Another 'Labor Day'

Workers in Washington prepare for the Solidarity Day rally sponsored by the AFL-CIO and scheduled Sept. 19. More than 100,000 persons are expected to be on the Capitol Mall in Washington to protest Reagan Administration policies. From left are Ron Martin of the American Federation of Labor; an unidentified worker; Frances Kenin of the Solidarity staff; and Will Duncan of the Philip Randolph Institute.

Labor policies dispute widened

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and organized labor widened their dispute Sunday over whether the administration is pursuing policies harmful to America's workers, with Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan vowing "no amnesty" for striking air controllers.

In nationally televised interviews timed to coincide with Labor Day, Donovan, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Kenneth Blaylock, head of a large federal employees union, argued about Reagan's dismissal of controllers who began an illegal strike a month ago.

Donovan reasserted the administration's position that "there will be no amnesty" for the nearly 12,000 fired controllers.

"I believe the most important message that could be given on Labor Day is that this is a nation of laws and that we cannot pick and choose those we will keep and those we will get rid of," he said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

KIRKLAND AND BLAYLOCK, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, maintained in separate intervews that Reagan should rehire the controllers. They contended the nation's flight control system is suffering in their absense.

The president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, Robert Poli, told a gathering of 20 PATCO locals in Patchogue, N.Y., they were as right to strike today as they were when they walked out five weeks ago. Government officials, he said, are "acknowledging the fact that something is wrong with the profession" and when those wrongs are corrected, the striking controllers will be the ones to benefit.

Poli told reporters informal conversations were under way with the government and "The strike could end at any time."

Such conversations, through intermediaries, have been reported several times before.

"He's established the fact that he's hard-fisted," Kirkland said of Reagan.

"What remains to be established is where's the rest of him, where's the heart and where's the understanding of these people's problems that will make it possible to have a decent resolution of this problem that will...restore these qualified people back their jobs."

INTERVIEWED ON THE CBS program, "Face the Nation," Kirkland said the air control system will "limp along, sharply curtailed, at great expense to the public, and I think the circumstances cry for a decent resolution" of the dispute.

On NBC's "Meet the Press," Blaylock suggested that the ousted controllers might have a better chance of getting their jobs back after the government has concluded its efforts to strip the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization of its right to bargain for workers.

But, Blaylock also said, "the controllers have had some very serious problems at the work site for years.... Unless mechanisms are developed to address the problems that public workers have, there will be strikes."

Donovan asserted that Reagan's firm response to the air controllers strike should signal state and local government officials to hold the line against illegal strikes.

"There is not an ounce of gloating in this administration," over the firing of the controllers, he said, adding: "I would say, yes, the message is to follow the lead of the president in protecting the Constitution.

"What I would hope is that they will understand their own basic (economic) pressures as well as the president understands his," the labor secretary said.

DONOVAN MAINTAINED that if unions would give Reagan's economic program a chance, workers would have an even better chance to achieve their goals at the bargaining table.

"We're an administration of hope, not an administration of pain, ...where we all have to learn to settle for less," Donovan said.

Asked about Kirkland's criticism of his direction of the Labor Department, Donovan responded, "Lane Kirkland, I suggest, wears two different hats. He's president of the AFL-CIO and a very major part of the heirarchy of the Democratic Party."

The labor secretary said, "I suggest to you that Ronald Reagan, when the effects of his economic program are truely felt, will be a hero," to those groups that have been critical of the administration.

KIRKLAND DISMISSED suggestions that organized labor already has aligned itself with the Democratic Party in a plan to wrest power from the Republicans in 1982.

"No," he retorted, when asked whether the AFL-CIO considered the Democratic Party its ally.

Kirkland bemoaned what he called, "a negative course of events harmful to our society," but added that, "We're not in a position to engage in warfare. They have the tanks and planes, not us."

Asked what message he wanted to send to Kirkland and other union leaders, Donovan replied:

"I would say, please let us not trumpet against the walls that already have been breeched.... Let's give each other the benefit of the doubt."

Meanwhile, President Reagan, in his Labor Day message, said the goal of his economic program is "jobs, jobs, jobs and more jobs." He said the administration's policy "has been and will continue to be: what is good for the American worker is good for America."

Reagan said legislation passed by Congress encourages Americans to help through increased savings and investment. "I urge American workers, who traditionally saved to make their families secure, to do so again. I urge American investors, who traditionally took risks to make a profit, to do so again."

Reagan focuses on jobs

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told American workers Sunday to resume saving for their families' futures and urged investors to risk their savings on new ventures in order to help his economic program succeed.

In a Labor Day message taped for radio broadcast beginning Sunday morning, the president said his economic program depends not only on the legislation Congress enacted but on the actions of the American people, who must help revitalize the economy.

The goal of the economic program, Reagan said, is "jobs, jobs, jobs and more jobs."

Rewriting a controversial statement attributed to one of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's Cabinet officers, Reagan said,"Our policy has been and will continue to be: What is good for the American worker is good for America."

(Charles E. Wilson, a former General Motors executive who served as Eisenhower's secretary of defense, was widely quoted as having told a Senate committee, "What is good for General Motors is good for America." What he actually said was, "What's good for the country is good for General Motors and vice versa.")

Reagan said enactment of his economic program, including "the largest budget cuts ever considered by the Congress (and) the first real tax cut for working men and women in nearly 20 years," has achieved "an historic reversal of the failed policies of an era gone by."

But "merely signing legislation is not going to bring about an instant cure," he said. "We are only beginning a recovery that will take many long months."

The president noted that the legislation Congress passed contained various incentives to encourage people to save part of their earnings, both for their families' security and for their retirement.

"All of us must take advantage of the incentives for savings, investment and hard work that have been restored," Reagan said. "I urge American workers, who traditionally saved to make their families secure, to do so again. I urge American investors, who traditionally took risks to make a profit, to do so again."

Reiterating his own optimism that his program will work despite its critics, Reagan called for cooperation and expressed hope that all Americans will share his confidence.

"As President Eisenhower told us once, a crisis can be deadly when inert men are smothered in despair," he said.

Begin's Washington talks to focus arms sales, Palestinian self rule

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — When Prime Minister Menachem Begin meets President Reagan this week, Israelis are hoping to see a spark of chemistry between two hard-line leaders who prefer action to words.

Begin left Sunday for New York on a 10-day trip that includes meetings with Reagan on Wednesday and Thursday, talks with Jewish leaders and a visit with former President Jimmy Carter in Plains, Ga.

The prime minister told reporters in a departure ceremony at Ben Gurion airport near Tel Aviv that he and Reagan "shall speak with open hearts, as friends to friends and allies to allies."

Begin's attache case is stuffed with problems. Chief among them are the U.S. sale of spy planes to Saudi Arabia, an alleged Palestinian arms buildup in southern Lebanon and the U.S. role in talks on Palestinian self-rule in Israeli-occupied territory.

But sources who discussed the trip with Begin say his most crucial task in Washington is to get on well with the U.S. president and set a cordial personal tone for the next 3½ years.

The visit comes against a backround of mutual suspicion after the Israelis bombed the Iraqi nuclear reactor in June and Palestinian headquarters in Beirut in July.

U.S. officials were quoted in the Israeli media as calling Begin "the mad bomber." The Reagan administration suspended the delivery of new aircraft to Israel for 10 weeks, arousing doubts in Israel over Washington's credibility.

"The Americans respect toughness, they like to see the exercise of power. But they don't like Begin," said an American source who confers often with Begin. "He's got some fences to mend."

Tension appeared to be easing last week with the delivery of the last of the delayed F-16 warplanes and a conciliatory letter from U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, whom Begin accused of leading the campaign to punish Israel for the bombing raids.

The Israelis attribute their poor start with the new administration to Reagan's advisers and to what Jerusalem sees as the traditionally hostile State Department.

Sadat's measures to calm relations between Moslems, Coptics criticized

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Coptic Christian leaders sought to calm the fears of their followers Sunday about withdrawal of state recognition of their patriarch, one of the steps taken by President Anwar Sadat to ease Egypt's sectarian strife.

Many Moslems interviewed on the street chastised the president for also ordering the mass arrests of fundamentalist Moslem leaders in his crackdown that started Thursday.

Others, however, expressed support for Sadat's moves.

The reactions follow Sadat's emotional three-hour speech Saturday night in which he announced sweeping measures he said were intended to calm the tension between the Coptic Christians and Moslems. The state radio said a referendum on Sadat's steps was being scheduled for Thursday.

The president accused Moslem fundamentalists and some Christians of "charging up" an atmosphere of hate that led to bloody clashes in Cairo's Aawiya Al-Hamra slum during June and July.

Sadat announced the cancellation of a 1971 presidential decree that recognized Pope Shenouda III as the head of the Coptic Church of Egypt. He also disbanded 13 religious societies.

The weekly newspaper Mayo, organ of Sadat's National Democratic Party, said the president had evidence the Coptic pope encouraged attacks on Sadat's leadership, both in Egypt and abroad.

It said the effect of Sadat's action was to restrict Shenouda's movements, invalidate his signature and seal on official documents and bar him from addressing public gatherings "to guarantee the security of the people and the good reputation of the church."

Observers in the Egyptian capital saw Sadat's removal of state recognition of the patriarch as an effort to dampen possible adverse reaction from Egypt's majority Moslems to the mass arrests of Moslem fundamentalists.

The state-guided press said 1,536 people, including religious men, politicians, journalists and lawyers had been arrested in the crackdown. All are accused of contributing to Christian-Moslem violence.

School wants no part of Yarbrough controversy

GRENADA, West Indies (AP) — The vice chancellor of the Caribbean medical school attended by former Texas Supreme Court justice Don Yarbrough says he would be "happy" if he never sees Yarbrough again.

On Aug. 28, after Yarbrough had failed to appear in Austin, Texas, for)entencing on a 1978 perjury conviction, he was suspended from St. George's University School of Medicine.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle and the Texas attorney general's office are trying to extradite Yarbrough from Grenada, a 133-square-mile island where he has lived since the summer of 1980.

"We're anxious to keep out of this situation; we're not part of it. I'd be happy if I never see him (Yarbrough) again," Vice Chancellor Geoffrey Bourne told Austin American-Statesman reporter Pete Szilagyi, who made the 2,700-mile trip to Grenada in hopes of interviewing Yarbrough.

Yarbrough, however, apparently was unwilling to discuss his thoughts with a reporter unless he was paid for the interview.

According to Szilagyi, a man who refused to identify himself answered Yarbrough's phone and said Yarbrough would not submit to interviews because he had been "exploited" by the press.

The man said he was editing a manuscript by Yarbrough and added, "I've never seen anything so powerful ... if he doesn't get a Pulitzer, I'll be shocked."

The day Szilagyi saw Yarbrough at the medical school's main campus on Grand Anse Beach most of the students were dressed in T-shirts, shorts and running shoes. Yarbrough, however, had on tan slacks and a sports shirt. "Yarbrough spoke to no one and walked back inside. He was not interested in being interviewed," Szilagyi's story said.

Other students know Yarbrough, 40, as "the lawyer from Texas, a nice fellow and diligent student," the story said. Bourne confirmed, however, that Yarbrough had to repeat some courses.

Bourne said Yarbrough told him when he enrolled at St. George's, which has a $7,100 annual tuition, that his legal problems in Texas stemmed from a "mistake" he had made in arranging a 1977 business meeting.

Actually, Yarbrough was convicted of lying to a Travis County grand jury about telling a former business associate, Bill Rothkopf, how to forge a car title to get a bank loan. Rothkopf, who was wearing a concealed tape recorder, also recorded Yarbrough plotting to have a Victoria banker killed. Yarbrough's lawyers kept the jury from hearing that part of the tape because it involved an alleged crime for which he was not on trial.

Later, Yarbrough told the grand jury the meeting with Rothkopf never had taken place.

Amarillo residents, from left, Shane Pitcher,9; Mickey Pitcher, 13; and Eric Robinson, 8, see that the water inside this submerged car is just as high as that outside, even though the windows are rolled up. Torrential rains flooded parts of Amarillo this weekend and subsequent rains made the situation worse, with water reaching five feet deep in some areas of the city.

Parts of flooded Amarillo evacuated

By The Associated Press

Overnight rain in the Texas Panhandle flooded Amarillo streets Sunday and forced the evacuation of several apartment complexes, and police said two or three people were missing along the swollen Canadian River.

Police quarantined an area of Amarillo where water rose to 5 feet deep in the streets and sewage backed up into apartments, said a police spokesman.

Gov. Bill Clements declared a state of emergency Sunday in Amarillo's flooded sections and ordered the mobilization of about 30 National Guardsmen to protect businesses from looters.

Amarillo, which has been inundated with rain for two weeks, received an addition 0.68 inch overnight and and more was forecast Sunday night and Monday, said a National Weather Service spokesman.

Elsewhere, scattered thundershowers remained over the southern Plateau and northern Utah on Sunday and a flash flood watch was in effect for Arizona.

A cold front carried scattered showers and thunderstorms to the central Plains states and the Dakotas, and there were isolated showers over west Texas.

A few thundershowers also extended from Florida into the southern and central Appalachians, and light rain lingered over parts of the lower Great Lakes and southern New York.

Clouds covered most of the rest of the Atlantic Coast states, while skies were generally clear over the Pacific Coast states, Montana, and the Tennessee and lower Mississippi valleys.

Hurricane Floyd strengthened Sunday and moved past the Bahamas toward the north-northwest. Hurricane Emily was drifting slowly to the northeast over the North Atlantic, south-southeast of Newfoundland.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from a low of 54 at Rawlins, Wyo., to a high of 95 at Red Bluff, Calif.

For Monday, scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast over the southern Atlantic Coast states and from the southern and central high Plains through the middle and upper Mississippi Valley to the upper Great Lakes. A chance of widely scattered thunderstorms was forecast over the southern Plateau and Rockies.

Highs in the 80s and low 90s were predicted over the northern Plateau and from the Rio Grande Valley in Texas to the lower Mississippi Valley and the southern Atlantic Coast; in the 90s over inland California; in the 100s in the Southwest deserts, and in the 70s or low 80s elsewhere.

Here is Sunday afternoon weather in selected cities, as supplied by the National Weather Service:

—East: Atlanta 85 partly cloudy, Boston 68 cloudy, Buffalo 67 cloudy, Caribou 75 fair, Charleston S.C. 86 partly cloudy, Cincinnati 77 fair, Cleveland 69 showery, Detroit 71 cloudy, Miami 91 partly cloudy, Nashville 84 hazy, New York 77 hazy, Philadelphia 78 partly cloudy, Pittsburgh 75 hazy, Washington 82 partly cloudy.

—West: Albuquerque 75 fair, Anchorage 50 cloudy, Los Angeles 75 cloudy, Phoenix 89 fair, Salt Lake City 61 cloudy, San Diego 78 hazy, San Francisco 65 fair, Seattle 70 fair.

—Canada: Montreal 73 fair, Toronto 68 cloudy.

Geologists warn of possible eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens rumbled with many small earthquakes Sunday and scientists issued an eruption alert, saying an eruption, probably with little or no violence, would occur within 12 hours.

Six geologists who had been working in the volcano's crater were pulled back to a safer location, said Dick Janda, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist.

The red zone hazard area, extending in a ragged circle about 20 miles out from the mountain, was closed, he added.

"Increased seismicity to this point indicates that an eruption could occur at any time," said Chris Trisler of the University of Washington Geophysics Center.

Janda said there was a "finite chance" that the volcano could explode with a violent eruption of ash, as it did when it blew off the top of the mountain more than a year ago.

But he said all indications pointed to a non-violent, dome-building episode in which masses of cooling lava push from inside the volcano to the crater floor and harden into a huge dome-shaped lump that is slowly rebuilding the mountain.

The USGS and University of Washington issued the alert at 1:30 p.m. PDT after earthquakes jiggling the volcano increased to about 10 an hour, Ms. Trisler said. The quakes were recorded at an average of less than 2 on the open-ended Richter scale of ground motion, she said.

Earlier Sunday, scientists had upgraded an "extended eruption advisory" issued Aug. 26 to a simple 'eruption advisory." Increased changes in the surface of the crater resembled changes that preceded four other dome-building episodes in December, February, April and June, said Janda.

Janda said that early Sunday small earthquakes, measuring 1.5 to 2.5 on the Richter scale, were recorded at the volcano "every couple of minutes or so."

Since the volcano's cataclysmic May 18, 1980, eruption that leveled 150 square miles of forest and left 60 people dead or missing, Mount St. Helens has had five additional explosive eruptions.

The latest dome-building occurred over about a two-day period in June and added about 150 feet to the height of the dome and 130 feet to its width, said Kathy Cashman, another USGS geologist. The dome as of Sunday was about 450 feet tall and 1,400 feet wide, she said.

There may be a bonus in the geologic show for scientists this time. In the past, thick clouds hid dome-building from view but Janda said weather for the near future would be "clear and outstanding."

Armed inmates escape Kansas State Prison

LANSING, Kan. (AP) — Seven heavily armed inmates, including five covicted of murder, overpowered a guard Sunday and escaped from the Kansas State Prison, commandeering two cars and shooting a policeman as they made their getaway, authorities said.

Three of the inmates were recaptured, but police in Kansas and Missouri were searching for the others who fled with two shotguns, a .38-caliber revolver, a .30-30-caliber rife and a supply of ammunition.

The injured policeman, Doug Cansler, 31, of the Bonner Springs police department, was listed in stable condition with a chest wound at the Providence St. Margaret Health Center in Kansas City, Kan.

Prison Spokeswoman Linda Moppin said one inmate was caught near a Kansas Turnpike toll gate in Bonner Springs and taken to the town jail.

The inmate, Terry McClain, 31, of Topeka, is serving 15 years to live for first-degree murder and aggravated robbery, she said. McClain is president of the Lifers' Club, which seeks prison reforms for those serving life sentences.

Two of the escapees, Marvin Thornton, 40, and Larry Miller, 33, were captured near a Bonner Springs home about 5 p.m. Sunday by state, county and local authorities, the Kansas Highway Patrol said.

Ms. Moppin said the escape occurred about 8:45 a.m.

Full force of guards reports to troubled Tennessee prisons

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A full force of guards reported for work Sunday at two state prisons troubled by weekend walkouts in protest of working conditions and safety, a prison spokesman said.

"There were three sick, but they appear to be legal sick," said Lt. Earl Lowe, a spokesman at the Tennessee State Prison here.

Guards at the maximum-security prison joined their colleagues at Turney Center for Youthful Offenders in a walkout early Saturday. The walkout, which followed the fatal stabbing of a guard at Turney, was in protest of working conditions and safety.

An unofficial agreement was reached later in the day with state correction officials, and guards at both prisons began returning to work by midnight Saturday.

Correction Commissioner Harold Bradley told guards outside the main state prison that they could subtract work hours missed from annual leave time if they returned on their next regularly scheduled shifts.

One guard, Charlie Atchison, said he doubted anything was accomplished by the walkout.

"If we don't get what we want in 30 days, I'm going to walk out again and urge everybody else to do the same," Atchison said.

Bradley said Gov. Lamar Alexander agreed that more money was needed for prison problems.

