PLO leader alive

TUNIS, Tunisia — Yasser Arafat was found alive in the Libyan Desert early Wednesday, nearly 12 hours after his Russian-built private airplane crash-landed in a sandstorm, officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization said here. Three of the 13 people aboard the plane were killed in the crash. The dead were identified as two Palestinian pilots and a technician. Arafat, 62, the chairman of the PLO, talked to his headquarters in Tunis shortly after a patrol from a desert training camp at Sarra in southern Libya found him bruised but not seriously injured./8A

Anderson cited

WASHINGTON — Terry Anderson, The Associated Press reporter held hostage in Lebanon for nearly seven years, will receive a $245,500 cash award from The Freedom Forum, Chairman Allen H. Neuharth announced Wednesday. Anderson was designated the first recipient of the group's Free Spirit Award and will receive $100 for each of the 2,455 days he spent in captivity, Neuharth said. The award, he said, "is designed to focus attention on the long, hard battle that Terry fought and won to keep his spirit free. Terry Anderson's uplifting spirit for 2,455 days provided a dramatic example of what free spirit means," Neuharth said in remarks prepared for delivery before the Radio-Television News Directors Foundation. "His captors held him hostage but they could not imprison his spirit."

Silence is golden

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. — Actress Polly Holliday, who portrayed the shrill, talkative Southern waitress Flo on the television show "Alice," told Georgia College drama students to use silence to discover themselves. Ms. Holliday told the students Tuesday to set aside 30 minutes a day to quietly ponder where they fit in the grand scheme of life. "You must have silence. This is where your imagination takes over," she said. Ms. Holliday spent four years in the late 1970s as the red-haired, wisecracking Flo, who had a fondness for shouting "Kiss my grits!"

Election timing creates considerable confusion

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The timing of elections this year has created confusion among voters — and it may only get worse, an official said Wednesday.

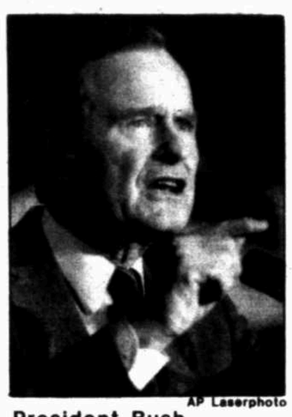

Two days remain in early voting for the Midland County Republican primary runoff, with the election set for Tuesday. As of poll closing time Wednesday, 2,492 people had voted.

But even before the county races are decided, early voting for another election is slated to start. City, hospital and local school races go to voters beginning Monday.

So Tuesday, while county runoff voters are at various polling places making their choices, the county elections office will host the second day of early voting in the city election.

Feds alter natural-gas industry pipeline rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government ordered increased competition Wednesday in the natural-gas industry, issuing rules that substantially change the way gas pipeline companies do business.

The action by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission immediately was praised by President Bush as a major step toward allowing competitive market forces to dictate natural-gas prices and supplies.

The new requirements "will help to create a competitive, nationwide gas market ... that will provide ample supplies of clean-burning natural gas for heating homes, running factories and powering cars and

'I have AIDS,' Ashe says

Virus hits tennis great via blood transfusion

■ Former U.S. Open, Wimbledon champion reluctantly, emotionally discloses he has disease.

By William C. Rhoden
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Arthur Ashe, the former U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion and a pioneer in sports and social issues, said Wednesday that he had contracted AIDS, apparently from a blood transfusion, and that he has known about his condition for more than three years.

Accompanied by his wife, Jeanne, Mayor David N. Dinkins, a close friend, three physicians, and his attorney, Ashe told reporters at an emotional news conference in midtown Manahattan that doctors informed him he had the disease after he underwent brain surgery in September 1988.

The surgery was performed in an effort to determine the cause of a sudden paralysis in one arm. A biopsy revealed the presence of toxoplasmosis, a parasitic infection that often indicates an AIDS infection.

Blood tests confirmed he was infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Ashe previously had undergone cardiac-bypass operations in 1979 and again in 1983. He said Wednesday that the virus had been transmitted through blood

Researchers uncover a reason.

Scientists expose cause for beer belly

BOSTON (AP) — At last, science has found an explanation for one of the obvious effects of drinking too much — the beer belly.

Swiss researchers report that when people drink alcohol, their bodies burn up fat much more slowly than usual. And any fat that isn't burned is stored in the paunch, the thighs or other places where people tend to put on weight.

The study suggests it isn't just the calories in alcohol that make it fattening. It's the way alcohol throws off the body's normal disposal of fat in the diet.

"This is one good explanation of why people get fat drinking alcohol," said Dr. Clifton Bogardus of the National Institutes of Health.

The study was based on an experiment in which people were put on a diet that included about 3 ounces of pure alcohol a day. This much alcohol — about six shots of whiskey or six beers — reduced their bodies' burning of fat by about one-third.

The study, directed by Dr. Paolo M. Suter of the University of Zurich, was being published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The research is one more piece of a larger idea to emerge from recent investigation of how people get fat or stay thin. It seems that fat is what makes people fat.

When people eat extra carbohydrates — sugar or starch — they tend to burn most of it, adding little to their girth. But the body burns extra fat sparingly and instead

Daughters, business were focus of Tower's life during final days

EDITOR'S NOTE: John Tower was often contradictory and always controversial. But when he died a year ago, his remarkable legacy was all but lost in the plane crash that killed him. Last of a five-part series.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — For three decades, Texas Sen. John Tower and former Speaker of the House Jim Wright and occasionally Gov. John Connally were the hits of the Fort Worth Gridiron Show, the annual spoof by local journalists.

Traditionally, Wright would be recognized as one who walks with royalty but remains a friend of the little man. Then Tower would be introduced as "the little man."

"Please stand, senator," the roastmaster would intone. When Tower arose, he would be told again to stand. Tower would reply with an obscene gesture.

When the nomination turned sour, stories of Tower's early Gridiron antics surfaced in print. A dubious honor perhaps, but he was the only public figure ever invited to the "after-after" parties.

So named for the bashes after the cast party, they often were raunchy affairs, lasting all night and occasionally attracting uninvited guests, such as the police.

Cast members smuggled the tipsy senator through the grasp of one such raiding party.

