Poland receives $350 million to repay debt

The Washington Post

Western sources said Sunday that Poland had come up with the $350 million it needed to pay by the end of 1981 to avoid technical default on its huge $26.3 billion in debts to Western governments and banks.

The sources said this information had been given by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski during a visit last week to West Germany. The sources said he also assured the West Germans that Poland would continue to meet its financial obligations.

Earlier, Western banks had refused to provide Poland with the necessary funds, which were required to pay the remainder of last year's interest on the debt.

The sources said that since Poland's hard-currency reserves were virtually nonexistent and since no Western institutions or governments were known to have provided the cash, it was assumed that the $350 million came from within the Soviet Bloc, probably from Moscow itself.

THE POLISH government has made no announcement of the payment and there was no way to confirm the reports.

Polish officials have been telling Western diplomats and journalists privately that a cutoff of assistance from the West inevitably would push Poland to still greater economic reliance on the Soviet Bloc.

Some Western bankers who have long been concerned over the ability of Poland to pay its Western debt on its own have hoped that the Soviet Union might assume responsibility for the debt. It is doubtful, however, whether Moscow would shoulder the entire debt.

Poland had been scheduled to begin negotiations with both the U.S. government and American banks this month on possible rescheduling of Poland's $2 billion debt to the United States.

Immediately after the imposition of martial law on Dec. 13, the Soviet Bloc rushed in to prop up the military government with emergency food, medical and other supplies.

A ranking Communist Party source said Poland had already used up its 1981 quota of Soviet oil imports by mid-December. He said Moscow had allowed Warsaw to draw upon its 1982 oil allotment after martial law was imposed.

LAST SEPTEMBER, the Soviet Union had threatened to reduce sharply supplies of critical raw materials, including oil, unless the Polish authorities succeeded in reasserting control over the Solidarity independent trade union movement.

The Soviet Union is virtually Poland's sole supplier of oil and an important source of other items such as iron ore and natural gas.

In exchange, Poland supplies its Soviet Bloc allies with coal and sulfur. Polish authorities have made it clear that raising the extraction rate of coal is pivotal in their program for economic revival.

One key element has been the reintroduction of the six-day work week in the southern coal mining region of Silesia — a move that reversed a popular gain won by Solidarity last year.

The authorities claim that coal output recently approached the levels reached before the introduction of martial law, even though several mines went on strike immediately after martial law and are still not back in production.

They say an average of 580,000 metric tons a day has been extracted in recent days. The highest daily output before martial law was said to be 625,000 tons.

For many Poles, the statistics may be open to question given their experience during the last 18 months, when Solidarity repeatedly presented evidence that economic figures from earlier periods had been manipulated by the government.

A side effect of the martial law restrictions is the saving of gasoline, the sale of which has been banned to private motorists for the last three weeks.

In order to hinder organized resistance to martial law, the authorities have also banned the sale of other articles including tents, blankets, sleeping bags, shoulder bags, school notebooks, typing paper and writing paper.

THE BANS ARE partly directed at efforts by remnants of the Solidarity organization to circulate underground newsletters, one of which had called for everyone to wear backpacks so the authorities would have trouble locating those worn by Solidarity couriers to deliver their underground materials.

As part of the effort to restrict the flow of information, the government has imposed censorship on foreign journalists and a curfew and travel restrictions on Poles.

Telephones and telexes are still out of service in most of the country. Polish language broadcasts from the West are being jammed.

Reagan returns to settle up with Allen

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan returned from his California vacation Sunday night, still prepared to settle accounts with his embattled national security adviser, Richard V. Allen, and to meet with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters on Air Force One that Reagan will not meet with Allen Monday, as had been expected, but will see him later in the week.

He said presidential counselor Edwin Meese III talked to Allen on the telephone Sunday "in general terms about a determination" of the Allen matter.

Allen has been on administrative leave with pay pending a White House review of his conduct in accepting a $1,000 honorarium from a Japanese magazine and three gift watches from Japanese friends.

Speakes said he could not predict whether the internal review would be completed by the time Allen meets the president, although he said it is quite possible it will be.

Reagan is expected to put Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark in Allen's job, and to try to bring some order to his White House foreign policy-making apparatus by giving Clark expanded powers, including direct access to the president.

WHEN ASKED SUNDAY who would replace Clark at the State Department, Speakes said: "I haven't even heard any good rumors."

Reagan refused to comment on the Allen matter as he was boarding Air Force One in California Sunday for the return trip. Allen could not be reached for comment, but he said Friday that he had not been informed of any plans to replace him.

The president also will try to deal this week with another foreign policy headache — the matter of winning support from its allies for U.S. sanctions on the Soviet and Polish governments in response to a crackdown on the Solidarity movement in Poland. Reagan's meeting with Schmidt Tuesday is expected to focus on the issue.

Like other European allies, Schmidt has described the crisis as an internal Polish dispute and has suggested that U.S.-imposed economic sanctions may be counterproductive. The chancellor, vacationing in Florida before his meeting with Reagan, said last week that West Germany would "find it very difficult" to impose sanctions on Poland.

A SIMILAR VIEWPOINT regarding sanctions was offered Sunday by George F. Kennan, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union.

"It's very difficult for me to see that any positive results could be obtained from the sanctions imposed on the Soviet Union," Kennan said on "Meet the Press" (NBC). He said the U.S. sanctions "are mere pinpricks" to the Soviets that "have heightened the tensions and the ill feeling between the two governments."

Kennan, an authority on American relations with the Soviet Union, said, "there are limits to what we can do about the Polish situation."

"I am persuaded that if these reform movements continue to proceed gradually, without raising abrupt challenges to Soviet prestige ... they can continue to make good progress — as indeed they have done to date," he said.

But former national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, interviewed Sunday on "Face the Nation" (CBS), said the United States should increase economic sanctions against the Soviet Union "if the suppression of Solidarity and Polish society continues." For example, cutting of phosphate deliveries to the Soviets "would be a signal that we might be moving further in the future if the Soviets were to become actively involved" in Poland, he said.

BRZEZINSKI SAID the upcoming meeting between Reagan and Schmidt is important because it will give Reagan a chance to argue that German hopes for reunification, as well as the future of the entire Soviet bloc and of East-West relations are at stake in the Polish crisis.

FBI probing 1,400 public officials

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI has 1,400 public officials under investigation for possible corruption, bureau Director William Webster said Sunday. Those under investigation include appointed and elected officials on all levels of government, Webster said.

Webster said the officials were being investigated because they are believed "to be utilizing their offices for corrupt purposes."

In Oklahoma alone, Webster said, 135 people have been convicted or pleaded guilty "in a statewide pervasive practice at the local level of county commissioners accepting bribes or kickbacks."

He said the FBI began such investigations because in many cases, the people responsible for prosecuting officials were there "at the sufferance or through the efforts of the people under investigation. It makes it very difficult for them to do that job."

Also during the program, Webster was asked how many Soviet KGB agents are operating in the United States.

"That's a classified figure, but if you take 35 percent of all diplomats in this country, you'd not be far off," he said, estimating that there are 1,200 diplomats in the United States.

In addition, he said, there are others who are not diplomats, "illegals" who are in the United States under other cover.

He said all these engaged through their intelligence sources in technology transfer efforts.

Asked if a Libyan "hit squad" ever really entered the United States, Webster said the FBI never confirmed it.

Asked if the reports of such a hit squad, supposedly assigned to assassinate President Reagan or other top U.S. officials, could have been planted to put the government "into a tizzy" and even make it "look somewhat silly," Webster replied, "That's always a possibility."

But the FBI director, interviewed on "This Week With David Brinkley" (ABC), said bureau investigators "certainly had enough information and continue to receive enough information to require us to take appropriate investigative steps, and we will continue to do that." The publicity over the threats, he added, isn't making the job easy.

"I gather you would have been happier had it never been made public at all?" he was asked.

"Yes, I would," Webster replied.

France signs agreement to sell Egypt 20 Mirage fighter jets

The Washington Post

CAIRO — Egypt signed a $1 billion agreement with France Sunday for the purchase of 20 Mirage 2000 jet fighters, a deal that may have repercussions on the additional sale of U.S. military aircraft to this country.

Announcing the agreement at the end of a three-day visit here, French Defense Minister Charles Hernu said his government will finance the sale of this "first batch" of the latest Mirage model to Egypt but said terms for the purchase of additional planes would have to be discussed later.

Egypt had hoped to clinch a $2.4 billion deal to buy 40 to 60 of the sophisticated French warplanes, but there was no indication the two sides had reached an agreement so far on a larger arms package.

Nonetheless, the accord represents a major accomplishment for France, which has been seeking contracts abroad for the purchase of the Mirage 2000 to meet the costs of its production in larger numbers.

It could mean that Egypt will now use its scarce resources to buy the French aircraft rather than seeking to obtain more American-made F-16 jets, the first of which are about to arrive here from the United States.

Under the present $3 billion U.S. military-aid package for this country, Egypt is to obtain 40 F-16 aircraft, presently the most sophisticated jet in its air force. But local press reports prior to the latest French arms deal said the Egyptian military wanted the United States to provide another 100 to 150 F-16s.

The main problem for Egypt has been to find financing for its arms purchases, aimed at replacing its outdated and often immobilized Soviet equipment, particularly planes.

Grocery prices remained unchanged during 1981

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The last month of 1981 brought only a small increase in grocery bills, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which shows that prices at the end of the year were lower than at the beginning.

The good news was tempered, however, by the fact that the drop was due mainly to a single item — sugar. When sugar was removed from the marketbasket totals, the AP survey found prices almost unchanged through 1981.

Economists are predicting that food prices — which have risen less than most other items during 1981 — will continue to provide a bright spot in the inflation picture for 1982.

THE AP SURVEY covers 14 food and non-food products, selected at random. Prices were checked on March 1, 1973, at one supermarket in each of 13 cities, and have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. A 15th item — chocolate chip cookies — originally was included in the marketbasket, but was dropped from the list when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

Among the findings of the latest price check:

—The marketbasket bill went up during December at the checklist store in seven cities, rising an average of 1.8 percent. The bill went down at the checklist store in six cities, dropping an average of 1.6 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bill increased an average of two-tenths of a percent last month. That compared with a rise of half a percent in November.

—Comparing prices today with those a year ago, the AP found that the marketbasket bill at the checklist store — including sugar — dropped an average of 5.9 percent. Without sugar, the bill dropped an average of half a percent. In 1980 — when sugar prices were rising sharply — the marketbasket total rose 14.5 percent as sugar was included and 8.2 percent when it was not. Because the AP survey results are not weighted to reflect actual family spending, a sharp increase or decrease in one item — like sugar — has more impact on the marketbasket totals than it does on family budgets.

—THE AP FOUND prices for pork chops, coffee and detergent went up during December. Prices of chopped chuck and eggs generally declined. Beef prices generally have been stable this year because of large supplies which reflect a cyclical increase in cattle production. Supplies are expected to increase again next year, according to the National Cattlemen's Association. Cattlemen in general have been losing money for most of the past two years — losses which would tend to discourage increased production. The cattlemen's group notes, however, that previous increases in herd size make another increase in meat supplies inevitable. Pork producers, however, can increase or decrease supplies much more quickly since hogs grow to maturity in much less time than cattle. They have cut output over the last year and pork prices are beginning to rise.

Over-all food prices had been expected to rise as much as 15 percent in 1981 because of 1980's drought. There were bumper corn and wheat harvests, however, as well as large supplies of meat. Now, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is predicting an 8 percent rise in food prices for 1981 followed by an increase of between 5 percent and 9 percent in 1982.

A look at the items in the AP survey showed a few more increases during December than during November. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

The day of the week on which price checks were made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used. Products temporarily out of stock on the survey date were not included in totals.

THE AP DID NOT TRY to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more one place than another. The only comparisons were in percentages of increase or decrease — saying an item went up 10 percent one place and 6 percent in another.

Young's priority: Seek funds to generate jobs

ATLANTA (AP) — Andrew Young says his top priority upon becoming Atlanta's second black mayor will be to seek private funds to generate jobs.

He also pledged to improve public safety in a city haunted by the deaths of 28 young blacks over a 22-month period, although he offered no specific ways to accomplish either goal.

Young, an ordained minister who was President Jimmy Carter's ambassador to the United Nations as well as a former congressman, will take the oath of office at 5:30 p.m. today. The inauguration will be followed by a public reception and a $100-a-plate, black-tie dinner for 2,500 invited friends and political supporters.

"I see my first priority as trying to find a new infusion of capital," Young said Sunday. "Attracting a major private sector infusion of capital is for me essential, and how I do that I'm not sure. But I've been working on lots of things and which one will pan out, I don't know yet."

"That infusion of capital basically is jobs. You've got to find a way to generate job opportunities in this city. The capital could be a relocation of plants or new buildings," he said.

On increased safety, he said, "I do want to be involved with the law enforcement in this city, because I think that we're entitled not only to be safe, but to feel safe."

Young has been lecturing and running a consulting firm since he resigned his U.N. job because of a controversy over unauthorized meetings with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

He succeeds Maynard Jackson, who was barred by law from seeking a third consecutive term. Young defeated a liberal white candidate, state Rep. Sidney Marcus, in a runoff election.

Elsewhere in Georgia today, Edward M. McIntyre will be sworn in as the first black mayor of Augusta. The former Richmond County commissioner succeeds Lewis A. Newman, a three-term incumbent who could not seek re-election.