Chance for showers continues

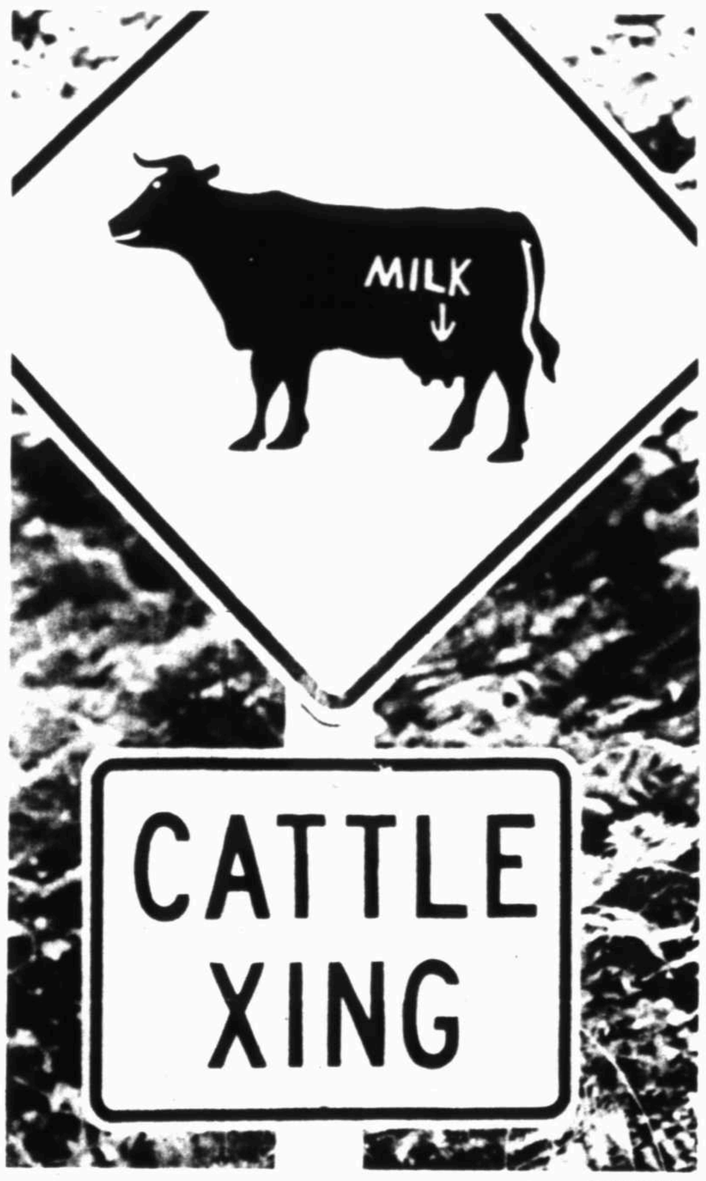

The chance for showers and thunderstorms in the Midland area will continue to linger through the holiday weekend. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, there will be considerable cloudiness through Tuesday.

Probability of rain is 30 percent today, increasing to 40 percent tonight.

Temperatures should be cooler today, with the high today and Tuesday expected to reach the middle 80s. The low tonight will be in the lower 60s.

Winds will be from the south and southeast 10-15 mph today.

Sunday's high of 91 fell 13 degrees short of the record high for that date of 104 set in 1948. The low for Sunday of 67 was 10 degrees warmer than the record low of 57 set in 1957.

Strong Floyd, weak Emily continue to stir up Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) — Strengthening Hurricane Floyd whipped past the Bahamas on Sunday, keeping holiday pleasure boaters in port, while a slowly weakening Hurricane Emily moved over the chilly North Atlantic.

Floyd, its winds building from 75 to 90 mph overnight, was moving north-northwest at about 10 mph, and was about 520 miles east of Nassau at 6 p.m. EDT.

The Bahamian government called off a hurricane watch, but small craft were told to stay out of the open Atlantic until the hurricane was gone. A hurricane watch also was discontinued in the Turks and Caicos island group.

"There's really no land in its path," forecaster Bob Sheets said at the National Hurricane Center here. "It would have to take a turn to the west to affect land, and it's not doing that."

Floyd, which formed late Thursday north of the Virgin Islands and became the sixth storm of the season Friday, was centered near latitude 26.2 north, longitude 69.3 west at 6 p.m. Sunday. Gales extended 100 miles out from the hurricane.

"Conditions favor rapid strengthening," Hurricane Center Director Neil Frank said.

Far to the north, after remaining stalled all day Saturday, Hurricane Emily began drifting slowly to the northeast late in the day.

At 6 p.m. Sunday, Emily was centered over open water about 470 miles south-southwest of St. Johns, Newfoundland. Its center was near latitude 41.4 north, longitude 57.5 west.

Emily brought intermittent rain and high winds on Nova Scotia's Atlantic coast, but no damage or injuries were reported.

Elsewhere along the Atlantic Coast, the strong swells being pushed out by Emily were making swimming hazardous along some beaches. Virginia and North Carolina officials closed some beaches Sunday for a second day.

At Virginia Beach, Va., more than 30 swimmers, many of them young children, were rescued Sunday when they were caught in riptides created by Emily's swells.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Aspirin may kill cancer pain

Dear Dr. Solomon: What do you think of prescribing aspirin to a cancer patient? My aunt's doctor did this, and it seems to me it's like trying to kill an elephant with a BB gun. What's your opinion? — Brenda, Salem, Mass.

Dear Brenda: When you consider that pain from cancer is not always severe, aspirin is certainly a logical starting point. In addition to the fact that it may be all a patient needs at the time, it is inexpensive and has a low incidence of serious side effects.

If aspirin does not do the job, the physician can always prescribe a more potent medication. But the use of aspirin is certainly an appropriate point at which to start.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to know if kidney transplants are successful in children. My son has kidney disease, and his doctor says I ought to start thinking about the possibility of a transplant. — Mrs. C.L., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Mrs. L.: Success, of course, is a relative term; however, Dr. Andrew C. Novick and his associates at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation say that transplantation is the best long-term solution to end-stage renal disease in children.

This does not mean that the procedure is risk-free. Of 58 children who were studied, almost 80 percent werealive after an average follow up of six years, and slightly more than 60 percent had a functioning kidney.

There were fewer surgical complications and better long-term functional survival rates when the kidney was obtained from a live donor than when it came from a cadaver. The rehabilitation of patients after successful transplantations, Dr. Novick says, was excellent.

Thailand is preparing for bicentennial feast

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand is preparing itself for a yearlong birthday party it hopes will shore up traditional strengths, such as religion and national unity, which helped keep it independent for 800 years.

The year 1982 will mark the 200th anniversary of both the founding of the capital city, Bangkok, and the beginning of a remarkable royal dynasty whose monarchs modernized the country, kept colonial power adroitly at bay and today are mainstays of an often troubled society.

Although the government will be all too happy to collect tourist revenue the celebrations are expected to generate and promises "pomp and splendor the likes of which are rarely seen in today's grim and gray world," the bicentennial is largely conceived as an inward-looking event.

Sandwiched among elaborate masked plays, royal processions and centuries-old religious ceremonies on the bicentennial calendar will be the provision of safe drinking water to up-country schools, village development projects and a tree-planting campaign in Bangkok, a once-ravishing capital now in the running for the title of Asia's ugliest city.

"We have not gone out of our way to commercialize the celebrations simply to attract more tourists," Lt. Gen. Chan Ansuchote, a key organizer, told foreign correspondents.

Some of the official objectives of the bicentennial have the ring of campaign slogans: "to promote Thailand's national identity," "to revive and promote Thailand's culture and national heritage," "to reinforce the national unity and solidarity of Thai people."

Body not designed for ultra-marathon

By ED HOUSEWRIGHT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Luke Barber wasn't about to quit. He'd just reached the 75-mile checkpoint at the 100-mile Western States Endurance Run, and he felt great — for the moment.

There were only 25 miles to go, and seven more hours before the 24-hour time limit was up in the race.

A little impatiently, he waited while doctors checked his blood pressure, pulse and weight — checks they had made at each of the previous checkpoints.

All signs were fine — at least momentarily. But as soon as Barber, a Dallas philosphy instructor, sat down to grab half a sandwich, he started feeling dizzy, then extremely weak. One of the doctors walked by.

"He said, 'You don't look too good,' " Barber, 36, said. "Then another doctor came along and said, 'I want you to take this guy's blood pressure every five minutes.' "

Each time they checked Barber's blood pressure, it had dropped — from 90 over 70 to 80 over 70 to, finally, 60 over 54. His pulse was dropping too — from 108 all the way to below 40.

The doctors at the scene did everything they could — they put an intravenous tube in Barber's arm, made him lie down, tried to cool him off — but they couldn't make his blood pressure or pulse come back up.

"The doctors started getting very concerned," Barber said. "At one point, I asked one of the doctors if I was going to be all right. He said, 'I can't really say.' "

An ambulance took him to the hospital. Medical personnel watched him all night. Finally, his heart got stronger, increasing his pulse. And his dilated blood vessels returned to their normal size, allowing his blood pressure to come back up.

Such are the strains ultra-marathons — races of between 27 and 100 miles — can have on the body.

Ten years ago most people thought the 26 miles, 385-yard marathon was all the body could take. But now, after thousands of runners have completed marathons, some are looking for another challenge, and they're finding it in ultra-marathons.

"It's a mania," said Shannon Gardner, race director for the Western States Endurance Run.

Four years ago, she said, only 14 people entered the Western States, in which runners ascend a 8,670-foot peak where the temperature is 25 degrees and then descend to canyon floors where the temperature is 115. This year, 250 people were accepted and another 850 had to be turned away, she said.

Ms. Barber predicted that in several years ultra-marathons will be as popular as marathons.

But not all physicians, even those who are serious runners, think ultra-marathons are safe.

"There's a point of diminishing returns from a health standpoint," said Dr. Charles Sterling of the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas. "We emphasize moderation."

Research centers like the Aerobics Institute have compiled data that researchers say proves that running is beneficial — that it increases the efficiency of the heart and lungs, improves the muscle tone and reduces fat.

But ultra-marathons, because they have become popular so recently, haven't been studied thoroughly. Doctors don't know the effects of running up to 100 miles.

"It's unexplored territory," said Dr. Robert Lind, medical director for the Western States race. "We're not really sure what is happening to the human body."

Before last year's Western States ultra-marathon, he told the entrants:

"You're pushing human endurance beyond the point where anybody knows what the hell is happening ... "

Iran's shaky future

With each passing day, the revolution in Iran becomes more violent. As the turmoil increases, there seems to be no coherent voice speaking, no apparent leader to bring calm to that troubled nation once again.

Even preceeding the fall of the late shah, Iran was a seething pot of political turmoil. After the shah fled, the violence erupted, exhibiting itself in anti-shah demonstrations along with anti-American sentiment.

What has transpired since that time has been the virtual destruction of government as it was formerly known in Iran. The Islamic revolutionary government established by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini did not bring an end to the atrocities blamed on the shah during his reign. If anything, political imprisonment, tortures and executions increased.

During the past several months, following the release of the Americans held hostage by Iran for more than a year, the violence seems to have intensified with opponents of the Khomeini regime becoming more vocal. Deposed Iranian President Abohassan Bani-Sadr escaped to France in July and since appears to have been working behind the scenes to organize opposition to the current Islamic regime. But his supporters are not the sole opposition to Khomeini. Several other factions also exist.

Virtually every aspect of governmental and civil order seems to be disappearing from Iran. Yet that nation's strategic importance to the United States cannot be overlooked.

The fate of Iran will be important to the Free World. Which direction Iran will go at this point in time is unclear, but the type of government established there after the Islamic revolutionary government falls, as it surely will, will have importance for the United States and the peace and security of that corner of the world.

When the insanity in Iran ends, hopefully a clear voice will come to lead the nation back to peace.

Buying more prisons

This question has been debated for decades by psychologists, criminologists and an assortment of scholars concerned with making the punishment of criminals deter more crime. It has been raised again by the President's task force on violent crime, one of whose 64 recommendations is that $2 billion (B) be spent on more prisons.

Therein lies the genesis of another debate about the extent to which imprisonment keeps killers from killing again, or burglars from continuing their careers of crime. It has started already, with the co-chairman of the task force, Illinois Governor James R. Thompson, citing the millions for prisons as his committee's most important proposal, while civil libertarians are saying it will not be a deterrent at all.

We should not let the discussion sidetrack us from the truth, which is that the prisons of the United States are dangerously overcrowded. Here are some disturbing statistics:

— In California, the prison population has jumped 25 percent in two years, and is growing at the rate of about 100 convicts a week.

— In four years the number of prisoners here in Texas has grown from 22,000 to 30,000 without a commensurate increase in housing facilities.

— After a murderous (33 dead) 36-hour riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary, it was discovered the prison population of 1,157 was 22 percent above capacity.

Regardless of the debate over the relationship between imprisonment and crime deterrence, it is obvious that our prisons are dangerously overcrowded. It is equally obvious that overcrowding leads to violence and rioting, and that the dangers are growing, not receding. In asking for two billion dollars to put up more bars, the task force is giving priority to easing the tensions that have caused some of the bloodiest outbursts of violence in the nation's penal history.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Sept. 7, the 250th day of 1981. There are 115 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 7, 1978, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat held their first face-to-face meeting at the Camp David summit.

On this date:

In 1807, Napoleon Bonaparte suppressed the Tribunate, thus ensuring his dictatorship.

In 1901, the Peace of Peking ended the Boxer Rebellion in China.

Five years ago: The United States granted asylum to a Soviet Air Force lieutenant who had flown a sophisticated fighter jet to Japan a day earlier.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Solidarity continues its death-defying act

WASHINGTON — The most significant labor union in the world today is Solidarity, the Polish workers' movement that has exposed the spurious image of international communism as the workingman's champion — and in the process has won a degree of freedom for all Poles that other captive nations in the Soviet bloc hardly dare dream of achieving.

Jack Anderson

It has been just over a year since the Polish workers at the huge Lenin shipyard in Gdansk walked off their jobs and demanded, among other things, the right to organize their own union to replace the sham organizations set up by Communist authorities. I sent my associate Bob Sherman to Poland to find out how the Polish workers' movement has fared since then.

He was in Gdansk on the first anniversary of the historic day when 16,000 shipyard workers defied the Communist government and went on strike — the kind of spontaneous action that has been forbidden in the supposed Polish worker's paradise since it was established by the Red Army more than 36 years ago.

The upstart strikers not only got away with their anti-Marxist blasphemy; the movement they founded — Solidarity — now numbers more than 10 million members in a nation of 35 million. In pathetic contrast, the Communist Party can claim a membership of only 2.5 million.

The anniversary celebration of that first dramatic walkout highlighted what has been one of Solidarity's most effective moves: its alliance with the Catholic Church. So far at least, the combination of church and workers in an overwhelmingly Catholic country has been more than the Communist government can withstand.

Thousands of workers and their families stood solemnly in ankle-deep mud under a light rain while a Catholic bishop offered Mass to celebrate Solidarity's first year of precarious, but successful, existence. In the background, the giant shipyard cranes stood motionless against the pale gray sky — steel dinosaurs of an era when obedience to Communist doctrine was the unquestioned rule, machines that would only be brought back to life when the men who worked them agreed to go back to the controls.

That is the real triumph of Solidarity: It is a victory of men over machines, not just the cold, metallic machines of steel mills and auto factories, but the equally cold, rigid machinery of the Communist Party. And it is this last, shaky victory that is also Poland's greatest danger.

Solidarity has made the Polish Communist Party — and its masters in the Kremlin — bend to a surprising degree over the past year. But if the workers' movement pushes the party to the breaking point, it could lose everything it has won in the past year, by provoking an armed occupation by the Soviet Union.

Western diplomatic observers believe the Soviets will suffer Solidarity's slings and arrows up to a point — but will resort to force if they conclude that the Polish cancer will metastasize throughout the Soviet bloc.

And this puts virtually the whole weight of Poland's future on Lech Walesa, the head of Solidarity. He is a moderate, trying to pull off a tricky balancing act between the Communist Party leaders and his own radical followers.

There is no doubt that Walesa is a celebrity, and to most Poles a hero. After the anniversary Mass in Gdansk, he moved quickly to his white Polish-made Fiat after pausing briefly to give autographs. As he was driven away, the crowd parted respectfully to let him pass.

Walesa must persuade the Polish people to go back to work and endure the hardships that their own fight for freedom have exacerbated; he must also persuade the Polish Communist Party — and particularly the puppeteers in the Kremlin — that Solidarity does not threaten the entire Soviet system. It's asking a lot of someone who was an unemployed electrician a little over a year ago.

ABORTION BATTLE: There's another union story on this Labor Day. It involves the 700,000-member American Federation of Government Employees and the determined anti-abortion forces in Congress.

The so-called right-to-lifers have been unable so far to outlaw abortions for all American women. But they have succeeded in barring direct subsidy of abortions by the government through Medicaid. And now they are trying to eliminate indirect government payment for abortions through the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program.

Language that prohibits health-insurance plans from coverage of federal employees for abortion — except when the mother's life is in danger — has passed the House. The Senate is considering even stricter language. Its provision would permit no abortion-connected services to be performed under federal health plans. This means that federal employees enrolled in prepaid health maintenance organizations could not have their doctor perform an abortion even if they were willing to pay for the operation themselves.

But the Office of Personnel Management is taking no chances on final passage of the tough anti-abortion plan. It has already laid down the exclusionary rule by executive fiat, and has sent the language of the provision to the printer for use in 125 of the 127 government health plan brochures. (The two other plans already have stricter language.)

The AFGE is considering taking the OPM to court in an effort to thwart the administration's end run around Congress.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

The Environmental Protection Agency is about to ease up on its requirements for hazardous waste permits. The dump, once a dirty four letter word, is now achieving its rightful place in society.

●

Previously, a permit only lasted 10 years. This will be changed to a lifetime license allowing a chemical dump to go uninspected (to use a technical chemical term) until hell freezes over.

●

Even beyond the dedication of Yellowstone National Sewer.

●

It's about time somebody did something bout discrimination against dumps. Remember, a dump is just a garden turned upside down.

●

So, next time you go past a dump, don't hold your nose. Smile and take a deep breath — you'll get used to it. Remember, the cavemen never needed deodorants because they didn't know they smelled bad.

●

At least, not until deodorant was invented — by a chemist, ironically.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Amnesty for 'political offenses' isn't favored by all

Amnesty, a general pardon for "political offenses," is an oft-heard demand in Latin America.

The cries for amnesty usually reach their height after a revolutionary group has lost the initiatives in its battle to topple a government.

William Glandoni

At the moment, El Salvador, where Marxist-led guerrillas have been fighting the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta for nearly two years, is the prime target in Latin America of such organizations as Amnesty International and some U.S. church groups.

Next on the agenda promises to be Guatemala where an elected government, headed by an army general, is pressing on the struggle against Marxist groups who have been trying to regain the control of the country that they lost nearly three decades ago in 1954.

Clearly, there is cause for concern in Central America, as the pace of insurgency and counterinsurgency has been escalating and thousands of persons have died violently in El Salvador alone. Amnesty International estimates that there were 8,000 political killings there in 1980 alone. It also says that "government security forces have been reportedly implicated in 6,000" of those.

But to conclude on the basis of that tragic information that amnesty, a pardon for crimes committed in the name of some political or ideological goal, would bring peace to Central America is to overlook the experience the other American republics have had.

Take Argentina, for example. In 1973, after the Peronist Hector Campora was elected president, the first important thing he did was declare a political amnesty. That threw prison doors open for guerrillas, terrorists and all those who claimed to be prisoners of conscience. Included even were those who had kidnapped and murdered former President Pedro Aramburu, years after he left office.

Campora resigned after only a few weeks and Gen. Juan Domingo Peron was elected to office. But neither the ailing Peron, who died in 1974, nor his wife, Maria Estela, who succeeded him, were able to counter the guerrilla and terrorist onslaught that Campora's action brought on. The military removed Mrs. Peron from power in 1976, to the applause even of Peronists, and has been running the country since then.

More recently, Chile offered amnesty to the politicians who were toppled from power by the revolution of 1973 that ended three years of Marxist rule of that country, on the condition that they refrain from political agitation. Some abided by the requirement. Others did not. Recently the Chilean government exiled four of the most prominent offenders, three Marxists and Jaime Castillo, the Christian Democrat who is widely considered to be the "brains" of that party, for proclaiming their support of what the government termed "a de facto well-known Marxist organization."

The current regime in El Salvador also offered amnesty to guerrillas who would lay down their arms but there were few takers. In fact, Salvadoran Marxists seemed to regard President Jose Napoleon Duarte's offer as a sign of weakness on the government's part.

Of course, neither Argentina, Chile nor El Salvador currently enjoys much of a reputation as a representative democracy. So one might feel justified in rejecting their arguments and ignoring their experiences.

