NEGROES POSSESS BOOZE BUT ARE ONLY FINED

Two negro men were released by city police here Monday morning after payment of drunk fines, following their arrest by Motorcycle officer Paul Hardy, who was after the pair for speeding, but discovered after he had caught them that the car in which they were riding contained a small quantity of choc beer.

Efforts were made for a time to connect the blacks with sale of the illicit beverage, but various circumstances surrounding the arrest, and seizure of the choc, made this practically impossible. In the opinion of county Attorney Owen W. McWhorter.

Youth And Girl Are Killed As Car Goes Into Denison Ditch

DENISON, Jan. 4. (AP) — Ethel Snow 17, and Elmer Shultz, 23, of Coffey, Okla., were killed Sunday night about 8 o'clock when a small car turned over on a twelve foot embankment 200 yards north of the Colbert Bridge over Red River, four miles north of Denison. The couple were pinned under the wreckage and were not discovered until 7:30 o'clock this morning.

The woman had only been dead three hours when found.

LAMESA BOY LOST IN N. M. MOUNTAINS

MANY SEARCHERS FAIL TO LOCATE MISSING HUNTER

EARL BRASH, 21, VICTIM OF SNOW-COVERED MOUNTAINS

Special to Daily Journal.

LAMESA, Jan. 4. — Edgar Brash, 21, well known local man, nephew of H. E. Williams, owner of the H. E. Williams Hardware company, of this city, has been lost in the Guadalupe mountains west of Carlsbad, New Mexico, since last Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, when he left a party of local men at a cabin in the mountains, and went out alone on a deer hunt. Efforts of searching parties to locate the youth have proved unavailing on account of the heavy snow that is falling throughout the mountain regions, reports reaching here today from the scene.

It is estimated that at least 1,000 people left here Saturday and Sunday to assist in the search, but many of them returned late Sunday after finding that they were unable to render any assistance because of the heavy snowfall.

Young Brash, eager to equal the record of Mr. Williams, who owns a cabin in the mountains and Mr. Hamilton, the third member of the party, both of whom had bagged one deer each, left the cabin last Wednesday morning, before noon, seeking to bring in a buck alone, and soon after he had left a heavy snow storm broke over the mountains. Since that time, he has not been seen.

The storm, reports from the scene say, continued in all its fury for two days, obliterating all traces of the youth, and even the native mountaineers of the section hesitate, and in some instances, refuse to enter the search, on account of the heavy volume of snow, with the consequent destruction of all trails through the mountains.

The search, in which hundreds are participating, led by natives who know the dangers of the mountain crags and snow slides, is continuing with unabated enthusiasm, but fear is held that the young hunter will never be found alive.

MYSTERY KILLING AROUSSES POLICE IN HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Jan. 4. (AP) — Robert G. Hewitt, retired florist, who was shot and killed on the street here Saturday night, may have been overtaken and slain just as he was preparing to flee to South America to escape an enemy. That was one of the theories being put forward by authorities today.

Hewitt was found unconscious in a pool of blood on the sidewalk and died shortly afterward. A .32-caliber bullet was found in his head and nearby a pistol with 5 shells was discovered.

Justice Campbell Overstreet, with holding a verdict in the request until a more complete investigation could be completed, today had turned his attention, definitely, to the theory of foul play.

Earlier in the evening Hewitt announced he was preparing to take a boat for South America. Mrs. Hewitt told authorities.

Grand Jury Probes Statutory Charge

BELOIT, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — The Beloit County grand jury, convening here today, was charged by District Judge Lewis H. Jones, to investigate on an alleged statutory offense in Mills County. This unusual procedure was occasioned by the fact that a boy held in jail at Goldthwaite is unable to make bond, and the grand jury there will meet for several months.

Striking Miners In Wales Raid And Burn

GRACE BAY, N. S. W., Jan. 4. (AP) — One store was burned and several were looted by 1,000 unemployed coal miners last night.

Raid followed meetings of the miners at which the urgency of their need was expressed. No arrests were made. A store was burned in New Aberdeen where miners took flour, meat and canned goods from stores.

Travis County Jury Reopens At Capital Following Vacation

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP) — The Travis county grand jury, which adjourned two weeks ago for the holidays, reconvened today for further investigation into state affairs. When it was charged in the 53rd district criminal court to investigate every office of the state government from the governor's to the constable's the December grand jury took over voluminous testimony taken by the preceding jury relative to the probe into the state highway and other departments.

BOOZE STEALING PROBE IS BEGUN BY FEDERAL MEN

FEDERAL WAREHOUSE IN MARYLAND LOOTED AND GUARDS WHIPPED

(By Associated Press)

WESTMINSTER, Md., Jan. 4. — Federal operatives from the prohibition headquarters in Washington today began an investigation of the wholesale looting of the "Mackinac" government warehouse in Tonawanda, four miles from here, where a band of fifty men seized more than 75 barrels of whiskey valued at $100,000 after overhauling three guards and four passively Saturday night.

Four federal officers, ordered here yesterday when the department was notified of the robbery, will also assist in checking up the liquor theft in the warehouse.

Although federal agents had blocked the main road to the warehouse, the thieves drove their loaded machines through fields found the barriers. An advance guard of three armed men, captured and bound the three guards as they appeared for duty separately. Four others were seized and bound with others. Telephone lines in the neighborhood were cut.

The remainder of the band then appeared in machines and trucks and worked through the night transferring whiskey by machines and elevators from the seventh floor of the building to the loading platform below. Approaching dawn they found them abandoned fifteen barrels on the runway, after carrying away 75 barrels and 32 cases of whiskey.

Police, summoned yesterday morning, when one of the captives worked himself loose, traced the machines to Mexico, a village on the state road, several miles below here. There the caravan is believed to have separated, part heading for Westminster and the remainder for Baltimore.

Mellon Warns The Senate On Larger Reduction In Tax

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP) — Secretary Mellon warned the senate finance committee today that the tax reduction of about $300,000,000 voted by the house must not be exceeded by the senate.

Some Democratic members of the committee questioned Mr. Mellon at length. They have urged a tax reduction of $500,000,000, pointing out that this sum could be met if the government extended its program of retirement of the public debt over a longer period.

The secretary told the committee that $1,373,176,900 of the total issue of $4,175,850,000 involved in the Second Liberty Loan bond had been retired. He will report before the committee again tomorrow.

Inmon Is Now With Main Street Grocery

J. T. Inmon, who is well known to the patrons of local grocery establishments by virtue of his long service in this line of endeavor here, has assumed his duties with the Main Street Grocery, which is owned and operated by W. W. Nelson.

Inmon probably holds the distinction of having served more grocery stores in Lubbock than any other individual, for he not only has spent more than a half score of years in the industry of others, but for a time was in business for himself, and his manner of straightforward business dealings has marked him as distinctive and a great asset to any institution.

ARMED FORCE TO BE RESORTED TO NEXT IN GREECE

BULGARIAN PREMIER HAS RESIGNED; CIVIL WAR
NOW THREATENED

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 4. — Coincident with the troublous situation in Roumania due to the resignation of Crown Prince Carol and reports of a conspiracy to overthrow the monarchy, comes the news that two other Balkan states are in political turmoil.

In Greece General Pangalos, premier and minister of war, who deposed King Constantine and placed the crown on the head of King George, has announced he will institute a military dictatorship.

Bulgarian Premier Quits. Due to failure to bring the members of his cabinet into harmony, the Bulgarian premier, M. Tsankoff, has handed his resignation to King Boris. Andrey Plapchewski, a former finance minister, will endeavor to form a new ministry.

Pangalos once said the Greeks went to war with the olive branch in one hand and the sword in the other. In announcing his decision to take over the entire control of the government, he said that parliamentary government was the cause of all Greece's troubles.

"I am therefore preparing a program based solely on armed force," he added. "Our fleet in a few months will be mistress of the eastern Mediterranean and our army one of the strongest in the Balkans."

His announcement was made at a dinner given in his honor by regiment.

LONDON. — Some of the girls carrying their watches tucked into garters just above the knee. Another new mode is the wearing of neckties behind instead of in front.

NEW YORK. — Girls working for the League of Political Education have taken a pledge not to smoke.

NEW YORK. — Bobby Walthour Jr., cyclist, is honeymooning in Miami, with the former Miss Margaret Murray of New York. They eloped.

WASHINGTON. — President and Mrs. Coolidge have gone to church twice in the same day for the first time since they entered the White House.

LONDON. — Joop Leit is a Dutch heavyweight boxer who sings from the ring. After forcing Billy Prestage, an Englishman, to quit in two rounds, Joop sang from Pagliacci. It seems as if it would have been more appropriate for Billy to warble from the opera, but presumably he can't sing any better than he fights.

BOSTON. — Cardinal O'Connell thinks that a certain man who left his millions to art seemed to have lost touch with compassion for the poor. The cardinal spoke at the Holy Name meeting. He did not name the man, but identified him as a poor boy who accumulated $70,000,000.

NEW YORK. — Edward Fitzgerald, Duke of Leicester and Earl of Kildare is here on a mysterious trip. His ex-wife, formerly an actress, remains in England. A young woman met him at the pier.

ALBANY, N. Y. — A red fox which unwittingly wandered into the yard of the executive mansion probably heard about the good food served in there, Governor Smith opines.

BOSTON. — The rivalry of old dancers seems to be getting as bad as the marathon dance craze. A competition for the New England championship began in Providence, R. I., tonight. A world championship meeting is posted for Lewiston, Maine, and there is talk of a contest between Melville Dunham and Uncle Jimmy Thompson, of Martha, Tenn.

Lee Satterwhite Is Sued For Old Board Bill Of 75 Dollars

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP) — Suit was filed today before Justice of the Peace F. R. Tannehill, against Lee Satterwhite of Amarillo, speaker of the House of Representatives, for collection of a $75 promissory note, dated June 1, 1922, at Panhandle, Texas. The note was executed in Panhandle, to Emma Ford, now of Tulane County, California, John Shelton, attorney, who filed the suit, said, for payment of a board bill, according to Miss Ford.

BURNS MIGHT BE FATAL FOR WIFE OF VA. GOVERNOR

ATTEMPTS TO SAVE SON
FROM FLAMES MAY END
IN MOTHER'S DEATH

(By Associated Press)

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4. — Mrs. E. Lee Trinkle, wife of the Governor of Virginia, suffered serious burns today when she tried to rescue her small son, E. Lee Trinkle Jr., from the third floor of the burning executive mansion.

The fire, which was caused by a Christmas fireworks sparkler, forced Mrs. Trinkle to jump from an upper floor of the building. She suffered burns about the hands, arms, face and chest, and her hair was badly singed.

Fire Caused By Sparkler. The sparkler was in the hands of the governor's four-year-old son, Billie. It set fire to the Christmas tree and the flames spread rapidly throughout the lower floor of the mansion. E. Lee Trinkle Jr., whom Mrs. Trinkle attempted to rescue also was forced to jump from the upper floor.

He was asleep when the fire was discovered and the alarm was sounded by a negro butler. Mrs. Trinkle rushed upstairs to her room and both mother and child were trapped by flames and smoke. A ladder raised by firemen was too short and they jumped.

Fall Broken By Ladder. Mrs. Trinkle's fall was broken by a fireman's ladder. The son fell into the arms of the butler, Clayton Setgray.

A nurse rushed Billie from the burning building and later both Billie and E. Lee Jr. were taken to a hospital, Billie being slightly burned. Governor Trinkle was in his office in an adjoining building when the flames were discovered.

Five paintings and antiques were destroyed by the fire, which damaged the lower part of the building.

Banker Is Sentenced To Three Years Term

JACKSON, Tenn., Jan. 4. (AP) — T. B. Carroll, former cashier of the defunct Peoples' Savings Bank of Jackson, today pleaded guilty in circuit court to a charge of fraudulent breach of trust and was sentenced to three years imprisonment.

John M. Carroll, his son and assistant cashier of the bank at the time it was closed last summer after the discovery of an apparent shortage of approximately $381,000 was cleared of the charge of having aided and abetted his father in certain alleged speculations.

R. L. Slaughter Is Sued For Divorce

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP) — Mrs. Rita Slaughter, formerly Miss Rita Jaychener, New York nurse, today instituted divorce proceedings against R. L. Slaughter, Jr., of Dallas. They were married in December, 1922, after a lawsuit brought by Mrs. Slaughter.

In the petition brought by Mrs. Slaughter she asks for a division of the community property and for restoration of her maiden name.

Doheny Lease Case Upheld By Jurymen

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4. (AP) — The United States circuit court of appeals today affirmed the decision of the lower court cancelling the lease of Edward J. Doheny and associates in oil lands in the Elks Hills naval reserve of California.

The court reversed that portion of the lower court verdict which had allowed the Doheny company an amount in excess of $11,000,000 from the government for the building of the oil station at Pearl Harbor.