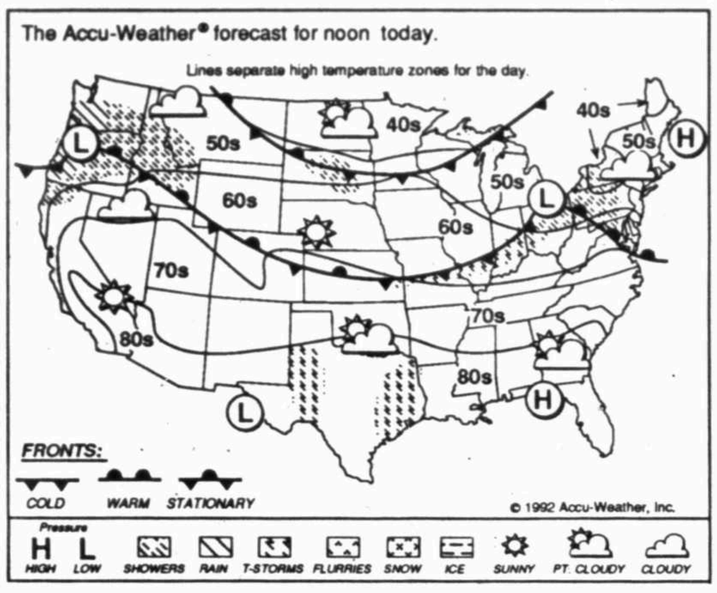

"It would not be much of an overstatement to say that the press is either at your feet or at your throat," Tower said.

It was at a media party in Dallas that a

ASHE: Tennis great discloses he has AIDS

(From 1A)

transfusions, most likely after the second operation.

Reading from a three-page prepared statement, Ashe alluded to "rumors and half-truths" he felt existed about his health for the last several years.

"Beginning with my admittance to New York hospital for brain surgery in September 1988, some of you heard that I had tested positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. That is indeed the case," said Ashe, who won the first U.S. Open in 1968 and Wimbledon in 1975 and became the most prominent black male tennis player in history.

Ashe, 48, said he decided to make the announcement Wednesday after a reporter from USA Today called to ask about rumors that he was suffering from the disease.

And while not blaming the newspaper, he said he was angered about what he considered to be an intrusion into his privacy.

"I am angry that I was put in the position of having to lie if I wanted to protect my privacy," said Ashe, who works for HBO and ABC Sports as a tennis commentator. He also writes an occasional column for the Washington Post.

"Obviously, I operate in the role of press myself, so I understand it," he said. "Still, I didn't commit any crime. I'm not running for public office. I should be able to reserve the right to keep things like that private. After all, the doctor-patient and lawyer-patient relationships are private."

Ashe's disclosure is the second time in five months that a major sports figure has publicly stated that he has been infected with the virus that causes AIDS.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson announced his retirement from professional basketball last November, saying he had become infected through heterosexual intercourse.

Johnson's doctors say he has not developed the actual disease. However, Ashe and his doctors said Wednesday that he is suffering from AIDS itself.

Ashe said he had chosen to conceal the disease from all but a close circle of family and friends because "any admission of HIV infection at that time would have seriously, permanently and — my wife and I believe — unnecessarily infringed upon our family's right to privacy.

"Just as I'm sure everyone in this room has some personal matter he or she would like to keep private, so did we," Ashe said. "There was certainly no compelling medical or physical necessity to go public with my medical condition.

"What I came to feel about a year ago was that there was a silent and generous conspiracy to assist me in maintaining my privacy," he said, still reading from the statement. Then speaking about his wife and 5-year-old daughter, he said, "This has meant a great deal to me and Jeanne and Camera."

Charles Pasarell, a former top-ranking American player and one of Ashe's closest friends for more than 35 years, confirmed that Ashe had told him about the disease shortly after he had tested positive three years ago.

Another longtime friend and former player, Cliff Drysdale, also said he knew.

STOMACH: Research reveals cause of beer belly saves it away.

Of course, not everyone who drinks gets a spare tire. It depends on what they eat. Beer guzzlers and whiskey drinkers who subsist on hamburgers and potato chips will almost certainly put on pounds, while vegetarian wine sippers do not.

The Swiss study found that alcohol suppresses the body's already-stingy disposal of fat. Just why this happens is unclear. The body may simply prefer to burn alcohol first, or alcohol may have some other effect on metabolic processes in the liver.

The finding "points to the fact that energy balance over the long term has a lot more to do with fat balance than anything else we eat," Bogardus said. "The main way to stay thin is not to eat fat."

The study was conducted on eight healthy men during two sessions. In one, alcohol made up 25 percent of their calories, but their total daily calories did not change. In the other, they drank enough alcohol to increase their daily calories by 25 percent.

On both diets, the men's bodies burned about one-third fewer fat calories when they drank alcohol.

The study reached one modestly positive conclusion: People who substituted alcohol for other food but did not increase their daily calories actually burned up slightly more calories overall than when not drinking. The reason appears to be that alcohol boosts the metabolism.

This finding provides a strategy for drinking without putting on flab.

"If somebody wants to drink socially and avoid gaining weight, he should have a substitution strategy — substitute fat calories for alcohol," said Suter.

However, this is hard to do. And Bogardus noted that people doing this might still put on extra fat, even if they actually weigh less.

"You'd end up with a slightly different body composition," he said.

The study found that while on the alcohol substitution diet, people burned up 875 fat calories, instead of their normal 1,291 fat calories. They also burned slightly less carbohydrate, a bit more protein and all of the 680 alcohol calories they consumed each day.

VOTE: Multiple elections may cause confusion overlap," said Bettye Calvert, elections administrator. "We've gotten close before. But I know it must be confusing for some people."

(From 1A)

In the county elections, Precinct 1 Commissioner Durward Wright faces challenger Henry Goulet in a runoff for the seat. Only residents of that precinct are eligible to vote in the election.

For district judge, George D. "Jody" Gilles and Robin Malone Sams are battling in the runoff. Early voting for those two races continues at the elections office, 709 W. Washington Ave., from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Friday.

Even the city-school-hospital election alone could be called confusing, because the various districts involved required 14 different ballots be prepared.

At the city level, elections will decide the mayor — chosen by city residents from a field of four candidates. They are: J.D. Faircloth, Robynne Fuller, Don Kyser and Michael Trost.

