increase in gasoline and crude oil prices, attesting to the improved conditions in the oil industry. The second general revision of prices within the past fortnight carried gasoline from 1 to 3 cents a gallon higher and crude oil up 15 to 35 cents a barrel.

As evidence that the advance in raw and refined production was based on a solid foundation it was pointed out that consumption, according to government figures, was exceeding production and stocks of both crude oil and the refined output were being heavily drawn upon. No new fields with the possible exception of Wortham appeared to offer promise of increased production. For the past several years a balancing of oil consumption and production invariably has been the signal for an increase in prices, automatically encouraging a resumption of intensive drilling, followed by another price reaction.

Tax Exempt Issues Go.

Further selling of tax exempt issues also was noted. In this connection figures were published to show the flight of capital into this type of security. Some offerings of $400,000,000 in tax exempt bonds in 1913 before the income tax law became operative, the total was swelled last year to $1,400,000,000. The value of such issues outstanding was estimated at more than $10,000,000,000. Prospects for a readjustment of taxation, bankers believe, will reduce the volume of tax exempt offerings this year.

The latest addition to the growing list of foreign borrowers in this country is the German General Electric company, which has arranged to float a $10,000,000 twenty-year, 7 per cent loan this week.

Mrs. Ida Chitwood Will Open Cooking School For Record News Today

Cooking can easily be called the most important subject known to man, for what else is as vital three times a day as cooking is? And during the week of January 26, cooking will be just as important between meals as it is when the dinner gong sounds—for all feminine Wichita Falls will be improving its biscuit style at The Record News Cooking School in the Kemp ballroom.

Mrs. Ida Chitwood, nationally known food expert, predicts the greatest school she has ever conducted, in Wichita Falls this week. With her miniature white enamel-and-porcelain kitchen erected like a pretty stage setting and operating like a bungalow food manufactory and with hundreds of inquiries preceding the first lesson Monday afternoon, Mrs. Chitwood was highly delighted with her decision to pay Wichita Falls a visit, during her schedule of engagements in the larger cities of the United States.

Culinary Artist.

With her reputation already established as one of America's foremost culinary artists, the women of Wichita Falls have responded enthusiastically to the visit of Mrs. Chitwood. Barely has the opportunity for practical food study ever been offered in such an ideal manner, and the feminine population of the city is threatening to break down the burdened elevators that lend from the streets right up to the most savory spot in Wichita Falls today.

"Women are always interested in cooking, everywhere," Mrs. Chitwood said, as she estimated the capacity of the spacious hotel ballroom to accommodate those who will assemble this week, every afternoon from 2:30 until 4:30, until and including Friday. "I only hope that standing room will be left for those who are a tiny bit late, for I do so want to help every housewife in this beautiful city to make her household burdens and her kitchen problems easier."

The subject f Mrs. Chitwood first lecture will be cake—and the audience will be surprised to hear that in all the world and all the pantries, there are only two kinds of cake: Shortening cake, and sponge cake. Every cake is a variation of those two, and every one begins with being a shortening or a sponge cake. The angel's food and Satanic confections and all the big family of sweet breads, simply are children of these two parents.

Mrs. Chitwood's program contains only the most practical and most useful ideas. Cooking as an art should also be an applied science, Mrs. Chitwood believes, and a recipe that is useless in ordinary households is best left for the caterer. However, Mrs. Chitwood will select from her wide store of culinary knowledge the best fancy and Parisian named delicacies, and will show that after all, there is not so much in a name as there is in the good old flour and eggs from which the French nom-de-plumed dishes all must come.

Wives Interested.

Every wife is interested in bettering her knowledge of cooking, for it is said that the path to a man's heart is through his palate. And every woman will some day be a wife, with leap year coming so often, so that even the unmarried women will have something valuable to learn from Mrs. Chitwood.

Aprons are being donned by hundreds of Wichita Falls women who are delighted that they may avail themselves of this rare opportunity. Rice puddings are threatened with extinction; and after the Better Cooking Week at the Kemp hotel ballroom, there will be much truth in her claim to being a good cook—she will be, if she is a student of The Record News' great school.

For that is the combined purpose of The Record News and of Mrs. Ida Chitwood, and where there is a series of practical, interesting demonstrations each day for five days, there surely should be some latent talent awakened and much exciting genius aided.

LYNCH, JIM, DAN OR T. W. IN 27? TEXAS WONDERS

Whit Davidson's Rejection Of Regent Clears Way For More Politics

MOODY MAY BE FACTOR

Lynch Davidson Already A Candidate and Ferguson May Come Out

By S. RAYMOND BROOKS, Record News Staff.

AUSTIN, Jan. 25.—In the husks of an innocent-looking statement by T. W. Davidson lies the nubbin of the political field two years hence.

This statement is the most significant, looking to the men and the events after the short two-year span on which Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson has entered as the Texas governor, since the general election last November. It is the most significant of all developments affecting the next political line-up, the next governor's free-for-all, and the determination of Mrs. Ferguson's successor, except the announcement of its author's namesake, Lynch Davidson of Houston, previously made, of his intention to take another two-year running start for the primary hurdles of 1926.

T. W. Davidson was appointed by Governor Neff, on Neff's and Davidson's last day in office, as a member of the University of Texas board of regents, in the place of one of the four regents rejected by the senate Monday. It is noteworthy that Lynch Davidson, the other lieutenant governor of the first Neff administration, was also appointed at the same time, a director of Texas Tech. college at Lubbock. The names were sent to the senate.

T. W. Davidson has written to Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, declining to accept the nomination as a regent for the university. It was not known here what steps could be taken to get his name from before the senate. One governor apparently cannot withdraw the nominations of another governor. It seemed however, that Mrs. Ferguson might solve the question by sending Davidson's letter to the senate, and the senate dispose of it by disregarding his appointment. This would not involve a vote on confirming or rejecting him.

The significant statement in Davidson's letter declining the appointment as a regent was that an individual who may engage in a political campaign should not be on the board.

T. W. Licked Lynch.

Without disparaging the races made by any of the leaders in the democratic primary last summer, this writer expresses the opinion, which reflects that of many able political observers, that T. W. Davidson's entry into the race last year prevented Lynch Davidson from being governor, threw the leadership of the race from a middle-ground man to a decision between the two extremes of the list.

These observers are asking, is there

Like Your Room, Not You-E. d V.

BELFAST, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Eamonn de Valera, the republican leader, today protested against the proposed visit to Ireland of the Prince of Wales.

"If the Belgian king or the American president should come," said Mr. De Valera, "you can respect them as much as you please, because they are rulers of foreign states. But we don't want any foreign king coming to our country to claim rulership."

The belief was expressed today that should the projected visit of the Prince of Wales be dragged into the political arena the arrangement for his coming, which thus far are only tentative, will be cancelled.

E. E. Reynolds, aged 38, formerly a member of the city police force, died at 3:45 Sunday morning at his home, 1915 Tenth street, after a long period of ill health. Leakage of the heart and complications brought on by it were assigned as the immediate cause of death. Mr. Reynold's health broke last spring, necessitating his giving up active work but not until a few days ago was his condition regarded as critical.

He had worked as an officer for about 14 months and had also been employed at the Saul Lebenson department store.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines undertaking parlors at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

COTTON TRADING IS DULL.

Market Past Week Held to Narrow Range of Prices; Sales Slow.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25.—Trading in cotton contracts during the past week has been on the whole very moderate, in fact the market could be described as exceedingly dull. The lack of disposition to trade was due mainly to fear the census report on ginnings, issued Friday morning, would show very large totals. It is probable that prices would have declined more than they did, but for the supporting influence of strong stock and grain markets and continued heavy exports.

KLAN AND ANTIS ACCUSE OTHERS OF DEATHS OF 4

One Deputy Sheriff, An Anti-Klansman, Gets Three of Foe

IS THEN KILLED

State Militia Sent to Preserve Order in Shot-Torn Town

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 25.—(AP)—The dawn of a new peace for Williamson county, the scene of bloody ku klux klan and anti-klan strife in recent months, was freely forecast by members of both factions tonight after a revolver battle here last night in which S. Glenn Young, klan liquor raider, deputy Sheriff Ora Thomas, his arch enemy, and two others were slain.

HERRIN, Ills., Jan. 25.—With militia again patrolling the streets of Herrin, order prevailed today after the latest outbreak of klan and anti-klan warfare last night in which four men were killed, including Glenn Young, klan liquor raider and Ora Thomas, deputy sheriff, recognized outstanding leaders of the two factions.

The two others killed in the revolver battle in a main street cigar shop were Ed Forbes and Homer Warner, both reputed klansmen and companions of Young.

Young died from a bullet wound through the heart, although he was shot in the right breast. These shots, according to reports, came from the two revolvers handled by Thomas.

Find Young Dead

When citizens entered the cigar shop a few minutes after an exchange of 40 or 50 shots they found Young dead and Warner unconscious. Thomas slumped to the floor with bullet wounds in his body and died on the way to the city hospital.

Forbes lay dead on the sidewalk outside, shot through the base of the skull. Warner died in the hospital about two hours later.

A company of militia headed by Major Robert Davis arrived at 2 a. m. from Carbondale and took charge of the situation.

Versions of the battle vary. It is known, however, that the shooting took place in the Canary cigar store and barber shop, operated in the front of the European hotel, a reputed rendezvous of anti-klan adherents.

Accounts agree that a shot was fired a few minutes before the outbreak from an alley adjacent to a restaurant operated by Young. The bullet lodged in a telephone pole. Rose Lizenby, Herrin policeman, said the shot was fired by Thomas and directed at him. They with others had just left the Herrin courthouse, sitting in night session. Spectators fled and Thomas is reported then to have gone to the European hotel, a block distant, as a call was sent out for Young sympathizers to mobilize.

The anti-klan version is that Young and his companion thereupon went to the hotel to seek Thomas and "shoot it out."

The Klan Version

The klan account is that Young and the others were attacked as they passed by outside. Young adherents asserted Forbes was shot from above, because the bullet penetrated in his skull in a direction indicating it might have been fired from an upper window.

Thomas' body was removed to one undertaking establishment and the bodies of the three others to another undertaking place. It was announced the inquest into the killings will be made Tuesday, although Coroner McCowan indicated the investigation might be started tomorrow.

Crowds thronged the two undertaking places and the scene of the fight, viewing the shattered windows. Militiamen patrolled the streets and quiet prevailed.

Major Davis late today issued an order stopping the long procession of curious persons passing through the undertaking establishments to view the bodies.

The body of Young was wrapped in a purple robe, said to designate a "kleagle" of the ku klux klan.

Although first reports said several had been wounded in addition to those killed, none were taken to hospitals. Reports persisted late today that two standers-by had been grazed by bullets. These, however, could not be verified.

Physical Grace Of Child Ruled By Parent Mind

Speaker Tells Health Club That Children's Future is "Up to Them"

"USE TEMPERANCE"

Moderation In Diet And Thought Necessary For Good Health

Physical perfection in the human body relates directly to attitude of parent to child, for "in the heart of every child there is the pattern of a perfect man or woman, provided he be well born; and in taking it for granted that he is, it remains our duty as parents to see that he does develop into perfect manhood."

This was the advice given by Mrs. T. B. Couch in an address recently before the Health and Efficiency club on "Social Hygiene."

Pity Rather Than Hate.

Mrs. Couch stated that in her study and work in social hygiene she had learned the history of man from the beginning to the present time. Telling of laboratory work that has shown her losthsome disease, and hospital work where she has seen suffering innocent women and children paying the price of wild oats she says that all of this does not make her hate man. Rather, she says, it has made her pity him because he did not know what he was not taught in his youth: the value of a single standard.

Disputing the prevalent thought that social hygiene was embodied entirely in problems relating to sex and to the control of social diseases, Mrs. Couch defined the term as having to do with human endeavor, with home life, with the health of the community, with childhood and child life in general. She pointed out that the subject was vitally concerned with the control of delinquents, whether the delinquent be a girl or a boy who is full of life and is giving expression to some vicious practice because of lack of proper home training. Social hygiene, she said, was vitally concerned with the girl in the home—the one being on whom all society should focus its eyes as the future mothers of men.

"While I am tremendously interested in all of the above movements," Mrs. Couch declared, "I deal more particularly with the problem of social hygiene in its relations to social diseases, and to the question involved in child training and its ethical outlook. As David Starr Jordan has said, "If you ever wish to be of any use in the world, do something for the little child. If you ever yearn to be truly wise, study children. We can dress the sore, bandage the wounded, imprison the criminal, heal the sick and bury the dead; but there is always a chance that we can save a child. If the great army of philanthropists ever exterminate sin an pestilence, ever work out the race salvation—it will be because a little child has led them."

Plea for Good Health.

The appeal to good health was characterized as one of the best methods of getting the sex question over to children. This, she averred, was better than the moral appeal, being a common sense appeal which proves effective with children of all ages. The mother, she pointed out, could always look after a child's health without creating surprise, since she is the recognized guardian of it, and from this vantage ground the sex question could be introduced as occasion permitted.

"When children reach the age where they begin to ask vital questions, in the name of all that is pure and holy, tell them the truth. Parents should take pride in telling them things about themselves that they should know. Then if they ever go wrong, it will be with their eyes open. But what of the girls and boys who learn from youngsters on the street things that cause them to blush and to believe that their reproduction was a function unholy and unclean? There is nothing unclean about life, about calling into existence a new being.

Expressing her wish that all parents could realize the importance and value of keeping the confidence of their children, the speaker continued: 'The saddest thing I ever heard was a young girl who said, 'I couldn't tell mother that.' Mothers you are losing a great deal of pleasure if your children cannot come to you with the things that are nearest to their hearts. If you are able to get your child to discuss things with you even after he has heard it from others it may be the means of re-establishing that confidence which every parent should make it his aim to win and to hold.

"If the time ever comes when we will understand that we do not belong to ourselves, that we are only representatives of God, placed here on this earth by Him to represent Him for a period of time, then we will take better care of ourselves, and likewise we will not feel as we do now that our children are our chattels to do with as we please. We will understand that they are only loaned to us so we may rear them up to take our places when we pass on. If we bring them up in the wrong environment if their heredity is not good, if their blood is not pure, who is to blame? When your mantle and mine which will fall on the shoulders of those for whose existence we are responsible and who are to carry on after we are gone is moth-eaten and unclean, civilization suffers. On the other hand if we can boast of the fact that our blood is clean, free from the taint of syphilis and gonorrhea, and that we have fed and educated them properly, we can enter into the bosom of our fathers with a smile on our lips and lie down in peace, feeling that we have done our full duty to ourselves, to our children, to our country and to our God.

Teach Temperance.

Cautioning mothers to do their duty in the home, Mrs. Couch urged them to "start the youngster by teaching him temperance in all things. The proper regulation of the dietary may be certainly made one of the greatest of all helps to purity. Someone has said "that cow's milk was a much better means of curing a boy's waywardness than cow's hide." Many parents who give their children an abundance of wise counsel and religious training send their boys to saloons and to brothels by the influence of morbid and inflamed appetites, engendered by the irritating and passion stimulating foods with which they feed them at the dinner table," says Dr. Kellog.

"The person whose nerves are habitually highly stimulated and irritated, whose blood is excited and made feverish by the daily use of condiments, tea and coffee, and an excessive amount of phosphorous may not possess the needed strength to resist successfully the temptations to impurity which may assail him and to which his unwholesome diet has rendered him especially susceptible. The descent from virtue to vice is a gradual one, not a sudden transition from one state to the other." When animal instincts are excited by the habitual use of stimulating foods, the resisting power of the will is gradually undermined; little by little, the conscience is silenced, and the lower instincts gain the ascendancy. Mothers, if you do not exclude from your children's diet the things that tend to excessive irritability in your children the most careful moral teachings may not save them. This principle applies to older persons as well as to children.

Purity of the mind, the speaker showed, was vitally affected by habits of eating. She quoted history to prove that the successive degeneracy of the nations that ruled the world began with gluttonous and luxurious habits of diet.

"Simplicity in habits of eating and the avoidance of all stimulating foods are, with the exception of religion, the most powerful of all aids to purity of life, and in addition are most potent corrective of impure tendencies when once they are developed. Talmage says that "many a man is trying to do by prayer what can only be done by correct diet." Certain it is that earnest prayer and pure diet together accomplish what would be impossible, attempted by either agency alone.

Simplicity in Life.

"The sacred scriptures inculcate the same principle. Simplicity in habits of life and purity of character are everywhere associated. While leading the simple life of a shepherd lad, David developed those elements of character which fitted him to become the greatest among all the kings of Israel. John the Baptist found in the natural products of the wilderness a bill of fare, the simplicity of which comported perfectly with the purity of his divine mission. Our Lord taught us a most important lesson respecting the necessity for bringing the appetite under full subjection, during his forty days' fast in the wilderness.