Candidate

Henry W. Zweifel of Fort Worth, Tex., is being groomed as a gubernatorial candidate by prominent Texas republicans. He is a U. S. district attorney who gained fame in prosecuting oil swindlers, and the G. O. P. leaders hope to cash in on the demagogue's split over the Ferguson.

ENROLLMENT IN SCHOOLS LEAPS HIGHER MONDAY

174 NEW STUDENTS ASK ADMITTANCE TO CITY
SCHOOL ROOMS

Once again school authorities of the Lubbock Independent School district are faced with a perplexing problem in handling the ever-increasing enrollment, for it was announced here Monday by Supt. M. H. Duncan that 174 new pupils had applied for entry into the schools following the holidays, bringing the total enrollment for the system to approximately 3,800.

The number of new pupils applying Monday does not include the negro or Mexican schools, for the four ward schools in outlying district to the city. The number is confined entirely to schools in the city proper. While no reports had been received at the superintendent's office early Monday afternoon as to the number of new ones enrolling in the schools not included in the list, it is believed that the total will be swelled to well above the 200 mark.

Present indications are that the estimates placed on the new enrollment following the holidays, which was approximately 400, will not be far amiss, for it is known that there are others who will seek classifications, within the next few days.

Every effort is being made to handle the increased enrollment with the present corps of teachers, but with conditions congested even before the holidays, school authorities are beginning to cast about for some means of relieving the situation through the balance of the term. Next year two new buildings will be ready for occupancy.

Texas Ranger Now Faces Charges Of Mysterious Death

MERIDIAN, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — M. Burton, state ranger who figured in liquor raids which resulted in the mysterious killing of Dick Watson, at Pampa more than a year ago, has been indicted with C. A. Barker, Meridian city marshal, for murder in connection with the death of Frank Terrell, of Clifton, this county. Both have been freed on $5,000 bail.

Terrell was one of three men returning from Sonerville county when the fatal shooting occurred June 1, 1923.

MYSTERY DEATHS IN OKLAHOMA TO CLOSE IN COURT

ONE CONVICT AND THREE PROMINENT MEN ARE IN LAW'S MESHES

(By Associated Press)

PAWBUKA, Okla., Jan. 4. — Information charging W. K. Hale, of Fairfax, "King of the Osage Hills," Ernest Burkhardt, M. A. Boyd, former deputy sheriff of Osage County, and Bert Lawson, prisoner in the Leavenworth penitentiary, with the slaying of W. E. Smith, March 19, 1923, was filed by the state attorney general's office here today.

Following filing of the information state warrants were issued and state and federal officers, who came to Pawhuska from Oklahoma City today, were sent to bring Hale and the other two men to Pawhuska.

State Men On Hand. J. Harry King and Edwin Dabney, assistants attorney general, arrived in Pawhuska today bringing with them the information which they filed with county attorney J. W. Smith.

Hale, wealthy ranchman residing at Fairfax, was expected to be brought to Pawhuska this afternoon. Hale, Burkhardt, Boyd and Lawson were charged with "having joined together to murder W. E. Smith," husband of a wealthy Osage Indian, by destroying his home with a bomb. Smith, his wife, and a hired girl were killed.

Accused By Convict. The three men were accused by Lawson in a confession to officers at the Leavenworth federal penitentiary, where he was taken for safe keeping after being convicted of robbery in Osage County.

Lawson declared in his confession that he had been hired by Hale to touch a fuse to another fuse running to a bomb in the Smith home. —Burkhardt, said by officers to be a close friend to Hale, is the husband of Mrs. Smith's sister.

Allowed To Leave Jail. Boyd, according to meager information, was a former deputy sheriff, while Lawson was in the Osage County Jail.

MAN AND WIFE IN WACO SHOT TO DEATH

WACO, Jan. 4. (AP) — Locked in each other's arms, Lloyd A. Haynes, aged 33, was found dying and his wife of six weeks, aged 23, was found dead in bed at their home here today. A .32-caliber automatic pistol was found nearby. Only two bullets had been fired, one piercing the temple of Mrs. Haynes and the other passing through the head of Mr. Haynes.

Neighbors told the officers they heard shots about one o'clock this morning. The tragedy was covered until about 10 o'clock, at which time C. M. Seley, president of the bank where Mr. Haynes was employed, went to the home when Mr. Haynes failed to report for duty.

At the sanitarium where Mr. Haynes was rushed, physicians declared that his death was only a matter of time.

Many Women Will Attend Business Meet At Capital

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP)—Nearly all the members of the Board of Managers of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations will attend the January meeting here the seventh and eighth. Reports of special committees, plans for the new state chairman, election of delegates to the national convention, plans for district conferences, filling of vacancies in state chairmanships and such other business as may be found necessary are scheduled for discussion and action.

According to the revision of the by-laws, adopted at the present state meeting of the organizations at El Paso, this board consists of twenty-five members, the president, seven vice presidents, recording and corresponding secretaries, treasurer, historian, ten district presidents, state chairman of life memberships and endowment fund and the honorary life members. The state chairman, who have been members of the board of managers, still have not the voting privilege. This change was made so that the laws of Texas governing the charter of the organization should be conformed with in every way.

Among those expected to attend the January meeting are: Mrs. C. E. Madsen, Rancho, president; Mrs. M. D. Darling Smith, Austin, vice president at large; Mrs. F. W. McAllister, San Antonio, second vice president; Mrs. O. M. Kugenecker, third vice president and director of extension; Mrs. M. R. Chapman, Beaumont, fourth vice president; Miss Mary Jo Popplewell, Austin, fifth vice president; Mrs. L. E. Ledbetter, Austin, seventh vice president; Mrs. A. P. ### G. M. Hunt School P. T. A. Will Meet Again Thursday

On Thursday afternoon at 3:30, the Geo. M. Hunt P. T. A. will meet to begin the work for the new year.

While much has already been accomplished, now that the holidays are over and there are not so many things to divert our attention, we hope for bigger and better achievements in the future.

In fact, we would like to reach that standard of excellence which our former president, Mrs. Baugh, was so anxious for this club to attain.

We are asking every mother who has a child in the Geo. M. Hunt school to meet with us next Thursday. The children know we are striving to improve conditions for them, hence they are happy when their mothers attend.

At our last meeting I heard a little fellow ask a neighbor, "Did mother come?" The lady answered, "No dear." The child was disappointed, his mother was not coming.

DALLAS ARTIST PRAISES LUBBOCK DELPHIANS

Mr. Frank Reaugh, Dallas artist, praises Lubbock Delphians in being instrumental in bringing to Lubbock citizens the opportunity of viewing the art exhibit to be shown here soon, possibly the early part of next week.

Following is a statement made by Mr. Reaugh:

"In a world that is largely given to contemplating things through the shades of age and the haze of distance, the tribute paid to a living painter by his own people, is to be taken as proof that Dallas art lovers have reflected the declaration of more than 1,900 years ago—a prophet, is not without honor, save in his own country."

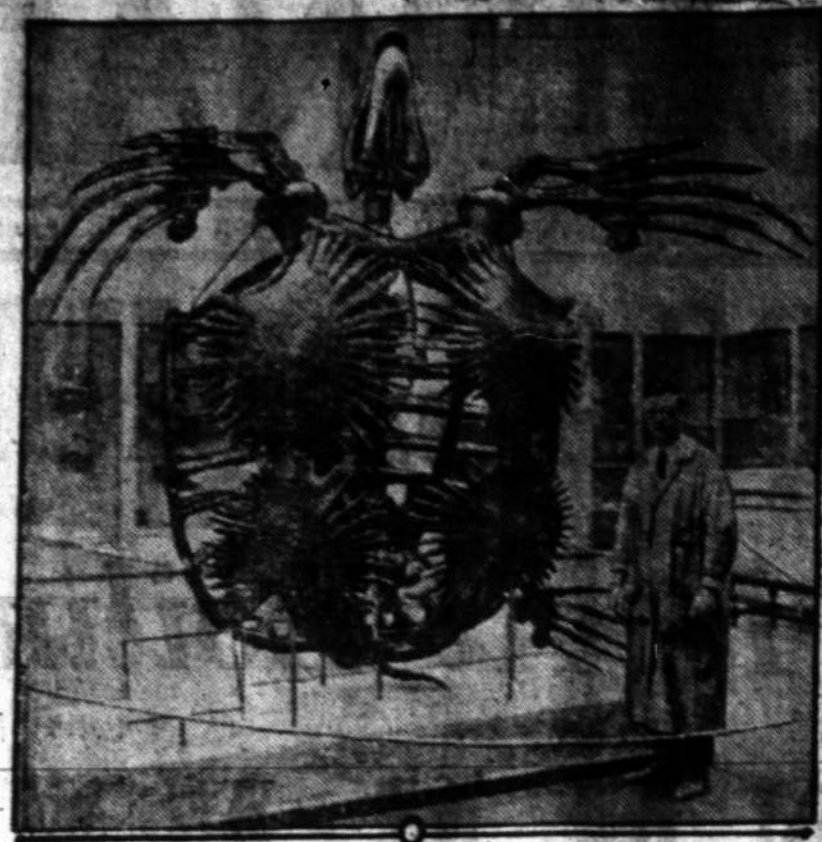

The Delphian Society is to be congratulated upon securing seven of these artists' most popular pictures for their art exhibit to be held soon."

Italy's Dowager Queen Dies Following Attack Of Pleurisy; Has Long Been In Power In Europe; Had Modern Tendencies

(By Associated Press.)

BORDIGHERA, Italy, Jan. 4. — Margherita, beloved Queen Mother of Italy, died at the Royal Castle here at 11 o'clock this morning after having apparently won a brave fight against pleurisy pneumonia.

Her son, King Victor Emmanuel, and other members of the Royal Family were at the bedside when the end came, having been hurriedly summoned yesterday when the sudden turn for the worse was first noted. The patient last night sank into a coma from which, despite heroic efforts by her doctors, she never emerged.

Was 74 Years Old

The widow of King Humbert, who was assassinated at Monza, July 29, 1900, Margherita celebrated her 74th birthday anniversary on November 20.

The actual cause of death was a cerebral blood clot which developed last night, but a heavily contributing cause was the serious weakening of her powers of resistance by the attack of pleurisy pneumonia, which began early in November.

Oxygen Prolongs Life

Throughout the night the end was postponed by frequent administrations of oxygen. The actual coming of death was hardly apparent to the little group around the bed. News of the sudden change for the worse and then the announcement of death caused a wave of profound emotion to sweep over the nation.

Margherita was the best beloved Queen Italy ever had, not only because of her personal sweetness and charm, but because she was herself an Italian, being born a Princess of Savoy.

DELPHIAN CLUB IN SESSION FOR FINAL PLANS OF ART SHOW

Plans are being perfected this afternoon by the Delphian club in a special called meeting sent out by the president, Mrs. E. L. Banks, for their art exhibit to be held soon in the building on Broadway, recently vacated by Yarrow Grocery company. The date to be decided this afternoon, will be announced tomorrow, and already many interested people are inquiring concerning it.

Too much could never be said in praise of the Delphian club ladies for their work and interest in securing for Lubbock this exhibit of native artists, an effort which will be rewarded in bringing to Lubbock the first real exhibit ever shown here.

Masterpieces by Texas artists and pottery from the leading potteries of America will be exhibited.

The general chairman, for the exhibit, Mrs. J. V. Conner, made the following statement today relative to the exhibit: "We hope to be able to admit free of charge all students and all children accompanied by adults, as we are bringing the exhibit here primarily for the benefit of students and to acquaint our people with Texas artists and their work, but owing to the fact that we will be at a heavy expense for insurance, transportation and such, we will be forced to charge a small fee for admission for adults, possibly ten cents."

We are sure the citizens will appreciate the opportunity to view these pictures and availing themselves of this rare occasion, attend the exhibit the date of which will be announced in tomorrow's paper.

POTTERY TO BE FEATURE OF EXHIBIT

Pottery, especially pottery of American make, will be featured at the art exhibit by the Delphian Society. Some fifty or more pieces of Newcomb Pottery, Paul Revere, Hookwood, Van Briggle, Marbled and Indian pottery will be shown. All articles exhibited are for sale and no doubt many people will take advantage of this opportunity to secure some fine pieces.

WAR VETS MONEY IS ASKED BY COOLIDGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—President Coolidge today asked for deficiency appropriation of $114,000,000 for the veterans bureau, largely to meet the cost of the bonus. A supplementary appropriation of $2,315,368 was asked for the interior department, most items being for the relief of Indians.

Disastrous Floods May Be Means Of Subjugating River Which Has Long Threatened Several States

AMARILLO, Jan. 4. — Out of the disastrous floods of the North Canadian River in November, 1923, that wrought destruction throughout Oklahoma and inundated a portion of Oklahoma City, has emerged a stupendous project that has for its goal the subjugation of the Arkansas River from its source in Colorado to its junction with the Mississippi in Arkansas.

