Local weather

Forecast for the Big Spring area: Fair tonight and Tuesday. Colder through tonight warming Tuesday. Low tonight mid 30s, high Tuesday mid 60s to lower 70s. Yesterday's high was 82 with a low of 43.

On the side:

Face painting

BIG SPRING — Ghostly faces will be wandering all over the Howard County Library on Tuesday.

The Library is holding its annual Halloween face decorating program from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Parents may register their children for free face decorating by stopping in or calling the library at 267-5295. Registration is limited.

Martin County meeting

STANTON — The Martin County Commissioners Court and the Stanton City Council will meet in a joint session at 7:30 tonight in the courthouse.

They will consider establishing priorities and plans for the city-county owned landfill which is scheduled to be closed in the wake of new Environmental Protection Agency regulations, the agenda says.

It will be the second time this year that the two governmental bodies have met together to discuss the closing of the landfill.

At tonight's meeting, county commissioners will also consider replacement of a custodial pickup and the sale of salvage property.

Robbery rash

BIG SPRING — A rash of aggravated robberies in the city continued Friday night as two men held up a convenience store.

Neighbor's Convenience Store, 3315 E. FM 700, reported the robbery to the Big Spring Police Department at about 11 p.m. Friday. According to police reports, the clerk reported that two Hispanic males entered the store and robbed it while holding him at knifepoint.

The robbers took currency totaling $250, two cartons of cigarettes valued at $27 and three 12-packs of beer valued at $19, according to the report.

The robbery follows three that occurred during the week when two gunmen held up three convenience stores. Police believe the same black male robbed both the East 4th Fast Stop and Kay's Fina Mart Monday morning. Tuesday morning, another black male robbed the 7-Eleven on Wasson Road.

Three-car accident

BIG SPRING — Four people walked away with just slight injuries Saturday night after a major three-car accident.

According to Big Spring Police Department reports, a 1977 Chevrolet Nova driven by Curtis Wayne Fry, 26, 1905 Donley, hit another car at about 11:30 in front of the Brass Nail Club on South Highway 87. According to the report, Fry's car was traveling northbound at a high rate of speed and did not have its headlights on.

Fry's car hit a 1977 Oldsmobile driven by Alford Dee Pace, 25, 538 Westover, sending the car spinning into a third unidentified car, which was legally parked on the shoulder, reports said.

Fry was uninjured, the report said, but Pace received possible injuries and his passengers, Geoffrey Chandler, SouthWest College Institute for the Deaf Avenue C, and Hector Cardenas, SWCID Avenue C, also received possible injuries.

Award stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand a $1.5 million award won by the family of a U.S. Forest Service employee who died of cancer after his exposure to a Dow Chemical Co. herbicide.

The justices, without comment, refused to hear a Dow appeal aimed at winning a new trial in the product-liability case.

James Greenhill in 1976-77 was seasonally employed by the Forest Service in Oregon, primarily as a fire fighter. He also participated in a weed-control project in which he applied Dow herbicides, including dichlorophenoxyacetic acid or 2,4-D.

Greenhill's exposure to 2,4-D ended in 1978 when he was transferred to another national park.

EASTLAND — The Court of Appeals in Eastland affirmed the state district court's decision to sentence Big Spring murderer Frankie Hernandez to 50 years in prison after rejecting each of a defense attorney's grounds for a new trial, according to an appeals court document recently obtained by the Herald.

Hernandez filed an appeal with the court in Eastland in November after being sentenced by a 118th District Court jury for the murder of Grand Prairie resident Noe Perez.

In a first point of alleged error before the appeals court earlier this month, Hernandez's attorney, Thomas Morgan, contended that the admission into evidence of a "damaging" written confession by co-murder defendant Arthur Islas Jr. was an error which would warrant a new trial. Morgan charges Hernandez was "deprived of his fundamental rights of confrontation and cross-examination when Islas' confession was admitted during trial." Islas did not testify.

But appeals court judges disagreed, saying it was the defense rather than the state which initially used Islas' confession during cross-examination of a state's witness, Pete Salazar. Morgan read significant portions of Islas' confession while attempting to impeach Salazar, the appeals court noted.

Because Morgan chose to use part of Islas' confession, the whole statement became admissible under Texas rules of criminal evidence, the court said. The appeals court, citing a previous decision, said: "When part of an act, declaration, conversation, writing or recorded statement is given in evidence by one party, the whole on the same subject may be inquired into by the other." "Writing or recorded statement" includes depositions.

The court then elaborated. "Since the (defense) first made reference to Islas' statement for the purpose of creating the impression that the state's witness, Pete Salazar, was not credible, it was proper for the state to combat this impression by introducing the balance of the statement into evidence. Moreover, the admission of the complete statement provided the jury with a proper context in which to assess the credibility of Salazar. We conclude that Islas' entire confession was properly admitted."

The court said the purpose of the Private prison eyes county site

BIG SPRING — A private prison business still hopes to open a facility in Howard County by May 1990, a private prison official said, although several questions remain unanswered about the proposal before any construction can begin.

"We're getting there," said Frank Powell, chief executive officer for Private Prisons of America Limited. PPAL hopes to be able to receive on May 1, 1990, its first group of 100 inmates at what will eventually be a 1,025-bed complex.

Powell described May 1990 as a "target date," but said he believes PPAL may be able to have a facility in operation in Howard County by that date.

PPAL now has a source that can provide inmates for the facility. Powell said, but said he has yet to complete financing of his $30-million project for Howard County. Architectural plans, approval of the financing by the State Attorney General's Office and approval of the structure by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards have also yet to be arranged.

A state official with the jail standards commission has raised doubts concerning the legality of the size of the proposed facility and whether it meets state-mandated regulations concerning the number of beds.

PPAL has an agreement with Baker and Dover/Dover Inc., of Idalou to provide inmates for the facility, he said. Baker, a former sheriff who now operates a 225-bed private prison facility in conjunction with Zavala County, is able to provide inmates to fill the Howard

Traffic fatalities raise complaints

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — An intersection that residents complain is dangerous won't get a signal light despite a recent accident that killed two people.

City officials say they can't do anything about the intersection at FM 700 and Virginia Street, which recently claimed the lives of an 84-year-old couple, because it is state controlled.

"That's been a controversial intersection for a long time," said City Manager Hal Boyd, "(but) I don't see that the city has any control over that intersection. We can make recommendations."

Mike Chetty, resident engineer with the Texas Department of Highways, said the state is willing to work with the city on a solution, but it can't install a signal at the intersection.

"The first thing we look at for a signalized intersection is traffic," he said. "You've got to have enough traffic to warrant a signal and that intersection doesn't come anywhere close to enough traffic. "The only other way you could go and look at it... would be on accidents."

Chetty said an intersection must be the site of at least five accidents with injuries each year to be considered for a signal. And, even if it meets that qualification, he said, it still must meet volume of traffic standards, which are reduced 20 percent.

According to Texas Department of Highways records, the intersection was the site of four accidents from 1986 through 1988 and only two involved injuries. The only fatalities within four years, he said, have been the two recent ones.

"There're lots of places in town that people would like to have signals but we can't," install them, Chetty said.

According to Big Spring Police Department files, there have been five accidents since 1982 that can be attributed directly to problems with the intersection. According to

Borden, Loving counties unable to operate own 911 systems

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

GAIL — Sparsely-populated Borden County can have an emergency 911 system if plans are approved for a system to be handled outside of the county entirely.

Borden County, with a population of 812, would be one of only two counties in the 17-county Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission area not operating its own 911 emergency-call system. The other is Loving County with a population of 67.

Officials cite the two counties' inability to raise needed revenue because of their populations and the absence of 24-hour dispatch services as reasons for basing the 911 system outside the counties.

According to a current plan, Borden County will be handled out of Big Spring in the Howard County Emergency Communications District and out of Snyder in the West Central Texas Council of Governments district, said Harley Reeves, 911 project director with the Permian Basin Commission.

However, the plan still needs to be approved, he said. "We haven't worked up an agreement for those people yet. It'll probably be six months down the road when we do that," he said.

The five-member board of the Howard County District must also agree.

"We haven't taken any action on that yet," said Timothy Yates, chairman of the Howard County district board. "We're certainly not opposed to bringing them in if it doesn't cost the Howard County taxpayers any more. My feeling was we need to get a month's track record on just the Howard County residents."

"We're going to get that in good shape before we consider taking on any more subscribers. It remains to be seen what will happen. We just don't have the information to make that decision."

Carl Dorton, director of communications for the Howard County district, said Nov. 15 is the expected installation date of the estimated $72,000 system. The service will handle about 15,500 access lines through nine telephone exchanges, all in Howard County, he said.

Meanwhile, the Borden County Commissioners Court passed a resolution Oct. 23 to participate in the Permian Basin regional plan.

There are three telephone companies that serve 293 access lines in Borden County through five exchanges in and around the county, the plan states. Those lines will be handled by two public safety answering points to be located in Snyder and Big Spring.

The 112 lines in the Gail exchange will be routed to the Snyder exchange, which already serves 68 access lines in Borden County, the plan says. The 12 lines in the Ackerly exchange, the 37 in Luther and the 64 in Vincent will be routed to the Big Spring exchange.

The plan shows no estimate on costs. A spokesperson with the West Central COG office said the estimated installation costs in Snyder and Scurry County will be $58,466. The ongoing monthly fee is estimated at $2,262.

The system will handle 8,364 access lines, including the ones from Borden and four from Fischer County, the spokesperson said. Besides the Snyder exchange, Hermleigh is the only other telephone exchange in the county served by one telephone company.

The West Central Texas COG has proposed a 50 cents a month user fee, which will be included on phone bills beginning in January, that office said.

The Howard County district has been charging 50 cents a month for residential phone lines since the first of the year, Dorton said. Business lines are being charged $1.17 a month.

Any user fees in Borden County will be collected by the respective districts handling the lines. Reeves said that a surcharge on long-distance phone calls for the past few years in cities with populations of at least 120,000 will also help generate funds for the state-wide emergency system.

Besides not having a large enough population to raise the necessary funds to install a public safety answering point in Borden County, another problem is the lack of a 24-hour dispatching service, Reeves said.

"Borden County itself cannot have a 911 because they do not have a 24-hour dispatch," he said. "They don't have a population in the entire county to warrant 24-hour dispatch."

Kent Holmes, a paramedic for the county's volunteer emergency medical service, is one of the people looking into the possibility of setting up an around-the-clock dispatch service.

"We have to get some procedure 24 hours, some number that we're either going to do with a phone (forwarding system) or an answering service," said Holmes, who is part of a three-member county committee looking into the 911 service possibility.

"When a call comes in, this answering service will call some of us," he said. "This answering service will be at Snyder but they will answer the (Gail exchange)."

He said he is not sure how or if the Ackerly, Luther and Vincent exchanges will be handled by the 24-hour service. He did say that the EMS board will probably make a decision on implementing a dispatch service at its next meeting.

County facility, Powell said.

PPAL's agreement with Baker will not alter the terms of the agreement between PPAL and Howard County, he said. Under provisions of the current agreement, the county would receive $35 per inmate per day from contracting county, state and federal agencies to house prisoners, of which $22.66 would be paid to PPAL for its management services.