City Council single-member Districts 3 and 4 will be determined as well. In District 3, candidates are Buddy Sipes and Hugh White. For District 4, they are Claudia Egan, Tom Johnston and James Radtke.

Midland Independent School District trustees in two districts will be decided. In District 7, the challengers are Michael Dobey, Wayne "Woody" Woodside and Lex K. Crawford. In District 1, incumbent James Fuller is unopposed.

In the Greenwood Independent School District, Tim Outlaw and Vicki Moody seek Place 1, while Johnny Womack faces Rick Jones for Place 2.

In the Midland County Hospital District, Jo Ann Viney alone seeks the District 3 spot, while Jean Pittman seeks District 4 unopposed. Charles Coffman and Larry Lawrence are battling for the District 7 seat.

Midland College trustee candidates include William Howard, uncontested in Place 3, and Charlene Romero Wurtz alone in Place 6. Competing for Place 2 are Mrs. John W. (Joann) Foster, Allen Wesley Bryant and Norma Viney Burke. For Place 1, Steven Kiser will meet Kevin Skipper.

Early voting begins Monday, continuing from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays through April 28. The election is set for May 2.

COMPETE: Feds alter natural gas pipeline rules

(From 1A)

trucks," said Bush in a statement.

The new rules, which had been eagerly awaited by the natural-gas industry, would for the first time allow pipeline companies not only to transport natural gas, but also sell gas at negotiated rates, competing with unregulated gas suppliers.

At the same time, the pipeline companies must provide transportation services equal in quality to all gas supplies, whether a customer purchases from the pipeline company or another supplier.

"This ensures that gas buyers have greater access to the competitive wellhead market," said FERC Chairman Martin Allday.

The new regulations, which are expected to substantially restructure the natural gas distribution and marketing industry, has been in the works for many months. Allday said general agreement on the rules was reached late Tuesday and it was given final approval by commission members Wednesday.

Bush called the action a major step toward removing "unnecessary regulatory barriers" that have inhibited the expansion of the natural-gas industry. In significance, he compared it to the 1989 government action that abolished price controls on producers of natural gas.

Allday predicted that the opening of the natural-gas transportation system to increased competition will "ensure that consumers have an adequate supply of natural gas at reasonable prices for the foreseeable future."

"We are elated," said Nicholas Bush, president of the Natural Gas Supply Association, which represents gas producers. The group had fought hard for rules that would provide suppliers wider access to pipelines. "Now the industry can continue the progression towards a more competitive environment."

Others were more cautious.

"There's no doubt that this new regulatory framework presents us with a whole new series of challenges," said Michael Baly 3rd, president of the American Gas Association, which represents natural gas distribution companies.

But Baly said the industry welcomed "the end of the uncertainty" and the expected emergence "of a stronger market-based industry."

DRIVE: Museum launches campaign for expenses

(From 1A)

"We have had tremendous support from individuals," Ms. Hagman said. However, this year's campaign does differ from those held in the past.

"This is the first year we have put every facet of our development plan into one program and have condensed all our fund raising into one time period," she said. "We are looking for corporate and business support in monies and in 'in-kind support' as well as individual support. In the past, we have not done much with corporate and business support. This year, that is where our real thrust will be."

Ms. Hagman gave as examples of "in-kind support" a copier and maintenance agreement from American Business Machines and the upgrading of another copier at the facility by G.M.S.

In addition, Dimension Cable is presenting two classic cinema series at the museum. One is designed for children, the other for senior citizens.

Both are in conjunction with American Movie Classics and begin April 30. Another main purpose of "Discover!" is to increase public awareness of the facility's services and programs.

"We want people to rediscover the museum, or discover it if they haven't been here yet," said Susan Zellars, "Discover" campaign manager and financial manager for the museum.

A non-profit organization organized as a public trust, the museum's focus lies in three areas — art, archaeology and astronomy.

The Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum and the Marian Blakemore Planetarium are located in the museum complex.

The museum has tripled its size in the past five years, Ms. Zellars said.

The facility is "one of 16 in the nation that has made it this far in the accreditation process," said Lee Majors, a member of the board of trustees. "We are one of the top 700 museums in the nation."

Accreditation is acquired through the American Association of Museums. Requirements to receive accreditation are based on the museum having achieved two goals: professionalism and financial stability.

The latter includes financial management and having a reasonable endowment fund in place.

Ms. Zellars also announced that the Abell-Hanger Foundation has offered the museum a matching grant of $50,000.

"We only have to raise $100,000 to get that," Ms. Zellars said. "It's a great opening to kick off the campaign." The museum's annual budget is $800,000. In addition to the annual campaign drive, the money is raised through grants, memberships and two fund raisers conducted by the facility's auxiliary organization, Las Manos. Those events are the annual Septemberfest and an auction held once every three years.

The next auction is set for 1993.

Those associated with the museum hope to continue the practice of not charging admission. When the Children's Museum opened, a $1 admission was charged. That admission is no longer in effect.

"We had 20 a week who turned away due to the admission," Ms. Hagman said. "That adds up in a year."

More than 167,000 people visited the museum last year, she said.

More than 30,000 children visited the museum for school tours and sky shows in 1991. A "Kids Count Campaign" is being conducted in conjunction with the "Discover!" campaign.

"Children will be raising money," Ms. Hagman said. "MISD and Trinity have OK'd soliciting through homeroom classes. The winning homeroom will have a party in the Children's Museum."

It also was announced that the museum has recently received as gifts two paintings from private art collections owned by individuals living outside the Permian Basin. Those paintings are Frank Reed Whiteside's "Zuni Pueblo" from Peggy and Harold Samuels of New Mexico, and Willard Nash's "Portrait of a Lady" from James McClary of California. Majors attributed the acquisition of these two paintings to the museum "growing in recognition as a regional museum."

The campaign includes "Discover! Week," set for April 12-18.

Activities are scheduled to begin with an "Arts Association Demonstration Day" planned from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. This free event offers the public the opportunity to watch artists work and to ask them questions.

Other activities and exhibitions planned at the museum this month include:

■ Lecture by Dr. E. Mott Davis, professor emeritus of the Department of Anthropology of The University of Texas at Austin, on "Archaeological Culture Shock — An American Archaeologist on a Roman Site," at 7:30 p.m. today, presented by the Midland Archaeological Society and the museum, free.

