Oil fee could cut tax needs

By DONNA GEHRKE

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans wouldn't have the possibility of having a temporary sales tax increase imposed if President Reagan would order an oil import fee, Gov. Mark White said.

White told the Houston chapter of the American Petroleum Institute that his Republican opponent, former governor Bill Clements, should make use of his friendship with Reagan and press for the fee.

The governor said he was encouraged by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who said Monday he was working with the president on an energy legislative package that might include an import fee or a price floor.

Among other ideas of the package are repealing the windfall profits tax, a move White said is important in helping establish a strong energy industry.

The governor Tuesday also urged the members of the petroleum institute to press for solutions.

"Let's put the drills back in Texas and let's go back to work," he told them.

White also echoed his wants for a temporary sales tax increase even though a new study estimates the projected state budget deficit has eased by $700 million.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock announced Tuesday that the state's projected budget deficit has improved slightly over the past two months, from $3.5 billion to $2.8 billion.

The state Legislature in its first special session made budget cuts and resolved other issues that lowered the shortfall estimate, Bullock said.

White said he was encouraged by the new projection because "it makes it easier for all of us."

But the governor said the state still needs a one-year, 1⅛-cent increase in the state's 4⅛-cent sales tax because of immediate cash needs. House Speaker Gib Lewis, in a separate speech near Fort Worth, predicted such a proposal would pass.

Source of Big Spring flood unusual

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Flood waters in Big Spring's swampy valley — its low-lying area along the railroad track — are not just a quirk of nature.

"This is not at all unusual," said Joe Pickle, secretary of the Colorado River Municipal Water District. "I've seen it many times in my lifetime."

This time, however, the rising waters came from Natural Dam Salt Lake about 12 miles west of Big Spring, flooding the shallow and narrow Beals Creek, which runs through the city and into the Colorado River then feeds the E.V. Spence Reservoir at Robert Lee.

The out-of-bounds waters flooded older business and residential areas on Big Spring's west side and turned the multi-track railroad yard into a canal.

"I've seen the railroad yards flood many times," said Pickle, who has lived in Big Spring since the early 1920s.

But this time, instead of coming from direct rainfall and runoff into Beals Creek and from tributaries such as Mustang Draw and Elbow Draw, the waters are flowing into Beals Creeks by way of the spillway at Natural Dam Salt Lake.

Monahans Draw, which runs eastward from Odessa and Midland, eventually feeds Beals Creek.

Normally, the salt lake is "almost nothing," said Pickle. But due to the recent rains, the salt lake's watershed has collected between 30,000 and 35,000 acre feet of water — about the size of Lake Colorado City — and is spilling out about 1,000 acre feet of water per day.

"THIS PROBLEM IS going to persist" for awhile, Pickle said, because of the release of water from the lake, which is on the Wilkerson Ranch.

The spillway there was put in last summer "to protect the integrity of the dam," he said.

Big Spring City Manager Mack Wofford has been monitoring the Beals Creek overflow and flooding.

"That failure (of the dam) would have been disastrous to the community," Wofford said.

Under the present situation, the flooding is relatively isolated though extensive.

A break in the dam would change that. And Wofford noted that some talk — nothing official — has been given to dredging or otherwise widening or deepening Beals Creek to reduce the probability of future flooding.

Families have evacuated the low-lying area just west of downtown Big Spring when the Beals Creek waters encroached on their houses and businesses on Monday.

"We've been giving food out. We've been giving furniture out. We've been giving blankets out," said Big Spring Salvation Army Capt. Carroll Braun.

Judge orders implementation of single-member districts

From Staff Reports

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton today ordered the Midland Independent School District to implement a seven single-member district school board.

Currently the district has seven at-large positions.

In his judgment, Bunton ruled that the MISD's proposed 4-3 plan for four single-member districts and three at-large positions and the districts 2-5 plan for two single-member districts and five at-large positions were "unacceptable" and in violation of the 1965 federal Voting Rights Act.

The judgment stemmed from a lawsuit filed against the school district by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council.

In an earlier judgment on the same suit, Bunton had ordered the 7-0 plan advocated by LULAC and the BAC.

But the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La. had recommended that Bunton review his judgment due to a recent U.S. Supreme Court case dealing with elections.

Budget picture brighter

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The beleaguered state budget got a double-barreled shot in the arm Tuesday with hope for a resolution of the House-Senate deadlock over spending cuts and good news from Comptroller Bob Bullock.

An unofficial panel of House-Senate negotiators picked up Tuesday afternoon where they had left off when the first special session ended last week: about $320 million apart on proposed budget cuts.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Temple, broke the ice by offering an additional $160 million in cuts.

"The Senate stands ready to split the difference with you," Jones told the five House members on the committee.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, called Jones' offer "a big step toward our direction."

Rudd said the House negotiators would study the Senate proposal and probably come up with a counter-offer of their own.

"We'll try to see if we can't accept it, basically," he said.

Jones' plan would reduce the $18.5 billion fiscal 1987 budget by a total of $582 million. The Senate originally called for $418 million in cuts, while the House chopped $669 million.

About half of the additional cuts would come in higher education, the chief bone of contention between the two chambers.

At the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, for example, Jones' proposal appropriates almost $6 million — $131,000 less than the original Senate proposal but $624,000 more than the House plan and $594,000 less than under current law.

Midland and Ector County Health officials Dr. James Humphreys, left, and Dr. Robert Rowntree III in Odessa Tuesday discuss the recent outbreak of shigellosis.

Midland, Ector county officials confirm 46 cases of shigellosis

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland and Ector County authorities laid official claim Tuesday to 46 confirmed cases of shigellosis, saying state health officials are concentrating on restaurants as a source of the infection.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Ector County had 29 cases to Midland County's 17, but officials admitted the numbers may increase.

Dr. James Humphreys, a Midland Health Department official, said there was a possibility the initial infector's case of shigellosis had begun to wind down.

Humphreys, who spoke Tuesday afternoon with other health experts, said officials would continue to concentrate on keeping more people from getting the disease.

Officials admitted they began seeing the sudden increased outbreak of shigellosis cases as far back as Aug. 29.

They said they delayed telling the public because they wanted to be sure of their facts and quell a possible mass panic.

"We have a moral and ethical obligation to make sure what we say is 100 percent correct," Dr. Robert Rowntree III, an Ector County health official said.

"We don't have enough data to be badgered into just shooting from the hip here...we don't want this turning into a witch hunt," Humphreys said.

An investigation into the outbreak, which has primarily stricken those between the ages of 17 and 40, began in Midland and Odessa Saturday by Texas Department of Health epidemiologists, Dr. Harold Davis said.

Officials say that an outbreak among this population is unusual because the illness generally shows up among pre-school aged children.

"We have no idea where the disease is originating from," Davis, a TDH official said.

"Under law," Rowntree explained, "we can't even name a specific hunch while an (TDH) investigation is in process."

Officials said they are looking everywhere, but did confirm the water supplies in Midland and Odessa counties have all but been ruled out.

"There is no evidence of water supply infestation," Humphreys said.

Chilean killings called 'death squad vengeance'

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Three men linked to the Marxist left were abducted and killed in what a civil rights activist called apparent death squad vengeance for an assassination attempt against President Augusto Pinochet.

The fatal shootings of a well-known journalist, a schoolteacher and a machinist were reported Tuesday as tens of thousands of marchers roared their approval for the 70-year-old Gen. Pinochet and for his vow of tougher laws against terrorism.

Relatives said gunmen dragged all three victims from their homes within hours of the Sunday evening grenade and rocket ambush that killed five bodyguards in Pinochet's motorcade. None was considered a suspect in the attack.

"These seem to be revenge killings, except there is no apparent logic in the selection of the targets. They are leftists who seem to have been chosen indiscriminately," said Luis Hermosillo, a lawyer for the Roman Catholic rights agency Solidarity.

"What is frightening," he added, "is that we have not seen this kind of random death squad violence since the first few years after the coup."

Pinochet seized power from elected Marxist President Salvador Allende in a coup 13 years ago Thursday. Allende died in the revolt.

The lawyer spoke in an interview during a wake for Jose Carrasco, the foreign news editor of Analisis magazine, who was dragged barefoot from his home and shot 13 times in the back of the head.

The other victims were identified as Gaston Vidarrauguzaga, a schoolteacher who was shot 16 times, and Felipe Segundo Rivera, a government-employed machinist shot eight times.

Meanwhile, the military government's chief spokesman, Francisco Cuadra, said at least 40 members of the Communist-backed Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front were involved in the assassination attempt Sunday in the Maipo Canyon near Santiago. No suspects have been found.

Cuadra said the manhunt focused on Cesar Bunster, 28, son of a former Chilean ambassador to London who moved in upper-class circles after returning here from England in March. He worked 10 days as a doorman at the Canadian Embassy before dropping out of sight Aug. 20.

MISD approves new rate, foresees little change in taxes

From Staff Reports

The 1986-87 tax rate for the Midland Independent School District will be 4 percent higher than in the current fiscal year, but officials say most property owners will pay the same or less taxes.

Meeting in regular session Tuesday, the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees approved a tax rate of 79.9 cents per $100 valuation — 3.1 cents higher than the previous year.

However, officials said 85 percent of Midland homeowners will pay the same or less taxes than in 1985-86 because property values decreased an average 13 percent in Midland County.

For instance, school taxes on a home valued at $100,000 in 1985-86 will be $67.14 less this year based on the approved rate and the average decrease in property values.

Officials said the approved tax rate represents a 10.2 percent decrease in the effective rate which, as required by law, was printed on every property owner's tax statement.

Trustees said they were able to keep the tax rate at a "reasonable" level through budget cuts, increased state funding and the use of nearly $1.5 million in reserve funds.

Trustees on August 26 unanimously approved a 1986-87 budget of $58,071,125 — a decrease of .09 percent or $53,000 from the prior year's budget.

The 1986-87 budget includes cuts of more than $1 million in payroll costs and fringe benefits and an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Capital outlay expenses also are down $388,242 and MISD will spend $55,521 less on supplies and materials despite an increase in student enrollment.

News about teen suicide seems to induce deaths

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — News and feature stories about suicide, as well as television movies on the subject, seem to induce teen-agers to take their own lives, two new studies conclude.

The research suggests that even well-intentioned examinations of the rising suicide rate can prompt troubled adolescents to kill themselves. However, experts are unsure what, if anything, the news media should change in their portrayal of suicide.

"I don't think we should not tell the public that the suicide rate is going up. That would be ridiculous," said Dr. Leon Eisenberg of Harvard Medical School. "Yet if this is right, that may be some sort of stimulus to people who are thinking about it. I don't know what the solution is."

Although the studies concluded that teen-age suicides increase after television news programs or movies dealing with suicide, neither showed that the victims had seen the programs.

Dr. David P. Phillips of the University of California at San Diego found that the nationwide suicide rate among teen-agers was 7 percent higher than usual following 38 television news and feature stories about suicide during the 1970s.

Dr. Madelyn S. Gould of Columbia University found that the number of teen-age suicide attempts in the New York City area rose significantly following three of four made-for-television movies about suicide that were broadcast during the fall of 1984 and winter of 1985.

CHILE

Bunster is suspected of renting the four vehicles used by the assailants as well as the country house from which the ambush was staged.

Pinochet, wearing a white general's uniform, led mourners at a funeral service at the national military academy for the dead bodyguards, then stood for almost seven hours saluting marchers in a downtown Santiago parade in his honor.

Interviewed on the reviewing stand by state television, he said he intends to call a plebsicite to ask voter approval for "some laws to attack terrorism definitively." He did not elaborate.

An announcer claimed 800,000 Chileans marched in "the first day of the future" parade in support of Pinochet's candidacy for an eight-year presidential term starting in 1989. Chilean newsmen put the figure at 100,000 or less.

Under a 90-day state of siege decreed by Chile's ruling four-man military junta immediately after Sunday's ambush, the government can hold prisoners in secret locations, tap telephones and open mail. The decree also suspends judicial powers to review press censorship and bans on public gatherings.

On Monday, the government closed six opposition magazines and banned dispatches from Chile by the Reuters news agency. Twenty dissident leaders also have been arrested.

More than 100 Chilean journalists and dissidents gathered Tuesday for an all-night wake for Carrasco at the press association headquarters, where he served on the board of directors.

"Who killed him? The fascists!" they shouted as his open casket arrived from the morgue. "Who will avenge him? The people!"

"These killings have no logic," Jose Ruiz de Giorgio, a Christian Democratic labor leader, said at the wake. "Their effect is to scare a lot of people away from involvement in anything political."

The Chilean press association said it checked with government police agencies and found no evidence of an arrest order against Carrasco.

Carrasco, 41, joined the Leftist Revolutionary Movement as a student in the 1960s and left Chile after the 1973 coup.

MISD trustees approve AIDS attendance policy

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A policy to allow children with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome to attend school with their healthy classmates met unanimous approval Tuesday from the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

The policy — devised under the guidance of the Texas Education Agency and the Texas Department of Health — was created not to alarm the public, but rather prepare students, parents and teachers if a child is diagnosed with AIDS and attends public schools, officials said.

MISD Board President Bill Jackson has said there have been no reported cases of AIDS or AIDS-related diseases among Midland school children.

Given the present knowledge about AIDS, a child who has contracted the disease "is as much at risk from his environment as he is to his environment," Midland oncologist Dr. David Snyder told trustees August 26.

"Although there is certainly an amount of apprehension, a child with AIDS would not pose a threat to other school children," he said.

Jim Davis, microbiologist with the Texas Department of Health, has said nine AIDS cases have been reported to date in the 17-county region that includes midland and Ector Counties.

However, the number of AIDS cases cannot be reported per county until a minimum of 10 victims are identified in each county.

Under the school policy, children diagnosed as having AIDS would be allowed to attend school in a regular classroom with the approval of the superintendent and a committee comprised of the child's physician, the MISD medical advisor, director of elementary and secondary education, coordinator of health and a physician who has experience treating AIDS patients.

Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said the identity of any child with AIDS would be confined to the school principal, nurse and child's teacher.

However, in the event that a child is diagnosed as having AIDS, the school principal would notify in writing all staff members and parents that he or she is attending school.

Baressi said a child with AIDS may be removed from the regular classroom for his or her own protection when cases of childhood diseases are occurring in the schools.

Student enrollment surpassed the 19,000 mark this week despite earlier rumors of a mass exodus of Midlanders.

Officials said 19,020 students were enrolled Tuesday — 238 more than after the first week of school last year.

The largest increase is at Santa Rita Elementary School which reported an enrollment of 616 students compared to 516 on the same day last year.

Other elementary schools experiencing enrollment increases include Rusk, Parker, Long, Houston, Emerson, De Zavala, Crockett and Bonham.

At the junior high school level, Goddard enrollment is up while enrollments at Alamo and San Jacinto are below last year's figures.

Both freshman high schools reported enrollments slightly below last year while the district's two high schools said enrollment is above last year's figures.

Officials said the totals indicate a trend toward movement to the northwest part of the city.

If current trends continue, officials predict enrollment will peak at about 19,200 students and will be within 4 percent of last spring's enrollment projections.

Storm not likely to gain strength

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression in the Caribbean, downgraded from a tropical storm, probably won't strengthen today, a hurricane forecaster says.

At 6 a.m. EDT today, the poorly defined center of what used to be Tropical Storm Danielle was near latitude 15.2 north and longitude 76.0 west, or about 175 miles south southeast of Kingston, Jamaica, according to an advisory issued by the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables near here.

The system, with maximum sustained winds of 35 mph, was moving westward at 25 to 30 mph and is expected to continue to do so for the next 12 to 24 hours.

Danielle, the 1986 Atlantic hurricane season's fourth named storm, formed Sunday and carried highest sustained winds of 63 mph.

DISEASE

"Though the two cities do draw their water from the same sources, the water is separated and purified individually. I don't think that's a possibility.

"We are leaning more toward the food angle," Humphreys said.

All three doctors stressed they thought it was unethical to speculate publically which restaurants could have infected employees or have gotten bad food from a distributor.

"Any food handler is suspect, any restaurant is suspect," Rowntree said.

"We have to talk to the sick people and find a common denominator in the events immediately prior to their becoming ill," Davis said.

"Then, to begin ruling causes out, we'll try to find people who are not ill, but did some of the same things the sick people did," Davis said.

Davis said at this point, he had found no common threads at all.

"Even if it is food, it could be contaminated in the field as a raw product or somewhere else down the line," Davis said.

Questions were later raised concerning the ethics involved in keeping information out of circulation.

Shigellosis is rarely fatal, but in isolated cases could cause life-threatening complications, particularly dehydration resulting from severe diarrhea.

"What if an elderly person or someone already sick contracts the disease? The dehydration resulting from the intense diarrhea could kill him...are you willing to take that chance (in not releasing more information)?" a reporter asked.

"We don't think it's a chance. Shigellosis can be fatal only if it's not treated. All our cases are being treated with the proper medicines," Dr. Rowntree responded.

"It would be much tidier if we could trace all this back to a banquet or something, but unfortunately, that is not the case," Humphreys said.

Humphreys said he had never dealt with the disease and could not recall where other outbreaks had historically come from.

Davis said, however, shigellosis has been known to originate at banquets, day care centers, nursing homes, grocery stores or from water supplies.

The Health Department reminded that one of the few ways to possibly prevent contracting shigellosis is to make sure hands are washed scrupulously before preparing meals and after using the restroom.

Though Davis declined to make a solid committment, he said they should know something within a week.

"If I had all the answers now, then we wouldn't be here now would we?" Davis said.

FLOOD

The Salvation Army and other agencies have been assisting flood victims since the Labor Day weekend when flooding in south Big Spring and the threat of another dam collapse caused people to evacuate their houses. One woman drowned in the flooding then.

RALPH PIERCE, who said he has seen "three or four floods down there" in what he calls Jones Valley along Beals Creek, left his frame shack along Beals Creek late Monday at the urging of Braun.

"The churches had prayer meetings for water" before the drought was broken earlier this year, said the 84-year-old Pierce. "They got it."

By Tuesday, Pierce said that there was still "a bucket full or two" of water in his house.

"It's my home," said Pierce. "There ain't much to it, but it's my home."

Businesses along Third Street were flooded including a swap shop, a lock business, a thrift shop, the Harley-Davidson Motorcycle shop and an air-conditioning business.

The Alamo Motel, though partially flooded, was still open for business. And so was Lou's Cafe, a tavern on the west end of the flooding.

Two beer trucks forded Third Street and parked at the tavern-cafe.

"Betty (Lou) must be doing a good business," said Braun as he was driving down the flooded street in a van to determine if some residents who opted to stay in their houses needed food, clothing or evacuation.

A 35-year Salvation Army volunteer waded over to a woman's house, which was surrounded by water.

"She said she was doing fine as long as it doesn't rain," said the volunteer, who requested anonymity. The Salvation Army furnished her with groceries.

BEALS CREEK flooded into undeveloped areas.

"You could sell these as lake lots now — waterfront lots," quipped Braun.

Momentarily, the overcast sky partly cleared, and the bright sun shone through the blue sky.

"If we could just see a few days of sun like that," said Braun, "it would be a blessing."

Frances Pesina, 33, did not evacuate her house though the water surrounded it. Her husband, Jose, tested his fishing rod and reel.

"That's when the water goes into my house — when it rains," said Mrs. Pesina. "It's under the house."

She said that she was not going "to complain about the water anymore. We'll be complaining about mosquitoes."

On the far north side of Beals Creek, 31-year-old Linda White was standing on the porch of her parents' modest home while she held her 6-month-old son, Rickey. The house on Northwest Seventh Street was isolated by shallow water.

"It happened really overnight," she said of the flooding.

Ms. White said that the family stays at the house during the daytime but moves out each night to a motel out of fear that waters might rise during the night and endanger lives.

"I just hope it goes down, goes away or something," she said.

Braun told the woman that she and her family were welcome to spend the night at the Salvation Army.

"It won't cost you a penny," Braun said. "You're welcome over there. We'll help you in anyway we can."

Braun recounted the crippling effect which the sagging petroleum economy has caused the community — unemployment abounds, houses are vacant, and rumors suggest that up to 6,000 of Big Spring's almost 25,000 people already have left town.

And then came the recent heavy rains and the flooding.

"It's a sad thing for this town," Braun said. "All the (welfare) agencies are pressed to limit. You try to keep a good optimistic outlook, but it hurts."

OIL

White said he was pleased with the attitude of lawmakers and predicted they would be able to compromise on balancing the budget in the second special session which started Monday.

He estimated that the House and Senate differed $150 million on a compromise, but he said urged legislators not to cut too heavily into higher education, arguing that Texas needs an educated workforce to diversify the economy.

SESSION

Jones also agreed to the House request to cut $25 million from the Department of Highways and Public Transportation, but stuck to the Senate plan to maintain current spending for prisons and parole and probation programs.

Meanwhile, in a letter to state leaders Tuesday, Bullock officially reduced the state deficit from $3.5 billion to $2.8 billion.

"The lowering of the expected shortfall for 1986-1987 is solely a result of the moves by the Legislature and the attorney general and not from any new found optimism concerning the outlook for the Texas economy or state finances," Bullock warned.

"In fact, fiscal 1987 will be a darker year for the economy and state revenue than was 1986."

He said he continues to expect oil prices to average about $15 a barrel, depressing the energy industry. The comptroller based his revisions on:

— The Legislature's decision during the first special session to hold on to $223 million in interest on local sales tax collections otherwise owed to Texas cities;

— Passage of bills during the session that saved $273 million by eliminating a pay raise for state workers and shifting the state's pay day;

— A letter from Attorney General Jim Mattox saying that the state will not have to pay $100 million in contested corporate franchise tax payments this year; and — "Higher-than-anticipated earnings" by education trust funds, increased tuition collections and "increases in other minor fund revenue."

Gov. Mark White, who called the second session to deal with the unresolved crisis, was pleased with the news.

"That's what we're shooting for," he told reporters after visiting with House members and chatting amicably with Speaker Gib Lewis.

Both White and Lewis denied that the governor's speech Monday had created friction between the two.

In an address to the lawmakers, White said Lewis was ready to agree to a tax increase, while Lewis maintained he still considered that a last resort.

"There was no problem there," White said of his talk with Lewis Tuesday. "The speaker had his priorities set exactly right."

"Don't worry about it," Lewis said before leaving for a campaign speech in Fort Worth. "Don't try to create a problem that's not there."

Sen. Garn donating kidney to daughter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn underwent surgery today to donate a kidney to his daughter, who suffers from progressive kidney failure due to a diabetic condition.

Garn entered surgery at 7:45 a.m., a Georgetown University Hospital spokeswoman said. She said she did not know how long the operation, known as a nephrectomy, would take.

Garn, R-Utah, interrupted his reelection campaign Tuesday to check into the hospital with his daughter, Susan Rhae Garn Horne, 27.

Mary Thiriot, an aide to Garn, said Mrs. Horne was conscious when she checked into the hospital but added, "her condition has deteriorated."

"I am very happy and proud to be the donor. Her mother carried her for nine months and I am honored to give her part of me," Garn said in a statement Tuesday as he entered the hospital.

Diabetes impairs the body's ability to use sugar and causes sugar to appear abnormally in the urine. Among the many complications that can develop is kidney disease, caused by damage to the small blood vessels or to the units in the kidneys that clean the blood.

Mrs. Horne was diagnosed at age 10 as having juvenile diabetes, the form of the disease that requires an insulin shot each day to regulate blood sugar levels.

House members introduce tax bill

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Blaming Speaker Gib Lewis and partisan politics for the 30-day stalemate, 27 House members Tuesday introduced a bill containing Gov. Mark White's temporary tax increase plan.

Although the Constitution requires all tax legislation to originate in the House, a bi-partisan group of 21 senators plans to file a similar proposal — for discussion purposes only — in the senior chamber.

Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston and chairman of the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, said his group's tax bill would increase the state sales tax by 1.125 percent to 5.25 percent. As White had proposed, the tax rate would revert back to 4.125 percent when the fiscal year ends on Aug. 31, 1987.

Luna said the bill would raise about $500 million and, in combination with about $600 million in budget cuts, "would enable us to solve the fiscal crisis that we're in during the special session and get out of here." He said lawmakers could consider a more permanent solution to the state's financial problems when they return for the January regular session.

STATE

"As long as the Republican-partisan line in this whole process is, 'Stop a tax bill at all costs,' then we're not going to have the progress made that we need to have made on balancing the budget and dealing with the crisis."

— Al Luna

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said his 13-member committee continues to oppose raising taxes to deal with the state's $2.8 billion deficit. Only if sponsors can prove that a majority of the panel will support a tax bill, Schlueter said, will he hold a public hearing on any tax plan.

Echoing Lewis' position, Schlueter said the committee members won't back new taxes without some compromise from the Senate over budget cuts. "I'm convinced that until the Senate does something with our appropriations bill,...that there's not going to be any consideration whatsoever given to a tax bill," he said.

Luna, however, blamed the Republican majority on the committee for bottling up any revenue increases. "As long as the Republican-partisan line in this whole process is, 'Stop a tax bill at all costs,' then we're not going to have the progress made that we need to have made on balancing the budget and dealing with the crisis," he said.

GOP House members denied playing politics. Rep. Talmadge Heflin, R-Houston, called the split more conservative vs. liberal than Republican vs. Democrat. "I really don't think partisan politics has that much to do with it," he said.

Other tax bill sponsors blamed Lewis for the impasse that stalled the first 30-day special session.

"I do blame the speaker," said Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, who particularly criticized Lewis' plan to just keep the Treasury solvent until next year. "In business circles they tell me that once you start playing around with cash flow, the next step is bankruptcy."

In the Senate, 19 Democrats and two Republicans have signed on to a resolution calling for senators to discuss increasing both the sales and gasoline taxes.

"This is just to give the Senate Finance Committee a vehicle to hold hearings on so that the process can be compressed," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, explaining that senators were not trying to circumvent the House's constitutional prerogative on tax bills.

Angry husband shoots wife, himself on school grounds

ABILENE (AP) — A man who was angry at his wife over an imminent divorce chased her across the street to an elementary school and shot her before he turned the gun on himself, police said.

No children or teachers at the school were injured in the incident Tuesday morning at Bonham Elementary School.

Both David Lee Wilkerson, 32, identified by police as the assailant, and his wife, Beverly Wilkerson, 31, were in serious condition early today in the intensive care unit of Hendrick Medical Center, said spokeswoman Alice Bishop. Wilkerson had three gunshot wounds in his chest, while his wife was wounded in the back, officials said.

