MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

According to Dallas advices, Former Chief Justice Nelson Phillips has become the general attorney of the Bell Telephone Company with headquarters in the city of Dallas. He is to be congratulated. Texas pays miserly salaries to its high court judges. As Vox Poruli insists that a man shall not serve two masters the high court judge must stick to the bench and worry along on his salary. It is impossible for him to set aside a nest egg for a rainy day. If he is without an independent income when he does the bench he will be without after having served Texas for a life time. Nelson Phillips is a years counted man. He has had all the honor [illegible] to the position of chief attaches why shouldn't he retire the public service in order that build up his private fortune?

Senator Tom Watson of Georgia is as venomous as ever in his attacks upon Woodrow Wilson and the Wilson administration. In war time Watson opposed the draft. This was before he was a senator. He should have been indicted and convicted of a violation of the espionage act. His newspapers were denied mail privileges, Albert Sydney Burleson was postmaster general. Watson had no use for Wilson; he had no use for Burleson. He spat upon the military laws of his country. His reward came when a majority of the Democrats of Georgia elected him to a seat in the United States senate. Now Henry Ford is a target for his venom. T. H. Newberry and his friends spent $400,000 in the Michigan senatorial contest. Henry Ford did not spend a dollar. Newberry won the election by a majority of less than 7,000. His money put him over. There is a contest on. Watson says the real issue in the election contest is the league of nations controversy. Honest men the country over say the real issue is, "Shall a candidate for the United States senate be permitted to spend huge sums of money to control the election and the electorate." Ford was not elected. He does not ask to be seated. He should not be given a seat. Newberry was declared elected, but the trial of his case and the investigation by a senate committee developed the fact that his campaign fund was the largest ever employed to debauch voters in the state of Michigan or any other American commonwealth. Newberry should not be seated. Michigan is a Republican state. No doubt it is entitled to two Republican senators but the senator should not be men who are willing to pay the price in hard cash. Regardless of this if Georgia can stand Tom Watson then the people of Michigan should be able to worry along with Truman H. Newberry as one of its representatives in the upper house of the American congress. Newberry did not oppose the draft; he was not a fire in the rear patriot when his country was at war with the central empires; he isn't holier than thou fanatical demagogue nor an apostle of religious and racial hatred.

Dr. Thomas Briggs of Columbia University says the American people spent forty-six times as much for luxuries, that is $23,000,000,000, as they did for education during 1919. During 1919 they spent three times as much for tobacco as they did for education. Why jab the American people? It was their own money they spent. They earned it and they had a right to spend it. And this is not an argument against education. Illiteracy should be bludgeoned and this applies to the brown and yellow as well as the black. Ignorance is ever a menace. It is the mother of supersition, fanaticism, bigotry and intolerance.

John D. Rockefeller and others who participated with him in the distribution by the Ohio oil companies and by the Prairie Oil and Gas Company to their stockholders of stock respectively in the Illinois Pipe Line Company and Prairie Pipe Line Company must pay income tax upon the same, under a decision by the supreme court. The stock was distributed in 1915, and assessed under the income tax act of 1913. The questions presented were whether the excess of the market over the par value of the stock was taxable as income, and also whether the tax could be levied on the par as well as such excess. When the supreme court held that the two parent companies could be subject to supervision and regulation by the interstate commerce and federal trade commissions because of their pipe lines, they organized the new companies, transferring to them all pipe line properties, and distributing among the stockholders of the parent companies the stock of the newly organized companies. The government won in the federal district court in New York.

Calves were produced in 1919 on 63.2 per cent of all the farms of the United States; pigs on 49 per cent, and lambs on 5.8 per cent of all the farms, according to a census bulletin. The number of calves raised during the year was 21,158,569; hogs, 62,083,392; lambs, 13,691,115. Five states reporting more than one million calves raised were: Texas, 1,682,530; Iowa, 1,457,098; Wisconsin, 1,354,140; Minnesota, 1,047,150, and Illinois, 1,004,521. Missouri produced 913,843; Kansas, 965,678; Nebraska, 920,826. Six states reported more than three million pigs raised on farms in 1919, as follows: Iowa, 8,804,746; Illinois, 5,364,756; Indiana, 4,646,894; Missouri, 4,484,884; Ohio, 3,989,970, and Nebraska, 3,335,006. Kansas produced 1,853,378. Six states reported over 700,000 lambs raised on farms in 1919, as follows: Montana, 997,827; California, 897,136; Ohio, 884,414; Idaho, 780,780; Wyoming, 773,286, and Oregon, 703,890. Kan-

PORTO RICANS ASK REMOVAL OF GEN. REILY

Numerous Grave Charges Made Against U. S. Official in Request That He Be Ousted.

Charges Against Reily Are Signed by 39 of 58 Members of the Porto Rican Assembly.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Senior Felix Cordova Davila, resident commissioner from Porto Rico, was instructed in a cablegram received today from San Juan to request President Harding to remove Governor E. Mont Reily, immediately from that office. The cablegram, comprising a document of 1,000 words, set forth in detail the specific charges which were to be preferred with the request. It was signed by 29 of the 58 members of the Porto Rican assembly.

Senor Davila announced tonight that he would see President Harding and Secretary Weeks—the latter as the immediate superior of Governor Reily at the "earliest opportunity."

Declaring Governor Reily had come to the island "with deep rooted prejudices," the cablegram asserted that his actions since then had indicated he lacked "judiciousness and discretion" necessary for the position he now holds. On the "pretext that the president of the senate and members of the majority party were enemies of the United States," it continued, he embarked on a "policy of aggression against Porto Ricans not personally addicted to him."

WHERE'S YOUR FREEDOM ASK MEET GUESTS

Foreign Visitors Think German Word "Verboten" Should Be in Webster's Unabridged.

By HERBERT COREY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Remember—this was before the war—how we used to laugh at the "verboten" stories returned travellers told about the Germans? The magazines used to run pictures showing fat, spectacled Germans picking their way through the "verboten" signs. We were a free untrammelled, untrained nation then.

Now it's our turn to be laughed at. the Europeans here to attend the Washington conference sneer at our trained, ordered, and confined liberty. Some of them laugh at us, but not many. Most of them are frankly astounded at what seems to them an unbelievably well dragooned nation. Many of these have known America before the war. They find the change has taken place in the past seven years.

"You are thinking about prohibition," I usually answer. "You miss your petite verre?"

A Little of Everything.

"Not that alone. In everything." New York gave them the first shock. They followed the green line in the subway stations. They were herded into line by the police. They tried to cross Fifth avenue during the rush hour and beheld a perfectly trained crowd behave. The home bound commuters were as well drilled as a pony chorus. When the policemen lifted their fingers they dashed forward. When the policemen held up a warning hand they stopped dead in their tracks.

They find that Americans think along the dotted line. It used to be, they said, that ours was a nation of individuals. Some one was continually popping up his head above the crowd. Now, they say, it seems to the foreign visitor that the man who does pop his head gets it well rapped. Henry Ford was given as an instance by one man. Ford undertook to run a railroad in a new way.

Not Only Ford, But Hotels.

"Those who did not like his way criticized him," our friends say, "and most of the crowd took in the criticism open-mouthed. Talk to the next man you meet about Henry's

Harding Plans Clemency for War Prisoners

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Extension of executive clemency to offenders against war-time laws now serving prison sentences will be given early consideration by President Harding, it was said today at the White House. This subject was discussed at the cabinet meeting today and it was understood a policy of leniency toward their offenders, where possible, was generally approved.

The president has asked the attorney general for a digest of each of these cases and Mr. Daugherty expects to have the history of the wartime prisoners completed in two weeks.

Under the administration policy, there would be no sweeping proclamation of amnesty, it is said officially, but each case would be considered on its merits separately and military as well as civil offenders would be considered.

The question of freedom for Eugene V. Debbs, socialist leader, imprisoned at Atlanta, will be treated separately, Mr. Daugherty said, adding that recommendations to the president on the subject have been completed, although it was understood there would be no possibility of action by Thanksgiving.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE ON ISSUES IN CASE INVOLVING SPIRITUALISTIC MEDIUM

"Did Mrs. Gill represent to the plaintiff that the spirit of the plaintiff's deceased husband had communicated to her through one 'Little Bright Eyes' and that all Good Spirits were with her and that he approved the trade?"

Twelve men constituting a jury in the 78th district court after one hour deliberation Tuesday afternoon failed to reach an agreement on that issue and six others that were submitted to them by Judge Ed Napier in the case of Mrs. Ada Holden in her $3,000 damage suit against Dr. Emma Gill, member of the faculty of Kosman Institute, spiritualist school at Colorado Springs and Mrs. Ida Alexander of this city for their alleged fraudulent representations in the sale of a rooming house lease last year.

The jury will return this morning to continue their deliberations on the seven issues, three of which according to attorneys have never been submitted to any previous local jury and probably no other in the state.

According to the court's charge should they answer the above issue in the affirmative, then they are required to determine in the next issue whether or not the deceased husband of Mrs. Holden did actually communicate to Dr. Gill through "Bright Eyes" and tell her to inform his wife that she should purchase the rooming house lease from Mrs. Alexander through Dr. Gill who was acting as her agent in the sale.

Other issues submitted are concerned with whether or not Mrs. Holden relied on the supposed messages from her deceased husband in agreeing to purchase the lease together with issues regarding the value of the lease and whether or not Mrs. Holden waived her right to recover damages by taking under the contract after she had discovered the alleged fraud.

The case went to the jury at 4 p. m. Tuesday following arguments by the two attorneys interested in the case. The jury was dismissed until this morning when it reported at 5 p. m., that it failed to reach an agreement on all the issues submitted.

Denies Communication.

Dr. Gill, now living in Colorado Springs, denied emphatically when her deposition was read Tuesday morning that she had ever told Mrs. Holden that she had received a communication from her deceased husband stating in effect that she should buy the lease from Mrs. Alexander for a consideration of $3,500 which the

DELEGATES YET SEEK TO SOLVE CHINESE PUZZLE

Sub-Committee Is Appointed to Thresh Out Problem of China's Economic Embarrassment.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The negotiations relating to both the far east and armament limitation moved more slowly today as the attention of the arms delegates passed from general policies to specific details.

China's economic embarrassments formed the text of the far eastern discussions, which resulted in the appointment of a sub-committee of representatives of nine nations to study the whole subject of administrative autonomy for the Chinese republic with particular reference to tariff and tax restrictions.

The land armament problem also was considered at various informal conferences today and a meeting of the armament committee of the whole was called for tomorrow with the expectation that Premier Briand off France would say a last word as to his country's attitude on reduction of armies. It is understood he is anxious to bring the question to a point of a formal expression by the conference before his departure for France.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Legislation designed to carry out the policies of the recent national unemployment conference was introduced in the senate today by Senator Kenyon, republican, Iowa.

STATE'S CASE IN ARBUCKLE TRIAL CLOSED

Prosecution Reserves Right to Introduce Further Testimony Before Arguments Open.

Court Announces That Jury, Counsel and Officers Will Visit Scene of Fatal Party Today.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22.—After the prosecution had closed its case late today in the manslaughter trial of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, after reserving the right to introduce further testimony tomorrow, Gavin McNab, chief counsel for the defense, made the opening statement for Arbuckle.

"We will prove Arbuckle was not in the Hotel St. Francis room more than ten minutes with Miss Virginia Rappe," McNab said. Arbuckle is accused of having inflicted fatal injuries on Miss Rappe, a motion picture actress, in his room in the Hotel September 5. George Glennon, house detective of the St. Francis, was the first witness called by the defense.

The court ruled out McNab's attempts to have the witness detail a conversation he had with Miss Rappe following her alleged injuries at Arbuckle's hands.

Before the trial the defense announced Glennon had made a statement to the district attorney in which he said that Miss Rappe had exonerated Arbuckle. Glennon was excused from the stand following the court's ruling.

Kate Brennan, a maid at the Hotel, followed Glennon and testified that she dusted off the two doors introduced by the prosecution for finger print evidence, some time after the finger prints were supposed to have been made by Arbuckle and Miss Rappe. The defense endeavored to prove through her that in the dusting process she rubbed out the finger prints.

