Fires force thousands to evacuate in Florida

■ Motorists turned on headlights in middle of the day to make their way through the smoke; 30,000 people evacuated as fires consumed land to north, south and west.

Associated Press

BUNNELL, Fla. — The sky glowing orange behind them, motorists streamed inland through the smoke Friday as 30,000 more people were ordered out of their homes at the start of the Fourth of July weekend because of wildfires closing in from three directions.

With the fires consuming brittle pine trees and brush to the north, south and west — and the Atlantic Ocean to the east — residents in northeastern Florida packed up pets and family heirlooms and entered a bumper-to-bumper procession to safer ground.

"I felt like crying this morning. I took one last look at things because I didn't know if they would be here when we got back," said Alfred Musella, who loaded his pickup with suitcases and water and left his home near the beach, only to get stuck in traffic most of the morning.

All of Flagler County, at least 30,000 people, was ordered evacuated. Some 40,000 others had been ordered out of their homes in two other East Coast counties, Brevard and Volusia, earlier in the week.

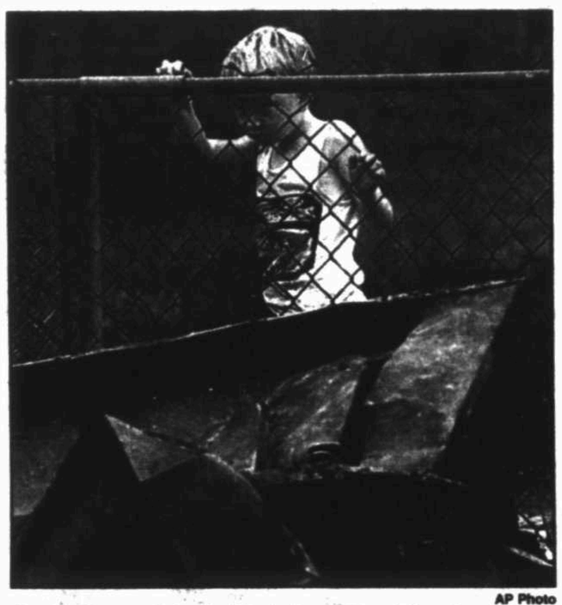

Within hours of the evacuation order, Bunnell and other communities were ghost towns.

Shelters were set up mostly at high schools. Evacuees and firefighters also took shelter at what was going to be a posh hospitality pavilion and other buildings at the Daytona International Speedway, where a stock car race Saturday had to be canceled.

Motorists turned on their headlights in the middle of the day as they made their way through the smoke that cut visibility to a quarter-mile at the Daytona Beach airport. Traffic on State Road 100, lined with American flags in anticipation of holiday celebrations now on hold, was backed up for miles.

About 1,500 members of the National Guard were

According to the state's tally Friday, the flames have damaged or destroyed at least 150 homes and blackened nearly three times the land touched by fires in a normal year in Florida.

Hooking the heart

WASHINGTON — For years, states snatched driver's licenses and put up "Most Wanted" posters, trying to get absent fathers to pay child support. Now they're trying to hook the heart as well as the wallet. Though the government has new tools to crack down on deadbeat parents, officials increasingly are concluding they'll get only so far with threats. They want fathers involved with their kids' lives.

Stormy economy

WASHINGTON — The summer forecast? Stormy and a lot cooler. Not the weather, the economy. Analysts see the United States headed for a dramatic slowdown in growth because of troubles in Asia. And that is the best-case scenario. In the nightmare versions, economists fear the Asian crisis could spiral out of control, bringing down first Japan, then China and in short order engulfing the whole world in a global recession.

Court decision

AUSTIN — Buffer zones meant to keep abortion protesters away from several Houston area women's clinics violate free speech, the Texas Supreme Court has ruled. In a 6-3 decision released Friday, the court modified buffer zones surrounding four clinics and eliminated buffers around five other clinics. Four clinics — Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas, Houston Women's Clinic, West Loop Clinic and Women's Medical Center of Northwest Houston — now must allow up to two "sidewalk counselors" to approach their patients within their buffer zone boundaries.

Midlanders gather with friends, family to celebrate independence

Say, fellow Americans, what do you say about this grand old nation, the United States, now 222 years into its independence?

"I just think it's a pretty awesome country to live in," declared General McArthur Hambrick, a Minnesota-based dancer, musical-theater teacher, and tenor. Hambrick sang the national anthem, Francis Scott Key's 1814 "The Star-Spangled Banner," in downtown Midland's "A Star-Spangled Salute" on Friday in initiating Midland's Fourth of July celebrations.

"I'm lucky to be here," Hambrick said moments after he had sung the anthem's closing line: . . . . Land of the free and home of the brave!

"And God gave it to us."

The nation today celebrates its founding and freedom through the effects of the 222-year-old historic document, the Declaration of Independence, by which the American Colonies declared their independence from Great Britain and then won that independence in the American Revolutionary War.

Hambrick's joy in acclaiming America seemed rivaled by the enthusiasm of the Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players troupe in singing "Everything's Free in America" and other songs from the musical "West Side Story."

"I came to see the Pickwick Players," said Midland banker Wayne Merritt, "and it's not just because my daughter (Morgan, 16) is there."

Zhiqing Ma was among the hundreds of Midlanders who stood and

Police find woman's body; deputies arrest daughter, two teens in Texas

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Detectives searching for a missing woman found her body Friday in a wooded Tampa area, a day after West Texas deputies in Pecos County captured her 15-year-old runaway daughter and two companions in a stolen mini-van.

"The physical evidence we found out here is overwhelming," Hillsborough County, Fla., Sheriff's Capt. Rocky Rodriguez said Friday at a rural Town 'n Country area west of Tampa.

He said a hypodermic syringe and knife were used to kill Vicki Robinson, 49. He would not elaborate. She was slain at home and her body moved, Rodriguez said.

Warrants were being readied Friday charging Valessa Robinson, 15, her 19-year-old boyfriend, Adam "Rattlesnake" Davis, and their friend Jon Michael Whispel, also 19, with murder and robbery, the detective said.

The teens were picked up Thursday near Fort Stockton by the officers who shot out the tires on Ms. Robinson's van following a police chase that reached 100 mph.

The trio sped through a road block and swerved side-to-side before deputies started firing at the vehicle's rear tires, said Pecos County Sheriff Bruce Wilson.

The van veered off the road and into a

Compromise means surrender for Orangemen

By Shawn Potatchnik
Associated Press

PORTADOWN, Northern Ireland — Police and British soldiers threw a ring of steel around this grim Northern Ireland town Friday, posting armored cars and checkpoints on every road in advance of this weekend's showdown with Protestant marchers.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair scrambled to safeguard the peace accord he helped broker, waging telephone diplomacy with officials and church leaders. He sought a compromise between Protestant Orangemen — who are determined to hold their annual parade down rural Garvaghy Road on Sunday — and the road's Catholic residents — who expect British security forces to stop the procession.

But Blair's appeals for somebody to back down for the sake of peace fell on deaf ears in Portadown, the most explosive battleground on the Northern Ireland map.

This province's delicate embrace of a peace process designed to bring British Protestant and Irish Catholic politicians together clashes with the mutual contempt and fear that color everyday life in this segregated town.

Portadown and surrounding North Armagh form the heartland of the Orange Order, the Protestant fraternal group founded 203 years ago to defend the "reformed faith" against "the false doctrines of Popery," as its oath declares.

Orangemen were instrumental in founding Northern Ireland 77 years ago, but today see their organization and the state struggling to survive.

"This seems to be the year they have decided to break the Orangemen. But if they think that, they are very mistaken," said Denis Watson, Armagh's senior Orangeman, confirming that his followers will defy a government-appointed Parades Commission's order to stay away from Garvaghy Road after their church service Sunday.

The confrontation is more entrenched today than when Catholics first tried to block the march in July 1995. In the past two years, the protests have triggered widespread violence across Northern Ireland.

This week, rival arsonists have raised the temperature by burning churches, a school, Catholic homes and an Orange hall.

Both sides in Portadown portray themselves as victims trying to defend their rights and pin blame for the nasty consequences on the unreasonableness of their enemies.

For the 3,000 Catholics living along Garvaghy Road and nearby Obin Street, Orange marches represent deliberate demonstrations of their second-class citizenship in a town the Orange Order has always considered its own.

While Protestants here cite the sanctity of their right to free assembly, Catholics see it as a one-way street. Their community has never been allowed to parade into the town center, three-quarters of a mile away.

Even being identified as a Garvaghy Road resident can mean a death sentence for Catholics.

Two Aprils ago, on the main street, 25-year-old Robert Hamill was kicked to death by drunken Protestants, some of them members of a band that accompanies local Orange parades.

This April, 28-year-old Adrian Lamph was shot dead at his downtown workplace by Northern Ireland's most ruthless pro-British gang, the Loyalist Volunteer Force, which has its roots in town.

Orangemen insist the protesters, represented by the Garvaghy Road Residents Coalition, are the real bigots and should be expected to offer concessions.

But they refuse to talk with the coalition because its leader, Breandan MacCionnaith, is a former Irish Republican Army prisoner. They presume he's simply pursuing the IRA goal of undermining Northern Ireland and its dwindling Protestant majority by different means.

Police tried to close down the Garvaghy Road route in 1996. But after four nights, when an Orange mob massed at Drumcree church — the starting point for the march — and blocked roads, the airport and port, police caved in and pushed Catholic protesters off the roadway. Orangemen are determined to repeat that ugly scenario if necessary.

"We have given so much already," argues the order's senior Portadown spokesman, David Jones. "We used to have 11 parades that went through (Catholic) nationalist areas, now just this one. And it only takes seven minutes to pass through."

Caribbeans drop British legal system

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

CASTRIES, St. Lucia — Eager to hang convicted murderers, four leading Caribbean countries have agreed to form their own high court, abandoning a colonial system that made Britain their final legal arbiter.

Britain's House of Lords is apparently happy about the idea, keen to relieve itself of the increasing cost of maintaining ties to countries that once made fortunes for the empire.

Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad — all independent nations with varying links to Britain — hope to establish the Caribbean Court of Justice next year, Trinidad Prime Minister Basdeo Panday said Thursday.

The move would cut a colonial link dating to 1833 and end a hiatus on hanging prompted by British pressure to abolish the death penalty in the Caribbean. Britain is part of the European Union, which considers state executions a violation of human rights.

Caribbean residents, however, are clamoring for the right to execute criminals — especially as they face a surge in violent crime related to drug trafficking from South America to the United States and Europe.

"We don't want anybody lecturing us about human rights," Guyanese Foreign Minister Clement Rohee said at the summit of the 16-member Caribbean Community this week.

In Barbados, Attorney General David Simmons recently said the British "have infuriated populations who see their governments rendered virtually powerless by decisions of legal policy set for Caribbean countries" and driven by "British and Eurocentric notions."

In a legal ploy to stop the hangings, the Privy Council of Britain's House of Lords in 1993 ruled that it was inhumane to execute people who had waited on death row more than five years. It recommended commuting their sentences to life in prison. Hundreds of convicted murderers were spared.

Britain tried another tactic earlier this year: It offered to give residents of the former Caribbean colonies full British citizenship under certain conditions — including abolition of the death penalty.

That posed a quandary for places like Bermuda, where islanders have voted in referendums to stay British and keep the death penalty.

Under the new plan, the countries will change their constitutions to free themselves of the Privy Council, the final legal arbiter for many current and former British colonies.

An overwhelming majority of leaders attending the Caribbean Community summit supported the idea for the court, which would ultimately serve all 16 members, Panday said.

Caribbean attorneys general went to London to ask how officials felt about cutting court ties. "The Privy Council was overly anxious to get rid of their jurisdiction," Panday said. "It's costly."

A spokesman for the Foreign Office in London declined to comment on the decision Friday.

ditch, then came back onto the highway before a deputy shot out the front tires, bringing it to a stop.

Ms. Robinson disappeared last Friday after making a macaroni, cheese and sausage dinner for Valessa and her two friends.

Ms. Robinson, 49, and Valessa were reported missing Saturday when Robinson missed work appointments and failed to keep a date with her boyfriend.

Valessa, Davis and Whispel were later spotted at a tattoo parlor in Tampa's Ybor City and on Monday were seen on a hardware store surveillance video purchasing cement.

Authorities realized the teens left Florida and were driving west by tracking purchases on Ms. Robinson's stolen credit cards.

Davis and Whispel initially were held in Fort Stockton on Hillsborough County warrants charging them with grand theft and grand theft auto, as well as a federal warrant charging them with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Valessa was held in juvenile detention. All three teens face Texas charges of fleeing, Wilson said.

Hillsborough detectives flew to Texas Thursday evening to interview the teenagers who have agreed not to fight extradition back to Florida. Rodriguez said Valessa was eager to talk.

Relatives said Ms. Robinson was having problems with her daughter, who had tried to leave home several times.

Early Friday morning, the Odessa Police Department's Street Crimes Unit and Bomb Disposal Unit officers had secured a warrant to search the suspects' motel room and van and found the explosive devices and a modified rifle in the van.

The devices were disarmed, and Limbrock and Ms. Schairer were arrested without incident, according to the Lt. Brian J. Moersch, commander of the Special Operations Division of the Odessa Police Department.

BLAZES: High winds, temperatures stymie firefighters ordered to report for duty to help with traffic control and provide security for evacuated areas. Earlier, nearly 600 Guardsmen were called up to fight the fires.

Firefighters have been stymied by gusty winds, 100-degree temperatures and low humidity. Temperatures were in the low 90s Friday along the coast and close to 100 degrees farther inland.

The forecast offered no hope of rain anytime soon, and winds have been pushing the blazes east toward populated areas along the Atlantic coast. Meteorologists predicted that sea breezes from the Atlantic early Saturday would push the blazes back toward already burned areas.

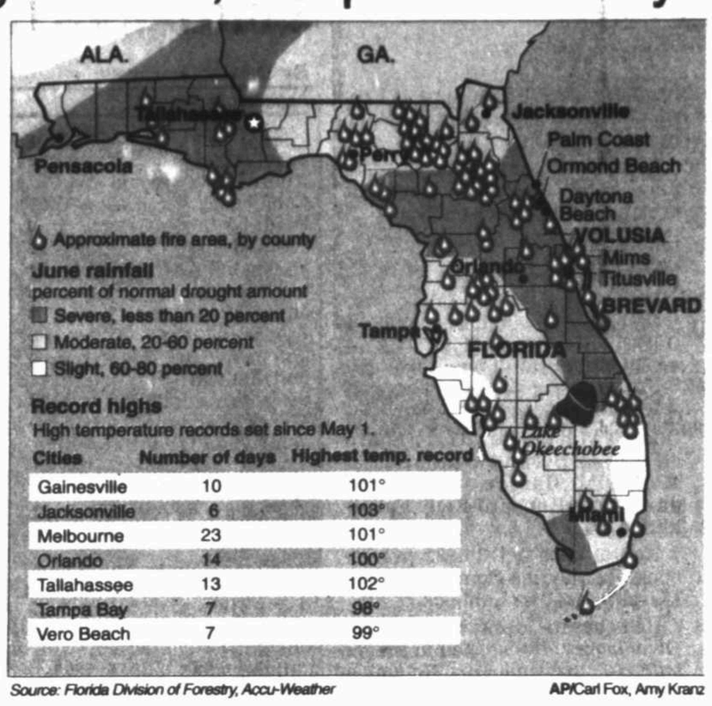

"That may allow the firefighters to gain control of it because the fire will be burning back into areas that have already been burned," said Joel Rothfuss of the National Weather Service.

By evening, officials said the humidity rose and the sea breezes kicked in, slowing the spread of the fires.

"That gives the people a better chance of defending structures, defending themselves and curtailing the fires," said Ray Geiger, chief of field operations for the Florida Division of Forestry.

"We're still losing structures, we still have people in jeopardy, but it's not nearly as bad as we thought."

About 322,000 acres have burned since Memorial Day, nearly three times the land touched by fires in a normal year in Florida. At least 150 homes have been damaged or destroyed, and 55 people, many of them firefighters, have been injured. No deaths have been reported.

Walt Disney World and other resorts in Orlando, about 50 miles south of the worst of the blazes, were largely unaffected.

Some residents decided to go farther than the nearest hotel or shelter.

John Branning II said he, his wife and 1 1/2-year-old son were driving to Beacon, N.Y., to stay with relatives.

"I can't take it no more. I'm going to go up there and wait until it's all done and come back and see if I still have a house," Branning said. "Everywhere you look, it's burning."

In one subdivision in Palm Coast, where 19 homes were destroyed by fire June 6, flames flared up sporadically and came dangerously close to many of the one-story stucco homes.

Firefighters ran around the neighborhood, often using garden hoses to extinguish the flames. Many yards were charred and blackened, but almost all of the homes escaped serious damage.

"People who move back here won't realize how close the flames came," said Ray Alfred, a fire chief from Jacksonville. "We probably saved this whole subdivision because the fire would spread so fast."

Despite the evacuation orders, some people simply refused to leave their homes. One Ormond Beach resident waited until flames surrounded his house, then called 911.

"We had to pull crews off and go in with a helicopter," said Mike Pleus, Volusia County emergency management spokesman. "That really puts a strain on our resources."

The man was airlifted to safety.

EVENT: Midlanders kick off July 4 celebration downtown honored their flag, Old Glory, and the Declaration of Independence's proclamation that all people are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with "certain unalienable Rights (of) . . . . Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness."