Fourth grade teacher Ledessa White said she was standing outside the door of the teacher's lounge about 10 a.m. Tuesday when she heard a woman scream and then heard two gunshots.

Ms. White said the woman ran into the teacher's lounge where she was followed by a man who pointed a gun at her. She pleaded, "Please don't shoot me, please don't shoot me," the teacher said, and locked herself in the bathroom.

Ms. White said the man "looked like he wanted to force the door open where his wife was, but instead he left" without saying a word.

Police officer Kim Vickers said Wilkerson had chased his wife from his mother's home across the street. It "appears he shot her inside the doorway," of the school, Ms. Vickers said.

Then, he went back across the street to his mother's home and shot himself three times in the chest with a .22-caliber rifle, according to police.

Ms. Vickers said Wilkerson, who had been working in Andrews, apparently became enraged upon learning his wife had filed for divorce.

A school official said students probably didn't even hear the shots Tuesday morning.

School principal David Polnick said he told teachers over the public address system to lock their classroom doors, turn out the lights and go into the "duck and cover" drill designed for a tornado.

It took about 30 minutes to make certain the gunman was not on the school grounds, Polnick said.

Lewis proposes delaying retirement program

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The key plank in House Speaker Gib Lewis' no-tax solution to the state's fiscal crisis faces an uncertain future in a House committee Lewis hand-picked.

With or without any new taxes, Lewis' staff maintains, the Treasury will be too deep in the hole by December to pay its bills unless lawmakers take some significant steps to adjust cash flow.

The speaker's answer to the cash-flow problem is to delay the $60-million-a-month transfers from general revenue into pension funds for retired teachers and state employees.

The plan calls for the state to pay back the full $700 million, plus a minimum 8-percent interest, on the Aug. 31, 1987 end of the fiscal year.

The two bills — one for each retirement program — never came out of the House Appropriations Committee during the first special session that ended last week.

At the time, supporters said Lewis knew the bills had no chance in the Senate and didn't want to ask House members to take the political heat for voting on the controversial bills when they had no future across the rotunda.

Opponents Tuesday said Lewis may not have gotten a positive vote if he wanted one. The Appropriations Committee met Monday and took no action on them.

"It's going to be a close vote," said Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, the chief opponent of the transfers. Ms. Denton said the outcome in committee will depend on which of the 29 committee members show up when the roll is called.

Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and a supporter of the plan, agreed with Ms. Denton's assessment. "It's going to be a tough vote," Rudd said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Tax amendment approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would prohibit the Legislature from imposing an income tax on corporations or individuals.

The vote was 9-1.

A similar resolution was approved by the committee in the first special session but never debated by the House.

If approved by the House and Senate the constitutional change would be placed on the November 1987 general election ballot for a statewide vote.

Primary bill introduced

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would have Texas join other Southern states in holding a regional presidential primary in 1988 has been introduced in the Legislature.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, introduced the measure in hopes of getting it passed during the 30-day special session that began on Monday.

Gov. Mark White, who sets the agenda for special sessions, said during the session which ended last Thursday that he wouldn't allow consideration of the primary bill.

But Edwards said he was hopeful White might reconsider if the current special session completes work on balancing the state budget.

About a dozen Southern states so far have agreed to shift their 1988 presidential primaries to early March. Backers, including Texas state Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, say a regional primary would give the South new clout in the selection of Republican and Democratic presidential candidates.

A&M enrollment increases

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Fall enrollment at Texas A&M University was marked Tuesday at 36,520, for an increase of 855 students over last year, university officials said.

Although the figures are unofficial, President Frank E. Vandiver reported 36,520 were enrolled for classes as of Monday, a 2.5 percent increase over last year. The final enrollment figures will be recorded Sept. 16, the 12th day of classes.

Texas A&M's Corps of Cadets, the largest uniformed student body outside the military academies, also is larger this fall. About 2,038 students are in the cadet corps, compared with 1,977 last year.

More than 6,037 students are enrolled at the graduate level this fall, up 178 over last year.

Texas A&M Associate Registrar Don Carter said the final total enrollthis fall will be higher for the first time in two years. Texas A&M's enrollment peaked in 1983 at 36,846.

Baptist panel OKs program

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Baptist Executive Board has approved a $65.5 million cooperative program for missionary, benevolent and educational causes in 1987, officials announced Tuesday.

The 193-member board, here for its quarterly meeting, also elected D.L. Lowrie as new director of the State Missions Convention.

The board will recommend the budget to the Baptist General Convention of Texas at its annual meeting in El Paso on Nov. 4-5.

More than $22 million, or 36.5 percent, of the proposed budget is designated for worldwide Southern Baptists causes. The rest will help support eight Texas Baptist universities, eight hospitals and several other institutions.

Johnson Space Center to regain control of building crew module

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Johnson Space Center will regain control of the interior elements of the crew compartment of America's space station under an agreement now being negotiated between managers of two NASA centers, a space agency spokesperson said.

The spokesperson, Mark Hess, made the comments to clarify a statement made earlier Tuesday by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

The senator said that the Texas center would have "full control of the habitation module," but Hess said the development of the hull and exterior of the module would still be managed by the Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama.

Hess emphasized that work management assignments for the space station are tenative and that agreement has not been affirmed by both centers nor by NASA headquarters.

In a statement released by Gramm's office, the senator was quoted as saying that the plan "already has been accepted in principle by NASA headquarters" and that it "marks a major policy realignment."

Hess said that, in effect, the plan would merely return to Johnson a work assignment that had been taken away under a previous revision of the space station plan.

Gramm also was quoted as saying, "At this point in the review process, it appears that full control of the habitation module, including contracting and operation of training facilities, will remain in Houston."

Hess said that Johnson would not have "full control" of the entire module, but only of the internal components, and that Marshall would oversee construction of the external components. A single contractor, however, would manufacture the entire module, and that management of the total space station program would be by NASA headquarters in Washington.

Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Texas, cautioned that the agreement was still far from final on giving the internal component contract to Johnson.

"It sounds very positive. We're making great progress," said Andrews, but he added: "It's premature to say that the issue has been finally resolved."

He said NASA administrator James Fletcher is scheduled to testify before the house subcommittee on science on Sept. 25 and is expected to explain the agreement then.

Under the original plan, Johnson was to manage the whole space station program and oversee construction of the habitation module.

But Fletcher announced earlier this year that the original plan was being modified. The management of major elements of the habitation module on the space station were to be taken from the Johnson Space Center and assigned to the Marshall center. Also, Fletcher said that management of the whole space station program would be moved from Johnson to NASA headquarters.

Studies showed that the move would cost the Houston center more than 1,000 jobs.

Andrews said he and other Texas congressmen vigorously objected.

"The first meeting with Fletcher on the issue was very brutal and very frank," said Andrews.

Gramm later also met with Fletcher.

The administrator shortly afterward ordered the space station plan to be re-examined. Fletcher admitted he should have consulted with congress before announcing the plan.

Primaries launch another Kennedy career, second 'women-only' race

NATION

Associated Press

In a night of triumph for female politicians, Maryland voters launched the career of a Kennedy daughter and set up the nation's second women-only Senate race, while Connecticut Republicans bucked party leaders to nominate lawmaker Julie Belaga for governor.

Other results from Tuesday's primaries in nine states and the District of Columbia showed New York Democrats putting Bella Abzug ahead in a comeback bid and Arizona superintendent of public instruction Carolyn Warner leading for the Democratic nomination to succeed Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

Vermont's Democratic Gov. Madeleine Kunin was unopposed for nomination to a second term.

"We think Sept. 9 is a real breakthrough," Celinda Lake of the Women's Campaign Fund said in Washington early today. "It's going to put us in very good shape for November. It's part of the coming of age of our women candidates."

In other highlights from the busiest primary day of 1986, Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich fended off a Democratic challenge by St. Paul Mayor George Latimer; former Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling won the GOP race to oppose Sen. Patrick Leahy, and consumer activist Mark Green defeated millionaire John Dyson for a chance to face New York's GOP Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

The Minnesota race appeared closer than polls had indicated. With nearly half the precincts reporting, Perpich had 132,651 votes or 50.6 percent, and Latimer had 124,399 votes or 47.4 percent, with three others dividing the rest.

The most heartening results for women came in Maryland, where former White House aide Linda Chavez and Rep. Barbara Mikulski crushed male competitors to win the Republican and Democratic nominations for Senate.

The seat, being vacated by retiring GOP Sen. Charles Mathias, is seen as crucial in the battle for control of the Senate, where Republicans hold a 53-47 edge.

With 99 percent of the vote counted, Ms. Mikulski had 343,432 votes or 53 percent in an eight-candidate field that included Rep. Michael Barnes, second with 189,531 votes or 29 percent, and Gov. Harry Hughes, third with 85,288 votes or 13 percent.

On the Republican side, Chavez had 97,421 votes or 73 percent, and the closest of her 10 opponents was Michael Schaefer, who had 16,327 votes or 12 percent.

Chavez, claiming her victory, immediately attacked her rival as a "left-of-center-liberal who represents the failed policies of the past..."

"Barbara Mikulski is a San-Francisco-George-McGovern-liberal-Democrat, and I am a mainstream Marylander," said Chavez, a recent convert to Republican ranks who moved to the state two years ago.

The nation's only other Senate race pairing two women was in Maine in 1960, according to officials in the Senate historian's office, when Republican Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, since retired, defeated Democrat Lucia Cormier.

In Maryland's 2nd District, Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, the daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, won the Democratic nomination to oppose first-term GOP Rep. Helen Delich Bentley.

Mrs. Townsend, the first female member of the Kennedy family to seek office and the first of her generation, defeated Linda B. Robinson, a follower of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche Jr., and Morris C. Durham, an engineer with the State Aviation Administration.

"This campaign started small. Some of the experts said we didn't stand a chance," she said. "Now the experts are taking another look."

Next Tuesday, Mrs. Townsend's brother, Joseph P. Kennedy II seeks the Democratic nomination in the Massachusetts congressional district once represented by their late uncle, John F. Kennedy.

Mrs. Abzug, an outspoken feminist who served three terms in Congress from Manhattan in the 1970s, claimed victory as she held to a slim lead in over three rivals in suburban Westchester County's 20th District.

"I've won some and I've lost some and believe me, winning is better," said Mrs. Abzug, who failed in past bids for Senate and New York mayor.

With 97 percent of precincts reporting, Mrs. Abzug had 36 percent, or 9,243 votes. Her closest opponent, Oren Teicher, had 34 percent, or 8,774 votes. Teicher won the nomination in 1984 and lost the election to Republican Rep. Joseph DioGuardi.

The victory for Belaga in Connecticut was especially sweet because the state GOP had endorsed one of her two rivals, former state Sen. Richard Bozzuto. Belaga, the deputy House majority leader, said she would campaign on her "absolute commitment that the people of this state deserve better" than Democratic Gov. William O'Neill.

Here are results of other major races Tuesday:

ARIZONA — Evan Mecham, a Glendale auto dealer, held a surprising lead over House Majority Leader Burton Barr for the GOP nomination for governor. Veteran Democratic Rep. Morris Udall easily overcame a primary challenge and won renomination for the seat he has held since 1961.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA — Mayor Marion Barry coasted to renomination in the Democratic primary. His Republican opponent will be Carol Schwartz, a member of the city council.

MARYLAND — Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer defeated Attorney General Stephen Sachs in a four-way race for the Democratic nomination to succeed Hughes. State lawmaker Thomas J. Mooney was unopposed in the Republican primary.

MINNESOTA — Former state Rep. Cal Ludeman won the GOP nomination for governor.

Abducted educator was 'fearful'

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. educator abducted in Lebanon was becoming more fearful about living in the war-torn country and had planned soon to return here after long ignoring recommendations that Americans leave, relatives say.

Frank H. Reed, a 53-year-old Malden native, wrote in a letter to his mother saying he needed money to help him return to the United States with his Syrian-born wife, Fahima Dalati, and their 5-year-old son, Tareq, Reed's brother said.

"He said he had intentions of coming home this year," Edward Reed said. "We had urged him to get out."

Reed was being driven from his home in Moslem west Beirut to play golf when he was abducted Tuesday.

"This is awful news," his mother, Leota Sprague, 87, said. "I wonder if we will be able to get him out of there. I hope that everything that can be done is being done. But I don't really know."

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem fundamentalist group believed to have ties to Iran and reportedly holding at least three other Americans, claimed responsibility.

It accused Reed, who has lived in Beirut since 1977 and founded the private Lebanese International School, of being a spy for the CIA.

"We just know that's not true," said Jean Reed, Edward Reed's wife.

Edward Reed said his brother had made Lebanon his home and converted to Islam to marry the woman he loved.

Even when the U.S. government recommended that all Americans leave Beirut, Reed "felt at home in Lebanon, so naturally he stayed over there," his brother said.

"He thought it was a challenge to be there," he said. "He thought he was doing good there."

But because of the continuing violence in Beirut, Reed wanted to leave and was trying to obtain a permanent resident visa for his wife, the brother said.

Tewfik Mishlawi, a journalist who knew Reed when he worked in Lebanon, agreed that the spying allegation seemed far-fetched.

"He was apolitical and had friends all over the country," said Mishlawi, now working at The Center of Foreign Journalists in Reston, Va.

The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, the Roman Catholic priest who was kidnapped by Islamic Jihad but was eventually released, said in Washington that because of Reed's Islamic faith, he doubted that group was really responsible for the abduction.

However, he added: "Maybe they feel as if their demands have not been met. They might be renewing their kidnapping to make sure their demands are met or it might be a response to other things that are happening in the world, in the Middle East."

Mrs. Sprague said that during the violence that has plagued Lebanon, her son's former home was destroyed by bombing, as was a school where he taught before founding the Lebanese International School.

"We worried, but Frank told us he'd take care of himself and not to worry," said Jean Reed, adding that he went to Lebanon on a teaching assignment after working years as a teacher and principal in Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire.

NATION in brief

Senator says anti-Marxist leader deserves weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who recently returned from a clandestine visit to Angola, says anti-Marxist rebel leader Jonas Savimbi deserves increased U.S. military aid, particularly armor-piercing, anti-tank weapons.

At a news conference Tuesday, Hatch displayed a Russian-language "instruction plate" he said he had unscrewed from a captured Soviet-made rocket launcher and a video tape in which he is seen inspecting other captured Soviet weapons, including a tank.

Hatch said Savimbi's forces have received some effective U.S. weapons, but declined to say whether he was referring to shoulder-fired, ground-to-air Stinger missiles that he urged be provided.

Hatch's visit to Angola apparently was timed to precede an expected House vote on ending covert U.S. assistance to Savimbi, a step the senator said would be "a grave error."

Cancer survivors defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is considering a resolution decrying employment discrimination against cancer survivors.

The House, by voice vote, passed the non-binding, sense-of-Congress resolution condemning job discrimination against people, who have or have had cancer, based on their health histories.

"This group is entitled to equal rights, opportunities and privileges in our workplace and in society as well," Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., said Tuesday. "They are courageous conquerors who deserve the open arms, not the cold shoulder, of society."

Plane, chopper too low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Photographs taken by a tourist show the sightseeing plane and helicopter that collided over the Grand Canyon last summer were at least several hundred feet below the canyon rim at the time of the collision, according to documents.

The National Transportation Safety Board released a number of documents Tuesday on its investigation of the accident in advance of a hearing on the collision scheduled for next week at Grand Canyon, Ariz.

Federal investigators previously had not been able to determine the altitude of the collision or whether the two aircraft were below the canyon rim.

Sightseeing flights below the rim of the canyon have been the center of controversy on both environmental and safety grounds.

Since the accident, which claimed the lives of 25 people last June 18, the Federal Aviation Administration has been considering a ban on low-level flights into the canyon.

Shuttle fleet needs money

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has asked Congress for money to restore the space shuttle fleet to four ships, despite claims by NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher that "a fifth orbiter is absolutely imperative."

Reagan's approval of a replacement for the space shuttle Challenger was announced in August, and the request made Tuesday for $272 million to begin the first phase of construction had been expected.

The new ship, expected to be ready to fly in 1991, will cost about $2 billion. Other replacement costs, such as spare parts and space suits, will bring the total to $2.8 billion.

'Little chance' of tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood, who heads the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, says there is little chance Congress will raise income taxes this year to cut the federal deficit.

"There will not be a rate increase this year and, I hope, not for several years to come," the Oregon Republican told the American Business Conference Tuesday. Packwood repeated President Reagan's position that the deficit should be reduced by cutting spending.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has endorsed increasing income-tax rates to get the deficit down to a more manageable level. But Rostenkowski acknowledged there is little chance Congress will move in that direction without a presidential request.

Packwood predicted Congress will pull together a package of spending reductions of $6 billion to $7 billion with enough revenue increases to cut the deficit to the highest level allowed by law, about $154 billion.

Army restricts chopper use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it will not ground two aging helicopter models that have suffered a rare pattern of engine failures, but said it has imposed special flight restrictions on the aircraft.

The flight restrictions will remain in place until the Army replaces certain engine gears in affected OH-6 and OH-58A light observation helicopters, a spokesman said Tuesday.

That replacement process will begin in January. It will take about a year to modify all 1,700 affected helicopters, at a cost of some $2 million, said Jim Wittmeyer, a spokesman for the Army's Aviation Systems Command.

In the meantime, the Army and National Guard units that use the helicopters have been ordered to maintain a minimum altitude of 400 feet during flights; to have a fire crew standing by during engine starts, and to ban passengers from the chopper back seats.

Reagan prepared to 'take steps' in Daniloff release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, rejecting "business as usual" with Moscow while American reporter Nicholas Daniloff remains in a Soviet jail, says it is prepared to take steps if he is not released soon, but will not say what the steps might be.

A decision was expected today on whether administration officials will attend a conference in the Soviet Union next week that is being sponsored by the Chautauqua Institution, a private cultural center near Buffalo, N.Y. Daniloff's wife has said their attendance would be "very inappropriate."

Strobe Talbott, Washington bureau chief of Time Magazine, said Tuesday he will cancel his participation unless Daniloff is freed.

"I am not going to the Soviet Union to take part in an event that is supposed to advance and increase communications between the American and Soviet people while a journalistic colleague is in jail for pursuing legitimate professional obligations," Talbott said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the question of whether U.S. officials will attend the conference, being held in Riga, the capital of Latvia, was still under consideration.

Officials said a decision was imminent because participants in the meeting were scheduled to leave Thursday. Administration officials scheduled to make the trip included Jack Matlock, a Soviet affairs specialist on the National Security Council staff; Pentagon arms control expert Richard Perle; and Mark Palmer, a State Department expert on Eastern Europe.

Michael Armacost, undersecretary of state for political affairs, said earlier this week he had not made up his mind on the issue, but that if U.S. officials attend they should make the Daniloff case the centerpiece of their discussions.

Speakes told reporters Tuesday, "Our strong desire is to resolve this case quickly rather than to talk about what steps we might take if it is not resolved."

"I will not have any discussion on the options that are at our disposal except to indicate that there are some, and we will be prepared to do so," he said.

Speakes said several U.S.-Soviet meetings, regarded as preludes to a possible summit this year between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, were still scheduled.

Asked whether this meant it was "still business as usual" between the two countries, he said, "No, it's not business as usual. We will, in every case where we meet with the Soviets, use these meetings to first raise the question of Daniloff."

Daniloff, 51, is Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report. He was arrested by the Soviet KGB on Aug. 30 and later was charged with espionage.

The Senate voted 93-0 on Tuesday to demand Daniloff's release, saying his continued imprisonment on espionage charges "threatens to undermine constructive relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and jeopardizes the hopes for a summit meeting."

The resolution also urged news gathering and news accreditation organizations that provide support, membership and other privileges to Soviet news organizations to "consider appropriate actions to underscore the demand for Daniloff's release."

In New York, the board of directors of The Associated Press canceled a planned trip to the Soviet Union to protest Daniloff's jailing. Board members were to have begun an eight-day visit to Moscow and Leningrad on Sept. 20. The board had suggested such a visit and an invitation had been extended by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Terrorism's toll

To anyone who thought the international scourge of terrorism was abating, the outbursts of violence at distant quarters of the globe during recent days brought a dismaying message:

Sad though it is, as a cheap instrument of power, terrorism still flourishes. No one can predict where it will strike next or how many more innocent victims will be claimed in its name.

The enormity of this crime against mankind was laid bare in one poignant moment last week when a mother from the United States, Kala Singh of San Diego, Calif., died when she threw herself in front of her two young children to save them from Arab gunmen.

That the incident occurred aboard a hijacked airliner in Karachi, Pakistan, is simply a reminder of terrorism's long reach. That the attack was perpetrated by Palestinian extremists in a country long sympathetic to the Palestinian cause underscores terrorism's randomness and irrationality.

Over the short span of four days, the civilized world sustained a heavy toll:

■ Amid grenade explosions and bursts of gunfire on Pan Am Flight 73 in Karachi, 18 passengers died and scores were wounded, including numerous children, at the hands of four terrorists who panicked when the plane's power system failed.

■ In Istanbul the next day, masked Arab militants hurled grenades and sprayed submachine-gun fire in Turkey's largest synagogue, killing 21 worshipers and wounding four. A radical Islamic group proclaimed the attack was in retaliation for Israeli Army actions in southern Lebanon.

■ In the Philippines eight persons died and 56 were wounded when anti-government rebels tossed a grenade into a Roman Catholic church during a wedding. A group seeking Muslim self-rule claimed responsibility.

■ In Paris a bomb blast tore through the post office at City Hall, killing a woman and wounding 16 persons, including a 12-year-old girl. Authorities believe the attack was related to French policies in the Middle East.

All of these acts were seemingly unrelated, evidence that terrorism sometimes stems from many causes even though it has international links that are capable of coordination.

So far the attacks do not appear to have the direct support of radical governments such as Moammar Gadhafi's Libya. In fact, Gadhafi lost no time in publicly denying any involvement in the carnage at Karachi, where one of the groups claiming credit was known as the Libyan Revolutionary Cells.

What the all-too-familiar horrors of the last few days show is that a terrorist bent on martyrdom in pursuit of his cause cannot always be thwarted. It is particularly worrisome that the ranks of such would-be martyrs have increased with the rise of Islamic fundamentalism.

But where states have assets that can be placed at risk, a sustained U.S. policy of striking back militarily, economically and diplomatically can help. Last April's U.S. military raids on targets in Tripoli and Benghazi have done much to deter this particular strain of terror.

Ending all violence by the world's fanatics is beyond the reach of any government policy. The best that can be achieved is a firm stance that refuses to reward terrorists for their actions and promises to punish them when they are caught.

Drug testing for air controllers on hold

WASHINGTON — The shocking allegations of illicit drug use by Los Angeles air traffic controllers shouldn't have surprised the Federal Aviation Administration. The agency was warned two years ago that drug abuse could be high among the 12,000 controllers who were hired to replace strikers fired in 1981.

Jack Anderson

The warning came from the Transportation Department's inspector general, who said: "Many of the newly hired individuals have prior records of involvement with civilian or military police involving drugs."

The inspector general's investigators found that 80 out of 2,108 controllers they checked had been implicated with drugs before joining the FAA, a spokesman told our associate Stewart Harris. Those studied were employed in the FAA's New England, Great Lakes and Northwest Mountain regions.

But none of the arrests prevented the FAA from hiring the desperately needed controllers. Federal law forbids discrimination against job applicants because of past histories of alcohol or drug abuse.

If the three regions studied by the inspector general's investigators are typical, there could be 450 air traffic controllers nationwide with drug records. The inspector general noted that the number of such prior offenders could be higher than normal because most of the striker replacements grew up at a time when drug abuse was widespread.

Last year the inspector general's investigators found that three controllers at Scranton (Pa.) International Airport used marijuana. After a urinalysis exposed him, one controller confessed that his addiction was so strong that he smoked pot while traveling to and from work. The others admitted smoking marijuana as often as three times a month. None admitted using the perception-altering drug while actually working in the control tower.

The inspector general's report estimated that, all told, at least 1,500 FAA employees — controllers and others — should be enrolled in some kind of alcohol or drug rehabilitation program. Yet in fiscal 1985, only 262 FAA employees were actually enrolled in these programs.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen minimized the problem in an appearance on network television a few days ago. "We do not have a lot of drug abusers in the FAA," he asserted.

The agency did not take kindly to the inspector general's report, complaining that it didn't identify a single actual drug abuser who was on the FAA payroll. The agency insisted it has relatively few drug-related incidents considering the large number of employees.

In an internal memo, the FAA warned that the report could "severely damage public confidence in the air transportation system." Still, the fact remains that there's no way to know if control tower personnel are taking drugs, because the FAA doesn't require controllers to be tested for drug use.

While refusing to acknowledge that it has a problem, the FAA has dawdled for nearly two years over a program to test controllers for drug abuse before they are hired, then once a year after that. At first, the $700,000 drug testing program was postponed while the FAA tried to find funds. Then the program was delayed by the search for a laboratory to handle the testing.

The result is that actual drug testing for traffic controllers won't start until this December — 26 months after the inspector general warned the FAA brass that there might be junkies in their control towers.

The relaxed attitude toward drug and alcohol abuse among those on whom the safety of millions of air travelers depends is not limited to top officials in Washington, apparently. The 1984 inspector general report said: "We found that (control tower) supervisors are often reluctant to take necessary action against a drug or alcohol abuser before a serious conduct event (i.e., a safety violation, civil arrest) has occurred."

At one airport, for example, the report said, it wasn't until a "serious safety event occurred" that an FAA worker who was drinking on the job finally was ordered into rehabilitation. This was despite the fact that a concerned co-worker had warned the supervisor about the boozer on three separate occasions.

Each time, according to the inspector general report, the boss replied that "he was monitoring the situation." Even when controllers are confirmed drug abusers, their punishment varies depending on the region, according to the report. Some aren't even disciplined.

The inspector general urged a uniform agency policy for dealing with controllers who abuse drugs and alcohol. He also recommended hiring a full-time coordinator to run a nationwide rehabilitation program, training supervisors to refer workers with problems to the program and monitoring the workers' performance after they complete it. The full-time coordinator has not yet been hired.

MINI-EDITORIAL. Mexico's foreign ministry wins the Inspector Renault Award for 1986 hands down. As fans of "Casablanca" know, the inspector, ordered to find a reason to shut down Rick's nightclub, professed to be shocked that gambling was going on — just as a croupier brought him his winnings. The foreign ministry expressed indignation that U.S. drug agents had been carrying on investigations inside Mexico — as if this hadn't been done with full cooperation of Mexican authorities. The Mexicans are miffed at U.S. criticism of the arrest and torture of a U.S. agent. But they shouldn't respond by being silly — or by ending the cooperative effort.