But recently Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, president of Colombia, which is widely acclaimed as one of the very few democracies in Latin America, sounded off on the question of amnesty.

"Some of my compatriots, who have good intentions but are misinformed, have come to me to ask why I am not a bit more generous with the guerrillas," Turbay said in a speech delivered in Boyaca.

"They ask me why I do not expand the amnesty, why I do not pacify the country....

"I am told: 'Mr. President, establish during your administration that kidnapping and extortion, arson and the poisoning of public waters, homicide and atrocious crimes are all subject for amnesty as long as they are for political purposes.'

"Well, if I did this, it would cost Colombia its democratic and constitutional life," Turbay declared.

"The day I yield or give in, I may get sympathy from the guerrillas, but I will also earn the hatred of the generations of Colombians who witnessed the disappearance of the inheritance of glory and dignity that we received from our forefathers."

That is the thinking on amnesty of a man whose democratic credentials are hard to question.

CHARLEY REESE

Military men are better role models

In this racket, you get to meet a lot of big shots. It occurred to me again, after a lunch with a former commander of the Strategic Air Command, that nearly all of the military big shots I have met are exceptionally fine human beings and nearly all of the political big shots are both less than exceptional and less than fine.

Charley Reese

Some of you may think I am a military groupie. This is not so. I never joined the military until the last possible minute and when they said my time was up, I left so fast my shadow couldn't find me for a week. Furthermore, the U.S. Army was — to be perfectly frank — rather glad to see me go.

I am only relaying a true observation. Nearly all politicians are likeable just as nearly all frogs are green. If they weren't likeable, they wouldn't be politicians. But likeable and admirable are not the same qualities. Very few professional politicians are really admirable, the kind of people you would want to hold up to your children as role models.

On the other hand, there are any number of military people I would be delighted for my children to emulate. There is a reason for this difference, too.

The professional military man is motivated by a genuine desire to serve his fellow man. The professional politician is motivated by a genuine desire to serve his own ego and pocketbook. The professional politicians have seen to it that they enjoy prestige, perquisites and a better lifestyle than 95 percent of the people they claim to serve. To a professional politician, self before service is instinctive. On the whole, career politicians are as vain, self-centered and petty thinking as actors.

The professional military men, however, tend to be idealists. Their instincts are in the opposite direction — away from their own welfare and toward the welfare of the country. They tend to be genuine, even earthy, but also romantics to whom such intangibles as honor and duty are realities.

The professional military man trains for and is oriented to life and death conflict. To the military man, sacrifice does not mean you have too many speeches to make. It means hardship, separation from loved ones, fear, grief, pain, agony and death. Such a furnace burns away the phonies, the con artists and the cowards in a hurry. If you tell a comrade you will cover his flank, it's not the same as promising a constituent you will look into his problem. In war, honesty and fidelity are necessities.

The professional military man makes decisions that result in life or death for the people under him and he lives with the results of those decisions forever. He doesn't have the politician's luxury of changing his vote or of evading the consequences of his decisions. I have never known a combat veteran, no matter how distant in years his battle experience, who did not remember in vivid detail the deaths of his comrades, who did not still after all those years feel the grief.

I have always contended the Constitution is on safer ground in the Pentagon than it is in the halls of Congress or even in the White House. The military men believe in the Constitution and are ready to die for it. I'm afraid if you asked the Congress to put its life on the line for the Constitution, you'd have to travel to Canada to find a quorum.

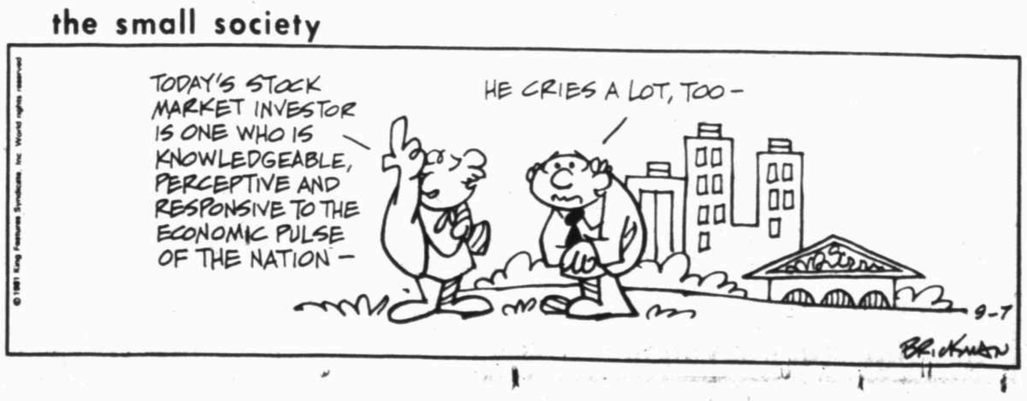

Part of the hostility the military encounters from some civilians — most of it, in fact, is nothing more than the resentment of people who know they are dealing with a better man than they will ever be.

Rules for funeral prices in works

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Efforts are under way on several fronts to give consumers more information about a sensitive subject — funerals.

The Federal Trade Commission is putting the finishing touches on a proposed rule to make it easier for people to compare prices and shop for simple funeral services.

The National Funeral Directors Association, which opposes the government plan, has come up with a proposal for an industry-wide system to handle complaints.

And a new law has taken effect in New York City putting strict limits on funeral homes and employees.

The FTC has been investigating the funeral industry for more than six years. Earlier attempts at regulation were rejected by Congress, which said consumers were adequately protected by state laws.

The latest proposal was issued in July. A final version is expected shortly, after which Congress has 90 days to exercise veto power.

The plan would require funeral directors to provide itemized price lists and give prices over the telephone if asked. It also would prohibit them from requiring caskets for cremation.

David A. Clanton, the acting chairman of the commission, said the rule was necessary because "of the inability of customers to bargain effectively for goods and services."

Richard Myers, president of the Funeral Directors Association, disagreed. He repeated earlier arguments that state and local laws offer sufficient protection, and said there was only a "very, very small percentage of people complaining about funeral services."

In an effort to handle those complaints, the association's board of governors voted recently to propose to its House of Delegates the creation of a dispute-settlement program using CAPs — Consumer Action Panels — similar to those in other industries. The panels provide impartial arbiters to settle disputes that cannot be resolved by customers and individual companies.

The New York City law is broader than the FTC proposal.

Carter conducted televised teach-in in Japan

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter was asked about crime and women's liberation in the United States at a televised teach-in with about 100 Japanese college students near here Sunday.

Speaking on the theme of the "meaning of youthfulness," Carter told the students of Kansei Gakuin University that crime among young people in the United States often involved minorities who "are excluded from authority and influence."

He said youths should follow the example of the late Martin Luther King in working for a more equal society.

The teach-in took place in a seminar house of the Methodist-run university located on a mountaintop an hour's drive from this western Japan city. Before the gathering, he attended church services with his family in a chapel there and was awarded an honorary degree by the university.

Told by a female student that Japanese women often have trouble finding good jobs, Carter said that almost all American women feel they should have complete equality and job opportunities, "but more than half prefer to get married and find the role of wife and mother exciting and fulfilling."

"I'm glad Rosalynn chose to marry me," he said. "If she had not I would probably still be a peanut farmer."

The former president also warned the young people that the future holds "more threats to peace and a greater struggle for dwindling supplies for the good life," and said young people must show moral strength and courage to keep the world situation from deteriorating.

Carter said that staying young depends on "the attitude of your heart and mind," citing the example of his mother Lillian who joined the Peace Corps at age 68 to work as a nurse in India.

At the end of the one-hour session on an outside veranda overlooking the mountains, Carter joined with the students in singing Bob Dylan's "Blowing in the Wind."

Carter, who arrived Thursday in Japan for a six-day private visit after traveling to China, later left Osaka by the high-speed "bullet train" for the 330-mile trip to Tokyo.

Soviet action has stirred up new concerns

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Proof of Soviet involvement in Angola has stirred up new concerns that Moscow might try to take advantage of the turmoil caused by the fighting over South-West Africa.

South Africa's recent attacks into Angola to wipe out black nationalist guerrillas fighting for control of South-West Africa, or Namibia, "have raised the price of admission for the other side," said David Willers, research head for the private, non-profit South African Foundation.

"The Soviets have to decide whether they want to meet that price. It will cost millions to replace the (hundreds of tons of) ammunition, weapons and vehicles confiscated by the security forces," he said.

But West German Ambassador Ekkehard Eickhoff, speaking recently in Cape Town, said Angola was being "pushed into the arms of the Soviet Union" because of the conflict on its southern border.

The South African raid into Angola that began Aug. 24 from across the South-West African border resulted in the death of four Soviets — including two lieutenant colonels and two women — caught in a skirmish between South African soldiers and guerrillas from the South-West Africa Peoples Organization. Maj. Sgt. Nicolay Feodorovich Pestretsov, 36, was captured and held at an undisclosed location.

But a South African military spokesman said Saturday that Pestretsov was captured because he refused to leave the body of his slain wife.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer confirmed that the clash was the first indication the Soviets were advising the Angolans and SWAPO guerrillas at the "platoon level."

He said it had been known that 1,400 Soviet and Eastern European advisers were working as military advisers and technicians with the Angolan armed forces.

Angola has said it was ready to invoke its mutual defense treaties with the Soviet Union and Cuba to defend its territory against South African forces. About 20,000 Cuban troops have been stationed in the former Portuguese colony since the mid-1970s.

The official Angolan news agency, Angop, reported that 11,000 South African troops were occuping nearly all of Cunene province late last week. The news agency said a South African warplane bombed a convoy of foreign journalists and Angolan officials Saturday near Cahama, 140 miles north of the South-West African border.

South Africa refused to confirm or deny the reports Sunday, saying only that those associating with SWAPO risked being attacked. It also has refused to confirm that its troop withdrawal has been completed.

The United States deplored the South African raid. But its statement that the operation had to be viewed in light of guerrilla attacks into South-West Africa, also called Namibia, and the presence of Cuban troops in Angola, underlined Reagan administration fears of Soviet expansionism.

A statement by South African Foreign Minister P.W. Botha in a television interview Thursday night said that the Namibian situation was beginning to resemble the one in Afghanistan. His suggestion of a possible Soviet invasion of the territory was an apparent play to U.S. Republican conservatives pushing for a tougher attitude toward Soviet involvement in southern Africa, and a more sympathetic one to this nation's white-minority government.

The United States, at a U.N. Security Council meeting last week, vetoed a resolution condeming South Africa, a government ostracized by most of the world for its racial segregation policies.

An experienced Western observer, who declined to be identified, described U.S.-South African relations as "dicey" and said the Americans were trying "to get Namibia settled and to help South Africa come to its senses on an internal policy."

EARS provides medical assistance

By ED HOUSEWRIGHT
Associated Press Writer

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Hattie Hancock was skeptical. She remained unconvinced until the middle of a July night when she almost died.

She had listened, she said, with a touch of disbelief when Katie Gleason from North Texas Home Health Services Inc. came out and explained how the Emergency Alert Response System worked.

All you have to do, Mrs. Gleason had said, is wear this 2-by-2½-inch pendant around your neck and if you think you need help, just mash the two buttons. Operators at a monitoring station will be alerted and paramedics will be dipatched.

Mrs. Hancock, who is 60 and lives alone, had been told about the alert system — EARS — at the kidney dialysis center where she goes for treatment. But even after the demonstration she was skeptical.

"I didn't think it would work," she said. "I didn't think I would ever need it."

She was wrong on both counts. It was about 4 a.m. July 7 when Mrs. Hancock awoke with a sharp pain in her right arm where the nurses put the needles to hook her up the kidney dialysis machine.

She hadn't gone to the dialysis center three days before like she was supposed to because her daughter's car wasn't running and no one else would take her. Whatever the reason, the pain got worse.

"My arm was just killing me," she said.

Finally, she reached to her bedside table and grabbed the transmittor and mashed the buttons. That's all she remembers.

"I guess I blacked out," she said.

She rolled off the bed and lay on the floor, unconscious, until the paramedics broke down the door — with three locks — and took her to the hospital.

"I woke up with tubes all in me," she said. "I thought I had a stroke. But I asked the doctor and he said, 'You didn't have no stroke. You just had a little seizure.' "

Mrs. Hancock thinks it might have been worse if she hadn't had EARS.

"I'd have just laid there and died because nobody stays here and nobody comes here," she said. "I'd probably have been dead by morning."

For a year now, the Texas Department of Human Resources has been sponsoring EARS through home health care companies in Dallas County, Austin, Amarillo, Coleman and Quanah. People who need medical assistance and have a limited income have been able to receive the emergency alert system at no charge.

In Dallas County, six lives have been saved by EARS, said Bob Porter, director of social services for North Texas Home Health Services.

"I think it's probably one of the best programs we offer," said Dr. Nancy Bellows, director of special initiative programs for the DHR.

Under federal budget cuts, DHR spending on social services will have to be cut 17.7 percent. But Dr. Bellows said the funding for EARS is guaranteed until next August, when the five pilot projects will be evaluated.

"We're going to make every effort to fund it," she said.

In Dallas County, 100 people have EARS. They range in age from 25 to 98 and include three quadraplegics, six blind persons, seven who are bedfast, 10 who are on kidney dialysis and 19 who are wheelchair-bound.

All might need emergency help but don't need the constant care they'd get from a nursing home or a live-in nurse, Porter said. They're people who in an emergency might not be be able to get to the telephone. That's why they need EARS.

The transmittor weighs a little more than an ounce and hangs around their neck or attaches to their belt. If they need help they can activate the transmittor and it sends a signal to a metal box about the size of a large telephone book that the phone attaches to.

The transmittor is guaranteed to work up to 150 feet away from the box but has worked from as far away as 400 feet, Porter said. When the box receives the signal from the transmittor, it dials the number of a monitoring station, which is manned at all times.

As soon as the operator gets the message, they telephone the client. If the person can answer, they question them to make sure it's an emergency before sending help. If the person doesn't answer, the operator calls a list of responders — relatives or friends — the client has provided.

A responder is asked to check on the person and see if they need help.

"The responder then takes charge and decides, 'Do I call the doctor? Do I call the family? Do I call the ambulance?" Porter said.

For most clients, that's the procedure that's followed. But for people who are known to be high risks, especially heart patients, an ambulance is sent out as soon as the signal is received, saving time and sometimes lives.

Every 12 or 24 hours — depending on the client — EARS must be reset. To do that, the person just picks up the telephone receiver and puts it back down. This tells the operator that the person is all right, that they aren't in an emergency where they can't reach their transmittor. If the 12 or 24 hours passes without the person resetting EARS, the operator automatically calls the client.

"If you don't summon aid, this machine is going to summon aid for you," Porter said.

The system even has a built-in battery that allows it to function for eight days without electricity in the case of a blackout.

Porter said less than 4 percent of all calls are false alarms.

"I talked to the fire chief in Dallas, and he said the false alarm rate for fire trucks is about 6 percent," he said. "These folks have demonstrated a lot of responsibility in handling this equipment. Most of the false alarms have been accidents."

"It makes me feel better," said Mrs. Hancock. "Before I had it, I was here by myself and I didn't have nobody to contact. Since I've had it and had to use it I feel safer."

Soviets increasing pace of war games

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is stepping up the pace of its "West-81" war games involving about 100,000 troops in land, air and sea operations in the western part of the country, official news reports said.

The Soviet reports offered few details about where the mock battles were being fought or how they were proceeding. One radio report said a unit had passed through the Byelorussian town of Polotsk, about 248 miles from Poland.

Newspapers reported Sunday that sea operations were "gaining in scope" and on land "the tension of combat training actions is increasing with each hour." The newspaper Soviet Patriot said the main operations planned for the maneuvers had yet to come.

The Soviet Union revealed the number of troops taking part in "West-81" on Saturday. The disclosure followed complaints from Washington that the number should have been released at least 21 days before the war games started Friday under the 1975 Helsinki agreements.

Soviet news articles continued to claim that the exercises are designed to boost the "defense potential" of the Soviet Union, presumbly against the Western alliance. Western maneuvers are routinely referred to in the Soviet Union as designed to prepare aggression.

Referring to current NATO naval exercises near Norway, the newspapers said Sunday that the "steel armadas of NATO" were exercising "on the north flank of this aggressive bloc."

The Soviet maneuvers, which end Saturday, coincide with the first national congress of Poland's independent labor union Solidarity in the Polish city of Gdansk. The labor federation, the only one of its kind in the Communist bloc, has been sharply criticized by the Soviet Union. U.S. officials said Friday in Washington that the maneuvers could be aimed at intimidating the Polish labor movement.

Moscow Radio continued to issue warnings over the Polish situation Sunday, saying outside forces were trying to split the socialist camp.

"New facts keep showing that anti-socialist forces inside Poland would never have tried such brazen sallies against the party and state, never would have dared to blacken the image of socialism and call for undermining it, if not for the powerful support from outside that they put their hopes in," the radio said. It also noted what it called the "raging of anti-Sovietism" in Poland.

The radio report reasserted Soviet pledges that any attempt to undermine the unity of socialist nations would be met with "resolute rebuff."

Boston mayor helps make honeymoon happy

BOSTON (AP) — Thanks to a loan from Mayor Kevin H. White, honeymooners Lee and Kim Burleson of Bath, N.Y., will drive home from Boston, but not in the same vehicle that brought them to the city.

The couple arrived Wednesday on a delayed honeymoon trip to Boston and Cape Cod.

Kim, 30, and Lee, 25, told police they parked their 20-foot white camper on Atlantic Avenue to tour the Quincy Market area. When they returned, the camper was gone. So were a stereo, clothes, a camera, $900 in cash and their pets, Emily, a gray tiger cat, and Kaluha, a black half-poodle, half Schnauser.

On Saturday, the Burlesons' luck improved. A South Boston resident located Emily and the mayor presented them with the keys to a car in a ceremony at City Hall Plaza.

White said the loaned car was confiscated in a drug bust.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite, or maybe because of, the pitching performance of conductor Zubin Mehta, the Country Music All-Stars outscored the New York Philharmonic in a benefit softball game.

By an uneven 22-8, the All-Stars won the game staged Saturday to raise money for the Tennessee Performing Arts Center. The Philharmonic was scheduled to play a concert there Sunday to commemorate the center's first anniversary.

Mehta, 45, who grew up in India before moving to Vienna to study music, was lifted in the fourth inning of the seven-inning game. The burly righthander said in a pregame interview he was more familiar with the game of cricket than softball.

"In fact, this is just the third softball game I've played in my life," a laughing Mehta said. "I'm here because I think pitching is the safest position."

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — When reruns of "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" come on television Saturday mornings, Harriet Nelson tunes in.

"I enjoy them a lot and find myself laughing out loud at them," she said. "Not that I had that much to do. I was just there. I was sort of the cement that held everything together."

She's not as interested in watching herself as in watching Ozzie. She misses her husband of nearly 40 years, who died of cancer six years ago at age 69.

"We were almost like one person. We used to start from Hollywood and drive down here and and we never stopped talking — and this was after almost 40 years of marriage," she said recently. "We wouldn't talk about the boys, the family or the show. It would be general talk, sort of philosophizing. We had total communication."

The two years after his death were "like a nightmare," she said. For a long time, she found it too painful to watch the show.

"I must say, I'm beginning to appreciate how funny he was," she said. As for her role, Mrs. Nelson laughed, "Nobody recognizes me without an apron and a coffee pot in my hand."

She believes the show had something to say to audiences, "the decency of the characters for one thing. There was honor and principles — they were just decent people."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The district attorney's office has dropped drug charges against rock singers Sylvester Stewart and George Clinton.

The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday that authorities discovered there wasn't enough of the suspicious substance that was found in their car to conduct tests.

Stewart, known as Sly of the group Sly and the Family Stone, and Clinton, leader of Parliament-Funkadelic, were arrested Aug. 20 for investigation of possessing cocaine and paraphernalia.

They were released on bail the same day.

Miss America correspondent catches eye of counterparts

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — One of the big eye-catchers at the Miss America Pageant is not one of the lissome contestants, but a rookie reporter covering Miss Texas for a small news syndicate.

