Thai Airways jet plunges into sea

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai Airways jet trying to avoid a collision with another airliner crashed into the sea off the resort island of Phuket today with 83 people aboard, the airline's managing director said.

Marine police boats and fishermen retrieved at least 12 bodies from the Andaman Sea in a search that continued after dark, officials said. At least two Americans had been reported aboard the plane, but there was no immediate word on the nationalities of the dead.

Airline officials initially said all aboard were killed when the plane crashed at 3:40 p.m. local time, but Air Marshal Narong Dithipeng said later there were likely to be many survivors.

Many were seen wearing life vests, Narong, the airline's managing director, told a news conference. The plane was seen afloat. It may have suffered cracks but no serious damage.

There was no immediate word that anyone had been rescued.

Narong said the Boeing 737 jet carrying 74 passengers and a crew of nine was trying to avoid hitting a jet of the Hong Kong-based Dragon Airlines when it crashed eight miles from Phuket airport. Phuket is about 540 miles southwest of Bangkok.

The reason for the crash was to avoid a Boeing 737 of Dragonair, which also was descending, he said. He said he did not know why the two planes nearly collided.

The Dragon Airlines jet, which landed safely at the Phuket airport, reported the crash to the control tower, Narong said.

In Hong Kong, Dragon Airlines Ltd. said in a brief statement that its officials "have spoken to the captain of the Dragonair aircraft in the area at the time and have been assured that the Dragonair aircraft was not involved. We express our sympathy and condolences to Thai Airways."

Narong said the Thai Airways Flight TH365 was flying from the commercial town of Hat Yai, 155 miles east of Phuket. It was to pick up passengers and continue on to Bangkok, he said.

The plane was carrying 35 Thai passengers and 37 foreign passengers, including about 30 Malaysians, two Americans, two Japanese and the other Europeans, Narong said. The other two passengers were children accompanying adults, he said.

It was the third fatal crash of a Thai Airways jet since April 1980. Eleven people were killed on April 15, 1985, when a Boeing 737 smashed into a hill in the southern province of Phangnga. The jet also was bound for Phuket, about 40 miles away.

On April 27, 1980, a Thai Airways jet crashed just north of the Bangkok airport after being struck by lightning. Forty-one people died.

Texas SSC plans, independent bid en route to panel

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Two Texas bids for the proposed $5 billion superconducting "atom smasher" were loaded aboard an airplane bound for Washington today, with officials predicting Texas could win the project.

The atom smasher, the largest scientific project of its kind, is being sought by the Dallas-Fort Worth area and by Amarillo.

Joe Kloesel, vice chairman of the Garden City SSC project, said today a local independent bid is already in Washington and will be "carried over" to the U.S. Department of Energy by Wednesday's deadline.

A Washington firm, ICF Technologies, is printing up a polished version of the local proposal calling for the lab to be located near Garden City about 40 miles southeast of Midland, Kloesel said.

Early this summer officials decided to go ahead and pursue a local bid, after being rejected by the state.

Both state proposals go to the U.S. Department of Energy as part of a national competition.

"Both the Dallas-Fort Worth and Amarillo sites are very strong, technically. And they are both very well-presented in these proposals," said Peter Flawn, chairman of the state's National Research Laboratory Commission, which has coordinated the effort.

"I believe our chances to win this great national competition are excellent. The benefits to Texas will be enormous," Flawn said.

The super collider project would generate more than 4,500 construction jobs and more than 2,500 permanent jobs, officials said. Built at a cost of more than $5 billion, its annual operating budget would total nearly $250 million.

"From an economic viewpoint, this is a competition well worth winning for Texas," Flawn said.

But equally important, he said, is the leading role in the scientific community that the winning state will gain.

"Of paramount importance for our state is the position of scientific leadership that comes with the (super collider). The state that is home to the (super collider) will be out front, will maintain a position of national leadership well into the next century. And that's where we want to be," Flawn said.

The atom smasher would be located in a 53-mile-long underground tunnel.

The super collider would be used in high-energy physics research.

Agents in local 'sting' halted Houston operation

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Austin men involved in the arrest of an alleged Iranian arms dealer in Midland claim federal officials halted a larger Houston-based sting operation to protect covert arms shipments to Iran. The Houston Post reported today.

Gary Howard and Ron Tucker claim in a suit filed in federal court in Washington this June that the U.S. government owes them $1.4 million for their expenses in a sting operation designed to nab an alleged English arms merchant. The Post said.

Howard and Tucker said they believe government officials lost interest in the investigation and ended it because it would have blown the covert U.S. operation involving arms shipments to Iran. The two say they helped gather enough evidence to prosecute the alleged arms merchant.

Houston Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said today he was aware the lawsuit had been filed, but he would not discuss any of the details.

We can't comment on anything like that. It's a matter before the court," he told The Associated Press.

While the suit claims they Justice Department refused to prosecute a man named Ian Smalley, U.S. Customs Service officials say Smalley was tried and acquitted by a Dallas federal jury in 1983.

Howard, a former border patrol agent, and Tucker, a former Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics agent, claim they have worked as investigators and informants for Customs and the Treasury Department since 1979.

Customs spokesman Dennis Murphy acknowledged that the two 39-year-old men had been "confidential informants" for the agency.

Earlier this month, the pair helped Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter arrest a middleman in an alleged deal to deliver stolen missile parts to Iran.

Victor Fonseca of Lisbon, Portugal, is held on state charges.

The two men say that shortly after they helped in a March 1981 arms seizure at Houston's Intercontinental Airport, they were asked by Customs to help in an investigation of an undercover arms transaction that allegedly targeted Smalley. They say they agreed only after being assured by Houston Customs officials they would get a 10 percent cash finders' fee.

The suit also claims that Customs would reimburse the two men if the investigation was dropped. The men claim they spent 16 months on the probe, spending more than $1.2 million.

But the men claim Customs officials closed the case without filing any charges and the two were not reimbursed.

The suit says that "it was only in the fall of 1986 and early this year, with the revelations of United States arms deals with Iran that these plaintiffs realized that they were in all probability a connection between the U.S. government's covert arms deals with Iran the sudden and inexplicable desire not to prosecute Ian Smalley."

Gephardt focuses on Texas visits, state-oriented issues

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of weekly profiles on presidential candidates.

By JIM WARREN

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Richard Gephardt proudly reminds Lone Star Democrats that he's been to Texas more than any other Democratic presidential hopeful.

"At least 20 times I know," the congressman from St. Louis said during a recent swing through the state. U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Dallas, a Gephardt supporter, quickly corrected him. "About 25 times really, Dick," Bryant said as Democrats mingled at a reception here.

Gephardt, who's had his hand in most high-profile legislation over the last two years, says his issues are those Texans care about. Tax reform, trade, agriculture — those are a few of the major bills in Congress that Gephardt calls his own.

Just as the 1988 Democratic presidential races began to take shape last spring, Gephardt fell into the public spotlight with his amendment to the trade bill. The amendment calls for retaliation against countries that don't open their markets to U.S. goods. It cleared the House and made trade a front-burner issue on the political scene.

Gephardt, the 46-year-old chairman of the Democratic Campaign Caucus, sponsored the so-called Save the Family Farm bill in the House. And the six-term congressman says he and Sen. Bill Bradley started the tax reform movement that resulted in a major overhaul of the federal tax code.

He supports an oil import fee and tax incentives to domestic oil producers and pledges to curb U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

Gephardt's critics charge that he associates himself with wealthy issues but lets others do the hard work. They say Gephardt was out campaigning for president during preliminary debate on the trade bill, never sought to have his amendment attached in committee, then gave a rousing speech on the most climactic day when he knew the trade bill would top the evening news.

Others say his trade amendment takes the same approach as an infamous bill in the 1920s that many credit with starting the Great Depression. Gephardt says that's not true.

Mobile-home builder hopes papal blessing will boost price

BURLESON, Texas (AP) — A mobile-home builder says he is banking on a papal blessing to increase the value of two homes he has donated to house Pope John Paul II's entourage in San Antonio.

Since the pope blesses every home he enters, builder Gary Lundvall of Burleson, 20 miles south of Fort Worth, figures there will be a demand for the two homes later. "The homes will be placed at the staging area for the pope's use, then they'll remain on display for the rest of that week, for people who want to see them or look through them," Lundvall told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Then a plaque will be placed in each one — over the fireplace — saying Pope John Paul II used the home. Whoever buys it will also own the plaque.

And a blessing. "The pope automatically dedicates (blesses) every home he enters," said

Rene Nino, manager of Key Homes in San Antonio, a distributor for Oak Creek Homes of Burleson, which Lundvall manages.

All of which significantly enhance the value of these particular mobile homes.

"Yeah, I can't help but believe that," Nino said, "but we're not looking to gouge anybody. We're not selling at a loss, but I'll be happy as long as I break even."

Nino said he was contacted about five weeks ago by the Rev. David Garcia of San Antonio.

"He had been in charge of finding a staging area for the pope's visit and setting things up."

Impoverished teen's honesty rewarded

DETROIT (AP) — An impoverished teen-ager who turned in a $7,500 diamond ring she found at the crash site of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 will be rewarded by a newspaper columnist, who says he was touched by her honesty.

Denise McNeely, 14, of Taylor found the ring after police removed barricades around the site where 156 people died in the Aug. 16 crash of the MD-80 jetliner.

"She's just an honest teen-ager girl whose family obviously doesn't have very much money and she wanted to return the ring to the (crash victim's) family," the Chicago Tribune's Bob Greene said Sunday.

Iraqi planes strike at 'maritime target'

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes pounded a "maritime target" near the Iranian coast this morning in the third day of an offensive that has rocketed the Persian Gulf war out of a mid-summer lull.

In the southern gulf, an Iranian speedboat attacked a Kuwaiti-flag freighter, gulf-based marine salvage executives said. It was the first such strike since Iraq on Saturday broke an informal month-long cease-fire between the warring countries had observed on attacking each others' commerce in the waterway.

Iraq accuses Kuwait of aiding and abetting the Iraqi war effort.

Tehran had threatened to retaliate for any raids that curtail its oil exports and said no targets would be immune, including the convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers escorted by U.S. Navy warships. A convoy of two tankers and at least six U.S. warships passed the halfway point of its 550-mile voyage to Kuwait today.

Iraqi military communications read over state-run Baghdad radio said Iraqi warplanes struck "large maritime targets" off the Iranian coast at 11:30 p.m. Sunday and 7:45 a.m. today. The attacks were the fourth and fifth since Saturday.

Iraq uses the term "large maritime target" to refer to tankers near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the northern gulf.

Baghdad said it resumed the attacks to force its war foe of seven

U.S. 'deplores, understands' renewed air offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is dismayed by Iraq's renewed air offensive against Iran, but finds it "understandable" in light of Iran's delay in accepting a cease-fire resolution, a Reagan administration official says.

"I find it deplorable, but I also say in terms of their interest it's understandable," Undersecretary of State Michael H. Armacost said in an interview Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Armacost said the resumption of air attacks, including Sunday's Iraqi raids on Iran's chief offshore oil facility in the northern Persian Gulf, "lends urgency" for a second resolution by the U.N. Security Council.

The Security Council passed a resolution July 20 calling for a cease-fire in the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The United States has urged the council to approve a second resolution imposing an arms embargo on the country that does not honor the cease-fire.

Iranian officials met with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar last week, but they did not formally accept the cease-fire resolution. Iran has vowed that if its gulf oil-exporting facilities or tankers were attacked by Iraq, Kuwaiti ships and the U.S. warships escorting them would be in danger of Iranian attack.

Two senators seeking their parties' presidential nominations said Sunday the United States would be justified in retaliating against Iran if it attacks U.S. warships or the vessels they are protecting.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., also said he understood Iraq's reasoning for resuming its attacks on Iran.

"I also understand we're talking to the Iraqis, trying to get them to back off. But they see the Iranian oil being shipped out, a lot of money coming in, the Iraqis buying more weapons," Dole said.

Dole, a likely candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, and Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., who has cleared his presidential candidacy, were interviewed separately on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program.

Gore said that if Iran attacked U.S. ships, "We would be justified in having a proportional response, one that was designed to make the retaliatory point but not so extensive as to enmesh us even more in the Iran-Iraq conflict."

Dole said the United States would have to retaliate if there were an attack and Iran were identified as the attacker.

Both senators said they preferred finding a means of getting Iran to comply with the Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire, but they also said the United States cannot pull out of the area now that it has established a naval presence.

Iraq resumed its air offensive Saturday, breaking the warring neighbors' 45-day informal cease-fire on attacking each others' commerce in the gulf.

"I think it's very regrettable, extremely unfortunate," Armacost said. "We don't condone it. It's not entirely unexpected. We've known for some time the Iraqis do not wish to allow a situation in which restraints were imposed in the gulf while no constraints were imposed on Iran to pursue the ground war. The ground war has continued."

The undersecretary said the United States wants a "comprehensive cease-fire on land, sea and air."

On Saturday, the State Department urged restraint on both sides in the war.

sustained minor damage and was proceeding to Dubai for repairs.

The latest U.S.-escorted convoy, the fourth northbound and sixth overall since the operation began July 20, includes the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City.

The U.S. Navy said the convoy entered the Persian Gulf early Sunday and included the missile cruiser USS Reeves and missile frigates USS Hawes. It said RH-53D helicopters from the USS Guadalcanal searched for mines.

Kuwait asked the United States to give 11 of its 21 tankers U.S. flags and military escorts to protect them from Iranian attack. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq and began attacking its tankers a year ago.

Baghdad said its aircraft on Sunday hit three targets inside Iran: a communications center in the southwestern city of Asadabad and power stations in Tabriz, near the Soviet border, and in the central city of Hamadan.

Iraq said its aircraft hit at least three Iranian oil installations in the gulf Saturday.

Gulf-based shipping sources, speaking on condition they were not identified, said Iran's Lavan Island, a coastal refinery and terminal, was burning and Rakhsh, an oil platform, was severely damaged after Saturday's attacks. Both are in the southern gulf.

Marine helicopter needs jumper cables

FLATWOODS, La. (AP) — Three Marine helicopters made an unscheduled landing on a rural road to check a warning light on one of the craft, say startled residents who provided jumper cables to get that chopper flying again.

The choppers landed Friday near Flatwoods on a one-way road. The Marines who disembarked told Dolores Basco and other spectators they landed because a warning light signaled a loose part on one of the helicopters.

Rapides Parish Sheriff's Sgt. William Pilcher confirmed the report Sunday.

The Marines were traveling from their home base in North Carolina to the National Training Center in California and had stopped for refueling at England Air Force Base in Louisiana, the Alexandria Daily Town-Talk newspaper reported.

The soldiers quickly tightened the part, Mrs. Basco said, but the helicopter's battery ran down while it was on the ground and it was unable to restart. She said the Marines used her telephone to alert their next checkpoint in Dallas of the trouble.

Satellite TV Update Sept., Oct., 1987

Today's modern system is a receiver, dish mover, and descrambler all built into one attractive box. It's smaller than an average VCR. Touch the power button on the remote, and the TV screen comes to life. The first thing you notice is how clean and sharp the picture is; it's better than any cable system. These new systems put words and information on your TV screen. With the touch of a button you can get the time of day, the title of a movie, what it's rated (G, PG, R, X, etc.), how many minutes are left in the movie, and the satellite and channel you are on.

Touch another button and it tells you what comes on next, what it's rated, and when it starts. All that information is in big, easy-to-read letters on your TV screen. If there are certain channels you don't want the kids to watch, you can block them out quickly and easily.

Many of the programs are in stereo for those who have a stereo TV, or even better still, a separate component stereo system. The stereo sound is clean, rich and crisp, just like sitting in a movie theater.

Speaking of movie theaters, there is a new type of programming available through your descrambler called Pay-Per-View. These movies are either still showing at the theater or just left and won't be available on VCR tape or cable for months. You can watch these movies for about $4 each and be billed at the end of the month for what you watch. The hand-held remote will control the system from any room in the house. These systems have every luxury feature imaginable. You get some scrambled channels free and others are very inexpensive. For example, KTVN Dallas is $9 per year. Four HBO and Cinemax movie channels are $72 for six months, that's $12 per month for all four. You can buy a system just like this one for $2,495, including installation. You can buy this system for $64 per month with no money down. Come to Satellite City and get a free demonstration while they are on sale.

Helicopter, plane collide over Florida

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — A helicopter and a small plane collided in the air today while making practice landings at the same time at Opa-locka Airport, and at least one person was killed and two were injured, officials said.

The airplane crash-landed on a runway and the helicopter crashed into a field after the collision.

Roger Myers, of the Federal Aviation Administration's regional public information office in Atlanta, said "both aircraft were in the traffic pattern making touch-and-goes" when they collided.

Myers said two people on the plane, a Cessna 152, were injured when it crash-landed. He did not know the extent of their injuries.

The only person aboard the helicopter was killed, said Maria Carbonell, a spokeswoman for the Metro-Dade Fire Department.

The airport, which also serves as an air base for the U.S. Coast Guard's 7th District, is near this Miami suburb in northern Dade County. It is one of the busiest general-aviation airports in the nation.

'Jubilarians' renew marriage vows

CHICAGO (AP) — The sound of wedding bells faded long ago, but the 750 couples who entered Holy Name Cathedral holding hands and exchanging winks appeared more like newlyweds than people celebrating 50 years of marriage.

Every pew was packed with smiling senior citizens who came to renew the wedding vows they took in 1937 and receive a special blessing from Cardinal Joseph Bernardin during Sunday's 10th annual Golden Wedding Anniversary Mass.

Bernardin congratulated the "jubilarians" on their commitment to marriages that have survived wars, the Depression and numerous personal struggles.

"We live in a world of fast food and brief marriages," Bernardin said. "You have clearly demonstrated that faithful married life is, indeed, possible."

The Office for Family Ministries of the Archdiocese of Chicago sent 990 invitations, and 756 couples replied that they would attend, said spokesman Joe Dix.

The years went by too fast for Bob and Eleanor Huck of suburban Hinsdale, who said they will celebrate their anniversary Nov. 20.

"I can't believe it, it feels like it was just several years ago," Mrs. Huck said.

"We never thought we'd make it

Sharing a special moment during a Golden Wedding Anniversary Mass help for 750 couples at Chicago's Holy Name Cathedral are Christine and Michael Mavigliano of Chicago.

50 to begin with," Huck said with a laugh.

When asked if they had any regrets since their marriage May 15, 1937, George and Ellie Dods of La Grange simultaneously answered

"none at all."

"When you think back on all that went on, it seems very short," George Dods said. "I'm just glad I was with a generation that can stick together."

Dods said he knew Ellie was "the one" from the first moment he saw her.

"His mother said his car knew no other way to go than to my house," Mrs. Dods said.

Sunday's Mass was the second time this summer Victoria and Phillip Vitale renewed their wedding vows.

"I'm wearing the same dress I wore to my granddaughter's wedding June 27, and we said our vows again there," said Mrs. Vitale. The Vitales were married on the same day 50 years ago, she said.

"We get along real good, and I wish I could do it all over again," said Vitale, who wore a shiny gold bow tie and a boutonniere with his black suit.

Remaining true to traditional values is the secret of marital success, according to Waino and Christine Sarvana of suburban Arlington Heights.

"When we got married we weren't even old enough to vote, and look at us now," Sarvana said.

"When you get married, it's until death do us part, in sickness and in health — that's what we believe in."

Today's young newlyweds could benefit from the example set by the jubilarians, said Irene O'Leary, who played with her son outside while her parents Tony and Mary Capua attended the Mass.

REWARD

"She ought to get the message," said Greene. "If you do the right thing, it might come back at you in the right way."

Miss McNeely gave the ring over to police, who said it would be returned to the husband of a 50-year-old Arizona woman killed in the crash. An insurance appraiser valued the ring at $7,500.

Greene said he will give the girl a reward matching the purchase price of the ring up to its current value.

Ms. McNeely said news of Greene's reward "makes me feel good because right now my mom's on AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) and trying to raise three kids."

The teen-ager's honesty and Greene's gesture, however, may have a price.

State Department of Social Services Director C. Patrick Babcock said a $7,500 reward could push the family over the maximum income allowed clients of the government's family support program.

"But because of the circumstances, we would see if there was some way of setting up an educational trust or something else to help the family," he said.

The girl's mother, Thelma Poynter, said Greene called twice this weekend and promised to help straighten out that problem.

"He thinks she should be paid for being honest," Ms. Poynter said. "I don't get it. Denise's reward has nothing to do with me."

Greene said he acted on impulse to reward the girl and said he didn't even tell his editors at the Chicago Tribune, which publishes and syndicates his column.

"We stand on the sidelines telling people stories and this seemed like an opportunity to get off the sidelines and maybe change a girl's life," said Greene, 40.

Greene said he had no plans of writing a column about the girl and her good deed, although he had considered it.

"I was thinking 'What do you do? Write a tear-jerker about it? That's too easy. So I thought I would send a message,'" Greene said.

"I'm not a protectionist, I'm a protectionist," he says. "I want to get markets open, and I want more trade, not less trade. The issue in trade is not how to protect our markets, it's how to get other countries to stop protecting theirs."

And, Gephardt says, the voters are interested in trade, because they've seen that unemployment stems from unfair trade practices that caused the enormous trade deficit.

Although his Texas fundraising and organization can't rival that of Republican George Bush, no other Democrat has surpassed his early organization. So far seven Texas congressmen have lined up behind him.

Bryant and Martin Frost of Dallas, Marvin Leath of Waco, Albert Bustamante of San Antonio, Solomon Ortiz of Corpus Christi, Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs and Mike Andrews of Houston have endorsed Gephardt, who expects other members of the Texas delegation to join his team soon.

Houston banker, developer and political kingpin Walter Mischel Sr. and Dallas super-developer Trammel Crow have raised money for Gephardt, leading the way for other Democratic fundraisers to back him.

"He's built a fundraising organization that many of our statewide elected officials wish they had," Bryant says. "I went to his fundraiser in Houston the other day and he had (longtime liberal leader) Billie Carr and Walter Mischel in the same room."

Gephardt also has enlisted some of the state's top Democratic organizers, including John Poland, who assembled Jimmy Carter's team in 1976 before anyone had heard of the Georgia peanut farmer. Missy Mandel, an Austin political consultant who worked in the Carter White House, also is helping Gephardt.

Political pros think Gephardt stands a good chance in Texas if he can finish in the top two or three spots in the early primaries and caucuses leading up to the March 8 Southern regional primary — Super Tuesday. Several good showings in the early contests, they say, could separate Gephardt from the pack.

"Getting more votes than your opponents in the early events is a good way to distinguish yourself," Gephardt says. "But I think the greatest distinction is I can get things done. I just don't talk about trade and tax reform and social security reform and health care legislation, I go out and do it."

He notes that 70 congressmen have endorsed him so far, more than any of the other Democratic hopefuls. Gephardt, a lawyer, also says he can win in the general election because he can bring in independent and Republican voters who support him on trade, agriculture or other areas.

"Ronald Reagan tried to make us feel good," he says. "Now we have to be good."

Pit bulldog fight raided by authorities

DALLAS (AP) — More than 50 people were arrested and scores of others fled when authorities raided a high-stakes pit bulldog fight in a wooded area in southeast Dallas County, officials say.

"To veteran lawmen, this is the first organized dog fight they had come across, going back 30 years," Dallas County Sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said Sunday.

"From time to time, we have heard rumors of dog fights, and we have been vigilant to check out those reports, but we never before had this kind of hard evidence of organized dog fights," he added.

The Greater Dallas Area Organized Crime Task Force raid followed a tip from an informant that a pit bulldog fight was being staged Saturday night, Ewell said.

"Many escaped through the thick underbrush that marked the area, and no doubt hid until the activity was over and our officers left, but a total of 56 persons was apprehended," Ewell said.

STATE

A 37-year-old man, who lived in a house near the fight site, was booked Sunday into Lew Sterrett Justice Center for investigation of a felony complaint of operating a facility used for dog fighting, Ewell said. A city magistrate set bond at $2,500.

Another man, a former convict, was arrested for possession of a pistol, a felony. The other 54 were released after being cited to appear later in Justice of the Peace court in Mesquite, an east Dallas suburb, Ewell said.

No dogs were captured or confiscated, said the task force commander, Lt. Jim Valentine of the Dallas County sheriff's department.

The task force was dispatched after being informed that a prize of $2,500 would be given the owner of the winning dog in the first fight of the night, Ewell said, "and as they go up to the last surviving dogs, the grand finale would be a $10,000 fight."

As in a cockfight, spectators also bet among themselves on various dogs, Ewell said.

The pit bulldog fight was being staged in a wooded area about 75 yards off Beltline Road, which loops around Dallas, on the outskirts of subdivisions that are sparsely setted, Ewell said.

"There was a frame house sitting 25 yards off Beltline Road," between the suburbs of Mesquite and Seagoville, Ewell said, "and the promoter used an extension cord for an electrical source, stretching the cord 50 yards to a fighting area."

Tarpaulins were stretched over low-hanging tree limbs to conceal the light from the road, and benches and chairs were arranged to form a square around the fighting area, Ewell said.

"The officers, with the assistance of a Dallas police helicopter, moved onto the location, sending a wild bunch of people scattering through the underbrush, hampered by the fact that someone in the house pulled the plug on the extension cord, throwing the area in darkness," Ewell said.

Authorities found a concession stand of beer and barbecue, as well as containers of waters with sponges apparently intended to clean up the bloody dogs, he said.

Controlled burning of forest continues

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Controlled burning in the Four Notch area of Sam Houston National Forest is expected to continue this week as part of controversial insect-devastation recovery efforts, officials said.

The U.S. Forest Service began burning about 100 acres of thick underbrush on Sunday, and a total of about 2,500 acres is targeted, spokesman Hal Glasman said.

The first step of the reforestation program, chopping away damaged trees, began in April 1986 amid protests by environmentalists and the Texas attorney general's office.

Some protesters chained themselves to trees in a futile effort to stop big machines from ripping down timber affected in the early 1980s by southern pine beetles.

But on Sunday, only two activists turned out to protest the burning, speaking with reporters outside where a news conference was held in New Waverly, south of Huntsville.

One of the two, George Russell, 43, of Huntsville, was issued a citation for obstructing traffic, Glasman said.

The burn went ahead unhindered under overcast, occasionally rainy skies using flammable materials dropped to the ground by helicopter, he said.

"We needed the wet. The long, dry spell for the last three to four weeks made it too dry," he said. "Conditions for prescribed burning are very scientific — we need the rain, we need the ground moisture."

Survivors of 'Pancho' Villa's forces reunited, honored

HOUSTON (AP) — They rode tall and fought hard as teen-agers under Mexican revolutionary hero Francisco "Pancho" Villa, who brought a constitutional government to Mexico that stands today.

On Sunday, Jesus M. Gonzalez and Leo Reynoso, both 87, were honored as two of the few remaining survivors of Villa's forces. A third survivor, Rafael Lorenzana Reyna, 88, could not travel from Brownsville for the reunion.

"General Villa was a man, as all other men are, with a simple heart but high ideals," said Gonzalez, who served as a captain to Villa between 1912 and 1915.

Villa was a "hardworking, very honest man, and he knew when to become angry when the situation called for it," he said, speaking through an interpreter.

Gonzalez and Leo Reynoso, also 87, were presented commemorative awards by the Urbina Foundation, a charitable group dedicated to, among other things, preserving Texas and Mexican history.

"When you finally realize that there are only three or four survivors, then you realize that is the time to bring them together," said Manuel Urbina II, foundation chairman.

"When we become aware that this episode in history is about to pass before us, it becomes time to honor them," he said.

According to Urbina, the three are the only known survivors of the group that helped wage the Mexican revolution between 1910 and 1917. Reynoso rode with Villa's forces between 1914-1916. Reyna served with Villa between 1915 and 1917.

During the presentation, a videotape on Villa's life and times was shown, followed by interviews with his widow, Gonzalez and Reynoso.

In addition to the commemorative awards, the men were given specimens of currency for the Mexican state of Chihuahua bearing Villa's name issued in 1913. Reyna's grandson, Jose Munoz, accepted the awards on his behalf.

The Mexican Revolution began in 1910, when opposition grew to the 30-year rule of President Porfirio Diaz. Francisco Madero, supported by revolutionaries in northern Mexico headed by Villa and in southern Mexico by Emiliano Zapata, assumed the presidency in 1911, exiling Diaz to Paris.

Instability and fighting wracked the country until 1917, when the present-day constitution was written. Hermilo Lopez Bassols, Mexican consul general in Houston, said the Mexican revolution was the first of the 20th century.