Seven states through which the Arkansas and its tributaries flow, would be freed from the menace of devastating floods, millions of acres would be brought under intensive cultivation through irrigation made possible by the project, and water power in untold amounts would be rendered available for the industrial development of the region. This is the vision to which the Oklahoma drainage commission under the chairmanship of E. E. Blake of Oklahoma City, is giving concrete form.

Data on the project, involving work in Oklahoma, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Texas, Arkansas, and possibly Missouri, is being compiled for presentation to the next session of congress, when an attempt will be made to obtain federal aid.

Would Conquer Canadian? Blake has returned from a trip through Colorado and New Mexico where he conferred with state officials and drainage experts and investigated the feasibility of the project. In a drainage conference held in Denver, the plans were materially forwarded Blake said.

Another conference which General George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal, attended was held in Amarillo Aug. 23, in connection with the National Farm Congress. At this conference the conquering of the Canadian river was discussed.

The rivers would be controlled by a series of reservoirs in which it is planned to impound flood waters.

These would be drained gradually, or the water would be held for irrigation through the dry season, as desired.

Sites for dozens of these reservoirs in Oklahoma have already been selected, 42 alone on the North Canadian, one of the most treacherous rivers in the Southwest. Others are located along the Caney and Cimarron and on the Grand river in Eastern Oklahoma, four tentative sites have been located by private companies.

Largest Artificial Lake One of the Grand River projects, proposed by the Grand River Hydro-electric Company, contemplates the formation of the largest artificial lake in the United States covering 2,200,000 acres in Mayes and Wagoner counties, Blake said. Engineers who have surveyed this project declare that it would generate more power than the famous Muscle Shoals plant.

One of the proposed Cimarron river reservoirs would be formed in Cimarron County, Oklahoma, near Kenton. It would have an area of 17,000 acres, with a circumference of approximately 40 miles. Another has been tentatively located in Oklahoma, just across the line from Englewood.

YOUNG BOY SAVES BROTHER FROM GAS FUMES

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—Knowledge of how to apply artificial respiration gained from training as a boy scout enabled Billie Cooper, 14, to save the life of his brother, Jack, 20-year-old Texas University student. Dr. D. C. Weller said today.

While bathing, Jack was overcome by gas fumes. Hearing groans coming from the bathroom, Billie kicked open the locked door, entered the room and carried his unconscious brother from the tub.

After telephoning for Dr. Weller, Billie remembering his boy scout training applied artificial respiration and in 15 minutes had restored consciousness to the almost lifeless body of his brother.

Henry Ford Wins In Supreme Court Suit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Henry Ford won in the supreme court today in his fight against Dodge Brothers, J. Calvert Sons, and others arising out of the condemnation of land improvement of the River Rouge at Detroit.

Under an act of Congress Ford deposited with the court $2,000,000 to pay awards for land taken by the government in the improvement of the river.

Settlement was made for all the land taken except 15 parcels in which the Dodge Brothers, J. Calvert Sons, and others, were interested. Ford claimed that the awards for the parcels were too high.

HOTELS HAVE TO ENFORCE DRY STATUTES

MAJOR WHITE SAYS THEY MUST ENFORCE THE PROHIBITION LAW

(By Associated Press.)

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4. — Hotels will be expected to see that the prohibition laws are enforced on their premises at all times, Major H. H. White, regional prohibition administrator for Texas and Oklahoma, declared here today.

Particular diligence in enforcing the liquor law on their premises with the aid of federal dry agents any time they desire them, is expected of them during the Christmas and New Year's plays had been read and considered, he said.

White denied that dry agents had "passed the buck" to the hotel keepers in enforcing the laws, declaring that their cooperation had been requested in insisting that their guests comply with the prohibition act during Christmas and New Year's parties and at all other times.

Open To Prosecution.
"Guilty knowledge of violations on their premises without attempts to prevent or stop it, is an admission on the part of the hotelkeepers that the violations are sanctioned, which lay them also open to prosecution," he said.

Precautionary measures invoked by San Antonio hotels in an effort to forestall violation of the 18th amendment on their premises during Christmas and New Year's Eve festivals will be continued strenuously at all times, managers said.

All employees, including bell-hops and waiters who take ice-water to a hotel room and while there observe whiskey, is bound, under his pledge, to report the incident to the management. Waiters who get a glimpse of diners surreptitiously flashing a pocket flask are pledged to go word to the management at once.

KING AND QUEEN MOVE TO HELP SUFFERERS

BELGIUM AND HOLLAND RULERS AID IN FLOOD WORK

(By Associated Press.)

BRUSSELS, Jan. 4. — Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, and Albert, King of the Belgians, are trying to stem the tide of desolation, which threatens to overwhelm their people because of floods. Albert, at Liege, which has suffered more from the present flood than from the German siege guns which levelled her forts in 1924. Wilhelmina has gone to Nimeguen in Gelderland, accompanied by the Prince consort. The entire country surrounding Nimeguen is under water and the houses mount into millions of dollars.

Some estimates place the losses around Liege at twenty million francs. Ten thousand houses are isolated, and the residents have been flooded in for three days. One hundred thousand rations are being issued per day, with King Albert and his ministers personally supervising this work. The train service in central Belgium is paralyzed; great numbers of cattle have perished.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 4. (P) — Latest reports tonight say that the waters are rising everywhere. The Meuse and the Rhine have gained twenty inches during the past 24 hours.

Dikes have collapsed at various places and many small farmers and peasants have abandoned their property and are crowding onto the railway dikes or other high ground.

The River Becht has begun to flood the region around Utrecht.

Queen Wilhelmina and the Prince consort are traveling through the flooded regions, their boat being followed by a second boat loaded with foodstuffs for distribution. Premier Colyn and several other ministers are touring the distressed districts also to learn how best to afford help.

Wool Grades Are To Be Supervised By Federal Group

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (P) — Preparation of international wool grades soon will be undertaken by the department of agriculture following the recent return from Europe of members of the United States wool standardization committee, which obtained the approval of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce, ranking authority in foreign woolen markets, as a set of standards correlated with democratic grades.

A series of public hearings will be called by the department at which the wool trade here will be asked to endorse the grades as international standards.

Notary Rites Are Decided In Texas

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (P) — Partnerships and newspapers are not qualified for appointment as notaries public, Judge D. A. Gregg, chief clerk of the secretary of state's office has held. He has ordered John Jacobs and Mrs. Nola Woods, clerks of the executive wagon division, to issue commissions to only "real live persons." Included in approximately 2,000 notaries public appointed by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and confirmed by the senate were a number of corporations, partnerships, and one newspaper.

POWER OF OPINION

Public opinion rules man with an iron hand such as no Pharaoh or Roman emperor ever possessed. No tyrant ever exercised so despotic a power over human beings as the tyrant public opinion.

Few acts that men do are not directly or indirectly answerable to
public opinion, and few men act without one eye on public opinion. Everything man talks or thinks about bears
the impress of this seal of authority
of the masses. Businessmen live or die,
politicians are elected or defeated, society "does" or "does not" artists become famous or unknown, governments
rise or fall, by the mandates of public opinion. Public opinion is the opinion of the majority and the public's opinion of a democracy or republic is a
nation in which the majority rules.

Most men and women will admit
that 99 per cent of their actions are
guided by public opinion, by what
other people will think of them. Coming to think of it, isn't that just the
reason girls, young and old, primp
and powder and spend all their money
on pretty clothes, men buy expensive
cars instead of the inexpensive kind,
people make the exteriors of their
homes more beautiful than the interiors, the opera and Shakespearean
plays are so well attended, and everybody does so many things they would rather not do?

"Like other tyrannies, the tyranny
of the majority was at first, and is still vulgarly, held in dread," wrote
John Stuart Mill in 1858.

How applicable today is his further
statement:
"Those whose bread is already secured, and who desire no favors from
men in power, or from bodies of men,
or from the public, have nothing to fear from the open avowal of any
opinions, but to be ill-thought of and ill-liked, and this it ought not to require a very heroic mould to enable them to bear."

From the pen of the nineteenth century philosopher it sounds easy
but, from our knowledge of today,
was martyrdom in the Roman arena
and on the rack of the Spanish Inquisition more terrible than the modern martyrdom to public opinion? Mill
didn't know public opinion.

WASTE ACRES

It is no secret that there are parts
of the United States which, while they
can not be said to be unexplored, are
remote from any human habitation
and for long periods are uninhabited
by human beings, and yet one usually
thinks of these wildernesses as being
in the sparsely settled west or south.
That an aeroplane could fall within
a few miles of New York and be un-
discovered for six years seems incredible, and yet the remains of a wrecked
plane found in the Berkshire Hills has
been identified as that of a Canadian flyer who disappeared while making a flight in 1919.

Incidents of this character show
that in virtually every state of the union there are isolated regions without human inhabitants and in which
the human voice is seldom heard.
Primitive conditions exist in many of
these sections, the only visible change
being the color of the skin of the
hunters who occasionally wend their
way between their virgin trees.

They are, for the most part, regions
too barren, isolated or irregular for agriculture, although the frontiers
just push into them mass the nation's population increases beyond the expansion of existing inhabited areas to house and feed it. For those who fear
a time of over-population in the United States there is comfort in these
"blind spots" and uncharted trees.

EXPLOSIVES ARE BIG JOLT IN WILD RIDE WITH ADMIRAL

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—One of our leading admirals took me out to the naval research laboratory, on the other side of the Potomac, not long ago,
to see some scientific experiments
work in progress there.

Just what it was was nothing to do with the story. I didn't understand it anyway.

The point is that the admiral is very much interested in it and wanted to
stir up a little publicity in its behalf,
with a view to extracting enough money
from congress to develop it still further.

So we took a street car. We rode
and we rode and finally we came to
the end of the line.

"Now we gotta get a gasoline wagon," said the admiral "Hey!" he called
to an African youth, standing alongside a venerable flivver nearby the street car terminus. "Can you take
us to the naval laboratory? You know
where it is, doncha?"

"Yassuh, yassuh," said the Senegam-
bian.

This flivver was of the model of the early 20's. It was fastened together with wire. A number of the parts
were missing entirely. The wheels
wobbled—threatened to come off, infact. It had asthma. It had the blind stagger. It had paresis. It had everything.

We took a sharp curve on two wheels.
Far down the road ahead of us loomed
a huge navy motor truck. From the rear a red flag fluttered.

"Slow bell! Slow bell!" yelled the admiral. "Great gosh! Explosives!"

The dusky driver turned calmly in
his seat.

"Muh brake's no good," he observed
placidity.

Well, we missed that truck by the
breadth of a hair, to a chorus (though
only one voice furnished it) of "Fort!
Hard o' port! Port y'r helmum!" and landed alive at the naval laboratory.

"You can go home as you please,"
said the admiral, as we got out. "I'm going to take an airplane."

No Better Looking.

From the Weekly Scotsman:

Mandy, negro maid, picked up
a magazine and began to turn over the pages aimlessly. Then she seemed to be fascinated by one of the pictures.

"Who dat woman, Mrs. Blank?" she inquired.

"That's Queen Elizabeth, Mandy," said Miss Blake. Mandy seemed to be stricken dumb. Finally she burst forth breathlessly.

"Am dat de queen, Miss Blank? My land, what a homely woman. My land, what a ugly woman! Why, Miss Blank, that queen ain't no better looking than you is."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BARBARA HAWLEY is 25, self-
willed and talented. Wanting to
"live," she breaks with her fiancé, BRUCE REYNOLDS, an architect, and gets a job on the Telegraph.

She sees plenty of it at a road-
house dinner, where BOB JEF-FRIES, police reporter, introduces her to JEROME BALL, man
about town. A prominent man
kills himself at the dinner and Barbara picks up a red scarf
dropped by his unknown woman
companion.

Bruce enters the real estate
firm of Manners, Stone and Reynolds, which launches an ambitious development, Vale across LYDIA STACY, rich widow, is interested in him, but he rebuffs
her and the teller ANDREW Mc-DERMOTT, managing editor of
the Telegraph, that she suspects
crookedness in the firm.

Barbara, meanwhile, edits a love Lorn column and gives much advice to a correspondent who
signs herself "Violetta" and asks
how she can land a "socially superior young man." Suddenly she learns that Bruce has married a factory girl, VIOLETTA GRAN-
BY—the same one she has been advising.

At this point Manners decamps
with the bank deposits and Vale
Acres goes to smash. Bruce is bitter against Barbara for the newspaper publicity that fell him.

Barbara's mother dies and Barbara moves to an in-town apartment, sharing it with McDermott's
daughter, Fanny. Fanny is in love
with Jerome Ball, and Barbara,
unable to argue her out of it, calls
for Ball, and Fanny walks in as
the two are talking. She accuses Barbara of trying to steal Jerome
for herself to keep from being an
old maid, but after a short spat
there is a reconciliation.