Rita Jenrette, 31, ex-wife of former Rep. John Jenrette of South Carolina, said she will file daily dispatches on the pageant and on Sheri Ryman, 20, of Texas City.

"Oh, you won't see too much of me.... I don't want to take away from Miss Texas," Mrs. Jenrette said Sunday.

Mrs. Jenrette was featured in Playboy magazine last April in a photo layout in which she posed topless. Earlier she described a wild Washington life that included a lovemaking session with Jenrette on the steps of the Capitol.

Jenrett was convicted Oct. 7, 1980 of taking a bribe in the Abscam scandal. He resigned his Democratic seat last December.

Mrs. Jenrette said she will portray the Miss America Pageant in a positive light to Miss Ryman's fans in Texas and in five columns for a Philadelphia newspaper.

"Journalists always think that good journalism is go-get-em Mike Wallace type journalism," she said. "But is it journalism or is it sensationalism? ...Isn't it a comforting thing to know that this wholesome pageant goes on every year?"

Miss Ryman said she's thrilled by her celebrated scribe.

"Rita's a fabulous person, but frankly I didn't know what to expect," said Miss Ryman, a junior at North Texas State University. "She is warm and congenial and, above all, she's no dumb blonde."

"I want to get to know Sheri on a one-to-one level. I'm developing a relationship," Mrs. Jenrette said.

The pageant chairman, Albert A. Marks, said there will be no favoritism for Mrs. Jenrette, declaring, "She'll be treated like any other reporter."

'Ultra'-rich Texans target of exclusive magazine

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — There's a new magazine on the market, but you can't buy it.

Only wealthy Texans will be seeing "Ultra" magazine, and that's what advertisers are paying for, say the two Houston entrepreneurs who created it.

Houston apartment developer Harold Farb said that before Ultra, there was a crying need for a publication targeted at rich Texans, like him, who want to read about fashion, art, travel — and themselves.

Ultra won't appear at local news stands. There is no price on its cover, because it's not for sale. It's mailed at no charge to a carefully selected list of Texans whose average annual income is roughly $150,000, said publisher Carter Rochelle.

"We're not an investigative publication," he said. "We're a good news, good life publication. We don't ignore what's out there, but we're about the 'beau monde,' and the people who enjoy it."

"Ultra is optimistic, it's upbeat — it's a happy publication," Farb said. "We hope people will look forward to reading it, because they're not going to find anything in there that's going to be depressing."

The magazine certainly won't depress you — unless you happen to be poor.

The first cover shows an immaculately dressed woman handing a trophy to an man on a polo pony. The first three pages of advertising feature Tiffany's, Neiman-Marcus and the International Gold Bullion Exchange.

There are articles on fashion, polo and the art of diamond buying.

This is Texas? It certainly is, said Rochelle.

"There aren't too many states where the circumstances are ideal for a magazine like this," he said. "Most of them don't have the geographic spread of affluence and going's on."

So far, Ultra is being sent to about 70,000 Texans, whose names were gleaned from country club rosters and social registers.

Rochelle believes Ultra's exclusivity will heighten its appeal.

"I do believe very thoroughly that this magazine is going to catch the public's fancy. People are going to want it," he said.

"If you tell someone they can't have something, they want it more."

But Farb wants a high-fashion, good taste image, not charges of elitism. And it's obvious he hasn't reconciled this notion with publisher Rochelle — a public relations and marketing expert.

"As young men and women start out, a lot of them would like to be rich someday and many of them have good taste," Farb told Rochelle in front of a reporter. "How can they get a copy of this magazine? You know, they're not in the $100,000 range right now."

"If you're really interested in Ultra magazine, you can get Ultra magazine," Rochelle responded. "But we're not going to dilute our demographics to the point that it disturbs the advertisers. But you can get it if you want it."

"How?" Farb asked.

"Get one of your friends who gets Ultra magazine to tear out the coupon for you.

"What we're going to try to have is a very up-scale magazine that will appeal to people who like the good life," Rochelle said. "That's going to include a lot of people with champagne tastes and Champale pocketbooks, and we want them to have it, too. We're not going to say, 'Sorry, you can't have it.'"

But Rochelle says Ultra's narrowly targeted audience is what appeals to its high-class advertisers. And, he says, even the publishing schedule is designed around that audience. Ultra won't publish in July and August — that's when everybody who's anybody takes his annual jaunt abroad.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Some mutaul funds avoid income taxes

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My broker recommends I buy shares of a new "tax-managed mutual fund." What makes this fund different than other mutual funds? Also, how would you measure its "pros" and "cons"?

A. The big difference is that you won't have to pay income taxes on your investment in that fund each year — if that fund's management succeeds in operating it as planned. You'll postpone any tax bite until you redeem your shares. Then, your profit will be taxable as a capital gain.

There are now about a half-dozen tax-managed mutual funds. Because they have operated successfully, to date, their "pros" outweigh their "cons."

All mutual funds collect dividends from stocks and-or interest from bonds and other debt securities they hold. After deducting their operating expenses, most mutual funds pass that money along to fund shareholders as dividends. Under a provision of the Internal Revenue Code, those mutual funds qualify as "regulated investment companies" and don't pay tax on that income they pass through to shareholders. The money is taxable to shareholders as dividend income.

A tax-managed mutual fund, however, does not pay dividends to its shareholders. Instead of being a regulated investment company, it's tax status is that of a corporation. As such, it does not have to pay income tax on 85 percent of the dividends it receives from stocks it holds. And the fund uses other, rather complicated provisions of the tax code to reduce its taxable income to zero each year.

As a result, the tax-managed fund pays no income taxes. And, because they receive no dividends, that fund's shareholders have no income tax liability until they cash in their shares. Assuming the fund's management has done a good job handling the fund's investments, shareholders should be able to redeem at a profit. That, of course, cannot be guaranteed.

Q. We haven't been able to obtain much information about "closed-end funds." In reviewing the listings of a number of these funds on the New York Stock Exchange, they appear to be favorably priced to provide good yields. Is there any way these funds can be compared to mutual funds?

A. They are similar to mutual funds in many respects. You're asking about what are correctly called "closed-end investment companies," although they go by a variety of other names.

A mutual fund is an "open-end investment company" — open-end because a mutual fund stands ready to redeem its shares on any business day. When you want cash for your mutual fund shares, you don't "sell" them. You "redeem" them, by turning them back to the fund. Except for the handful of mutual funds charging a small redemption fee, your shares are redeemed at net asset value — the dollars and cents value behind the shares on that day.

Most mutual funds continuously offer new shares to the investing public. You buy "no-load" mutual fund shares at net asset value and "load" mutual fund shares at net asset value, plus commission.

Closed-end investment companies do not redeem their shares and seldom offer additional shares for sale. Shares of some closed-end investment companies are listed on stock exchanges. Others are traded in the over-the-counter market.

Because there is no "floor" of net asset value for closed-enders' shares, most trade in the marketplace at discounts, below asset value. If you pay $800, plus commission, for shares of a closed-end investment company trading at a 20 percent discount, you buy shares backed by $1,000 of assets.

That can, and often does, result in a higher dividend yield on your money. On that score, closed-enders can be worthwhile investments.

But don't overlook the fact that, when and if you sell, you will most likely have to do so at a discount. The prices of closed-end investment company shares can move up or down, as other stocks do.

Texans will get break in student aid cutbacks

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Young Texans can weather cutbacks in federal aid for college students better than people in most other states, says Texas' commissioner of higher education.

One reason is a loan program dreamed up in the 1960s by a former East Texas school teacher, Gov. John Connally and a tough-talking conservative senator from Amarillo.

"Texas is one of the best states in the country to be in if you want to go to college. Tuition is inordinately low. Texas has one of the best loan programs of any state in the country. ... I don't see any reason for any student with college-level competence to be denied an opportunity to go to college," Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth said in an interview.

Mack Adams, assistant commissioner for student services, said the state's Hinson-Hazlewood loan program has $20 million to lend and can raise another $79.5 million by selling bonds.

"We could carry the load for a year or more without selling bonds," Adams told an interviewer.

Ashworth said he sees no need to ask the Legislature and the voters to increase the authorized amount of Hinson-Hazlewood bonds, partly because of repayments from the more than 140,000 students who received loans in the past.

"We could have a substantial increase in the number of students borrowing from the Hinson-Hazlewood program and still have enough funds from the available cash we have and the ability to sell more bonds," he said.

Don Davis, associate director of student financial aid at the University of Texas at Austin, said there has been a slight increase in UT's Hinson-Hazlewood loans this fall.

"But next year we anticipate they will double or triple," Davis said, partly because of new federal restrictions and partly because a tight money market has virtually eliminated bank loans as a source of college money.

"Since Hinson-Hazlewood are the only ones that will have money, we will be using them more often," Davis said.

Congress, prodded by President Reagan, recently tightened eligibility requirements for federal grants and the federally subsidized Guaranteed Student Loan Program. The changes take full effect on Oct. 1. Students whose family incomes exceed $30,000 will be ineligible, in most instances, for guaranteed loans. There also will be a 5 percent "origination fee" and higher interest on the loans. Congress also voted limits on total spending for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

Adams predicted an increase in Hinson-Hazlewood loans because new federal rules probably will make it "harder for low-income students to find sources of loans."

Demand for state loans has been slow since the federal government eased requirements for its grants and loans in the mid-1970s.

The state lent $14 million to 8,500 students in the past 12 months, compared with $25 million a year when the Hinson-Hazelwood program peaked in the early 1970s.

Undergraduates can borrow up to $2,500 a year, graduate students $5,000, at interest rates of 9 percent for those who borrow for the first time this year. Previous borrowers pay 7 percent. Students must start repaying nine months after they leave school.

Adams stressed that the state program is geared to meeting genuine need and not just to smoothing over a bumpy spot in a family's finances.

"This is not a loan of convenience. It is a loan of need. At all times, it is the loan of last resort. We are here to pick up whatever slack remains after other sources have been tapped," he said.

Students apply for their loans at campus financial aids offices, which tells the Texas College Coordinating Board how much a student needs.

Voters approved an $85 million bond program in 1965 and added another $200 million in 1969.

Legislation submitting the original Texas Opportunity Plan bond proposal to the voters was recommended by Connally and sponsored by the late Rep. George Hinson, D-Mineola, a former teacher, and blunt-spoken Sen. Grady Hazelwood, D-Amarillo.

Both saw the need for a state-administered program of low-interest loans with a long repayment time to help Texans through college. Hinson, who died in 1970, said he was motivated by "the bad time I had getting a college education."

In its early years, the Coordinating Board had a hard time getting many borrowers to repay their loans after they left school.

But a get-tough policy has improved the flow of cash back into the program from its past beneficiaries.

Comptroller Bob Bullock's computers locate delinquent borrowers among state employees, vendors and teachers who quit and pull their money out of the Teacher Retirement System. Payment is withheld until the borrower begins repaying his or her loan.

In addition, 35,000 borrowers have been sued.

The show may not go on

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission has thrown a twist into the show two comedians have been performing for 12 years, but John Bowley and John Wilson don't find it funny at all.

Officers walked onstage one night and arrested the pair for telling obscene jokes and singing dirty ditties.

The comedians and club owner Robert Peterson were handcuffed and led away during a performance Aug. 13 at their new club, Bowley and Wilson's Easy Parlor. If convicted of misdemeanor obscenity charges, they could be jailed for up to a year.

Peterson also could be fined or have his liquor license suspended or revoked, depending upon what the ABC decides at an administrative meeting in Austin.

The case, with its emphasis on language rather than nudity or other physical contact, could set a legal precedent.

Even ABC District Supervisor E.P. McCracken, who requested the charges be filed, says he knows of no previous criminal prosecution of a comedian on obscenity charges.

"I may lose this one," he concedes, but he points out that the Alcoholic Beverage Code outlaws lewd and vulgar language in a bar, "and the kind of language they were using out there, I thought, was lewd and vulgar."

While Bowley admits that he uses vulgarity, he says he uses it "as defined in the dictionary: that which is used by the common people, that which is popular.

"But I'm not doing anything that's obscene or immoral. I'm doing a comedy routine. The show is written and produced to be funny. It's not written to be dirty."

The two formed their comedy team 12 years ago, when both were in master's degree programs at Southern Methodist University.

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity brothers and roommates, Bowley and Wilson both "were heading toward advertising" when comedy overtook their lives, Bowley says. "It was just a hobby that got out of hand."

They have cut three albums since 1970 and spent nine years performing at Up Your Alley before moving up lively Greenville Avenue in June to their new club.

Four years ago, Bowley and Wilson had their first run-in with the ABC when Up Your Alley was threatened with temporary suspension of its liquor license because of several alleged liquor law violations, including the language used in the comedians' routine.

Jim Wallace, owner of the club, said he paid a fine in lieu of the suspension and persuaded Bowley and Wilson to tone down their language. No charges were filed.

Before he and the comedians were arrested in August, Peterson says the ABC offered him the option of paying a $1,500 fine or taking a voluntary 10-day suspension instead of facing formal charges.

But Peterson refused because he says McCracken wouldn't tell him how the comedy routine would have to be changed.

"I can't tell a person how to run their business," counters McCracken. "I can't tell a person what to put in their act, but (Peterson) knew what was wrong with it. He knew what I was talking about."

McCracken said the arrests followed a call from a woman who complained her 16-year-old daughter had been exposed to vulgarity while visiting the club.

"The only reason (charges were filed), I think, was that a 16-year-old was involved," McCracken says.

But Peterson says the club does not allow under-age patrons inside.

"We check IDs at the door and no one who is too young to drink gets in," he says.

Bowley and Wilson say they are "angry" and "scared" about the charges against them, but they refuse to change their act.

Mother removes IRA son from hunger strike

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The mother of jailed Irish Republican Army hunger striker Lawrence McKeown removed him from the fast Sunday, and an IRA splinter group said it would reduce its participation in the deadly protest.

McKeown is the second hunger striker in three days to be taken off the fast by his family and the fifth to leave the hunger strike since it began March 1 at the Maze prison outside Belfast. Officials said McKeown had lapsed into a coma Sunday in his 70th day without food when his mother authorized medical attention for him.

Ten members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and its splinter groups have died in the hunger strike started by Bobby Sands who died May 5.

Shortly after McKeown's fast was ended, the Irish National Liberation Army, an IRA splinter group, said it would not replace Michael Devine, its hunger striker who died Aug. 20.

However, the INLA announcement said the IRA "can be sure of our full militant support for the campaign." One INLA member, Liam McCluskey, is among the five current hunger strikers and the organization gave no indication he would end his fast.

The group said it could no longer afford to contribute one INLA man to the hunger strike for every three IRA fasters because the British government is "far more intransigent than we had first expected."

"We have only 28 protesting prisoners," it said, "and if we continue to maintain this ratio all our prisoners will be dead within six months."

The IRA is seeking to end British rule in predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic which is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic. The INLA split from the IRA in 1970 and is considered to be more militant and farther to the left in its political views.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office said McKeown, 24, slipped into a coma early Sunday, and his mother — at his bedside in the prison hospital ward — immediately signed documents authorizing emergency care.

McKeown, was is serving a life sentence on charges including the attempted murder of a policeman, was transferred to a Belfast hospital for treatment.

"Obviously, we're pleased," said a government source who asked not to be identified.

"Anyone that comes off fast is good news... but one doesn't know how much hope it signals."

Officially, the British government reserved comment, and the government source said, "We don't want to put pressure on relatives who are considering taking any of the men off fast."

Irish nationalist campaigner Bernadette Devlin McAliskey said the hunger strike would continue until British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher agrees to grant the prisoner's demands.

"Mrs. Thatcher has had no qualms watching 10 die and obviously will have no qualms watching it go on for a longer period," Mrs. McAliskey said.

The five jailed guerrillas still fasting are demanding treatment that would amount to status as political prisoners. The British government refuses.

In Dundalk in the neighboring Irish Republic, leaders of the National H-Block-Armagh Committee that is coordinating the hunger strike met Sunday. A spokesman said the withdrawal of McKeown and of Matthew Devlin on Friday from the fast was a "major point" of discussion.

"It is not the first time it has happened, and obviously we respect the views of the hunger strikers and their families," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Devlin, who had gone 52 days without food, was withdrawn from the protest by his family after he had become unconscious. The 31-year-old convicted Irish Republican Army bomber was recuperating Sunday in a Belfast hospital.

Patrick Quinn's fast was ended by his family on July 31 after 46 days without food and Patrick McGeowan's strike was ended Aug. 20 after 42 days. Another hunger striker, Brendan McLaughlin, gave up his fast May 28 after 14 days when doctors said he would soon die if his bleeding ulcer was not treated.

A British government source noted that, aside from McLaughlin, none of the guerrillas who left the hunger strike was conscious when the decision was taken. "But none who've been taken off have come back on."

Rep. Martin asked another cousin to stage shooting

DALLAS (AP) — Another cousin says state Rep. Mike Martin asked him to serve as gunman in an allegedly staged shooting about a month before the legislator was wounded outside his Austin trailer home.

James Grant, 18, of Longview, said Martin sought his help, saying "he was wanting to get publicity and he felt this would be the way to do it."

Grant's half-brother, Charles Goff, 29, has told authorities he was the one who shot Martin July 31 in an incident the freshman legislator allegedly arranged to win voters' sympathy before a state senate race in Longview.

Martin has called Goff's story a "lie," and now attributes the shooting to a political conspiracy in Longview. He first blamed it on a satanic cult.

The Longview Republican was indicted on charges of aggravated perjury after both he and Goff testified before a Travis County grand jury.

Goff said Martin also had him make a series of threatening telephone calls to political supporters to bolster the story that a cult was after him. Goff was charged with making terroristic threats, a misdemeanor.

Grant, who said he also has testified before the grand jury, said Saturday he told law enforcement officers about Martin's offer shortly after Goff surrendered.

"There's been lots of lying and so I decided to put some truth in the matter," Grant said.

"Mike approached me about the same thing he talked Charles into about a month before the shooting. He didn't offer me a specific amount of money; he just said I would never need money again."

But he said he turned Martin down because "I thought it was kind of dumb, myself. I didn't think it would work."

Grant said he and Martin drove around Longview for about 45 minutes discussing the proposed shooting.

"He wasn't getting the recognition he felt he deserved," Grant said. "He wanted me to help out by being his gunman."

He said Martin outlined a plan identical to the July 31 shotgun ambush, in which the legislator was wounded in the arm.

Grant said Martin called him the night before the shooting to warn that it was about to happen and to ask him not to reveal that he knew it was staged.

Boy found in field

LAKE PARK, Iowa (AP) — A farmer guided by a psychic's map found a missing 2½-year-old boy huddled in a corn field just hours after the youth's tearful father told a search party, "Justin will no longer be with us."

But George DeGroot of rural Ocheyedan refused to give up and found Justin Stahly about 9:50 p.m. Saturday, shivering in a field south of the boy's farm home where he had disappeared about noon Thursday.

"We said we needed a miracle and we got a miracle," said Jeff Stahly, the father who had announced about two hours earlier that he would call off the search.

The women are participants in a puppet show presented to school students prior to touring the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Persons interested in becoming a volunteer at the museum should call the museum. A four-week session for new trainees begins Tuesday.

Recruitment drive is underway for Petroleum Museum volunteers

Volunteers are being recruited for the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

A recent welcoming coffee for new docent trainees acquainted them with certified docents. Purpose was to explain the new training program which begins Tuesday to be held every Tuesday and Thursday for four weeks.

Those interested in being a volunteer, but unable to attend each session may obtain tapes made each day of training.

One of the major projects of the volunteers is the puppet show.

"Written by Sue Harris, the script attempts to enhance interest of school children in visiting the museum," explained Dorothy Campbell, docent chairman. This puppet show was presented for the first time to docents attending the coffee.

This new program will be taken into the schools to be shown to fourth graders prior to their school tour to the Petroleum Museum.

Serving as organizer for the show was Eloise Elgin. Participating in staging, preparation and acting were Shirley Hodges, Vera Rogers, Norma Baker, Jean Walters, Linnie Donnely, Carol Tipton, Fena Berry and Gail Miller.