Employers of aliens face sanctions

DALLAS (AP) — A nationwide experiment designed to stem the flow of undocumented aliens begins Tuesday when the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service can begin using unprecedented employer sanctions.

Effective Sept. 1, employers may be subjected to fines and civil penalties for knowingly hiring undocumented aliens after Nov. 6, 1986.

Hailed as an instrument to spoil the fruits of illegal immigration, the sanctions accompany a program of offering amnesty to undocumented aliens.

The sanctions, core of the Immigration and Reform and Control Act of 1986, have created tension among aliens whose bosses issued an ultimatum — obtain a work permit by filing for amnesty before Sept. 1 or get fired.

Until now, employers have avoided fines for hiring an alien who said he or she would apply for amnesty. Starting Tuesday, however, employees hired after Nov. 6, 1986, must have work authorization instead of promises to seek amnesty.

Impending employer sanctions have had two immediate effects. Undocumented aliens are flocking to INS centers seeking amnesty to satisfy their bosses' requests for documents. Also, some aliens have been fired, a few unnecessarily, as employers scramble to avoid sanctions.

"We've got a load. Sept. 1 is really pressing us...bringing more people to our doors," said Richard Rios, director of the Houston INS center.

In Houston, police were summoned to disperse 300 aliens who pounded on windows and demanded entry after INS officials at the Houston center turned them away Aug. 18. The tension was partly fostered by haste to meet the Sept. 1 deadline.

A six-week lull at the Arlington amnesty center ended last week as about 80 additional amnesty applications were filed each day, driving the total to the center's daily capacity of 300 applications.

But an INS spokesman said that for the time being, investigators will not cite or penalize employers for retaining undocumented workers after Sept. 1 if the employer has made a good-faith attempt to ensure that the workers will be legalized.

"We're certainly not encouraging employers to make wholesale firings," said Verne Jervis, INS spokesman in Washington. "They should inquire with their employees if they have applied for amnesty and, if not, why not. We're not going to write a citation for a technical offense if the employer shows a good-faith effort."

Employers walk a tightrope: they must verify the legal status of everyone hired after last Nov. 6 while avoiding discrimination lawsuits for wrongfully firing legal aliens or refusing to hire ethnic Americans.

"I'm advising them if they don't have the I-688A (an amnesty work permit) by September, they are to terminate them," said Dallas lawyer Harry Joe, a certified immigration law specialist who counsels many employers. "They don't want to get caught with unauthorized employees in their business."

But about 5,000 Dallas-Fort Worth area employers contacted recently by INS investigators now appear to understand employer sanctions, said Ronald Chandler, director of the INS Dallas District.

STATE IN BRIEF

Children need AIDS test

SPRING (AP) — Six of seven children pricked with a hypodermic needle in an initiation rite will have to undergo AIDS and hepatitis tests, the mother of one of the children says.

A 10-year-old boy first denied pricking the Spring woman's 6-year-old child in the arm, but later confessed, a report by Detective Mickey Worley of the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department said.

"My son came in screaming, 'Mommy, Mommy, they stuck me with a needle,' said the boy's mother, who asked not to be identified. "I was sewing at the time, and I thought he meant a sewing needle of some sort."

"I didn't think anything about it until the next day," the woman told the Conroe Courier. "You don't think of a 10-year-old running around with a hypodermic needle."

That was Wednesday. By Thursday evening, the child's arm was red and swollen.

The 10-year-old gave an account of an initiation rite to some kind of secret club and said his 14-year-old brother pricked his arm with the needle and he then pricked the arms of six other boys, the detective's report said.

One of the children who were pricked said the needle came from the drawer of the 14-year-old, the mother of the 6-year-old said.

AIDS hospital closing

HOUSTON (AP) — As the nation's first AIDS hospital prepares to close, top administrators are trying to assure treatment and research that began at the less than year-old facility will not end with it.

"We have done everything we can think of," said Dr. Peter Mansell, medical director of the Institute for Immunological Disorders. "I don't know where to go next."

Among Mansell's priorities are saving a $5.8 million contract from National Institutes of Health designating the institute as one of 19 facilities around the country for testing experimental treatments

If the contract isn't continued, Houston AIDS patients could be left hundreds of miles from the nearest site where they could undergo experimental treatments for the deadly disease.

Patients who have signed up to take part in experimental drug tests in Houston may have to move to other cities if the contract is lost, according to Dr. Gary Brewton of the institute.

"People on the protocols might have the option to transfer to Tulane (in New Orleans) or Miami or San Diego," he said. "That is the distance they would have to go to get into an ATEU protocol."

ATEU stands for AIDS Treatment Evaluation Unit, the name given centers where experimental treatments are administered.

City sign loved, hated

CARROLLTON (AP) — A rainbow-colored sign that proclaims "Jesus is Lord" is wearing out its welcome in this north Dallas suburban city.

For six years, the sign has been decorated a huge grain elevator near Interstate 35. Some consider it a landmark, but others hate the sign that advertises the Word of Faith Outreach Center in Farmers Branch, and think it ought to be changed to something that promotes the community.

The elevator — owned by Lee and Dorothy Groves, owners of Groves Electrical Services — also bears a Word of Faith telephone number and urges passers-by to "Visit Word of Faith This Sunday."

Consultant Dennis Wilson asked 80 local merchants for their opinions about good and bad aspects of Old Downtown Carrollton and said the sign was high on both lists.

"I think a lot of people were concerned about the sign in general, but a lot of people associate it with Carrollton," said Wilson, whose company, Wilson Killinger Inc., was hired by the city to devise a revitalization plan for the Old Downtown area.

Mayor Pro Tem John Heath said city officials hope to lease the tower and replace the sign.

Ill-fated expedition remembered by Texans

QUITTAQUE (AP) — Texans gathered in this Panhandle town to honor men who tragically failed in 1841 to help the infant Republic of Texas enforce its boundaries and set up trade between Austin and Santa Fe.

At a Sunday ceremony near Quitaque, officials from the Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas, Texas Historical Commission and the Daughters of the Republic of Texas unveiled a pair of historical markers indicating where members of the ill-fated Texas Santa Fe expedition made camp at a spot known to historians as "Camp Resolution."

One of the markers was erected by the Texas Historical Commission and the other by Masonic Lodge, because 22 freemasons died in the expedition.

Historian Frederick Rathjen wrote that after Texas gained its independence from Mexico in 1836, the new nation's second president, Mirabeau Lamar, wanted to enforce newly defined national boundaries and foster trade between Austin and Santa Fe.

A march by 321 volunteers began at Austin and ended at the confluence of the Los Lingos and Quitaque creeks, with many marchers suffering from starvation.

On Aug. 30, 1841, after at least 35 men had perished, a scouting party from the camp was ambushed by 150

Kiowa Indians, and five other men were killed.

Eventually, another group made its way from the camp and found a group of Mexican traders and hired them to lead the rest of the group to Santa Fe.

When the survivors reached Santa Fe, however, Mexican authorities arrested them. As prisoners, the Texans were forced to march south 2,000 miles to Mexico City jails.

The spot near Quitaque became known as "Camp Resolution" because of the men's decision to make a "resolute stand" at that spot and send a party to New Mexico for help.

To add color to the dedication, some Panhandle area history buffs honored the expedition by showing up in 19th-century dress.

Members of the 4th Cavalry Regiment, Memorial, drew their swords in tribute to the men who died there in 1841. The group of about 40 Lubbock-area residents dress in 1870s model cavalry uniforms and attend special occasions such as Sunday's, said Robert L. Carr, a Lubbock doctor who travels with the group.

Mike Van Deventer of Amarillo showed up dressed in 1830s-style garb, along with two other members of "Los Historicos De Tejas."

Dallas minister in debt, down to last paycheck

DALLAS (AP) — With debts mounting from medical costs and legal fees, the Rev. Walker Railey is down to his last paycheck as senior minister at Dallas' First Methodist Church, and acquaintances say he has not found a new job or sold his house.

Railey was put on leave of absence in May and has not preached since Easter Sunday, three days before his wife, Margaret "Peggy" Railey, was choked nearly to death. She remains in a coma in a nursing home at Tyler, where her parents live.

Railey has refused to talk to police about the attack and in late July was subpoenaed by a Dallas County grand jury, where he reportedly declined to answer questions, citing the Fifth Amendment.

Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon reportedly told grand jurors she and Railey had been dating for about a year, had taken trips together and had discussed marriage.

Railey's last semi-monthly paycheck of $2,521 was scheduled to be paid today, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday. Railey did not return messages The Associated Press left on his answering machine Sunday night.

In addition to costs not covered by insurance for Mrs. Railey's care, Railey incurred bills from a medical and psychiatric hospitals after he attempted suicide by taking a drug overdose 10 days after the April 22 attack on his wife.

The Times Herald reported that little more than $5,000 has been contributed to four trust funds set up for Railey, his wife and their two children.

"I've talked to him a few times in the last few weeks, but he hasn't said what he might do," said Ralph Shannon, chairman of the church's pastor-parish relations committee. "He's still in Dallas, and he hasn't told me about any plans he has to move."

Railey's home is up for sale and listed at $279,000.

Posse ropes calves loose on interstate

DALLAS (AP) — A posse of sheriff's deputies chased over 150 calves on Interstate 20 over the weekend after the trailer carrying them flipped over.

"We got here, split up and began roping and driving and catching them any way we could," said Ron Tucker, a member of the Dallas County Sheriff's Office's posse division.

About 55 deputies roped and wrested the calves early Sunday and had most of the frightened animals corralled by the afternoon, deputies said. The animals were being kept in the sheriff's department livestock center in Hutchins.

Sheriff spokesman Kelly Reagan said the driver, Robert Lee Jones, 35, of Fort Worth, had reached for a cigarette when the truck veered to the right and dropped off the road embankment.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You feel more at ease in social situations now and should have more fun. Your personal relationships improve and become a source of great happiness. Business decisions are still difficult to make but bring positive results. New financial gains are likely. Travel for pleasure, but handle business matters by phone. Develop your talent for dealing with all kinds of people. It is OK to be reticent about your past. Give children a chance to make more decisions for themselves.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: "Tarzan" creator Edgar Rice Burroughs, actress Yvonne de Carlo, heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano, director Seiji Ozawa, Bee Gee's singer Barry Gibb, labor leader Walter Reuther, comedienne Lily Tomlin, country singer Conway Twitty, outfielder Garry Maddox.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your intuition serves you well in business and romance. Tackle one thing at a time to boost productivity. A promotion could hinge on how well you get along with a superior's wife.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your social graces are a big asset in business circles. Tact and diplomacy are your strongest allies. Hide your dismay if a trusted associate or loved one lets you down. Curb extravagance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The business climate changes for no obvious reason. Follow your normal work pattern. Showing anxiety will only complicate things. New partnerships are a real possibility in both business and romance. Make intelligent concessions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A power struggle ends and you come out on top. Seize a golden opportunity to show your leadership skills. Prosperity is linked to old friends or close relatives. Be a good listener.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sound advice from a trusted friend will help you recoup recent losses. A teen-ager wants you to be a sounding board, not an adviser. Share any problems with mate. Loved one has terrific ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Overreacting to a tense situation will only make things worse. Keep your cool. A telephone call or letter brings good financial luck.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take stock of your financial reserves before making new investments. An expert's advice could be off the mark. Your intuition serves you well in tight places. Obstacles to romance seem to melt away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rely on your own efforts and your confidence will grow. Think big! Others will see you in a new light. Follow current trends if planning a major change in your personal or professional life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others are surprised by your ability to perform when under the pressure of a deadline. Recycle old ideas to make new profits. A great day for free-lancers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Jump into a new business venture with both eyes open. You could be taking a major risk. Your spunk impresses influential people. New romance provides many happy moments. Speak from the heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A scholarship is given to a teen-ager at the last moment. A promotion or raise is likely. Sharpen your high-tech skills to increase productivity. You need to spend more time on creative projects.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A little flattery will work wonders if you are subtle. Good luck comes when you do the unexpected. Someone who recently rejected you seeks you out.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A75 ♥AKJ83 ♦93 ♣A104
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart.
What action do you take?
A.—When an opponent bids your best suit, you have only one course of action—pass. This hand is no exception. Don't overcall one no trump; you have the right strength and no one will argue about your stoppers in the enemy suit, but you have little trick-taking ability.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A103 ♥AQ ♦AJ63 ♣AJ92
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart.
What action do you take?
A.—You are too strong to overcall one no trump, and most people play that a jump to two no trump would be "unusual"—for the lower unbid suits. Therefore, you must double for takeout and then bid no trump as cheaply as possible to show a balanced hand in the 19-21 point range.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J ♥6 ♦K97632 ♣AJ932
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
2 ♠ Pass Pass ?
*preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—At rubber bridge, we wouldn't bid if you held a gun to our heads—it is too risky. At duplicate, however, we would be sorely tempted to balance with three diamonds. Incidentally, if you thought two no trump would be "unusual," may we recommend one of our books on bidding; such action would be natural and strong.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J ♥6 ♦K97632 ♣AJ932
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
2 ♠ Pass Pass ?
*preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—This is close. If partner's values are all in hearts, even a game might be in jeopardy. However, if partner has a strong holding in one of the minors, slam could be laydown.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ5 ♥KJ93 ♦KQ10 ♣983
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Obviously, this hand is best suited to no trump because of your stoppers in the unbid suit. The question is how many no trump to bid. One no trump would show 8-10 points; three no trump would promise at least 13, since opener might be minimum. The 11-12 point range is handled by an invitational jump to two no trump, and that should be your choice.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10762 ♥2 ♦A76 ♣AQ8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—This is close. If partner's values are all in hearts, even a game might be in jeopardy. However, if partner has a strong holding in one of the minors, slam could be laydown.

Since you can't know, go for broke! Bid six spades.

Marvin fondly remembered as a 'softy'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Marvin, the gravel-voiced Oscar winner who died at age 63, was remembered by colleagues as an actor who really was among the good guys even though he often portrayed the hard-as-nails rogue.

Marvin, a World War II Marine who went on to star as the consummate macho man in films like "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" and "The Dirty Dozen," died of a heart attack Saturday at Tucson Medical Center.

Ernest Borgnine, who started out in show business with him in a Randolph Scott western and later starred with Marvin in "Bad Day at Black Rock" and "Emperor of the North Pole," wept when told of his friend's death.

"He was a helluva good good buddy. God, I'm sorry to see him go," Borgnine said. "We always had a great respect for each other. We loved each other. The old rascal never let on, but he was a softy. He knew I knew that."

Jane Fonda, who starred with Marvin in "Cat Ballou," said the actor's rock-hard demeanor belied a softer core.

"For all his seeming hard-living and gruffness, he had a big heart," Miss Fonda said Saturday.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Lorne Greene, stricken with pneumonia following ulcer surgery, was listed in serious condition today, breathing with the aid of oxygen tanks, a hospital spokesman said.

The 72-year-old Greene, who was being treated at St. John's Hospital, developed the pneumonia after undergoing abdominal surgery for a perforated ulcer, hospital spokesman Steve Seeley said Sunday.

Greene's condition remained serious early today, a nursing supervisor said.

Greene's spokeswoman, Roxanne Lawrence, said the actor underwent surgery Aug. 19.

Greene starred as patriarch Ben Cartwright in television's Western series "Bonanza," which ran from 1959 to 1973. "Bonanza: The Next Generation," a television movie based on "Bonanza," is in production, Ms. Lawrence said.

Greene also starred in the TV series "Battlestar Galactica" and has appeared in commercials.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The family of John Huston was bidding farewell today to the Oscar-winning director during a private funeral, but plans are being made for a public memorial service within two weeks.

The cemetery and family refused to divulge the date and time for the funeral, but a source close to the family who spoke on condition of anonymity said it was scheduled for 11 a.m. today.

Huston's body was returned to California on Friday for burial in Hollywood Memorial Park near the grave of his mother, Rhea Gore, a journalist who died in 1938, said cemetery spokeswoman Marilyn Simpson.

The director died in New England last week at age 81.

The family wished to keep the funeral private because they were unprepared to face large crowds that might attend a public funeral, said park spokesman Jerry Tangen.

Arrangements for a public memorial service, under the auspices of the Directors Guild of America, were still incomplete.

Madison gets report on Northwest Territory

Associated Press

Friday, Aug. 31, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY
Philadelphia Jacob Hiltzheimer noted: "Clear & Pleasant, forenoon went to the Little Meadow, in afternoon went to Gravehill. My boy Lapsley Took my large Steer to...Primerfield. My (hired) Boy fetched a Bull from Mr. Meredith's Place, and Turned him into my lot to our black cow." Meredith was Samuel Meredith, a Pennsylvania delegate to Congress and Robert Morris' next door neighbor.

CONFEDEATION TODAY
Five states (New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Virginia) and four individual delegates attended.

Virginia delegate William Grayson wrote from New York to James Madison to report on the Northwest Territory. Maj. Turner's chances for appointment as Secretary of the territory were nil, he was trying for judgeship. Judge John Cleve Symmes yesterday applied to purchase a large tract. Congress needed to know how much land on the Ohio was needed to meet the claim of Virginia's Revolutionary War veterans.

CONVENTION TODAY
Article XXI, on ratification, remained on the floor.

Rufus King (Mass.) moved an amendment to confine the new government to the states ratifying it, which passed, only Maryland no. The entire day was spent debating how the proposed plan should be ratified. Maryland, as the act appointing its delegates required, sought to require all 13 states to approve.

Late in the day, the report from the committee on treating the states equally in regulating trade came up. A clause forbidding preference to the ports of any one state was approved. A clause forbidding vessels bound to or from one state to enter or clear in another came up. James Madison (Va.), Nathaniel Gorham (Mass.), and John Langdon (N.Y.) opposed it, pointing out cases where exceptions were desirable; Thomas Fitzsimons (Pa.) and the Marylanders strongly supported it and it passed New Hampshire and South Carolina only no.

DELEGATES TODAY
William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) dined at Wilson's and visited Mr. Stanhope. His daily expenses were 8 shillings, 6 pence.

George Washington dined at Mr. Morris', then escorted Elizabeth Powell to Gov. Penn's estate at Lansdowne for tea.

Benjamin Franklin replied to a letter of Aug. 16 from the Treasury Board asking for Mr. Ross' accounts. Franklin had looked for them, couldn't find them, and thought he'd turned them over to Thomas Barclay. "However as soon as my Grandson returns from Albany, whom I expect in a week or ten days, and who knows better than I do the Arrangement of my immense Mass of Papers, I shall cause a more full Search to be made."

LOOKING BACK

The Loyal Opposition
On this day, George Mason of Virginia made it clear that he could not support the proposed Constitution as it stood. At the same time, he supported ratification by only nine of the 13 states — a proposal which proved to be the key to ratification.

Of the 55 delegates who attended the Constitutional Convention, 39 signed the Constitution, indicating their support of its ratification. Nine others left early for one reason or another, but subsequently supported ratification. Another three — Robert Yates, John Lansing and John Francis Mercer — came to oppose the plan soon after arriving in the Convention, and left shortly thereafter.

The four remaining delegates — Elbridge Gerry, Luther Martin, George Mason and Edmund Randolph — were still in this Convention on this day 200 years ago, although all four had decided they could not support the new plan of government.

Martin had reached this decision very early, probably by June 16, and the death of the New Jersey Plan; Gerry had decided by Aug. 21, and Mason and Randolph announced their opposition on this day. All, however, continued to work constructively to improve the document, none of them tried to make it less acceptable and thus less likely to be ratified. Mason's conduct is an example. It was he who moved and supported ratification by nine states, when a larger number would have made the Constitution's ratification less likely.

Sheriff should give county full attention

We don't view Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter's role in the recent Iranian arms sale "sting" here as alarming. And we don't agree with those who believe the tactic — or Painter's ABC "Nightline" TV appearance, for that matter — will cause serious unfavorable publicity to descend on Midland.

But we suspect there are more important things for county law enforcement officials to be doing with their time than engaging in adventures in international undercover work, despite the fact that Iran isn't on our "most favored nations" list right now.

Time does, in fact, seem to be the major outlay as far as Midland County resources are concerned in this case since the sheriff estimates total cost to the county of only about $1,000. But the time and efforts of local lawmen are genuine and important resources.

Although so-called independent or freelance undercover people were involved and responsible for much of the operation, it would be unlikely that the project did not occupy quite a bit of local officials' time in one way or another.

During a closed session with county commissioners, Sheriff Painter likened the arms sting with "working stuff out of Mexico" and said the only difference is that "Iranians were involved and it's a further distance to the international border." We disagree.

Trafficking of drugs from Mexico into West Texas, for instance, has a direct bearing and potential effect on Americans in general and West Texans in particular. U.S.-Mexico efforts directed at fighting that problem, with help of lawmen on local levels here and elsewhere in the state, cannot be ranked with international arms sale sting operations involving third-world people.

We don't question Sheriff Painter's intentions. Since his election, he has gained support and respect in the community. He will continue, we imagine, to run the sheriff's department as he sees fit, making decisions that he believes are in the best interests of the Midland County citizens who elected him. And we think there is a chance that some would blow Painter's involvement out of proportion.

We just believe there are other agencies which both by definition and by job description can more appropriately deal with some types of problems.

For the most part, dealing with problems at the local level is not very glamorous work. It doesn't spark appearances on national news programs and, unfortunately, is thankless work to a great extent. But the job is important nevertheless. And it is serious enough business to deserve the full time and attention of all who hire out to perform it.

Confession raises questions about VA

WASHINGTON — Hospital worker Donald Harvey's confession of mass murder in Cincinnati raises new questions about the administration

Jack Anderson

$50 for carrying a firearm on federal property but was allowed to resign rather than face criminal charges or administrative disciplinary proceedings, which would have been entered on his employment record.

That was in July 1985. In February 1986, his work record unmarred by any mention of the charge, Harvey was hired at the Daniel Drake Memorial Hospital, where, according to his own confession, he murdered 21 patients.

The VA hospital's director, Donald Zeigler, has explained that Harvey had not been formally charged with carrying a concealed weapon because the loaded .38-caliber revolver was not "concealed ready at hand" as Ohio law requires for such a charge. The gun was in a zippered case inside a gym bag that Harvey was carrying.

Law enforcement sources in Ohio have questioned that interpretation of the statute. They point out that state courts have upheld charges of concealing a loaded weapon — a third-degree felony — against persons who have hidden a gun in the glove compartment of the car they were driving.

Our associate Stewart Harris asked Wilson if Harvey's race saved him from criminal prosecution. The chief replied: "I'm not going to answer that. That's not even a fair question."

Meanwhile, here in Washington, more allegations of brutality by Chief Wilson were aired at a recent Senate hearing on legislation designed to protect whistle blowers. Harold R. Hipple, a former security officer at the VA hospital, testified that Wilson attacked a black man, John R. Shives, who had parked illegally at the medical center.

"Wilson called him a 'dirtball,' 'scumbag' and 'black bastard,' among other names," Hipple testified. He then described what followed:

"Finally, Shives raised his arms as if to move past Wilson, but then dropped his arms after Wilson warned Shives not to touch him or else he would charge Shives with assault. When Shives complied, Wilson grabbed him in a bear hug. The chief tried to kick Shives' legs out from under him, but in the process kicked me also, causing a blood vessel to burst in my leg."

After other officers jumped on Shives, Wilson "began choking him and gouging him in the eyes," Hipple testified, adding: "Shives was not hostile by any means until provoked by Wilson."

Last April, we reported on congressional testimony by another officer at the hospital, John Berter, who told about two black men who were beaten by Wilson after being brought to the chief's office for panhandling on the premises.

Wilson has refused to comment on the allegations while they are still under investigation. He did note that the FBI had closed its investigation of the charges and that the Justice Department has declined to prosecute him.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., noted at the recent hearing that the FBI had "found nothing to exonerate" Wilson.

In fact, one of the FBI agents who worked on the case, Mike McDaniels, told Hipple that he had solid evidence of brutality by Wilson, from victims and witnesses. Hipple secretly taped the conversation. McDaniels was not under oath, but Pryor read a transcript of his remarks into the record. The FBI agent said: "I've got 10 people I have interviewed, 10 that I call victims, 10 victims, which is pretty substantial in my opinion." He also said, according to the transcript: "You have got other witnesses saying they saw it. It is still not enough."

MINI-EDITORIAL — Juan Ponce Enrile, who turned on his benefactor, Ferdinand Marcos, after years of faithful service, has now turned on Philippine President Corason Aquino, whose ascent to power he aided with ambiguous inaction as Marcos's defense minister. In his first speech as Senate opposition leader, the Harvard-educated Enrile accused Aquino of hypocrisy — for making use of martial law powers that she had denounced when Marcos and Enrile used them. At the same time, he defended his own rigorous enforcement of martial law as perfectly legal. In the art of identifying hypocrites, it clearly takes one to know one.

Another View:

No contradiction

It might seem a contradiction that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has both a reformist image and strong ties to the KGB. But the KGB wants a stronger, modernized Soviet Union. So does Gorbachev.

A revamped economy combined with more intelligent diplomacy could make the Soviets more formidable, rather than less. A dangerous adversary of the democracies could become a shrewder, more subtle competitor. There really is no contradiction in Gorbachev's role.

Revolutionary nations, flush with ideology, are often contemptuous of their neighbors and belligerent toward their enemies. This chip-on-the-shoulder attitude characterized revolutionary France in the 1790s, Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany in the 1930s and the Soviet Union since its founding by Lenin in 1917. Paranoia and belligerence reached their height during the regime of Josef Stalin and survived in the neo-Stalinist era of Leonid Brezhnev and Yuri Andropov.

The modern KGB, led by a Gorbachev ally, Viktor Chebrikov, is breaking with the hide-bound Communist Party and military establishment in moving toward a more efficient way of carrying on the competition with the free world.

The Soviet Union, in area, is larger than any other country. In population it is the world's third largest. It is rich in petroleum and other natural resources, particularly strategic minerals. Its natural trading partners are Europe, China and Japan.

Through decades of belligerent foreign policies and incompetent domestic management, however, it has failed to exploit its advantages to their full potential.

Gorbachev has offered a conciliatory plan to ease border quarrels with China. His disarmament proposals have made him more popular and trusted in Western Europe. He has announced economic accords with Iran and is exploring a relationship with Israel. Soviet agents and diplomats ply the officials of the South Pacific Island nations. Domestically, Gorbachev has appointed a five-member commission, led by liberal economist Abel Aganbegyan, to recommend steps toward de-Stalinizing the economy.

These moves are apparently supported by the KGB leadership, which understands that the Soviets will never be a world economic power until the legacy of Stalin in foreign and domestic policies is junked. Gorbachev is no democrat, just a smart communist.

Reagan letter gave Kohl way around missiles

WASHINGTON — A top-secret letter from President Reagan paved the way for West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's retreat in the fight with Moscow over those Pershing missiles by backing down without seeming to back down.

Reagan wrote Kohl, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and French President Francois Mitterrand that preserving the NATO alliance was more important than getting an INF treaty with the Soviets. Translated, that meant the U.S. would not publicly pressure Kohl to get rid of the Pershing missiles.

That gave Kohl his head — and an exit that would let him duck a fight with Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher, his coalition partner and a liberal Free Democrat who wanted to dump the missiles. Kohl's pledge not to modernize the Pershings saved his coalition and pleased Reagan. It infuriated Kohl's conservative allies who viewed it as a humiliating bow to the Soviets.

JEANE'S N.H. FRIEND

Besides her neo-conservative friends from New York who have been urging Jeane Kirkpatrick to seek the Republican presidential nomination, she has drawn interest from one of New Hampshire's most influential conservatives: Nacey Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union-Leader.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

None of the declared Republican candidates has satisfied Mrs. Loeb. She had no intention of backing her old friend, ex-senator Paul Laxalt, before he withdrew. But in private conversation, she gives former ambassador Kirkpatrick exceptionally high marks and speculates about her presidential possibilities.

The run-Jeane-run movement will hit high gear when she returns from her summer vacation in France. But she has disavowed any presidential ambitions while hope remains for her friend Rep. Jack Kemp, whose prospects have been picking up lately.

NUNN'S NO

The real reason Sen. Sam Nunn said no to a race for the Democratic presidential nomination had more to do with his plan to lead the Senate battle for ratification of the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet nuclear treaty than worry about convention delegates and primary elections.

Explaining to political allies why he returned from Europe with his "no," Nunn was convincing in saying that his position on the expected treaty would be attributed to political ambition, not conviction, if he were running for president.

Nunn tells intimates that handling the expected new nuclear treaty will be one of the most important matters he has ever dealt with as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He intends to lead the fight for the treaty — unless the U.S. backs down from its current position.