Arbuckle gave her a tip of $2.50 for cleaning his room and offered her some whiskey, which she refused. Miss Brennan testified.

Mrs. Lois Harding Lancashire, a guest at the hotel during the party, said she was near the rooms and heard and saw nothing.

Al Semnacher, manager for Miss Rappe, and Josephine Kesea, chambermaid, told of the party in the hotel in which Miss Rappe is said to have been fatally injured.

The last prosecution witness today was Professor E. O. Heinrich, consulting criminologist of the University of California, who identified finger prints found on two of the hotel doors as those of Miss Rappe and Arbuckle.

Gavin McNab, chief counsel for the defense, said in his opening statement that the room in which Arbuckle was alleged to have locked himself and Miss Rappe at the time of the supposed attack, was open at all times.

The window shades were up at all times also, he said, and the interior of the room therefore was in full view of other hotel guests.

Arbuckle's attitude bordered on the jovial throughout the day. Mrs. Minta Durfee Arbuckle, his wife, wept at times.

Upon the conclusion of the prosecution testimony the court announced the court officers, jury and counsel would visit the hotel rooms tomorrow.

STRANGE DEATH OF DALLAS GIRL WILL BE INVESTIGATED

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Nov. 22.—The district attorney's office today began an investigation of the death here early this morning of Auda Odell, 17-year-old girl, who was taken to a sanitarium late Sunday suffering from what appeared to be acid burns in the mouth and throat. She also was bleeding internally, physicians said. An autopsy was to be held later in the day.

The girl's only statement, according to District Attorney Maury Hughes, was that she "wished she could give a certain party the same thing she got," although previously she had told authorities she would tell the details of the affair.

NEWS SLEUTHS AT MEET GET CHANCE TO STUFF SELVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Lord Riddell, the affable British publisher, whose job at the armament conference concerns the proper enlightenment of reporters on such conference "inside low down" as seems wise to print, stepped to the front today to prevent the closing of the thanksgiving open door.

"Considering the natural desire of the American newspaper men and their normal appetite," he said, "there will be no press conference thanksgiving day. What?"

"It may be," said another spokesman, "that the gentlemen of the press who have been hopping constantly from one meeting to another may want to take a day off to rub their feet with liniment."

FORT WORTH PACKERS MAY REJECT CUT

Union Officials Denounce Proposed Reduction of Wages as Unfair.

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 22.—Although no official action will be taken by the local butcher workmen's union regarding the proposed wage cut agreed on by Armour and Company at Chicago last week until word is received from international headquarters, members of the union here are of the opinion that the cut will not be accepted.

Officials of the Union declared today that the proposed reduction was unfair, was not voluntary on the present majority of the workmen and did not express the general sentiment of the employes in the local packing plants.

Officials of the union here characterized the "company unions and councils" as non-representative, declaring that the action at Chicago was taken without the consent or knowledge of the majority of workmen in the Fort Worth plants.

The company council at the Swift plant in a meeting this afternoon requested the management to call a general assembly.

The loss is estimated at $75,000.

By Associated Press.

Two detectives were wounded, one possibly fatally.

The fight followed a search of an hour for two men whom the police were informed were connected with shooting affrays here and near Winfield, Kansas, yesterday in which Robert Fitzpatrick, a motorcycle patrolman, was shot and killed instantly, and George Oldham, a Cowley county farmer was shot and probably fatally wounded, and Ray Casner, another Wichita motorcycle patrolman was wounded in the hip.

SHOPS CRAFT WORKERS ASK HIGHER WAGES

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Wage increases of 13 cents an hour have been requested or virtually all carriers in the country by the heads of shop crafts unions, representing about 400,000 employes, who have asked railroad executives for conferences on the subject, December 20.

This action follows the railroads' recent petition to the United States railroad labor board proposing to cut the wages of shop crafts employes to the "rate paid for the same class of labor in other industries."

MYSTERY VEILS NAVAL EXPERTS' DELIBERATIONS

Officials of Opinion That No Radical Change From American Plan Will Be Forthcoming.

Proposed 5-5-3 Ratio Not Susceptible to Mathematical Alteration, Is Washington View.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Deliberations of the naval experts of the "Big Three" in the arms conference remain wrapped in mystery so far as any official word of what is transpiring goes. Unofficially spokesmen in some cases give hints and half glimpses that reveal little but involved technical questions which only serve to confuse laymen in naval matters.

In the American viewpoint there is no good reason to bring into public view all the almost incomprehensible discussions of the experts. What is in progress, it was pointed out today, is in conference of equals, of which the only product can be a unanimous agreement and there is every reason to expect that such an agreement is to be reached soon that will not vary widely from the American proposals as to naval reductions and limitations.

In shaping their suggestions the American delegation took into consideration many things besides the mere question of capital ship tonnage in terms of which the plan was finally set down. Estimates of naval strength of each power included, it is said, estimates of the whole situation of each, of its whole building program, of its financial ability and mechanical equipment to execute any building program it might desire if competitive building was to continue. The "Five-Five-Three ratio," of the American replacement scheme to end competitive building and all its evils, and the fleet strength that would remain under the proposed immediate reductions on the eve of a ten year complete building holiday both are understood to reflect this summary of matters, not susceptible of mathematical treatment.

It is because of these considerations that American officials appear hopeful that in the end the work of the experts will come out at practically the same place the American plan did, the November 11 "zero hour" for the cut. The arguments that have been raised as to the effect of different methods of calculating tonnage, differences in formulating the rate of progress on construction of new ships into definite percentages do not change the American view, it is held, that the "Five-Five-Three ratio" is wholly fair.

PHYSICIANS TESTIFY THAT "BLUE BEARD" IS SOUND MENTALLY

VERSAILLES, Nov. 22.—Fernade Segret, a woman who lived with Henri Landru, the so-called "blue beard" of Gambais, in Versailles and also in Gambais from late 1917 until Landru was arrested in April, 1919, charged with 11 murders, was the principal witness for the defendant today.

She testified Landru was perfectly normal mentally; that he was loving and attentive to her and not cruel. Her testimony regarding the normal condition of the prisoner was supported by three doctors who concluded the accused man was rational and responsible for his actions.

"You accuse me of heineous crimes such as only a mad man could commit, and the greatest specialists in France swear I am normal and rational," Landru told the court, adding:

"It proves my innocence."

SENATE SPEEDS WORK IN HOPE OF ADJOURNING

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—A concurrent resolution was adopted by the senate late today to adjourn sine die tomorrow night after a vote is taken on the tax bill. The resolution now goes to the house where it is expected to be acted favorably upon.

The senate in executive session tonight endeavored to clean the slate of presidential nominations in preparation for the adjournment and more than 200 nominations were confirmed.

Plans for the adjournment of congress tomorrow virtually preclude any action on pending resolution to order work on battleships stopped while the arms conference is in session. Senator King, democrat, Utah, today sought to obtain committee action on his resolution to that effect and was promised by Senator Page, republican, Vermont, chairman, that a poll of the committee would be taken to determine whether the question had been taken up. Republican leaders declared an adverse decision was certain.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE ON CASE AGAINST MEDIUM

plaintiff alleges was excessive and constituted a fraud.

She also denied that she and Mrs. Holden had ever "concentrated" and thus prevailed upon Mrs. Paul Fowler, owner of the rooming house at 806 Scott street, to agree to the transfer of the lease from Mrs. Alexander to Mrs. Holden.

This testimony was in direct contradiction to that introduced Monday and Tuesday by the plaintiff. Mrs. Holden and others testified that Dr. Gill who was in the city at the time did make such representations in her previous to the sale of the lease.

"I don't pose. I am a medium spiritualist," Dr. Gill testified in answer to the query as to whether or not she posed as a spiritualist.

"I do receive actual messages from the spirits of the dead," she also testified, "when I have spirit trances, made possible by the development of the psychic senses."

Dr. Gill said that she had been a spiritualist medium for seventeen years. She said that she received $325 for the sale of the lease to Mrs. Holden, her former pianist at the public meetings she held in this city in 1920. She also told of meeting Mrs. Holden in March of 1920 when the latter answered her advertisement for a musician to aid her in conducting her meetings. She said that at no time did she misrepresent facts concerned with the lease and thought, "she was doing her a favor in selling her the lease."

Says Everybody Did.

"Suppose I did profiteer? Wasn't everybody in Wichita Falls doing the same at that time?" was Mrs. Ida Alexander's heated reply to the plaintiff's attorney's question as to whether she did not consider a 100 per cent profit on a lease profiteering.

"I don't believe in spiritualism. I don't have time for such frivolous things," Mrs. Alexander also testified when cross examined. She denied having any knowledge of the manner Dr. Gill sold the lease to the plaintiff, although testifying that she was present when Dr. Gill and Mrs. Holden "concentrated" in an endeavor to secure the transfer of the lease by Mrs. Fowler.

Mrs. Alexander testified that the two months she had held the lease she made a profit. She contended that the price she received at the time of the sale was not exhorbitant.

Other testimony was introduced, both by the state and defense tending to indicate the value of the lease and the furniture which was included in the transfer. The furniture, according to the plaintiff's witnesses was worth approximately $1,000. The lease sold for $2,500, a price which witnesses for the defendant said was not exhorbitant.

Girl Is Spurned by Mother, but Not by Salvation Army Which Is Making Fight to Save Her Life

The story of fifteen-year-old girl placed in a bad situation by a brother whose mother spurned her but whose heart broken father appealed for help to care for the unfortunate daughter was made known Tuesday at the local Salvation Army post.

The girl is now being cared for at a Salvation Army hospital home in another city and when she is well enough to leave she will be taken into the home of a friend who brought her case to the attention of the army officials.

The friend wrote that the girl had appealed to her for help but that she was unable to "give her the help she needs."

"Two lives are at stake and the girl says that she will kill herself before she will stay at home with her mother who does not sympathize with her," the letter stated.

The father is paying a part of the expenses of the girl at the hospital and will aid in the expenses after she leaves the institution.

The cloak of secrecy has been thrown about many of the details of the latest act of mercy of the Salvation Army and it is said that not even the closest relatives and friends of the family concerned are aware of the near tragedy.

SHRINERS ANNOUNCE ALL PLANS COMPLETE FOR BIG THANKSGIVING CEREMONIAL

All plans, including preparations for the mammoth feast that is to be a feature of the day, were reported complete Tuesday for staging the greatest shrine ceremonial Thursday, that Wichita Falls has yet seen.

Recorder C. O. Fritz asks that all out of town novices report to his office Thursday immediately following their arrival so they may be checked into the class. Local novices are requested to report after 8 o'clock Thursday morning and all are requested to be reported back to the recorder's office at 12:15 o'clock to be lined up for the parade which is scheduled to begin march promptly at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The formation of the parade has been announced as follows:

Mounted police.
United States flag.
Electra drum corps.
Official Divan in uniform.
Chanters.
Maskat Arab patrol.
Nobles in full dress.
Maskat band.
Nobles, wearing fez.
All novices.

Potentate Cline has announced the appointment of Elmer C. DeMontel as special marshal to have full control of directing the parade. He will be assisted by E. H. Archer, C. O. Fritz, Vaughn Ray, Horace Robbins P. J. Lea, Joe Ward, Alfred Burnside and M. D. Rowe. Potentate Cline has asked that all nobles who can conveniently do so, appear in full dress for the parade.

Mrs. R. T. Shepherd, chairman of the ladies entertainment committee, has made special arrangements for the out-of-town women visitors.

Stage Director Ellis announces that he and his stage crew of 20 members have everything in readiness for an up-to-date performance and that the largest class ever initiated into Maskat Temple is expected to be on hand.

A big body of Shriners is expected to attend the Wichita Falls-Polytechnic high school football game at Athletic park in the forenoon. The game will be played at 10:30 o'clock and announcement was made yesterday that the Shriners would take a section of the grandstand and do some nifty rooting for the home boys. Every Shriner who can do so, is urged to attend the battle.