McDermott asks Barbara if she wants to cover the convention of
the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

With that white suit and that green hat, you ought to have the pick of
'em.

Barbara laughed. "Honestly, Fanny,
one would think you hadn't a thought
in the world for anything except 'em.'"

"Well, I have, but not more than
one or two. You might as well admit
there's nothing else as interesting."

Fanny was trying on one hat after
another and prouetting before the
looking glass.

"That's a broad statement, young
lady," answered Barbara.

Fanny took off the green hat and
came back to hop in the middle of
the bed among the new clothes. Look here, Bab, why don't you try falling in love? It's wonderful. And you're
such a peach, almost any man would be glad to have you. I can't see why
you've never tried it."

Barbara's face was sober. "Perhaps
I have Fanny."

The day came at last. Barbara found herself the center of interest in the Telegraph staff, as she closed her desk and turned to leave. Miss Badger was studiously regarding a page
of copy. She did not look up when everybody else shouted farewells to Barbara.

McDermott came to the outside gate
of the office with her. "Keep a stiff
upper lip, Miss Hawley," he said.
"There'll be terrible confusion. And
you'll be lucky if the hotel holds that room we reserved for you. Rooms will
be as scarce as hen's teeth this month.
But if you get in trouble of any kind,
wire me."

Barbara bade him goodby and
caught a taxi to Elm street. She found Fanny in the kitchen, employed in
the unaccustomed work of getting dinner.

The girl blushed as Barbara entered. "I think I've burned nearly everything, and this gravy's curdled, Babs," she apologized. "But I was determined you shouldn't have to stand
out here over this stove after you got home. You must be too excited to breathe."

"Too tired to breathe, instead. I think I'll slip into a negligee for dinner. You're a dear to think of me this great picnic my dear. If you've never done it before, you'd better stick close

to me."

"The older woman flushed. "No special picnic now, I'm a free lance." Barbara thought she caught a flicker of amusement across the faces of the two women who overheard the remark.

After dinner, the women reporters
went sight seeing. They wandered
through the old public square, where fountains played and ran down little
cascades over lily pads.

The spot of green was shut in by
high gray buildings.

Molly Perkins, the black-eyed woman, walked beside Barbara. She talked constantly, telling anecdotes,
quoting witty sayings, commenting on
life, with always a faint strain of de-
flant, braggadocio. Barbara listened,
wonderingly.

Part of the crowd decided upon motion pictures for entertainment. Barbara and several others declined to go.

"Come back to the hotel with me,
Miss Hawley," said Miss Perkins.
"We'll go up to our room and have
a good talk."

Barbara assented somewhat unwill-
ingly.

Miss Perkins' room proved an enigma. It was cluttered with nondescript articles. There were two marvellous Spanish silk shawls, a milk
bottle, an array of high-heeled slippers, a stack of copy paper on the floor, a broken fan on a chair and
a much battered old trunk in one corner.

"You see before you the sole fruits
of a mispent life," said Miss Perkins. "Anybody that'd choose newspaper work deserves what he gets.
That's all I say. Though it isn't so bad
for those of us who make a success."

Barbara looked at the woman's shabby shoes and at the lines between
the sharp black eyes.

"Yes," continued Molly. "It's going to be a great game this time. I can show you the ropes if you like. I'll sell my stuff to several of my regular magazines and syndicates. Always a market for it, you know."

"And if you wish, I'd be glad to con-

In a moment Barbara handed a scrawled message to the man behind the counter.
"Rush that through," she said.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

BARBARA snipped. "The big women's convention? Not really?" Mc-Dermott smiled. "Yes," he said. "Give me interviews with all the feminine celebrities—watch the sessions and
give us all the laughs you can. That's what the great mass of people like."

"Jeffries will go ahead and give us
protection on all the preliminaries.
He'll stay through the convention.
You'll only have to worry about the
interviews and so forth."

"Of course I'm thrilled over it, Mr.
McDermott," answered Barbara, her
cheeks glowing. "When do I leave?"

"In about two weeks," was the answer.

The time passed quickly. Barbara
bought new clothes—a striking white
suit and tailored hats and shoes, a
lace dress for dinners and luncheons
and an evening dress beyond her
means.

Fanny met her as she struggled up
the apartment steps one night just before the departure, her arms full of packages.

"Why, Bab, you've bought out the town."

In Barbara's bedroom they unpack-
ed the dresses and shoes, the sheer
hose and delicate handkerchiefs. "You
will look like a grand duchess once
removed, when you descend upon that convention."

Babs, you ought to buy out the town every once in a while. It gives you such a pretty color."

Barbara glanced in the mirror. It was true. She looked younger and prettier than for many months.

"It's wonderful what clothes will do
for you," she said. "I hadn't realized how few of them I'd had till I got these and began to get the kick
out of them."

"It's also wonderful what happiness
will do for you," remarked Fanny,
wisely. "You look now as if you had
something to live for."

Barbara got up and whirled around
on her tiptoes, to Fanny's evident astonishment. "I have. What more could
I ask than a chance to cover this Women's Federation convention? It's
the chance of a lifetime."

Fanny shook her head. "I'm afraid
I could ask more of life than a tiresome old convention, with a lot of upstage women to interview. But," she brightened, "maybe you'll meet a perfectly fascinating man on the train."

Barbara's train was to leave at nine o'clock. She dressed, finished her packing and was ready to leave the house at eight. Fanny hung about,
visibly struggling against tears.

Barbara stopped once and laughed.
"Really, Fanny, you act as if I were going to die, or something. Don't be foolish. I'll be back in a few days,
and you'll have a good rest while I'm gone."

An almost imperceptible shadow passed over Barbara's face, but Fanny saw it.

"You needn't worry, Babs," she cried. "I won't commit any crimes
while you're gone. I'll not see anybody
you don't want me to see." Her face childish and woebegone, moved Barbara to pity.

"I know you won't, dear," she said,
as she went out to the waiting taxi.
As she went down the steps a boy
rushed up and handed her a box of flowers. In the taxi she opened them
and found Jerome Ball's card with the
single word, "Apologies."

The trip was the most delightful
one that Barbara had known. She lay
back in a chair on the observation
platform and watched a yellow moon
come up far across the hills.

Toward midnight she went to bed
and slept blissfully all night, relaxed
from the knowledge that for a few hours at least no hungry press was waiting for her copy.

Breakfast was a new pleasure. Barbara ordered fruit and eggs and honey
and muffins and sat reveling in the gleaming linen and silverware. She had never lost her child's delight in eating on the diner.

She had slipped a little volume of Anatole France in her purse, but she
was too happy to read. She wondered
if perfect happiness did not consist
of just one long journey like this after another. But the jaded traveling men around her belied the idea.

At the convention city the station
was thronged. She found a taxi and drove to the hotel. Its lobby was still more crowded than the station.

The room had been held, to her
great relief, she unpacked the new dresses and lay down for a nap. There
would be nothing to do till tomorrow.

At dinner in the bronze room, she
met several other newspaper women.
They accepted her easily as one of
the tribe.

A very thin woman with snappy
black eyes leaned across the table to speak to her. "It's going to be a

duct you around."

Barbara fidgeted slightly. "Thank
you, I fear you'll be too busy to bot-
er with me. But I may call for help."

The woman brightened. "I've been
in the game 20 long years, my dear,"
she said.

Again Barbara glanced at the cluttered room and the old trunk. She shivered ever so slightly and rose to
go. "I think I'll go to bed, Miss Perkins. I'm very tired."

Molly Perkins reluctantly followed
her to the door. As Barbara put her
hand on the knob, the other woman
said, "Oh, by the way, could you lend
me ten dollars until Saturday? I ought to have a draft that hasn't got here
yet."

Barbara looked in her purse. "I haven't it in cash, but I'll go down and
get a traveler's check cashed for you."

The woman's smile was brilliant.
"Thank you so much."

Barbara caught an elevator. The lobby was still crowded with laughing
groups of women. Barbara caught glimpses of several faces known to the national eye. She walked along, fascinated with the novelty of the experience.

As she neared the cashier's window
a man came hurrying around a corner. His face was sleek and his eyes
were uneasy.

Barbara stared at him. Then she hastened to the hotel register. The
clerk opened the recent pages for her,
and she ran her fingers down the column of arrivals.

She stopped at the name, "Winthrop
R. Mannerling."

Then she rushed to the telegraph
booth near the elevator. She found a pad and a pencil.

TODAY'S MARKETS

NEW YORK STOCKS
DISPLAY STRONG
TONES

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Stock prices displayed a strong tone at the opening of today's market. Motors were again bid up in spirited fashion in apparent anticipation of a favorable reception of the new models at the Chrysler opened two points higher. General Motors 14, and Studebaker 1. Ralls started upward under leadership of Chicago and Northwestern, which opened a point higher.

Reports that a large January reinvestment demand was as yet unsatisfied and prospects of easier money rates stimulated the activity of operators on the long side. The general list bounded upward under an avalanche of buying orders with the motors continuing as leaders of the advance. Chrysler (old stock) extended its gain to five points before the end of the first half hour, American Chicle to four, and General Motors, Fisher Body, Hudson, Woolworth, American Agricultural Chemical, preferred, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, and Texas Gulf Sulphur sold 2 to 3 1/2 points higher. There were a few soft spots, Radio Corporation, American Tobacco, and DuPont sagging a point or so.

Foreign exchanges opened firm with a jump of nearly ten points to 384 cents in French francs as the outstanding feature. Demand sterling held firm at 454 3/4.

ADVANCE FEATURE
OF WHEAT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. (AP)—With Liverpool quotations showing an unexpected advance the wheat market here took an early swing upward today. A liberal decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage attracted notice and so too did reports of unwelcome further rains in Argentina as well as serious floods in western Europe. Opening prices 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 cents higher, new style, May 1.81 1/2 to 1.82 1/2, and July 1.55, were followed by something of a setback and then by fresh upturns.

Corn and oats were firmer, sympathizing with wheat strength. After opening 1/2 to 1 1/4 cents up, May 87 to 87 1/2, corn receded somewhat. Oats started unchanged to 1/2 cent higher, May 45 1/2 to 46, and then scored a moderate advance all around. In line with hog values the provision market was easy.

NEW ORLEANS HAS
FIRM OPENING
MONDAY

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (AP)—The cotton market opened with a firm tone after the triple holiday. Liverpool cables were better than due and first trades here showed gains of 19 to 23 points. Prices eased off slightly after the call to 19.25 for January and 19.40 for March, or 5 to 10 points down from the opening, but soon rallied again on evidence of trade buying, July advancing to 19.03, March to 19.51, and May to 19.13, or 29 to 30 points above the previous close.

The market ruled quiet but steady all morning, the strength of the near positions of January and March dominating the market. The buying of the near months caused January to advance to $20.67, March to $19.54, and May to $19.14, or 31 to 32 points above the previous close. The late months, July and October, showed less strength as these positions are being sold against purchases of near months. Toward noon the market was steady and six to seven points under the highs.

The market continued steady during the afternoon and the three near active months made new highs, January advancing to 20.08, March to 19.57 and May to 19.16, or 33 to 35 points above the previous close. July and October did not make new highs, being held back by transferring from the near positions. Later in the afternoon prices eased off 2 to 3 points from the highs.

Keeping Pace

With the Constant Growth of Lubbock

One of the contributing factors in the growth of this city is the reputation she enjoys of supplying to the citizens electric current at the very lowest rate. This was done by the co-operation of the people — those who decided that the consumers of this necessity should be owners of its source.

It is interesting to note that the plant has provided an unusually good service to the people and has kept pace in equipment necessary for the care of the increased population.

POWER OF OPINION

Public opinion rules man with an iron hand such as no Pharaoh of Roman empire ever possessed. No tyrant ever exercised so despotic a power over human beings as the tyrant
public opinion.

Few acts that men do are not directly or indirectly answerable to
public opinion, and few men act with-
out one eye on public opinion. Everything man talks or thinks about bears
the impress of this seal of authority
of the masses. Businessmen live or die,
politicians are elected or defeated, society "does" or "does not" artists be-
come famous or unknown, governments
rise or fall, by the mandates of public
opinion. Public opinion is the opinion of the majority and the public opinion of a democracy or republic is a
nation in which the majority rules.

Most men and women will admit
that 99 per cent of their actions are
guided by public opinion, by what
other people will think of them. Coming to think of it, isn't that just the
reason girls, young and old, primp
and powder and spend all their money
on pretty clothes, men buy expensive
cars instead of the inexpensive kind,
people make the exteriors of their
homes more beautiful than the inter-
iors, the opera and Shakespearean
plays are so well attended, and everybody does so many things they would
rather not do?

"Like other tyrannies, the tyranny
of the majority was at first, and is
still vulgarly, held in dread," wrote
John Stuart Mill in 1858.

