Oil prices down nearly 10 percent this week

Reasons for decrease: inventory level, report that Saudis plan to up production

The Hearst Energy Awards event is next week. Learn more about this year's winners. Also, find out who will be the guest speakers at upcoming West Texas Geological Society, Society of Petroleum Engineers and Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists meetings. Find this and more in the Oil Report.

Oil prices are getting hit hard. The Energy Information Administration's report that oil inventories were much higher than expected, reports that Saudi Arabia is going to increase production to spite Iran and a vitriolic presidential campaign season fast-approaching decision day are just some of the reasons why oil fell nearly 10 percent this week.

West Texas Intermediate futures contracts for December settled at $44.07 on Friday, down 59 cents (1.32 percent) for the day. It wasn't too long ago, however, that long-awaited sunnier times were seen. Oct. 19's close of $51.60 set a new year high. Since then, oil has fallen about 15 percent.

WTI settled lower every day this week and has seen losses 10 times since the year high. Oil hasn't closed higher since Oct. 27, marking six straight days of declines. In 214 trading days, WTI has closed lower 113 times and higher 101.

While WTI is back to the mid-$40s, the price is still up $7.31 (19.89 percent) this year and far from the year low of $26.21.

Plains Marketing posted prices also fell significantly this week. WTI posted was down 10.5 percent, while West Texas sour declined 8.5 percent. On Friday, WTI posted fetched $40.50 a barrel, while sour was priced at $36.80.

The spread between the prominent West Texas varieties narrowed to $3.70 on Tuesday after Plains upped sour by $1.60 a barrel versus WTI posted's daily gain of a quarter. The spread previously was $5.05, which held for 20 days.

In other futures trading Friday, January contracts fell 60 cents to $44.65, February was down 61 cents to $45.28 and March dropped 61 cents to $45.92. There aren't any futures contracts in the $60s.

New polls show Trump's lead growing in Texas

By Jamie Lovegrove
The Dallas Morning News

WASHINGTON — Two polls released Thursday indicated that Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump has expanded his lead in Texas with just five days to go.

A joint poll from NBC News, The Wall Street Journal and Marist College put Trump up over Democratic rival Hillary Clinton 49 percent to 40 percent among likely voters in Texas. Libertarian Gary Johnson garnered 6 percent in the poll, and 2 percent of respondents said they are voting for Green Party candidate Jill Stein.

Trump's lead shrank to 4 points among the larger universe of registered voters in Texas, at 45 percent to 41 percent. But pollsters tend to attribute more precision to the likely-voter tally, which takes into consideration whether respondents say they plan to vote or have in past elections.

Among those likely voters, 54 percent said they have already cast their ballots in early voting, and Trump led that group by 10 points, 52 percent to 42 percent.

The poll of 943 registered voters, taken Oct. 30 through Nov. 1, has an error margin of plus or minus 3.2 percent, meaning results can vary by that much in either direction. There were 679 likely voters interviewed, with a margin of error of 3.8

Whisenhunt leaving Museum of the Southwest

From staff reports

CORNING, N.Y. — Museum of the Southwest Executive Director Brian Lee Whisenhunt has been named executive director of the Rockwell Museum in Corning, New York.

Whisenhunt will assume his new post in early January, succeeding Kristin A. Swain, who announced her retirement earlier this year, according to a press release from the Rockwell.

Whisenhunt

"After a national search, we are so pleased that Brian Lee Whisenhunt has accepted the appointment of executive director to The Rockwell Museum," said Deb Naylor, president of the board of trustees. "Brian's museum experience and eagerness around arts in education, community collaboration and high-quality American art experiences make him a great fit for The Rockwell and our region. I'm certain he'll be overwhelmingly welcomed by our vibrant arts community and the people that make it happen."

The Rockwell Museum, which in the last three years has become a Smithsonian Affiliate, offers a diverse collection that includes a mix of contemporary American art with traditional bronze sculptures, landscape paintings and other works that embody the American experience, according to the release. The museum has transformed its permanent art galleries, opened a new Family Exploration Studio for young visitors.

Voter stickers sit in a pile near a ballot machine at an early voting site in Albuquerque, N.M., on Thursday. Bernalillo County Clerk Maggie Toulouse Oliver says more than one-third of the county's registered voters have already cast ballots and she expects turnout to reach 2008 levels when 70 percent of voters in the state's most populous county went to the polls.

Cellphone ban at rural polls in New Mexico rankles ACLU

By Morgan Lee
Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — One rural county's ban on the use of cellphones and "ballot selfies" at voting locations in New Mexico has prompted a backlash from advocates for civil liberties.

The American Civil Liberties Union of New Mexico on Thursday urged county clerks across the state to lift or avoid restrictions on cellphone use at the polls, and to allow voters to take photos of themselves and their ballots.

ACLU spokesman Micah McCoy said the advisory responded to cellphone restrictions at polling places in Rio Arriba County in Northern New Mexico, where signs said, "No cell phone usage during voting." Early voting began in New Mexico in mid-October.

County Bureau of Elections Chief Michele Jordan says the cellphone restrictions have been in place for more than a decade and are designed to preserve privacy and decorum. She said voters and poll workers worry that someone with a cellphone camera might take a photo of someone else's ballot and share how they voted, though that has never happened.

"They should be sure that nobody is going to take a picture of their ballot," she said.

In a letter to county clerks, the ACLU said voters should be able to take picture of their own ballot to show other people how they voted if they choose, under constitutionally protected rights of free political expression.

Legal wrangling over ballot selfies has erupted ahead of elections in states including Colorado, California and New York, where there are laws against voters sharing photos of ballots.

New Mexico law does not address the "ballot selfie" issue explicitly, according to Ken Ortiz, chief of staff at the Secretary of State's Office. A state statute says that "after marking and preparing a paper ballot in a polling place or alternate voting location, the voter shall not show it to any person in such a way as to reveal its contents." The ACLU called the statute unconstitutional.

One New Mexico state lawmaker wants to update the law to better match modern sensibilities about social media and free speech.

"It really is a right to free, uninhibited political expression," said 29-year-old Sen. Jacob Candelaria, a Democrat from Albuquerque. "As a millennial legislator, I don't think we should be criminalizing, in any way, forms of political expression, especially those that are being used by younger folks."

Many ballot photo bans across the U.S. were enacted over 100 years ago as a way to prevent coercion, intimidation and vote buying. McCoy of the ACLU said those problems are best left to police investigators and prosecutors to enforce without restricting cellphones.

Ballot selfies don't appear to trouble other election officials in New Mexico.

Bernalillo County Clerk Maggie Toulouse Oliver, who oversees voting across New Mexico's most populous county, last month posted on Twitter a photo of herself in the process of voting, with the caption, "I voted early! Have you?" Her ballot was not visible.

Toulouse Oliver is the Democratic candidate for secretary of state, the state's top post for overseeing elections.

Obama commutes the sentence of another Midlander

President Obama commuted the prison sentence of another Midland man Friday, according to the White House.

Gregory Scott Taylor was sentenced in 2002 to 240 months imprisonment and then 10 years supervised release. It was announced by the White House that his prison sentence is commuted to expire on Nov. 4, 2018, conditioned upon his enrollment in residential drug treatment.

Taylor was one of seven Texans and one of 72 people across the country who received a commutation of sentence. The president has granted a total of 760 commutations overall.

In late October, the president commuted the sentence of Midlander Arandal Derrick Goodley, who was sentenced for conspiracy to distribute cocaine base "crack"; possession with intent to distribute a quantity of cocaine base "crack"; 15 counts of money laundering; and aiding and abetting money laundering.

Earlier in October, the president commuted the sentence of Midland's Derrick Drake Price, who in 2004 was sentenced for conspiracy to distribute 5 grams of cocaine base and a violation of supervised release.

Abbott says go about daily life while threat assessed

Gov. Greg Abbott says people should stay vigilant but go about their daily lives as usual while officials assess the credibility of information about a possible al-Qaida threat on the eve of Election Day.

Abbott on Friday responded to officials saying that counterterrorism investigators were reviewing information that mentioned Texas, New York and Virginia as potential targets.

An NYPD spokesman says the information "lacks specificity" and the FBI said it was working closely with law enforcement agencies.

Abbott said in a statement his office was monitoring the situation in coordination with the Texas Department of Public Safety. He said people should report suspicious activity to law enforcement.

Election Day is Tuesday.

ROSWELL, N.M.

Former police chief to avoid jail time for stalking, battery

A small southeastern New Mexico town's former police chief has accepted a plea agreement that will keep him out of jail but bars him from ever working in law enforcement in New Mexico again.

The Roswell Daily Record reportsthat after appealing his conviction to district court, former Dexter Police Chief Mario Contreras entered an Alford plea on Wednesday to one petty misdemeanor count of battery and one misdemeanor count of stalking, of which Contreras was found guilty of in May after a trial in magistrate court.

An Alford plea means Contreras does not admit guilt, but admits there is enough evidence to convict him.

"If Mario Contreras keeps his nose clean, which no doubt he will, for one year on unsupervised probation, this case is dismissed," Contreras's attorney Jones Witt said Thursday.

He added: "Think of a conditional discharge as an earned dismissal, keep your nose clean for a certain amount of time, and it is dismissed. So he agreed pursuant to the plea agreement that he would not be a certified peace officer in the state of New Mexico and he agreed that he would make a $300 donation to the refuge."

Witt said it was important to Contreras to maintain his innocence while avoiding another trial.

Contreras was put on leave when New Mexico State Police began an investigation after women complained that he stalked them, made crude gestures and touched them inappropriately.

The town later fired Contreras.

Netflix's 'Longmire' to shoot season 6 in New Mexico

The Netflix series "Longmire" will return to New Mexico to produce its sixth and final season.

The Santa Fe New Mexican reports that Santa Fe Film Office Director Eric Witt says production on the 10-episode season will begin in March. He says the series will use locations in and around Santa Fe, Pecos, Los Alamos and Las Vegas.

The contemporary crime drama is set in Wyoming and based on the "Walt Longmire" mystery novels authored by Craig Johnson.

The series stars Robert Taylor, Lou Diamond Phillips and Katee Sackhoff and is produced by The Shepherd/Robin Co. in association with Warner Horizon Television.

TRUMP

percent.

Another count from Emerson College gave the Republican nominee a 14-point lead in Texas. That's up from a 6-point margin when Emerson last polled Texas in early September.

Clinton's support held steady in the mid-30s between Emerson's September and November polls, but Trump appeared to gain ground by picking up potential third-party voters. Still, 5 percent of Texans in the poll said they remain behind Johnson, and 4 percent are backing Stein.

The poll of 700 likely voters, interviewed from Oct. 31 through Nov. 1, has a margin of error of 3.6 percent.

A series of October polls appeared to show a closer race than usual in Texas, with several pointing to a low single-digit lead for Trump in the state. Those results began turning heads in Texas and around the country, as Democrats eyed an unexpected opportunity to pick off the solidly red Republican stronghold.

But recent figures suggest the state may be returning closer to the position most observers expected before the race began.

A poll earlier this week from CBS 11/Dixie Strategies showed Trump surging to a 12-point lead in Texas.

Mitt Romney won Texas over President Barack Obama by 16 percentage points in 2012, and Sen. John McCain carried the state by 12 points in 2008.

The Texas results track with a stronger showing for Trump in polls around the country this week. Clinton's national lead in the Real Clear Politics polling average has dropped from more than 7 percentage points in mid-October to less than 2 points Thursday.

Other traditionally red states in the NBC/WSJ/Marist poll, however, remained closer. Trump led by 5 points in Arizona and just a single point in Georgia, a statistical dead heat.

revitalized the museum store, and launched new programs such as Rockwell Roadhouse, Gingerbread Invitational and Urban Arts Crawl.

"The Rockwell is an amazing museum and asset to Corning — their exhibitions, programming and deep community connections are exemplar to the field for how cultural organizations can become a true resource for their city," said Whisenhunt, who has 20 years of museum experience. "I am thrilled to be given the opportunity to work with The Rockwell team and continue to build upon all of their tremendous success. I'm also excited to get to know my community and all of the great people who are a part of it."

Whisenhunt has served as executive director of the Museum of the Southwest since July 2011. He was responsible for planning a $5.4 million capital campaign to renovate and restore the Turner Memorial Art Museum, which includes the historic Turner Mansion dating from the 1930s. The museum reopened in May and was part of the year-long celebration of the museum's 50th anniversary.

Museum of the Southwest board president Dwight Alworth said Whisenhunt is leaving the museum in a positive place.

"We're extremely excited for Brian and we're fortunate to have him as long as we did," Alworth said Friday. "He's absolutely left the museum in a better position on virtually every front. We made it through phase one of the capital campaign. He's done a fantastic job with the staff. All his efforts to get us organized the last couple of year has left us in a great position as we go into our reaccreditation process."

Associate director Angela Galvan will serve as interim director until Whisenhunt's replacement is found.

Alworth said that a search is already underway with Marilyn Hoffman of Museum Search and Reference, who worked with the Ellen Noel Art Museum to find its executive director.

"We believe we can have someone in place by next summer," Alworth said.

During his time in Midland, Whisenhunt was accepted into the prestigious Getty Leadership Institute, an international executive leadership program for museum professionals, and also received the Beacon Award for Excellence in Organizational Leadership from the Nonprofit Management Center.

He has served as an adjunct professor of art at Indiana State University, director of education at the Wichita Art Museum and manager of Public Programs at Blanton Museum of Art at the University of Texas.

Questions on Christie role swirl after ex-allies' conviction

By David Porter
Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — Two former aides to Republican Gov. Chris Christie were convicted on Friday of causing epic traffic jams for political revenge near the nation's busiest bridge, a verdict that further damages his legacy and raises anew questions about why he and his inner circle escaped prosecution.

Bridget Kelly, Christie's former deputy chief of staff, and Bill Baroni, Christie's appointee to the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, were found guilty of all counts against them. Kelly cried as the verdict was read; Baroni showed no emotion. They announced plans to appeal.

Testimony during the seven-week trial contradicted Christie's statements about when he knew about the four days of gridlock at the base of the George Washington Bridge in Fort Lee in September 2013. The traffic jams were aimed at retaliating against Democratic Fort Lee Mayor Mark Sokolich for not endorsing Christie's re-election, prosecutors alleged.

Other testimony described some of Christie's top advisers and confidants knowing about the plan ahead of time or soon afterward and being aware of the political motivation well before Christie told reporters in December 2013 that none of his staff was involved.

Baroni's attorney, Michael Baldassare, called the case "a disgrace" and said the U.S. attorney's office should be "ashamed" of where it drew the line on who to charge.

"They should have had belief in their own case to charge powerful people, and they did not," Baldassare said.

Baroni and Kelly were indicted last year. Also charged was former Port Authority official David Wildstein, who pleaded guilty and testified against them.

U.S. Attorney Paul Fishman declined to say whether any of the testimony could lead to charges against Christie or others. He said prosecutors only charged people where they had "evidence beyond a reasonable doubt" to convict.

Christie said the verdict affirmed his decision to terminate Baroni and Kelly and the jury held them responsible "for their own conduct." He repeated his assertions he had no knowledge of the plot and said he would "set the record straight" soon about "the lies told by the media and in the courtroom."

"I had no knowledge prior to or during these lane realignments and had no role in authorizing them," Christie said. "No believable evidence was presented to contradict that fact. Anything said to the contrary over the past six weeks in court is simply untrue."

At the time the scandal unfolded, Christie was considered a top presidential contender and was on the verge of a runaway re-election victory to demonstrate his crossover appeal.

Christie ultimately dropped out of the presidential race after a poor showing in the New Hampshire primary and said recently the scandal probably influenced Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump's decision not to pick him as a running mate. Christie is chairman of Trump's transition team, in charge of hiring thousands of employees if he wins the presidency.

Christie was expected to campaign for Trump in Pennsylvania and New Hampshire this weekend, the Trump campaign said, but Christie's office listed no out-of-state travel for him. A message left with the Trump campaign wasn't immediately returned.

Wildstein, a former political blogger and high school classmate of Christie's, testified Christie was told about the traffic jam at a Sept. 11 memorial event in New York while the gridlock in Fort Lee was in progress. He said Christie laughed and made a sarcastic joke when he learned of Sokolich's distress over not getting his calls returned.

It was unclear from Wildstein's testimony whether Christie knew then that the mess was manufactured for political reasons; however, Kelly testified she told Christie about Sokolich's concerns about political retaliation during the week of the traffic jams at the bridge, which connects New York and Fort Lee.

The federal jury took five days to reach a verdict, convicting Baroni and Kelly of conspiracy, misapplying the property of the Port Authority, wire fraud and deprivation of civil rights. The most serious charges carry up to 20 years in prison, but Fishman said the defendants likely would receive far less time. Sentencing was scheduled for Feb. 21.

Wildstein faces a maximum of 15 years in prison, but under his plea agreement and sentencing guidelines he could receive a sentence of 20 to 27 months. His sentencing hasn't been scheduled.

Democratic state Sen. Loretta Weinberg, who helped lead a legislative effort to investigate the lane closings, said it was a terrible day for New Jersey and "a terrible day to have a spotlight on the kind of administration that was run."

The defense portrayed Wildstein as a liar and a dirty trickster — "the Bernie Madoff of New Jersey politics" — and argued Christie and his inner circle had thrown Kelly under the bus. Kelly and Baroni, both 44, testified that they believed Wildstein that the lane closings were part of a legitimate traffic study.

"They want that mother of four to take the fall for them. Cowards. Cowards," Kelly attorney Michael Critchley said in a thundering closing argument.

One of the most damning pieces of evidence was an email in which Kelly wrote: "Time for some traffic problems in Fort Lee." Then, as the gridlock unfolded and Sokolich complained about children unable to get to school, she texted: "Is it wrong that I am smiling?"

On the witness stand, Kelly explained she was referring to what she thought was a traffic study and expressing satisfaction it was going well.

Trial testimony reinforced Christie's reputation among his critics as a bully, with accounts of profane tirades, threats of bodily harm and tough-guy posturing that seemed straight out of "The Sopranos."

Montclair State University political science professor Brigid Callahan Harrison said Christie was damaged by "the narcissistic way" he was portrayed at the trial.

"These convictions will be an essential defining feature of Christie's legacy in office," she said, "and will forever taint how his administration is perceived and will be remembered."