WHERE'S YOUR FREEDOM ASK MEET GUESTS

railroad. It's seven chances to four that he will laugh wisely.

"'I guess he isn't doing so well with his railroad,' he'll say."

Our hotels jar them—jar them to the very depth of their being. In Europe a guest has a certain liberty in a hotel. Here, whether because we cannot be trusted with liberty, or because we are so easily handled, hotel guests, they say, are merely trained sheep, who turn right and left at command. Last night American friends visited a certain general in his suite in a certain hotel. The visitors were man and wife. The hosts were the general and his aide-de-camp and another officer. Eleven o'clock struck.

"Sorry," said a hotel servant at the door, "but the lady must leave. No ladies are allowed in the rooms of gentlemen after 11 o'clock."

Another Perplexing Problem.

Another sought to have a luncheon served in his hotel salon for himself, another diplomat, and a gentleman and lady. It could not be done.

"Luncheons are not served in rooms if there are ladies present."

The most horrifying tale is that of the torn pajamas. One of the visitors rang for the valet to take 'em and sew 'em. It wasn't the valet's business. He rang for the chambermaid. She dared not, she said. Some one would inform on her and she'd lose her job. She thought it might be done at the housekeeper's linen room, but it appeared that sheets and not pajamas are dealt with there. The pajamas remain unsewed.

"I am amazed," said another, "at the manner in which your police drive you around—oh, in all cities—not in New York and Washington only. You grant them a slavish obedience. In England and France it is the law that is obeyed and the policeman is honored as a representative of the law. If he steps out of his role he is in trouble. Here you seem to care nothing for the law. Violations are heard of on every side. Everywhere one hears of policemen for example, who are in collusion with bootleggers. But you permit a policeman to give orders that he has no right to give and you obey them without question."

Lines of Caste Broken Down.

In England, so it seems to the visitors, and in France, the old lines of caste are being broken down. The rich and powerful of yesterday are the poor and weak of today. Here, so it seems, a frightful cleavage of classes is being set up. It is a class rather than a class cleavage which they think they see. The man with money rises superior to law, and the poor devil without money knows it and grumbles but submits. America is a place of graft, they find. Tipping may have been born in Europe, but from their experience with American hotels they find that tipping has become brigandage here.

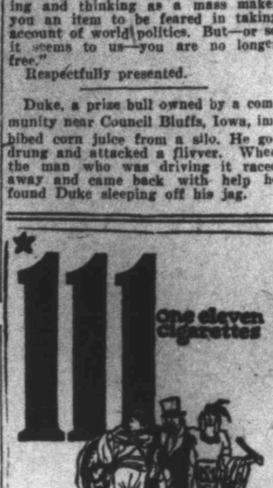

"We find that we must tip," they say, "and at a rate that is out of all proportion to the service rendered. We dare not refuse. We hear too many tales of what happens to the man who refuses."

They are all careful to say that this first impression may be an erroneous one. It may be that the strong, virile hardy American they have always visualized really exists and that they have merely been unfortunate. But the impression seems to be a widely held one among the visitors. Above all they stand in amazement at the docile manner in which—as it seems to them—Americans think what they are told to think.

"You are great in power and wealth and efficiency," they say. "You have learned to take the shortest way between two points. Your habit of acting and thinking as a mass makes you an item to be feared in taking account of world politics. But—or so it seems to us—you are no longer free."

Respectfully presented.

Duke, a prize bull owned by a community near Council Bluffs, Iowa, imbibed corn juice from a silo. He got drunk and attacked a flivver. When the man who was driving it raced away and came back with help he found Duke sleeping off his jag.

ARRANGES FOR STATE SURVEY COUNTY SCHOOLS

The necessary local arrangements to secure the survey of the rural schools of the county by the extension department of the University of Texas has been made according to information Tuesday from Burl Bryant, county superintendent of schools.

Mr. Bryant has written T. H. Shelby, director of the extension department that the incidental local expenses can be met and it is now believed that the survey for the county is assured.

The matter of having the survey was brought up a week ago when Mr. Bryant received a letter from Mr. Shelby stating that this county had been selected as one of the seven or eight in the state in which the survey would be made provided certain local expenses could be made taken care of here. It is not expected that the local expenses will exceed $200.

The action means that before Christmas an exhaustive survey will be made by representatives of the state extension department cooperating with school officials and teachers of the rural school. Mr. Bryant expressed himself Tuesday as highly pleased in securing the survey which he said would be a great aid carrying on rural work in the county in the future.

We will pay you highest cash price for your turkeys.

Urges Negroes to Keep New School In Top Condition

Increased zeal in keeping the sanitary conditions of the ground and building at a high average was asked Tuesday by School Superintendent Lee Clark in a short talk to negro students at the Washington school.

He also urged that the negro youth of the city avail themselves of the exceptional educational opportunities being afforded them and be prompt in their attendance at all classes. Mr. Clark asserted that during the past month the records of the Washington school had shown a too high average of tardies and absence marks and urged that they bring their attendance records to an even higher record than that set by the white students.

Culberson and Kenly Speak at University Club

A plea for support of the United Charities drive by Major W. J. Culberson and a short address by R. O. Kenley on the subject of respect of the higher laws of nature, featured the weekly luncheon of the University club Tuesday noon at the Kemp hotel.

In explaining to what the money derived from the charities campaign would be devoted, Major Culberson took occasion to point out some of the good work which has been done in the past by the various organizations represented in the drive, including the Salvation Army, the Y. W. C. A., the Welfare Council, Boy Scouts and others. This good work, he declared stamps these organizations as important in the life of the city. Following his talk, assignments of places on the teams were given members of the club.

"We must all learn, sooner or later, to labor and to wait patiently," declared Judge Kenley in touching on the existence in the system of life of a higher law which must be followed.

"Faith begets courage and both are necessary for true success," he said. An example of faith coupled with patient labor and waiting for success, he said, is found in the culmination of years of effort to start an irrigation project in this section.

"Do you suppose that we would be as near to the actual start of work in this project if Mr. Kemp and others has not had the courage faith and patience to wait until the higher law decreed it was time for their hopes to be crowned with success."

Music for the occasion was furnished by Charles Angle, with two baritone solos, accompanied by Professor Frank Love.

Four hundred correspondents, of the domestic as well as the foreign brand, are grinding out copy in the city of Washington and daily the wires are loaded down with the views on disarmament of th aforesaid correspondents. Why not cut out the bunk? Secretary Hughes submitted a program or plan. Is the plan to be accepted or rejected? This is all that the reading public care to know.

Congressman Claude B. Hudspeth of Texas wants representatives of foreign governments attending the arms conference, as well as the newspaper writers, to tour the country after the conference. There are millions of Americans who should tour the country first. They are as dense when it comes to America and its resources and advantages as the foreigners who are attending Mr. Hughes' party.

Boris Litvinoff of Russia is coming to the United States. Boris is the Russian trade commissioner and is said to be the ablest salesman that Director Lenine has on his staff. Uncle Sam's sons have the stuff to sell. They have manufactured as well as raw materials to sell. If Boris has the coin or is able to furnish credits then his tour of America should take on all of the thrills of one glad song. There are millions of sellers here.

DISARMAMENT IMPOSSIBLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

President Harding, in a letter which he wrote to Miss Ella T. Freed of Brooklyn, in reply to her communication urging him to work for complete disarmament, said that while he was in favor of "reasonable limitation of armaments," he feared that universal disarmament is beyond the hope of realization, and even its desirability at this time might well be questioned."

This is perfectly true.

That is to say, it is perfectly true that with the conditions as they are, with the world disorganized as it is at present, disarmament is impossible.

But when the President adds that "thousands of years of history, recording the wars and controversies of mankind, suggest that human nature would have to undergo a revolutionary reorganization to make universal disarmament possible," he is, with all due respect to his high office, emitting piffle.

As it has often been asserted, the cause of wars is not human nature. It is not human nature for one population to go up and slaughter a neighboring population. It is not human nature for people to leave their families and their business to go out and kill each other.

If it be human nature, it is human nature as assassination, theft and blasphemy are human nature. That is to say, it is a perverted and minor portion of human nature, which it is the business of individuals and of society to repress, to punish and correct as much as possible, business the world has, although imperfectly, succeeded measurably in doing.

The cause of war is precisely the same as the cause of street fights. It is the lack of police, which means the lack of government.

The reason why it is true that disarmament is impracticable at the present time is simply that the United States refused to join the Allies at the close of the war in such a co-operative association of nations as would render wars impossible.

So long as there are no courts in the city to settle disputes between the citizens and no policemen to enforce the judgments of the court, just so long will the streets be full of brawling.

And so long as there is no court in the world to settle disputes between nations and no international constabulary to enforce the decrees of that court, just so long will the fields of earth be arenas of carnage, and the seas graves of shattered fleets.

So long as each citizen carries his own revolver, sword, or bowie knife, and wreaks his private vengeance according to his own notions of justice, just so long will the city be a barbaric camp and not an ordered mart.

And just so long as each nation keeps up its own army and navy ready to fight any other nation; so long as each individual nation refuses to acknowledge any canon of justice except its own sense of honor; so long as the nations cannot agree to come together and find some sort of international police, just so long will the insane rivalry of national armaments continue to play havoc with the commerce of the world and periodically to take its toll of humanity's first-born.

This is the plain, simple truth, the remorseless logic that some time or other we shall have to acknowledge.

COTTON FOR FOOD PRODUCTS.

Texas spent the proceeds from more than half of her 1920 crop of cotton for food products which could have been grown in this state, according to statistics gathered by the Texas chamber of commerce. Figures collected through a careful survey of the dairy, meat and other food producing industries indicate that Texans donated at least 2,500,000 bales of the 1920 cotton crop for food products which could have been grown in Texas. The figures are based upon statistics gathered from the United States departments of labor and agriculture, Texas A. & M. college specialists, packing houses, produce concerns and wholesale firms handling such products. Residents of Texas consume annually 502,000,000 pounds of pork products, according to figures from the United States departments of labor and agriculture. Figures furnished to the Texas chamber of commerce by the American institute of meat packers, and the various agricultural agencies, place the amount of pork produced by Texas annually at not more than 275,000,000 pounds at the outside, leaving a balance of 227,000,000 pounds against this state.

AMERICANS AS PROPERTY OWNERS.

Latest government reports indicate the United States is one of the most extensive property-holding nations. Records show that of the adults in the United States, less than 20,000,000 can be grouped directly or indirectly as without some material property interest in land, transportation, public finance or industrial securities.

Twenty million persons bought Liberty and Victory bonds and notes, of whom about 12,000,000 still retain them; 6,000,000 family groups own the homes in which they live; more than 1,000,000 own railroad bonds and 800,000 own railroad stocks; a large proportion of the 6,000,000 farmers own in whole or in part the land which they cultivate, while more than $5,000,000,000 is the average total of bank deposits.

Returns show that of 5,500,000 individuals who pay income taxes, 70 per cent gained a large proportion on their annual return from the business world. Only 30 per cent received the major portion of their incomes from salaries.

Another evidence of the growth in property holdings is that ownership of securities of concerns in which they are employed by industrial workers is steadily increasing.

A European was beaten to death in Bombay according to a London telegram. Awful, but seventeen hundred natives were shot to death by foreign soldiers just because they paraded the streets after a military governor, also an overlord, had ruled that they should not parade.

CHATTERER HITS ON A PLAN AT LAST

Each time that Chatterer the Red Squirrel thought himself smarter than Sammy Jay he found that he wasn't as smart as he thought he was, and this always made him feel mortified. He just couldn't admit even to himself that Sammy was the smarter, and yet here he was every day bringing corn for Sammy from Farmer Brown's corn crib, whenever Sammy told him to, and running the risk of being seen by Farmer Brown's boy, all because he hadn't been able to think of some way to outwit Sammy. Once, after he had such a narrow escape from old Roughleg the Hawk, he tried going down to his storehouse on the edge of the corn field, but he found Roughleg on watch and had turned back. From the way Sammy Jay had grinned when he saw Chatterer coming back Chatterer had made up his mind that Sammy knew something about how old Roughleg happened to have found out about that storehouse and so seen on watch.