Kent's own 'censorship'

In response to the Kent Kwik ad in the Midland Reporter-Telegram of Aug. 24, it is time to tell it like it is.

Of the four people who recently visited the district office of Kent Oil, only one was from Odessa. Two were from the Midland Chapter of West Texans for Decency, and one was from the Andrews Chapter.

Mr. Kent stated that some of his employees were offended at the contents of magazines he sells — offended by his own merchandise!

Mr. Kent stated they had been threatened with pickets. In 1985, Mr. Kent said his organization was reconsidering the matter of selling these magazines and requested that his stores not be picketed. This request was honored, and the Kent stores were not picketed. But afterward, there was no word from Kent regarding their decision and they continued selling the magazines.

Mr. Kent talked of censorship, yet he stated "we have also removed some magazines and books we felt inappropriate" — in effect, he censored his own merchandise! Did he "dictate to the people of West Texas what they can or cannot buy?" He violated his customers' right to choose, then says he supports that right!

Yes, it's time to tell it like it is — if you disagree with us, we respect your opinion. To those who are "fed up" with pornography and indecency, we appreciate your support.

Ban a state income tax

When Gov. Mark White opened the special session of the Texas legislature, one of the items that he requested was a constitutional amendment banning state income taxes. With all the debate over horse racing and a lottery, this request has apparently become lost somewhere in the committee rooms of the capitol. A constitutional ban on state income taxes should be enacted, at the latest, in the second session.

A ban on state income taxes would insure that Texas could continue to attract new business and industry from the high-tax states. There would be no new bureaucracy created to collect and administer the tax. The taxpayers of Texas would not have to worry about recovering from the next recession under the burden of a state income tax. Without a constitutional ban on state income taxes, the next "budget crisis" will likely be solved by imposing a state income tax on the citizens of Texas.

Clearly, a ban on state income taxes is desirable. Every taxpayer in Texas should write or phone their senators and representatives in Austin and urge them to pass a constitutional amendment banning state income taxes.

Where is Ed Todd?

Where, oh where has Ed Todd gone? Oh where, oh where can he be? With his beard cut off and his mustache gone, oh where, oh where can he be?

There is a clean-shaved person going around town claiming to be Ed Todd. This can't be! Where is the fuzzy little face we all know?

I think Ted Battles picked on him so much, it drove him to distraction, wherever that is. I believe the R-T has thrown us a ringer. This is going to take a lot of investigation.

'A Star Is Born' — for the Democratic Party

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan may be the biggest money-raising star on the political circuit, but for once the Democrats matched or maybe even topped him here last weekend, with a superstar of their own: Barbra Streisand, singing in public for the first time in six years.

Tom Wicker

Reagan rang up close to $1.5 million at a $1,000-a-plate dinner for 1,500 on behalf of Rep. Ed Zschau, the Republican candidate for the seat of California's Democratic senator, Alan Cranston.

But for Streisand's performance in an outdoor amphitheater constructed at her secluded ranch in Malibu, 250 couples paid $5,000 each. Together with other revenues, that brought the Democratic box office take to an estimated $1.5 million too, benefiting Cranston and five Democratic senatorial candidates.

A video recording of the evening — which included a monologue by the comedian Robin Williams (Reagan, he observed, was "Disney's last wish") — may also be produced. If so, its profits could run to more millions, which a foundation formed by Streisand could use to finance voter registration, antinuclear activities and the like. Under federal law, the video revenues could not be used to support political candidates.

The weekend in Los Angeles might have set some kind of record for political fund-raising — an activity of crucial political importance in the expensive age of television, but one that is tending to entangle politics more and more with show business and big money. Nowhere do these elements tap into each other more naturally than in Los Angeles.

The Democrats' weekend coup was organized primarily by the Hollywood Women's Political Committee but actually came about because of the Soviet nuclear accident at Chernobyl. When she read of it, Streisand told an audience of some of Hollywood's prettiest faces, biggest names and fattest wallets, "I realized we are all downwind."

She asked friends, nuclear experts and political activists for advice on what she might do to help avert the nuclear dangers symbolized by Chernobyl. The consultations resulted in her decision to sing again in public — for only the fourth time in 20 years — to dramatize the issue and with the practical object of raising money to help Democrats regain control of the Senate.

The profits from the concert will support Cranston's re-election campaign and that of Sen. Pat Leahy in Vermont, as well as the Senate bids of Reps. Tim Wirth in Colorado, Bob Edgar in Pennsylvania, Tom Daschle in South Dakota and the winner of a Democratic primary in Maryland.

All except Leahy and the Maryland candidates were present at Streisand's elaborate but well-hidden ranch; at a dinner catered by the posh restaurant Spargo and served at tables on the star's tennis court, they were fulsomely introduced by former Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas. Other leading Democrats wandered among the Hollywood notables who crowded the manicured ranch grounds and ogled Streisand's five separate houses.

The near-reverence in which show business holds the reclusive singer made possible a ticket price staggering even for the rich movie and television enclave. The opening of her ranch ("Temple Beth Malibu," Williams called it) guaranteed the evening's aura of exclusivity; and the event probably was sold out as much because "it was the place to be" as because of its political significance. Even some known Republicans put down their $5,000, and some in the audience probably shelled out for the Reagan dinner too. Political money is often nonpartisan, but that makes it no less welcome to either side.

But Williams and Streisand never wavered from the evening's theme. The comedian mercilessly imitated the president ("What would this country be without this great land of ours?") and his nominee for chief justice, William Rehnquist ("Will I be allowed to have a hood on my new robe?"). Besides her frequent references to the nuclear danger, Streisand appended to her standard "Send in the Clowns" a satirical version dedicated to the administration: "Send Home the Clowns."

As if inspired by the closeness of her audience, the beautiful setting and the cause that brought her back to the stage, Streisand's presence and singing, mostly numbers identified with her ("People," "The Way We Were"), moved the producer and political activist Norman Lear to say that he'd never seen "such a magnificent theatrical performance." The applause suggested that even at $2,500 a head, and whatever their political interests, those who heard her thought they got their money's worth.

Summer tennis complaints rapidly rolling in!

The mail concerning summer tennis has been very heavy, and must be answered immediately.

Dear Sir:
This summer I reserved a court at 10 o'clock in the morning. When I showed up, Payette wouldn't get off. He claimed that I had refused to give up the court the day before when he had a reservation. The reason I refused to leave was that I hadn't finished serving. What should I have done to get Payette off the court? — Don Rappaport

Art Buchwald

Dear Don:
There is only one thing to do in such a case. Take Payette's tennis balls and throw them over the fence. Then when he goes to fetch them, lock the gate on him. If it can work for John McEnroe, it can work for you. — A.B.

Dear Sir:
I had a singles' game with Rose Styron the other day, and she arrived with six house guests. I protested that we couldn't get all of them on the court at the same time. She became angry and said that she had promised her guests a game and she couldn't understand why I was making such a big deal over a few extra people. Was I wrong in objecting to having so many players on the court at the same time? — Wendy Leurs

Dear Wendy:
It's hard to say who is right and who is wrong. While four people are usually the maximum for a tennis match, there have been occasions, particularly where there is a shortage of courts, when as many as 14 people play on each side. What you should have said to Rose is, "Why don't we have a baseball game instead?" — A.B.

Dear Sir:
I play with a fellow named Califano (no relation to the former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare). He has never opened a can of tennis balls in his life. He says that the reason he doesn't do this is that every time you tear off the top of a can you destroy the ozone. Is there any truth to this? — Jack Valenti

Dear Jack:
This ozone rumor has been going around for some time. It is spread by people who have guarded the same can of balls since they took up playing tennis. While the ozone is being destroyed, it is not caused by those opening cans, but by people who are constantly lobbing the balls high into the air. — A.B.

Dear Sir:
My wife and I enjoy playing singles against each other. The only problem I have is that she calls all my shots out when they are in. If she cheats at tennis, how do I know she isn't cheating at other things? — Bruce Dogged

Dear Bruce: The first thing I would suggest is ask your wife to take an eye examination. As with many tennis players, it's possible her eyesight is impaired enough for her to believe that your shots are out. If her eyes are OK, then have a heart-to-heart conversation with her. Tell her the most important thing in a marriage is complete honesty and trust. If she wants to cheat on her calls, suggest that she play golf instead. — A.B.

Gunmen kidnap International Lions Club official in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three gunmen kidnapped the top official of the International Lions Club in Lebanon and Jordan today, a day after an American educator was abducted in Moslem west Beirut on his way to play golf.

Police identified today's kidnap victim as Victor Kenou, a Christian Lebanese of Syrian origin. He was abducted at gunpoint at 9:35 a.m. near the French Embassy compound in west Beirut, authorities said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The gunmen intercepted Kenou, forced him into a blue BMW and sped away, said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity. The official said he did not know whether Kenou was on foot or driving a car at the time of the abduction.

Kenou is head of 39 Lions clubs in Lebanon and Jordan, the official said. Lions clubs are a worldwide charity society.

On Tuesday, four gunmen driving a blue Volvo abducted Frank Herbert Reed, 53, of Malden, Mass., director of the private Lebanese International School in Moslem west Beirut.

Islamic Jihad, a group of Shiite Moslem fundamentalists, claimed responsibility for the kidnapping. The group has said it holds at least three other Americans.

Police said today they had no indication where Reed was being held.

His kidnapping was the first of an American in Lebanon in 15 months. It also was the first abduction of a foreigner since July 4, when Syrian troops moved into west Beirut to take control from warring militia factions.

A spate of politically motivated abductions in 1985 prompted most Americans and other Westerners to leave the city.

The U.S. State Department has refused to divulge the number of Americans still in Lebanon, but a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Christian east Beirut said 454 remained in the capital.

The spokesman, Christopher P. English, said most of those remaining held dual Lebanese and American passports.

An anonymous caller claiming to speak for Islamic Jihad charged in a call to a Western news agency that Reed was a spy for the CIA and that "documents convicting him" were found on him.

"We found out that his educational mission was a mere disguise for his espionage efforts," the caller said Tuesday. "The real Moslems have uncovered the game and they will punish whoever is involved in it."

An editor at the news agency said the caller spoke Lebanese-accented Arabic and hung up after reading a statement. The Christian-run Voice of Lebanon radio said the man promised to distribute Reed's photograph soon.

Islamic Jihad, which espouses the teachings of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has cautioned repeatedly that any statement purporting to come from it without a hostage photograph would be false.

Police said the assailants, toting silencer-equipped pistols and driving in a dark blue Volvo, rammed Reed's chauffeur-driven car onto the sidewalk near the ruins of a supermarket in west Beirut's Bir Hassan district.

Reed was driving from his home in west Beirut's Manara neighborhood to play golf at the war-scarred course on the city's southern edge. Two men climbed from the Volvo, forced Reed and his Lebanese driver at gunpoint to get into the kidnappers' car and sped off, police said.

The driver was freed minutes later a few hundred yards from the headquarters of Syrian intelligence officers in charge of enforcing a security plan to restore law and order in west Beirut.

Thousands jam bloodstained house of worship

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Thousands of mourners today jammed a bloodstained synagogue and the narrow streets outside it for the funeral of 19 Turkish Jews killed when two gunmen stormed the house of prayer.

"No act of violence or aggression could have been so inhuman, so insane, so cruel," Jak Veissid, adviser to chief Rabbi David Asseo, said in his eulogy.

Relatives of the dead came to the Neve Shalom Synagogue weeping and wailing. Officials estimated that 1,000 mourners packed the temple while thousands more stood outside, guarded by dozens of riot police.

Two other Jews killed in the attack Saturday lived in Israel, and their bodies were flown there Tuesday and buried in Jerusalem. The attackers, believed to be Arabs in their 20s, fired on the Sabbath worshipers with submachine guns before blowing themselves up with hand grenades.

President Reagan sent a message to Jewish leaders in Turkey, saying their grief was shared by all Americans and expressing "our determination to put an end to such horrors."

During the 30-minute funeral, a local rabbi read the Kaddish, the Jewish prayer for the dead, and a prayer of revenge for the orphans and widows of the dead.

Twenty-one floral wreaths — one for each victim — were placed along the synagogue walls.

Members of the city's 20,000-member Jewish community cleaned up the synagogue for the funeral. But signs of the carnage remained: bloodstains on the walls and ceiling and smashed stained-glass windows.

Representatives from Jewish communities in the United States, France, Sweden, Italy and West Germany attended the funeral. Also present were the chief rabbi of Israel, two Turkish Cabinet members and the U.S. ambassador to Turkey, Robert Strausz-Hupe, who delivered Reagan's message to local Jewish leaders.

The message, which was not read at the ceremony, said, "The senseless killing of 21 members of the congregation at the Neve Shalom Synagogue on Sept. 6 has shocked all Americans. You have our deepest sympathy in this hour of grief.

"These vicious murders were an attack on the values and standards of civilized men everywhere, and we are resolute in our determination to put an end to such horrors."

After the service, a procession under heavy police escort brought the 19 plain pine coffins to the Jewish ceremony in the residential district of Ulus, 6 miles from the synagogue.

Israel had sought to send a government representative but the government of Turkey, an overwhelmingly Moslem nation with delicate diplomatic ties to the Jewish state, opposed this, according to sources in Ankara.

Interior Minister Yildirim Akbulut said Turkish officials are seeking help from Interpol, the international police organization, in identifying the two attackers.

Fingerprints taken from the terrorists' dismembered bodies were being circulated in various countries through Interpol. Police also compiled composite sketches of the gunmen, pieced together with the help of the few worshipers who survived the assault.

Israeli Religious Affairs Minister Yosef Burg said the government would punish those responsible for the massacre of Mirza Babazade, 82, and Rafael Nesim, 65, both Iranian Jews who lived in Israel.

"A righteous man has been murdered...The Israeli government will do all it can to sever the hand of evil and crime," Burg said.

Hijackers helped by Pakistanis, officials say

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Four Palestinians held in the hijack of a Pan Am jumbo jet had detailed knowledge of the security system at Karachi airport, indicating they were assisted by Pakistanis, security officials said.

The death toll in Friday's hijacking, meanwhile, rose to 20 today after 18-year-old Imram Ali Rizvi of Pakistan died of his injuries. Rizvi had been lying brain-dead at a Karachi hopital. More than 100 people were injured.

Authorities are looking for Pakistanis who provided hijackers with weapons, uniforms and detailed information on Karachi airport and its security, said security officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"Without Pakistani help there was no question of carrying out this operation," said one official. "There had to be a Pakistani connection who guided them through everything."

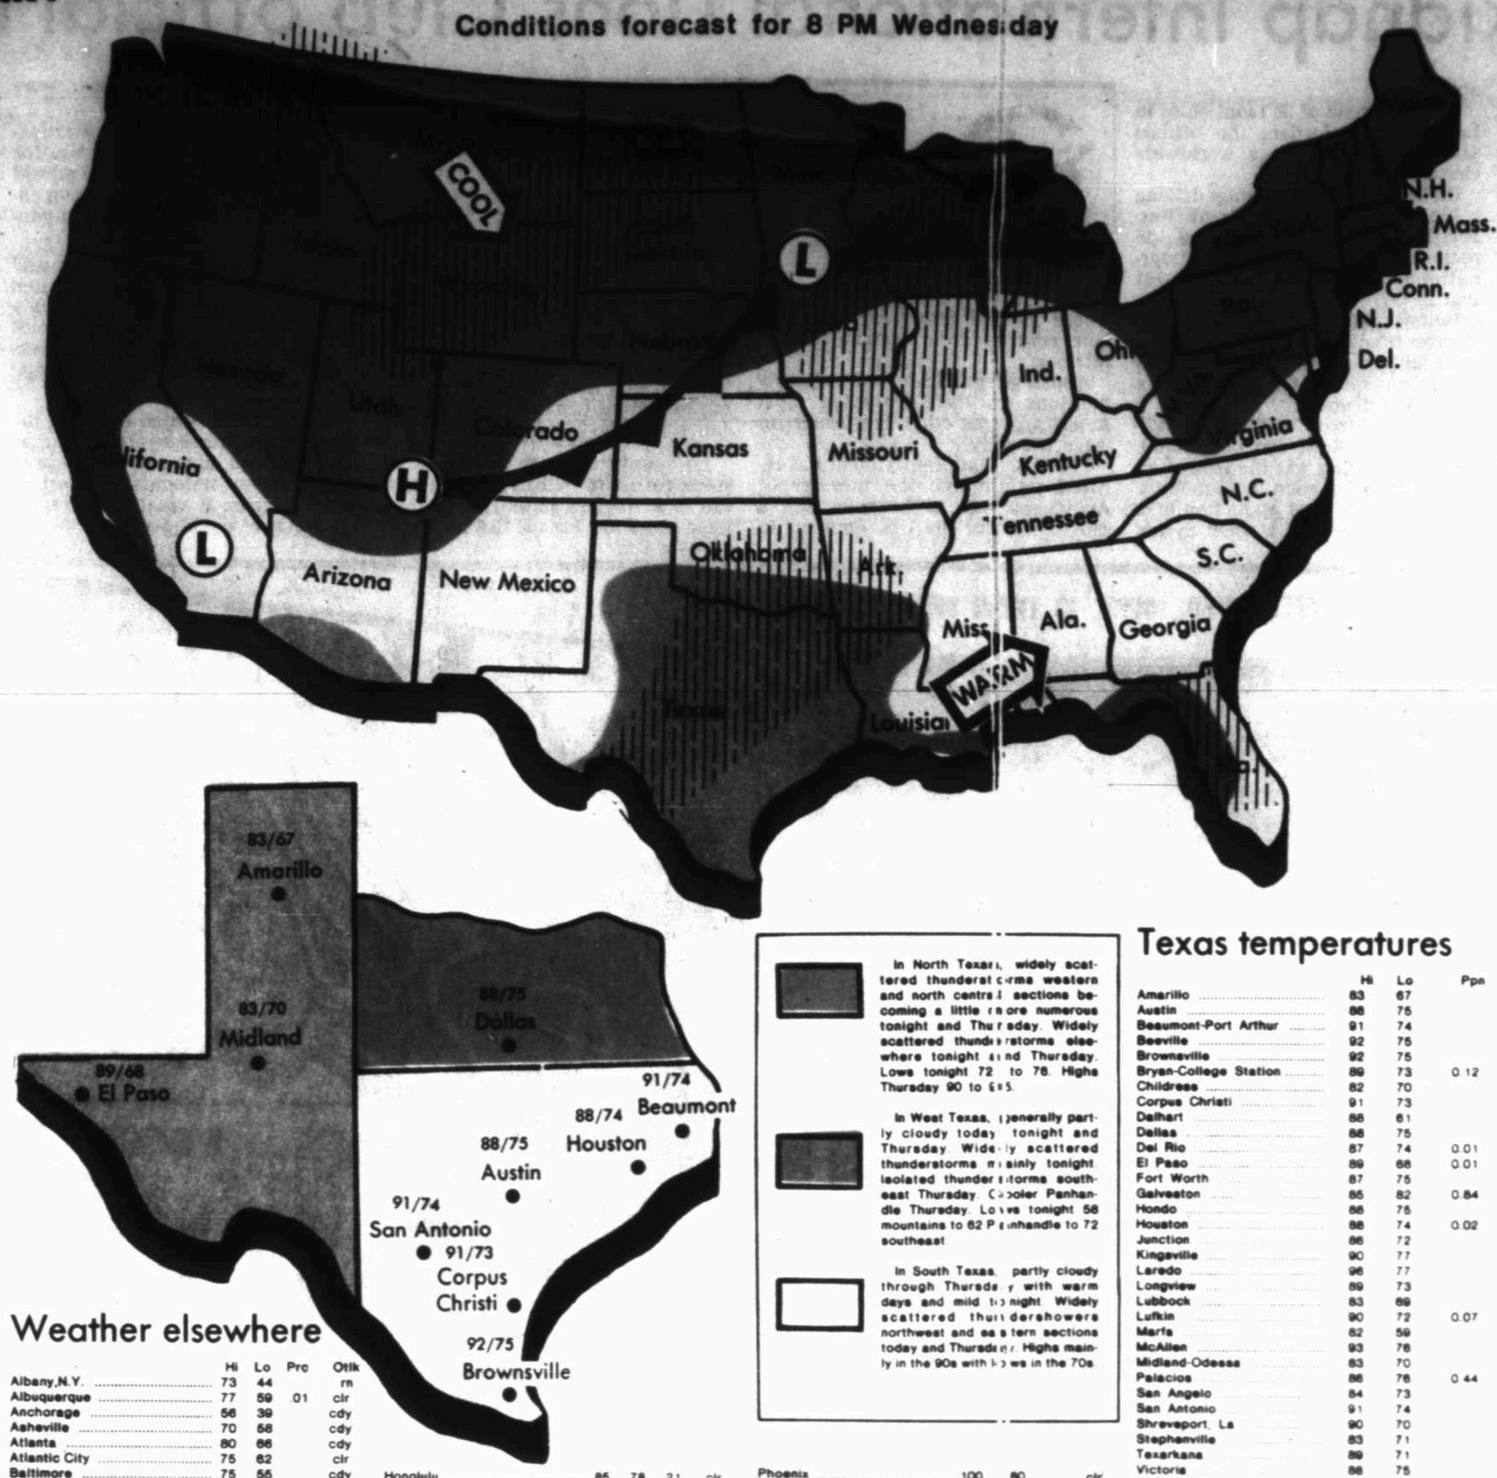
TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)



In North Texas, widely scattered thunderstorms western and north central sections becoming a little more numerous tonight and Thursday. Widely scattered thunderstorms elsewhere tonight and Thursday. Lows tonight 72 to 76. Highs Thursday 90 to 95.

In West Texas, generally partly cloudy today tonight and Thursday. Widely scattered thunderstorms mainly tonight. Isolated thunderstorms southeast Thursday. Cooler Panhandle Thursday. Lows tonight 58 mountains to 62 Panhandle to 72 southeast.

In South Texas, partly cloudy through Thursday with warm days and mild nights. Widely scattered thundershowers northwest and eastern sections today and Thursday. Highs mainly in the 90s with lows in the 70s.

Rain again in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has put the possibility of thunderstorms into the Midland area forecast once again. There is a 30 percent chance of storms tonight. A low in the middle 60s is expected.

Area residents can look for warming temperatures on Thursday. The NWS is calling for a high in the lower 90s. Partly cloudy skies are forecast for tonight and Thursday. Winds will be out of the south at 10-20 mph this evening, shifting to the southwest at 10-20 mph on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 83 was 18 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1984. Today's low was 70, which was 19 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1935.

STATE

Early today a trough of low pressure was over West Texas with showers and a few thunderstorms scattered along the trough from the western Trans-Pecos to the edge of the South Plains, the National Weather Service said.

A small area of scattered showers also was located just west of Lubbock. Partly cloudy skies covered parts of the interior, while clear skies prevailed over East Texas and coastal areas, the weather service said.

Southerly winds dominated the state in the 5 to 15 mph range. Early morning temperatures were mainly in the 60s and 70s, according to the weather service. At 5 a.m. the extremes were 61 degrees at Guadalupe Pass in the Trans-Pecos and 81 degrees at Galveston.

North Texas should see widely scattered thunderstorms tonight and Thursday with lows in the 70s and highs Thursday in the low to mid 90s.

West Texas was forecast to have partly cloudy skies through Thursday with some isolated storms on Thursday. Overnight lows should range from the upper 50s to 70s with highs in the 80s to 90s.

The forecast for South Texas calls for partly cloudy skies with some scattered thunderstorms and highs in the 90s and lows in the 70s.

NATION

A Western storm dusted mountaintops with snow today and scattered rain elsewhere, as gusty winds churned California deserts and rain dotted sections of the Midwest and South.

The storm spread snow across higher elevations of the central Rockies and sent showers and thunderstorms across the southern Rockies as well as lower elevations of the central Rockies.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Tonight: Partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s, southerly winds at 10-20 mph, and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Thursday: Partly cloudy with a high in the low 90s and southwesterly winds at 10-20 mph.

NCAA softens stance on Nebraska suspensions

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The NCAA had a change of heart and Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne enjoyed a change of luck.

Osborne's past teams have lost late-season games that cost them a chance at the national championship, and his 1986 squad seemed snakebitten before the season even started.

The NCAA ruled last week that 53 Nebraska players would be suspended for one game and seven other players for two games. The penalty was primarily punishment for the misue of players' complimentary game passes.

The usually soft-spoken Osborne complained that the penalty was unfair. The university appealed, and the NCAA on Tuesday restored full eligibility to all 60 players.

"I hope nothing else comes up," Osborne said. "We were ready for a little good news, and I'm glad it came."

The Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals said the guilty players will be stripped of game-pass privileges this season.

Subcommittee Chairman Dave Maggard of the University of California said every NCAA Division I men's football and basketball and women's basketball program will be asked to review their student athletes' use of pass lists from the 1985-86 academic year.

Any violations will be dealt with in the same manner as those at Nebraska, with loss of pass privileges, Maggard said.

"I think this is the best step they could take," Osborne said. "We are really pleased. I think it is a tough but fair decision."

Nebraska's players were also pleased.

"I feel like turning a flip right now," said I-back Keith Jones, who was among the players suspended.

In a statement released by the NCAA, Maggard said the subcommittee found no indication of financial gains by the student-athletes.

The subcommittee heard Nebraska's appeal by teleconference call Tuesday morning for 90 minutes and didn't reach a decision until late in the afternoon.

Nebraska faculty representative James O'Hanlon said the school had offered some proposals that were more severe and involved "phasing (the penalties) by the number of violations of the athletes involved."

Osborne said ethical matters are primarily handled by the institutions involved, "and this was an ethical matter, not a rule violation."

The University of Tennessee held 10 players out of its game last Saturday with New Mexico, saying that they had been guilty of violating the rule, which says only a players' relatives and fellow students can use the four passes Division I players receive for each home game.

Will Bailey of Auburn, the NCAA's secretary-treasurer and a member of the subcommittee, said "we didn't consider Tennessee at all" during the conference call.

Tennessee athletic director Doug Dickey said from Knoxville, Tenn. that school officials have a conference call set for Thursday with the NCAA on their suspensions.

"We will still have our discussion with them," Dickey said. "I'm sure it's a situation we can work out, based on the Nebraska situation. I feel sure we're in the same situation.

"We may want to consider asking for some different penalties for those who gave up one game," Dickey said. "Reasonable minds have prevailed."