NANCY'S PEEVE

Administration officials well connected to the White House attribute President Reagan's current lack of combativeness to the first lady's desire to get her husband out of Washington without further political combat.

Nancy Reagan is described as sick and tired of the Washington struggle, and eager to get the president and herself back to California. Until his term ends, she wants to avoid confrontations as much as possible.

A footnote: Senior White House aides, who had rejected out of hand a cancellation of the president's summer vacation to campaign for contra aid, refused to permit even Cabinet members too see Reagan in Santa Barbara.

BUSH AND POLAND

Although Vice President George Bush's unannounced trip to Poland late next month is seen by some of his GOP presidential rivals as a cheap bid for ethnic votes, Polish-American leaders here say its true purpose is far more important.

Instead of adding Poland to the obligatory three-l vote-hunting tour in Israel, Ireland and Italy, Bush's real purpose is to get Secretary of State George Shultz to frame a new U.S. policy that will wean Poland away from its total reliance on the Soviet Union.

That would include political reforms making it possible for the U.S. to grant Poland International Monetary Fund loans and other economic favors. But Bush's presidential rivals fear he will exploit his government-paid trip to ingratiate himself with the Solidarity movement and downplay the hard work of policy-making.

CHARLEY REESE

Support for Israel directly tied to its virtues

A frequent question which comes into my newspaper is am I Jewish? When told no, the response is always, "well, he's so supportive of Israel I thought he was."

Now that's interesting because it never occurs to ask of an American fan of Great Britain, are you British? Or an American who is fond of France, are you French? There is an implied assumption that only Jews might be fans of Israel.

Charley Reese

I know some intend the question to be an insult but they have missed their mark, as I consider it a compliment. I'd be more than proud to be part of the Jewish people who have contributed so much to Western Civilization in such an enormous proportion to their numbers as to border almost on the mystical.

The simple fact is I admire Israel for its virtues, just as I admire some individuals for their virtues. In my case, it has nothing to do with religion at all. Nor is it a case of being supportive or non-supportive. I'm just a commentator. As a comedian used to say, "I callsem the way I sees em."

What I admire most about Israel is that it has not become what circumstances would justify. Israel was born in war and has been at war ever since. It exists in a state of siege, the subject of international economic boycotts, hostile propaganda, terrorist attacks and the incessant threat of all out war. If ever a country were justified in becoming a militaristic, closed and spartan society, it is Israel.

Yet, Israel is the opposite. Sure it has one of the best armies in the world but it is a citizen army. It is one of the most vigorous democracies on the globe. It has an independent judiciary. It has a free press, free trade unions, a vibrant cultural life, and an extraordinary record of humanitarianism.

Israelis are human beings. They make mistakes. But they are extraordinary human beings and they have done many admirable things for which, in a world awash with propaganda, they never get any credit.

Most criticism of Israel by Americans is a reflection of the extensive Arab lobby output of anti-Israel propaganda which, because Americans haven't learned the facts, they can't evaluate.

Most Americans don't know, for example, that in its founding document Israel declared complete freedom of religion and two official languages, Hebrew and Arabic. Most Americans don't know that 700,000 Israeli citizens are Arabs who have the same rights as Israeli citizens who are Jews. Arab Israelis are exempt from the draft but some nevertheless volunteer and do serve in the Army.

When Japan attacked us in 1941, we rounded up 120,000 Japanese aliens and Japanese-Americans and put most of them in relocation camps. Not once, in all the desperate years Israel has had to fight with Arab countries, has it ever so treated its Arab citizens.

Israel occupies what is called the West Bank because it took the West Bank, the Sinai and the Golan in the 1967 War when Egypt, Jordan, and Syria coordinated an attack intended to wipe Israel off the map.

It is customary, traditional and legal for a nation to hold territory gained in war until its disposition is settled in the course of negotiating a peace treaty. Egypt negotiated a peace treaty and Egypt has the Sinai. Jordan and Syria have refused to negotiate a peace treaty, are still at war, hostilities only suspended by a ceasefire, and Israel therefore continues to occupy the West Bank and the Golan.

If the Japanese had taken the position of Jordan and Syria — that there would be no peace negotiations until the U.S. surrendered all Japanese territory captured in the war — Harry Truman would have dropped another glowing egg on them.

It's unfortunate for the greedy in America that the Israeli side of the Arab-Israeli conflict is poor but morally correct on most issues while the Arab side is rich but morally incorrect.

But then morality has always been a pain in the kister to the greedy, the appeasement-minded, and the opportunists.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 31, the 243rd day of 1987. There are 122 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on Aug. 31, 1887, inventor Thomas A. Edison received a patent for his "Kinetoscope," a device which produced moving pictures.

On this date: In 1881, the first U.S. tennis championships were played, in Newport, R.I.

In 1886, the first recorded major earthquake in U.S. history rocked Charleston, S.C., killing up to 110 people.

In 1895, the first professional football game (in the sense that one team paid its quarterback) was played in Latrobe, Pa. (John Brallier, who received $10, led a YMCA-sponsored team to a 12-0 victory over a team from the town of Jeannette.)

In 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed an act prohibiting the export of arms to belligerents.

In 1941, "The Great Gildersleeve," a spin-off of "Fibber McGee and Molly," made its debut on NBC radio with Harold Peary in the title role.

In 1954, Hurricane Carol hit the northeastern United States, resulting in nearly 70 deaths and millions of dollars in damage.

In 1962, the Caribbean nation of Trinidad and Tobago became independent within the British Commonwealth.

In 1965, the House of Representatives joined the Senate in voting to establish the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

In 1969, boxer Rocky Marciano died in the crash of a small airplane in Iowa, one day short of his 40th birthday.

In 1980, Poland's Solidarity labor movement was born as Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Jagielski and labor leader Lech Walesa signed an agreement in Gdansk, ending a 17-day-old strike.

In 1985, a suspect in the "Night Stalker" killings that terrorized Southern California was captured in East Los Angeles.

Man goes on shooting rampage, kills self

BOSTON (AP) — A man whose shooting rampage killed six people, including himself and four relatives, and critically wounded two others was retreating against family members who had accused him of stealing, a survivor says.

David Huynh, 25, said his 23-year-old cousin Minh Le brought a gun to the Huynh home in the Dorchester section Sunday afternoon to settle a dispute. Huynh said his family had turned Le in for stealing money from Huynh's mother's bank account.

"He came back for revenge," said Huynh, the only member of his family at home who escaped harm.

Tuan Tran, a Vietnamese interpreter called to the scene by police, said the gunman was a Vietnamese refugee who apparently had been accused of stealing the mother's bank book four years ago and wanted to clear his reputation.

The gunman pulled an automatic weapon from a sleeve of his trench coat and blasted away, authorities and witnesses said.

"Bullets were flying around our heads," said Juli Nichols, a paramedic who was among the first to arrive at the scene.

The gunman killed his 52-year-old uncle, 48-year-old aunt, two female cousins, ages 23 and 26, and a 24-year-old woman visiting the family, police spokeswoman Jane Sheehan said.

After a two-hour standoff with heavily armed police, the gunman fatally shot himself, said Deputy Police Superintendent Robert O'Toole. A 9mm gun was found next to his body, O'Toole said.

Police would not release the names of the victims, but Huynh said his parents and 26-year-old sister were killed in their house. He said the gunman shot four people on the street, all members of the family except Huynh's 24-year-old girlfriend, who was slain.

The two people critically wounded were Huynh's 3-year-old niece, Phuong Huynh and a 19-year-old man. A motorist braved the gunfire to grab the wounded child off a neighbor's porch.

The 19-year-old was in critical but stable condition today at City Hospital, and 3-year-old Phuong Huynh was in critical but stable condition at New England Medical Center, hospital officials said.

The worst mass-killing in Boston in about 15 years overwhelmed some residents of the densely populated neighborhood.

Rick Coppola, a longtime resident who lives across the street from the house, said he and his wife are now thinking of moving.

"I have two daughters and I don't want this for them," he said. "Right after it happened, we talked about leaving. It takes something like this to make you realize what's important."

The motorist who rescued the girl said he thought about his own children, and knew he had to act.

"I was a little scared but to me that little girl's life was worth a lot more than my life," said Joe Munroe, 27. "I know I'm going to have bad nightmares about this."

Ms. Nichols said Munroe jumped out of his tow truck during the gunfire to hand the girl to his sister, Donna, who in turn carried her to an ambulance.

DiWanna Salmons, 14, who lives across the street from the house, said she thought she heard firecrackers exploding when she saw the gunman, wearing a trench coat with a gun barrel protruding from a sleeve. "He came running at me," the girl said while crying. "He chased me into my yard, but he slipped on a piece of board. He shot at me, but nothing came out of the gun."

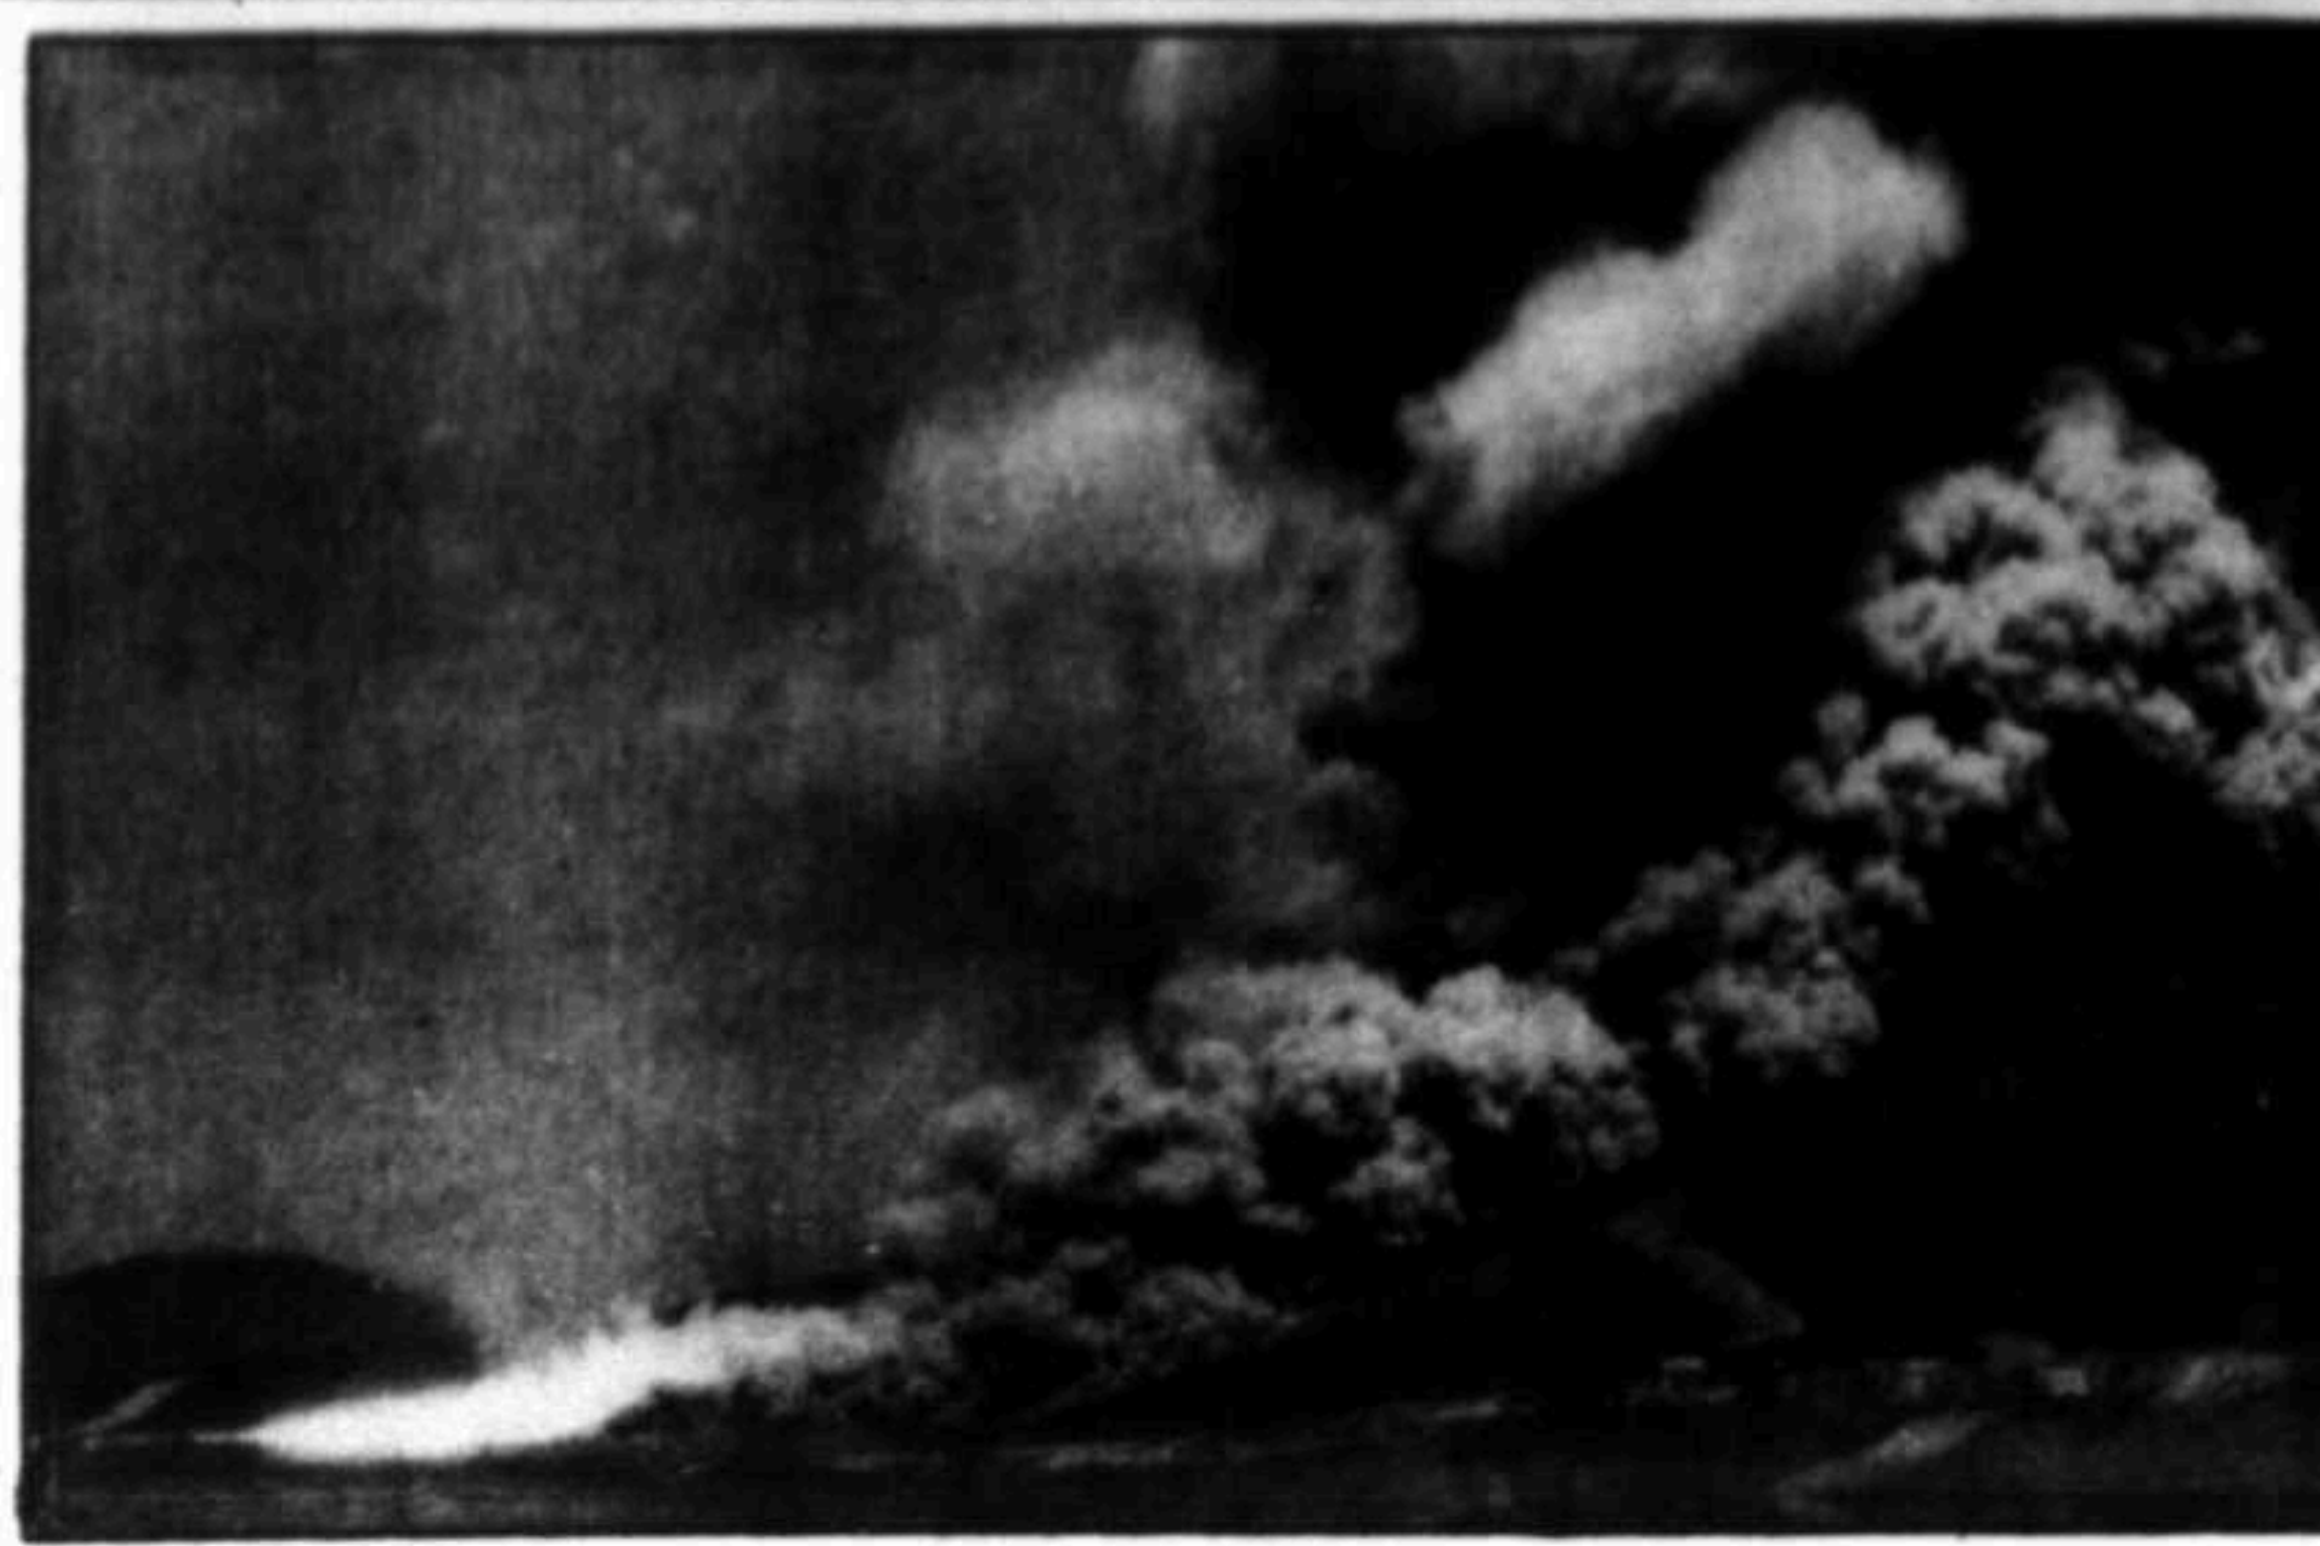

Two other neighbors, Nancy Feeney and a registered nurse who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they rushed to aid the woman who was shot outside the house.

The woman "had a lot of blood coming from her mouth and nose," the nurse said. "I couldn't tell if it was a head or chest wound."

Feeney said the gunman fired several shots at the woman's head after she had been felled by the first shot.

After the man rushed into the house, Feeney and the nurse said, they heard windows breaking and people yelling. "Get back! Get back!" The man then fired more shots into the street, they said.

A police special operations squad, armed with rifles, surrounded the house and called for the translator to try to open a dialogue with the gunman, police said. Police and the gunman did not exchange fire.

A test firing of the newly designed shuttle rocket motor at Morton Thiokol's Wasatch plant near Brigham City went off without a hitch Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. NASA and Morton Thiokol officials say that the test was a success. A flash and a roar signaled the stationary test.

Shuttle program 'back on track' with success

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — The space shuttle program reached a milestone in its return to flight readiness with the successful first full-scale test of a redesigned booster rocket that made the ground rumble 45 miles away.

The 126-foot-long rocket with 1 million pounds of solid propellant spewed orange flame 500 feet and sent a cloud of smoke high into the sky Sunday.

The test prompted cheers from about 9,500 spectators at Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations test site 25 miles west of here.

The test, which had been postponed three times since Thursday, was conducted by rocket manufacturer Morton Thiokol to show National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers that it had corrected flaws blamed for the Challenger explosion.

"This is a major step on the way to return of the shuttle to flight," said Adm. Richard Truly, two-time shuttle veteran and NASA associate administrator for space flight. "Based on the data, it sure looks good to me."

Before shuttle flights resume, the redesigned booster is scheduled to be tested three more times, with the next fire-up in late November. Three additional tests will follow the launch of Discovery scheduled for June 2, 1988.

While Sunday's experiment was declared a "normal, successful test," engineers must disassemble the rocket and analyze computer data during the next month to obtain a full understanding of the motor's performance.

"I think it's going to look just as good from the inside as it did from the outside," said John Thomas, NASA manager of solid rocket design at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Truly said the test-firing breathed hope into the nation's space program, which has been grounded since the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion of the Challenger that killed its seven crew members.

A presidential commission said a faulty seal in Challenger's booster rocket allowed hot exhaust gases to leak, igniting the shuttle's external liquid fuel tank.

The $400 million redesign reinforced the joint between the rocket nozzle and the body of the booster with 100 additional bolts, substituted bonded insulation for putty and added a pressure relief slot.

Pro-choice abortion groups fight changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion rights groups are promising an all-out battle against a Reagan administration proposal to block federally funded clinics from giving out any information on abortion.

"I'm certain we'll be very vocal and very, very active in opposing this attempt to strangle these clinics in red tape," Sandra Jordan, communications director for the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Sunday.

Kate Michelman, president of National Abortion Rights Action League, called the proposal "outrageous."

"You have the government of a free nation trying to coerce women's reproductive actions. It is an attempt to deny women information about one of their vital choices, to deny medical practitioners the right to give women medically necessary information," Michelman said.

On Saturday, the Department of Health and Human Services announced the proposed rules, which one official said were designed to "build a high wall" between abortion clinics and federally funded family planning programs.

Under the proposals, family planning clinics that receive federal funds, but carry out abortions with private funds, would be required to keep the two functions totally apart by such means as separate entrances, examination rooms, and medical and financial records.

While the supporters of President Reagan's initiative applauded the action, abortion rights activists predicted the regulations will have little immediate effect on the clinics, in part due to anticipated court battles over the regulations.

"What it means in the short run is nothing," said William Hamilton Jr., Planned Parenthood's chief lobbyist in Washington.

Hamilton said, however, that his organization was concerned about the possible impact on low-income women, the primary clients in such clinics. Also, he said, the rules amounted to an infringement on freedom of speech and the physician-patient relationship.

"I don't think they have the constitutional underpinning for what they are trying to do," he said.

"This is pure political philosophy. It has nothing to do with quality health care," he added. "What we have here is President Reagan and the White House attempting to do through executive fiat what they failed to do legislatively."

Hamilton, along with other abortion rights activists, said their organizations intended to take the administration to court if it proceeds with the proposed rules.

"The representatives of the reproductive rights community are ready to litigate the minute these regulations go into effect," said Jennifer Pizer, legal coordinator for the National Abortion Rights Action League.

Community urged to treat AIDS boys, family with compassion

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Three young brothers who carry the AIDS virus should not be shunned like modern-day lepers, a pastor told residents of this rural community after the family's home was burned.

"It reminds me of the time of leprosy when they rang bells and told people to stay away," the Rev. Michael Hickey told his 300 parishioners at St. Paul's Catholic Church here Sunday.

"The ultimate tragedy is to make them feel outcast and unwanted," Hickey said. "People need to stand by them. They need to look into their own hearts."

Clifford and Louise Ray and their children — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, Randy, 8, and Candy, 6 — lost everything in the Friday night fire that officials called suspicious.

The family says it has given up and will find a new home far from Arcadia when they come out of seclusion. The Rays had to go to court to win the right to keep their hemophiliac sons into public school.

"I'm embarrassed for the state of Florida," said Sarasota attorney Judith Kavanaugh, who handled the Ray court case.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop today called it "tragic" that "three little boys and their family who have a problem that is no fault of theirs have been treated so abysmally by the community."

Koop, who spoke on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said assurances that the Rays posed no threat to their schoolmates were "based upon as solid evidence as anything possibly can be in public health."

"I would have no compunction at all about sending my children or grandchildren to a school where children not only carried the virus, but had frank AIDS," he said.

Late Sunday, Ray sorted through the rubble of his home, looking for his children's toys.

"I told my youngest boy that I'd try to find his monkey for him. I ain't done that yet," he said. He picked up one sooty stuffed animal and pulled the string that made it talk. "Stuffed again," the bear said.

"Stuffed again," repeated Ray as he disgustedly threw the toy down. Publicity over the family's plight brought offers of help from as far as London and the Netherlands. St. Paul's rectory became a makeshift collection center, with one priest handling more than 100 phone calls throughout the weekend.

Even Citizens Against AIDS in School, the Arcadia group that organized protests after a federal judge ruled that the Ray boys could attend classes when they began last week, collected several boxes of clothes, bicycles and toys.

The group has called off its week-long boycott at Memorial Elementary School, where only half the pupils expected showed up last Monday and about a third remained absent by Friday.

Melody Patton, vice president of the group, said she was sorry the Rays left town and believed the fire was accidental. Other residents said they were stunned at what had happened to the Rays, who received telephone threats before the fire.

"I feel bad for the kids. It's not their fault," longtime resident Kimberly Longenecker said. "I feel bad that they're gone."

Others were relieved by the departure of the Rays, whose boys are believed to have become infected through medical products to help their blood clot. The boys have no symptoms of deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome, nor do their parents or sister test positive for exposure to the AIDS virus.

Darlene Sadler, who kept her son from kindergarten classes last week because of the Ray brothers, criticized the family for starting the controversy by sending their children to public school.

"They don't know enough about this disease," she said.

Bradleys need $43 part

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $43 part is all that's needed to fix the $1.5 million Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the Army's amphibious troop carriers that on 11 instances sank or were swamped while crossing water, a House panel says.

The Armed Services Investigations subcommittee reported Monday that the Army plans to install an inexpensive locking mechanism to keep a canvas water barrier more firmly in place on the 3,250 Bradleys now in the field.

The original water barrier "was designed so the driver could collapse it an instant after leaving the water," said Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of the subcommittee.

Screening could cut costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Courts could cut their rising costs in providing poor people with lawyers by screening defendants to determine their ability to pay, the National Institute of Justice says.

"Eligibility screening programs appear to discourage applicants who are not eligible for court-appointed counsel from pursuing their requests any further," James K. Stewart, director of the institute, said Sunday.

The institute, a research arm of the Justice Department, reached its conclusions after examining measures used to control costs in Los Angeles, Colorado and Seattle.

AIDS book order 7 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress have ordered nearly 7 million copies of a government booklet about AIDS to distribute to their constituents, the Public Health Service reports.

The booklets have been requested by dozens of lawmakers, according to congressional aides, but most Americans still won't get a copy of the 36-page report prepared by Surgeon General C. Everett Koop unless they request it.

The Reagan administration is contemplating mailing facts on the deadly disease to all citizens but has said it does not want to use Koop's pamphlet because it is too long and detailed.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Garza, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight, mostly fair with a low around 80. Wind east 5 to 10 mph. Tuesday morning fog or low clouds, becoming partly cloudy by afternoon with a high near 80. East wind 5 to 10 mph.