Young said his inaugural address will be a message to the world that his administration signals a new beginning for Atlanta after the suffering brought on by the 28 killings of young blacks.

Meanwhile, jury selection in Wayne B. Williams' trial on murder charges in the slayings of two young blacks continued. He is charged with killing Nathaniel Cater and Jimmy Ray Payne, whose deaths were investigated by a special police task force looking into the 28 slayings.

"They're really sort of competing media events," Young said. "Atlanta is a very visible place, and the eyes of the world are riveted on us. The Williams trial emphasizes the shame, the negative that everybody is focusing on. I want the inauguration to be an uplifting occasion."

The Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and two choirs were to provide music for the inauguration.

Critics have charged that his inaugural plans were too grand, but Young responded by saying, "It's for the people of Atlanta."

Young, an ordained United Church of Christ minister, was one of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s top lieutenants in the civil rights struggle and led the 1963 demonstration in Birmingham, Ala.

After winning state lottery millionaire wants real job

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Like many other unemployed people trying to track down work, Paul Smolak resolved on New Year's Eve to find a job — even though he's a millionaire, set to receive $50,000 every July for the next 20 years courtesy of the Pennsylvania Lottery.

"I've been looking everywhere. But you know things are off when some places will take applications for one hour once a week," said Smolak, 31, who was laid off indefinitely in August from his job delivering beer.

"I'm not a brain surgeon or anything, but I've had two years of college," he said in an interview Sunday. "All I want is to make a living and be in a retirement fund."

Smolak, who lives with his parents in Creighton, just northeast of Pittsburgh, was laid off six weeks after coming up a big winner in the lottery. Although he had worked at the distributor for about five years, he had the least seniority.

"I felt bad about it (the layoff)," he said. "I've been laid off at all the companies I've been with. I've always been the last in and the first out."

THE LOTTERY payoff was a stroke of good luck, Smolak admits, but it occasionally worked against him during job interviews.

"Some of them know (about the winnings), and some of them don't," he said. "Some of the places

I've gone, people look at me kind of funny."

Smolak, who is single, never considered an early retirement, even after he won last July 10.

"Hey, I'm 31, what was I going to do?" he asked.

Since his first payoff, Smolak has traveled to eastern Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C., taking along his parents and older sister. He's also bought some new clothes and is considering buying a house. But that's been the extent of his spending.

Smolak, who receives unemployment benefits, said he spends most of his time knocking on doors in search of work in southwestern Pennsylvania, an area reeling from numerous steel industry-related layoffs.

"I'm not going to lose anything or starve," he said. "But inactivity isn't any good for you, either."

DESPITE HIS more than four-month hiatus from work, Smolak realizes he's better off than the next unemployed fellow down the line.

"I'm thankful. There's a lot of basic pressures that people have, and a lot of that is off," he said. "But I've got new pressures — taxes, investments, people waiting for me to do something stupid, in investments or in my personal life."

Rehnquist home from hospital after drug reaction treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist is back home from a hospital where he was treated for a withdrawal reaction to a cut in the dosage of a drug he was taking for back pain, a doctor says.

Rehnquist, 57, was released from George Washington University Hospital on Sunday. He had suffered temporary "disturbances in mental clarity" but is "in a clear mental state now," said hospital spokesman Dr. Dennis O'Leary.

The drug Rehnquist was taking was not identified by either O'Leary or by Dr. Hugo Rizzoli, who had ordered the dosage reduction.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to reconvene Jan. 11, but a court spokesman, Barrett McGurn, said he did not know when Rehnquist would return to work.

The justice was appointed to the court in 1971 by President Richard Nixon. He has suffered chronic back pain for 10 years.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Cecylia Barczyk, a top Polish cellist who's awaiting word on a request for political asylum in the United States, will play concerts next month to raise money for food and medical supplies for Poland.

Ms. Barczyk, 31, announced Sunday the formation of a 56-member committee which will support her drive to aid Poland, which has been under martial law since Dec. 13.

The Committee for Human Rights and Democracy in Poland has a membership which includes well-known musicians and university faculty members, said Carl Borowski, a spokesman for Ms. Barczyk.

Ms. Barczyk said she had booked Carnegie Hall in New York for Feb. 5 to begin her concert tour.

Borowski said Ms. Barczyk plans concerts in other major U.S. cities, as well as several foreign countries, including Australia, Canada, Switzerland and Brazil.

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney, blamed by his critics for breaking up the Beatles 11 years ago, rejects the charge and says that of all the "Fab Four," he wanted most to keep the group going.

"I certainly wasn't responsible for splitting up the Beatles as some people suggest," the 39-year-old superstar said in an interview in today's edition of The Times of London. "In fact, I was the last one to come to that view. I'd wanted us to tour, to bring us closer together again."

McCartney, who with the late John Lennon wrote most of the Beatles' music, also said he and Lennon did not dislike one another, as has been suggested. However, McCartney he acknowledges that Lennon's public criticisms of him in the early 1970s shocked and hurt him, and also inspired him to prove he could be a success in his own right with the group Wings.

He rarely answered Lennon's challenges, he said, because he had little chance of matching his former writing partner's renowned wit.

"It all gets absorbed into the myth, your image builds up, it gets into plays and books and it becomes the truth," said McCartney. "Except that it wasn't."

Lennon, who was shot to death outside his apartment in New York on Dec. 8, 1980, actually liked him, McCartney said.

Humane group denounces rabbit roundup

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A spokesman for an animal protection group said Sunday he is outraged by the inhumane action he saw at a weekend jack rabbit roundup in eastern Idaho.

"I saw people standing about 15 feet apart throwing live rabbits up and trying to hit them with baseball bats, sticks and ax handles," said Michael Bailey, spokesman for Fund for Animals.

Bailey said he intended to file charges Monday against individuals he said he saw mistreating the rabbits.

Orvin Twitchell, a farmer from Mud Lake, Idaho, who has been acting as spokesman for farmers who have been slaughtering rabbits to save farm crops, disputed Bailey's account of the Saturday's roundup.

"I was right there and I didn't see anything like that," he said by telephone. "There were television crews right there near the slaughter pen and if anything like that had happened, they would have seen it."

Bob Ziel, a reporter for KID-TV in Idaho Falls, said he was near the slaughter pen for part of the roundup Saturday and did not see any incidents such as Bailey described.

Farmers said the eastern Idaho farm area is overrun by wild jack rabbits that have destroyed hay and farm crops worth $10 million.

THE ROUNDUP was the fifth by the farmers in less than a month, which the farmers estimated have led to the death or removal of 55,000 wild jack rabbits, most of them killed with clubs.

Bailey, of Portland, Ore., has been protesting the roundups, particularly the method of killing the animals.

He said he posed as a farmer Saturday and went into the pen where the rabbits were being slaughtered, although the public and news media have been restricted from the pens during most of the drives.

"We can document numerous instances of cruelty and inhumane treatment of rabbits," said Bailey.

He said he and his friends rescued nine rabbits, taking them back to a hotel and keeping them overnight in the bathtub. He said he planned to treat the rabbits and release them.

Twitchell said Bailey was only trying to appeal to "bleeding hearts" to generate contributions to his organization, which Bailey says has 120,000 members.

"I DON'T KNOW why he's going to such lengths to make us look bad," said Twitchell. "Unless he's trying to raise more money."

she Goyette of Hamburg, Kan.; two brothers, Harold Goyette of Grand Kan. and Vernon Goyette of Houston, Kan.; and four grandchildren.

Laotian tribesmen put training to good use

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Half a world away from the mountain jungles of Laos, members of a tribe with a reputation for bravery are putting their military training to use as security guards in urban jungles.

The Hmong "fought under CIA auspices all through the Vietnamese War in the '60s and into the '70s," says Chet Harris, vice president for operations of the Lao-Hmong Security Agency, set up to provide employment for refugees of the close-knit Laotian tribe.

"The only skills they really had when they arrived here, the majority of them, were farming skills and their service in the military," said Harris. "There are something like 12,000 of them in Southern California."

The Hmong were recruited by the thousands by the CIA to fight the Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese armies, and fought the communists for 13 years. The lost battle gained them a reputation for courage and resilience.

After the war, more than 60,000 of the sometimes polygamous tribesmen fled to Thailand, and from there some found their way to the United States. The Hmong have been in the news in recent months following reports that 25 were among 38 Southeast Asian refugees to die of an unexplained affliction that strikes people as they sleep.

Harris said the guard agency, which completed four-week training for its first class and put graduates to work in September, was established because of the concerns of relatives active in helping resettle Laotian and Vietnamese refugees.

The training, in English, covers the law regarding citizens' arrests, job conduct and use of tear gas. No guns are carried.

Harris said that since organizing for the security agency began last March, the company has grown slowly, with about 18 to 20 employees so far. A dozen are on guard duty and the others work in a new branch, doing maintenance in large buildings. Wages range from $4.50 an hour for guards up to $7 for experienced maintenance workers.

"It's growing," Harris said, adding the agency's name has sparked "a lot of conversation" and a mixed reaction.

Back-door spending

In the battle against the deficit, Congress and the administration have confined themselves to wrangling with appropriations for those programs covered by the federal budget. They have virtually ignored the two other major drains on the federal Treasury: "off-budget" expenditures, which cost the Treasury a net of $20 billion last year (nearly a third of the total federal deficit), and "tax expenditures," which under the Reagan administration will cost far more than that.

Tax expenditures are the funds Congress provides through tax write-offs and exemptions for activities it wishes to encourage. Off-budget expenditures are the funds spent, without the usual appropriations procedures, on government loans and loan guarantees and on certain government-sponsored enterprises. In their effect on the deficit, both kinds of expenditures are indistinguishable from direct budget outlays. But only the budget outlays must be reviewed each year by congress and traded off against each other when money is short. Tax expenditures and off-budget expenditures are practically immune to oversight.

Nor is there any sign that the current budget crisis will change this absurd situation. Despite testimony from former congressmen and government officials that tax expenditures "are nothing more than spending in disguise," Congress has refused to act.

Attempts to reduce the government's off-budget spending have been no more successful. The Office of Management and Budget, for instance, failed several times this year to get the president and Congress to prevent off-budget abuses by limiting the access of federal agencies to the off-budget Federal Financing Bank (FFB).

The FFB is only supposed to coordinate and package government loans, but it does so by buying the loans from the agencies that make them. These agencies' books, as a result, look as if they hadn't yet spent the full amounts Congress authorized. And the agencies can, thus, go on making new loans — and selling them to the FFB — almost indefinitely. A recent investigation by the Wall Street Journal found that the Farmers Home Administration, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had all used FFB to parlay certain budgeted allotments into off-budget expenditures many times as great.

The problem with "off-budget" spending is not that Congress has created this separate budgeting category to deal with the special bookkeeping requirements of government loan revolving funds and such. Rather, the problem is that both Congress and the administration have abused this bookkeeping convenience to circumvent the usual appropriations process, and neither has been willing to create an effective system of off-budget oversight in its place. Congress has placed entire agencies "off-budget" — like the Rural Electrification Administration — just to avoid scrutiny. And both Democratic and Republican administrations have avoided debate over unpopular expenditures by calling them "loans" and getting them paid by the off-budget FFB.

Until Congress is willing to exert control, and the administration to allow congressional control, over off-budget spending and tax expenditures, their complaints about deficits will have a hollow ring. And their success in reducing deficits will be minimal. No matter how closely they guard against excessive spending in the regular budget, they can't protect the Treasury with the back door wide open.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Jan. 4, the fourth day of 1982. There are 361 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 4, 1974, President Nixon rejected the Senate Watergate Committee's subpoenas seeking White House tapes and documents.

On this date: In 1932, the Indian government introduced emergency powers as the National Congress was declared illegal and Mahatma Gandhi was arrested.

In 1944, Allied forces launched an attack east of Casimo, Italy, during World War II.

In 1948, the Union of Burma became an independent republic.

And in 1951, North Korean and communist Chinese forces took Seoul, Korea.

Ten years ago: Maine Sen. Edmund Muskie formally entered the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Five years ago: Democrats chose Robert Byrd of West Virginia as Senate Majority Leader.

Today's birthdays: actress Jane Wyman is 68; former CIA Director William Colby is 62; former heavyweight boxing champ Floyd Patterson is 47.

Thought for Today: "I have found that most people are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." — Abraham Lincoln.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Navy wants to spend more for less sailor

WASHINGTON — At a time of budget cuts for the underfed, the Navy wants to spend more money on the overweight. The admirals think it would cost about $300,000 to flatten some of the bulging bellies that are popping Navy buttons.

A confidential memo estimates that "13 to 15 percent of all active duty naval personnel are over maximum weight standards." This is attributed more to compulsive gluttony than to the palatability of Navy food.

There are some 23,000 sailors who just can't seem to stop stuffing themselves. Their eating habits have brought them to the point, declares the memo, that they "face disciplinary and administrative actions, including discharge or re-enlistment refusal."

Congressional waste-watchers, however, are concerned about the Navy's waist-watchers. In fact, the House Defense Appropriations Subcommittee recently rejected the Navy's request for a $300,000 budget increase for "physical fitness programs" intended to slim down its sailors.

The Navy tried standard methods of getting the tubbies to trim down. Eat less and exercise more, they were told. But this didn't work.