How applicable today is his further
statement:

"Those whose bread is already secured, and who desire no favors from
men in power, or from bodies of men,
or from the public, have nothing to
fear from the open avowal of any
ill-spoken of, and this it ought not to require a very heroic mould to enable
them to bear."

From the pen of the nineteenth
century philosopher it sounds easy
but, from our knowledge of today,
was martyrdom in the Roman arena
and on the rack of the Spanish In-
quisition more terrible than the modern martyrdom to public opinion? Mill
didn't know public opinion.

WASTE ACRES

It is no secret that there are parts
of the United States which, while they
can not be said to be unexplored, are
remote from any human habitation
and for long periods are unvisited
by human beings, and yet one usually
in the sparsely settled west or south.
That an aeroplane could fall within
a few miles of New York and be un-
discovered for six years seems incredible and yet the remains of a wrecked
plane found in the Berkshire Hills has
been identified as that of a Canadian flyer who disappeared while making a flight in 1919.

Incidents of this character show
that in virtually every state of the
union there are isolated regions with-
out human inhabitants and in which
the human voice is seldom heard.
Primitive conditions exist in many of
these sections, the only visible change
being the color of the skin of the
hunters who occasionally wend their
way between their virgin trees.

They are, for the most part, regions
too barren, isolated or irregular for
agriculture, although the frontiers
must push into them as the nation's population increases beyond the capacity of existing inhabited areas to house and feed it. For those who fear
a time of over-population in the United States there is comfort in these
"blind spots" and unmapped trees.

STEWART'S
WASHINGTON LETTER

EXPLOSIVES ARE BIG JOLT IN WILD RIDE WITH ADMIRAL

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—One of our
leading admirals took me out to the naval research laboratory, on the other side of the Potomac, not long ago,
to see some scientific experiments
work in progress there.

Just what it was had nothing to do with the story. I didn't understand it
anyway.

The point is that the admiral is very
much interested in it and wanted to
stir up a little publicity in its behalf,
with a view to extracting enough modesty from congress to develop it still further.

So we took a street car. We rode
and we rode and finally we came to
the end of the line.

"Now we gotta get a gasoline wagon," said the admiral "Hey!" he called
to an African youth, standing alongside a venerable filver nearby the
street car terminus. "Can you take
us to the naval laboratory? You know
where it is, doncha?"

"Yassuh, yassuh," said the Senegam-
bian.

This filver was of the model of the early 90's. It was fastened together
with wire. A number of the parts
were missing entirely. The wheels
wobbled-threatened to come off. In fact, it had asthma. It had the blind
stagger. It had paresis. It had everything.

We took a sharp curve on two wheels.
Far down the road ahead of us loomed
a huge navy motor truck. From the
rear a red flag fluttered.

"Slow bell! Slow bell!" yelled the
admiral. "Great gosh! Explosives!"

his seat.

"Muh brake's no good," he observed
placidly.

Well, we missed that truck by the
breadth of a hair, to a chorus (though
only one voice furnished it) of "Fort!
Hard o' port! Port y'r hellum!" and
landed alive at the naval laboratory.

"You can go home as you please,"

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BARBARA HAWLEY is 25, self-
willed and talented. Wanting to
live, she breaks with her fian-
cé, BRUCE REYNOLDS, an architect, and gets a job on the Telegraph.

She sees plenty of it at a road-
house dinner, where BOB JEF-FRIES, police reporter, introduces her to JEROME BALL, man
about town. A prominent man
kills himself at the dinner and Barbara picks up a red scarf
dropped by his unknown woman
companion.

Bruce enters the real estate
firm of Manners, Stone and Reynolds, which launches an ambitious development, Vale acres.
LYDIA STACY, rich widow, is interested in him, but he rebuffs
her and she tells ANDREW Mc-DERMOTT, managing editor of
the Telegraph, that she suspects
crookedness in the firm.

Barbara, meanwhile, edits a love letter column and gives much
advice to a correspondent who
signs herself "Violetta" and asks
how she can land a "socially superior young man." Suddenly she learns that Bruce has married a factory girl, VIOLETTA CRAN-
BY—the same one she has been
advising.

At this point Manners decamps
with the bank deposits and Vale
Acres goes to smash. Bruce is bitter against Barbara for the newspaper publicity that follows.

Barbara's mother dies and Barbara moves to an in-town apartment, sharing it with McDermott's
with Jerome Ball, and Barbara,
unable to argue her out of it, calls
for Ball, and Fanny walks in as
the two are talking. She accuses
Barbara of trying to steal Jerome
for herself to keep from being an
old maid, but after a short spat
there is a reconciliation.

McDermott asks Barbara if she
wants to cover the convention of
the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

With that white sult and that green
hat, you ought to have the pick of
'em."

Barbara laughed. "Honestly, Fanny,
one would think you hadn't a thought
in the world for anything except men."
"Well, I have, but not more than
one or two. You might as well admit
there's nothing else as interesting."
Fanny was trying on one hat after
another and prouetting before the
looking glass.

"That's a broad statement, young
lady," answered Barbara.

Fanny took off the green hat and
came back to hop in the middle of
the bed among the new clothes. Look here, Babs, why don't you try falling
in love? It's wonderful. And you're
such a peach, almost any man would be glad to have you. I can't see why
you've never tried it."

I have Fanny."

XXX

The day came at last. Barbara found herself the center of interest in the Telegraph staff, as she closed her desk and turned to leave. Miss Rad-
ger was studiously regarding a page
of copy. She did not look up when everybody else shouted farewells to Barbara.

McDermott came to the outside gate
of the office with her. "Keep a stiff
upper lip, Miss Hawley," he said.
"There'll be terrible confusion. And
you'll be lucky if the hotel holds that
be as scarce as hen's teeth this month.
But if you get in trouble of any kind,
wire me."

Barbara bade him goodby and
caught a taxi to Elm street. She found Fanny in the kitchen, employed in
the unaccustomed work of getting dinner.

The girl blushed as Barbara entered. "I think I've burned nearly everything, and this gray's curled,
Babs," she apologized. "But I was determined you shouldn't have to stand
out here over this stove after you
got home. You must be too excited to breathe."

"Too tired to breathe, instead, I
think I'll slip into a negligee for dinner. You're a dear to think of me this

done it before, you'd better stick close
to me."

The older woman flushed. "No
special paper now, I'm a free lance." Barbara thought she caught a flick-
er of amusement across the faces of
the two women who overheard the remark.

After dinner, the women reporters
went sight seeing. They wandered
through the old public square, where
fountains played and ran down little
cascades over lily pads.

The spot of green was shut in by
high gray buildings.

Molly Perkins, the black-eyed woman, walked beside Barbara. She
talked constantly, telling anecdotes,
quoting witty sayings, commenting on
life, with always a faint strain of de-
flant braggadocio. Barbara listened,
wonderfully.

Part of the crowd decided upon motion pictures for entertainment. Barbara and several others declined to go.

"Come back to the hotel with me,
Miss Hawley," said Miss Perkins.
"We'll go up to our room and have
a good talk."

Barbara assented somewhat unwill-
ingly.

Miss Perkins' room proved an enig-
ma. It was cluttered with nondescript articles. There were two magnificent Spanish silk shawls, a milk
bottle, an array of high-heeled slip-
pers, a stack of copy paper on the
floor, a broken fan on a chair and
a much battered old trunk in one corner.

"You see before you the sole fruits
of a misspent life," said Miss Perkins. "Anybody that'd choose newspaper work deserves what he gets.
That's all I say. Though it isn't so bad
for those of us who make a success."

Barbara looked at the woman's
shabby shoes and at the lines between
the sharp black eyes.

"Yes," continued Molly, "it's going
to be a great game this time. I can show you the ropes if you like. I'll
sell my stuff to several of my regular
magazines and syndicates. Always a
market for it, you know."

"And if you wish, I'd be glad to con-

In a moment Barbara handed a scrawled message to the man behind the counter.
"Rush that through," she said.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

BARBARA gasped. "The big women's convention? Not really?" Mc-Dermott smiled. "Yes," he said. "Give us interviews with all the feminine celebrities—watch the sessions and
give us all the laughs you can. That's
what the great mass of people like."
"Jeffries will go ahead and give us
protection on all the preliminaries.
He'll stay through the convention.
You'll only have to worry about the
interviews and so forth."

"Of course I'm thrilled over it, Mr.
McDermott," answered Barbara, her
cheeks glowing. "When do I leave?"
"In about two weeks," was the answer.

XXX
The time passed quickly. Barbara
bought new clothes—a striking white
suit and tailored hats and shoes, a
lace dress for dinners and luncheons
and an evening dress beyond her
means.

Fanny met her as she struggled up
the apartment steps one night just
before the departure, her arms full of
packages.

"Why, Babs," laughed the girl,
"you've bought out the town."
In Barbara's bedroom they unpack-
ed the dresses and shoes, the sheer
hose and delicate handkerchiefs. "You
will look like a grand duchess once
removed, when you descend upon that convention," laughed Fanny. "Honestly, Babs, you ought to buy out the town every once in a while. It gives
you such a pretty color."

Barbara glanced in the mirror. It
was true. She looked younger and
prettier than for many months.
"It's wonderful what clothes will do
for you," she said. "I hadn't realized how few of them I'd had till I
got these and began to get the kick
out of them."

"It's also wonderful what happiness
will do for you," remarked Fanny,
wisely. "You look now as if you had
something to live for."

Barbara got up and whirled around
on her tiptoes to Fanny's evident astonishment. "I have. What more could
Women's Federation convention? It's
the chance of a lifetime."

Fanny shook her head. "I'm afraid
I could ask more of life than a fire-
some old convention, with a lot of upstage women to interview. But," she
brightened, "maybe you'll meet a perfectly fascinating man on the train."

way, Fanny."

Barbara's train was to leave at nine
o'clock. She dressed, finished her
packing and was ready to leave the
house at eight. Fanny hung about,
visibly struggling against tears.

Barbara stopped once and laughed.
"Really, Fanny, you act as if I were
going to die, or something. Don't be foolish. I'll be back in a few days,
and you'll have a good rest while I'm gone." An almost imperceptible shadow passed over Barbara's face, but Fanny saw it.

"You needn't worry, Babs," she cried. "I won't commit any crime
while you're gone. I'll not see anybody
you don't want me to see." Her face
childish and woe-begone, moved Barbara to pity.

"I know you won't dear," she said,
as she went out to the waiting taxi.
As she went down the steps a boy
rushed up and handed her a box of
flowers. In the taxi she opened them
and found Jerome Ball's card with the
single word, "Apologies."

The trip was the most delightful
one that Barbara had known. She lay
back in a chair on the observation
platform and watched a yellow moon
come up far across the hills.

Toward midnight she went to bed
and slept blissfully all night, relaxed
from the knowledge that for a few
hours at least no hungry press was
waiting for her copy.

Breakfast was a new pleasure. Barbara ordered fruit and eggs and honey
and muffins and sat reveling in the
gleaming linen and silverware. She
had never lost her child's delight in
eating on the diner.

She had slipped a little volume of Anatole France in her purse, but she
was too happy to read. She wondered
if perfect happiness did not consist
of just one long journey like this after another. But the faded traveling men around her belid the idea.

At the convention city the station
was thronged. She found a taxi and drove to the hotel. Its lobby was still
more crowded than the station.

The room had been held to her
great relief. She unpacked the new dresses and lay down for a nap. There
would be nothing to do till tomorrow.
At dinner in the bronze room, she
met several other newspaper women.
They accepted her easily as one of
the tribe.

A very thin woman with snappy
black eyes leaned across the table to speak to her. "It's going to be a

duct you around."

Barbara fidgeted slightly. "Thank
you, I fear you'll be too busy to bot-
ter with me. But I may call for help."

The woman brightened. "I've been
in the game 20 long years, my dear,"
she said.

Again Barbara glanced at the clut-
tered room and the old trunk. She shivered ever so slightly and rose to
go. "I think I'll go to bed, Miss Perkins. I'm very tired."

Molly Perkins reluctantly followed
her to the door. As Barbara put her
hand on the knob, the other woman
said, "Oh, by the way, could you lend
me ten dollars until Saturday? I ought
to have a draft that hasn't got here
yet."

Barbara looked in her purse. "I haven't it in cash, but I'll go down and
get a traveler's check cashed for you."

The woman's smile was brilliant.
"Thank you so much."

Barbara caught an elevator. The
lobby was still crowded with laughing
groups of women. Barbara caught
 glimpses of several faces known to the national eye. She walked along, fascinated with the novelty of the experience.

As she neared the cashier's window
a man came hurrying around a corner. His face was sleek and his eyes
were uneasy.

Barbara stared at him. Then she hastened to the hotel register. The
clerk opened the recent pages for her,
and she ran her fingers down the columns of arrivals.