The NCAA announcement said one pass would be revoked during the 1986-87 academic year for each violation. The Division I programs will be asked to report the results of their internal audits of their 1985-86 pass lists to their respective conferences, which in turn will forward the information to the NCAA.

Independents will report directly to the NCAA.

This will involve, counting women's basketball, more than 500 programs.

Some other alleged violations against members of the Nebraska football program were not considered by the committee.

Osborne said the decision affects his players more than most schools because Nebraska has sold out its last 144 home football games.

Weaver to leave Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Weaver Watch is over.

Earl Weaver won't be back as manager of the Baltimore Orioles next year, but he will finish out the 1986 season.

Ending weeks of speculation and rumor, owner Edward Bennett Williams announced late Tuesday that the Orioles had accepted Weaver's decision to retire for a second time in four years.

Williams, the celebrated Washington attorney who used his courtroom oratory to lure Weaver out of retirement in the middle of the 1985 season, will not try to influence Weaver this time.

"I told Earl," Williams told a hastily-called news conference at Memorial Stadium a couple of hours before Tuesday night's game against Boston, "that I would not try to persuade him to do something he did not want to do any more."

Williams said Weaver did not want to manage any baseball team in 1987, a message which could serve as an advance notice to any other club which would seek his services.

Weaver has said frequently he doesn't want to go elsewhere, while noting he has a $1-a-year contract as an Orioles' consultant through 1990.

In a brief appearance at the news conference, Weaver denied a broadcast report that he considered leaving the club before the end of the season, and said he would do his best for the remainder of the schedule.

Hours later, the Orioles were beaten 7-5 by the Red Sox, their 14th loss in the last 17 games. Since pulling to within 2½ games of Boston on Aug. 5, the Orioles have gone 8-24 to fall 17 games off the pace.

Williams said a replacement for the 56-year-old Weaver, who will have been paid $1 million for 1½ seasons in his second stint with the Orioles, won't be announced until shortly after the season.

The frontrunners for the job, provided the Orioles continue their tradition of promoting organizational products, would seem to be present coaches Cal Ripken Sr. and Frank Robinson.

Catcher Rick Dempsey said the Orioles had a lot of respect for Ripken, the father of shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. and a 30-year veteran of the Baltimore organization, who managed more than 13 years in the minor leagues and has been an Oriole coach since 1976.

"He knows the players, and what they're capable of doing," Dempsey said of the 50-year-old Ripken.

But Dempsey also had words of praise for Billy Martin, the much-traveled manager who has been the skipper for five American League teams.

"I was 19 years old when he managed the Twins," Dempsey said. "He can get 150 percent out of you, and make you want to run through walls for him. We could use some of that around here."

"We don't need a placid guy," Dempsey said. "We need someone who can push the players."

Asked if Ripken could be a 'tail kicker,' Dempsey said, "I could see him taking over that role."

Ripken, who was bypassed when Joe Altobelli was hired in 1983, and again when Weaver replaced Altobelli on June 14, 1985, said he would not actively pursue the job despite his qualifications.

"I don't believe in going out and seeking anything," he said. "If they want me, they'll contact me; if they don't, they'll hire somebody else. It's not my decision to make."

Robinson, the first black manager in baseball, has managed all or parts of seven seasons in the majors at Cleveland and San Francisco, and nine more seasons in winter ball.

"I'm here, and under contract," Robinson said of his availability. "If they want to talk with me, I'll certainly want to talk with them."

Although he hasn't managed since 1984, Robinson saw no problem in resuming should he get the job.

"It's like anything else you're used to doing," he said. "You don't forget how, especially when you're active in the sport. It would be different coming into the league after not seeing the players for a few years."

Dempsey said he was happy to see Weaver, his frequent protagonist, head for retirement, confident that this time it will be permanent.

Cincinnati's Eddie Milner avoids tag by Houston's Bill Doran on this stolen base, but the Reds still fell a full 10 games behind the Astros in the National League West Tuesday in a 9-2 loss.

Rose fears Reds collapsing as Houston wins again

Associated Press

The rest of the National League East long ago conceded the New York Mets the division title. Their counterparts in the West may soon be doing the same for the Houston Astros.

"I'm worried about my team collapsing," Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose said Tuesday after a 9-2 loss at Houston dropped the Reds 10 games behind the division-leading Astros. "We're still in second but I can't worry about catching Houston. I'm worried about catching (last-place) San Diego the way we're playing."

Houston's victory completed a two-game sweep of Cincinnati and left the Reds in their biggest hole of the season.

"It puts us in a double-figures lead when they could have walked out of here six games back and thinking they could still win," Astros third baseman Denny Walling said. "I don't think they look as forward now to the series next week."

The Reds host the Astros in a three-game series beginning Tuesday.

Baseball Roundup

The Mets, meanwhile, had their magic number for clinching the East reduced to four when second-place Philadelphia lost to Chicago 8-6 in 10 innings. The Mets were beaten 9-7 by Montreal but still maintained a mountainous 21-game lead.

Mike Scott pitched a five-hitter over eight innings and Glenn Davis' double keyed a four-run sixth inning as Houston beat Cincinnati. Scott, 16-9, who leads the major leagues in strikeouts, fanned seven to increase his total to 260.

The Astros broke a scoreless tie in the sixth when Davis drove in two runs with a double. Houston added two runs in the seventh and three in the eighth.

Eric Davis' 23rd homer of the season in the eighth inning accounted for both of the Reds' runs.

Expos 9, Mets 7

Andre Dawson's two-run homer with none out in the top of the ninth inning lifted Montreal over New York.

Tim Raines opened the inning with a single off relief pitcher Jesse Orosco, 6-6, and Dawson followed with his homer on the first pitch. Randy Hunt added an RBI single to give the Expos a two-run lead.

The NL East-leading Mets, who are now 7-7 against the Expos, had taken a 7-6 lead in the bottom of the eighth on Darryl Strawberry's 21st homer of the season.

Tim Burke, 9-7, was the winner in relief. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 31st save.

Cubs 8, Phillies 6

Leon Durham's two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning boosted Chicago over Philadelphia. Keith Moreland, who earlier had hit two home runs, singled with one out in the 10th before Durham hit his 18th home run of the year.

Lee Smith, 9-9, was the winner and Steve Bedrosian, 8-5, the loser.

After trailing 6-1, the Cubs pecked away and finally tied the game in the seventh when Dave Martinez tripled and scored on a two-out single by Ryne Sandberg.

Mike Schmidt knocked in four runs for the Phillies, capping a five-run fourth with his league-leading 32nd homer and the 490th of his career.

"I had to start doing some of the things I'm capable of doing," said Durham, who has hit five home runs in the last eight games and took over the club leadership in homers. "This has been a crazy year for me and I'm not altogether happy with it."

Cardinals 3, Pirates 1

Andy Van Slyke had three hits and one RBI and Clint Hurdle hit a solo homer to lead St. Louis over host Pittsburgh.

Van Slyke singled home Vince Coleman in the third inning after Coleman had singled and stolen his 92nd base. Hurdle led off the fourth with his third home run of the year and second against Rick Reuschel, 8-16, giving the Cardinals their eventual winning run.

Rick Horton, 3-3, allowed one run and seven hits over the first five innings for the victory. Todd Worrell, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, worked the final two innings for his 32nd save.

Debuts bring mixed reviews

It seemed like a long wait for Sept. 5. After all, we were talking about District 4-5A's changing of the guard through last February. Last Friday the "New Guard" had to put teams on the field.

After Week 1 of the high school football season, speculation over new coaches may not be over, but some questions were answered with mixed reviews.

Midland Lee's Earl Miller, Odessa Permian's Gary Gaines and Abilene High's Larry Pullin all had rousing debuts with victories. Even the left over oldsters of Doug McCutchen at Midland High and 4-5A dean Jimmie Keeling of San Angelo showed the league newcomers that they can still put "W's" on the board.

WITH RAIN soaking the land of 4-5A last week, all coaches entered Friday night's encounters with a bit of apprehension.

Last Friday morning, Miller looked up at dripping skies and said, "I hope my debut at Lee doesn't turn out like the first one I had as a head coach. It rained then too and we lost. Kids kept fumbling in the end zone."

History doesn't always repeat itself. Lee won 48-7 over Lubbock Coronado in a game that was decided about 7:37 p.m. They kicked off at 7.

McCutchen, too, was a little worried. The grass at Memorial Stadium almost made players disappear from sight. With the speed that McCutchen owns this year, that fact was a pressing matter for MHS coaches.

"Do you see that grass?" McCutchen noted. "I don't know if we're going to have a football game or a safari."

McCutchen's fears were laid to rest when his defense presented him with his first shutout in three years in a 14-0 win over Lubbock Monterey. "It was a great time for a shutout," sighed McCutchen.

PERMIAN'S GAINES probably has a dozen fewer wolves at his front door after a 55-0 shelling of El Paso Coronado. That's a Permian-type score, one that keeps Odessa fans happy and the rest of the league looking over one shoulder.

Abilene High's Pullin had a 19-14 scare from Wichita Falls Rider, but a fourth quarter TD pass gave Pullin his first check mark as part of the 4-5A fraternity.

It wasn't all smooth sailing, however. Odessa High's Jerry Taylor saw his Bronchos bombed 34-0 by Amarillo Palo Duro, a team Permian crushed in a pre-season scrimmage. And Abilene Cooper's Larry Peel, a former assistant coach at both MHS and Lee, dropped a 28-6 decision to 4A Brownwood, who is without Gordon Wood for the first time in about a century.

More good and bad news came from down on the farm from some former 4-5A fraternity members.

Former Lee offensive line coach David Browning made his debut at 4A Willis in a 16-6 loss to Cleveland while former MHS sophomore coach Ron Hubby lost a weird 6-2 decision to Menard in his debut at Class A Junction.

However, Ken Herring, Permian's defensive coordinator last year, made his debut a good one at 4A Fort Stockton with a 19-13 win over powerful 3A Crane and Don Cumpton, head coach at Abilene High last year, returned to his old stomping grounds in Hereford with a 28-0 win over Andrews, who has the task of playing shutout hungry Midland High this week.

Long time West Texas coach Maurice Hodges returned Friday to help Greenwood move into Class 3A, but a 25-0 loss to McCamey spoiled his Ranger debut.

AND WE can't stop without mentioning former MHS boss Pat Culpepper. His Lufkin team suffered a 17-8 loss to Jasper. Earlier last week, Culpepper found out that one of his starting running backs was trying to play for a fifth year after moving to Lufkin from another town.

I can't help but wonder if Pat tried to change up his offensive scheme prior to the Jasper game. One year at MHS, Culpepper changed his offense three times during the season.

Coaches are a rare breed. Sometimes I think they were born to be both praised and burned at the stake. This week's winner is often next week's crying towel. But at least, for now, they all have jobs and that's saying something in West Texas.

"I've been waiting for this game all year" — Houston's Nolan Ryan after striking out 10 in six shutout innings as the Astros beat Cincinnati 3-1 Monday night. The victory gave the Astros a nine-game lead in the NL West over second-place Cincinnati.

Trivia...

Today's Question: Three coaches, still active and still with the same teams, reached the playoffs during their first NFL seasons?

Tuesday's Answer: Three. Georgetown beat Houston in the NCAA finals in 1984, but also came up a loser in 1982, North Carolina State; 1985, Villanova; and 1943, Wyoming.

Baseball Today...

Wednesday, Sept. 10

STAT

The Cincinnai Reds currently have five players with 2,000 career hits — Pete Rose, Tony Perez, Dave Concepcion, Buddy Bell and Dave Parker.

STREAKS

Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets had two hits in his last 54 at-bats at Shea Stadium through Monday night.

SWINGS

Kansas City's Dennis Leonard, who had lost seven straight decisions and not won since June 4, pitched a three-hitter and beat Minnesota 5-0 Monday night.

SEASONS

September 10

1969 — The New York Mets swept the Montreal Expos in a doubleheader at Shea Stadium, 3-2 in 12 innings and 7-1. The victories moved the Mets into first place in the National League East, the first time they had ever been in first place.

BASEBALL

Giants 7, Padres 0

Mike LaCoss pitched a seven-hitter, ending a personal eight-game losing streak, and San Francisco got home runs from Candy Maldonado and Bob Brenly to beat visiting San Diego.

LaCoss, 10-11, had not won since July 13 and his losing streak was the longest in the NL this season. He had four strikeouts and walked none in his first shutout since 1984, when he pitched one for Houston.

Maldonado hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Brenly lined a two-run shot in the third off LaMarr Hoyt, 7-10. The Padres' starter allowed only three hits in four innings, but he walked five batters and hit one.

Dodgers 9, Braves 5

Bill Madlock hit a two-run homer and Alex Trevino and Enos Cabell each contributed two-run singles to lead Los Angeles over Atlanta.

Rick Honeycutt, 11-9, got the victory despite allowing five runs, nine hits and four walks over five innings. Alejandro Pena pitched one-hit ball through the final four innings for his first save since April 22, 1983.

After spotting the Braves a 1-0 lead on the first of Terry Harper's three singles, Los Angeles sent 11 men to the plate en route to a five-run first inning that knocked out left-hander Zane Smith, 7-15.

After Billy Sample hit a two-run homer in the top of the second inning, Madlock gave the Dodgers their eventual winning runs with his homer in the bottom of the inning.

The game drew 22,643 fans, the smallest crowd of the season at Dodger Stadium this season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Angels 8, Indians 1

McCaskill, 16-7, pitched his 10th complete game of the season, striking out seven and walking two, and lost his shutout bid in the sixth when Julio Franco hit a sacrifice fly.

"You hear everybody talk about how important the stretch drive is," McCaskill said. "All you hear is, 'Stretch drive, stretch drive.' But I try to keep away from that. I try to pitch the same in September as I do in April."

The Angels scored twice in the first inning without a hit, and they went up 4-0 in the second when Wally Joyner drove in a run and scored on a hit by Reggie Jackson.

Cleveland knuckleballer Tom Candiotti, 13-11, allowed seven runs, five earned, on six hits and seven walks.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 5

Evans hit two solo homers and Marty Barrett drove in two runs with a double in Boston's three-run seventh as the Red Sox rallied to extend their winning streak to 10. Evans now has 17 of his 22 homers and 54 of his 88 RBI on the road.

"To me, this is the best hitting ballpark," Evans said of Baltimore's Memorial Stadium. "It's the best maintained, the lights are good and the background is good. It's fun to play here."

The Orioles were playing for the first time since Manager Earl Weaver's retirement became official. Weaver will quit at the season's end.

Evans homered in the seventh to begin a rally that erased a 4-2 Baltimore lead, and hit another in the eighth inning. Don Baylor also homered for the Red Sox, his 28th, as Al Nipper evened his record at 9-9.

Mariners 3, Rangers 1

Seattle's Jim Presley hit a two-run homer, and Edwin Nunez won his first game as a starter since Sept. 19, 1982 by pitching five scoreless innings. The homer was the first on the road for Presley in 91 at-bats, while Nunez was making his first major league start since 1983. His last victory as a starter also came against Texas.

Seattle added an insurance run on a double by Mickey Brantley and Alvin Davis' RBI single in the eighth. The only Texas run came on Larry Parrish's home run off Mike Trujillo in the seventh inning.

"We hit some balls hard tonight and they didn't fall," Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine said. "They hit some balls hard and got three runs out of it."

Yankees 3, Blue Jays 1

New York's Mike Easler drove in a tie-breaking run in the eighth inning iwth a single, and Willie Randolph drove in an insurance run in the ninth with a sacrifice fly, backing Ron Guidry to his first victory since Aug. 6.

Guidry, 7-10, held Toronto scoreless through five innings, allowing five hits in his seven-inning outing. He retired the first nine hitters he faced.

Royals 11, Twins 3

Jamie Quirk hit a two-run homer and had his second three-hit game in two nights, pacing Kansas City to its third straight victory. Minnesota has lost five in a row.

Mark Gubicza, with relief help from Steve Farr, won for the ninth time in his last 11 decisions.

Quirk's two-run homer in the fourth broke a 1-1 tie and was his fifth hit in five at-bats. The Royals scored five more runs in the eighth inning, two on Rudy Law's pinch-hit double.

Brewers 3, Tigers 1

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor hit a double in the eighth inning that broke a 1-1 tie, and Ted Higuera worked seven innings to pace Milwaukee over Detroit. Jim Gantner started the winning rally with a single and was sacrificed to second. Molitor drove him in with a double to right.

Higuera, 18-9, allowed just six hits and three walks while striking out seven. Frank Tanana was the loser, going 7⅔ innings.

White Sox 4, A's 1

Ron Hassey had three hits, including only his third triple since 1980, and scored three runs for the White Sox. Joe Cowley, 9-9, allowed seven hits over seven scoreless innings for Chicago, while A's pitcher Dave Stewart, 9-2, saw his five-game winning streak end.

The only Oakland run came on Mark McGwire's leadoff homer in the ninth.

Diablos win Texas League crown

EL PASO (AP) — Center fielder John Gibbons hit a three-run homer and a bases-loaded single as the El Paso Diablos swept past the Jackson Mets 16-4 to win the 1986 Texas League championship.

Tuesday night's win gave the Diablos' a 4-0 sweep of the series with three of the four wins on the road, and they paid back the Mets who beat El Paso in a 4-0 series last year.

It was the first Texas League title for El Paso since 1978. Jackson had entered the series trying to become the first team since 1925 to win three straight Texas League championships.

All but one of the runs came from just three innings with four in the fifth, seven in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

In the fifth inning, Gibbons hit a bases-loaded single to put the Diablos ahead 5-3, and they held the lead throughout the game. His three-run homer in the sixth iced it.

Gibbons ended the game with six runs batted in.

Keith Smith drilled three straight doubles.

Starting pitcher Dan Scarpetta, followed by Ed Myers, Cam Walker and Alan Sadler held the Mets to four runs.

Girl ousted from Austin grid team

AUSTIN (AP) — Tina Trejo thought she earned a Bobcat uniform on the Bedichek Junior High football team.

"During the month of August, I worked out every day, running a mile and lifting weights. I sweated it out, and I made this team fair and square," said the 5-foot-2, 164-pound 13-year-old.

She finished tryouts last week and made the team as a defensive lineman.

BUT SCHOOL officials said Tuesday they learned that University Interscholastic League rules prevent girls from playing football, so Tina won't be suiting up this fall after all.

Tina got the news about an hour before she was to suit up for practice Tuesday.

Principal Kent Ewing told her "the UIL was looking back and forth at it, and that I couldn't play football but could play another sport like volleyball instead," Tina said.

She got as far as she did this season because school officials said they were unaware that girls could not try out for the team. Ewing said he had been confused over a section of the UIL rules that in some cases allow girls to try out for boys athletic teams.

But he said school district officials explained to him Tuesday that UIL rules definitely prevented her from playing.

"There are two basic types of restrictions — boys can't play on girls' teams, and girls can't play football," said Bill Farney, UIL athletic director. "In our day and age, it's difficult for people to understand that the rule is not a slap in the face to females.

"I don't think anybody's making the statement that girls are not capable of playing, but we have to weigh the factors, and we don't want to make a decision that would allow girls in a physically punishing activity," Farney said.

Ewing and Bedichek football Coach Jose Garza said if the UIL rule were defied, both Bedichek and Crockett High School could be placed on probation by the UIL. The junior high is a feeder school for Crockett.

Garza said he was impressed with Tina's strength and determination.

"I was going to let her try out, and I thought I would see that her physical abilities were not as strong. As it turned out, she was capable of playing," said Garza.

WINCHESTER

THE CHALLENGE: TEXAS DOVES.
THE CHOICE: XPERT, FROM WINCHESTER.

They'll be flying in fast. So you'll need plenty of skill—and plenty of Xpert field loads from Winchester.

This new load from Winchester is the perfect load for Texas doves. The Double A hull, plastic wad and eight segment crimp give you the added value of reloadability.

And Xpert's new cleaner burning powder means your gun won't jam at the height of the action—plus Winchester's hard chilled shot stays rounder out of the barrel for better patterns and more knock-down punch.

Xpert—everything you need for Texas doves, including the added value of reloadability. Go get 'em.

Landry likes Walker debut

IRVING (AP) - Herschel Walker's spectacular NFL debut came as no surprise to Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

"I wasn't surprised by what he did against the New York Giants Monday night because he works and studies hard," Landry said on Tuesday. "He concentrates on what he does in practice."

Landry said "Herschel is very bright and has a great grasp of what's going on. He's picked up our offense faster than anybody I've ever seen."

Walker scored two touchdowns in a 31-28 victory over the Giants, rushed for 64 yards on 10 carries, and caught six passes for 32 yards.

"Herschel picked up the whole squad," Landry said. "Walker has given this team renewed confidence. We would have been in trouble without Herschel and everybody knows it."

Walker, whose five-year, $5 million contract after he departed the USFL's New Jersey Generals has caused some resentment, was moved to center stage by Landry after Tony Dorsett sprained an ankle in the first half.

IRONICALLY, IT was Dorsett who complained the loudest about Walker's contract and demanded to be traded. He was one of the first to congratulate Walker after the victory.

Walker responded the way he did as a Heisman Trophy winner at Georgia and as the showcase running back in the USFL, where he set a professional rushing record with 2,411 yards in 1985.

Walker bolted 10 yards up the middle with 1:16 to play to score the game-winner winning touchdown against the Giants on a draw play.

"It was imperative to his teammates that Herschel have some early success," Landry said. "What Herschel did was open the eyes of all the players. They will react to a player who has promise."

"We took a little bit of a gamble drafting Herschel fifth (in the 1985 NFL draft) because there was still a question of how good a runner he was going to be," Landry said. "He didn't produce a lot in his first few years in the USFL but he did begin to blossom."

Landry said there's no telling what Walker can accomplish in the NFL.

"Walker is too good a talent to be on the sidelines even with Tony as the starting tailback," Landry said. "You may find him at fullback, or flanker or at tailback. We may use him at all three positions in one game. But we are going to use him."

Walker could start Sunday in Detroit against the Lions although Landry said there "is a chance" Dorsett can play.

Dorsett is listed as questionable but Landry said "Tony's ankle didn't have a lot of swelling. As tough as he is, he'll probably play."

Dallas lost to the Lions last year there after a big opening Monday night victory over Washington.

"Hopefully, we are smart enough to have learned something from last year," Landry said. "You have to respect every opponent you play in the NFL."

Bosworth corrects UCLA comments

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth apologized Tuesday for statements he made following the top-ranked Sooners' 38-3 victory over UCLA last weekend.

"I used poor judgment in making uncomplimentary remarks about UCLA, but I also understand that, due to the fact that the reader almost never gets the whole story, I can be misunderstood," Bosworth said in a statement he wrote, which was released by the school's sports information office.

"I would like to submit that if the reporters had included in their articles the entire contents, or even a little, from the press conference this letter would be unnecessary," Bosworth said.

In his post-game interview, Bosworth said, among other things, that the Sooners opened last season "with a semi-doormat (Minnesota). This year, we opened with a legitimate doormat." He said later in the interview that it was meant as a joke and he didn't mean it.

He also was quoted as saying UCLA played "girls football."

His statement read as follows:

"After careful consideration, I realize that a few of the statements I made after Saturday's game with UCLA were unnecessary. By now I should realize that if I request a statement be made off the record, I should know that my request won't be taken seriously.

"Nevertheless, it is my responsibility as a representative of the state, the university and the football program of Oklahoma to be man enough to retract any derogatory statements made towards a program that I have nothing but respect for. "I used poor judgment in making uncomplimentary remarks about UCLA, but I also understand that, due to the fact that the reader almost never gets the whole story, I can be misunderstood. I would like to submit that if the reporters had included in their articles the entire contents, or even a little, from the press conference this letter would be unnecessary.

Tennessee welcomes NCAA's new ruling

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Word that the NCAA had softened its penalty agaist the University of Nebraska for breaking the complimentary pass rule was welcomed at Tennessee, but officials were cautious about the fate of Volunteer players accused of the same rules violation.

"I feel sure we're in the same situation," Volunteer athletic director Doug Dickey said late Tuesday after learning that the NCAA had reinstated the eligibility of 60 Nebraska players who had broken the free-pass rule.

Tennessee suspended 10 players during Saturday's opener against New Mexico for giving game passes to persons other than classmates or relatives. An unspecified number of other players also have been accused of breaking the rule. The university expects a decision on its own case Thursday.

JOHNNY MAJORS, coach of the eighth-ranked Vols, said he believed their situation is similar to Nebraska's.

"As far as our own situation, it would be premature to respond. But whether we're in the same situation or not, you would think so," Majors told WBIR-TV in Knoxville.

Dickey and Majors both said they want to hear personally from the NCAA that the 1-0 Vols are in the clear before they open their Southeastern Conference schedule Saturday against 1-0 Mississippi State.

In its ruling, the Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals said the guilty players at Nebraska will be stripped of game-pass privileges this season.

In addition, Committee Chairman Dave Maggard of the University of California said every NCAA Division I men's football and basketball and women's basketball program will be asked to review their student athlete's use of pass lists from the 1985-86 academic year. Maggard said any other violations of the rule will be dealt with in the same manner as those at Nebraska, with loss of pass privileges.

Tennessee is apparently the only university which invoked the original NCAA penalty, but Dickey said he did not see this as a stumbling block to resolve the Vols' problem.

"We may want to consider asking (the NCAA) for some different penalty for those who gave up one game," said Dickey, referring to a Thursday teleconference scheduled with the NCAA.

Dickey said he believed the NCAA's ruling demonstrated that "reasonable minds have prevailed."

"It's in the best interest of our next two games and in the best interest of college football," he said.

Majors said he would continue preparing the entire squad for the Mississippi State game.

Majors said earlier that the suspended players, including placekicker Carlos Reveiz, linebacker Kelly Ziegler and reserve quarterback Randy Sanders, would return to the roster for the Mississippi State game.

Thon hoping to meet Mets

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros shortstop Dickie Thon, whose career was nearly ended in 1984 by a pitch that struck him during a game against New York, says he hopes to meet the Mets in the National League playoffs.

Thon, who has been sharing time at shortstop with Craig Reynolds, said he will be fresh for the championship series, provided the Astros hold on to win the NL West.

"New York has a couple of left handers so I would probably have some opportunities," Thon said. "We can't look that far ahead though. There's some business to take care of in our division."

In April 1984, a pitch from New York's Mike Torrez struck Thon above the left eye. Thon missed the 1984 season, but returned in 1985 to hit .251 in 82 games.