Jurors review video of officer killing unarmed fleeing man

By Bruce Smith
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A fired police officer's defense team couldn't keep jurors from seeing a cellphone video Friday that shows him killing an unarmed man who was running away, so they spent much of the day trying to discredit the man who recorded it. Jurors at Michael Slager's murder trial wore headphones as prosecutors played the video, which has been seen millions of times on the internet, shocking the conscience of a nation already sickened by violent encounters between police and the public. Recorded at the scene in April 2015 by a bystander, it shows black motorist Walter Scott wrestling with the white officer over a stun gun, then breaking away. Slager then shoots him in the back from a distance and he crumples to the ground.

"For some reason I decided to use my phone to record and prevent something that might happen," testified Feidin Santana, a 25-year-old barber. "It was something I will never forget."

Slager had pulled Scott over for a broken tail light on the used Mercedes he just picked up. Slager's defense had sought to keep the video out of the trial, but didn't object after Santana took the stand. The defense did ask that jurors be instructed that the proper perspective to consider the action would be from the perspective of the officer. They also wanted the judge to prevent the video from being shown in slow-motion.

Judge Clifton Newman denied both requests, saying "I don't seek to control the manner in which the state presents its evidence."

Slager, who was swiftly fired from the force and charged with murder after the video surfaced, faces 30 years to life if convicted.

The defense says the two men fought over the Taser, but Santana said he never saw it in Scott's hands, and never saw Scott on top of the officer. He said Scott got away and began running before he was shot down.

Santana also explained why he did not immediately give the video to the North Charleston police.

As a legal permanent resident of the U.S., he said he didn't want to be caught up in legal proceedings before returning home to the Dominican Republic. Also, he said he initially thought Scott was still alive, so perhaps the video wouldn't really matter..

"There were only three people there — Walter Scott, the officer and me," he said.

Santana said he later reached out to representatives of the Scott family, and it was their attorneys who released the video to the media. Later, he turned over his phone to agents from the State Law Enforcement Division.

FBI, NYPD assess possible al-Qaida threat on US election eve

By Jake Pearson
Associated Press

NEW YORK— The FBI and New York Police Department say they are assessing the credibility of information they received of a possible al-Qaida terror attack against the U.S. on the eve of Election Day.

Officials sais Friday that counterterrorism investigators are reviewing the information that mentioned New York, Texas and Virginia as potential targets.

It wasn't immediately clear how the intelligence came to investigators' attention. An NYPD spokesman says in a statement the information "lacks specificity."

In a statement, the FBI said it was working closely with law enforcement agencies and sharing intelligence reports.

Officials say they regularly assess all possible security threats ahead of major events.

Election Day is Tuesday, and both Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton and Republican nominee Donald Trump are holding their Election Day parties in New York City.

CBS News first reported of the potential threat.

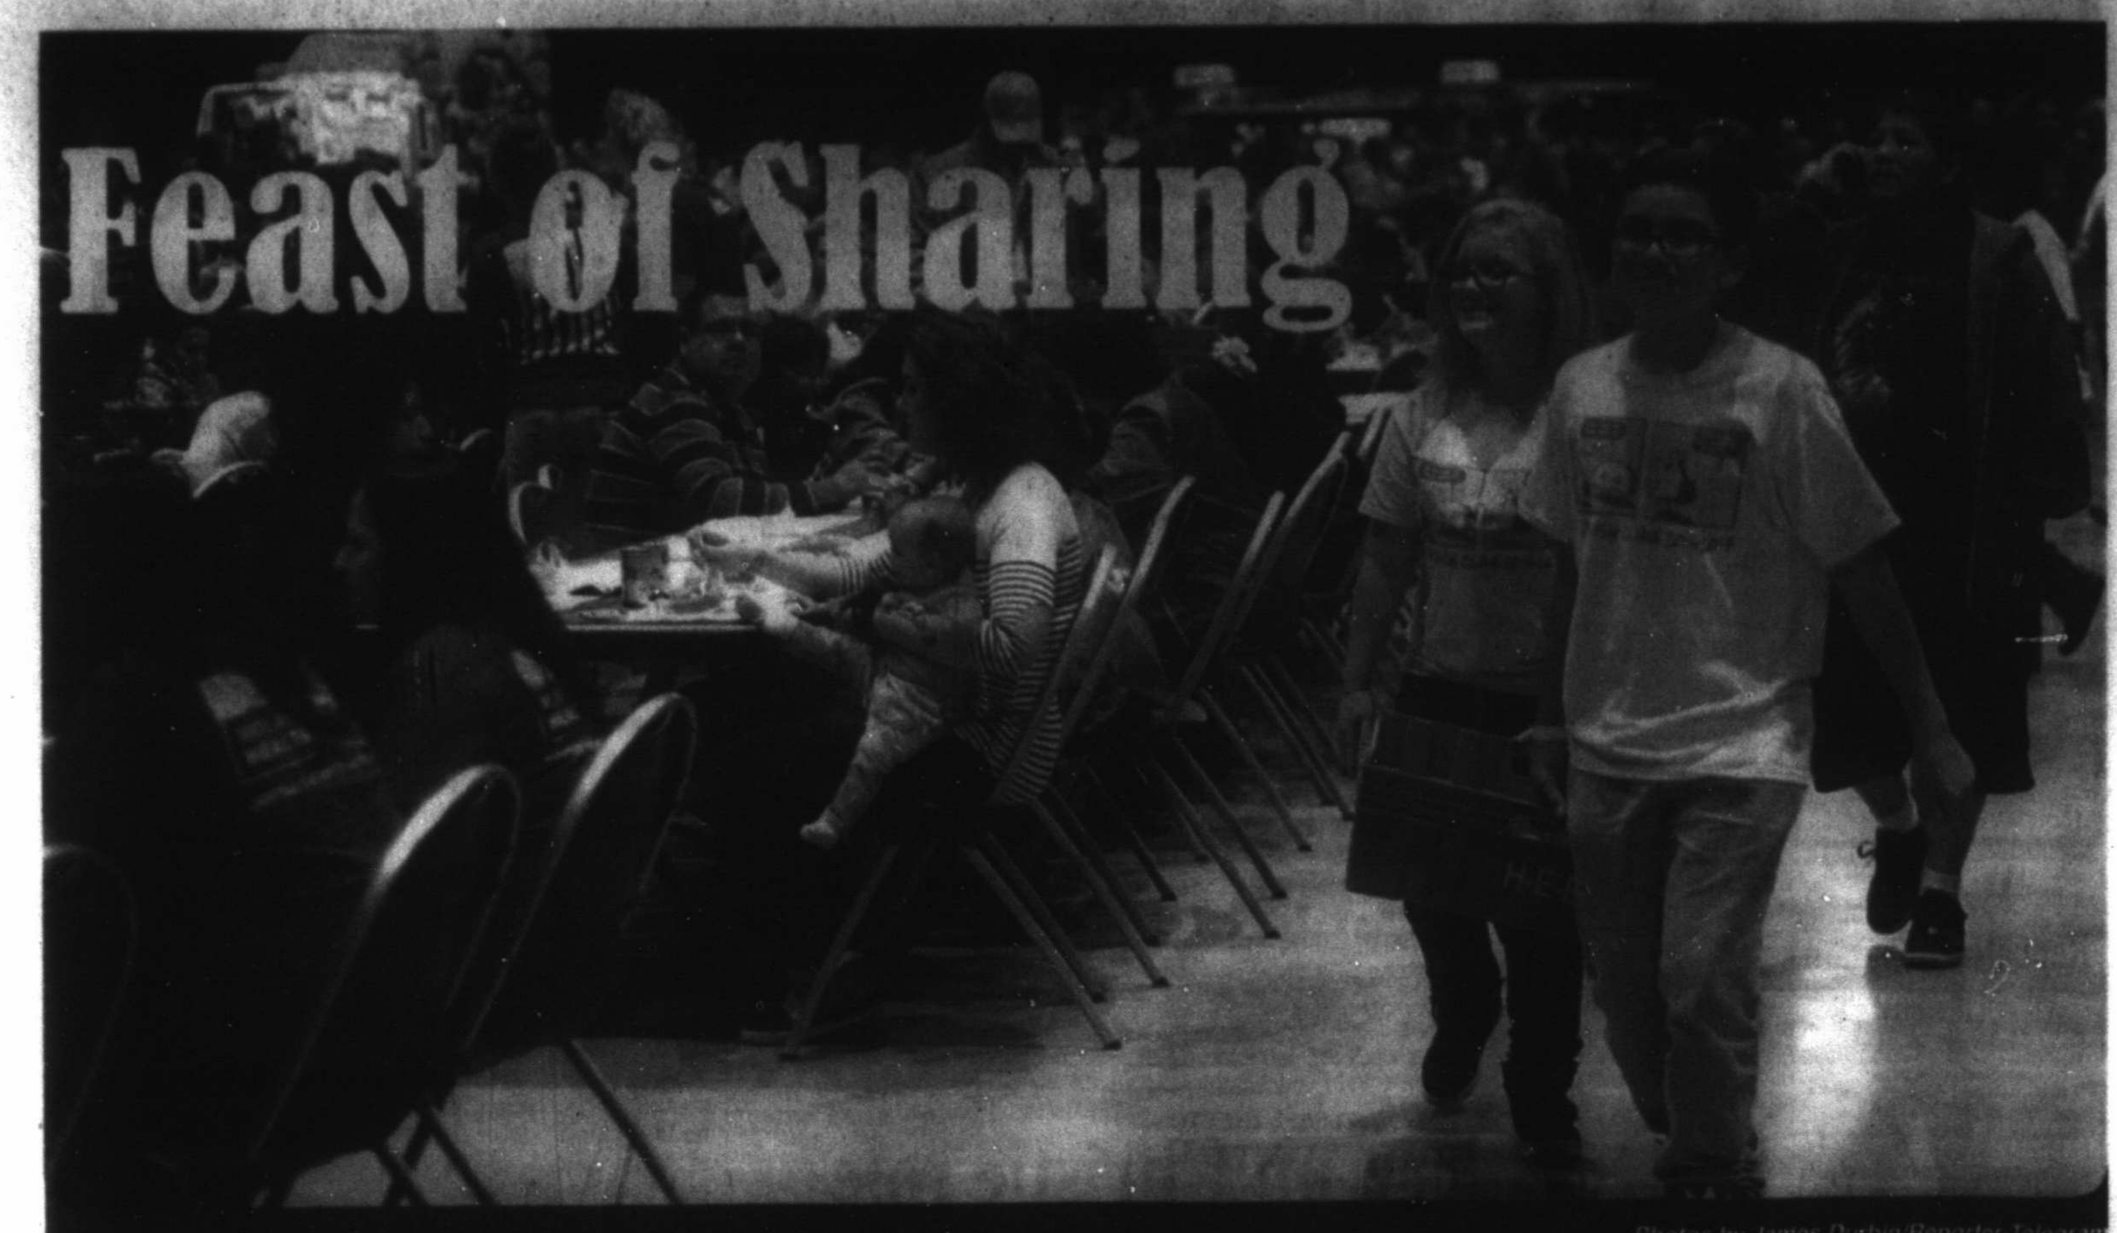
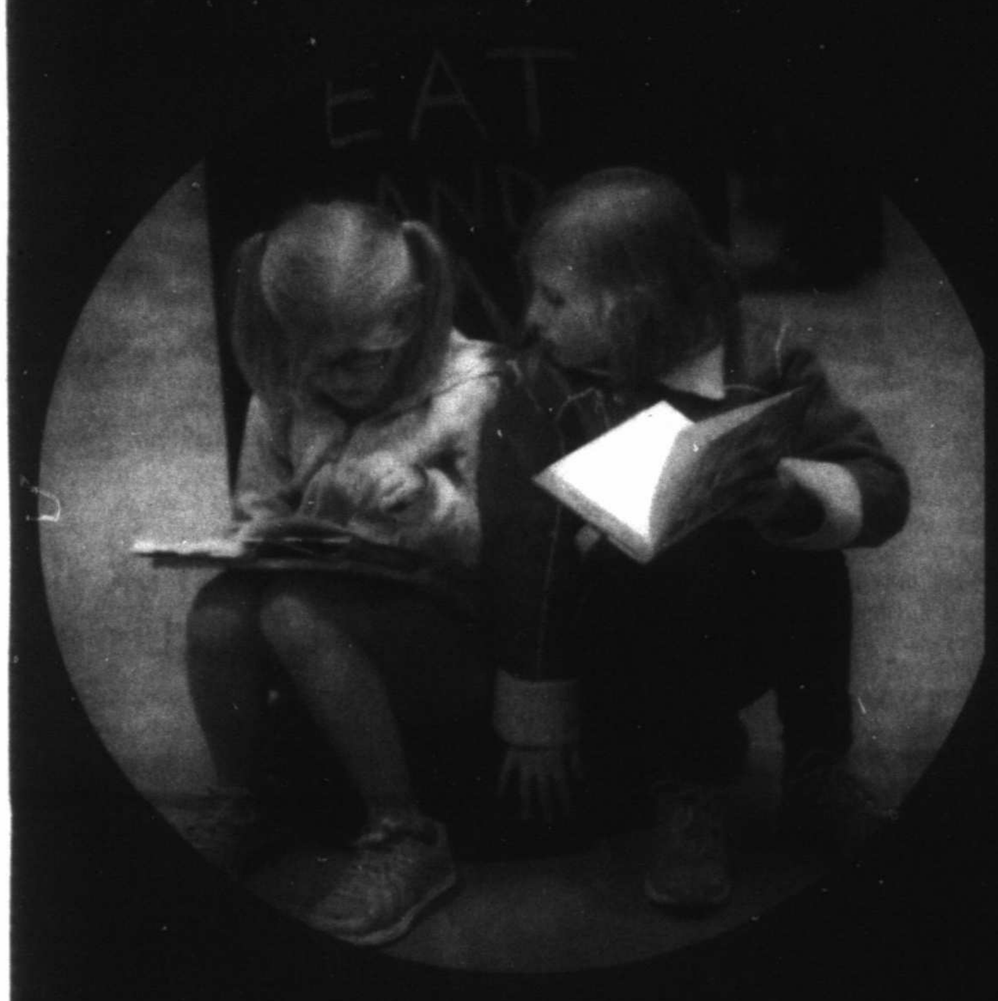
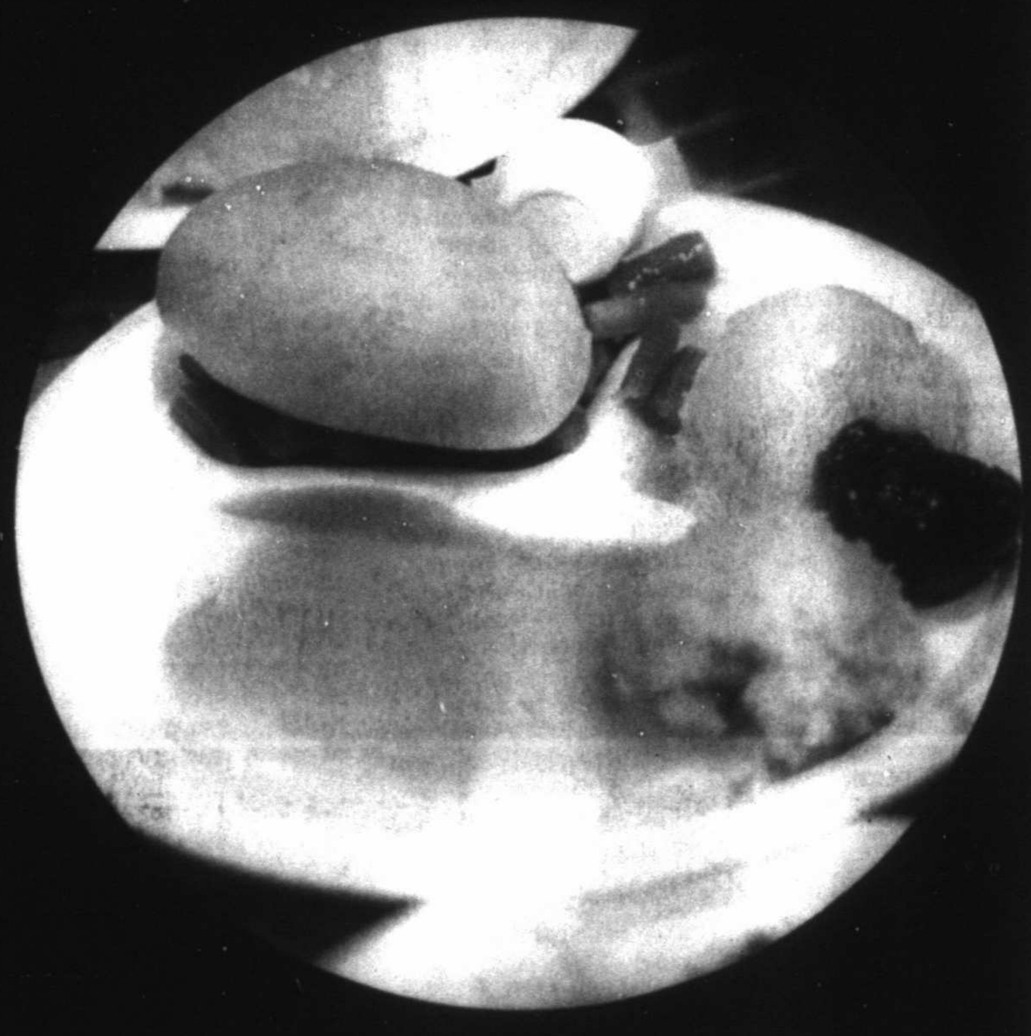
Feast of Sharing



Photos by James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Organizers of the 14th annual event expected 10,000 people to attend and planned to serve 7,000 to 7,500 meals. H-E-B's crews' preparations included 1,800 pounds of turkey breast, 1,600 pounds of stuffing, 1,600 pounds of mashed potatoes, 110 gallons of gravy, 7,000 dinner rolls and 800 pumpkin pies. Feast of Sharing is the grocery chain's way to say thank you to the communities where it calls home. The 23-city tour began in Midland and will end Christmas Eve in Corpus Christi.





UK's May seeks to keep Brexit plan going despite setback

By Gregory Katz
Associated Press

LONDON — British Prime Minister Theresa May sought Friday to reassure European Union leaders that her timetable for Britain to leave the EU remains intact despite a court ruling requiring British lawmakers to have more of a say in the process.