Then someone suggested that maybe it was a psychological problem, an obsession like alcoholism or drug abuse. Food "addicts" would respond to treatment like that in the Navy's well-regarded alcohol and drug rehabilitation programs.

A pilot program for fat control was set up in Jacksonville, Fla. Personnel with acute overeating tendencies were given six weeks of "behavior modification" training. Part of the regimen was "positive control" — constant supervision to prevent clandestine visits to the nearest fast-food outlet.

But investigators for Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., concluded that the Navy had gone overboard in its zeal to restrain the compulsive gourmands. For instance, my associate Lucette Lagrado learned that participants in the program were being picked up and chauffeured to evening meetings of Overeaters Anonymous in special vans.

Why, the congressional watchdogs wanted to know, couldn't the overweight sailors drive their own cars? Not possible, replied the brass hats. Overeaters had to be "under positive control at ALL TIMES."

Congressional investigators also questioned the need to use "med-evac" equipment and personnel to transport the fatties to the Jacksonville treatment center. Medical evacuation is supposed to be limited to emergency situations only, the congressional investigators pointed out.

Dismayed by such findings, Congress deleted the Navy's requested $300,000 budget increase.

But the admirals haven't given up. They're planning to return to Capitol Hill with the argument that thousands of overweight sailors affect the Navy's combat readiness. They figure that should give their fat-control program a little more muscle.

INSTANT REHABILITATION: Not every convicted felon can hope to have a government contract waiting for him when he gets out of the pen. But Jerome S. Brower is a special case.

Brower is an explosives manufacturer who pleaded guilty to supplying munitions and expert instructors to Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi and lying about his involvement with renegade ex-CIA agents Frank Terpil and Edwin Wilson. He was fined $5,000 and served four months of a five-year prison term.

But before he copped his plea — while he was merely under indictment — Brower snared a $97,000 contract with the U.S. Bureau of Mines for a device he invented that can remove dangerous unignited explosives from mine sinkholes.

Bureau of Mines officials, who apparently don't read the newspapers, were warned by private sources about Brower's involvement with international terrorism. But they were apparently reassured when told by the regional solicitor general in Denver that Brower was technically not a criminal, just an indicted suspect. A few weeks later, Brower pleaded guilty.

Now that he is indeed a certified criminal, Mines officials have changed their tune. They told my reporter Monica McKenna that Brower is only a consultant for the contractor — Jerome S. Brower Associates. However, the company still lists Brower as its president and takes messages for him. Neither Brower nor his attorney returned our calls.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Edward F. King Jr. is a pension expert who has learned about the Washington merry-go-round the hard way. Instead of grabbing the brass ring, he got thrown off. King was after an appointment as head of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., and had reason to believe he would get it. He had letters of recommendation from high Reagan aides, even a personal nod of approval from the president himself. He endured 11 interviews over 14 months.

Now he's discovered that the letters of recommendation were probably identical to those written for some of the 14 other candidates for the job. White House staffers say it's nothing unusual for them to recommend more than one person for the same appointment. Meanwhile, the incumbent Carter appointee stays in the job.

Financiers selling rope to hangman

I'm going to tell you something and I hope it makes you as sick and as angry as it makes me.

I'm going to tell you what an American banker said when he was interviewed by the Wall Street Journal on the trouble in Poland.

"Who knows what political system works? The only test we care about is: Can they pay their bills."

The man who said that is Thomas Theobald, senior executive vice president of the international division of Citibank of New York. I want you to visualize this man, comfortable in his plush office in this free land, saying that while Polish patriots are dying in the snow, beaten and shot to death for no other reason than they had the courage to ask for just a little of the freedom Thomas Theobald enjoys.

Now the only difference between Thomas Theobald and most of the other international bankers is that Theobald is either more candid or less cautious than the rest. They all believe exactly what he expressed. They are a sorry lot in my opinion and if their health and welfare depended on my good will, would be poor risks for a life insurance salesman.

They aren't fit to wipe the snow off Lech Walesa's boots.

These are the men who have financed communism. These are the men who have surrounded every president since Woodrow Wilson and preached appeasement. These are the men who have preached globalism and who hope one day to merge the United States into a world government.

These are the men you can thank for the fact that a backward, inefficient dictatorship now possesses the means to incinerate you and your children. These are the men who sell the rope to the hangman. These are the men who supply the Soviet KGB with the computers to facilitate tyranny, with the truck factories to provide mobility to the army, with the precision ball-bearing grinding machines to give the Soviet missiles accuracy, with the credit to buy the technology and the grain to store for time of war. These are the men Lenin spoke about when one of his fellow thugs asked facetiously, "Where will we get the rope to hang the capitalists?" "They will sell it to us," Lenin said.

These are the men who generate hate for America among the peoples of the world faster than we can undo it. They like authoritarian governments. Like the men in the Kremlin, they view people as merely economic units. What counts is can they pay their bills?

These are the men who didn't help pressure Hanoi to release American prisoners of war because they might want to do business with Hanoi after the war. These are the men who have tried for 32 years to undermine the State of Israel lest the presence of a humane democracy disrupt their business deals with feudal tyrannies.

These are the men who invest in the industries which make a profit on your attempt to defend yourself against communism and who make a profit on investments in communist states. Their front groups, which attempt to influence and which do influence government policy, are the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission.

The American people will never defeat communism so long as they are duped into financing both sides of the conflict so international bankers can make a profit. How would you feel if you were a Polish worker and in one ear you hear President Reagan's speeches of sympathy and in the other you hear American bankers saying they don't care what happens to you as long as they get their pound of flesh?

The greatest threat to our freedom is within our own borders.

Begin's Merry Christmas wish nice, but more is needed

WASHINGTON — A private Christmas message to President Reagan from Prime Minister Menachem Begin shows an Israeli desire to ease the impact of Begin's harsh Dec. 20 attack on the administration, but what Reagan really wants is progress on the West Bank autonomy talks.

Though Begin's gesture was as close to an apology as he could come, it in no way changes the administration's present Mideast planning. To keep pressure on Israel for a workable West Bank autonomy agreement. That has had the highest priority here both before and after the ceremony unleashed on Washington by the Israeli prime minister.

What aroused White House interest about Begin's Christmas message was that he took the initiative himself, with no prodding from aides. He asked U.S. Ambassador Sam Lewis to send the greetings the day after his veiled charge that "anti-semitic propaganda" has been used by the administration in repeated U.S.-Israeli clashes of the past six months. The charge deeply angered Ronald Reagan.

That such a normal gesture as "Merry Christmas" was taken seriously as Begin's first step to narrow the breach between Washington and Jerusalem proves how dangerously wide that breach is. With the new strategic agreement suspended by Reagan, Israel is on notice that the U.S. "is going to measure everything Begin does," in the words of a high administration official. That most importantly includes West Bank autonomy.

High-placed word is being dropped here that if the Egyptian-Israeli autonomy talks do not soon start moving ahead, the U.S. might be compelled to seek other avenues for a solution to the future of 1.3 million Palestinian Arabs who live in the West Bank and Gaza. Even if that other avenue did not include Saudi Arabia's temporarily derailed 8-point plan, any sign that the U.S. might be thinking of new ways outside the Camp David accords to speed the autonomy talks would be anathema to Begin.

Reagan is firming up his resolve to move the autonomy talks off dead center. He talked to Saudi oil minister Zaki Yamani on Dec. 18 and learned that Prince Fahd, the real head of the Saudi government, was once again postponing a state visit to Washington. One reason: Uncertainty about the durability of the Washington-Riyadh axis in the face of West Bank stalemate and Israeli troublemaking.

Mideast diplomats insist that the autonomy breakthrough must come before Israel pulls out of Sinai by the April 25 deadline. If not, Egypt may be forced to harden its position toward Israel by pressures inside Egypt (the same pressures that led to Anwar Sadat's murder) and throughout the Arab world. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, whose own plan for eventual solution of the West Bank is one of Washington's best-kept secrets, agrees.

So Haig is now sifting the names of several prominent Middle East specialists for a possible "personal emissary" to be sent to Cairo and Jerusalem as his autonomy agent. On the list are Brent Scowcroft, former President Ford's national security aide; Joseph Sisco, under secretary of state for political affairs during the Henry Kissinger regime; and Winston Lord, another former Haig deputy and now president of the Foreign Policy Association.

Haig has been under Arab pressure for months to add an American hotfoot to Israel to shake the autonomy negotiations off dead center. But the Egyptians have quietly counseled against a White House envoy, such as former autonomy envoys Robert Strauss and Sol Linowitz. Egypt worries about political pressures on the White House.

For Egyptian President Mubarak, that makes sense. The White House has always been the most rewarding target of Israeli political pressures. The State Department, on the other hand, is accused of partiality toward the Arab side.

A Haig decision to follow this course would mean that he is close to deciding also on an American bottom line for the West Bank: Just how much territory should Israel be allowed for its occupation armies and what autonomy powers should be handed over to the Palestinians? The Reagan administration has never revealed where it stands on these explosive issues, but once it decides, the special emissary would be used as Haig's traveling salesman at the sterile autonomy negotiations.

That rules out any quick, easy resolution of the political crisis between Israel and the U.S. The strategic agreement remains in limbo, soon to be far overshadowed by the battle for the West Bank. Reagan was pleased with Begin's "Merry Christmas," but Christmas is now over.

Mexico's gas-guzzlers are ambushed at pump

By DIAL TORGERSON
(c) 1982, Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — The big, gas-guzzling, American car — which had found one of its last homes in Mexico, a land of vast distances and cheap fuel — has been ambushed at the gas pump.

The price of gasoline has doubled here. And, in a sudden concern over the environment, the government has issued a decree that would, by 1984, bar the manufacture of every young Mexican's dream: the V-8 engine car.

There were 300,000 cars manufactured here in 1980, and although figures are not in yet for 1981, the total will probably come to around 400,000. Subsidiaries of Ford, Chrysler and General Motors here made most of them, and more than half were the kind of V-8s the United States last mass-produced in the mid-1970s.

Unhindered by even the most rudimentary smog devices, the Mexican-made versions of Yankee V-8s cruised Mexico's long, open roads burning regular gas that cost 42 cents a gallon — until Dec. 21. That was when Pemex, the government-owned national petroleum company, announced that prices at the gas pump would more than double.

"That means," a Pemex spokesman said, "that our prices are now about equal to those on the American side of the border. Regular is now about a dollar a gallon, extra non-leaded about a dollar and half."

It hurt U.S. motorists in border states who had been accustomed to crossing to Mexican frontier cities like Tijuana or Ciudad Juarez to fill their tanks. But it was a bigger blow to Mexican motorists, who thought that their oil-rich nation would support them forever in the manner of driving to which they had become accustomed.

An American who drove his four-year-old Chevrolet V-8 from Los Angeles to Mexico City in November — hoping Pemex prices would underwrite the use of the American dinosaur — was awakened each dawn by motorists warming up their rumbling V-8s, a roar little heard in the streets of America for a decade.

"I bought a V-8 because I wanted air conditioning in Mexico City," said an American affiliated with a U.S. bank. "Mexico is above 7,000 feet, and they say you lose five horsepower with an air-conditioner for every 500 feet above 5,000."

"So now I'm stuck with a car that gives me eight miles to the gallon in Mexico City," he complained.

Mexico City Mayor Carlos Hank Gonzalez, whose city has one of the worst smog problems in the world, defended the increase in gasoline prices. "It was necessary, because we have been burning our national wealth and dirtying our air," Gonzalez said. The mayor added that he would seek methods to encourage the use of mass transportation instead of private autos in 1982.

Few have pity for the plight of the nation's gas-buyers, who after all, are members of the economically better-off motoring public. The increased profits to the government oil monopoly should allow it to expand without borrowing abroad as heavily as it has been forced to do in the past. And, because the government also taxes Pemex sales, the increased revenue should produce funds for development projects benefiting the whole nation.

"The gasoline price increase will affect mainly the higher and middle classes and they have enough resources to pay for it," said Miguel de la Madrid, the government economist who is running almost unopposed for the Mexican presidency in the 1982 election. "I see these price changes as a needed measure to strengthen the financial situation of Pemex. To make it less dependent on foreign debts for its expansion."

Pemex has been suffering decreased profits — despite the fact that Mexico is fourth in the world in proven hydrocarbon reserves — because of the 1981 drop in world oil prices.

When Pemex bucked the downward market trend by attempting to increase prices for its oil exports, many of its customers canceled contracts, and Pemex finally had to cut back to the world price. The only place it could turn for profits was the internal market.

"In 1980, Pemex subsidized the national market to the extent of 200 billion pesos, an amount considerably higher than its total sales abroad." (Each liter of gasoline bought in Mexico for 2.8 pesos, at the old rate, could be sold in the world market for three or four times that amount," Sen. Fausto Zapata Cordero, an adviser to President Jose

Lopez Portillo, said.

"Gasoline consumption has almost doubled since 1977 and this just cannot continue," an Industrial Development Ministry official said.

One reason Mexico has been subsidizing the nation's gasoline users was to postpone the impact on inflation sure to result from a gas price hike. Government experts had predicted a 25 percent annual inflation rate for 1981.

By Christmas week the spiral of inflation had already begun. First the taxi drivers in Mexico City raised their fares by at least 50 percent. Producers of farm products did the same, blaming higher gasoline costs.