In June, Manager Hal Lanier placed Thon, a former All-Star shortstop, on the disabled list after he complained of blurred vision.

"He was pulling off a lot of pitches," Lanier said. "But now he's swinging as good as he did in April."

Since Thon returned June 23, he is hitting over .280. He shares time at shortstop with Craig Reynolds, playing mostly against left-handed pitching.

Thon said he's hitting better now becasue he's become more selective.

"I want to hit the fastball in the strike zone," Thon said. "But I wasn't giving myself the opportunity because I was chasing too many bad breaking balls. Lately, I've been more selective at the plate and it's paid off."

Gold rebound

LONDON (AP) — Gold rebounded on European markets in morning trading today on a surge of buying, recovering much of the ground it lost the day before. The dollar was little changed.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $409.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $411.00. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $414.50.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid price of $412.75, up from $411.50 late Tuesday.

In Hong Kong, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, gold fell $3.27 to close at a bid $407.22. In New York Tuesday, the metal lost $1.75-$1.90 an ounce.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.69 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.72.

Dealers said the prospect of the Bundesbank, the German central bank, cutting its discount rate was propping up the dollar against the Deutschmark, which would become a less attractive investment if rates came down.

The Germans have refused so far to follow the U.S. lead and cut interest rates, arguing that it will trigger an undesirable growth in the money supply and threaten higher inflation.

Earlier, in Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.47 yen after inching up against the Japanese yen over the last week. It closed at 155.50 yen compared with Tuesday's close of 155.97 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

-2.0605 West German marks, up from 2.0585

-1.6755 Swiss francs, down from 1.6783

-6.7345 French francs, up from 6.7325

-1.3805 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3835

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4775, compared with $1.4860 Tuesday.

Dow still in retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market had a third straight losing session Tuesday after a strong tone at the opening soured.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 4.50 to 1,884.14. Buyers at first rallied to the blue chips and the Dow Jones industrial average spurted more than 12 points during the morning on Wall Street.

But the buyers lost interest and the blue chip indicator pulled back as it has each session since last Thursday when it reached a record closing high of 1,919.71.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange shrank to 137.52 million shares from 153.30 million Monday. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell by 0.35 to 142.07.

Fuel Use Act vote good news for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

A cornerstone of U.S. energy policy in the late 1970s — a law intended to switch large oil and natural gas users to domestic coal — is eroding further because of today's glut of cheap petroleum, and the outcome could benefit the Permian Basin.

On a voice vote, the House on Tuesday sent the Senate legislation to repeal the last major remaining provisions of the Fuel Use Act of 1978, which was enacted to counter then-rising U.S. dependence on expensive foreign oil.

These provisions banned the use of oil and gas as the primary fuel for new power generators and large industrial plants and required that such installations be capable of burning coal or another alternative fuel.

In recent years, however, the Energy Department has granted exemptions to the prohibition and has allowed many new installations to use natural gas and oil as their primary fuel.

"This is good news to the Permian Basin gas industry," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "It could open up new gas markets in as early as six months." Spannaus said the law change would allow many of the industrial plants with multi-fuel capabilities to switch immediately to the now lower priced, clean natural gas fuel. He also said he expected little resistance to the bill in the Senate, where both Texas senators have come out in favor of the bill.

The 1978 law also required existing power plants to convert to coal by 1990, but this section was removed from the statute books in 1981 after foreign energy prices leveled off and U.S. petroleum use decreased.

The latest repeal effort is being pushed by petroleum-state lawmakers who hope to stimulate business for a domestic oil and gas industry pushed into a severe slump this year by the worldwide drop in petroleum prices.

"This is an important step that will open markets," Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., said during the debate. He predicted that consumers would benefit from increased price competition and that exploration for new U.S. sources of natural gas would be stimulated.

Some petroleum-state lawmakers said, however, that the bill did not go far enough to help the depressed U.S. industry. They called for a fee on imported oil and an end to the price controls covering about 50 percent of the domestic natural gas.

The repeal proposal was downright unpopular with some members from coal-producing states.

"This is a short-term response to what I consider a long-term (energy) problem," said Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va. "We forget the events of just a few years ago."

The soul of the Compaq Computer Corp.'s entry into the brand new field of ultra-fast personal computers is a new microprocessor from Intel Corp., the 80386, which puts the power of a small mainframe computer into a silicon chip the size of a fingernail.

Faster personal computers beginning to hit market

NEW YORK (AP) — Personal computers powered by the lightning-fast "chip of the future" are beginning to hit the market, threatening the potential of bigger and costlier machines, experts say.

The Intel Corp. 80386 microprocesors can execute more than 2 million instructions per second, giving the PCs they inhabit the raw processing speed of small mainframes.

Houston's Compaq Computer Corp. announced its version of an 80386-based personal computer Tuesday at a disco in New York City.

Some day, experts say, the 30386 chip should make possible big advances in the use of personal computers in such fields as artificial intelligence and computer-aided design. As many as 15 people could work off a single machine.

"The 386 chip is the chip of the future," said Norman Lombino, spokesman for Corvus Systems Inc. of San Jose, Calif., which announced three weeks ago it was the first to begin shipments of an 80386-based machine.

But until designers make full use of all the chip's features, the main use of the new personal computers will be to run existing PC software twice as fast as the current top of the line, IBM's PC AT and its clones.

In other words, the first computers using the new chip will be like battleships prohibited from using their biggest guns. That will limit their appeal, but the firepower will entice some customers.

"The speed of these machines is addicting, just like power is in real life. Once you get some you want some more. You can never get enough," said Gary Robertson, sales and marketing manager for the Software Link Inc. of Atlanta, which makes a multi-user operating system for 80386-based computers.

Sales of 32-bit microprocessors should reach $195 million by 1990, and the total market for equipment based on the chips could be many times that, predicts Dataquest Inc., a San Jose, Calif.-based market researcher.

Western Airlines agrees to merger with Delta

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Directors of Western and Delta Air Lines have approved an $860 million merger that would create the nation's fourth largest scheduled air carrier.

Delta plans to acquire Western for an estimated $12.50 per share, half in cash and half in Delta stock, the companies announced Tuesday.

"This merger represents an ideal culmination of all of our efforts in recent years," said Gerald Grinstein, Western's chairman.

Delta is the nation's sixth-largest airline in terms of revenue passenger miles, while Western ranks ninth. When they combine, the new entity will fly more than 40 billion revenue passenger miles a year, putting it in fourth place behind a merged Texas Air Corp.-Eastern Airlines, United Airlines and American Airlines.

Western initially will be operated as a wholly owned subsidiary of Delta, but the operations are to be consolidated within a year of completion of the transaction.

Sixty-year-old Western, which lost $400 million from 1980 to 1984, made what industry analysts consider a spectacular comeback because of worker concessions, and earned a record $67.1 million last year.

"We managed to survive the most threatening days in the company's history," Grinstein said. "And we were able to rebuild, restructure our finances and restore Western to a position of financial health and profitability."

In July, Western reported a second-quarter net loss of $13 million compared with a second-quarter net profit of $31.7 million in 1985. The loss was attributed to fare wars.

Western has relatively little debt and holds valuable properties at airports at Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, the airline's major hubs.

"The route systems of the two companies fit together ideally," said Delta Chairman David C. Garrett Jr. "The combined companies will be able to offer expanded and improved service to every section of the country and will have the size and resources necessary to compete effectively with any other airline in the deregulated environment."

The merger is subject to the approval of regulators, including the Department of Transportation, and of stockholders of both companies. The airlines predicted completion of the merger by spring of 1987.

New car loan incentives mean used car bargains

DETROIT (AP) — Cut-rate loans for new cars mean bargains at used-car lots, but customers looking for a steal instead of a deal may leave disappointed.

"In terms of people saying, 'Go out and buy any kind of used car because you're going to steal it,' that's unfair to the consumer," Rick Cantalini, used-car manager of King Charlie Hillard Ford-Mazda in Fort Worth, Texas, said Tuesday. "You get what you pay for."

Auto industry analysts, however, said the drop in used-car prices may be greater than dealers expect.

"Whenever new-car prices come down, every car in the fleet, all the way down to the one going to the junkyard tomorrow, reduces in value," said Arvid Jouppi, a Detroit automotive analyst.

The top four U.S. automakers last month began offering interest rates of less than 3 percent on some loans to clear showrooms for the 1987 models. The low rates will end Oct. 8.

General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. offer 2.9 percent financing, and Chrysler Corp., 2.4 percent. American Motors Corp., whose sales this year have sagged to about half the year before, gives interest-free loans on most models.

About 1.5 million used cars will be offered on the market as owners trade them in for new-car bargains, Jouppi said. With more used cars available and cheaper new cars in the showrooms, used-car dealers will need to shave prices as much 10 percent, he said.

Lower used-car prices will steer some buyers from new models, said David Healy, automotive analyst with the New York brokerage house Drexel Burnham Lambert.

Geologists honor director of 25 years

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

A Resolution of Commendation from Midland mayor Carroll Thomas was just one of the highlights at a luncheon honoring Marie Bellomy for her 25 years of service to the West Texas Geological Society.

Thomas recalled the first time he met Bellomy, as a student at Texas Tech, when he made her open the office on a Saturday to sell him a guidebook. In the commendation, he cited Bellomy, who serves as the WTGS executive director, for her efforts on behalf of the society and the profession. "From everyone in the profession and the city, thank you for your service and dedication." As a token of its appreciation, the society presented Bellomy with $935.

Bellomy said she's enjoyed all of her 25 years with the society: "It's like being in one great big family. Everyone's so compassionate and cares so much about each other. Whether it's a lady geologist or a male geologist, when someone's had a crisis, everyone's been there. We've all weathered lots of storms."

Past presidents of the WTGS shared memories of working with Bellomy during their time in office. Many likened economic times then to current economic times in the oilpatch, including Gene Greenwood.

Greenwood recalled his first executive committee meeting as president, where he was told the WTGS had $540 in the bank and $550 in monthly expenses. "I told Marie we were going to have to let her go, that we were broke," he said. As it turned out, together they worked on a cost-cutting plan: Bellomy worked half-days, and she, with some help, compiled a list of universities and libraries that would possibly buy the society's cross-sections and guidebooks. "By the end of the year, we turned over $7,000 to the incoming administration," Greenwood stated.

Jay Stewart Martin, another past president, recalled a time in 1970 when things were also tough in the oilpatch. There was a conflict:

Chinese sister city will send representatives to Basin

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Permian Basin Oil Show has long been touted as the worldwide showcase of the latest in petroleum technology. This year, it comes one step closer to living up to its advanced billing as it hosts representatives of the petroleum industry from the People's Republic of China.

Seven representatives from Dongying, Midland's Chinese sister city, will visit Midland and Odessa from Oct. 14 to 18 in a reciprocal visit that will see them sampling the educational, cultural, social and economic offerings of the Permian Basin.

Dongying's mayor, Shenghai Tang and other government representatives, along with two high ranking officials from the Shengli field — the second largest oilfield in China, and analogous with the Permian Basin — will be introduced to every aspect of the lifestyle and economy of the area.

A highlight of the trip is the opportunity for many local companies to show their equipment and services to the Shengli field representatives, in hopes of selling their products to the oilrich area of China.

The object of the trip is to establish "quang shi" — a Chinese term meaning connections through friendship and trust.

"We are confident that we can develop a relationship in which interested local companies will have an introduction to trade with China, and enable them to meet with the individuals who can make trade possible," states Dick Dunbar, president of the Midland-Dongying Sister City Association.

Dunbar says that the Chinese have technology to offer Permian Basin businesses as well, and noted that there is some Chinese oilfield technology being sold successfully and competitively here.

In addition to meeting with local petroleum industry representatives, the delegation will be taken on tours to enhance their understanding of city planning and education in the U.S.

Local furniture store announces expansion

By MELLA McEWEN

MATLOCK FURNITURE, 805 S. Big Spring, is remodeling its store to add 4,000 square feet.

According to Ann Matlock Hopkins, the expansion will add to the showroom and increase storage in the warehouse. It will also give the store more inventory and more room for customers to move around, Hopkins said. "Right now," she said, "it's in a complete chaotic mess." The remodeling should take another month.

In addition, Matlock's has added a new parking lot on the south end of the store.

She noted that this is the fifth or sixth addition to the store, which has been in the Big Spring location for 30 years. She said the store was founded in the early 1940s.

Companies suffering through the state's depressed economy search for ways to keep costs down. Few few companies look to the accounting area for savings, but a new accounting concept could save companies thousands of dollars, according to a Dallas/Houston based firm.

RADER & CO., a CPA firm, has developed the "Part-Time Controller" wherein a CPA professional is assigned to spend 20 to 40 hours per week performing a company's Controller/VP-Finance duties. This differs from traditional CPA activity in that it involves a day-to-day commitment from the firm.

Each client designates the specific duties and number of hours the professional is to spend each week, and is charged on an hourly basis.

According to Rader & Co., the arrangement saves the client a full-time salary; the professional can call on the entire CPA firm to solve a client's problem; and one professional is assigned to one client, increasing availability and response time, and because each client monitors the number of hours to be spent, fees can be monitored.

Rader says the concept is perfect for small or start-up businesses and companies whose business is cyclical and must hold down fixed costs, and for those companies affected by the current depressed oil market.

Business journals merge

From Staff Reports

Two West Texas business journals have announced a merger.

The five-year old West Texas Business Journal, headquartered in San Angelo and published by Lackey Communications Inc., has merged with the Business Journal of the Permian Basin, published by Midland Newspapers Inc. which also publishes the Midland Reporter-Telegram, according to Ray Dumont publisher of the Business Journal of the Permian Basin and Jerry Lackey, publisher of the West Texas Business Journal.

Under the terms of the merger agreement the staff and subscribers of both publications will be combined, and Lackey Communications Inc. will continue to serve as San Angelo bureau, providing the Business Journal of the Permian Basin with editorial contributions, public relations and advertising and marketing support.

"We are pleased with the merger," said Dumont. "The new publication's circulation and advertising bases will be enhanced greatly, benefiting both our readers and advertisers. We are also excited about our new strength in the San Angelo and Abilene areas."

Lackey said he was pleased with the merger because it would provide readers of both publications more comprehensive coverage of the business news in an attractive full-color publications.

Combined circulation of the two publications will be 60,000, making it one of the largest regional business publications in Texas.

Production concerns cause oil prices to slump

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Oil prices slumped on world markets Tuesday amid growing concern that OPEC's production cutback will not make a significant dent in the global oil surplus until late this year.

Late in the day the American Petroleum Institute reported gasoline and home-heating oil inventories increased substantially last week in the United States, the largest oil-consuming nation.

OPEC appears to be close to achieving its goal of reducing output by nearly 4 million barrels to around 16.8 million barrels a day in September and October, but energy specialists said the cartel's surplus production during the summer could weigh down prices as these excess supplies hit the marketplace.

Oil prices had risen by more than $4 a barrel in the aftermath of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' Aug. 5 accord until heavy selling erupted Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, followed the U.S. lead and weakened Tuesday.

"The OPEC agreement on paper looks good," said Jay Amberg, crude pricing editor of the Oil Buyers' Guide in Lakewood, N.J. "But in fact there are still vessels transiting oil from the Persian Gulf that were loaded in August when Saudi Arabia's production was at record levels."

Amberg said these tankers would be arriving in the United States, already "beseiged by too much crude oil and petroleum products, through October — if not November."

On The European spot market, Britain's North Sea Brent crude dropped 20 cents to $14.95 a barrel.

West Texas intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude for immediate delivery on the Merc, fell 35 cents to $15.27 a barrel. Analysts said selling accelerated after the key crude broke through the critical $16-a-barrel mark during Monday's session.

Some analysts contended the market is undergoing a correction after a five-week advance spurred by speculative buying and will eventually rebound to the $17-a-barrel range.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast market, West Texas intermediate nosedived by 90 cents to $15.40 a barrel.

But Diamond Shamrock Corp. raised the price it will pay for West Texas intermediate by 75 cents to $15 a barrel and Crown Central Petroleum Corp. increased its buying price by $1 to $14.75 a barrel.

Home-heating oil for October delivery on the Merc slipped by 1.50 cents to 41.79 cents a gallon, unleaded gasoline by 0.67 cent to 43.41 cents, and leaded gasoline by 0.85 cent to 43.87 cents a gallon.

Marketing research project set

Midland/Odessa PULSE, a cooperative market research project, will host a presentation about the need and uses for research on Sept. 11 at the Mission Country Club from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Guest speaker at the presentation will be Christopher N. "Christo" Jackson, who has 27 years of hands-on experience in marketing, including seven with Sears Roebuck & Co. His "mini-seminar" will focus on the needs and uses of research in the current marketplace.

Midland/Odessa PULSE is a local firm owned by Greg Goree. It is a cooperative market analysis that is conducted twice annually in the Midland/Odessa area. Since all subscribers contribute to the cost, they are able to receive valuable marketing information at a nominal cost.

Members of the PULSE team include Goree; Art Pratt, owner/president of Creative Market Research of Houston, who will conduct the research and compile the data; and Kenny Karr.

Midland/Odessa PULSE is beginning its second year as a cooperative research program.

SEPM to host presentations

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will host two noon luncheon speakers on Tuesday, Sept. 16. The presentations will be at the Midland Center, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. Don G. Bebout of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin, will present "Improved Field Development Through Reservoir Characterization - San Andres/Grayburg Formations, Permian Basin."

This will be followed by Dr. J.F. (Rick) Sarg, Exxon Production Research Co., Houston. His talk will be a preview of the PBS-SEPM annual field trip "San Andres/Grayburg Facies and Stratigraphy, Guadalupe Mountains, New Mexico."

Bebout received his doctorate from the University of Kansas in 1961. He began his career with Exxon Production Research Co. in Houston, where he worked from 1960 to 1972. He is currently a senior research scientist and principal investigator of the Reservoir Characterization Project.

Sarg earned both a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in geology from the University of Pittsburgh, and his doctorate in geology in 1976 from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He is presently a research associate with Exxon and supervisor fo the Carbonate Facies Analysis section.

Reservations should be made with the SEPM office by Sept. 12.

Consumer buying spree may be at end

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending was one of the key forces keeping the economy moving in the April-June quarter, but analysts have expressed fears that the buying spree may be coming to an end as Americans begin to worry about record high levels of debt.

Americans took out $5.38 billion more in consumer credit than they paid off in July, the smallest increase since April, the Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday.

The July increase represented an 11.4 percent annual rate of gain, the Fed said.

World trade talks called critical

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, claiming the future of world trade hinges on an upcoming 93-nation conference in Uruguay, today accused "a handful of countries" of seeking to sabotage those talks.

"Nations that engage in three or four percent of the world's trade cannot be allowed to jeopardize the future of the entire world trading system," Yeutter said in sharply worded remarks prepared for a U.S. Chamber of Commerce breakfast.

Yeutter did not name the countries. However, a group of Third World nations led by India and Brazil have openly resisted U.S. efforts to include trade in services and investment in any new trade talks.

In addition, Yeutter previously has criticized France for leading the opposition to including a discussion on phasing out government agricultural subsidies on the agenda of any new trade round.

Aides said Yeutter's speech was intended to establish the U.S. bargaining tone for the conference, which begins this weekend at the seaside resort town of Punta del Estes. The meeting is being held under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

"What we do there will have major repercvussions for decades to come," Yeutter said of the conference. "I am not exaggerating when I say that the future of the international trading system hinges on the outcome of this ... meeting."

Yeutter earlier in the week had said the U.S. delegation, which also includes Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, would "walk away" from a new round of talks if any of the Reagan administration's five "big-ticket" items were excluded from the agenda.

These include investment, trade in services such as banking, agriculture, rules against piracy of intellectual property and a general strengthening of the GATT procedures for settling disputes.

In today's speech, Yeutter reiterated that threat.

"If a handful of countries blocks the rest of the world from negotiating on matters of great economic importance during the coming years — matters that will advance the cause of global trade — the United States will not participate in the new round," he told the business audience.

Yeutter said a collapse of next week's talks would lead to increased protectionism throughout the world.

BLM takes over shale oil facility

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management has taken over a $40 million oil shale facility, 50 miles southeast of Vernal, rather than restore the area to its original condition, officials said.

The White River Shale Oil Corp. agreed Tuesday to give the federal agency all facilities at the operation, including buildings, roads, powerlines, earthworks and mine construction, said Roland Robison, BLM Utah state director.

White River will establish a $1 million bank account, he said, interest from which the BLM will use to fund maintenance of the facilty.

Sun Oil Co. and Phillips Petroleum bid $75.6 million for a 5,120-acre tract and White River, jointly owned by Phillips, SOHIO and Sunoco, bid $45.1 million for the adjacent 5,120-acre tract.

The two tracts were being developed as a joint venture, said spokesman Jack Reed. The leases, issued June 1974 and relinquished Dec. 31, 1985 because of poor economic conditions for oil shale development, provided for the tracts to be reclaimed.

"We would have liked to see White River continue to develop the leases," Robison said. "However, given the options available to us, maintaining properties was preferable to dismantlement and rehabilitation."

Local residents and the Utah Congressional delegation expressed strong support for maintaining the property, Robison said.

Approximately 90 percent of the U.S. oil shale is in the Green River Formation, which includes northwestern Colorado, northeastern Utah and southwestern Wyoming. The federal government owns 80 percent of the oil shale.

The formation is estimated to contain 1.8 trillion barrels of oil of which 600 billion barrels may be recoverable.

"White River has been very cooperative in working out this agreement," Robison said. "It would have been very easy for them and us to simply close things down, dismantle the facilities, seal the mine and reclaim the area, but that may not be in the best interest of everyone in the long run."

VOTE

Wise predicted that repeal would discourage the development of clean coal-burning technology and lead to the draining of U.S. natural gas reserves.

In another energy matter Tuesday, Energy Secretary John Herrington said the Reagan administration is waiting for a further drop in oil prices before speeding up the filling of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Current crude prices run around $16 a barrel, down from about $28 late last year. Herrington did not say how far the price would have to fall to make him buy faster for the reserve, another 1970s hedge against a cutoff of foreign supplies.

Congress and the Reagan administration have had a running dispute over the reserve. Until he changed his mind last month at Herrington's urging, Reagan opposed filling the stockpile to the 750 million barrel level sought by Congress.

Herrington now has authority to pump oil into the reserve — salt domes in Texas and Louisiana — faster than the current 35,000-barrel-a-day limit if the price is right.

The secretary told reporters Tuesday that he would like to push the fill rate to 100,000 barrels a day, the practical limit of intake capacity, but "the price may be a little high to go to that large a purchase."

HONOR

Should the society keep the dues at $5, and keep the office open half days, or should dues be raised to $10, and keep the office open five days a week. "Marie won that vote," Martin said. Dues were raised, and the office was kept open.

Not all the remembrances were "hearts and kisses," as master of ceremonies Vic Brockman said. Past president Larry Seright remembered Bellomy this way: "She started with a junky two-room office, by herself, and is now in a four-office suite shielded by secretaries who screen her calls and who probably do all the work." Before Bellomy joined the WTGS, she worked for Microviolite, a firm that handled guidebooks and other functions for the society.

Bellomy said some of her best memories are of the field trips: "Getting out and looking at the rocks are some of my better memories. You're able to learn so much more about people. They're entirely different when they're away from the desk."

The field trips were the subject of some good-natured joking by some of the society's past presidents. "Here is a lady that for 20 some-odd years has made two or three exotic trips a year, in the company of 50 to 400 guys, all the food and booze is furnished, and she gets paid for it," Martin joked.

Past president Bruce Pearson said his favorite image of Bellomy was of her standing by the buses, just before a field trip, looking down the road for the guidebooks to arrive. "Noone was ever issued a guidebook more than 24 hours old," he said. "There have been some memorable trips."

CHINA

As part of the cultural exchange, Dunbar reports that approximately 50 works of art, including drawings and paintings depicting life in the Permian Basin, all by local artists, are currently on display in Dongying. The Chinese will send a similar collection of its own art work for display in Midland and Odessa.

Although petroleum is the main industry in both Midland and Dongying, Dunbar says there will also be opportunities for establishing trade and commerce in other industries.

A delegation of 33 Permian Basin residents traveled to Dongying in June to tour the city and other areas of China. "At that time, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas signed a Sister City agreement in which both cities agreed to look toward areas of mutual benefit — principally in an economic sense," said Dunbar.

As the itinerary for the visit is being firmed up, Dunbar urges any local businesses who are interested in meeting with the delegation to contact the Midland or Odessa chambers of commerce.

Tenneco sells metals division to Canadians

HOUSTON (SWN) — Tenneco Inc. has reached an agreement in principle to sell the precious metals assets of its Tenneco Minerals unit to Echo Bay Mines Ltd., Edmonton, Canada, for $130 million and certain production payments.

Included in the transaction are three gold mining operations in Nevada, two development properties in Nevada and California and several active exploration projects in Alaska, the western United States and Latin America.

The transaction is subject to a definitive agreement, approval by the boards of directors of both companies and government approval. It is anticipated that closing will be in November.

Texas Eastern, Grace complete drilling merger

HOUSTON (UPI) — Texas Eastern Corp. and W.R. Grace & Co. Tuesday completed a previously announced agreement to combine the domestic contract drilling operations of the two companies.

The newly combined operations of Brinkerhoff-Signal Inc. and Grace Drilling Co. will be headquartered in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Brinkerhoff-Signal, based in Houston, operates 43 rigs, primarily in the Rocky Mountains, California and Alaska.

Grace Drilling's 129-rig operation is headquartered in Oklahoma City. Most of the company's business is in the Rocky Mountains, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Texas.

Chapter 11 not on the wire for Western Union

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — The chairman of the 135-year-old Western Union Corp. says the troubled telecommunications company isn't considering filing for protection under federal bankruptcy laws.

Robert S. Leventhal said in a statement Tuesday that if the restructuring now before the company's shareholders was not approved, the company would consider other options, such as a renegotiation of its $300 million bank loan agreements.

Leventhal's comments came after shareholder voting on one element of the restructuring was adjourned until Friday to provide additional time for receipt of votes.

Consumer group: Baby Bell profits excessive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local Bell Telephone company stockholder profits are too high in a time of low inflation, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

The group on Tuesday urged state regulators to force companies to lower their rates.

During the first seven months of 1986, consumer prices have dropped at an annual rate of 0.2 percent. Most local phone rates were set as local companies gained independence from American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and successfully argued they were facing an uncertain economic future.

Canadian oil industry granted tax reprieve

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government, bowing to pressure from beleagured oil companies in western Canada, announced it will drop a controversial revenue-based tax Oct. 1.