She stopped at the name, "Winthrop
H. Mannerling."

Then she rushed to the telegraph
booth near the elevator. She found a pad and a pencil.

TODAY'S MARKETS*NEW YORK STOCKS DISPLAY STRONG
TONES

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (P)—Stock prices displayed a strong tone at the opening of today's market. Motors were again bid up in spirited fashion in apparent anticipation of a favorable reception of the new models at the New York automobile show this week. Chrysler opened two points higher, General Motors 1½, and Studebaker 1. Ralls started upward under leadership of Chicago and Northwestern, which opened a point higher.

Reports that a large January reinvestment demand was as yet unsatisfied and prospects of easier money rates stimulated the activity of operators on the long side. The general list bounded upward under an avalanche of buying orders with the motors continuing as leaders of the advance. Chrysler (old stock) extended its gain to five points before the end of the first half hour. American Chicle to four, and General Motors, Fisher Body, Hudson, Woolworth, American Agricultural Chemical, preferred, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, and Texas Gulf Sulphur sold 2 to 3½ points higher. There were a few soft spots, Radio Corporation, American Tobacco, and DuPont sagging a point or so.

Foreign exchanges opened firm with a jump of nearly ten points to 384 cents in French francs as the outstanding feature. Demand sterling held firm at 484 3-4.

ADVANCE FEATURE OF WHEAT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. (P)—With Liverpool quotations showing an unexpected advance the wheat market here took an early swing upward today. A liberal decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage attracted notice and so too did reports of unfavorable further rains in Argentina as well as serious floods in western Europe. Opening prices 2½ to 3½ cents higher, new style, May 1.81½ to 1.82½ and July 1.55, were followed by something of a setback and then by fresh upturns.

Corn and oats were firmer, sympathizing with wheat strength. After opening ½ to 1½ cents up, May 87 to 87½, corn receded somewhat. Oats started unchanged to ½ cent higher, May 45½ to 46, and then scored a moderate advance all around. In line with hog values the provision market was easy.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (P)—The cotton market opened with a firm tone after the triple holiday. Liverpool cables were better than due and first trades here showed gains of 19 to 24 points. Prices eased off slightly after the call to 19.22 for January and 19.40 for March, or 8 to 10 points down from the opening, but soon rallied again on evidence of trade buying. July advancing to 20.03, March to 19.51, and May to 19.13, or 29 to 30 points above the previous close.

The market ruled quiet but steady all morning, the strength of the near positions of January and March dominating the market. The buying of the near months caused January to advance to $20.07, March to $19.54, and May to $19.14, or 31 to 32 points above the previous close. The late months, July and October, showed less strength as these positions are being sold against purchases of near months. Toward noon the market was steady and six to seven points under the highs.

The market continued steady during the afternoon and the three near active months made new highs, January advancing to 20.08, March to 19.57 and May to 19.16, or 33 to 35 points above the previous close. July and October did not make new highs, being held back by transferring from the near positions. Later in the afternoon prices eased off 2 to 3 points from the highs.

TEXAS
NEWS BRIEFS
By Associated Press

DALLAS — J. J. Bye, Dallas newspaper pressman, was found shot to death at his home last night. A shotgun he had given his son for Christmas lay by his side. Besides his widow, Bye is survived by two sons and one daughter.

DALLAS — A negro, armed with a pistol, held up and robbed George McDonald, employe of a cigar stand in the lobby of the Melba Theatre here today and escaped with between $175 and $200. The hold-up occurred in the heart of the business district, a few steps from the sidewalk.

SHERMAN — Seventy-five hundred people were present at the Sherman-Bellefonte football game New Year's Day, check of admissions show. The surplus fund was turned over to the high school athletic association.

SHERMAN — The Pool Manufacturing company, garment makers, opened an addition to their plant today, which gave employment to one hundred more people. The Pool Knitting Mills also is ready to begin operation with twenty-five people employed.

SHERMAN — Hubert H. Harrison, manager of the Chamber of Commerce at Wichita Falls, will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Sherman Chamber of Commerce Friday night, January 29, it was announced today. Five new directors will be elected.

VERNON — Vernon expects to have 1,900 school students in city schools here when enrollment is checked today following the Christmas holiday recess.

GALVESTON — County officers today continued their investigation of the Dickinson Drug and Dry Goods store robbery, which was discovered yesterday morning and in which thieves took more than $1,000 loot. The robbery is believed to have been perpetrated by the same gang that has staged similar crimes in Galveston county during the past year.

Texas Gains In Ruling Given By Interstate C. C.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (P)—Upon the protest of the Ogden, Utah, Grain Exchange, the Interstate Commerce Commission today found that rate increases by the Los Angeles and Salt

Lake railroad on grain products moving to Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma points were unreasonable.

The railroad was ordered to cancel new schedules which were to have become effective September 15, 1925, but which have been held in suspension. Illustrating the effect of the increase sought the commission said that the present rate of 71 cents on wheat from Milford, Utah, to Sherman, Texas, would have become $1.02.

ISSUE COMPLAINT AGAINST BIG BAKERY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (P)—A new complaint alleging violation of the Clayton act by the Continental Baking company by acquiring control of more than a score smaller bakeries throughout the country, has been served by the Federal Trade Commission. Filed on December 19, it was made public today by attorneys for the company in presenting its answer, a denial that the merger had effected a monopoly in the baking trade.

The complaint, originally issued last October and revised to include several bakeries whose stock recently was obtained by the Continental corporation, alleged that the consolidation acted to lessen competition, restrain commerce and create a monopoly in bakery products. It stated the corporation to appear at a hearing before the commission next February 3.

The answer of the concern, which some time ago completed a huge merger with the Ward and General corporations of New York, declared it "has no monopoly in any products in which it deals, nor can anyone obtain such a monopoly in any community in the United States."

"It is physically impossible," it continued for any concern to acquire or obtain such a monopoly because the business relates to products that are made from material available in large quantities and in reasonable prices to all going concerns, and to millions of homes, in which various people are capable of producing such products in case of necessity."

One of the contributing factors in the growth of this city is the reputation she enjoys of supplying to the citizens electric current at the very lowest rate. This was done by the co-operation of the people — those who decided that the consumers of this necessity should be owners of its source.

It is interesting to note that the plant has provided an unusually good service to the people and has kept pace in equipment necessary for the care of the increased population.

Nick Altrock Is Safely In Ranks Of Harris' Club

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Baseball fans who like a little comedy with their baseball can now relax and sigh contentedly for Nick Altrock has signed his 1926 contract.

The famed coach comedian in announcing his acceptance of new terms said:

"I've been with President Griffith for 15 years, and have never even had a debate with him, yet, over salary."

BUFFALO QUINTET IS PRACTICING HARD

CANTON, Texas, Jan. 4.—With the opening of the winter quarter at West Texas State Teachers college, basketball practice opened with a bang. There are five letter men reporting regularly for practice and a host of last year's "yearlings" together with the best array of freshmen ever to report for basketball at the Teachers college.

The letter men are Capt. Alex Hale who is playing his second year with the Buffaloes and who is regarded as one of the best floor men in the state. Cleat Crump of Dallas is Hale's running mate at forward and is also playing his second year. Otella Herm of Snyder is playing his last year with the Herd and is rated high in basketball circles of the state. Hill who lives in Canyon, is Herm's running mate at guard and is also outstanding man of this section of the country. Ray Evans the other letter man is one of the best utility men ever developed at the college, playing equally well at guard or forward. He has not played as long as Hill or Herm, but will be lost to the team after this year by graduation.

Four Regulars Back.

The four regulars from last year's team, Mill, Herm, Hale and Crump, were recognized by basketball experts throughout the state as the cage game's best men. Practically every coach that saw Herm work last year named him as the outstanding guard of the T. I. A. A. He was almost unanimously chosen for all the T. I. A. A. selections. Hill was given the third guard position by many coaches and officials and in one or two instances was rated ahead of Herm. For the forward selections Crump was probably the favorite of the coaches of the T. I. A. A. He scored more points than any other man in the conference and was also a splendid man for team work. Hale, his running mate, received honorable mention by many coaches and in some instances he was placed on the all-star cast. He was probably the best floor man the Buffaloes had last year and was popular with the men, because of the fact that he would rather see a buddy score than to score himself.

WHAT'S DOING IN WEST TEXAS TOWNS

HEREFORD.—Mrs. Harrison Trow of this city has donated to Wayland college an entire section of land located near Dimmitt in Castro county. Total value of the gift is given at $16,000. Wayland college is said to have received donations of more than $100,000 during the past year.

FLOYDADA.—The Floydada Chamber of Commerce arranged with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to send B. M. Whitaker, exhibit manager of the organization to put on a week campaign through Floyd county in the interest of diversified farming. Mr. Whitaker made instructive talks of seed selection and displayed interesting and instructive motion pictures in the campaign.

SAN SARA.—San Saba county pecan growers have organized an association which has for its purpose to promote the growing of improved varieties of pecans in this county. The organization also proposes to encourage top working native pecan trees in the section. An annual pecan day is to be held at which time a pecan show with prizes will be put on.

MERKEL.—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Largent have returned from Chicago where they have been in charge of the famous Largent herd of Herefords which have been on exhibit at the Chicago Live Stock show. The Largent herd made great winnings at this fair. This herd is famed throughout the United States for its winnings at the leading fairs and exhibitions.

OZONA.—A new modern fire proof hotel will be erected here during the coming year at a cost of $100,000.

ELECTRA.—More and better dairy cows on the farm in Electra's territory is being urged. The Electra Creamery is forced to ship in its raw product from points three or four hundred miles away and the Electra Chamber of Commerce has resolved that Electra shall feed itself and produce a surplus for shipment to other points.

AMARILLO.—Amarillo, voted overwhelmingly to extend the city limits. This election will facilitate the sale of the $1,700,000 bonds for the municipal water system here.

WELLINGTON. — A bond issue of $200,000 carried here by a vote of 300 to 3. The issue will provide funds for a modern water system here. Wellington development is proceeding steadily. Gas is the next step proposed.

JACKSBORO. — A twenty-four thousand egg capacity hatchery will be installed here in time for spring hatching.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Bills have been introduced in both the House and Senate carrying substantial appropriations for exploration and development of the potash deposits of western Texas. These deposits are said to be comparable to the great German deposits which now constitute the world's sole source of supply. Senator Morris Sheppard and Representative Claude Huddleston are authors of the bills.

AMHERST. — Sugar beet culture is proven practicable in the shallow water belt of the Plains. The Haisell Farms experimented with the crop this year and met with great success. Heavy yield of fine quality beets was made. It is planned to try the crop on a larger scale next year and if it proves successful to go after a sugar factory and encourage the crop on a great scale.

HURRICANE WHICH WRECKED SAMOA IS OVER

PAGO PAGO, Samoa, Jan. 4. (AP)—The hurricane which struck American Samoa is over leaving destruction and wreckage. The thatched houses of the prosperous Samoan villages are strewn everywhere, and many villages were completely wiped out, but without loss of life, because of the light construction of the native houses.

Giant trees loosened by the fury of the wind slid down steep mountain-sides into the valley villages. Landslides are blocking roads and cutting power lines.

Amoy Samoa is facing a greater food famine than in the hurricane of 1915. The present food supply on the island, it is estimated, will last two weeks. The island government is taking steps to assure a food supply.

Hurricane Raging.

LONDON, Jan. 4. (AP)—An Evening News dispatch from Christchurch, N. Z., reports a terrific hurricane raging at Apia, on Upolu, one of the Samoan Islands.

The correspondent declares the storm is worse than that of 1889, when a number of warships were wrecked.

English Prepare To Move As Flood Waters Advancing

LONDON, Jan. 4. (AP)—After fifteen successive days of rain, with no let-up in sight the people in and near the inundated areas of England are packing their belongings and preparing for hasty departures.

The waters continue to rise in the low-lying districts. The Thames went up again over the week end and now measures more than a mile and a half across in some places.

In the low lying towns of Northampton county, furniture is floating about in the lower rooms of houses and hundreds of acres are inundated in Yorkshire. The electric works are flooded in some places, cutting off power for lighting purposes.

MRS. DELLA HOOD FOUND DEAD AT SHALLOWATER

Funeral services for Mrs. Della Hood wife of M. P. Hood, of Shallowater, who died suddenly at her home Saturday night, were held this afternoon at Shallowater, with Rev. Todd, local Baptist minister, officiating. Interment was made in the cemetery there.

Mrs. Hood died Saturday night about 9 o'clock after she had been found in the yard of the farm home in an unconscious condition shortly before dark. None of the family except her had been at home since 10 o'clock Saturday morning, and it is not known how long she had lain unconscious before she was found, attaches of the Rix Undertaking company, who handled the body, said. High blood pressure was given as the cause of her death.

Deceased is survived by her husband and several children.