"The shippers, the merchants, the taxi drivers, all are taking advantage of the rise in gas prices to increase prices," said a Pemex official. Estimates of 1982 inflation are not in yet but economists fear it will soar into the 30 percent range.

Seven New Mexico WCs are planned

Seven wildcats have been scheduled in the New Mexico counties of Lea, Chaves, and Eddy. Also, one Abo gas well has been completed in Chaves County.

LEA WILDCATS

The Superior Oil Co., The Woodlands, has staked a 15,000-foot Abo (Pennsylvanian) wildcat, 18 miles southeast of Halfway.

The project is the No. 2 Triste Draw Federal, located 1,980 feet from the south, and 2,480 feet from the east line of section 14, township 23 south, range 32 east.

It is 1/8-mile west of the same firm's No. 1 Triste Draw Federal, a 12,193-foot Wolfcamp oil discovery.

CHAVES VENTURES

Stevens Operating Corp., Roswell, staked two Abo wildcats in Chaves County.

The No. 1 Helen Collins is scheduled for 4,500 feet, and is located 1,980 feet from the south, and 935 feet from the west line of section 5, township 7 south, range 26 east.

IRION TESTS

Ike Lovelady Inc., Midland, will drill an 8,900-foot wildcat outcrop two miles east of Barnhart.

The test is the No. 1 Linthicum, located 2,310 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 35, WCRS survey.

It is one mile east of 8,916-foot Ellenburger production in the Irion 163 field.

Printer going not-so-gentle into the night

KOUNTZE, Texas (AP) — It's been five years since Archer Fullingim turned out the light over the Linotype machine at The Kountze News. But Fullingim is not going gentle into anyone's good night.

Retirement means that Fullingim has quit taking aim at politicians in his front-page column, "The Printer Fires Both Barrels." When Fullingim was at his peak, he could step on toes in the pages of his paper in this small southeast Texas town and politicians in Washington and Austin would say, "Ouch."

When Fullingim quit publishing, U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, told the House of Representatives, "Archer Fullingim has retired. Now Texas politicians can breathe easier."

Surely Wilson did. He was known as "Timber Charlie" in The Kountze News because Fullingim considered his association with the logging industry suspect.

Richard Nixon became "Tricky Dicky" — a name many people credit Fullingim with coining — in The Kountze News during the early 1950s. Sen. John Tower, D-Wichita Falls, was always "Useless John."

But retirement doesn't mean Fullingim has given up his political commentary. He's still no fan of Republicans.

"Everything the poor people in this country ever had was given to 'em by the Democrats," he says. He predicts Ronald Reagan will end up like Herbert Hoover.

"In 1932, at the height of the Depression, you couldn't find anybody who would admit they'd voted for Hoover."

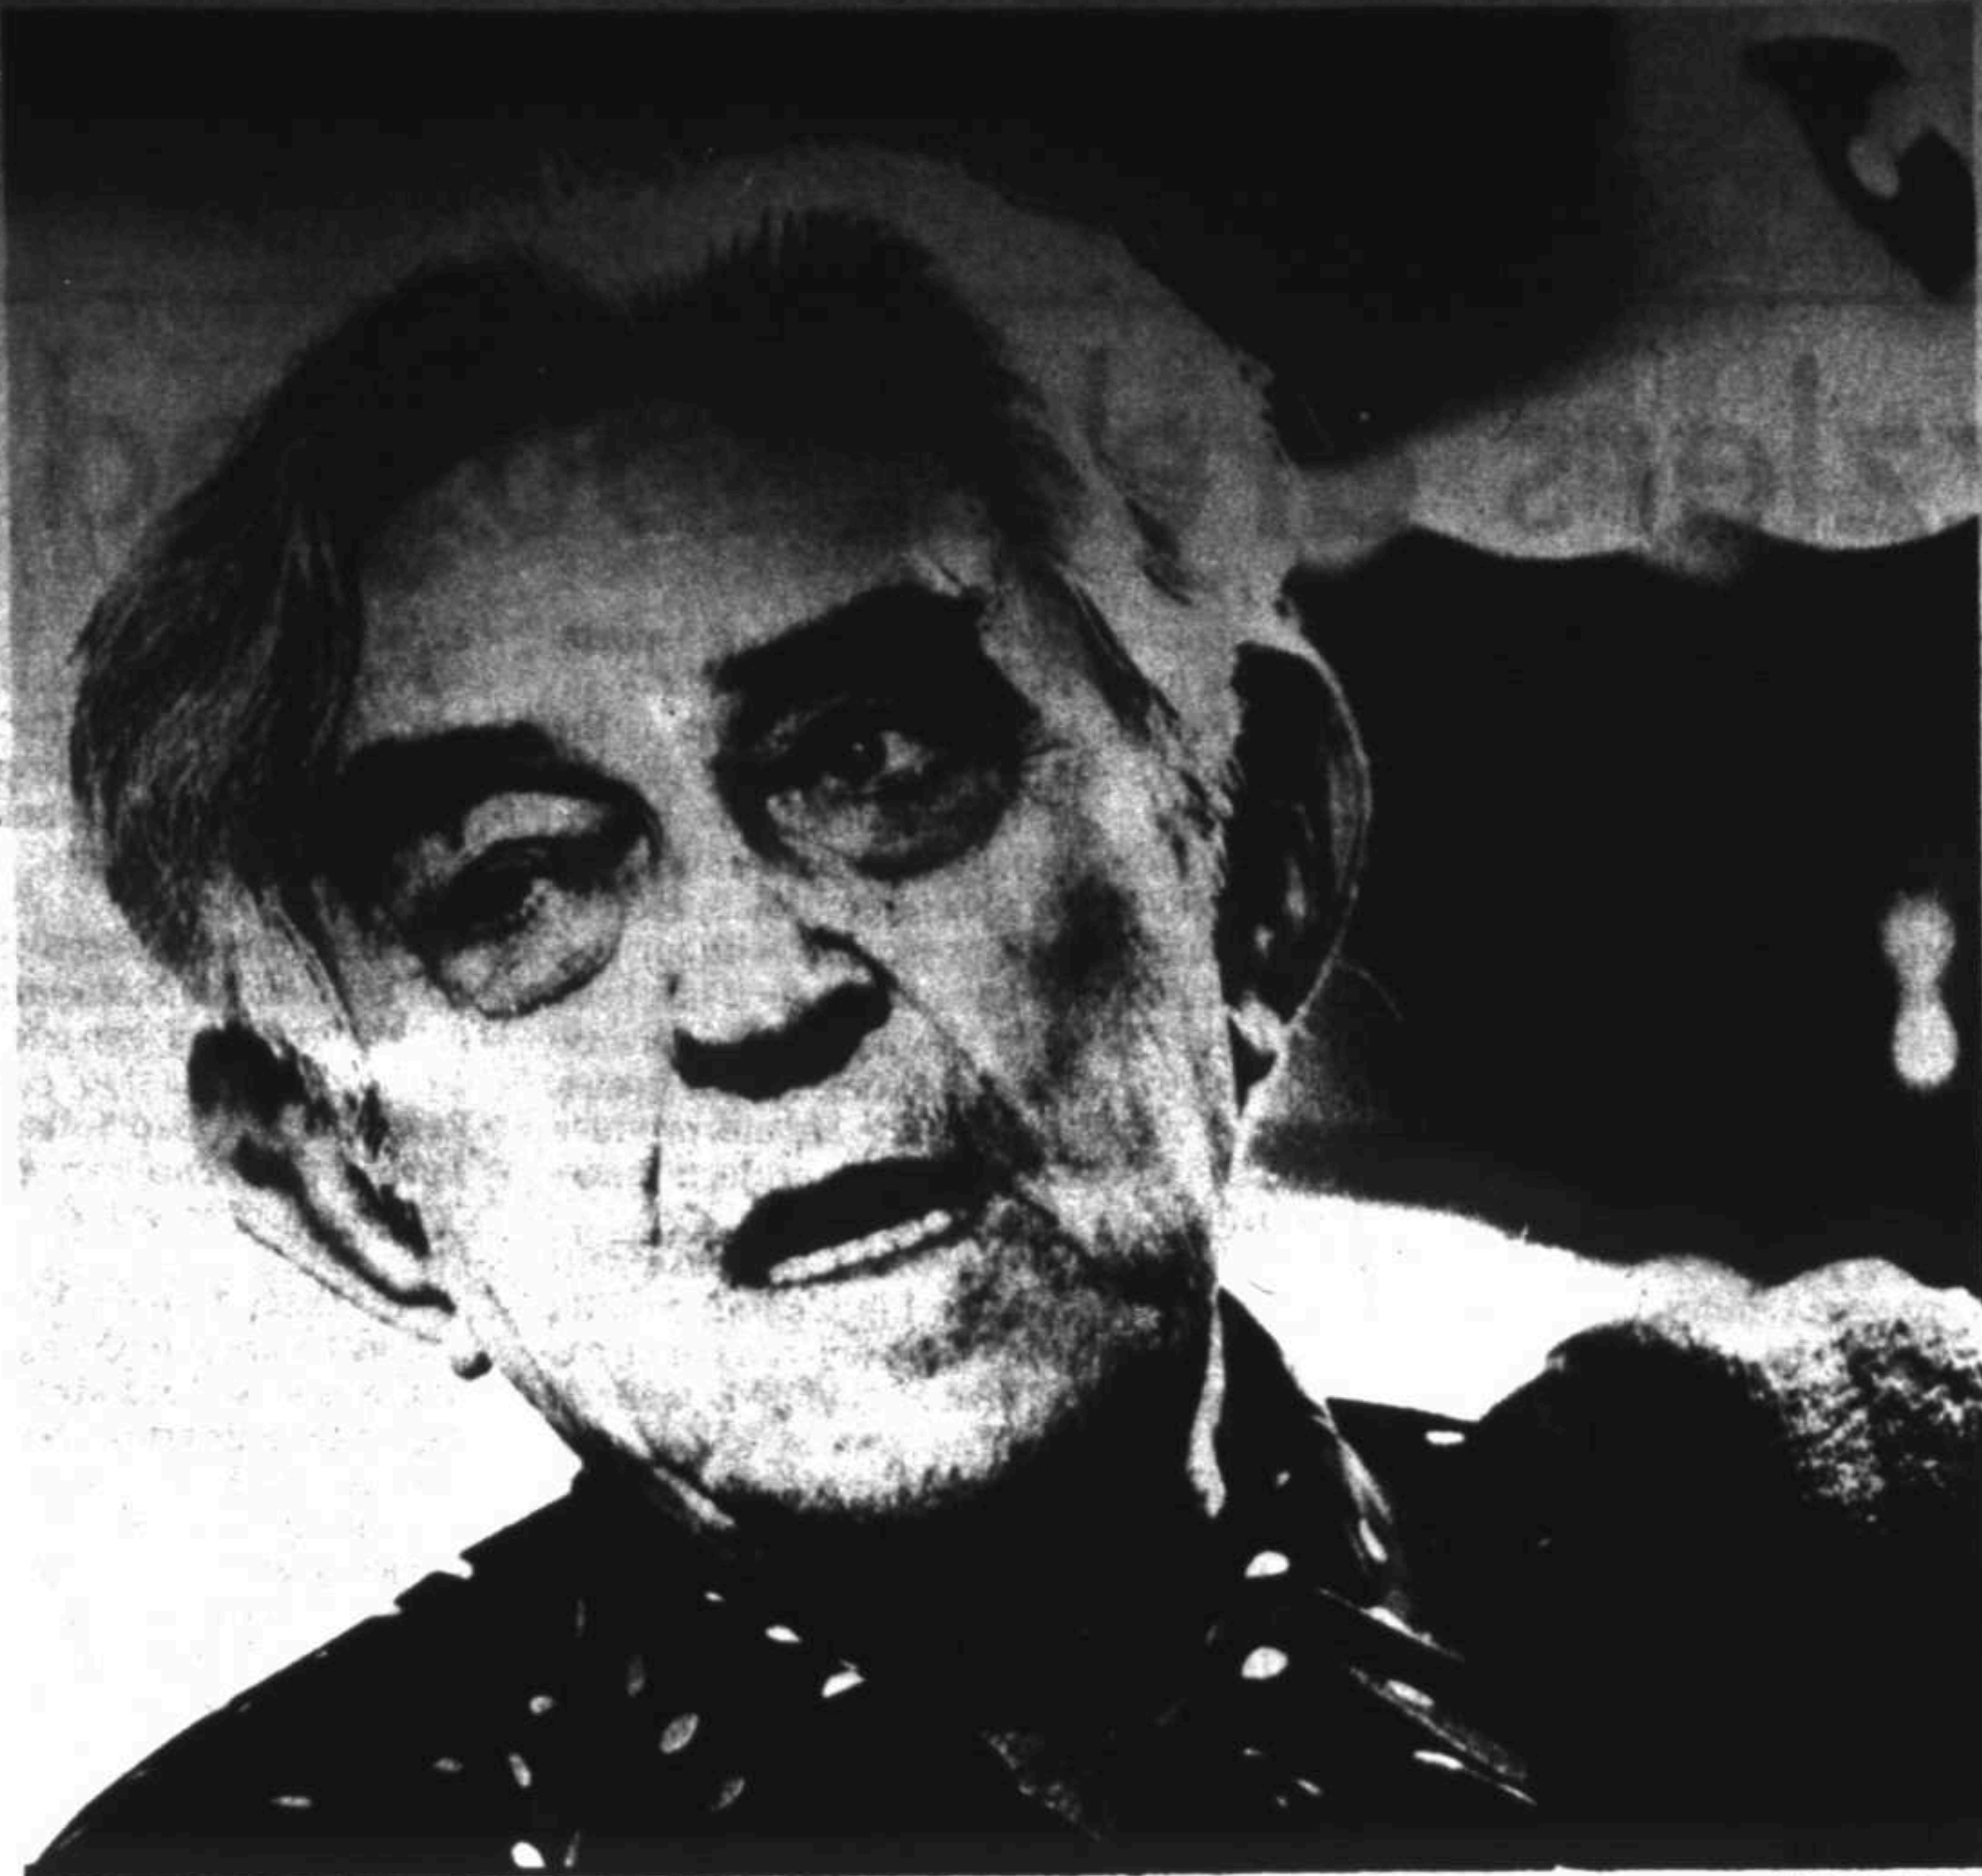

RETIREMENT ALSO HAS GIVEN Fullingim time to entertain. He might invite friends up to the loft above his bedrooms and play them some gospel music on an old organ.