Fair conditions in area likely

Tonight is expected to be fair with the low near the 60-degree mark, according to reports from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The winds should be out of the east at five to 10 mph. Tuesday will be foggy with low clouds becoming partly cloudy by the afternoon. The high should reach near 80 and winds will stay easterly at five to 10 mph. Sunday's high of 88 was 17 degrees below the record high of 105 set for that date in 1964. Today's low of 59 was only three degrees above the record low of 56 set for this date in 1944.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms roared across middle and upper sections of the Texas coast early today and across a vast area of South Texas northward into North Central Texas. Forecasters said the shower activity would likely continue through tonight. Clearing skies and warmer temperatures are expected across the state Tuesday. Strong thunderstorms were reported early today along middle and upper sections of the coastal plains and in the Gulf of Mexico and in Southeast Texas as well as portions of East Texas. Other scattered thunderstorms were reported at dawn along the lower Texas coast and northward into an area north of Laredo. Other showers were reported from the Edwards Plateau northward into North Central Texas. The showers were the remnants of heavier rains and thunderstorms that were reported in the same area late Sunday night, forecasters said. Forecasters called for widely scattered thunderstorms across North Texas and West Texas through tonight although skies will be mostly fair across the areas.

NATION

The Northwest warmed up today for another sizzling day while rain dampened sections of the Midwest, South and Southwest. Thunderstorms were scattered across Texas, Louisiana, the Florida Panhandle and Georgia. Showers and thunderstorms also ranged from central Illinois across northern Indiana and southern Michigan. Temperatures in the Northwest were in the 50s to 70s early this morning after record highs Sunday, including a reading of 106 in Grants Pass, Ore. Skies were mostly clear across the West, while clear to partly cloudy skies prevailed across the South.

THE BEST INVESTMENT FOR YOUR ADVERTISING DOLLAR

A few words for anybody who still thinks money can't buy happiness.

There are people in the world, and maybe in your own community, whose total monthly income is less than you spend on a large pizza. There are people whose definition of happiness would be as simple as a safe place to sleep at night. Or a chance to get a decent education. Or a cure for a debilitating disease. In a country with personal income in excess of $3.5 trillion a year, surely we can do something about that. Just 5% of what we earn would come to $175 billion a year. Maybe not enough to buy universal happiness, but certainly enough to give a lot of people a better chance at it. So think about it. Then resolve to do something about it. Contribute to the causes you say you care about. If you do, the people you help won't be the only ones who'll feel better.

What you give is five.
What you get back is immeasurable.

Subterranean Synthesis

SONORA — For millions of years, the crystal studded caverns of Sonora lay untouched by man, waiting in cool, dripping darkness beneath the hot West Texas desert plains.

Unlike most caves that were discovered and used as shelter by prehistoric man and later as tourist attractions, the Sonora Caverns remained sealed until they were discovered in 1955 by a shepherd's dog chasing a raccoon through an 18-inch aperture, said Don Clark, a tour guide at the private park about 150 miles southeast of Midland off Interstate 10.

Five years later — in 1960 — the crystals, stalactites (icicle-shaped mineral deposits dropping from the cave's roof), stalagmites (similar mineral deposits growing upward from the floor) and reef-like formations resembling coral were opened up for public view at the park, about 8 miles west of Sonora on the Ingram Ranch.

The park is open seven days a week from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., May through Labor Day, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Labor Day through April. Guided tours through the caverns are given every half hour. Admission is $6 each for adults, $5 for children 6 to 11 years old, and children under 5 are admitted free.

Some calcite formations, resulting from water dripping for eons, resemble coral and the floor of dead ocean.

Clark said nature took between 10 to 12 million years to carve — by acidic erosion from dripping water — the caverns studded with unique formations into the limestone of the Edwards Plateau.

The caverns are about 7.5 miles long, and the tour runs through 1.5 miles of the caves.

Visitors to the caves dip 150 below the surface to 70-degree temperatures and between 95 to 100 percent humidity.

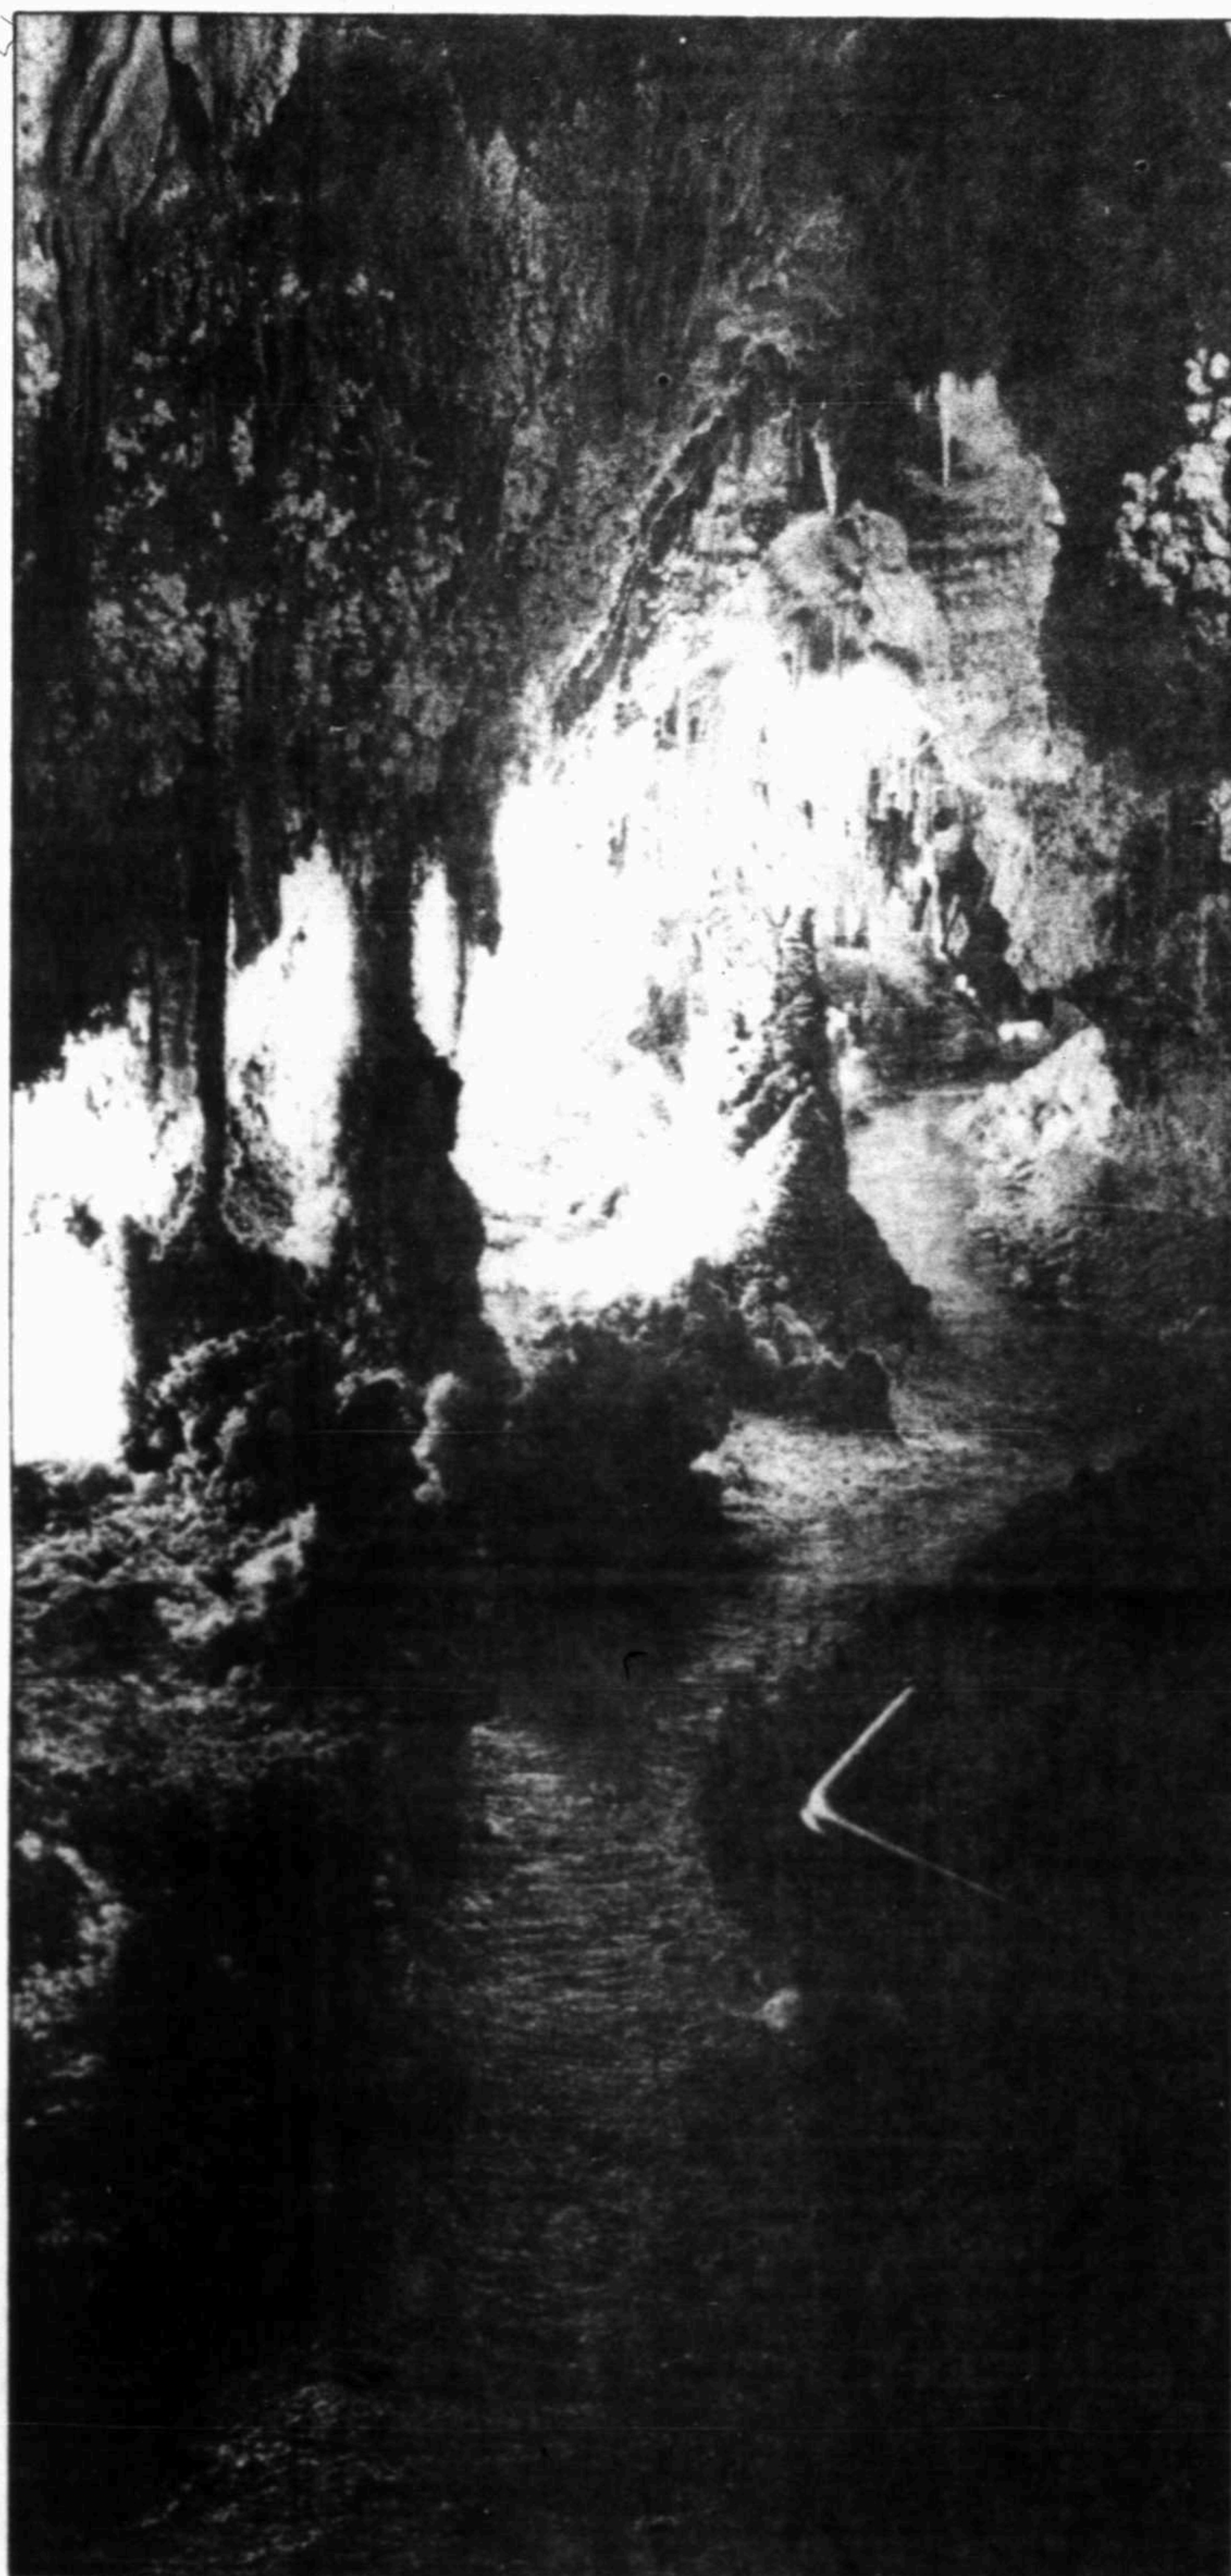

The humidity is so high that another guide, Deana Brown, said if a warm breeze passed through the caverns it could create a rain shower.

The first half mile of the tour is in the "dead" part of the caves, which are no longer actively forming crystals and dripping stalactites.

Stalactites, right, — mineral deposits dripping down from the caverns' roof — and stalagmites, below, — mineral deposits growing upward from the floor — are abundant throughout the caverns.

After a half mile of the 1.5-mile tour visitors enter into the "active" portion of the caves, where dripping water still slowly creates a variety of mineral formations.

Hot, scrubby West Texas plains lie above the cool, 70-degree Sonora caverns.

State tourism good, but down slightly

Associated Press

The oil-busted Texas economy didn't keep vacationers away from major state attractions this year, but overall visitation statewide was down an estimated 4 percent from 1986, industry officials say.

Last week, heading toward the close of the summer tourist season, attractions such as Six Flags Over Texas and Wet'n Wild in Arlington and Astroworld in Houston reported sizable increases in attendance.

But many families took shorter vacations than in years past, frequently only big attractions and stayed within easy driving distance of home to hold down costs with the uncertain economy, officials said.

"Most of the attractions I've talked to are having a good summer, but people are staying closer to home, taking shorter trips and staying with friends and relatives," says Murrell Foster, director of visitor development for the Dallas Convention & Visitors Bureau. "People are still being very, very cautious with the spending."

Statewide, a letdown from the 1986 Sesquiennial celebration, shark attacks along the Gulf Coast and "negative publicity" of the state's dismal economy were blamed for a slight decline in overall visitation.

"When the Dallas Cowboys don't win, you can't get a crowd. When Texas is perceived as being a bust, then people won't want to come down here," said Larry Todd, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency in Austin. "People want a winner."

Also, while some major theme parks benefited from visitors traveling short distances, other smaller attractions across the state were hurt by the combination of early rains and reduced travel from some oil-depressed regions, Todd told The Dallas Morning News.

The tourism agency, based on surveys of private attractions and public parks and museums, estimated total visitation through July this year of 29.6 million tourists, compared with 30.8 million for the first seven months of 1986.

The number of out-of-state travelers passing through Texas' 12 visitor information centers declined 9.1 percent to just more than 2 million through July, from more than 2.2 million in 1986, the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation reported.

Tourist expenditures in 1986 produced revenue of about $17 billion, up from about $16 billion in 1985, Todd said. No cash totals for 1987 are available, but Todd suspects figures may be down.

A tourist agency survey of selected private attractions showed Six Flags and Astroworld with 6 percent increases over last year through July. Six Flags attendance totaled 1.77 million, up from 1.66 million, and Astroworld had attracted almost 1.1 million visitors, up from 1.04 million.

Visitors to the state's museums slipped to 4.29 million, down 7 percent from 4.61 million, while state parks registered 13.17 million visitors, down 5 percent from 13.83 million. Attendance at national parks and seashores was 3.17 million, up 3 percent from 3.06 million, and at national forests, 1.06 million, up 14 percent from 920,337.

"Last year was a record year for most private attractions because of the Sesquiennial, especially during the first four months of the year," said tourist agency spokesman O.C. Garza said. "It's a pretty normal year, other than the fact the economy has been in a downturn."

The hotel economy generally across the state ranged from soft in the West Texas Permian Basin region to excellent in the Brownsville-South Padre Island area, said Don Hansen, executive vice president of the Texas Hotel & Motel Association. In fact, South Padre Island perhaps has been the brightest spot for Texas tourism in 1987.

The South Padre Island Tourist Bureau this year introduced an aggressive advertising campaign targeting major Texas urban centers and positioning South Padre against the "Texas Riviera" theme used successfully by competitors at the northern end of the island, and Corpus Christi.

Up the coast in Galveston, tourists generally followed the statewide trend, staying fewer nights and spending less, said Jack Bushong, executive director of the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau. Hotel room-nights were down about 1 percent from last year, and shoppers at the Strand's row of 62 shops and boutiques did more looking than buying, he said.

Astroworld regained tourist business from Southern Louisiana that it lost last year with the severe oil-industry decline, accounting in large part for gains in attendance, said Debra Ford, the park's public relations director.

San Antonio remained a top tourist destination, despite heavy construction downtown that cut into tourist traffic at the Tower of the Americas in HemisFair Plaza.

A reported 19 percent decline in tourists there — to 295,595 through July, compared with 364,663 last year — was due to construction improvements to the nearby convention center, said John Mosty, executive director of the San Antonio Convention and Visitors Bureau.

In West Texas, Big Bend National Park has posted a 17 percent increase in tourists this year to 193,012, from 165,500 last year, a park spokeswoman said.

And at Palo Duro Canyon's Pioneer Amphitheater near Amarillo, 63 summer performances of "Texas, A Musical Drama," attracted 99,157 people — the show's second-largest turnout in 22 years, behind last year's 106,432.

Motel clerk sought, feared to be abducted

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities searched today for a motel clerk who disappeared from the Tru-Valu Inn.

Co-Workers says they fear Richard Oncken, 26, who also worked part-time as a disc jockey at a radio station in Lockhart, where he lives, and KAPT Radio in Austin, was kidnapped during a robbery.

Co-workers describe Oncken, who disappeared shortly after 5 p.m. Saturday, as a hard-working and punctual man who held down three jobs to help make ends meet.

Oncken was last seen when he registered a couple at the motel on Interstate 35 at about 5:45 p.m. Saturday.

A clerk at another motel tried to contact Oncken for 25 minutes, and when he could not reach him, called police.

Officers thoroughly searched the hotel and surrounding area without finding any trace of Oncken, police spokeswoman Kellye Norris said.

A chair in the lobby had been overturned and co-workers said an office door had been kicked in.

About $450 in bills was missing from the cash register, although other money was left undisturbed in an office drawer. Oncken's pickup and keys were found at the motel.

"At the time the couple checked in, he appeared fine," Norris said. "At this point, we're not exactly sure what is going on."

Carl Breaux, who manages Cross Country Inn in Austin, which is owned by the same company that owns the Tru-Valu Inn, says he fears Oncken was the victim of foul play.

"He's very punctual and easy to get along with," Breaux said. "He's an excellent guy. We're all very worried. You just don't think anything like this can happen in broad daylight."

Oncken had worked at the motel since February, Breaux said.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Permian Basin Labor Day celebration set

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 30th annual Labor Day celebration of the Permian Basin is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 7, in Odessa's Floyd Gwin Park, according to D.L. Willis, president of the Permian Basin Central Labor Union.

The purpose of the event is to honor America's workers and contributions they have made to the country.

This year's celebration is dedicated to the newest union members in the Permian Basin, United Rubber Workers Local 1124 of Odessa and the Texas State Employees Union, CWA Local 6186.

The celebration will start at noon and continue until 4 p.m. It will feature speakers, a fiddler's contest, food and games.

The public is invited.

Central Y offers karate

From Staff Reports

The Central YMCA of Midland is offering karate lessons from competing Black Belt Instructor, Curtis

Abernathy. Classes will be starting Sept. 15, with beginning, intermediate and advanced classes available.

Karate, in addition to teaching self-defense, builds confidence and self-discipline, develops coordination and agility and strengthens muscles.

Co-ed volleyball offered

From Staff Reports

The Midland Central YMCA will be hosting a co-ed volleyball league with "power" and "recreational" divisions.

Entry deadline is Oct. 1. Games will be played on Tuesday and Thursday nights beginning Oct. 6.

Billiards tournament set

From Staff Reports

The Midland Senior Citizens Center will sponsor a billiards tournament at the center on Sept. 25 beginning at 9 a.m.

There is no charge to enter the tournament.

It is open to anyone 55 years or older.

It will be double elimination with trophies awarded to those finishing first, second and third.

For additional information on how to enter, call 699-5023.

From Staff Reports

The Midland Senior Citizens Center is seeking donations for a garage sale to be held at the center on Friday, Sept. 18, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Any items suitable for sale will be accepted at the center from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

All proceeds will be used to benefit the seniors and to purchase needed supplies and equipment.

Also, on the same day the center will be sponsoring a sale of its ceramics, original paintings and handmade items and crafts.

For additional information, call Em Carnett at 699-5023.

Police identify suspect in Saturday burglary

From Staff Reports

Midland police have identified a suspect in Saturday's burglary of a residence in the 500 block of East Tennessee, according to reports.

Gold jewelry valued at $4,000 and a videocassette recorder valued at $400 were reported stolen from the home sometime between 1 p.m. and 7 p.m., police said.

The suspect in the burglary was described as 17 to 20 years old, five feet eight inches tall, weighing 140 pounds. He was wearing a brown sweater, blue jeans, and white tennis shoes, according to witness reports to police.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1100 block of East Cuthbert. According to reports, jewelry valued at $1,000, a cable television converter box valued at $250, a 22 caliber rifle valued at $200, clothing valued at $50, and a fan valued at $40 were stolen. The burglary occurred Saturday about 9 p.m., police said.

Jewelry valued at just over $3,000 was reported stolen from a home in the 1800 block of West Washington Avenue, police said. Among the items reported missing were a diamond necklace, diamond earrings, diamond ring, two watches and a sterling silver necklace.

The burglary occurred between 8 a.m. Saturday and 12:15 p.m. Sunday, police said.

In other reports, two cable television converter boxes were among the items reported stolen from Midland residences. The boxes, valued at $250 each, were stolen from homes in the 400 block of Humble Avenue and 700 block of South Lincoln Street, according to police reports.

Man electrocuted, friend burned

EL PASO (AP) — A West Texas man was electrocuted and a companion was burned when a metal casing they were pulling from a well fell across a high-voltage power line, authorities say.

Juan Zambrano Jr., 18, of Canutillo, was pronounced dead on arrival at Providence Memorial Hospital. Antonio Rico, 39, was listed in stable condition at Sun Towers Hospital.

Houston's medical mecca hard on outlying areas

HOUSTON (AP) — The city's medical mecca is making it more difficult for some smaller area towns to lure physicians and facilities to provide basic medical care, some leaders say.

Houston's 6,431 physicians mean nearby rural residents have access to medical specialists they wouldn't usually have. But some area leaders are worried about maintaining medical resources within their communities.

Liberty County needs obstetricians, while Freeport officials are concerned that the town's two family practitioners are nearing retirement. Waller County doesn't have a hospital and San Jacinto County would like to provide better ambulance service.

In general, the farther towns in nearby counties are from Harris County, the more developed their medical services, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

"The picture here is better than in most places," said Dr. Ken Baker, a pediatrician in Brenham, 70 miles northwest of Houston, where the 11,000 residents have two hospitals, a clinic and 38 physicians.

In some other towns there are doctors, but not enough. Others can't lure the necessary specialists.

Of 750 babies born to Liberty

County residents each year, more than 700 are born in out-of-county facilities.

"If we have a real need it would be for obstetricians," said Richard Arnold, administrator of the Yettie Kersting Memorial Hospital in Liberty.

Tim McGill, administrator of Charter Community Hospital in Cleveland, said his hospital has begun recruiting obstetricians. Charter had an obstetrician for 13 months but he left last December to return to the East Coast.

"It's only a 30-minute drive from Cleveland to OB-GYNs in Humble or Conroe but that's still 25 miles you have to drive when you're in labor," McGill said.

But he said a quality obstetrician won't come without a second one as a backup. And the doctors also want a pediatrician to take responsibility for the baby after birth.

On the Bolivar Peninsula, physicians tried but couldn't make enough money, said Galveston County Health District Director Dr. Ralph Morris. As a result, the 8,000 residents — including the communities of Crystal Beach and Port Bolivar — must use the Bolivar Ferry to reach hospitals in Galveston, he said.

Entering the "active" part (tour guides claim the Sonora caverns have more active crystal growth than any other cave in the world) visitors can watch the waters that have dripped for eons from the delicate looking accumulations of calcite.

"I bet you didn't know the inside of Texas was as pretty as the outside," said Clark pointing out some of the finer formations along the cave walls.

The caves include a mineral sculpture called "the butterfly," which is the only known transparent formation in the world shaped like the delicate insect, according to cave officials.

Delicate, hollow, pencil-like formations called "soda straws" hang from a portion of the cave's roof as infant stalactites.

Eventually the hollow center of the soda straws fill up, and water begins to drip over the edges forming stalactites, explained Ms. Brown. The cave also contains several pools of eerie, death-still water that have formed after the crystal pattern on the cavern floor has tightened and prevented the water from escaping, Clark said.

Some visitors captured by the subterranean ancient geological art have even held weddings in one section known as "the bridal room," he said.

Ms. Brown said experts claim another cave similar to the Sonora caverns should be within 50 miles of the area because of the geological formations.

However, she added, "One hasn't been found."

Copley News Service

Candy Hansen has no Ph.D., no master's degree, and no appearances on "Nova" among her credits. But every workday for most of the last decade, it has been her job to monitor and organize the images beamed back from NASA's Voyager 1 and Voyager 2 spacecraft to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

Omer Divers has a pair of cowboy boots up on the corner of his desk, a south Texas drawl, and no college degree at all. But if something odd happens among the cosmic rays and low-energy-charged particles beyond Uranus, he will probably know it first.

Sue Linick started in the space program as a clerical typist. But for the past 10 years, many of this nation's leading astronomers have been seeing new ultraviolet light readings only after she has.

Hansen, Divers and Linick are experiment representatives on the Science Investigations Support Team of NASA's Voyager mission, which has given mankind its closest look ever at the planets Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, and is this country's longest-standing major space mission ever.

VOYAGER 2 is not quite half way from Uranus to Neptune, some 2.1 billion miles from Earth. Voyager 1, moving more or less directly toward the edge of the solar system, is about 2.9 billion miles away. Each is traveling at better than 40,000 mph.

The experiment representatives did not choose those courses, nor are they leading the analysis of the mission's findings. They are the twin spacecraft's baby sitters — the uncelebrated workers who monitor and organize the findings of the project, then forward it to the scientists around the world.

On the recent 10th anniversary of Voyager 2's launching, many of those scientists joined the Voyager mission's day-to-day staff of about 250 at a lab party to celebrate the mission's accomplishments.

But when the party was over, the great majority of those scientists headed back to their universities and research institutions, not to return again until Voyager 2 reaches Neptune in 1989.

Most of those on the day-to-day staff of the Voyager mission, on the other hand, walked back over to Building 264 to get back to business: keeping tabs on a pair of 1,820-pound spacecraft that have gone far beyond the point where no man has gone before.

"I'm sure for a person on the outside, it seems incredible," said Linick. "But from the inside, let me tell you: It really is incredible. You're truly amazed that it could work, because you know how it could fall apart."

THE VOYAGER mission, said Isaac Asimov, is "the most successful unmanned planetary probe ever sent out." Mission flight-engineering manager William McLaughlin has described it as "the most successful space mission of all time."

Edward C. Stone, chief scientist of the mission since its inception, is not inclined to disagree.

"Certainly, from my point of view, Voyager is the most productive mission we've ever had," said Stone, sitting in his roomy office at the California Institute of Technology, talking animatedly but balancing a teacup in his lap.

"I think we expected to be surprised, but I think we were surprised to be so surprised," he said. "We're seeing things which we couldn't even imagine."