(From 1A)

"This is a big day for America," said Zhiquip Ma, who was joined by her husband, Midland petroleum engineer Edward Yang, and their daughter, 3-year-old Judy Yang. "I like to celebrate."

The couple lived in China before they moved to America about 10 years ago.

"China is improving," Zhiquip Ma said of the country's freedoms and progress in human rights. "People's lives are getting better and better. China is more open than before."

Of America, "I like it here," she said. "More freedom."

And in noting that in marriage the Chinese bride retains her maiden name, Zhiquip Ma quipped: "The Chinese woman is more independent than the American woman."

Next to Zhiquip Ma under the generous shade of a Midland County Courthouse pecan tree was Bill and Kathleen Hunt.

"We came out to celebrate the beginning of a new nation, the richest country in the world," Mrs. Hunt said of America's resources, freedoms and liberties.

Conrad Young, 6, and his sister, Caroline Young, 7, joined their parents, Randy and Susan Young, in celebrating the holiday.

"We won our independence," Conrad said of the reason behind the holiday.

Of appreciating her country, Caroline simply said, "It's where I was born. The only places I've ever lived are Oklahoma and Midland."

And of the family outing, Young noted that his wife and children turned out to Midland Centennial Plaza "just to have a good time, to visit with friends, and to celebrate the Fourth of July."

"We are living in the best country in the world," Mrs. Young said.

Donned in cowgirl attire as "Queen" of the American Association of Sheriff Posses and Riding Clubs, 18-year-old Stephanie Miller, who was part of the celebration's color guard, cited America's grand prize: freedom. "I love it," she said of the nation. "It's great."

Girl Scout Alicia Meek characterized the day's celebration as "fun." Dressed in a clown's garb and make-up, she was recovering from a Hula-Hoop contest, which was one of several holiday games that also included a turtle race, limbo, and pinning stars on the flag.

Downtown celebrations continue today with a 10 a.m. parade and conclude with the Midland-Odessa Symphony's holiday concert and pyrotechnic-and-laser-light finale at 9 p.m.

Across from the courthouse, Dan Partain, 16, and Heather Wells, who is "16 fixing to be 17," were wearing newspaper hats and showing folks how to make them in illustrating the principles of recycling resources. Their newspaper hat-making slogans went like this: "The only hats guaranteed to maintain freedom" and "Make a hat for freedom."

"It's a Yankee-Doodle spirit," Miss Wells said. "It shows pride for a wonderful country," said Partain.

Midland businessman Sam Curtis, who once lived overseas for 15 years in the oil-equipment business, said that "It's wonderful always to get back home in the U.S.

"I like to travel. And I learned the language (Spanish) down there (in Argentina and Venezuela)," Curtis said. "There's no place like the United States. Sometimes I almost think we have too many freedoms. I'm sure if they took any of them away, I'd be the first one to scream."

His wife, Midland school teacher Pat Curtis, said that the Midland holiday celebration reminded her of the Fall Festival back in her hometown in Illinois.

"And all the community would come out and support it," she recalled. "And you would see people performing and doing things that you didn't even know they had that talent to do. The whole community made it lots of fun for children and adults: lots of good food, good entertainment. Everything was wholesome. Families could go, and turn their children loose. Everybody knew one another. And it was just great fun.

And the Midland event, she said, reminded her of "a small-town atmosphere" especially "after living in Dallas-Fort Worth for the past 30 years. The people very friendly here. It's a nice community."

In America, there are "the freedoms that we have that no other land enjoys," Mrs. Curtis said. "If people ever traveled abroad, they would have a greater appreciation for our country and all the freedoms that we enjoy here."

Clinton ends China visit with forecast for democracy

By Stewart Powell
Hearst News Service

HONG KONG — President Clinton ended a nine-day visit to China Friday with the prediction that democracy would replace the hard-nosed communist regime that has ruled in Beijing since 1949.

The president also lavished praise on Chinese President Jiang Zemin in laudatory remarks that may ignite critics back home who challenge his dealings with Beijing as a naive, one-way street.

Clinton made the remarks during a 37-minute news conference before departing on an 18-hour flight for Washington, D.C.

Clinton, who spent barely 11 hours in face-to-face summitry with Chinese leaders during his five-city tour, said he expects to see the transition to democracy and the end of Chinese communism during his lifetime.

Clinton was asked if there can "ever be democracy" in China?

"Oh yes," Clinton replied. "I believe there can be and I believe there will be."

Clinton said he would like to see "the present government — headed by this president and this premier who are clearly committed to reform — ride the wave of change and take China fully into the 21st century and basically dismantle the resistance to it."

Clinton reiterated: "Not only do I believe there can be (democracy in China); I believe there will be."

Asked if he foresees the end of Chinese communism during his lifetime, Clinton, 52 , replied: "I certainly hope so. I believe that leaders of vision and confidence and courage will find a way to put China on the right side of history — and keep it there."

Clinton hailed China's "remarkable transformation," adding that Chinese leaders are beginning to share his conviction that democracy is "the right course practically as well as morally, yielding more stability and more progress" in the 21st century.

Clinton said he is as confident about the emergence of democracy in China as he is about the eventual election of a woman to serve as president of the United States.

"Do I believe that a woman will be elected president of the United States? I do," Clinton said. "Do I think it will be a good thing? I do. Do I know when it will happen? No. Who will make the decision? The American people."

Clinton said that he has "very high regard" for the ability of China's Soviet-trained 71-year-old leader to lead the nation of 1.2 billion through a tumultuous transition from a command economy without western-style political freedoms to a free enterprise system with democratic liberties.

Jiang is "a man of extraordinary intellect, very high energy and a lot of vision for his age — and indeed for any age," Clinton said."I think he has a good imagination; he has vision; he can visualize; he can imagine a future that is different from the present."

Clinton added: "There is a very good chance that China has the right leadership at the right time and that they understand the daunting, massive nature of the challenges they face."

Clinton said Jiang showed "a personal expression of confidence" with his willingness to permit a nationally-televised debate with an American president last Saturday.

But Clinton acknowledged that Jiang faces resistance within the Chinese leadership.

Clinton said there were "powerful forces resisting change" in China, including factions that permit "continuing governmental restrictions on free speech, assembly and freedom of worship."

"Like everyone else, he (Jiang) has constituencies with which he must work," Clinton said.

Clinton said he hoped his trip would help Jiang fend off hard-liners. Clinton adopted a low-key approach on hot button disputes with Beijing. He did not meet personally with any Chinese dissidents, despite criticism from the dissidents here and critics back home, in an effort to avoid antagonizing hard-liners.

"I hope that more of them (hard liners) understand that America wishes China well; that we're not bent on containing China; and that our human rights policy is not some excuse for some larger strategic motive," Clinton said.

Clinton said the cause of human rights would make progress as the result of his private appeals to Chinese leaders to free 150 Chinese imprisoned for nonviolent offenses in connection with the Tiananmen Square pro-democracy protests of 1989 and other Chinese serving prison time for crimes that have been wiped off the books.

"We can have a strategic partnership with a country with whom we do not have a perfect relationship," Clinton declared.

Clinton also met with Martin Lee, leader of pro-democracy activists in Hong Kong. Clinton also addressed Hong Kong business leaders, warning that the United States cannot continue to bolster Asia's troubled economies with disproportionate U.S. imports of Asian-made products without Asian imports of U.S. products.

"There is a very limited time period in which we can absorb all the exports to try to do our part to keep the Asian economy going," Clinton cautioned.

Conference highlights chasm in AIDS care

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

GENEVA — "Bridging the gap," read signs draped everywhere at the 12th World AIDS Conference. But by meeting's end Friday, the message to many seemed just the opposite: The chasm between the haves and the have-nots in the global epidemic is only widening.

Around the world, nearly 34 million people are infected with HIV, and that number is growing: Since the international meeting began Monday, about 100,000 more have contracted the virus, which causes AIDS.

Perhaps 4 percent of those infected live in the United States, Western Europe and a few other affluent nations, where patients routinely get powerful — and expensive — AIDS medicines that can keep the virus in check. For everyone else, the benefits of recent medical breakthroughs are an ever distant dream.

"Medical advances present us with a painful paradox," said Anna Luisa Liguori, who works with the MacArthur Foundation in Mexico. "The greater the advances in clinical research, the greater the gap between those who can afford the best treatment and those who can afford no treatment at all."

Treating just one HIV-infected person with the standard three-drug regimen costs $10,000 or more. According to one estimate at the meeting, making this protocol available worldwide would cost $36.5 billion, two-thirds of that expense coming in Africa.

"Bridge the gap?" asked Dodji Mathey of Togo. "I don't think so. It is not possible for the new medicines to ever get to Africa. We are too poor."

Among the meeting's 13,371 attendees, less than a quarter were — like Mathey — from the parts of the world where children routinely die for lack of basic antibiotics and clean drinking water.

In Mathey's tiny West African country, 9 percent of adults are infected with HIV. In some nations on the continent, the figure approaches 30 percent.

With no effective AIDS vaccine close to development, the only way to stop the epidemic in poorer nations is to prevent the spread of the infection. The primary approach is to make condoms cheap and abundant and to persuade people to use them.

Serbs regain control of key Kosovo crossroads

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — With U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke in the Yugoslav capital trying to broker a cease-fire, Serb forces captured a strategic town in the secessionist Kosovo province Friday after a two-week siege.

Serb police entered Kijevo shortly after dawn, freeing about 100 Serb villagers and 50 policemen held by ethnic Albanian separatists. Breaking the rebels' hold on Kijevo was believed to be Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's remaining goal in his latest crackdown on Kosovo.

Hours after the village was retaken by the Serbs, Holbrooke arrived in Belgrade, where he began talks with Milosevic aimed at producing a cease-fire.

Holbrooke, nominated to be America's next ambassador to the United Nations, had said the standoff between Serbs and Albanians in Kijevo made the village the "most dangerous place in Europe," a flashpoint for a wider Balkan war.

Having the town now in Serb hands could signal a turning point, allowing the stalled negotiations to go forward.

The ethnic Albanian separatists want independence for Kosovo, a province in southern Serbia where they outnumber Serbs 9-to-1. Serbia is the largest of two republics remaining in Yugoslavia.

Late Friday, both sides reported fighting around Kijevo, 15 miles west of the provincial capital Pristina, but accounts of casualties were conflicting. Journalists were not allowed into the area.

Serb forces were seeking to push the Kosovo Liberation Army rebels as far west as possible after ending their siege of Kijevo, Serb police said. At the same time, the KLA was reinforcing its forces in villages around the village, said Murat Musliu, head of an ethnic Albanian human rights group.

Hundreds of people have died in Kosovo since Serb forces stepped up efforts to crush militant resistance in late February. Milosevic says the crackdown is aimed at Albanian terrorists who have targeted Serb police in their fight for independence.

On the eve of Holbrooke's visit, Milosevic denied any government repression in Kosovo and offered to restore the autonomy he yanked from the province in 1989 on grounds of protecting its Serb minority.

Holbrooke is pressing for a cease-fire before trying to get Milosevic to withdraw his forces. But he and other Western officials are insistent that Kosovo should not be allowed independence.

Holbrooke will travel to Pristina on Saturday to meet with ethnic Albanians. During a visit to the region last month, Holbrooke tried to get the KLA to end the siege of Kijevo, fearing Serb forces would use massive force against it and spark a wider war in the region.

Sitting astride the main east-west road in Kosovo, Kijevo has been a flashpoint since the KLA surrounded it in mid-June and cut off its Serb inhabitants. Serb police then surrounded the KLA fighters.

Serb police sources said they had suffered no injuries in Friday's offensive, but that the ethnic Albanians had undetermined casualties.

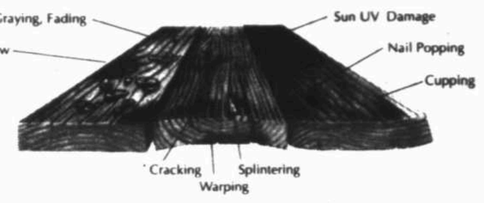

Belgrade's independent Beta news agency quoted a Serbian police source as saying fighting was still going on in Kijevo after the morning operation.

An ethnic Albanian human rights group in the region claimed many were killed and wounded in the Serb attack, in which they said the Serbs targeted five villages with tanks, helicopters and artillery.

But Western diplomats, citing intelligence reports and speaking on condition of anonymity, said casualties were not high because the KLA saw the attack coming and retreated without resisting.

Underscoring the high tensions throughout Kosovo, a remote-controlled bomb exploded Friday in a Serb residential area of Pristina. No injuries were reported but windows on nearby buildings were blown out and several cars were damaged in an attack Serb police blamed on the KLA.

Hearts and wallets: Government explores new ways to hook dads

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For years, states snatched driver's licenses and put up "Most Wanted" posters, trying to get absent fathers to pay child support. Now they're trying to hook the heart as well as the wallet.

Though the government has new tools to crack down on deadbeat parents, officials increasingly are concluding they'll get only so far with threats. They want fathers involved with their kids' lives.

The approach is both practical and philosophical. Children with involved fathers do better in school, are less likely to become teen parents and have fewer behavior problems. At the same time, involved fathers are more likely to pay support.

Some 1,000 fatherhood programs have popped up nationwide, and they have plenty of dads to reach: Nearly one in three children is born to unmarried parents, and about half of the children who start life with married parents see them separate or divorce.

So far, there's little evidence the new programs work. Not much rigorous research has been done, and the programs that have been evaluated have not achieved their lofty goals.

Still, many people believe the idea eventually will pay dividends, and future evaluations are planned. Supporters point to successes such as Derrick Dunn, who joined a Baltimore program that targets the partners of pregnant women.

"I wasn't looking forward to fatherhood," the 20-year-old admitted.

But in the months before his 1-year-old daughter, Breauna, was born, Dunn began attending fatherhood classes that began by exploring men's often tenuous relationships with their own fathers. By the end, they took on stages of child development and how to change diapers.

That program led Dunn to a job preparation program. He now has a job at a hotel front desk, ready and able to pay support.

But he doesn't talk about the money. He talks about Breauna.

"I see her every day," he said proudly.

The new emphasis is a subtle shift for the Department of Health and Human Services, which helps finance child support collection programs. HHS is now funding fatherhood involvement projects and encouraging states to incorporate positive messages in their efforts.

"The best child support collector in the nation is the child," said David Gray Ross, who heads HHS' child support division. "When the child looks up and says 'Daddy, can I have a new pair of shoes?' that's a pretty good incentive."

Cooler economic weather heading for U.S.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The summer forecast? Stormy and a lot cooler. Not the weather, the economy. Analysts see the United States headed for a dramatic slowdown in growth because of troubles in Asia.

And that is the best-case scenario. In the nightmare versions, economists fear the Asian crisis could spiral out of control, bringing down first Japan, then China and in short order engulfing the whole world in a global recession.

While that doomsday scenario is considered only a remote possibility, most analysts believe a substantial reduction in U.S. growth is not only a virtual certainty but has already begun. Unemployment is inching up, orders for manufactured goods are falling and the trade deficit is setting records each month.

"The United States and other countries can't escape it," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Primark Decision Economics in New York. "Since Asia turned out worse than expected, the U.S. economy will turn out worse than expected."

The big question, of course, is just how much worse.

Recent signs have not been reassuring. This week, a closely watched survey of manufacturing health reported slowing activity at more than half the factories surveyed, the poorest showing in nearly two years.

And on Thursday, the government said the unemployment rate edged up to 4.5 percent last month with the weakness led by a third straight monthly decline in factory payrolls.

Hardest hit have been companies with a heavy focus on Asia. Nike, the world's biggest shoe manufacturer, said this week it had lost $67.7 million in the fourth quarter as its Asian revenues declined sharply.

Asia buys one-third of all U.S. exports. For April, America's trade deficit climbed to an all-time high of $14.5 billion as U.S. farm exports fell to their lowest level in 3 1/2 years.

Analysts said worse numbers are yet to come with America's trade deficit in goods alone expected to hit a record $230 billion this year.

Bad as those figures are, many believe the rising trade deficit does not represent Asia's biggest threat to the U.S. economy. The bigger threat would be if Asia's financial troubles seriously harm America's high-flying stock market and a big sell-off there frightened consumers and caused them to cut back on spending.

Last October's 554-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average, the biggest one-day point loss ever, and more recent but smaller dips provided hints of the potential problem.

The weakness that began in Thailand a year ago and then spread to Indonesia and South Korea has now worsened economic conditions in Japan, pushing it into its worst recession in 50 years.

Despite prodding from the Clinton administration, the Japanese government has been slow to deal with its underlying problems, including more than $500 billion worth of bad bank loans.

The Japanese government announced details of how it planned to deal with its banking crisis Thursday, but the initial market reaction reflected widespread skepticism that the proposal would be able to get the world's second largest economy back on track.

"If we got a major financial crisis in Japan, that could trigger a major stock market correction in the United States," said David Wyss, economist at Standard and Poor's DRI. "There is plenty to be scared about for the next couple of years."

Still, Wyss rated the chance of a U.S. recession in the next 18 months at only one in five. More likely is that the U.S. economy will slow substantially but continue growing.

Instead of the sizzling 5.4 percent January-March growth rate in the gross domestic product, Wyss forecast growth slowed to just 2.1 percent in the just-completed spring quarter and predicted it will hover around that rate for the next year.

Such low growth rates would not be enough to keep the unemployment rate from rising, and many economists predict the jobless rate will near 5 percent by year end.

While up from the 28-year low of 4.3 percent reached this spring, a 5 percent unemployment rate would still reflect a robust U.S. job market.