"How's that, Mammy?" he'll inquire of a picture of his mother after he sings a verse.

Fullingim's political interests weren't limited to national affairs. He campaigned for years for a national park to protect the Big Thicket, the vast forest surrounding Kountze where Fullingim says he once had a religious experience.

"I sat down against a tree, and pretty soon this feeling washed over me like a wind in my heart, and I felt like I'd been there before," he said. "I was suffused with a spirit something like what Adam and Eve must have felt. It's a feeling of lightness."

More than 80,000 acres of what Fullingim calls the Holy Ghost Thicket are now included in the Big Thicket National Preserve.

When Archer Fullingim was at his peak, politicians in Washington and Austin said "Ouch" when he stepped on toes in his small-town newspaper column. Retirement hasn't mellowed the man credited with first calling Richard Nixon "Tricky Dick."

Fullingim founded his paper in 1950 and ran it until Feb. 28, 1974. He was never the editor or publisher. He was the Printer, by thunder!

It started when he bought a defunct print shop for $845. A few years later, an 11-year-old named Dee Ard started showing up on Saturdays to sweep up the place. One day the boy brought his clothes and said he was going to live with the printer.

Fullingim, a bachelor, protested. But his sister, 73-year-old Virginia Simms, said she told him, "Archer, you're going to hell if you don't help that little boy."

So Fullingim took Ard in. "I could have never gotten the paper out without Dee," he says now. Ard, now 38, works in the oil fields, but he keeps the pilot lights burning beneath the lead pots on the Linotypes, just in case the old press rumbles to life again.

FULLINGIM DIDN'T LET his support of Democrats get in the way of business. He canceled Lyndon Johnson's subscription when Johnson failed to pay his subscription.

More important, he cut off Johnson's supply of mayhaw jelly, a substance made from tart berries that grow in the Big Thicket. The secret is that he never uses water, only snow. Fullingim told host Tom Snyder when he appeared on the "Tomorrow" TV show in 1974.

"Where are you going to get snow in a place where it snowed only one time in seven years?" Fullingim wrote in a 1950 column on making the jelly. "Well, the Printer gets his from the ice house, but one year my rich brother Ford who lives in Colorado sent a barrel of it by airplane."

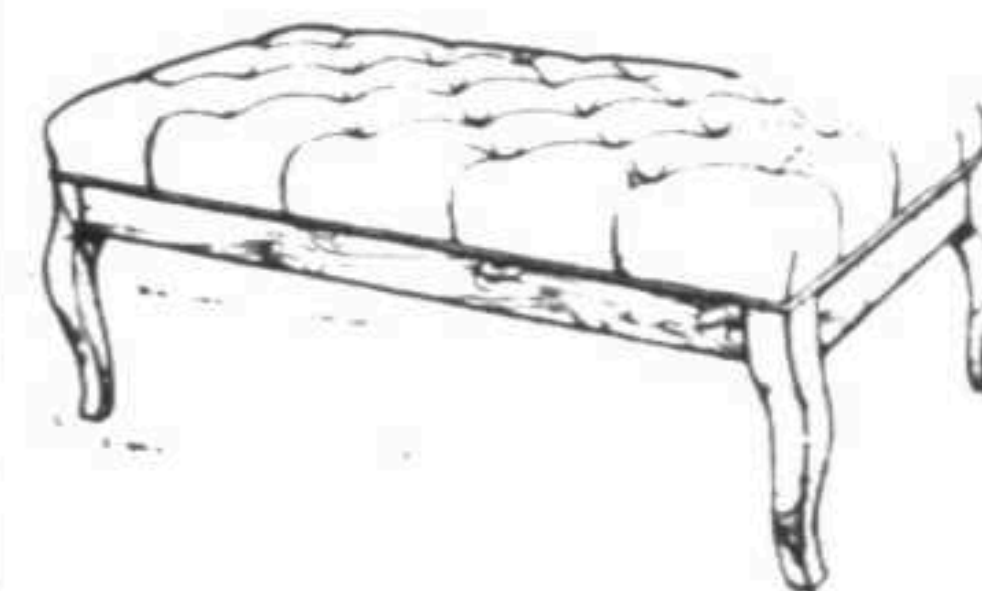

"However, if you can't get any snow, use water. All the snow does is make the jelly so clear you can read through it."

Fullingim has finished a project he began after retiring — a book about a college professor who finds an ivory bill woodpecker, an endangered species, in the Big Thicket.

Agent who pushed Reagan in car promoted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jerry Parr, the Secret Service agent who shoved President Reagan into his armored limousine to flee an assassination attempt last March 30, served his last day Sunday as head of the White House Secret Service detail.

He begins his new job Monday as assistant director of the Secret Service for protective research. The promotion came after 2 1/2 years as head of the White House detail, guarding Presidents Carter and Reagan. Parr, 51, will be replaced at the White House by Robert DeProspero, 42, formerly a Parr assistant.

In addition, Robert Horan, another member of the Secret Service detail assigned to Reagan, was promoted to the post of deputy to the asstant director of technical security.

Flying home to Washington from California Sunday evening, Reagan visited briefly with Parr and Horan in the Secret Service agents' compartment aboard Air Force One.

Museum features puppets

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

One of the posters in the new puppet exhibition at Cooper-Hewitt Museum was discovered under the back porch of someone's house. Several of the puppets were rescued from a backyard burial plot at the same property.

It seems that from some people, puppets "just don't get no respect." But the Puppeteers of America, creators of the current exhibit at Cooper-Hewitt, the National Museum of Design in New York, are out to change that.

The non-profit organization of about 3,000 members includes puppet makers, performers and aficionados. Some of them maintain that puppets are an art form as well as a medium of entertainment, political comment, education and advertising.

The current exhibition, which seems to prove their point, is said to be the first traveling puppet show since the 1930s. Already on exhibit in Washington, D.C., and other American cities, it remains at Cooper-Hewitt through Feb. 21.

According to Gordon Linge, installation consultant, and Alan Cooke, project researcher, the exhibit — which includes videotaped performances and live demonstrations — is an extraordinary event. Yet puppets have been a commonplace in American life for centuries.

They were on the scene well before the first Europeans appeared in America, said Linge, since some native American tribes used puppets as religious and cultural symbols in rituals.

"George Washington saw puppet shows and recorded the fact in his diary," added Linge. Later, as successive waves of European immigrants came to this country, itinerant puppeteers made their way to all localities, giving performances wherever they could find an audience. Parents handed down their skills and trade to their children.

Puppets have been more popular in some eras than in others. Cooke singled out the post-Civil War period and the 1930s as two periods when puppets were very popular forms of entertainment.

Perhaps as a result of the televised visibility of puppets (from Howdy Doody to Jim Henson's Muppets), puppets are very popular at present both with audiences and as a creative medium for performers, added Cooke.

"They seem to be in demand when times are hard. After all, you can put on an extravaganza with a cast of 40 and gorgeous costumes — with only two or three people," said Linge.

Though most people probably picture marionettes — figures made to move by pulling strings — when they think of puppets, there are a number of types. Besides marionettes and rod puppets (similar to marionettes but manipulated with rods) there are hand and finger puppets and head and body puppets as well as shadow puppets, one dimensional figures whose shadows are reflected onto a vertical surface.

Among the 230 puppets represented in the Cooper-Hewitt show are several towering 15-foot-tall figures, each of which must be manipulated by several individuals, as well as tiny finger puppets no larger than a couple of inches.

Today, puppetry is mainly an entertainment medium. But other uses — in therapy and in education, for example — are on the increase.

One problem in advancing the cause of puppetry from era to era is the fragility of the figures. They literally are worn to shreds in the course of hundreds of performances, said Cooke who is himself a performer of puppet shows and the owner of a collection of about 2,000 puppets.

Another difficulty is that in times when puppets are not in fashion, they tend to be devalued and consigned to the trash. That's how the poster and puppets of John and Louisa Till, an important traveling twosome in the 19th century, came to be discarded in the backyard of a descendant's property.

To save and advance the puppeteer's art, Alan Cooke envisions a national puppet museum. Activities including exhibitions, performances, classes and scholarship on the history of puppetry could be undertaken.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Reader going through phase

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think this plea for help is crazy. This problem is very real to me. No matter what the experts say, I really believe that the moon in its full phase adversely affects me. I've read about "moon madness" — and the theory is that a full moon affects one's mind. I believe it is true because whenever a full moon approaches, while it's at its peak and immediately after, I can't seem to control my temper, and I really get crazy!

Abby, I am convinced that a full moon affects my mind. I wonder if other people have had this experience.

— LOONY IN L.A.

DEAR LOONY: "Loony" is slang for "lunatic," which translates into "made crazy by the moon." For centuries man has theorized that the phases of the moon affect one's mind, moods and behavior.

Although there is no scientific evidence to support this age-old theory, those who are convinced that it's true can be physically affected to the point of looniness.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old college student who is currently seeing a girl about twice a week. (I'll call her Cindy.)

However, Cindy has a close friend,

Amy, whom I would like to date. Amy's been sending me subtle messages that lead me to believe that she would like to go out with me.

My question is this: If I were to ask Amy out, do you think she'd keep her mouth shut, or do you think she'd tell Cindy? Cindy is very possessive. If she knew I saw Amy she would drop me, and I really don't want to stop seeing Cindy.

How much do girlfriends tell each other? I would really like to see both of them, but I don't want to start in with Amy if there's a chance she'd tell Cindy. Please advise. — DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR DON'T: From what you tell me about your relationship with Cindy, you've led her to believe that you are far more loyal than you really are.

Don't play around with Amy. If you're out to get something from each, you're apt to end up with nothing from both.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that her fiancé refused to have sex with her until after they were married. You told her how "lucky" she was. I have been thinking about that ever since, and want to tell you my experience.

I was a divorcee making plans to marry. I thought I was lucky because he didn't persist when I said I wanted to wait until marriage.

After we were married I understood why he could be so "patient." Once or twice a year was enough for him. I was 36 when we were married, and it was a terrible shock and disappointment to me.

Now that we are in our 50s there is nothing at all. We have spent much time and money on therapy and counseling, but to no avail. I feel cheated. My personality has changed, and I feel like a vegetable. Nothing could be worse than living this way.

If I were that woman, I would insist on knowing her fiancé sexually before marriage. Sign me ... ANOTHER UNHAPPY WIFE ("WIFE")

Couple adopts 18 unwanted children

By ROBERT E. SHOTWELL
The Oregonian

SISTERS, Ore. (AP) — "I like you just the way you are."

That is a motto that has crept into the lives of Dennis and Diane Nason.

When you have 19 children, some with severe handicaps, living at home you learn to accept what comes along. What has come along for the Nasons is six children of their own and 18 children they have adopted.

It's the "United Nasons" of Sisters. The adopted children arrived from Vietnam, El Salvador and India with several from throughout the United States — Florida, Oregon, Indiana, Washington and New York.

Medical histories for some of the children read like textbook cases of what can go wrong with a child. But that doesn't bother the Nasons.

Nason, who is postmaster in Sisters, said, "Most of these kids are kids that no one else wanted, but we love them. There are a lot of kids in the world who could make it if they had understanding and love. They may not all grow up to set the world on fire, but at least they can function as members of society."

Mrs. Nason said, "What we have now are kids from every race. It didn't start out that way, but I think God would really like this family. There's a lot of harmony — the way a family should be, and that's the way it has turned out."

Seven-month-old Kevin is an example of the type of child that finds a way into the Nasons' hearts. When Kevin was born to a family in Florida his parents were devastated to learn he had Down's syndrome — a form of retardation. His tests showed him to be at the top of the scale — able to read and write — but his natural parents couldn't accept the handicap.

"Their loss is our gain," Nason said.

Another example is 4-year-old Mandy, whose birth-parents in Calcutta, India, used drugs to try to abort the mother's pregnancy. The parents, both doctors, were appalled when their daughter was born without arms. Mother Teresa in Calcutta took Mandy until the Nasons adopted her.

Then there is Melissa, 5, who was born with cerebral palsy, deafness and clubfeet. Surgery has corrected many of her frailties.

David, 5, of black-white-Indian heritage, was born in New York City to parents who didn't want him. David has a mild case of cerebral palsy and a few other disabilities caused by his mother's use of drugs.