The idea for the mission was born in 1966, when a UCLA graduate student named Gary Flandro proposed a "grand tour" of the solar system's outer planets.

Then came battles to win support from NASA and the federal government — the mission's overall cost is estimated at about $500 million so far — and finally, the flight itself.

Voyager 2 went up on Aug. 20, 1977, and Voyager 1 followed on Sept. 5.

THOUGH LAUNCHED later, Voyager 1 was from the beginning intended to reach Jupiter first, because it would travel a more direct route.

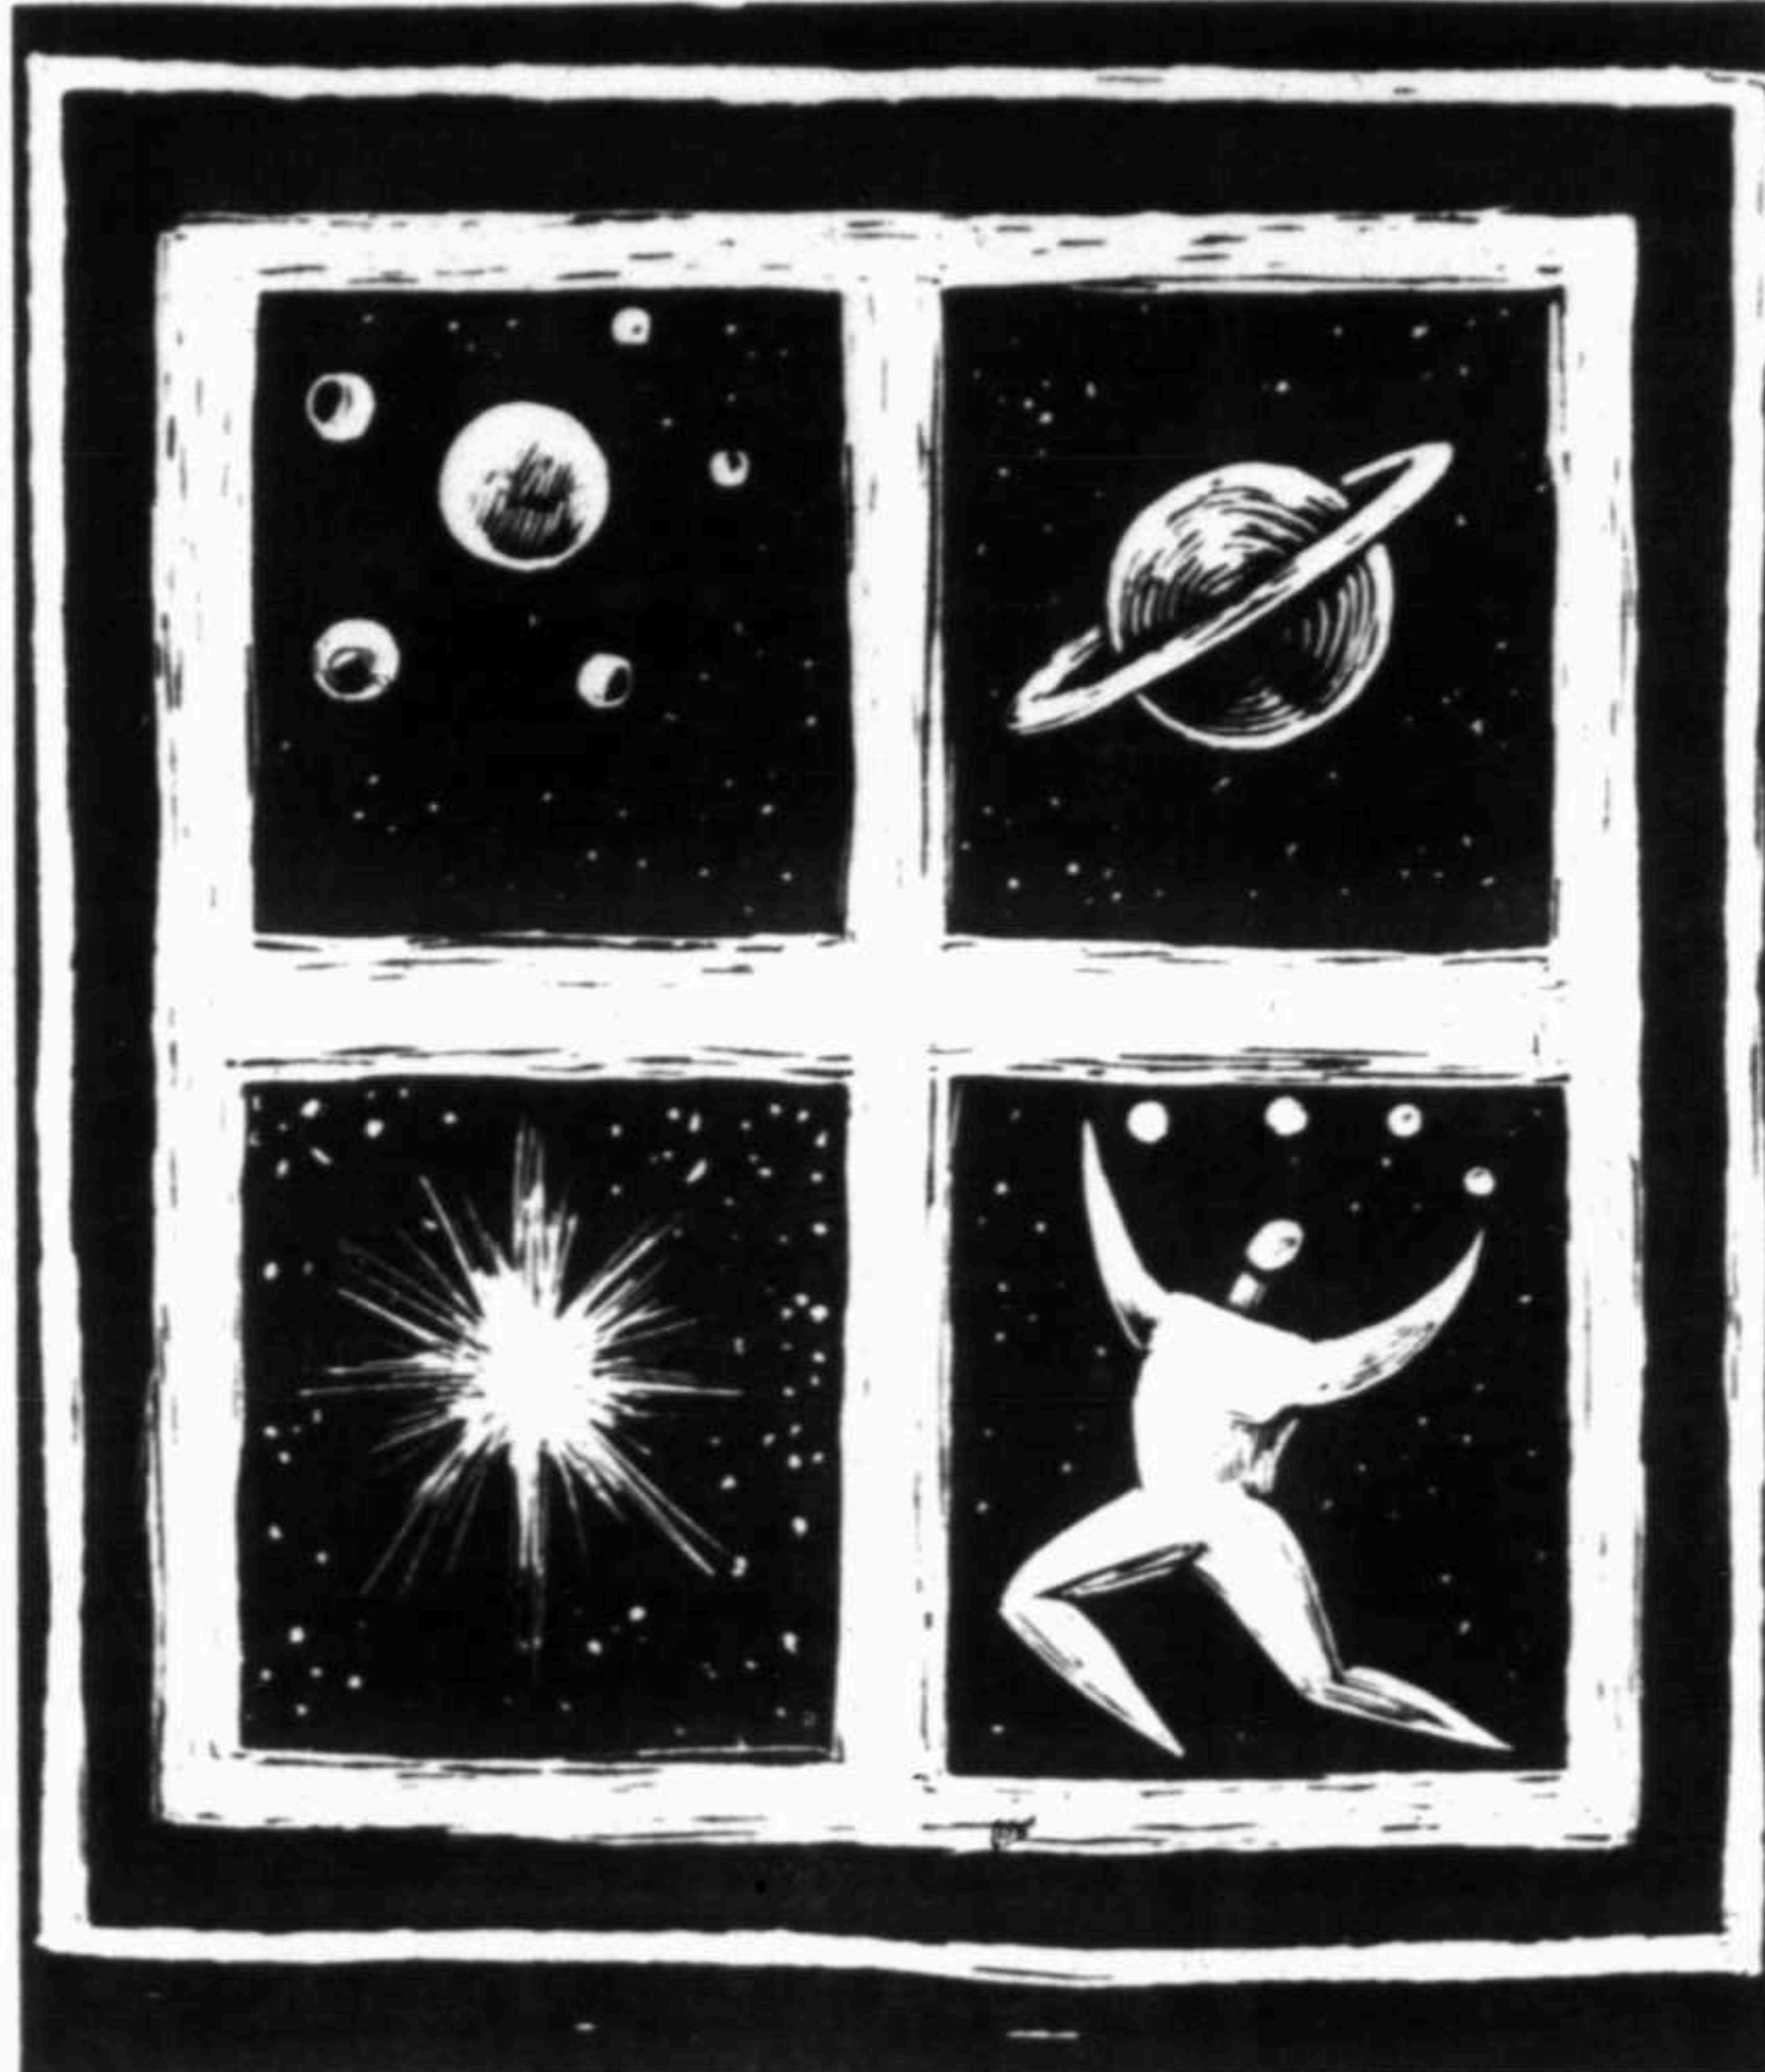

Over the next three years, the two spacecraft sped to Jupiter (arriving four months apart) and then to Saturn, where they parted ways. Mission planners sent Voyager 1 on a course for the edge of the solar system, and pointed Voyager 2 toward Uranus.

On Jan. 24, 1986, some 1.842 billion miles from Earth, Voyager 2 reached its closest approach to Uranus, and mission planners set their sites for the last planetary stop on the Voyager mission, in August 1989 — Neptune.

It has been a taxing itinerary: years of drudgery while the twin spacecraft sped along between encounters, then brief bursts of round-the-clock activity and breathtaking science.

On Jupiter's moon Io, the mission found the first active volcanoes ever detected in space, mountains that speckled sulfur 150 miles high.

On Saturn's moons Tethys and Dione and Uranus' moon Ariel, the mission found glacierlike ice flows that rose to the surface from within the moons.

Elsewhere on Tethys, the mission found a 1,550-mile canyon. And on Uranus' moon Miranda, an ice cliff twice the height of Mount Everest.

"Voyager," said Candy Hansen, "ranks right up there with Columbus and Magellan."

SO THE Voyager mission is astronomical history. But up on the third floor of Building 264, it is a personal history as well.

Here, they remember the carefully planned pregnancies of Linick and another lab employee, Linda Horn, who between 1981 and 1986 each delivered two children. Each pregnancy and birth was planned to take place between planetary encounters.

They remember the scientist from Colorado who named one daughter after a moon of Saturn (Rhea), and another after a moon of Uranus (Ariel), and the Titan Equatorial Band, a rock group made up of space reporters and lab workers that played at parties and local restaurants.

They remember the giddiness of the Jupiter encounter in 1979 when the office staff, punchy from hours of intense work, hatched a contest: Which leading space scientists could best duplicate John Travolta's pose in a "Saturday Night Fever" promotional poster?

And they remember the horror of Jan. 28, 1986, when the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger silenced their celebration of the Uranus encounter that peaked just days before.

These are some of the workers of long standing and little fame who labor in the shadow of the Voyager mission's innovative machinery and luminary scientists.

CANDY HANSEN stands at the door of her office and presents the Voyager mission imaging team's library. More than 100,000 photographs from space, in a filing system so complete that it takes a drawer 3 feet deep to just hold all the photographs from a single moon of Jupiter.

"At Jupiter," she said, "we could do exposures that were fractions of a second. Now, to get the same light level, we need to use exposures in tens of seconds."

This change prompted one of the more amazing technological innovations of the mission. To cut down "image smear," Voyager mission scientists and technicians have the spacecraft fire its thrusters so that it pivots during exposures — thereby compensating for its speed of about 40,000 mph.

Hansen, 33, has a bachelor's degree in physics from California State University, Fullerton. She has worked at the lab since June 1977, regularly tailoring her personal life to accommodate encounters.

Between Saturn and Uranus, she took 2 1/2 years "off" to work in Europe on a project to measure electromagnetic activity in the magnetosphere. Now that the Uranus encounter is passed and Neptune is two years away, she is planning for graduate school.

Omer Divers sounds like south Texas, even when he is talking about low-energy-charged particles. And his boots and cowboy hat don't exactly diminish the impression.

DIVERS HAS worked at the lab since 1976, with one 10-month hiatus. And it certainly isn't a job taken of convenience: He lives in Encinitas, about 100 miles south of Pasadena, and takes a 6 a.m. train to work every day.

The experiments he works on, which include measurements of cosmic rays, magnetic fields and high- and low-energy charged particles, are expected to provide crucial indications when Voyager 1 nears the edge of the solar system. In that vicinity, known as the heliopause, scientists expect interstellar winds to overpower the sun's radiating solar wind.

For a man whose home includes an amateur astronomer's telescope, a neon Saturn sign on the living room wall, and a photograph of Jupiter in the upstairs hall, that is a substantial perk.

Sue Linick is thinking back to a day two years ago, when she was keeping tabs on the ultraviolet spectrometer as usual and some funny-looking data came up.

"I called the guys up and said, 'From the data we've got, it looks like this star is having an outburst,'" she said. She was right.

Linick, 37, came to the lab as a clerical typist in 1969, when she was still attending Glendale Community College. In 1975, she got her bachelor's degree from California State University, Los Angeles — in art.

Bob Poynter sits in an office strewn with papers, printouts, notebooks and updates.

A gruff man with a white beard and an elbow-patched jacket, Poynter spends half his time on the Voyager mission and the rest on other work in molecular spectroscopy.

He is 61, and holds a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Iowa.

He was recruited from another lab position to the Voyager team in May 1978, and only made the move reluctantly. Now, he said, he expects to keep working on his Voyager data — monitoring signals from planetary and solar radio bursts in an effort to understand the magnetic fields of planets and moons — even after his official retirement.

Linda Horn remembers when, as a graduate student at California State University, Los Angeles, she asked a professor to reschedule her final exam in quantum mechanics. Why? She would be needed at work that day, to monitor mankind's closest encounter ever with Saturn.

The professor let her take the exam early.

Horn, 32, watched the data from the spacecraft's infrared radiometer and spectrometer, which measure heat and create thermal maps of planets and their moons.

Horn, who has worked on the mission since April 1977, holds a bachelor's degree in physics and wrote her master's thesis at California State University, Los Angeles on Voyager mission data from the rings of Saturn.

Scattered around the grounds of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory are video screens displaying a line of ever-diminishing numbers. Omer Divers has one on his bookshelf, another looks down from the wall of the Deep Space Network's operations control center.

One afternoon last month, the display read .780204017 — the number of days, hours, minutes and seconds until Voyager 2's closest approach to Neptune.

Neptune holds immense promise. Voyager 2's course should bring it near the planet's moon Triton and over the north pole of the planet — drawing within 3,100 miles of Neptune itself.

After Neptune, both Voyager 2 and Voyager 1 will continue to send back data as the two spacecraft near the edge of the solar system. But for many insiders in Building 264, the Neptune encounter will signal the end of the adventure in space that began in 1977.

After 12 years, the Voyager mission will have no new planets to aim for.

BOB POYNTER and Omer Divers will probably start thinking more about their retirements. Sue Linick will look into Ph.D. programs. Linda Horn's curiosity has been piqued by the initial plans for Cassini, a mission to probe Saturn's rings that is to be launched in the late 1990s. But no one seems in a great hurry to leave this mission behind.

'Cyber-punk' science fiction has wider global viewpoint

Copley News Service

Have you been hearing the word "cyber-punk" banded about and wondering what it means?

Well, according to author William Gibson, it refers to a new type of science fiction that has a global viewpoint, a wider cultural reference than the traditional American sci-fi viewpoint.

Gibson ought to know, since his book "Neuromancer," about a computer cowboy, is called the cyber-punk pioneer.

The author says he's not techno-phobic — he just sees technology as "morally neutral but totally invasive."

Gibson also says technology is unavoidable, and humans will have to make choices about how to use it or how it uses them.

However, this isn't part of a pessimistic view of the future.

Gibson thinks man wrestling with technology has been going on since the first Industrial Revolution, or maybe before.

Copley News Service

It's just 10 months and counting before the U.S. space shuttle program resumes its launch schedule. The upcoming launch in June next year will be the first in 2 1/2 years.

NASA pushed back the lift-off from January of '88 to test the shuttle's liquid-fueled main engines, and improve insulation seals in its solid-fuel boosters. Meanwhile, experts at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center say a switch to liquid-fueled boosters may be the prudent choice.

Altogether, three shuttle flights are scheduled for 1988, followed by seven in 1989.

Outer space becoming dump site

Copley News Service

From your seat on the orbiting space shuttle, Earth's familiar face casts an eerie, hypnotic glow.

The trouble is, that stunning view is partly a camera, a wrench, a large packet filled with human waste, a Russian satellite, bales of steel wire, an astronaut's helmet, and a 30x10-foot metal slab, as well as hundreds of other pieces of cosmic flotsam.

Like some of our oceans and rural areas, space is slowly becoming one vast dump site.

"It's beginning to get a little crowded up there," said Lt. Cmdr. Doug Schamp, at the North American Aerospace Defense Command located deep within Colorado's Cheyenne Mountain.

Currently, at least 6,146 man-made objects are in orbit around the Earth, all of which are tracked and cataloged by the agency. Additionally, 40,000 so-called micro-meteorites of 1 millimeter or less in size are also in Earth's orbiting range. Most of the latter objects are thought to be man-made — including specks of paint and small metal shavings from satellites — but are too small to be detected.

All of the refuse — some of which can occasionally be seen by the naked eye in the night skies — is the questionable testament to past space missions.

"We maintain a network of military outposts throughout the globe — including bases in the United States, Turkey, South Korea, Canada, Italy and Diego Garcia — that constantly monitor objects within the orbiting range of Earth, from 500 to 25,000 miles into space," Schamp said.

Each base consists of sophisticated huge transmitters that, simply put, use radio waves that penetrate deep into space. When an object — from a steel pipe to the shell of an abandoned satellite — moves across the field, countless antennas and sensors at the base "hear" the floating junk with the aid of state-of-the-art computers.

CNS Graphic

NORAD began monitoring man-made objects moving within Earth's orbit in 1956 at the dawn of satellites and space travel. It has since cataloged more than 17,000 such items, most of which have been destroyed while re-entering Earth's atmosphere.

The space junk primarily consists of equipment and waste products jettisoned by astronauts on various space journeys over the years.

"During a space walk, one astronaut dropped a camera into space. Another time, an astronaut dropped a wrench. Those objects are still up there," said Schamp.

Each item detected by the government's radar is assigned a catalog number that remains in NORAD's records even after the object disintegrates.

The Russian space station SOYUZ, for instance, is identified by the number 1,485. One RCA communications satellite has the number 3,876.

The idea behind the extensive project is fourfold.

The United States initially worried that some man-made space objects might not be completely destroyed coming out of orbit.

"We wanted to keep track of them if there was a chance that they might fall on large population centers," Schamp said, noting that pieces of a Russian satellite destroyed while re-entering Earth's atmosphere over Canada in 1981 dropped on a remote, lightly populated area.

"We want to know what they are doing at all times. If the Soviets launch a 'killer' satellite, we'll be aware of its every move," Schamp said.

The complex radar system would also serve to detect ballistic missiles that could be launched into orbit during a first-strike attack by the Soviet Union, or any other hostile country.

But following the distant traffic has been most useful for determining when it is safe to conduct satellite and rocket launches.

It's conceivable, he said, that a multimillion-dollar communications satellite being sent into orbit could be destroyed if it collided with a fuel drum.

Schamp is the man who gets calls from the public whenever objects are destroyed — with a flash in the sky — from friction caused by their re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere.

Outside of that rare excitement, life at NORAD's operations center is as dull as staring at a television test pattern.