"All it assumes is that the facilities will be filled," Powell said.

Baker acknowledged last week that he has an agreement with PPAL, but declined to give details. Although he said he has plans of his own to build more private-prison facilities, Baker said he does not consider PPAL a direct competitor.

"They are and they're not. I have no problem with them, no problem with PPAL," he said.

Baker expressed confidence he will be able to provide the inmates for a Howard County PPAL facility. "If they can get them places by May I think I can get them somebody in them," he said.

There is a need for private prison facilities because there is an excess number of inmates and few places capable of housing them, Baker said. "Not too many Holiday Inns will take them," he said.

Powell said there is a need for the facilities PPAL is proposing because prison overcrowding is so overwhelming. "With crime and recidivism as it is, you could build a prison a week and not catch up," he said.

But Jack Crump, executive director of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, said he was not able to say if the facilities will meet rule is to "lessen the risk of confusion or false impression that could result from presenting the fact finder with only a portion of the statement."

The court also dismissed three other alleged errors which would have been grounds for a new trial. The defense charged there should have been an instruction to jury members on a possible lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter, that Hernandez was entitled to a plea of self-defense and that the defense of a third person should have been included.

The appeals court found that grounds for the three alleged errors were based solely on the testimony of Hernandez's sister Jeannie Fonseca. Fonseca testified that she stood outside the partially-opened door of Hernandez's motel

"With crime and recidivism as it is, you could build a prison a week and not catch up."

with the approval of the jail standards commission. The TCJS approval is required for a private prison to operate.

Crump said for the commission to approve a facility it must meet with the needs and demands of the area. Overcrowding in the prison system as a whole may or may not be considered sufficient reason to allow the operation of a proposed facility, he said without specifically mentioning PPAL.

The commission will review each of four proposed PPAL facilities, including the one proposed for Howard County, individually rather than as a whole program, he said. Crump said nothing from PPAL has been formally presented to his office at this time.

Crump expressed some reservations with the idea of a 1,000-bed complex, saying it is "contrary to the law" and that "500 (beds) seems to be the limit." He later added, "I'm not an attorney, but it seems pretty clear to me."

The 500-bed limit was established by an act of the state Legislature and would take another act of the Legislature to change, he said. Crump said he does not expect legislators to change their decision when they convene again in the next session.

room when she heard Perez threaten to kill Hernandez, his brother Joe Hernandez, Arthur Islas and Pete Salazar.

Upon hearing the death threats, Fonseca allegedly "kicked open the door and, with shotgun in hand, confronted Noe Perez. Noe Perez was also armed. In fear for her life and for the lives of her brothers, fire the shotgun. The blast blew off Noe Perez's head."

Fonseca testified she was solely responsible for the death of Perez and the burning of his body.

The appeals court noted Fonseca's testimony was contrary to evidence presented by the state, which held that Hernandez and the others were at his motel when Perez arrived. The state contends that everyone present at the motel contributed to Perez's death by tying a rope around his neck and to the bathroom of a door handle, which raised his neck, and then jumped on his body until he was dead.

The defense contends that Fonseca's testimony entitled the jury to consider a lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter for Hernandez on grounds of self-defense and on the defense of a third person.

Three other alleged errors related to jury challenges, failure by the state to comply with making certain information available to the defense before the trial began and admission of evidence by the state were also denied by the appeals court.

Morgan could not be reached for comment today, but said previously he was willing to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

most of those reports, drivers on Virginia Street complained they could not see eastbound cars on FM 700 because of a curve in the road right before the intersection.

Seven people were injured at least slightly in three of the accidents, with only one of those persons sustaining serious injuries, police files indicate. The two recent fatalities were the only deaths listed in the file since at least 1982.

Although the intersection doesn't qualify for signals under department standards, the state still is willing to work toward a solution, Chetty said.

Pigs go to auction

MCKINNEY (AP) — A group of wild pigs that terrorized residents in the unincorporated Trinity Park area will be sold to the highest bidder, the Collin County sheriff's department says.

The sheriff's department will place the 39 pigs on the auction block Friday at the McKinney Livestock Commission on U.S. Highway 380.

Animal control officers rounded the swine up Oct. 12 after residents said they had been attacking pets, garbage and people for more than a year.

The owner agreed to release the pigs to the county for sale after being told that the roundup and cost to feed the animals exceeded $2,000.

False distress signal

SABINE PASS (AP) — A report of a sinking boat that brought Coast Guard crews away from inspections apparently was a hoax, authorities said.

The Coast Guard said it now believes shrimpers may have given the false distress call Saturday morning to prevent on-board inspections that were under way.

Part of the on-board inspection includes a check for turtle excluder devices, which shrimpers must use to free turtles from their nets. Some shrimpers say the apparatus reduces their catch.

The hoax was the first received at the Sabine Pass station in two years, said Richard Hupf, officer of the day at the station.

The call reported a sinking boat off Holly Beach, but gave no specific coordinates, Hupf said.

"It was pretty vague," Hupf said, adding most distress calls contain more information.

Officials believe shrimpers may have pulled the hoax to divert attention from the inspections, said Hupf.

The boarding team was about 20 miles from Holly Beach, which is approximately six miles east of the Sabine Jetties, Hupf said. Rescuers searched for an hour and found nothing, he said.

A Coast Guard boarding team that was conducting routine safety inspections on some shrimping vessels in the Calcasieu area responded to the call.

Another Coast Guard vessel and a helicopter from Houston also responded, Hupf said.

Fur protests

DALLAS (AP) — Animal rights protesters are conducting "fur funerals" to discourage people from shopping at stores that sell furs.

The protesters, draped in black, wore masks and carried caskets containing fur coats as they marched last weekend in front of a shopping mall which contains a fur salon.

"We're trying to let people know about the horrors of trappings and the horrors of ranch-raised furs," Rhonda Holley, director of the Society for Texas Animal Rights, said.

The group organized the event in conjunction with national protests by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The demonstrations by members of PETA Saturday also targeted Jindo Fur Salons in New Orleans, Atlanta, Los Angeles, New York, Washington, D.C. and six other cities.

In Dallas, about 50 demonstrators in front of the Galleria Mall carried signs with slogans such as "Buy a fur and slip into something dead" and distributed brochures featuring a mink to focus on claims of animal cruelty.

The manager of the Jindo store, who declined to give her name, said she had called police three times to try to stop the protest and offered a company brochure to answer further questions.

"U.S. fur retailers and manufacturers are committed to responsible treatment of fur-bearing animals," the brochure stated. "We support the rigorous regulation of trappers by local, state and federal agencies."

However, PETA officials claimed the fur retailer uses steel-jaw leg traps, which break the animals' limbs and often cause hours of pain.

The Korean-based Jindo Industries Ltd. has started a national campaign to make mink coats more affordable.

The protests against Jindo are part of the Washington-based PETA's "Fur Is Dead" campaign.

Heavy rain aids search for missing plant workers

PASADENA (AP) — Heavy rains in the Houston area helped rescuers locate two more bodies in the massive steel and concrete debris of the Phillips Petroleum Co. plastics plant early today, while the search continued for six workers still missing.

"They were found in the area of the control room and the finishing room," company spokesman Rob Phillips said of the latest recoveries.

"That's really where we expect to find the rest of the missing. But we're talking about an area as big as a football field, so there's still quite a lot of area to get through."

In the week since the plastics plant was ripped apart by a series of explosions, 16 bodies have been recovered by crews working around the clock. Only five bodies have been officially identified.

Phillips said heavy rains that dumped hail and up to four inches of rain in some areas in and around Houston Sunday helped rescue efforts by damping dust from the rubble.

"The rain didn't really slow them down yesterday," Phillips said today. "It kept the dust down and the asbestos that is being cleaned up and removed from the area from flying around. From what I hear, we may get more rain today, so that could be good."

But the crews' search was hampered Sunday by a steel beam which was hanging loosely 150 feet over a control room area where rescuers believe they will find the missing bodies. Workers were able to locate a crane to stabilize the beam.

Six bodies were recovered Saturday and another on Sunday before the early morning finds. One of those recovered Saturday was identified as Jesse Thomas Northrup, 42, of Brookshire, company spokesman Dave Dryden said Sunday. Northrup had been an operator for Phillips since 1978, he said.

Others identified include two Phillips employees: Jeffery L. Harrison, 36, Houston, and James H. Campbell, 30, Baytown. Two Fish Construction Co. employees who were doing contract work at the plant also have been identified: Jose Gonzales, 38, Galena Park, and William Scott Martin, 28, Dayton.

Phillips spokesmen said 124 people were injured in the accident and nine remained hospitalized late Sunday.

"The accident came as a big shock and it will be a long time coming before the company recovers," said spokesman Bill Wicker. "There are economic concerns for the company right now, but ahead of everything is our commitment to find the missing people."

Debris from Monday's explosion near the plant's control and finishing rooms is stacked as high as 40 feet, officials say.

The polyethylene plant produced almost 20 percent of the nation's production of plastic pellets used in the manufacture of milk jugs and grocery bags.

Phillips officials believe flammable hydrocarbon vapor from ethylene and isobutane gases escaped from a leaking chemical reactor, triggering Monday's blast. But company officials have said they don't know how the gases were ignited.

A memorial service for the victims is planned for tonight at the Pasadena Civic Center.

Suspect confesses to slaying

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A 20-year-old Mexican citizen arrested by police in this city south of the Texas border told officers he killed an artist who had allegedly assaulted him sexually.

Cesar Najera Flores was arrested by Chihuahua State Judicial Police at 6 a.m. Sunday at his home in an impoverished colonia southeast of Juarez. Najera was wearing the artist's shoes when he was arrested, judicial police said.

Najera was charged in Juarez with murder and robbery in a foreign country in the death of artist Manuel Acosta, according to Jose Refugio Rubalcava, head of the State Judicial Police in Juarez.

Najera will go before a judge today on the Mexican federal charges, said Rubalcava.

Authorities found Acosta, 68, bludgeoned to death Wednesday evening in his El Paso home.

Police in El Paso, across the Rio Grande from Juarez, contend robbery was the primary motive for the murder. Longtime friends of Acosta question Najera's version of events surrounding the slaying.

"I just kept thinking of what he did to me, and I just had to kill him," Najera told reporters in an interview.

Najera faces up to 40 years in prison if convicted on the charge. The Mexican government traditionally has refused to extradite Mexican nationals to face trial in other countries.

In the United States, Najera could face the death penalty if convicted in Texas of murder during a robbery.

Najera told reporters at state judicial police headquarters in Juarez that his resentment and anger toward Acosta exploded after a two-day drinking bout.

"I was drunk and I couldn't stand it anymore," Najera said. "I just kept thinking of what he did to me and I just had to kill him. I'm not a homosexual. I have a wife and 2-year-old son."

Najera told authorities Acosta was standing in his studio watching television when he hit him once in the head with a hammer, and that he struck him three more times after Acosta went down.

Relatives claim patriarch was 122

LUBBOCK (AP) — Survivors of a family patriarch who fathered 15 children say his name belongs in the record books for being the world's oldest person before his death this fall.

But, so far, Arthur Cooper's relatives haven't been able to prove his claim.