■ "Face Fantasia" for children 4-7, includes the history of mask-making and the opportunity to create masks, Saturday, cost $7.50 members and $9 for non-members.

■ "Brown-Bag Lunch Program," "Discover!" presented by Gary Hood, museum curator, 12:15 p.m. April 15. Museum furnishes free coffee and tea.

■ "Little Explorers" for children 4-7, explore the world of archaeology, April 25, cost $7.50 members and $9 for non-members.

■ On display "New Museum Acquisitions from Major Private Art Collections," Friday through April 30.

■ Exhibition "Spotlights: Paintings by Dick Mason," April 18-May 31.

■ Exhibition "Student Art Festival," April 25-May 18.

SPELL: Globetrotters weave magic

other guy's shorts up?"

Globetrotter Michael "Memphis" Douglas, who was wired for sound, kept the crowd laughing throughout the first half as he yanked members of the crowd onto the floor and danced with them, harassed the referees, sat on the laps of many female audience members and threw a vendor's cotton-candy into the crowd.

"I can't even believe he grabbed that guy's cotton-candy and gave it away. I bet that guy's mad," said 7-year-old Ashley Rowhart, seemingly unaware that the vendor was playing along with the act.

Douglas talked non-stop throughout the first half and at one point approached a local television cameraman, waved and exposed one referee's middle-age pouch.

"I wish they would do more slams. But that big, tall guy is good. How come they don't give him the ball more?" said Billy Jackson, 7. "That other team is no good."

The Globetrotters boast an undefeated record against their longtime nemesis, the Washington Generals. The Generals follow the team across the country. Tuesday night, the teams squared off in Amarillo.

"I wonder if those guys (the Generals) are letting them win. It's like they miss shots on purpose or something. And when they do that passing back-and-forth thing real fast, I think they could reach in and steal the ball," said 10-year-old Lee Jamison.

Although many of the older children were too focused on who won the game to enjoy the sight-gags and jokes dished out by Douglas, the younger children seemed to take it in stride.

"I think they're funny," said 5-year-old Lisa Bishop. "I think the dancing lady was really funny."

FAMILY: Tower began spending time with daughters near end

(From 1A)

photographer captured the famous picture of Tower bounding about in a Superman suit and muttering such lines as "I was born to play Superman!"

Tower had two running jokes, a perpetually pregnant cat named Filibuster and a 1972 Dodge named "The Green Bullet," which he drove long beyond its lifetime. In 1983 he rescued it from the grave with a $3,000 renovation.

"Welcome Back Bullet," read a banner strung up by his staff in the parking lot of the Russell Senate Building. Aides presented Tower a lamp made from Bullet's old muffler.

"My staff," he said later, "was too damn cheap to bronze the thing."

It was only a few months later that Tower, after conferring for seven hours with Dallas attorney Paul Eggers, made the bombshell decision not to seek a fifth term.

"He went through the pangs of hell," recalled Eggers, who said they debated the pros and cons until 2 a.m. in the senator's Washington office.

As they left that morning, Tower, ever the showman, slapped his pal on the back and said: "This stand I must take. I cannot do otherwise."

On Aug. 23, 1983, Tower and his second wife Lilla Burt Cummings flew to Austin for the announcement at the state capitol. He said at a news conference he did not want to outlive his usefulness and that he was ready "to pursue other avenues of endeavor."

Former campaign manager Ken Towery was in the gallery that day, chewing on a cigar and growing angrier by the minute. He did not believe Tower's explanation and said so.

"I THINK the real reason is sitting at his right arm," he said, glaring at Ms. Cummings.

In a voice rich in defiance, Penny Cook, John Tower's eldest daughter, told a recent visitor to her Dallas office there is something she wants cleared up about her father's death.

"I don't want anyone to have as their last impression of Daddy that he was a beaten or embittered man, because he wasn't."

She recalled the words of Alamo defender William Travis that her father recited each year at his revered Texas Independence Day parties: "I shall never surrender. I shall never retreat."

That, she said, "aptly describes him. He was not a beaten man. He was at a wonderful point in his life."

Ms. Cook, her sister Jeanne Cox and their mother, Lou Tower, contend that Tower had shaken off the devastating events of his last years and was moving ahead.

They, too, are carrying on.

Ms. Cook occupies her father's highrise office overlooking Turtle Creek and serves as chief operating officer of John Tower & Associates Inc., a consulting firm.

Ms. Cox is active in fund-raising for the Tower Library at Southwestern University in Georgetown and the Tower Center for Political Studies at Southern Methodist University.

BUT THERE is one overriding concern.

"All of us are trying to dispel the notion that John was an angry and bitter man," Mrs. Tower said. "He was not. He was in very good spirits and felt very good about himself.

"He was happy and I think it showed."

They said his book served as a catharsis for the confirmation fight, an opportunity to tell his side. It had not been the book he intended to write. He was glad to have it behind him.

"For the first time in his life, he was able to be out in the private sector making money and doing what he wanted to do," Ms. Cox said.

Two Macedonias can be troubling

Greece, the country that introduced Europe to comedy and tragedy, now leads its European Community partners into a shameful diplomatic farce. It's all in the name of the name of Macedonia. Or rather, of two Macedonias.

One Macedonia is a tiny, democratic and unthreatening former Yugoslav republic wedged between Albania, Bulgaria, Greece and Serbia. It has no army and desperately seeks to distance itself from a widening Balkan war. It proclaimed itself independent last November. But its hopes for recognition have been frustrated by Athens.

Greece's objection? That only the other Macedonia, a region of northern Greece, is entitled to use the name.

Greek Macedonia is famous as the birthplace of Alexander the Great, one of ancient history's most successful expansionists. Alexander had very different ideas about name proliferation, leaving behind no less than 10 Alexandrias in various parts of the ancient world to commemorate his greatness. The more Macedonias the better, one might imagine him saying.

But Greece's modern-day leader, Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis, says only no, no, no. For the former Yugoslav territory to use the name Macedonia, his government asserts, constitutes an implicit claim to Greek territory.