Now, all this time Sammy Jay was having a great deal of fun out of Chatterer's trouble. Each time that Chatterer thought of a plan to outwit Sammy he would find that Sammy had already thought of it, and a way to make the plan quite useless. You see, Sammy used to spend a great deal of his time when he was alone in the Green Forest pretending that he was in the same fix as Chatterer and then trying to think of some way out of it. So it was that Chatterer never could think of a plan that Sammy hadn't already thought of. And yet there was a way to cheat Sammy out of his fun, though not out of his corn, and it really was the fun of seeing Chatterer so worried that Sammy cared most about. Sammy had thought of it almost at once and it seemed to him that Chatterer was very, very stupid not to think of it, too.

"He will think of it some day and I don't see any way to upset such a simple plan," said Sammy to himself and then fell to studying some new way to torment Chatterer.

And at last Chatterer did think of it. It was such a simple plan! Probably that was why he hadn't thought of it before. All he had to do was to go over to Farmer Brown's corn crib at break of day, before any one in Farmer Brown's house was awake, just as he had been doing, only make two or three trips and store a lot of corn in a safe hiding place in the old stone wall. Then when Sammy Jay demanded corn he could get it without trouble or danger. He tried it and it worked splendidly. Sammy Jay got his corn, but he didn't get any fun, and he cared more for the fun of seeing Chatterer in trouble than he did for the corn. So, after two or three mornings, Sammy didn't come up to the Old Orchard, and Chatterer chuckled as he stored up the corn, not in one place, but in several places.

Now, while Sammy Jay seemed to have grown tired of corn he was doing a lot of thinking. He had no idea of leaving Chatterer alone. He had just got to think of some way of upsetting Chatterer's simple plan. It was Reddy Fox who finally gave him the idea. He saw Reddy trotting down the Lone Little Path through the Green Forest, and right away the idea came to him. He would tell Reddy where Chatterer was storing the corn in the old stone wall and Reddy would hide close by.

"Of course, I don't want Reddy to catch Chatterer, but I can prevent that by warning him just in time. But he will be so frightened that he won't dare go to that place for corn again in a hurry, and so will have to go to the corn crib for it," thought Sammy, and hurried to tell Reddy Fox about the place half way along the old stone wall where Chatterer had hidden his corn.

THE HAPPY ENDING.

Among back numbers I am wending, I like the old things, though they're stale; and I admire the happy ending when I wade through a stirring tale; I know my course needs much defending, since critics at old methods rail. "It isn't Art," they tell me, sadly, "the way all stories used to cease; the villian always turned out badly, the hero wed the vicar's niece, and packed his trunks with gems and gladly went honeymooning off to Greece." Art is a thing of pomp and glory, and I'm its booster and its friend; I claim that Art is hunkydory, my throbbing eulogies ascend; and yet I do not like a story that does not have a cheerful end. The methods of the old-time masters were good enough to be my guides; they soaked their heroes in disasters until disasters stained their hides; but in the end the smiling pastors united them to blooming brides. The heroes suffered for a season, till Chapter Twenty-four or five; the dupes of guile and crime and treason, they wondered why they were alive; but in the end they had no fleas on, and they began to bloom and thrive. The villians for a time were winners, all things appeared to come their way; they fed their works with costly dinners, and drank cold bottles from Cathay; but retribution smashed these sinners, to Tyburn tree they rode away. The highbrows doubtless I'm offending when I let thoughts like these prevail; and Art, perhaps, in ire is lending her help to have me put in jail; but I admire the happy ending when I persue a stirring tale!—Copyright by George Matthew Adams.

THE INNBADDS LAY DOWN A HOME-DISARMAMENT PROPOSAL

"My dear," said Ingatius Innbadd, who has been reading about the disarmament conference at Washington, "I move that you and I profit by the proposals to end war as set forth by the disarmament conference."

"I don't quite get you," replied Mrs. Innbadd. "What do you propose we do?"

"I think we should declare a ten-year holiday," he replied.

"Whaddya mean?"

"I mean a ten-year period during which we would each pledge ourselves not to attempt the construction, purchase or lease of any new weapons of attack or defense."

"Are you crazy?"

"I was never more serious. And, what's more, I think every married couple should do the same thing. We've never had real peace in America or any other country otherwise."

"What about the weapons we already use?" asked Mrs. Innbadd.

"I propose that we scrap . . . began Innbadd.

"We scrap enough," interrupted the wife.

"I propose that we scrap all our present weapons," repeated Innbadd. "It would be a great step in the interest of harmony and happiness if you would proceed immediately to destroy that China vase which has constituted your first line of defense and attack in so many battles."

"It is pretty well destroyed now," remarked Mrs. Innbadd, looking at it. "The last time I threw it at you it hit you on the head."

"And you might scrap the faithful flatiron, teapot, poker and stovelid-lifter upon which you always have placed so much dependence in major engagements."

"What about you agreeing to scrap that inkwell, iron paperweight, and heavy bronze tobacco tray that you resort to in counter attack? And how about scrapping that old corncob pipe of yours?"

"The pipe is not a weapon."

"No, but it has started allotuv our battles, Ignatius. If you won't agree to scrap it you might at least disinfect it."

"Well, suppose I agree to disarm . . . will you disarm first as a guarantee of good faith?" asked Mrs. Innbadd.

"My dear, I will be more than glad to. My aim ain't what it used to be and I've lost judgment of distance, anyway."

"Well, I'm willing," replied Mrs. Innbadd, "but I believe in disarming gradually. Why can't we have a programme just as they propose at Washington. Suppose we agree to scrap certain weapons now, certain others in three months and certain others at the end of half a year?"

"That might be best," agreed Ignatius.

"How about replacements?" demanded Mrs. Innbadd, proving that she had been reading the disarmament news, too.

"I think you ought to agree not to buy any new crockery without first giving me written notice. And I'll agree not to buy a nutcracker or anything like that without notifying you. Is it a vote?"

"Not yet," returned Mrs. Innbadd. "Why not?"

"I'm going to wait and see what the Japs do. They're pretty foxy in matters of this sort. If they agree to throw away their fighting tools, I will."

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

THE STIMULUS OF CLEANLINESS

The woman who had been ill for several weeks, just able to drag herself out of bed for a few minutes each day, only to find that she had to go back to bed again, sighed and turned her face to the wall just as the stage brought an unexpected guest in the form of a doctor on his way to the mines at the upper level.

The woman was alone in a huge ranch far from town or railroad. True, she had servants, but they were useless. Little enough good they were, she said bitterly, when she was well. But since her illness they had been worse than useless.

The young doctor, who was as keen and observing as any young doctor can be after spending years where observation is developed as a doctor's most important asset, glanced about the dingy, untidy room, looked at the woman who had turned her face to the wall, and stalked down stairs.

Young Doctor Acts Quickly.

Two slatternly women who spoke indifferent English were drinking coffee at an untidy table. The men who did the outdoor work lounged in the room smoking, though it was but the middle of the afternoon.

Tersely and to the point the doctor spoke.

"Either you clean up that room upstairs, and the rest of this shack, and cook some decent food for your mistress, or you get out. No money—no work. Which shall it be? Quick!"

Sullenly, the women got up, and the men slunk away to their own province. The doctor, who had told the stage to come back for him that evening, when he had discovered the plight of the lonely white woman who was ill in her ranch house, took off his coat and became instructor in chief.

"That room upstairs has to be swept," he said. And as one woman started toward the stairs with a broom, he called her back.

How to Sweep Sickroom.

"Not like that. A dry broom—dry dust—and the air worse than ever. Haven't you got any cheese cloth, or old muslin?" The woman produced an old curtain. The doctor tore it up recklessly, dipped it in clean water and wound it around the broom.

"Go up stairs and clean that floor with this," he said. "And when the muslin gets too grimy come down and change it for a clean one wrung out of clean water. Sick folk can't breathe all that dust into their lungs without coughing—don't you know that?"

Then, swiftly appraising the contents of the cupboard and the icechest, he spoke sharply to the woman in the kitchen about the interior of the ice-box. The drain was clogged up, the ice chamber filled with unwashed ice. At his suggestion the woman cleaned out the ice-box, scraping away stale portions of food, scalding the drain pipe with hot soda solution, washing the ice and replacing it in the clean ice chamber.

Servants Had Been Aroused.

"Fill it up. It will hold another chunk of ice and then it will be cold inside." The doctor, who was enjoying his campaign, supervised the making of mutton broth, the general cleaning up of the kitchen, and went upstairs to inspect the sick room. It was a different place. The Indian woman, no longer sullen, but interested, had done her best. Had gone a notch further and carried hot water to her mistress for a wash had helped her comb her hair. Had even made the bed afresh.

And when, late that day, the stage picked up the doctor, who had been doing district work in the lonely ranch house, he left behind a woman who was stimulated with clean air, and fresh surroundings, with hot mutton broth that was palatable. And he had stirred something in the soul of her servants, who had only needed some one to tell them what to do.

"Auto" Killings

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

From an advance bulletin of the United States government's annual report on mortality statistics, the urgent need of drastic measures to check "auto" killings becomes increasingly evident. In 1919 deaths from automobile accidents were at the rate of 9.4 per 100,000 population. Last year, it appears, they were at the rate of 10.4 per 100,000.

This represents a really appalling increase in fatalities. And while the automobile death toll is doubtless to some extent inevitable, by far the greater number of slayings might have been prevented.

Recklessness and negligence—often amounting to criminal negligence—are responsible for them.

And the burden of responsibility rests partly on motorists, partly on pedestrians, partly on lawmakers and partly on those whose duty it is to punish adequately motorists whose recklessness or negligence causes them to become takers of human life.

As things now stand, too great leniency is shown professional or amateur drivers whose incompetence or mania for speed involves them in tragedies that need never have been. Their pleas, "I did not mean to do it," moves judges to unwarrantable gentleness.

Of course they did not mean to do it. Nobody, not being a madman, an imbecile, or a desperate criminal, deliberately takes another's life.

But unless intent is subordinated to fact in passing on the issue of the killing, unless prison terms are made the invariable penalty for such killings, the caution that motorists should show will never become the invariable rule it ought to be.

Nor will it even then become the rule unless would-be motorists are by law subjected to more rigorous tests than now are usually applied to them. In many communities ability to purchase an automobile is virtually equivalent to the right to drive one.

THIS SHOULD NEVER BE.

The world abounds in semi-fools who become social menaces the moment a driver's license is granted to them. Proper tests, honestly applied, would reveal their sluggish mentality or deficient power of control, and would keep them in the passengers' seat where they belong.

Pedestrians, too, need to be more than gently admonished when, in crowded centers, their violation of traffic rules invites disaster.

The blame in "auto" killings by no means always rests with the man in the car. Many a motorist has been forced to risk his own life, perhaps to sacrifice it, because of the actions of pedestrians who do not govern themselves by the principle "Safety first."

Such pedestrians deserve punishment they seldom receive.

Until they do receive it we may expect—we must expect—others to "take chances" which will mean a continuance of the "plain by Auto" headline, now so painfully familiar in the daily paper.

The fire loss in America in 1920 is estimated at more than half a billion dollars. During the same period 15,000 persons lost their lives in fires.

The Daily Story

THE OPENING

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

He had begun in a very small way—a little shop in front of the housekeeping rooms where he and Mollie, newest of newlyweds, lived. He kept his own books in the evening after closing hours. Before he opened in the morning he did his own janitor work. His only helper was the blushing bride, who, plump, rosy cheeked and bright eyed, with the endurance of an indestructible doll, smilingly waited on customers between her household tasks of cooking, baking and dish washing.

From the first the little shop prospered. It was such a "handy" place, where you could buy anything from a paper of needles to a pretty dress with all its "fixings," not to mention peppermint stick candy and licorice lozengers. Then you were sure of getting your money's value.

"Better go to Foster's," people soon began to tell each other. "He's always reliable."