Cooper said he was born in 1866. Family members insist that he was right, in spite of conflicting evidence that he may have been only 106 or 119.

His relatives say that he had lived well beyond the 120 years, 237 days the "1989 Guinness Book of World Records" lists as the oldest authenticated age.

Family members have tried for nearly 30 years to prove Cooper's claim. Cooper and his wife, Bess, who died last January at age 81, had 15 children, 89 grandchildren, 126 great-grandchildren and 10 great-great-grandchildren.

"You were born and a lady come and delivered you. And they didn't turn in no records," said Lois Tealer, 50, sitting with her sister, Katherine McLin, 64, reminiscing about their father earlier this month.

Cooper, born in Greenwood, Miss., died Sept. 20 — just short of his Oct. 26 birthday. A house fire during Woodrow Wilson's presidency claimed a family Bible that might have shown his true birth date.

Relatives say there was no particular secret to Cooper's longevity. He didn't drink. He smoked a pipe, but only as a young man. His favorite foods were eggs over easy and squirrel soup, preferring freshly caught varieties.

Mrs. McDonald is preparing a biography with the anecdotes. But among evidence, she only uncovered birth certificates prepared in the 1930s that make Arthur Cooper younger than some of his siblings. No one disputes that he was the oldest of 13 children born to Jim and Rosie Cooper, former slaves.

'Grandma, Please' help line offers company for 'relatives'

CHICAGO (AP) — Estelle Brownstein thought a want ad reading "Grandma Wanted," would lead to the perfect job, but she never expected to end up as an honorary relative to hundreds through a phone-in service for latchkey children.

Mrs. Brownstein, a 66-year-old grandmother of five, is one of 35 "grandmothers by telephone" to children who come home from school to empty houses while one or both parents are at work.

"The ad ran 'We need grandmas' Well, I'm a grandma, so I volunteered," she said. "I found my niche in life. My niche is to give of myself and get something in return."

"Grandma, Please," lets children aged 6 to 13 call in when they feel insecure, need a little advice or just want to talk, said Monica Glaser, who directs the program at the Uptown Center Hull House social service agency.

And for some senior citizens, the need to talk is often as great as that of the latchkey children. Many are confined to their homes, she said.

Being a senior citizen is not enough to qualify. Volunteers must undergo screening and receive training before being ready for the help line.

Seniors must be warm and welcoming on the telephone and very non-judgmental, Ms. Glaser said. The 33 grandmas — and two grandpas — sing to the children on their birthdays, mediate fights and often help with homework.

"Oh, they test you," Mrs. Brownstein said. "There are some children who want to see if they can get me mad, and I've done pretty good so far."

Problem cases are directed to the help line's supervisor, a psychologist who reviews the day's work and directs major problems to appropriate agencies.

The program, the first of its kind, was created in 1985 and has spread to 30 cities in Maryland, New Jersey and Minnesota, Ms. Glaser said. This year, it has received more than 800 calls, an increase of 300 over last year. Operators handle 25 to 30 calls a day between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

Doctor still makes house calls

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — That comforting amenity of memory, the doctor's house call, still exists.

Dr. James Mold, for one, still makes house calls to elderly patients and says he finds them useful and, in fact, enjoyable.

"There are a variety of reasons physicians still make them," says Mold, assistant professor of family medicine and director of the geriatrics program at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center. "One reason I make house calls is that they allow me to get to know patients in a way I can't during a regular office call."

Mold says that the home setting often alerts him to problems like overuse of medication or alcohol abuse — things he might miss during an office appointment.

"With geriatric patients, how they function is often much more important than diagnosing disease," he says. "The place

"Personally, I find house calls very enjoyable. I feel more comfortable, and the patients feel more comfortable. People are appreciative when I take the time to come out, and everyone likes to be appreciated." — Dr. James Mold where people function is in their home, so it's crucial in some cases that you actually see what the person is dealing with."

Mold says the home setting is more relaxing and reassuring to the patient, and he often can get a more accurate blood pressure reading.

But the negative side has to be considered, too, he says. The doctor can't rely on staff and equipment backup that he has at his office.

Despite these drawbacks, he predicts that a doctors will make more house calls in the future, owing to the greater number of older people and to the interest in home health care to shorten hospital stays.

Patients who are too frail to make trips to the office or don't have transportation shouldn't hesitate to ask their doctors to come to them, he adds.

"Personally, I find house calls very enjoyable. I feel more comfortable, and the patients feel more comfortable," he says. "People are appreciative when I take the time to come out, and everyone likes to be appreciated."

Abandoned pueblo lures retirees

GRAN QUIVIRA, N.M. (AP) — Hilltop ruins here may not be the fabled city of gold sought by conquistadors, but voyagers — most of them retirees — lured by nuggets of history and mystery still occupy Gran Quivira.

Gran Quivira, part of Salinas Pueblo Missions National Monument, holds a spiritual treasure for them. The pueblo originally called Cueloze was given its present name in 1780 — a century after it was abandoned — after Indians near El Paso, Texas, told a Spanish chronicler it was Coronado's lost city of gold.

Archaeologists believe up to 10,000 people lived in the area. Scholars aren't sure why they left but National Park Service pamphlets suggest drought, starvation, Spanish cruelty, disease and Apache raids all played a role.

Centuries of wind have eroded the adobe, leaving walls of stacked rocks on the brushy hilltop 60 miles south of Albuquerque.

"The silence up here: It's not a leaden silence. It's a silence that speaks to me," says Anne Scheeler, a 69-year-old widow from Lakeland, Minn., who completed her first stint as a volunteer this spring. "What am I doing in the midst of this wilderness of New Mexico? But listen, you can hear the ghosts of the people who were living here."

Scheeler has edited weekly newspapers, served in the Peace Corps in Honduras in 1965 and in the Christian Appalachian Project in Kentucky in 1967. Now she's in Alaska cooking at a camp for handicapped children.

Historian Eugene P. Link, 81, and his wife, Beulah, 77, of Plattsburgh, N.Y., stay here every winter. Link, author of dozens of articles, pamphlets and books on social history, worked on galley revisions of his fourth book while at Gran Quivira the last two winters.

"If you go up almost any time of the day to see the pueblo, it's an extraordinary privilege," Mrs. Link said in a telephone interview. "The vistas are just incredible. You're by yourself, and you can think. You can identify with all the people who have lived there, what they thought."

"There are some people who can't understand why we would ever want to do such a thing," Link said. "A lady came into the Visitors Center. She was from New York City. She came in and threw her arms in the air and said, 'Where are the people?'"

WOODWAY — Gene Wood's mother hid him in a dresser drawer when Indians approached her family's Indian Territory home around 1908.

That's just one of the adventures Wood has had during his 82 years.

"Of course I don't remember that one — I was just a baby," Wood said recently in Woodway, where he lives with his wife, Myrtle. "The Indians just wanted to water their horses. But when Mama saw them coming, she got scared and hid all the kids. She put the least one in a dresser drawer. That was me."

Soon after Wood was born in 1907, his parents moved in a covered wagon from the Texas Panhandle to Indian Territory, now Oklahoma. His dad, the late William Steven Wood, was deputy sheriff in Stratford.

A few years later, his wife-to-be, then 4 years old, began her own covered-wagon adventure, moving with her family from Arkansas to West Texas.

"My daddy was a telegraph operator for the railroad. I guess he just wanted to move to Texas," said Mrs. Wood. "Mama packed our dolls in the sewing machine drawers, and we couldn't play with them until we got here."

Her parents, the late Ed and Bertha Gentry Yarbrough, had eight children, including one who died at the age of 6 months.

"We came in two wagons. I have no idea how long it took us, but I imagine we didn't make more than 20 miles a day," she said. "We crossed the Arkansas River on a ferry. I remember how scared Mama was."

"We came in two wagons... I have no idea how long it took us, but I imagine we didn't make more than 20 miles a day." — Myrtle Wood

Her only memento of the trip is a small, blue enamelware cup now hanging in her kitchen.

The family stopped at farmhouses along the way and asked to do laundry. "My sister remembered, the people were always glad to see us and always let us wash. While Mama washed, my brothers would chop wood and do chores for them."

Once settled in Texas, the Yarbroughs built a two-room house in Rule.

"There was a living room with a bed in it and a sofa that made in to a bed, and a kitchen — and a bed in it, too," she said.

Her father died before he could enlarge the little house, leaving her mother to rear seven children alone.

Meanwhile, Gene Wood's family had lived in several Texas towns, always moving in covered wagons.

When his father ran a freight line between Texline and Clayton, N.M., "he got his finger mashed somehow on the freight wagon, and blood poisoning set in," Wood said. "They had to take it off five times before they got through — finally took it off at the shoulder."

When the family later settled in Mart, Wood remembers one special family outing — a trip to Waco to see the Suspension Bridge.

Public Notice

On October 18, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWB) intends to file an application with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to add a new service offering for business customers, called Consolidated Billing (CSB). The proposed effective date for this offering is December 4, 1989.

Consolidated Billing allows the business customer to combine an unlimited number of accounts within a single Revenue Accounting Office (RAO). Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's RAOs in Texas are located in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. This service will establish a common billing date for each of those accounts so that they may receive one bill each month. Each customer account is tied together for billing purposes, but retains its own identity and level of detail.

PROPOSED RATES

There is no monthly rate associated with Consolidated Billing. However, a nonrecurring charge of $15.00 will be applied to establish a Consolidated Billing arrangement. An additional $15.00 nonrecurring charge will apply for each account which is incorporated into the Consolidated Billing arrangement.

Consolidated Billing (CSB) has been forecasted to generate an increase in first year annual revenues of approximately $581,733.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by November 24, 1989. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Bay area picking up the pieces

Residents of the San Francisco Bay area are starting to pick up the pieces . . . after the massive earthquake that killed scores of people, injured and left homeless thousands more, and caused billions of dollars in damages.

Despite the toll, some 75,000 football fans saw the San Francisco 49ers play in Stanford University stadium on Sunday, defeating the New England Patriots, and it was announced that the World Series between the San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics would resume . . . Friday.

Such events perhaps are part of the answer to a question which must be asked: Why will millions of people continue to live in a known fault zone that promises even larger earthquakes with greater death and destruction?

One obvious reason is that all of us place our lives and fortunes on the line every day. More than 50,000 persons die each year in auto accidents alone.

Another part of the answer lies with the unquenchable part of the human spirit that has always defied threats to life and economic stability.

But together, are these reasons the full answer to the question of why virtually all of those in the San Francisco area are now beginning to rebuild their lives and stake out new futures? No, they are not.

A certain state of mind exists in California in general and San Francisco in particular. A youthful exhilaration exists there that comes from the outdoor lifestyle of swimming, surfing and skiing and being on the cutting edge of much change in American society.

For millions, the risk of life in that region is worth it. San Francisco Examiner

Compassion not much in display

Last Wednesday (Oct. 18), the switchboard at KYW-TV in Philadelphia logged nearly 500 angry calls between 8:30 a.m. and noon.

They came in response to NBC's coverage of the California earthquake that expanded the "Today" show and cut the regular morning lineup.

The quake put the Bay Bridge World Series on hold. The next morning sportscasters, with a token nod to the tragedy of death and devastated lives in California, clamored to know when the series would resume.