The puppets were created by Sandy Hayes.

Persons interested in becoming docents may call the museum to take part in this month's training. Docents conduct tours through the museum Monday through Saturday. Approximately 8,000 school children from Midland, Odessa and surrounding areas toured the museum led by docents last year.

"Retirees in the oil industry may find an interest in leading adult tours during the weekdays," suggested Mrs. Campbell.

Docent committee members hosting the coffee were Moira Attwell, social chairman; Mrs. Elgin, puppet chairman; Shirley Rogers, telephone chairman; Mary Emma Bennett, Junior League liaison; Mrs. Walters, recruitment; and Mrs. Campbell.

Hard look

DUDLEY, Mass. (AP) — Eyeglass wearers who actively pursue sports, hobbies and other leisure-time occupations are taking a look at a new, lightweight lens that resists scratches and hard knocks.

According to U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission statistics, more than two-thirds of eye injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms result from some mishap involving a product. The study also revealed that eye injuries are not limited to select age groups or activities.

To afford protection for the sportsman, hobbiest and handyman who wear eyeglasses, Gentex Corp. has introduced a hard-coated polycarbonate single vision corrective lens that is one-half the weight of glass lenses. Polycarbonate is an impact-resistant plastic used in bulletproof windows among other applications.

Women Voters League to conduct seminar

The Midland League of Women Voters will conduct a seminar entitled "To Focus Your Fall On Our Midland League" at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Thursday at 2010 Harvard.

The event will concentrate on local members and their expertise in various fields of League related study.

Kathleen Gilluly will explain the League's participation in Voter's Service. Marion Kimberly will discuss Women's Issues. Midge Erskine will give a Water and Natural Resources update. Betty Sheeler will discuss housing needs in Midland as well as involvement in local government. Anne Swendig will elaborate on the League's upcoming Health Care Item which will be the first topic in a series of League unit discussions in September.

Faye Van Blake Williams will review Human Resources. Evelyn Gould will highlight Redistricting and Reapportionment and Charleen Roseberry will present a report on public school finance and elaborate on the League's local Study Item of Evaluating the Curriculum in the Midland Secondary Schools.

Membership is open to all citizens of voting age and guests are encouraged to visit League unit meetings and participate in League functions. Dues are payable at any time throughout the yer. Members receive a subscription service which is optional and includes background information on upcoming legislation and items of local, state and national concern.

The League is non-partisan, which means it does not support or oppose any political candidate or party. The League acts as a grass roots organization by serving as a training ground for active political and governmental participation.

The League meets on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. in various member's homes.

Current officers for 1981 include Terri Trenthem, president; Pat Stanley, first vice-president; Nancy Cassin, second vice-president; Marijo King, secretary; Bonnie Waibel, treasurer. Board of Directors consist of Sylvia Drew, Fay Williams, Carolyn Wallace, Betty Sheeler, Midge Erskine, Kathy Gilluly, Janet Pritchett and Cookie Wetendorf.

Pickup your miles

BURLINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Dick Berggren's 1975 pickup truck has traveled 100,000 miles, and he expects to add at least another 20,000 miles.

There is no reason your car or truck can't travel that distance, too, says Berggren, editor of a car racing magazine.

Certain car parts require cleaning at intervals, he says. Those include the carburetor, which can be cleaned by spraying it inside with an aerosol cleaner available from any auto parts store.

"Follow the direction on the can, and repeat the procedure every six months," he said.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Get organized with a handy file system for hints

DEAR HELOISE:

Would you please share your system of filing hints so one can find (and use) them when needed? I'm suffering from an extreme case (I hope not fatal) of clutter.

I started this letter to you three months ago! I really need help getting organized!

Please, please save me. Thanks a million. — Karen Van Nostram

+ + +

Hang on! It's not that hard a job. If I can manage (eventually) to find a hint among thousands of file cards, ANYONE can come up with a filing system.

Here in the office, over the years with different secretaries and each thinking differently, we've found filing them alphabetically by subject matter the best, so far. Of course, it's necessary to cross-reference some.

For instance: Removing ballpoint ink from a shirt using hairspray can be filed under "shirt," "ink," "stain," or "hairspray," with cross references to the remaining three. See what I mean?

We keep hoping for the day when we can computerize our files and just punch a button for an instant idea. Doesn't that sound fantastic! Dial-a-hint...

Enough dreaming! Just get the main thought of the hint and file it under a sub-heading, such as Auto, Baby, Bath, Kitchen, Laundry, Furniture.

Sometimes underlining the main subject in red helps you spot the hint quicker.

Readers have sent in their various methods of filing hints. Some use a self-sticking photograph album, others file the hint where it's used, such as in the laundry room, above the stove, in the linen closet, bathroom cabinet, you name it.

In our office, we simply make a heading of the subject, give a short description, glue the hint onto a 3 x 5 card and file it accordingly. Quick and easy (sometimes). Hope you find it to be, too.

Just keep clipping those hints and filing them away, though, 'cause you never know when you'll need one. — Hugs, Heloise

BABY BED

Dear Heloise: When camping in a trailer with a very tiny baby, especially along with others, and sleeping room is limited, make a bed in the bathtub for the baby.

Makes a comfortable one of well padded with a blanket or quilt and baby can sleep safe and sound. (Of course, be sure there are no drippy faucets). — Mrs. Pam Janderhave

+ + +

Be sure the baby is small enough that he can't turn on the faucet. — Heloise

BURNED BEANS

Dear Heloise: When cooking dry beans, should the water cook out and the beans burn, don't add water to them.

Instead, just set the pan in cold water, then pour the unburned into another pan. Add more water and also more seasonings if desired.

They will not taste burned. — H.B.S.

COOKIE CUTTER

Dear Heloise: Cutting soft, hot cookies with a knife to separate them sometimes tears them apart. Using a pizza cutter works so much better.

Try it the next time you make a batch of cookies. — Mrs. Ruth Cumbow

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: I've been a widow for less than a year, and had to retire several years ago.

My evenings are long and lonely, so I crochet — anything from afghans to stuffed toys.

Please tell your readers if they do not have a hobby or interest, to learn one now while they are able.

It sure helps a person keep her wits about her. — E. in Ohio

NEEDLE THREADING

Dear Heloise: Perhaps some of your readers do not know that there are needles available for hand sewing that are called "self-threading."

The eye of the needle has an open slot at the top where the thread can be pulled down through. No more trying to poke the thread through the eye.

It also has a regular eye for those who prefer it.

Any department store or fabric shop will have them. Just ask a salesperson if you can't find them. — Anita Stickney

IRON-ON MAGIC

Dear Heloise: I've finally found the solution to my problem of a blouse with one lapel that refused to lie flat.

No matter how I pulled and tugged, or pinned on the underside, it would buckle.

I cut a small piece of the iron-on bondable interfacing, fitting it into the offending lapel.

Just make sure it fits smoothly and doesn't show from the right side.

Success, at last! — Lu

Rental furniture industry growing

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Life sometimes has a way of imitating fiction.

In fairy tales, genies can produce magic carpets which transport heroes and heroines to new lives in far-off castles.

Today, instead of genies there are corporations which transfer employees to distant cities at short notice. In the new location, the employee is often accommodated in lodgings whose rented furnishings he gets to choose, while the company pays the bill.

In personal terms, it is rather like a fairy tale transplanted and settled in new surroundings few days. But it is big business, not magic, that is responsible for a startling growth in the rental furniture industry in recent years.

From simple beginnings little more than a decade ago, the industry today reports receipts in excess of $400 million a year.

Ernest Rosenfeld, president of the Furniture Rental Association of America whose 60 corporate members represent about 300 rental establishments, says "close to half a million people are renting furniture at present."

Approximately 80 percent of their business is directly or indirectly associated with large national and multinational companies, said Rosenfeld.

While corporate employees are the primary beneficiaries of furniture rental services, others also make use of them.

"Newly divorced persons, families whose homes have been burned, people who have sold a house and have not yet permanently relocated as well as sports and entertainment figures are others who make up the clientele of rental firms," said Rosenfeld.

While the reasons and personalities of the individuals vary, many of their needs and furniture tastes appear to be similar, said Rosenfeld, who also is president of International Furniture Rentals of New York.

Typically, clients choose furniture in the upper medium price range in contemporary styles. Lately, they have been selecting a more luxurious style of furniture in which plush, overscaled upholstery and case pieces with heavy wood trim predominate.

Clients tend to rent all they need to fill the space in which they will settle temporarily whether it is a one-bedroom or studio apartment, as is typical, or a four-bedroom house. Besides the usual sofas, chairs, tables, beds and cabinets, they rent accessories such as paintings, lamps, area rugs and even television sets.

It takes most individuals an hour or so to pick out their furnishings. They are encouraged to come to a rental showroom prepared with the measurements and other particulars of each room.

Salespersons help clients make their selections, often laying out the room arrangement on paper. The sales staff is frequently called on to provide decorating advice and to coordinate colors to be used in the room.

According to Rosenfeld, most rental firms go out of their way to be helpful to their VIP clients.

"If necessary, we will send someone out to the home to get the measurements. We pick people up if they are without transportation. In fact, we'll do almost anything to satisfy a client," he said.

That includes accepting the return of an item or two the client decides was a mistake and the substitution of something else.

Furniture can be rented for as little as three months or as long as three or more years. However, the typical rental period at Rosenfeld's firm is about 16 months. Clients receive better terms on rentals of a year or longer than shorter-term rentals.

Renters pay a monthly fee, depending on the quantity and costliness of the furniture chosen, ranging from about $130 for a one-bedroom apartment to $400 to $700 for furniture for a three-bedroom house. In approximately 75 percent of the rentals, the employer directly or indirectly pays for the furniture rental.

Even at the upper end of the scale, companies find paying the fee is less costly than paying to ship an employee's furnishings into and out of the area, said Rosenfeld.

Renters receive an option to purchase the furniture which they may exercise within a year of rental. But only about 8 to 10 percent of clients actually do purchase.

Rosenfeld says that rental companies are pleased by that.

"We are not here to sell furniture to people," he explains. "That's what retail stores are for. What we offer is convenience and service.

"We make it possible for someone to relocate and get settled immediately. They don't have to waste time in buying furniture. Instead, they can get right down to work."

Administration insists skies are safer

BY ROBERT PARRY
and
H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan charged that too few controllers "working unreasonable hours with obsolete equipment has placed the nation's air travelers in unwarranted danger."

Today, five weeks into the air traffic controllers' strike, there are about half as many controllers.

They are working longer hours.

And their equipment isn't getting any less obsolete.

Federal aviation officials have been back-pedaling furiously from Reagan's campaign rhetoric, but still the question: Is it safe to fly?

There is no conclusive answer, but at least this much is true:

Since the strike began Aug. 3, there has been no commercial air accident; the relationship between working controllers and pilots, once verging on animosity, is unusually cordial; and all sides agree the government's decision to cut flights by one-fourth has provided a new margin of safety.

The Reagan administration insists the airways are safer because fewer planes are flying farther apart under a new computerized "flow control" system. The government reports a sharp drop in near-misses since the strike began.

The striking Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization concedes that fewer flights reduce the risk of an accident, but the union says that the added safety buffer is wiped out by undermanning the traffic control system.

Moreover, some experts on advanced technology contend the government might be underestimating the impact of firing half the controller workforce. They say the true test is not far off: winter weather creates significantly more problems for air traffic than summer.

"If you have a series of unpredictable events, a computer malfunction, bad weather, and an unexpected increase in general aviation, you could have problems," said Harley Shaiken, an expert on the use of computers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"And on top of that you have the intangible factors of fatigue and overconfidence" as controllers become accustomed to the system that on the surface appears to be working, he added.

With nearly 12,000 PATCO members fired after launching an illegal strike, the union charges that the government is minimizing the problem of fatigue and inexperience among the working controllers. And the union says the administration is understating the number of recent safety violations.

"How far are they going to go with a system that is unsafe, how far are they going to go in their continued efforts to try to convince the people that it is safe?" PATCO president Robert E. Poli complained recently.

The strike has posed a number of safety questions:

—Can the diminished force of supervisors and non-striking controllers, currently working six-day weeks, remain alert over the many months, perhaps even several years, it will take to rebuild the system?

—Are all the working controllers qualified to deal with such emergency situations as serious computer failures or unexpected bad weather? Neither hazard has posed a serious problem to date.

—Will the government be able to withstand increasing pressure from commercial and private aviation to allow additional planes into the skies?

—Does the increased use of "see-and-avoid" techniques by military and private pilots, whose flights have been dropped from the air traffic control system, endanger commercial aircraft?

The government's plan to maintain air safety is keyed to reducing air traffic to whatever level the working controllers can handle.

"We absolutely will not allow airplanes to take off if there is a question of safety," declares Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

The Federal Aviation Administration cut flights at the 22 busiest airports by 50 percent and reduced the nation's commercial flights overall by about 25 percent. Those ceilings are expected to continue through April.

The FAA also instituted a computerized "flow control" system that keeps commercial aircraft on the ground until direct flights to their destinations are assured. That eliminates the need for aircraft to be diverted or circle near airports until permission to land is granted.

In defending the current air traffic system, FAA officials have disputed Reagan's campaign rhetoric.

Ray Van Vuren, FAA's director of air traffic operations, said Reagan was "not properly informed" when he said "too few people (were) working unreasonable hours" in the air traffic system. Reagan's statement was contained in an Oct. 20 letter to secure PATCO's endorsement.

Van Vuren said management studies and the strike itself have shown "you had a lot of people you really didn't need."

During an eight-hour day, he said, the average controller worked only about four hours in pressure positions directing aircraft. Since the strike, he said fill-in controllers are having no trouble working 6½ hours a day in those spots.

"The only problems that they've got...is the stress (of) the...picket line that's out there and the harassment that they get after work," he said in an interview.

Before the strike, 16,000 controllers manned the system. Now, there are 5,200 non-striking controllers and 3,000 supervisors qualified for controller duty, Van Vuren said.

The FAA has also called in several hundred recently retired controllers and 1,250 military controllers, many of whom have yet to be cleared for work directing civilian aircraft.

Van Vuren said the replacements are at least as qualified as the strikers. And he said medically disqualified controllers who have been brought back are only allowed to handle support functions and are not directing traffic.

But Van Vuren acknowledged that fatigue from the six-day, 48-hour weeks could pose a safety problem if continued indefinitely. He said the FAA hopes to reduce the controllers' workload to the normal five-day, 40-hour week by Christmas as newly trained controllers begin to enter the system.

"As soon as the bad weather comes, these people who haven't worked for years can't handle it," said PATCO spokesman Patrick Doyle.

In the meantime, much of the verbal sparring over whether the skies are safe is centering on conflicting figures of near-misses and "system errors," the failure of controllers to maintain proper distances between aircraft.

The FAA says reports of near-misses are down by more than half, 28 last month compared with 60 in August 1980. It listed 33 "system errors" in August compared with 80 in the same month last year.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says the number of hazardous incidents received under its reporting system has dropped by about 50 percent.

Yet NASA official Al Chambers says, "The question that one can raise is how long can these people continue to keep the effort up."

PATCO figures show more problems, but hardly an epidemic. The union cites 44 "confirmed near-misses" from Aug. 1 to Aug. 25. PATCO also claims to have confirmed 76 cases of planes being allowed to fly to close together.

Reagan administration insists the airways are safer...fewer planes are flying farther apart under..."flow control" system.

Wyoming State 'Lottery' Offers Every U.S. Citizen Chance To Own An Oil Lease

CARSON CITY, NV — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public awards conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production.

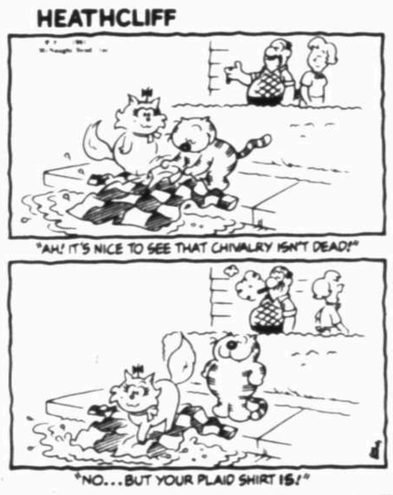

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Oil Lease Division, P.O. Box 660 (404 N. Valley), Carson City, Nevada 89702. Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, September 8, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: U.S. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Secretary Samuel Pierce celebrates his birthday today —the day on which the Miss America pageant begins in Atlantic City. Also born on this date: comedian Sid Caesar and the late great Peter Sellers. Exciting career and business rewards will come to those Virgos who stay on their toes and investigate new or unusual opportunities. Excessive optimism is all that stands between you and greater financial success. Romance moves into the background as you pursue your career objectives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Other people's actions will have a direct effect on your holiday plans. Temper your comments with kindness when dealing with older person. Your surroundings are conducive to romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day for taking care of insurance and tax matters. Business affairs can also be advanced. Count your cash before plunging into a new financial venture.

GEMINI (May 20-June 20): Your personal plans come under discussion today. Do not insist upon having your own way! Postpone travel; a lot is going on at place of employment. A new understanding could lead to romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Child-related problems are easy to solve today. Business may be slow. Examine legal papers before affixing your signature. Romance takes a temporary back seat to career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trust your intuition! First impressions are apt to be correct now. Delegate authority to leave more time for creative and artistic projects. Travel will not be as profitable as expected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be firm if higher-ups try to heap too many responsibilities on your shoulders. Romance will bloom if you want it to! Seek a second income to beat the cost of inflation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Despite the assurances of someone who is optimistic, you would be wise to go slow. Let others outline their plans first! Avoid legal entanglements. Be receptive to those who really care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start. Seek a better method of distribution. A promotion, new responsibilities and additional income are likely. Message from loved one becomes increasingly clear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21-Dec. 21): A deal is made now which will bring in extra income. Be prepared to explain your plans and ultimate goals. A friend shows new loyalty. Return a favor at the earliest opportunity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take advantage of a lull at work to catch up on routine tasks. Keep your sense of humor if someone suggests that you might be on the wrong track. Your instincts are correct.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Live up to both your obligations and your potential! Get expert advice if thinking of making new investments. Real estate transaction may prove to be a wise move.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An enthusiastic associate may be only too willing to spend your money. Take precautions to protect your interests. State your views, but show that you are also willing to listen.

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠872 ♡9653 ◇AQ82 ♣J6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A. — Partner's rebid of a lower-ranking suit is not forcing. Even though you have four-card support for partner's second suit, you do have a near-minimum responding hand. There is no reason for you to want to encourage partner with your miserable holding. Pass.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1076 ♡J105 ◇AQJ542
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A. — Your hand is not quite good enough for a jump rebid of three diamonds, even though it is too strong for a simple two diamond rebid. But even if it were not, you should show a four-card major before rebidding a six-card minor. And there is no reason to raise partner with only three-card support when you have a better bid available. Bid one spade.

Q.3 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ872 ◇K7 ♣AQ9652
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A. — You have already described most of the distributional features of your hand, and you have nothing extra in the way of high cards. You have no reason to take any further action. Had North been interested in slam, he could have jumped or cue-bid at his last turn. Pass. You must expect that a considerable part of North's assets will be wasted.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10762 ♡AK83 ◇7 ♣8742
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. — Your hand has suddenly become very valuable. Partner's decision to double and then bid a new suit shows a hand that is stronger than a minimum opening bid, and in support of spades your hand is worth 10-11 points. A simple raise does not do it justice. We would not fault you greatly for jumping to three spades, but a leap to game gets the top spot in our rating.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ872 ♡KJ542 ◇A ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A. — We are sure that the scientists can come up with some convoluted auction which consumes a lot of time and space, but all we are really concerned about is: How many aces does partner hold? If his response to our Blackwood inquiry shows two aces, we would gamble on a grand slam; one ace is all we need to essay six hearts.