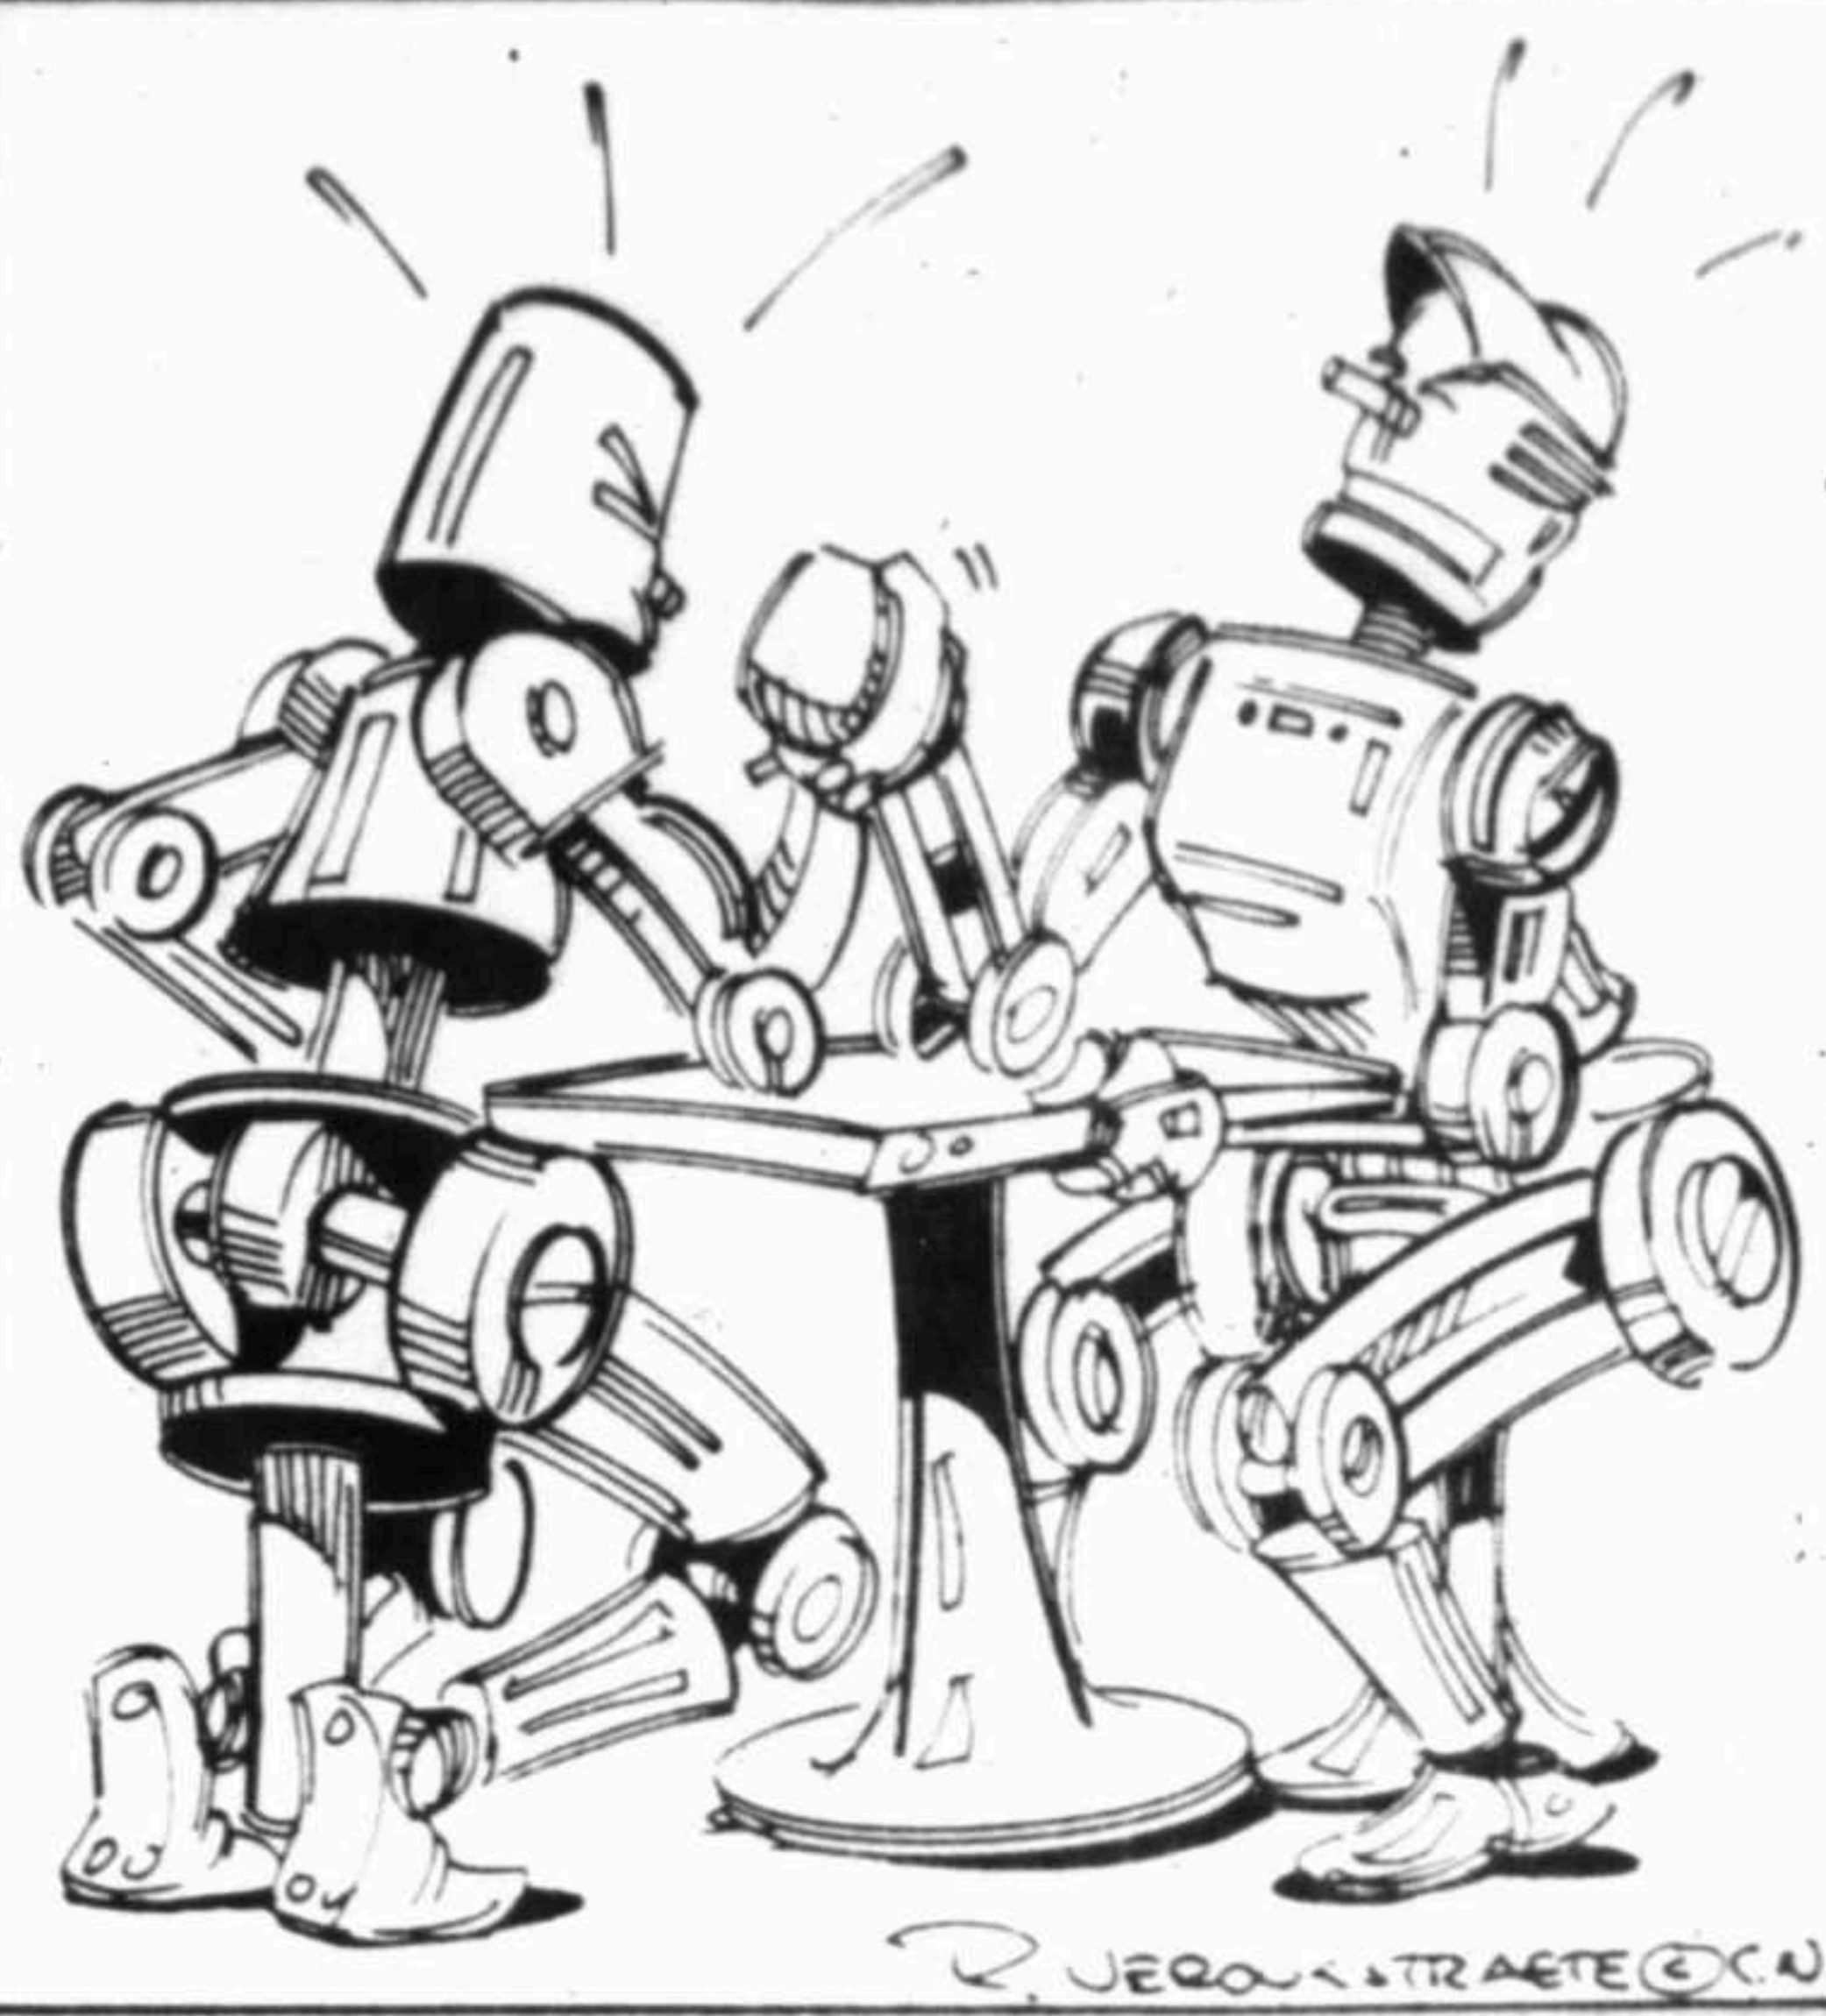

"A satellite doesn't suddenly go out of geosynchronous orbit, nor are there ever collisions of bodies in space. Nothing like that ever happens. It's usually pretty predictable around here," he said.

NORAD scientists are only slightly troubled by the growing pollution in space. But the agency estimates that by the turn of the century, 10,000 man-made objects will be passing overhead.

In anticipation of that dubious achievement, a few inventors have offered NORAD their plans for "space sanitation satellites" that would clean up the outer environment.

One Phoenix, Ariz., physicist is working on a celestial vacuum cleaner, Schamp said.

"It'll be like a giant dump truck in space, picking up and hauling away all of the junk," he said.

Romance with robotics causes business bust

Associated Press

When high-technology stocks were the rage five or six years ago, investors had a mad romance with robotics. Wave of the future. Unlimited growth. Star Wars technology. Sky-high productivity. These were the sweet nothings that accompanied the start-ups and new stock offerings. Venture capitalists and small investors alike were smitten.

Well, forget romance. Robotics left investors stranded at the altar. Although revenues are up since 1984, they stopped growing in 1986. Meanwhile, new orders are down 27 percent from a year ago. In 1986, a great year for equities, robotics stocks lost 54 percent of their already-low market value.

As a business, this one has been a bust, says Changing Times Magazine. The puzzle facing investors today is whether to write off robotics forever or to look again for opportunity in continuing efforts to develop new, possibly indispensable uses for these machines and systems.

Experts who suggest a second look maintain the industry is starting to live up to the early hype and investors can be well rewarded. If they're right, it's all a matter of timing. Timing wasn't right before. Is it now?

The optimists maintain that as technical progress gushes forth from labs and classrooms, more robotics companies will prosper and new markets will arise. The new grand vision is of robotic systems, which combine a computer-controlled robot with a vision apparatus that controls its movement and allows it to "see," "feel," and make decisions. These tools can attack specific problems — or so the story goes. If they allow managers to get by with fewer people, then so much the better.

SO WHERE might you scout for this financial about-face? Clue one: Skip today's market leaders. The top American robot makers by 1986 sales volume are GMF, a joint venture of GM and Fanuc, a Japanese company that is the world's leading robot crafter; Cincinnati Milacron, a machine-tool company that has branched into computer-controlled manufacturing systems, including robots; and ASEA, a Swedish company that is gradually shifting most of its American robotics manufacturing operation from Milwaukee back to Europe.

In each instance, robotics accounts for only a small portion of revenues. Cincinnati Milacron's industrial specialty products segment, which includes robots, brought in 30 percent of company revenues in 1986 and generated 42 percent of operating earnings. But the GM-Fanuc joint venture is private, and robotics is a flea on the ASEA elephant.

So the search for a super stock will probably pull you toward small robotics companies that don't try to be all things to all people. A sensible approach would be to make small investments in companies that stand a chance of gaining pre-eminence as the industry matures.

DEAR ABBY

Tattoo wearer's future is not a pretty picture

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please print this immediately for the 17-year-old girl who wanted a tattoo, but her father refused to sign the consent form.

Van Buren

DEAR GIRL: Like you, I do not drink, smoke or do drugs, but I wasn't 17. I was a 29-year-old mother of two when I decided to be tattooed. I had a good excuse: When I was 14, I tried to "punish" my boyfriend for hurting me, so I cut his initials into my forearm and poured ink into the cut. His initials didn't really take, but I was left with a stupid-looking scar. In order to cover up this mess, I went to a tattoo artist. He suggested a "tiny" dragon. He said, "Let me draw you something, and if you don't like it, we won't do it." And so, on the spur of the moment, his beautiful artwork — all six inches of it — was imbedded into my forearm. It was my birthday present to myself, at the cost of only $45. And don't let anybody tell you it's painless. It was like getting a "shot" non-stop for 90 minutes.

Five months later, I met the man who was to be my second husband. He was rather old-fashioned and never liked my dragon, but he accepted it as a part of me. In time, my dragon became an embarrassment. Your father's opinion of tattooed people is widely held by the majority of the population, and even though most people don't realize their prejudice toward us, you will find yourself answering a multitude of rude, obnoxious questions: (1)

How old were you when you did it? (Assumes that you were very young, immature and stupid.) (2) Were you drunk? Stoned? (Meaning only someone who was not in his or her right mind would perform such an idiotic mutilation to their own body.) (3) Did it hurt? (Duh!) (4) How long did it take? Cost? (Too long, more than you'll ever know.) (5) Are you sorry you got it? (Yes, mainly because of the moronic questions like these and others I've had to answer for years.)

And lastly, in business (and at 17, you'll never know what you'll be doing later in life), my tattoo caused such a distraction, I've made a conscious effort to keep it covered. Tattooed people are judged before they have a chance to open their mouths.

As for getting the problem solved: One plastic surgeon told me to cut it out and graft some skin from another part of the body over it. This will result in two large scars and the cost is $2,000 and up! Second opinion: Laser surgery — one scar that will look like a burn, the cost is around $700. I opted for this.

I have my arm bandaged now, and must go for the third — and last — section in a few weeks. It's a rather gruesome thing to do to one's self. But then so was the tattoo.

I'm 35 now, and I will always have something on my arm for people to stare at. But the questions have improved already. "What happened to your arm?" Answer: "I burned it." So, kiss your dad and thank him for loving you enough not to sign that consent paper, or you might be like me in time: An adult who did a foolish thing when she was young, and is now — SORRY, SORRY, SORRY.

P.S. Abby, I know this is too long for your column, but please, get my message across, no matter how much you have to cut.

DEAR SORRY: I'm printing your letter as is — no editing. It's long, but well worth the space.

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my wife when she lost a six-year battle with a terminal illness. The medical school to which we had planned to leave her remains rejected her, so I was suddenly faced with changing all of our plans and arranging an open casket memorial service.

At the wake, knowing that after the casket was closed, I would not see her again until I joined her in eternity, I poured out my heart to her as she lay on display. I guess I shed a few tears as I said goodbye and planted a farewell kiss on her cold and silent lips.

The clergyman (I am a former clergyman) scheduled to preach her memorial service became highly incensed because of even having the viewing in the first place, talking to my wife while she lay in the casket and kissing her. (Her mother did the same thing.) He doesn't believe in the traditional American way of death and honoring the remains, but only in "commencements" as he calls them — when the body is not in view.

After the viewing, he telephoned me and "laid me out in lavender" using a few choice phrases, suggesting I was a mental case and in need of a psychiatrist. (One hundred and eight people attended the wake, and no one else objected.)

Abby, is it very unusual and totally out of order for a husband to act as I did under the circumstances? And what do you think of this minister? — BEN FROM BROCKTON

DEAR BEN: Forgive your minister for his lack of compassion and his insensitivity to your last moments with the remains of your beloved wife. I think he is a troubled man, and his behavior should be reported to whomever is his superior.

DEAR ABBY: My parents say that when my date picks me up, he should come to the door and get me.

The guy I go with doesn't. I watch for him in the window, and as soon as his car pulls up in front of our house, I run out and get in.

I guess I will have to tell him, but I don't know what to say. Please help me — STARTING TO DATE

DEAR STARTING: Say, "The next time you pick me up, would you please come to the door and get me?" Explain that it's the courteous and customary thing to do. (P.S. You don't say how old he is, but if he's old enough to drive, it's time he learned one of the elementary rules of dating.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for "Motormouth," who asked for hints on how to refrain from talking too much.

I had that problem, and I keep reminding myself of the saying "Blessed are they who have nothing to say, and the courage not to say it." It has helped me through the years — IDA FROM SEQUIM, WASH.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Soviet suggests Mars mission

Copley News Service

While Soviet and American negotiators bicker over primitive terrestrial weaponry, a Soviet major general and former cosmonaut who has received his country's highest honor — the Order of Lenin — five times and Hero of the Soviet Union twice, has suggested a novel idea for the future.

His dream is that Americans and Soviets work out their differences by a joint space mission to the planet Mars.

Maj. Gen. Vladimir Dzhazibekov says the launch of a communist capsule aboard a Soviet Sputnik satellite in the '50s first inspired his dream of connecting with other civilizations in the universe.

And it wouldn't surprise him if space becomes the place where Americans and Soviets finally learn to respect each other.

Johnson busts 100 mark

ROME (AP) — It took Ben Johnson exactly 9.83 seconds to achieve several goals.

The Canadian entered the history books as the fastest 100-meter sprinter ever and proved beyond any doubt that he is the fastest human by beating American arch-rival Carl Lewis at the World Track and Field Championships Sunday.

Only a few minutes later, another world mark fell when Bulgaria's Stefka Kostadinova cleared 6 feet, 10 1/4 inches in winning the women's high jump as she improved her mark of 6-9 3/4 set last year.

Johnson catapulted out of the blocks for an explosive start and blazed across the finish line to shave an amazing one-tenth of a second off Calvin Smith's 4-year-old world record of 9.93.

IN DROPPING the record by an unheard-of one percent, Johnson became the first non-U.S. sprinter to break the 100 record since Armin Hary of West Germany in 1960, and the first Canadian to do so since Percy Williams in 1930.

The muscular Johnson had no false modesty after setting the mark.

"This record is the best ever in the history of track, in all events," Johnson said, and then promised to go after it again.

"I can do better next year," he said, adding that he had progressed every season.

Johnson said that in high altitude, his time would have been 9.75. Smith, who did not run the 100 here, set his record in the rarified air of Colorado Springs.

Lewis had nothing to be ashamed of in finishing second in the race that had 60,000 fans at Rome's Olympic stadium jumping from their seats.

He equaled Smith's old record and ran the fastest 100 meters of his career.

Lewis was gunning for three world titles here and now has the chance to redeem himself in the long jump, his favorite event, and the 400-meter relay.

The loss in the 100 could motivate Lewis to go for the world record in the long jump.

"How does 9.83 in the 100 transpose to the long jump? I hope the 9 stays there," Lewis said. A nine-meter long jump would top Bob Beamon's world long jump record of 8.90, set in Mexico City's thin air 19 years ago.

"I am in my best shape ever. I have run my fastest 100 and I have been jumping well. I ran my best 100 today, I will try to get my best ever in the long jump," Lewis said.

"He deserved to win today. He had an unbelievably good race. But he is not always unbeatable. Nobody is," said Lewis, who won four gold medals at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

THERE, JOHNSON had to settle for the bronze. Here, his shot-gun start left Lewis no chance. The American, a notoriously slow starter, twice lowered the meet mark in the preliminaries, clocking 10.05 and 10.03 in Sunday's semifinals.

But in the final, Lewis immediately fell behind Johnson and was never able to close the gap.

"I feel I didn't do what I needed to do at the start. Ben had a great race, I didn't," Lewis said.

"In the first round I guess Lewis was trying to run his best to impress me. I kept my cool. I knew what I could do in the final," Johnson said. "My first 10 meters were great. I pushed hard. I knew Lewis reaches top speed after 60 meters so I tried to hit my best after 40-45 to get a big enough margin to stay ahead."

It was Johnson's fifth consecutive victory over Lewis and capped a remarkable month, during which he had run under 10 seconds three times.

Both racers, who are not exactly friends, said they would now concentrate on their expected clash at next year's Olympics in Seoul.

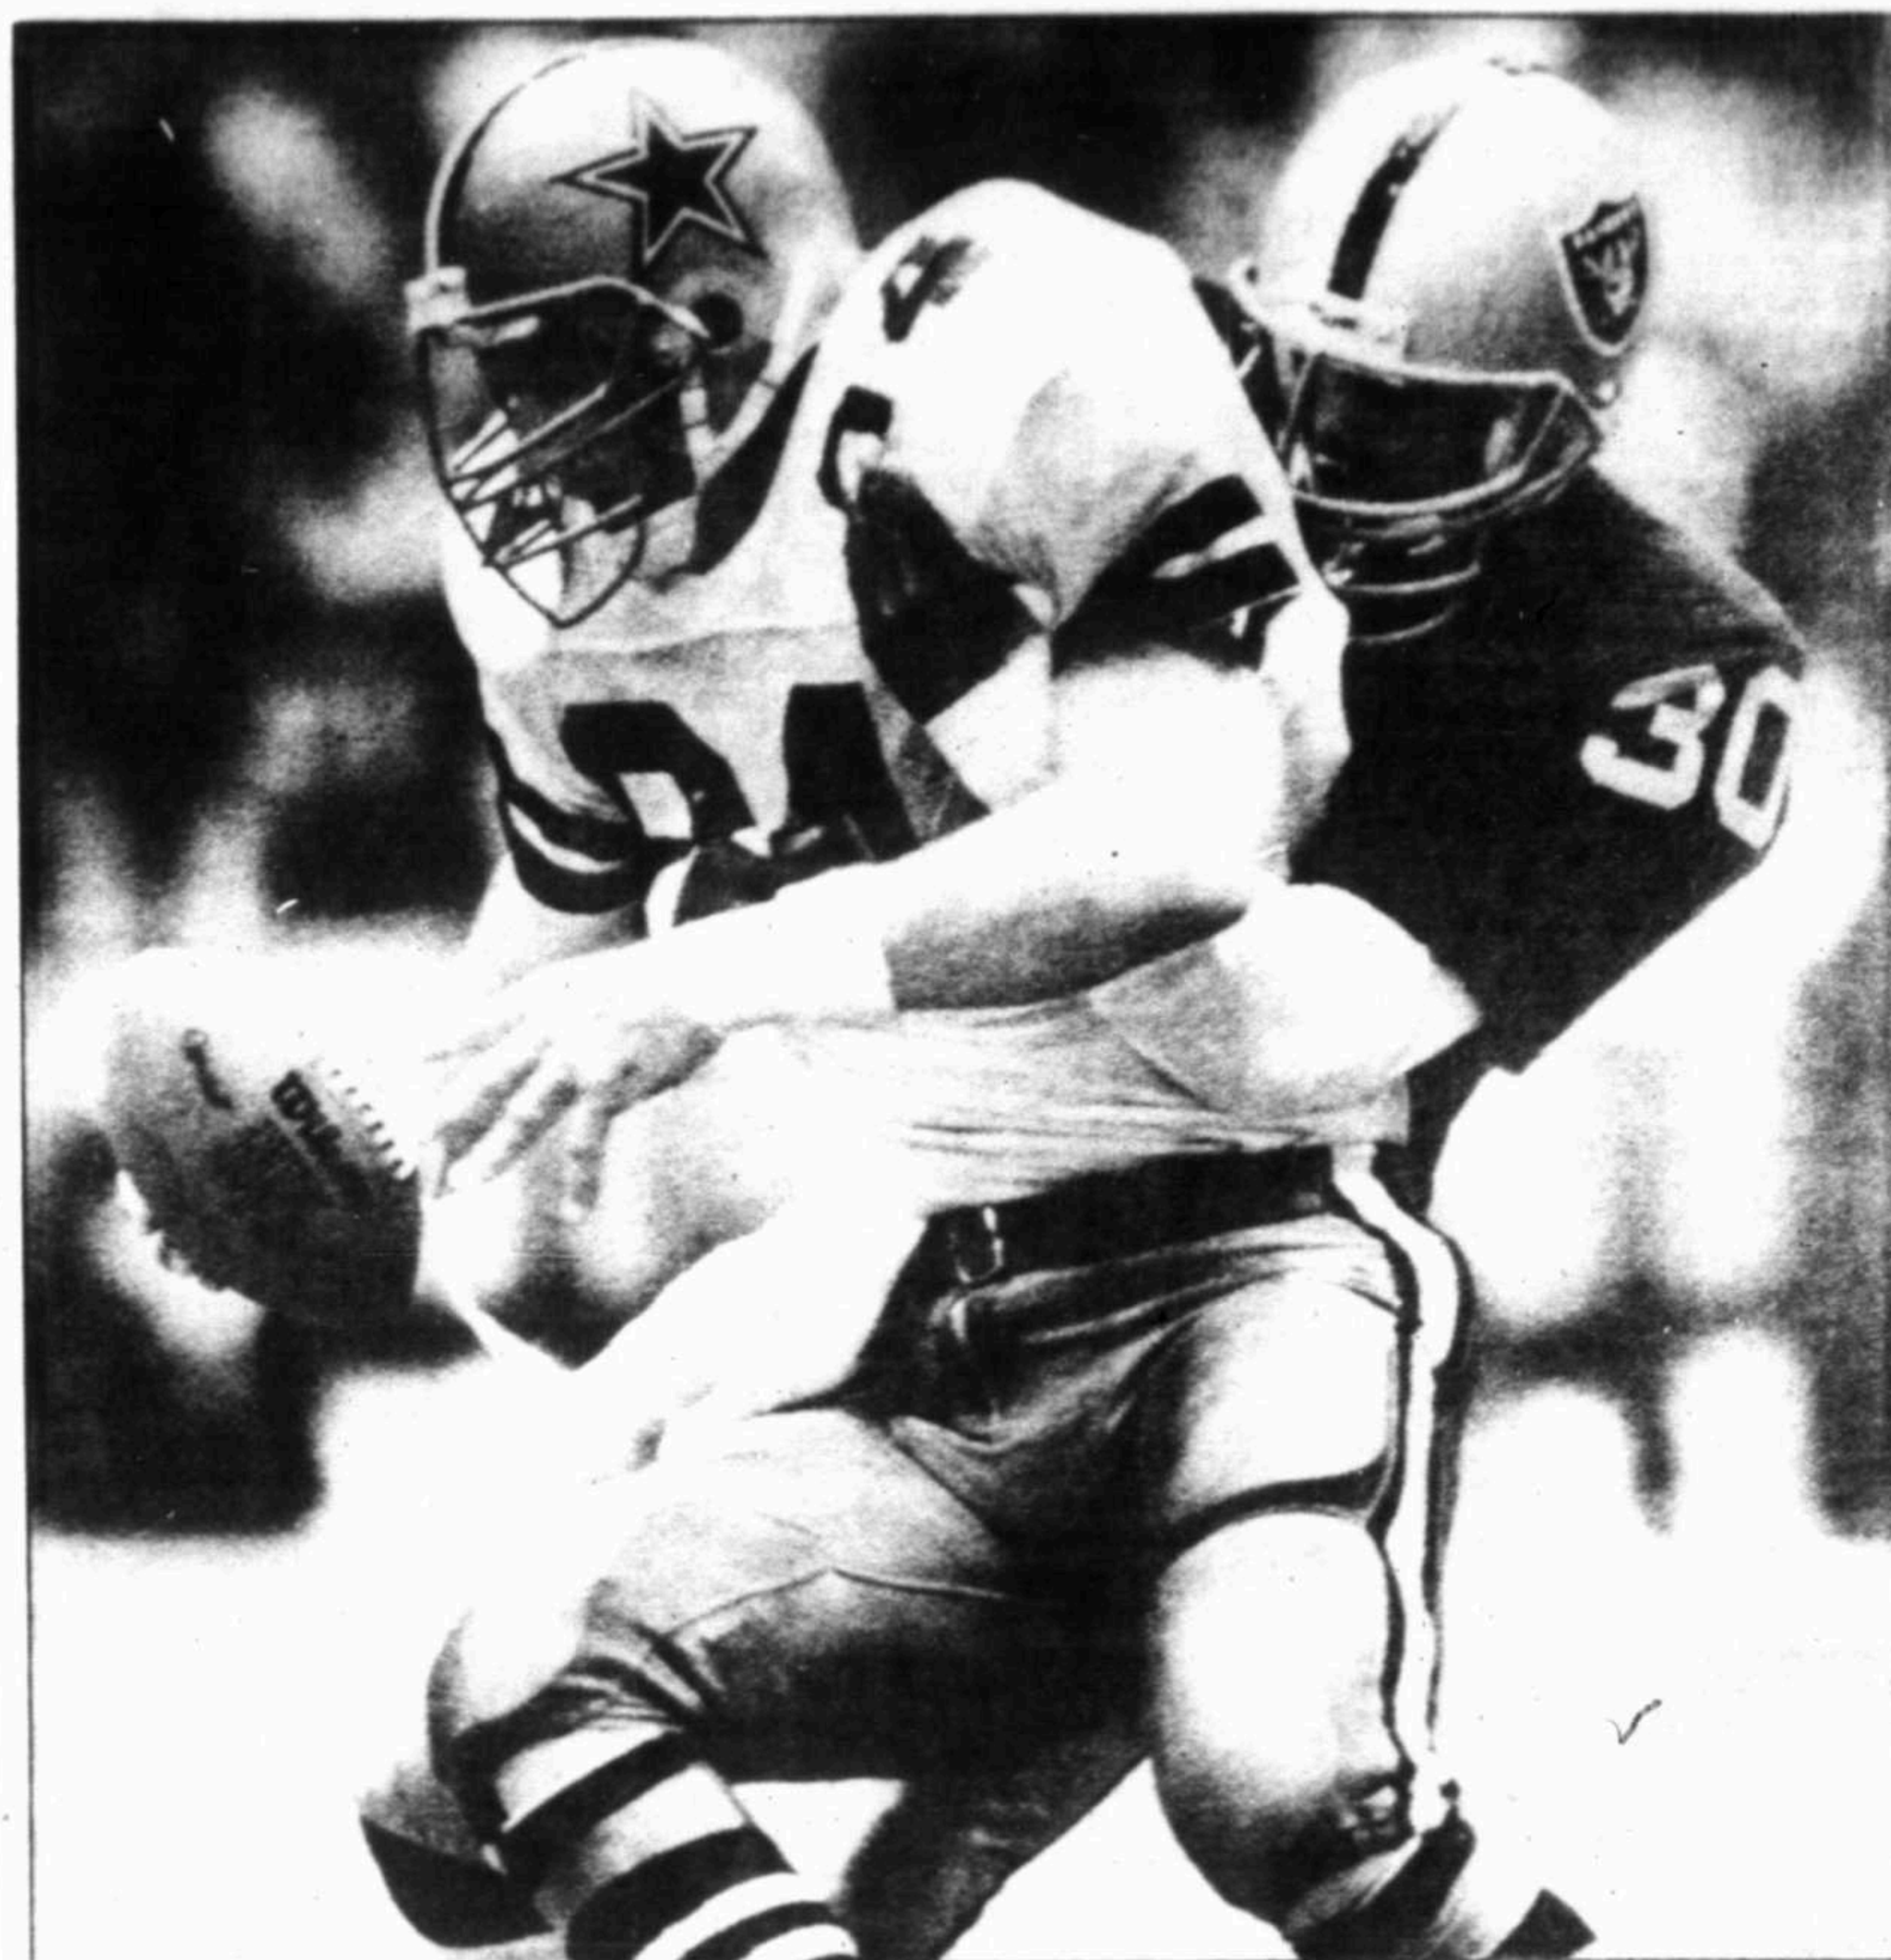

Like Lewis, another star suffered a blow in her quest for three gold medals.

East Germany's Heike Drechsler, competing in the same events as Lewis in the women's competition, had a slow start and finished second to countrywoman Silke Gladisch in the women's 100. Gladisch powered out of the blocks and won in 10.90.