May

She telephoned Jean-Claude Juncker, the EU's top official, and German Chancellor Angela Merkel to say her plan is still to start the process to remove Britain from the EU by the end of March. Officials say she will also call French President Francois Hollande and European Council President Donald Tusk.

In Berlin, British Foreign Minister Boris Johnson said the court ruling should not interfere with the government's Brexit timetable. He described Britain's planned EU exit as a "huge opportunity" and said "with the right spirit, I believe we can turn these negotiations into a win-win discussion."

But May's hopes of a "business as usual" approach suffered an unexpected blow with the abrupt resignation of a pro-Brexit Conservative Party legislator who had complained about the government's plan to implement Brexit without involving Parliament. A by-election will be held, and the resignation reduces May's already slender Conservative majority in the House of Commons.

Her round of calls to senior European figures came a day after a High Court ruling that the British government needs Parliament's approval before invoking Article 50 of the EU treaty, which formally begins a two-year countdown to Britain's exit from the 28-nation bloc. The decision by the three-judge court has the potential to delay that process.

The government is appealing the ruling at the Supreme Court, with a hearing expected next month. If the country's highest court rules against the government, Parliament will become directly involved in discussions over how the Brexit process begins.

A number of lawmakers from opposition parties want assurances from the government that it won't be seeking a so-called "hard Brexit" that will see Britain leave the European single market of more than 500 million people.

The court decision Thursday has stoked speculation that May will look to call an early general election next spring, where Conservative Party is predicted to win an overwhelming majority, according to opinion polls.

Party unity suffered a blow with the resignation of lawmaker Stephen Phillips, who said he was leaving office because of differences with May's approach. In the past, he complained that it was "tyranny" for the government to move forward on Brexit without giving Parliament a say.

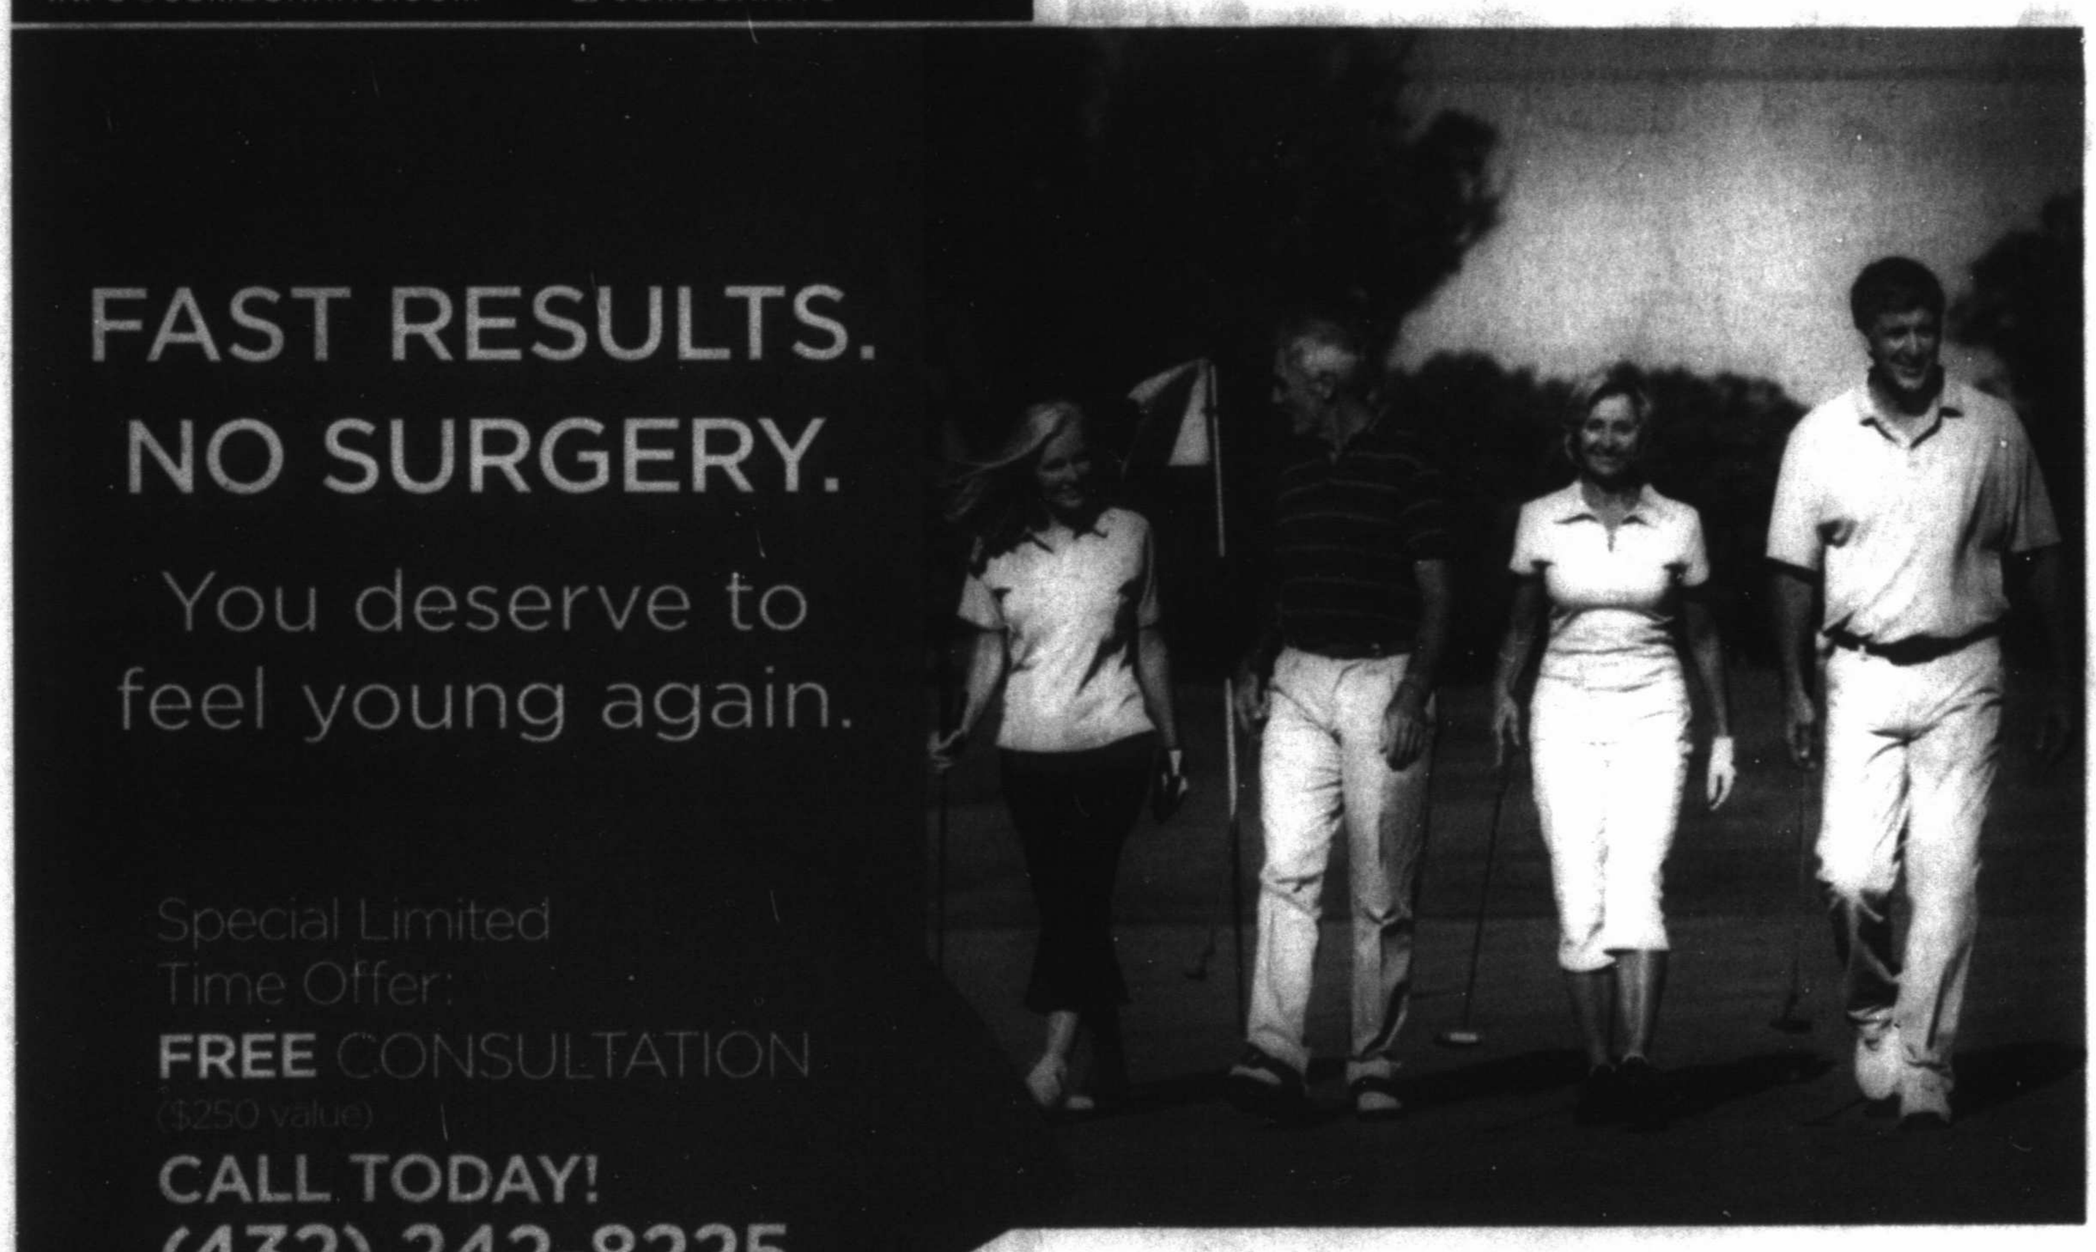
"It has become clear to me over the last few months that my growing and very significant policy differences with the current Government mean that I am unable properly to represent the people who elected me," said Phillips, who represents Sleaford and North Hykeham, 120 miles north of London.

Another Conservative legislator, Zac Goldsmith, resigned last week in disagreement with the government's support for a third runway at Heathrow Airport.

In the German capital, Johnson sought to calm fears about the U.K. court ruling while his German counterpart called for Brexit negotiations to start "as soon as possible."

"This is one stage in a legal process, that the government is going to appeal that ruling, and I think that it's very important to recognize that the British people voted to leave the European Union," Johnson said after meeting German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier.

"And that is what we are going to get on and do, and ... no, I don't think it will interfere with the timetable for that process."



GM starts producing 200-mile electric Chevrolet Bolt

By Tom Krisher
Associated Press

ORION TOWNSHIP, Michigan — It can go more than 200 miles on battery power and it costs less than the average new vehicle in the U.S. But in an era of $2 per gallon gasoline, the Chevrolet Bolt probably won't do a whole lot to shift America from gasoline to electricity.

General Motors has started making Bolt hatchbacks on a slow assembly line at a factory in Orion Township, Michigan, north of Detroit.

The cars, starting at $37,495 before a $7,500 federal tax credit, will go on sale in California and Oregon before the end of the year, and will spread to the rest of the country next year. The average sales price of a new vehicle in the U.S. is about $34,000, according to Kelley Blue Book.

Analysts say the Bolt's 238-mile range on a single charge, plus a net price of around $30,000, should make it an attractive alternative to cars with internal-combustion engines. While they expect the Bolt to incrementally add to the number of electric cars now on the road, they don't expect a seismic shift to electricity yet.

The Bolt's range more than covers the average daily round-trip commute of about 40 miles in the U.S., and that should give comfort to those who fear running out of power, said Stephanie Brinley, an auto industry analyst for IHS Markit. But there's always the late night at work and the early meeting the next morning without enough charging time, or the night you forget to plug the car in. Those are tough adjustments for Americans, she said.

"We're trained to believe that wherever we go, we get can get the fuel that we need. With electricity you need to plan that out a little bit more," Brinley said.

IHS predicts that GM will sell just under 30,000 Bolts in the first year, which won't add much to the roughly 235,000 electrics now on U.S. roads. Brinley says there will be small growth as more companies such as Tesla Motors roll out affordable electric vehicles with range over 200 miles. Last year about 100,000 EVs were sold in the U.S., and IHS predicts 300,000 annual sales by 2020 and 400,000 by 2025.

Still, Chevrolet believes the Bolt is a game-changer. "It becomes just a mainstream vehicle choice," said Darin Gesse, the Bolt's product manager.

GM, he said, set out to make the range about equal to a half-tank of fuel in a gas-powered car. With a half-tank of gas, most people don't worry that they have to refuel for a while and are comfortable driving, he said.

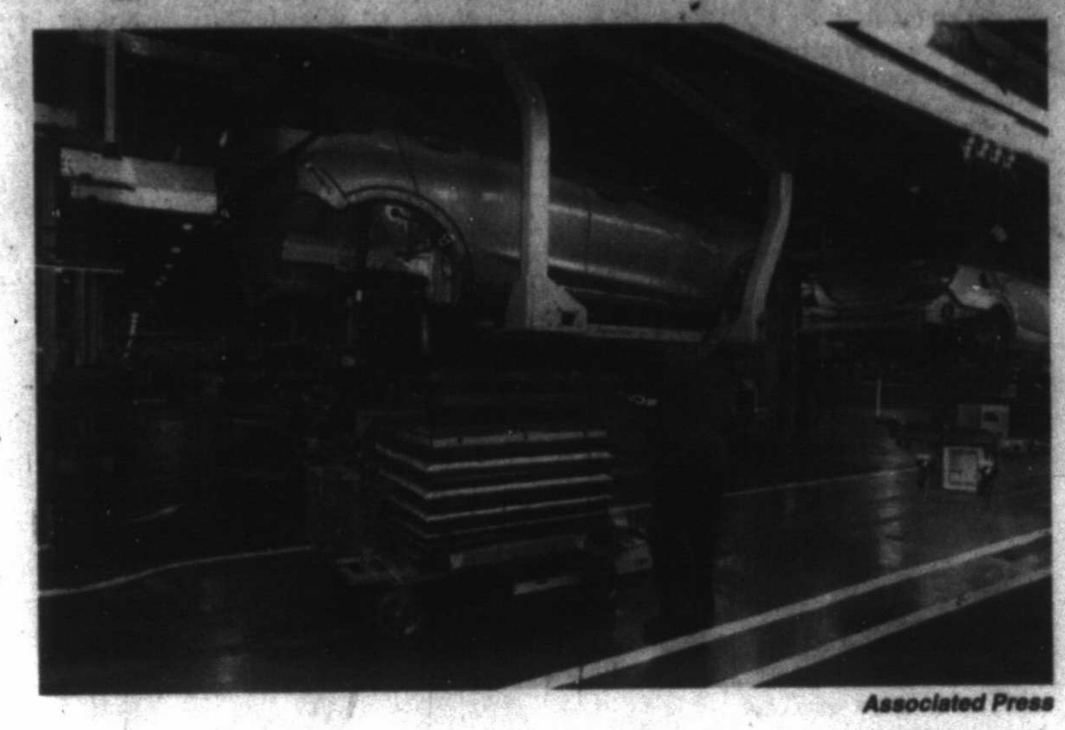
In a quick drive Friday on roads near GM's technical center north of Detroit, the car accelerated quickly when compared to a gas car. GM says it goes from zero to 60 mph in about 6.5 seconds, which is faster than many muscle cars from the '70s and '80s. The handling was tight with very little body roll, yet the ride was smooth and quiet.

GM beat rival Tesla to market with a long-range affordable electric car by at least a year. Tesla plans to start delivering its 200-mile, $35,000 (before tax credits) Model 3 in the second half of next year, and it had 373,000 deposits as of May.

The carmaker hasn't revealed exactly when the first customer will get a Bolt. Chevrolet didn't take advance reservations but says there's been strong interest at its dealerships.

Not all of GM's 3,000 dealers nationwide will be certified to sell and service the Bolt, although the company isn't sure how many yet. Around 2,000 can service the Bolt's plug-in cousin, the Volt.

GM says that should be a big advantage over Tesla, which doesn't have service centers in every state.



Associated Press

A battery is lifted into place for installation in the Chevrolet Bolt EV at the General Motors Orion Assembly plant Friday in Orion Township, Mich. The Chevrolet Bolt can go more than 200 miles on battery power and will cost less than the average new vehicle in the U.S. But it's unclear whether the car can do much to shift America from gasoline to electricity in an era of $2 prices at the pump.

Weekly rig count: Permian Basin rig count hits year high

■ 218 rigs were operating in the Permian and 33 in Midland County.

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The Permian Basin continues to climb to year-highs after the nation's most active oil-producing basin hit 218 rigs this week, up six, according to Baker Hughes.

The Permian has 83 percent of all rig activity in Texas and 38 percent of the nation's. Midland County, this week unchanged at 33 rigs, holds 15 percent of Permian activity, 13 percent of Texas' and 6 percent of the nation's.

Other counties with double-digit rig counts in the Permian this week were Reeves (27); Martin (22); Lea, New Mexico (17); Loving (17); Eddy, New Mexico (14); Howard (11); Culberson (10); and Upton (10).

District 8 was up seven rigs to 148. In other areas with activity in the Permian, District 7B held steady at three, District 7C was unchanged at 22, District 8A fell one to 13 and New Mexico stayed at 32. Texas had 186 rigs operating in the Permian.

At this time last year, the Permian had 232 rigs.

Texas & New Mexico

Texas' rig count rose six to 262. The Eagle Ford added two rigs this week, raising the South Texas basin's count to 35. The Haynesville in East Texas added one rig for a total of 21. The Granite Wash and Barnett were unchanged at 10 and three, respectively.

Texas was unchanged at one rig offshore and no rigs in inland waters.

New Mexico held steady at 32 rigs, all of them in the Permian.

A year ago this week, Texas had 340 rigs and New Mexico had 37.