Energy Minister Marcel Masse said the 10 percent Petroleum Gas &Revenue Tax would save the oil and natural gas industry more than $1 billion over the next 28 months that would have been paid to the federal government.

Masse said the government would regularly examine the books of oil companies to ensure that any savings were reinvested in exploration to help maintain jobs in western Canada.

Brazil cut off Export-Import Bank loan list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Export-Import Bank says it is no longer making loans to debt-ridden Brazil, a disclosure that came as Brazilian President Jose Sarney arrived for talks with President Reagan.

Brazil, the Third World's most heavily indebted country, owes $103.5 billion to banks, governments and intergovernmental bodies. It is more than $300 million behind in payments to the Export-Import Bank.

The Ex-Im Bank disclosed the loan cutoff on Tuesday.

Senate bars private collections from farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee has voted to halt the Reagan administration's use of a private collection agency to demand repayment of $630 million in past-due farm debts.

The Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture on Tuesday added language to its $31 billion 1987 spending bill that would prevent the Agriculture Department from employing private collection agencies such as the one that has sent out 6,500 letters to farmers in recent weeks.

Reports of the tactic angered many farm-state senators, particularly because some farmers said the payment demands violated understandings they had about working out their remaining debt with local Farmers Home Administration officials.

CAPITAL STRENGTH

Strength you can rely on.

At United Bank our officers and directors have set a goal to maintain the highest capital-to-assets ratio among Midland financial institutions. We have achieved a ratio of 18% at the end of August, still the strongest in Midland.

Our capital base is an important safety factor for our depositors and shareholders. It ensures that we have the capacity to weather uncertain economic conditions. United Bank's unprecedented growth is due, in large part, to the leadership of the men who comprise our board of directors. Each director contributes experience and wisdom in his special field, and together, give our management a realistic and balanced approach to meeting the banking needs of our community.

This strategy is reflected in the positive results of our year-to-date operations. Earnings through August totaled $684,738. Comparisons with our 1985 performance is shown below.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

H bonds pay 7.5 percent by check twice a year

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Shortly after retiring in February 1984, we exchanged all our Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, for Series H bonds, which originally had 10-year maturities. These bonds have been granted two 10-year extended maturities and will reach final maturity in February 1994.

We are both 88 and probably will not see the year 1994. But, just in case a miracle happens and we do live that long, should we start cashing the H bonds to avoid a large tax when they finally mature?

A. Unless you are in dire need of money, it would be a mistake to redeem those bonds.

Doyle

Your H bonds are paying 7.5 percent annual interest by check twice a year. These days, that's a mighty good rate on direct obligations of our federal government — absolutely safe securities.

When you exchanged your old E bonds for Hs, you did not pay federal income tax on the interest that had accrued on the Es. Instead, you postponed that tax bite until the Hs are redeemed or reach final maturity.

By cashing some of those Hs each year you would pay the tax on the accumulated E bond interest over a period of time, rather than paying that tax all at once.

However, after paying that tax each year, you would have less money to put to work at interest. As a result, your interest income would be reduced.

My advice is to keep the H bonds and let your heirs worry about paying the tax on the accumulated E bond interest. If you both join the choir silent before 1994, that tax can be paid when your final income tax return is filed. Or, your heirs can pay that bite when they cash the H bonds before final maturity.

But let's look to the bright side and assume that "miracle" you mention happens — a not really unlikely thing. Although no one enjoys paying taxes, the tax bite will be offset by the joy of living into truly golden years.

Q. My wife and I have Series E bonds purchased from 1949 through 1978. We don't need the cash from these bonds at the present time. When should we exchange them for HH bonds?

A. Don't make the exchange until Nov. 1, 1987, or the next semiannual interest accrual date of each bond following November 1987.

By holding them that long, your E bonds will accumulate interest at the variable rate for the previous five years. That rate, which the Treasury Department calls a "market-based" rate, almost certainly will be higher than your bonds' guaranteed rate.

Since it went into effect on Nov. 1, 1982, the variable rate has averaged out to 9.36 percent. It changes every six months and, because interest rates in the marketplace have been heading down, most likely will be lower when the five-year calculation is completed. But it should be higher than the guaranteed rate.

The variable rate added complications to an already confused Savings Bond situation. Boiled down, it means most Es should not be redeemed or exchanged for HHs until November 1987 at the earliest. The exceptions are Es more than 40 years old, which have reached final maturity and have stopped accruing interest.

EE bonds have to be held for five years or until their next semiannual interest accrual date following Nov. 1, 1987, whichever comes later, to be eligible for the variable rate.

Q. I'm writing for my grandmother, who is very upset because her latest Series H bond interest check is for less money than the checks she had been receiving. Can this be correct?

A. Unfortunately for your grandmother and many other H bond owners, yes.

The annual interest rate on H bonds that enter extended maturities — meaning they won't come due for another 10 years — has been reduced from 8.5 to 7.5 percent.

That change took place on Nov. 1, 1982, but most H bond holders didn't know about it until their bonds went into an extended maturity and their next checks were lower.

Lost accident report surfaces

NORWICH, Conn. (AP) — Police received payment for a copy of an accident report nearly a month late, after the U.S. Postal Service dutifully routed it to the police in Norwich, England.

"I've never seen this happen before," said Lt. Louis J. Fusaro, who received the envelope from England on Wednesday. "It took a roundabout route, but we got our copy fee."

The mix-up started on Aug. 7 when a Massachusetts man mailed his payment and a short note to the Norwich, Conn., police department, but neglected to indicate the state or zip code.

Scrawled next to the city's name in different handwriting are the letters "GB" (or Great Britain), apparently written by a confused postal worker.

HERE SHE COMES...A HEALTH-SMART Miss America

Miss America. Who wouldn't want to wear her crown? The Miss America of the 80s embodies many of the attributes common to the most well-rounded women across the country – ambition, talent, political savvy, good health and fitness.

While people often think pageant contestants must starve themselves to stay thin, they don't. Although these women are like any of us, capable of putting on weight while traveling, they manage to avoid it. The truth is, they're more careful than ever about what they eat and do during the interim between winning their state crown and competing for the national title. Keeping their figure is important, but even more important is taking care of their bodies.

The Miss America look – the look of the 80s – dictates a toned, shapely body with a naturally attractive appearance. But features like that don't just "happen" overnight. Every step of the contestants' way involves countless hours of practice and training. And what their example shows us is that anything we really want is worth a little hard work, isn't it?

Each pageant entrant quickly agrees that three meals a day are essential to fuel them through a daily schedule of commitments and workouts not unlike that of a professional athlete's. What they eat on a regular basis is a vital factor in how well they look, feel and function. Their food choices this time of year include produce now in season – fresh fruits like plums and cherries and vegetables such as peppers and tomatoes – which not only heighten the pleasures of eating but also contribute to fitness and well-being. Wherever these women travel, juicy fruits, green vegetables and even fresh loaves of whole-grain bread are always available for "take-out" at sidewalk stands, supermarkets and local delis.

These beautiful women must have some diet tricks, you say. Yes, but only health-smart ones.

Their advice is basic enough for all of us to follow. First, drink lots of water between meals to suppress hunger. Next, eat less fat through simple measures such as selecting leaner meat, drinking skim milk and using margarine and vegetable oil sparingly. Then, step up fiber intake. Natural fiber-filled foods include whole-grain wheat and rye products, legumes, fruits and leafy vegetables. Lastly, realize that carbohydrate calories are not as scary for weight watchers as fat calories are and they provide a liberal dose of vitamins and minerals.

The truth is, every time you eat carbohydrates, say from succulent fruit or a dish of grains, you do take in a significant amount of calories. Luckily however, your body uses up quite a bit of available energy in order to process these carbohydrate calories. On the other hand, your body does not need to expend much energy in processing dietary fat and as a result, more of it is available to be stored away as body fat. So, go all out to include whole-grain breads, rice and pasta in your meals. For the pageant contestants, these foods are diet choices that help keep energy levels high.

With a day dedicated to strenuous workouts and practice for their future stage performances, Miss America contestants take their lunch break eagerly. "I really look forward to lunch," says Miss New Hampshire, Lisa Van de Casteele, an amateur auto mechanic with a B.S. in marketing from the University of New Hampshire. "I'll prepare a meal that's nutritious, healthy and keeps me energized. After all, I've still got all afternoon to burn off calories!" By combining those health-smart carbohydrates, such as rice, with vegetables, like broccoli, red pepper and a protein source, such as chicken, the end result for a busy woman like Lisa is a light casserole dish such as "Stiff Competition Rice Salad" which provides adequate "energy punch."

A day in the life of a pageant contestant starts early, usually well before dawn with a breakfast shake like the "Atlantic City Fruit Frappé" and a brisk jog. Never wasting a moment, these young women typically then work out on a stationary bicycle set in front of the television. By watching the morning news while logging miles, they tone their minds as well as their bodies. "Paying close attention to world and national news issues keeps me on top of current events and will help prepare me for the demanding final interview in Atlantic City," says Miss Vermont Michelle Dawson, a sophomore at Carnegie Mellon in Pittsburgh.

But the word on exercise from most of the state representatives is simply consistency. And according to Miss America 1979, Kylene Barker Brandon, "your body doesn't burn fat without exercise." Brandon, in fact, does not believe in dieting at all, but in eating well and exercising frequently. Take travel pro Susan Akin, Miss America 1986, who's made hundreds of appearances all across the country since winning her title, yet with this busy schedule, still takes time to run. However as a safety precaution in strange towns, not knowing the roads, Susan takes off down the halls and runs up and down the stairs inside her hotels.

Pick an exercise that doesn't need too much equipment; one you can't come up with an excuse not to do. Many contestants routinely choose leg kicks, sit-ups and jumping rope as morning and bedtime toners. Some continue their indoor workouts via videotape instruction courses while others head for the great outdoors. Emily Franklin, Miss New Mexico, walks rather than runs because "it's a more relaxing and enjoyable form for me and better for my posture too."

Hours of practice, eating right and endless training. Obviously, stamina and determination are key ingredients among all of the 51 Miss America contestants. With a record $5 million in scholarship monies available to winners this year, it's no surprise. In fact, scholarship prizes are one of the major factors that motivate many to embark on this summer's long journey to the pageant finals in Atlantic City, New Jersey on September 13.

"The academic scholarships are firm proof of the pageant's validity," stresses a determined Miss Alaska, Jeri Morrison. She adds that the pageant presents a great opportunity to young women. "A woman must have the desire to improve herself in order to enter the pageant in the first place," she notes. "The scholarship money offers her the opportunity to better herself through education after her reign ends." Jeri is currently a junior at the University of Alaska who plans to continue her education with a career in public relations or advertising.

The grand prize awarded to Miss America 1987 will be a $30,000 educational grant, the largest prize ever awarded for top place in the pageant. Since its inception, the Miss America Pageant has been the largest single source of scholarship monies available to women from the financial sponsorship of corporations like The Gillette Company, a sponsor since 1959.

Is it all worth it? Despite the long hours, calorie counting and grueling workouts, increasing numbers of women continue to enter the pageant each year. Miss North Dakota Barbara Kerzman, a theatre arts major with an interest in opera, seems to capture the sentiment of most contestants for the title. "Putting my life on hold for a year is a sacrifice I've made in order to enter the Miss America Pageant," she says. "I have no regrets because the honor of representing my state far outweighs anything I've had to give up."

Stiff Competition Rice Salad

1/2 cup uncooked rice
1 pound boneless chicken (about 2 cups)
1 medium red pepper, julienned (about 1-1/2 cups)
1-1/2 cups broccoli flowerettes, blanched
3 to 4 scallions, chopped
1 can (8 ounces) water chestnuts, sliced (about 1 cup)
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup teriyaki sauce
1/4 cup of oil
1 tablespoon of white wine vinegar
2 teaspoons of dried dill weed
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 can (3 ounces) chow mein noodles (optional)

Prepare rice according to package directions; refrigerate until cool. Poach chicken until tender (about 5 minutes). Run under cold water; cut into chunks.

In a large bowl, combine chicken, rice, red pepper, broccoli, scallions, water chestnuts; set aside. In a small bowl, combine garlic, teriyaki sauce, oil, vinegar and mustard; blend well. Pour dressing over chicken-rice mixture and mix thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Top with chow mein noodles, if desired. Makes 4-6 servings.

Approximately 260 calories per serving.

Atlantic City Fruit Frappé

3/4 cup low-fat milk
1 container (8 ounces) low-fat fruit yogurt
1/2 medium banana
5-6 ice cubes

Pour milk into blender. Add yogurt and banana; mix until smooth. Drop ice cubes, one at a time, into blender, mixing until even consistency is achieved. Makes 2 servings.

Approximately 160 calories per serving.

Susan Akin, Miss America, 1986.

Current Miss America Susan Akin points out that good personal care and grooming is one of the most important attributes a candidate for the crown can hold. A fresh, healthy look is one contestants strive for and so the best advice for aspiring pageant winners is to keep their beauty regime simple. Some beauty and grooming tips from the contestants for this year's Miss America Pageant follow.

- "Having clear, healthy-looking skin is probably most important," says Michelle Dawson, Miss Vermont. Because of the make-up used on stage, the contestants are extremely conscious of cleansing skin often and well. Michelle uses Aapri facial scrub with ground apricot seeds once a week to loosen dirt and unclog pores.

- "Competing in a beauty pageant is a really stressful situation," notes Barbara Kerzman, Miss North Dakota. "One of the most important grooming tips I could give would be to start with a good anti-perspirant." A good one to try is Dry Idea, which goes on dry, not wet or greasy.

- Lisa Van de Casteele, Miss New Hampshire, feels that clean, shiny hair is important to a woman's overall appearance. "I wash my hair every day with a shampoo especially formulated for my hair type that also gives me subtle highlights," she explains. Shampoos are actually available with built-in body boosters and highlights, like Silkience.

- Having thick, full hair is another physical feature very important to the contestants. "I have fine hair which I compensate for by using a volumizer perm and lots of styling mousse," says Jerri Morrison, Miss Alaska.

Low-calorie meals hearty

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Low-calorie dishes needn't be skimpy affairs of wispy greens and lean vegetables.

These dishes are hearty, satisfying and add color and variety without many calories. Vegetables also add essential vitamins, minerals and fiber to family meals.

Avoid rich sauces, which only mask the flavor of fresh foods. Peaches, plums, berries, melons and apples are good without special preparation.

GRILLED HERBED TOMATOES
(Serves 6)

6 medium tomatoes, peeled
2 medium cucumbers, scored and thinly sliced
¼ cup oil
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons snipped chives
1 tablespoon snipped parsley
1 tablespoon sugar or substitute
1 tablespoon dried salad herbs, crushed
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon salt

Place tomatoes and cucumbers in large bowl. Combine remaining ingredients in jar or bowl and pour over vegetables. Cover and chill several hours or overnight, turning tomatoes once.

Remove tomatoes, reserving cucumbers in marinade. Wrap each tomato in a 6-inch square of foil. Grill over medium coals until heated through, about 20 minutes, turning once. Drain cucumbers to serve with tomatoes.

GRILLED ACORN SQUASH
(Serves 6)

3 medium acorn squash
2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons water
1 apple, cut into 6 wedges

Wash, halve and seed squash. Prick inside with tines of fork. Season with salt and pepper. Add 1 teaspoon each of margarine, sugar and water to each squash. Wrap each half, cut side up, in foil and secure. Place cut side up on grill to cook over medium coals till tender, 50 to 60 minutes. Open, stir to fluff squash and top with apple wedge.

ZUCCHINI FRITTERS
(Serves 6)

⅓ cup biscuit mix
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 slightly beaten eggs
2 cups shredded zucchini
2 tablespoons margarine

In bowl stir together biscuit mix, Parmesan cheese and pepper. Stir in eggs just until mixture is moistened. Fold in zucchini. In large heavy skillet or griddle melt margarine. Using 2 tablespoons mixture for each fritter, cook 4 or 6 at a time until browned, 4 to 5 minutes on each side. Drain on paper towel while cooking remaining fritters.

SPICED APPLESAUCE
(Makes 1 quart)

2 pounds (about 8) cooking apples
1 cup water
¼ cup molasses or honey
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg

Cut apples into wedges. Peeling and coring is not necessary. Combine with water in kettle. Cover and simmer until apples are tender, about 30 minutes. Put cooked fruit through a sieve or food mill. Add remaining ingredients to hot sauce and stir.

APPLESAUSE GINGERBREAD
(Serves 9-12)

2 cups flour
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup unsweetened applesauce
⅓ cup molasses
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup shortening

Sift dry ingredients onto waxed paper and set aside. In bowl, combine applesauce, molasses, eggs and shortening. Add sifted dry ingredients and beat to combine. Pour into greased 9-inch square pan and bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until center tests done.

SPICED ZUCCHINI BREAD

⅓ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup shredded zucchini
⅓ cup water
1⅔ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
⅓ cup chopped pecans

Cream together sugar, shortening and eggs. Add zucchini and water. Mix. Combine flour, soda, baking powder, salt and spices. Add to creamed mixture and stir. Add nuts.

Spoon batter into an 8- by 4-inch loaf pan greased on the bottom. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes or until center tests done.

Asparagus plant related to onions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — What's your asparagus IQ?"

Asparagus is a vitamin-rich vegetable, with vitamins A and C, according to Del Monte USA, a producer of canned asparagus. The vegetable is high in potassium and low in calories, too.

The asparagus plant is a member of the lily family, which also includes onions, garlic, leeks, hyacinths and tulips.

Information service studies data on dieting, dieters

STAMFORD, Conn. (A) — The most compelling diet motive is weight control, a goal shared by 59 percent of all people on any diet, according to detailed diaries filled out by 4,000 adults and 2,000 nationally representative households participating in the Menu Census study.

Other findings of the study, made by MRCA Information Services of Stamford:

- Nearly two-thirds of adult dieters are females;
- Low-calorie diets are the most common;
- Dieters skip dinner 40 percent more often than non-dieters;
- 4.4 million people are on an allergy-related diet;
- The low-fat diet is most popular in the West.

Sack lunches nutritious

Hearst News Service

Most students today eat lunch inside a school building in place of going home.

Buying a school lunch is a bargain when compared to other meals purchased away from home. The cost is low because school lunches are federally funded. For about a dollar, students can purchase a meal that is nutritionally adequate. Menus are planned by professionals. They offer variety and cater to the appetite of youth.

Brown-bag lunches can be economical and are a good way to cater to fussy eaters, but they require planning and time. Packing a lunch requires advance planning and preparation time. Variety will be limited and special attention must be given to keeping the food safe to eat.

A well-balanced lunch carried from home will include a good source of protein, a bread product, milk and fruit or vegetable. Variety is limited by ease of transportation, likes and food safety.

Brown-bagging it with a cold meat sandwich, milk and an apple five days a week can become tiresome. The use of small insulated containers can add variety to the lunch carried from home. Pack a hot hearty soup, warm dinner leftovers or a cold meat salad in a wide-mouth insulated jar.

To keep packed lunches safe to eat, select foods that will remain safe to eat when standing at room temperatures three to four hours. Peanut butter, jam, jelly, hard cheese and cured meats are wise sandwich choices.

Cleanliness in lunch preparation and packing is essential. Keep hands, work surfaces, utensils, food and lunch containers clean.

Keep food cold when refrigeration will not be provided. Small refreezable ice packs work well in lunch boxes. Some sandwiches freeze well. The best fillings for freezing are sliced and ground meats, poultry, fish, peanut butter, commercial cheese spreads, processed cheese, cream cheese, finely chopped egg yolks, pickles and olives.

PEANUT BUTTER-ORANGE CREAM CHEESE FILLING

1 package (3-ounce) cream cheese
⅓ cup peanut butter
1 tablespoon orange juice
¼ teaspoon grated orange rind

Combine the ingredients in a small bowl. Makes ¾ cups, enough for 5 or 6 sandwiches.

TUNA, RAISIN AND WHEAT GERM SANDWICHES

1 can (6½-ounce) tuna, drained and flaked
⅓ cup salad dressing
¼ cup raisins, cut
⅓ cup wheat germ
3 slices whole wheat bread
2 slices white bread

Mix the filling ingredients together, spread on slices of whole wheat and white bread and stack the slices alternately. Press the stack firmly together. Using a sharp knife and sawing motion, slice the crusts from all sides of the stack. Wrap and chill. When firm, cut into ½-inch slices. Wrap as individual sandwiches. Makes 5 sandwiches; serves 2 or 3.

MOLASSES SPICE COOKIES

½ cup margarine
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg
¼ cup molasses
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon salt

Preheat the oven to 375 F and lightly grease a baking sheet.

Beat the first four ingredients together. Mix the remaining ingredients thoroughly on waxed paper. Stir into the molasses mixture and mix well. Drop the dough by teaspoonfuls onto the baking sheet. Place the cookies 2 inches apart. Flatten each cookie with a fork. Bake until set but not hard, about seven minutes. Remove from the baking sheet while warm. Cool on a rack. Makes about 5 dozen.

JIFFY COOKIES

1 cup baking mix
1 package (3⅝-ounce) instant pudding mix
¼ cup oil
1 egg

Preheat the oven to 350 F. Combine the ingredients and mix until the dough forms a ball. Shape into small balls using 1 teaspoonful for each. Place on an ungreased baking sheet and flatten with your hand to about 2 inches. Bake about eight minutes. Makes 24 cookies.

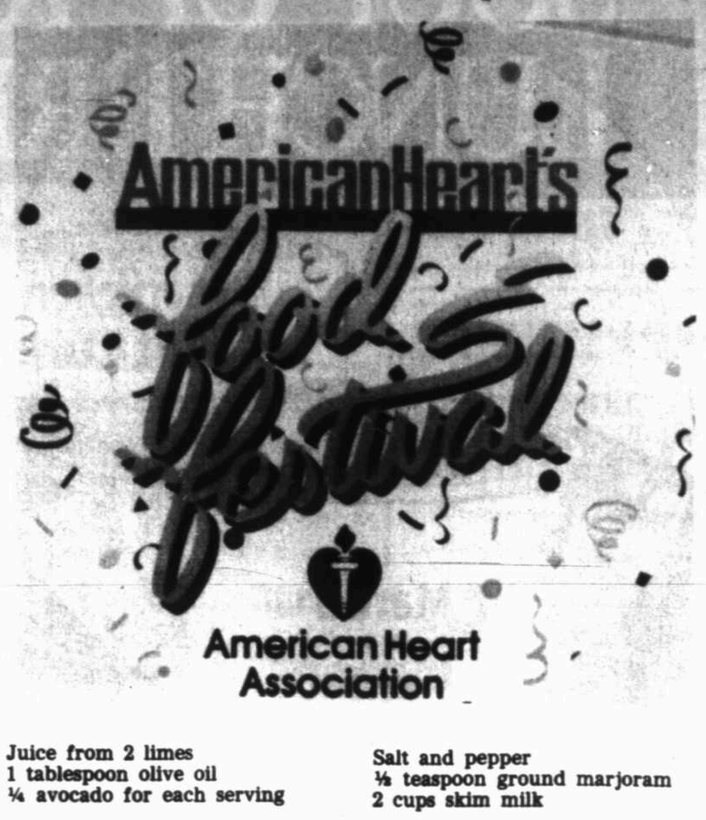
WHAT'S COOKING

Tasty recipes lead to healthy heart

By MARY BEA DRUMMOND
Lifestyle Writer



Eating the right foods can prolong life without making meals boring, said local health authorities.

The American Heart Association kicked off its second annual Food Festival Monday at the Plaza Club with a food demonstration and some tips for eating your way to a healthy heart.

Dr. Brian Mohr, Permian Cardiology Associates, said low fat, low cholesterol diets reduce the instances of heart disease.

One recent study focused on heart patients with high cholesterol levels, he said. Persons with low cholesterol diets and proper medication had a 50 percent lower rate of a second heart attack than those who did not, he said.

Another study on persons without prior heart trouble also suggested low cholesterol diets reduced heart disease, he said.

"People can make a change in their lives if they are willing to eat the proper foods," Mohr said.

Kelli Burkett, dietition with Midland Memorial Hospital, said the greatest contributors to heart attack are high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and smoking.

Other important risk factors are diabetes, being overweight, lack of exercise and a family history of early heart disease.

Ms. Burkett said reducing sodium and maintaining body weight are important. She said new research indicates reducing alcohol intake is essential.

AHA statistics show most Americans use 10 to 15 times more salt than they need, which contributes to high blood pressure and stroke in some people.

To limit the amount and kind of fat eaten AHA recommends:

- limiting intake of meat, seafood and poultry to no more than 5-7 ounces a day;
- use chicken or turkey (without skin) or fish in most main meals;
- choose lean cuts of meat and trim all fat;
- substitute meatless or "low-meat" main dishes for regular entrees;
- use no more than 5-8 teaspoons of fats and oils daily;
- use low-fat dairy products.

Most people get cholesterol from meats, poultry, seafood and dairy products. Egg yolks and organ meats are very high in cholesterol.

Fruit, vegetables, grains, cereals, nuts and seeds contain no cholesterol and are highly recommended.

The following recipes are from the American Heart Association:

SEA SCALLOPS MARINATED
3 ounces sea scallops
¼ teaspoon chopped fresh basil
¼ teaspoon chopped fresh cilanto
Juice from 2 limes
1 tablespoon olive oil
¼ avocado for each serving

Mix all ingredients and marinate for 4 hours. Serve in a radicchio cup with an avocado fan. Each serving is 223 calories.

RASPBERRY CHIFFON PIE
2½ cups fresh raspberries
1 tablespoon gelatin
½ cup hot water
3 ounces sugar
1 tablespoon flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅓ cup non-fat dry milk
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 ounce sugar

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. In 2 quart saucepan put 1 cup raspberries (reserve remainder), sugar, flour and salt. Heat to dissolve sugar and puree raspberries. Remove from heat, add half the lemon juice and remainder of raspberries, set aside to chill.

Whip non fat dry milk and ice water until peaks. Use chilled attachment. Add lemon juice and sugar, whip about 3 minutes. When raspberry mixture is well chilled but not set, fold in whipped milk. Pour mixture into baked 11-inch tart shell. Chill until set. Each serving is about 190 calories.

GREEN SPLIT PEA SOUP
1 cup green split peas
3 tablespoons margarine
¼ cup chopped onion
4 cups cold water
Salt and pepper
½ teaspoon ground marjoram
2 cups skim milk

Soak peas as directed and drain. Melt margarine in large saucepan and cook onion until lightly browned. Add water, peas and seasoning; cover and simmer 1 hour or until peas are tender, stirring occasionally. Press soup through sieve or puree in electric blender.