"We must recognize as a solemn reality that religion includes the body, and that the laws which govern he healthful performance of the bodily functions are as much the laws of God as those of the decalogue. While man regards his body as a harp of pleasure to be played upon so long as its strings can be made to vibrate, so long will he continue to travel down the hill of physical decadence and degeneration in spite of all sanitary regulations. But when he recognizes his divine origin and obligations, and himself as the crowning masterpiece of creation, his body a precious thing to be sacredly preserved, developed, expanded and purified for service for humanity in this world, then only will he begin to climb toward the heights from which he has fallen.

Mrs. Couch closed her address with a stirring appeal to the mothers present, urging them to apply the advice which she so forcibly introduced in her lecture.

"Give your children better training. Teach them more about themselves. Play a game of fifty-fifty with them. Take them into your confidence and tell them the wonderful story of life. Thow aside prudishness, discord old teachings that condemn children to darkness, for new ones which will drive to cover the vicious man-made institutions of mock modesty, fight for a single standard of morals and the time may come when we will know that a great fight has been won."

LYNCH

a possibility that the accident of T. W. and Lynch both bearing the same name, will prevent both from ever holding the high office of governor; or will the determination of both to run, as in 1924, again exclude both from achieving the victory; or will one of the Davidsons triumph in the defeat of the other?

In the first place, the well-known political observers do not think the race for governor next year will be limited to the two Davidsons, though they admit that both the Davidsons individually would be strong factors in the race.

The observers say that, just as it proved in the 1924 derby, the two Davidsons are less dangerous to another opponent than either would be singly.

James E. Ferguson, the militant leader of a seven-year minority which grew in 1924 into a powerful majority of the electorate of Texas, is now rigging the sails of a bark on which to sail back in triumph from his political Elbe. He is signing the crew, and back at home in the Texas senate his friends are framing the welcome.

Would Put Him In.

To some, that means smoothing the course for James E. Ferguson's own race for another term as governor. It wouldn't really be a third-term affair, it is said, but would be regarded as full restitution to Ferguson for the pains and penalties of the impeachment, by returning him, in his own name, to serve out a term of which the people elected him, but from which he was ejected by the senate on September 24, 1917.

Others, though, think Ferguson has his eyes beyond that office which he once held, and whose power he will share during the coming two years with his wife, who has told the world she will conduct the office as an example of teamwork. There are those who think that he is looking with longing eyes to that seat in Washington for which he crowded Earle B. Mayfield through a bitter second primary race in 1922.

Then, keeping Ferguson in mind as one of the possible contenders in the governor's race two years hence, there are two other groups from which further opposition to the Davidson-Davidson pair may come.

Ferguson's victory, as always occurs in the ascension to power of a minority group, or in the return of a former leader group to power, has brought up with it a number of younger aspirants, a new bunch of contenders. And by the time the gate is lifted two years hence and the race is on, the political two-year-olds of the 1923-24 crop may be ready to give to the veterans an upset race. So much is sure: The horse that Jim Ferguson backs, in case he is not up himself, will have the backing of a highly respectable block of the Ferguson following.

Might Be Moody.

Aloof, almost isolated in the splendor of his unprecedented victory, is the brilliant young Dan Moody, now attorney general of Texas. If he chooses to get into the governor's fight, Dan Moody is a man whose picturesque background and tradition of victory, will give the opposition some bad nights and days.

But, as in the case of Ferguson, many are thinking that he may prefer to serve as Texas attorney general for a while and then offer for the United States senate, three or five years from now.

There are some of the old-timers, who after being out in the cold for several years in the recent elections and political conventions tasted again the sweet of victory, and may plunge back into the thick of the fight for high honors at the next race. Among these are such as former U. S. Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey and General M. M. Crane, C. C. McDonald and Dwight Llewellyn. In addition there are Jed C. Adams of Dallas and Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller of Dallas, to be considered.

Returning parenthetically to the younger class of those who have not been prominent in political leadership heretofore, there is E. A. Berry of Houston, chairman of the state committee, whose future seems to hold significant possibilities in the political affairs of Texas.

Then there are the women of Texas, and from over half a million of them who take interest enough to vote, may come candidates for the governor's office. The political prognosticators say Texas isn't ready to elect a woman governor, except under the unusual circumstances of an outside issue, beyond and above the personal candidacy of any individual, which placed Mrs. Ferguson in the chair. But who can tell what the two years will bring about, what advancement with the accelerated momentum of woman's cause which gave them the primary ballot in 1918, the vote in 1920 and the highest office in the state in 1924?

record as an aviator in the Royal Flying corps, a trick performer in the air, and a climber of tall buildings, will hesitate to declare that he will not hold out.

Starts Tuesday.

At 12:30 noon Tuesday, Lockwood will be shackled to the steering wheel by an expert and the key to the cuffs held in a safe. The hood will be sealed to cover the engine, and Lockwood will be off on his long grind.

Several merchants are offering prizes to the persons who write the nearest number of miles the speedometer will register at the end of the run. The indicator face will be sealed and even Lockwood will have difficulty in determining what the car will register in the 100 hours. The driver will announce the winners from the stage of the Mission theater next Monday night where he makes his first appearance after the run.

Lockwood will be in training for this run beginning this morning in the windows of the Hub Clothing store. He will appear there at 11 o'clock sharp and will appear again at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Tomorrow he will appear in the windows at 11 a. m. and will remain in training until the start of the trip.

Diet of Milk.

Every one knows that milk is an almost perfect diet, so Lockwood is sticking to this under advice of his physician and nurse. Producers Creamery, the local milk dealers, will provide Lockwood with their famous pasteurized milk at frequent intervals. During the run the Daredevil will appear at the dairy twice daily for his ration.

The Reo will be equipped with India balloon tires for which Marcus Brothers, 710 Tenth street, are supplying and the Wichita Falls Battery Co. are supplying the car with their famous Willard battery.

In order to increase the mileage and to eliminate carbon the Reo has been equipped with the H. P. air burner through the courtesy of Mors C. Clark, general manager of the H. P. Air Burner Co., 605 Staley building.

Insured by Williams-Dwyer.

Williams-Dwyer, automobile insurance, 704 Ninth street, have issued one of their insurance policies to the Fritz Motor Co. to safeguard against any possibilities of an accident or fire during the endurance test.

A Brunswick portable phonograph will be placed on the Reo to furnish the Daredevil with the latest entertainment in music during the long grind.

The Zale Jewelry Co., Eighth and Ohio streets, cordially invites the public to call at their store during the run for any information relative to the condition of the Daredevil or the Reo during the 100 hours.

A schedule of the Daredevil's daily itinerary will appear each morning in The Record News.

Please, Ma, Stop This Sand Storm

AUSTIN, Jan. 25.—Some strange messages come to the desk of the new woman governor. The following was considered the prize among "freak" telegrams which came to Mrs. Ferguson today:

"Could you do something to stop the sand blowing down the street here?" It came from Mexia and was signed by two citizens.

Foolish money, fortunately, doesn't talk.

Correct this sentence: "He cries at times during the day," the mother admitted, "but never at night."

Operates A Farm 35 Years, Never Buys Bit Of Feed

D. A. Ford of Friendship Community Makes An Unusual Record

QUANAH, Jan. 25.—Nerer having bought a bushel of feed since the first year he came to Hardeman county, 30 years ago, is the remarkable record of D. A. Ford from the Friendship community, southwest of Quanah. A well balanced, diversified farm program; wheat, maize, corn and other feeds, as well as cotton, has made the above record possible. This crop program, rounded out with several dairy cows, and a good flock of exceptionally fine chickens have enabled Mr. and Mrs. Ford to prosper during all these 30 years, and to demonstrate how successful Hardeman county farmers can be.

Another real asset of this farm is a nice orchard of peache, plum, apple and pear trees, all of which are seedlings but three. One seedling apple tree 15 years old has never missed a crop since four years old; and in 1923 blossomed in April, again in June and later in August, holding and maturing fruit from each blooming period, despite the fact that it is an Augus. maturing apple.

Mr. Ford's method of growing seedling peaches is to carefully crack the stones, select the plumpest kernels, and plant in a row some two or three inches deep the first week in April. He states they will come up as quickly as corn, and get a growth of several inches the first year. These small plants are then transplanted to permanent location the second year, by removing with shovel so as not to disturb the root system.

The fine flock of Buff Orphingtons on this farm are another proof of results from breeding and culling in the upbuilding of pure-bred poultry. Mr. and Mrs. Ford are enthusiasts on having only the best; and to that end they take and study leading poultry journals, having their flocks culled, and put into practice the many worthwhile suggestions of authorities on poultry raising. Several of their February, 1924 hatched pullets weigh around nine pounds and are making a good winter egg production record.

Rope With Hangman's Noose, Candy And Fruit With Poison Inside Are Frisco's Gifts To Dot Ellingson

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—"Jazz insanity" will be the defense of Dorothy Ellingson, 16-year-old "dance mad" girl who murdered her mother.

A battle as bitter as that waged during the Leopold-Loeb trial loomed today when Alexander Moslin, attorney for Dorothy, announced if the girl went on trial for murder he would prove she was "mentally sick."

Says She's Sane.

District Attorney Mathew Brady declared emphatically that "Dorothy" is perfectly sane and will resist an insanity plea at every step.

Moslin said psychiatrists would establish the child defendant's mind was unbalanced when she shot her mother.

Belief of police that Dorothy's life is constantly in danger may cause her removal to another city.

It was stated by Captain of Detectives Duncan Matheson today that unless threats against the girl stopped she would be placed in jail in a nearby city.

Sent a Noose.

Attempts to make Dorothy pay for her crime with her own life reached a crisis when she was mailed a hangman's noose. The noose with its grim knot was anonymously sent to the girl by mail but did not reach the child's hand because of precautions taken by police to examine the girl's heavy mail.

An investigation of the mailing of the noose was launched by the police and efforts will be made to trace the writer of the letter found attached to the rope. The letter said:

"You had the courage to kill your mother, now have enough courage to use this on yourself."

A large quantity of candy and fruit received by the girl during the past few days was destroyed by the officers, who feared the "gifts" contained poison.

Wild West Bandit In Business

SEGUIN, Texas, Jan. 25.—(INS)—A bandit of the old west type is languishing in the Guadalupe county jail here today after holding up an "auto stage" between San Antonio and this city early today.

The highwayman, attired in a 10-gallon hat, leather chaps and high heel boots, riding a cow pony, stopped a bus from San Antonio and beat several passengers, including District Judge W. A. Green, with a gun. The passengers all escaped with their valuables.

Later a Mexican and his family motoring to San Antonio were forced to abandon their car and flee to the woods.

TAXPAYERS GET THRILL.

"Don't Pay More Income Tax Than You Owe," Says Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The humble taxpayer was given an unaccustomed thrill Saturday by the internal revenue bureau just as the solar eclipse was turning the usual signs of nature topsy-turvy.

In a formal statement the bureau gave the country this advice:

"Do not pay more income tax than you owe."

The unusual warning was caused by the fact that the first of the income tax returns to come to hand revealed a widespread failure to deduct the 25 per cent deduction under the new law to earned income.

EDISON ON EDUCATION.

Thomas A. Edison says the American educational system is not delivering enough either in its methods of teaching or in what it is teaching. He is not blaming the teachers. He thinks they are honestly trying to do their best. He favors the establishment of a national university of experience and insists that steps be taken to teach American boys and girls morality.

Aren't they taught morality at the fireside, at the church, at the school house and coming down to brass tacks, aren't the boys and girls of today just as moral as their parents and grandparents were in the days of their youth.

Thomas A. Edison was selling newspapers at the early age of eleven. His achievements have made his name a household word wherever there is a civilized or semi-civilized household under the shining sun.

However, he now stresses the need of moral training in all efforts to prepare boys and girls for life and concludes that it's a matter of taking the ten commandments or the sermon on the mount out of the moth balls and putting them to work.

A very wise old man is Thomas A. Edison. A man of vision is this wise old man. He tells his countrymen that if they want to cut down the job of American jails, if they want to reduce the congestion of the criminal courts, one of the first places to begin is to find the boys and girls of America the right kind of work. This he insists is more important even than finding the right kind of wives or husbands.

It goes without saying that the child labor amendment backed by the labor organizations and the women organizations does not appeal to the wizard of Enlo Park. There is a reason for it. He became a wage earner at eleven, a wage worker selling newspapers and he has been thoroughly educated in the college of experience.

This reminds the writer that the fathers of the Texas republic, the men who drafted the first constitution, declared that the wealth of the state should be taxed for the education of all the children of all the people.

DRASTIC PENALTIES PROPOSED.

Representative Fruka of the Texas legislature has introduced a bill which, if it becomes a law, will make it a felony upon conviction for the offense known as malicious libel. If malicious libel is to be made a capital crime it should cover all the ground and not newspapers and newspaper writers alone.

A malicious libeller wherever he may be found is a loathsome creature and should be handled by the agents of the law without gloves. For this reason all classes and conditions of libellers of the malicious type should be within reach of the proposed law.

It would be grossly unfair to make it apply to writers for newspapers and then exempt those in the other professions or callings or pursuits.

WHY THEY CEASE TO GROWL.

Just the other day wheat was quoted at two dollars per bushel in four grain centers in the United States. Less than a year ago wheat was selling at 90 cents. There is no growling on the part of the tillers of the soil in the great wheat producing sections of America. High priced wheat came last year. It was brought about by the partial failure of the wheat crop in other lands.

What Today Means To You

AQUARIUS

Great care should be exercised during the early part of the day, as the planetary aspects indicate accident or disappointment. Only routine matters should receive your attention, and no new ventures should be essayed, and above all, nothing should be said or done on impulse. It is just as necessary to meditate on your speech as on your actions. Later on in the day, conditions show a certain degree of improvement, but they are not so favorable as to warrant the abandonment of caution and reserve. No letters of an important nature should be written, and no contracts or arguments executed.

A child born today will not display, at birth, any evidence of being robust, but this fact need not cause any worry, as its latent powers of recuperation, provided it be given proper nutrition, will prove of great assistance in successfully overcoming the ailments to which it will be more than ordinarily subject. On reaching the period of childhood, it will be, in a physical sense, quite normal. In character, whilst an ardent student and a hard worker, it will be rather morose, and seek its chief pleasure not in the companionship of others, but in literary and artistic pursuits. It will be diffident, and slow to make friends. The few, however, that it does make, will be quixotically loyal and faithful. This child will develop a high form of citizenship, with good ideals and a progressive intellect.

If today is your birthday you are very candid and frank, and often shock your friends by your blunt utterances, lacking, as they are, in all tact or diplomacy. Truth is an asset of which the value cannot be denied, but it is not always necessary, or expedient, to serve it unadorned. It can be neatly and adroitly draped, without any of its inherent beauty being sacrificed.

In your affections you are more fickle than constant, and you are easily attracted by externals, without stopping to think of the fundamentals, or consequences. You treat your own passing affections, and those of others, very light-heartedly. The time, however, will surely come—no one can say how soon or how tardy—when your feelings will be deeply moved, and, at such time, it is more than likely, in the line of retribution, that your attachment will be a forlorn one, and your love unrequited.

Successful people born on this date are: Cornelius N. Bliss, New York merchant; Hattie Tyng Griswold, author and poet; George Francis Atkinson, botanist; Mabel O. Wright, author; Cleveland Dodge, capitalist; Frank Orren Lowden, former governor of Illinois.

More Truth Than Poetry

TIGER, TIGER.

Blake might have written it today,
Tiger, tiger, burning bright,
In the forest of the night,
If you had destroyed the gut,
What would cross word puzzles do?

Well for us you did not try
To annihilate the ai,
Or that other five-toed sloth—
For we sorely need them both.

When you wandered through the wood
Seeking animals for food,
We are glad you did not turn
And exterminate the erne.

Luckily those eyes of fire
Did not burn with savage ire
When the eland passed your way;
He is such a help today.

Never, in a famished state,
Did you ever lie in wait
For the shrinking bok, or stalk
The extremely needful auk.

Though you saw the roe and doe,
Happily you let them go,
Which we think of with a thrill—
When the squares they neatly fill.

Tiger, tiger, burning bright,
In the forest of the night,
You were kind, to say the least,
To spare so many a brief named beast!

AN AMENDMENT

If Horace Greeley were alive today his advice would be "Go West, young man, and get away from the train robbers."

UNLIMITED USES

Now that a man, who left a string of pearls in a Paris hotel recovered it by radio, woman voyagers will soon be sending back radios to their husbands to put the cat out and turn off the water in the bath room.

By Dr. Frank Crane

THE PENALTY OF NOTORIETY

The penalty of notoriety is that most people like to throw stones at a prominent object.