Assisted suicide ban passes

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — After four years of watching Dr. Jack Kevorkian take part in dozens of suicides, the Michigan Legislature has passed a bill aimed at stopping him.

It approved a ban Thursday on assisted suicide, and Gov. John Engler said he will sign it. Effective Sept. 1, it would make assisted suicide a crime punishable by up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Kevorkian reacted defiantly to the passage of the bill.

"Don't you know you cannot legislate morality? You cannot do that," he told The Oakland Press of Pontiac for a story Friday.

"Tell them we will go to trial immediately after that law goes into effect. The Michigan Legislature is a tool of the Inquisition. It is a lie. They would burn us at the stake if it wasn't for a jury," he said.

Prosecutors have been asking the Legislature for a clear law ever since a 1992 temporary ban on assisted suicide lapsed four years ago.

The measure "ought to put Jack Kevorkian out of business and end that sorry spectacle that's been playing out these many years," Engler said.

Employees of the Architect of the Capitol raise and lower American flags on the roof of the Capitol in this file photo. The flags are run up and down at the Capitol, then boxed to be given to members of Congress who make them available to people who contact their office and are willing to pay for them.

Stars and Stripes wave over Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hand over hand, William Warley hoists an American flag up a rooftop pole at the U.S. Capitol. It flaps in the breeze for a few seconds and then Warley runs it back down, folds it and boxes it.

Hand over hand — up, then down. Fold. Box. Repeat.

Since the program started in 1937, more than 2.4 million flags have been flown over the Capitol and then sold or given away as souvenirs. Each comes with a certificate marking the date that it flew in the Capitol breeze — however briefly — and the name of the person for whom it was flown.

"We just send it up, let it blow three or four seconds and then bring it down," said Warley, one of several workers who together hoist an average of 250 to 300 flags a day except in rain or snow. "This is priority, so if we're doing another job and emergency (orders for) flags come up, we have to stop what we're doing and come do this."

The banner year was 1991 when 154,224 flags were flown. Maybe Americans were feeling patriotic because of the Persian Gulf War. Nobody knows for sure.

The biggest single day for flag-flying was July 4, 1976, the U.S. bicentennial.

"We did 10,471 that day," said Christine Benza, who has worked in the flag office for 38 years. "We worked round the clock to make sure all those flags were flown."

Is it fun?

"Not really," said Warley, who works on various projects around the Capitol.

Especially not on a day last month when flags around the nation were flying at half-staff to mark the death of former Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona. No disrespect to Goldwater, but his death made Warley's job more difficult.

He had to run each flag all the way to the top, back down halfway in memory of Goldwater, back up to the top and then back down. That's flag-raising protocol.

"That's what you've got to do," he said. "That's my job."

The flag-waving operation began after a member of Congress asked for one of the flags that had flown over the Capitol and was being replaced due to wear. Word got around.

Soon, the rising number of requests for flags prompted Congress to begin flying smaller flags, furnished by members or constituents, from special poles erected on the Capitol's roof.

Nowadays, people contact one of their members of Congress to request a flag, sometimes asking that one be flown over the Capitol on a date that marks a special occasion such as a birthday or graduation.

Prices range from $6.94 for a 3-by-5-foot nylon flag to $18.75 for a 5-by-8-foot cotton flag.

Court modifies 'buffers' around Houston women's clinics

AUSTIN (AP) — Buffer zones meant to keep abortion protesters away from several Houston area women's clinics violate free speech, the Texas Supreme Court has ruled.

In a 6-3 decision released Friday, the court modified buffer zones surrounding four clinics and eliminated buffers around five other clinics.

Four clinics — Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas, Houston Women's Clinic, West Loop Clinic and Women's Medical Center of Northwest Houston — now must allow up to two "sidewalk counselors" to approach their patients within their buffer zone boundaries.

However, the anti-abortionists must leave patients alone if asked to, the court said.

Five other clinics — Downtown Women's Center, Aaron's Family Planning Clinic of Houston, A-Z Women's Clinic, Suburban Women's Clinic and AAA Concerned Women's Center — must eliminate their boundaries, the court ruled.

In addition to eliminating some buffers and changing rules governing others, the court eliminated a buffer around the home of one physician and allowed buffers around four others to remain intact with no changes.

The court also let stand $1.01 million in damages awarded to the clinics against Operation Rescue, Dallas Rescue, the Rev. Phillip Benham, Bob Jewett, Don Treshman and the Rev. Keith Tucci.

Planned Parenthood officials cheered the court's decision leave the monetary damages intact.

"This is a complete and total victory," said Judy Reiner, senior vice president for Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas.

The 1992 case involves protests in Houston during the Republican National Convention. Abortion opponents publicly announced plans to protest outside of clinics that perform the procedure and at the homes of physicians who perform the operation.

To fight those plans, Planned Parenthood, along with several other clinics and five doctors, obtained a temporary court order prohibiting abortion protests within 100 feet of their clinics.

Tucci, Benham, Jewitt and other protesters violated the court order and were arrested, records show.

The Supreme Court ordered them released, saying the then-100-foot buffer zone violated the protester's rights to freedom of expression.

Prior to that ruling, a Houston judge issued a tighter rein on protests at the clinics and doctors' homes. Those limits became permanent after the convention.

On Friday, Supreme Court said the Houston judge's ban was too restrictive.

"We conclude that portions of the injunction infringe upon (protesters') freedom of expression ...," Justice Nathan Hecht wrote for the majority.

"The buffer zones in this case can be justified only if there is evidence to meet the constitutional standard that such (a court order) burdens no more speech than necessary at each specific location," Hecht wrote.

Hecht added that courts should rule on free speech issues based on the activities of those involved, not the content of their message.

Amarillo child's death blamed on E. coli bacteria

AMARILLO (AP) — Four children who are related got sick from E. coli bacteria and one died after a weeklong stay in a hospital.

The Texas Department of Health was helping to try to find the source of the bacteria.

"We've had a cluster of four cases reported and confirmed in children; one of those children died," Anne Denison, communicable disease nurse with the Amarillo Department of Public Health, said Thursday.

Jonathan Ryan Roberts, 18 months, from Amarillo, died June 25 at Northwest Texas Hospital.

Health officials confirmed the child "died of complications as a result of the infection."

Food eaten at a family gathering June 14 at Lake Meredith tested negative for the bacteria.

Investigator Jim Northcutt from the Texas Department of Public Health in Canyon collected water samples at Lake Meredith on Wednesday.

Karen Brentlinger, mother of three of the children who contracted E. coli, drew a map for Northcutt indicating the place the family gathered, which was near the loading ramp at Harbor Bay.

The family also briefly visited the Cedar Canyon area, she said.

Health officials say it was very unlikely that the water was the source of the E. coli.

The Lubbock Health Department was testing the water samples, with final results expected in a few days.

"Preliminary findings didn't indicate any fecal-coli forms present in the water," said Lab Director Tommy Camden.

Ms. Brentlinger's 19-month-old twin daughter was admitted June 26. Two days later, Ms. Brentlinger's twin son and 4-year-old daughter were admitted. The children were discharged Tuesday.

The children, including the boy who died, had played in the water at the Lake Meredith gathering.

"The kids were eating Cheetos and cookies," Ms. Brentlinger said. "You know toddlers, they drop something and then they put it back in their mouth."

Ms. Brentlinger's 4-year-old daughter accidentally fell into the water, swallowing some of it.

E. coli is a large family of bacteria, most of which are harmless and live in the intestines of healthy humans and animals. However, a strain carried by some cattle produces a toxin that can cause severe illness in humans.

13-year-old taken into custody for gasoline attack

SPLENDORA (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was taken into custody Thursday in the investigation of an attack on a suburban Houston boy who was doused with gasoline and set ablaze on his eighth birthday.

Robert Ray Middleton is being treated at the Shriners Hospital Burn Institute in Galveston for burns over 99 percent of his body. He was listed in critical condition Thursday but a breathing tube had been removed and he was breathing on his own.

"We have made progress in this case," Montgomery County Sheriff Guy Williams said. "So far the young man has admitted to being near when the 8-year-old was set on fire. We have additional people to interview."

The 13-year-old, identified as a neighbor and taken by police at gunpoint as he rode in a pickup truck, yelled to reporters that he was not involved in the fire.

Williams said investigators finally were able to speak with the victim, who gave them a name.

The boy was attacked while walking through a wooded area near his east Montgomery County home in Splendora, about 20 miles northeast of Houston. A neighbor called 911.

On a tape of the emergency call released Thursday, the neighbor told the dispatcher: "He said some kids threw the gas on him."

Drew finally signs

ST. LOUIS — J.D. Drew, who refused to sign with the Philadelphia Phillies last season but was picked again in the first round of this year's draft by St. Louis, agreed today to a $7 million, four-year contract.

Drew, 22, gets a record deal for a drafted player, but falls short of the $11 million he had been seeking.

Drew was drafted in 1997 by Philadelphia with the second overall pick, but the Phillies' highest offer was for $3.1 million guaranteed. Drew instead played for the St. Paul Saints, an independent Class-A team in the Northern League.

Drew gets a $3 million signing bonus, according to a source familiar with the negotiations who spoke on the condition he not be identified. He gets $375,000 this year, $500,000 in 1999, $1 million in 2000 and $2 million in 2001.

The Cardinals used the No. 5 overall pick in this year's draft to take a chance on Drew.

Comets win

HOUSTON — Cynthia Cooper scored 34 points and set WNBA records for free throws made and attempted as the Houston Comets beat the Sacramento Monarchs 84-67 Friday night.

Cooper, whose 34 points were the most in the league this season, went 22-of-24 from the free throw line, easily passing the league marks of 13 free throws made, set by Kim Williams of Utah, and 18 attempted, set by Wendy Palmer, also of Utah. Both players set the marks last year, the WNBA's inaugural season.

All-Star change

NEW YORK — Bernie Williams of the New York Yankees, sidelined by a strained right knee, will not play in next week's All-Star game in Denver and was replaced on the AL roster by Cleveland's Manny Ramirez.

Williams was one of five Yankees selected as reserves this week after baseball's top team failed to have a starter voted in by fans. The center fielder hopes to make a minor league rehab start this weekend and is expected to rejoin the Yankees after the All-Star break.

Ramirez will be one of six Indians on the AL team, managed by Cleveland's Mike Hargrove. The right fielder, who'll be making his second All-Star appearance, entered Friday night's game batting .300 with 16 homers and 64 RBIs.

On Thursday, Baltimore first baseman Rafael Palmeiro was named as a replacement for Boston's Mo Vaughn, who strained a hamstring this week.

Holyfield-Lewis?

DOTHAN, Ala. — If promoters expect Evander Holyfield to step into a ring with Lennox Lewis, they better come up with a lot of money.

Holyfield, in town Thursday for an LL Cool J concert, told the Dothan Eagle he wants a guaranteed $25 million before he'll agree to fight.

Stars strike gold

NHL's No. 1 free agent Hull inks 3-year deal with Dallas

By C. Bryson Hull
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — The "Golden Brett" landed in Dallas Friday.

Seeking to bolster an offense that faltered in the Western Conference finals, the Dallas Stars signed unrestricted free agent Brett Hull to a three-year, $17.5 million contract.

The 33-year-old right wing became the most sought-after player in this year's free agent market after failing to reach an agreement with his longtime team, the St. Louis Blues, earlier this week.

His new contract with the Stars also includes a no-trade clause, a one-year option and, Hull hopes, a chance to win his first Stanley Cup.

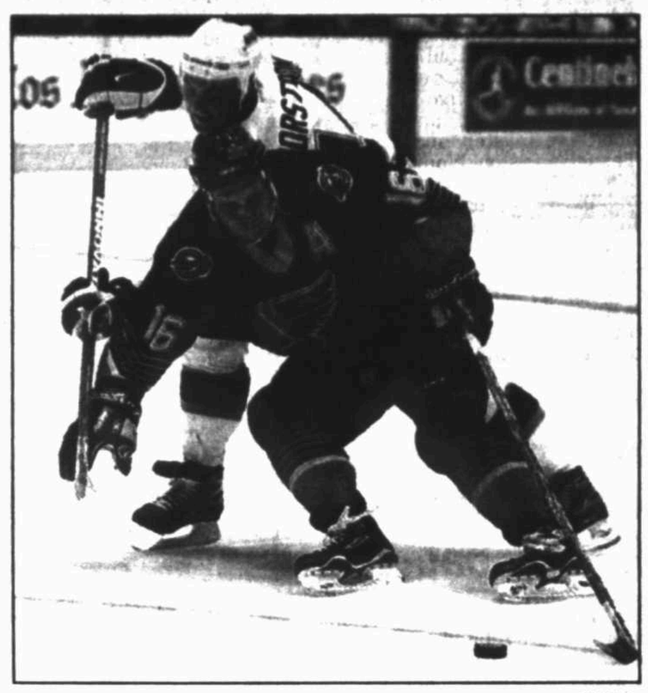

"The main thing is to win and to be a champion," Hull said. "They (Dallas) were as close as anybody to winning a Stanley Cup and to have them want me to be a part of that I thought is a great honor."

Hull, a 13-year NHL veteran with 554 career goals and 987 points in 801 games, turned down a $15 million contract in March with the Blues because it didn't include a no-trade clause.

"I lost a home and a career over it, so that was the stickler for me," Hull said.

While the negotiations to bring Hull to Texas took only two days, starting

Hammering Halos drill Tulsa

Midland Angel starter Matt Beaumont releases a pitch during the Angels' 14-2 win over Tulsa on Friday. Beaumont picked up the win, tossing 7 2/3 innings of six-hit ball. Midland is 2-0 in its current 12-game homestand, which continues today at 7:11 p.m.

By Oscar LeRoy

While a fireworks show was scheduled after Friday night's Midland-Tulsa baseball game, the Angels provided few sparks of their own during the game.

The Angels exploded for 16 hits, including two long bombs by Danny Buxbaum, to pound the Drillers 14-2 in front of 4,509 fans at Christensen Stadium. Buxbaum lit up the sky in the first inning with a grand slam off Tulsa starter Dan Smith (7-8) and gave Angel hurler Matt Beaumont (4-7) all the cushion he needed to earn the victory.

Angels win

■ Score: Midland Angels 14, Tulsa Drillers 2.
■ Records: Midland Angels are 13-7. Tulsa is 14-6.
■ Halo Hero: Danny Buxbaum had two homers, including a grand slam. He also drove in six RBIs.

Buxbaum was almost unstoppable in Friday night's contest as he connected again — this time a two-run shot — in the Angel six-run second inning. Buxbaum's production could've easily beaten the Drillers alone as he went 3-for-5 with six RBIs.

"I got a couple of good pitches to hit, and in Midland you know it's got a good chance of going out," Buxbaum said. "It was just one of those kinds of nights. In San Antonio, I didn't get that many hits, so I've just been trying to basically just hit the ball. I've had a couple of good days in a row and I'm just trying to get more consistent with my hitting."

Sampras, Ivanisevic make final

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras outplayed Tim Henman in four sets today to move within one victory of his fifth Wimbledon title in six years.

Sampras, who lost his first set of the tournament, relied on his superior serve and experience to prevail 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3. He ended Henman's bid to become the first British men's finalist in 60 years and will play Goran Ivanisevic for the title Sunday.

Ivanisevic squandered two match points in the fourth set, then outlasted Richard Krajicek 15-13 in a marathon fifth set to win 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-7 (7-5) 15-13 in a match that lasted 3 hours, 22 minutes, with the final set alone going 1:19.

Sampras and Ivanisevic also played for the title in 1994, with Sampras winning in straight sets. Ivanisevic also was a loser in the 1992 finals.

The American today had to come up with some of his best tennis against the 12th-seeded Henman, his occasional practice and doubles partner.

"There was a lot of emotion out there, especially playing Tim here in England," Sampras said. "This is what it's all about. You raise your level of intensity and raise your emotions."

The women's final is set for Saturday, with Jana Novotna facing Nathalie Tauziat.

By winning Sunday, Sampras would join Bjorn Borg as the only players in the Open era to win Wimbledon five times. A victory would also give him a total of 11 Grand Slam titles, one behind all-time leader Roy Emerson.

Returning to the final ended a slump for Sampras, who had failed to get past the quarters of a a Grand Slam tournament since last

Brazilians win stellar match over Denmark

By Peter Muello
Associated Press Writer

NANTES, France — They were sloppy, trailed early and didn't look like world champions. But in the end, the Brazilians were still too good for Denmark's giant-killers.

With a pair of goals from Rivaldo and Ronaldo in a new role as playmaker, Brazil edged Denmark 3-2 on Friday and moved into the World Cup semifinals.

The Brazilian defense fell apart at times against a plucky and carefree Danish team that was happy just to reach the quarterfinals for the first time ever, having upset Olympic champion Nigeria 4-1 in the previous round.

And just two minutes into the game, the Danes were at it again when Martin Jorgensen stunned the four-time World Cup champs with a goal off a pass after a free kick.

With goals from Bebeto and Rivaldo, Brazil had a 2-1 lead at the half. A blunder by Roberto Carlos led to Brian Laudrup's tying goal early in the second half, but Rivaldo scored his second goal to clinch the victory.

The Danes could have tied the score again, but Laudrup shot wide from close range and Marc

France advances on penalty kicks

By Raf Casert
Associated Press Writer

SAINT-DENIS, France — Third time, and the shootout curse continues for Italy. For France, a fantastic World Cup adventure moves within one step of the championship game.

After being eliminated in a shootout in the semifinals in 1990 and losing the championship to Brazil in 1994 when the last penalty kick sailed over the crossbar, Italy suffered again Friday, losing 4-3 in the shootout after 120 scoreless minutes of play.