United States

About 80 percent of all rigs in the U.S. are exploring for oil. Oil rigs tallied 450 this week after nine more went online. There were 117 natural gas rigs, up three. Miscellaneous rigs were unchanged at two.

In total, the U.S. had 569 rigs, up 12. The number of rigs on land rose 13 to 546, while inland remained at two and offshore rigs fell one to 21. All offshore rigs are in the Gulf of Mexico.

By drilling trajectory, there were 459 horizontal rigs, up nine; 58 vertical rigs, up five; and 52 directional rigs, down two.

The U.S. had 771 rigs at this time last year.

Most Active

Basins with the most activity were the Permian, the Cana Woodford (41), the Williston (37), the Marcellus (36) and the Eagle Ford.

States with the most activity were Texas, Oklahoma (76), Louisiana (48), North Dakota (37) and New Mexico (32).

Canada & North America

Canada added one rig this week, bumping its total to 154. There were 76 oil rigs, up three; 77 natural gas rigs, down two; and one miscellaneous rig, unchanged. Canada had 185 rigs a year ago this week.

The total number of rigs in the North America region was 723, up 13. At this time last year, there were 956 rigs in North America.

Who's watching the polls? Some questions answered

By Ben Nuckols
Associated Press

Laws governing who can observe voters at the polls and what those observers can do vary from state to state. Some questions and answers about what is and is not allowed on Election Day:

Who can observe?

States have a variety of rules about who can monitor polling places, but observers generally fall into three categories: partisan, nonpartisan and international.

Partisan observers are appointed by political parties or candidates and usually are required to sign up in advance to monitor polling places. Nearly every state allows partisan observers, and most of them specify how many can be present at each polling place and what they can or cannot do while there. In Pennsylvania, for example, official poll watchers must live in the county where they monitor elections, a rule that the Republican Party is challenging in federal court.

Nonpartisan or citizen observers also are common at polling places and are permitted by at least 35 states and the District of Columbia, according to research by the National Conference of State Legislatures. Most of those states lack specific legislation regulating nonpartisan observers but allow them in practice.

International observers are allowed in at least 33 states and the District of Columbia, according to the NCSL. These observers usually are deployed by international nonpartisan groups with the goal of promoting free, democratic elections and respect for human rights. They are bound by a code of conduct. The U.S. committed to allowing international observers when it signed an agreement with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in 1990, and the group began sending observers to the U.S. in 2002. This year, it plans to send more than 400 observers, a nearly tenfold increase over the last presidential election four years ago.

What if observers have an agenda?

States do not have specific rules regarding election observers who, while not explicitly partisan, have a stake in the outcome of the race. In practice, such poll watchers are generally treated as nonpartisan or citizen observers, even though they may have a partisan agenda.

Donald Trump has urged his supporters to show up at polling places and look out for possible voter fraud. Right-wing groups including the Oath Keepers, a coalition of former police officers and members of the military, are urging members to do the same. Meanwhile, civil rights groups are asking poll watchers to look out for people being unfairly denied the right to vote, especially minorities who tend to vote Democratic.

Can poll watchers carry guns?

The District of Columbia and 11 states have laws explicitly banning guns at polling places. In states that do not restrict the open carrying of handguns, poll watchers could legally be armed outside a polling location. However, nearly all states ban the carrying of firearms in schools and government buildings, where many polling places are located. That would preclude the possibility of armed citizens watching people as they cast ballots.

Arkansas used to be among the states that banned carrying concealed weapons into polling

In final push, Clinton, Trump target different Americas

By Jill Colvin and Kathleen Hennessey
Associated Press

ATKINSON, New Hampshire — Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton charged through vastly different corners of America Friday hunting for vastly different voters in a final, frantic push that traced the country's geographic, racial and economic divides.

Clinton and Democratic allies bounced from city to city oters. She was to campaign in urban centers of Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland on Friday while President Barack Obama was heading to Charlotte, North Carolina — all cities where minority voters are crucial.

In Pittsburgh, a city where one in three people is not white, Clinton hammered Trump as "someone who demeans women, mocks people with disabilities, insults African-Americans and Latinos and demonizes immigrants and Muslims."

"Everywhere he goes he leaves people behind," Clinton told rowdy supporters.

Trump, meanwhile, was on a tour of rural areas, hoping to boost turnout among the white, working-class voters drawn to his promise to bring back a lost America. He started his day Friday in Atkinson, New Hampshire, population 6,800 and almost 98 percent white, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. From there, he was bound for Wilmington, Ohio, another overwhelmingly white town where just 13 percent of residents have a college degree.

Speaking more than 2,000 miles from the Mexican border, Trump drew loud cheers in Atkinson when he vowed to build a massive wall between the U.S. and Mexico. The crowd booed when he contended that Clinton supports "open borders."

"Her plans would mean generations of terrorism, extremism and radicalism spreading into your schools and through your communities," Trump declared.

In spite of a close race in national polling, Trump's path to victory remains narrow. For example, he must win Florida, where polls show a neck-and-neck race. His campaign is increasingly looking to make up for losses among suburban voters, particularly women, by wrestling up new voters in out-of-the-way places.

The candidates' divergent paths highlighted the yawning gaps between race, place and economics that drive presidential policies.

Trump told his largely white audience in Atkinson that "we have to rebuild our country."

"They've shipped our jobs and they've shipped our wealth to other countries," he said. "To all Americans, I say it is time for new leadership."

Trump's dark views on the economy clashed with a new jobs report showing the unemployment rate declined to 4.9 percent while wages went up in October. The report marks 73 straight months of job growth.

But the Republican said the numbers weren't good enough, and he cast doubt on whether they were accurate.

"These numbers are an absolute disaster," Trump said, reviving his argument that the unemployment numbers released every month by the Labor Department are skewed because they don't accurately account for those who've dropped out of the workforce.

"Nobody believes the numbers they're reporting anyway," he said.

As he spoke, Clinton campaigned in Pittsburgh, delivering a nearly opposite message. She celebrated what she described as the Rust Belt city's rebirth of "confidence" and economic renewal. She asked voters to "imagine two different Americas" — one with Trump in charge, and one with her in the White House.

"Think about what it will be to trust the nuclear codes to someone with a very thin skin," she said, adding Trump could "start a real war, not just a Twitter war at 3 in the morning."

Clinton called the jobs report "good news."

"I believe that our economy is poised to really take off and thrive," she said. "When the middle class thrives, America thrives."

Clinton's campaign has announced two more stops in Philadelphia before Tuesday. Pennsylvania is a state where Clinton has long had a solid lead; it has not voted for a Republican in six presidential elections.

But with polls tightening across battleground states, Democrats are taking little for granted. Former President Bill Clinton worked to drive up turnout in Colorado on Friday, while Vice President Joe Biden was due in Wisconsin, both states Clinton was believed to have locked up weeks ago.

Clinton herself was to wrap her day in Cleveland at a get-out-the-vote rally with hip-hop artist Jay-Z.

If Trump loses: We'll be at the White House — 'in arms'

By Johnathan Lemire
Associated Press

SELMA, N.C. — Donald Trump's legions of followers say they're growing confident of victory — and many say they won't accept defeat.

"We're going to win. And if we don't win and Hillary wins, I think we're going to take over the government," said Nancy Fraize, 51, who works as a cleaning lady in Manchester, New Hampshire. "I think personally we'll all be at the White House sitting on the front lawn. In arms." Her view of the possible outcome and aftermath are hardly rare. Poll numbers show an uncertain race and renewed scrutiny of Hillary Clinton's emails just before Election Day, and a survey last month showed only one-third of Republicans saying they have confidence the votes will be counted fairly.

The blend of confidence in Trump and distrust of those in power was reflected again and again in more than two dozen interviews with his supporters across battleground states where the presidential race is being fought.

Trump backers are nearly uniformly confident about their candidate's prospects, despite the controversies that have surrounded his campaign all year and opinion polls that show him trailing Clinton in potentially decisive states. Many of those interviewed agree with the Republican nominee's incendiary assertion that the election could be "rigged," an unprecedented challenge to the nation's democratic tradition. The New York businessman speaks of his supporters as "a movement," one drawn by his celebrity, his fiery populist rhetoric and his denunciations of Democrat Clinton as the embodiment of an establishment Washington that many Americans feel has forgotten about them.

"It's about time we had someone with the balls to get things done," said Lugene Martin, 51, of Eau Claire, Wisconsin. "I'm so tired of this country being led by same-old, same-old politicians. We need one who won't follow the rules."

"If he lost?" she asked herself. "I don't even know what I'd do." From early in his candidacy, Trump has drawn super-fans, those who have attended several rallies and watched the internet live streams of many more.

Paula Pierce, 63, who attended a Trump rally in New Hampshire last week, said the election "feels very different this time," as if the country has reached a historic turning point. Trump, she said, "has ignited a movement, a fire."

Most Trump supporters interviewed said they are convinced he has the momentum, especially after FBI Director James Comey's announcement of a review of more emails that may be connected to Clinton's private server. And many Trump backers are deeply skeptical of public opinion polling.

Cindy Spritzer, 51, said at a rally Wednesday in Miami that mainstream polling is missing Trump voters who make up a "silent majority."

"These are people who don't do polls. They don't answer the phone. They don't put Trump bumper stickers on their car or buttons on their shirt," Spritzer said. "But they are smart. And they will vote. And they will vote for Trump."

For these Trump supporters, Clinton's advantage in polls seems incompatible with what they see and hear. Many say they've never even met a Clinton supporter. And they see thousands of people at Trump's raucous rallies.

The candidate himself tells them repeatedly the only way he can lose is if the election is rigged. In Michigan recently, he urged supporters to vote and then go to a different polling place with friends and make sure "it's on the up and up." He said voter fraud is "a big, big problem in this country."

There is no evidence that voter fraud is a widespread problem in the United States. A study by a Loyola Law School professor found that out of 1 billion votes cast in all American elections between 2000 and 2014, there were only 31 known cases of impersonation fraud.

Yet only about one-third of Republicans say they have a great deal or quite a bit of confidence that votes on Election Day will be counted fairly, according to a poll from the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research released last month. Still, not all Trump supporters say they doubt the system or want a prolonged legal challenge that could plunge a nervous nation into uncertainty.

"If he lost fair and square, we'd have to accept it. We all would," said Andrew Armitage, 18, a first-time voter from River Falls, Wisconsin. "It's what I learned in school. That's the American tradition and that's the way it should be."

places.

How can voters be challenged?

Thirty-nine states allow citizens to challenge the eligibility of their fellow voters inside polling places, and 28 allow the challenge to be issued before someone votes, according to a 2012 report by the Brennan Center for Justice at New York University School of Law. At least four battleground states — Florida, Iowa, Nevada and Pennsylvania — not only allow people to challenge voters inside polling places but place the burden of proof on the person who is challenged.

In recent years, Alabama, Ohio and Texas have banned citizen challenges at the polls. Other states allow only election officials to challenge voters.

What constitutes voter intimidation?

Nearly every state has laws banning poll watchers from intimidating, harassing or threatening voters. Federal law prohibits voter intimidation on the basis of race, ethnicity or the language they speak. Poll watchers who seek to challenge a voter are generally prohibited from approaching voters themselves.

The Republican National Committee is barred by a 1982 court order from monitoring polling places for fraud after Democrats sued over alleged voter intimidation in minority communities.

Midland High capped off a fine regular season in style Friday night.

The Bulldogs were firing on all cylinders, as their rusbing attack, passing game and defense all contributed during a 49-0 rout of Odessa High in their District 2-6A finale at Grande Communications Stadium.

With the victory, MHS (8-2, 5-1 in District 2-6A) achieved eight or more wins in a regular season for the 11th time in school history.

The Bulldogs will represent the district as the No. 2 seed in the Class 6A Division I playoffs and they will visit El Paso El Dorado (8-2) at a time, location, and site to be determined.

"This bunch has really bought in starting back in January," MHS head coach Craig Yenzer said. "We really challenged them with the boot camp and our offseason. This is a really good senior class. They've done everything that we have asked them to do. We were real proud. The players have just really bought into what we're trying to do, so it's really good to see a great family atmosphere here. They have worked hard, so it's really good in today's world to see young people really hard and be rewarded for that work."

Midland High rode its balanced and explosive offense to a 35-0 halftime lead over the Bronchos (0-10, 0-6).

Bulldogs quarterback Jackson Anuszkiewicz completed 16 of 23 passes for 263 yards, three touchdown passes and one interception.

Anuszkiewicz connected with McLane Mannix with a 62-yard TD pass in the first quarter, and capped it off with a 45-yard touchdown pass to Jalen Childress in the third quarter.

In the process, Anuszkiewicz set the Midland High single season record for most passing yards with 2,535, breaking the mark of 2,481 set by Ryan Rowland in 2002.

"Our goal was to finish strong so we can go into the playoffs strong," Anuszkiewicz said. "We really wanted this game a complete team effort and we got the job done so it was exciting to get see everybody contribute to the win, so we're looking forward to the playoffs."

Childress, a senior playing likely his final game at Grande, finished with five receptions, 105 yards and two touchdown receptions.

"We just wanted to get a win at our last time at home," Childress said. "This

Lee's Josh Traylor (22) runs for a large gain against permian Panthers during the second quarter Friday night at Ratliff Stadium.

ODESSA — With the fates of their seasons already decided, the Lee and Odessa Permian football teams took the field Friday night with pride in their hearts and coveted bragging rights at stake.

In a game without a trace of any playoff implications, the two sides battled to the bitter end. But after 48 minutes, it was the Panthers — playing without offensive weapons Brother Miller and Ed Williams — who ran away with a 55-28 win over the Rebels in the two foes' 2016 regular season finale at Ratliff Stadium.

Permian (6-4, 2-4 in District 2-6A) led 35-28 with 59 seconds to play in the third quarter, before reeling off 20 unanswered points. Toddrick Robinson spearheaded an explosive, at times quick-strike Panther offense, with 114 yards rushing and two scores, as well as a 71-yard touchdown reception that gave Permian a lead on the first play of the night.

Robinson, a sophomore, said Friday's result was a picture-perfect way for he and his Panther teammates to wrap up their season.

"It was an amazing feeling," Robinson said. "They were very competitive, we were very competitive and it was amazing."

Senior running back Kade Davis added 140 yards on eight carries for the Panthers, who once again found a wealth of success from their by-committee running game.

It was an emotional end to the year for the Rebels (3-7, 2-4 in District 2-6A), who were coming off a 58-28 home loss against Wolfforth Frenship that knocked them out of the playoff race. Many of the Rebel players left the

With the victory, Midland High (22-15) moves into the regional quarterfinal round to play Keller at a time, day and place to be determined. Keller defeated El Paso El Dorado in four sets to advance.

"It's amazing," MHS head coach Amanda Lopez said. "The girls are fired up. They're making things happen that people didn't think we'd be able to do."

MHS took a 2-0 lead in the match thanks to winning two close sets.

Last match: MCS def. No. 10 Austin Hyde Park, 3-1, Saturday; Tyler All Saints Episcopal def. Tyler Grace Community, 3-0, Saturday

Notes: After a first-round bye, Tyler All Saints Episcopal is coming off a sweep of rival Tyler Grace Community in the area round last Saturday. ... Meanwhile, the Lady Mustangs enter this match fresh off a 3-1 victory against Austin Hyde Park. MCS has won six of its seven sets thus far in these playoffs. ... MCS head coach Alicia Filyukova said she expects a tough test from the offensively-talented Lady Trojans today. "They definitely have some standout hitters offensively," Filyukova said. "So those are the two key players we're trying to zone in on and take out of the game early. We've been prepping for that all week." ... Last season, the Lady Mustangs fell to Lubbock Trinity in the area round and Filyukova said it's a great feeling to know her team has pushed past its stopping point from a year ago. "It's extremely exciting especially for these seniors," Filyukova said. "We're looking at playing well on our side of the net. We've done everything we can preparation wise, so it just comes down to who wants it more and who's going to fight for it." ... As always, mental toughness will be a main key for the Lady Mustangs today. "We're confident enough in ourselves that if we control our mental toughness, then we'll play better," said MCS senior setter Savana Walker. "We see now what we can do when we're mentally tough."

JAZZ 86

SALT LAKE CITY — Kawhi Leonard scored 29 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs avenged their lone loss of the season with a 100-86 victory over the Utah Jazz on Friday night.

The Spurs bounced back from a 15-point home loss to the Jazz on Tuesday after losing just one game in San Antonio all of last season.

The Jazz jumped out to a 10-2 lead in the first quarter and an unhappy Spurs coach Gregg Popovich called a timeout just minutes into the game. The Spurs responded with a 29-7 run and the Jazz never led again. Utah got within seven in the third quarter, but Leonard responded with five quick points and the Jazz never got within single digits the rest of the game.

Leonard continued his MVP-caliber season by shooting 9 for 18 from the field while LaMarcus Aldridge added 19 points and six rebounds.

Rodney Hood led the Jazz with 18 points, but the team shot just 37.5 percent.

TRAIL BLAZERS 105
MAVERICKS 95

DALLAS — Damian Lillard scored 27 of his season-high 42 points in the second half to lead the Portland Trail Blazers to a 105-95 victory over Dallas on Friday night, sending the Mavericks to their first 0-5 start in franchise history.

Mason Plumlee had 19 points and Al-Farouq Aminu added 12 points and 10 rebounds for Portland.

J.J. Barea scored 23 points and Harrison Barnes had 17 for the Mavericks, who were without Andrew Bogut (personal reasons) for the game and Dirk Nowitzki (sore right Achilles) in the second half.

With backcourt mate C.J. McCollum saddled with foul trouble for most of the game, Lillard had 18 of Portland's 25 points during a 14-minute stretch of the second half.

The Blazers, who shot 3 for 14 on 3-pointers in the first half, started 7 for 8 from beyond the arc to start the third quarter and open a 78-62 lead.

Howver, Portland went 0 for 10 for the rest of the quarter and the Mavericks pulled to 79-76 entering the fourth, playing most of that stretch with Barea and four reserves in the game.

RAPTORS 96
HEAT 87

TORONTO — DeMar DeRozan is showing no signs of slowing down.

The Toronto Raptors star has surged to the top of the NBA scoring charts, averaging 35.8 points after dropping 34 on the Miami Heat in a 96-87 victory Friday night.

It was his fifth straight game with at least 30 points for DeRozan, passing Mike James for the longest such streak in franchise history and the best such start to a season since Michael Jordan did it for six straight games to open the 1986-87 season.