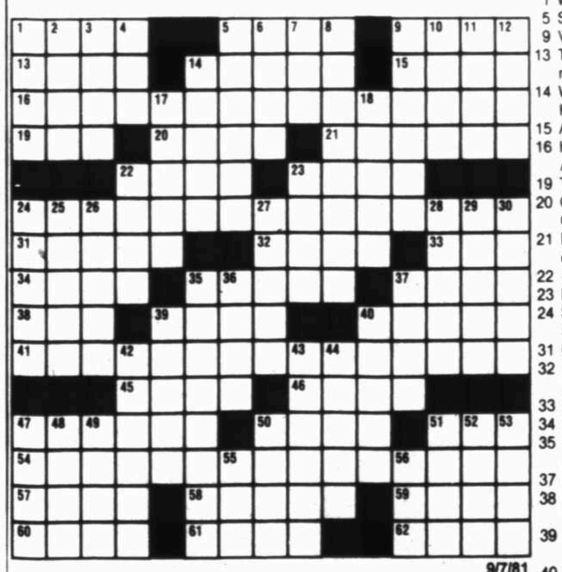

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A872 ♡K1063 ◇K853 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	3 ♠	?

What do you bid now?
A. — In support of either major, your hand is worth 13 points, and the equivalent of an opening bid facing another rates to make game. However, rather than pick a suit yourself and run the risk of selecting a suit in which partner has only three-card support, you should pass the choice to him. The way to do that is to cue-bid four clubs, and partner will make the selection.

Fields' day in Congress product of broken dream

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — He was an all-around athlete in the Humble, Texas, public schools, and Rep. Jack Fields could be looking back on a successful college basketball career by now if he'd only gotten his wish back in the seventh grade.

"I wasn't that tall or fast or a jumper, but I had a good shot, and all the way from the seventh grade, my goal was to get a basketball scholarship," Fields, 29, recalled in an interview.

However, Fields went to Baylor University without any athletic scholarship offers. He had been student body president at Humble for two years and, after arriving at Baylor, served an unprecedented two terms as student body president for the Baptist school.

"Later on, I began to see that if I had gotten a basketball scholarship, which I really thought was what I wanted, I would not have been student body president, I wouldn't have gone to law school and I wouldn't have ever been elected to Congress," Fields said.

"The contacts I made in Austin and elsewhere, when I was student body president, were significant as I ran for Congress."

Fields, a Republican and one of three first-year Texans in the U.S. House of Representatives, was born and raised in Humble, a town of about 7,000 people northeast of Houston.

Rep. Jack Fields

After graduating from Baylor law school in 1977, Fields returned to his home town to open a law practice and serve as executive vice president of the family business, Rosewood Memorial Park, one of the largest and oldest cemeteries in the Houston area.

He gave that up to run for Congress two years later.

"Somebody had to. I had no desire to come to Washington, really. I loved living in Humble. But we had a man who did not understand our concerns and did not represent us. I didn't even consider running for the Texas Legislature. There wasn't a need there," Fields said.

The incumbent was Bob Eckhardt, now 68, a colorful, liberal Democrat who fought for his causes in the Texas Legislature for eight years before being elected to Congress in 1966, representing the Houston ship channel, the largest petrochemical industrial complex in the world.

"The best way to describe him is what I see that bothers me most up here. That unless you live and work for the government in Washington, or unless you graduated from such and such prestigious school in the East, you are not considered too smart, so the people in Washington ought to make the decisions for you," Fields said.

Fields, whose family has lived on the same plot of land at Humble since 1860 and whose great-grandfathers fought for Texas in the Civil War, began knocking on doors, telling people they deserved a representative in Washington, not a politician.

"People began to realize that we had a congressman who voted nine times for forced busing, voted against just about every defense bill and belonged to a group that advocated tax increases, social welfare programs and more federal regulations," Fields said.

"My district is a working-class district, whose people average $12,000 a year, very religious, blue collar, very patriotic. And the Democratic Party on the national level has not represented them."

In ousting Eckhardt, Fields ran ahead of President Reagan in every precinct and ahead of former President Carter in all but the minority areas.

"After the election, somebody asked Eckhardt what he planned to do, and he said he guessed he was going home to Washington. And that about sums it up, we were a political necessity for somebody who wanted to live in Washington."

If people in Texas' eighth district seldom saw Eckhardt, they have seen plenty of Fields.

He and his wife, Roni Sue, live in Falls Church, Va., but through July he'd returned to Texas on 24 of 28 weekends. He attended civic clubs, banquets and other affairs in Humble, Deer Park, Baytown, Pasadena, La Porte and so on — all 16 towns in his district.

By the time Congress recessed in early August for its annual summer break, Fields had already made the rounds of the 16 towns for town hall meetings not once, but twice.

Fields' father was president of the Chamber of Commerce, an active member of the Rotary Club and president of the school board for 12 years. Fields says his father always encouraged him to be active in civic affairs.

"He's always taught my brother and myself that America is the best country to live in and that you've got an obligation to return something to your coungry in service," he said.

Fields, although a strong supporter of President Reagan, isn't a lifelong Republican. Being a member of the GOP is a rather new innovation for much of Texas, since until recently the Republican Party didn't even bother fielding candidates on the local level.

"My family has been in Texas since 1830, and we grew up supporting the candidate, which in Texas meant Democrats. But I had never supported the Democrats on the national level, so I considered myself independent," he said.

"I saw the Democratic Party as a party that encouraged people not to work and supported more money going to Washington and less back to Texas, a weak national defense."

Over half of the people who draw a paycheck in the Eighth District take it directly from energy or energy-related industry.

Seventy percent of all oilfield equipment is manufactured within 100 miles of Houston, Fields said.

Secrecy still surrounds release, destruction of mustard gas, other toxic chemicals

By TIM GEBHART
Rapid City Journal

IGLOO, S.D. (AP) — William Tanner remembers working on a ranch less than a mile west of Igloo in clouds of yellowish-gray gas that "stunk like hell" and burned his nose and throat.

The smoke was produced by the destruction of tons of poisonous gases at the now-abandoned Black Hills Ordnance Depot which operated at Igloo from 1942-1967.

Tanner, who worked on the ranch from Sept. 1, 1959, through Nov. 5, 1961, filed a $10 million suit in U.S. District Court in Rapid City in August 1980, claiming the government was responsible for lung damage he suffers.

Now, the government is settling out of court. Details are secret.

But court records and Army documents obtained by the Rapid City Journal under the Freedom of Information Act show that for at least 20 years the depot routinely burned and released war gases, including mustard gas, phosgene and cyanogen chloride.

Mustard gas causes blisters; cyanogens can kill in minutes, and phosgene causes lungs to swell, often causing death. Much of it was burned in open pits, allowing toxic — probably carcinogenic — smoke to drift with the wind, the documents show.

The burning was done in Igloo, now home to about 140 people, in the extreme southwestern corner of South Dakota, just miles from the Nebraska and Wyoming borders and eight miles south of Edgemont.

When the depot was operating, population ranged from 600 to 2,000.

Doctors agree Tanner has severe lung problems, including possible pulmonary fibrosis, a progressive degeneration of the lung often resulting in death from a lack of oxygen or heart failure. But they disagree on whether it was caused by the gases and the byproducts of the burning.

Between 1951 and 1967, about 230 tons of mustard gas, 9,990 pounds of phosgene, and 1,800 pounds of colorless, toxic cyanogen chloride were destroyed by burning at the depot, court documents show.

The government admits mustard gas was burned in at least three open pits and an incinerator, that unknown quantities of the other gases were vented directly into the air when pressure inside the shells became dangerous.

While the burning may have destroyed the mustard gas, it also released deadly chemical byproducts including sulfuric acid, which dissolves metal, and chlorosulfonic acid, a highly toxic substance used in poison gases.

Yet the government did not regularly test for contamination, the record shows. And while government workers had to wear protective clothing and masks, civilians like Tanner had no such protection.

The potential for health problems at the depot concerned the doctors stationed there, according to Army documents.

In an undated letter to the Army Chemical Center, Dr. Fred C. Merkling Jr. said men working in the burning area had blisters in their mouths and inflammed lungs, eyelids and throats. What worred him more were possible long-term effects of the "extremely toxic" byproducts of the burning. He feared they might produce cancer and pulmonary fibrosis.

"I cannot compromise with medial ethics and must demand that action be taken to determine just what we are dealing with out here," he said.

The government admits at least eight employees were treated for health problems, and some mustard gas skin burns were reported. But it says it doesn't know how widespread health problems may have been or if area residents were exposed to hazardous fumes or even warned of them. There have been no other lawsuits.

The government said it was not liable for Tanner's health because BHOD was part of the "discretionary functions" of government.

"The manufacture and storage of war gases was deemed necessary for the security of the nation, and the manner in which they were handled and disposed of were consistent with the best-known practices existing at the time," government documents said.

Francis Finkle, BHOD's chief of maintenance, told attorneys that no civilians were ever warned about the burning. He said as many as 200 mustard gas bombs would be burned about every other day and six to eight phosgene bombs would be vented each day. The gas, he said, "just escaped into the air."

Collapse of Muir & Co. may change Wall Street

By JOHN F. BERRY
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — When John Muir & Co. collapsed last month, it seemed to spell the beginning of the end of another Wall Street craze.

For nearly two years, investors have been gobbling up share of stock in unknown companies, many with negligible assets but high hopes. Muir, under the direction of its general partner, superpromoter Raymond L. Dirks, had led the field underwriting these new issues, pumping out an amazing 43 in just 18 months.

As if to underline the risk of investing in the new-issues market, Muir was driven into liquidation at least partly because investors alleged that claims made in offering prospectuses were fraudulent. A spate of class-action lawsuits, along with a massive Securities and Exchange Commission investigation, was apparently more than Muir could stand.

Dirks was one of the first to realize that investors were ready to gamble on new issues, but the word soon got out, and a wide array of deal-makers flocked to The Street to capitalize on the trend. And while some of the little companies taken public by these promoters were seeking funds to finance legitimate business expansion, many more have been corporations in name only, devised to sell stock th$t would enrich the brokers and the promoters.

AT LEAST THAT'S the contention of one unusually candid Wall Street attorney, who is himself a prime example of how a small circle of insiders get rich on new issues — often at the expense of the investing public.

Howard B. Sirota Esq. is 32 years old, out of law school about three years and in his own Wall Street practice less than two years. He made "more than a hundred thou" the first year and expects to make "probably twice as much" this year.

Not bad for a former organizer of the radical Students for a Democratic Society, who less than a decade ago was looking to overthrow the very capitalism he now enjoys.

His Afro hairstyle, which once stretched from here to there, has been shorn, tattered blue jeans have given way to finely tailored Brooks Brothers suits, and meals of bean sprouts and brown rice have long since been replaced by perfectly prepared steaks at his favorite East Side restaurant, the famous and expensive Christ Cella.

IN TERMS OF MONEY — which is, after all, the measure of most attorneys practicing securities law — Sirota is a tremendous success. His cab fare home at night from Wall Street to Flatbush, he says a bit uncomfortably, is more than his father made in a day working as a presser in the garment district.

But Sirota, for all of his new trappings of success, has not totally abandoned his rebellious ways. While other young attorneys in big firms walk cautiously along the gray-flannel road toward a partnership, Sirota is a loner, openly disdainful of the system that is making his fortune possible.

The story of Sirota's overnight rise to riches on The Street, told in his own unvarnished, Brooklyn-accented words, is enough to make a cautious investor swear off the stock market.

Sirota makes his money giving legal advice to clients who want to "take public" little, capital-hungry busines es — that is, raise money by selling stock to the public. If investors ever bothered to read the prospectuses prepared by Sirota for some of his clients, they would find that in some cases the companies don't have any actual products — only promises of products. But as any stockbroker knows, it's a rare investor who reads an offering statement.

"Ultimately," says Sirota, "I'd like to put a legend up on these things: 'Warning, persons considering an investment in these securities should see a psychiatrist.' But people would still buy it."

THE HOTTEST NEW ISSUES usually are in companies that claim to be involved in some trendy product, Sirota says. His clients, for example, have started up companies in such Wall Street pop items as solar energy and gene splicing, cancer cures and oil and gas tax shelters.

Sirota reviews the securities offerings to be sure they meet the requirement of law before they are submitted to the SEC, the federal agency that oversees the securities markets. Once the securities registration statements clear the SEC — a modest hurdle, Sirota says — then his clients are free to sell the stocks or bonds to the public. If his clients follow his advice, they can unload the stock at a quick profit and still stay within the letter of the law.

As it happens, Sirota started his practice on the eve of the biggest new issues craze since the early 1970s. According to the publication "Going Public," in the first six months of this year 259 companies sold new issues of common stock and raised nearly $2 billion, up from 237 companies raising $1.4 billion in 1980, and 81 raising $506 million in 1979.

While allowing that the new issues market has been staggered by the Muir collapse, Sirota believes that it still has some life left. "The new-issues market attracts the least knowledgeable investors. These people have to be killed before they give up and get out of the market," he claims.

Reaching into his desk drawer, Sirota pulls out a stock prospectus for one of his clients, a solar energy company. (It was agreed that none of Sirota's clients would be named in this article.)

The prospectus didn't reveal precisely what the company manufactured, so he is asked: "Is there any product?"

"Are you crazy?" Sirota replies in mock amazement. "These guys have a fantastic product. It converts sunlight directly into money for the investors and promoters. And it's fully reversible. It converts the investors' money in sunlight. It's a remarkable chemical achievement."

BUT SURELY SUCH CHICANERY violates the securities laws.

"Thanks to Richard Nixon's Supreme Court, it's completely kosher," says the former student activist with undisguised glee.

"The Berger court said in 1977 in Santa Fe Industries vs. Green that if you fully disclose to people in a stock prospectus that you're cheating them, then you're not defrauding them. So if you tell them in the stock offering, 'This is utterly worthless,' and they buy it, then there's no violation of law."

For example, Sirota reads the "risk factors" listed in the prospectus of the solar energy company, the vry same "Santa Fe" disclosures that save him and his clients from being accused of violating the antifraud statutes of the federal securities laws. If investors read it, they would learn the following about the company: "No record of sales or earnings ...no manufacturing facility...possible infringement of a patent...inadequate funds...management salaries to be paid from proceeds of stock sale...no orders or contracts for products...."

ANOTHER SIROTA CLIENT sold interests in an oil-drilling venture. Says Sirota: "This guy acts as the general partner, the promoter, the underwriter, the explorer, the finder, the contractor. And if you imagine a circular conference table, he jumps from seat to seat, negotiating with himself, payin g himself exhorbitant fees for his services. So when he's done, maybe the only way he'd find oil would be to drill in a gas station and hit a tank. But if he does hit oil, he gets half the profits. It's all perfectly legal. And that's how he can afford to take his lawyer to lunch at Lutece."

How do these deals come about?

"Promoters, like advertising executives, have brainstorming sessions where they chew over trends," says Sirota. "Some will just do oil deals until there is no more energy crisis. But the more imaginative ones decide the real money is to be made in something new — say, gene splicing. They come to me and ask if I've done a gene-splicing deal. And I say, 'No, but I'm sure you will be covered if we include the usual laundry list of warnings to the investor that it's an utterly worthless offering and that they'll lose all their money if they invest.' "

"Then," continues Sirota, "the promoter goes out and hires some guy, preferably with a Ph.D in molecular biology from MIT who is more interested in making money than getting a Nobel Prize. They make him president, give him assistants, fill a lab with glass beakers and microscopes, and instopresto, you have something called New Life Biology Corp. Inc. The professor is given 1 million shares of stock, and told it would be taken public at a $1 a share. And if it works, and the stock can be kept up long enough, the professor is told he can sell his shares and make a fortune."

Sirota estimates that there are "at least $100 million in wothless new issues" sold to the public each year, but he adds, "If you told me that it w$s five times that, well, I wouldn't argue with you. The fact is, nobody knows."

Doomsday D, Dorsett do job

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' Doomsday defense and the running of Tony Dorsett combined Sunday to spoil the head coaching debut of Washington's Joe Gibbs.

Cowboys' defenders intercepted four Joe Theismann passes and held Washington to 44 yards rushing as Dallas beat the Redskins 26-10 to extend their opening day record winning streak to 17 games.

"The secondary made a lot of key plays and prevented several touchdowns by Washington," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

DORSETT GAINED 132 yards on 21 parries and added 26 yards on three receptions, in his best effort ever against the Redskins.

"Dorsett ran the ball well and we were able to pull away. He's in better shape than he's ever been in," Landry said.

"We got beat by a good football team," Gibbs said. "We couldn't make the play ... The credit goes to Dallas."

Theismann, trying to avoid a Dallas pash rush keyed by ends Harvey Martin and Ed "Too Tall" Jones, attempted 48 passes, a personal high. He had 22 completions for 281 yards and one touchdown.

Halfback Joe Washington, acquired in the off-season from Baltimore, was the big threat for the Redskins, catching 10 passes for 124 yards and throwing a pass, on the halfback option, for 32 yards.

Quarterback Danny White completed touchdown passes of 33 yards to Billy Joe Dupree and 42 yards to Drew Pearson as the Cowboys opened a 14-7 lead at the half.

RAFAEL SEPTIEN kicked field goals of 29, 42, 23 and 18 yards for Dallas.

Septien's last field goal followed an interception and 96-yard return by Dennis Thurmann.

"Thurman made a great interception; otherwise, Washington may have gotten back into the game," Landry said.

The Cowboys scored first on White's touchdown pass to DuPree six minutes into the second period. The completion came despite the efforts of free safety Mark Murphy, who was hanging on Dupree as the two crossed the goal line.

The Redskins, hampered by bad field position throughout the half, tied the score after marching 80 yards.

THE TD, a 15-yard Theismann to Joe Washington pass play, followed a decision by Redskins' Coach Joe Gibbs to remove points from the board.

Mark Moseley had converted a 37-yard field goal when the Cowboys were detected lining up with 12 men on the field. Gibbs accepted the penalty, nullifying the three points and giving his team a first and 10 on the Cowboys' 15. Washington scored on the next play, bringing the sellout crowd to its feet.

White struck again in the second period, finding Drew Pearson on a post pattern in front of defender Jeris White.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Haas edges Kite in BC

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Jay Haas shot a final round 2-under-par 69 and posted a 3-stroke victory over Tom Kite in the $275,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Haas took the lead for good in the second round and went in Sunday's final round with a 3-stroke lead over Kite. He maintained that margin and finished the 72-hole event with a 14-under-par 270 at the En-Joie Country Club, earning a top prize of $49,500.

Kite failed to mount a challenge in the last 18 holes. He could come no closer than two strokes before a bogey on the 15th hole set him back. Kite also finished with a 69 over the par-71 course to complete the tournament with at 273.

Haas, a 1975 collegiate national champion from Wake Forest, won the Greater Milwaukee Open earlier this year and was No. 20 on the tour's money list this week with $124,967 in earnings.

It was the second straight week Kite has finished second.

Rookie triumphs

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Rookie Patty Sheehan fired a 5-under-par 67 Sunday to take a 1-stroke lead over three players after two rounds of the $125,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic golf tournament.

Sheehan had a 36-hole total of 136, 8 under par, entering Monday's final round. Pat Bradley, Kyle O'Brien and Dale Lundquist were all one-stroke behind the leader.

Bradley and O'Brien each matched Sheehan's 67, the day's best score, while Lundquist shot a second-round 68.

Lindley holds lead

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brian Lindley took a 1-up lead over Nathaniel Crosby, a fellow Californian, after 18 holes of their title match Sunday at the 81st U.S. Amateur Golf Championship. The match, scheduled for 36 holes, resumes today.

Marsh triumphs

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Graham Marsh of Australia shot a 4-under-par final round 68 Sunday to win the $200,000 European Open Golf Championship at Royal Liverpool. Marsh finished with a four-round total of 275, two strokes ahead of of Severiano Ballesteros of Spain. Ballesteros, who led by four shots after the third round, had a disastrous final round 74.

Holbert race winner

TROIS RIVIERES, Quebec (AP) — Al Holbert stormed to a victory of nearly 25 seconds Sunday in the 88-mile Sports Car Club of America's Can-Am Challenge road race.