The writer was once delivering a lecture, and was shot at by a drunken man in the audience. He wanted to shoot something, and the speaker being the most prominent object in view was his chosen target. Luckily, he missed.

The love of being prominent, or famous is in all of us. We want to rise a little above the general mass. It is pleasant to be pointed at and noted as a prominent person.

But there is a trait in human nature that loves to knock those who are prominent.

There are thousands of people who would enjoy seeing Henry Ford taken down a peg, simply because he is so rich. There are many people—we believe they are not in the majority—who would enjoy the discomfiture of any public man, from President Coolidge down.

Perhaps it is part of the inferiority complex. Those who are low in the scale do not like to be outdistanced by others, and the reaction upon them is one of envy.

We may rest assured that among those who have been bested in any form in the game of life there are some who do not take it good-naturedly, although the majority do. These people like to attack anyone who is superior.

One of the members of Dr. Perry Stickney Grant's church hit the nail on the head the other day when he said: "He who raises his head above the multitude runs the risk of having it struck."

The bolt that lays low the towering cedar will pass the lowly bush by unharmed, and those plants that bend before the storm will last longer than those that rigidly resist it.

The only way to be safe in this world is to remain unnoticed and unworthy of notice. All success is a sort of venture. No matter what it is that brings a person into prominence—whether ability, or riches, it makes him a target for the venomous shafts of a few lowly.

It is rare, therefore, to find a man who has achieved success who, at the same time, is kindly and free from bitterness.

There are some such, and they deserve a great deal of credit.

There are just enough poor losers in this world to make the lot of the successful not a happy one.

At the same time, it is impossible to be of much use to your fellow men unless you are well equipped with personality, or with money. Those who desire to help their fellow men and seek success for this purpose should have enough philosophy to hold them steady against the assaults of those who want to take them down. There is something in human nature that resents superiority, either that of ability or of fame, and one must be prepared to bear patiently with this.

In order to live comfortably in this world, you must take the world as it is and not expect people to be ideal.

Optimism may be a mere point of view, but it is valuable for all of us, even though we have no foundation for it. Some one has said that "an optimist sees a light where there isn't any, and a pessimist is the son-of-a-gun who comes along and blows out that light."

TO THE ENGAGED GIRL.

Of all the people in the world, with the possible exception of the June bride, the engaged girl is supposed to be the happiest. And possibly she is, but probably she isn't—always.

You see the modern engaged girl is a very different individual from the about-to-be bride of our mother's day who awaited her marriage with a calm sweet, peaceful assurance that engagements were made in Heaven, and there was no need to worry. Nowadays, the modern miss is apt to be rather uneasy and worried during the months preceding her marriage.

This is due sometimes to the fact that she's always been popular, always had her pick of the boys, and is now wondering after two or three months, of an engagement, whether this is the real thing. This particular girl should have a long engagement so that she will have plenty of opportunity to find out all about the man who's going to be her companion through life.

Then when she takes the fatal step she'll have no doubts or fears. If she's gone through a long engagement, week after week, seeing the same boy, having to cut down on good times, so there'll be enough money to furnish the new home—she knows fairly definitely that the man in the case means a great deal to her.

Sometimes the future bride has had a long business training, and worries about whether she's going to take to housework, whether she won't get fed up with the monotony of caring for a home. If it is at all possible, this girl ought to be allowed to work for a short time after she's married so the change won't be so great.

She'll find herself, after a while longing to give up her business career so she'll have more time to devote to her home.

Don't worry engaged business girl about the necessity of changing from doing work for an employer to doing work for the man you love. You'll find the change comes a great deal more easily to you than you anticipate.

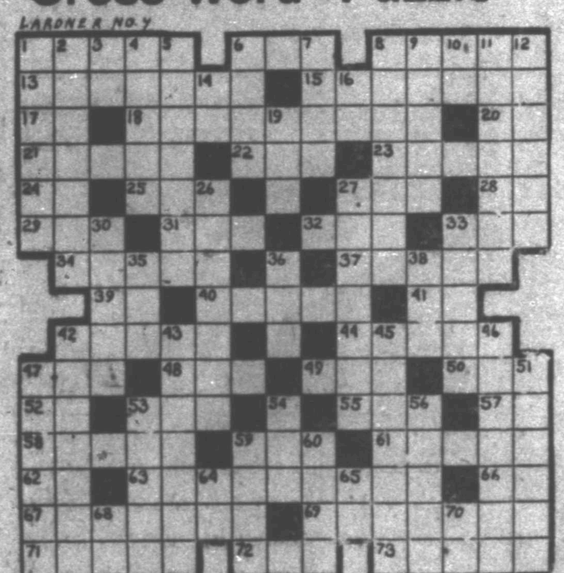

On the whole, though, I should advise as short engagements as possible. It's a trying time even in the most ideal love matches—no matter what the poets say—as girls know.

Cross-Word Puzzle

LARDNER NO. 9

How to Solve the Cross-Word Puzzle.

Every number in the form represents the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically. If there is a black square to the left of the number, the word is horizontal; if above it, the word is vertical. The same number may of course begin both a horizontal and a vertical. The definitions for the correct words to fill the form are found below, with numbers corresponding to those on the form. Run through the definitions till you find one that you recognize, and put it in its proper place on the form, one letter for each white square. This will furnish several cross-clues to the words linking with it at right angles. Continue in this manner till the form is completely filled. If you have solved the puzzle correctly it should read both horizontally and vertically with words corresponding to the definitions.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE ANSWERED

POEMS THAT LIVE

A LIFE ON THE OCEAN WAVE.

A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep;
Where the scatter'd waters rave
And the winds their revels keep!
Like an eagle caged I pine
On this dull unchanging shore;
Oh, give me the flashing brine,
The spray and the tempest's roar!

Once more on the deck I stand,
Of my own swift-gliding craft;
The gale follows fair abaft,
We shoot through the sparkling foam,
Set sail! farewell to the land;
Like an ocean-bird set free,
Like the ocean-bird, our home
We'll find far out on the sea.

The land is no longer in view,
The clouds have begun to frown;
But with a stout vessel and crew,
We'll let the storm come down!
And the winds and the waters
While the winds and the waters rave,
A home on the rolling sea!
A life on the ocean wave!

DENY FLU VICTIM REPORTS.

Tokio Authorities Say 4,700 Death Toll in Epidemic an Exaggeration.

TOKIO, Jan. 25.—Reports of an influenza epidemic in the Tokio area in which 4,700 persons are dead, are exaggerated, Tokio municipal health authorities said today, though there are between 30 and 40 deaths daily. This, however, is only slightly above normal for this time of the year, it was stated.

Lack of rain is claimed to have caused the epidemic.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Wasting Time on Worry.

The statement by a professor at Columbia university that the present generation is being made ill by worry makes one wonder what the present generation has got to worry about.

Three or four hundred years ago, when famines swept civilized communities as regularly as epidemics of colds in the head do now, there was abundant reason to worry.

In that time no citizen was ever quite sure just when one of his powerful neighbors wouldn't drop around and take away the food supply, and perhaps burn the house down just for the pleasure of seeing the fire.

If he managed by hard work and thrift to pile up a little nest egg, he had to keep it secret or some gentleman who owned a private army would come and get it.

He had a little chance of educating his children—little hope of rising out of the position in life where he was placed by his birth.

Comfort, as we understand it today, was not known, even by the people of wealth and power.

The palace in which Louis XIV dwelt in such magnificence would cause most house-hunting ladies of the present time to turn up their noses, and to inquire disdainfully how they could be expected to live in a place that had no central heating, and which possessed not a single electric light or even a gas jet.

The pioneers who journeyed to America in the wake of the Pilgrims had plenty of cause to worry, especially during the first years after their arrival.

But unaccustomed weather, shortage of crops, hostile Indians and other things kept them so busy trying to stay alive that they didn't do much worrying.

In the present day, when about nine-tenths of the work that our ancestors used to do is done by others, there is not much justification for wearing out the nerves, in the fear of the future that is worry.

Most worriers would soon forget their worry if they were stranded on a desert island and compelled to shift for themselves, learning all that their fathers have forgotten about fire building, and cooking, and food collecting.

A generation that is wasting its energies on worry is a generation that has not enough to do.

In the face of real peril worry usually disappears.

Fathers and mothers are anxious when their children fall ill, but if they are the right sort they are usually fully occupied trying to relieve the sufferers, and help them to get well again if possible.

The man who worries because he is afraid he will lose his savings stops worrying when he actually loses them, and begins to look around for ways and means to accumulate new savings.

In this century, when three-quarters of the reasons for worry that afflicted our ancestors have totally disappeared, it is curious that this nerve racking habit should persist.

Yet it does. And most of the worriers, curiously enough, are those who have little to worry about.

The best cure for worry is industry, and plenty of it. Now that competition is so keen, every minute counts and not one must be wasted in troubling about calamities that may not happen at all.

BANK PRESIDENT ARRESTED.

Missouri Executive Gives Up to United States Marshals Saturday.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 24.—Beth M. Meservey, president of the First National bank which was closed by federal bank Examiner E. L. Chapman last Thursday following the suicide of Jack Brasher, cashier, submitted to arrest here this afternoon by deputy United States marshals.

A warrant charged Meservey with violation of the federal banking laws following Chapman's examination which is said to have disclosed shortages totaling approximately $50,000.

Meservey will be taken to Kansas City where, he said, he would plead guilty. It is expected he will be sentenced this afternoon.

In a statement written to Chapman the bank president is said to have admitted violations of the banking laws "with his knowledge and consent." The signed statement does not mention the dead cashier.

SCIENTISTS ARE JUBILANT.

Inspections and Observances of Solar Eclipse Best Ever, They Assert.

LAKE HURST, N. J., Jan. 25.—Jubilant because of the apparent success of their venture to observe and photograph from aloft the phenomena of a solar eclipse, the group of scientists who Saturday witnessed the eclipse from the dirigible Los Angeles were enthusiastically describing the beauty of the spectacle. Like a group of excited school boys, they recited their adventure in the simple words of the layman.

"When you can adequately describe celestial glory, then you will have told what this eclipse looked like," was the way Captain Edward T. Pollock, superintendent of the naval observatory at Washington described it.

"A most spectacular sight," Commander J. H. Klein Jr., commander of the Los Angeles said. "the sky at the horizon was a flood of merging orange and red light. Overhead the ceiling was blue black while all about was the darkness of twilight."

Quanah Women Honor Veterans Of War With Turkey Banquet.

QUANAH, Jan. 25.—Honoring the last ex-confederates of Camp Rhodes, in commemoration of the birthdays of Lee and Jackson, Mrs. A. Mosely and Mrs. T. K. Hawkins, assisted by Miss Florence Stevenson, served a turkey dinner January 21 at the home of Mrs. Mosely.

Only six veterans responded to roll call from a membership of Camp Rhodes, death having taken heavy toll during the past few years. Harry Koch, editor of the Quanah Tribune Chief, who was one of the few outside invited guests, recalled at the dinner a similar dinner given twelve years ago by Dr. G. S. Wyatt, when 25 veterans sat at the table. Following are those present at Mrs. Mosely's: W. J. Talbott, Co. F., first regimental reserves, Arkansas cavalry; T. F. Garner, Davis regiment, Rosnes brigade; W. G. Kearley, second Tennessee cavalry; H. W. Martin, Co. T, Robinson's artillery; W. H. Altman, Co. I 37th Mississippi infantry; W. P. Irrigation

Why the river water contains more salt at one time than at another.

Some people here have been wondering why the flood waters of the Wichita are less salty and less hard than the low waters. To one who has not given the matter much thought or who is unfamiliar with dissolved impurities it may seem strange that there is such a difference.

Let us examine the conditions that cause such variations. A heavy rain falls on the watershed of the river. The soil is more or less dense and does not absorb water quickly. So most of the water runs directly into the creeks and the river without penetrating the soil at all.

The surface of the soil has been washed by rains for untold centuries, therefore there is but little mineral matter on it and the water that flows over it takes up few impurities other than some of the surface soil.

But part of the water does penetrate below the surface through cracks and otherwise. This water of course tends to flow into the creeks and the river the same as the surface water, but much slower because it must pass through the soil on its way.

Finally this underground water does appear. It shows up along the streams as springs or seeps. It is a different water, however. It started as pure rain water but in its journey through the soil it has dissolved out many minerals which it carries with it. It has dissolved salt and gypsum and lime and other things it met.

The low water is made up of this ground water. The high water is surface water. One has absorbed a considerable amount of impurities, the other hardly any.

BALM FOR SUPERSTITIOUS.

Corn Curers and Thimble Hiders Can Work More Accurately Hereafter.

NAVAL OBSERVATORY, MARE ISLAND, Cal., Jan. 25.—Persons who plant potatoes, hide thimbles in an attempt to cure corns and carry on other of life's activities under certain movements of the moon upon data furnished in almanacs will be able to work more accurately in the future, as a result of today's eclipse of the sun, according to Captain T. J. See, U. S. N., well known scientist.

Dr. See declared observations made today during the eclipse would furnish extremely valuable data to compilers of almanacs and that information as to the movements of the sun and moon previously unknown may be revealed.

The law provides, as to other boards that the governor "shall" appoint the members, but in the case of the pardon board it stipulates that he "may" appoint two members of a board of pardon advisors.

MOTHERS

Saving Steps.

One Mother Says:

Mothers who find, as I do, that living in a two-story house means an endless amount of running up and down stairs will find it a great saving of strength and time to duplicate some of the articles that are in the most frequent demand. I keep a bottle of iodine and some cotton in the kitchen cupboard, also a bottle of milk of magnesia, so that when a dose has to be administered it can be given with the breakfast orange juice. I also keep brush and comb in a drawer in the kitchen, and on a brass hook I keep a clean wash cloth so that a hurried washing can be had in case of sudden "company" or other emergency.

J.G's Hard Luck Swings Again Like Cards In A Poker Game--Bad--Worse

LIBERTY, Mo., Jan. 25.—"Life's little ironies" have changed to luck's great ironies" for Joseph G. Wright, Clay county auctioneer.

It's a tough winter for J. G. But that's not worrying him so much as it was a rather sinewy fall and the summer was not so good and if the spring he had was the gentle kind the poets waudle about somebody else can have it.

It's been less than two weeks since J. G. broke into print with a catalogue of the things "lady luck's" evil complex did to him. They included a little matter of the wandering propensities of a neighbor's hogs, for which a grand jury indicted him, fire in his house and barn, which a grand jury indicted him, an affair of the heart, for which a grand jury indicted him, the setting aside of wife's divorce and the subsequent discovery that his marriage to the lady of his choice was illegal.

Perhaps these jabs when "lady luck's" face was averted were just meant to try Mr. Wright's patience. But they did not have that effect. They dazed him so much that last night he investigated the gas tank of his flivver with a match.

And today, the once jovial acutioneer has another sorrow—deeper than all the rest.

For the doctor says Wright's eye brows will grow out again and that he will live despite his burns.

But life—well, life is not such a pleasant thing, says Wright, unless there's a new deal.

In the meantime, Octavus Roy Cohen wonders why Wright was born white.

What a plot—what a plot!

Mrs. Chitwood Starts the Cooking School, Using Our Hotpoint Electric Range

—Mrs. Chitwood, noted home economist and lecturer on better cooking methods, begins her series of instructions on new and better ways of cooking at The Record News' Cooking School. At Mrs. Chitwood's request, we are supplying her with electric service and her preference, the Hotpoint Hughes Range. She finds the evenly regulated heat of an electric range makes better cooking results possible. Go today—then you will want to attend every session

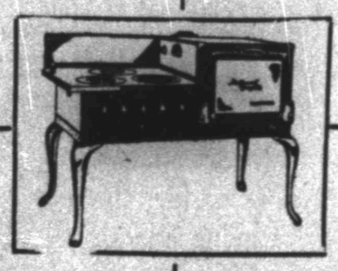

Take Note of These Four Points

Time Saving

When cooking can be done by rule instead of by guess, much of the cook's time is saved. In the Hotpoint Electric Range the heat is so uniform, so evenly regulated, that almost no watching is required. Because the heat is exact, food in the oven needs no watching; you know it is cooking satisfactorily without looking. Turning is unnecessary; the oven bakes with wonderful uniformity on top, sides and bottom. Basting is not required. You can cook many foods with practically no water—meat, cabbage, onions, for example—and without frequent inspection to see that they have not cooked dry. You can put food in the oven at low heat and leave it for hours at a time while the cooking is in process, without danger of disaster. This gives you additional hours every day away from your kitchen—a thing that every woman will welcome.