"It's a curse," Italian coach Cesare Maldini said.

France, which has allowed just one goal in four five games, reached its first World Cup final four in 12 years before a home crowd of almost 80,000 including Jacques Chirac, the fans cheering throughout and singing "La Marsaillaise."

"It takes the coolest heads to win," said French coach Aime Jacquet.

Houston hangs on to beat Arizona

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Derek Bell hit a two-run homer and Bill Spiers had three hits as the Houston Astros beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 6-5 on Friday night in the first game between the teams.

Shane Reynolds (10-5) won for the eighth time in 10 decisions, allowing two runs on 11 hits and one walk in seven innings. He had eight strikeouts.

Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his 19th save, allowing Tony Batista's two-run homer with two outs.

Bell hit his 12th home run of the season in the first inning off Andy Benes (6-9). Bell's shot, a line drive to left, extended the Astros' homer streak to six games.

The Astros added three runs in the third. Craig Biggio led off with a double and scored on Spiers' single. Spiers moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Jeff Bagwell's double. Bagwell scored when second baseman Andy Fox committed an error on Carl Everett's groundball.

Arizona made it 5-2 in the fourth on Jay Bell's RBI triple and Jorge Fabregas' run-scoring groundout. Houston added a run in the fifth, with Spiers scoring on Benes' wild pitch.

Cubs 12, Pirates 9

CHICAGO — Tyler Houston homered twice and drove in five runs, and the Chicago Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates for their fourth win in five games.

Henry Rodriguez and Jose Hernandez added solo shots, and Kevin Tapani won for the first time since June 6, stopping his three-game losing streak. He allowed seven runs — six earned — and 10 hits in eight-plus innings, striking out eight and walking one. Rod Beck got one out for his 21st save.

Reds 6, Cardinals 3

CINCINNATI — Reggie Sanders homered and had three RBIs as Cincinnati beat St. Louis for its seventh victory in eight games.

Cardinals slugger Mark McGwire thrilled more than 10,000 fans who showed up for batting practice by clearing the wall on 13 of 21 swings, but got to swing the bat only once during the game and flew out. He is tied with Reggie Jackson for most homers before the All-Star break at 37.

Phillies 2, Brewers 0

PHILADELPHIA — Curt Schilling added five strikeouts to his major league-leading total and Doug Glanville had a two-run single in the second as Philadelphia beat Milwaukee.

Schilling (8-8), who allowed five hits in seven innings, has 180 strikeouts in 19 starts, ahead of Nolan Ryan's pace when he set the major league mark of 383 in 1973. Ryan had 179 strikeouts after 19 starts.

Expos 8, Marlins 4

MONTREAL — Shane Andrews homered and drove in three runs, and Orlando Cabrera also had three RBIs in Montreal's victory over Florida.

Javier Vazquez (3-6) went 6 2-3 innings for his second straight victory following a 10-start winless drought. He allowed four runs and eight hits.

Braves 3, Mets 2

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine became the second 12-game winner in the majors, surviving early trouble to pitch Atlanta past New York.

The Braves have won six straight to push their lead in the NL East to a season-high 10 1/2 games over the Mets.

Glavine (12-3) allowed eight hits in seven innings to join teammate Greg Maddux in the dozen-victory club. Glavine also had two hits. Kerry Ligtenberg worked the final inning for his ninth save.

Padres 4, Rockies 2

SAN DIEGO — Ken Caminiti hit a go-ahead double with two out in the seventh and Steve Finley and Carlos Hernandez hit consecutive homers in the fifth as San Diego beat Colorado.

Joey Hamilton (6-9) ended a two-game losing streak. He allowed two runs on six hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked five. Trevor Hoffman pitched the ninth for his 25th save and 33rd straight dating to last year.

Mariners hand Rangers sixth straight loss

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jeff Fassero pitched 7 1-3 shutout innings, and Edgar Martinez and Alex Rodriguez each drove in three runs as Seattle extended Texas' losing streak to a season-long six games with an 8-2 victory Friday night.

Fassero (7-5), who had won only one of his previous eight starts, gave up only six hits as the Mariners won their third straight. Bothered by leg cramps, he was pulled with one out in the eighth and a runner on first.

The Rangers didn't score until the ninth, when Fernando Tatis completed a 4-for-4 night with an RBI single off Heathcliff Slocumb and Mark McLemore drew a bases-loaded walk from Bobby Ayala.

Seattle took a 2-0 lead in the first off John Burkett (4-9) on an RBI single by Martinez and David Segui's sacrifice fly.

■ AL Roundup

The Mariners stretched their lead to 4-0 in the third when Ken Griffey Jr. singled and Martinez hit his 14th homer into the Rangers bullpen in right-center.

Red Sox 15, White Sox 2

BOSTON — Nomar Garciaparra had three of Boston's 17 hits to extend his hitting streak to 24 games and Billy Ashley hit his first career grand slam as the Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox.

One night after supporting Pedro Martinez with 15 runs on 20 hits, the Boston bats helped Tim Wakefield (10-3) become the third 10-game winner on the staff. Wakefield allowed two runs and five hits, struck out seven and walked three to win his 4th consecutive decision.

Indians 2, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Manny Ramirez, named to the AL All-Star team earlier in the day, hit two solo homers to spoil a superb pitching performance by Jose Rosado.

Ramirez broke up Rosado's no-hit bid with a two-out homer in the sixth and hit another homer in the ninth to break a 1-1 tie. They were the only hits off Rosado (3-6), who struck out seven, walked four and gave up the fewest hits of his career in a complete game.

Yankees 3, Orioles 2

NEW YORK — Chad Curtis stole third and scored on Scott Brosius' one-out single in the ninth inning, leading Andy Pettitte and the New York Yankees over the Baltimore Orioles.

In improving to 59-20, the Yankees set a record for the most wins in the first half of the season since the inception of the 162-game schedule in 1961. The 1970 Cincinnati Reds went 58-23 in their first 81 games.

Tigers 5, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Luis Gonzalez and Trey Beamon had two-out RBI singles in the 10th inning to give the Detroit Tigers a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Gonzalez singled off Eddie Guardado to score Damion Easley, who doubled off Dan Naulty (0-2).

Blue Jays 3, Devil Rays 2, 10 innings

TORONTO — Shannon Stewart had a two-out single in the 10th inning to give Toronto a victory over Tampa Bay.

Gump ties course record at GHO

Associated Press

CROMWELL, Conn. — Scott Gump tied the course record with an 8-under-par 62 Friday to take the second-round lead at the Canon Greater Hartford Open, while Casey Martin made history but didn't make the cut.

Gump's round put him at 10 under for the tournament, one stroke better than Larry Mize and Omar Uresti. It also matched a season low on the PGA Tour this year.

He started his round on the back nine and had nine birdies, including four straight midway through the round.

Martin, who sued for the right to use a motorized cart in tour events because of a disability in his right leg, shot a 73 Friday and was four over for the tournament. The Nike Tour player was using a sponsor's exemption to compete in his first PGA event, but missed the cut by five strokes.

His round included a triple-bogey 8 on the 523-yard 13th.

The rolls definitely went Gump's way at the TPC at River Highlands, which was marked Friday by firm fairways and soft greens. He had birdie putts of 20 and 30 feet and said his birdie on the 444-yard, par-4 18th was "a bonus."

Little-known Jenkins shoots 67

COLUMBIA, Md. — At long last, Tom Jenkins has that winning feeling again.

Jenkins shot a 7-under par 65 Friday for a one-stroke lead over Graham Marsh after the opening round of the State Farm Senior Classic. Jenkins, a Senior Tour rookie, last collected a first-place check in 1975 as a member of the PGA Tour.

Montgomerie injury opens the way for challengers

DUBLIN, Ireland — Tony Johnstone, Craig Hailine and John McHenry tied for the lead after two rounds of the Irish Open on Friday.

First-round leader Colin Montgomerie shot a 3-over-par 74 after injuring an ankle when he tripped while signing autographs before he played. Montgomerie had a 139 total and was one stroke behind the leaders when the round ended.

HALO: Angels still lead West

(From 1B)

Buxbaum was joined by Bengie Molina, Keith Luuloa, Eddie Christian and Norm Hutchins as multi-hit performers Friday night. Molina was 3-for-4 with three RBIs on the night.

Pounding the Drillers in two games by a combined score of 24-7 makes it a little difficult to believe that Tulsa came in with a 14-4 record and leading the Texas League East division. Meanwhile, the Angels improved to 13-7 and kept their lead in the West division by one game over Wichita and don't want to relinquish that during this current 12-game homestand.

"It's great when you've got a 12-game homestand because you try to get a nice lead going and win as many games as possible," Buxbaum said. "At home you try to establish a winning record and when we go on the road we try to sneak in as many wins as we can."

Also, for the second straight night the Angels had a solid pitching performance from a former bullpen hurler.

Beaumont went 7 2/3 innings, allowed six his, two earned runs, struck out six and walked three on the night. With Buxbaum's blast to start things off for the Angels on the right track, Beaumont could only smile as he took the mound.

"It's nice to see as a pitcher that your team can put up 14 runs," Beaumont said. "You never know what's going to happen with this team as it's an exciting team to watch. When you have several guys hitting over .300, it's easy for a pitcher to concentrate and just throw strikes."

And throw strikes he did.

Beaumont did not allow a hit until the fourth inning and didn't allow a run until the seventh frame when the game was pretty much in the books. It's coming slowly but Beaumont may be regaining the form he had in 1996 when he led the league in strikeouts (132).

"I'm trying to get back to where I was," said Beaumont, who suffered a season ending injury early in the '97 season. "My worst enemy is myself. But as long as I keep throwing strikes, I'm going to be all right."

As long as the Angels keep getting production from the mound like they had from Beaumont, and keep pounding away at the opponents pitching staff, Midland should be all right in the second half race.

ANGEL NOTES: Matt Wise (7-4, 4.77 ERA) takes the mound for Midland against Tulsa left-hander Corey Lee (6-5, 4.36) in the third game of a six-game series at 7:11 tonight... Another post-game fireworks show is scheduled for tonight. Reserved seat and box seat tickets are sold out, but general admission tickets will be available at 9 a.m... Hutchins extended his hitting streak to 16 games, which began on May 1, before he was sidelined for more than a month with a wrist injury... It seems that Anaheim's No. 1 draft pick, pitcher Seth Etherton, is making a brief stop at Single-A Lake Elsinore of the California League. He might arrive in Midland early next week...

No Teen Angels

Older proves to be better for Wimbledon's women

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — The brash teen queens of tennis are dominating the headlines, but not the Grand Slams. Once again at Wimbledon, older is better.

Jana Novotna, 29, and Nathalie Tauziat, 30, will meet in Saturday's final, wresting the spotlight from those charismatic kids — Martina Hingis, Anna Kournikova and Venus and Serena Williams.

The battle of the ages at Wimbledon turned out to be a mismatch.

"It tells you that the teen-agers are too cocky," said three-time Wimbledon champion John McEnroe, a commentator for NBC-TV.

A Novotna-Tauziat final won't do much to boost network ratings, but give them credit for refusing to act their age. Many of their contemporaries have retired, and in combined years they're the oldest Wimbledon women's finalists since 1977.

"It really doesn't matter how old you are. Most important is how you feel," Novotna said. "Nathalie and I are playing very similar tennis. Our tennis is based on experience, and that's what we have shown in this championship."

The pairing is surprising given the hype accompanying the teen-age vanguard, but the youngsters also came up short last month at the French Open, where Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat Monica Seles in the final.

Attrition took a toll on the teens at Wimbledon. The photogenic Kournikova dealt the London tabloids a blow when she withdrew before the tournament with a thumb injury. Hingis lost in the semifinals, then denied that she's washed up at 17.

Venus Williams lost to Novotna in the quarterfinals but won plaudits for throwing the tournament's best temper tantrum. Younger sister Serena Williams, citing a sore calf, curiously quit a match two games from defeat to save herself for mixed doubles the following day.

Novotna and Tauziat, meanwhile, quietly worked their way through another yet Grand Slam. It's the 45th for Novotna and the 43rd for Tauziat.

Neither has won a major title and Tauziat had never reached a Grand Slam semifinal until this week. Novotna, however, is a two-time Wimbledon runnerup remembered for sobbing on the shoulder of the Duchess of Kent after blowing a big lead in the 1993 final.

"She's not the youngest player on the tour anymore," Hingis said. 'Sometimes it seems like the older, the better. If you see Tauziat on the other side in the finals, it's amazing, you know? I hope it's going to be like that with me also — the older, the smarter, the cleverer, the better."

With maturity, the third-seeded Novotna seems to have overcome a longstanding reputation for choking. She lost to Hingis in last year's final but coolly avenged that defeat Thursday, earning a standing ovation from a crowd well aware of her past suffering on Centre Court.

"Let's just hope what the Duchess of Kent said last year is right," Novotna said. "She said, 'Third time lucky,' so here I am."

Tauziat is the first Frenchwoman to reach a Wimbledon final since Suzanne Lenglen won her sixth title in 1925. Lenglen became legendary not only because of her talent, but because she wore short skirts, played without a corset and sipped brandy during matches.

Tauziat, on the other hand, is an obscure 15-year veteran who had sportscasters scrambling for pronunciation guides (it's TOE-zee-ott) when she became the lowest-seeded finalist in Wimbledon history at No. 16.

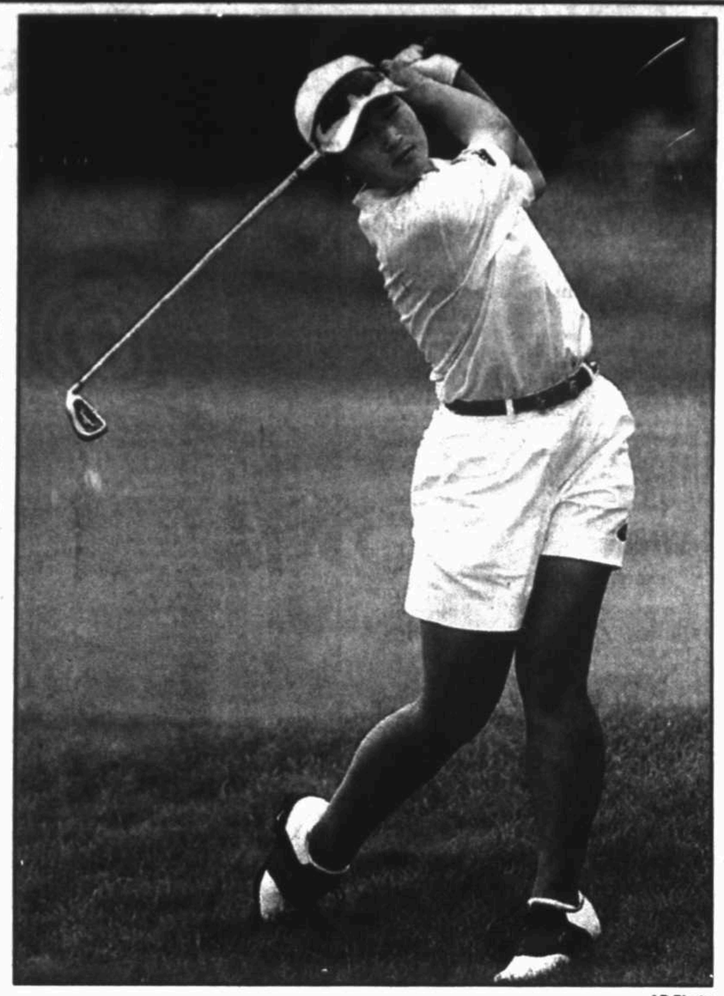

She cracked the top 10 for the first time in January and has won just four WTA Tour tournaments, two of them on grass. After winning match point in the semifinal against Natasha Zvereva, Tauziat shrieked and flopped to the grass in celebration, seemingly as stunned by her achievement as anyone.

"I don't know what I'm going to do if I win the final," she said. "I'm not on the moon already, but almost."

Tauziat and Novotna both like to play serve-and-volley, so the match may hinge on who controls the net. They've played eight times previously, winning four matches each, but they've yet to meet on grass.

"I have nothing to lose," Tauziat said. "For me it's going to be a nice present to be on Centre Court. If I play my best tennis, I think I can win."

She almost sounded like a brash teen-ager.

Pak continues steady play at Women's Open

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

KOHLER, Wis. — Rookie Se Ri Pak says Blackwolf Run Golf Course is so mentally demanding that it is making her head spin.

Save the aspirin, though, for the rest of the field in the 53rd U.S. Women's Open.

Pak continued to tame the menacing Pete Dye-designed course that crushed the likes of Nancy Lopez and Meg Mallon in the second round of the Open on Friday.

A 1-under-par 70 put Pak at 3-under 139 halfway through the biggest event in women's golf, one stroke ahead of Liselotte Neumann, the 1988 Open winner, who also shot a 70.

"I don't think she is going to be too nervous," Neumann said of Pak. "She has nothing really to lose. She is having a good year and a long career in front of her."

Pak indeed is calm, collected and confident.

"I really enjoy playing this course. I'm thinking a lot. This course requires more thinking, more smart play," Pak said.

"Too many headaches," she added with a laugh.

The 20-year-old from South Korea, who won the McDonald's LPGA Championship in May, is seeking to become the first woman to win two majors in her rookie year since Juli Inkster in 1984.

Because of high scores, slow play and a 51-minute lightning delay, not everybody finished the round.