So by the time the baby came and the happy, absorbed Mollie could not tend shop for the first exacting six months at least, Jim Foster could well afford to hire a clerk.

The baby was a boy—the most beautiful, the most wonderful, the most adorable James, Jr. And from the proud moment that the beaming father first took the youngster in his arms twin interests held sway in Jim Foster's heart—the boy and the business.

The twins grew up together, a steady, healthy growth. And by coincidence or fate that Jim and Mollie never tired expatiating upon, together they had certain spectacular special-event celebrations. For instance, the morning Jim Foster came excitedly hurrying into the back room to tell Mollie the new cash register was being installed in the little shop she met him with the breathless news that Jimmy's first tooth was through. The same day that Jimmy was celebrating his first birthday in the new flat that the family had recently moved into, the shop was altered and expanded, taking in the former housekeeping rooms, and was ready to welcome customers to its new suit and millinery departments. And the week that Jimmy first strutted in his first microscopic trousers the store—no one thought of calling it a shop now—acquired a floorwalker.

So they had gone on—the boy in kindergarten, at grammar school and in high school, shooting up like a sturdy young tree. The constantly branching out business taking in the store on either side, opening new departments and engaging more clerks.

It was when Jimmy entered college and to his father's delight, chose the commercial course, that Jim Foster made the great decision—to put up a building of his own; to have a store with plenty of floor space and light and plate-glass show windows, the kind of store that could not fail to appeal to Jimmy.

As he mentioned his decision to his wife, in spite of the confidence of his smile, Mollie detected a plaintive note in Jim's eager voice. Lately a miserable doubt, admitted to no one but Mollie, had begun to torment him—the doubt whether the boy really took an interest in the business.

"I can't understand it," he said, with a shake of his head. "Even as a little tike there was nothing Jimmy liked better than to come to the store and tag me about, asking forty-leven questions. And you remember, Mollie, when we first got a wagon, how keen he was to ride around after school hours, helping Henderson deliver. And when he was old enough to clerk during the Christmas holidays I never saw a youngster of his age show more natural business ability. And now all of a sudden he seems to have grown indifferent. I can't figure it out."

"You don't suppose," Mollie hesitatingly suggested, "that he has something in his mind that he thinks he'd like better?"

"No; I asked him the direct question, and he said he'd as lief go into the business as anything else. 'As lief,'" indignantly repeated Foster. "I thought he'd be crazy about it. But he'll feel different when he knows about the new store," he continued hopefully. "I'm going to keep dark about it though, until I begin to build. And things are not quite in shape for that yet awhile."

Things were not quite in shape even in Jimmy's last year at college. For, although he had no dissipated habits, since he entered the university the boy's expenses had shot up rather alarmingly and at the same time the business was facing a trying period of depression. But Foster had unlimited credit and, bound that the business should be ready in its new quarters when the boy was ready to take hold he began preparations for building in the early spring.

When he sprang the surprise, over which he had been secretly gloating for years, the response was not what he had hoped for. Jimmy was surprised all right, but he failed to show any enthusiasm.

"It's because he doesn't realize it in the abstract," Foster told Mollie. "Wait till he sees the building go up and watch his eyes bulge."

But they did not bulge—not even when the building was far enough advanced for the Foster family to inspect the interior.

"Of course, you can't tell what it's really going to look like," Foster still clung to hope. "He'll sit up and take notice when the thing's done and all the fixings in."

But a plasterer's strike caused weeks of delay and on the resplendent June day on which the boy got his sheepskin the business was still in its shabby old quarters. The delay was the more exasperating because the basement of the old place was piled high with unopened packing boxes of expensive stock ordered for the new building, which now could not be realized upon until fall.

It was not an auspicious moment for an expensive pleasure trip, but some of Jimmy's fraternity brothers were going to spend the summer touring California and young Foster coaxed so hard to join them Jim finally gave consent.

"Perhaps if the boy has his fling first, Mollie, he'll take hold of the business with vim. I must say though," sighed Foster. "I'm mighty disappointed that he won't be back in time for the opening."

But he was. All summer long one delay at the new building followed another and the little party returned the very evening before the opening day.

Although they had sat up late listening to Jimmie talk, the Foster family arose at 6 o'clock and went down to the new store directly after breakfast.

"Come early and avoid the rush!" exclaimed Jim in tremendous excitement as they passed through the impressive entrance before the arrival of the public.

As he led the way up one broad aisle and down another it was the proudest moment of Jim Foster's life. It was really a beautiful store with all the most up-to-date appointments. Never in the home town had there been a finer display of goods. And then the floral offerings were most impressive.

"Well, son, what do you think of it all?" Jim Foster beamed.

"It's some store all right, dad," answered Jimmy.

But there was no glow either in his voice or face, and had Jim Foster been more hurt.

Yet if on that opening day of triumph the boy failed him, the business was struck, he could not have been more did not. From morning until night people came, saw and went into ecstasies. And in the evening there was a brass band and speeches. It was all wonderful and magnificent.

Not until midnight did Jim Foster get home and to bed. And no sooner had he fallen asleep than he was aroused by the clattering noise of the fire department dashing by. The next moment the telephone rang uproariously. The new store was on fire.

By the time they dressed and got down in a taxi the fire was under control. The damage done to the building itself was comparatively slight, but from water and chemicals three-fourths of the beautiful new stock was ruined.

"Never mind, Jim," comforted Mollie, "you've always carried a big insurance, you know."

"You know you are wrong," he said to me. "I know you are acting in good faith, but you are wrong and you must make good."

I know I am right. I know it as well as Old Doctor Higgins knows that he is right. Our clash resulted from our acceptance of two different stories about a single incident. My story came from a friend of mine and I have checked up on it and I am sure that he told the truth. Doctor Higgins's came from his friend and he has checked up on it and knows that his friend told the truth. If we have to fight it out on that line there is no chance for a compromise.

"But I'll meet you half-way," I told the old doctor. "It isn't a matter of great importance. If we both make concessions it can all be smoothed over. I'll go as far as you will and then a little further."

But the old doctor isn't built that way. His is the blood of martyrs, all right, and he will not yield an inch or give a gram. He has hammered away at me on the theory that if he hammered long enough I would give way. At last my martyr blood has come to the top. Now we're both angry, and the chances are we will make a couple of lawyers more indecently rich than they are already.

But if you ask my real, innermost opinion, I'll tell you we are a couple of red-eyed old fools.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

My mother used to tell me that we should always try to be right. But there is such a thing, she used to say, as being too right.

"The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church," she used to say. "But before you insist on being a martyr be real sure that you want to found a church."

That saying came in my mind to-day after I had my final conference with Old Doctor Higgins. Whatever conferring is to be done hereafter will be between our lawyers. I was willing to make a compromise, following the spirit of my mother's dictum, but Old Doctor Higgins would not compromise for a cent.

"You know you are wrong," he said to me. "I know you are acting in good faith, but you are wrong and you must make good."

I know I am right. I know it as well as Old Doctor Higgins knows that he is right. Our clash resulted from our acceptance of two different stories about a single incident. My story came from a friend of mine and I have checked up on it and I am sure that he told the truth. Doctor Higgins's came from his friend and he has checked up on it and knows that his friend told the truth. If we have to fight it out on that line there is no chance for a compromise.

"But I'll meet you half-way," I told the old doctor. "It isn't a matter of great importance. If we both make concessions it can all be smoothed over. I'll go as far as you will and then a little further."

But the old doctor isn't built that way. His is the blood of martyrs, all right, and he will not yield an inch or give a gram. He has hammered away at me on the theory that if he hammered long enough I would give way. At last my martyr blood has come to the top. Now we're both angry, and the chances are we will make a couple of lawyers more indecently rich than they are already.

But if you ask my real, innermost opinion, I'll tell you we are a couple of red-eyed old fools.

A Flemington, N. J. man taught his cat to jump against a door to close it. Recently when the house caught fire, the cat performed this trick and stopped the flames from going up the stairs by shutting the stair door. This gave the members of the family time to escape.

The house was beautifully decorated in the chrysanthemums and autumn foliage for the occasion, and the dining room was especially pretty, with decorations in the Oriental colors suggestive of the lesson theme. Fashions for Americans

For the little lady of two years or thereabouts there is shown here a charming party frock of white chiffon or Georgette combined with pastel colored taffeta. The dress, as the sketch indicates, is a straight section of the sheer fabric finished at the bottom with an oddly shaped band of the taffeta and at the top with a cape collar that is formed in one piece by taking a round piece of taffeta of the correct size and shaping it for the neck. A ribbon bow for the hair should match the taffeta trimming in color.

The little cap sketched is of white faille silk. It is cut in pointed sections, each being decorated with a hand embroidered motif, and the two front points turn back from the face. A bow of ribbon finishes the top of the cap.

An exceptionally lovely coat for a two-year-old, seen recently, was made of gray chiffon velvet. A deep smocked yoke reached almost to the waist, and collar and cuffs were of squirrel. Another smart little coat was of pale yellow chinchilla finished with a collar of beaver.

In making a coat for a little child, especially if the garment is to be interlined, it is best to make coat proper and lining quite separate, finishing each completely, and merely attaching them at the neck, arm holes, and down the front. The coat hem will set much better if this rule is followed than when the lining is attached to the outer fabric all the way around.

YOU CAN'T TRUST CALOMEL AT ALL

It's Quicksilver, Salivates, Causes Rheumatism and Bone Decay.

The next dose of calomel you take may salivate you. It may shock your liver or start bone necrosis. Calomel is dangerous. It is mercury, quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate. (Adv.)

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. (Adv.)

BEAUTY IS HARMONY

There can be no harmony, and therefore no beauty, in a home in which the wife and mother is cross and irritable and dull-spirited. Often as not, disease is at the bottom of such a condition.

Let the woman who is always tired and who suffers from low spirits and mysterious aches and pains, only try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She will then see that the beauty and harmony will be restored to her home with the return of her health and good spirits.—Adv.

Wichita-Poly Game Tomorrow at 10:30 a.m.

TIME OF BATTLE ADVANCED TO GIVE SHRINERS CHANCE TO VIEW BIG GRID STRUGGLE

In order not to conflict with the Maskat Temple ceremonial, and to give every Shriner an opportunity to witness the battle, the Thanksgiving football "scrap" between the Wichita Falls eleven and Polytechnic high of Fort Worth will be played at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, instead of in the afternoon as originally scheduled. That the Shriners appreciate this courtesy was shown in a statement last evening, urging all Masons in the city to attend the game, and support the wearers of the red and black in their last and biggest tussle of the season.

Harry Viner, coach of the local eleven, announced last night that the following men had been named as officials: Referee, Boyd of Ames; Umpire, Duff, of Kansas; Head linesman, Leach, of Baylor. Each one of these men knows the gridiron game from every angle, and a square deal is assured to both teams.

Viner's only worry last night was the wing positions for tomorrow's game. Shaw, plucky and speedy little left end for the red and black, was badly shaken up last Saturday in the Vernon game and in all probability will be unable to start tomorrow. Hembree and Anderson will guard the wings, but if "Shorty" Chewning is disabled (And his hip is still very lame) Hembree will have to run the eleven at quarter— in which case Coach Viner will be up against it for an experienced man to help turn back the Fort Worth attack on the ends.

I asked Harry if he had any new tricks up his sleeve for tomorrow, and he grinned his famous grin as he answered:

"I'll be satisfied if the boys don't forget the plays they've known earlier. They have been through a tough season and a hard schedule, with many handicaps to overcome, and they've shown a great fighting heart as a high school team. I'm satisfied now that they'll give the home fans everything they've got Thanksgiving Day."

The Line-Up

In all probability the eleven that will face Polytechnic high when the opening whistle sends the pigskin on its way, will line up as follows: "Dutch" Anderson, left end; Carroll Johnson, left tackle; Clyde Robinson, left guard; Capt. Leo Haney, center; William Walker, right guard; Gerald Coffey, right tackle; Joe Hembree, right end; Albert Chewning, quarterback; Pyrl Brashear, left half; Hubert Stringer, right half; Gorman Kenley, fullback.