Better Food

One of the marvels of the Hotpoint Electric Range is the better cooking results which are possible with it. The evenly regulated heat eliminates the guesswork of cooking and substitutes in its place an almost scientific exactness. Cooking failures are rare—success the rule. The wonderful Hotpoint oven, free from fumes which contaminate the food and from air currents which carry off the juices, produce better results than have ever before been possible. Meats are richer, juicier; bread is more moist, keeps longer; cakes are more delicate in flavor; biscuits more beautifully browned; everything has a more delicious taste. Good cooks become better; inexperienced cooks quickly learn to cook with assured success. The same heat which produces a satisfactory result one time will duplicate it every time.

Economy

The way in which the Hotpoint Electric Range conserves the heat means a decided saving in fuel cost. The heat storage principle of the oven makes it possible to start the cooking with "high" heat and finish with the heat entirely "off"—a wonderful feature in cooking which will appeal to every woman, and which will reduce fuel consumption to a minimum.

In addition, the absence of strong air currents in the oven saves food. The shrinkage in meats is materially less than in other fuel ovens, because the juices are not carried off in the air. A five-pound roast weighs approximately a pound more after cooking in a Hotpoint oven than in an oven using other fuels. This saving is well worth consideration—goes a long way toward paying the fuel bill. The reliability of the heat means fewer spoiled dishes—another saving.

Comfort

The whole plan of the Hotpoint Electric Range is to conserve all heat for cooking purposes and waste none of it in the room. The result is a cooler kitchen than is possible with any other type or range. The electric units throw all of the heat directly against the cooking utensil; none of it can escape at the sides or bottom. The heavily insulated oven walls and close-fitting oven door retain the heat so well that even with the oven at high heat the outside is cool—you can put your hand on it without burning. What this means in hot weather any woman can appreciate. No longer is it a burden to cook in summer, when it can be done in such comfort as the Hotpoint Electric Range affords.

—Examine the range Mrs. Chitwood is using at the school. She will gladly explain further details of operation to you. We will be glad to show you the other models made by Hotpoint.

EDISON ON EDUCATION.

Thomas A. Edison says the American educational system is not delivering enough either in its methods of teaching or in what it is teaching. He is not blaming the teachers. He thinks they are honestly trying to do their best. He favors the establishment of a national university of experience and insists that steps be taken to teach American boys and girls morality.

Aren't they taught morality at the fireside, at the church, at the school house and coming down to brass tacks, aren't the boys and girls of today just as moral as their parents and grandparents were in the days of their youth.

Thomas A. Edison was selling newspapers at the early age of eleven. His achievements have made his name a household word wherever there is a civilized or semi-civilized household under the shining sun.

However, he now stresses the need of moral training in all efforts to prepare boys and girls for life and concludes that it's a matter of taking the ten commandments or the sermon on the mount out of the moth balls and putting them to work.

A very wise old man is Thomas A. Edison. A man of vision is this wise old man. He tells his countrymen that if they want to cut down the job of American jails, if they want to reduce the congestion of the criminal courts, one of the first places to begin is to find the boys and girls of America the right kind of work. This he insists is more important even than finding the right kind of wives or husbands.

It goes without saying that the child labor amendment backed by the labor organizations and the women organizations does not appeal to the wizard of Enlo Park. There is a reason for it. He became a wage earner at eleven, a wage worker selling newspapers and he has been thoroughly educated in the college of experience.

This reminds the writer that the fathers of the Texas republic, the men who drafted the first constitution, declared that the wealth of the state should be taxed for the education of all the children of all the people.

DRASTIC PENALTIES PROPOSED.

Representative Franks of the Texas legislature has introduced a bill which, if it becomes a law, will make it a felony upon conviction for the offense known as malicious libel. If malicious libel is to be made a capital crime it should cover all the ground and not newspapers and newspaper writers alone.

A malicious libeller wherever he may be found is a loathsome creature and should be handled by the agents of the law without gloves. For this reason all clauses and conditions of libellers of the malicious type should be within reach of the proposed law.

It would be grossly unfair to make it apply to writers for newspapers and then exempt those in the other professions or callings or pursuits.

WHY THEY CEASE TO GROWL.

Just the other day wheat was quoted at two dollars per bushel in four grain centers in the United States. Less than a year ago wheat was selling at 90 cents. There is no growling on the part of the tillers of the soil in the great wheat producing sections of America. High priced wheat came last year. It was brought about by the partial failure of the wheat crop in other lands.

What Today Means To You

AQUARIUS

Great care should be exercised during the early part of the day, as the planetary aspects indicate accident or disappointment. Only routine matters should receive your attention, and no new ventures should be essayed, and above all, nothing should be said or done on impulse. It is just as necessary to meditate on your speech as on your actions. Later on in the day, conditions show a certain degree of improvement, but they are not so favorable as to warrant the abandonment of caution and reserve. No letters of an important nature should be written, and no contracts or arguments executed.

A child born today will not display, at birth, any evidence of being robust, but this fact need not cause any worry, as its latent powers of recuperation, provided it be given proper nutrition, will prove of great assistance in successfully overcoming the ailments to which it will be more than ordinarily subject. On reaching the period of childhood, it will be, in a physical sense, quite normal. In character, whilst an ardent student and a hard worker, it will be rather morose, and seek its chief pleasure not in the companionship of others, but in literary and artistic pursuits. It will be diffident, and slow to make friends. The few, however, that it does make, will be quixotically loyal and faithful. This child will develop a high form of citizenship, with good ideals and a progressive intellect.

If today is your birthday you are very candid and frank, and often shock your friends by your blunt utterances, lacking, as they are, in all tact or diplomacy. Truth is an asset of which the value cannot be denied, but it is not always necessary, or expedient, to serve it unadorned. It can be neatly and adroitly draped, without any of its inherent beauty being sacrificed.

In your affections you are more fickle than constant, and you are easily attracted by externals, without stopping to think of the fundamentals, or consequences. You treat your own passing affections, and those of others, very light-heartedly. The time, however, will surely come—no one can say how soon or how tardy—when your feelings will be deeply moved, and, at such time, it is more than likely, in the line of retribution, that your attachment will be a forlorn one, and your love unrequited.

Successful people born on this date are: Cornelius N. Bliss, New York merchant; Hattie Tyng Griswold, author and poet; George Francis Atkinson, botanist; Mabel O. Wright, author; Cleveland Dodge, capitalist; Frank Orren Lowden, former governor of Illinois.

More Truth Than Poetry

TIGER, TIGER.

Blake might have written it today,
Tiger, tiger, burning bright,
In the forest of the night,
If you had destroyed the gut,
What would cross word puzzles do?

Well for us you did not try
To annihilate the ai,
Or that other five-toed sloth—
For we sorely need them both.

When you wandered through the wood
Seeking animals for food,
We are glad you did not turn
And exterminate the erne.

Luckily those eyes of fire
Did not burn with savage ire
When the eland passed your way;
He is such a help today.

Never, in a famished state,
Did you ever lie in wait
For the shrinking bok, or stalk
The extremely needful auk.

Though you saw the roe and doe,
Happily you let them go,
Which we think of with a thrill—
When the squares they neatly fill.

Tiger, tiger, burning bright,
In the forest of the night,
You were kind, to say the least,
To spare so many a brief named beast!

AN AMENDMENT

If Horace Greeley were alive today his advice would be "Go West, young man, and get away from the train robbers."

UNLIMITED USES

Now that a man, who left a string of pearls in a Paris hotel recovered it by radio, woman voyagers will soon be sending back radios to their husbands to put the cat out and turn off the water in the bath room.

By Dr. Frank Crane

THE PENALTY OF NOTORIETY

The penalty of notoriety is that most people like to throw stones at a prominent object.

The writer was once delivering a lecture, and was shot at by a drunken man in the audience. He wanted to shoot something, and the speaker being the most prominent object in view was his chosen target. Luckily, he missed.

The love of being prominent, or famous is in all of us. We want to rise a little above the general mass. It is pleasant to be pointed at and noted as a prominent person.

But there is a trait in human nature that loves to knock those who are prominent.

There are thousands of people who would enjoy seeing Henry Ford taken down a peg, simply because he is so rich. There are many people—we believe they are not in the minority—who would enjoy the discomfiture of any public man, from President Coolidge down.

Perhaps it is part of the inferiority complex. Those who are low in the scale do not like to be outdistanced by others, and the reaction upon them is one of envy.

We may rest assured that among those who have been heated in any form in the game of life there are some who do not take it good-naturedly, although the majority do. These people like to attack anyone who is superior.

One of the members of Dr. Percy Stickney Grant's church hit the nail on the head the other day when he said: "He who raises his head above the multitude runs the risk of having it struck."

The bolt that lays low the towering cedar will pass the lowly bush by unharmed, and those plants that bend before the storm will last longer than those that rigidly resist it.

The only way to be safe in this world is to remain unnoticed and unworthy of notice. All success is a sort of venture. No matter what it is that brings a person into prominence—whether ability, or riches, it makes him a target for the venomous shafts of a few lowly.

It is rare, therefore, to find a man who has achieved success who, at the same time, is kindly and free from bitterness.

There are some such, and they deserve a great deal of credit.

There are just enough poor losers in this world to make the lot of the successful not a happy one.

At the same time, it is impossible to be of much use to your fellow men unless you are well equipped with personality, or with money. Those who desire to help their fellow men and seek success for this purpose should have enough philosophy to hold them steady against the assaults of those who want to take them down. There is something in human nature that resents superiority, either that of ability or of fame, and one must be prepared to bear patiently with this.

In order to live comfortably in this world, you must take the world as it is and not expect people to be ideal.

Optimism may be a mere point of view, but it is valuable for all of us, even though we have no foundation for it. Some one has said that "an optimist sees a light where there isn't any, and a pessimist is the son-of-a-gun who comes along and blows out that light."

TO THE ENGAGED GIRL.

—Of all the people in the world, with the possible exception of the June bride, the engaged girl is supposed to be the happiest. And possibly she is, but probably she isn't—always.

You see the modern engaged girl is a very different individual from the about-to-be bride of our mother's day who awaited her marriage with a calm sweet, peaceful assurance that engagements were made in Heaven, and there was no need to worry. Nowadays, the modern miss is apt to be rather uneasy and worried during the months preceding her marriage.

This is due sometimes to the fact that she's always been popular, always had her pick of the boys, and is now wondering after two or three months, of an engagement, whether this is the real thing. This particular girl should have a long engagement so that she will have plenty of opportunity to find out all about the man who's going to be her companion through life.

Then when she takes the fatal step she'll have no doubts or fears. If she's gone through a long engagement, week after week, seeing the same boy, having to cut down on good times, so there'll be enough money to furnish the new home—she knows fairly definitely that the man in the case means a great deal to her.

Sometimes the future bride has had a long business training, and worries about whether she's going to take to housework, whether she won't get fed up with the monotony of caring for a home. If it is at all possible, this girl ought to be allowed to work for a short time after she's married so the change won't be so great.

She'll find herself, after a while longing to give up her business career so she'll have more time to devote to her home.

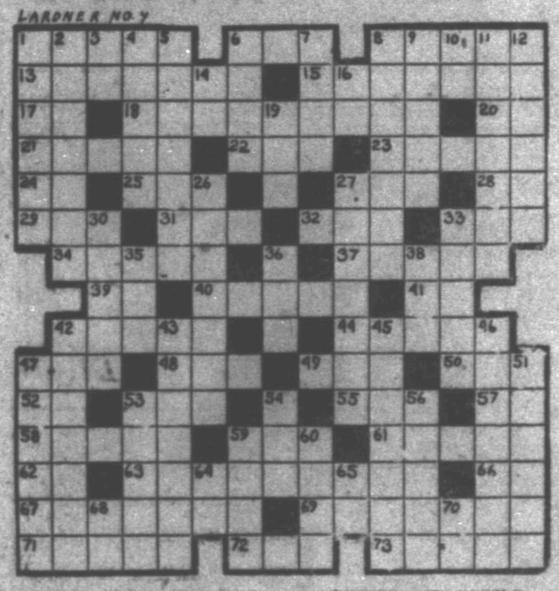

Don't worry engaged business girl about the necessity of changing from doing work for an employer to doing work for the man you love. You'll find the change comes a great deal more easily to you than you anticipate.

On the whole, though, I should advise as short engagements as possible. It's a trying time even in the most ideal love matches—no matter what the poets say—as girls know.

Cross-Word Puzzle

How to Solve the Cross-Word Puzzle.

Every number in the form represents the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically. If there is a black square to the left of the number, the word is horizontal if above it, the word is vertical. The same number may of course begin both a horizontal and a vertical. The definitions for the correct words to fill the form are found below, with numbers corresponding to those on the form. Run through the definitions till you find one that you recognize, and put it in its proper place on the form, one letter for each white square. This will furnish several cross-clues to the words linking with it at right angles. Continue in this manner till the form is completely filled. If you have solved the puzzle correctly it should read both horizontally and vertically with words corresponding to the definitions.

DENY FLU VICTIM REPORTS.

Tokio Authorities Say 4,700 Death Toll in Epidemic an Exaggeration.

TOKIO, Jan. 25.—Reports of an influenza epidemic in the Tokio area in which 4,700 persons are dead, are exaggerated, Tokio municipal health authorities said today, though there are between 30 and 40 deaths daily. This, however, is only slightly above normal for this time of the year, it was stated.

Lack of rain is claimed to have caused the epidemic.

POEMS THAT LIVE

A LIFE ON THE OCEAN WAVE.

A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep;
Where the scatter'd waters rave
And the winds their revels keep!
Like an eagle caged I pine
On this dull unchanging shore;
Oh, give me the flashing brine,
The spray and the tempest's roar!

Once more on the deck I stand,
Of my own swift-gliding craft;
The gale follows fair aloft,
We shoot through the sparkling foam,
Set sail! farewell to the land;
Like an ocean-bird set free,
Like the ocean-bird, our home
We'll find far out on the sea.

The land is no longer in view,
The clouds have begun to frown;
But with a stout vessel and crew,
We'll let the storm come down!
And the winds and the waters
While they swing and the waters rave,
A home on the rolling sea!
A life on the ocean wave!

DINNER FOR CONFEDERATES

Quanah Women Honor Veterans Of War With Turkey Banquet.

QUANAH, Jan. 25.—Honoring the last ex-confederates of Camp Rhodes, in commemoration of the birthdays of Lee and Jackson, Mrs. A. Mosely and Mrs. T. K. Hawkins, assisted by Miss Florence Stevenson, served a turkey dinner January 21 at the home of Mrs. Mosely.

Only six veterans responded to roll call from a membership of Camp Rhodes, death having taken heavy toll during the past few years. Harry Koch, editor of the Quanah Tribune Chief, who was one of the few outside invited guests, recalled at the dinner a similar dinner given twelve years ago by Dr. G. S. Wyatt, when 25 veterans sat at the table. Following are those present at Mrs. Mosely's: W. J. Talbott, Co. F., first regimental reserves, Arkansas cavalry; T. F. Garner, Davis regiment, Rosnes brigade; W. G. Kearley, second Tennessee cavalry; H. W. Martin, Co., T, Robinson's artillery; W. H. Altman, Co. I 37th Mississippi infantry; W. P. Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Wasting Time on Worry.

The statement by a professor at Columbia university that the present generation is being made ill by worry makes one wonder what the present generation has got to worry about.

Three or four hundred years ago, when famines swept civilized communities as regularly as epidemics of colds in the head do now, there was abundant reason to worry.

In that time no citizen was ever quite sure just when one of his powerful neighbors wouldn't drop around and take away the food supply, and perhaps burn the house down just for the pleasure of seeing the fire.

If he managed by hard work and thrift to pile up a little nest egg, he had to keep it secret or some gentleman who owned a private army would come and get it.

He had a little chance of educating his children—little hope of rising out of the position in life where he was placed by his birth.

Comfort, as we understand it today, was not known, even by the people of wealth and power.

The palace in which Louis XIV dwelt in such magnificence would cause most house-hunting ladies of the present time to turn up their noses, and to inquire disdainfully how they could be expected to live in a place that had no central heating, and which possessed not a single electric light or even a gas jet.

The pioneers who journeyed to America in the wake of the Pilgrims had plenty of cause to worry, especially during the first years after their arrival.

But unaccustomed weather, shortage of crops, hostile Indians and other things kept them so busy trying to stay alive that they didn't do much worrying.

In the present day, when about nine-tenths of the work that our ancestors used to do is done by others, there is not much justification for wearing out the nerves, in the fear of the future that is worry.

Most worriers would soon forget their worry if they were stranded on a desert island and compelled to shift for themselves, learning all that their fathers have forgotten about fire building, and cooking, and food collecting.

A generation that is wasting its energies on worry is a generation that has not enough to do.

In the face of real peril worry usually disappears.

Fathers and mothers are anxious when their children fall ill, but if they are the right sort they are usually fully occupied trying to relieve the sufferers, and help them to get well again if possible.