Martin's Bakery To Celebrate 16th Anniversary In Program To Formally Open New Plant In Lubbock Tonight

There is probably no business institution in Lubbock or on the South Plains that can surpass the record made by R. H. Martin, better known as "Batterflake" since he came to this city sixteen years ago, and opened what is now one of the biggest business enterprises in West Texas, known as Martin's Bakery.

In keeping with his policy of supplying the demands made upon him for his products, regardless of the volume, Mr. Martin has recently installed in a building erected for the purpose on East Broadway, one of the best equipped and most up-to-date bakery plants in this section of the state, and tonight will hold open house to his thousands of friends and customers in a double celebration, marking not only his sixteenth anniversary in business in this city, but the formal opening of his new plant.

Music and Souvenirs.

The doors of the institution will be thrown open at 8 o'clock when the public will be urged to make inspection of the plant in every detail. Music will be furnished for the occasion by a well known orchestra, and favors for all lady visitors will be distributed.

The plant is equipped with two ovens, one of them weighing 150 tons, which required five men working constantly for thirty days to build. 32,000 brick, many of them enamel face, were used in construction of the oven, and to gain some idea as to this particular part of the plant, it might be interesting to note that it required fourteen days to heat the oven the first time. It is heated by electricity, and is equipped with regulators that keep it at even temperatures at all times. 700 Loaves Per Hour Capacity.

This oven had a capacity of 400 loaves of bread, and right beside it another oven has been constructed with a capacity of 300 loaves, giving the plant a total capacity of 700 loaves per hour. This is quite a contrast to the plant built by Mr. Martin when he opened business sixteen years ago. At that time he could produce only 60 loaves per hour, and then under rather difficult circumstances. The present plant is so constructed that another oven could be very easily added to bring the capacity to 1,700 loaves per hour. The plant represents a total investment of approximately $65,000. Mr. Martin told the Daily Journal.

In addition to the bakery plant, Mr. Martin owns and operates a confectionery and lunch parlor, uptown, where the many varieties of products turned out at the plant are retailed, including pies, cakes, and pastries of all kinds. In the operation of the two business institutions, he employs 22 people, with ten at the plant and 12 in the uptown establishment, which is one of the most modern and best equipped in the state.

Mr. Martin issues an urgent invitation to all his friends and customers to attend the formal opening exercises tonight, when guides will be furnished to show them through the many departments of the new plant.

Three Points In Mystery Of Roumanian Prince And His Love Affairs Are Made Public; Carol Refuses To Give Report

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 4.—At least three points in the mystery surrounding Crown Prince Carol of Roumania, and his relinquishment of his right to ascend the throne have been cleared up.

Carol is in Milan. Also, there is Mme. Magda Lupescu, blue eyed, red haired daughter of a Jewish merchant of Jassy, Roumania, with whom Carol is on friendly terms. Zsazs Lamberino, former morganatic wife of the Prince, is remarried.

Is Dinner Host.

Carol gave a dinner to his entourage at a hotel last night. Mme. Lupescu was a guest. At her place at the table was a huge bouquet of white flowers—of the same kind that she threw into his automobile, enclosing a love note, which brought them together in the bonds of friendship.

Prior to Carol's abdication, he and Mme. Lupescu motored together daily but when the storm broke these pleasures ceased. Carol remained in seclusion, but Lupescu occasionally appeared in the foyer.

Not To Make Statement.

To a number of written questions sent in by the correspondent of the Daily Express, Carol replied in writing that he had determined not to make any statement with regard to his renunciation. With some asperity he declared that the details of his doings, printed in the newspapers, were fundamentally incorrect and that they constituted infamous propaganda. Carol is said to have flown into a rage when informed that his father, King Ferdinand, announced to a crown council that he had given up his rights to the throne.

King Claims No Split.

Best advice given says that both the King and Queen and the cabinet are reassuring that the abdication of Carol does not indicate a dynastic or political conflict. A dispatch from Budapest describes a woman who has visited Paris, London and Milan with Carol as the wife of a major. The Prince was ordered by the Roumanian

MORE LAUREL FOR BROTHERS AT CAPITOL

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — The Connery brothers, Bob and Fred, are about to hang up another championship in addition to their shooting, fishing and golf titles. In point of service, they are perhaps the two oldest court clerks in Texas. Bob is chalking up 28 years as clerk and deputy clerk of the Third Court of Civil Appeals, and Fred is approaching his fortieth year as an official of the Texas Supreme court, 18 years of which he has spent as clerk of the tribunal.

Now officials are more familiar in the capital or have a greater number of friends than the Connery brothers. Yet this fact has at times led to a situation, somewhat disquieting to Bob, because persons without discriminating perception have been known to interpret an embarrassing question of consanguinity.

"What I distinctly know is that Fred is not my son; let that be understood at the outset."

With this emphatic pronouncement, Bob lays at rest insinuating presumptions and is ready to proceed.

"Of course, Fred sometimes comes to me for legal advice, and he always accepts it if it suits him," said the clerk of the Third Court of Civil Appeals. "He also seeks fishing and golf advice from me."

"Bob can talk all he wants about his fishing and golf; let it be remembered that I got him his first job with the court of civil appeals," rejoins the clerk of the Supreme court.

Which naturally brings up another parallel in the lives of the two court clerks. They are interested in outdoor sports, golf, fishing and hunting, but Bob claims superiority in all three.

Back in 1910 Bob was state golf champion. He held that honor and also was champion shot of the state from 1906 to 1919, and for 23 years was champion of his local golf club. All his life he has been known as an invincible fisherman with a reputation for uncanny success, an ailment which time has failed to check. He claims the "croix de fish."

While Bob was winning the state golf championship, Fred got up among the 50 per centers and was runner-up to Bob in the 1910 championship matches. The fishing championship now has been settled, but the clerk of the court of civil appeals has some pointed obiter dicta on the fishing habits of a certain person about the Supreme court.

"Fred likes to fish," says Bob, "but he's a Pullman car fisherman. He's a fastidious duck; wants a servant to bait his hook, pull out the fish and cook breakfast for him."

"I love sport. I'd rather shoot than eat. I'd rather play golf than shoot. I'd rather fish than do anything."

Whatever may be the present competitive sporting talents of the two brothers, it is certain that back in their boyhood in Alabama, Fred was an expert squirrel shot, and both were great performers with the sling shot, the kind made of a rubber band and a forked stick. One of them, which one is now obscure, once hit an enraged bulldog in the eye with a missile from a sling shot.

Fred Connery came to the Supreme court clerk's office in 1886. Dr. Charles S. Morse was then clerk. Upon the death of Dr. Morse, 16 years ago, Mr. Connery became clerk.

Bob Connery has been a county school superintendent, a surveyor, a postmaster, and a city attorney, serving in the latter capacity at El Paso. He came to the clerk's office of the Third Court of Civil Appeals as deputy clerk in 1893, serving in that capacity three years, and since then has been chief clerk.

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — Peddlers who prey upon the credulous with deft intimations that their goods have been smuggled into the United States, have made their annual appearance in Houston.

They offer for sale fine linens, suitcases, table cloths and bed spreads. The peddlers say the goods come from ships, but just arrived at the port of Houston from other countries. With an air of mystery the peddler manages to convey the idea that he has smuggled the merchandise and that the potential purchaser can buy it cheaply, because forsooth, it has paid no duty. The salesman apparently cannot speak good English. He is a foreigner but he understands psychology and the effect of an indirect appeal to cupidity and avarice. Besides, wouldn't it be clever to "put one over" on the customs men?

Finally, after two bed spreads, for which the original price was $50 each, are offered for $20 the pair, the sale is made. The buyers look over their purchases and sure enough they find them marked "Made in Ireland," so they surely must be imported. And so cheap, too. This fellow must have been on a tramp ship and picked up his merchandise at a British port. Sailors are always picking up things. Then somebody, anybody, informs the customs office and inspectors are out on the scent. They find a man with a pack on his back who cheerfully checks his goods on a bill of sale from a New Jersey factory.

Almost nothing is ever done about it.

Peddlers Have A Cinch On Selling 'Smuggled Values'

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — Peddlers who prey upon the credulous with deft intimations that their goods have been smuggled into the United States, have made their annual appearance in Houston.

They offer for sale fine linens, suitcases, table cloths and bed spreads. The peddlers say the goods come from ships, but just arrived at the port of Houston from other countries. With an air of mystery the peddler manages to convey the idea that he has smuggled the merchandise and that the potential purchaser can buy it cheaply, because forsooth, it has paid no duty. The salesman apparently cannot speak good English. He is a foreigner but he understands psychology and the effect of an indirect appeal to cupidity and avarice. Besides, wouldn't it be clever to "put one over" on the customs men?

Finally, after two bed spreads, for which the original price was $50 each, are offered for $20 the pair, the sale is made. The buyers look over their purchases and sure enough they find them marked "Made in Ireland," so they surely must be imported. And so cheap, too. This fellow must have been on a tramp ship and picked up his merchandise at a British port. Sailors are always picking up things. Then somebody, anybody, informs the customs office and inspectors are out on the scent. They find a man with a pack on his back who cheerfully checks his goods on a bill of sale from a New Jersey factory.

Almost nothing is ever done about it.

Phones To Feature Texas Roadway

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP) — The surfside drive which is to run 135 miles along Padre Island, connecting Brownsville and Corpus Christi, is to have a telephone station every five miles for the convenience of tourists who might have automobile trouble along the route. Poles for the telephone line have been received here and at Corpus Christi. They are being placed along the island.

The drive when completed, will be the longest island drive in the world, it is said, and will shorten the dis-

CORPUS CHRISTI TO INSTALL DEEP HARBOR

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4. (AP) — A deep port at Corpus Christi is a necessity and will come soon if the people of this section of the state go after it, Edward Hurley, member of the debt funding commission, and former head of the shipping board, asserted here today.

"The thing to do is to get the port," Hurley declared. "The cargoes will take care of themselves. Once deep water is obtained at Corpus Christi, nothing can stop the flow of exports and imports. Deep water at Corpus Christi would serve as an outlet for the exports of all this section of Texas and imports would naturally come in return cargoes."

Mr. Hurley pointed out that it was not necessary to control the ships, that ships go where they can obtain cargoes and that cargoes both ways are necessary. He declared that Great Britain with all its ships never moved more than half of its exports on British bottoms. If England had decreed that all exports be moved on British ships there would have been no return cargoes, he said, as other countries would have retaliated.

Mr. Hurley said he was deeply interested in the Corpus Christi port, although he is not connected with any shipping interests. He said he is devoting most of his time to public matters, with some operations in the real estate development. He took a prominent part in the real estate boom in Florida, and is now interested in plan to develop Montauk Point. He will be in San Antonio a few days before going to Corpus Christi and said he hoped to visit the citrus fruit region before his return.

Home-Seekers To Visit River Land

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4. (AP) — Between 1500 and 200 homeseekers from the north will assemble here every week end for a tour of the Rio Grande delta and Catalina districts. It was indicated here today by Herbert E. Barrett, traveling passenger agent of the International Great Northern railway.

Kansas City was formerly the assembling point, and the homeseekers were routed through Dallas. Removal of the gathering point to Texas came with consolidation of the Missouri Pacific lines and the I. G. N. service in north and south Texas.

WILL RUN AGAIN
AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP) — J. D. Parnell, Wichita Falls, announced he will be a candidate for reelection in the democratic primary of next July as state senator from the 23rd district. He said his platform would be announced in due time.

ments of the democratic guard. After the dinner, the guards paraded the principal streets of the city cheering for Pangalos.

Bombing Causes Trouble.

Possibly bearing on the situation in Bulgaria is the fact that on Sofia on Saturday a meeting of survivors of Zveti Kral Cathedral bomb explosion last April protested against the amnesty bill which would pardon even those responsible for the explosion. The bill is before parliament.

Advises from Sofia reiterates that a plan was afoot in Bucharest to overthrow the ministry headed by Premier Bratianu and set up a military dictatorship, but with King Ferdinand continuing as King. A statement from Bucharest says, however, that political considerations were not involved in Carol's renunciation of the throne, but that his decision was due to private and sentimental reasons.

Pangalos Makes Statement.

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 4. (P)—Premier Pangalos in a statement to the press today explained his assumption of dictatorial powers announced yesterday.

The statement said that the government, convinced that there was no hope of reaching an understanding with the party leaders, owing to their intransigent had decided to concentrate all the power in its hands and assume responsibility for the further development of the political situation.

Says He Must Act.

The premier said he must act in accordance with the demand of that large majority on which the government had relied and would continue to rely.

Therefore, the government, or rather he, himself, considered it no longer was bound by any previous declaration or obligation. He was convinced that he enjoyed the full confidence of the Greek people and that what he had done in the past constituted sufficient guarantee for the future.

ty jail and as jailkeeper, is alleged to have allowed Lawson to leave the jail.