There is Kari, 12, who as a tiny child in Vietnam was burned in a napalm attack on her native village. Skin grafts and other care in Vietnamese hospitals finally made it possible for her to become part of the Nason family.

Ten years after the Nasons had been told by their doctor that they would never have any more children of their own, Donny arrived. Then came Diana. And then Kenny. Donny is now 5, Diana is 3 and Kenny is 1.

"Now we have these three of our own (at home) and they are role models for the so-called 'handicapped' kids, and it works beautifully," Mrs. Nason said. "They see these three doing things they want to do — so they do them — with no concern for their handicaps."

The Nasons say they have become experts in psychology, medicine, deafness and a host of medical problems. There are many problems from time to time but they have learned to cope with that phase of their lives, too.

Do those self-help books really help?

By MERRY NYE
Hearst Feature Service

One of the most popular sections of any bookstore is the self-help department, where titles like "Be Happy for Life," "Stay Slim Forever" and "You Will Never Light Another Cigarette" reach out to people who want to control old habits or improve their lot.

But do self-help books really help? Seattle psychologist Gerald Rosen calls such publications "do-it-yourself books" and thinks there are some that can help, especially when it comes to eliminating fear. But he also thinks there are plenty that don't live up to the claims they make.

"If a book makes a claim it will solve a particular problem, it is the responsibility of the author or publisher to have evidence for those claims," says the 36-year-old former University of Oregon faculty member.

"Most do-it-yourself books have never been systematically tested," he says.

How could it be possible to differentiate the self-help books that help from the ones that don't deliver?

"I think the books that help should earn a seal of approval," Rosen says. "Like toothpaste does." That approval should come from the American Psychologists Association (APA), he says.

Rosen sees a lot of self-help books because in his position as advisory editor of Contemporary Psychology, the journal of the APA, he recommends to that publication the books he thinks should be reviewed.

"The most common do-it-yourself books are on assertiveness," Rosen says, adding that books on weight loss, how to quit smoking and how to eliminate fear and depression also are big sellers.

The oldest self-help book, he says, is the Bible. The second oldest, to his knowledge, is one called "Build Your Character," by Sam Smiles, a man also credited with writing "Happy Homes and the Hearts that Make Them."

The bookshelves in his office are lined with self-help books he says he loans to his patients. He removes any book that get more than a couple of bad reviews from his patients.

Rosen, the author of "Don't Be Afraid" and "The Relaxation Book," says he loans the books to patients because they can supplement in-person therapy.

When used without in-person therapy, Rosen says, self-help books can often make the frustrated person who buys them out of desperation more frustrated when what appears to be a sure-fire remedy for the problem doesn't work.

When a book makes a claim, it is offering a product, Rosen says. With this kind of "product," however, there are no controls over truth in advertising.

If the product doesn't do what it claims to do, can the customer sue the author or publisher?

"If that ever happened," Rosen says, "I would follow it with the keenest of interest."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

A letter from Heloise

MY DEAR READERS

If you will take a few minutes out of your busy day to sit down, I would like to just talk a little.

"Hints From Heloise" has been appearing in newspapers for over 22 years now, and you have followed the column through my growing up, Mother's death and my taking over.

Our column has changed a little over the years, and I know from your mail that you are pleased.

I now have a post office box so you can send your letters directly to me. They will get here faster, and we can put your suggestions and problems in the column sooner.

Please, please, however, don't send self-addressed stamped envelopes to me with questions. I just can't answer them personally. The volume of mail that you dear people send me is unbelievable.

Even though I really want to help each and every one of you, I just can't answer your individual letters. If I did, I would be writing you all day long, and I'd never get a chance to get the column together.

If you have a problem, write and I will try to answer it in the column, so everyone can be helped by the answer.

I do love you and try to do my best by printing the hints which you ask about most.

Most newspapers print my address at the end of the column. Just in case it is omitted, write this down in your address book, so you can write directly to me:

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: Each of us should have the patience to teach our children to perform chores up to desired standards, then solicit (demand) their cooperation in maintaining the household.

Busy children are happier and less bored and will learn to be more responsible to, and respectful of, parents and authorities outside the home. — Mrs. Ray Skelton

SWEETER SAUCE

Dear Heloise: When making spaghetti sauce, drop a whole carrot into the pot, then just remove it when the sauce is cooked.

It seems to take the acidity out, and you won't have to add sugar to your recipe. — Joyce Buffolino

GLASS CLEANER

Playwright Neil Simon, known for his humorous plays that often take place in hotels, would have an abundance of material to work with if he visited the south wing, where the apartments are located.

"It's a real bohemian neat community," said Mrs. Lee, a real estate agent who decided to move to the inn five years ago after her children left home. "The age group is like 18 to 90 years old. We have every lifestyle, every color, every nationality, every occupation from unemployed to a doctor to a school teacher."

The apartments overlook an enormous garden crowded with large palm trees.

Mrs. Lee said apartment life at the inn is full of surprises. "They shoot movies here and its hysterical."

A few years ago, in fact, a low-budget film took over the place for a week. "It was fun," she said. "They were filming at night. And they did some crazy things. They did a sword fight on the balcony. They put up a breakaway window and this guy jumped through it."

The most recent movie filmed at the inn was "Buddy, Buddy" starring Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau.

The residents have become inured to the number of weddings throughout the Mission Inn's gardens, patios and two chapels.

"You'll be going downstairs and somebody is bringing up a four-tier cake. You just open the door for them," said Mrs. Lee. "You'll be carrying your laundry and there's a bride and groom running down the hall. You'll be in your curlers and grubbies and everybody is dressed up in white tuxes as you're getting in the elevator from the grocery store."

The man responsible for the inn was Frank Miller, whose father, a civil engineer who moved from Wisconsin to California in 1874. A year later, the family built a two-story adobe home, and later began taking in guests. Soon, they were adding wings to the building for more rooms

Frank Miller, who had his hand in the grocery store business and had invested in some land, bought the hotel from his father, C.C. Miller, in 1880.

By 1902, Miller had accumulated enough capital and secured enough loans to build a new hotel. The design for the new hotel took on a Spanish character, influenced by the California missions. He changed the name of the guest house from the Glenwood Hotel to the Mission Inn.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ultrasound may detect problems in unborn babies

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I are expecting our first child. We are really concerned about whether our baby will be normal because there are two mentally retarded children in my husband's family. Is there some way to test our unborn child to find out if he is developing properly? — Sally, Oakland, Ca.

Dear Sally: You might want to ask your obstetrician about Ultrasound. This test is being used to visualize and document normal as well as abnormal eye movements. This test might indicate developmental problems in the unborn fetus. Abnormal eye movement might alert an obstetrician to change prenatal care for a fetus, or that the fetus may be a high risk during delivery. Talk about your concerns with your obstetrician. Good luck to all of you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You say that cancer is so many different diseases. What is the common bond that makes them all cancer? — Sidney, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sidney: There are several common bonds:

1. All cancerous cells are descended from a normal cell.
2. Cancerous cells divide more often than the normal cells from which they come.
3. Cancerous cells serve no useful purpose.
4. Cancerous cells live longer than normal cells.
5. Under a microscope, cancerous cells have a disordered appearance.
6. They invade neighboring tissue.
7. They tend to leave the original site of cancer and move to distant parts of the body.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has diabetes, and every time he gets a sore on his foot we get scared. His father had diabetes and had to have a leg amputated. Isn't there any treatment for these infections? — Mrs. N.A. Elmira, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. A. Dr. Jack L. LeFrock, of the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital in Philadelphia, says there is an alternative to amputation for diabetes with foot infections. He recommends treatment that includes regularly draining the pus and changing dressings every four hours. This is a time-consuming procedure, but one that is very worthwhile.

You and your husband can be reassured that doctors do not recommend amputation lightly, but only as a last resort. Of course, prevention of foot infection, particularly wearing the correct shoes, should be practiced by all diabetics.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an uncle who is 70 years old. My aunt (his wife) is concerned that he is becoming forgetful and that he does not take care of his personal appearance the way he used to. Do you think he's becoming senile? — Dolores, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Dolores: I believe one exercise we should try to avoid is jumping to conclusions. The fact that a person is 70 years of age does not automatically make him senile. In fact the behavior you describe may just as readily, if not more so, be attributed to depression.

His doctor may be able to clarify the diagnosis and recommend what treatment, if any, is indicated. But don't assume that any behavior in an older person that is not "normal" is the result of senility.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Reggie strikes out on custom Corvette

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas-sized bid of $550,000 was too much for New York Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson Sunday when a custom-built Corvette was auctioned in Phoenix.

Milton Verret of Beaumont, Texas, was the successful bidder on the gray and black, turbine-engine Corvette built by Vince Granatelli, son of racing great Andy Granatelli.

Jackson made the second-highest bid, $525,000, on the top attraction of the Southwestern International Collector Car Show and Auction.

Although his bid on the custom Corvette failed, Jackson brought a car of his own to put on the auction block. His 1974 Rolls-Royce Corniche Coupe sold for $43,000.

Bids during the three-day show totaled $11.5 million, and actual sales were between $5 million and $6 million, a spokesman said. The show ended Sunday evening at the Hilton.

The one-of-a-kind Corvette was owned by Herbert Orlovitz of Boca Raton, Fla. He originally paid $750,000 for the car in 1979, promoters of the auction said.

The Corvette is powered by a turbine engine — the kind used by Andy Granatelli in repeated but unsuccessful attempts to win the Indianapolis 500. But this Corvette was designed as a street vehicle, not a race car, the spokesman said.

The second-highest price at the auction went for a 1934 Duesenberg owned by Dr. Ed Counselman of Topeka, Kan. Several bidders jointly claimed the Duesenberg by trading several classic automobiles worth a total of $300,000 to Counselman.

There were 500 cars in the show and auction, and about 65 percent of the vehicles shown were sold, auction figures released by promoters.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, January 5, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You and I will be celebrating our birthdays together today, so let's make it a very special occasion! Late born on this date, the late German political leader and statesman Konrad Adenauer. Your willingness to make sacrifices for your good friends and loved ones wins you great affection. Be sure to give others a chance to do nice things for you also. Your systematic ways contribute to domestic harmony by ensuring that your home is most efficiently run. Career advancement will be easier in the months ahead. Employment activities work to your advantage, thanks to something that happens in spring. Be on guard against deception.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A fine day for those considering forming new partnerships. If possible, expand present operation. People from or at a distance should prove reliable. Be discreet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put the brakes on impulsive schemes. Correspondence should be given prompt attention. Your work is likely to take precedence over your social plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be cautious about doing business with strangers. Some deception could be involved. Family members are sympathetic to your special needs. Remember to return the favor!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends urge you to get involved in fanciful schemes. Member of opposite sex may be stringing you along. Know it and act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Routine work is favored over starting new projects. The up loose ends. Friendships, family relationships provide more satisfaction than romance right now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A serious confab takes place regarding money, romance or career. Do not let another's flattery overwhelm you. Keep friendship separate from business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New people or projects can make this a productive day. Your relations with both higher-ups and co-workers are likely to be good. Your creative drive is in high gear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spend more time on at-home projects to earn extra income. A cottage industry can help you beat inflation. Singles may be unwilling to make a romantic commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work pressures will require maturity and self-control. Steer clear of aggressive people. Spend the evening with those who share your interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money and friendship do not mix right now. An unexpected turn of events could upset your apple cart. Get a clearer picture of your priorities. Welcome older person's advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Time is on your side. Self-improvement activities are vital to your success. A love triangle causes an uncomfortable situation, but things will sort themselves out if you let them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Group activities are featured prominently today. People are happy to follow your lead. Your popularity with an attractive newcomer is on the rise.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♠AQ875 ♠Q952 ♠63
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—We are not inclined to sell out cheaply, but here there are strong indications that partner might not have very much. Despite the fact that he is probably short in diamonds, he could not make a takeout double or even overcall. It looks as if West has a very powerful hand, so don't give him a chance to show it. Pass.

Q.2—East West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠965 ♠KQ72 ♠AJ104 ♠Q6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠
Pass Pass Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—We seldom recommend converting a one-level takeout double to penalties when holding only four trumps, but this looks like the exception to the rule. You rate to make three tricks in the enemy trump suit and have other goodies besides. Dummy should be well-nigh useless. Pass. This decision is based solely on the vulnerability. Were East-West not vulnerable, it would be silly to play for a small penalty when you could pick up a valuable part score.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠862 ♠AJ85 ♠J6 ♠AQ107
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—If partner is an aggressive bidder, you should be satisfied with raising to four no trump—he won't refuse the invitation on any hand that would offer play for slam. However, if partner is the kind who wears a belt and suspenders, you should just up and bid the small slam in no trump.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10974 ♠Q9832 ♠A6 ♠K8
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ 1 ♠
2 ♠ 2 ♠ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—The opponents' bidding marks partner with a single-ton spade, so the high cards in your two hands should all be working. This is not the time to put partner, who might have already strained to raise to two hearts, under pressure. Don't make a nambypamby bid of three hearts—four hearts gets our vote.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J965 ♠A9843 ♠J6 ♠Q6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—There is no reason not to make the bid you would have, had there been no interference. Bid one heart. If you pass, you might have no safe way of showing your scattered values on the next round, and your side might get frozen out of the auction when the hand belongs to you.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1062 ♠85 ♠KQJ7 ♠A94
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Simple addition should lead you to the right bid—six no trump. You have a balanced 14 points opposite a partner who has shown a balanced 19-20. But we don't mind if you stop off to bid three diamonds en route. If partner has four-ard diamond support, six diamonds might be a better contract than six no trump.