This will line up an eleven averaging 152 pounds, far from being heavy for high school elevens run this season, but a team that is fast and full of fight. The weights scale all the way from "Shorty" Chewning's 133 pounds to the big frame Bill Walker, who tops the beam at 180. That Polytechnic high will average several pounds heavier to the man is admitted, but anything else that the Fort Worth boys attain in advantage they will have to fight to collect.

The remarkable record made by the high school eleven this year has convinced Athletic Director Danheim that the Wichita Falls high school has earned the right to be considered in a class with the big schools of the state. If the boys defeat Polytechnic tomorrow, or put up a great game against odds, even, next season's schedule will be drafted with the idea of obtaining some of the best high school elevens in Texas as opponents of the red and black.

The biggest crowd of the season is expected at Athletic park tomorrow forenoon. The game will be a test to determine whether local fans will support a local team that has honestly earned good support. If the attendance is heavy, enough money will be realized to lift the financial burden under which the boys have played all season and to put sufficient surplus in the high school athletic fund to get the school started right on its basketball season. Admission to tomorrow's game will be 75 cents, with an additional charge of 25 cents for box seats. This price is lower than the admission charged for the recent Electra-Childress battle here, and should meet with popular approval.

The Wichita Falls high school football team of 1921 has lost only one game this season, when its goal line was crossed once by Electra, champions of Northwest Texas. Every red-blooded football fan in this city owes his attendance, his royal, loyal, rooting, tooting attendance, to that fighting red and black eleven tomorrow forenoon at 10:30 o'clock.

There will be a "pep meeting" at the high school this afternoon to organize the students for the game. Talks will be made by Coach Viner, Athletic Director Danheim and Capt. Leo Haney.

GOPHERS TURN ATTENTION TO BASKETBALL

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 22.—With athletic directors at the University of Minnesota taking inventory of its victories and losses on the gridiron, following the close of the football season, attention is centered in the basketball possibilities of the Gopher institution.

Although but one candidate, Captain Adrian Kearney, has participated in Big Ten conference games, Dr. L. J. Cooke, the basketball coach, has a quantity of promising material which includes several former state college players.

Preliminary practice has been progressing favorably and Coach Cooke has selected his first squad, which will be composed of Kearney, Fogelberg, Sullivan, Forsell, Claydon, Becker, Hanson, Swanson, Pesek, Hultkranz, Grimes, Doyle and Anderson. Hanson, Swanson and Pesek were basketball luminaries in the state colleges.

Coach Cooke does not predict a championship five but with the promising material on hand, hopes to be near the top when the "Big Ten" basketball is finished.

In an effort to overcome the handicap of lack of experience of some of the men before the season starts, Dr. Cooke has decided to recommend to the Minnesota Athletic Board, that the University of Kansas basketball team be invited to spend the Christmas holidays in Minneapolis, practicing daily with the Gophers and culminating the work in an exhibition game to defray expenses. This idea was first conceived at Kansas.

School Programs To Show Spirit of Thanksgiving

Programs touching on the historic nature of Thanksgiving day was announced Tuesday to be planned as a feature in all ward schools of the city for Wednesday afternoon.

In explanation of the need for teaching the real spirit intended to prevail on Thanksgiving day, Superintendent Clark said that in one school of the city the question was asked Tuesday, "What have you to be thankful for on Thanksgiving?" "A holiday," was reported to have been the prompt reply of one of the students.

Special programs are planned at the San Jacinto and Alamo schools. The Rev. J. H. Groseclose, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist Church is scheduled to deliver an address to the students of the Alamo school during their program Wednesday afternoon.

Wichitan and Childress Man Honored at Texas

A Wichitan and a student from Childress have again distinguished themselves at the University of Texas, winning recognition for scholarship and general accomplishment, according to word received here Tuesday.

According to the announcement here, Paul J. Pond of this city and G. G. Harrington of Childress have been elected to membership in the Tau Beta Pi fraternity, which requires an average of "B" grades in all subjects for three years before a man is entitled to membership, and then must come through election. Another membership rule of the fraternity is announced to be that members must be chosen from the twenty-five per cent of the class who make the highest grades.

Half of the members are chosen at the close of the year and the remainder near the beginning of the ensuing year.

There is one fairly good hotel in Jericho.

KIWANIANS TO OBSERVE "KEMP DAY"

To the Kiwanis club, whose motto is "We Build," falls the privilege of having the first "Kemp Day," honoring J. A. Kemp, father of the irrigation project and the man who, as both dreamer and builder, has had more to do with the actual start of work, according to a decision reached Tuesday by a meeting of the board of governors of the club.

Monday, December 12, has been selected as the day, and plans for a thorough and appreciative celebration of the completion of the first steps toward realization of the dreams of Mr. Kemp are being worked out by the directors of the club. These plans will include talks by prominent local men and other appropriate features, according to Ben Neal, secretary.

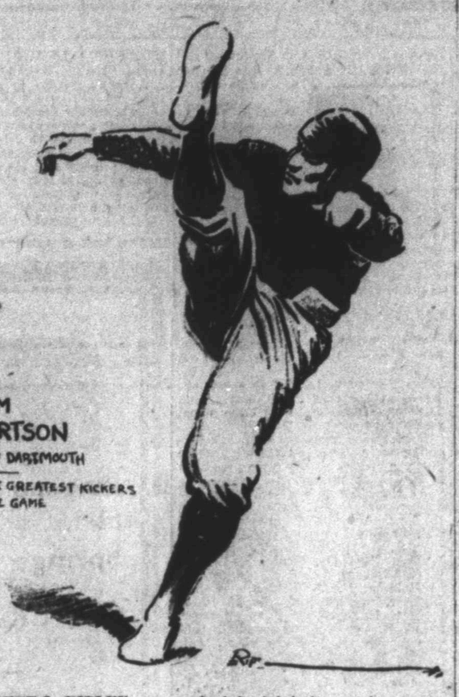

RED SOX RECALL PITCHERS FROM MINOR LOOP CLUBS

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—The recall by the Boston Americans of Cliff Bean, southpaw, whose pitching aided Pittsfield in the pennant race in the Eastern league, and Curtis Fullerton, who pitched last season for the Toronto club of the International league was announced today.

The Mexican government has opened a permanent agricultural exhibit in the United States.

The Eastern Star. —By Ripley.

By ROBERT L. RIPLEY.

Big Jim Robertson, the running, plunging, kicking back of Dartmouth, is finishing his football career in a blaze of transcending glory that may place him on the All-American eleven. He is the whole team.

Robertson has been an unfortunate star. His light has been hidden under a bushel of injuries ranging from a broken nose down to a broken leg. He has suffered comparatively little this year, as a broken nose hardly bothered him at all, so the best backfield man in the east is having a chance to prove it.

He ranks second to Aldrich of Yale in individual point scoring among the eastern stars.

MAJOR LEAGUE OWNERS WILL STAND PAT ON 1921 MANAGERS; MINORS WAIT ANNUAL MEETING

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Major league managers who finished the 1921 season at the helms of the sixteen big league clubs seem pretty sure of their jobs for another season. Unless present signs fail there will be no managerial shifts and if this holds true the coming Winter will set a record, as there has never been a "hot stove" season in which one or more managers' heads were not lopped off.

Last winter there were several changes. Johnny Evers took Fred Mitchell's place at Chicago and Mitchell succeeded George Stallings at Boston. Wild Bill Donovan came out of the International league to manage the Phillies. Huggie Duffy stepped into Ed Barrow's boots at Boston and Tyrus Cobb succeeded Hugh Jennings at Detroit. At Washington, Clark Griffith retired to the business of being a club president and appointed George McBride to handle the reins of the Senators.

Two of the managers installed last winter failed to last out the season. Evans being succeeded at Chicago by Bill Killefer and Donovan being dropped by the Phillies in favor of Irving Wilhelm. The owners of the Cubs and Phillies, have announced that 1922 entrance in the big show and the rest of the managers are apparently securely anchored.

McGraw on the Job.

Rumors to the contrary, John McGraw will be the guiding spirit of the Giants again next year. He may take Johnny Evers back to assist Hugh Jennings in coaching the team, but in the heat of the pennant race McGraw will be on the old bench, telling 'em what to do.

Rumors that Huggins was to be deposed have quieted down since the world's series. Just how the Yankee Colonels could let Huggins go after he won a pennant for them and made a hot fight in the world's series against the Giants is a point that a good many critics cannot fathom and, generally speaking they agree that Huggins stands better than an even chance to stay.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson, popular and in great demand by Brooklyn fans, can scarcely be sacrificed by the Brooklyn club even though he might want to go elsewhere, so the three New York clubs are seemingly set in a managerial way.

Hugh Duffy and Fred Mitchell delivered at Boston and will stick; Connie Mack is not thinking of tieing the can to himself at Philadelphia and Wilhelm is signed for 1922.

McBride Solid.

George McBride did very well with the Senators. He is solid with Griffith. George Gibson, though he stood on shaky ground when his team was beaten out by the Giants, looks like a good bet to manage the Pirates again and Pat Moran is firmly rooted in Cincinnati.

Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker are prime favorites in Detroit and Cleveland; Kid Gleason and Killefer will return to Chicago and Rickey and Fohl will be found at the helms of the Cards and Browns. This accounts for all of the managers and it looks sure that all will be leading rookies and regulars toward the training camps in March.

The managerial array and the tenure of "office" they have had in the big show follows:

National League.

McGraw, New York	19½ Years
Robinson, Broklyn	7 Years
Moran, Cincinnati	3 Years
Rickey, St. Louis	3 Years
Gibson, Pittsburgh	2 Years
Mitchell, Boston	1 Year
Wilhelm, Philadelphia	½ Year
Killefer, Chicago	½ Year

American League.

Mack, Philadelphia	21 Years
Huggins, New York	4 Years
Gleason, Chicago	3 Years
Speaker, Cleveland	2* Years
McBride, Washington	1 Year
Cobb, Detroit	1 Year
Duffy, Boston	1 Year
Fohl, St. Louis	1 Year

President Michael Sexton, of the National Association of Professional Baseball clubs, has sent out circular letters to every member of the minor league organization urging attendance at the annual meeting at Buffalo December 6 to 9. Says Mr. Sexton:

"I believe that our approaching meeting will be one of the most important and interesting that this association has ever held. Hon. Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner, will be in attendance and will have a double message, of great interest to all, to deliver. At our opening session he will speak directly to baseball people, club officials, players, umpires, scorers, sport writers and all persons directly connected with the game, and on Wednesday evening at our annual banquet his message will be to the great body of sport loving people of the United States and Canada. This message, I am sure, will be of such interest and importance that it will be carried by the several press associations to all parts of our jurisdiction."

200,000 FANS ASK TICKETS FOR ARMY-NAVY GRID GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Applications for the Army-Navy game to be played here next Saturday are estimated to have reached a total of 200,000. The seating capacity of the Polo Grounds for football games is 44,000 and but a very small percentage of the tickets have been allotted for public distribution.

Thanksgiving Day

By "NICK" CARTER

Thanksgiving? Aye, what does it mean?
Take breath from your daily toil,
And ponder that dear old word a bit
That grew from the Pilgrim soil.

There isn't a sweeter word, I wis,
In all this wide-flung sphere;
For it spells the thanks of a nation's folk
To the God who placed them here.

Backward, Oh Time, clear the mists away,
Lift the veil that we all may see
With humbler hearts, more grateful hearts,
The hearthstone of the free.

A little clearing in the woods,
And on the fir-strewn sod
A simple, rugged, sober folk
Giving their thanks to God.

Thanks for what? For the right to live
For the simple things of life;
And simple thanks for sunshine thrown
Across a year of strife.

Thanksgiving? 'Tis a sweet old word.
We ask too much today;
We wander in our selfishness
Too far, too far away.

Seldom we pause to offer thanks
For all the little things
That cleanse the heart with happiness
And give the spirit wings.

Rich is our heritage, and yet
We blindly pass it by,
Each in his own self-centered world
Content to live and die.

Thanksgiving? Mawkish sentiment?
No! Midst the circling night
I'm thankful for the lonely chance
To set my house a-right.