DeRozan was not about to dwell on his place alongside such distinguished company.

"Yeah, I heard," he said. "I don't believe it."

What he could believe was the four turnovers he had in the first quarter, part of the six the team committed as it fell behind by 12 points at one point.

HORNETS 99
NETS 95

NEW YORK — Kemba Walker lost his backup and a few other key players from the best team he's played on in the NBA.

Instead of taking a step back, his Hornets are off to their best start in 16 years.

Walker scored a season-high 30 points and Charlotte improved to 4-1 for the first time since 2000 by beating the Brooklyn Nets 99-95 on Friday night.

"It's pretty early but I like the team that we can become," coach Steve Clifford said.

Nicolas Batum added 18 points and nine rebounds, while Marvin Williams, who missed his first 10 shots, made a 3-pointer with 1:05 left after the Nets had cut the lead to one point.

Reserve Sean Kilpatrick scored 19 points for the Nets, who didn't have starting point guard Jeremy Lin available to face his former team because of a strained left hamstring that will keep him sidelined for at least two weeks.

WIZARDS 95
HAWKS 92

WASHINGTON — With John Wall sitting out the second game of a back-to-back on Saturday night, part of an effort to ease the All-Star point guard's return from offseason surgery on each knee, the Washington Wizards will be counting on Bradley Beal to lead them.

Beal just wants to make sure he doesn't try to do too much in Wall's absence.

What the Wizards and Beal would love to see is the same sort of go-to-the-basket style he displayed while scoring 20 of his 28 points after halftime Friday night, helping Washington give new coach Scott Brooks his first victory with the team, 95-92 over the Atlanta Hawks.

The key Saturday at the Orlando Magic, Beal said, will be for him to "not feel like I've got to take over and do everything."

Beal averaged only 14 points during Washington's 0-3 start, never getting more than 15, and Brooks said before facing Atlanta he considered that his fault for not giving his young shooting guard enough opportunities.

KNICKS 117
BULLS 104

CHICAGO — Kristaps Porzingis had 27 points and Carmelo Anthony added 25 to lead the New York Knicks to a 117-104 victory over the Bulls on Friday night in the triumphant return of Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah to Chicago.

Rose, the Bulls' first-round draft pick in 2008, finished with 15 points and 11 assists, while Noah, a 2007 first-rounder, had 16 points and nine rebounds. They teamed up to play a familiar two-man game late as New York held off a Chicago rally.

SUNS 112
PELICANS 111, OT

NEW ORLEANS — Devin Booker scored 38 points, including an improbable jumper that tied the as regulation expired and the Phoenix Suns beat New Orleans 112-111 in overtime Friday night, keeping the Pelicans winless on the season.

T.J. Warren added 18 points on 4-of-17 shooting for the Suns (2-4), while Eric Bledsoe had 17 points and Tyson Chandler had 12 points and 18 rebounds.

Anthony Davis had 22 points and 11 rebounds for the Pelicans (0-6), while forward Terrence Jones, starting in place of the suspended Dante Cunningham, had 19 points. Though the Pelicans outshot the Suns 46 percent to 43 percent, they managed to shoot just 53.6 percent from the free throw line (15 of 28). The Suns finished 24 of 28 at the line.

2 Late TD passes lift Sweetwater over Greenwood

From staff reports

Chris Thompson threw two late touchdown passes to lift Sweetwater to a 28-14 victory over Greenwood at J.M. King Memorial Stadium on Friday night.

With the win, Sweetwater (8-1, 5-1 in District 2-4A Division II) will go into the playoffs as the No. 2 seed. Greenwood (7-2, 4-2) will go in as the No. 3 seed and will play Bushland in the bi-district round 7 p.m. Thursday at Lubbock Cooper's Pirate Stadium.

The game was tied late in the third quarter when Thompson threw a 7-yard pass to Jordan McGee with 2:06 remaining in the period.

Early in the fourth quarter, Thompson found Kobe Clark for a 72-yard TD pass for an insurance score..

Mustangs	28
Rangers	14

The potent Ranger offense was held to its lowest scoring output of the season by the Mustang defense as Greenwood had just 312 yards of total offense.

"They've got some really good linebackers and they did a good job of running to the ball. We couldn't get our running game going consistently tonight," said Greenwood coach Shad Hanna. "Defensively, we played a great ballgame tonight and did some good stuff against them."

Greenwood was first to get on the board when Ben Brockman scored from a yard out on a 1-yard run with 1:36 left in the first quarter.

Sweetwater took a 8-7 lead at the half when Luke James returned a punt 45 yards for a score and then Thompson ran for a 2-point conversion.

Thompson added a 59-yard TD run in the third quarter, before Greenwood tied it at 14 on a 1-yard keeper by Brockman.

Brockman finished with 92 yards passing and 88 yards rushing.

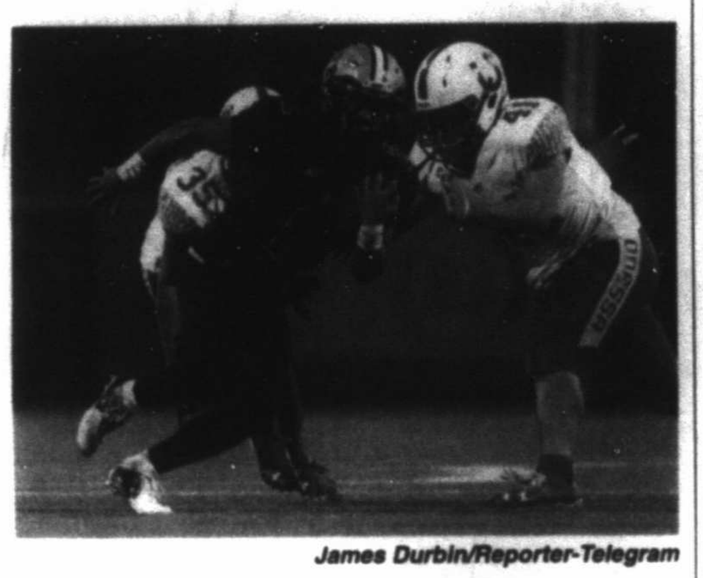
is our last time putting on Midland High at Grande so we wanted to put a show on."

The Midland High defense shined as it registered the program's first shutout since a 46-0 blanking of Lubbock Monterey in 2011, and held the Bronchos to only two first downs, 19 yards passing and 37 yards rushing in the first half.

In addition to the long passing plays, Bulldogs' rushing attack had a successful evening as it totaled 291 rushing yards, led by 89 yards rushing from Nick Hernandez. Hernandez broke away on a 49-yard scoring run during MHS' 21-point second quarter.

Ricky Hubert scored a pair of rushing TDs and added 88 yards on the ground to eclipse the 1,000-yard rushing barrier with 1,027 yards rushing this season.



James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's Nick Hernandez (2) scrambles for yardage against Odessa High on Friday at Grande Communications Stadium.

"Midland High is a great football team," Bronchos head coach Danny Servance said. "They're going to go into the playoffs and do some good things. Whenever you play DeSoto down to the wire like those guys did, they're going to represent our district in a good way."

Note: Midland High wide receiver Courtney McMaryion made five catches to bring his career total to 96 receptions and pass Chris Woods, who had 94 catches between 2003-04, for most catches in school history. ... Yenzer said the date, time and location of the El Paso El Dorado playoff game is still being negotiated by Midland ISD executive director of athletics Randy Rowe after bad weather might have caused damage at the proposed venue on Friday night.

LEE

field in tears knowing that Friday was the last time they'd ever wear a Lee jersey in a game.

"We had our chances," said Lee head coach Clint Hartman. "We weren't disciplined enough and that has to be cultivated here through the offseason. They (Permian) didn't really hurt us as much as we hurt ourselves as far as taking the right keys. The game was within 14 points late."

Permian bolted to a 21-0 lead by the early stages of the second quarter, thanks to the long catch and an impressive 42-yard run by Robinson.

But Lee rallied right before the half to claw its way back into the contest. With 48 seconds to play, quarterback Sema'J Davis carried it from seven yards out, and then on the ensuing kickoff, Jordan Rodriguez recovered a Permian fumble to set up the Rebels deep inside Panther territory.

Then, Davis found Colby Standard for in the corner of the end zone for a 12-yard pass that cut the Panthers' lead to 21-13 with 12 seconds remaining.

In his final game under center for the Rebels, Davis finished with 130 yards and two touchdowns on 22 carries. Through the air, he added 154 yards passing and another score.

Permian head coach Blake Feldt has always been impressed with Davis' ability as a playmaker and that didn't change one bit after Friday.

"We were really concerned about Sema'J Davis, because he's a great football player and he made some great plays tonight," Feldt said. "There were some instances where we didn't do a very good job of tackling him."

Permian's offense opened the second half white-hot, scoring 14 points on just five plays that netted 142 yards.

The Rebels were done in by a pair of turnovers-on-downs in the second half. Both turnovers came on prime scoring opportunities inside the Permian 15-yard line.

"It's always frustrating when you get down there and don't get any points out of it," Hartman said. "It's frustrating when you get down there, you're trying to get back into the game and you overthrow it."

Lee running back Josh Traylor ran for 111 yards on 18 carries and ended a stellar sophomore campaign with 1,095 yards and eight touchdowns. He is the third Lee running back ever to run for 1,000 or more yards in a single season, joining Cedric Benson (1998) and Trent Hines (2003).

Jimmie Johnson pulls into pit row during practice for a NASCAR auto race at Texas Motor Speedway in Fort Worth on Friday.

Jimmie Johnson drive for 5 at Texas before shot at 7th Cup

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jimmie Johnson gets to make a drive for five in Texas with no pressure before going for his record-tying seventh NASCAR championship.

Already locked into the Sprint Cup title-deciding race at Homestead, Johnson doesn't have to worry about the Chase like seven other drivers who have only two more chances to get a title shot. He can focus Sunday on trying to win the fall race at Texas Motor Speedway for the fifth year in a row.

"We've had a great hot streak going, we certainly hope it keeps going," Johnson said. "But if we show up and the best we can run is 15th, believe me, we're going to be pretty disappointed in that."

Johnson has won six Cup races overall at Texas, twice as many as any other driver. Carl Edwards got the last of his three Texas victories eight years ago.

Since Johnson won at Martinsville, in the first race of the third round in the Chase, there is plenty of time to talk about his opportunity to match the seven season championships won by Hall of Fame members Richard Petty and the late Dale Earnhardt.

Not that Johnson is paying too much attention to any of the talk and speculation.

"I'm kind of immune to it," he said. "I just have never been caught up in that stuff, and I try even harder now at this point in the year to avoid any media related to myself or my sport, just so I can have my own little universe and just kind of focus on what I think I need to."

This is the third year of NASCAR's elimination Chase format. Johnson was already out of contention and played a spoiler role by winning the last two fall races at the 1 1/2-mile, high-banked Texas track.

"Our wins the last two years in this fall race, we've actually gone home obviously happy, but also kicking ourselves" he said. "We would have made it to the final round if we would have just had the first part of the Chase under control."

Last November, Brad Keselowski led 312 of 334 laps and was so close to a win to get one of the final four spots. But Johnson took the lead on the final restart , and Keselowski was eliminated the next week.

Johnson won at Texas in 2014 on the second attempt at a green-white finish, though his victory was overshadowed by the post-race melee between Jeff Gordon and Keselowski on pit road.

When the Chase championship was still determined by the final 10 races, Johnson regained the points lead by winning Texas and went on to win his sixth championship in 2013. That was a year after Johnson left Texas with a win and the lead over Keselowski, who ended rallied to win the 2012 season title.

Another win at Texas this weekend would take away the chance for another contender to automatically advance into one of the remaining three spots for a championship shot at Homestead. He finished fourth at Texas in April with damage to the nose of his car.

While it doesn't matter where Johnson finishes, his mindset is "exposure to the right pressure" and to keep trying to win. That applies to the driver on late restarts, crew chief Chad Knaus making strategy calls, or the pit crew going over the wall for stops.

"If they got the job done the week before, they're going to jump off the wall more comfortable and calmer, and can execute hopefully better on that stop at Homestead," Johnson said. "That's the stuff I want to keep my team engaged in, just to feel the pressure of competing for the win."

By a nose: Beholder upsets Songbird to win BC Distaff

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

ARCADIA, Calif. — Beholder edged Songbird by a nose to win the $2 million Distaff on opening day of the Breeders' Cup at Santa Anita, handing the 3-year-old filly her first loss in 12 races.

It was a thrilling finish to the four Cup races Friday, three of which involved New York-based long shots winning on an 80-degree day.

Nine Cup races will be run today, capped by the $6 million Classic in which California Chrome is the early favorite.

Ridden by Hall of Famer Gary Stevens, Beholder ran 1 1/8 miles in 1:49.20 and paid $8.60, $3.60 and $3 as the 3-1 third choice.

It was her third Cup victory, having won the Distaff in 2013 and the Juvenile Fillies in 2012. She was supposed to have run in last year's Classic at Keeneland against male horses, but developed a fever.

The Distaff was Beholder's final career race, ending on her home track, where she was never worse than second in 16 starts at Santa Anita. She finished with 18 career victories. The 6-year-old mare is a three-time Eclipse Award winner.

Songbird returned $3.20 and $2.80 as the even-money favorite under Hall of Famer Mike Smith. The loss spoiled her 11-0 career record.

"You saw the real Beholder show up today, maybe even the best race she ever ran in her life," Smith said, "and she had to do it to beat us."

When the win photo was shown on the video board, the announced crowd of 45,763 roared at the slight margin between Beholder and Songbird, who was along the rail with Beholder on her outside.

"Other than losing it was an amazing, amazing race," Smith said. "That much more and I'd have been the one hooraying."

Songbird set the pace through the early stages of the race, with I'm a Chatterbox and Beholder in close pursuit.

On the far turn, I'm a Chatterbox and Beholder both went after Songbird but by the top of the stretch it was a two-horse duel Beholder and the 3-year-old filly. They kept it up through the stretch, with neither horse willing to give an inch. Nor were their veteran jockeys: the 53-year-old Stevens and 51-year-old Smith.

"I put my head in front and Songbird came back again," Stevens said. "She put Songbird away three different times through the stretch, and she kept coming back, like she wouldn't go away."