Does Mitsotakis seriously argue that Greece, a NATO member and a steady recipient of U.S. military aid, would be threatened if the world let this Slavic mini-state with no army keep calling itself Macedonia?

Perhaps the real issue is not security but pride. That's suggested by the way a Greek diplomat explained the problem to The New York Times' John F. Burns: "This pseudo little republic," he said, "must stop irritating us."

Early in the last century, friends of freedom everywhere supported Greece's heroic struggle to liberate itself from the Ottoman Turks. Today, Greece thwarts the dreams of another Balkan people seeking freedom and peace.

Washington has given its ally's temper tantrum more deference than it deserves. It ought to recognize independent Macedonia without further delay.

ANOTHER VIEW

Bush is correct on support for Russia

Western governments have decided to give Russian President Boris Yeltsin an economic vote of confidence that ex-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev never earned. President Bush correctly has aligned the United States with this effort.

While aid to Russia has been subject to extensive political spin here, there is broad bipartisan agreement that the United States has much at stake in promoting a prosperous and stable Russia.

Should Yeltsin's efforts to reform and improve his national economy fail, it is unclear who or what might replace him at the head of a government still loaded with nuclear weapons and a huge army.

The West has no guarantee that its $24 billion package will assure success of the reform effort. But the prospects are better than ever and timing is crucial.

The president must be forthright about the source of these future funds and the need for them. Bush properly noted that Americans have "an enormous stake" in the success of these fledgling democracies. He must clearly and honestly articulate that interest or risk shortsighted defeat for a U.S. role in this cause.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 9, the 100th day of 1992. There are 266 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, April 9, 1942, during World War II, American and Philippine defenders on Bataan gave up to Japanese forces; the surrender was followed by the notorious "Bataan Death March" that claimed the lives of nearly 10,000 prisoners.

On this date:

In 1682, the French explorer Robert La Salle reached the Mississippi River.

In 1940, Germany invaded Denmark and Norway.

Brown leads ragged left-to-right plan

Will

WASHINGTON — It is exquisite burlesque, Jerry Brown leading tattered remnants of America's hapless left into supporting conservatism's agenda.

Conservatism has rhetorical and fiscal strategies for diminishing government power. One strategy is to peel away government's authority by flaying it rhetorically as an incestuous jumble of corrupt elites incapable of empathy with ordinary people and incompetent at government's basic tasks — budgeting, educating, maintaining public works. Brown's rhetoric abets this strategy.

Brown's flat-tax proposal serves the conservative fiscal goals of reducing government power three ways — by shrinking its revenue base, curtailing its ability to fine-tune society's "fairness," and augmenting the private sector's countervailing power.

For example, Brown would end the deductibility of state and local taxes. This would ignite state tax revolts, particularly in high-tax states such as New York, which have become liberalism's last redoubts.

Brown is not an economic man, he is a moralist, and his tax plan is a measure for political hygiene. He believes, plausibly, that radical simplification of the code would put out of business Washington's swarm of complicators who gain advantages from generally unnoticed nuances in legislation and regulations.

Brown is extreme but not nutty when depicting Washington as a mare's nest of interests bending public power for private advantages. But Brown's moralism stops short of acknowledging this: Today's Washington is what you get when you have a hyperactive modern state using its myriad subsidizing and regulating activities to allocate wealth and opportunity in the name of "fairness" and for the ultimate benefit of elected officials.

Brown disdains his party's recent obsession with the tax code's "fairness." But the correct implication of his critique of Washington is that the modern state is inherently unfair because it is so susceptible to manipulation by well-heeled and well-connected interests. It is axiomatic: He who wills the end, wills the means to that end. If Brown wants the modern state that liberalism has rationalized, he should not be shocked that he gets modern Washington too.

To be on the left is to believe this: The goal of politics is to capture state power to force egalitarian social change. Brown's platform makes this problematic. The left's agenda presupposes a government strong in fiscal resources and moral authority.

Most arguments for progressive taxation are implausible or empirically unsupported. The arguments include: Progressivity is economically efficient because it stimulates rapid expansion of society's aggregate product; in a middle-class society government will not be generous to the poor unless the wealthy are thought to be paying disproportionately; the existence of the poor is caused by the existence of the wealthy.

Belief in progressivity has weakened because of the belief that progressivity is usually vitiated by arcane tax code provisions accessible to the wealthy who can hire experts who understand them.

Flying tourist class presents foreign policy risk

Buchwald

When Secretary of State James Baker decided to fly tourist class on commercial airlines to silence the criticism of his using military aircraft for personal business, it was a noble gesture — and also a dumb one.

No statesman of a superpower should be required to fly in coach no matter what kind of message Secretary Baker is sending to the American taxpayer.

Let's discuss it point by point. Flying tourist class is a security risk. What if, by accident, Baker ate the airline food? You can't expect him to come up with any kind of peace plan for the Middle East and survive a tourist-class Beef Stroganoff at the same time.

The news stories report that the secretary was very pleased with his flight. This is because it was a one-time event. Wait until the next trip when he flies coach and the lady in the adjoining seat asks for his help while she changes her baby's diaper.

Or, worse still, wait until the kid in the row behind him starts hitting him over the head with a Walt Disney bungee stick.

According to the secretary's spokesperson, while flying in coach the secretary received notes from other passengers on U.S. foreign affairs.

It's pretty hard to have a coherent policy when everyone on the plane is giving him advice on what the State Department should do about the Kurds in Turkey.

"Give the money to Israel," "Get the British army out of Northern Ireland" and "Don't forget to bomb Libya" were just some of the suggestions that he received. All these people mean well, but I don't want those who travel on special low-fare airline packages making foreign policy for this country, particularly when many of them don't even know how to fasten their safety belts.

To show the type of people Baker must travel with these days I relate this true story. I was on a flight recently from Paris to Washington when an American passenger opened the overhead compartment and his bag fell on a Japanese gentleman's head.

The Japanese passenger, who was fluent in American curse words, let out a stream of expletives against the American, who could have been a construction foreman on leave from the Middle East.

The American answered (in almost the same language the Japanese gentleman used) that he was not responsible because his bag had been placed there by someone else.

The Japanese man demanded an apology. The American refused.

The other passengers sat frozen in their seats and finally, with the persuasion of the flight attendant, both men returned to their own seats. The Japanese passenger flew the rest of the way with an ice bag on his head. Had Secretary Baker been on board he could have been accused of Japanese bashing.