The man who worries because he is afraid he will lose his savings stops worrying when he actually loses them, and begins to look around for ways and means to accumulate new savings.

In this century, when three-quarters of the reasons for worry that afflicted our ancestors have totally disappeared, it is curious that this nerve racking habit should persist.

Yet it does. And most of the worriers, curiously enough, are those who have little to worry about.

The best cure for worry is industry, and plenty of it. Now that competition is so keen, every minute counts and not one must be wasted in troubling about calamities that may not happen at all.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 24.—Beth M. Meservey, president of the First National bank which was closed by federal bank Examiner E. L. Chapman last Thursday following the suicide of Jack Brasher, cashier, submitted to arrest here this afternoon by deputy United States marshals.

A warrant charged Meservey with violation of the federal banking laws following Chapman's examination which is said to have disclosed shortages totaling approximately $50,000.

Meservey will be taken to Kansas City where, he said, he would plead guilty. It is expected he will be sentenced this afternoon.

In a statement written to Chapman the bank president is said to have admitted violations of the banking laws "with his knowledge and consent." The signed statement does not mention the dead cashier.

SCIENTISTS ARE JUBILANT.

Inspections and Observances of Solar Eclipse Best Ever, They Assert.

LAKE HURST, N. J., Jan. 25.—Jubilant because of the apparent success of their venture to observe and photograph from aloft the phenomena of a solar eclipse, the group of scientists who Saturday witnessed the eclipse from the dirigible Los Angeles were enthusiastically describing the beauty of the spectacle. Like a group of excited school boys, they recited their adventure in the simple words of the layman.

"When you can adequately describe celestial glory, then you will have told what this eclipse looked like," was the way Captain Edward T. Pollock, superintendent of the naval observatory at Washington described it.

"A most spectacular sight," Commander J. H. Klein Jr., commander of the Los Angeles said. "the sky at the horizon was a flood of merging orange and red light. Overhead the ceiling was blue black while all about was the darkness of twilight."

Irrigation

Why the river water contains more salt at one time than at another.

Some people here have been wondering why the flood waters of the Wichita are less salty and less hard than the low waters. To one who has not given the matter much thought or who is unfamiliar with dissolved impurities it may seem strange that there is such a difference.

Let us examine the conditions that cause such variations. A heavy rain falls on the watershed of the river. The soil is more or less dense and does not absorb water quickly. So most of the water runs directly into the creeks and the river without penetrating the soil at all.

The surface of the soil has been washed by rains for untold centuries, therefore there is but little mineral matter on it and the water that flows over it takes up few impurities other than some of the surface soil.

But part of the water does penetrate below the surface through cracks and otherwise. This water of course tends to flow into the creeks and the river the same as the surface water, but much slower because it must pass through the soil on its way.

Finally this underground water does appear. It shows up along the streams as springs or seeps. It is a different water, however. It started as pure rain water but in its journey through the soil it has dissolved out many minerals which it carries with it. It has dissolved salt and gypsum and lime and other things it met.

The low water is made up of this ground water. The high water is surface water. One has absorbed a considerable amount of impurities, the other hardly any.

BALM FOR SUPERSTITIOUS.

Corn Curers and Thimble Hiders Can Work More Accurately Hereafter.

NAVAL OBSERVATORY, MARE ISLAND, Cal., Jan. 25.—Persons who plant potatoes, hide thimbles in an attempt to cure corns and carry on other of life's activities under certain movements of the moon upon data furnished in almanacs will be able to work more accurately in the future, as a result of today's eclipse of the sun, according to Captain T. J. See, U. S. N., well known scientist.

Dr. See declared observations made today during the eclipse would furnish extremely valuable data to compilers of almanacs and that information as to the movements of the sun and moon previously unknown may be revealed.

Legislative Hopper

From The Record News Legislative Bureau at Austin, Edited by Martin Anderson in charge and The Associated Press.

S. RAYMOND BROOKS MARGARET STALLINGS
W. BOYD GATEWOOD GEORGE S. WRIGHT

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 25.—Many are predicting the legislature will not get to the general appropriations bills in 60 days—that a special session will be necessary, following the custom of many years.

But the house and senate seem in better shape to get the supply bills passed than at the same time in any previous regular session of a decade.

There is little in the way.

The bills have been predigested by the board of control budget bureau, and data assembled showing comparative appropriations and requests for six years. In the past, the legislature spent weeks doing this work itself.

The first of the general bills for support of the government was introduced Friday. It is the judiciary bill, an can be passed in both houses in probably an hour's time each.

There are three other general bills—four if the miscellaneous claims are included. The big bills are the departmental, eleemosynary and higher educational appropriations.

Gov. Mariam A. Ferguson's demand for consolidation, abolition and cutting down of departments was so much less drastic than had been anticipated by some of those who didn't know just what to expect but were hoping for the worst, that whether or not the legislature follows her suggestions, little time need be lost in passing the general bills.

Students of the Texas banking system are of the opinion that the legislature, by making the pet guaranty fund system a little less rigid will stabilize banking affairs to a great extent. Half a dozen city banks were kicking over the traces because they wanted to get out of the guaranty fund system, whereby the poorly-managed and inefficient bank profited by their experience, leadership and high salaried executives. In other words, the bigger banks, with efficient administrative personnel, bore the risks as well of the little fellows in the system.

A bill to permit banks to readily leave the guaranty fund system is now before both houses, sponsored by the bankers. When passed, it will give those banks that want to a way to get out without surrendering their charters; and will leave in the system those banks of comparable size and kindred interests who want to proceed under the principle of the guaranty plan—pooling the responsibility, and spreading the loss over so wide an extent that it is virtually imperceptible to the individual bank.

Will it be Sam Johnson of Stonewall or Eugene Nordhaus of San Antonio for labor commissioner? That was the question being asked in legislative halls, by the labor people of Texas, and by the public. The general opinion was the appointment of the labor commissioner in the Ferguson administration lay between these former members of the house. It was not known whether Mrs. Ferguson would make the appointment before the expiration of the term of Commissioner Joseph S. Myers, in February.

The intensity of the newspaper "game"—the game of work—has developed two definite schools during the nerve-racking, soul-straining days of the legislative session and governor's inauguration. These schools are:

The George Ade-Ring Lardner-Will Rogers Style of Spelling all the big Words with Capital Letters. In this school art is Art, politics is Politics, and religion, Religion.

The other is the verbless, or dot-and-dash school. Tired south . . . Jim's old-time smile—More speed and less talk . . . over the hump—pardon-hunters, job-hunters, swarms . . . shocks. . . .

Senator R. A. Stuart of Fort Worth points out his bill, introduced defining securities in which life insurance companies may invest surplus funds, and defining the method by which funds may be invested in Texas securities, has nothing to do with the famous "Robertson law" which requires foreign insurance companies to invest a fixed percentage of their Texas reserve in Texas property.

Thursday was the seventy-first birthday of Rep. John A. Veatch of Joshua. Johnson county. His colleagues passed a resolution congratulating him. He told the house he had wanted to pass his bill merging the markets and warehouse department into the agricultural department on his birthday but that the bill had not reached him from committee.

Speaker Lee Satterwhite is said to be the best versed presiding officer in the house rules of procedure of any speaker in recent years. So far, no member has shown any tendency to appeal from his rulings.

Support of the women's state-wide organizations of the bill reorganizing the public health work of the state was voiced by members of the women's joint legislative council to Governor Ma Ferguson.

The news gathering corps at the capitol is quieting down somewhat after the strain of inauguration day. Some of the special writers sent down to cover Mrs. Ferguson's inaugural have gone, and the flock of photographers who cluttered up the capitol several days is thinning out.

The second longest bill is the common carrier measure for motor vehicles operated for hire. The biggest bill is the revised statutes as drafted in the report of the codifying commission.

An old-time legislator, Fritz R. Smith, now mayor of Snyder, is back to watch the proceedings. He is serving as a committee clerk in order to be again in the thick of the legislative din.

Former Senator W. P. Sebastian, reappointed by Mrs. Ferguson on the pardon board, on which he served under James E. Ferguson up to 1917, will reopen the pardon board in the offices, at the east end of the capitol, where they were last conducted by Fritz R. Smith and W. H. Knight, four years ago, until the board was abolished by Gov. Neff. The law provides, as to other boards that the governor "shall" appoint the members, but in the case of the pardon board it stipulates that he "may" appoint two members of a board of pardon advisors.

A resolution, proposing to amend the state constitution and provide for pensions to school teachers who have served the state more than 25 years, is before the house. A proposed amendment to this effect was drafted by a committee of Galveston school teachers.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Saving Steps.

One Mother Says:

Mothers who find, as I do, that living in a two-story house means an endless amount of running up and down stairs will find it a great saving of strength and time to duplicate some of the articles that are in the most frequent demand. I keep a bottle of iodine and some cotton in the kitchen cupboard, also a bottle of milk of magnesia, so that when a dose has to be administered it can be given with the breakfast orange juice. I also keep brush and comb in a drawer in the kitchen, and on a brass hook I keep a clean wash cloth so that a hurried washing can be had in case of sudden "company" or other emergency.

Here's a "step saver" that is typical of the helpful suggestions found in the booklet "100 Ideas for Mothers," which you may obtain by sending 12c in stamps to The Record News Mothers' Bureau, Room 330, 440 S. Dearborn, St., Chicago, Ill.

J.G's Hard Luck Swings Again Like Cards In A Poker Game--Bad--Worse

LIBERTY, Mo., Jan. 25.—"Life's little ironies" have changed to luck's great ironies" for Joseph G. Wright, Clay county auctioneer.

It's a tough winter for J. G. But that's not worrying him so much as it was a rather sinewy fall and the summer was not so good and if the spring he had was the gentle kind the poets maudle about somebody else can have it.

It's been less than two weeks since J. G. broke into print with a catalogue of the things "lady luck's" evil complex did to him. They included a little matter of the wandering propensities of a neighbor's hogs, for which a grand jury indicted him, fire in his house and barn, which a grand jury indicted him, an affair of the heart, for which a grand jury indicted him, the setting aside of wife's divorce and the subsequent discovery that his marriage to the lady of his choice was illegal.

Perhaps these jabs when "lady luck's" face was averted were just meant to try Mr. Wright's patience. But they did not have that effect. They dazed him so much that last night he investigated the gas tank of his flivver with a match.

And today, the once jovial acutioneer has another sorrow—deeper than all the rest.

For the doctor says Wright's eye brows will grow out again and that he will live despite his burns.

But life—well, life is not such a pleasant thing, says Wright, unless there's a new deal.

In the meantime, Octavus Roy Cohen wonders why Wright was born white.

What a plot—what a plot!

Mrs. Chitwood Starts the Cooking School, Using Our Hotpoint Electric Range

—Mrs. Chitwood, noted home economist and lecturer on better cooking methods, begins her series of instructions on new and better ways of cooking at The Record News' Cooking School. At Mrs. Chitwood's request, we are supplying her with electric service and her preference, the Hotpoint Hughes Range. She finds the evenly regulated heat of an electric range makes better cooking results possible. Go today—then you will want to attend every session

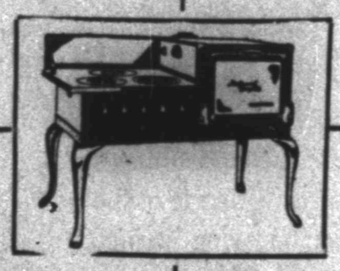

Take Note of These Four Points

Time Saving

When cooking can be done by rule instead of by guess, much of the cook's time is saved. In the Hotpoint Electric Range the heat is so uniform, so evenly regulated, that almost no watching is required. Because the heat is exact, food in the oven needs no watching; you know it is cooking satisfactorily without looking. Turning is unnecessary; the oven bakes with wonderful uniformity on top, sides and bottom. Basting is not required. You can cook many foods with practically no water—meat, cabbage, onions, for example—and without frequent inspection to see that they have not cooked dry. You can put food in the oven at low heat and leave it for hours at a time while the cooking is in process, without danger of disaster. This gives you additional hours every day away from your kitchen—a thing that every woman will welcome.

Better Food

One of the marvels of the Hotpoint Electric Range is the better cooking results which are possible with it. The evenly regulated heat eliminates the guesswork of cooking and substitutes in its place an almost scientific exactness. Cooking failures are rare—success the rule. The wonderful Hotpoint oven, free from fumes which contaminate the food and from air currents which carry off the juices, produce better results than have ever before been possible. Meats are richer, juicier; bread is more moist, keeps longer; cakes are more delicate in flavor; biscuits more beautifully browned; everything has a more delicious taste. Good cooks become better; inexperienced cooks quickly learn to cook with assured success. The same heat which produces a satisfactory result one time will duplicate it every time.

Economy

The way in which the Hotpoint Electric Range conserves the heat means a decided saving in fuel cost. The heat storage principle of the oven makes it possible to start the cooking with "high" heat and finish with the heat entirely "off"—a wonderful feature in cooking which will appeal to every woman, and which will reduce fuel consumption to a minimum.

In addition, the absence of strong air currents in the oven saves food. The shrinkage in meats is materially less than in other fuel ovens, because the juices are not carried off in the air. A five-pound roast weighs approximately a pound more after cooking in a Hotpoint oven than in an oven using other fuels. This saving is well worth consideration—goes a long way toward paying the fuel bill. The reliability of the heat means fewer spoiled dishes—another saving.

Comfort

The whole plan of the Hotpoint Electric Range is to conserve all heat for cooking purposes and waste none of it in the room. The result is a cooler kitchen than is possible with any other type or range. The electric units throw all of the heat directly against the cooking utensil; none of it can escape at the sides or bottom. The heavily insulated oven walls and close-fitting oven door retain the heat so well that even with the oven at high heat the outside is cool—you can put your hand on it without burning. What this means in hot weather any woman can appreciate. No longer is it a burden to cook in summer, when it can be done in such comfort as the Hotpoint Electric Range affords.

—Examine the range Mrs. Chitwood is using at the school. She will gladly explain further details of operation to you. We will be glad to show you the other models made by Hotpoint.

Queer Things In Eclipse Time But World Still Here

Photographs Were Taken, And Sea Gulls Went To Roost Saturday

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 25.—Just how does an eclipse affect a hen laying an egg, one particular biddy, at the residence of Mrs. Pablo Lozano solved the question Saturday.

An egg, of a dark brick color was presented as evidence. It was removed from the nest while still warm, and right after the eclipse.

The theory, is that the hen looked at the sun, and the gradual passing of the moon over its bright surface cutting off part of the light had its effect on the hen, so that the egg turned out a prune color.

The egg is now being held for observation.

TONE WAVE CHANGES REPORTED FROM WDAR.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. Jan. 25.—Radio station WDAR, Philadelphia, announced that a marked departure from the direction of their tone wave had been observed by radio scientists stationed at Waterbury, Conn., immediately before and during the first stages of the eclipse.

SHORT WAVE LENGTH FOLLOWED THE SUN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The tests made of the behavior of the ether of the air during the total eclipse Saturday officials of the Radio corporation of America deducted that a short wave length follows the sun, that static is not entirely a local condition because it was affected by general conditions and that a long wave, irregular before the eclipse, became noticeably regular during totality.

RADIO STORY ABOUT ECLIPSE UNSUCCESSFUL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Attempts by Major William N. Hensbay, commandant at Mitchell Field, to send by radio a story of the eclipse from above the clouds failed. Appartus set up in Central park to retransmit his voice could do little more than make audible his voice counting from one to ten as a test.

TEMPERATURES DROPPED 1.3 DEGREES IS REPORT.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 25.—The temperature dropped over 1.3 degrees during the totality of the eclipse, the United States weather bureau at Cornell university reported after the phenomenon.

AGED NEGRO SAW END OF WORLD HERE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Laboring apparently under a hallucination that the eclipse of the sun marked the end of the world, E. C. Washington, an aged negro barber employed in the senate wing of the capitol, ran amuck early today with a razor and before he was captured after an exciting chase by capitol police he slashed one of the engineers of the building on the face.

DEER ARE IN TEROR AS DARKNESS COMES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Deer in the open at the Bronx zoo tumbled over one another in terror during the darkness of the eclipse. The great Arctic owl hooted and flew about. The heavyweight alligator bellowed as at night.

SEA GULLS FOOLED BY THE SUDDEN DARKNESS.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 25.—A great flock of thousands of sea gulls which spend the winter days feeding along the Chemung river here were fooled by the eclipse. As the moon blotted out the sun and darkness fell, the gulls rose from the river and started for Watkins, 22 miles distant, where they make their nightly roost. Before they were out of sight the shadow began to leave the sun and the gulls turned about and returned to the river.