Holbert, 34, who won earlier this year at Watkins Glen, N.Y., defeated current Can-Am point leader Geoff Brabham of Australia to collect the $22,000 first prize. The veteran driver from Warrington, Pa., piloted his CRC-2 Can-Am car from the pole, lost the lead briefly to Teo Fabi of Italy, then took charge the rest of the way.

The victory boosted Holbert into second place in the Can-Am standings, the same position in which he finished last year. Brabham has 364 points to Holbert's 260. There are four races remaining on the circuit.

Jeff Wood of Los Angeles was third in a Lola T-530, followed by Fabi in actor Paul Newman's March 817.

Earlier in the day, Eppie Qietzes of Canada drove his Corvette to victory in the 73-mile CRC Chemicals Trans-Am event, while local favorite Gilles Villeneuve of nearby St. Cuthbert took the 100-mile Formula Atlantic Race.

Connors dodges Bullet

Jimmy outlasts Gomez in five-set thriller

NEW YORK (AP) — "I dodged a bullet," Jimmy Connors said after barely beating back an upset bid by Andres Gomez of Ecuador Sunday and advancing to the fourth round of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

"I played great in some spots," Connors said. "He played great throughout. I don't think you've seen as many forehands like that from anyone. He goes all the way into the stands to hit a forehand."

The battle wasn't decided until Connors fired only his second ace of the match to win a fifth-set tiebreaker 7-5.

On the winning point, Connors swung his serve wide to Gomez' forehand, and the gritty left-hander just watched it as it hit on the line. It ended a dramatic 4-hour, 23-minute battle that saw both players repeatedly question line calls.

"I thought maybe the serve was out," Gomez said. "I was so nervous that maybe I wanted them all to be out."

But when it was over, Connors had won the bitterly contest battle 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 7-6, while Gomez had won respect.

One seeded player fell Sunday afternoon. Mike Cahill eliminated 12th-seeded Johan Kriek of South Africa 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

The No.2 seed, Sweden's Bjorn Borg swept past David Carter of Australia 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 as he attempts to capture his first U.S. Open.

Carter was never in the match as the nearly full stadium of 20,146 watched the "Swedish Machine" carved up his opponent.

The Connors-Gomez match, the first of the day at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow, began on a jarring note for Gomez. He was indentified three times by the umpire as being from Mexico. He finally walked to the umpire's stand and corrected him before he served to begin the match.

Then came the line calls, and most of them seemed to go against the unseeded Gomez.

Connors broke Gomez in the third and seventh gamess of the first set. But Gomez broke the American in the fourth and eight games, and they eventually went to a tiebreaker.

Connors then took the next two sets relatively easily and appeared poised to closed out the set. Instead, Gomez, who like Connors battled leg cramps as well as his opponent, fought back with brilliant cross-court passing shots and down-the-line rockets that Connors could only wave at.

With the score 5-5 the seventh set, Connors lost his serve when he double-faulted at game point. But he broke right back to send the match into the deciding tiebreaker.

Connors won three straight points to take a 5-2 lead. But he then double-faulted and Gomez won the next point, pulling to 4-5.

Connors won the next point, breaking Gomez' serve, when he hit a deep forehand that appeared to be long. The linesman called it good and Gomez' return, a forehand, was definitely long on the other end. That made it 6-4, Connors, as the players traded ends.

Gomez staved off match point as he fired a forehand deep into the corner and Connors could only manage to net a weak return. Then came the ace. It was over.

Air show slated for Monday TV tilt

CLEVELAND (AP) — The pregame chatter, of course, must focus on the quarterbacks, but both the San Diego Chargers and the Cleveland Browns hope to display more than token running attacks in their National Football League Monday night game.

"We can move the ball a lot of ways," says Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano.

Indeed, lost in the shuffle as quarterback Brian Sipe was winning the National Football League's Most Valuable Player award last season was fullback Mike Pruitt, who quietly compiled his second straight season of 1,000-plus yards rushing.

On the other side of the field is Chuck Muncie, who just spent his first preseason with the Chargers after coming over in a trade with New Orleans last September.

Playing in the shadow of San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, Muncie carried the ball 135 times for 659 yards in 11 games with the Chargers.

"They've changed a great deal since they've acquired Chuck Muncie," Rutigliano said.

Other interesting matchups loom for this season premier, which matches a pair of 1980 divisimn winners. The Browns and Chargers both finished 11-5 last season — winning the AFC Central and West divisions, respectively — and both fell to eventual Super Bowl champion Oakland during the playoffs.

Rookie rescues win with 95-yard return

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Rookie Willie Tullis returned a kickoff 95 yards with 57 seconds remaining to bring the Houston Oilers a 27-20 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Sunday in their National Football League opener Sunday.

The Rams had just tied the game on a 36-yard field goal by Frank Corral before the 190-pound speedster from Troy State took the kickoff at the Houston 5-yard line and went all the way up the sidelines to score.

Ken Stabler, who came out of retirement just 12 days ago, threw two touchdown passes in the third quarter to stake the Oilers to a 20-17 lead.

The 35-year-old left-handed quarterback, who called it quits after last season, returned to the Oilers after Gifford Nielsen was hurt in the third preseason game. Stabler had thrown only five times in 1981 prior to meeting the Rams. But he connected with Rob Carpenter on a touchdown play covering 33 yards and one for 20 yards to Ken Burrough to put the Oilers ahead.

ALTHOUGH RAMS quarterback Pat Haden also threw for two touchdowns, he had three interceptions, all of them leading to Houston scores. He was relieved by Jeff Rutledge for the final period, with Rutledge guiding the team to Corral's late field goal.

Los Angeles scored first on a 67-yard pass play from Haden to Wendell Tyler in the first quarter. After Toni Fritsch booted field goals of 50 and 41 yards for the Oilers, Corral hit a 35-yard field goal for Los Angeles.

Haden put the Rams ahead 17-6 at halftime with a 19-yard pass to tight end Walt Arnold late in the second period. Both of Fritsch's field goals came after interceptions of Haden, and so did Houston's second touchdown, which came on the first play after Gregg Bingham picked off a Haden throw midway through the third quarter.

STABLER JIT 13 of his 20 passes for 192 yards, threw no interceptions, and was sacked just once as he went all the way after appearing only a short time a week ago in the preseason game against Dallas. He had a perfect second half against the Rams, completing all seven of his passes for 97 yards.

Earl Campbell, the NFL's leading rusher the last three years, had 122 yards on 27 carries for Houston, but 86 of those yards came on his last eight carries. He was shaken up near the end of the game and had to leave the field.

Haden hit 11 of 20 passes for 168 yards, but the three interceptions proved devastating in his return as a starter after Vince Ferragamo moved to the Canadian Football League. Rutledge, like Stabler a product of Alabama but with limited NFL experience, was five of eight for 97 yards and was intercepted once.

He put the Rams into scoring position midway through the final period, but Corral missed a 29-yarder.

THE RAMS had four turnovers and Houston three as Los Angeles dominated the first half and the Oilers the second as they scored their first victory ever over the Rams.

Tyler, the Los Angeles halfback who missed most of last season because of injuries, had 90 yards rushing on 20 carries and another 90 on four pass receptions.

A crowd of 63,198 was at Anaheim Stadium for the contest, with all 69,006 seats having been sold.

Howard's 65-yard run with fumble wins it

KC Chiefs shock Steelers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Linebacker Thomas Howard scooped up a Terry Bradshaw fumble and raced 65 yards for a touchdown with 1:59 left to play to give the Kansas City Chiefs a 37-33 victory Sunday over the Pittsburgh Steelers, who committed a disastrous eight fumbles in their National Football League opener.

Despite three straight lost fumbles midway of the second half, the Steelers rallied to take a 33-30 lead with 7:12 left on a 41-yard touchdown bomb from Bradshaw to Jim Smith.

It looked like the Steelers were in control, and they had a first down at the Chiefs 28-yard line with about two minutes left when Bradshaw was jolted by blitzing linebacker Frank Manumaleuga. The ball popped loose and was picked up by Howard, who ran untouched for the score.

Early in the fourth quarter, Chiefs running back Ted McKnight ran 3 yards for a touchdown that gave Kansas City a 30-26 lead. The score capped a 38-yard drive that began with a fumble by Franco Harris. A series earlier, Kansas City's Nick Lowery had kicked his third field goal, a 42-yarder, set up by a Bradshaw fumble.

Falcons blank Saints

ATLANTA (AP) — Steve Bartkowski fired three touchdown passes and Kenny Johnson returned a fumble 35 yards for another score as the Atlanta Falcons opened their 1981 National Football League campaign with a 27-0 victory over the New Orleans Saints Sunday.

It spoiled the New Orleans coaching debut of Bum Phillips, hired by the Saints last year after he was fired by the Houston Oilers.

Bartkowski connected with Wallace Francis for two of the touchdowns, covering 10 and 19 yards, and connected with Alfred Jenkins on a 25-yard scoring bomb early in the final quarter.

The Falcons, defending champions of the NFC West, scored on their first possession with a 67-yard drive to set the tone of the game.

The Saints seldom threatened, although New Orleans moved to the Atlanta 33 after taking the opening kickoff, only to turn the ball over on downs when Jack Holmes was nailed for no gain on a fourth-and-one play. The Saints also had a field goal attempt blocked late in the first half.

Dolphins beat Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — David Woodley flipped touchdown passes of 22 and 47 yards to Jimmy Cefalo and the alert Miami defense capitalized on St. Louis mistakes as the Dolphins carved out a 20-7 triumph over the Cardinals in the National Football League opener for both teams Sunday.

Miami, ignited by Glenn Blackwood's pass interception and Gerald Small's fumble recovery, exploded for two touchdowns and two field goals in a little more than a quarter.

The Dolphins, of the American Conference East, led 20-0 in the third quarter en route to their 12th straight victory over a National Conference opponent.

A knee injury which sidelined veteran St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart, preceded Blackwood's game-turning interception of a pass by rookie Neil Lomax, late in the opening period.

The Miami safety returned the interception 34 yards to the Cards' 29, setting up Uve von Schamann's 27-yard field goal. A St. Louis penalty then helped Miami roll 73 yards to score on Woodley's 22-yard pass to Cefalo, and the Dolphins made it 13-0 at halftime on a 30-yard von Schamann field goal.

Morton-Upchurch bomb beats Oakland

Broncos upset Raiders

DENVER (AP) — Craig Morton fired a 44-yard touchdown pass to Rick Upchurch and the Denver defense forced three second-half turnovers as the Broncos upset the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders 9-7 in National Football League action Sunday.

The Raiders scored on their first possession, with Jim Plunkett hitting tight end Raymond Chester on a nine-yard scoring toss. But Oakland was largely ineffective after that, giving up the ball on downs twice in the fourth quarter, and suffering an interception and a fumble.

Five minutes after Chester's touchdown, Morton hit the speedy Upchurch in the end zone. But the Broncos failed on the extra-point attempt because of a bad snap and Oakland led 7-6.

Early in the second quarter, after the Bronco defense had pinned Oakland deep in its own territory, Morton hit Haven Moses on a 24-yard pass to set up Fred Steinfort's 29-yard field goal with 9:31 left in the half.

Colts beat Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Rookie Randy McMillan rushed for 146 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns, as the Baltimore Colts erased a 14-13 halftime deficit and held on to edge the New England Patriots 29-28.

Trailing 29-21 after McMillan's second touchdown, the Patriots scored on Steve Grogan's 4-yard pass to Don Hasselbeck with 2:31 left in the game after Mark Buben recovered a Baltimore fumble and returned it 31 yards to the Colts' 36-yard line. But the Patriots never got the ball back.

Mike Wood kicked his third field goal of the game, a 35-yarder with 5:44 left in the third quarter to put the Colts ahead 16-14.

McMillan then capped a 78-yard drive when he broke several tackles and rambled 35 yards for a touchdown with 13:35 remaining in the game. The score was 22-14 as Wood missed the extra point attempt.

Bengals rally, 27-21

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Johnson slammed through the Seattle defense for two touchdowns as the Cincinnati Bengals rallied for a 27-21 victory over the Seahawks.

Johnson scored on runs of 3 and 2 yards and finished with 84 yards in 20 carries to become the Bengals' all-time leading rusher with 3,071 yards. Essex Johnson held the old Bengal record with 3,070 yards.

Sims sparks Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit running back Billy Sims scored his second touchdown of the day on a 1-yard dive with only 18 seconds left in the game to spark the Lions to a 24-17 National Football League victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

Sims, the NFL's rookie-of-the-year in 1980, ignited the sluggish Lions in the second quarter by taking a short pass over the middle from quarterback Gary Danielson. He then sidestepped 49er defensive back Dwight Hicks at the 15-yard line and raced into the end zone to complete a 38-yard pass play that helped the Lions to a 10-3 halftime lead.

Eagles do it again

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ron Jaworski's 55-yard touchdmwn pass play to Rodney Parker helped the Philadelphia Eagles outclass the New York Giants 24-10.

Giants quarterback Phil Simms was sacked six times, losing 66 yards as 72,459 fans watched at Giants Stadium.

Jaworski completed a 35-yard pass play to Montgomery that put Philadelphia at the Giants' 8-yard line. Montgomery followed up with a 1-yard run, giving the Eagles their third touchdown less than 30 seconds into the final quarter.

Packers sack Bears

CHICAGO (AP) — Gerry Ellis and Eddie Lee Ivery led a punishing ground attack and each scored a touchdown Sunday to lead the underdog Green Bay Packers to a 16-9 victory over the Chicago Bears in a National Football League opener.

The Bears' bid for a tying touchdown ended on the when Matt Suhey fumbled on the Green Bay goal line with 23 seconds to play.

Ellis carried 17 times for 94 yards and Ivery had 72 yards in 14 carries before leaving the game in the third quarter with a twisted left knee, the same knee on which he had surgery two years ago.

Denny hurls third straight shutout

By The Associated Press

John Denny fired a three-hitter for his third consecutive shutout to give the Cleveland Indians their 10th victory in the last 12 games, a 2-0 decision over the California Angels Sunday.

Denny, 7-4, allowed only a double to left to Brian Downing in the third, an eighth-inning single by Dan Ford and a single in the ninth by Rick Burleson.

The Cleveland right-hander struck out seven and walked three in running his consecutive scoreless inning streak to 27.

Ron Hassey drove in Cleveland's first run with a fourth-inning single and the Indians got their other run in the sixth on an error by second baseman Bobby Grich.

IN OTHER Americam League action, the New York Yankees scored six runs on eight hits in the first inning, both season highs, and rolled past Kansas City 6-1 in Bob Lemon's first game as their new manger, replacing Gene Michael, who was fired. Dave Winfield, Reggie Jackson, Rick Cerone and Bobby Brown singled in runs and Bob Watson blasted a two-run triple.

The Boston Red Sox also scored all six of their runs in one inning as Carl Yastrzemski and Rick Miller drove in two runs apiece in the sixth for a 6-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Lenn Sakata rapped a grand-slam homer and Jose Morales hit a two-run pinch single to highlight Baltimore's six-run seventh inning, giving the Orioles an 8-4 victory over the Oakland A's.

Jesse Barfield belted a two-run homer and George Bell chipped in a solo blast to lift the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox, their ninth loss in 10 games.

Ben Oglivie hit a home run off reliever Doug Corbett to lead off the 10th inning, giving the Milwaukee Brewers an 8-7 victory over the Minnesota Twins and a sweep of their four-game series.

IN THE National League, Phil Garner lined a run-scoring single in the 12th inning to score Dickie Thon from second base and lift the Houston Astros to a 4-3 triumph over the Montreal Expos despite two homers by Andre Dawson.

Ray Knight socked a two-run double with two out in the ninth inning to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Dale Murphy walloped a three-run homer in the first inning and the Atlanta Braves went on to beat the New York Mets 5-2 behind the combined seven-hit pitching of Rick Mahler and Gene Garber.

FERNANDO Valenzuela fired a four-hitter, tying a National League rookie record for shutouts in a season with seven, and also tripled home three runs in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 5-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The 21-year-old rookie left-hander walked one and struck out eight in becoming the major leagues' first 12-game winner.

Vida Blue pitched a no-hitter for 61-3 innings and settled for a one-hitter before leaving in the eighth as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs 3-0.

Jason Thompson drove in four runs and collected four hits, including a first-inning homer, and Steve Nicosia had three RBI to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Lance Parrish socked a two-run homer in the eighth inning to rally the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers in a late afternoon game. Texas had a 3-2 lead when starter Danny Darwin gave up a lead-off triple to Kirk Gibson in the eighth. Reliever Mark Mercer, 0-1, struck out the next two batters before Parrish connected with his ninth homer over the left field fence.

'San Jose State' strikes again

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The defending Southwest Conference champion Baylor Bears had their "San Jose State" six games early this year.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff just hopes Saturday night's shocking 18-17 loss to the upstart Lamar University Cardinals of the Southland Conference will be as therapeutic as the seventh-game defeat by the Spartans last year, which got the Bears mad enough to growl right to the Cotton Bowl.

"I believe we would have gotten the same lesson if we had won by two points," Teaff said hours after the devastating defeat, which saw the Bears also lose two of their frontline defensive players.

A 42-YARD field goal by Mike Marlow with just three seconds on the clock erased what had appeared to be a Baylor victory after freshman Marty Jimmerson had kicked a 41-yard field goal for the Bears with 2:53 remaining.

In other games involving SWC teams Saturday, Texas A&M rallied in the second half behind Johnny Hector to nip California 29-28, Southern Methodist routed Texas-Arlington 48-0, Houston downed New Mexico 21-10, and Texas Christian lost 24-18 to Auburn.

Baylor lost linebacker Steve Malpass for the year with a knee injury and cornerback Cedric Mack for more than a month with a shoulder injury in the loss to the Cardinals.

"That really hurts us losing those two kids," said Teaff. "We'll just have to huddle back up and start over around here to get ready for Bowling Green. There just ain't nothing else we can do."

Lamar held All-SWC running back Walter Abercrombie to just 50 yards rushing and limited the Bears to only 16 yards passing.

Abercrombie fumbled the ball away on Lamar's one-yard line early in the game and Teaff thought: "Oh, no. The same thing happened against San Jose State."

"Lamar did a good job on our wide stuff," said Teaff. "We didn't take advantage of some of the things they were doing like we should have. But I can't play (quarterback) Jay Jeffrey.

"I just did a poor job in getting us ready to play."

IT WAS Lamar's first victory over an SWC team in football and ranked as one of the biggest upsets for Baylor in an opener since the Bears lost to Hardin-Simmons some 40 years ago.

David Hardy's 30-yard field goal late in the fourth period gave the Aggies their victory over California.

Lone Star loop scores grid slam

By The Associated Press

The Lone Star Conference opened its 1981 football season with a grand slam Saturday, with all four teams in action emerging victorious.

Defensive back Emmuel Thompson produced some big plays to lead Texas A&I to a 26-3 victory over Northern Arizona of the NCAA Big Sky Conference.

In other games, defending LSC champion Southwest Texas scored a 56-0 win over Prairie View, Howard Payne won 20-19 over the NAIA's No. 8-ranked East Central (Okla.) and Angelo State beat Alcorn (Miss.), 16-10.

Summer Encounter just reaching potential

Filly threat in All-American

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Jack Brooks handled the question with a feeling of familiarity; it was obvious he had posed it in his mind more than once.

"I really don't know how good this filly is," he said, standing in the mud that surrounded his barn at Ruidoso Downs race track. "She has had a shin (sore) problem all summer and is just now beginning to run to her potential."

Brooks, a quarter horse trainer since 1959, will saddle the rapidly improving filly Summer Encounter and the consistent colt Greybon in Monday's 23rd running of the All-American Futurity, with a record purse this year of $1.53 million.

The 440-yard race is scheduled to be run at 6:49 p.m. MDT, with 10 horses racing for the $528,000 first-place purse that goes to the winner of the race, which takes less than 22 seconds to run.

The prohibitive favorite in the futurity is the unbeaten 2-year-old colt Special Effort, winner of eight races this summer, including the Kansas and Rainbow futurities at this New Mexico track.