Darkness suspended play with 21 golfers still on the course, but amateur Brenda Corrie Kuehn elected to finish the 18th hole, which she bogeyed, finishing at 1-over for the day and even-par for the tournament.

The 36-hole cut won't be determined until Saturday morning. The 60 lowest scores and ties and anyone within 10 strokes of the lead will make the cut.

Lopez won't be one of them.

She and her playing partners, Mallon and Jane Geddes, were so deflated by their play that they approached the 18th green Friday waving white towels from their putters.

"Jane said we ought to walk up to 18 waving the white flag," Mallon said. "That's pretty much how we felt. The course definitely won."

Lopez's 83 was the worst of her 81 career Open rounds and left her at 18-over 160. Mallon shot a 76 for 153, Geddes a 79 for 157.

Blackwolf Run got the best of them — and many others.

Kim Williams, who shared the first-round lead with Laura Davies at 3-under, stumbled to a 10-over 81 for a two-day total of 149. Davies had a 75 and, was four strokes back.

Annika Sorenstam of Sweden, the 1995 and 1996 Open winner, had a 75 for 146.

Different Goran reaches final

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Goran Ivanisevic kept his muttering to a minimum. He didn't argue with the chair umpire, and he waited until the match ended to throw his racket.

In short, the quick-tempered Croatian wasn't himself, and that's why he won.

Keeping his poise even after blowing a big lead, Ivanisevic advanced to his third Wimbledon final Friday, outlasting 1996 champion Richard Krajicek 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-7 (7-5), 15-13.

Ivanisevic, a runnerup in 1992 and 1994, will play four-time champ Pete Sampras in Sunday's final.

"This year I have the best chance," Ivanisevic said. "I would be very disappointed if I don't do it."

Ivanisevic, long considered the most talented active player without a Grand Slam title, has always been quick to unravel under pressure. He came into the tournament ranked 25th, with just one match victory in the past five majors.

But Ivanisevic, 26, has shown a newfound maturity during the fortnight, suffering only one "blackout," as he termed it. And Friday's match really tested his temper.

Ivanisevic squandered a pair of match points in the fourth set when he missed an ace by an inch and then double-faulted. But even after losing the set, he somehow kept his cool.

"That's strange, you know?" he admitted. "But I think, 'If I lose it for just a second, I will lose the match.'

"I don't think anybody bet on me when I lost the fourth set. Everybody said, 'It's going to be 6-2, maybe 6-3. He's gone. He's going to lose it.' But I did win."

The match featured two of the game's biggest servers, and Krajicek was in top form with 42 aces — 23 in the final set — and just five double-faults. Ivanisevic had a more modest 28 aces and 16 double-faults, but he compensated with outstanding play at the net.

The most dramatic moment came with Ivanisevic holding two match points at 5-4, 40-15 in the fourth set. He slammed a serve beyond the reach of Krajicek, who thought he had lost and started toward the net to congratulate his opponent.

Tim Henman appeals to the umpire over a decision in his match against defending champion Pete Sampras on Friday. Sampras won the match 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3 and will play Croatia's Goran Ivanisevic in the final.

TENNIS: Henman falls

year's Wimbledon.

Henman, the first British men's semifinalist in 25 years, had been aiming to become the first home-grown finalist since Henry Austin in 1938 and first champion since Fred Perry in 1936.

"One day, he's going to win this thing," Sampras said. "I can tell you that. He's very, very strong. He does everything very well. He doesn't have any holes in his game. He's going to learn from this match."

Henman offered no excuses.

"At 5-6 in the third set, he was the one that came up with the goods," he said. "It's relentless the way he plays."

Sampras broke Henman twice to take the first set. But Henman displayed the full range of his grass-court talents in the second set, breaking Sampras twice. It was the first set Sampras had lost in six matches.

Henman stayed even with Sampras in the third set until the American broke in the 12th game. After Henman saved two set points, Sampras converted on the third, ripping a backhand return which forced a volley error. He skipped to the back of the court and pumped his right fist.

"When I won the third set, I knew I had him," Sampras said.

Sampras broke for 3-1 in the fourth set, attacking Henman's second serve, punching a forehand volley winner and celebrating with more fist pumping.

Sampras served out the match in the ninth game, closing with his 16th ace.

Throughout the match, Sampras came up with big serves when he needed them. He hit the fastest serve of the tournament so far, a delivery timed at 136 mph.

Ivanisevic put on an animated display after Krajicek — the 1996 champion — netted a backhand volley to end the match in the 28th game of the final set.

He fell to his knees, tapped the grass with his hand and held his clenched fists in the air. He then flung his racket across the court high into the stands.

The Croatian ripped off his bandana, tossed two towels into the stands, clapped to the crowd and held up his left index finger in a No. 1 salute as he walked off the Centre Court.

"The fifth set was a just a horror-thriller," he said. "I never saw somebody serving like that in my life. They were just bombs. I couldn't even react. I said, 'Just keep your serve. He has to miss a couple of first serves.' And that happened at 13-14."

Ivanisevic has never won a Grand Slam title and came into this tournament after winning only one match in his five previous Slam events.

Brazil's Ronaldo is tackled by Denmark's Brian Laudrup during the World Cup quarter final match between Brazil and Denmark at the La Beaujoire Stadium in Nantes Friday. Brazil defeated Denmark, 3-2.

SOCCER: Brazil advances

(From 1B)

Rieper's header hit the crossbar with two minutes left.

"This was a victory of courage," Brazilian coach Mario Zagallohe said. "This was a true World Cup game: beautiful, frank and open. All games should be like this.

"Ronaldo showed that is he is not only about goals. His two plays were spectacular."

Denmark had some spectacular plays of its own and had a chance for a shocking upset.

"I am very proud of my players' performance," said Denmark's Swedish coach, Bo Johansson. "They were almost as good as the best team in the world."

They were better at the very start of the game.

After Dunga fouled Peter Moller just outside the penalty box, the Danes took the free kick quickly and Laudrup slipped free down the left side. With the Brazilian defense slow to see the danger, he pulled the ball back to the unmarked Jorgensen, who shot the ball past Taffarel from 12 yards out.

The Danes' lead was short-lived. The Brazilians tied the score in the 11th minute when Ronaldo, at the midfield line, passed to Bebeto, who outran defender Thomas Helveg and shot the ball past goalkeeper Peter Schmeichel for his third goal of the Cup.

The Brazilians managed to slow down the fast pace of the game before striking again in the 26th minute.

The Danes were punished for losing possession 30 yards from their own goal and Ronaldo wasted no time in passing to Rivaldo. The midfielder had Bebeto alongside as they ran clear of the defense, but he needed no help as he drove the ball past Schmeichel with a high, angled shot.

Down 2-1 at the half, the Danes came out strong and tied the score in the 51st minute on a Brazilian mistake.

Roberto Carlos, facing his own goal, tried a spectacular overhead kick to clear the ball but barely made contact. Instead of flying upfield, the ball bobbled straight to the grateful Laudrup, who shot it past Taffarel from close range.

Rattled by the goal, the Brazilians struck back and regained the lead 10 minutes later on Rivaldo's low 25-yard shot in the corner of the net as the defense backed off him.

It should have been 3-3 with 12 minutes remaining when Helveg got behind the Brazilian defense and pulled the ball back to Laudrup, who shot wide from right in front of the goal.

Two minutes from the end, the Brazilians were almost caught again when a cross found Rieper unmarked and his header struck the top of the crossbar.

"It was the spirit of our game which saw us through," said Brazilian defender Cafu, who will miss the semifinal after collecting his second yellow card. "We are always running for the ball."

Brazil plays the winner of the Argentina-Netherlands game in one semifinal Tuesday. France, which beat Italy in a penalty shootout, plays the winner of the Germany-Croatia game in the other semifinal on Wednesday.

CUP: Italy again loses on penalty kicks pushing France into the quarterfinals with the first sudden-death overtime goal in World Cup history.

After a 120-minute thriller in which returning playmaker Zinedine Zidane did everything for France but score, it came down to a single shot to separate the two neighboring soccer giants.

Luigi Di Biagio had the fifth and final shot for Italy, down a goal. His shot crashed into the crossbar, sparking wild celebrations at the Stade de France.

"I'm really sorry, so sorry," Di Biagio said.

Di Biagio joined Roberto Baggio as shootout goats. Baggio, who made his penalty kick against France, sent that final shot high above the crossbar in Pasadena, Calif., four years ago to hand Brazil victory.

"It's hard to go out of the World Cup this way," said Demetrio Albertini, who missed early in the shootout series.

Bixente Lizarazu of France missed his shot on the same round and the teams stayed even until the very end.

"We didn't lose our nerves" Jacquet said. "In the end, the best team won."

France will come back to the national stadium on Wednesday to play the winner of Saturday's Germany-Croatia match.

The shootout, the second of France 98, came after two hours of physical play and refined tactics could not separate the two. France dominated, outshooting the Italians by 31-10. Italy didn't get its first corner kick until the third minute of the second-half injury time.

"We just wanted this victory more than the Italians did," French captain Didier Deschamps said.

Yet Italy almost won the game in overtime. Twelve minutes into sudden death, Baggio took a long pass from Angelo Di Livio and volleyed the ball without controlling it. It swerved just past the far post.

Twelve minutes later, Youri Djorkaeff had a scoring chance off a pass from Thierry Henry, but the French forward could not lift the ball over his Inter Milan teammate, goalkeeper Gianluca Pagliuca.

So it came down to penalties and the heartstopping moments.

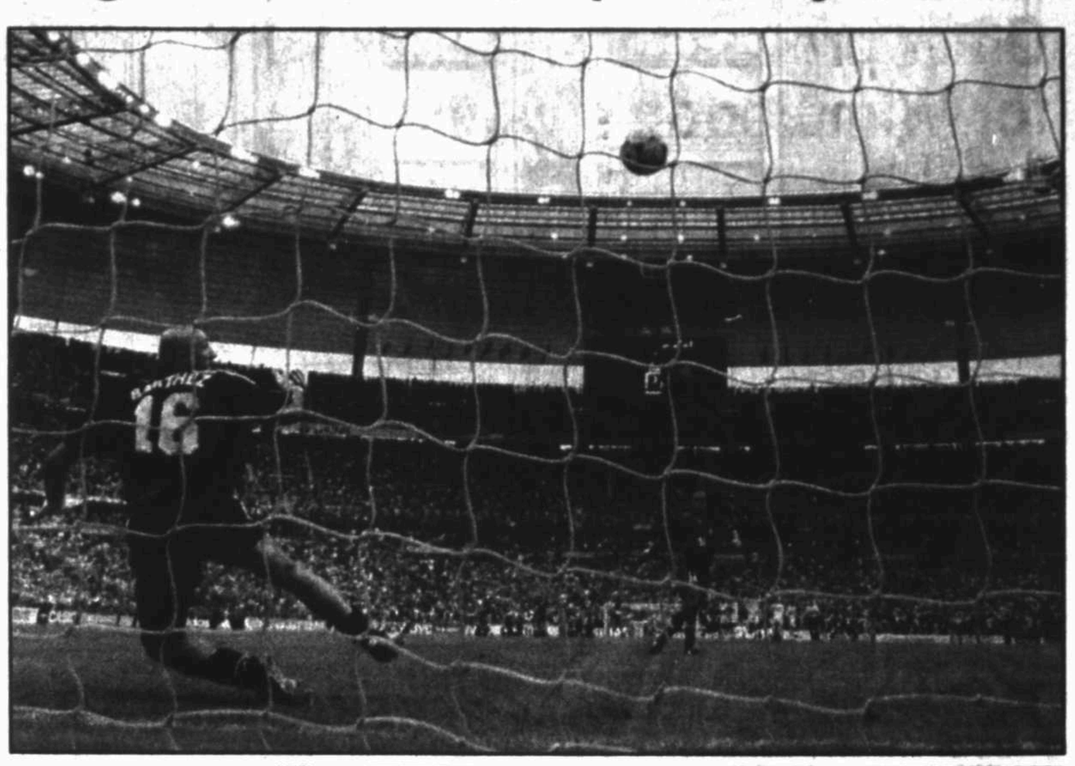

Even Chirac was spellbound.

"This is true happiness after total stress," said France's first fan.

Christian Vieri, co-leader of the tournament's scoring list with five goals, had a pair of early chances but then was held in check by France's defense, whose only goal allowed was on a penalty kick.

Seven of France's starting lineup play or have recently played in Italy, including Zidane, making a comeback after missing two games because of suspension.

Although players on both sides were friends, the game was rough, with 50 fouls called and five yellow cards issued.

Comets' Swoopes released from hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Comets forward Sheryl Swoopes was discharged from a hospital on Friday after treatment for dehydration that had caused her to collapse a day earlier during practice.

The 27-year-old Swoopes began sweating and then collapsed Thursday. She remained overnight at Methodist Hospital after doctors diagnosed the dehydration.

"She went from a standing position to down on the floor. She just dropped immediately," Comets spokesman Tom Savage said. "It was a scary moment for her and us."

Swoopes missed Friday night's home game against Sacramento.

"She is also doubtful for our game Monday in Cleveland, but may join us in New York on Wednesday," Savage said.

The former Texas Tech standout left Methodist between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m., said hospital spokeswoman Kathryn Tesar.

The Comets said doctors had ordered intravenous fluids for Swoopes during her hospital stay.

"Part of it is that she did not eat a very good breakfast that morning," Savage said. "Then she had a pretty intense workout and didn't drink a lot of fluids. On top of that, it's hot down here and our gym is hot. It all just kind of caught up with her."

Letter leads to Blues signing Courtnall

By R.B. Fallstrom
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS — A letter from Geoff Courtnall's sons to St. Louis Blues management might have helped him land a three-year contract.

"My 8-year-old wrote it for fun and signed it," Courtnall said. "I never saw it. If I would have, I probably never would have let him send it."

After signing Courtnall on Thursday, two days after he became an unrestricted free agent, Pleau said he'll frame the letter and hang it in his office.

"He's a classy guy," Pleau said.

The letter from Courtnall's sons, who both play youth hockey in St. Louis, was brief and to the point.

"Dear Mr. Pleau: We love St. Louis and we'd like to stay. Please work to sign our dad. Sincerely, Justin and Adam Courtnall."

The signing came two days after the Blues decided they wouldn't try to re-sign Brett Hull, their career scoring leader. That gave them enough money to keep Courtnall, 35, who led the team with 31 goals and was third in scoring with 62 points.

Courtnall, who's perhaps most valuable as an agitator, had been seeking a package in the $10 million range.

"He's a guy that really gives us energy on the ice," Pleau said. "It's something we felt real good about."

Hull became the last of the four Blues who could have been unrestricted free agents by signing today with Dallas. Defenseman Steve Duchesne signed with the Los Angeles Kings on Thursday, and the Blues signed all-star defenseman Al MacInnis to a three-year, $15 million contract last month.

The Blues hadn't been negotiating with Duchesne.

"We were just talking with Geoff and looking at forwards, and kind of keeping an eye on defense," Pleau said. "When you've got limited funds, you can't just go out and spend."

Reports: Blackhawks agree with Gilmour

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Blackhawks signed veteran free-agent center Doug Gilmour to a multi-year contract on Friday after giving up on landing Brett Hull.

The Blackhawks would not disclose contract terms, but the Chicago Sun-Times and WMAQ-AM quoted team sources saying Gilmour agreed to a three-year deal worth $18 million. He had been with the New Jersey Devils.

Chicago had been in the running to sign Hull, but dropped out in favor of Gilmour.

Hull signed a three-year, $17 million contract with the Dallas Stars on Friday, hours after his agent was told Hull was out of the picture in Chicago.

"It was not possible for us to (sign both Gilmour and Hull)," Blackhawks general manager Bob Murray said. "I've got a couple of other things I want to get done."

"We took the guy who's going to help the hockey team the most," he said.

The Blackhawks also announced the signing of 6-foot-3, 212-pound free-agent center Mark Janssens to a multi-year deal Friday.

Gilmour, 35, has averaged 25 goals per season over his 15-year NHL career.

SIGN: Hull comes off 27-goal season in 1998

(From 1B)

with the opening of the free agency period Wednesday morning and ending late Thursday, Stars owner Tom Hicks made it clear that he's had his eye on Hull.

Though Hull is coming off a disappointing season where he scored a career-low 27 goals, it is Hull's offensive skill that Dallas coveted most.

"We believed we needed to improve our goal scoring and I think we did that," Hicks said at a news conference announcing Hull's signing.

Still up in the air is the chemistry between Hull and his new teammates and Hull's application to Dallas' defense-first system. Hull has earned a reputation as a self-centered player quick to shirk his defensive duties in recent years.

General manager Bob Gainey was confident that Hull would be a valuable asset. A knee injury to center Joe Nieuwendyk in the first game of the playoffs severely hampered the Stars offense.

"We think he'll blend and mesh with the team we have," Gainey said. "As an athlete, he is capable of participating in a lot of different ways with our team."