Return to saucepan, add milk and adjust seasoning; heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Serve immediately. Yield: about 1½ quarts, about 200 calories per 1-cup serving.

FLOUNDER FILLETS IN FOIL
4 flounder fillets
Margarine or oil
Freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon shallots or green onions
½ pound chopped mushrooms
3 tablespoons dry white wine
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Saute shallots or green onions in margarine until soft; add mushrooms and cook five minutes. Stir in wine, lemon juice and parsley, and cook until most of liquid evaporates. Lightly grease four pieces of heavy-duty foil with margarine or oil. Place fillet on each piece; season with pepper. Spoon mushroom sauce over each fillet. Draw edges of foil together and seal. Bake at 400° for 20 minutes or until fish flakes. Serve in foil. Makes four servings of about 225 calories each.

Maternity clothes designed for executives

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — When the company president learns she's pregnant, she doesn't have to give up the dress-for-success look or spend hours combing through shopping malls, thanks to a Philadelphia-based retailer.

Mothers Work, a firm that specializes in "executive maternity clothing," has a fall 1986 line available through its national chain of 25 outlets and its mail-order catalog.

The company was started in 1982 by Rebecca Matthias, an executive in the computer industry who was expecting at the time. Its classic designs in traditional fabrics are aimed at "all fashionable mothers-to-be who have been shocked by the pink polyester frocks which are the mainstay of the typical maternity shop."

The new Mothers Work fall line features a black and red group of coordinated suits and sportswear, based on a J.P. Stevens worsted glen plaid and tic luxury fabric. Blazer and skirt coordinates are designed for mix-and-match ease, and the line includes a trench coat and evening wear.

THE BUTCHER

Cheese complements meat dishes

By MERLE ELLIS

The first market I worked in when I was learning the butcher trade was the O.P. Skaggs store at the corner of 4th and Pearl street in Sioux City, Iowa. One of my first jobs was "putting up" the cheese. Every butcher shop in those days had a display of cheese on top of the meatcase. There wasn't a large variety back then, usually only a wheel of longhorn, a loaf of cheddar and one of domestic Swiss and a wheel of Maytag Blue.

Maytag was the only blue cheese we carried at O.P. Skaggs. It is an Iowa product, produced for almost 50 years at Maytag Dairy Farms in Newton, a picturebook-like setting in the countryside about an hour east of Des Moines. The O.P. Skaggs stores were owned by a man named Charlie Van Eaton who was at the time U.S. senator from Iowa. It was a matter of pride. It wasn't until years later, after "putting up" a lot of cheese in a lot of different meat markets, that I realized that Maytag blue is one of the finest blue cheeses in the world.

A slice of blue cheese adds a marvelous burst of flavor to a simple hamburger or steak. Just lay a slice on top and let the heat of the meat melt the cheese. In Iowa, they use Maytag blue to make a stuffing for double thick pork chops called "Iowa Chops" that are great on the grill. The same stuffing, I have found, is equally good in lamb chops. The winning recipe in the barbecue category of this year's California Beef Cookoff was one for grilled beef tenderloins topped with a blue cheese sauce. Blue cheese also goes very well simply crumbled over salad greens. (Man, I will admit, does not live by meat alone. Not even butchers.)

MAYTAG STUFFED IOWA CHOPS

6 thick cut (1 to 1¼ inch) pork loin chops, with pockets cut
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup onion, finely minced
⅛ cup mushrooms sliced very thin
6 ounces crumbled blue cheese (Maytag, if you want to be authentic)
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut a pocket in the pork chops. If they are from the rib section of the loin, cut a pocket by cutting along the length of the rib. The membrane on the inside of the loin will shrink during cooking, holding the stuffing in place. If the chops are from the tenderloin section of the loin and have no rib bone, make a small incision at the small end of the chop and cut a pocket by rotating the blade of your knife inside the chop, keeping the opening no wider than an inch or so.

Melt the butter in a heavy skillet over medium heat and add the onions and mushrooms and cook for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in the blue cheese and bread crumbs. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Stuff each pork chop with a sixth of the mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven for 45 minutes, or grill over moderate coals for 20-30 minutes. Serves 6.

BELL'S BARBECUED BLUE CHEESE BEEF TENDERLOINS

2 (8-ounces) beef tenderloin steaks, cut about 1-inch thick
1 large clove of garlic, cut in half
⅛ teaspoon salt or to taste
1 tablespoon cream cheese
2 teaspoons finely chopped onions
2 teaspoons blue cheese
2 teaspoons unflavored yogurt
Dash of white pepper
Parsley, chopped for garnish

Rub each steak on both sides with cut garlic, sprinkle with salt. Place steaks on grill rack over medium coals. Cook 5-7 minutes on each side to the desired degree of doneness.

While the steaks are grilling, or before if you like, mix together the cream cheese, onions, blue cheese, yogurt and pepper.

When the steaks are done, transfer to warm plates and top each steak with ⅛ of the blue cheese mixture. Garnish with a sprinkle of chopped parsley. Serves 2.

HAMBURGERS WITH THE BLUES

⅛ pound blue cheese
2 pounds ground beef
¼ cup minced green onions, including tops
¼ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
¼ teaspoon red pepper (a little less if you don't like the red hot "blues")
8 hamburger buns

Crumble the blue cheese into the ground beef, add the minced onions, Tabasco, Worcestershire, salt and peppers. Mix lightly to blend, be gentle. Let stand in the refrigerator for an hour or two for the flavors to blend. Gently press the meat into 8 patties. Broil, pan fry or grill over moderate coals to the desired degree of doneness. Serve on toasted hamburger buns. Serves 8.

Americans developing taste for spicier foods

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Salt and pepper are old hat: Americans are buying more exotic spices than ever before, according to a recent report in Food Engineering magazine.

In 1932, annual per capita spice consumption was 10 ounces. In 1976, it was 31 ounces and today, it's more than 36 ounces, says Food Engineering.

That may not sound like much, unless you consider a single ounce of black pepper will season your breakfast eggs for two years.

Overall, America's spice usage topped the half-billion pound mark for five years in a row.

Tom Burns of the American Spice Trade Association cites three reasons why spices have become more popular:

■ A growing ethnic-minority population influencing the mass American market;

■ A greater concern for diet and nutrition that has resulted in spices replacing ingredients like salt and fats and

■ A heightened sophistication among Americans in general about food and flavor.

Hot spices have grown in popularity because of the boom of Mexican, Cajun and Szechuan cuisine, but the use of mild spices has also jumped. Basil consumption alone has increased 407 percent since 1976, fennel has risen 159 percent and cinnamon is up 124 percent.

Pork chops stuffed with chili peppers

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Both the taste and the convenience of this dish are hot stuff. Freeze the stuffed chops individually and reheat one entree for a single diner; reheat four and serve the whole family.

You'll have some of the nacho cheese sauce left. Cover and chill the rest to serve with tortilla chips another time.

PEPPER-STUFFED PORK CHOPS

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¾ cup corn bread stuffing mix
2 tablespoons water
4 pork loin rib chops, cut 1-inch thick
1 (4-ounce) can whole green chili peppers, drained and seeded
1 (7½- or 9-ounce) container nacho cheese sauce

In a small saucepan melt butter. Stir in stuffing mix and water. Set aside. Trim excess fat from chops. Make a pocket in each chop by cutting from the fat side almost to the bone. Place ¼ of the chili peppers in each pocket. Spoon ¼ of the stuffing mixture into each chop. Secure with wooden toothpicks. Place chops on an unheated rack of a broiler pan. Broil 5 inches from heat for 8 minutes. Turn; broil 7 to 8 minutes more or until no pink remains. Remove toothpicks. Cool slightly.

To serve without freezing: Prepare as above, except do not broil. Bake, covered, in 350-degree oven 45 minutes. Uncover; bake 25 to 30 minutes more or until done.

Mogul foods feed masses

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Some 450 years ago, Mogul invaders swept across the plains of northern India and set up a Moslem dynasty that brought the world the Taj Mahal and the Peacock Throne.

Today, the Mogul rulers have faded into history but their descendants are planning a new invasion, one aimed at conquering the palates of Americans.

Using the same secret recipes that satisfied the appetite of Emperor Shahjahan, the builder of the Taj Mahal in 1653 and what is now the old city of Delhi, they hope to win over Westerners with their tandoori chicken, mutton korma and other spicy Mogul delicacies.

"The Almighty has given us the food," said 80-year-old Syed Sahib Uddin, with a messianic look in his eyes. "Our aim is to popularize Mogul food among the common people."

Ancestors of the Uddin family cooked for the Mogul rulers before the last of the rulers was deposed by the British in 1857.

Since 1913, the Uddins have run Karim's. It was little more than a hole in the wall when Hafiz Karim Uddin, who died in 1964, opened next to his two-story house in the old section of the city.

As the popularity of Karim's grew, the restaurant expanded, taking over the other buildings including the Uddin's house.

On an average day, more than 3,000 Hindus, Moslems, Sikhs and and the more knowledgeable of tourists crowd into Karim's three dining rooms to feast on inexpensive, tasty Mogul food.

Diplomats and other well-heeled patrons, however, found it inconvenient to wend their way through narrow streets teeming with hawkers, beggars, bicycle rickshaws, cows and goats to reach Karim's. A spacious, modern, air-conditioned branch was opened to serve them in the south Delhi neighborhood of Nizamuddin in 1972.

By tradition, all the males in the Uddin clan are initiated into Mogul cooking at an early age and most grow up working at Karim's.

The founder's three generations of offspring are eager to introduce Mogul food to a wider populace. Hungry for expansion, the family has set its sights on the United States for its first foreign branch.

"Americans who visit our restaurant like our food," said the white-bearded Sahib Uddin, son of Karim and the eldest of the Uddin clan.

The founder's 25-year-old great-grandson, Wasim Uddin Ahmed is the first in his family to have a college degree. He hopes, in the near future, to open the first overseas Karim's in New York City.

In fact, only a few additions have been made to Karim's original menu, which included tandoori chicken and lamb dishes such as mutton korma, made with a rich, sweetish sauce; nargisi kofta, with ground mutton and hard-boiled eggs; badam pasanda, tenderized mutton cooked in an almond sauce, and the ever-popular sheep brain curry.

"The Moguls never ate vegetables because they were the warriors and needed strength," Wasim Uddin said.

To meet the demands of its Hindu customers, Karim's added vegetable and lentil dishes to the meat-dominated menu.

DEAR ABBY

'Pre-engagement' questioned

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently, several young girls I work with have come to work wearing rings with tiny diamonds — they call them "pre-enagement rings."

Abby, just what is a "pre-engagement ring?" Rather than risk hurting their feelings, I thought I'd ask you. Does this mean she's a "pre-bride?" Or does it mean she's a "post-virgin?" Or is it a precommitment on the boy's part? (Meaning, "I'll marry you, if no one better comes along.") I would feel insulted to receive a "pre-engagement ring." You're either engaged, or you're not. If you're engaged, call it an "engagement ring." If you're not, call it a "friendship ring."

What do you think? — TOO OLD TO UNDERSTAND

DEAR TOO OLD: What you (or I) perceive the ring to mean is unimportant. Its meaning to the giver and receiver is all that matters. Obviously it signifies some degree of special commitment. Don't concern yourself with the size of the diamond, or the question of virginity; just wish the ring-bearer well and pull in your claws.

DEAR ABBY: I have noticed several letters in your column lately containing valuable tips on how to keep small children safe from death traps. Who ever would have dreamed that a toddler could wander off during a family outing and lose his life by climbing into an ice chest containing just enough melted ice to drown in! Or that a child could slip down in his high chair and strangle to death by catching his throat on the tray!

I have another tragic story to tell that may save the lives of other children. About 20 years ago my aunt put her twin boys in their playpen because she had a lot of work to do. They were about 14 months old at the time. When she returned about half an hour later to check on them, she found one of the twins dead! She had thoughtlessly placed the playpen near a window where the child could reach the cord from the blinds. He was probably playing with the cord, became entangled in it, and hung himself. — VIRGINIA READER

DEAR READER: Thank you for alerting my readers to a danger that may not have occurred to them. You may have saved a life today.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to write when I read the young girl's complaint about her mother's secondhand smoke.

I want to tell you how proud I am of my own mother. She used to smoke, though I have no memories of it — only photographs of a pretty young mother holding a baby (me) in one hand and a cigarette in the other. She was 32 years old at the time.

When the reports first came out stating that smoking was unhealthy, she quit — cold turkey. Others have told me she climbed the walls for a couple of months, and it was years before the craving left her.

She did it for me and my sisters. She didn't want us to follow her poor example and become smokers who would find it as hard to quit as it was for her.

What have I (and my sisters) gained? We have never smoked. Or wanted to. I grew up in a home free of burn marks, smelly draperies and nasty ashtrays. And when Mom baby-sat for my children, I didn't have to worry that they might find matches or a lighter in her purse. Mom is still around, though we live thousands of miles apart. Her letters have no scorch marks on them, and when we talk on the phone, I don't have to listen to a hacking cigarette cough.

Thank you, Mom, for having quit the habit when I was a baby. It took guts, courage and caring. — BETTY DIEMERT'S DAUGHTER

Popcorn popular

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

I've always liked popcorn. But since I learned that plain popcorn contains just 23 calories per cup, it's become my favorite snack! Even with Mexican-style seasonings and a little cheese and butter, a cup of Nacho Popcorn has only 79 calories.

NACHO POPCORN
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon crushed red pepper
½ teaspoon ground cumin
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
10 cups warm popped popcorn
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

In a small bowl stir paprika, red pepper and cumin into melted butter. Gently toss butter mixture with popcorn, coating evenly. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and toss until coated. Makes 10 cups.

Nutrition information per cup: 79 cal., 2 g pro., 5 g carbo., 6 g fat, 15 mg chol., 109 mg sodium.

Unusual jam made with tomatoes, basil

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

TOMATO-BASIL JAM
3½ pounds tomatoes, peeled, cored and seeded
3 tablespoons snipped fresh basil or 1 tablespoon dried basil, crushed
¼ cup lemon juice
3 cups sugar
1 (1¾-ounce) package light powdered fruit pectin

Finely chop tomatoes to make 3½ cups. In a 6- to 8-quart kettle or Dutch oven simmer tomatoes, covered, for 10 minutes; measure 3½ cups. Return tomatoes to kettle. Add basil and lemon juice. Stir ¼ cup sugar into pectin. Stir pectin mixture into tomato mixture. Bring to full rolling boil, stirring constantly. Stir in remaining sugar. Return mixture to full rolling boil. Boil hard, uncovered, 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; skim off foam with metal spoon. Ladle at once into 5 hot, clean half-pint jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes (start timing when water comes to boiling). Remove jars from water bath. Makes 5 half-pints.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, September 11, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Keep things shipshape on the job and career advancement will come more quickly than in the past. A change of residence could be lucky for a relationship. Enjoy the tall stories your competitors tell but do not be influenced by them. Take as much time as you need to get a job done right. Guard against someone who might try to defraud you.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Los Angeles Raiders center Don Mosebar, actor Earl Holliman, movie director Brian DePalma, Hedy Lamarr, Florida politician Reubin Askew, legendary Alabama football coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, Las Vegas favorite Lola Falana, author O. Henry and the Cowboys' coach Tom Landry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Joint business ventures enjoy highly favorable influences. Recognize the importance of good public relations. Avoid discussing controversial issues. "Far out" ideas will annoy a conservative person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Business is fairly brisk during the morning but slacks off after lunch. A new career opportunity sounds too good to be true. Do your own research to avoid small but costly errors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20). Do what you can to build savings. A great day for sorting out problems connected with personal relationships. Be certain to include mate in your social plans for this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22). Continue to work behind the scenes. Cultivate new contacts and join a special professional or fraternal organization. The friction that once existed between you and a relative begins to fade. Be patient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Once you decide on a course of action, stick to your guns. Others look to you for leadership. Write to friends or business contacts who live abroad. Romance thrives in an atmosphere of trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Pay closer attention to detail. Delay approving contracts until more up-to-date information is available. Devote any spare time to activities that will relax you. Romance beckons from afar.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). An influential person who has been elusive in the past is anxious to get in touch with you. Follow up immediately. A good day for making small investments. Parents look to you for assistance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Get in touch with contacts who can give you valuable inside information. A prominent individual offers financial backing. There could be strings attached. Curb extravagance. Limit purchases to essentials.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Be careful not to take people or situations for granted. Unless you keep the details of a plan to yourself, someone could spoil your timing. Let loved one know what is on your mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You may have to direct most of your energy to helping children today. Someone could ask you to choose between career and family. Be thankful for the success you already enjoy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Pay a debt before you owe even more. You cannot afford to back out of a commitment at the last minute. Be imaginative when varying your routine.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Someone you find attractive thinks you are the greatest! Volunteer to raise funds for a library or child care center. Give mate the benefit of doubt. Keep a business associate's confidences.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

TOO EASY TO SPOT

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 5 2 ♡ K 6 4 3 2 ◇ J 8 7 5 4 ♣ 9
WEST ♠ 4 ♡ J 9 8 7 ◇ 3 2 ♣ K Q 10 8 7 3		EAST ♠ J 10 9 8 ♡ 10 ◇ K 9 6 ♣ J 6 5 4 2
	SOUTH ♠ A K Q 7 6 3 ♡ A Q 5 ◇ A Q 10 ♣ A

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	3 ♣	Pass	5 ♠
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

This problem, composed by the late Paul Lukacs and Jeff Rubens, is so simple that it has fooled many experts. Suppose you have reached six spades via the auction shown. East and West have taken advantage of the vulnerability to make it as difficult as possible for you to reach your best contract with any degree of certainty, and North probably would not have taken any action had he known that you, too, held a singleton club.

Against your spade slam West leads the king of clubs. You win and cash the ace-king of trumps, West discarding a club on the second round. Since you intend sluffing your two diamond losers on long hearts if possible, you continue with the queen of trumps and another. East makes life difficult for you by shifting to a diamond. Do you take the finesse, or do you rely on a 3-2 heart break?

If you are having a problem, it is because you have already committed an error. Can you tell us what went wrong?

You surrendered the lead too soon. Before conceding a trump trick, you should cash the ace-queen of hearts. If both defenders follow, surrender the trump trick, win the diamond shift with the ace, cross to the king of hearts and take your two diamond pitches on the good hearts. However, if the heart split is 4-1 or worse, you must use the king of hearts as a dummy entry to lead the jack of diamonds for a finesse!

Isn't it too easy for words?

Dennis Weaver's 'cowboy sense' wins him star on Hollywood Walk of Fame

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dennis Weaver, who played Chester on television's "Gunsmoke" and used his cowboy sense to solve big city crimes as Marshal McCloud on "McCloud," has received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Weaver

As about 300 well-wishers paid tribute, the Emmy Award winning actor set the 1,832nd star in the sidewalk in a ceremony Tuesday evening along Hollywood Boulevard.

"I think this is one of the stars on Hollywood Boulevard...that will transform itself and take more the shape of a heart," extolled Mike Farrell of the television series "M*A*S*H." Farrell toured the Soviet Union with Weaver last year.

Weaver, apparently moved by the ceremony, told the audience, "I cannot tell you what feeling goes through someone...when they hear such things as I've heard tonight. If we could package that feeling around the world, we would have peace."

But the ceremony was not all sober-minded.

At one point, Amanda Blake, who portrayed Marshal Matt Dillon's love interest, Miss Kitty, on "Gunsmoke," smacked Weaver with a passionate, theatrical kiss.

The embrace prompted Weaver to revert to the high-pitched voice of his old Chester character and say, "By golly, Mr. Dillon. I know what you mean!"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susan Stamberg has given up the co-anchorship of National Public Radio's late afternoon news program "All Things Considered" after 15 years.

Ms. Stamberg told listeners in a farewell statement Monday that she will continue to do features for the program. Next year, she will be host of an NPR Sunday news and features program.

Wendy Kaufman will fill in as co-host of "All Things Considered" until a permanent replacement is selected, NPR said.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wide receiver Willie Gault isn't trading his Chicago Bears football jersey for a tutu, but he will don tights and slippers this month for his ballet debut.

Gault

"I wanted to show them that ballet is not a sissy sport, that a masculine guy like myself can come in and do it," Gault said Tuesday at a rehearsal for "Dreamer's Journey."

The ballet, to be presented Sept. 29 at a North Side high school, stars Gault in a show that mixes classical ballet with popular rap poetry written and performed by a cast of youngsters from Lawndale, one of Chicago's roughest neighborhoods.

The program is a collaboration between the Chicago City Ballet and the Better Boys Foundation, of which Gault is a board member, to raise money for both organizations.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana is Britain's most stylish person, according to a Gallup poll that ranked her husband, Prince Charles, a distant second.

Charles' brother, Prince Andrew, tied for third place with TV talk show host Terry Wogan. Andrew's wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, ranked fifth, according to the poll published Tuesday.

Queen Elizabeth II came in sixth, actress Joan Collins seventh, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher eighth, Queen Mother Elizabeth ninth and Princess Michael of Kent 10th.

The poll of more than 1,000 people was commissioned by Polaroid U.K. Ltd.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Maxim Shostakovich makes his debut tonight as conductor of the New Orleans Symphony, but an estimated 3,000 subscribers may not get their tickets.

Season tickets for the Soviet-born conductor's first performances were mailed late because the company that supplies the blank tickets was behind by three weeks, said orchestra spokeswoman Angela Vachetta.

Tickets for tonight's debut weren't mailed until the middle of last week, she said.

Shostakovich, son of composer Dmitri Shostakovich, was principal conductor of the U.S.S.R. Radio and Television Symphony Orchestra in the 1970s. He was granted asylum in the United States in 1981 and has worked with many of the great orchestras.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There are many ways to commit a blooper on television but only a few ways to show them, a federal appeals court ruled in dismissing Dick Clark's copyright infringement suit against the producer of a rival show.

Clark claimed his "TV's Censored Bloopers," was the basis of a series by Alan Landsburg Productions, "Life's Most Embarrassing Moments."

After watching tapes of both shows, U.S. District Judge James Ideman of Los Angeles dismissed Clark's suit, saying Landsburg's show was not "substantially similar."

His ruling was upheld Tuesday by a unanimous three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Jicama: Versatile 'Mexican potato' sparks salads

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Jicama is known by several curious names, including "yambean" or "yambean root," "Chinese yam" and "Mexican potato." To add to the confusion, this tuberous veggie has the color of a potato, the shape of a large turnip, and the approximate flavor and texture of a water chestnut.

In fact, because it so closely resembles the water chestnut, it is often used as a substitute for this more expensive vegetable.

Grown throughout Latin America, jicama is especially popular in Mexico, where its status is comparable to that of the potato in the United States. (Some jicama is also grown in Hawaii.)

Jicama makes a crunchy addition to a crudite platter, where its bland flavor is the perfect foil for a spicy dip. Its major use is as a fresh, raw vegetable, but the root may also be pickled — or steamed, fried or boiled, as you would a potato.

When purchasing fresh jicama, look for tubers that are smooth, well-shaped, firm and blemish-free. Smaller-sized tubers are best, since larger ones tend to be woody. Refrigerate jicama in a plastic bag. It will stay fresh up to two weeks.

The tough, fibrous skin is always peeled off, and the watery-crisp white flesh cut into pieces which may be eaten plain, garnished with lime or lemon juice, or lightly salted. Jicama is around 88 percent water, and has a calorie count close to brussels sprouts and peas.

While well-loved in Mexico, many Americans have yet to discover this marvelous root. It's a great accent to salads of all kinds (potato salad included), which is where it's featured in today's recipes.

JICAMA SALAD

2 cups peeled jicama, cut in matchstick julienne
1 green pepper, diced
½ medium green pepper, diced
½ medium red sweet onion, thinly sliced
1 medium cucumber, peeled and thinly sliced
10 cherry tomatoes
¼ cup peanut oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon leaf oregano, crumbled
Dash each salt and pepper
1 small head red leaf lettuce, washed and dried

In medium mixing bowl, combine jicama, green pepper, onion, cucumber and tomatoes. Combine all remaining ingredients except lettuce and blend well. Toss with vegetables to coat.

Line serving bowl with prepared lettuce leaves. Turn jicama mixture into bowl to serve.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

ENSALADA TECATE

4 small, raw beets
¼ pound fresh jicama
1 orange
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 medium red apple
2 small bananas
8 large romaine lettuce leaves, finely shredded
3 tablespoons unsalted sunflower seeds
3 tablespoons pine nuts
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
Dash each salt and pepper

Cut off beet tops; do not remove root. Scrub beets and place in small saucepan. Add water to cover.

Bring to a boil and reduce heat. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes, or until beets are tender. Drain and rinse with cold water.

Rub off skins under cold, running water. Refrigerate.

Peel jicama and cut into thin strips. Peel orange and cut into thin slices.

Slice unpeeled apple into thin wedges and sprinkle with lemon juice, to prevent discoloration. Peel banana and cut into thin slices.

Line serving bowl with shredded lettuce; shred chilled beets over lettuce. Top with prepared jicama, orange, apple and banana. Sprinkle with sunflower seeds and pine nuts.

In small bowl or jar combine remaining ingredients. Whip or shake well to blend and drizzle over salad.

BAVARIAN BEEF SANDWICH

8 slices dark rye bread
8 ounces thinly sliced cooked beef
3 tablespoons Thousand Island salad dressing
1 (16-ounce) jar sweet-sour cabbage, drained

On each of 4 slices of the bread, layer ¼ of the beef, dressing and cabbage. Top with remaining bread. Makes 4 main-dish servings.

Penalties for using drugs, tobacco called 'Nazi-like'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Mandatory work details, two-week suspensions, losses of privileges and obligatory family counseling sessions are "unenforceable" penalties to impose on students caught using drugs off campus, Midland teachers and students said Tuesday.

"Those kind of tactics are Nazi-like," LHS band director Randy Storey said.

"I realize we have a problem and we have to attack the problem. But I'm not sure it needs to involve taking away the student's rights."

The Midland Independent Independent School District Board of Trustees voted unanimously Tuesday to crack down on athletes, band and choir students, cheerleaders, Student Council representatives and other extracurricular participants caught using cigarettes, snuff and mind-altering chemicals.

School officials said the rules will be enforced on and off campus.

"It is time for us as a school district, with policy, to eliminate drug use by our students," Midland High School Principal Jimmie Kelly said.