Incredible. That within hours attention could so easily turn from real-life battles for survival to the contrived struggle of a game.

Disquieting that viewers would respond so angrily at being denied an hour of watching actors mimic tragedy.

Distressing that even a few Americans were unwilling to pause — and to make the adjustments in their daily lives that comprise compassion.

Aberdeen (S.D.) American News

Commissioner deserves praise

Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent deserves special praise for his actions since the Oct. 17 earthquake. His decision to delay the World Series reveals a solid set of priorities.

Candlestick Park probably could have withstood an early resumption of the series. Bay area residents certainly could use a diversion from the task of cleaning up.

But resuming play wasn't worth the extra burden the game would place on the area's already overtaxed highway and public safety systems. Having the games on weekday afternoons to meet the East Coast's prime-time schedule would push more traffic onto San Francisco's weakened transportation system at rush hour.

Given how much overemphasis is placed on sports in America, Vincent's willingness to postpone the Series is heartening. Baseball, after all, is what you're supposed to do after the real work is done.

Cool heads and burning flags

It's probably a good thing the U.S. Senate killed a proposed constitutional amendment against burning or otherwise desecrating the American flag. The Bill of Rights has stood us in good stead for two centuries now, and it isn't wise to tinker with it.

The issue was understandably emotion-charged. The senators understood very well that their constituents love the flag and want it protected. Probably some of them voted for the amendment though they privately deemed it unwise, and were sure it would be defeated, in order to appear to be on the side of the angels.

But a number of influential voices, including those of several leading conservatives, had been raised against the amendment. The gist of what they had to say was that flag burning does not pose any such threat to the public order as to justify altering-out basic guarantees of liberty and due process.

Testing who's timid; who isn't

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Democrats have launched an autumn political offensive, accusing President Bush of timidity — which is a slightly kinder way of saying wimp.

It's a label Bush confronted and overcame when he was a candidate. Now there is a toughening tone at the White House, and from Bush's Republican allies in Congress, against the risk that Democrats can revive the image as an issue by calling him a hesitant, timid leader.

Among other things, the president is vowing to stand, lobby and fight for a capital gains tax reduction, something the leader of Senate Democrats says he will not get.

The House passed the tax measure as part of a budget bill, but the Senate stripped it away and differences between the two bills now are under negotiation. The White House said Bush will look for the first opportunity to push the issue to a vote in the Senate, where the administration claims it can get majority support in an up or down test. Bush is expected to contact as many as 20 senators in a personal lobbying drive for the tax cut he advocated as a candidate.

"He's going to press for it and it's not the greatest issue of our times, but it sure as hell is a campaign promise that he kept and I think that's what people admire about him," said Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, the Republican whip.

Another challenge to the Democrats: Vice President Dan Quayle said Bush may pick an issue and try to veto one item in a composite bill, thus claiming a power of line-item veto both he and Ronald Reagan have sought.

"We are looking for a vehicle that might be a suitable test case," said White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

With that power, Bush could, for example, have vetoed only the abortion language in the appropriations bill he rejected last

Guest column

Saturday because it provided federal funds for Medicaid abortions in cases of rape or incest.

The idea of forcing a legal challenge and a court decision on whether a president already has the power to veto specific items is not new business. It was discussed during the Reagan years, but never pushed to a test.

And nobody said it was going to happen this time. But raising the prospect fits the strategy of counterattack, drawing a line against the Democrats running Congress, where the power to build hostage items into hard-to-veto bills always has been guarded against administration inroads.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, the House majority leader, sounded the Democratic offensive.

"The key to the current Republican strategy has been to perpetuate a precarious status quo. Any great changes, even those that might inure to America's benefit, are avoided at all costs. Change is to be put off. The status quo is to be preserved."

"George Bush appears to be determined to go down in history as the hesitation president," Gephardt said in a speech at the National Press Club a week ago. "At least his first year in office could be entitled 'The Year of Living Timidly.'"

Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, leader of the Senate's Democratic majority, already had accused Bush of "timidity" in dealing with the opportunities opened by the move toward democracy in eastern Europe.

The House has voted to approve nearly twice as much aid for Poland and Hungary as the administration proposed.

Democratic leaders and more than a few Republicans complained at administration inaction in the brief and futile Panamanian coup against Manuel Noriega.

Congress forced Bush into an abortion veto that could hurt Republicans; the Democrats outmaneuvered him on flag-burning by passing a law he didn't want and rejecting a constitutional amendment he sought.

"For the last three weeks, as it becomes more and more obvious that the Democratic leadership of the Congress can't get their job done, they have been attacking President Bush more and more aggressively," said Rep. Newt Gingrich, the House Republican whip.

For all of that, the Democrats have had trouble finding the voices and the themes to compete with the White House. Gephardt acknowledged the problem, saying that congressional Democrats must present a cohesive program, not a batch of unconnected issues. He said they're still trying, and hope to put together a consensus Democratic agenda to be presented next year.

First, Congress and the president will have to settle the capital gains fight along with other major issues — their rival child care programs; a minimum wage bill to replace one Bush vetoed as too high and might veto again because of his insistence on a lower training wage for new workers; differences on how and how much to spend fighting drugs; the stalled budget bill that has forced automatic, if probably temporary, spending cuts.

There's plenty there to test who's timid and who isn't.

Talk show with a difference

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I've decided I want my own television talk show, too. Everybody else has one. Even Jesse Jackson.

I'll call my show "The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show."

I'll appear on your television screen and promote my show saying things like "Children who eat bugs. Next on 'The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show.'"

Or "How to tell if your husband is actually an aardvark. Next on 'The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show.'"

I'm not sure how the television talk show epidemic got started. It all used to be quite simple. You tuned in "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson at 11:30, and you stayed awake as long as you could.

Sometimes, you'd go all the way till 1 in the morning if Johnny had an interesting guest like George Carlin or a bellman from the local hotel who played classical music on a bicycle pump. I saw the Carson show live when it was still in New York. He didn't have George Carlin on, but he did have a bellman from a local hotel who played classical music on a bicycle pump.

(When I get my show together the first thing I'm going to tell my staff is, "Anybody tries to book a bellman who plays classical music on a bicycle pump is out of here.")

Then, Carson went to an hour. And then Carson quit showing up but four nights a week. And suddenly, here's Donahue with all his fancy-smancy sensitivity, and then all hell broke loose.

Donahue, Oprah, Geraldo, Morton Downey Jr., Sally Jessy Raphael, Regis and Kathy Lee. Have I missed anybody?

Of course I have. Pat Sajak. David Letterman. Arsenio Hall. And Joan Rivers, twice. And, now, Jesse Jackson. Who's next? Marcel Marceau?

How much longer can these shows stay on the air? How many topics, sensitive and insensitive, can there be without massive repetition?

How many times can Spike Lee be interviewed? How many more left-handed-lesbian-Chinese-yacht-racers can there be to appear on Donahue?

How much more Satanism can we stand, Geraldo? The devil with it all.

OK. So you're asking, if there are too many talk shows as it is, why would I want to start another one?

It's because "The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show" is going to offer a completely different twist.

Everybody on my show, including me, is going to be naked.

I'll be on your screen promoting my show saying, "Want to see a lot of famous people naked? Tune in to 'The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show.'"

You won't get that much of a thrill out of seeing me naked, of course. When I shower at the club after golf, they make me wear a towel. In the shower.

But what if I have former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger? Wouldn't just about everybody in the country like to get a look at ol' Henry naked?

Of course if I've booked a movie sex idol, my ratings would soar. Want to see Mel Gibson without any clothes on? Next on "The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show."

Or, "Kim Basinger Naked. Not a stitch. Next on 'The Lewis Sally Jesse Grizzard Jr. Show.'"

It wouldn't matter hardly at all what we talked about on my talk show because people would be tuning in mostly to see who they were going to see naked. What a brilliant idea, and if Joey Bishop thought of this he'd still have a job.

DC murder toll at record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia's 1989 homicide toll already equals last year's record of 369 killings — with more than half blamed on drug-related violence — and officials say they see no end in sight.

Police blame more than 60 percent of the district's slayings on drugs, particularly the arrival of crack cocaine.

The federal government is making the nation's capital a test case for national anti-drug strategies, and city police are working long hours trying to curb drug-related violence.

National Drug Policy Coordinator William J. Bennett acknowledged recently that the district's drug and crime problem — the focus of special attention from his office — will be difficult to solve.

"No one should be surprised to learn that the nation's capital is still plagued by a serious drug problem," Bennett said while reviewing federal efforts in the district's drug war. "The drug-related murder rate is intolerably high, the prisons are too crowded, drugs continue to be sold openly around schools, parks and housing projects."

On Friday, President Bush vetoed the city's annual spending bill, delaying a special $32 million federal anti-crime package.

By vetoing the bill because it would allow the city to use local tax money to finance Medicaid abortions for poor women, Bush put on hold a plan to hire 700 extra police, eight new judges, and a host of school-based anti-drug educational programs.

Plane hits deck of aircraft carrier

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A jet practicing take-offs and landings crashed into the tower of the aircraft carrier Lexington, then cartwheeled and burst into flames on the flight deck, killing five and injuring two, authorities said.

The two-seater T-2 Buckeye jet, based at the Naval Air Station in Meridian, Miss., crashed Sunday afternoon during the training mission about 30 miles south of Pensacola in the Gulf of Mexico.

The pilot approached too low for a landing and deck crewmembers tried to wave the flier off before the crash, according to Rep. Earl Hutto, D-Fla.

The plane hit the tower of the 46-year-old aircraft carrier, flipped over and slammed into a row of parked planes, said the congressman, who was briefed by Navy officials.

Aviation fuel immediately ignited on the 889-foot-long blacktop deck, but the fires were quickly brought under control, said Navy Cmdr. Dennis Hessler.

The crash caused major damage to two aircraft on the ship and minor damage to another, said Army Maj. John Smith, a Pentagon spokesman.

The Lexington, the Navy's oldest aircraft carrier, was not damaged extensively. It was due to arrive today at its home port in Pensacola, said Navy officials.

Agent Orange issue re-evaluated

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advisory committee to the Department of Veterans Affairs this week may open the door a crack to disability benefits for Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange.

Responding to a federal court decision in May, the 15-member Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards will look again at scientific papers and studies on the herbicide used to clear dense foliage that hid the enemy.

This time, however, the committee will use standards considered less strict than those used for determining other service-connected disabilities.

No one is predicting the outcome. But there is agreement that VA Secretary Edward J. Derwinski wants to resolve the issue quickly and in favor of veterans.

Veterans blame exposure to Agent Orange for cancers, skin diseases and genetic damage leading to miscarriages or birth defects. The committee will spend its first two days reviewing about 20 or 30 studies on the connection between exposure and non-Hodgkins lymphoma, one of the most frequently cited cancers, then study other diseases at later meetings.

On Friday, it will issue recommendations on non-Hodgkins lymphoma and Agent Orange.

The four-year-old advisory committee and government scientists have thus far rejected a link between Agent Orange exposure and health problems other than a skin condition known as chloracne.

The American Legion, the prime veterans' group in this dispute, contends the committee has a longstanding bias against veterans.