A little chance to plow the line
Across life's golden sod;
And at the long, long furrow's end—
Thanksgiving to my God.

"BILL" FOWNES WINS BIGGEST GOLF MATCH

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—His greatest match, with a dreaded malady as his opponent, has resulted in a victory for William C. Fownes, Jr., former amateur champion and the captain of the American golf team which invaded Great Britain. It was a grim encounter he waged, but the stakes were big, and with the same indomitable fighting spirit which characterizes his play in golf he battled against the dreaded cancer. The result of the encounter was to determine if he would live or die. He has scored a big triumph and is assured by his physicians that all danger has passed.

The news brought rejoicing in the ranks of local golfers. A gloom had pervaded here since it became known that Mr. Fownes was suffering from cancer. In fact, so deep was the feeling that all of the Pittsburghers entered in the National championship tournament at St. Louis withdrew. While the tournament was in progress in St. Louis, Mr. Fownes was engaged in his greatest of all tournaments, the one in which his life was at stake. He was at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, receiving treatment from eminent cancer specialists. The outcome of the operation was watched with keen interest. They were more concerned about Fownes' fight against the grim reaper than they were in the new champion.

The cancer developed while Fownes was returning from England, where he played in the British championship tournament at Hoylake. It appeared on his right ear and was discovered while he was aboard ship.

BENNY LEONARD WINS DECISION OVER FRIEDMAN

By Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Benny Leonard, lightweight boxing champion of the world, outpointed Mailer Friedman of Chicago, in an eight-round no-decision bout here tonight. Both men entered the ring over the lightweight limit and the champion was not at stake.

Friedman entered the ring at 10:30 and Leonard followed five minutes later. Both men were greeted with rounds of applause.

Their weights were announced at ringside as Friedman 140 pounds, and the champion 138 3-4 pounds.

Both being above the lightweight limit, the championship technically was not at stake.

The Chicagoan was game and took the offensive in many of the rounds. Leonard, the better boxer, withstood his assaults and found that he must pile up enough points to win a popular victory. The challenger staggered the champion several times with hard punches to the head, but Leonard smiled and gave three or more blows in return.

The champion did most of his fighting in the seventh and eighth rounds and at one time appeared to have his opponent in a weakened condition.

SAY, OLD TIMER!

Do you remember that old-time THANKSGIVING DAY at home? Sure you do. The big fat turkey in the center of the table; the creamed potatoes; the "stuffin'" celery, cranberries and the pumpkin and mince pie. And oh, boy the steaming coffee pot over at mother's place. Didn't it smell good? Talk about incense—and mother poured in rich yellow cream and it turned a golden yellow and Uummmm how it did taste. Wouldn't it have been a punk old Thanksgiving dinner without the coffee?

You know mother didn't buy tin cans and lithographed labels, she bought green coffee and "parched" it in the oven.

If you want the same kind of coffee THIS THANKSGIVING just say to your grocer, "Gimme BERT BEAN'S WHO CAN BEAT IT"

"IT'S FRESH FROM THE ROASTER."

And always good. If your grocer don't carry it in stock, he is giving neither you or BERT BEAN a square deal.

Chapter VI.

Sam had a little money, back pay he had just received.

"Don't let them know you have it, Sis," he said to Ruth as he slipped it into her hand. "I see hard sledding ahead for all of us, you particularly. I heard you and dad talking about the interest on the mortgage. Gee, but you talked Dutch to him all right. You're the business man of this family. I saw you too when you told him Bettey could have your dress. You were crying. It isn't fair, Ruth, a great hulk of a fellow like me, sitting here in a chair all day while a girl bears all the burdens of the family!" The muscles of his face twitched. Ruth, frightened at the effect his outburst might have on him, soothed him as best she could.

"Bosh! I was a bit sentimental, that's all. What's the good of a dress when you've no place to go—no time if you had. Betty will get a whole lot of good of it, while it would only hang in the closet until it was yellow with age before I got another chance to wear it! Please, Sam, don't get excited. You know it always makes your heart hurt."

"All right, but you're the greatest little girl ever. The fellow who gets you for a wife will surely get a peach."

"I shall never marry, Sam. I can't! And why should I?" As she saw the frown on his face, she added: "Haven't I a ready-made family of my own to care for?" She laughed coyly. It is easy to laugh at love when one never has thought much of the tender passion, when one has never had a lover.

"That's the rough part of it! It's a sin and a shame."

"There, there, Sam Browning! It is time enough to cross streams when we come to them, not when we are walking on dry land. I just love to help, so you needn't pity me." Then soberly: "This is awfully generous of you, Sam. Won't you need it for tobacco and things?"

"No, keep it. And Ruth, count my pay in when you figure expenses. That colonel of mine was great to see that I got money to take care of myself until I was able to work. A lot of the poor fellows haven't even got their back pay yet."

"Remember that, young man, when you feel like grumbling. We are lucky in many ways. Except you, old dear, we are all well. Dad will surely find something after a while. If only mother wouldn't fret so. It takes the heart out of me."

"I know. She feels so abused. Mother was always like that when things went wrong. I'm afraid, sis, she will always be that way."

"Oh, well, we can't expect to have everything come our way! I am so happy that there is money enough to pay that interest, and now with this of yours we won't have to live on air as I told dad we would rather than not pay that interest. Why, Sam, if they should foreclose that mortgage! I don't dare think of it, of what would happen to all of us." Then: "I wish Ted would come back, Sam. It is six months since we have heard from him. Oh, I hope nothing has happened to him!"

"Don't worry about Ted. Let's hope he'll come back with a fortune. If he doesn't he better stay away. There are enough derelicts in the Browning family now," he ended with the bitterness so easily aroused.

Betty was only partly pacified when she heard that she was to have Ruth's dress.

"I don't see why I can't have a new one," she grumbled. "I hate hand-me-downs!"

"But, Betty darling," her mother argued, "your father was earning a lot of money when I bought this dress for Ruth. It is beautiful material. She thought it would be a party dress afterward. Poor child, she hasn't any time for parties now. She has to work so you and Susan can stay in school." Mrs. Browning never acknowledged her debt to Ruth. "If I could buy you a dress now it would be a very cheap one."

"I hate cheap things!" fiercely declared Betty, stamping her foot. "When I get older I am going to marry a millionaire. Other girls do, and I am as pretty as any of them."

"Prettier dear," her mother soothingly replied as she pinned the dress up a bit. Betty was not as tall as Ruth. "You are just the image of what I was at your age." A sigh accompanied the last remark.

"How did you ever come to marry a poor man, mother? With your family you should have annexed a millionaire. Not that dear old dad isn't all right, but he don't seem to have the knack of making money. He hasn't any bad habits either."

"I fell in love with your father, Betty. And when one 's young and in love one doesn't think much about money. Or how big a family they may have to care for. If I had my life to live over again—" The unfinished sentence breathed loudly of possibilities.

"Well, you just watch me! I'm going to marry a man with money. What's the use of being pretty if you can't turn it to account?"

"That's not a nice way for a 16-year-old girl to talk," the mother's words reproved. But approval was in her eyes. Betty was right. Her beauty should bring her money, ease, all the lovely things she craved, and which she, her mother, had craved before her.

Too much living may have something to do with the high cost of living, Secretary Davis intimated in making public bureau of labor statistics showing that the average American eats more than a ton of food a year. "The exact amount," he said, "is 2,664 pounds for each man in a year. In footing up the cost of living, there's one thing we've got to remember—we certainly don't stint ourselves. Is such an appetite any better for the body than for the pocketbook? I notice by these same statistics that the average American wage earner manages to keep the spark of life in his body on 1775 pounds of food a year, and if I recollect rightly, the American soldier did some pretty fair work on that allowance. The medical authorities may make what they please of these figures," Secretary Davis added "but I notice that the average Japanese consumes 905 pounds of food a year and the average Japanese adult gets only thirty pounds of fruit as against 250 pounds the average with us. What these figures may mean I don't know except as something for appropriate reflection on Thanksgiving."

Some Chest-Nuts

"You remember that handsome watch I lost five or six years ago?" asked Graves.

"Yes, I recall the occurrence," replied his friend.

"You remember how I looked high and low for it and could not find it anywhere?"

"I remember your diligent and exhaustive search."

"Well, yesterday I put on an old waistcoat that I hadn't worn for years and what do you think I found in the pocket?"

"Your watch; let me congratulate you."

"No; I found the hole I must have lost it through.

A young wife was boring her visitor to tears, her brand-new husband being the theme of her discourse. Having regaled the patient hearer with a description of her hubby's idiosyncrasies, she started on a monologue of his hobbies.

Her remarks being received without enthusiasm, she endeavored to evince a slight interest in some one else.

"What is your husband's chief hobby?" she inquired politely.

"Himself," was the laconic reply.

An old gentleman boarded the trolley car, and, luckily finding a seat, sat down next to a friend.

He nodded pleasantly, paid his fare, and then said genially.

"Well, what do you think of the weather?"

"Oh, horrible!" said his friend.

"And how's your wife today?" said the old gentleman.

"Oh, about the same!" was the reply.

I can't keep visitors from coming up," said the office boy, dejectedly. "When I say you're out they won't believe me. They all say they must see you."

"Well, put them off somehow," said the editor, with a worried look. "Whatever they say, just tell them, 'That's what they all say.' Be firm. See?"

"Yes, sir."

That afternoon a lady called. She had hard features and an acid expression, and she demanded to see the editor at once.

"Impossible," said William.

"But I'm his wife," persisted the lady.

"That's what they all say," said the boy.

Secretary Hoover said at a banquet:

"One difference between Europe and America is that over there they like to keep you in your place—stationary, you know, while here we like to see a man rise.

WHY NOT?

Wife—We should have a nurse for the baby, my dear.

Hubby—Nurse? What we need is night watchman.

"The European idea is pretty well illustrated by the remarks of Muggins on his return from the club one Saturday night, said to his wife:

"I believe in manly pride and reasonable ambition, but when Sargeant Todd with his cork leg takes to carryin' a cane besides, it looks to me as if he was tryin' to climb out of the station what Divine Providence sunk him into."

Master—Give my respects to the professor and tell him I shall be much obliged if he'll poison his daughter and burn the piano.

MARKET REPORTS

Local Market

Produce lines experienced quite a few changes in price in the local wholesale markets Tuesday to go into effect Wednesday. They were: A drop in cucumbers from 15 to 12 cents a pound; drop in No. 1 walnuts from 34 to 32 cents a pound; pears dropped from $5.00 to $4.50 a box; celery advanced from $1.50 to $2 a dozen; mustard is now 85 cents a dozen; all other bunch vegetables 75 cents a bunch.

Cocoanuts are being brought in to the local market now at a price of $10 a hundred.

Outside of the changes in price of the lines quoted above there were no developments reported in Tuesday's markets.

CHICAGO PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Butter higher, creamery extras 44c. Eggs higher; receipts 3,806 cases; firsts 50@53c. Poultry alive unchanged; fowls 12@20c; turkeys 37c.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The raw sugar market was unchanged at 3.98 1-2 to 4.11 for centrifugals. There were sales of 36,350 bags of Cuba's by the committee to a local refiner at 2 1-2 cents, cost and freight, equal to 4.11 for centrifugal.

The raw sugar futures market was steady early on covering, but after midday eased off under increased selling pressure from trade and commission houses with new crop positions at net low record prices. Final quotations were unchanged to 4 points net lower. December 2.28; March 2.19; May 2.29 and July 2.39.

In refined business continued quiet and prices were unchanged at 5.20 to 5.30 for fine granulated. Trading in refined futures was limited to one lot of November at 5.65, or 5 points above the previous close. Closing bids were 5 to 15 points net lower. December 5.40; March and May 5.25.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Unimportant shares of the railway, steel, oil and utility groups were the conspicuous features of today's contracted and uncertain stock market, taking the place of standard issues.

Buying of the junior rails was stimulated to an extent by the re-organization of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway.

Independent oils, notably Gulf states, which added subsequent to its gain of the previous day were sustained by circumstantial gossip of prospective mergers.