Drechsler, who had broken the meet record with a 10.95 clocking in the semifinals, was next-to-last out of the blocks in the final and could not make up the ground against the quick-striding Gladisch.

Drechsler's late rush got her second place in 11.00, just ahead of Jamaica's Merlene Ottey, third in 11.04.

Italy's Maurizio Damilano thrilled the partisan crowd by winning the men's 20-kilometer (12.4-mile) walk through the streets of Rome in one hour, 20 minutes, 45 seconds, breaking the meet record.

Raiders spill Dallas, 34-10

IRVING (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders cut the preseason list of NFL winless teams to just the Green Bay Packers and Pittsburgh Steelers.

And they did it Sunday night against their old friends, the Dallas Cowboys, who lost for the seventh time in eight preseason meetings to the Raiders, dropping a 34-10 decision in Texas Stadium.

Dallas hasn't beaten the Raiders in a preseason game since 1972 and hasn't won a game in Texas Stadium since beating St. Louis 37-6 on Oct. 26, 1986.

Vance Mueller's 40-yard scoring run and Stefan Adams' 75-yard touchdown return of a punt finished off the Cowboys before 46,063 fans.

Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores said he would be proud to take the rout over Dallas — even if it came in a preseason game.

"It was nice to win one," said Flores. "It has been a long time since we won a game of any kind."

"Overall we played well. The offense made some big plays and the defense gave us some turnovers," Flores said. "It was hard to believe the way the Cowboys folded."

"Most times when we play Dallas it is usually a close game — 14-13 or 17-14 or something like that," he said. "You sure don't expect a game like this."

The mistake-ridden Cowboys were saddled with 17 penalties for 163 yards.

"We said all along there were going to be high and low points," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "This is definitely not one of the high points. We just had no offense at all. The errors were just terrible."

The Cowboys threw five interceptions, with starting quarterback Danny White suffering three of them.

"I was just awful," White said. "I hope I'm not one of the cuts on Tuesday."

Tennessee running back Keith Davis is up-ended by Iowa defender Dwight Sistrunk during college football's first game of the season Sunday at the Kickoff Classic in East Rutherford, N.J.

Vols produce first college upset

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — If the rest of the college football season is anything like the opener, it won't lack for excitement.

"There's no question the fans and the television people got their money's worth," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Sunday after the fifth annual Kickoff Classic — and his team lost.

Seventeenth-ranked Tennessee edged the No. 16 Hawkeyes 23-22 on three field goals by Phil Reich in the final 12 minutes, including a 20-yarder with three seconds left.

Reich's field goals — the first two from 45 and 25 yards — came on Tennessee's last three possessions after the Vols blew a 14-3 second-period lead and fell behind 19-14 on Kevin Harmon's second touchdown, a 20-yard run off a double reverse late in the third quarter.

Besides Reich, who also kicked two extra points, Tennessee's late heroics were produced by junior quarterback Jeff Francis and redshirt freshman tailback Reggie Cobb, the game's most valuable player with 138 yards on 25 carries in his collegiate debut.

"We still have a long way to go, but it was a great way to start the season," said Francis, who completed 11 of 23 passes for 151 yards and was 4-7 in helping to set up Reich's field goals.

"We took what they gave us. We felt we needed to be a well-conditioned team this year, and I think it helped us. It was a big part of our preparation."

Of the final drive, which began at the Tennessee 29 with 4:37 remaining, Francis said: "I knew it was just a matter of going out and executing. We'd been stopping ourselves all game. In the huddle, I told the guys that this is what we've worked for and that now was the time to suck it up and get the job done."

Cobb carried 14 times on the last three drives for 102 yards.

"I can't remember relying on a first-game freshman as much as we did Reggie Cobb," Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors said. "We were excited about his possibilities and he seemed to come along as the game progressed. He was doing such an outstanding job we decided to keep on giving it to him."

Reich kicked two field goals and three extra points in the 1986 opener when Carlos Reveiz was ineligible. Majors had put Reich on scholarship just last Wednesday.

"It's the happiest moment of my life," said Reich, who transferred from Tennessee-Chattanooga in 1984 and sat out the following season under NCAA rules.

"I'm happy we won and happy I contributed." Tennessee scored both its touchdowns in the second period on a 1-yard run by William Howard and a stunning 96-yard gallop by linebacker Darrin Miller after he intercepted a pitchout from Chuck Hartlieb, one of the three quarterbacks Fry promised Iowa would use.

Puckett's two-game eruption puts Twins back in first

Associated Press

Kirby Puckett followed an outstanding performance with an encore that was even better.

Puckett, 4-for-5 with two homers on Saturday night, went 6-for-6 with four RBI and two more homers Sunday as the Minnesota Twins moved back into first place in the American League West with a 10-6 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In addition to tying Rennie Stennett's major-league record for hits in consecutive games, Puckett also robbed Robin Yount of a grand slam in the sixth inning when he leaped above the center field fence to make a catch.

"It's been quite a while since I've felt this good at the plate," Puckett said. "I feel great up there now. I'm laying off the high pitches, laying off the ones in the dirt and just going up looking for a good pitch to hit."

"He had six hits in one game and they were six hard hits," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said. "That's quite an accomplishment. There's not much more one person can do in a game."

Puckett had an RBI single in the first, his 20th homer in the third and a two-run homer in the ninth. He also had two doubles.

"It's the best Saturday and Sunday I've ever seen a player have," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "I don't mean to take away from his catch on Yount, but I've seen that a lot. It was his offense that won the game. I think his bat had a little more sting

Tigers 7, Rangers 0

All of Detroit's runs were unearned as Texas catcher Geno Petralli tied an 85-year-old major-league record with six passed balls on pitches from knuckleballer Charlie Hough.

Lou Whitaker scored four of the runs and Doyle Alexander pitched a three-hitter as the Tigers stayed one game ahead of Toronto in the AL East.

Hough, 14-10, allowed only three hits in seven innings, but Petralli, who tied the AL record of five passed balls in Hough's last start, established a new league mark on Sunday. The major-league record of six passed balls was set Oct. 4, 1902 by Harry Vickers of the Cincinnati Reds.

Alexander, 3-0, making his fourth start since coming to Detroit in a trade with the Atlanta Braves, struck out six and walked none. He retired 22 consecutive batters until Tom O'Malley doubled with two outs in the ninth.

Blue Jays 13, Athletics 3

George Bell hit two of Toronto's five homers, including one of three by the Blue Jays in an eight-run seventh inning that broke a 3-3 tie against Oakland, which fell out of first in the West.

Jim Clancy, 12-10, allowed eight hits in the first four innings, but settled down and gave up only one hit in the next four.

Royals 11, White Sox 7

Kansas City got a three-run homer from Jamie Quirk and a grand slam from Kevin Seitzer to win a slugfest at Chicago.

Quirk's fourth homer capped a five-run sixth inning and Seitzer's first career grand slam gave the Royals an 11-4 lead in the eighth. Seitzer hit reliever Scott Nielsen's first pitch into the center field bullpen after Jim Winn walked the bases loaded.

Richard Dotson, 10-11, had a 2-1 lead and was working on a one-hitter when the Royals rallied for five runs in the sixth. Danny Tartabull and Frank White singled in runs before Quirk hit his fourth homer.

Yankees 4, Mariners 1

Bill Gullickson, who hadn't won since July 21, pitched seven shutout innings in his American League debut as New York beat Seattle.

Gullickson, acquired Wednesday from Cincinnati for Dennis Rasmussen, took a three-hitter and a 4-0 lead into the eighth. He gave up Harold Reynolds' one-out double and Mickey Brantley's RBI single before Dave Righetti got the final five outs for his 25th save.

Mike Moore, 6-17, gave up four runs, two earned, in 6½ innings. Two errors by Reynolds at second base helped the Yankees score twice in the fourth.

Red Sox 7, Indians 3

Boston defeated Cleveland as Dwight Evans knocked in four runs and hit two homers, establishing a career high.

Evans, who now has 33 homers, one more than he had in 1982 and 1984, had a solo homer in the fourth inning and a two-run shot in the fifth. He added an RBI grounder in the ninth.

Roger Clemens, 14-8, pitching on three days' rest for the first time this season, allowed three runs on 10 hits in six innings. Wes Gardner pitched three hitless innings for his eighth save.

Jim Rice and Evans had three hits each to pace Boston's 15-hit attack. Rice put the Red Sox ahead in the second inning with a solo homer, his 11th of the year. Ellis Burks added a two-run single later in the second.

Angels 6, Orioles 2

Wally Joyner came closer to becoming the first AL player since 1940 to have 100 RBI in his first two seasons when he hit a three-run homer to pace California past Baltimore.

Joyner now has 27 homers and 96 RBI and could be the first in the AL since Ted Williams in 1940 to have 100 RBI in his first two seasons.

Joyner homered off Eric Bell, 9-11, in the fourth inning after Johnny Ray, making his debut for California after being acquired from Pittsburgh last week, sliced an RBI double.

Don Sutton, 9-10, won the 319th game of his career. He gave up six hits in seven shutout innings.

With the three runs batted in Sunday, Dawson has 115 for the year, surpassing his career high of 113 set with Montreal in 1983.

In 79 day games this season, Dawson is hitting .324 with 31 homers and 81 runs batted in. In 43 night games, he's batting .238 with 12 homers and 34 RBI.

Padres 6, Phillies 1

Mark Grant pitched an eight-hitter for his first major-league complete game and Chris Brown and Marvell Wynne homered as San Diego defeated visiting Philadelphia.

It was the second consecutive complete game by a Padres pitcher, the first time they have accomplished that since Aug. 21-22, 1985. Rookie Eric Nolte defeated the Phillies 3-1 on a four-hitter Saturday night.

Brown tied the score 1-1 in the second inning with his ninth homer off starter Kevin Gross, 8-12. Wynne hit a two-run homer in the sixth to make it 6-1.

Expos 5, Dodgers 4

Pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson drove in the tying and winning runs with a two-out double in the ninth as Montreal rallied for three runs in the inning for its fifth straight victory.

Trailing 4-2, the Expos loaded the bases for the third time against Los Angeles starter Fernando Valenzuela, 11-12, on Reid Nichols' single, a one-out walk to Vance Law and Mike Fitzgerald's bunt single.

Casey Candaele hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Tim Crews and Johnson, batting for winning pitcher Jeff Parrett, doubled scoring Law and pinch-runner Pascual Perez. Johnson is 15-for-52 with 11 RBI as a pinch hitter this year.

Reds' Rose may suit up

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose says he may activate himself as a player next month when major league rosters expand to 40 players.

Rose, baseball's all-time hit leader with 4,256, said earlier this season he would only name himself to the playing roster before Sept. 1, if at all, in order to be eligible for postseason play.

Rose said Sunday he might come back in September, but he was still undecided.

"Maybe it's all over, but it's not all that bad," Rose said. "I didn't say anything about next week, though."

The Reds management has said the decision on playing is strictly up to Rose.

"Maybe it would affect me more if I wasn't manager. Maybe it would affect me more if we were 10 games in front of the division," Rose said.

After Sunday's 3-1 loss to the Chicago Cubs, the Reds were in third place in the National League's West Division, trailing the San Francisco Giants by five games.

Rose broke Ty Cobb's hit record when he collected his 4,192nd hit on Sept. 11, 1985, in Cincinnati. Rose is also baseball's all-time leader in singles with 3,215, games with 3,562, and at-bats with 14,053.

"What good would two more at-bats in September do me," Rose said. "I might feel different if I thought I wasn't going to be able to put on a uniform next year."

Rose's last at-bat came Aug. 17, 1986, when he struck out pinch-hitting against San Diego's Goose Gosage.

Rose has taken batting practice on only a few occasions this season, including during a three-game series in Philadelphia on July 20-22.

GOLF

AKRON, Ohio — Curtis Strange established a PGA Tour single-season money-winning record on Sunday as he scored a relatively easy three-stroke victory in the World Series of Golf.

Strange's third victory of the season was worth $144,000 from the $800,000 purse and pushed his earnings for the year to $697,365, surpassing the record $653,296 amassed by Australian Greg Norman last year.

Strange also moved atop the Player of the Year point standings and into first place in the Nabisco Grand Prix of Golf, a season-long points competition that will award the winner $175,000.

BUFORD, Ga. — Japan's Ayako Okamoto broke out of a tie with a 2-foot birdie putt on the 16th green and shot a 1-under-par 71 Sunday to win the $250,000 World Championship of women's golf.

The victory was worth $81,500 — the richest prize in LPGA history — for Okamoto, who lifted her season's earnings to $411,966, just behind King.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — John Inman sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the 18th green Sunday to cap a round of 4-under-par 66 and capture the $450,000 Provident Classic by one stroke over Rocco Mediate and Bill Glasson.

JUPITER, Fla. — Billy Mayfair, the NCAA Player of the Year from Arizona State, defeated Eric Rehmman 4 and 3 Sunday to win the 87th U.S. Amateur Championship.

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Mark McNulty of South Africa shot an 8-under-par 63 Sunday for a 259 total and won the $430,000 West German Open golf tournament by three strokes.

TENNIS

MAHWAH, N.J. — Third seed Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria beat sixth seed Sylvia Hanika of West Germany 1-6, 6-4, 6-1 Sunday to win the singles title in the $150,000 United Jersey Bank Classic women's tennis championships at Ramapo College.

JERICHO, N.Y. — Jonas B. Svensson of Sweden, a 20-year-old ranked 25th in the world, scored his fourth straight upset of the week Sunday, beating eighth-seeded David Pate 7-6, 3-6, 6-3 in the final of the $150,000 Norstar Hamlet Challenge Cup.

RYE BROOK, N.Y. — Peter Lundgren of Sweden rallied for a 6-7, 7-5, 6-3 victory over John Ross of Gainesville, Fla., in the final of the NYNEX Open tennis tournament Sunday.

BRYN MAWR, Pa. — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova overcame a shaky start on the slow Bryn Mawr College courts Sunday, then cruised past second-seeded Helen Kelesi 6-4, 6-0 for the championship at the Kiss 100 Tennis Invitational.

CYCLING

VIENNA, Austria — France, the most successful nation in the history of the World Track Cycling Championships, finally won its first gold medal of the 1987 competition Sunday night as racing concluded.

WRESTLING

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France — The Soviet Union gained three more gold medals at the World Freestyle Wrestling Championships on Saturday, while John Smith gave the United States its second victory as the tournament ended.

The Soviet wrestlers finished with six golds, one silver and two bronzes in the 10 weight classes. The United States took two golds, three silvers and three bronzes.

BOWLING

AUTO RACING

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. — Despite the lingering effects of a separated shoulder, Mario Andretti led from start to finish as he won the LivingWell-Provinci 50-lap, 200-mile Indy-car at Road America Sunday.

Former SMU gridder has last look

DALLAS (AP) — Former Southern Methodist defensive back Frank Thomas left his East Texas home recently to report to preseason practice with his new team, the University of Houston Cougars.

But he couldn't resist a last swing by Dallas and SMU's athletic facilities for one last look at the school where no Southwest Conference football will be played this fall.

"It was like one big ghost town. It made me kind of sad," Thomas said.

He scaled a six-foot chain link fence surrounding Ownby Stadium, where he spent the first three seasons of his college career practicing for a football team that no longer exists. He sat alone for an hour, reminiscing about the days before the NCAA suspended the Mustangs' football program for repeat recruiting violations.

"That was the first time the reality of the situation really hit home," Thomas told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I sat there thinking about how a lot of guys had shed a lot of blood, sweat and tears on that field. Then, some guy comes along with a pen and a piece of paper and takes it away from you."

Thomas is just one of many former SMU football players playing for different colleges this fall.

At last count, the brunt of SMU's 56 scholarship football players had scattered to 26 different universities — from Columbia University in New York (defensive end John Robinson) to the University of Hawaii (linebacker Ken Masterson).

SMU players were allowed to transfer anywhere in the United States with immediate eligibility after the NCAA announced on Feb. 25 that it was shutting down the program for a year. The decision was based on a $61,000 slush fund involving 13 members of last year's team.

Faced with departing players and a loss of scholarships, SMU officials voluntarily canceled the 1988 season as well.

When SMU opens its doors for fall classes on Monday, it will have no athletic director, no football coach and no football team.

One of three scholarship players who did not transfer is linebacker Ricky Roden. He spent most summer afternoons this year lifting weights at the tiny training facility at Godley High School.

Roden will have two years of eligibility remaining when SMU resumes football. He made a couple of trips to SMU in early summer but did not return, he said.

"It was sad to be over there. There are big signs all around saying 'SMU Football' but no one in there has anything to do with SMU football," he said. "It was weird to be in there. Everything was all dressed up with no place to go. It was like being in a ghost town."

Wide receiver Mitchell Gieber is another who didn't transfer and will have eligibility in 1989, when SMU football returns. Defensive end Brett Kershaw is the other.

"This whole place is deserted," Gieber said. "It's hard to work out when there's nothing to get ready for. Your mind really isn't into it. I miss the other guys. The noise there used to be when the place was full and everyone was joking with each other."

Defensive tackle Robert McDade, who joined Thomas and offensive tackle Del Montgomery as part of Houston's "Three Mustang Keteers," said his heart goes out to Roden, Gieber and Kershaw.

"I couldn't have done it. The emotional trauma would have been too tough," McDade said.

"We were like one big family. Then one day, someone threw a hand grenade into the house and killed half the family. I couldn't stand being up there, with all those memories, and seeing what the place is like now."

Navratilova slightly envious of No. 1 seed Graf

If Navratilova and Graf meet again in the Open final, Graf's No. 1 ranking could be on the line.

"In my mind, if I win the Open, I should be No. 1 even if I don't play another match the rest of the year," Navratilova said. "I've always felt anyone who wins the Open and Wimbledon is No. 1. I've always said that, not just because it's convenient this year."

While most fans focus on the Big Three, Navratilova feels there are other players capable of winning the Open.

"The top 10 is loaded," she said. "(Gabriela) Sabatini and (Pam) Shriver are playing well now, and Hana (Mandlikova) and (Helena) Sukova are always tough."

Conditions at the Open can be even tougher than the competition.

"The Open is probably the most unpredictable tournament in the world because of the conditions," Navratilova said. "The planes, the people, the wind, the scheduling — there's no telling what you have to go through. No matter how well you prepare, you can't prepare for that."

Navratilova said she is fully recovered from an ankle injury she suffered playing basketball this summer.

"It hasn't given me any trouble at all," she said. "I'm in as good a shape as I've been all year. My problem is not having enough practice time before the tournament. That's the only

Navratilova completed her final tuneup for the Open Sunday with a 6-4, 6-0 victory over Helen Kelesi at a tournament near Philadelphia.

The woman she defeated in the semifinals, Robin White, said she thinks Navratilova isn't playing as aggressively as she used to.

"She seems more willing to stay on the baseline," White said. "I think she's lost a little bit of confidence coming in (to the net). She has a different type of game plan. Her game isn't as sharp this year."

White said Graf's emergence has put more pressure on Navratilova. "Steffi's gaining on her, and Martina is hearing the footsteps," she said.

Ronas Ryon wins Derby

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Ronas Ryon dashed to a two-length victory Sunday in the $843,000 All American Derby, a 440-yard sprint for 3-year-old quarter horses at the Ruidoso Downs horse racetrack.

Last year the colt won the $2.5 million All American Futurity on the same mountain track.

Ronas Ryon, ridden by jockey Jerry Nicodemus, jumped to an early lead and never gave it up. He finished the race in 21.32 seconds, shaving 0.06 seconds off the Derby's stakes record of 21.38 seconds set in 1985 by Heavenly.

The colt earned $361,000 for his owners, James Plummer, Benjamin Benham and Sarge Darden of Selma, Ala. Sunday's purse boosted Ronas Ryon's winnings to $1.73 million.

Hooked on Cash earned $150,000 for Louis Howard of Austin, Texas, with a second-place finish. Sompinkaglass was a head in front of stablemate Dashin Linda, who earned a combined total of $120,000 for J.E. Jumonville of Ventress, La.

Unies Rocket finished fifth, followed by Ruler Oak, Some Super Jet, Irish Moon Lass, Maricao and Jet Go Chick.

Sept. 30 set for possible strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, says he expects the NFL Players Association to set a deadline of Sept. 30 for a possible strike.

The players union is expected to announce its strike deadline today after its 28 player representatives meet in Washington.

The current five-year contract expires Monday. There have been no negotiations between the two sides since Aug. 14. Donlan said the union has refused to negotiate since then.

The union printed a booklet last December outlining exactly what they were going to do, and they have done it," Donlan said. "They had a game plan. They stuck to it."

"What disturbs me is the union seems to have different priorities than we do. It disturbs me they don't think they belong at the bargaining table."

Dick Berthelsen, the union's general counsel, said there haven't been any meetings recently because union officials have been busy briefing players on the status of the talks.

A Sept. 30 strike would come after the third week of the season. By that time, players would be eligible for a full year of pension benefits.

Michigan team gains Musial Series finals

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Jim Cronk pitched a three-hitter as Michigan's Birmingham team demolished Chicago, 19-0, to advance to tonight's championship round of the amateur baseball Stan Musial World Series.

In earlier games Sunday in the double-elimination tournament, San Antonio edged Birmingham, 10-9, and Atlanta eliminated Toledo, Ohio, 9-3.

Israeli Cabinet scraps Lavi fighter project

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Cabinet narrowly voted to scrap a project to build an Israeli plane of the future in favor of the U.S.-manufactured F-16 jet fighter of today.

The Cabinet voted 12 to 11 with one abstention Sunday in favor of a proposal by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, head of the left-wing Labor Party, to stop work on the Lavi jet fighter.

Israeli and American companies, headed by the government-owned Israel Aircraft Industry, spent seven years and $1.3 billion on research and development on the jet.

Peres said his proposal was based on economic considerations. He told Israel radio that the Lavi project would require almost $500 million a year over the next decade and that the three contributors to the project — the United States, the Defense Ministry and the treasury — opposed it.

"We welcome the Israeli Cabinet's decision to terminate the Lavi," said a statement issued in Washington by the State Department and the Pentagon. "We recognize this was a difficult decision for Israel but it is one we believe will best serve Israel's interests."

Cancellation was a blow to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud Bloc and to Israel's billion-dollar-a-year arms industry.

Vietnam seeks investment

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (NYT) — Vietnam, falling further and further behind its free-market Southeast Asian neighbors in development, is about to begin an ambitious two-track investment campaign.

Officials appear willing to deal with just about anyone with capital but are placing special hopes on tapping the accumulated wealth of the hundreds of thousands of "boat people" and other exiles who now live in the West.

Vietnamese emigrants, being wooed with nostalgia, already play a large role in the newly liberalized "family economy," supplying relatives with goods to sell in local markets and mom-and-pop businesses. They also send machines, tools and parts for small industries. Such shipments, along with dollars, are now allowed to enter Vietnam almost without limit. Emigrants are also allowed to return for visits.

Western nations restrict trade with Vietnam and give it no official aid, in protest of the presence of 140,000 Vietnamese troops in neighboring Cambodia, which Vietnam invaded in 1978. Vietnam and the United States have no diplomatic relations.

At the heart of the development campaign is a new investment code, which Hanoi says will be ready by the end of this year after having been tied up since 1984 in what now appear to have been political disagreements. The new law is intended to remove many bureaucratic barriers that have made doing business here virtually impossible for most Westerners.

KIRK WALL, Orkney Islands (AP) — German warships sunk at Scapa Flow during World War I have become one of the world's richest lobster grounds.

Mexico readies new resort area

SANTA MARIA HUATULCO, Mexico (AP) — Cows and donkeys still graze by the runways that will open to commercial flights late this year for the start of what the government hopes will be Mexico's next successful ocean resort.

Planners for the Bays of Huatulco hope to avoid the mistakes that have marked such successful ventures as Cancun on the tip of the Yucatan peninsula and Ixtapa on the Pacific north of Acapulco.

"This is this administration's most important tourism project," Manuel Alonso, spokesman for President Miguel de la Madrid, said during a weekend tour of the project on the southern state of Oaxaca's Pacific coast.

De la Madrid, whose six-year term ends in late 1988, toured the area and dedicated everything from waste treatment facilities to the first hotel open for business to taxi concessions on Saturday.

Unlike Cancun and Ixtapa, where four- and five-star hotels generally priced out of reach of Mexican vacationers were built in homogeneous strips, the Bays of Huatulco will have a mix of moderate and expensive hotels stretched out over nine bays.

ster fishing grounds, according to a published account.

In recent years, marine experts have "planted" 10,000 one-inch baby lobsters bred in captivity in the underwater wrecks, where the lobsters find ideal hiding places to grow to maturity, London's Sunday Telegraph reported.

The creatures are caught by frogmen when they reach 4 pounds or more.

Of the 71 German High Seas Fleet warships scuttled at Scapa Flow in 1919, only eight remain. The rest were salvaged for scrap.

'Identical' pairs marry

MOSCOW (AP) — Leningrad officials couldn't understand why a couple who had just applied for a marriage certificate came back and asked for another one — until they found it was a case of double look-alikes, Tass reported.

A look at their identity papers made everything clear: twins were marrying twins, the news agency said Sunday.

The marriages were between the brothers Nazarov, students at an air defense college, and Galina and Marina Sheynykh, both nursery school teachers, Tass said.

"The marriage registration of the two look-alike couples made quite a splash in the city," Tass said.

Treason trial continues

JERUSALEM (AP) — The closed-door treason trial of a former nuclear technician entered its second day today with testimony from secret service agents who interrogated him after he told a British newspaper Israel makes nuclear weapons.

Mordechai Vanunu, 32, was brought to the Jerusalem District Court under elaborate security to prevent him from making contact with reporters.

Vanunu has been held in isolation since October, when his family says Israeli agents lured him from London to Rome, drugged and kidnapped him and brought him to Israel. If convicted, he faces life in prison.

The former technician was charged with betraying Israel after The Sunday Times of London ran an article Oct. 5 based on information he provided. The story said Israel had stockpiled 100 nuclear weapons, was able to make hydrogen and neutron bombs and ranked sixth among world nuclear powers.

A marine today checks autos on a street leading to the presidential palace in Manila. Security remains high following a recent coup attempt.

AP Laserphoto

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The armed forces' deputy chief rushed to the nation's military academy today where 600 cadets were reported on a hunger strike launched to show sympathy with last week's coup attempt.

He apparently failed to persuade the cadets to end the strike.

Right-wing sources, meanwhile, distributed copies of a rebel statement declaring a provisional junta and calling for new presidential elections. Sources said the rebels had planned to release the statement if their Friday coup attempt had not been crushed.

Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, who President Corason Aquino fired as defense minister in November after a coup plot was uncovered, today blamed "lack of statecraft" for the political instability and said he would neither condemn nor defend the mutineers.

North of the capital, efforts continued to find coup leader Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, who had been Enrile's security chief, and several hundred mutineers who were still at large.

Officials said at least 37 people were killed and 300 injured in the fighting, which posed the most serious challenge to the government since Mrs. Aquino came to power in a military-civilian uprising 1 1/2 years ago.

Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita, deputy chief of staff, rushed to the Philippine Military Academy in Baguio City, 130 miles north of Manila. There were press reports that the 600-member cadet corps had started a hunger strike in support of the mutineers.

Academy sources said Ermita, the third-ranking officer in the 150,000-member armed forces, and academy superintendent Commodore Rogelio Dayan met with cadets.

Several hours later, Ermita left the academy for the airport and refused to talk to reporters. Academy officials clamped a news blackout on the protest.

Honasan and other coup leaders graduated from the academy, the Philippines' equivalent of West Point. The school trains officers for all branches of service.

Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno described the academy as "what you might call a 'cradle' of very youthful idealism" and said he was confident the cadets would realize they were "out of step with the Filipino people."

The rebel statement, signed "ruling junta central Luzon," accused Mrs. Aquino of treason and vowed the mutiny would continue.

It was impossible to tell from the statement, dated Saturday and distributed in Manila during the week end, whether Honasan and his comrades were still trying to form a junta.

Central Luzon is the area north of Manila from the mutiny was launched Friday against the presidential palace, broadcast stations and military garrisons.

The rebel statement accused Mrs. Aquino of dismembering the country by "illegally" granting autonomy to minority groups, appointing communists to the government and refusing "effectively respond to the reasonable demands of the freedom-loving nationalist members of the Armed Forces of the Philippines."