Lessons in Bundy tragedy are ignored

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A sheriff who guarded Theodore Bundy before he was convicted for killing two Florida State University coeds and a schoolgirl says the tragedy hasn't been forgotten but its lessons have been ignored.

"Every night, girls that were here at that time are going out, probably meeting guys that they've never seen before, or maybe casually have seen, and are acting as if they're good friends," said Sheriff Ken Katsaris.

Bundy, 32, spent 26 months in Katsaris' Leon County Jail before his conviction.

The handsome former Utah law student is on Florida's death row following his convictions in trials in Orlando and Miami for the 1978 slayings of the two college students and a 12-year-old schoolgirl from Lake City. Before the Florida murders, Bundy had been convicted of kidnapping a suburban Salt Lake City woman and was charged in the murder of a Detroit woman vacationing in Colorado.

He escaped from jail in Colorado, where he was awaiting trial, shortly before the January 1978 slayings of the two Florida State students. He was arrested later in the spring of 1978 for the slaying of the schoolgirl, Kimberly Leach.

"It's a natural phenomenon of life for boy to meet girl," Katsaris said. "It's not unusual for a girl to dance with a guy she's never known before, or to go out and have a drink with him and even get closer."

But Katsaris said the Bundy case proved that it's impossible in that first acquaintance to tell if someone could be a killer.

Bundy was an excellent conversationalist, the sheriff said, and apparently was at a bar next to the sorority house when he met the two Chi Omega sorority sisters he later killed.

Katsaris says students in Tallahassee still believe something like that wouldn't happen to them.

Katsaris doesn't advise caution to the point of locking oneself in a room. Instead, he suggests women ask a few extra questions of a potential friend.

"You've got to be wary, not to the point that you get paranoia sickness but at least a degree of paranoia until you've proven to yourself that the association is all right."

"Check out people. Ask friends...and just knowing that he's a student doesn't mean much," Katsaris said.

"If you're intent on going out with him tonight, and you just met him, I guess you'll have to take your chances."

Refiners must address demands before contracts are agreed upon

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Agreement will not be reached on new two-year contracts for 55,000 oil refinery workers across the nation until refiners address demands for a no-layoff guarantee and better pensions, a union leader says.

The contracts expire at midnight Thursday and no progress has been made toward resolving of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

"We'll be at the bargaining table all week and we'll see what happens," Goss said in an interview Sunday. "I'm certain it will go down until the last minute."

He said all of the more than half-dozen company proposals rejected by OCAW so far were turned down because they did not offer enough money in wages or medical benefits. More importantly, Goss said, they did not address the union's primary demands for no layoffs and no plant closures, and a large pension boost.

The union has not set a wage increase request, but will do so this week, Goss said. He has indicated it might be 11 percent or more.

About 400 contracts with 98 refiners — from the largest such as Gulf Oil Corp.'s Port Arthur operation to small independents — expire at midnight Thursday. OCAW has not granted contract extensions in the past, but union officials have said bargaining could continue past the deadline if settlement was imminent.

The contracts were forged in 1980 following a three-month nationwide walkout over a wage and benefits reopener clause in the 1979 contract. It was the first OCAW strike in 11 years and the longest in the union's history.

The walkout ended with a 10.5 percent increase that brought the average refinery worker's wage to $11.66 an hour and added a one-year extension to the two-year contract.

Under OCAW bargaining policy, contract proposals are approved or rejected by a 12-member committee meeting at union headquarters in Denver. The trend has been for one of the larger companies to reach a settlement and set a pattern for the rest of the industry.

In late December, Goss and the National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee turned down contract proposals by Gulf, Texaco Inc., Amoco Oil Co., the refining arm of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), and Shell Oil Co., as well as an unspecified number of independent refiners.

"We don't have any particular reaction" to the rejection of the contract, said Gulf spokesman Kirk Vogeley on Sunday. "No meetings have been scheduled at this time, but we would be available to meet with the union this week if something could be arranged."

Goss said all the rejected contracts proposed wage increases of about 7 percent in 1982 and 5 percent in 1983. He said the union wants at least to match its estimate of an 11 percent inflation rate in 1982.

None of the proposals addresser-week, per-worker contribution to the union pension fund, Goss said. "Without that, there can be no real progress," he said.

Budget cuts delay task of cataloging Nixon tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a cut in the National Archives budget, the complex task of getting thousands of hours of Richard Nixon's White House tapes ready for public disclosure won't be finished until at least 1987, says a top official on the project.

Twelve of the 31 National Archives technicians involved in the project are being dismissed because of the budget reduction, meaning the job will take twice as long as had been anticipated, according to James Hastings, deputy director of the Nixon project.

The technicians have been cataloging both the tapes and the 40 million pages of written matter taken from the Nixon White House under an act of Congress. Approximately 4,000 hours of the tapes have never been disclosed to the public.

A 1974 law directed the archives, storehouse of the nation's records, to catalogue the tapes and papers and to make public first those dealing with "presidential abuses of power."

Until now, the public has had access to only a relative handful of Nixon tapes — the 31 introduced as evidence in the trials of Nixon aides H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, John N. Mitchell, Robert C. Mardian and John B. Connally. They are available at the archives to anyone who cares to hear them.

After the law calling for the disclosure of all Watergate material found in the Nixon White House was passed, Nixon managed through suits to delay work on the materials until 1977. That year, the Supreme Court upheld the law and the project started.

Edward Welden, deputy archivist, said the budget cuts would fall heaviest on "the newest projects, which naturally have the newest people" — and the Nixon project is a prime example.

"It's a great loss of momentum," Welden said. "In effect, it's a generation of people getting zapped."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Johnny Miller
...big year already

Miller wins richest purse

By The Associated Press
GOLF—American Johnny Miller subdued Seve Ballesteros of Spain with a routine par on the ninth hole of a sudden death playoff and won the biggest prize ever offered in the history of golf in the Sun City, Bophuthatswana Million Dollar Challenge. Miller claimed $500,000 when Ballesteros three-putted from 50 feet on the ninth playoff hole. Both golfers finished the regulation 72 holes tied at 11-under-par 277, with each shooting a 71 over the last 18 holes of regulation. Jack Nicklaus, who missed the playoff by a single stroke, finished with a final round 69 for a 278 total, 10 under par on the 7,083-yard Gary Player Country Club course.

ay Haas opened the 1982 golf year by winning the Spalding Invitational Pro-Am with a 22-under-par 337 total.

TENNIS—Mark Edmondson and Kim Warwick retained their Australian Open doubles title with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Americans Hank Pfister and John Sadri. Sweden's Jorgen Windahl posted a 6-4, 6-4 win over top Australian junior Patrick Cash in the 18-and-under national singles championship. The 18-and-under doubles title went to New Zealander David Lewis and Australian Tony Withers, who defeated Australians Peter Thrupp and Nick Arnold 6-3, 6-4.

BOXING—Mike Rossman, the former World Boxing Association light-heavyweight champion, was indicted on a charge of resisting arrest in a Dec. 15 incident and on a charge of possession of a dangerous weapon at Mays Lading, N.J. Rossman, whose real name is Michael DePiano, was arrested by two policemen after he refused to leave his car and cursed at them. After finally leaving his car, Rossman punched Patrolman Gene Conley on his cheek, breaking his glasses, police said. Rossman also exchanged blows with canine Patrolman Mitch Levin, said police.

SKIING—Thomas Wassberg of Sweden won the 29th annual 15-kilometer Monolith Oslo cross country ski race in 46 minutes, 53 seconds, 15 seconds ahead of Oddvar Braa of Norway. Erika Hess of Switzerland scored her third consecutive World Cup slalom victory, skiing a flawless second run on the fast Habakuk course on Mount Pohorje in Maribor, Yugoslavia. She clocked 1:37.58 after starting the second heat almost one second behind first-run leader Perrine Pelen of France.

HORSE RACING Saturday's Races—Back at Two, $6.20, captured the $64,750 Las Flores Handicap by 2 1/4 lengths over Abisinia at Santa Anita. Main Stem, $30.40, scored a 4 1/4-length victory over Main Stem in the $26,975 Gallant Bob Handicap at Keeneland. Mr. Bagbags, $18.60, turned back Meru by a half-length in the $42,950 Southern Maryland Handicap at Bowie. Signor Cotton, $10.20, galloped to a three-length victory over No Barriers in the $14,600 Au Revolt Purse at Hawthorne on the closing day of the track's 84-day thoroughbred meeting. Victorian Line, $4.40, beat North Cat by 10 lengths in the $113,800 Tropical Park Derby at Calder. Contare, $15, posted a two-length victory over Engine One in the $54,200 Paumotu Handicap at Aqueduct. Shady Jack, $10.40, won by a neck over Hasty Eagle in the $4,000 Maine Purse at Turf Paradise. Sunday's Races—Island Whirl, $7.60, won the $104,500 Malibu Stakes at Santa Anita by six lengths over Shanekite. Ahira's Narise, $10.80, edged Brenda's Passer by a neck to win the $8,000 Quincy Purse at Suffolk Downs. To Erin, $6.00, won the $20,000 feature at the Fair Grounds, beating out Worthy Too. Alla Brevia, $4.20, edged Princelet by a head to capture the $56,300 Assault Handicap at Aqueduct.

Reb, Pack girls back in action tonight

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland High will try to put the disappointment of Saturday's District 5-5A loss to Midland Lee behind them tonight when the Purple Pack travels to Odessa to tangle with Odessa Permian.

The Purple Pack wasted a fine 29-point performance by senior Shelia Christian as Lee edged the Bulldogs, 68-67. It was the second one-point Rebels have taken from the Bulldogs this year.

Coach Jane Young's Bulldogs have been playing better than expected through the early part of the season.

The Bulldogs craved out an 11-7 record in the non-district portion of the season. Although MHS lost Saturday, the one-point loss to the Rebels is no disgrace.

Odessa Permian, 10-9, 1-0, is coming off a win over Odessa High in its first district outing. The Panthers have struggled at times this season but should provide a stern test for the Bulldogs, especially on the road.

Midland Lee, 1-0, 12-6, will be gunning for its second straight district win when the Rebels host Odessa High, 8-8, 0-1, Monday at Chap Center.

The Rebels had a six-game winning streak snapped last week when they lost two out of three in the Slaton

Girls Invitational Tournament.

Reb coach Shirley Stephenson stated after Saturday's game, "We lost two games in the Slaton tournament but I believe we learned some things from them. Our win-loss record may not look too good, but I feel we have played the caliber of competition that has gotten us ready for the district."

The Bronchos of Odessa High lost their opening district game to Permian.

In other district contests Monday, San Angelo, the district's playoff representative last season, will be shooting for its second district win of the young season when the Bobcats tangle with Abilene Cooper on the Cougars' floor.

San Angelo, 9-7, 1-0, doesn't have the glossy record like last year, but the Bobcats have been pegged as an early district favorite along with Midland Lee.

Cooper, 10-6, 0-1, opened the district race on a sour note Saturday when cross-town rival, Abilene High, dealt the Cougars a solid 68-53 licking.

Abilene High, 9-5, 1-0, will be looking to keep its district record unblemished when the Eagles square off with Big Spring on the Steers' home floor Saturday.

Big Spring, 9-10, 0-1, will be trying to shake off a 22-point thrashing administered by San Angelo Saturday night in San Angelo.

All district contests tip off at 8 p.m.

49ers romp, but Perkins likes Dallas

By ERIC PREWITT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers, after another winning roll in their Candlestick Park mud, are one step away from the National Football League's gaudiest bash — the Super Bowl.

They got by the New York Giants 38-24 Sunday, following a pattern which seems standard in this season's playoffs.

"We knew other teams had blown big leads, and we didn't want to let that happen to us. We've been in a lot of pressure games this year," said quarterback Joe Montana, who had the first 300-yard passing day of his three-year NFL career but settled for 28 yards in the second half.

THE DALLAS Cowboys, 45-14 losers on Candlestick's slow turf early in the season, will be back next Sunday to face the 49ers in the National Conference championship game. The winner goes on to play the AFC champ, the Cincinnati Bengals or San Diego Chargers, in Super Bowl XVI on Jan. 24.

"Dallas has a lot of respect for our club," said San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh. He added, "The homefield advantage is a distinct advantage for us."

However, Giants Coach Ray Perkins said, "Dallas will win. They are a better football team. That's nothing against the 49ers, but the Cowboys have been in this situation before and they are a more experienced team."

San Francisco, 13-3 in the regular season, had its highest-scoring day since the victory over Dallas in eliminating the Giants, an NFC wild-card playoff game. The 49ers' defense, ranked second in the NFL this season, had a generally rough time and allowed three touchdown passes by young Scott Brunner.

THE 49ERS held a 24-7 lead after scoring three times early in the second period, but New York came back to within a touchdown, 24-17, and was stopped at San Francisco's 4-yard line on a third-period drive which could have tied the score.

"Defensively, we had breakdowns several times," said rookie cornerback Ronnie Lott, but he contributed two interceptions, one for a late, game-clinching touchdown.