The government says the main problem with studies up to now is that there has been no way to verify exposure to dioxin. The American Legion and others say the government has detailed records on spraying activities that can be combined with equally detailed records on troop movements.

Halloween ghouls and goblins real for some

Pumpkin festivals are sprouting in some school districts, where parents are trying to keep Halloween out of the hallways and off school grounds because of its connection with witches and Satan.

In Alachua County, Fla., Robert Guyer gathered the signatures of about 200 fellow parents who think the holiday is a religious celebration of Wicca, a modern pagan witchcraft cult.

When teachers dress up like witches, "what happens to these little Christian kids like mine?" asked Guyer, a University of Florida law student. "How are they going to feel when it's dress-up day and they don't dress up?"

Officials in Alachua County left the decision on Halloween to school principals.

In neighboring Levy County, the superintendent asked schools to avoid using Halloween decorations and to cancel school celebrations.

Halloween, which is being celebrated Tuesday night, apparently sprang from an ancient ceremony honoring the Celtic god of death. In medieval England, it came to be known as All Hallows' Eve, celebrated before the feast day of All Hallows, now All Saints' Day. As is the case with the pagan Christmas tree, few pay attention to its religious origins.

But Guyer cites a recent 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in Atlanta that found that prayers before high school football games violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

"As Easter has been banned in favor of spring holiday, as Christmas has been banned in favor of winter holiday, so, too, Halloween should be banned in favor of fall holiday," he said.

The Rev. Bill Ligon of Brunswick, Ga., agreed: "Some of the symbolism used for Halloween is used also by recognized religions. I think the law as interpreted by the 11th Circuit should be impartially applied to any religious activity at school."

Halloween's defenders say it has become a non-religious holiday.

"The witches and goblins of Halloween are no more believable than Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny or the Tooth Fairy. ... Are they going to ban those, too?" asked Charley Mack, a father of six in Tallahassee, Fla., where several schools are inaugurating "harvest festivals" in place of Halloween.

In Texas, Harlingen Superintendent T. Carl McMillan responded to parents' anxieties by asking principals to tone down celebrations.

"I asked them to review their practices and if they had anything that depicted blood and gore to try to eliminate that," McMillan said.

An elementary school in Amarillo planned to celebrate Pumpkin Fun Day rather than Halloween.

And in Frederick County, Md., three elementary schools have discontinued Halloween events. At least one decided to hold a fall celebration instead.

"I personally have trouble defending ghosts and goblins in our instructional curriculum," said John Thompson, a county school official.

Parents are upset by lurid descriptions of devil worship on television and in rock music, said Fred Eisenbraun of the Rapid City Cops for Christ, in South Dakota.

Eisenbraun was in Worthington, Minn., last week to conduct an Occult Awareness Seminar for teachers, parents and teen-agers.

Clues link Flight 103 bomb to Libya

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Investigators suspect a bomb that destroyed Pan Am Flight 103 and killed 270 people may have originated in Malta and that a Libyan may have been involved, a West German official said today.

Today, a spokesman for West Germany's federal criminal investigations office in Wiesbaden confirmed the Maltese link and said it was providing "a hot trail" for investigators.

The Scottish detectives who are heading the investigation have contended for several months that the bomb was put on the jet in Frankfurt, where Flight 103 originated. Passengers and luggage were transferred to a Boeing 747 at Heathrow Airport in London.

All 259 people aboard and 11 residents on the ground were killed when the bomb ripped apart the jet over Lockerbie, Scotland, on Dec. 21.

He said the initial clue about a Malta connection came from an "examination of the remains" from the crash site. He did not elaborate.

Journalists shot after extradition

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Attackers on a motorcycle shot and wounded two journalists in front of a television studio just hours after a purported cocaine kingpin was sent to the United States to be prosecuted.

No group claimed responsibility for Sunday's shooting in the capital, but it appeared to be yet another response by cocaine barons to the government's extradition of accused drug traffickers to the United States.

Jose Abello Silva, the Medellin cocaine cartel's reputed master smuggler, was handed over to U.S. narcotics agents before dawn Sunday at a Bogota airport and then flown to Tulsa, Okla., to face drug charges, U.S. authorities said.

He was the fifth and most important drug-trafficking suspect extradited to the United States since the Colombian government began an all-out war on drug gangs 10 weeks ago. Eight more suspects are being held for extradition.

In Sunday's attack, the two gunmen on a motorcycle shot Jorge Enrique Pulido, producer of the news program "Mundo Vision," and newswoman Ximena Godoy as they got into a car after leaving the studio, police said.

Pulido and Ms. Godoy were the ninth and 10th news industry employees shot since the government began its crackdown in August after the assassination of a leading presidential candidate. The other eight died.

In the week after the crackdown began, a group of drug traffickers calling itself the Extraditables vowed in a letter sent to a radio network to attack the country's journalists and public figures.

Since then, the offices of two newspapers have been bombed.

Rally under official investigation

WALTER SISULU

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they were investigating for possible prosecution participants in a rally by 70,000 people in which the outlawed African National Congress' guerrilla campaign was repeatedly praised.

"All that was said and all that took place is being studied," said police spokesman Col. Vic Haynes the morning after the welcome rally for seven recently freed ANC leaders in a soccer stadium outside Johannesburg.

Nearly everything about the gathering violated security laws, but police kept their distance and state television led the evening news with a report on what was the largest anti-government rally in South Africa's 79-year history.

The government granted permission for Sunday's rally as part of an attempt by new President F.W. de Klerk to promote black-white negotiations. But a magistrate had warned organizers that speakers should avoid promoting ANC aims.

Hyperion Club meets

BIG SPRING — The 1948 Hyperion Club met Oct. 19 in the home of Mrs. Sonny Shroyer with Mrs. Jack Alexander as co-hostess.

President Delores Currie reported that the Hyperion Council and other interested parties would meet Monday at 5 p.m. at the Dora Roberts Community Center to formulate ideas for renovation of the building for community activities.

Vice President Jo Anne Forrest introduced Pam Miller, Certified Hypnotherapist, who presented the program on the use of hypnosis in altering behavioral patterns relating to weight control and smoking.

The next meeting will be Nov. 16 at the home of Mrs. Merle Stewart.

Weaver guest speaker

BIG SPRING — Woman's Forum met Oct. 20, in the home of Mrs. J. O. McCrary with Mrs. E. P. Driver as assistant hostess. The meeting was called to order by Mary Crawford, president.

Mrs. Howard Salisbury introduced the guest speaker, R. H. Weaver, a local attorney, who spoke on "Women and the Law." Mr. Weaver stressed the fact that women outnumber men, live longer than men, control much of the country's wealth, and if informed and united on legal and political matters, could do much to effect changes in our legal and political system. He also stated that the Texas Constitution is 113 years old and has had 21 amendments. One particularly interesting facet of Mr. Weaver's talk was his disclosure that no woman had ever been called for jury duty in Howard County prior to the decade of the 1950s.

The next meeting of the Forum will be Nov. 17 in the home of Mrs. H. D. Cowden, with Mrs. Jack Y. Smith as assistant hostess.

Breast surgery talk

BIG SPRING — The Elbow Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Murriel Prokschl with President Myrl Soles presiding. Prokschl gave the devotion. Sixteen members answered roll call by giving the results of their mammogram.

Sherrie Bordofsky the Executive Director of United Way was the guest speaker. Bordofsky shared some of her encounters after having breast surgery, she stated its normal to have fear but don't be scared, have a positive attitude. Your relatives and friends should be supportive and not shun you, stress and strain activate cancer. She urged all members to have a mammogram and go see your doctor if you have any kind of problem.

The next leader training program "Getting Involved" will be in the conference room, Howard County Library. Members voted on recommendations for the council year book. Members discussed baking cookies to be served after the Christmas parade, also about dressing dolls for the Salvation Army. The next meeting will be at the home of Lou Vincent, Nov. 2.

Readers give Abby a new direction

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I take strong issue with your response to "Wrong-Way Housewife." Daily experience convinces me that a sense of direction is either inborn or not, on an individual basis. I have always had it — my husband has not. And lest you assume he is "slow-witted," he has an IQ exceeding 150 and was a high-ranking military officer in a position requiring exemplary map-reading skills. He also has an MBA. By his own admission, he has absolutely no sense of direction. He has striven all his life to overcome this failing, to no avail. This is a man who has the willpower of a bull and intelligence approaching genius level, so please don't tell him to "try harder." — THE FAMILY NAVIGATOR IN SCOTTSDALE

DEAR ABBY: Usually you're right on course, but your answer to "Wrong-Way Housewife" was 180 degrees off course.

A sense of direction is a right-brain function, and some of us are more left-brained than right-brained. Case in point: My husband and our oldest son are very good at directions — they always know where north is and can get anywhere with no problem. They both tend to be right-brained people. My younger son and I barely know left from right and find directions impossible to follow. We tend to be left-brained people.

Abby, please be a little more sympathetic to the ones who have this problem. It's no fun, believe me. — WRONG-WAY KENNEDY

DEAR ABBY: While I was driving, my wife awoke from a sound sleep to tell me that I had made a wrong turn!

I can get lost in a revolving door, but my wife has an unerring sense of direction. Those of us without it know that to keep from getting lost is not, as you said, "Simply a matter of paying attention." The fact of the matter is that many of us have to work twice as hard to get lost only half as often. — THE REV. RAYMOND J. HOWE, ST. PETER'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

DEAR ABBY: You should have checked with your experts before telling "Wrong-Way Housewife" that anyone can find his way if he just charts his course, then concentrates on staying on it. A neuro-psychologist would have probably told you that there are people who confuse left and right due to an in-born learning disability or a minor brain injury.

It's not a matter of intelligence, either. When I go to a large shopping mall and park my car in one of those enormous parking lots, I practically have to leave a trail of bread crumbs in order to get back to my car. I am fairly bright; I'm a member of Mensa, Phi Beta Kappa and a champion contract bridge player. — GETS LOST A LOT IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe you told "Wrong-Way Housewife" to "try harder."

Abby, her problem could be the result of a minor accident, or even something she was born with — in which case, no amount of "trying" can help her. It's like saying, "Abby, you could be a great opera singer, or a ballet dancer, or a gold medal Olympic winner, if you would just try harder."

Come on, Abigail, get real. — DISAPPOINTED IN YOU

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: All right, I'll take my lumps. I said, "No one is born with a sense of direction," which I still think is true. But I should have gone on to say that many people are born without one, due to a learning disability.

So, give me a break, and give me a charitable "D minus" on that one.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter about obscene phone calls, I had to write and tell you what has worked for me. When the caller starts in with the spiel, I listen and make no comment until the caller has finished, then I say, very innocently: "Would you mind repeating that, please? I don't hear very well, and I didn't understand what you were talking about."

The caller usually slams the receiver down forcibly! — LAS VEGAS READER

DEAR READER: Not a bad idea, but that necessitates having to listen to some disgusting dialogue.

A Tampa reader with a novel solution wrote: "I used to have trouble with obscene phone calls, then I kept my Bible by the phone and started quoting Scripture to the caller. After that, I wasn't bothered again."