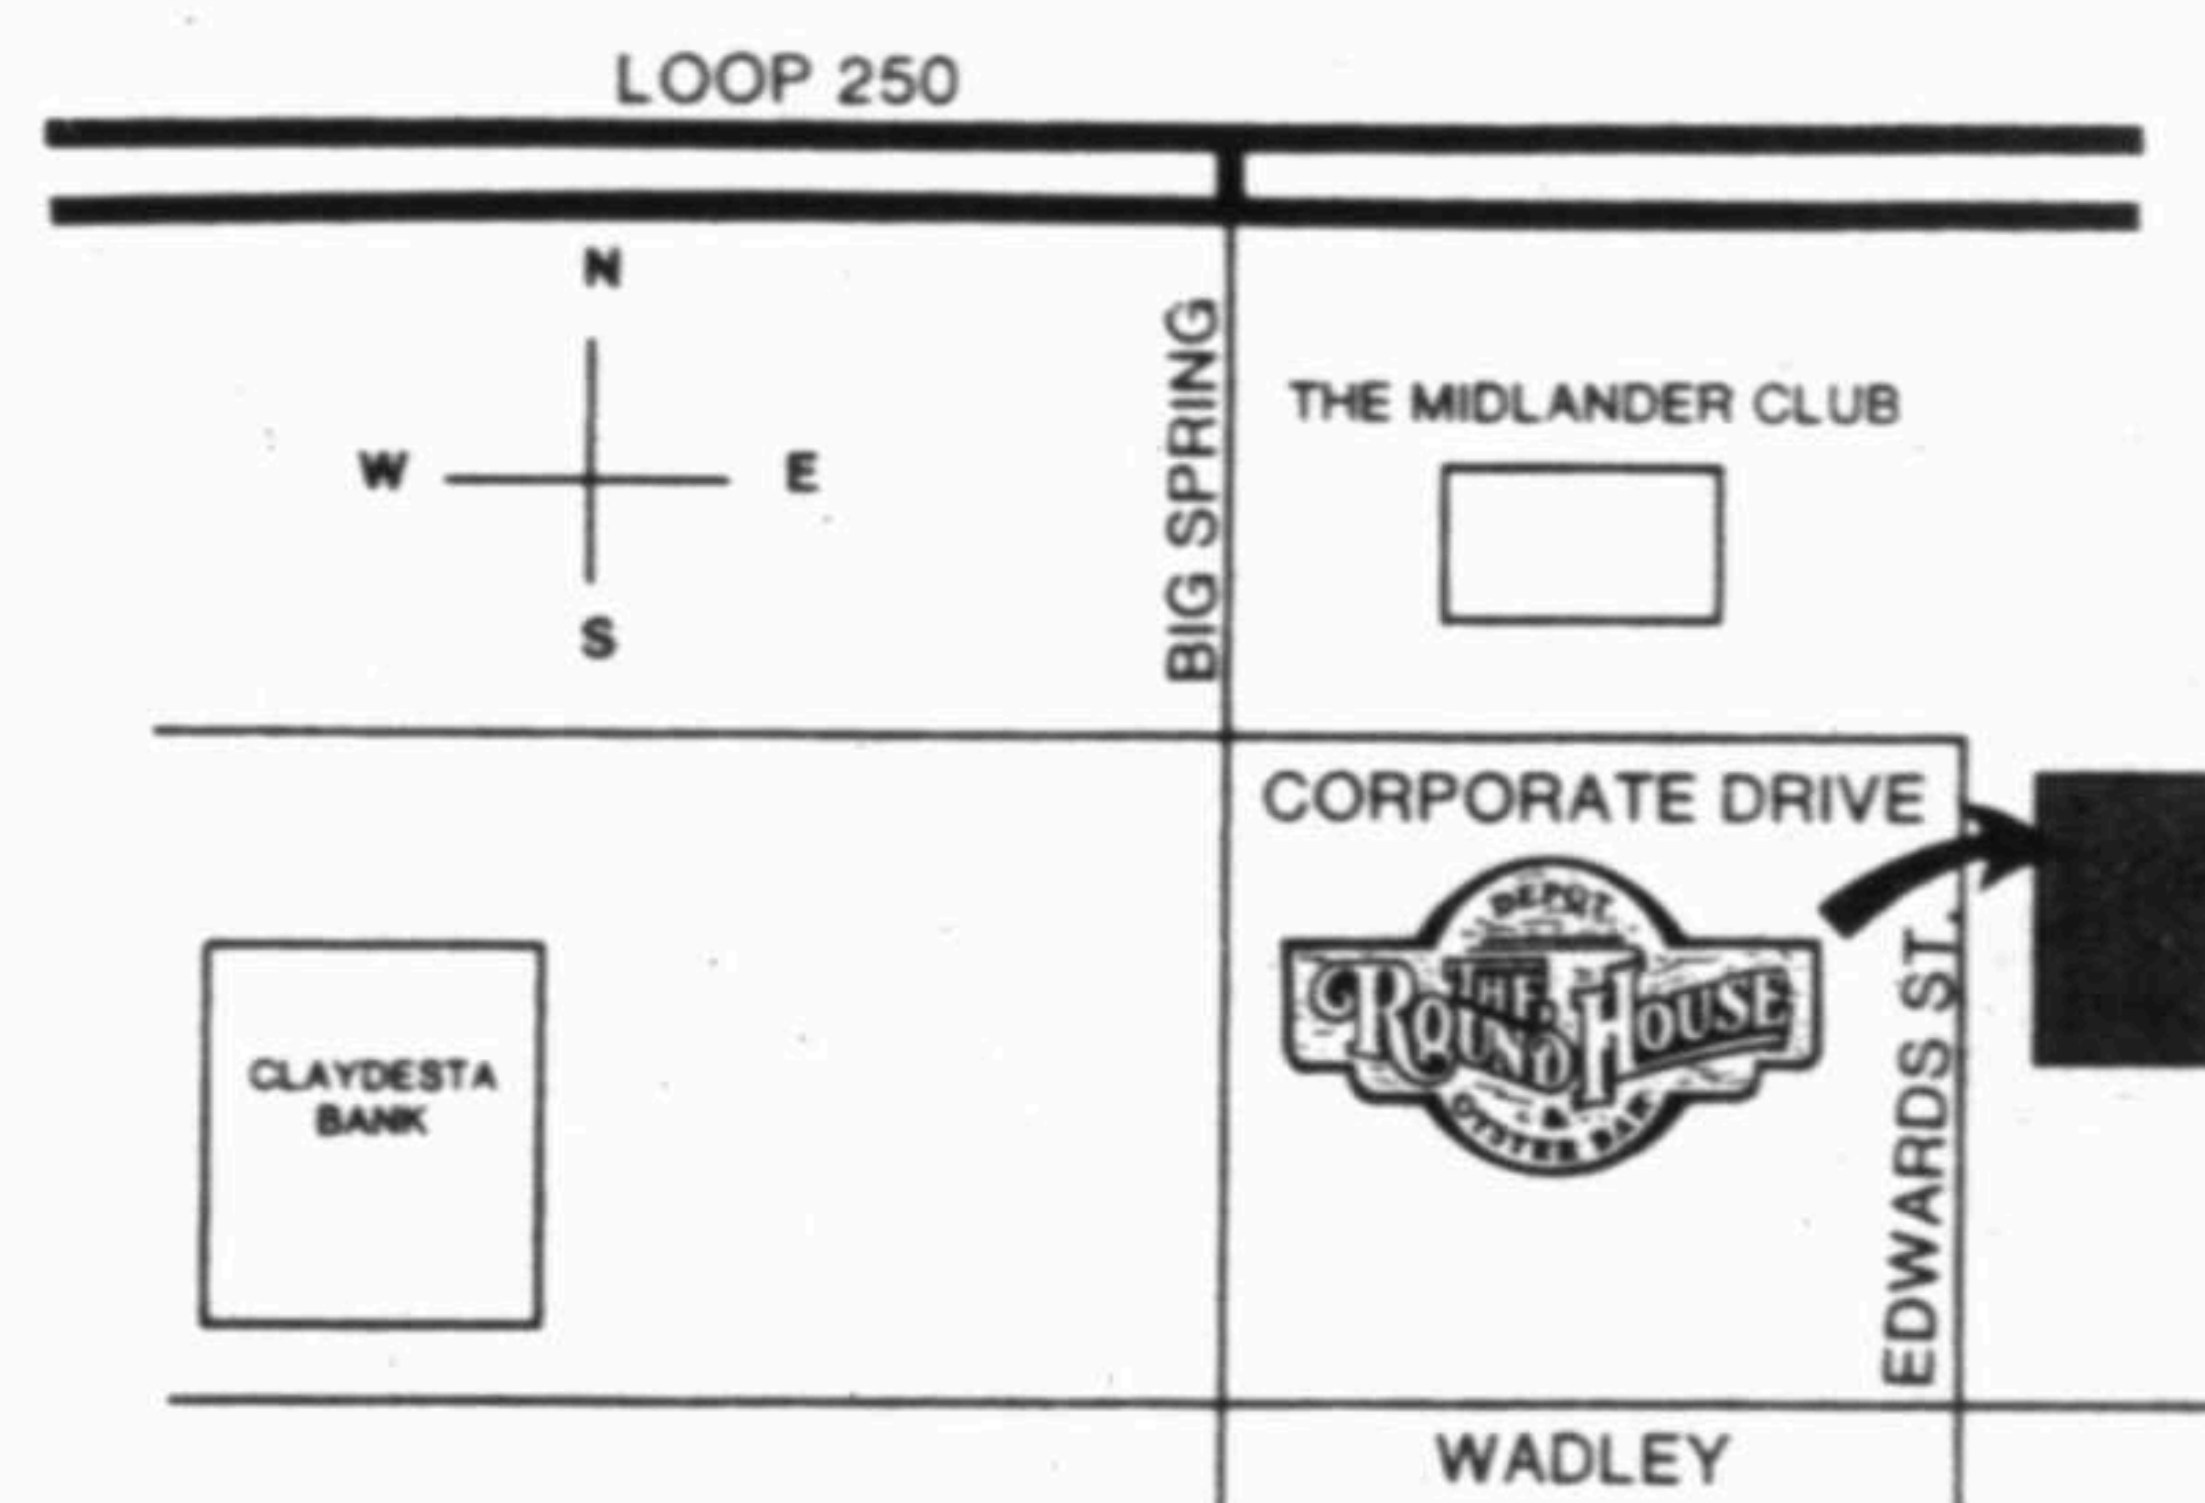

Honasan's whereabouts were unknown. The government-run Philippines News Agency quoted military officials as saying he was believed in Cagayan province. Enrile's political stronghold in northern Luzon.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in early European trading today. Gold was down slightly in Zurich.

Dealers said trading was thin because of a bank holiday in Britain and the Liberation Day holiday in Hong Kong. But they said business could pick up if central banks intervene to support the dollar, as several did last week.

Some dealers said the Bank of Japan intervened "modestly" today. In Tokyo, the dollar rebounded to close at 142.35 yen, up 0.85 yen from Friday's three-month low. Later, in Europe, it was quoted at 142.27.

Dealers in Tokyo said the dollar climbed on weekend news that Iraq had carried out air attacks on Iran's oil facilities and tankers. The U.S. currency is considered a safe haven in times of international tension.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

- 1.8140 West German marks, down from 1.8145
- 1.4955 Swiss francs, unchanged
- 6.0605 French francs, up from 6.0575
- 2.0440 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0445
- 1.3137 Italian lire, up from 1.3132
- 1.3192 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3194

In Europe, the British pound was quoted at $1.6305. It cost 1.6300 dollars to buy one pound in London on Friday.

GOLD

The London gold market was closed for the bank holiday, but in Zurich, the bid price of gold was $453, down slightly from $453.50 late Friday.

Financial institutions were closed in Hong Kong today for Liberation Day.

London silver prices were not available because of the bank holiday.

SEC examining aborted Hutton-Shearson merger

By JAMES STERNGLAND
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Stock Exchange have begun intensive investigations into the merger discussions late last year between the E.F. Hutton Group and the Shearson Lehman Brothers unit of the American Express Co., according to a number of Wall Street sources familiar with the inquiry.

According to these sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified, the key participants in the aborted merger talks, several dozen people in all, have been subpoenaed and questioned at length by both the exchange and the SEC.

Most of these depositions took place around April, but the investigations are continuing, the sources said. The individuals questioned include Robert Ritter, the chief executive of Hutton; Robert Fomon, the chairman at that time, and other senior executives of the securities firm, the sources said.

In addition Peter S. Cohen, chairman of Shearson, and James F. Robinson III, chairman of American Express, and officials at Salomon Brothers (Hutton's adviser in the talks) have been subpoenaed and have provided lengthy depositions, the sources said.

Officials of the Big Board and the SEC declined to confirm the investigation. David Herschberg, vice chairman and general counsel of Shearson, would not comment. Robert Sharkey, a Hutton spokesman, said the company would neither confirm nor deny the existence of the investigation. Fomon, who has since resigned from Hutton, said he would not comment.

The investigation appears to be focusing on two issues, according to the sources, some of whom had been subpoenaed and questioned.

First, the investigators are looking into whether Hutton made adequate and prompt disclosures about the seriousness of the merger talks with Shearson and American Express, which ended after a marathon meeting of Hutton's board on Nov. 8.

Second, they are looking into why the price of Hutton's stock shot up twice in October, after Shearson and American Express had secretly approached Hutton. The sources said the government was trying to determine if any of those involved in the negotiations had leaked confidential details to professional stock traders before there was any public disclosure of the talks.

In the last instance of such a price run-up, on Oct. 29, trading in Hutton's stock opened late because of a huge inflow of buy orders on rumors that Hutton was engaged in talks with Shearson and American Express. The stock rose $4.875 that day, to $62.

Neither company made any announcement then that they had discussed a possible combination. But it was reported at that time in The New York Times, quoting sources who asked not to be identified, that Hutton had been approached by Shearson after having earlier had talks with the finance division of the Chrysler Corp. Questions were later raised about how much Hutton disclosed in November when the talks ended.

Union leaders ponder strike target

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — United Auto Workers union leaders from across the country gathered today to review contract offers from General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. and to choose a 1987 strike target.

The national bargaining committees that have been negotiating with the nation's two largest automakers for five weeks were to report on progress and company offers to a 300-member GM worker council and a 200-member Ford worker council.

The UAW has rejected two GM offers and expressed displeasure with Ford's only offer in a month of bargaining. Both three-year contracts expire at midnight Sept. 14. Chrysler Corp.'s contract doesn't expire until 1988.

A meeting of the UAW's 23-member executive board was scheduled to follow the larger meetings, and to produce the target decision that has been the subject of speculation since long before talks began.

UAW President Owen Bieber acknowledged Saturday that his opinion carries much weight. But the question is discussed until the decision is unanimous.

Bieber said neither company has made an offer that could serve as a basis for a settlement.

The UAW represents 335,000 active GM workers and 104,000 Ford workers, as well as laid-off workers and pensioners.

GM's latest offer would include wage freezes with annual lump-sum payments, eliminate cost-of-living increases at parts plants and allow union locals to negotiate wage cuts at plants GM says are uncompetitive. That proposal is a radical departure from the traditional restriction of wage bargaining to the national level.

Ford's offer would freeze wages, give lump-sum payments during the first year, and require local unions to change work rules and reduce job classifications in plants.

Canadian Auto Workers members, meanwhile, have given their union the authority to call a strike against Canadian subsidiaries of Chrysler, Ford and GM. CAW President Bob White said the union's national executive board will meet Tuesday to decide which company will be the strike target or whether to extend the deadline past Sept. 14, when the current contract expires.

The 60,000-member Canadian union broke away from the UAW in 1985.

In the United States, bargaining will intensify Tuesday with the selected company, which is called the strike target because the union can strike it if no agreement is reached by the deadline.

The other automaker watches from the sidelines and turns out its 1988 models without fear of interruption until the union has reached a settlement with the targeted company. Traditionally, the UAW tries to impose that agreement on the second company.

Heavy tool order news 'disappointing'

By JONATHAN P. HICKS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — New orders for American-made machine tools plummeted 19.7 percent in July from the previous month's level, following strong increases in May and June, according to a report to be released Monday by the National Machine Tool Builders' Association.

The July figures represented a 4.2 percent decline from the comparable period last year. The numbers were particularly disappointing because they followed a 9.4 percent increase in new orders in June and a 44.4 percent increase in May.

The American machine-tool industry, which has been in an unrelenting slump for the last two years, has been battered by foreign competitors with lower-priced products. Also, expansion in the auto industry — a major buyer of machine tools — has not been sufficiently robust to pull tool makers out of their lengthy depression.

The association report expressed optimism that increased exports of machine tools in July might be a harbinger for an upturn for the rest of the year. The report said that exports rose 26.1 percent in July.

Machine tools are power-driven devices used to shape metal parts, from vacuum-cleaner parts to tractor gears. Their sales are an indicator of capital spending by heavy industry.

The trade association said that new orders of machine tools had dropped to $162.8 million in July, from $202.7 million in June. New orders in July were below the $170 million posted in July of 1986.

James A. Gray, president of the association, attributed the results to regular seasonal declines. "At this time of the year, a drop in new orders is characteristic of the machine tool industry, so it is difficult to interpret this month's data," Gray said. "We are hopeful that, as we move into fall, the improving trend that emerged in the late spring and early summer will continue."

F. John Mirek, an analyst with Blunt Ellis & Loewi, in Milwaukee, Wis., said that although the machine-tool industry remained "in pretty bad shape," a small increase in new orders was likely for the remainder of the year. "Quoting activity has picked up, which means that a lot of people are looking at machine tool products, but have not committed themselves," Mirek said.

Gray also expressed optimism about the rest of the year. "With the dollar at a much more realistic level than it has been in many years," he said, "American-made machine tools are becoming more competitive in the international market, a fact reflected in our improving export orders."

Exports of metal-cutting tools increased 8.7 percent while exports of metal-forming tools soared 56.1 percent in July.

"The improved exchange rate," Gray said, "improves our competitive stance in the domestic market as well, with foreign manufactured machine tools no longer the bargain they once were."

Orders for metal-cutting machine tools, including lathes and boring mills, fell 11.1 percent in July, to $102.1 million. Metal-cutting machines account for about two-thirds of the industry.

Hunts vs. their banks: After year, fight goes on DALLAS (AP) — The Hunt brothers realize their $13.8 billion lawsuit against their 23 banks is inflated, and that actual damages might not amount to more than $1.5 billion they originally borrowed, their attorney says.

But even that reduced amount would be enough to erase the Hunts' enormous debt obligation, attorney Stephen Susman said.

The Hunts' allegation that the banks planned to take over their oil and gas empire, violating anti-trust statutes in the process, didn't pan out, Susman said Saturday.

If the banks had planned an industry takeover — and Susman said he would have a difficult time proving that — he believes the suit chilled the plan.

Attorneys from both sides say a jury trial, set for October of next year, will be risky. Finding a solution, however, will involve a compromise strategy that is face-saving, they say.

"The key to settling this case is to figure out a way for the banks to say, 'We got every penny we're entitled to,' and for my clients to say, 'This is just what we wanted,'" Susman said. "We don't want to turn over the keys to the banks. Even if our chances are no more than, say, 20 percent, we really would rather roll the dice."

Attorneys for the banks say they have loan documents signed by brothers Lamar Hunt, William Herbert Hunt and Nelson Bunker Hunt pledging collateral from the William Herbert Hunt Trust Estate and essentially all the domestic reserves and equipment of Placid Oil Co.

The Hunts defaulted on the loans; that fact is not in dispute. So the banks filed a countersuit to demand payment. The banks argued that the court can decide whether they acted fraudulently after the Hunts pay them what they're due.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders denied the banks' demand for payment, saying that it was too early to tell if the Hunts' accusations were credible, and that if they were, they would not be obligated to pay.

Sanders, who left the case in May after a bank whose stock he owned was purchased by a defendant bank, left the door open for his successor, U.S. District Judge A. Joe Fish, to rule anew.

In late July, the banks submitted another petition saying four months of depositions had strengthened their side in the dispute.

But the Hunts say, despite the signatures on the loan documents, the banks made oral promises to restructure the loans if the Hunts got into trouble. To add further complexity, the two sides are fighting in bankruptcy court, too.

Both the trust estate and Placid Oil filed Chapter 11 petitions a year ago, and both have submitted plans to repay the billions in debt.

As with the civil case, the banks have consistently tried to deal the Hunts a legal death blow. So far, it hasn't worked.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Airlines agree to halt late flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six major airlines have signed a consent agreement requiring them to shift schedules to eliminate the number of chronically late flights at four of the nation's busiest airports.

Industry sources said the Transportation Department, in a campaign to reduce the soaring number of delays, had threatened the carriers with stiff civil penalties for flights that are repeatedly late.

Under the agreement announced Friday by the department, the airlines promised to adjust schedules at four airports at Hartsfield Atlanta, Chicago O'Hare, Dallas-Fort Worth and Boston Logan airports.

The airlines signing the agreement were: Eastern, American, Continental, United, USAir and Delta.

Newmont updates gold reserves

NEW YORK (AP) — Newmont Mining Corp. said it had updated estimates of its geologic gold reserves and gold production because of investor requests, not in order to make the company more expensive for any unwanted suitor.

The mining and energy company, which faces a possible takeover threat from an investor group led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., said Friday that a letter to shareholders stated that its proven and probable gold reserves rose to about 14 million ounces by the end of July, from 12.3 million at year-end 1986.

Chevron sued over 'sour' grapes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The prestigious French winery Chateau Phelan-Segur is suing Chevron Chemical Co. for more than $57 million damages, claiming the company supplied an insecticide that made three entire vintages smell like rotten vegetables.

The suit filed in San Francisco Superior Court against the Chevron Corp. subsidiary accused the defendant's Orthene 50 of rendering the 1983, 1984 and 1985 vintages so foul that they were "undrinkable and unmarketable."

Chevron officials said the problem may lie in the winemaking process.

Monstano cleared of dioxin exposure

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court absolved Monsanto Co. of knowingly exposing seven workers to dioxin, but found the chemical giant guilty of risking a worker's health with a second chemical.

The opinion Friday by a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a Charleston jury's 1985 findings in the test case.

The jury rejected workers' claims that Monsanto knew the dangers of dioxin when employees at its Nitro plant were exposed to the chemical in the 1950s and 1960s.

Home building buoys economy

From Staff Reports

Summer strength in the residential building sector pushed total valuations of new construction in the city ahead of last year's total at this time.

July's 29 permits for new homes followed 21 permits being issued in June, putting the two-month total at 50, nearly double the 29 permits issued during the same two months of 1986, according to figures released by the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Economic Development Department.

The total value of building permits issued by the city in the first seven months of the year stands at almost $149 million, about 4.7 percent more than the $142 million issued between January and July last year.

Financial indicators and airline boardings also showed improvement in July. Savings and loan deposits, totaling $867.3 million, are more than 45 percent ahead of 1986, while bank deposits of $1.465 billion are about 1.1 percent above last year.

Boardings at Midland Regional Airport were about 5,000 more than last July, putting year-to-date boardings ahead of 1986 for the first time this year.

The Pope's visit to the U.S.

Pope John Paul II's 10-day visit to the U.S., which starts in Miami on Sept. 10, will include nine cities and is expected to cost host dioceses $20 million. Press rooms, busses and phones for reporters traveling with the pope will be an additional $2 million and $5.7 million will be spent by the Secret Service on security, as the pope is considered a head of state.

ITINERARY AND COST OF THE POPE'S U.S. TRIP

Jewish leaders, Vatican officials discuss relations

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Jewish leaders and Vatican officials today opened talks aimed at improving relations strained by Pope John Paul II's audience with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim.

The nine-member Jewish delegation began daylong meetings at the Vatican with Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, president of the Holy See's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews.

On Tuesday, the Jewish leaders will meet with the pope at his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo near Rome.

During a lunch break today, delegation leader Rabbi Mordecai Waxman told reporters the talks had been "optimistic and friendly."

"The discussions were on very fundamental issues," said Waxman, chairman of the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations. "The meeting seems to be coming to positive conclusions."

"There is positive interest in both sides to make this meeting work in a significant way," Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, a member of the Jewish delegation said today before the talks began.

"Both sides are showing a sense of responsibility, and I think that augurs well for our discussions," said Tanenbaum, director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee.

Jewish leaders said the Waldheim audience and the Vatican's withholding of formal diplomatic recognition of Israel were among the main issues to be covered.

Waldheim has been accused of involvement in deportation of Jews while serving as a German army officer in World War II, and barred from visiting the United States. He denies the allegations.

In an interview last week, Tanenbaum said the Waldheim affair "triggered extremely widespread and spontaneous anger and resentment of Jewish communities all over the world."

"The atmosphere has become terribly filled with misunderstanding and strain, and a lot of passion is in the air, with extremist things being said on both sides," he said. "We felt it was urgent ... not to allow (Catholic-Jewish relations) to become jeopardized by the fallout from the Waldheim affair."

The meeting with the pope had been set as a precondition for Jewish leaders for their participation in a ceremony in Miami on Sept. 10, at the start of the pope's nine-day U.S. tour.

Tanenbaum said "unless there is some major setback" in the talks, mainstream Jewish leaders now plan to attend the Miami meeting as well as interfaith gatherings in other cities.

Jewish leaders said tensions have eased following publication earlier this month of the pope's statement praising the Jewish people and citing the "terrifying experience" of the Holocaust and its lessons for Christians.

Jewish leaders said other issues they will bring up are Vatican relations with Israel, anti-Semitism and church attitudes and teachings on Jews, Judaism and the Holocaust.

The Vatican has never formally explained why it has not established diplomatic ties with the Jewish state, but Vatican officials have cited Israel's unsettled borders and the status of Jerusalem as major obstacles.

Other members are Dr. Gerhard Riegner of Geneva, vice president of the World Jewish Congress; Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Dr. Geoffrey Wigoder of the Israel Interfaith Committee; Seymour Reich, president of B'nai B'rith International; Rabbi Leon Kleinkopf, director of international cooperation, Anti-Defamation League; Rabbi Henry Siegman, executive vice president of the American Jewish Congress; and Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America.

Visit inspires interest in priesthood

DETROIT (AP) — The pope's U.S. visit next month is already inspiring more interest in the priesthood in some parts of the country, according to spokesmen for several of the nation's dioceses, which are scrambling for successors to an aging clergy.

In Detroit, where Pope John Paul II will end his nine-day visit Sept. 19, a $300,000 advertising campaign to recruit new priests, launched just before the visit was announced, has been rescheduled to coincide with his appearance.

"We're trying to get out of it what we can," said the Rev. John West, archdiocese vocations director.

Using the same advertising firm, N.W. Ayer, that created widely praised ads for the U.S. military, the archdiocese has purchased radio and television spots, billboards, and full-page newspaper and magazine ads that extol the virtues of priesthood.

"We're looking to collar a few good men," reads the caption on a full-page ad featuring three clean-cut young men — one white, one black and one Hispanic.

"We're getting two or three times as many inquiries (into priesthood) than we normally would," West said. "Some aren't even Catholic."

Some dioceses say they are still reaping the benefits of the pope's 1979 visit, although interest hasn't necessarily translated into more priests.

"Within a year we doubled our number of seminarians" from 10 to 20, said the Rev. Phil Kruse, vocations director for the archdiocese of Des Moines, Iowa.

Since that initial jump, enrollment has averaged 16 students, six above normal, he said.

"That's a lot for our little rural diocese," he said, adding that new seminary students "who were in fifth and sixth grade when the pope came still make mention of it."

The Rev. Thomas Crowley, associate pastor at St. Augustine Church in Des Moines, said he decided to become a priest during the pope's October 1979 trip after witnessing an outdoor papal mass as a freshman at Creighton University.

"There was just a good feeling. The weather was bad. When the pope arrived, the sun came out," he said.

The Rev. Frank Silva didn't assume his post as vocations director for the archdiocese of Boston until three years after the pope's visit to that city, but he said applicants to jobs still refer to the event.

"I wouldn't be surprised if even here in Boston we'll be getting calls left and right," he said, even though the city isn't on the pope's itinerary.

But papal visits also seem to stir only temporary enthusiasm in the priesthood, some officials said.

In Philadelphia, also a stop on the pope's 1979 itinerary, there was a sharp jump in inquiries about lay positions, and a smaller increase in inquiries about the priesthood, said Monsignor James McGottigan, Philadelphia archdiocese vocations director.

However, he said seminary enrollment numbers remained about the same. "We can't tell if his visit was an impetus to some," he said.

Although the drop in the number of priests has been relatively slight, from 36,419 in 1966 to 35,156 last year, the number of Catholics has climbed 14 percent during that period, said Carl Eifert, a spokesman for the national Roman Catholic Church Headquarters of the U.S.