The flight attendant was not too surprised at the incident because people are behaving strangely on all flights these days.

A few weeks previously she told me that an Arab sheik demanded that she give him a manicure. She tried to explain that flight staff are forbidden to give manicures on transatlantic flights. But he insisted.

She asked him why he expected her to give him a manicure, and he replied, "Because you are a woman and I am a man."

I only tell this story because if Baker had been on the same flight, the sheik could have demanded that Baker take his side. This is the best reason why the secretary should not fly commercial.

Explain security officer

I wish the county commissioners would please explain to us ignorant taxpayers why in this time of budget cutbacks and tax increases, when we don't have enough money to go around for law enforcement for the citizens, we do have enough for the following new position with car:

Job description and requirements for courthouse security office:

- Minimum of five years experience law enforcement experience.
- Minimum intermediate law enforcement certificate. Advanced law enforcement certificate preferred.
- Experience in security operations.
- Currently licensed and certified peace officer.
- Ability to coordinate with other law enforcement agencies and courthouse personnel.
- Ability to develop and implement plan for courthouse security may require (position will be considered exempt from Fair Labor Standards Act).

Job description:

- "Roving" courthouse security officer with general responsibility for courthouse security.
- Responsibility for developing and implementing courthouse security plan and plan for security for other county buildings.
- Maintenance of liaison with other law enforcement and public safety agencies.
- Responsibility for courthouse parking control.
- Responsibility for coordination of security response team.

Related information:

- Salary equivalent to sergeant's pay for deputy sheriff together with educational and certificate incentive pay presently in effect.
- Employee will be directly answerable to commissioners court.
- Employee will be commissioned by district attorney or county attorney.

Taxpayers, ask your commissioner whether the City of Midland and Sheriff's Department already have trained "response teams" aka SWAT or Tactical Teams? Wouldn't another patrol deputy and patrol car be of far more service to the taxpayers? Why the commissioners need a police agency "directly answerable to the commissioners court?"

Who knows! Your County Commissioners' number is 688-1150; it's election time so they might even listen to you!

Bluegrass sounds great

After reading Rhonda Elliott's letter of April 3, I think a Bluegrass Festival in Midland is a great idea. Bluegrass music is a rich part of our American heritage and this community has many elements that would support our efforts.

If you've never been to a bluegrass festival, you're missing a most pleasing experience. People form impromptu groups to play music with each other. Anyone is invited to join and play, regardless of their musical ability. If you get tired of playing with one group, you just move to another. The result is that spectators get to enjoy a wealth of live traditional music.

Besides promoting the music (bluegrass gets little or no air time on commercial radio) the whole community would benefit from the festival. People travel great distances to attend bluegrass festivals. The people drawn to Midland would spend their money in our stores and businesses. Festivals provide a sage and healthy form of entertainment for people of all ages.

For a community known for its support of artistic endeavors, I believe this would be a worthwhile effort. If anyone is interested in this or in forming a local bluegrass organization, feel free to contact me at my home.

Fight federal tax waste

I am tired of reading newspaper stories about deficits, government waste and taxes. It's time to do something about our mismanaged tax dollars. Several Midland area residents are meeting to organize against government taxpayer abuse.

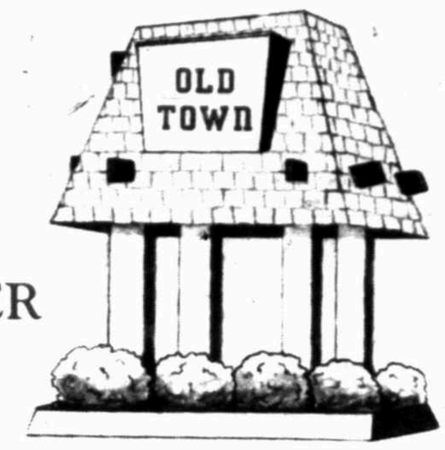

What is taxpayer abuse? The Census Bureau estimates that 71 percent of Americans have no money for savings, charity or entertainment after paying for food, clothing, shelter and, of course, taxes!

That's taxpayer abuse! In fact, the average taxpayer in the Midland area loses 44 percent of his or her income to some form of taxation. The American Revolution was fought over a $3 a year tax! Our local taxpayer's action network group will work with the Council for Citizens Against Government Waste (CCAGW) in Washington, D.C., to fight the scandal of government waste and mismanagement at all levels of government and promote sensible tax relief for area residents. CCAGW is the anti-government waste lobbying group co-chaired by J. Peter Grace, who served as chairman of the Grace Commission, and syndicated columnist Jack Anderson.

If anyone would like to join our organization in the fight against mismanagement in local, state and federal government, call me at 686-9640 for details on our next meeting.

Arafat survives after plane belly-lands during sandstorm

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Yasser Arafat, who has survived gun battles, air raids and assassination attempts as leader of the Palestinian cause, walked away Wednesday after his plane made a belly-landing during a desert sandstorm.

PLO officials said three of the five crew aboard were killed when the plane's nose plowed into a hill.

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi made a bedside visit with Arafat on Wednesday night at a hospital in Misratah, 120 miles east of Tripoli. Libyan TV showed Arafat, lying with a bandaged right eye, smiling and chatting with Gadhafi, who embraced him.

"We have treated him fully and comprehensively," Dr. Muftah al-Shwayhidi said. "His health is excellent."

Bassam Abu Sharif, a close adviser, said Arafat should be healthy enough today to preside over a session of the PLO's 80-member, policy-making Central Council.

In a televised interview with a Libyan reporter, Arafat thanked Gadhafi for having "mobilized the whole state" to find him. He said the two pilots and engineer were killed and five others badly hurt. Others on the plane suffered minor injuries or escaped unhurt, he said.

Rescue spares administration a tough choice

By Marcia Kunstel and Julia Malone
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The recovery of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat from a desert crash-landing Wednesday spared the Bush administration from a sticky decision on whether to help find him.

"The question of assistance was being discussed, but before there was an answer, there was a solution," said an administration official who asked not to be identified.