Haunted graveyard

BIG SPRING — The Howard County Jaycees have temporarily taken over the old KUFO-KBYG building at the Big Spring Airport and decorated it as a haunted house. In the graveyard room, several monsters lurk in the shadows. The haunted house will be open from 7-10 p.m. Sunday and Tuesday.

Colonial Dames meet

BIG SPRING — The Richard Chapter of the Colonial Dames of the 17th Century met at the Green Room, Oct. 24 for lunch. Mrs. A. A. Kelly, vice president presided.

Additions to the scrap book were discussed.

Mrs. Lou Horton reported to be hospitalized and Mrs. Wm. Riley recovering from knee surgery.

Mrs. Elvis McCrary told of a manuscript that was stored in the tower of the Old North Church in Boston, Mass., which disappeared during the Revolutionary War and not found until 1855 in the Fulham Palace Library, London, England by a student who connected it with the early history of the Pilgrims. The manuscript was finally released by the library to the United States in 1898 and stored in the Massachusetts Archives in Boston. It was first published in Boston in 1856 from a copy of the manuscript in book form entitled "The History of Plymouth Plantation."

The author was William Bradford, one of the Pilgrim Fathers, colonial governor and historian, came to America in 1621, was one of the founders of the Plymouth Colony. He was born in England in 1590 and died in 1657. It is not known how the manuscript reached England. Mrs. McCrary found a copy of the book — which she purchased for 25 cents — while browsing through a North Carolina Book Store.

Mrs. Olive Ruth Cowden was a visitor.

A special meeting is called for at The Green House, Oct. 30 at noon and the regular meeting will be Jan. 8, 1990 at noon at the Green House.

A bad day for the Texas teams

Browns resort to trickery to rally past Oilers, 28-17

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Houston Oilers called it trickery. Bernie Kosar called it guts.

"It takes courage to attack them with those sorts of plays," Kosar said Sunday after the Cleveland Browns revived their offense with an assortment of reverses, flea flickers and even a halfback pass, beating the Oilers 28-17.

"Every team has them," Kosar said. "It takes a lot of nerve on a coach's part to call them, because if they backfire, you can lose 15 yards."

The Browns (5-3), losing 10-0 at halftime, were lucky to be even that close. Kosar was intercepted twice in the half, and only a strong Cleveland defensive effort and some mistakes by Houston's offense kept the Browns in the game.

At halftime, Coach Bud Carson and offensive coordinator Marc Trestman decided it was time to dust off Chapter 2 of the play book.

It started innocently enough, with receiver Reggie Langhorne going 18 yards on a reverse to set up Kosar's 5-yard touchdown scramble, making it 10-7.

On the Browns' next possession, they got more creative. Kosar handed off to rookie Eric Metcalf, who flipped the ball back to Kosar, who found Webster Slaughter alone 10 yards behind the Houston secondary for an 80-yard touchdown pass.

After Mike Rozier ran 1 yard for the Oilers' only second-half points, Kosar hit Slaughter with a 77-yard scoring pass, threading the ball neatly between two defenders.

The final touchdown came on CLEVELAND — Cleveland Browns wide receiver Reggie Langhorne (88) leaps to catch a seven-yard pass as Houston Oilers cornerback Steve Brown defends in the first quarter Sunday afternoon.

Metcalf's 32-yard halfback pass to Langhorne. It was set up by yet another gimmick play on which there were two handoffs, a flip back to Kosar and a pass to Metcalf for a 25-yard gain.

"I played quarterback my junior year in high school," Metcalf said. "I was able to throw the ball then, and I threw it a couple of times in college. What's new about this is that it was in the NFL against the big leaguers, and that's more exciting for me."

Former Cowboys coach teaches new Cowboys coach a new lesson

IRVING (AP) — It was a familiar setting for Phoenix coach Gene Stallings, except this time the guys with the silver stars on their helmets made the game-breaking mistakes.

Stallings, an assistant for 14 seasons under Tom Landry, gave Jimmy Johnson a lesson in ball-control offense and a quarterback-harassing defense.

He also saddled Johnson with an eighth straight NFL loss Sunday, a 19-10 Cardinals victory over the Dallas Cowboys at Texas Stadium.

The Cardinals had no turnovers, intercepted Steve Walsh twice with deadly effect and recovered a fumble late in the game that led to a clinching field goal.

"We wanted the clock to run in this game and that's why we were conservative," Stallings said. "We wanted the game over so that's why we didn't come with anything special on offense."

St. Louis controlled the ball for more than 39 minutes in the 60-minute game.

Safety Michael Zordich returned an interception 16 yards for a third-period touchdown, and Al Del Greco kicked four field goals as the Cardinals evened their record at 4-4.

It was a big day for Zordich, whose wife had a baby boy in Phoenix earlier on Sunday.

"I was right there when Walsh threw the ball and it fell right in my hands after it was tipped," Zordich said. "There was nobody in front of me. It was just a matter of catching the ball and taking it in."

"The last three days have been just unbelievable. I can't wait to get home and see the kid."

Johnson, used to success in the college ranks, said it was difficult to accept one defeat after another.

"We're trying so hard that we're making mistakes,"

Johnson said. "For the second straight week our opponent didn't have any turnovers. I guess we are pressing as we try to make something happen and that in turn causes errors."

Johnson said the team was

Controversial call gives Eagles a win over Broncos

By The Associated Press

It isn't often that Buddy Ryan agrees with the men in stripes, those much-maligned zebras whose decisions frequently divide victory from defeat in the NFL. This time, however, he was a staunch defender.

"It was a good call, no question about it," Ryan said Sunday after his Philadelphia Eagles beat the Denver Broncos 28-24.

Perhaps the location of one's final number begets vision extraordinary. Being to the left of the hyphen, Ryan saw it his way. On the right was Dan Reeves, who swears rookie Darren Carrington didn't do it.

"Darren says the punt did not hit him," Reeves said. "I don't think the referee saw it clearly."

What either coach thought mattered little, however, because referee Jim Tunney said an Eagles punt hit special-teamer Carrington midway through the fourth period. The ball was recovered by Philadelphia's William Frizzell.

"I had an excellent view and I saw the ball hit the Denver player," Ryan said. "I was just afraid the ref was going to miss it."

But Tunney saw it and so, too, did the replay official.

Their decision gave the Eagles, trailing 24-21, the ball at the Denver 24. Two minutes later, Keith Byars ran one yard for his second touchdown of the day as Philadelphia (6-2) came from behind for a victory for the fourth time this season.

The call also wrecked Reeves' strategy.

"We had planned to run some time off and protect a three-point lead," he said. "And then all of a sudden they have the ball. I hate losing like that."

The loss dropped the Broncos to 6-2, but they lead the AFC West by two games. The Eagles are a half-game behind New York in the NFC East. The Giants host Minnesota tonight.

Elsewhere, it was the Los Angeles Raiders 37, Washington 24; Cincinnati 56, Tampa Bay 23; Cleveland 28, Houston 17; Chicago 20, the Los Angeles Rams 10; Buffalo 31, Miami 17; San Francisco 23, the New York Jets 10; New Orleans 20, Atlanta 13; Green Bay 23, Detroit 20 in overtime; New England 23, Indianapolis 20 in overtime; Phoenix 19, Dallas 10; Pittsburgh 23, Kansas City 17, and Seattle 10, San Diego 7.

3-1 since replacing the fired Mike Shanahan.

The Redskins (4-4) turned the ball over eight times, allowed seven quarterback sacks and were penalized 12 times for 135 yards. Washington quarterback Mark Rypien accounted for five turnovers, fumbling twice after being sacked and throwing three interceptions.

"Their front four put a lot of pressure on me," Rypien said. "They played one of the best games I've ever seen them play."

Steve Buehler, making his first start of the season in place of ex-Redskin Jay Schroeder, threw two touchdown passes to Mervyn Fernandez. Bo Jackson, who gained 144 yards on 19 carries, ran 73 yards for another score for the Raiders (4-4).

Bengals 56, Bucs 23

Boomer Esiason matched his three-year-old club record with five touchdown passes as Cincinnati ended a two-week offensive drought with its most productive day since a 61-17 victory over Houston in 1972.

"I don't think any of us in our wildest dreams expected 50-some points," said Esiason, who threw five scoring passes against the New York Jets in 1986. "We had a lot of frustration built up the last two weeks, and somebody had to pay for it."

The usually high-scoring Bengals (5-3) had totaled just 25 points in consecutive losses to Miami and Indianapolis. But they scored 42 in a row at one point against the Bucs (3-5).

"In the second half, it was like we didn't show up," Bucs receiver Mark Carrier said.

Bears 20, Rams 10

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh relieved Mike Tomczak in the second quarter and led Chicago (5-3) over Los Angeles as the Bears snapped a three-game losing streak. The Rams (5-3) have lost their last three.

Harbaugh directed a 39-yard drive when he entered the game with 5:50 left in the second quarter. Kevin Butler kicked a 35-yard field goal for a 3-3 halftime tie.

Harbaugh engineered two second-half touchdown drives, scoring one himself on a 1-yard run. He completed 10 of 13 passes for 157 yards.

Bills 31, Dolphins 17

Thurman Thomas and Larry Kinnebrew rushed for more than 100 yards apiece and each scored a touchdown as Buffalo (6-2), missing injured quarterback Jim Kelly, passed just nine times in 60 plays.

Thomas ran for 148 yards and scored on a weaving, 30-yard run. Kinnebrew added 121 yards, scoring on a 1-yard run. The Bills gained 280 yards rushing against Miami in winning their third straight game.

A big surprise was a sack by the Buffalo defense, which put Dan Marino on ground twice. Miami (4-4) had not allowed a sack in its previous 19 games.

49ers 23, Jets 10

Jerry Rice made a leaping catch for a touchdown, and Mike Cofer kicked three field goals as the 49ers won their sixth straight road game. The Jets (1-7) have lost five games in a row.

Steve Young started for the 49ers (7-1) in place of Joe Montana, who was resting a sprained knee, and Steve Bono also saw some playing time. Bono completed the 45-yarder to Rice, who leaped over two defenders at the 2-yard line and came down in the end zone in the second quarter.

Saints 20, Falcons 13

Dalton Hilliard scored from a yard out with 2:12 to go, lifting New Orleans (4-4) over Atlanta (2-6). Saints linebacker Pat Swilling sacked Chris Miller three times and forced two fumbles.

Saints scores came on a 21-yard pass from Bobby Herbert to Hilliard, the rushing touchdown by Hilliard and field goals of 32 and 44 yards by Morten Andersen.

Packers 23, Lions 20, OT

Green Bay's Chris Jacke won the game with a 38-yard field goal. Jacke, who missed a 50-yarder on the final play of regulation, ended it three plays after Mark Murphy intercepted Rodney Peete on the first play after Detroit received the overtime kickoff.

The Lions (1-7) rallied with 10 fourth-quarter points, tying the score 20-20, and moved to the Packers 36 with 44 seconds left in regulation before Peete fumbled a handoff.

Green Bay is 4-4.

Mavs okay Tarpley

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks have accepted forward Roy Tarpley's apology for his 24-hour disappearance last week. But it may be league officials who decide Tarpley's NBA fate.