The 49ers also recovered two New York fumbles and held Rob Carpenter, coming off a 161-yard effort in the playoff victory over Philadelphia, to 61 yards rushing.

"When we played the 49ers earlier this year, we made a lot of mistakes. We tried not to today, and we still made too many," said Johnny Perkins, who caught two of Brunner's touchdown passes.

The 49ers will be forced onto a neutral, artificial surface field and an indoor one, the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome, if the team wins its first conference title and goes to the Super Bowl.

"We're starting to love that sloppy mess that everybody's been knocking. It's been pretty good to us," said San Francisco offensive tackle Keith Fahnhorst.

The Candlestick footing was better than expected Sunday, and rain amounted to only light sprinkles until late in the second half when the Bay Area was hit by its latest strong storm. Both teams' offenses came up with big plays frequently.

"I thought it was going to be a defensive struggle," admitted Fahnhorst.

MONTANA passed for 276 yards in the first half, hitting tight end Charlie Young on an early 8-yard touchdown pass and later connecting with Freddie Solomon on a 58-yard scoring play. Another long Montana pass, 39 yards to Dwight Clark, set up a touchdown as the 49ers scored three times in the opening 4 1/2 minutes of the second quarter.

"We had to get respect from their defensive backs, and that's why we went long. They were playing a lot of zone defense, and we were guessing right," said Montana.

"Montana did some things people didn't expect. He threw deep, and some people had said he can't throw deep," said New York's Brunner, who delivered the two longest touchdown passes of his budding NFL career, 72 yards to Earnest Gray and 59 to Johnny Perkins, in the playoff loss.

The 38 points was the most scored against the Giants this season, and receiver Perkins disagreed with his coach about the Cowboys' 49ers title matchup.

"The 49ers have a helluva ballclub. I think we'll be watching them in the Super Bowl," he said.

Bengals' Anderson likes the feeling

By JOE KAY

CINCINNATI (AP) — For the first time in his 11-year career, Cincinnati Bengals' quarterback Ken Anderson knows how it feels to win in the playoffs.

"The feeling is kind of beyond description," Anderson said, wearing a broad smile after he tossed the winning touchdown pass in Cincinnati's 28-21 victory Sunday over the Buffalo Bills.

Anderson completed 14 of 21 passes for 192 yards against a stubborn Buffalo defense to put the Bengals in the American Conference title game for the first time in the 14-year history of the franchise. It was the first playoff victory for Cincinnati in four tries.

Although it marked a milestone for the franchise founded by Paul Brown before the 1968 season, the Bengals celebrated their club-record 13th victory of the season with little fanfare.

"These guys just sort of show up and say, 'We are going to win this game.' No one panics or worries," said All-Pro rookie receiver Cris Collinsworth, whose 16-yard touchdown catch in the fourth quarter snapped a 21-21 tie. "We feel like we can do whatever it takes to win."

THE BILLS, who held on to beat the New York Jets in the AFC wild card game, were driving toward a tying touchdown with three minutes to play when a delay of game penalty nullified an apparent first down inside the Bengals' 20-yard line.

Joe Ferguson's fourth-down pass to wide receiver Lou Piccone was wiped out by the penalty, and Ferguson overthrew Roland Hooks in the end zone to kill the Bills' last serious threat.

"It's hard to accept because it was a mistake that shouldn't have happened," Ferguson said of the delay penalty that put the ball back on the Bengals' 25-yard line.

Cincinnati scored on its first two possessions, driving 42 and 48 yards. Charles Alexander bolted 4 yards for the first touchdown and fullback Pete Johnson crashed 1 yard into the end zone for the other.

Ferguson, who failed to complete a pass in the first quarter, connected with wide receiver Jerry Butler on a 54-yard pass play to set up Joe Cribbs' 1-yard touchdown run just before the half and narrow the gap.

The teams traded touchdowns in the second half. Buffalo lost Cribbs to a knee injury on a 44-yard touchdown burst that tied the game 14-14.

Cowboys return to wreck scene

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys figured they would be going back to Candlestick Park, the site of a 45-14 humiliation Oct. 11.

The San Francisco 49ers assured themselves of the homefield advantage in the National Conference title game Sunday with a workmanlike 38-24 thumping of the New York Giants.

"You had to figure the 49ers would win playing at home and all," said Dallas linebacker D.D. Lewis. "Now, we've got to go back to California and that bad field."

"That's OK. We seem to play our best when we owe a team something and we certainly owe the 49ers a paycheck."

DALLAS QUALIFIED for its 10th NFC title game Saturday with a 38-0 rout of Tampa Bay in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys had hoped for a Giant upset so they would get the homefield in the championship game.

"It would have been sweet," said Lewis.

"The field is treacherous but we've just got to get it out of our minds," said Lewis. "The field didn't beat us the last time. We just flat weren't ready to play."

The Cowboys came on strong in the second half of the season after the 49er thrashing.

"The 49ers humiliated us earlier in the year and we owe them one," said tailback Tony Dorsett.

Dallas' defense devastated Buccaneer quarterback Doug Williams, who suffered four interceptions and four sacks.

TWICE HE grounded the ball and completed only 10 of 29 passes for 187 yards.

"San Francisco has changed a lot since we played them so we really don't know that much about them," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "I think we've improved a lot since that day. However, the 49ers will definitely have the advantage because they know the field they are playing on better than we do."

Dallas lost to Philadelphia in the NFC title game last year.

The Cowboys' coaches want to work at halftime on their 49er plans when it became obvious it was not the Giants' day.

Dallas will fly to San Francisco Friday for Sunday's 8:30 p.m. kickoff.

Lone gunman pulls AFC hoist

CINCINNATI (AP) — A lone gunman held up a Riverfront Stadium concession office and fled with $10,573 during the National Football League playoff game between the Buffalo Bills and the Cincinnati Bengals, police said.

The robbery took place just before halftime Sunday, according to Officer Robert Glasmeier. A male suspect was being sought, but there had been no arrests by late Sunday night.

The game had long been a sellout, so no tickets were sold at the stadium and no ticket money was on hand. The stolen money was believed to have been taken from a program concessionaire.

The New Individual Retirement Account

In 1982 everyone who works for a living is eligible for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), even if they already are participating in a pension or profit sharing plan. You can save hundreds of tax dollars in 1982 by starting your own IRA. It would be a costly mistake to pass up this opportunity.

The amount each person can save in an IRA has been increased to $2,000 a year as long as earned income is $2,000 or more. Deduct $2,000 from your taxable income or $4,000 if both husband and wife are working.

Taxes on IRA interest are deferred until you begin withdrawing from your account. Most likely you will be in a lower tax bracket after retirement.

Face it, Social Security simply isn't going to be enough. Now Uncle Sam is giving us all a tax break that also means financial security later on. Contact Vi Evans for details about setting up your IRA. Call 683-5281.

Federal regulations require both a tax and interest penalty for withdrawal from an IRA before you attain age 59½. Transfers may be made from one IRA to another without penalty, in some cases.

Robert Brewer and Fred Akers
...hey, kid, why'd you call time out?

Brewer dream comes true

Back when he was on the JV team at Richardson, Robert Brewer told Coach Fred Akers he would play for him at Texas someday.

Akers probably grinned obligingly and said, "Sure, kid" and, to himself, "about as soon as I play quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys."

Texas didn't even offer Brewer a scholarship, so he walked on and now he's following in a long line of Texas quarterbacks that include his Dad, "who can't run and can't pass. All they can do is win."

BREWER, an almost forgotten junior, took over for Rick McIvor at halftime of the Houston game with the Longhorns behind 14-0. He rallied the Steers to a 14-14 tie and the Longhorns haven't lost since.

His performance in the Cotton Bowl was his best yet and even forced Akers to reassess Brewer's talents. When asked about Brewer's success despite his lack of essential quarterback skills, Akers amended, "I'm beginning to more and more think of him as a passer. He's a competitor."

He's also got a head on his shoulders, which was one reason Texas was to turn an apparent 10-0 loss into a 14-12 win over Alabama in the Cotton Bowl game.

IT WAS Brewer's 30-yard TD run on a draw play, just when it seemed Texas' most promising drive of the day was about to bog down, that turned the game around.

Brewer courted sideline disfavor by calling a time-out as Texas lined up with third and 10, admitting, "I knew there would be some frowns on the sidelines."

Akers may have frowned, but Brewer quickly turned it to a wide grin. "He called time out because he saw that their defense would defeat the play we called. If we had run the play, it would have lost yardage," Akers said. "We decided it was time to call the draw and it worked. But none of it would have happened if Robert had not been heady enough to read the defense and call the time out."

And for Bear Bryant, the Cotton Bowl game was a case of Deja Vu. It was back when the Bear was at A&M that Charley Brewer, one of those in the traditional Texas quarterback mould, led Texas to a win in the 1955 game at College Station.

SWC's enjoys proudest moment

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference, boasting its proudest intersectional record since World War II, began family feuding Saturday night with a shocker.

Arkansas, unbeaten and fifth-ranked, ran into the rapidly improving Texas Tech Red Raiders at Lubbock Coliseum and the result was an opening disaster for the Razorbacks.

The panicky Razorbacks lost the ball 15 times as a sellout crowd of 9,544 fans howled in Lubbock Coliseum and coach Gerald Myers' scrappers prevailed 79-74.

Center Clarence Swannegan had eight rebounds and 23 points for Tech.

Arkansas center Scott Hastings answered with 24 points and 6 rebounds but the tough Razorback defense had an off night.

"You can't give up 79 points on the road and expect to win," said Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton. "I think the Southwest Conference will be this way all season. No one is going undefeated in this league or in the country."

The SWC tempo quickens Monday night with Rice at Houston in a television matchup at 8:10 p.m. CST.

On Tuesday, Texas A&M is at TCU and Texas Tech is at Texas.

night

Texas is at SMU on regional television Saturday while Baylor is at A&M, TCU is at Rice, Houston is at Texas Tech and Arkansas visits Nebraska.

The SWC is 64-23 against outside competition, the best record since 1943 for the league.

There are six non-conference games remaining. In other games Saturday night, Texas A&M defeated S.F. Austin 51-45 and SMU downed Angelo State 77-66.

TEB BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

FOR 50 minutes Friday, it seemed as though the Bear would add to the record for most wins by a college coach. The Tide appeared as well prepared for Texas as they had been for Baylor a year earlier.

In fact, it looked as though a win over Texas and another in 1983 would have given Bryant permanent possession of the Cotton Bowl and the right to move it back to Tuscaloosa.

He pulled out all the stops. There was the quarterback draw off the Shotgun, the old fashion shovel pass to set up a field goal, switching quarterbacks and tactics in midstream to confuse Texas and, yes, even a Quick Kick, a play that went out with the single wing.

"We used it several times this year," Bear explained. "I remember Texas beat us with a quick kick that rolled to our two-yard line when I was at A&M. In fact, I saw the fellow who kicked it here the other day. The kick was good for 55 yards, but I was hoping it would roll to their two or three."

EVEN after Texas pulled ahead 14-10, Joey Jones returned the kickoff 61 yards, a Cotton Bowl record, to almost rescue the game and this, too, was the result of another Bryant innovation that you may expect to see adopted elsewhere.

Asked about the presence of so many quick players on his kickoff unit, Bryant said, "We decided those big, slow ol' boys just got in the way on kickoffs. All they could do was stick out an elbow at someone and get in trouble, so we started putting in the quicker people."

Much was made before the game of Bear's inability to beat Texas with an Alabama team. When asked how he felt about the Texas jinx, he said, "I've never had any feeling about it, but I may start now." Then, he added with a grin, "I'd like to schedule them sometime during the regular season in Alabama."

Paterno advocates playoff

Ted Brown recuperates

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Ted Brown, leading ground-gainer for the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, is recuperating in High Point Memorial Hospital from an accidental shooting.

The 24-year-old former North Carolina State All-America running back was admitted to the hospital after the accident at his parents' home in High Point Dec. 27. His football career should not be affected by the wound, Brown said Sunday night.

According to police reports, Brown was moving a revolver to a safe place when it fell out of the holster, hit the floor and discharged. The bullet hit him in the back of the right thigh.

A hospital spokesperson said Brown was listed in "satisfactory" condition. When contacted Sunday, Brown initially declined to discuss the reason he was admitted.

"I am here for a rest," Brown said. "The doctor ordered me to take a vacation. I took quite a beating this season and now I'm here for a rest."

Brown later discussed the incident, saying he was able to walk into the emergency room under his own power.

The new IRA plans are here and there's one for everyone.

Now you, too, can retire a millionaire.

It's here. The new Individual Retirement Account. The IRA. A personal tax sheltered retirement savings plan for everyone. And it's available at First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. You can literally retire a millionaire, assuming you begin the plan in your late twenties. Not bad. Huh? Accumulations can be very substantial regardless of the age you begin.

Accumulations at retirement based on age of enrollment

At Age 27 — $1,044,533	At Age 45 — $142,530
At Age 30 — $758,329	At Age 50 — $76,380
At Age 35 — $441,826	At Age 55 — $37,123
At Age 40 — $253,998	At Age 60 — $13,826

*Figures above are based on the assumptions that $2,000 is invested in the account every year until age 65 and that the funds invested draw interest at 11% compounded annually until that age. Your interest rate may be higher or lower than 11%. Substantial penalties are required for early withdrawal.