The filing of the information against the four men is the first move in an effort by the state to place behind prison bars those who are responsible for the slaying of nearly twenty Osage Indians, over a period of about two years.

(By Associated Press)

Case Nears Solution

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 4.—The Osage murder mystery, as dramatic as any created by a novelist's pen, today seemed nearer a solution.

Federal and state officers, working in unison, were closing a net around suspected members of a murder ring believed to have been responsible for the death of nearly a score of Osage Indians and white persons.

Action was to be divided today between Guthrie, where a federal grand jury is convening to consider the testimony of about 140 witnesses, and the Osage country, where state officials are expected to arrest several suspects.

State To Prosecute

It has been indicated that the federal authorities will leave the prosecution of murder charges to the state, confining its activities to the conspiracy aspects of the case. Although no formal charges have been made in connection with the case, a theory has been publicly advanced that the murders were the outgrowth of a conspiracy to gain possession of the fortunes of the victims, estimated to total $2,000,000.

Although the most recent of the crimes was committed about three years ago, none of the perpetrators has yet been brought to justice. Osage County, generally called the "Osage Country" and the "Osage Nation" is exceedingly rough and hilly and even yet is noted as a haven for desperadoes.

Investigations Launched

Numerous investigations have been launched and seemingly abandoned, because it was impossible to obtain information. Federal secret service men have been working quietly on the case, however, and, three weeks ago, the state was invited to participate in a round-up of suspects.

Attorney General George F. Shott accepted, and two of his assistants, Edward Dabney and J. Berry King, were to visit Pawhuska today to carry out the state's part of the compact.

It seemed probable that solution of the case would revolve about the dismantling of the W. E. Smith home in Fairfax, three years ago. The Oklahoma City Times has asserted that Dick Greig, inmate of the federal penitentiary Leavenworth has confessed knowledge of the crime. Smith, his wife, and Anna Brookshire, a servant girl, were killed by the explosion. Smith was a white man and his wife was an Indian, a sister of Anna Brown whose immediate family was either killed or died under mysterious circumstances. Greig will be witness before the grand jury, the Guthrie Leader says.

AUSTIN PREPARES FOR NUMBER OF CONVENTIONS

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (P)—Eight conventions which will bring at least 15,000 persons to Austin are already scheduled for 1923. Last year 46 conventions were held in the capital city, averaging nearly four a month. Walter Long, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce anticipates that at least 30 more conventions will be held here during 1923.

Because of its central location, Austin obtains more than its share of state conventions. Numerous organizations have yet to select their 1923 convention cities.

Probably the largest gathering will be the University of Texas Homecoming from November 27 to 29. More than 7,000 are expected to be here throughout the session, while not less than 12,000 visitors are expected for the annual Texas university, Texas A. & M. college football game—Thanksgiving day.

The earliest convention scheduled is that of the Texas Young Men's Christian association, February 12 to 14, inclusive. Six hundred delegates are to attend, W. A. Smith, local chairman, said.

Four thousand delegates to the state convention of Odd Fellows, March 15 to 18, are being arranged for by J. S. Gray, local chairman on arrangements.

Approximately 100 members of the Texas Bill Posters association will attend the annual convention in March G. Plury, chairman, said.

Texas Wholesale Credit Men's association will bring 150 visitors in May. Mrs. R. L. Bewley, chairman, estimated.

George Reichert anticipates that 500 members of the Travelers' Protective association will attend the annual convention in May.

Six hundred members of the Southwest Water Works association are to convene here October 5 to 10. C. N. Avery, chairman of the arrangements committee, said.

From November 27 to 29, the State Baptist Students' convention will be held here and 2,000 members have signified their intention of attending.

Gotham Awaits Later Developments As Tammany Hall Presents To New York A New Type Of Mayor In James J. Walker

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (P)—Tammany Hall has presented to America's largest city a new type of man to wear its mayoralty robes—James J. Walker, product of Greenwich Village, pianist, composer of popular songs and legislator.

In the past, the city's mayors have come from many walks of life, but this is the first time "Tin Pan Alley" has seen one of its sons in the office. The new mayor boasts a versatile career.

DEVELOPMENT HAS CONTINUED IN LITTLEFIELD

LITTLEFIELD, Jan. 4. — Notwithstanding the damage to late crops done by a recent freeze, improvements and development in a big way continue in Littlefield.

Eleven brick business houses are now being erected and many residences also. The Texas Utilities company has a large force of men at work on the high lines and in extension of the local lines.

The Panhandle Telephone company is expanding its system and plants. Increased business has required the putting in of three double copper wire lines to Lubbock. The company now has 500 phones on the system and reaches all the small towns surrounding Littlefield.

Work will soon be under way on the sewerage system. Work is progressing on the $45,000.00 brick building for the First Baptist church. The First Christian church has just completed its building. Other improvements are in prospect, and 1923 should see a great increase in the town and country.

Joint Group Will Decide On Leases For Muscle Shoals

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (P)—The House rules committee today approved a resolution to create a joint congressional committee to negotiate for the leasing of the government muscle shoals property.

The joint committee would be composed of three members of the Senate agricultural committee and three members of the House military committee. It would be directed to complete work by April 1.

The report of the committee on a bill to carry out its work would be privileges to use in the House similar to that accorded appropriation bills.

Representation By Counties At Canyon

CANYON, Jan. 4. — Following are the counties represented by students of the West Texas State Teachers college in order of the number of students from each: Potter, 44; Swisher, 35; Floyd, 26; Hale, 21; Deaf Smith, 22; Lubbock, 17; Armstrong, 15; Donnelly and Hall, 17 each; Dallam and Wheeler, twelve each. Randall county leads in numbers but was not classified with these, because of the situation of the college.

In a student body of almost 100, 93 counties of Texas and eight other states are represented. Following are the states: New Mexico, 15; Oklahoma, 12; Florida, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, California and Indiana, one each.

Promises Many Things

CANYON ENTERING BIG PROGRAM FOR 1926

CANYON, Jan. 5.—Canyon is entering the new year better in every respect than at this time last year, and with bright prospects for 1926.

During the past year 125 residences, most of them modern and well constructed, have been completed. There has been no building boom, but houses have been built to take care of the normal healthy growth of the city.

Twenty business houses have been completed during the last 12 months, and four more are under construction at the present time.

A white way, one and one-half miles in length has been built, giving the city the best lighting of any place of its size in this section. Many improvements have been made in the lighting system for the city, and a new light plant has been built. This plant also makes ice which is furnished for Canyon, Happy, and other nearby towns.

Big Improvements for 1926

The little city of Canyon expects to carry out an ambitious program of improvements in 1926. A bond issue will make possible several blocks of paving which will be added to the four miles which the city now has. Water mains will be extended so that every part of the city will have adequate fire protection and lower insurance rates.

Almost all of Randall county is joining in the campaign which will make possible the building of a paved highway from Canyon to Amarillo. This project will link the two towns more closely than ever before, will increase the attendance at the State Teachers college, and will make farm lands adjacent to the new highway worth much more than at the present time.

Dairy and Poultry Development

The year 1923 will find many more chickens and dairy cows in Randall county than any year before this time. Thousands of well chosen poultry flocks will bring ready money to their owners. Many farms have been practically supported during the past year by the poultry and dairy products of their owners. With the increased ease of marketing which the paved highway from Amarillo to Canyon will bring, more attention will be given to these activities. Banks, schools, commercial clubs, and county officers are giving help and encouragement to this work.

The year 1927 will find Randall county richer and more closely populated than at the beginning of 1923.

Young Lawyer Is Named Legislator

BROWNSVILLE, Jan. 4. (P)—Polk Hornaday, young lawyer of Harlingen, was today elected to fill the vacancy in the Texas legislature caused by the resignation of Harry Faulk, partial return institute.

It is believed that not more than 150 votes were cast in the special election and there was no opposition. Hornaday received all of 50 votes cast in his home town.

Texas Secretary Has Good Report

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (P)—Receipts of her office for 1923 have shattered all records and likely will total $1,500,000 when finally tabulated, Mrs. Emma Grisham Meharz, Texas first woman Secretary of State, said today. This money is derived from franchise taxes, charter and permit fees, and fees for commissions for state and county officials.

Disguised Men In Oregon Beat Man Who Aided In Raid

BARER, Ore., Jan. 4. (P)—Two men with their faces disguised by blackening, entered a garage owned by Deputy Sheriff Arthur Romagosa, at Huntington, Ore., early today, seized Retta Miglorette, an employee and drove away with him in an automobile. At a point two miles from town they took him two hundred yards into the sagebrush, knocked him down, beat him, tore his clothing from his body and left him entirely naked in the snow. They then drove away.

The attack followed a raid on a moonshine still near Huntington last Tuesday in which Deputy Sheriff Romagosa was badly injured by an explosion. Miglorette took part in the raid.

After the attack upon him, Miglorette found his way to an abandoned house, where he found an old shirt and some gunny sacks. He wrapped the sacks about his feet and walked back to town. His injuries are not serious.

Glib Madiens In Fort Worth Take Much 'Easy Money'

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4. (P)—Shapely girls in hiking togs, riding glibly of a coast to coast tour "for educational purposes," have been ordered out of Fort Worth after harpneying the chief of police out of a letter they used as a recommendation, and hundreds of citizens out of a dollar or more for magazine subscriptions.

The only part of the sales talk that was true, the chief explained, was that the money was for "educational purposes," but it was the victim who was being educated and not the girls.

The "open roadster without top or windshield" in which the young were alleged to be journeying proved entirely mythical, as the sheet-written to the number of thirty or more, were traveling by train and stopping only in the principal cities, under the direction of a male crew manager and two assistants, the chief declared.

Fort Worth, Dallas, Birmingham, and a number of other southern cities had been "worked" by the hikers. The subscribers probably will get their magazines, but they aided no worthy cause, the police determined.

'MUD CHAINS FOR ME' SAYS MAN IN ACCIDENT

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4. (P)—"From now on, I use mud chains."

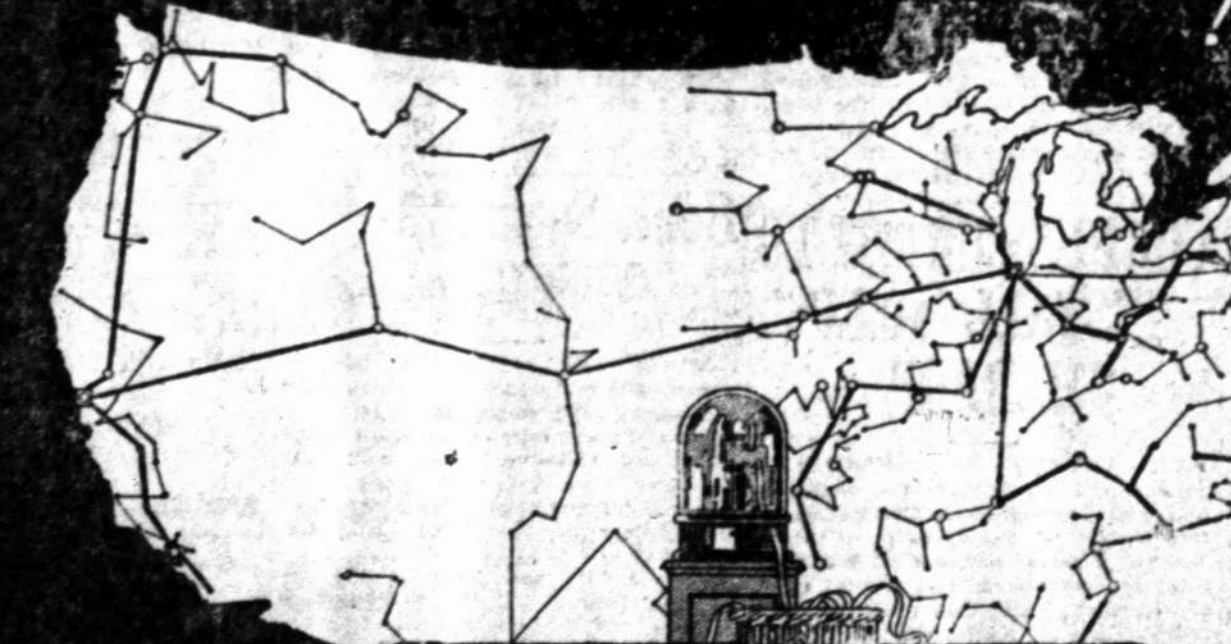

This is the conclusion of a 73-year-old man here after an experience Sunday afternoon.

He weighs close to 400 pounds. But, despite the muddy condition of the old Riverside park he chose to take a short cut through it on his way home. Half way across he stuck in the mud and was unable to extricate himself. Other residents upon seeing him notified the police that a man was drunk in the park.

An officer responded and upon learning of the aged man's predicament helped free him and take him home.