Special Effort, bought earlier this summer for $1 million by Canadian, Texas oilman and rancher Dan Urschel and later syndicated for $15 million, could become the first 2-year-old in quarter horse history to win all three major futurities at the mountain track, noted for its lucrative purses.

The race is likely to be run on an off track. Three days of off and on rains have left the track under several inches of mud, posing the possibility of an upset winner.

If Special Zffort can be beaten, the challengers given the best chances are Summer Encounter, Greybon, Viva El Seis and Go For Bugs.

Summer Encounter has run only five times this summer, winning four races. In her only defeat, the filly ran third behind Special Effort in the Rainbow Futurity last month.

"She gets a little better every time out and if everything goes right for her, she could be there," Brooks said.

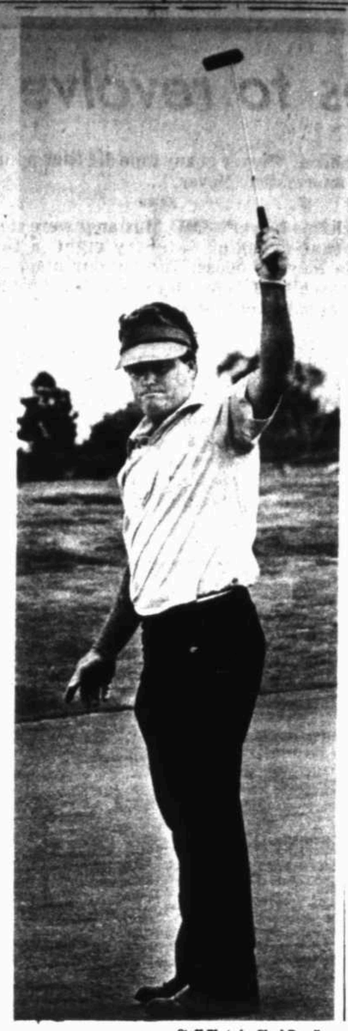

Greybon won the Sun Country Futurity last spring and has remained sound throughout the summer. He has finished first or second in eight of his 10 races and earned $170,06.

"He runs hard every time. He's honest," said Brooks.

Go For Bugs, like the other two, qualified for all three of the big futurities at Ruidoso Downs, but ran poorly in both the Kansas and Rainbow.

Viva El Seis, a strong colt who has won five of his last six races, could pose the biggest threat to Special Effort. After winning three straight in Louisiana, Viva El Seis shipped in to Ruidoso Downs and had no problem acclimating to the higher altitude. He easily won both of his trials for the futurity.

"He likes this track and I have a hunch he will run a good race," said his trainer, Dennis Olbrych.

C.E. Boyd, the defending champion of the Green Tree Country Club men's club championship tournament, is fighting to reclaim his title. Boyd is currently one up on the field after two rounds with a 66-70-136. Steve Whiteside is in second at 66-71-137.

Boyd has lead in GT

Green Tree Country Club defending champion C.E. Boyd is out to reclaim his men's club championship this weekend, and so far he's on the right track. After two rounds of play, Boyd holds a one-stroke lead over Steve Whiteside with a 66-70-136.

The results of the first two rounds and today's tee times are as follows:

Yanks' door continues to revolve

George Steinbrenner's managerial door keeps revolving with Bob Lemon joining Billy Martin as a two-time Yankee manager after Steinbrenner fired Gene Michael, who lasted less than a year. Lemon becomes the sixth Yankee manager in four seasons. past four seasons. Ralph Houk was manager when Steinbrenner took over and was replaced by Bill Virdon. Then it was Martin, Lemon, Martin, and Dick Howser last year...

Many of the Oakland Raiders knew convicted bookmaker Nicholas Dudich, whose relationship with quarterback Kenny Stabler is under investigation. "Everybody knew the guy," receiver Fred Biletnikoff..."I can say 15 to 20 guys on the Raiders' team right now knew him well," said Pete Banaszak... "We sat down a number of times and had beers with Nick at the airport after a game while waiting for the plane," said linebacker Phil Villapiano, now with the Buffalo Bills. "Me and a lot of players. Like Kenny, Freddie and Pete and George Blanda, Bob Moore and Ted Hendricks, among others." He added: "Never at any time did Nick pump us for any football information. Never."...

While Coach Ron Meyer's SMU Mustangs were stealing 48 points off Texas-Arlington Saturday night, a thief was breaking into Meyer's house. The burglar made off with some of the coach's wife's jewelry — and the Purdue lettermen's ring Meyer had earned as a player...

Nobumitsu Yuhara edged veteran Kikuo Arai by one stroke Sunday to win the East Japan Open Golf Championship with a 282. Defending champion Isao Aoki was two strokes behind... Keiko Matsuda won her third tournament this season Sunday, shooting a 1-over-par 73 for a 177 total and capturing the Isuzu Ladies Cup golf title... South African junior middleweight Charlie Weir knocked out Jerry Cheatham of Phoenix, Ariz., in the third round of their scheduled 10-round fight...

Gas heating saves $226 per year!

Compared to the heat pump, gas heating can save you $226 per year on your utility bills. So if you hear that a heat pump is "more economical", remember, that is comparing it to other electric heating . . . not to gas! No other heating system even comes close to gas for economy. At Energas, we are committed to help you get the most for your heating dollar. Gas heating, combined with good conservation practices, saves energy, too.

Hornitos: Troubles of an 'untown'

Los Angeles Times Photos

This pastoral scene is Hornitos, Calif., a town "hanging in limbo." After the mining boom of the 1850s went bust and the population dwindled to 65, people just grabbed whatever land was not in use.

The hangers-on are fiercely protective of the place, the old buildings and the uncertain property lines — so much so that in 1972 they disincorporated, voting the town out of existence.

The town is a throwback to gold mining days and is mainly a collection of crumbling adobes, a few sturdy brick and stone walls, iron door structures dating back to the 1850s and 1860s, plus a handful of old frame dwellings and miners' shacks.

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

HORNITOS, Calif. — Property ownership in this town is confusing.

Nobody is sure where his or her property begins or ends.

Half the square mile of property that encompasses the town is "town land." But the town no longer legally exists.

"The whole place is in limbo," says fire Captain Dave Appling, 42.

When Hornitos was established in the 1850 gold rush, half the land within the square mile limites of the community was set aside as "town land" to be administered by town officials.

But when the mining boom went bust all but a handful of people moved on to better diggings.

Those who remained behind did not bother electing a mayor or town officials for nearly a century.

To this day, townspeople have never concerned themselves with precise property lines.

"There was no town government from which to buy or lease the 'town land.' So, people just grabbed what land wasn't being used and put it to use," said Carlos Ortiz, 32, who runs cattle with his brother on 60 acres of 'town land' first settled by their father in the 1920s.

Like others occupying "town and" in Hornitos in Mariposa County the Ortiz brothers pay no property tax. Title to their ranch is cloudy, to say the least.

Hornitos has a population of 65, but at its peak 15,000 lived here.

The town is a throwback to gold mining days and is mainly a collection of crumbling adobes, a few sturdy brick and stone walls, iron door structures dating back to the 1850s and 1860s, plus a handful of old frame dwellings and miners' shacks.

The people here are fiercely protective of the place, the old buildings, the uncertain property lines and the town land."

To make sure no one would come in and reorganize the town, residents disincorporated in 1972, voting the town out of existence.

"Don't stir it, is our motto," confides Gene Osborn, 60, owner of the Bridge Cafe.

"The town lad in Hornitos is an historic anomaly. What do you do with a town that is gone? It gives us fits," says Mariposa County Counsel Richard Denhalter.

When the town disbanded eight years ago the town land legally became county owned property. County officials have been mulling over the disposition of the old town land ever since.

The obvious solution is to use it for public purposes or sell it with priority to the people residing on it. But how to do it has been a matter of political concern.

The 18-member Hornitos Patrons Club was organized 35 years ago to protect what's left of Hornitos.

"The club takes care of the old stone jail, St. Catherine Catholic Church up on a hill, the Chinese opium den, the crumbling walls and buildings," says Carla Meyer, 38, president of the club and clerk at the Hornitos po t office.

Mass is said at the church twice a year, on Easter and Christmas.

Manuela Ortiz runs the 115-year-old Plaza Bar with the original back bar that was shipped around the Horn and transported to Hornitos from San Francisco.

Rosie Martinez' Fandango Hall and Saloon, where the legendary bandit Joaquin Murietta hid out for five days in August 1853, is a private home.

Spud Murphy, 74, retired Yosemite National Park packer, has lived in a miner's shack in downtown Hornitos 50 years. The weathered, tin-roofed, clapboard shack is on "town land."

Murphy pays Madeline McGregor, lifelong resident of the town, 8½cents a month rent ($1 a year) for living in the shack and caring for it.

In 50 years Murphy has paid $50 rent for his home.

This sturdy brick building date back to the 1850s, when Hornitos was eatablished about 50 miles west of Yosemite in the high Sierra. At that time, the population peaked at 15,000.

Spud Murphy, 74, a retired Yosemite National Park packer, has lived in this miner's shack in downtown Hornitos for half a century. The weathered, tin-roofed, clapboard shack, which rents for $1 a year, is in on "town land," even though there is no town — it was voted out of existence in 1972.

$300 raffle ticket investment wins family a $113,000 house

ANNANDALE, Va. (AP) — Sky-high mortgage interest rates weren't a problem for a suburban Washington couple and their two teen-age sons, who managed to acquire a five-bedroom $113,000 house with an investment of only $300.

In the process, patent attorney John Redman and his wife, Carilyn, succeeded in selling the home after months of fruitless efforts to find a buyer, while the local Boys Club gained about $75,000 to help its soccer program.

It all resulted from an unusual raffle Saturday night at the club's bingo hall, for which 2,000 tickets were sold at $100 each.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Price Jr. of Camp Springs, Md., bought three tickets. Two of their sons, 19-year-old Nathan III and 17-year-old Shawn, then pitched in $50 apiece to buy one of the chances from their parents — the ticket that turned out to be the winner.

The Prices weren't on hand for the drawing. "I was in the shower when the Boys Club called," said Price, 47, a general contractor. "We all thought somebody was playing some kind of joke. But it was no joke."

Price remarked that buying the chances was his wife's idea. "She saw it (advertised) on TV, so we decided to give it a try. She's always been kind of lucky." He said his sons plan to put the house up for rent.

The Redmans, who now live in Fort Monmouth, N.J., tried without success to sell the Cape Cod-style home through normal means from January to June, when they came up with the raffle concept. They suggested the idea to several local charitable organizations, and the Boys Club agreed to sponsor it.

Jack Herrity, chairman of the Fairfax County, Va., board of supervisors, drew the winning ticket from a giant drum Saturday night. He commented that "this is the most innovative of all the ways I've seen to raise money" for community activities.

"I'm sure there's a good possibility that this may be duplicated by other organizations throughout not only this county, but statewide and perhaps throughout the country," Herrity said.

Everett Germaine, president of the Annandale Boys Club, said the club expected to net about $75,000 out of the total of $200,000 generated from raffle ticket sales. Of the remainder, $113,000 was paid to the Redmans for the home, while the rest went to cover sale closing costs and taxes.

In the wake of national publicity over the raffle, Germaine said, "I guess we've had 200 people call us, write us, to raffle their house, from California to apartment houses in New York City and Baltimore to Florida — you name it."

But Germaine said he doubts that such real estate lotteries will become widespread because they may involve complications for the sponsoring organization, which first must agree to purchase a home before subsequently raffling it off.

"If you can raffle it, fine, but if you can't raffle it, you're stuck with a white elephant and the accompanying loss that goes with it," he said.

Interest rates hurting homeowners, too

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The homebuyer's dilemma has become the homeowner's downfall.

High mortgage rates are making it hard to buy a house. And when buyers can't buy, sellers can't sell.

President Reagan said recently that the interest spiral is hurting his economic program; businessmen say high interest rates have replaced inflation as their No. 1 problem.

The Robert W. Smith family is typical of the thousands of Americans caught in the housing crunch.

Smith moved from Georgia to Missouri earlier this year for a better job and a higher salary. The family put their three-bedroom house on the market in Atlanta for $79,500 at the end of April.

Today, almost four months later, the house is unsold. Smith moved to St. Louis on May 1. His wife, JoAnn, and their two children joined him at the end of July and the family rented a house in suburban Kirkwood, Mo. They pay $495 a month in rent, on top of their $384 mortgage payment.

"We expected to have some trouble, but I didn't really expect it to be this long," said Mrs. Smith. "We can't buy anything until we get the equity out of the house in Atlanta."

The double payments strain family finances, eating up the increase in Smith's salary. "We're really tightening our belt," said Mrs. Smith. "We're paying out twice as much as we had planned."

The problem, she said, is the high cost of borrowing money. With mortgage rates hovering around 17 percent, one potential buyer of the Smith's Atlanta home did not have a large enough income to qualify for a loan. Another family wants to buy, said Mrs. Smith, but "they've got their own house on the market. It's a waiting game."

Mrs. Smith said her realtor told her the problem was not unusual. "I know at one point this summer she had five people in other cities that she was talking to ... who were not moving because they couldn't sell their houses where they were."

People making corporate transfers — where no change of employer is involved — are luckier. Pete DiDomenico of the Employment Relocation Council, an association of corporations, said two-thirds of the group's members would arrange for the sale of a transferred employee's home. The company either buys the house directly or arranges for the purchase through a firm which specializes in corporate relocation. Many companies also pay duplicate housing costs like the ones the Smiths face.

But the bills mount up — no matter who pays the price — and the time it takes to sell a house is longer — no matter who does the selling. Individual employers and relocation specialists are "all feeling cost problems right now," DiDomenico said.

Ken Kerin of the National Association of Realtors said the group estimates that sales of existing homes this year will total only 2.6 million, instead of the 4 million originally predicted. Almost 1½ million homes which would have been sold will not change hands.

Future belongs to robots that can get job done

By DAVE LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times

MILPITAS, Calif. — Since an engineer in the nearby town of Sunnyvale had invented a talking tombstone, maybe Donald Dixon could team up with him to produce a walking tombstone.

After all, originating things that move are what Dixon has a flair for. His latest creation, a robot named Ahmad, guards the bedroom of his two children.

They tend to pay attention to it because, for one thing, its face bears a resemblance ot their father.

"It probably wasn't a smart thing to do, but I made a mask of myself by putting drinking straws in my mouth to breathe through and then covering my face with plaster," Dixon said. "After it had dried, I took it off and filled it with liquid rubber."

His wife, Ann, supplied some of her own hair for the eyebrows.

THE REPLICAS of the face was the hard part. Putting together the wiring and computers to make a machine act like a human is something that the 23-year old Dixon has been able to do since his elementary school days.

"I remember that when I was 3 years old, my parents got us kids a set of electric trains for Christmas. I spent the day taking them apart to see what made them run, which didn't go over too well with my brothers and sisters."

Nowadays he puts things together, and is part of a growing congregation that believes that robots will play a major part in our future lives.

Indeed, so convinced is Dixon of this that he recently quit his job as a systems technician at a San Jose, Calif., company to form his own company. He said he already has financial backing.

"What I plan to come up with are robots that can do housework, serve as a butler, be a caretaker and guard the premises."

HIS CURRENT version, which he put together in three months in his kitchen, came to life after his wife agreed to selling their dining room table, vacuum cleaner and other household goods to raise $1,000.

A coffe can, a coat hanger, a microcomputer and several batteries later, the Egyptian-looking Ahmad was ready for active duty.

Standing outside the bedroom of 1-year-old Christina and 2-year-old Donald Jr., the android scans from left ot right. If it detects movement in front, it commands with moving lips (in the voice of the father): "Go back!"

"If they make contact with his sensors, he sets off an alarm to alert me," the inventor said.

In Ahmad's forehead is a microphone that serves as voice recognition. Dixon can leave a message for his wife. If the robot recognizes her, he delivers it. If the person is an intruder, he may get the silverware, but he won't get the message.

But the state of the art of robotics has, with all due respect to the talents of Dixon, accelerated to the point where Ahmad is the equivalent of a Model T.

"VIDEO SIGNAL Input," says the article headline. "Build this inexpensive video digitizer circuit and give your robot sight!"

The magaine is Robotics Age, published in the Los Angeles County community of Tujunga that wasn't even in existence until late 1979, when it began coming out quarterly.

Philip C. Flora, the publisher, said that the issues now appear bimonthly, the circulation has grown almost overnight to 12,000, and is expected to be doubled that by this time next year.

Another magazine, Robotics Today, published by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, also started in 1979 and has a present circulation of about 5,500.

One robot fancier who recognized a bandwagon when he saw one was Gene Beley, a journalism graduate from the University of California, Los Angeles, who now heads a company called Android Amusement Corp.

THE outfits's first creations were Adam and Andrea Android, two life-size animated mannequins controlled by an operator using a radio transmitter. They also had buttons, Beley said.

For $500 a day apiece, they became much in demand for promotional events and parties. At a party, for instance, Andrea would roll up to a guest, take his hand, and escort him to the dance floor.

"But those two androids were basically novelties," Beley recalled. "Their arms and head moved, and you could speak your voice through them, but we felt the next logical step was a robot that served a useful purpose."

AS A WISE man once pointed out, there is nothing new except that which has been forgotten. In the first century a Greek inventor is said to have constructed birds that chirped and flew. In the 18th century a Frenchman made a duck that flapped its wings and pecked at corn.

So omewhere along the line, some ancient probably contrived a device to dispense grog. Be this as it may, Beley went ahead and developed DC-1, not terribly android (made to resemble a human), but as productive as some living counterparts. What it did was serve drinks.

"We brought it out last year and essentially it was a robot butler," the inventor said. "It had a barrel body that dispensed canned drinks through slots. Its arms contained cups and supported a tray. It had an AM-FM radio in the chest, its head contained ice cubes, and it moved at the direction of a radio trasmitter."

ANDROID Amusement took the profits from rentals nad sales ($5,000 apiece) of that model to develop DC-2, which Beley said his company is turning out at the rate of six a month.

It differs from its robotic preeecessor in such respects as having a 5-inch color televison set in its chest and a TV camera in the dome. The screen is for regular programming, taped shows or for playing video games.

As owner of one of these $8,000 models is Playboy magazine publisher Hugh Hefner, who had a DC-2 wheeling around at his New Year's Eve bash, serving drinks, asking guests to sign in, announcing films in the mansion's screening room.

The field is getting crowded. Among his brainchildren, a Kansas City man created a cylindrical one that would roll along his driveway, reach out and grasp the morning newspaper and return it to his master.

In a Tokyo department store, a robot covered with synthetic skin and resembling the late Marilyn Monroe moves its fingers and lips as it plays a guitar.

BUT BEAUTY is only skin deep. The future belongs really to robots that can get a job done.

A candy factory in England had a problem. No worker had ever lasted more than two years in the job of rapid fire placing of chocolates into boxes.

Enter Unimation Inc. of Danbury, Conn., Ameirca's largest manufacturer of industrial robots. It exported two-armed devices that pick up finished pieces of candy and place them in boxes at the rate of two a second.

It was 20 years ago that a Unimate became the first working robot in an industrial environment. Its function, in a die casting plant, was to extract the casting, quench it in cold liquid and place it on a conveyor.

Now more than 3,000 robots are doing jobs in U.S. factories. The brokerage firm of Bache, Halsey Stuart Shields, Inc., in a research newsletter, leans toward a projection of $2 billion in robot sales in the U.S. by 1990.

General Motors alone has a potential, the newsletter said, of using 7,000 to 14,000 robots by the end of the decade. It now has fewer than 400.

A vice president of the automaker was recently quoted as saying that only about 30 percent of the paint that is purchased winds up on the cars. The remainder either goes through exhaust systems that protect workers from fumes or is lost when workers miss the cars.

Donald Dixon, right, explains to his son, Donald Jr., 2, the workings of Ahmad, an android robot he created. Ahmad guards the children's bedrooms and relays messages between Dixon and his wife, Ann.