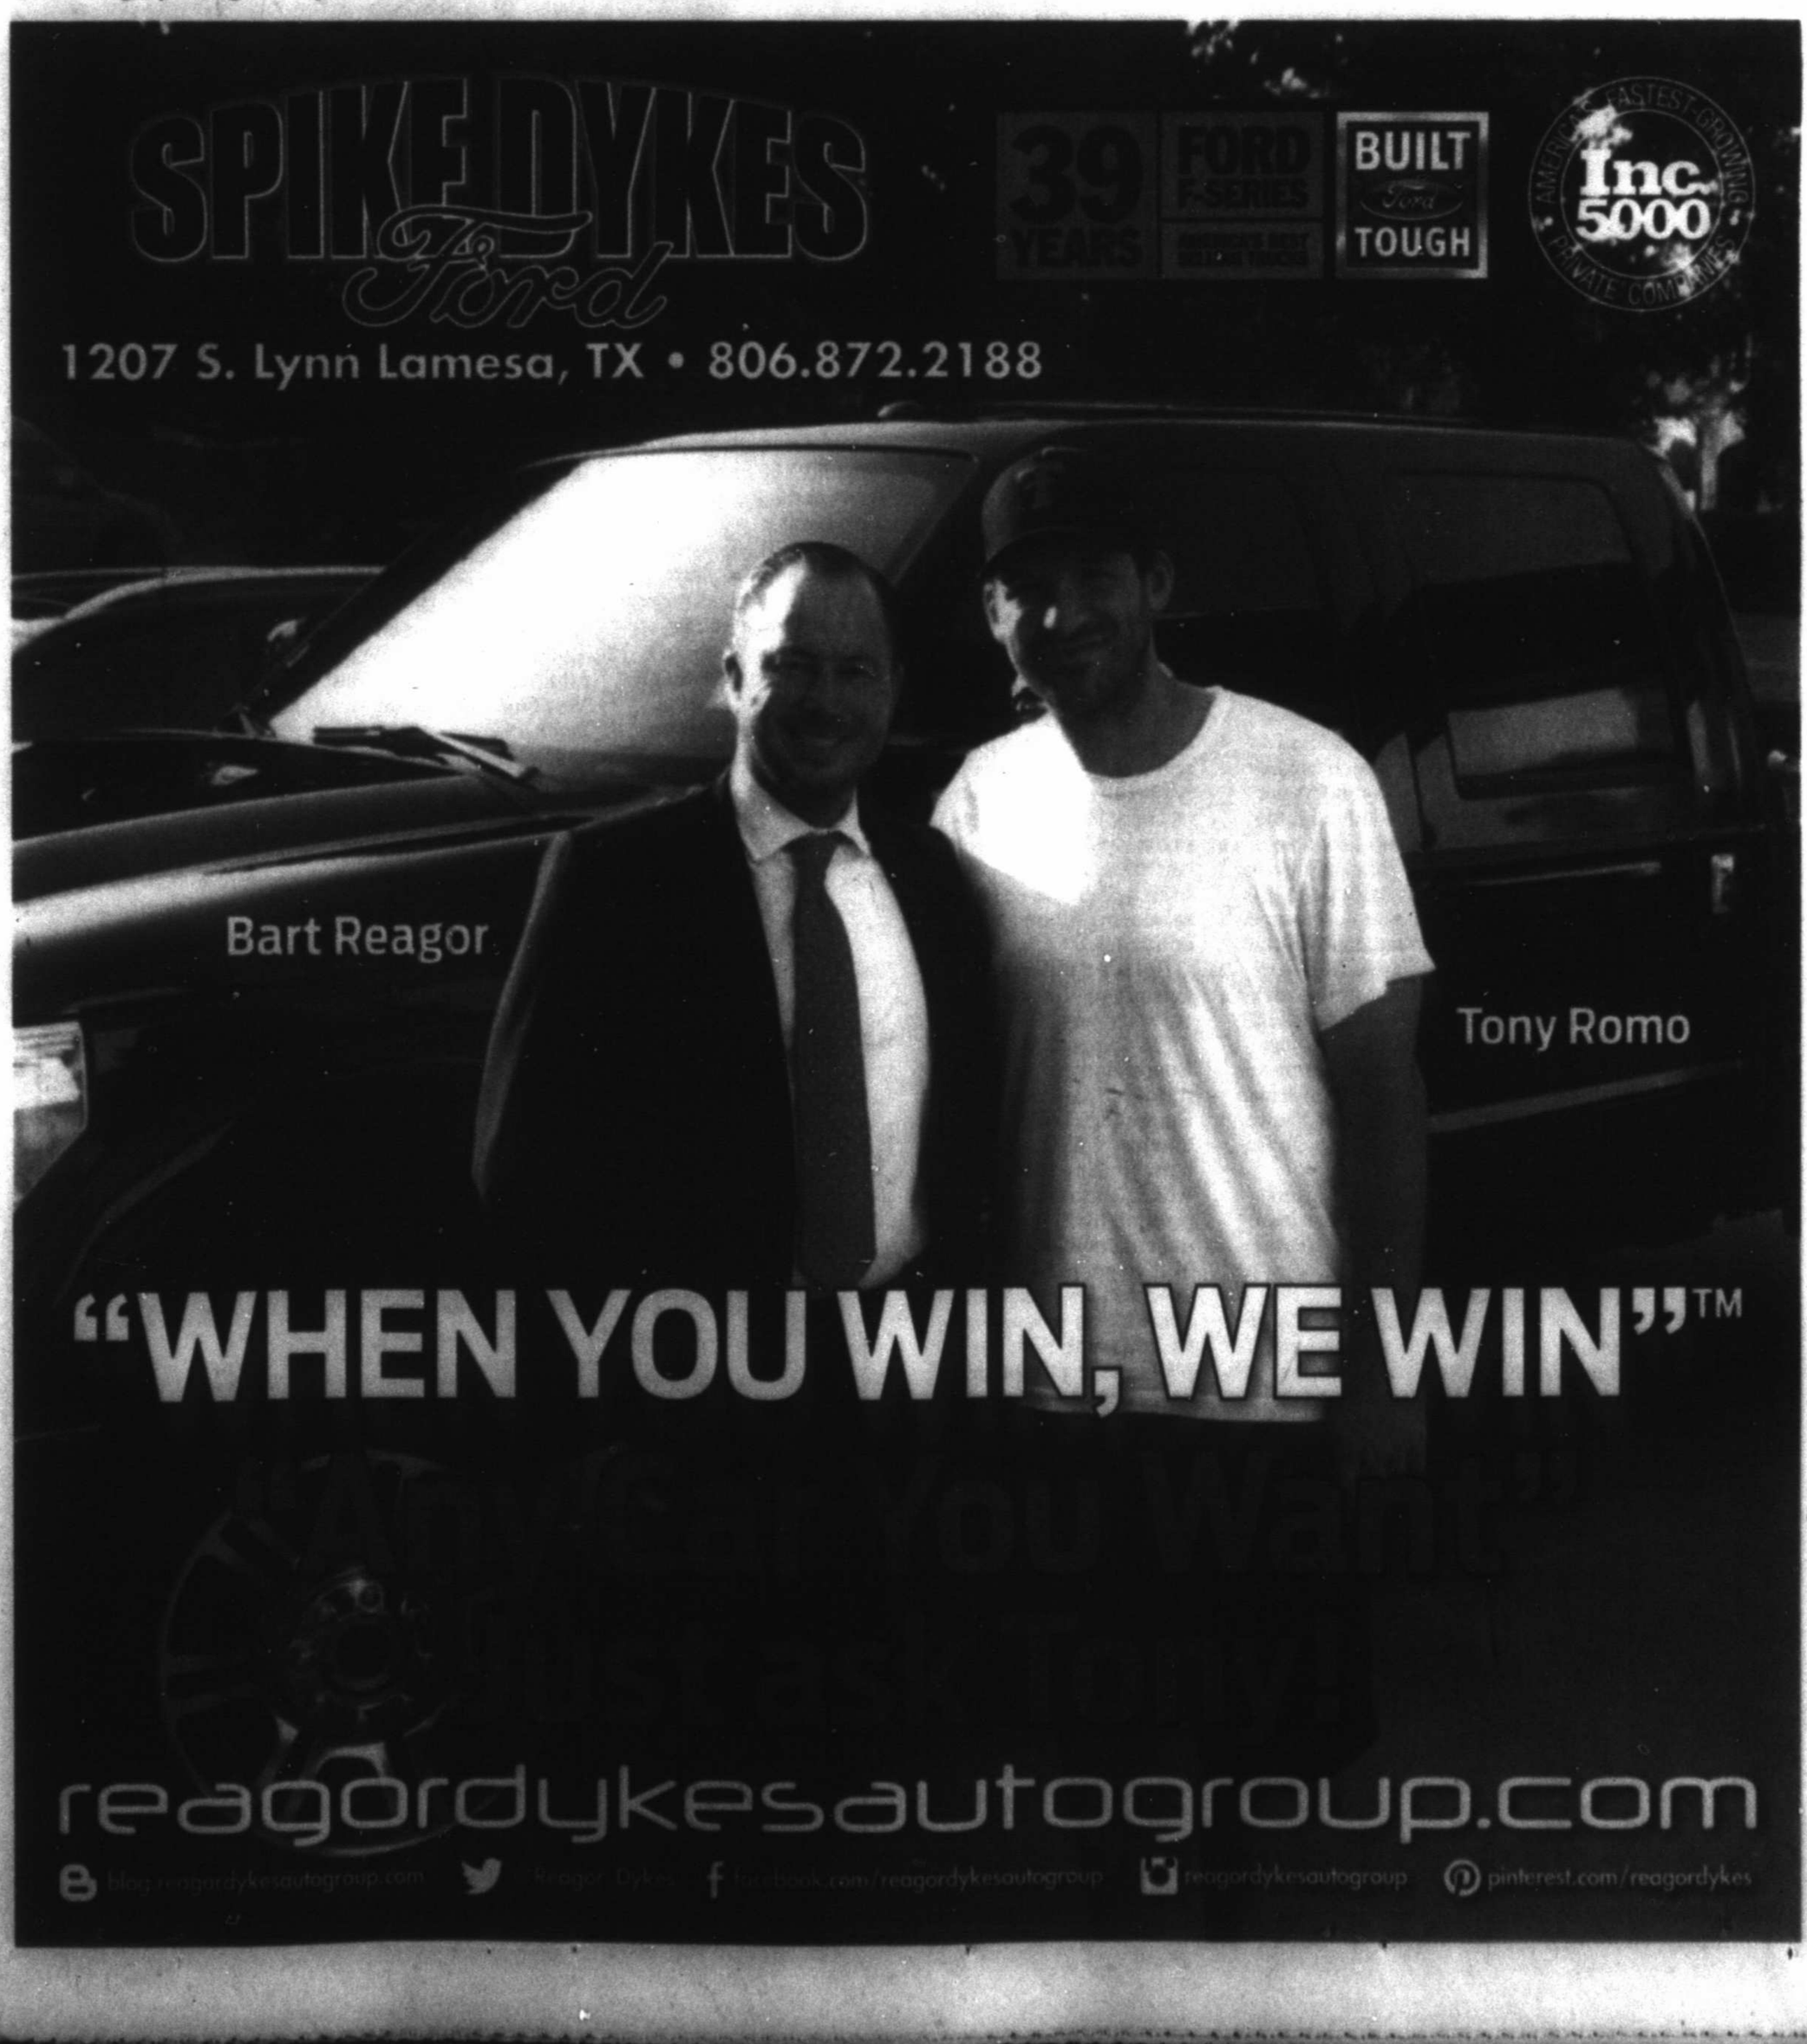
Smith thought he could put a length or two between his filly and Beholder when they got to the far turn.

"But, man, she jumped on me," he said of Beholder. "I couldn't do it."

Mandella earned his ninth career Cup victory, along with sharp farewell from Beholder.

"She kicked me on the way out," he said. "She's 90 percent of the time the sweetest thing you could find. The other 10 percent is dynamite."

Forever Unbridled was another 1 1/4 lengths back in third and paid $4.40 to show.



Youth football a defining issue with no easy answers

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

■ COMMENTARY

Kevin Turner started playing football when he was 5. If his father had it to do over again, he might've insisted that his son wait a few years before taking up the game he loved so much, the game that that would eventually turn his brain to mush and snuff out his life far too soon.

Turner

Tellingly, though, Raymond Turner wouldn't have prevented Kevin from playing football, even when looking at it from the most awful perspective of all: a parent who buried his child.

"I don't regret that he played football," Raymond Turner says. "I just wish he played in a safer way."

And that's the conundrum facing millions of football-loving parents across this country. Do they let their children play? And, if so, how old should their kids be when they first put on a helmet and pads?

There's no right and wrong in this debate but the stakes are enormously high, from the future of the game to the long-term health of those who play it.

While football is much safer now that it was when Kevin Turner took his first snap, it will always come with a significant risk of serious injury.

At Boston University on Thursday, experts said the former Alabama and NFL fullback had the most severe form of chronic traumatic encephalopathy they've ever seen in someone his age. Turner was 46 when he died in March from Lou Gehrig's disease, which robbed him of his body and was likely caused by CTE.

Now, on to the next stage in this debate.

Chris Nowinski, a founder of the Concussion Legacy Foundation, is leading the charge to keep young children from playing football, at least the blocking and tackling kind. He says Turner's death is just the latest in a persuasive body of evidence that kids should stick to flag football or seven-on-seven — essentially, a touch version without linemen — until they get to high school.

"This isn't about picking on football," Nowinski says. "I'm a football guy. But I'm very happy my mother kept me out until high school. I wanted to play earlier. I wanted to hang out with my buddies. I wanted to join the seventh-grade team. But she wouldn't let me."

Nowinski, who went on to play football at Harvard before a career in professional wrestling, said it only makes sense that someone who delays the start of their football career by nine years — from 5 to 14, roughly the time they're starting high school — will significantly reduce the risk of long-term health problems. And, since only a small percentage will keep going after high school, we can expect a whole generation of much healthier ex-players down the road.

"We have to accept that football is dangerous to the brain," Nowinski says. "It's like smoking and lung cancer. If you smoke fewer cigarettes per day and smoke for fewer years, the risk of cancer goes down. We can apply that same knowledge to football. If we shorten the years we take off the front end, and limit hits to the head through reforms like we've seen from the NFL to colleges to high schools ... then suddenly, the future is tremendously brighter for football players. That's what Kevin Turner taught us."

Jon Butler sees things differently. He's the executive director of Pop Warner, the nation's most prominent youth football organization, where kids can begin playing tackle football at age 5.

To its credit, Pop Warner has taken major steps in the last several years to reduce the risk of injury, such as limiting contact to no more than 25 percent of the practice time, requiring coaches to take part in programs design to teach safer tackling techniques, and prohibiting full-speed drills in which the players line up more than 3 yards apart. This year, kickoffs were eliminated for the three youngest age groups.

Butler says his organization has informally tossed around the idea of banning tackle football for young children, but found it would likely prompt nearly all players to simply leave for a non-Pop Warner-affiliated league that allows physical contact — and may not have many of the same safety measures.

Also, he stands by the value of teaching kids proper blocking and tackling techniques at a young age, insisting that makes the game safer as they get older.

"Flag football is fine as far as learning the techniques to be a quarterback or running back or wife receiver," Butler says. "But if you end up being a lineman ... you're not learning much of anything. Blocking and tackling techniques need to become instinctive and intuitive."

Both Nowinski and Butler make a compelling case, one that should be debated in the privacy of every household where parents are faced with this potentially life-altering decision.

Even then, it doesn't get a whole lot easier.

Dr. Wayne Gordon, director of the Mount Sinai Brain Injury Research Center, said there is no definitive proof of when a young brain is at its most vulnerable state. He described the idea of banning kids from playing tackle football until they get to high school as "a pretty arbitrary cutoff."

Then he was asked if children of any age should be allowed to play football.

"Obviously, kids want to have fun," Gordon says, measuring his words. "But they don't need to tackle in order to have fun. So I would basically not let children play tackle football."

This could be one of the defining issues of our times.

Unfortunately, there are no easy answers.

NFL begins recognition of the military this month

Associated Press

The NFL has begun its recognition of the military this month, including nominees for the "Salute to Service" award.

The award, presented by USAA, a leading insurance and financial services provider for current and former members of the military, veterans and their families, will recognize a league member who demonstrates " exemplary commitment to honoring and supporting the military community."

Among the nominees is Seahawks wide receiver Jermaine Kearse, who grew up on a military base near Seattle. Kearse recently launched the 15 to 1: The Jermaine Kearse Foundation, to support and inspire youth in military families.

"Being nominated by the Seahawks for the Salute to Service award is an honor and reinforces the importance of supporting our military," Kearse says. "It's important to me because I grew up in a military family. Think about it, your parent gets deployed, and it's a constant guessing game: Is my mom or dad going to come back? That's real life.

"This stuff we're doing here (playing in the NFL), this is cool, but when I think about that, what those kids are going through. That's real life for these people."

The other nominees: Arizona's Deone Buccanon; Atlanta's Dan Quinn; Baltimore's Steve Smith; Buffalo's Richie Incognito; Carolina's Ron Rivera; Chicago's Jerrell Freeman; Cincinnati's Kyle Caskey; Cleveland's Joe Thomas; Dallas' Darren Woodson; Denver's DeMarcus Ware; Detroit's Golden Tate; Green Bay's Tom Bakken (assistant equipment manager); Houston's Brian Cushing; Indianapolis' Pat McAfee; Jacksonville's Blake Bortles; Kansas City's Derrick Johnson; Los Angeles' Jeff Fisher; Miami's Jamie Quadrozzi (game entertainment manager); Minnesota's Jeff Locke; New England's Joe Cardona; New Orleans' Drew Brees; Giants' Mike Sullivan; Jets' Eric Decker; Oakland's Jon Condo; Philadelphia's Don Smolenski (team president); Pittsburgh Alejandro Villanueva; San Diego's Sean Lissemore; San Francisco's Garrett Celek; Tampa Bay's Clinton McDonald; Tennessee's Stormi Wagley (alumni cheerleader); and Washington's Derrick Dockery.

Buccaneers receiver Vincent Jackson was last year's award recipient.

ROBY'S BIG WEEK: Broncos cornerback Bradley Roby has been getting a lot of love lately.

First, he received the NFLPA's Community MVP award for his community work, then he won the AFC defensive player of the week award for his performance Sunday against San Diego when he started in place of an injured Aqib Talib.

"For me to be honored off the field and then be honored on the field was kind of special to me," Roby said. "I think that's the kind of a real life example that when I do things with good intentions in the community, sometimes you get rewarded for stuff like that on the field, as well.

"I'm living right is really what it comes down to."

Roby was honored by the players' union after hosting a family fun night while raising money for academic achievement programs.

Then, making his first start of the season, he had seven tackles, broke up two passes and had a 49-yard interception return for a touchdown in Denver's 27-19 win over the Chargers.

STAYING WIDE: The Green Bay Packers have been known in recent years for playing receivers in the backfield. The wrinkle is even more important this season with so many injuries at running back.

But don't look for Jordy Nelson lining up alongside Aaron Rodgers any time soon.

"We're in deep, deep trouble," Nelson joked this week when asked if there was a package for him to get snaps in the backfield.

Randall Cobb has lined up in the backfield at times. Ty Montgomery has excelled in the role this season. They're shorter receivers who can create plays in traffic.

The 6-foot-3 Nelson is a favorite target for Rodgers in the red zone, tied for the league lead with six receiving touchdowns.

Maybe one day though, Nelson could try his hand at a trick play.

AWESOME AJAYI: Dolphins running back Jay Ajayi rushed for 187 yards in 2015 as a rookie. Hardly the precursor to what he has done in his last two games.

Ajayi enters Sunday's matchup with the Jets — and their staunch run defense — coming off consecutive 200-yard rushing performances. He went for 204 yards on 25 carries in a win over Pittsburgh, and followed that with 214 on 29 rushes against Buffalo in another victory. Then Miami had its bye.

He also could join Pro Football Hall of Famers O.J. Simpson (647 yards) and Walter Payton (604) as the only players in NFL history to rush for 600 yards in a three-game span. Ajayi has 418 yards.

Revis Island has become a popular destination

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

Revis Island has become a popular destination.

Ignoring Richard Sherman, Josh Norman, Patrick Peterson and Aqib Talib, and Chris Harris Jr. is a thing of the past.

Opposing quarterbacks and offensive coordinators no longer are sacrificing the portion of the field patrolled by star cornerbacks. And we're not only talking about teams with outstanding receivers such as the Falcons (Julio Jones), Bengals (A.J. Green) and Giants (Odell Beckham Jr.).

Just about everyone is willing to attack the "shutdown" guys these days, though in a limited capacity.

"There are only certain routes you are going to throw against these guys," says former standout defensive back Herm Edwards, who also was a successful coach before heading to the ESPN studios. "Sometimes you get the matchup of the best receivers on a guy you can't stay away from, the No 1 guy. You can't ignore that side (of the field) all day long.

"The rules of the game really have given the offense an advantage, especially with pass interference. Now, with the back-shoulder throw that has become a staple of the passing game, you have something to use against them. If they play a lot of bump-and-run coverage, and you go at these guys, you can attack them in a technique they might be vulnerable at.

"But you have to find certain situations and plays where there are opportunities. You're not going to make a steady diet of it."

Although the rock-star CBs certainly want you to come their way.

"I welcome it. I welcome every challenge," says Norman, 2015 All-Pro who has struggled with penalties and has been kept plenty busy this season, his first with Washington. "If you throw the ball (at me) you're only feeding the beast. I enjoy those challenges because I get excited. I'm playing the game. Sitting over there and not playing the game is boring. I don't like it. ... Not throwing the ball, I've got to find something else to do."

No boredom this year. According to Football Outsiders, which tracks how often defenders are targeted — although the numbers can't fully account for zone defenses or for passes behind the line of scrimmage — Norman has been targeted 42 times in eight games. Revis, once the measuring stick for cornerbacks but clearly on the decline now, has been thrown at 33 times in eight games. For Sherman, it's 39, and for the Denver pair: 39 for Harris, 36 for Talib.

Tennessee CB Jason McCourty has been challenged the most, 50 times.