A two-time offender of the NBA's drug policy, Tarpley said he was upset with his performance at Thursday's practice and overslept Friday, missing practice.

Players who violate the policy three times face an automatic two-year suspension from the league.

Tarpley scored 11 points and grabbed 9 rebounds Sunday night in the Mavericks' 98-97 victory over the Indiana Pacers at Fort Worth.

But his next challenge will come in the form of a drug test, and he faces suspension if results are positive for cocaine or heroin, Mavericks and NBA officials said Saturday.

"The NBA determines what is a slip and what is a major problem," said Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju. "To the best of my knowledge, the NBA was satisfied that while it (Tarpley's absence) was not a good thing, it was not fatal, either. Of course, if they decide to hang him by his thumbs, that's their right."

Dr. David Lewis, head of the league's Adult Substance Abuse Program, or one of his assistants is expected this week to further evaluate Tarpley. They could determine whether Tarpley stays in uniform.

"If he doesn't follow his after-care according to what the physicians want," said Mavericks vice president Rick Sund, "there are things such as fines, there are things such as suspension, and last year he even had a strike against him."

The 7-foot forward was suspended from the team in January for drug violations. While undergoing drug rehabilitation, Tarpley missed 49 games last season. He returned to the roster April 11.

Tarpley worked out with the team Saturday and apologized for disappearing for a day.

Player has surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — A high school football player was in stable condition after undergoing brain surgery to remove a blood clot sustained during a game Friday night.

Jason Pennington, 17, was listed in critical but stable condition Sunday at Hermann Hospital, officials said.

Pennington, a defensive and offensive player for The Second Baptist School, was taken by LifeFlight helicopter from Grobbs Stadium about 10:45 p.m. Friday to Hermann Hospital where he had surgery early Saturday.

Pennington received the blow to his head Friday in a game with Galveston O'Connell, paramedics said.

Team physician Bruce Douthit said Pennington had suffered a head injury five weeks ago during a football game and was subsequently hospitalized but a brain scan found nothing abnormal.

Douthit said he does not think the previous head injury had any effect on Friday night's injury.

Pennington was hurt with only two minutes left to play in the game.

At least two doctors in the stands assisted the teen-ager, who was only semiconscious, the paramedics said.

The game was canceled at the time of the injury. Galveston O'Connell, which was winning 29-0 with two minutes to play, was awarded the win.

The onslaught completely fooled the Oilers (4-4) by taking advantage of the aggressive play of their defensive backs.

"We hadn't seen those plays before in any of the Browns' game films," safety Jeff Donaldson said. "There's definitely a lesson to be learned here, but I hate to learn a lesson when it has to cost us a game."

Kosar said the Browns decided to use misdirection and sleight of hand because opponents had been playing such tight defense, stuffing the Browns' running game at the

Washington runner keeps Chicago Marathon crown

CHICAGO (AP) — Lisa Weidenbach was way back in the pack and thought she didn't have a chance to successfully defend her Chicago Marathon title.

"I was in 22nd place behind the women's leader, running into the wind and was alone," Weidenbach said Sunday. "Then at the 15K mark, the wind was at my back and I started picking off people."

On a very warm morning, Weidenbach, of Issaquah, Wash., took the lead about eight miles from the end of the 26.2-mile race and pulled away to win the women's division in a personal best time of 2 hours, 28 minutes, 15 seconds.

Paul Davies-Hale, a 10-kilometer athlete making his marathon debut, easily outdistanced veteran Soviet runner Ravil Kashapov to become the third Briton to finish first here in the last five races.

Davies-Hale took over the lead from Mustafa El Nechchadi of Morocco at about the 20-mile mark and stayed in front to win in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 25 seconds.

"It's my first marathon, so I'm quite pleased with my performance," said Davies-Hale, of Rugeley, England, whose career victories include the 1988 Red Lobster 10K, and 1985 Boulder Bolder 10K and 1985 Lilac Bloomsday 12K in East Spokane.

"I took a lot of water early on, and it paid dividends later on," he said. "I might have run 2 or 2 1/2 minutes quicker if the weather wasn't so bad."

CHICAGO — Leisa Weidenbach of Issaquah, Wash., waves to the crowd after she won the women's division of the Chicago Marathon with a personal best of 2:28.14.

The marathon was run on a flat course through the city's ethnic neighborhoods and lakefront parks under bright sunny skies, with the temperature at 68 degrees and the relative humidity at 47 percent by race's end. It was about 20 degrees warmer than last year's race here.

Kashapov, 32, was second Sunday at 2:13:19, almost two minutes behind the 27-year-old Davies-

Hale. The Soviet said much of his time during the race was spent sightseeing.

"Being the first time in the U.S., I spent much of my energy looking not at how the race was going, but looking to the right and left," he said through a translator.

Briton Dave Long was third in 2:13:37 and Ed Eyestone of Bountiful, Utah, was fourth. Nechchadi fell back to finish 13th.

Eyestone, who had been hoping for the first U.S. time under 2:10 since 1983, covered the course in 2:14:57.

"I saw the temperature gauge at racetime and I knew no records were going to be broken," Eyestone said.

Weidenbach wound up more than two minutes in front of runnerup Carla Beurskens of The Netherlands, whose time was 2:30:24. Cathy O'Brien of Boston was third in 2:31:19.

"People say that when you're fit, you're fit and it doesn't matter how hot it is. One day the heat kills you and the next it is your friend," said the 27-year-old Weidenbach, whose previous best was 2:29:17 in winning the 1988 Chicago event.

Weidenbach said she took the lead at the same place she did in winning the 1988 race.

"My mom and dad were there. It was quite ironic," she said.

Of the marathon record purse of $350,000, the top man and woman each pocketed $50,000. Runnerups in both categories got $30,000.

Coach suspended for hitting quarterback with clipboard

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The football coach at San Antonio Roosevelt has been suspended with pay pending an investigation into an alleged clipboard-throwing incident that injured the Rough Riders' starting quarterback.

John Ferrara was suspended late Saturday, hours after allegedly injuring star quarterback Mike Coolbaugh during halftime of the Rough Riders' 28-0 loss to Converse Judson.

Roosevelt Principal Mark Schefler handed down the suspension, pending an investigation today by officials of the North East School District.

Coolbaugh suffered two cuts — one on the forehead and one on the bridge of the nose — that required plastic surgery at Northeast Baptist Hospital.

With Roosevelt trailing Judson 21-0 at halftime, Ferrara allegedly threw a clipboard that struck the 6-foot-1, 190-pound senior in the face during a fiery halftime talk.

Coolbaugh had completed 1 of 14 passes and was intercepted twice — his worst first-half showing of the season.

In an interview with KSAT-TV at the hospital Saturday night, Ferrara said he didn't throw the clipboard at the quarterback.

"I threw a clipboard at the wall ... how it hit the young man, I don't know. I threw that clipboard. That's what took place. I was just trying to get a point across, get the boys to play harder the second half," Ferrara said.

Robert Coolbaugh, Mike's father, believes the school should consider a coaching change.

"I definitely think they ought to have someone who will not touch the kids," Robert Coolbaugh told the San Antonio Light. "I don't think it's a matter of me wanting him to be dismissed. I think ... he has to be dismissed."

Roosevelt, which was undefeated entering the game against Judson, must win one of its two remaining District 27-5A games to clinch its first playoff berth since 1970.

In the latest Associated Press state school poll, Judson was the No. 1-ranked Class 5A team.

Ferrara, who has coached at Roosevelt since 1982, is the only active coach in the city to win a state football title in the highest classification, having done so while at Lee High School in 1971.

He was visiting relatives in Wimberley on Sunday and was unavailable for comment, according to Marty Shaughnessy, Ferrara's first assistant at Roosevelt.

But Saturday night Ferrara said he had talked to the quarterback's father at the hospital.

"I told him I was heartily sorry about the accident," Ferrara said. "He showed tremendous respect. We had a good conversation."

Patriots 23, Colts 20, OT
Greg Davis missed a 46-yard field goal at the end of regulation, then kicked a 51-yarder with 5:03 left in overtime, giving New England (3-5) the victory.

The Patriots started the winning drive from their own 12. Steve Grogan, who passed for 355 yards and one touchdown, was driven back to his own 4-yard line on a sack, but he hit three straight passes, taking the Pats to the 44 and keeping the drive alive.

Indianapolis fell to 4-4.

Steelers 23, Chiefs 17
Returning after missing two weeks because of injury, Bubba Brister threw two touchdown passes to Louis Lipps, including a 64-yarder in the fourth quarter. Pittsburgh (4-4) had to rally after blowing a 16-point lead.

The Chiefs (3-5) scored 17 straight points after trailing 16-0 and took the lead when Dwight Stone fumbled on a reverse and defensive lineman Bill Maas returned it four yards for a touchdown with 3:51 left the third period.

Seahawks 10, Chargers 7

Dave Krieg threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades with 40 seconds left, giving Seattle (4-4) the victory in a game that didn't really begin until the two-minute warning.

Seattle led 3-0 after a 27-yard field goal by Norm Johnson in the first quarter, and there wasn't another score until Jim McMahon came off the bench to throw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Arthur Cox with 1:53 to play.

San Diego (2-6) started Billy Joe Tolliver, but went to McMahon in the final period.

Mississippi free safety will have surgery for neck injury

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mississippi free safety Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins was scheduled for "stabilizing" surgery today after suffering a paralyzing neck injury in the first quarter of Saturday's football game against Vanderbilt.

The 20-year-old Mullins was paralyzed from the neck down when he hit Vanderbilt receiver Brad Gaines while breaking up a pass play in Mississippi's 24-16 victory over Vandy.

"Chuckie received a fractureddislocation of the fourth and fifth cervical vertebrae, which are located in the neck," said Leroy Mullins, Mississippi's head trainer. The two Mullins aren't related.

Mullins was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Baptist Central Hospital in Memphis. A hospital spokesman said Sunday night that Mullins was set for surgery today "to stabilize the injury."

He said he couldn't release any other information on Mullins' case.

"There were no neurological changes overnight. His condition is the same as when they brought him in. He's paralyzed," Ole Miss sports information director Langston Rogers said Sunday.

Mullins, a 6-foot, 170-pound red-shirt freshman from Russellville, Ala., was carried from the field on stretcher with 6:57 to play in the first quarter.

"He immediately told us he could not feel anything," trainer Mullins said.

Walsh threw a 37-yard scoring pass to Derrick Shepard with 4:37 to play, but Dallas' hopes of breaking the losing spell came to an end when Shepard fumbled a punt at the Cowboys 31 and Marcus Turner recovered with less than two minutes to play.

Del Greco kicked a 42-yard field goal with 1:23 left to make it 19-10.

"There was a case of Shepard trying to make something happen," Johnson said. "He tried to catch the ball and run with it before he was ready."

Walsh said the pressure is closing in on the Cowboys.

Bay went 0-14 in its first season in 1976, then lost its first 12 games the next season.

"This losing streak is tearing us up on the inside," said Dallas offensive guard Nate Newton. "We work hard all week, then we fall short. We haven't come together as a team yet."

line of scrimmage yet getting enough pressure on Kosar to keep him from throwing long.