TIDES ARE INFLUENCED BY THE SUN'S ECLIPSE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—The eclipse of the sun today exerted an unusual influence on tides in the Pacific ocean. The Presidio tide station reported this morning a tide of 6.25 feet, approximately two feet above normal. The extreme low tide tonight will be 1.8 feet below normal, marking a difference of eight feet between low and high tides. The magnetic influence exerted on the water by the moon are greatly increased during the period of an eclipse, according to the United States coast and geological survey office here.

"It gave me jewels and fine clothes, but I'd rather be a washerwoman," declares Mrs. Blanche M. LaRock, Watertown, N. Y., "rum queen," who was fined $500 at the same time her husband, Guy, "the honest bootlegger," was sentenced to four years in jail.

Endless Caverns Still Endless as Exploring Party Fails Once More

By BETTY LARRIMORE.
Special Correspondent of the Record News.
(Copyright, 1925, by The Consolidated Press Association.

NEWMARKET, Va., Jan. 25.—Another bold effort to find the end of the 26 famous endless caverns of Virginia has failed. New chambers have been explored, new casms have been crossed, new "fat men's miseries" have been endured, traces of animal life have been found in the far recesses, but the "end is not yet" and there are some distinguished explorers in a party which has just emerged from the caves who do not believe the end ever will be found.

Companions of Peary at the pole, of Roosevelt on the "river of Doubt" veterans of the arctic and the tropics, the mountain peak and the jungle depth, took part in this latest journey into the endless regions and while their work has been interesting and successful in part, the main objective was not attained and may not be attempted again for another year.

Had Its Comedy.

The affair was not without its amusing side, such for instance was when Carveth Wells, fellow of the Royal Geographic society of England, distinguished for his exploration in the Maley jungle and in Lapland got his 185 pounds evoirdupois stuck hard and fast in a small hole through which the entire party had to pass. Anticipating trouble of this sort, the party had a slender man attached to it for hole widening purposes, this heavy duty falling upon Donald Rheuten, a world war veteran of Richmond. The stalwart Mr. Wells did not attempt passage of the "misery" until several others had successfully negotiated the ordeal. Even this precaution failed and the explorer was held for more than five minutes in the slimy and suffocating mud.

Thirteen men made the trip, the writer serving to break any possible numerical hoodoo. The expedition was organized under the auspices of the Explorers' club of New York. Henry Collins Walsh, founder and president of the Explorers club headed the group, and Major E. M. Brown, of New York and Wasnington, owner of the caverns conducted the exploring party, which entered the caverns for long hikes, climbs and crawls on three successive days this week.

Cheerie a Ringleader.

George K. Cherrie, a ringleader of the trip is one of the greatest authorities on ornithology in the country. He is more famous however as a conductor of the Cheerie-Roosevelt expedition in which Colonel Roosevelt explored the River of Doubt. It was on this trip that Roosevelt fell sick with the disease which six years later ended his life. He gave entire credit to Cheerie for bringing him out of the upper Amazon alve.

Dr. Robert N. Keeley, surgeon on one of Admiral Perry's expeditions to the north pole was the medical officer of the party.

Dr. Chester A. Reeds, associate curator of geology of the American museum of natural history, was the geologist.

On the first morning the explorers entered the caverns, armed in overalls, miners lamps, flashlights, flares and four biscuits each. One hours walk took them to the unknown part of the caverns. A slippery stretch of rock about two feet wide and sloping at a 45 degree angle, dropping off into a 60 foot chasm, was our only path across by our vanguard, the eminent explorers crawled across sideways on their knees. We were reminded appropriately that if we slipped, our bodies could never be recovered.

Endless Caverns.

At the top of an almost perpendicular rocks, covered with slime, was the small hole about a foot in diameter through which we must pass. We lay down flat and were pushed from below until those above could reach our arms and pull us through the hole. When Carveth Wells stuck, it was only with the greatest difficulty that he was extricated at all. Coming back was much easier, as we just sat down by the hole and then slid through like a toboggan slide.

Days of crawling through the mud convinced the explorers that the caverns extended as far as the limestone strata and were practically endless. The only signs of animal life were several bats which flew around in the deepest and most inaccessible parts of the caves, tracks and skeletal remains of bears, and skeletons of worms. The bears were doubtless lost in the caverns and starved to death, like Mark Twain's injun Joe; but the worms were probably remnants of the life of the tertiary age in which the limestone was deposited millions of years ago.

HOUSTON, Jan. 25.—Three prisoners escaped from the city prison farm about 4 o'clock this morning. It was the first jail delivery there in several months. One of the men sentenced to thirty-five days and two were serving ten day sentences.

Escape was made by prying up the floor boards in the men's dormitory.

TO PORT OF MISSING MEN?

Wealthy Canadian in San Antonio Suddenly Disappears.

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 25.—With a large sum of money in his possession, a Canadian, spending the winter in San Antonio, embarked for the port of Missing Men, when he left his apartment at the New Home rooms, 302 1-2 South Alamo street, it is believed by Mrs. Durley, the operator of the rooming house, who reported the matter to the police Saturday noon.

James Forsum of Van Couver, Canada, came to San Antonio, a short time ago, Mrs. Durley said, and was living at her place. He was apparently wealthy, she said, and neatly carried a large sum of money on his person.

He left his room to go down town for a few minutes Friday morning, Mrs. Durley reported, and never returned. All of his clothes and other possessions were left in his room.

Mrs. Durley told police she believed others may have learned that Forsum had considerable money, with him and that he has met with foul play on that account.

The missing man is described as being five feet six inches tall, with ruddy cheeks, light brown hair, blue eyes and wearing a brown suit and dark hat when last seen.

America's Finest Condiment
and the GEBHARDT line of Mexican food specialities

Gebhardt's Eagle Chili Powder, the basic seasoning for all of Gebhardt's wonderfully wholesome, high-quality Mexican food products, is made from only genuine Mexican Ancho peppers, grown especially for and under the direction of Gebhardt. In addition to seasoning for typically Mexican dishes it is also a delightful condiment to be used in the preparation of all kinds of meats, fish, soups salads and salad dressings.

Gebhardt's line of Mexican Foods, ready prepared, are a combination of good foods and pleasing flavor that once tried are always enjoyed. Gebhardt's Chili con Carne is made after the original Mexican recipe. A Gebhardt secret—long sought but never achieved by imitators. The Tamales are genuine Mexican —just mildly hot, different, wholesome and palatable. Shuck wrappedand eight good sized ones to the can.

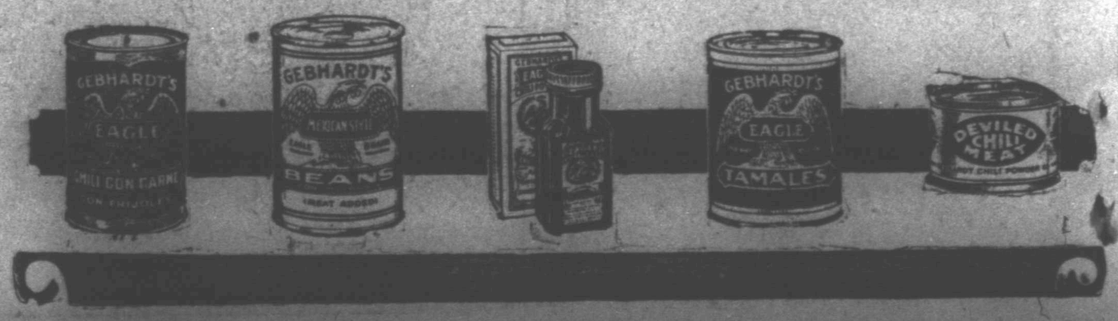

The Mexican style Beans with Chili con Carne gravy are tender, rich and wholesome. Deviled Chili Meat is a product in a class to itself, and entirely different from anything you have ever tasted. Get a copy of "Deviled Dainties" at the cooking school and see the many delightful ways this unusual food may be served.

Spaghetti and Chili and Rice and Chili complete the line. Both are foods of delicious difference with which to vary the every day menu.

All Gebhardt foods are prepared in sun-lit, white-tiled kitchens under rigid Government supervision.

Playing with Fire

The Story of a Social Climber

by Lucille Van Slyke

CHAPTER XXV.

From the Frying Pan Into the Fire

A WEEK of gorgeous autumnal weather followed Rosalie's return to Pendleton. She found herself involved in the routine of her job, which was by far the most strenuous thing she had ever tackled. Not only was Miss Ferguson an exacting task mistress, but Mrs. Hartwell too made many demands upan her time. And to make things even more complicated the gymnasium instructor sprained her ankle so that Rosalie had to spend hours on the tennis court in an endeavor to keep the pupils exercising. Evenings were deadly stupid things. A rather formal dinner was followed by some jerky dancing with the gawky adolescent girls, and always some stupid student needed an hour of tutoring.

But for all that she was busy she was not at all happy. She did not like teaching, she had no aptitude for it, and save for Nannette Quimby she had no personal interest in any of the youngsters. In her heart of hearts she admitted that she was restless and bored in this "world without men" as the Vassar graduate dubbed Pendleton.

In Emsville she had had the dubious fun of quarreling with Chet and making up with him.

"I've jumped out of the frying pan and into the fire," she thought moodily, "though I don't know as you could call anything so perfectly icy as the atmosphere around here, fire."

Her metaphor made her think of Nannette's father and the day he had warned her that playing around with Dick Converse was playing with fire. Dick had made no further effort to see her since she had come back and it rather piqued her.

The only excitement she had was a rather maudlin letter from Chet in which he clumsily expressed the hope that she would "not stay mad" long.

"I talked with Pa bout my leaving the store," he added, "and he was so kind of upset by the idea that I didn't settle on anything. As Jean says, there's time enough to talk out everything after you come home—"

His calm assumption that he ultimatum that he leave Emsville was just something to be "talked over" made her furious. With his letter there came by registered mail the ring she had tried to give back to him. She turned it over and over in her listless fingers without putting it on. Was it possible that she had once thought this tiny badly designed bit of jewelry a treasure to be proudly displayed? She tucked it back into its box carelessly, thinking covetously of a certain gorgeous sapphire and platinum circle that had adorned Mrs. Perry's blue-veined hand.

She looked at her own hands critically. They were a little roughened from chalk, to be sure ,but already she had learned to keep her nails as beautifully as anybody's She thought of Dick Converse's well kept fingers and Harrison Quimby's well shaped hands—and then of Chet's dingy, broken nails and his reddened knuckles.

"Chet would be so good looking if he only took some sort of care of himself," she thought gloomily.

Long after her charges were asleep that night she sat by a carefully shaded light composing a bitter answer to Chet's letter.

"— so I am sending back your ring," she wrote. "If you want me enough to do what I ask, why you can keep it to bring back to me, after you have done what I asked—but, if you won't, why, you'd better keep the ring for some girl who enjoys wearing it in Emsville."

SHE begged off from tennis the next afternoon and walked down the long hill to the village postoffice with the letter and the ring.

Nannette and another harum scarum went with her, giggling all the way over nothing at all. They wore the blue kilted skirts and middys that were the school uniform and rather ugly velour sailor hats, but Rosalie was dressed in a deftly cut grey jersey frock with quaint collar and cuffs: the Vassar girl had sold it to her the day before, agreeing to wait until the next pay day for the price thereof.

"Bought it at a bargain sale and it never fitted me," she explained tersely, "it's just what you need. That hicky suit of yours makes Mrs. Hartwell wince every time she looks at it."

Nannette looked back at her adoringly.

"Oh, Miss Rosy Lee!" she exclaimed ecstatically. "Thank goodness you don't look the least bit school teachery!"

Most surely she did not look that way a moment later when she pulled the children to the side of the road to let a motor pass and blushed crimson when the brakes squeaked with the suddenness with which its driver stopped the car.

"Hello Dicko!" Nannette sang out impishly.

"Want a lift?" asked Dick.

His manner was perfect but his eyes were positively shining with mischief.

"Let's!" Nannette implored Rosalie. "We could all get in. I'd sit in the middle and Hilda could sit on your lap and—"

"Certainly we couldn't," said Rosalie, her chin lifted haughtily.

DICK pulled the car out of the road. He leaned over his wheel, fixing imploring eyes on Rosalie.

"Nannie," he said, "I'll buy you two little ducks the largest ice cream sodas in the village if you'll go play your nice sweet teacher a beaunet. Golden rods and asters and that sort of thing."

Nannette laughed.

"We won't unless she tells us too," she announced.

"Please tell 'em to," he begged.

Rosalie hesitated. She looked down at her shoes, letting her lovely eyelashes trail against her flushed cheeks.

"If you only knew how many gallons of gas I've burned trailing around these roads on the chance I'd see you!" he added eloquently. "That old Harpy up at school wouldn't let me see you and a certain gentleman we needn't mention before his offspring said I wasn't fit to talk to you. But I simply must. Just for a minute. Surely you won't deny me that much?"

She said nothing at all but she was visibly weakening.

Nannette giggled and Nannette's classmate giggled.

"To my original offer," Dick said to them pleasantly, "I herewith add a pound each of the best triple distilled fudge in the village. Do cut along, Nannie, that's a good girl. I'll tell you exactly what it's about, isn't that fair? A couple of weeks ago I was very rude to your Miss Rosy Lee and hurt her feelings. I want to present my humble apologies and she isn't going to forgive me, you can readily see that. It will make me awfully nervous if you two stick around when she says 'No, never, never, NEVER!' You will get the ice cream sodas right away and have the fudge to take back to school with you and will earn the undying gratitude of a heartbroken man, so do cut along, Nannie!"

"Shall I?" Nan asked her youthful teacher doubtfully.

"She wants to say yes," Dick murmured. "She knows it is probably the last time she will ever see me again."

Waco Doffs T. A. Spangles And Prepares For Texas League Entrance

ASSOCIATION RELINQUISHES ALL CLAIMS TO TERRRITORIAL RIGHTS HELD IN BRAZOS RIVER VILLAGE

Town Expects to Enter Lone Star Loop Saturday—Club, Consisting of Three Players, Kept By T. A.

WACO, Jan. 25.—Texas Association representatives in conference with Waco business men today reached an agreement by which Waco was allowed to withdraw from the Texas Association. It is expected here that a club from this city will be admitted to the Texas league at the next meeting of that organization, to be held Saturday.

After a session lasting well over two hours, the two factions this afternoon finally came to an amicable agreement whereby the Texas Association relinquished its claim to the Waco territory. The terms of the agreement however, were not made public, although the final motion which was carried unanimously to give Waco its opportunity for Texas league baseball carried a provision which wiped out all indebtedness, it was alleged that H. A. Deputy of the Waco club owed the association, including the claim of $1,408.75 which had been appealed to Secretary Farrell of the national organization.

Every club in the Texas Association was represented when President J. G. McIntosh called the meeting to order. Corsicana was represented by Dude Ransom, president of the Corsicana club; Paul Moore, a newspaper man and W. Z. Herman. Mexia was represented by S. J. Stewart and Wallace Welch. Marlin sent E. A. Flowers, Austin Jimmy Warren and Roy West while Henry Meadows was on hand as a delegate from Temple. Meadows is president of the Temple team of the Texas Association.

Temple Suggests Release

Waco was represented by H. A. Dupuy, former president of the Waco club of the T. A., W. V. Crawford, Charlie Turner, William Abeel, owner of Katy park and E. C. Barrett. At the beginning of the meeting it seemed that it would be only another chapter of the old, old story, that both the Waco committee and the Texas Association would continue to stand pat.

Upon suggestion of Henry Meadows of Temple, it was agreed finally that inasmuch as it was appurent that the citizens of Waco did not want Texas Association baseball that the club owners go into secret session in order that a proposition might be made whereby the T. A. would agree to relinquish the Waco territory.

The proposition, which was accepted, eliminated the debt and the claim to Farrell in its entirety, and for the sum given the meeting voted unanimously to relinquish all claim to the Waco territory, giving the local committee an opportunity to make immediate steps toward arranging for Texas league baseball in Waco.

The Texas Association meeting, however, was continued, and the election of officers for the ensuing term was held with Joe McClendon, Mexia; Dude Ransom, Corsicana; Houghton Brownlee, Austin, and Henry Meadows of Temple being named on the board of directors. E. A. Flowers of Marlin was elected vice president, and Charles Clover of Mexia, was elected secretary-statician.

Amicably Settled

Many suggestions were offered as to the most logical city to be awarded the berth made vacant by the withdrawal of Waco, and opinion seemed to favor Taylor, though both Cleburne and Waxahachie were mentioned. A committee composed of Roy West of Austin, and Henry Meadows of Temple was appointed by President McIntosh to find a city where the franchise might be placed. It was also agreed that Jack Shires, Speck Regan and Chik Humphreys, the three ball players which had belonged to Waco should go to the new city. The rookie rule was also roundly discussed but no action was taken.