Against the Broncos, it's pretty much impossible to avoid testing Harris or Talib, unless teams want to simply throw to the backs and tight ends all day. Does anyone think the Raiders this Sunday will shut down Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree in their aerial games so they can avoid Harris and Talib?

One strategy, relatively but not entirely new in the NFL that teams employ to throw off cornerbacks is the back-shoulder throw. Edwards says that has become a dynamic weapon when performed accurately.

"It used to be that the hardest thing to cover was underthrown balls," Edwards explains. "Then coaches began to think, 'So why not start throwing back-shoulder fades? When the quarterback and the receiver have that chemistry going, this is that option can't be stopped."

Edwards notes that the best cornerbacks also can move inside to cover a slot receiver, which is especially useful when Beckham or Larry Fitzgerald lines up in that spot. So an offense can't necessarily get away from a Sherman or Harris by moving around a Green or a Jones.

But it's a different world inside, even for the top coverage guys.

"In Tampa, we had Ronde Barber," says Edwards, an assistant with the Bucs under Tony Dungy. "I told him, 'We're going to train you as a nickel guy, which is the most difficult position for a guy used to being outside to play.' You've got to be a really good tackler; you become a linebacker in a sense in the run game. You not only play man to man but also play zone and have to be able to blitz. If all you ever play with a cornerback in there is man to man, it is a disadvantage.

"Remember, a receiver can motion wherever, run wherever he wants to on the field, you can't get your hands on the guy and there is a lot of room. When you are a corner, you are playing to the boundary, which is your friend."

Edwards points to Charles Woodson and Ronnie Lott as two greats who made the transition from cornerback to safety, something he could see 10-year veteran Revis doing at some point.

For now, Revis, who has allowed 12.4 yards per completion, second-highest in the NFL behind Buffalo's Stephon Gilmore's 12.5, is staying put. So are Sherman, Norman, et al.

Talib would have it no other way.

"I've been in the league for nine years," he says. "It's nothing new, I've been getting interceptions and I still get balls thrown at me. That's just the NFL."

Chicago Cubs celebrate at massive rally

By Carla K. Johnson and Caryn Rousseau
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs catcher David Ross posed for a selfie Friday in front of a multitude of roaring fans in the city's Grant Park during a rally honoring the club's first World Series title in 108 years.

Ross and the other players sang "Go Cubs Go" from the stage along with the blissed-out crowd. "It happened, baby. It happened!" proclaimed infielder Anthony Rizzo to adoring cheers.

Team manager Joe Maddon — wearing a stocking cap, sunglasses and a jersey over a "We didn't suck" T-shirt — looked out over a sea of blue.

"Welcome to Cubstock 2016!" Maddon said. "This is an incredible moment for all of us. Never have I experienced anything like Wrigley Field on a nightly basis. ... I want to congratulate you fans also. Thank you for being so patient."

The victory party, which included a parade earlier in the day, is new territory for long-suffering fans of the Cubs, who hadn't won a World Series title in more than a century before their Game 7, extra-inning thriller Wednesday night in Cleveland. The last time the Cubs even reached the Fall Classic was in 1945.

City officials said an estimated 5 million people attended the celebration — a count that included everyone who lined the parade route and the crowd at Grant Park.

Miriam Santiago, 51, said she carried holy water, her rosary and a bright green lucky baseball with her during the playoffs. On Friday, she brought a goat mask with dynamite in its mouth and let other fans pose for photos wearing it outside Wrigley Field. She said she believes her lucky charms helped reverse the Curse of the Billy Goat, the story of a Chicago tavern owner who supposedly put a hex on the Cubs after the team refused to let his pet goat into Wrigley Field during the 1945 World Series.

Before the rally, throngs of young and old blue-clad fans roared as the motorcade of open-roofed buses carrying the players cruised along Lake Shore Drive. The mood was jubilant, bolstered by an unseasonably warm and sunny November day and clear blue skies.

Vendors hawked pennants and shirts, and selfie-taking teens tried to capture the crowds. Many just beamed.

Retiree Jarvis Moffett, 60, arrived at the lakefront park hours ahead of the rally just to take in the atmosphere.

"I'm an old-school Cubs fan," he said, gesturing to the sky and crowds. "This is what you live for. It doesn't get any better."

Steve Angelo carried his 4-year-old son, Nicholas, on his shoulders. The pair wore matching jerseys for first baseman Anthony Rizzo.

"The more and more they win now, at his earlier age, the more and more excitement there is," Angelo said.

Atop the double-decker buses, some Cubs players posed together for photographs, while others held their children and sat with their families. Center fielder Dexter Fowler had a cigar as the team headed toward the rally that some fans have called the "celebration of a century."

Fans packed morning commuter trains, causing delays despite increased service and capacity, to get downtown and find a viewing spot before the festivities began.

Laurie Winter woke up at 4 a.m. so she and her 2-year-old son, Cooper, could come in from the suburb of South Elgin and be among the fans outside Wrigley Field to see the players.

"I think everyone is excited about where this team is going," Winter said. "We can't wait to see them come out and get crazy."

The parade wound through downtown and ended roughly 7 miles south in Grant Park, where the rally started in the early afternoon. The city also dyed the Chicago River a bright shade of blue to match the Cubs' colors, repurposing a decades-long tradition of dying the river green on St. Patrick's Day.

Friday was already a scheduled day off for Chicago Public Schools and Illinois Gov. Bruce Rauner declared Friday as "World Champion Chicago Cubs Day" statewide.

Pacquiao fights Jessie Vargas in bout that's a tough sell

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The hook for Manny Pacquiao's latest fight is that he's the fighting politician, as eager to take on problems in the Philippines as he is to take on other welterweights in the ring.

Unfortunately for Pacquiao, at this stage of his career he needs a hook to sell his fights.

Pacquiao meets a likable but relatively unknown Jessie Vargas on Saturday, with a piece of the welterweight title at stake. In the past that might have been enough to excite boxing fans, but Pacquiao is aging and so is his appeal.

He probably should have retired after not showing up for the biggest fight of his life against Floyd Mayweather Jr. He certainly should have retired after getting elected to the senate in the Philippines, where he's an ally of President Rodrigo Duterte.

Yet he plods on, partly because he reportedly needs the money. He got a few million dollars to fight Timothy Bradley in April but is fighting on percentages against Vargas, so the sales pitch is necessary.

Pacquiao's longtime trainer, Freddie Roach, held out the possibility this week of a rematch with Mayweather, saying he has been told that Mayweather has been back in the ring sparring recently. But the first fight took five years to make and it seems a stretch to think Mayweather would come out of retirement to fight Pacquiao once again.

Still, Roach says he's convinced Pacquiao has one or two more big fights left in him.

"Manny's like the old Manny now," Roach insisted after spending a month training Pacquiao in the Philippines. "I like this Manny a lot."

To Pacquiao's credit he did look re-energized in April when he beat Bradley in the third fight between the two men. It was his first fight since losing to Mayweather, a loss he blamed on a bad shoulder that has since been surgically repaired.

But the fight with Vargas is a tough sell, which is why promoter Bob Arum stacked the undercard with competitive fights and is selling tickets for as little as $50. Arum is also selling the pay-per-view himself after HBO declined to take part in the distribution of the fight, and Pacquiao's purse will largely depend on how well it does.

"Anything north of 600,000 buys would be a big night and he'd make a lot of money," Arum said. "I'm hoping he makes money like the Manny of old."

Arum, of course, is way overestimating what the fight will do, but his job as Pacquiao's promoter is to get people interested. Since Vargas is not well known, it's a difficult sell even with an attractive undercard.

Pacquiao is taking a familiar path for an aging fighter, trying to squeeze a few more fights in before finally hanging up his gloves. He's got the right to fight whoever he wants, but fight fans also have the right to vote with their wallets on the matchup.

"He is a champion (Vargas holds the WBO version of the welterweight title) so you can't underestimate him," Pacquiao said. "But I still feel fresh and young."

Vargas will be fighting in his home town and is taller than Pacquiao. He's also full of confidence after stopping Sadam Ali in March for the WBO version of the 147-pound title.

Texas Tech quarterback Patrick Mahomes II (5) scores a touchdown on a running play in overtime against TCU on Oct. 29 in Fort Worth.

Red Raiders will need another strong defensive performance vs. Texas

Texas Tech coach Kliff Kingsbury attributed a change in attitude as to why the Red Raider defense rose up to the occasion in a 27-24 double overtime win over TCU last weekend.

After weeks of getting torched by opponents, believe it or not, the Red Raiders' defense played a big part in the key road win, as they forced the Horned Frogs to settle for field goals attempts. TCU missed two of those makeable attempts and got a third blocked in the second OT.

"You sit around all week and hear things and either get pissed off and do something about it or you pout and get worse," Kingsbury said. "And I think they got mad and took it personal and wanted to prove that they could improve, and they definitely showed improvement."

The Red Raiders (4-4, 2-3 in Big 12) will need another strong effort out of their defense at 11 a.m. today when they host rival Texas (4-4, 2-3) in a big game for both teams. The game will be broadcast on Fox Sports 1.

While true freshman Shane Buechele has had a fine first season as the starting quarterback and has finally given Texas a quarterback they can build and win with, Tech's biggest concern should be junior running back D'Onta Foreman.

Foreman has almost quietly had a very big year for the 'Horns, rushing for 1,105 yards, including a 250-yard, two-touchdown performance in last week's 35-34 win over then-unbeaten Baylor.

It's no secret that run defense has not been a strong point for the Red Raiders. In fact, Tech's run defense ranks 105th in NCAA Division I, allowing an average of 213.8 rushing yards per game. And it's not like Texas' run defense is that much better, as the Longhorns rank 98th with 203.4 yards per game.

Could it be that these two teams might actually grind it out on the turf of Jones AT&T Stadium today? It's doubtful, but the Red Raiders have to be on alert after getting gashed by Chris Warren (currently injured) in last year's game in Austin.

"They're going to try to pound the ball and be real physical," said Tech senior defensive back Justis Nelson of what he expects out of the UT offense. "They have size for sure. They have talent at every position, but you know they're probably going to come here and try and run the ball and we gotta be prepared for that."

Foreman said it's going to be important for his team to be prepared as well.

"I went in and watched some film this week, just trying to make sure I know what (the Red Raiders) are going to do," he said. "We just have to prepare right. I know they are going to have a hostile crowd. I went there my freshman year and I got hit with like two or three tortillas, so I'm ready for that. It's going to be fun

No. 13 Baylor, TCU all tied up in 117-year-old series

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

WACO — The longest-played series for both No. 13 Baylor and TCU really can't get any tighter.

Going into their 112th meeting today, the Bears have won 52 times — and the Horned Frogs have won 52 times. Their other seven matchups have ended in ties, including a scoreless game in their inaugural meeting in 1899.

Things haven't changed much since the old Southwest Conference rivals reunited in the Big 12 four years ago. They have split those four games, and the last three have been decided by a combined 13 points.

While TCU (4-4, 2-3 Big 12) is still trying to get bowl eligible, the Bears (6-1, 3-1) are still in control of their Big 12 fate despite coming off their first loss of the season.

"It's a hard thing to get over a loss, but I think that we're determined to get back to the winning record," Baylor linebacker Aiavion Edwards said. "I think that the loss won't change much, and we're going to be a very determined team coming into this week."

Baylor quarterback Seth Russell has been cleared to play after having to go through concussion protocol early in the week. He started feeling nauseated at dinner after the 35-34 loss at Texas, where he took plenty of hits while running a career-high 21 times and getting sacked six times — he had been sacked only three times combined in the first six games.

"I don't think we took a step back at all," center Kyle Fuller said. "We played very physical football and that was really the whole point of that game."

No. 7 Texas A&M readies for Mississippi St, Fitzgerald

By David Brandt
Associated Press

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Mississippi State's Nick Fitzgerald had one of the most productive performances for a quarterback in SEC history last weekend.

But those 417 yards passing, 119 yards rushing and seven total touchdowns came with a bit of a caveat: The game was against lower-level Samford, which plays in the Football Championship Subdivision.

Still, it was a performance that got the attention of Texas A&M coach Kevin Sumlin.

"Anybody in this league — I don't care who you're playing — who can throw for 400 and rush for 100 as a quarterback who's that big, you'd better start preparing for all kinds of stuff," Sumlin said. "Because he can spin it, he can put it down and run it and he's a load when he runs."

No. 7 Texas A&M (7-1, 4-1 Southeastern Conference, No. 4 CFP) travels to face Mississippi State (3-5, 1-3) on Saturday. Sumlin said figuring out a way to at least slow down Fitzgerald is paramount.

The 6-foot-5, 230-pound Fitzgerald has been inconsistent this season, but has had some really good moments like the Samford game. Sumlin said he sees a quarterback who is improving quickly.

"It's another one of those deals where you get later in the season and quarterbacks who are young and inexperienced are starting to see more things and they're getting better," Sumlin said.

Texas A&M would seem to be better equipped than most when it comes to slowing down an imposing quarterback.

TOP 25 CAPSULES

No. 7 Texas A&M (7-1, 4-1 SEC, No. 4 CFP) at Mississippi State (3-5, 1-3), 11 a.m., SEC Network
Line: Texas A&M by 13 1/2.
Series Record: Texas A&M leads 5-4.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Texas A&M is still in the hunt for the SEC's Western Division and very much in the discussion for the national playoffs after being slotted at No. 4 in the first college football playoff rankings. Mississippi State could use a marquee win in a season that's been full of disappointing losses.
KEY MATCHUP: Texas A&M's defensive line vs. Mississippi State QB Nick Fitzgerald. The Aggies have some of the best defensive linemen in the nation, including ends Myles Garrett and Daeshon Hall. They'll be trying to get to Fitzgerald early and often. Fitzgerald has been inconsistent, but has also had a few huge games this year, including last Saturday when he threw for 417 yards passing and ran for 119 more yards in a win over Samford.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Texas A&M: QB Trevor Knight. The graduate transfer has been very good for the Aggies this season, throwing for 1,868 yards and 13 touchdowns while also running for 529 yards and nine touchdowns.
Mississippi State: WR Donald Gray. The Bulldogs' second-leading receiver had a breakout game against Samford last week, catching four passes for 207 yards and three touchdowns.

TCU (4-4, 2-3 Big 12) at No. 13 Baylor (6-1, 3-1, No. 17 CFP), 2:30 p.m. (Fox)
Line: Baylor by 8.
Series record: Tied 52-52-7.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Baylor's playoffs hopes are in bad shape after its first loss, but the Bears still control their fate for a third Big 12 title in four seasons. TCU has consecutive losses for the first time since 2013, and needs two wins for bowl eligibility.
KEY MATCHUP: Baylor's rushing game vs. TCU defense. The Bears have more yards rushing than passing with the RB trio of Terrance Williams, Shock Linwood and JaMycal Hasty, and QB Seth Russell. All four average 6 yards per carry, and Baylor piles up 299 yards per game on the ground. TCU gives up less than half that — 147 yards rushing per game.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
TCU: LB Travin Howard leads the Big 12 with 88 tackles overall. He is averaging 12.8 tackles per game, and has at least 10 in each of the last five games.
Baylor: CB Ryan Reid has three interceptions the last two games, matching his career total his previous 36 games. His 29 career starts are tied with Linwood, the school's career rushing leader, for third-most on the team.

Kansas (1-7, 0-5 Big 12) at No. 14 West Virginia (6-1, 3-1, No. 20 CFP), 6 p.m. (ESPN2)
Line: West Virginia by 34 1/2.
Series Record: West Virginia leads 4-1.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: The Mountaineers must regroup after their first loss at Oklahoma State and get motivated to take on the Jayhawks. Kansas has lost 17 straight Big 12 games and 39 consecutive road contests.
KEY MATCHUP: Kansas DE Dorance Armstrong vs. West Virginia's offensive line. The sophomore has at least one sack in six straight games, a streak he shares with Alabama's Tim Williams for the longest in the nation. He leads the Big 12 with 12 tackles for loss. West Virginia's veteran line allowed four sacks against Oklahoma State.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Kansas: WR Steven Sims. The sophomore is averaging five catches per game and has scored five touchdowns. He has three 100-yard receiving games this season.
West Virginia: QB Skyler Howard. Howard has been efficient most of the season but lost a fumble and threw two interceptions that led to 17 points for Oklahoma State. A year ago against Kansas he threw for 133 yards and a TD and ran for 129 yards and another score in a 49-0 win.

No. 5 Louisville (7-1, 5-1 ACC, No. 7 CFP) at Boston College (4-4, 1-4), 11 a.m. (ESPN2)
Line: Louisville by 24 1/2.
Series record: Louisville leads 5-3.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Louisville is still in need of help from Clemson to get back into the ACC title game and College Football Playoff picture, but the Cardinals also could use a dominating performance after squeaking by at Virginia last week. Boston College is hoping to carry over some momentum after picking up its first ACC win since 2014 last week.
KEY MATCHUP: Louisville and Heisman Trophy candidate Lamar Jackson pit an offense ranked No. 1 in the nation in scoring offense (50 ppg) and total offense (603.2 ypg) against a Boston College defense ranked No. 1 in the ACC and seventh nationally in total defense, allowing just 298.5 yards per contest.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Louisville: It begins and ends with Jackson, who enters the game with 3,520 yards of total offense on the season to go with 38 total touchdowns (22 passing, 16 rushing). He is 4 yards short of becoming the first quarterback in school history to rush for 1,000 yards in a season.
Boston College: DE Harold Landry is putting up some of the best numbers of his Eagles' career this season. He currently is tied for the national lead in sacks with nine, and also is tied for the NCAA lead with five forced fumbles.

No. 4 Washington (8-0, 5-0 Pac-12, No. 5 CFP) at California (4-4, 2-3), 6:30 p.m. (ESPN)
Line: Washington by 17.
Series record: Washington leads 52-39-4.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: The Huskies have little room for slipups if they want to remain in position for a playoff berth. The Golden Bears look to beat a ranked team for a third time in a season for the first time since 2002 and move one step closer to bowl eligibility.
KEY MATCHUP: Washington secondary vs. Cal WRs. The Huskies CB Sidney Jones leads a strong secondary with a Pac-12 beat 14 pass breakups. The DBs will have a tough task this week. Freshmen Demetris Robertson and Melquise Stovall each had nine catches last week and Chad Hansen (9.8 catches per game) could be back after missing two games with an ankle injury.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Washington: WR Dante Pettis. Pettis broke a school record with his fifth career punt return for TD last week to provide the winning margin at Utah. Pettis has brought two punts back for scores this season and also has 29 catches for 470 yards and eight TDs.
California: QB Davis Webb. Webb has been busy this season, leading the nation in pass attempts (415) and ranking second with 29 TD passes and third with 259 completions.