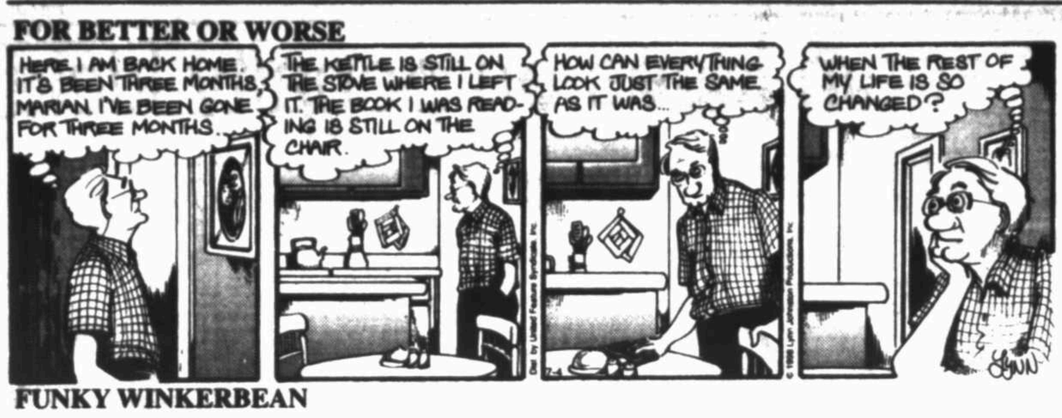

There was no word yet on whether Hull will play on the left side, as he did for much of last season, or whether he will stay at right wing.

Hull acknowledged the importance of defense in Dallas' system, but had no illusions about why he was brought to Texas.

"Whatever Coach Hitchcock wants me to do, I will, but I've spent a lot of years in this league scoring goals and I think that's my job," Hull said.

Influential Washington gay couple splits up

BOSTON — After more than a decade as Washington's most prominent and influential gay couple, Rep. Barney Frank and his partner, Herb Moses, have separated.

Frank, 58, said Friday that the reason for the breakup "is nobody's business," but that the two split amicably.

"They provided the definition for how elected couples can serve public life with dignity and authenticity," said Kerry Lobel, executive director for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

Moses, 41, recently left an executive position at the Federal National Mortgage Association to open a pottery studio.

Moses was the first partner of an openly gay member of Congress to receive spousal access privileges through the Capitol, although the decision was controversial.

"I know I speak for most members when I state that the only Moses we like to hear about on this House floor is our Moses of Exodus, Moses the lawgiver, Moses of the Ten Commandments," former Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., told the House in 1996.

WASHINGTON — Sherman Alexie knows that other up-and-comers in the movie business have said it before, but he really means it: He doesn't care about money.

"Money is the root of all evil. It's a cliche, but it's a true cliche," said Alexie, the 31-year-old writer and producer of "Smoke Signals," a new film by and about Indians that was honored at this year's Sundance Film Festival by other independent filmmakers.

"Every producer, actor and writer in Hollywood has sat on couches like this one at the beginning of careers and told reporters the same thing I'm telling you now. And then you interview them a year later and they've got the BMW, they've got the big house and they're making 'Godzilla,'" he said in Friday's Washington Post. "It's not going to happen to me."

LOS ANGELES — George Clooney has finally found a movie that needs no apologies.

"No one is expecting this movie to make a billion dollars," Clooney said of "Out of Sight," in which he plays a bank robber who falls for a federal marshal. The film opened last weekend and debuted at No. 3.

"We'd just like to get some good word-of-mouth and hang around for a while. I tell you, though, it's awfully nice sitting here talking to you about a movie that I can unabashedly say I love," he said.

Clooney's string of so-so flicks — including "From Dusk Till Dawn," "One Fine Day," "Batman & Robin" and "The Peacemaker" — have failed to give him the acclaim he receives from his role on NBC's "ER."

"All those movies were good breaks, especially considering where I was coming from," Clooney said. "And, yeah, if I had been better, they probably would have been better, too."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — "The Client" actor Brad Renfro has agreed to a plea deal that should allow him to avoid a trial on cocaine and marijuana charges.

15-year-old Brad Renfro agreed Thursday to be screened randomly for drugs.

The 15-year-old Knoxville native agreed Thursday to be screened randomly for drugs and evaluated for any substance abuse problems, The Knoxville News-Sentinel reported Friday.

If he stays out of trouble for six months, prosecutors will recommend the case not be pursued and he will have no juvenile criminal record.

"I made out pretty good," Renfro said, adding that he never used cocaine.

Renfro and his cousin were stopped June 3 for suspicion of drunken driving. Police said Singleton was drunk, driving without a license and had a bag of what appeared to be drugs in his underwear. Renfro had two baggies of cocaine and marijuana in his sock.

Renfro's lawyer had argued that police had no compelling reason to search the boy.

NEW YORK — Central Park has been the home to big-time musical productions. It will soon be the subject of one.

Playwrights A.R. Gurney, Terrence McNally and Wendy Wasserstein have been commissioned to write librettos for three one-act operas about the park, which will be performed as one show.

"Central Park" will be held at Glimmerglass Opera in Cooperstown next summer, followed by six performances at the New York City Opera.

The New York City Opera, Glimmerglass and the public station WNET's Great Performances have also asked three young composers to write the music: Deborah Drattell, Michael Torke and Robert Beaser.

Wasserstein wrote "The Sisters Rosensweig" and "The Heidi Chronicles." Gurney specializes in plays about Anglo-Saxons, and McNally wrote "Love! Valour! Compassion!" and the book for the musical "Ragtime."

Inspiration

If a man is called to be a streetsweeper, he should sweep streets even as Michelangelo painted, or Beethoven played music, or Shakespeare wrote poetry. He should sweep streets so well that all the hosts of heaven and earth will pause to say, here lived a great streetsweeper who did his job well.

Midland woman takes gospel to local parks

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

No stranger to missionary work, Midlander Gloria Youngblood's calling to take the gospel from the church to the local parks has focused the efforts of many Christians.

There have been several of these gatherings, most at Dennis The Menace Park, that include where the Christian group that shares Ms. Youngblood's vision provides two hours of music, testimony and worship.

The group has dubbed these park services the Tree of Life Ministries, after the tree of life mentioned in the book of Revelations, the fruit of which conveys everlasting life to those who eat of it.

Reaching the lost is the mission of the Gospel, and Ms. Youngblood was one day struck by the realization that the lost are often not found in the churches.

"God placed it in my heart," she said of her calling.

Ms. Youngblood has been a partner in several missionary trips to Mexico and South America, and is preparing to travel to Africa later this year.

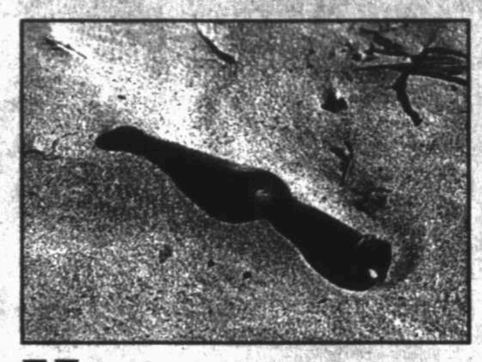

The philosophy that has built the Tree of Life Ministries in recent months is one of allowing divine inspiration to direct the course of the meetings.

Those Christians who participate each fulfill needs as they arise, from handing out toys to the children who come, to passing out refreshments to listening to standing up and testifying about their faith.

Some are musicians, solo singers, choral groups, even clowns. Ms. Youngblood's specialty is performing puppet drama displays with a Christian motif.

There is no program. The group allows the service to unfold as people are called upon to take the lead. "We

UNANSWERED PRAYERS?

Photos by Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Everywhere you look, there are signs of dryness where the only things sprouting up in West Texas fields are empty bottles and weeds.

If even ministers are praying for rain, why hasn't it?

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Last Sunday, in churches across the Permian Basin, ministers, regardless their denomination, stood before their congregations and prayed for rain, and likely for some relief from the torrid heat.

It is a prayer that is being prayed more frequently these days by clerics and lay persons alike. The hot, dry weather is relentless. Twenty-seven days over 100 so far. At one point last month, 14 in a row surpassed the century mark. Rain has totaled less than two inches this year in many areas.

The record heat and dry weather parches the land, damages crops, harms the young and old, causes our cars to overheat, spreads a general malaise over some and contributes to surly attitudes in others.

About the only good that can come out of the heat is you can fry a good two-minute egg on your driveway if your stove goes out.

So with all the heat — and all the prayers being devoted to the miserable conditions — why hasn't God given us more of a break? The only relief of late has been a stretch this week where the mercury plummeted to the low and mid 90's.

Taking the stress out of joining

■ Public acceptance gives way to private conversations with ministers, preferable to those who fear crowds.

By Laurie Fox
Associated Press

DALLAS — Doug Skinner, pastor of Northway Christian Church in North Dallas, has learned something from his weekly invitation to membership at the end of Sunday services.

"There are some people who'd rather have a root canal than to get up in front of others" to join the church, he said.

Larry and Beth Rice know exactly what he means. For weeks, the couple watched other prospective members troop up to the front of First United Methodist Church of Duncanville for the "altar call," the Protestant tradition of professing faith in Jesus Christ or transferring membership to a church.

"At the end of service you sort of subconsciously feel that everyone's waiting to leave because of you," Larry Rice said. "We knew that it was supposed to be a public statement, but getting up there in front of everyone was sort of overwhelming."

The Rices joined the church recently through what Larry Rice calls the "low-stress" option — a private conversation with the pastor that allows people to ask more questions and become confident in their decision.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A MORMON

Editor's Note: In our recurring "What It Means ..." series, Religion Page Editor Jimmy Patterson talks with representatives of different faiths in the Permian Basin. This month, a talk with Lloyd Hales, Odessa stake president of the Church of Jesus Christ-Latter Day Saints.

What is a Mormon?

We believe the Bible to be the word of God and that the restoration of the gospel was given through the prophet Joseph Smith. About 600 B.C., a group led by the prophet Joseph was commanded by God to leave Jerusalem and, under the direction of God, traveled and arrived at the American continent. The Book of Mormon is the writings of the prophets who lived amongst those people. The church was organized in 1830. The Book of Mormon was published prior to that. Mormon was one of the final prophets to write. He abridged many of the writings of those prophets, therefore his name was given to the Book of Mormon.

Do Mormons consider the Book of Mormon to be an actual book of the Bible?

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Lloyd Hales, Odessa stake president for the Church of Jesus Christ-Latter Day Saints.

We believe it to be scripture just as the Bible is scripture. Ezekial prophesied there would be a stick (or writing) of Joseph and a stick of Judah and the prophets. We believe the Bible to be the stick of Judah and the book of Mormon to be the stick of Joseph and the book of Mormon tells that after the crucifixion

Some Catholics favor return to Latin Mass

By Tom Kirchofer
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine — In the 1980s, the only way Bob Beaurivage could attend the traditional Latin Mass he knew as a child was to travel out-of-state for private services with a priest friend.

Today, he attends the traditional Mass each week, but not as a renegade sneaking across borders. The service is in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, the seat of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in Maine.

Now he has plenty of company. "All we're trying to do," Beaurivage says," is hold on to the faith as it was taught throughout the centuries."

AP Laserphoto

Mass said in latin is back in favor for a growing number of Catholics in Maine.

For hundreds of years, Latin was the official language of Roman Catholic worship. Under the Vatican II reforms of the 1960s, the traditional Mass gave way to a simplified and modernized version recited in native tongues.

Take a cue from Zacchaeus: Climb spiritual trees

I can empathize with the rich tax collector, Zacchaeus (Luke 19: 1-10), who climbed a tree to see Jesus.

Think of it . . . a rich man climbing a tree! Was there no regard for dignitaries when Jesus came to town? Zacchaeus' act forces me to recount one of my childhood experiences.

Kituku

The thought of climbing a tree brings both sweet and bitter memories to me. The sweet memories are of times my friends and I climbed trees to pick fruit, to play or search for dead branches to be used as firewood. Rarely did we leave home to go for a tree-climbing expedition. We climbed trees while doing other activities such as swimming or while taking care of livestock.

The last time I recall climbing a tree was in the early 70s. This time, we left home prepared to climb a tree not to eat fruit, get firewood or play. Poverty was the driving factor.

The community of Kangundo had started conducting an annual agricultural fair. The fairground was fenced with one main entrance where people bought their tickets before entering the grounds. While inside, they saw agricultural produce and displays of government developmental projects. Traditional dancers, a military band and national soccer teams entertained the patrons.

I lived with traditional dancers, and we played soccer daily, so I was not interested in those events or the government projects. But I was deterrnined to see the military band play, even though I had left home without any money. My mother had taught me some of the tunes they played. I wanted to hear them sung by this special group that seldom toured in our area. To see the baton being thrown up into the air and then caught, to observe the different formations, and to hear those loud drums was intriguing for a young boy to imagine.

My friends and I climbed trees that were taller than the fence so that we could see the military band play.

Zacchaeus climbed a tree because he was short and wanted to see Jesus. I don't know whether he left his home with the plan already laid out, or whether the idea came after he was there with the crowd and realized that he couldn't to see Jesus unless he stood on a higher spot.

I wonder whether he thought about what others would say about his action. Was he concerned about being ridiculed by his associates? What thoughts ran through his mind as he sat in that sycamore tree? Was he expecting Jesus to look up?

Zacchaeus wanted see Jesus. Jesus' miracles had been told all over, and Zacchaeus must have evaluated the circumstances that could prevent him from seeing Jesus. He must have wanted to see for himself what others had been talking about. He came up with only one limitation, his height, and he devised a strategy to overcome. Climb a tree. To do this, he humbled himself to a point that it didn't matter what others were to say of his action. Then he took a step of faith to act on his decision.

Jesus knew where Zacchaeus was and why. When He arrived in the place where the sycamore tree grew, He looked up and told Zacchaeus to climb down quickly. Jesus was to stay in Zaccaeus' house. I can't imagine Zacchaeus' thoughts as he was climbing down, but I believe he was satisfied beyond mea-

Remodeling work at Grace Lutheran nears completion

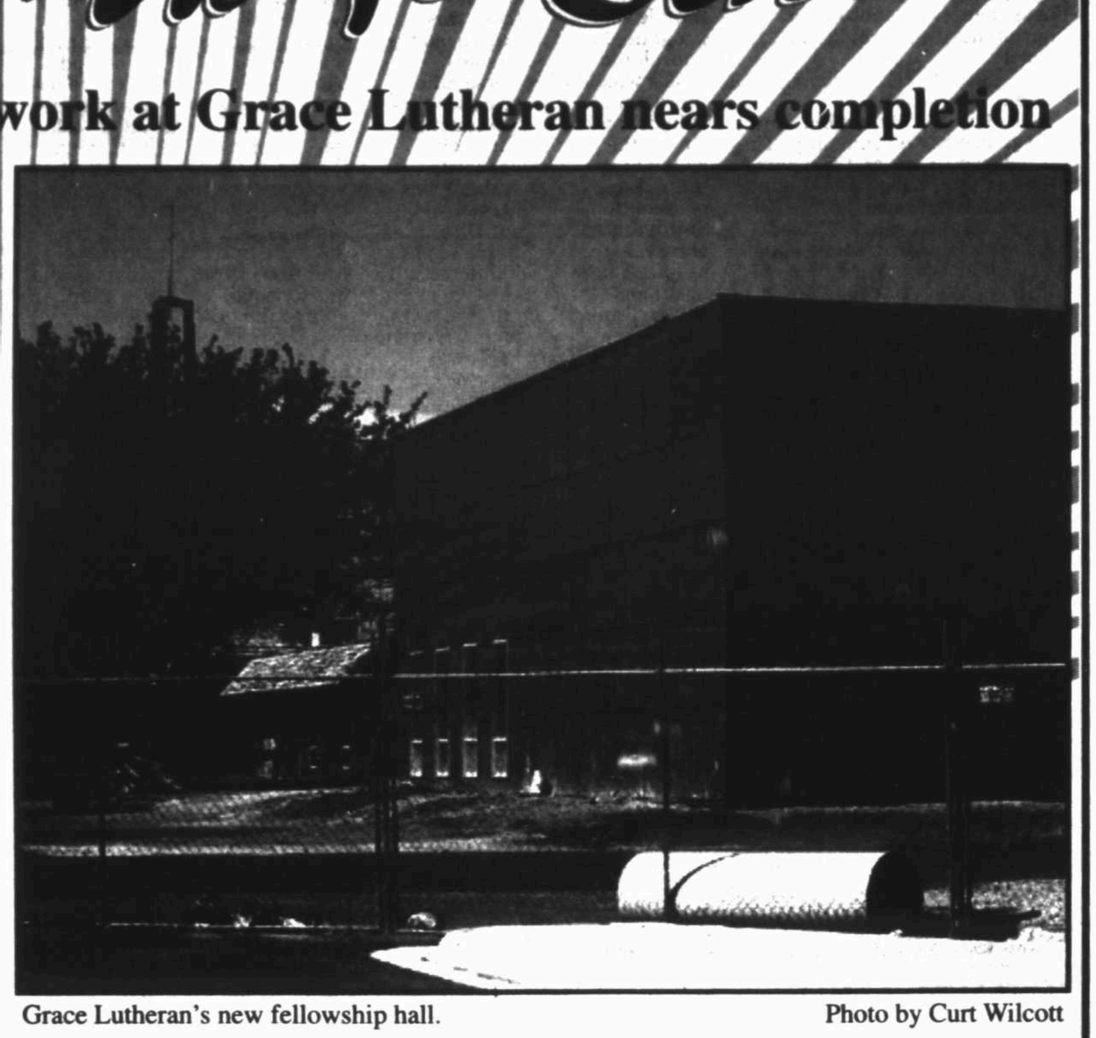

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Eight months after construction workers turned their first spade in a $1.4 million remodeling effort at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course, that work is nearing a completion. And church members can hardly contain themselves.

"We're really doing pretty well," Grace Lutheran pastor Larry Krueger said. "We had hoped to be done by mid-August but it really looks more like the end of August or September. In construction terms to me that' s pretty good. Everything keeps coming up. The outside structure is up and there's a lot of work on the interior being done right now, such as cabinets, shelves, painting and mechanical work."