National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft had ordered "various agencies" to look into providing help, the official said, after former President Jimmy Carter phoned the White House Situation Room to relay a plea for aid from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The PLO headquarters in Tunis had asked Carter to transmit their request for a "humanitarian" satellite search for the downed jet, according to a Carter spokeswoman. The plane crashed in a sand storm near the border of Libya and Sudan and went missing for 15 hours.

The U.S. government broke formal contacts with the PLO in 1990, so the group could not make a direct request to Washington.

The situation is so diplomatically sensitive that PLO advisor Bassam Abu-Sharif's thank you to the Bush administration "for helping us in spotting that plane" drew repeated and vehement denials from the State Department that any aid had been given or even considered.

Abu-Sharif expressed the gratitude in two telephone interviews Wednesday morning.

Judge orders firm to halt metal-coating work

■ Company to cease sandblasting in wake of investigation spurred by residents' complaints.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Prompted by residents' complaints of pollution, a local metal coating and sandblasting company will cease operations, at least temporarily.

Lee-Co Coating Enterprises, 2406 W. County Road 140, was ordered by a 238th District Court judge on Wednesday to stop metalizing work because the company lacks a required permit.

Judge John Hyde issued the ruling following an injunctive hearing initiated by the the Texas Attorney General's Office at the request of the Texas Air Control Board.

Ted Baughn, owner of Lee-Co, testified that if he was ordered to stop metalizing, he would quit sandblasting and trucking operations as well.

TACB's investigations into Baughn's company were spurred by residents' complaints.

The majority of those grievances stem from sandblasting operations, which are in compliance with government regulations.

After the judge's ruling, several residents disturbed by the work at Lee-Co expressed their satisfaction with the order to stop metal coating, which in turn prompted Baughn's decision to quit sandblasting.

Since 1990, the TACB office in Odessa has received 24 complaints about Lee-Co, according to Charley Sims, regional director.

A few people living near Lee-Co testified on behalf of the TACB.

"We have all kinds of dust and fragments flying ... and sometimes come down on our place," said Tommie Sue McDaniel, who resides in the 2300 block of W. County Road.

Mrs. McDaniel also testified about "some type of chemical smell" and a "burning sensation" in her nose and throat.

Other residents testified about smells, breathing problems and property damage.

County Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who attended the hearing, said afterward that she also had grievances about Lee-Co operations.

Despite the complaints, Baughn and his attorney, J.T. Morgan of Odessa, reaffirmed that the sandblasting was in compliance.

A TACB investigator said that if the sandblasting was done in the center of Baughn's property, it complies with regulations. During an investigation last year, sandblasting was determined to have occurred in an inappropriate area, the investigator said.

In defense of his company, Baughn maintained that no toxic contaminants are emitted from his operations and testing has confirmed the absence of hazardous materials, such as lead.

Furthermore, Baughn and Morgan said Lee-Co has tried to maintain metalizing standards.

Since 1983, Baughn has done metal coating with TACB's knowledge and was never informed that

Bush is the hope of America, state campaign chairman says

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

President Bush's state campaign chairman said Wednesday the hope for America depends on the candidate's re-election in November.

"Change is coming," said Jim Oberwetter, a Dallas businessman who represents the Bush-Quayle campaign in Texas.

"For heaven's sake, let's make sure those changes actually help America."

Oberwetter, vice president for government and public affairs of Hunt Oil Co. in Dallas and longtime Republican activist, spoke to the Midland County Republican Women's Club Wednesday. He was joined by state Sen. Teel Bivins, who described options for public-school financing.

MC day-care center hosts tots on parade

■ Procession commemorates 'Week of the Young Child.'

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Resplendent in a paper-and-glitter tiara and bearing a metallic windmill, Brianna Harper blithely brought up the rear of a procession of 75 tiny tots Wednesday.

The cherubic parade princess, who is just days shy of her first birthday, rode in a stroller at Midland College's "Week of the Young Child" parade.

The college's child-care facility hosted its fourth annual celebration featuring the parade and "dirt cake with worms," a chocolate cake concoction frosted with "dirt" (crushed chocolate creme-filled cookies) and jelly worm candies.

Brianna's grandparents, Bill and Lois Hepler of Denver, said they were visiting in Midland and ended up in the parade.

"Brianna's brother is actually in this school, but she didn't want to be left out," Ms. Hepler said, laughing. "My husband said, 'If my friends could just see me now.' "

The parade, a predominately green and yellow procession, featured balloons and streamers in the college's colors.

2 area officials support Goulet against Wright

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The sheriff's deputy who lost in a three-way race for county commissioner and the retiring tax assessor-collector endorsed Henry Goulet Wednesday in his bid to unseat veteran Commissioner Durward Wright in Tuesday's Republican Party primary run-off election.

Wright, a 60-year-old financial analyst who has been Precinct 1 commissioner since 1969, and Goulet, a 70-year-old furniture refinisher, won places on the run-off ballot by being the top two vote-getters in the primary election March 10.

Wright garnered almost 39 percent of the vote. Goulet pulled in about 36 percent, and the deputy sheriff, Ron Harvel, 43, drew more than 25 percent of the vote.

Districts expect budgetary shortfall for '91-'92 school year

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Area schools may have to tighten their belts during the last few weeks of the school year.

Lionel R. Meno, commissioner of education, told a legislative committee Tuesday the state may come up $229.77 million short in school funds appropriated for 1991-'92.

Midland Independent School District is expected to experience a $1.68 million shortfall out of a $30 million budget, according to the Texas Education Agency.

"Our increase in ADA (Average Daily Attendance) has more than made up for our budget shortfall," MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said.

"We budgeted for the $1 million shortfall. Our increase in ADA — over what we estimated — will make up for the $600,000 difference. We show about 300 more students than what the state estimates."

Baressi said the MISD budget should end up with a positive balance "because our first semester ADA is higher than their figures."

"We too had an increase in ADA, but it will not be sufficient to offset what we are going to lose," Ector County Independent School District Superintendent Gene Buinger said.

The TEA estimates ECISD will lose $2.3 million out of a $30.2 million budget. "We have not been notified of the final figures by the state, but we have been expecting this for several months," Buinger said. "Once again the state has underfunded the school-finance package."

"We are awaiting final notification from the state as to how they developed their figures, but we are expecting the loss will be substantial," he said. "Once we heard the state was going to come up about $229 million short, we knew our proration would be over $2 million."