It was shortly before 5 o'clock when the meeting which was called to order at 2 o'clock, was adjourned by President McIntosh, and as a whole it was one of the most amicable meetings held since the Waco controversy arose. The Waco committee was congratulated by the league for the business-like manner in which it handled the rather delicate situation, and wished the locals the best of fortune in their Texas league venture.

STRANGLER CAN SIGHT DEMPSEY-FIRPO CASE IN WRESTLING SUIT

"Big" Munn's right to the world's heavyweight championship is now being questioned because he is supposed to have deserved disqualification when he tossed Ed Lewis, the champion, out of the ring.

Lewis can sight Jack Dempsey's case. Luis Firpo wasn't accorded the world's heavyweight boxing title because he slammed the champion into Seat 6, Row B.

Speaking of "Big" Munn. The former Nebraska football star switched from boxing to wrestling. Paul Berlenbach, prominent middleweight, gave up wrestling to enter the boxing game. Too bad they aren't in the same weight class. They could be matched for the second guess championship.

BASKETBALL A STRAIN?

Game's Originator to Make Tests On Participants

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—The James Naismith, originator of basketball and a member of the University of Kansas faculty, is conducting an investigation to determine if the game is too strenuous and a strain on the heart. Dr. Naismith attended high school basketball games here last night and with pencil and charts, he noted the effect of the game upon players.

"This chart" said Dr. Naismith, "is to determine the actual playing time of the team. Later I shall determine the actual playing time of the individual. I have found that in football the player averages 12 minutes during which he is strenuously engaged."

Nothing Matter With Wills' Mitt, But Won't Fight

Mullins Sends Negro Into Stable To Prepare For Summer

By SPARROW McGANN
Copyright, 1925, by The Consolidated Press Association

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—First came news that Tex Rickard had matched Harry Wills and Romero Rojas. Then immediately afterwards the world was informed that Wills had trekked to Hot Springs with a left hand that required rest and medical attention.

The funny part of it is that Wills' left hand has nothing the matter with it at all. It is hard to keep up with the doings of managers and promoters in this wierd fight game. Things happen that look O. K. on the surface, yet actually they are something else again on the inside.

But what seems to be going on is a game of put and take between Rickard and Paddy Mullins.

Paddy Against Tex

For several years Tex and old Paddy, who seems to have a very trusting nature, have not been on business terms. One proof of this is that none of Mullins' fighters has appeared in the Madison Square Garden, that mecca of all boxers in the winter months.

Mullins is convinced, despite Rickard's statements, that the master showman is responsible for keeping his big brown man away from a shot at the title.

Insiders believe that Mullins missed one when he let Rickard sign Wills and Firpo. Or at that maybe Mullins had more faith in his fighter than Rickard had. Anyway, the dope is that the promoter expected that Firpo's wild rights would erase the negro from the picture or that the black battler would smash his hands on the Argentino's reinforced conk.

Trustful Again

Well as it turned out, Wills played mainly for Firpo's body and showed up the wild bull in his true colors.

Now the inside talk is that Mullins has again proved trusting and has listened to promises that Wills will get his big chance this summer and in return puts his man in the stable. Just how Mullins was talked into this belief is hard to say; but it looks as though the only result of this arrangement will be the keeping of Wills out of the limelight and the headliners. Dempsey, so goes the talk, will fight this summer. But Harry Wills won't be his opponent.

Illini Cagers Undisputed In Big Ten Race

CHICAGO, Jan. 25. — Illinois' basket ball five holds an undisputed lead in the western conference championship race as the result of their 23 to 15 victory over Iowa at Urbana last night. They remain the only undefeated team in the conference.

Other games of the week placed Ohio State and Michigan in a tie for second place with three games won and one lost, while Iowa with two won and one lost was fourth.

Next week only four of the conference teams go into action, Indiana meeting Iowa at Iowa City, while Ohio State plays Chicago at Chicago Saturday night.

MORE SEATS AT PITTSBURGH

Forbes Field To Have Capacity For 12,000 More Fans.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 25.—A new grandstand, providing 12,000 additional seats at Forbes Field, the home of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club will be erected immediately at a cost of $750,000, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates announced tonight.

The double deck structure steel stand to be erected in right and right center field, will bring the seating capacity of the park to 40,000.

GASSERS OBTAIN HURLER.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 25.—Sale of two pitchers and a first baseman was announced today by the Minneapolis American Association club. Jay Kirke, veteran of the first sack, was sent to Newark of the International League. Bill Morrisette, pitcher, was sold to Little Rock of the Southern Association, and Pat Malone, pitcher, goes to Shreveport of the Texas League.

14 YANKEES SIGN UP.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Fourteen members of the New York Yankees have already signed their 1925 contracts, Edward G. Barrow, secretary of the club, said today. Seven of this number are rookies. The veterans who have signed are Waite G. Hoyt, Robert Shawkey and Urban Shocker, pitchers; Benny Bengough, catcher; Everett Scott, Lou Gehrig and Howard Shanks, infielders.

Oklahoma A&M Shatters Texas Court Dreams

Porkers Second in Standing With Frogs Resting In Third

DALLAS, Jan. 25. — Oklahoma A. & M. remains at the top of the percentage column in the Southwestern basketball conference, undefeated in six games, after the close of the week of competition that held out in advance for the six Texas teams some hope of stopping the relentless advance of the Oklahomans.

Only a few slight changes occurred up and down the percentage columns as the result of the nine games played during the week. The Texas Aggies relinquished third place to T. C. U., dropping to fourth; S. M. U., after passing the Longhorns earlier in the week, fell back to a tie with them for fifth place, and Baylor, after registering its first victory Monday and for a few days standing high in the column, went back to sixth place by losing two games to Arkansas, the other conference favorite still holding a strategic point at the heels of Oklahoma A. & M. and a game behind. Rice continued to hold the cellar position.

McTigue Ruined Fist On Canadian Champion's Head

With the news that Mike McTigue is going to have his hand operated on —Mike being another of Mullins' string of battlers — there comes to mind a vivid recollection of the cause of that injury.

McTigue's injury, as a matter of fact is an old one and he but added to the serious condition of his maulie in his battles against Stribling and Walker.

It was in March 1920 that Mike faced the then Canadian champion, Gene Brosseau in Montreal, and surprised the smart ones by knocking the Canadian out.

The hand that did the trick was swollen black and blue for two months after that wallop and now after five years he is to undergo the operation necessary to restore it to its proper shape for defense of his light heavyweight crown.

McTigue's knockout of Brosseau, by the way, is said to have spoiled the biggest betting coup ever attempted in the Dominion. The French Canadians idolized Brosseau and thinking he could beat any man of his weight in the world went down into the old sock for money to wager on the battle.

So the unexpected knockout caused widespread woe up in the north and McTigue's prestige flew upward like an eagle. Maybe with his mitt in shape Mike will begin to prove he is qualified to bear the championship title.

GOLF
as Champions Play It

Is it correct to keep one eye closed when putting? Why or why not?

Answered by
BILL STRACHAN
Wichita Falls Country Club Golf Professional

Keep both eyes open while putting. I have never seen a good putter who putted with one eye closed. All the star putters, such as Hagen, McLeod, Deer and Ouimet, putt with both eyes wide open.

A golf ball at rest is a fixed object to be struck and should be hit with as much help from the eyes as possible. The eyes should be kept on the ball—not the hole. By using only one eye the proper perspective is destroyed and a golfer puts himself under a 50 per cent handicap which is both foolish and unnecessary. Naturally, if you have a long established habit of putting with one eye closed and are a successful putter, do not try to change your style.

RUBE WALBERG REJOINS MACKS WEARING MEDAL

Rube Walberg will rejoin Connie Mack's outfit next month wearing a tin medal stamping him as the strikeout king of his league. Rube was sent to Milwaukee by Connie last season and proceeded to prove himself the Dazzy Vance of the American association. He fanned 175 batters in 245 innings.

This fat list of whiffs helped him win 18 games while losing four less He allowed 103 earned runs.

Golf Sentiment Develops For Shorter Tourneys

By RAY McCARTY,
(Copyright, 1925, by The Consolidated Press Association.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 25.—Since the annual meeting of the United States golf association recently a very decided sentiment has developed throughout the country for shorter tournaments.

The contention, which has finally been heeded by the golf association that many tournaments, the national amateur championships particularly is more of an endurance contest than a golf competition is founded pretty much on fact. The amateur championship at Merion cricket club last fall just about crystalized golf public sentiment to the point where shorter tournaments were demanded. That event was such a long drawn out affair that everybody present was completely wearied at the end. Bobby Jones and George von Elm, two youngsters, were the only players who did not show the strain of the conflict.

Amateur One Week.

It has been decided to confine the amateur championship to one week this year, but just what conditions will be laid down is something still being widely discussed.

Many golfers feel a medal play qualifying round ought to be eliminated entirely and the tournament limited to match play. Findlay Douglas, former national champion, who is president of the Metropolitan golf association is one of those who argue against the medal round. He points to the fact that many good players are denied an opportunity of winning what is essentially a match play tournament because of the medal round. Cyril Tolley, Jesse Sweetser, Michael Scott and Dr. Willing were among those who failed to qualify for the amateur championship at Merion. It was rather pathetic to see two such great golfers as Tolley and Sweetser, ex-British and American champions, eliminated before the tournament proper had begun.

Ouimet An Advocate.

Francis Ouimet is a strong advocate of shorter matches in the national amateur championship and in other tournaments. The Boston star might well argue for the change. Undoubtedly he would have repeated as national champion had conditions not been so exhausting.

There is some talk of abolishing the eligible list entirely and of passing on the entries individually. There is merit in this suggestion because at present many good golfers are not listed, while a number who have no business competing for a national championship are enrolled among the elite.

There is no denying that there is more interest and action in the British amateur championship where the matches are limited to 18 holes than there is in the United States even where 36 hole matches are the custom. It has been argued that the 36 hole route usually gives victory to the better golfer, but it has shown also that the better golfer usually wins over the 18 hole route.

It is impossible and it would be unwise to try to eliminate all luck from the game. The good golfer would not be eliminated sooner under 18 hole match play system than he would be with a 36 hole qualifying round.

Whether or not a qualifying round of 18 or 36 holes is played at Oakmont this year, it is certain the early round and probably the semi-final matches will be limited to 18 holes. And then we shall see faster and better golf.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

The dope now is that the Detroit Tygers will line up for the coming season with an infield consisting of Lu Blue on first, Lu Fonseca or Jimmy Caveney at second, Topper Rigney at short and Bobby Jones at third. Fonseca and Caveney were obtained just a while ago from Cincinnati.

The outfield will be Manush, Cobb and Heilmann, the catching staff Johnny Bassler and Larry Woodall and the regular pitchers, Whitehill Wells, Dauss, Rip Collins and Pillette. This leaves Johnny Neun, newly acquired first sacker, to prove his worth before he gets a regular berth. Leshe Burke and Fred Haney will fight it out for the first infield utility job with Fonseca or Caveney.

Red Wingo, Fothergill and Carlisle will be the reserve outfielders and Johnson, Olsen, Hollaway and one or two other pitchers will fight it out for attention with the aforementioned flingers.

John McGraw plans to bench Freddy Linstrom, young third sacker who proved his worth last season, and give the veteran Heinie Groh another lease on the third base job. John is credited with believing that Lindstrom is not quite "ripe."

Something tells me that isn't McGraw's plan. Lindstrom is just at that period when regular work will make him—and mooning on the bench will break him.

Speaking of McGraw. One of his many trades is recalled by word that Hank Gowdy, veteran backstop, may not have to carry much of the catching burden this coming year.

Back in 1911 McGraw wanted to get "Buck" Herzog from Boston in exchange for Al Bridwell. He offered to throw in a young catcher, Gowdy by name, to boot. His offer was accepted. Over a decade later McGraw was tickled to get Hank back on his ball club.

Al Mamaux, veteran big league hurler, isn't in any hurry about signing up with the Minneapolis A. A. club, to which team the Yankees have sold him. Maybe Mamaux wants some assurance that he will get his usual four or five extra meals a day.

No one questions the greatness of Dazzy Vance's achievements in the National league last year but there is one youngster who can boast of shading the strikeout artist in one column of the pitching averages. Emil Yde, rookie hurler with the Pirates, hung up a higher percentage of games won. He grabbed off 16 victories and lost but 3 games for a percentage of .842. Vance won 28 and lost 6 games for an average of .824.

Does the knockout be received at the hands of Jack Zyle sound the knell of Lew Tendler's ring hopes? The chances are that it does. Tendler hoped to start a comeback with a victory over Zivic. The famous southpaw had reason to believe that he could hit the high road again. His past record numbered nary a knockout. This despite the fact that he had met all the good boys that would fight him, including Benny Leonard.

He had suffered but two point defeats last year. Nate Goldman and then Mickey Walker outpointed him in his 1924 battles.

The knockout at the hands of the Pittsburg lightweight probably will kill his chances of climbing back. For one thing those battlers are few who can take a knockout like that late in their careers and come back.

Tendler will go down in ring history, though, as one of the greatest if not the greatest lefthanded fighter in his class.

English Dread Invasion Of U. S. Golfers At Open

Americans Acquainted With Course Slated for Tourney

LONDON, Jan. 25.—(AP) — The British expect that their open golf championship next June will be enlivened by the desired but dreaded presence of several Americans. It is thought Walter Hagen, twice winner of the title in three years, will defend it again this summer at Prestwick.

Trooping along with Hagen the British expect to see, among others, MacDonald Smith, who finished near the front both in 1922 and 1923; Jim Barnes, Bobby Cruickshank and Cyril Walker.

Prestwick is near the place where Bobby Burns was born, on the Ayreshire coast of Scotland. Hagen and several other American professionals became acquainted with the course in 1923 while tuning up for the open championship at Troon, a few miles away.

The women's open championship will be played at Troon this year, beginning May 18. British golfers understand that at least two feminine American stars, Miss Edith Cummings and Miss Glenna Collett, will cross the Atlantic to compete.

INDIANS EVADE POSSE

Girl Doffs Shoes and Makes Quick Escape in Snow

FALLS CITY, Neb. Jan. 25.—How Cora Dupouise, 16-year-old Indian, escaped officers who came to an Indian reservation near here to return her to the Kansas industrial home at Beloit, by taking off her shoes and stockings and running over the ice and snow, was revealed today.

Headed by Harry Bell, prohibition officer from Beloit, the posse came to a house on the reservation where the girl with a white girl friend was staying. Bell attempted to grab Cora, but was foiled by an Indian who disarmed him. Then the posse pursued the two girls, the trail leading over the ice of the Nemaha river. The white girl was captured, but Cora escaped when she pulled off her shoes and stockings, took a last glimpse at her pursuers and showed her fast flying heels to the posse.

The military age is that within which civilians do mighty little clamoring for war.

SPALDING PITCHED AND WON 60 OF 63 CONTESTS BACK IN 1875

Names of Wright, Ward, Spalding, Young and O'Rourke Stand Out in Sport Annals of Yesteryear

These names stand out in gold letters in baseball's earliest pages.

Harry Wright.
John Ward.
Albert G. Spalding.
Nick Young.
James O'Rourke.

The records other men set, the fact that they played parts in the establishment and development of the games fifty years ago has caused the names of many others to be revered among baseball lovers. But the men above stand out because they contributed something more than individual effort or prowess to the game.

Wright's case is an example.

He is given credit for being the first man to take up baseball as a profession.

He managed the first professional team of importance, the famous Cincinnati Red Stockings.

It was he who led the famous Red Stockings of Cincinnati on a tour of the country—mostly as an education venture—and guided them to 60 consecutive victories.

He showed his greatness as a manager by winning four consecutive pennants, the first man to do that.

Wright became interested in baseball as a sport. He was wealthy and playing baseball as a hobby when backers of the Red Stockings invited him and his brother George to join the team. The salary offered him was $1,200 a season.

Spalding stands out first as one of the greatest pitchers in the game's history, second as one of the greatest organizers in the game and third because of his feat of introducing baseball to Europe.

Regardless of conditions Spalding's pitching feat of 1875 stands unequaled or unapproached. That year he pitched in 63 games and won 60 of them. And for three years after that he continued his iron man efforts, this in spite of his added duties as executive and prime leader in the organization of the National league.

The National league was born in 1876. That year Spalding assumed the management of the Chicago club. He also became secretary of it. And while he also managed and captained his team he filled the role of pitching staff, being the only pitcher on the club.

He continued in the game as pitcher, manager and then president of the White Stockings until 1891. An indication of the high esteem in which he was held throughout his state was his election as senator by his home state of California some years later.

Nick Young's part in the formation of the baseball foundation extended over a period of 40 years.