The remodeling includes a new fellowship hall on the north side of the existing building at Grace Lutheran; an enlarged narthex, almost two-thirds larger than the present one; a music practice room; a church parlor and bride's room; additional classrooms and office space; an enlarged youth room and storage; additional parking and additional rest rooms, and a covered entryway entering the church from a circular drive.

"Our vision is to be a caring and supportive Lutheran congregation enabling people in the Midland community to reach their maximum potential for Jesus Christ by fostering Christian growth, spiritually and relationally; Christian outreach, in witness and service, and Christian development, for youth and families," Krueger said last November near the beginning of the effort. "With the success of this program, we can expand our facilities to meet the ministry needs in our community."

Upon completion, Grace Lutheran, with a congregation of 500, will hold a dedication, planned for Sept. 27, and will follow that with a Christian Family Fair, Oct. 10. Although in the early planning stages, the fair will consist of food, music, skits, crafts, games and hands-on activities in every room of the new and existing facility.

The theme of the effort and stewardship program, "Not Equal Giving, But Equal Sacrifice," according to Krueger, "challenges us to do the extraordinary, to give over and above sacrificially. The theme reminds us we can all have an equal part in God's work."

Three years ago, Grace's Voters' Assembly recognized the need for an expanded church facility. The list of inadequacies was long and affected many areas of the church. Sunday school classes, for instance, have met in church hallways because of lack of classroom space. Choir members have had difficulties finding rehearsal areas that will accommodate members, not to mention the sanctuary balcony, which is hardly able to accommodate the ensemble.

"It's not just about building a building," Krueger said when ground was broken. We're here to expand the ministry into the community. If it was just a building, we might as well give it up. We're trying to fulfill a vision God has given us."

MORMONS: Odessa stake has almost 3,000 members and resurrection of Jesus, after he taught his apostles and appeared many times in Jerusalem, he organized his church there and taught his gospel.

(From 1C)

What is a stake?

The church and membership is organized geographically. The larger branch is a stake, which encompasses wards. In Midland, there are two chapels, three wards and one branch. Presiding over each ward is a bishop, and a president at each branch. The term stake comes from an Old Testament term, where it says a tent is held in firm position by the stake. That's the basic organizational unit of the church. I am president of the Odessa stake, which covers 15 congregations including Midland, Odessa, Alpine, Seminole, Snyder, Big Lake, Fort Stockton, Monahans, Andrews, Seminole and Big Spring.

What are the origins of the Mormon church?

The profit Joseph Smith, as a young boy, was seeking to know which church he would join. He said when reading the scripture in the book of James, he was moved through prayer that he could come to know which church he should join, and early one morning he left his family home and went to a grove of trees to be secluded, desiring to know what to do. His testimony was that, as he prayed, a pillar of light descended upon him and became brighter and brighter and there, two personages visited him: God the Father, and Jesus Christ. He was told he should not join any church in which the fullness of the gospel had been lost. According to the prophecies that had been given to the prophets in ancient time, restoration would take place over a period of time through the visitation of heavenly messengers, including John the Baptist, Peter, James and John. The authority to administer the ordinances was bestowed upon Joseph Smith and he was commanded to organize the church in 1830.

Where did these events take place?

Joseph Smith's first vision took place in Palmira, NY

How did it come that the Mormons settled in Salt Lake City?

When the Book of Mormon was translated by Joseph Smith — and during or following the first vision — over a period of time immediately after that he visited with a local minister close to the family and told him of his experience, and he was really ridiculed. He was told that there are no visions, nobody has visions anymore, and from that time he received quite a bit of persecution. A period of time passed and as he prayed again for fuller guidance, one evening a heavenly messenger appeared to him and introduced himself and said his name was Moroni. Moroni was the last prophet to write in the book of Mormon.

Mormon was Moroni's father. Prior to the organization of the church, there was a great deal of persecution, so the church moved in to Ohio and built a temple there, and there was a great deal of persecution, so the church moved to Missouri. There was further persecution there, and they were driven into Illinois, and on the Commerce River, they built a large city, which at the time was larger than Chicago. Again there was persecution, and in 1844 Joseph Smith and his brother Hiram were taken from Navu and put in jail. A mob broke into the jail in Illinois and shot Joseph and Hiram Smith to death. Following that, the followers were given an edict to leave Illinois. It was winter time and it was so cold that the river froze over, and under the direction of Brigham Young (who became head of the church after Smith's murder) the saints migrated and settled in Salt Lake City.

What position did Brigham Young hold prior to Smith's death?

At the time Joseph Smith was president of the church, Brigham Young was the president of the Quorum of the 12 Apostles. As the senior apostle, Brigham Young became head of the church.

What are some of the common misconceptions of the Mormon church?

There's been a significant amount of discussion lately about whether or not we're Christians. We profess that we are and that the church is known as the Church of Jesus Christ, the name of Latter Day Saints meaning latter day times. But one of our basic beliefs and articles of faith written by Joseph Smith states that we believe in God the eternal father and his son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. The third states that through the atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved by the obediences of the laws and the ordinances of the gospel. We believe the same gospel that has been taught by the prophets of God through all the angels of time and through the prophets that have been recorded in the Old Testament. We believe they knew of the coming of Christ, and that the coming of the Savior and his atonement is the most significant event that ever happened. We believe God spoke to the prophets in ancient time and we believe he speaks to prophets today.

Do Mormons still practice polygamy?

The church's stance is that we do not practice polygamy.

Maybe something not well known is that polygamy was banned a long time ago by the church, and when Joseph Smith did practice it, he treated his wives with much respect.

Yes, we believe at that time it was a commandment of God. Through the persecution, there were many who died and many widows who had no one to take care of them. In 1890, through the president of church, Wilford Woodruff, he was commanded by God at that time to issue a manifesto that polygamy was not to be practiced anymore. And to do so today, anyone who did so would lose their membership to the church.

Is the church continuing to grow?

Yes. There is in excess of 10 million totally, and in the last year or two over half of that membership is outside of the United States and Canada. Our main area of growth right now is in Mexico and in Central and South America

What is your membership in West Texas?

In the Odessa stake there are between 2,900-3,000 members.

Do Mormons believe that the only way to heaven is belief in the Mormon way of thought?

As I stated, through the atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved by obedience through the laws and ordinances of the gospel. We believe all may follow through the dictates of their own conscience, but we believe God did restore the fullness of the gospel and priestly authority, and we have been commanded to preach the gospel throughout the earth. We claim the privilege of worshiping almighty God through the dictates of our own conscience and allow all men the same privilege. Let them worship how, where or what they may, but in answer to your question, we believe the full gospel has been restored and within that restoration is the authority to administer the ordinances of the gospel and to receive the full blessings of the gospel you need to receive those ordinances. The fourth article of faith is that we believe that the principals and ordinances of the gospel are, first, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, repentance; third, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and, fourth, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The fifth article of faith says we believe that a man must be called of God by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands by those who are in authority to preach the gospel and administer the ordinances.

STRESS: Few churches doing away with altar altogether

(From 1C)

"This is no lesser commitment to the church," said Dr. Clayton Oliphint, who has "low-stress Sundays" several times a year. "I don't think God necessarily cares about the time or the place. If getting up in front of everyone is the barrier, we remove it."

From Southern Baptists to Methodists, Protestant churches are creating alternatives to altar calls to lure the more reserved, sometimes shy, churchgoer.

That pleases some worshipers, but others see the alternative altar calls as an affront to tradition.

"The question becomes, are we diluting an important part of what makes the church special?" asked Scott Jones, the McCreless chair of evangelism at Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology. "There is a lot of experimentation going on right now, and we're looking for ways to remove cultural barriers.

"But one way to bring a new member into the church is to bring that person in front of the congregation. There's a bonding that takes place, and people expect that."

Yet pastors also want to make sure their churches keep growing at a time when many are battling declining membership.

Oliphint said, for example, that 20 percent of the 100 or so new members who have joined the Duncanville church since January chose the low-stress option. Would they have joined otherwise?

"People have their reasons for not wanting to be the center of attention," said Carol Miller, the first member of Oliphint's church to join without answering the traditional altar call. "If it weren't for this other choice, I'd probably still be attending church and giving my donation but not be a full member."

Few churches are doing away with the altar call altogether. Instead, they're just offering another option.

KITUKU: Everyone deserves God's mercy

(From 1C)

sure with the result of his actions.

At Zacchaeus' house, Jesus made it known that Zacchaeus, the hated tax collector, deserved God's mercy, like everybody else. Salvation had entered his house.

All of us need to climb spiritual trees, humbling ourselves to seek God's salvation. In one way or another, we are spiritually of short stature. We must ignore what others will say, shedding off the superficial and temporal social status that may interfere with our humility.

Do you need divine healing, restoration of harmony in your family, help with quitting substance abuse, rekindling of unfulfilled dreams or divine direction in a decision to be made? If we climb our 'Spiritual Trees' with a definite purpose, we can derive the same spiritual benefits, forgiveness, salvation, love, peace and hope of eternal life, as Zacchaeus did.

LATIN: Vestment, priest's stance differs in Latin mass

(From 1C)

Nationwide, the centuries-old gesture of piety known as the Tridentine Mass is growing in popularity — and in controversy.

The Rev. Gregory Coiro, spokesman for the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, fears the resurgence of the traditional Mass could create a division among the world's nearly 1 billion Roman Catholics.

"We will have people worshipping in a pre-Vatican II mode, and we will have people worshipping in a post-Vatican II mode," Coiro says.

That opinion doesn't hold sway with the Rev. Calvin Goodwin, who says Portland's weekly Tridentine Mass.

"The old Mass is not going to replace the new Mass," says Goodwin, who was ordained in 1979, well after Vatican II reforms. "The best way to achieve division is to continue to marginalize and deny people who want the old Mass."

Beaurivage, a 42-year-old textile worker from Sanford, won't say exactly where he would visit the priest out-of-state when he began attending traditional Masses in the 1980s. While Maine church officials did not allow the rite, but his priest friend had special permission to say the Mass privately.

Now that traditional Latin Masses are more acceptable, Beaurivage goes to services closer to home.

About 150 people attend Sunday afternoon Mass in Latin along with Beaurivage at the cathedral in Portland. The traditional Mass also is offered once a month up the coast in Newcastle, and negotiations are under way for a traditional Mass in Lewiston.

The traditional Mass is more formal than the modern Mass, and the perky guitar-driven songs found in many modern Masses are nowhere to be heard.

The priest wears more elaborate vestments and faces away from the worshippers in a gesture meant to show the entire congregation standing together before God.

Women cover their heads with lace cloths to conform to a long-standing tradition designed to keep men's attention focused squarely on the spiritual.

Beaurivage recalls the Masses of his childhood as more reverent. And, he says, "one prays to God in the manner that I believe suits him the best."

The Coalition in Support of Ecclesia Dei, an organization based in Illinois that works to restore the traditional Mass, says 120 of the 185 dioceses in the United States now offer the Mass, up from a handful 10 years ago.

The coalition is named for a statement Pope John Paul II made in 1988 that "respect must everywhere be shown for the feelings of those who are attached to the Latin liturgical tradition."

PRAYER: Six principals necessary when talking to God

(From 1C)

Is God not answering our prayers? Is he avoiding even the heavenly requests of the clergy?

"Our timing and God's timing are often completely different," said Allen Whitman, retired rector at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and now a spiritual guidance director. "Our will and God' s will will often be different. Anytime I pray, I'm reporting for duty.

"There' s an old joke: in Isaiah, the Bible says, 'Speak Lord, your servant heareth.' We often turn that around and say, 'Listen Lord, your servant speaketh.' "

Whitman said the object of prayer should not be to request something that we desire, but to be closer to God. Prayer, Whitman said, "often opens me up to a more powerful relationship with God. We often just pray for the fruits and not for the relationship."

If the fruit, in this situation, is a 100 percent chance of rain instead of 100 degrees of mercury, does that mean our prayers are going unanswered?

"I think all prayers are answered," said Larry Krueger, pastor at Grace Lutheran church. "I don't think any go unanswered. The answers are 'yes,' 'no' and 'wait,' just like any other question.

"As for the rain, far be it from me to get into the mind of God to find out how come we have to wait for an answer right now. God always does things for a purpose and as far as what that purpose is, we may figure it out, we may not. God works all things for a purpose."

Six common principals of prayer, according to Krueger, include:

■ Humility. We approach God through Jesus Christ.

■ Sincerity. "You're not gonna fool God," Krueger said "He knows what you're thinking."

■ Confidence. Don't offer prayer as a last resort. "I've heard people say sometimes, 'I guess there's nothing left to do but pray.' My thought is . . . why not pray first?" Krueger said.

■ Submission. Pray and the Lord's will be done, Krueger said.

■ Unselfishness. Pray not just for yourself, but for others.

■ Persistence. God wants us to continue to come to him in prayer. "He doesn't expect us to stop asking for it if we haven't received it, and that pertains even to the rain issue," Krueger said.

Krueger said that ultimately, God does all things for his glorification. But how a lack of rain in West Texas contributes to that glorification is certainly confusing.

"As for the angle of trying to identify something of nature as being some punishment from God, I shy away from that," Krueger said. "You're getting into trouble there. You would be interpreting the mind of God and you don't know what to interpret. Scripture tells us rain comes on the just and on the unjust. When it rains, it rains on both the just and the unjust, and when it doesn't it's on both the just and the unjust."

Whitman said God may have a purpose that mere mortals may not understand fully.

"Just like we pray for someone to become well when they are ill," Whitman said. "When you pray for them, you bring them to God and release them over to God. They don't always get well, but that doesn't mean they can't have a deeper relationship with God."

Like Krueger, Whitman said he is not aligned with people who feel tornadoes and other natural disasters are the result of God' s will.

"I have far more confidence in the love of God than that," Whitman said.

And just because our prayers haven't yet been answered in terms that we can understand, Whitman said, doesn't mean we can't continue to ask for rain.

"Let me assure you," he said, "that I will continue to pray for rain and cooler weather and that the jet stream will eventually shift."

PARKS: Program is lighthearted, warm

just show up and see how it goes ... it looks like a program to the public ... we just leave it in God's hands," she said.

The program is kept lighthearted and warm, with very little actual preaching.

"The whole thing is to take the message of Jesus Christ into the city of Midland," she said. "We're just there to have fun and hope they get the message — we don't pressure anyone," she said.

"It's time for the Christians to get out of the pews and into the streets," she said.

While Ms. Youngblood is from Crestview Baptist Church, the Tree of Life group comes from several churches, and anyone who feels lead to take part in any way is welcome to join the team, she explained.

"Anyone can be a part, no matter what their age ... they don't need any special skills," she said. "God uses different people at different times to deliver different messages."

Another meeting has been planned tentatively for July 18 at Dennis the Menace Park.

One successful meeting happened at Hogan Park, and plans are being made to utilize all of the city parks, spreading their message of salvation through Christ to every part of the city.

The programs usually begin about 1 p.m., but this might be changed at some point to escape the summer heat. The group plans to continue the meetings, about two each month, through the summer and into October.

Anyone wishing to know more about the Tree of Life Ministries, how to be a part or when and where the next meeting will be — should call Ms. Youngblood at 520-0301.

Toyota PreRunner truck mixes off-road gear with 2-wheel grip

New Car News

BY BOB PLUNKETT

BORREGO SPRINGS, Calif. — In the gritty off-pavement world 4-wheeling truck racing, drivers often need to drive a rugged course like the Baja 1000 in advance of a race to check out nuances of the route, yet they don't want to risk damaging finely tuned race vehicles in the preview run.

To protect the race equipment, these reconnaissance trips are typically conducted in 2-wheel-drive pickups modified with beefy 4-wheel-drive suspension systems and raised platforms to withstand the rigors of running at high speed over rough terrain.

Such a preview truck in off-road race circles is known as a pre-runner.

These custom-built trucks, which closely resemble the 4x4 off-road racers, rarely venture away from a race course.

Now, however, a new customized pickup emerges from the 1998 truck line of inventive Toyota, the automaker from Japan with various North American production plants, and it bears that preview truck's name: PreRunner.

Derived from Toyota's popular compact truck, PreRunner looks like a hunky 4x4 XtraCab version of the Tacoma pickup with high stance and muscular flared fenders.

It packs the boosted power of either the 4-cylinder or V6 engine available for a 4x4 Tacoma, as well as the 4-wheeler's ride height and suspension system, including an optional off-road suspension package and on-demand full-locking rear differential.

In fact, PreRunner carries all of the features of the 4x4 Tacoma, save for a front-wheel-drive assembly.

What's the point?

Consumer research conducted by Toyota reveals that many 4x4 truck owners rarely if ever take their vehicles off-pavement, which suggests that they're riding around with pricy 4-wheel-drive hardware not utilized.

More surveys show that the elevated cost of a 4x4 truck puts that vehicle beyond the reach of some who desire the rugged look and stance of an off-road pickup.

PreRunner can satisfy both of these groups by providing a rugged pickup with the high stance and sturdy suspension of a 4x4 truck — and thousands of dollars shaved from the price tag.

A comparison of price points between PreRunner 4x2 and Tacoma 4x4 Xtracab shows the savings. With base engine, the suggested retail list price of PreRunner runs to $17,238, but it's $19,298 for the 4x4. With optional V6, PreRunner comes to $18,168, while the 4x4 equivalent hits $20,388.

Standard engine for PreRunner amounts to a 2.7-liter in-line-4. It produces 150 hp from a cast iron block with aluminum alloy heads and balanced shafts, four valves in every cylinder and twin cams on top.