No. 8 Wisconsin (6-2, 3-2 Big Ten, No. 8 CFP) at Northwestern (4-4, 3-2), 11 a.m. (ABC)
Line: Wisconsin by 6 1/2.
Series record: Wisconsin leads 57-35-5.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Wisconsin moved back into the Top 10 after beating then-No. 7 Nebraska 23-17 in overtime last week and is trying to catch the Cornhuskers for the Big Ten West lead. The Badgers are one of four teams in the division one game back at 3-2 in conference play. That group includes Northwestern, which nearly pulled off an upset at Ohio State last week. The Wildcats lost 24-20 after they had to settle for a late field goal after driving to the 3.
KEY MATCHUP: Wisconsin QBs Alex Hornibrook and Bart Houston vs. Northwestern front seven. Wisconsin has been going with a two-QB system in recent weeks to give the offense a change of pace, with Hornibrook starting over the more mobile Houston.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Wisconsin: LB Ryan Connelly. He was selected Big Ten co-Defensive Player of the Week for an 11-tackle performance against Nebraska. Connelly is helping fill in for leading tackler Jack Cichy, who is out for the year with a torn pectoral muscle.
Northwestern: QB Clayton Thorson. Thorson has thrown for at least 250 yards the past three games and is third in the Big Ten in passing (242.8). WR Austin Carr. The conference's leading receiver, he had eight catches for 158 yards against Ohio State.

No. 1 Alabama (8-0, 5-0 SEC, No. 1 CFP) at No. 15 LSU (5-2, 3-1, No. 13 CFP), 7 p.m. (CBS)
Line: Alabama by 7.
Series record: Tied 50-25-5.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Despite a dominant first eight games, Alabama could lose control of the SEC West with a loss in Death Valley, where the Crimson Tide has needed late heroics to win in its past two visits. LSU can move into a tie for first in the division and vault itself back into the College Football Playoff conversation with a win.
KEY MATCHUP: Alabama's dominant defense, which has accounted for nine TDs on interceptions or fumble returns and ranks fourth nationally, against an LSU offense, which has averaged 41.7 points per game since Orgeron replaced Les Miles in late September.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Alabama: DL Jonathan Allen's 24 career sacks ranks third all-time at Alabama. The menacing, 6-foot-3, 291-pound Allen's six sacks, two fumble recoveries, blocked kick and 35 solo or assisted tackles have even made him one of few defensive players to generate some Heisman Trophy hype.
LSU: RB Leonard Fournette, sidelined three games this season by a nagging ankle injury, returned with a vengeance from a two-game absence in LSU's previous game.

No. 9 Nebraska (7-1, 4-1 Big Ten, No. 10 CFP) at No. 6 Ohio State (7-1, 4-1, N0. CFP), 7 p.m. (ABC)
Line: Ohio State by 15 1/2.
Series record: Ohio State leads 3-1.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Two of Big Ten's top teams are in the running for the conference title and a spot in the College Football Playoff, and a second loss for either will all but destroy those hopes. Nebraska is trying to avoid a second straight defeat, and Ohio State hopes to get its sputtering offense back on track after a narrow escape against Northwestern last week.
KEY MATCHUP: Nebraska QB Tommy Armstrong Jr. vs. Ohio State defense. Armstrong, who has scored seven TDs rushing and passed for 11, holds a slew of school records and is among the Big Ten's offensive leaders. The Buckeyes, ranked sixth in the FBS in total defense, will need to tighten up after allowing 406 yards to Northwestern.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Nebraska: S Nate Gerry. With four interceptions this season — including two in the fourth quarter against Wisconsin last week — Gerry is within one pick of the Nebraska school record. He's second on the team in total tackles with 50.
Ohio State: H-back Curtis Samuel. One of the team's most dynamic playmakers, Samuel is utilized as a running back and a receiver.

No. 22 Oklahoma State (6-2, 4-1 Big 12, No. 18 CFP) at Kansas State (5-3, 3-2), Saturday 2:30 p.m. (ABC/ESPN2)
Line: Kansas State by 2 1/2.
Series record: Oklahoma State leads 38-24
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Oklahoma State controls its own destiny in the Big 12 because it still has to play Oklahoma, the only remaining unbeaten team in league play. The Wildcats are likely out of title contention, but another win makes them bowl eligible, and two more would give 77-year-old coach Bill Snyder his 200th.
KEY MATCHUP: Prolific passer Mason Rudolph, who directs the Cowboys' often potent offense, against Kansas State's defense. Rudolph has already thrown for 2,532 yards with 17 touchdowns and just two picks, but he will be going against arguebly the Big 12's best defense — one that mostly shut down West Virginia and Texas.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Oklahoma State: Rudolph's favorite target is James Washington. The junior WR has 43 catches for 857 yards and six touchdowns this season, and is coming off a 117-yard receiving effort in last week's win over the Mountaineers.
Kansas State: QB Jesse Ertz needs to be able to put up points for the Wildcats. Sure, their defense should be able to keep them in the game, but Oklahoma State's propensity for high-scoring affairs means that Ertz will need to match the Cowboys at some point in the game.

Syracuse (4-4, 2-2 ACC) at No. 3 Clemson (8-0, 5-0, No. 2 CFP), 2:30 p.m. (ABC/ESPN2)
Line: Clemson by 28 1/2.
Series record: Clemson leads 3-1.
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Clemson's undefeated season and run at a national championship. The Tigers hold a commanding lead, plus about all the tiebreakers, in the ACC Atlantic. A loss could be a detour on the way to the College Football Playoff. Clemson has won 43 straight games against non-ranked opponents. Syracuse is seeking another signature win — it defeated ACC Coastal leader Virginia Tech earlier this season — in coach Dino Babers first season.
KEY MATCHUP: Syracuse QB Eric Dungey against Clemson's pass defense. Dungey leads the ACC with more than 328 yards passing a game this season while the Tigers are the league's stingiest team against the pass at 181 yards a game.
PLAYERS TO WATCH:
Syracuse: WR Amba Etta-Tawo leads the ACC with eight catches and 131 yards a game. Should be an emotional time for the Orange receivers since his older brother, Etta, was a rising defensive lineman at Clemson until a medical condition caused him to give up football.
Clemson: QB Deshaun Watson seems to be giving the Tigers exactly what they need when they need it most.

TEXAS A&M

From 1C

The Aggies' formidable defensive line, which includes Myles Garrett and Daeshon Hall, has combined for 18 quarterback hurries and 19 tackles for loss so far this season.

"Those guys can just cause havoc up front with a bunch of potential NFL players and possibly first rounders or first picks in the draft," Mullen said. "You see why they are one of the top teams in America."

Some other things to watch when Texas A&M travels to Mississippi State:

DONALD'S BIG DAY: Fitzgerald's big day passing against Samford led to some big numbers for his receivers. Donald Gray caught four passes for 207 yards and three touchdowns in the 56-41 win. The junior is the team's second-leading receiver and could have a bigger role in the offense during the season's final month.

STATE'S SORRY DEFENSE: Mississippi State's great performance on offense against Samford couldn't mask some serious issues on defense. The Bulldogs gave up a whopping 627 total yards one week after giving up 554 total yards in a loss to Kentucky. Mullen said most of the team's problem is that there has been poor tackling.

TACKLING TREVOR: Texas A&M quarterback Trevor Knight has been very productive with the Aggies since coming to the school as a graduate transfer. Knight's thrown for 1,868 yards and 13 touchdowns while also running for 529 yards and nine touchdowns.

TRAYVEON'S BIG YEAR: Texas A&M freshman running back Trayveon Williams has quickly turned into one of the SEC's top backs. He's run for 776 yards and six touchdowns while averaging 7.8 yards per carry. He could become the first true freshman in school history to run for 1,000 yards in a season.

PRODUCTIVE AGGIE DEFENSE: Texas A&M leads the nation with 77 tackles for a loss. That's 13 more than Alabama, which is No. 2 on the list. The Aggies have had at least 7 TFLs in every game this year, with a season high of 13 against Auburn.

BAYLOR

From 1C

TCU's defense is coming off its best performance of the season, holding national passing leader Patrick Mahomes to 209 yards and the Red Raiders to only 17 points in regulation. But the Frogs fell 27-24 in their second double-overtime loss this season.

The Frogs have lost consecutive games for the first time since 2013, and their Big 12 wins have been over Kansas and Iowa State — neither of which has won a conference game. Three of their losses this season have been by six points or fewer.

"We need to find a way to win a close one," TCU coach Gary Patterson said. "You've got to find a way."

Some other things in the latest meeting between the Big 12's two private schools:

BACK TO THE BRAZOS: This is only TCU's second trip to Baylor's campus stadium on the banks of the Brazos River. In the stadium's inaugural season two years ago, the Frogs had a 21-point lead in the fourth quarter. The Bears rallied and won 61-58 on a game-ending field goal. That was TCU's only loss that season. The Frogs and Bears ended up as Big 12 co-champs, but both one-loss teams were bypassed for the first four-team College Football Playoff that season.

HEALING HORNED FROGS: TCU leading rusher Kyle Hicks injured his ankle early on the opening series last week against Texas Tech, and defensive end Josh Carraway missed that game with an ankle injury. Both are expected to play against Baylor.

SWITCHING BACK? TCU made an in-game quarterback switch last week with struggling starter Kenny Hill getting replaced by Foster Sawyer. Patterson said more than once this week that Hill would probably be the starter again, but he also said both quarterbacks could play. Patterson also said more consistent play from the outside receivers would help either quarterback be better.

NO ART: Much of the intrigue in the rivalry the past decade centered around Patterson's defense against Art Briles' offense, and the fact that the two coaches really didn't like each other. But Briles is no longer at Baylor, and Bears acting head coach Jim Grobe considers Patterson a friend. "We'll enjoy seeing each other before the game," Grobe said. "But during the game we'll try to knock each other down as much as we can."

though. I really enjoyed it the first time I went there and I'm looking forward to going again."

It should be entertaining, that's for sure. My pick: Texas Tech 44, Texas 42.

Here are my latest Big 12 power rankings with plenty of shakeups:

1. Oklahoma (6-2, 5-0): The Sooners began the year in this spot and they're back after Baylor and West Virginia went down last week. OU took care of Iowa State, 34-24, on Thursday night and looks to be at the top for awhile.

2. Oklahoma State (6-2, 4-1): The slight-upset over West Virginia vaulted the Cowboys this week, but they will be tested today with a trip to always-tough Kansas State.

3. Baylor (6-1, 3-1): I never thought the Bears would go undefeated even in a down year in the Big 12. However, they have a chance to bounce back today with a home game against TCU.

4. West Virginia (6-1, 3-1): The Mountaineers went into a hornets' nest in Stillwater and got stung 37-20. But hey, a home game against Kansas today should heal those wounds.

5. Kansas State (5-3, 3-2): The Wildcats survived a test at Iowa State last week and now they get a chance to knock OSU off last week's high at Bill Snyder Family Stadium.

6. Texas (4-4, 2-3): As they showed last week, the Longhorns are still capable of beating good teams when they play well. The thing is, they don't always play well and now they have to travel to rowdy Lubbock.

7. Texas Tech (4-4, 2-3): Can the Red Raiders continue to shock by playing some defense this week? They have a tall task against a Texas team that is ranked top 30 in the nation in total offense.

8. TCU (4-4, 2-3): The Horned Frogs are reeling and it won't get any easier today with a trip to Waco.

9. Iowa State (1-7, 0-5): The Cyclones continue to hang in there with teams and it will only be a matter of time before they get a Big 12 win.

10. Kansas (1-7, 0-5): I almost feel bad for the Jayhawks today as they have to go to Morgantown to face a ticked off West Virginia team.

Climate brief

PARIS

Eiffel Tower lit green in honor of Paris climate change deal

The Eiffel Tower and the Arc de Triomphe in Paris have temporarily been lit in green as a reminder to the world to enact the Paris Agreement on climate change.

The eco-colored warning on Paris' most recognizable monuments Friday night was the joint initiative of the Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo and French Environment Minister Segolene Royal.

The accord enters into force after a year with remarkable success in international efforts to slash man-made emissions of carbon dioxide and other global warming gases.

Living with a 4-year-old gives man cause to pause

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: At 26, I am about to move in with my girlfriend, "Candace." I love her so much, and I'm confident she's the one I want to marry. Candace has her 4-year-old daughter, "Michelle," with her most of the time we are together.

I'm confident that moving in together is the right decision, but living with Michelle makes me nervous. Although Michelle is smart and well-behaved, like most kids, she can be bratty and demand a lot of attention from Candace and me.

Candace has the utmost patience with Michelle, and I trust her ability as a parent. What I'm worried about is my own level of patience. I don't want kids anytime soon, and I get annoyed with Michelle a little too easily. What steps can I take to assure longevity in this relationship? — YOUNG STEPPARENT

DEAR YOUNG STEPPARENT: Feeling as you do, I am not at all sure you should move in together. I'm surprised that a man who doesn't want kids anytime soon is so eager to enter into a living situation where that very thing is guaranteed. Before changing your living arrangements, consider signing up for parenting classes. They may not only give you insight into what to expect, but also how to handle situations that may arise.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 13 and I have read your column for quite some time. I enjoy it and like to share and discuss some of the letters with my friends.

While I don't always agree with your answers, I always learn something new. I feel that this is the point of me reading your column. I do, however, have a problem with a teacher who feels I should not be reading "adult material" in the paper, and should concentrate on more "age appropriate" things.

Would you please give me advice on what to do or say to my teacher to make her understand this is not inappropriate material for a kid my age to be reading? I would really appreciate it, and I'll do whatever you say. — WAYNE IN NEW YORK

DEAR WAYNE: My column has a readership that spans all ages. I know that because I receive letters from individuals from 9 to 90.

Your parents should decide what reading material is appropriate for you — not your teacher, as well-meaning as she may be. When I was growing up, no literature in our home was off limits to me or my brother, and any questions we asked received straightforward answers. I hope it's the same for you, because children learn their family's values through frank and open communication.

DEAR READERS: It's time for my annual reminder that daylight saving time ends at 2 a.m. Sunday — so don't forget to turn your clocks back one hour before bedtime.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 5, 2016:

This year you have opportunities to break some rigid patterns. In fact, you might be forced to accept some unexpected changes. At first you might resist, but eventually you will enjoy what has happened and how you feel. You have a lot of energy. If you are single, you might be a lot harder to get along with than you realize. Be careful when choosing the person to whom you want to relate. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy surprising each other. You manage to keep your daily life exciting. CAPRICORN believes that he or she can run the show better than you can.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Be willing to adjust your plans in order to respond to a boss's or parent's request. You tend to act impulsively, and you easily can trigger friends and family members as a result. A conversation will help you to understand others' motives. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You have been longing to take off and enjoy yourself. Do that ASAP, and you will see how much your perspective changes as a result. If you act impulsively, you might cause a problem for a friend. Continue to go with the tried-and-true. Tonight: Do whatever pleases you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Whether you are with a friend or loved one, it appears that you have a lot to share. You might be like two kids swapping stories of what goes on at school. Try to be realistic about what you hear. More importantly, just enjoy being with this person! Tonight: Be yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You tend to hang out with people who are strong-willed. Perhaps you like their strength, or maybe a power play has a strong hold on you. Competing with someone like this could be futile. Accept an unexpected invitation or a request for your time. Tonight: Certainly not a wallflower.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You have a project on the back burner that needs to be completed. You might not find doing this a perfect recipe for a fun Saturday; however, you will be so relieved once it is done. In fact, your whole mood is likely to change for the better. Tonight: Celebrate completion!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ How you see a volatile situation could change dramatically, given some time. Listen to a loved one's feedback for more insight. Understand that the status quo is always changing. A friend or associate might decide to back out of his or her plans. Tonight: Do what you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Try as you might, you can't seem to get the response you desire from a loved one. You could be jolted by this person's reaction. Deal with this surprise with a smile, even if it does not feel right at first. You will be happy with the eventual outcome. Tonight: Roll with the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Sorting out plans could be challenging. Follow your heart, and do what you want. You will be happier as a result, and also more tolerant of others. You might not realize how short-tempered you are being or how fried your nerves are. Tonight: Visit with friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might feel as if someone is pushing you too hard. Let this person know that you have had enough, or just pull away. As you gain a better sense of direction, you will become more upbeat. Rein in your spending, as you easily could go overboard. Tonight: Make it your treat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You are likely to find a situation much more agreeable than you originally had expected. Your imagination takes you to places that might not even exist! Your sixth sense kicks in and allows you to make new decisions with more confidence. Tonight: Around great music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You seem to have been here, there and everywhere as of late. Therefore, it is not surprising that you want and need some downtime. Free up your schedule, and then decide what suits your fancy. The time has come to indulge yourself. Tonight: Mystery is quite alluring.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You know what you need to do. You might find yourself surrounded by friends, and could be presented with a spontaneous invitation. Keep your budget in mind when making a choice. You can have a great time without breaking the bank. Tonight: Let your hair down.

SHOE BAR RANCH
25,572 Deeded Acres
Ector County, Texas

The Shoe Bar Ranch is located approx. 15 air miles southwest of Odessa, Texas at Penwell. This ranch has been under the same family ownership since the 1920's. This quality Permian Basin ranch is all native pasture and is in good condition. The ranch has been rested with no livestock for approximately two years. Livestock water is primarily provided by eight taps on the CRMWD water line, two windmills and one submersible. Structural improvements include a two bedroom/two bath brick home, a bunkhouse, a shop building, pipe shipping pens and two sets of working pens. Oil production is mostly concentrated in the southeast portion. The majority of the ranch is free of oil field activity, which could possibly present future opportunities for the collection of surface damage income. Trophy quality mule deer and an abundance of quail are found on the ranch. Seldom does a ranch of this size, mostly free of oil field activity, come up for sale in close proximity to Midland/Odessa. The Shoe Bar Ranch is reasonably priced at $350 per acre.