As early as 1867 Young was interested in organizing baseball. He formed the old Olympic club in Washington that year. It was while managing the team in 1871 that he conceived the idea of calling a meeting of delegates from the professional clubs that had been formed and founding the Professional Association. Young was named secretary.

It was his success in promoting this association that caused his associates to name him first secretary of the National league when it was formed in 1876. For 26 years he retained the secretaryship.

John M. Ward stands out as one of the greatest all-around players the game has ever produced.

He won his early fame as a pitcher with the famous Providence Grays in 1879. Three years later he joined the New York Giants. His days as a pitcher ended by a sore arm, he became a shortstop—and one of the most brilliant in the annals of the sport. His ability to cover ground was astounding. His hitting was timely and hard.

Ward was one of the leaders in the historic revolt of the players which resulted in the formation of the Brotherhood league. Ward helped instigate the revolt when the magnates decided that $2,000 should be the highest salary paid any player, no matter how great.

It was the one just revolt in the history of the game. The Brotherhood league failed but not until the magnates had recognized its claims and arranged to open the fold to its members. Ward joined Brooklyn as manager and shortstop. Two years later, however, he rejoined the Giants and as player and pilot.

O'Rourke helped carve baseball history in those early days with his bat. As a member of the old Providence Grays he helped that famous team win the pennant in 1879 with his hitting. Two years later he joined the Buffalo club of the National league. And in the 19 years that he played in the National league he compiled a .300 average 12 different years.

When the Giants bought O'Rourke in 1885 they offered him a salary of $6,200 a year—the highest amount ever paid a player up to that time. The criers bemoaned the move.

Incidentally the game owes O'Rourke a debt of gratitude for bringing Dan Brouthers—thundering, ball murdering Dan—to the game when that slugger had decided that he was not cut out for a player. He had quit the Troy team and gone back to day labor jobs.

Other men there are who played their parts well in those early days. But the four men mentioned above were the "Big Four."

PENN RELAY CARNIVAL PROGRAM IS CHANGED

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 25. — Dr. pentathlon, which for a decade has been one of the feature events of the annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival, will be replaced this year, by the decathlon.

The action of the Olympic committee in removing the pentathlon from the list of events and making the decathlon the test of all around championship, has caused Dr. George Orton, director of the relay carnival, to make the change.

A philosopher is one who can rejoice, after it happens, that his car was a cheap one.

Complete Trust In Lord Needed Now, Kay Says

Beauties of Works of Christ Outlined in Sunday Address At Strand

269 OUT FOR LECTURE

Attendance Jumps Over Small Number Present A Week Ago

The necessity of complete and sincere belief in God was the principal theme Sunday morning of Judge John C. Kay in his Bible class talk to the 269 men at the Strand theater. His complete address was as follows:

The lesson this morning is about the belief of man in the Father, and the love of the Father for man. It is a wonderful lesson. A lesson like this is not demonstrated as a theorem in geometry, nor by any of the reactions of chemistry, but by faith; the very mainspring of life.

Faith in Future.

Now, after all, it isn't the knowledge that you have; it isn't your understanding that drives you forward, but, it is your faith in the future; that future that lies beyond the horizon, that good, good thing of tomorrow. So that one of the poets said: "Man never is, but is always to be blessed." We are not satisfied with these things that we have today, but next week, next year, somewhere beyond our vision, but within the range of our dreams, we think there shall come these things that satisfy the demands of the human heart.

Now, it is love that moves the world. It isn't pride, although I believe in a fair amount of pride. It isn't hate, which is a negation; but, it is love. Now, no man has ever been able to define it. It is beyond human measurement. I used to think that love was a human matter, but not so. I am glad to know, in my more mature years, that the great principle of love runs through all nature, and that it is the voice of God, loving tenderly and caring for each, every and all of his creatures.

Far back in the Rocky mountains, in a deep canyon, at a great altitude, I listened to the murmuring of a little brook. How exquisite was its music in that isolated place. And, I saw a little bird there and I could think, and did think that he cocked his head up to one side to listen to the very murmur of the music of the water in that remote place.

That was God's business. Why does He put all that beauty out there? I don't know. There is no way that I should know. And, away up on the highest of the high peaks, His snowflakes are beyond imagination. Beautiful! In those high altitudes, the snowflakes take on forms beyond the imagination, and beyond the reach of the engraver's art and the painter's dream; pouring out there on these frosted altars, beyond the reach and beyond the vision of man, in the prodigality of the beauty of the love of God.

Cares for All of Us.

So it is, that this principle of love, running through all nature, cares for all. It is this that sends the she wolf home to her cubs, and it is this that enables the mother, fighting against a world, and a hard world, to rear her brood, both the human mother and the animal mother. It is a principle that is too broad for the ken of my vision; too great that I should undertake to describe it here.

Now, the Savior says: "Ye believe in God," and a better rendering of the text would be, "Believe in Him." Now, that is not difficult for me to do. I see His works on every hand. I see His secrets locked up from the vain imaginings of man. I see the beauty of His creation all about me, and I know that His creatures are filled with love, for, in the springtime, when the flowers bloom, and the trees put on their raiment, the birds break into glorious song in praise of life, and of love, and of Him. Beyond, I say, my mind, and, I think, beyond the mind of the scientist.

"For who shall count the cost
Of all the fabrics torn and toss'd,
To make one summer for His trees?"

"In My Father's house are many mansions." Some time in my life, I want to make two or three lectures in Wichita Falls, if I can get an audience, on astronomy. You know, the astronomer is not the infidel. When he looks out into the heavens, beyond the reach of the human eye, beyond the knowledge of a former age, and when he sees that all is a system of law, and that the laws are perfect, and that God's universe, and, indeed, many universes, right out there, are all under the control of heaven's law, the astronomer is seized with a proud humility, and says: "It is the work of God."

"In My Father's house . . ." Too many men think of the Master as a great potentate sitting in state, surrounded by His ministers, unapproached and unapproachable. Yet, here He is called the "Father." "In My Father's house . . ." and there is no place in this world where you felt quite like you did in the house of your human father; then, how great is that illustration, when we think that the Savior said to you, and to me, that these mansions, this Father's house, exists out there somewhere in the blue, and exists for you and for me.

"If it were not so, I would have told you," He says, "I go to prepare a place for you." Heaven—working for humanity. Preparing to pay you—what? The wages of life. I have talked to you about that before. What are they going to be? "Prepare a place for you." Now, it is according to all my ideas of justice and of yours, that that place should have some relation to the sort of life that you lead here. That it is going to be, in some proportion, to your efforts here. "Prepare a place for you, that where I am, you may be also." I don't know what that means. That is one of these thousand secrets, the door to which is to be unlocked in another life. I don't know—but, we are to be there.

Question of Immortality.

That brings us to the fundamental question of immortality, that, if a man die, he shall live again, and you come on a religious doctrine that is a doctrine. Now, right there is the difference between the religion of a Buddha, and of Brahma, and of Confucius, and many others, and the Christian religion. The Christian religion is a religion with a promise. It says, "Do these things." "Do this task." "Perform that duty," and there is somewhere to be paid you the wages for that service. There is, somewhere, an exceeding great reward for that service. Whilst Buddhist religion teaches that at last a man's life is lost in infinity, and that he slips like a dewdrop into the sea, without hope, without a promise, without wages, without reward.

Now, that is the only thing that does offer any reward. It seems to me that it doesn't require a high degree of intelligence for a man to accept the Christian religion, when there is no other cult, no other philosophy, no other system, that offers anything.

The infidel, the unbeliever, the idolater, says: "Follow my system and be right." "Follow my system and respect your intellect," says the scientist. But, he brings you the labor without the reward, and without wages, into the darkness of his Nirvana where there is no hope and no help. So, then, the Savior, when He gave these things out in this lesson, wanted to lift men up to a higher degree; that a man should live a finer life; that all his effort, and all his work, every breath that he breathes and every song that he sings, shall testify to his honest effort to earn at last the wages of life, and to come to a reward worthy of the faithful and the only reward that is offered in the world to humanity.

MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

The "New England Method" of financing is so-called because it typifies all that has been told of "Yankee thrift" and conservatism.

In its essence, the New England method of financing means two things. Primarily, if the business is incorporated it shall be financed originally by means of issues of common stock and it shall grow gradually and steadily through reinvested earnings or, in certain exceptional cases, through the sale of additional common stock.

In the second place, if it should become necessary to borrow, due to unusual business conditions, the loan should be regarded as quite temporary in its nature and liquidated as soon as possible out of earnings or by additional stock issues.

Many of the New England textile mills employ this general type of financing. The United Fruit company has also used this method. In 1921, a year of severe readjustment, this company had a little over $300,000 in sinking fund debentures, 4 1-2 per cent outstanding and an income available for interest payments amounting to eighteen million dollars

Revival Services At Presbyterian Church Close Sunday Night With A Last Stirring Address By Dr. White

The series of revival meetings which have been in progress at the First Presbyterian church for the past three weeks closed with the service last night. Dr. White spoke to crowded houses three times yesterday. A number of additions to the church have resulted from the campaign just closed.

The sermon of the morning follows in brief:

Text: Judges 2:20—"I have a message from God for thee."

My text has to do with a tragedy. A man came to call upon a king in his home and found him resting from the heat of the day. After he had talked with him for awhile he asked that the servants be dismissed because he had something to say to the king alone. When they were alone he pulled from his girdle a small dagger and burying it in the body of the king uttered these words: "I have a message from God for thee."

Ministry Is Sacred.

It is not to the tragedy that I wish to call your attention but to some things which the statement of this man suggest. The first is the dignity and sacredness of the Christian ministry. I do not know anything that we need more in these days than to remember that there is a dignity and sacredness to the Christian ministry, that if a man has been called, equipped and ordained and set apart as the mouthpiece of the Lord, he is the messenger of the living God. Every ambassador that represents the stars and stripes throughout the length and breadth of the world speaks in behalf of his country, not his own message, and that is what the minister of the gospel is doing. He never stands up to preach his own message but always he comes as the mouthpiece of the living God, that we might know the will of God concerning our duty to Him.

The second suggestion is that the message is for thee. I had the impression when I was a little fellow that God talked to people as He does not do today. Nowadays God seems to have withdrawn himself and we do not hear Him speaking to us as we used to hear Him. But my text says that God still talks to men, that He still has a message. I assume that you people believe your pastor was called of God, set apart to be the mouthpiece of God. If you accept that truth I think you will be ready to ask: "what is the Lord going to say to me today through this man? What does He want me to hear today? What would God say if He were talking to me face to face?" Too many people today come to church, hear the sermon, go out expressing appreciation or dislike for it, and never one time think that the message was from God to them.

Message of Revelation.

I think the first thing God wants me to tell you is that the message is one of revelation concerning Himself. I think God would have every one of us set a new revelation of what He is to us and our duty to Him. You cannot find a heart anywhere that does not have its lonely hour when it turns to God and thinks of Him. You can take the most frivolous man or woman in the world and there are moments when they think of God. I think the heart of the world is crying out: "Show us the Father!" I am sure there are men and women right in this city that are making that cry. I think men and women want to know about God more sometimes than we give them credit for.

Now there are two or three things I want to speak of briefly. The first is that God is a father to us. It is hard to realize that poor and unworthy as we are God still is our father. If we could just get into our hearts this morning the fact that God is a real spiritual father and that He is all that a father could be to me as a child. Do you realize that the One who guides your every footstep, and overshadows every moment of your life is a Father? If you did you would stop talking about hard circumstances and remember that God is your Father and that He is caring for us.

The second suggestion I would make is that this Father God is just like any earthly father. He loves us and He loves us tenderly. He is saying that He has loved you with an everlasting love. Did you young people ever try to work out how much your father or mother loves you? I wish you would try it some day. This morning I would like to take the imagination of every man and woman in this town, or in Texas, or in America or in all the world and tie Jesus Christ to it as a plummet and let it down in the heart of God. And I would write then, deeper than all the imagination of the world is the love of God for the lost souls of men. And I would like to prove that love from the angle of what He does for you. I like to look up into the face of Jesus this morning and think of the ship of life floundering on the sea of time and remember that He said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his brother." He gave Himself for us in love. Do you realize that love this morning?

Interest in All of Us.

My third suggestion is a most natural one—His interest in me. There is not a father or mother here that would not give up everything you have in this world for your children and their welfare. I look up into the face of the Father God this morning and ask: "Does Jesus care as my earthly father does?" I think He bids me tell you that He is interested in you by name, more than you can ever think. Do you realize that the eyes of the great Father God are upon you and that He is interested in you?

My last suggestion is that in His love God wants you to come back home. If I have one definition of eternal torment it is a place where there is no Father God. I used to go home every year while my father and mother lived and I never went back that my father did not receive me at the door, until one time I went back and there was no father to greet me. I felt I could not bear to stay there. I cannot think of a worse thing than going from this life to a place where there is no loving Father who waits to greet me there.

"Boy Preacher" Will Come Here

The second business meeting of the Young People's council of the First Methodist church was held Sunday afternoon with about 40 members present.

Raybern Porter, educational director of the church presided the chair.

In discussing plans for the future of the organization Mr. Porter presented these ideas as the basis for the policy and platform of the council, which were accepted on motion:

1. To create a greater spirit of friendliness, good fellowship and co-operation among all the young people of the church.
2. To correlate and unify the progress of work of the various organizations in order to prevent overlapping and duplication—using present existing agencies but expanding and supplementing as rapidly as it seems advisable to do so.
3. To keep the attention of the church on its greatest opportunity and primary responsibility—the training of its childhood and youth in Christian service.
4. To sponsor social, educational and inspirational meetings at regular intervals, following a definite program as presented by the executive committee of the council. (This to include bringing out-of-town speakers who will discuss and lecture on subjects of vital importance to the young life of the church.
5. To train young people for leadership in the church activities such as delegates to conferences, leadership, training schools, etc.
6. To educate the young people so they will realize that the church offers opportunity for self expression relating to social, recreational and devotional activities.
7. To co-operate with outside agencies such as Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, patriotic leagues in awakening civic pride, institutional loyalty, personal and social culture.
8. To promote development of local talent in presenting high class, religious dramatics and entertainments.

Kenneth Pope famous as "The Boy Preacher" from Milford, Texas, to lecture to the Methodist young people's association here at the First Methodist church, Friday, February 6. Rev. Mr. Pope is known as the youngest B. D. graduate from Southe— Methodist university, Dallas and is well known as an evangelist. He is the first of a series of noted lecturers to be brought here this year by the Methodist Young People's association.

Mrs. Evarts Martin, concert harpist and Rev. Leslie Miller, soloist of Grace Methodist church will also appear on the program.

Men And Women Johnson's Topic At M. E. Church

Methodists Hear Suggestions As To Proper Conduct

The proper relation of young men to young women was the timely topic chosen by Dr. Walter F. Johnson as the subject for his lecture Sunday evening given at the First Methodist church.

Speaking to an overflow crowd of more than 1,000 Dr. Johnson read and commented upon a number of letters written to him by members of his congregation dealing with this subject. Some of these were brief and to the point, giving personal views regarding the proper relationship of young men to young women, others were more lengthy and brought forth out-bursts of merriment from the congregation.

Dr. Johnson in summing up the substance of the letters said to the young men: "Treat young women as you would have other men treat your sister or mother."

According to the pastor "man's relationship to women is second only to man's relationship to God." Christian religion has elevated womankind to a position where men look up to her but is found only where christianity prevails, he said.

The congregation of "jelly-beans" and "turkey buzzards on street corners was lamentably deplored by Dr. Johnson, for he said, the idle boy or the idle girl is the devil's worship and the devil will get in his work—be assured.

As a feature of the evening Miss Mildred Martin and Rayborn Porter sang a duet which pleased the congregation.

COMPROMISE ON COTTON.

Opposition to Trading Bill to Be Cleared by Expected Agreement.

AUSTIN, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Opposition to the bill legalizing cotton futures contracts in Texas when it comes before the house this week on a minority report, will probably be averted by a compromise amendment, Representative James W. Steel of Paris announced tonight. He, with Representative H. E. Webb of Odessa, introduced the measure and joined in the minority report.

Church Owes Much

Missionaries Due Great Things for Work in Foreign Fields.

The world's debt to the missionaries was the subject at the devotional meeting of Senior league No. 1 of the First Methodist church Sunday evening.

Representatives from various countries where missionary work is being done were impersonated by members of the league—in costume who expressed their appreciation for the wonderful educational work. India, Africa, the Philippines, China, Korea, Japan were among the fields heard from.

Mr. Ira Linn, brother of Rev. Ansil Linn, missionary to the Belgian Congo, was the leader for the evening. Rev. Ansil Linn is supported in his work by the local league.

Special music was another feature of the program which was enjoyed by the 100 members present.

Still, affections that can be alienated can't be worth the sum asked for them.