The optional 3.4-liter V6, also built from an iron block with aluminum heads and dual overhead cams, pumps the output to 190 hp, then builds torque to 220 lbs/ft. This plant acts particularly strong in lower gear ranges, and for hauling chores it elevates the trailer towing capacity to 5,000 lbs.

A 4-speed electronic automatic shifter is standard.

Like the 4x4 edition, PreRunner stretches wheel tracks wider than a 4x2 Tacoma to improve stability. Front track width increases by 1.6 inches, while in back the track width expands by 0.6 inches more than the 4x2.

Also, PreRunner compares to the 4x4 Tacoma in platform height by stuffing four more inches of air between ground and chassis to increase clearance for off-road conditions.

The suspension, composed of front independent double wishbone arrangement with coil springs plus stabilizer bar and a leaf-type rear spring, eases ride quality with low-pressure gas-filled shocks.

Vertical travel for each front wheel of PreRunner compares to the 4x4 to track better in independent motion when dealing with off-pavement surface abnormalities — such as a deep ditch, pothole or rut rock.

For tests, several prototype PreRunners were steered on highways winding through California's low Anza-Borrego Desert and off-road over deep tracks of sand in the Borrego Sink, a state park devoted to 4-wheeling trail blazers.

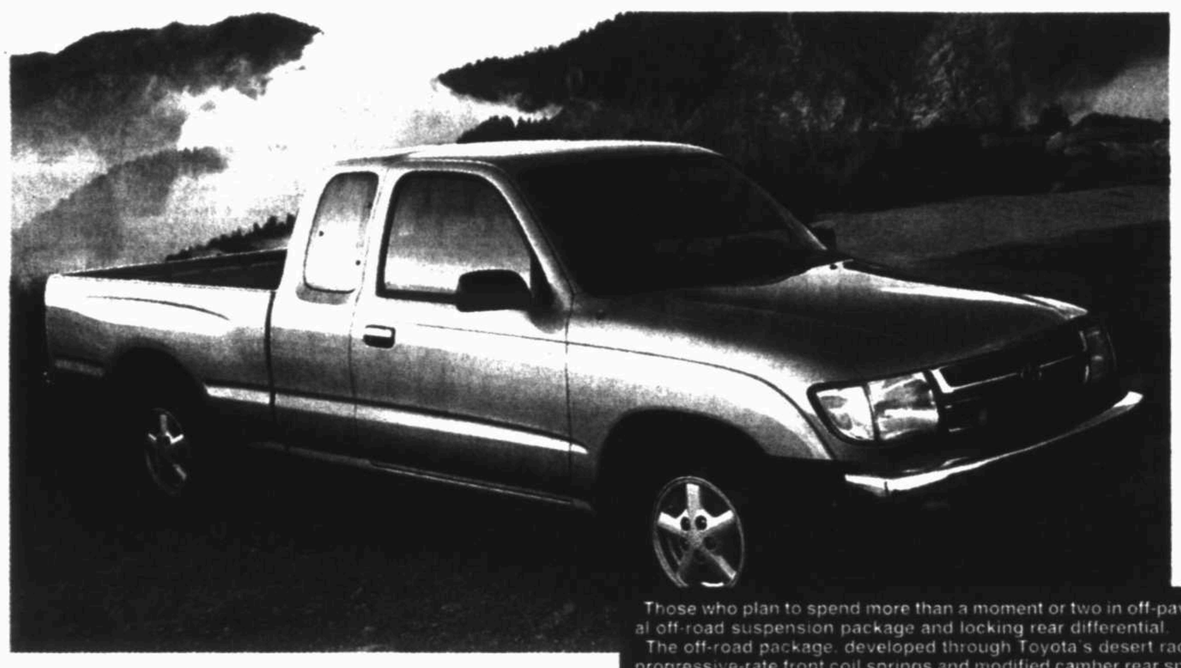

It rode smoothly and seemed easy to control on the hard pavement surface, as expected, but PreRunner surprised me when it plowed through sandy desert washes in off-pavement tests. Those nubby tires and the high stance with a strong suspension combined to maintain forward progress at a steady pace across the desert, proving it's capable of tackling moderate off-road challenges when necessary.

gaged through a cut-off switch.

PreRunner's Xtracab design extends the length of the Tacoma regular cab by 18 inches and hangs two jump seats behind a front bench with 60/40 split back.

Standard interior features range from air conditioning and stereo system with cassette deck to a fold-out table and twin cup holders, door map pockets, two 12-volt power outlets, sliding rear window and flip-out quarter glass.

Toyota turned to its California design team and Toyota Motorsports to create PreRunner, with production occurring at the West Coast Toyota assembly plant in Fremont.

Those who plan to spend more than a moment or two in off-pavement romps should consider the optional off-road suspension package and locking rear differential.

The off-road package, developed through Toyota's desert racing truck program, adds Bilstein shocks, progressive-rate front coil springs and modified camber rear springs, locking rear differential, black overfenders and alloy wheels.

The rear differential lock operates through a dashboard push button to split torque evenly between both rear wheels so they move in unison for low-speed maneuvers off-pavement.

Safety systems for PreRunner include dual airbags and side-door steel beams, wide sideview mirrors and adjustable anchors for outboard 3-point seatbelts. The passenger's airbag may be disen

Pontiac Grand Prix stands on a wide track for sporty action

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

ORANGE CITY, Fla. — Pontiac revives Wide Track, the sporty broad-stance car concept from decades past, in the revamped mid-size coupe and sedan which bear a legendary name: Grand Prix.

Wide Track refers to the wide stance of Grand Prix's wheels, which stretch to outer limits of a rectangular plan. A head-on check of the aggressive prow reveals a profile with walls of tires extending to curvy sides of the body.

The wide stance of Grand Prix sets up a stable platform for the vehicle which, when combined with independent suspension and quick steering system, enables Grand Prix to perform well in road challenges like twisty chicanes and ripply curves.

Then mix into this equation a zesty supercharged engine for GT editions and Grand Prix becomes one sweet sportster.

A recent encounter with a current Grand Prix GT took place in Florida for a speedy cross-state dash from Daytona Beach to Orlando, following back routes and freeways to play with all of that supercharged energy.

From the outset with throttle-up on Speedway Boulevard at Daytona, this Pontiac promised automotive action as assertive in thrust as all of that curvy sheet-metal seems daring in design.

Climbing on I-4 on the outskirts of town, driver aims for the freeway's fast lane, and the car performs eagerly, displaying more than enough muscle to peg the speed limit.

More importantly, it produces solid sensations when lipping over pavement bumps and reacts quickly and athletically when asked to whip clear of slower traffic.

That broad stance, with wheels spread wide and thick tires canted to negative camber, creates a sensation of stability which feels secure and entirely agreeable.

As a bonus, the in-your-face design looks gorgeous.

[illegible] the muscular front includes bulging shoulders [illegible] wheel and low front fascias with foglamps shoved to outer edges [illegible] strip. A rakish windshield sets up a low arch roofline that [illegible] for sedan or coupe.

Even bold side mirrors look racy: They're [illegible] ergonomically sculpted and pinned to [illegible] that skin over [illegible] extra longitudinal and cross-car bracing for extra rigidity and torsional stiffness when the vehicle moves down the road.

In the power department, Grand Prix can be outfitted with three different engines.

Neck-kicker Grand Prix GT sedan and coupe pack the supercharged 3.8-liter V6 as an ultimate option. It races to 240 hp with redline pegging at 6000 rpm.

The supercharged engine comes in a special GTP performance kit that also applies a heavy-duty automatic transmission with Normal or Performance shift modes, plus sport suspension settings, a decklid spoiler and speed-rated tires mounted on 16-inch aluminum wheels.

The 3.8-liter V6 engine without forced air induction of the supercharger serves as standard plant in GT sedan or coupe, spiking at 195 hp.

Then, as an economical alternative, Grand Prix's base SE sedan stocks a 3.1-liter V6 rated at 160 hp.

An automatic 4-speed transmission links to each V6, with no option for a manual shifter.

Grand Prix's interior layout orients toward an active type of driver.

Twin front bucket seats stand in front of a bench that's made for three but best for two.

Driver's sporty bucket, firmly bolstered, faces a cockpit rigged with [illegible] gauges, which glow in red light at night [illegible] ter and tachometer. A standard graphic [illegible] also, low [illegible] pressure and low oil pressure.

Pontiac's [illegible] display, optional on [illegible] [illegible] digitally [illegible] soft green glow, on the [illegible] of view. Other data also appear when desired [illegible] positioning, fuel condition, radio tuning, [illegible]

[illegible] add contrast, [illegible]

The ceiling console contains a power outlet — ideal plug for a high-mount radar detector to prevent the cord from dangling down the dash.

Safety systems in place across the board for Grand Prix include anti-lock brakes, traction control and the depowered front airbags. With safety cage surrounding the passenger compartment, extra steel bracing fills side door cavities, and the front and rear bumpers will withstand an impact of 5 mph without structural damage.

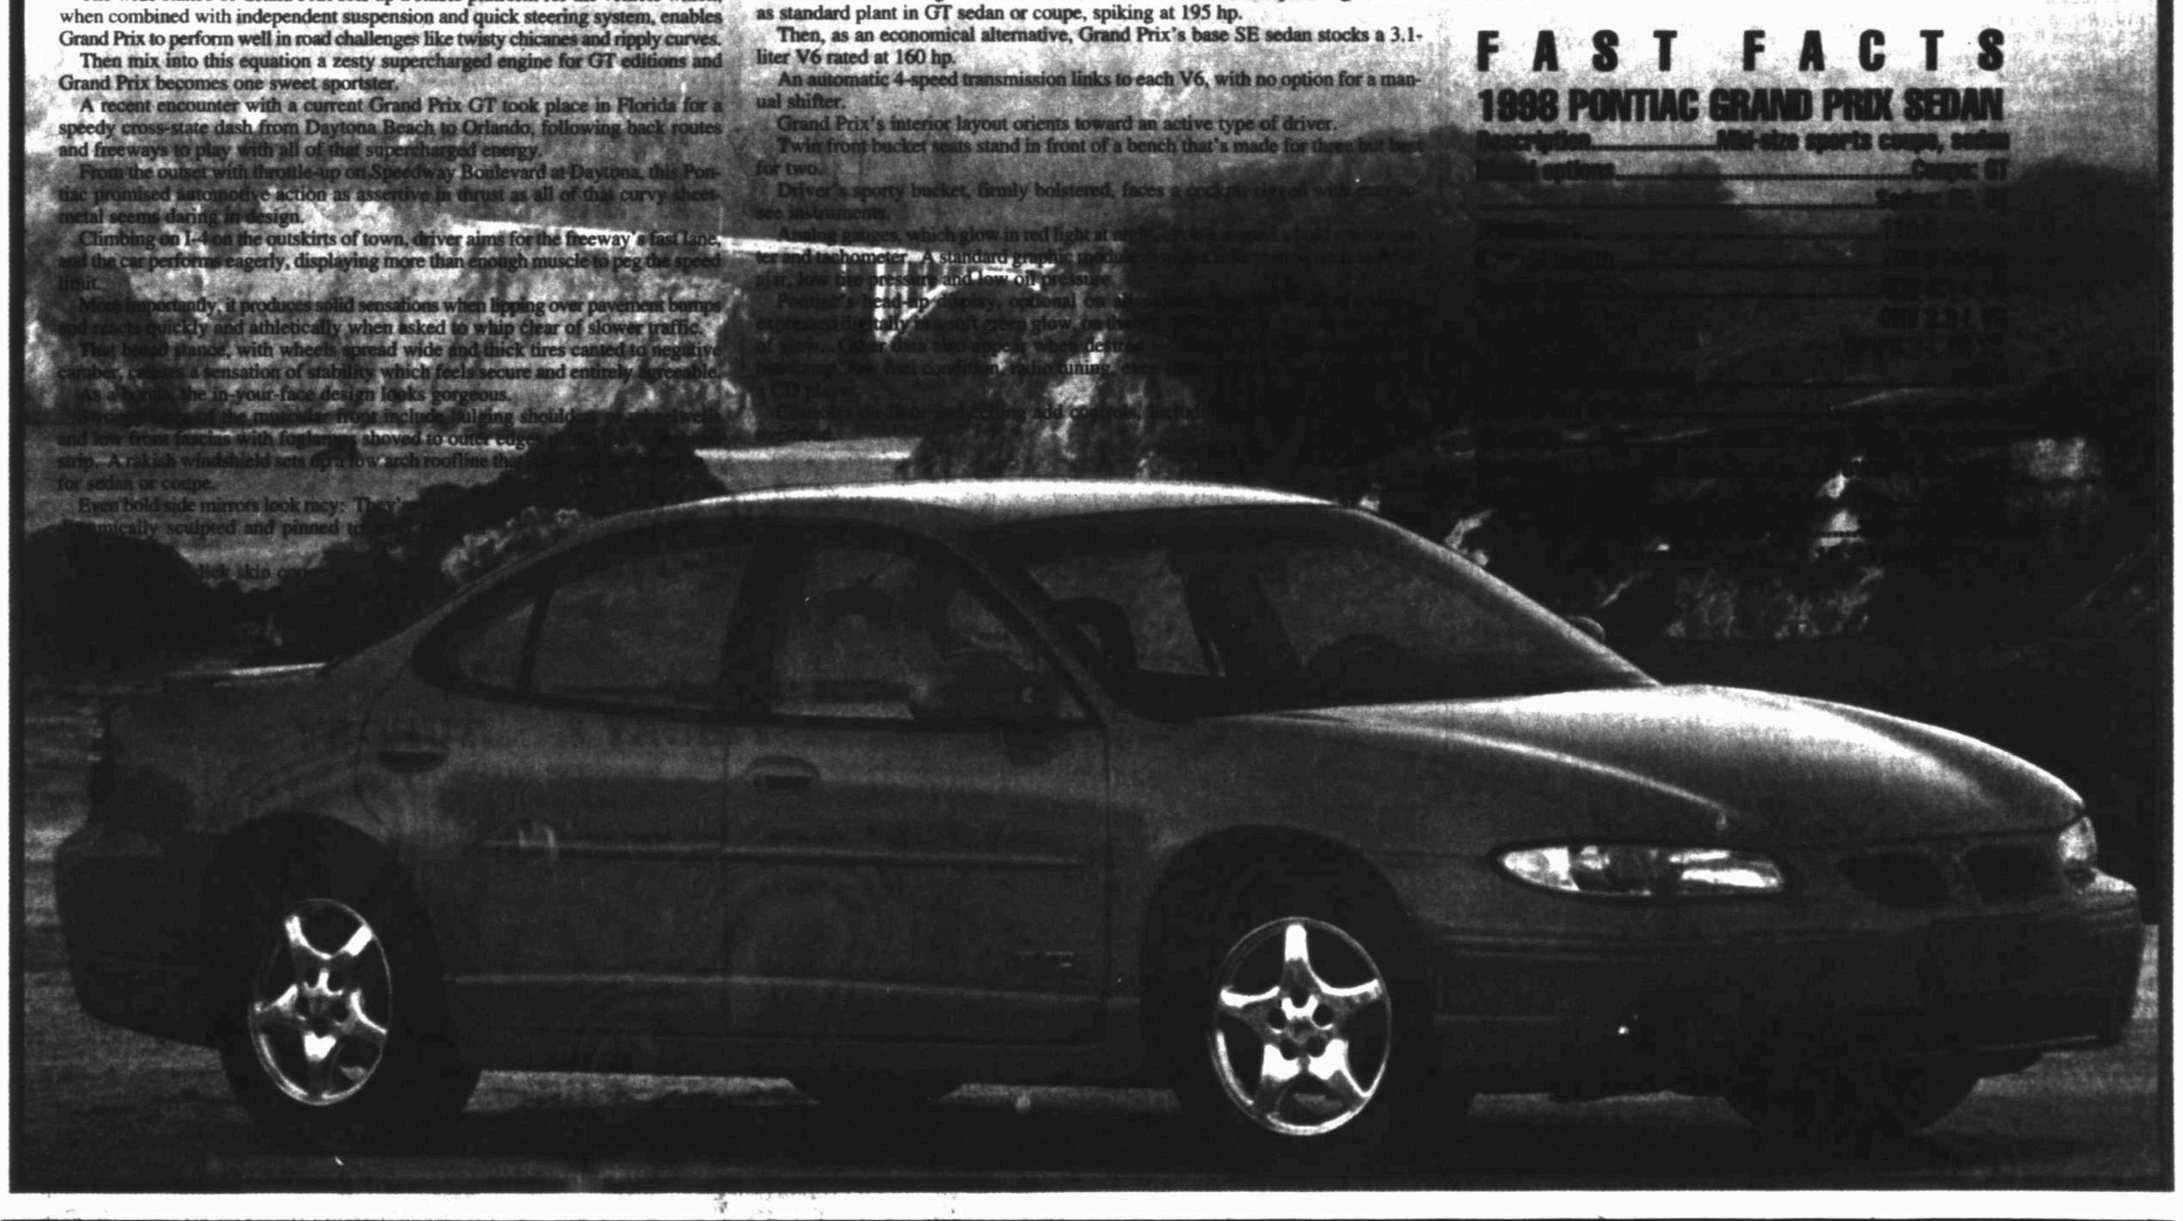

Rear doors of the sedan use child-proof locks, and an integrated kiddy safety seat is available optionally.

Current pricing for the SE sedan holds below $20,000, with the GT going for $21,000.