"I think the gimmick plays are what won the game for us," he said, defending the work of off-criticized offensive coordinator Marc Trestman. "I've been in the minority in my views on play-calling. It's been good all season, and it reached a peak today. I really think it's been unjust, all the criticism he's been getting."

Houston took a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on Warren Moon's 13-yard touchdown pass to Haywood Jeffries.

Kosar was intercepted twice in the second quarter, but the Oilers got only three points out of the mistakes. Bubba McDowell grabbed the first interception near midfield and returned it for an apparent touchdown that was nullified by an illegal block, and Houston settled for a 23-yard Tony Zendejas field goal.

Three plays later, Steve Brown picked off a Kosar pass at the Houston 37, but the subsequent drive ended in a punt.

The second half was nearly all Cleveland, with Kosar completing eight straight passes and the Browns getting 326 of their 383 total yards.

Kosar was 14-of-19 for 262 yards in the game. Slaughter caught four passes for 184 yards, the third-best yardage total ever for a Cleveland receiver behind his own 186 yards last week and Ozzie Newsome's 191 in 1984.

Moon was 15-of-25 for 241 yards. Alonzo Highsmith led all rushers with 58 yards on 12 carries.

"We just made too many mistakes on defense," Houston coach Jerry Glanville said. "It wasn't a lack of hustle. It wasn't a lack of our people trying to get the job done."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Academy Award-winning director Jean-Jacques Annaud knew what he wanted when he set out to find the lead character for his acclaimed new movie, "The Bear."

"I was looking for a John Wayne kind of character," Annaud said. His star is Bart, a 9-foot-2-inch Kodiak bear.

"I knew immediately Bart was the bear I was looking for because he was very reliable, very impressive," Annaud said in Friday's New York Times.

Annaud, who won an Oscar in 1976 for "Black and White in Color" and also directed "Quest for Fire" and "The Name of the Rose," bas-

He wanted to make "a film that would be honest to animal nature, that would be an adventure film, or thriller, in which an animal would be the hero."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Lionel Cartwright says he got his start "out in the sticks" in West Virginia playing at PTA meetings and 4-H shows.

"I started from the bottom up," said Cartwright, who's been performing for 19 of his 29 years. "I remember playing at a PTA meeting that was so far out in the sticks (that) we drove for miles and when we got there there were about 10 people there."

"I played at 4-H shows and civic things and church things," he said. "I did 'Mountain Dew' and 'Okie From Muskogee'."

Pressure's on when your parent's your teacher

By THERESSA RAY
Special to the Herald

BIG SPRING — Imagine having a class schedule with Honors English, trigonometry, or varsity football. Now imagine having one of your parents as a teacher.

Most students are fortunate enough to be able to avoid this stressful situation, but for senior Rance Thompson and sophomore Mary Kathryn Terrazas, this is an every day occurrence.

Mary Kathryn has her mother, Kathy Terrazas, for Honors English. For Mary Kathryn, the worst aspect of having her mother as a teacher is the quality of her homework.

"I have to be perfect on everything I do," she said.

Mrs. Terrazas, who had her father as a coach when she was in school, finds that teaching her daughter is not difficult, but dealing with others about their situation can be.

"I have to be on guard to make sure that I don't show any partiality," she said. "I'm afraid that someone will say that I show partiality and that she (Mary Kathryn) gets all the answers (for her homework) at home."

Mary Kathryn does feel that her mother's expectations of her are higher than those of other students.

"My mother does expect more of me," she said. "She always has, even when I didn't have her as one of my teachers."

On the other hand, Mrs. Terrazas feels her expectations are no different.

"I treat her just like anybody else," she said. "Sometimes she does just as well as everybody else. Sometimes she doesn't. I wish, sometimes, that she would do better, but she's just a student like anyone else."

Even though having her mother for a teacher can be awkward, Mary Kathryn would still prefer to keep the situation the way it is.

Mrs. Terrazas also has to limit

"He's a lot like I am. He's hard-headed, pig-headed, but so am I. That's the worst thing." — BSHS Athletic Director David Thompson on son Rance.

the stories she tells to her class because of her daughter's presence.

"I have to make sure that I don't tell stories in my teaching that include my daughter," she said.

Mrs. Terrazas does enjoy teaching Mary Kathryn because she is able to see her in a way most parents never see their children.

"I've always seen her as a daughter, and now I can see her as a student," she said. "She tries really hard to be a good student. She impresses me. If I wasn't her teacher, I would never be able to see her like this."

Rance, a senior, has both his parents as teachers. His father, David Thompson, is the athletic director and head football coach. His mother, Juanita Thompson, is his trigonometry teacher.

For Rance, being taught by his parents is nothing new. He had his mother for Algebra I during his freshman year, and he has had his father as a football coach for three years.

Even though Rance has been in his parents' classes before, the experience had not made this year any easier.

"It's harder having your parents as teachers because they expect so much out of you," he said. "You have to try and please them all of the time."

Mrs. Thompson does admit that she expects more out of Rance than other students.

"I know how he uses his time at home," she said. "His excuses for unfinished or poorly done work fall on 'deaf ears' while for someone else I might accept the same excuse."

"I know what Rance's capabilities are and I will not accept less from him," she said.

Mrs. Thompson enjoys having her son as a student and is grateful for the experience.

"I have always felt that every parent should take an active role in their children's education," she said. "I am in a very unique position to see to it that he is exposed to and has the opportunity to learn advanced math. Not every parent has that opportunity."

But if Rance could choose, he would prefer to have an unrelated teacher.

"There wouldn't be as much pressure with another teacher," he said.

The stresses Rance encounters may be greater but there are some advantages children of teachers have that most students don't.

"I tutor both of my sons at home; not every student has that advantage," Mrs. Thompson said.

Coach Thompson also enjoys the opportunity of coaching his son, but he sympathizes with Rance.

"Whenever everyone else goes home, they (the other players) don't hear any more about practice, but when Rance goes home, he hears more about it," he said. "We try not to do that, but that happens."

Coach Thompson does have high expectations of Rance, but he said he expects a lot from other players as well.

"We expect a lot out of everybody, but it's one of those deals where he lives with me," he said. "He doesn't get away from it (football)."

Coach Thompson feels there is only one drawback to coaching his son.

"He's a lot like I am," he said. "He's hard-headed, pig-headed, but so am I. That's the worst thing."

11 BSHS singers all-region

BIG SPRING — Eleven members of the Big Spring High School Choir were named members of Region VI's All-Region Choir and eight choir members were named Pre-Area contestants.

More than 350 students participated in the All-Region Choir auditions. Students representing Andrews, Big Spring, Crane, Fort Stockton, Midland, Midland Lee, Monahans, Odessa and Odessa Permian schools attended.

Big Spring choir members qualifying for All-Region Choir are: Brian Brown, Traci Clark, Crystal Collier, Belinda Davis, Eric Dorton, Joshua Free, D'Angela Green, Bradley Heckler, Renea Osborn, Donna Reitzer and Jon Sims.

They participated in a one-day clinic and concert Saturday at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa, with Loyd Hawthorne, director of choral activities at Hardin-Simmons University, as the clinician.

They performed "Hodie, Christus natus est," by Healey Willan, "Evening," by Hugo Alfven, "Kde Su Kravy Moje," by H.A. Schimmerling and "Pater Noster," by Jacob Handl.

To qualify for the choir, members auditioned Oct. 14 at Odessa High School. They performed excerpts from two compositions selected by the 1990 All-State Choir clinician, Paul Salamunovich, who has been a professor of music at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles since 1964.

Students were required to exhibit knowledge of the musical language, facility in vocal technique and flexibility in performing various musical styles in the auditions.

Qualifying for the Pre-Area auditions were Clark, Davis, Dorton, Free, Green, Heckler and Osborn. Brian Brown was named as second alternate in the Tenor I section.

They will audition again in early December for qualification in the Area auditions. Students who rank in the top six in each section at this audition will go to Lubbock for the Area auditions Jan. 6, 1990.

Those who place in the top seven in the Area auditions will be accepted as All-State Choir members and will perform at the annual Texas Music Educators Clinic-Convention in San Antonio in February.

Other BSHS students auditioning Oct. 14 were: Kim Alexander, Mike Allen, Heath Bradford, Toka Friday, Cara Gavin, Derek Griffith, Erica Hughes, Terrie Lawson, Staci Rogers, Marci Weaver and Marcos Yanez.

Students walk out in protest of scheduling problem

HOUSTON (AP) — About a thousand students from Houston's Stephen F. Austin High School have walked out of classes and refused to return until a chaotic learning environment stretching into the seventh week of school is brought to order.

"We came here to learn, but nobody is learning anything and our TEAMS tests are next week. Everybody has been switched around so much that I don't see how they'll pass," said Daniel Ellis, a ninth grader, one of many students who walked out and said they were being denied an education.

Students on Friday left school and described a scheduling nightmare that has left hundreds in the wrong classes. Some said they were being forced to switch classes up to eight times. One boy told of being assigned to a class in the girl's bathroom, while teachers were mistakenly assigned rooms in broom closets.

Houston Independent School District Superintendent Joan Raymond said she and her staff will meet through the weekend to analyze concerns raised by the students and teachers.

Student leaders said the high school principal, Utilia Urbina, blamed the scheduling fiasco on the lack of computers such as those that are used in Bellaire and other schools. "They had to manually do thousands of changes," said senior class president Juanita Rodriguez.

Teachers complained Urbina — who was hired last spring — does not have the background to run a high school.

Musicians nominated for band

"All-American" means different things to different people. To some it is a symbol, like the Statue of Liberty. To others it is a type of person, a way of life, a nation in celebration of its most outstanding features.

But, to high school musicians, being an "All-American" has only one meaning — being nominated to the 1989 McDonald's All-American High School Band.

Aruna Masih and Marilyn Corwin of Big Spring plays the flute and cornet in the BSHS band under the direction of Ricky Mitchell. Years of musical dedication and hard work have paid off by earning this national distinction.

Aruna was nominated for the All-American Band on the basis of musical honors and competitive contest ratings. Students selected to the 1989 McDonald's All-American Band will be notified in early October.

The nomination was announced by Gerald Kubicki who operates the McDonald's restaurant in Big Spring. "It's a pleasure for us to see motivated young people get recognition they deserve," said Mr. Kubicki. We're proud of Aruna because only the best musicians in the country are nominated to the All-American Band."

This year marks McDonald's 23rd year. Every year, band directors across the country are invited to nominate two of their finest musicians to the Band. From more than 4100 nominations received, only 104 students — two from each state and the District of Columbia plus one from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico — will be selected to represent their home towns in the All-American Band.

This year these musical all-Americans will perform in New York City, and nationally televised Macy's Thanksgiving day Parade in New York City, and participate in the filming of the McDonald's World's Largest Concert, a PBS TV special.

Selection to the All-American Band enables a student to be eligible for music scholarships awarded by the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston; Rice University, Houston; The National Music Camp, Interlochen, Michigan; University of Southern California, Los Angeles; and the Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music, Winchester, Virginia.

All euphoniums, mellophones, sousaphones, percussion, combo keyboards and other combo instruments used by the McDonald's All-American Band are provided through Yamaha. All travel, lodging and meal expenses for the Band and staff are paid by McDonald's.