Call money rose from 5 to 5 1-2 per cent in the final hour and was made the occasion of a selling movement in which the tobaccos, Anaconda copper, United fruit, Sears, Roebuck and Western Union were most affected. Sales amounted to 700,000 shares.

Dullness and a lower trend ruled in the principal foreign exchanges. The broad demand for bonds, especially underlying railways, continued, with strength in other domestic issues and several of the foreign division, especially French municipals. Total sales, par value, $18,250,000.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Although cotton markets were firm and rising today, unfinished cotton goods continued dull and easy. Sales of 38½ inch 64x60 print cloths were made at 8½ cents with most holders asking ⅛c higher. Yarns were quiet, spinners asking slight advances to cover high cotton costs. Wool goods were inactive in men's wear and staple dress goods. Fine and fancy lines of dress goods were still being bought for spring. News that burlap mills at Calcutta would continue to operate on a four-day week schedule led to firmer and slightly higher markets. Raw silk was firmer and higher. Wool hosiery sold well at retail and full fashioned goods were sold ahead for some time.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—There was an advance of between $3 and $3.50 per bale in the cotton market here today with January selling up to 17.95, or 70 points above last night's closing quotation and 17 points above the low level of a week ago last Saturday. That delivery at 17.85 with the general market closing very firm at a net advance of 54 to 61 points.

The opening was steady in response to the continued firmness of Liverpool and reiterated reports that Manchester was more hopeful of business with India. After selling about 25 to 35 points net higher, the advance was checked by liquidation of December contracts in preparation for possible notices on Friday and there was some irregularity during the middle of the day. At one time December sold a couple of points below the January price, but on the whole offerings seemed to be quite readily taken and as soon as the pressure of near month liquidation subsided the market showed renewed firmness.

December rallied with the rest of the list, selling up to a premium of 10 or 12 points above January during the afternoon and reports reached the ring of an improved demand with a firmer basis in the south. The rally carried December up to 18.06 and March sold at 17.85 with active months geenrally showing net gains of 60 to 70 points in the late trading. Closing prices were several points off from the best under realizing. Exports today were 13,876, making 2,181,819 so far this season. Port receipts 42,070. U. S. port stocks 1,454,869.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22.—An advance in cotton today started on the opening and persisted throughout the session, the heaviest buying pressure being felt in the last half hour when the list of active months displayed gains over yesterday's close of 60 to 73 points. December trading up to 17.29 cents a pound. Early buyers realized just on the close but last prices were still 53 to 63 points net higher on the day with December at 17.24.

A feature of the day was the widening out of differences between the near and the distant months and the premium on January ove December was considered an important bullish development, since it lessened the chances or large tenders against December contracts by establishing a transfer basis. January traded up to 17.47 and closed at 17.43.

Much of the buying was for the account of shorts but a good demand came from traders on the long side who considered that the increasing number of sections in the western belt reporting the presence of the pink boll worm meant a chance to next season's prospects. Liverpool was much better than due.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Buying by the West and South along with short covering on the firmness in cotton and lard put cottonseed oil higher, closing bids representing gains of 7 to 12 points. Sales 20,00 barrels. Prime crude 7.00 sales; prime summer yellow spot 8.25@8.00; December 8.35; March 8.85; May 9.05, all bid.

LIVERPOOL SPOT COTTON.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 22.—Cotton spot in fair demand; prices steady. Good middling 11.74; fully middling 11.34; middling 10.94; low middling 9.64; good ordinary 7.89; ordinary 7.14. Sales 7,000 bales, including 6,200 American.

MONEY ON CALL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Call money firm; high 5½; low 5; ruling rate 5; closing bid 5; offered at 5½; last loan 5½. Call loans against acceptances 4½. Time loans firmer; 50 days, 5@5½; 9 0days 5@5½; six months 5¼@5½. Prime mercantile paper 5@5¼.

Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—It was a typical scalping market today in the wheat trade with no big dominating factor, bulges brought out selling but the buying power increased on declines. Closing quotations were steady at the same as yesterday's finish to 3-8c higher, December 1.09 1-4 to 1.09 3-8 and May 1.11 to 1.11 1-8. Corn finished 1-4 to 1-2c up, oats off a shade to 1-8@1-4c and provisions unchanged to 17 cents higher.

Good exports and industrial demand gave firmness to the corn market. Oats were relatively dull. Buying of lard, presumably against sales of cottonseed oil appeared to have considerable to do with upturns in the provision market.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 22.—Extremely brisk trading was featured in the cattle division today. Another day of short receipts not only created a stronger demand but brought about an advance in prices. Steers, cows and bulls gained 10 to 15 cents, yearlings were 25 to 50 cents higher and the calf market was steady to 25 cents higher. Receipts amounted to 1,500 head of cattle and 2,000 calves, the calf run including about 1,000 head on through billing. Five cars of steers in one string sold at 6.00; yearlings brought 5.50@5.85, and a good many medium calves went at 5.25.

Hogs lost 10 to 15 cents, but the market was active at the decline. Receipts reached 1,250 head. Order buyers took over a few choice hogs at 7.25 to 7.00. Pigs were 25c higher, the top being 7.50.

COFFEE.

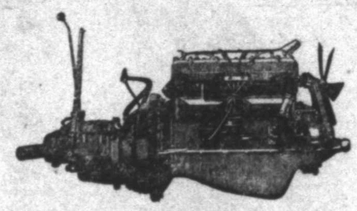

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The market for coffee futures was lower today. No change was reported in the apparent prospect that recent buying of December contracts would stop any notices that might be issued on Friday, but there was liquidation of scattering long accounts in the near months and some trade selling of later deliveries, presumably against cost and freight offers. The market opened unchanged to 2 points lower and sold 5 to 8 points was at a decline of 3 to 8 points. Sales were reported of about 31,000 bags. December 8.42; January 8.30; March 8.07 ;May 7.87; July 7.75; September 7.67.

MEMBERS OF LOCAL BAR AND GUESTS GATHER AT BANQUET TUESDAY NIGHT

Over sixty members of the Wichita County Bar association and their guests, representing the bars of adjoining counties Tuesday night enjoyed a banquet held at the Wichita club. The banquet was the first to be held since last spring and is to be followed by monthly luncheons.

Dr. E. D. Shurter, head of the department of public speaking at the University of Texas, delivered the principal address of the evening which was followed by several talks by guests and several members of the local bar.

Judge John Kay presided as toastmaster. Short talks were made by Judge D. W. Berry of Vernon, J. S. Dickey and C. O. Taylor of Henrietta, W. E. Forgy of Archer City, Judges J. T. Montgomery, R. E. Huff, P. A. Martin, Ed Napier and Attorneys Fred Weeks, W. J. Townsend, W. E. Fitzgerald, R. E. Hardwicke and S. A. L. Morgan of the local bar.

The serious and humorous was intermingled in the numerous toasts, many of which were extemperaneous. Guests expressed their appreciation for the friendly attitude of the members of the local bar while local judges and attorneys expressed the hope that the feeling of co-operation of all members of the bar in this district would be furthered by later meetings.

Speaking on the subject of "Americanization of the Schools," Dr. Shurter outlined a plan now under way to extend the Americanization work now being fostered by the Interscholastic League of Texas until it becomes national in scope.

"In its final analysis Americanization means education for citizenship," the speaker declared "and if we can educate our young in the history of our country, its institutions, its beliefs and principles we need have no fear of its future safety."

The spirit of contest is necessary, the speaker declared, in order to interest young people in anything. He told of the manner in which Americanization principles were being brought to the attention of the young and old throughout the state of Texas by means of the declamation and debating contests fostered by the interscholastic league. He said that the nucleous of an organization had already been formed by which these same Americanization principles would be spread to all parts of the United States in the same manner.

Fred weeks also spoke of the work of which Dr. Shurter is the head and asked that the national plan be given the support of those present when it should be formally launched.

"The best asset any lawyer can have is his reputation for honesty and fair dealing not only with fellow lawyers but with the public at large" declared Judge Montgomery, veteran member of the local bar.

"In my more than thirty years of experience as an attorney, I have never known an attorney to betray a trust of a client and I have never known a court to be biased by corrupt influences."

J. S. Dickey of Henrietta, in a well received talk, plead for a greater spirit of friendliness and co-operation on the part of all members of the bar in the district. Judge Berry expressed the appreciation of the Vernon bar for the courtesies shown by the local bar.

The hope that members of the bar of the district would in the future consent to serve as members of the higher courts of the state was expressed by W. E. Forgy of Archer City.

The following out of town guests attended the banquet: A. J. Anderson, Houston; C. P. Engleking, Electra; Vincent Stine, Henrietta; H. M. Muse, Henrietta; Raymond Sauter, Henrietta; S. M. Library to Sponsor Tree For Christmas

A tree and the lighting effects to go with it have already been secured for the municipal Christmas tree to be sponsored by the board of the Kemp Public library, in order that no child in Wichita Falls go without Christmas.

The offer of the tree came to Mayor Cline, a member of the board, through Mrs. Eli Morgan, Mrs. Morgan planning to include a large tree for this purpose in a shipment of Washington firs.

The lighting effects are planned by P. A. Rodgers, general manager of the local electric company, who told the board that they could have all the juice, and as many and variegated in color and size electric bulbs as they could stick on the tree.

Mrs. J. T. Montgomery, Mrs. J. A. Richolt and Mayor Cline are managers of a committee appointed to handle the tree end of the program, and George Thorburn and Mr. Rogers the lighting end.

COLD WAVE DUE TO ARRIVE WEDNESDAY NOT IN EVIDENCE

Although the severe cold wave predicted for Wichita Falls and immediate section for this morning late last night, appeared to be delayed, very low temperatures were reported at pionts on both the Denver and Northwestern railroads north of this city with temperatures of from 20 to 30 degrees. The lowest reported by local dispatches was at Woodward with 20, while Childress reported around 30 and Altus 35.

Locally the thermometer fell 20 degrees from noon Tuesday until midnight, dropping from 68 to 48 degrees.

Later reports from the Northwestern railroad dispatcher indicated that the clear and calm condition had changed slightly and that cloudy weather is imminent. Some indications of further moderating and possibly of rain, was reported early this morning.

AID FOLLOWS PUBLICATION FAMILY'S NEED

A shiny new buggy for the baby and a job for the father was reported by Mrs. C. E. Ousley to have followed fast on the heels of an article printed in the Records News last week relating the suffering of a seventeen months old child, who was being saved from starvation through the Welfare Council.

The father at that time was out of work and the baby when found by Mrs. Ousley was suffering from the effects of a childrens' complaint which left it to demand simple nourishing foods, which the parents could not buy.

Since the publishing in the Record News of the story of the child's sufferings, Mrs. Ousley reports that the father has been constantly employed and the mother furnished with a buggy in which to transport her child to and from a physician's office.

COLLECTIONS FOR HAYNES FOUNTAIN ABOUT COMPLETE

Collections for erection of a drinking fountain at the Alamo school to be named for Miss Kate Haynes in commemoration of her services in the public schools of this city are reported progressing satisfactorily with prospects bright that the books will be closed within the coming week.

The work of collecting the funds is under the direction of Mrs. L. R. Buchanan. Numerous contributions have been received from school children, and a number of larger subscriptions from patrons.

It is planned that the fountain, when finished, will be an attractive bit of statuary as well as a serviceable fountain where students may quench their thirst.

THIRD VICTIM OF MUNDAY FIRE DIES AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

A. F. Huskinson, about 61 years of age, died Monday night about 10 o'clock at a local hospital as a result of burns and bruises sustained on the night of November 5, when fire destroyed the principle business block of Munday, Texas.

The deceased was severely bruised when struck by falling brick and timbers from a brick building which was torn apart by what was believed to have been a dust explosion. Death, however, was said to have been immediately caused by disease of the heart and to have come unexpectedly.

The widow, two sons and two daughters survive. The body was shipped Tuesday afternoon to Corsicana, where burial is to be either Wednesday or Thursday. One son accompanied the body.