"As long as students are given the opportunity to participate in special activities, we as a school district have a right to set certain standards of behavior. That's what we've done in this case."

Students caught under the influence or in possession of drugs or alcohol will be suspended from extracurricular activities for two weeks on the first offense.

A second violation will result in the student's loss of extracurricular privileges for the remainder of the year.

If after the second violation, however, the student and family successfully complete a six-week chemical dependency program, the student may be reinstated in school activities.

Students caught using or possessing a tobacco product off campus would be required to serve a three-hour work detail on the first offense.

A second violation will result in the student being suspended from extracurricular activities for five days.

On the third offense, a student will be suspended from all activities for the remainder of the season or term of office.

Board President Bill Jackson said school principals will impose the punishment phase of the policy after investigating all facts and allegations.

He cited Dallas' Highland Park as the only other Texas school district to implement policy similar to MISD's.

Kelly admitted the "tobacco portion may be the most difficult part of the legislation to enforce."

However, he said "The non-tobacco use policy implemented at the beginning of the school year has not been a problem for us on campus. The students have responded in a very positive way."

Storey said he supports the MISD's on-campus policy, but added the responsibility of the district "has to stop somewhere."

"More and more we penalize students for being part of a group," he said.

"It's amazing we still have athletes and band and choir students with all the things they have to go through."

LHS junior Christie Rigtrup said she likes the policy even though "it's kind of messing with personal rights."

"I think it's sort of good for the school...It might scare some people into stopping," she said.

Classmate Dena Baker disagreed, saying "What kids do on their own time is their own business."

Probe does not point to single source

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Texas Department of Health's chief epidemiologist says the investigation into the outbreak of shigellosis is not at the stage "where we're going to zero down on a single food or a single person, a single organization or restaurant."

> "You don't finger organizations, food handling establishments, or anything like that until you've got pretty solid stuff."
> — Dr. Charles Alexander

Dr. Charles Alexander, contacted in Austin by phone, said, "Bacterial dysentery is no fun. It's not just your ordinary diarrhea. It is usually food-transmitted or water-borne. I don't think water has entered into this as a possibility yet," he said.

Noting that water as a source is a question to be addressed, Alexander said, "You've had some pretty heavy rains out there recently and people get sort of sloppy. That might enter into the thing, so they're pursuing a lot of different leads," he said.

Referring to the fact of the outbreak "almost at the same time in Midland and Odessa,"the state's chief epidemiologist said:

"You don't usually get two cites at the same time. Obviously, there's some connection and, of course, that is what we're all focusing in on right now," said Alexander.

"Whether they ever find a particular food stuff," he said, "I suppose that's the intellectual triumph, if you can find it's a single food from a single source that's wonderful. You can write it off."

But he noted finding the source of an infectious disease is seldom a simple thing, that painstaking investigation is required.

"I know one of the things Dr. (Howard) Davis is going to to is try to find a group of people, similar in age and maybe from the same area in which some of the victims live, who are not sick. They'll probably do that by telephone survey. Then maybe that will give some clue, you know, if you find differences in those people we can call controls and those who are actually sick with known shigella infection, then maybe that will point in the right direction. That's a laborious process," he said.

"We've been working on this thing since midday Saturday, from Dr. Davis' standpoint, when he got out there," Alexander said.

"I think they (local officials) were working on it, what, Wednesday or Thursday of last week they got involved."

As to the difficulty in citing a particular source at this time, Alexander recalled an incident in El Paso nine or 10 years ago.

"The health officer in El Paso had one of these things and he said, 'Oh, it was McDonald's over in Las Cruces, New Mexico' and McDonald's probably sued him, but he got out with his life and will never forget the experience," he said.

"You don't finger organizations, food handling establishments, or anything like that until you've got pretty solid stuff," Alexander said.

"Our job is not to drag them into court. Our job is, if there's something going on, to make sure that it doesn't happen again."

As to whether any one particular establishment as been identified as a source of the current infectious outbreak, Alexander said, "If it was that simple we wouldn't have Dr. Davis out there."

At a news conference Tuesday afternoon, Ector County Health Department Medical Director Dr. Robert Rowntree III said the current oubreak of shigellosis "is not food poisoning, we'd like to stress that. This is an infestious type of diarrhea," he said.

Council grants permit to drill well in northern neighborhood

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A local oil company was granted a permit to drill a well in a northern Midland neighborhood on a 3-2 City Council vote Tuesday, despite protests from those who live in the area.

"We feel like the city council let us down one more time," said Brooks Potter, whose home is within 400 feet of the site.

Another neighbor, Kem McCready said, "I just think they sort of ignored us. I don't see how drilling one well is going to benefit any people outside of the oil company and the mineral owners."

The City Council granted the permit for the well south of Greentree County Club, about 240 feet northwest of Widener Strip and Keenland Drive.

"The City Council always finds itself in an awkward position when it's caught between the citizens and the oil industry," said Mayor Carroll Thomas who voted against granting the permit.

During a packed public hearing, about nine people spoke against the proposed well site citing concerns about water contamination, a lower water table, poison gas, noise and lowered property values.

The public hearing was prompted because three homes fall within the city code limit of 467 feet of the well site.

Diane Bell, 7 Keenland, said the site is 625 feet from her front door.

"I feel we will not be able to sell our homes when the situation becomes intolerable.

"I do not feel it's right to come into our tranquil neighborhood. That's why most of us moved out there, because we like the outdoors. We spend 90 percent of our time outside," Ms. Bell said.

John Brose, 4481 Hackberry Court, of the Greentree Homeowners Association, said, "The encroachment of oil and gas development on Greentree affects the quality of life and property values."

Potter said during the hearing, "My primary concern is water. It can destroy my property. What good is a house without water? If you don't have water you've got a problem."

Most of the homes in the area, annexed in 1980, still use private water wells to tap a depleting aquifer.

Councilmen approve ordinance allowing subpoena, jury fees

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Getting convicted in Midland Municipal Court is going to cost more with the City Council approving of two new fees Tuesday.

The council unanimously passed an ordinance allowing the municipal court to charge people found guilty $1 for each subpoena issued and a $2 jury fee.

The ordinance already allows a $25 warrant charge for those arrested on a warrant and found guilty.

The fees are being charged to discourage the abuse of the subpoena system said Municipal Court Presiding Judge Robin Smith.

"We decided to charge a nominal fee to basically discourage them from going out and" being subpoenaed.

"We had several people that were abusing the subpoena power.

"Some people were coming in with a list of 15 to 20 people. It was getting rather time consuming to have people go out and serve these," Smith said.

The subpoena fees are expected to bring the city about $50 a year and the jury fees about $150 a year, Smith said.

"They are not revenue-raising measures at all. We could do a lot of other things if we wanted to raise revenue," Smith said.

In other action, the council created a 12-member street commission to advise the council and staff on street issues.

Duties of the commission include advising the council on the placement of traffic signals, the synchronization of traffic lights, one-way street and alley designations and needed street repairs.

The council also approved of new fees at the City-County health department.

The fees, to be charged beginning in Oct. 1, include a $100 prenatal care fee, a $5 per child immunization fee, a $3 tuberculosis test fee, a $5 fee for vitamins for children attending the child clinic and a $5 fee to release medical records.

"These fees are beginning to let people know health care is expensive and will help us recuperate our costs," said Community Services Director George Logan.

Immigrant finds hard work key to becoming success

LAKE JACKSON (AP) — Times were tough, but 24-year-old Nenad Baron knew he could make it.

The Depression was in full swing. Baron's family couldn't have picked a worse time to move to America from their native Yugoslavia.

Shortly after their arrival in Chicago, the young man's father became one of the many victims of the Depression.

He lost everything.

"Banks was closed, and business to the hilt. Twenty million people went out of jobs. No jobs. No language. No trade. No nothing," Baron recalls.

"Some people went to bed at night and they were rich. They got up in the morning and didn't have a dime for a cup of coffee," he said, in a heavy accent.

Those days are a far cry from being a stockholder and director at the First City Bank in Lake Jackson.

Baron, who climbed the ladder of success over 20 years in the shrimping industry, found that hard work is the key to making it.

"Thinking back, and where I come from, and all my life, I could never dream that I'd wind up over here," the Lake Jackson resident said.

Baron left Chicago shortly after arriving in the United States because he could not find a job there and didn't want to be a burden to his father.

"I went from city to city looking for a job. No job."

He decided to stay put in Pennsylvania. He lived on credit for six months before he finally found a job in a refinery and making 45 cents an hour.

When that job ran out, he went to New York and worked in a defense plant, then was hired on as a hand in a shipyard.

After that, he painted houses for $4 a day.

"I was in this country about two or three years by that time. I understand a little bit of English and he (the boss) could see that I wasn't doing good so he said to me he wasn't going to keep me," Baron recalls.

That news was like a knife in the heart.

"So I said to him, 'don't let me go. Pay me whatever you want,'" and the shipyard boss made an offer of $2 a day, Baron says.

"So I stayed and before six months was over he was paying me $6 a day. You see that I was ambitious and anxious, but I didn't know how."

Baron doesn't believe in laziness.

Children in Europe spent their time before and after school working on the farm, unlike today's children, who spend spare time playing.

"I hate to do it, but if I have to, I would dig ditches with my bare fingers not to be lazy. Lazy people never accomplish nothing," he said.

"When you do nothing, you think nothing, and you die."

When Baron came to this country and times were rough, President Herbert Hoover promised prosperity was around the corner.

"But the prosperity never did come," Baron said.

Baron met his wife, Tiveda, in New York, and married her when he was 35.

In 1946, Baron decided to try his hand at shrimping. He moved to Georgia and bought a boat, keeping it until he could afford a bigger boat, and a bigger one.

He heard the shrimping was good in Texas so he decided to move to Freeport in 1957.

Baron built up his finances by building boats and then reselling them for a profit. He also learned to save his money.

"I shrimped for about 20 years until I got up on my feet," he said. "Some people make the same kind of money, but they spend it."

"I figure save some for rainy days. I always say 'take care of pennies and dollars will take care of themselves.'"

And he learned the art of investment.

In the early 1960s, Baron was among a group of people who bought American Savings & Loan, then sold it at a profit. He later invested in the First Capital Bank of West Columbia.

After that venture was complete, he invested in the First City Bank in Lake Jackson where he still owns an interest.

He found credit can mean more than cash in hand.

"Credit could be a thousand times what the money you've got. My son could borrow today $1 million dollars quicker, easier than I could borrow $10 when I started," he said.

The 79-year-old Baron still has his fingers in several pies, including two shrimp boats. His son, Ned Baron Jr., runs Baron Marine Ways on the Old Brazos River in Freeport.

His daughter, Yvonne Baron Estes, is a teacher in Austin, and he has three grandchildren.

The work ethic Baron learned as a child in Yugoslavia is apparently to be with him for life, he says.

"My mom used to say to me that I'm going to die standing up, that I won't have enough time to die lying down."

DEATHS

Marshall Campbell

Marshall B. Campbell, 65, of Midland died Saturday.

Services were held Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Ross Payne officiating. Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Livingston was born July 11, 1916, in Lockney where he was reared. He worked there until 1956 when he moved to Winter Park, Fla. Four years later he moved to Monahans and then to Midland in 1971. He owned an automotive shop until his retirement in 1976.

He married the former Verna R. Snelson Nov. 2, 1939, in San Antonio.

He was a member of the Lutheran church.

Survivors include his wife; one sister, Alma Joe Davis of Amarillo; several nieces and nephews, including Susan Butler of Alexandra, Va.

Margaret Roseberry

Margaret Roseberry of Midland died Tuesday afternoon at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Jackson Funeral Home.

Police investigating home, car burglaries

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department is investigating several burglaries of homes and automobiles in the city.

A color television set valued at $1,000 and a cable box valued at $250 was reported stolen from a residence in the 1000 block of W. Cuthbert.

Alicia Pannell Harris told police the items were taken sometime Tuesday between 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m..

Police also reported the burglary of a residence in the 1700 block of N. Marienfield.

A videocassette recorder valued at $500, a rifle with scope valued at $250, a 20-gauge shotgun valued at $275, and $10 in currency weere reported stolen.

Reports said the burglary occurred sometime Tuesday between 8 a.m. and 5:45 p.m.

The theft of a garden roto-tiller valued at $1,040 was also reported. Don Schaffrina, 1105 Delmar, told police the item was stolen sometime between Sept. 4 and Tuesday.

Police are looking for two suspects in the burglary of an automobile Tuesday night.

Helen Winslett, 3100 Fairgrounds Road, told police a purse containing $50 cash and several credit cards were stolen from her vehicle while it was parked at the Stop N Go at 2104 North A St. The purse was taken about 9:35 p.m.

The suspects are described as two black men, about 18 years old. One was described as 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing 125 pounds, last seen wearing blue jeans and a red shirt. The other is described as 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 125 pounds. He was last seen wearing a khaki shirt.

An AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $200, a nine-inch color television valued at $200, and 24 cassette tapes valued at $150 were reported stolen from a vehicle parked in the 3100 block of Tealwood Place. Reports said the items were taken sometime between 8 a.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The burglary of a vehicle was also reported at the Hawthorne House Aptartments, 2811 N. Loop 250. The victim, Mike Havertz, told police an AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $300 was stolen.

In other reports, a 60-year-old Midland man was arrested late Tuesday after sheriff's deputies found a vial believed to contain a controlled substance in his residence.

According to reports, the man was arrested about 5:30 p.m. at his residence near the intersection of County Road 114 and County Road 1194.

Archaeologist to address society

From Staff Reports

Dr. Reid Ferring, research archaeologist with the Institute of Applied Sciences at North Texas State University, will address the Midland Archaeological Society Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Stables Gallery of the Museum of the Southwest.

Ferring will speak on "Petrographic Analysis of Prehistoric Pottery; Insight into Technology and Trade on the Southern Plains."

His research has centered on the prehistory of the Southern Great Plains and the application of geological methods to archaeological research. Currently, he has been investigating late Quaternary geology and past environments of the Trinity River Basin.

Ferring, who received his doctorate from Southern Methodist University, has served as chief archaeologist at the Museum of the Great Plains in Lawton, Okla., and is now working on a doctorate in geosciences at the University of Texas at Dallas.

The public is invited to attend.

WELL

But Mark Branum of Branum Petroluem said water contamination will not be a problem.

The site will be inspected by the state water board and nearby water wells will be tested to see if their levels drop, he said.

The council passed the vote with clauses requiring the testing of nearby water wells and hydrogen sulfide detection equipment.

Mayor Pro-Tem Katie Heck said she voted for the well permit because it met all of the city's criteria.

"When the ordinance was put together we placed some very severe conditions on those sites. We have given permits on a number of wells drilled on the northeast side of town within the city limits," Ms. Heck said.

In January the council denied six of seven applications for well permits in southwest Midland.

Ms. Heck said she voted against some of those sites because the situation was different.

"The circumstances were different. Most of those locations were very much nearer to schools and houses," she said.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II, who also supported the permit, said,"I just felt like it was a reasonable well site. If it would have been 67 feet further away from a house, they wouldn't have had to have a public hearing.

"It's such an unpopulated and undeveloped area," he said.

Marcum said he voted against the southwest drill permits in January because, "That one over there was right next to people's home. They were completely surrounded by people's homes. This one, when you look at it, it's over 600 feet away from most homes.

"There's no doubt about it that drilling of a well is a nuisance, but living in West Texas, it's just one of those things we have to live with," Marcum said.

District 3 Councilman Kelly Fish also voted for the permit.

Thomas said he voted against the well site.

"The bottom line is I would not want it drilled close to my house and the main thing was there was an alternative to drilling it outside city limits," Thomas said.

However, Branum said attempts to get an alternate site further north outside of city limits were unsuccessful.

District 2 Council member Oralia Corrales said she voted against the permit to insure a better quality of life for the residents.

Said Ms. Corrales: "I like clean air and water. I like tranquility."

Teen allegedly tries to burn mother

HOUSTON (AP) — A 17-year-old youth accused of trying to burn his mother to death while she slept remained in jail today facing charges of attempted murder and arson, officials say.

Derrick Edward Hicks was arrested Tuesday at Worthing Senior High School, arson investigator D.L. LaMott said. He was being held in the Harris County Jail in lieu of bonds totaling $50,000

Hicks was charged with arson and attempted murder in the Aug. 29 fire at his mother's home in southeast Houston, authorities said.

The youth is accused of breaking into his mother's home through a window, pouring lighter fluid on the bed where she slept and setting it on fire with some kitchen matches, prosecutor Jay Karahan said.

Rowntree, saying suspicions of an outbreak were aroused about last Wednesday but the suspicions were not confirmed until Friday, said the news media was not notified earlier because shigellosis is not considered "a life threatening disease. It's uncomfortable, it's communicable," he said.

Early Monday, Ector County Judge Jan Fisher, in a letter to department director Toby Cross, said, "I think this matter has reached a point where the interest of the public's health and welfare clearly outweigh" the concerns of restaurants that might be "directly or indirectly connected with the outbreak."

Report emphasizes need to educate about child abuse

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A local committee report on the problem of child abuse in Midland was released Tuesday, and it emphasized the need for education in dealing with an emotionally charged issue.

Ruth Bell, who chaired the ad hoc committee at the request of the United Way of Midland, said the abuse of children is a known phenomenon among law enforcement officials, state agencies, health care professionals, and others, but the message has just not been getting out.

Individuals from 20 agencies and others were interviewed by the committee in an attempt to pool knowledge on the subject, enabling a plan of action to be developed, possibly in the form of a community coalition on child abuse.

"We were surprised by the number of agencies who deal with the problem of child abuse," Ms. Bell said.

"We're finding that many agencies in Midland are talking about child abuse — hearing about child abuse, but aren't sure what to do about it," she said.

Bob Smith, executive director of the United Way, said the agency acted to nourish discussion by bringing knowledgeable professionals together.

"We've attempted to be inclusive of all the people who are involved in this problem," Smith said.

"What we've found is that more educational programs need to take place; there is a lot of ignorance about this."

The report listed several common myths about child abuse, including its prevalence among low-income and minority groups.

"Studies indicate that physical and sexual abuse cuts across all socioeconomic classes and is present in families of all races," the report said.

Another myth, according to the report, is that the Department of Human Services (DHS) is alone in the investigation of child abuse.

But, the report said the Midland Police Department and the Midland County Sheriff's office have investigators regularly assigned to cases.

"The DHS only investigates child abuse that is perpetrated by immediate family members and caretakers, (babysitters, day care centers)," the report said.

According to records of the Midland County District Attorney for 1985-86 compiled for the report, 62 felony cases involving injury or sexual assault to a child were processed. 21 cases were no-billed by the Grand Jury, dismissed, or pleaded.

Seventeen cases are pending; 16 abusers have been sent to prison, and six have been placed on probation.

But education about child abuse was the day's emphasis.

"It is an emotional issue," said Ms. Bell. "Our citizenry is really not well informed about this topic. We're dealing with something that has been in the closet a long time."

Stanton youth killed on motorcycle

From Staff Reports

A 16-year-old Stanton youth was killed Tuesday evening after he lost control of his motorcycle on a dirt county road in Martin County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Larry Carlton Duke of Stanton was pronounced dead about 9:25 p.m. at the scene by Martin County Justice of the Peace F.E. Kennedy.

According to the DPS, the accident occurred 3.7 miles northwest of Stanton on an unnumbered county road in Martin County.

Carlton was driving a dirt bike northbound on the road about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The driver was thrown from the vehicle and slid about 60 feet.

The body was taken to Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

South Africa threatens to close schools

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government threatened to shut schools where student boycotts persist, but attendance was reported spotty today as black pupils returned to class for the final term of the year.

Residents said they saw no troops on school grounds in Soweto, Johannesburg's sprawling township, for the first time since a nationwide state of emergency was imposed three months ago. Students had demanded withdrawal of security forces as a condition for ending boycotts.

Some youths were returning to classes in Soweto after a 10-day vacation, but it appeared many were staying away in defiance of the threat of closure, according to reporters who toured the township.

The government Bureau of Information declined comment on the absence of troops at Soweto schools, saying, "We cannot comment on security force actions."

Attendance appeared higher in rural areas and the troubled eastern Cape province, according to initial estimates.

In Cape Town, American civil rights activist Coretta Scott King met with anti-apartheid leader the Rev. Allan Boesak, a day after canceling her planned meeting with President P.W. Botha.

Boesak, among several government foes who had urged Mrs. King not to see Botha, said she made "a very wise and courageous decision" in canceling the meeting. Botha's office said Tuesday she had fallen victim of those "in a make-believe world of political fraud" who wanted to keep her uninformed about reforms in South Africa.

Mrs. King, the widow of slain civil rights activist the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., left for Johannesburg without comment after her 30-minute meeting with Boesak. She planned to leave for home on Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Bureau for Information said two blacks were killed in unrest in the 24-hour reporting period that ended at dawn today, but that overall the level of violence continued to decrease.

Schools Director General Braam Fourie announced Tuesday night that 20 schools in the eastern Cape where attendance was virtually nil during the past term would be closed for the rest of the year.

Fourie said other schools in the Johannesburg region, including Soweto, may be closed if low attendance continues in the fourth and final term.

School boycotts have been a major factor in two years of unrest that has left more than 2,000 dead. The government says most of the recent killings have resulted from black attacks on other blacks, not from security force action.

Job Schoeman, spokesman for the Department of Education and Training, said the 20 closures in the eastern Cape meant about 15,000 students would be without instruction until the school year ends.

He said 10 to 15 more schools in the Johannesburg area might be shut if the walkouts resumed.

In Soweto, more students were on the streets than in classes, the South African Press Association said.

Schoeman said attendance figures would not be available until late in the day, but that early reports suggested the turnout was higher than in recent months in the eastern Cape and in rural areas.

Fourie's department runs classes for 1.8 million black students in urban areas, while another 4.2 million black youths attend schools in the 10 tribal homelands run by school departments there.

Israelis hit guerrilla positions

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets rocketed Palestinian guerrilla positions on the outskirts of this southern port city at daybreak today, and three women were reported killed and 13 other civilians wounded.

No guerrillas were reported killed or injured in the raid, which Palestinian sources said followed a sea battle between Palestinian guerrilla infiltrators and an Israeli gunboat south of Sidon overnight.

The sources said one guerrilla was killed in the offshore clash.

Police contended that only nine civilians, all residents of the nearby Ein el-Helwah Palestinian refugee camp, were hospitalized as a result of the Israeli air raid. But Sidon's three hospitals reported three Palestinian women killed, including two sisters.

Nine other Palestinian civilians were being treated at Hammoud Hospital for shrapnel wounds, and four other injured Palestinians were being cared for in two other clinics.

All guerrilla factions have been on alert throughout Lebanon in anticipation of an Israeli attack since two gunmen stormed a synagogue in the Turkish city of Istanbul on Saturday, killing 21 Jewish worshipers.

Israeli Cabinet ministers, including Prime Minister Shimon Peres, have vowed to strike back at those responsible for the Istanbul attack.

It could not be determined immediately whether today's Israeli raid was in retaliation for the synagogue attack, the recent shooting of rockets from South Lebanon into northern Israel, or the attempted seaborne infiltration.

Sidon police said the Israeli warplanes struck three times around ammunition stockpiles of the Syrian-backed Popular Struggle Front on Sidon's southern edge shortly after 6 a.m.

Columns of black smoke billowed from an industrial compound that took the brunt of the assault as ambulances rushed victims from the scene, police reported.

Municipal fire engines and civil defense teams battled to prevent the blaze from spreading to shops and warehouses, Sidon police reported.

Jailed reporter suggests way to 'cool uproar'

MOSCOW (AP) — Nicholas Daniloff, the jailed American reporter charged with spying, suggested to his wife that letting him and a Soviet held in New York out of jail pending trial would help "cool the international uproar" over his case.

Ruth Daniloff told reporters her husband mentioned the idea, that the two be released on the recognizance of their respective embassies, on Tuesday during their third meeting since his imprisonment at Lefortovo Prison.

If such an arrangement were carried out, the embassies would serve as guarantors that the two men appear in court for trial.

Daniloff, Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report magazine, was arrested Aug. 30 by eight KGB agents after a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package later found to contain military photographs and maps marked "secret."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Garden readied for ceremony

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Construction workers continued their round-the-clock efforts to finish a new downtown Solidarity Garden in time for its inauguration Sept. 19, the first anniversary of the earthquake that toppled a hotel on the site.

Meanwhile, seismology researchers from Mexico and six other countries on Tuesday were in the second day of what sponsors called the first international symposium on earthquakes and their effects on cities.

The four-day conference brought together experts from Algeria, Colombia, Japan, Peru, the United States and Yugoslavia, all of which have long experience with earthquakes.

City and federal officials said the gathering was meant both as an information exchange and as a show of Mexico's gratitude for the "solidarity" extended by foreign governments that aided Mexico after the earthquake.

Several million dollars worth of material and financial aid began arriving from abroad within hours after Mexico City was struck the morning of Sept. 19, 1985, by an earthquake registering 8.1 on the Richter scale.

Afghan rebels mount assault

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem rebels are mounting their biggest assault in years on the Afghan capital of Kabul, and Soviet and government troops backed by jets and tanks are trying to push them back, reports today said.

Afghan guerrilla groups based in the Pakistani border city of Peshawar said their units had been locked in heavy fighting for the past week in the Paghman district, about 12 miles north of the capital.

There was also fighting in Qarahbagh to the south of the city, they said.

Divers cut into Soviet ship's hull

MOSCOW (AP) — Divers cut into the hull of the sunken passenger ship Admiral Nakhimov, searching for more victims in the Black Sea disaster in which 257 people are now known to have died, the official Tass news agency said.

In a report Tuesday, Tass said divers had cut into the Admiral Nakhimov's port hull and would use blowtorches and explosives to open doors on the lower decks in the search for more bodies.

Tass said rescue operations as of Tuesday had pulled 257 bodies from the water since the Aug. 31 collision between the freighter Pyotr Vasyev and the Admiral Nakhimov, which sank in less than 10 minutes.

Groups take blame for bombing

PARIS (NYT) — Two groups claimed responsibility Tuesday for the bomb explosion at City Hall on Monday that killed a post office employee and wounded 18 people.

In a statement typed in Arabic and dropped in the mailbox of a Western news agency in Beirut, a previously unknown group called the Partisans of Justice and Freedom said, "We declare our responsibility for the explosion at Jacques Chirac's City Hall."

The bombing was in the ground floor post office of City Hall only 100 yards from an office sometimes used by Premier Chirac, who is also the mayor of Paris.