TEA figures indicate Greenwood Independent School District will lose almost $87,000 out of its $2.7 million budget. GISD Superintendent Quentin Burnett was unavailable for comment.

Quaintness of local color diluted by commercialization

It's a crying shame: this thing called homogenization of society. The blend, heightened by the spread of chain-stores, restaurants and pervasive television, tends to make all the same.

Local color gets diluted.

Quaintness becomes endangered and commercialized.

Todd

Just about wherever you might go across this vast land and to nations across the great oceans, you will find familiarity. It is disappointing.

If you are traveling to savor cultures and traditions in other lands, from any of the Americas — North, Central or South — to Europe or Asia, why in the world would you want to seek out a McDonald's or another place or one of those fried-chicken franchises?

It makes no sense.

If you want the familiar, just stay home and don't vary your course.

If you want the familiar, travel across this land and wander onto places similar to what you conveniently will find at home: name-brand products, those burger, pizza and fried-chicken chains, the sameness of so-called discount stores, and those familiar filling stations: Exxon, Texaco, Mobil, Chevron, Shell, Conoco, Phillips. You'll see familiar cars both American and imported.

Along the mainstream route, you'll hear much of the old popular music: country, Western, rock 'n' roll, easy-listening. You'll have to search to find real bluegrass, jazz, mountain, Cajun, spiritual, or Beethoven-Mozart music.

Familiarity is fine. So is security and comfort. That's why many of us go home after work. For some, maybe it's the last place to go when your options are narrowed.

Despite inroads of television and other forms of mass communications, local color is still around. It's right here in Midland, Texas. Probably in your own neighborhood.

It is along the back roads.

It is in the big cities and country towns.

It is everywhere where people haven't forgotten their individualism and their status as thinker, doer and storyteller.

The real, ambling-around fun would be the pleasure of trying out those hometown cafes, those independent hardware shops and office-supply houses, those off-beat shops, those off-Main Street places.

Midland, certainly, is far more than what lines the streets, avenues, drives, roads and highways variously called Wall, Wadley, Big Spring, Andrews, Midland, Midkiff, Garfield, Thomason, Front and that big Loop 250 passing by the shopping mall's fashions, showcases, toys and other playthings.

It's more than the country clubs, golf courses, cafeterias, automotive supply shops, dress shops and all that.

Local color is in the down-home people: white-collar, blue-collar, no collar, rich, poor and the don't knows.

Local color is within yourself.

Treasure it and don't let it slip away.

It's simple. Be yourself. Don't be a plastic homogenization of this helter-skelter civilization that is rife with conflicting messages and values. The cries are many: Be this. Be that. Buy this. Don't buy that. Try this, and you'll be transformed (into what?).

Wonder of wonders! The person is not made by clothes, cars, perfume, soap, beer, cigarettes, stock and bonds, addresses.

Peel off the labels and the facades. And yourself, the precious individual that is you, will discover the real wonders of the world — this thing called "local color" that is all around.

RACE: Officials criticize Wright, court

(From 1B)

While endorsing Goulet, Harvel and Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield focused more on criticizing Wright and the Commissioners' Court than they did in touting Goulet.

Harvel said Wright "says he supports law enforcement and so forth, but I've never seen any evidence of that support."

And in saying it is the "sheriff's responsibility to protect the courthouse," Harvel lambasted the Commissioners' Court for bypassing the sheriff and seeking a courthouse security officer who would be answerable only to the commissioners.

"The Commissioners' Court has the right (to appoint a courthouse security officer)," Harvel said. "They can go ahead and do what they are doing." But, the deputy sheriff said, "In my way of thinking, that does not show much local support for your local law enforcement."

"The local people have lost a voice in their local government," Ms. Shuffield said, adding that she wants "to see someone in a position (who) will listen to the people.

"I feel like we need a change. And I think Mr. Goulet can effect a change."

Ms. Shuffield said she has been disappointed in recent years by what she perceives as the lack of stands and individualistic thinking on the Commissioners' Court.

"It seems like he (Wright) just follows whatever is there, and he hasn't stood up for things that I thought maybe he should have stood up for," Ms. Shuffield said.

"There's no voice against anything anymore," she said. "It's always unanimous. Nobody takes a stand. They all follow suit — whatever was proposed. No new proposals made. Nothing contested."

Goulet said he would bring "some of that common sense and horse sense to the Commissioners' Court . . . especially in the area of letting other elected officials do their jobs."

Of the proposed courthouse security officer, Goulet said "hiring one man is not going to get the job done." The security force, he said, would grow to a five-, 10- or 20-member "special security force just for the courthouse, answerable and accountable only to the Commissioners' Court. They (commissioners) have bypassed the sheriff entirely."

The measure, Goulet said, "doesn't make sense. It's a waste of money."

Goulet said his election campaign has a "large backing from members of the Sheriff's Department."

However, according to Wright, Sheriff Gary Painter said he would remain neutral in the runoff election for commissioner and that Painter reaffirmed his and Wright's personal friendship.

Wright cited his and the sheriff's relationship in building up the Sheriff's Department salaries and benefits. Wright said he was the "prime mover" in establishing the Law Enforcement Building and the new Midland County Jail — the Midland County Central Detention Center.

Painter, whose re-election for sheriff is assured in the uncontested November general election, will begin his third four-year term in 1993. Painter won more than 63 percent of the vote in the four-way race for the Republican Party nomination for sheriff in the March 10 primary elections.

The hiring of a courthouse security officer, Wright said, was proposed by members of the Midland County judiciary and fee clerks who feared for their safety and that of citizens who visit the courthouse.

Wright said his "background and experience and history of law-enforcement support in Midland County and knowledge of overall county operations will make me a far more qualified candidate" than Goulet.

"I am concerned about Mr. Goulet becoming commissioner at his advanced age and health conditions because of the anxieties, pressure and hard knocks that that office carries with it," Wright said.

Wright characterized himself as an "independent thinker" who does not have "any axes to grind" but who has serious concerns for the county's "overwhelming budgetary problem" and wants to control taxes.

Recommendations surprise member of city salary panel

Staff Report

A citizen member of the city's salary panel said he was surprised to learn of the group's recommendations Wednesday.

Wayne "Woody" Woodside, a local business owner and member of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, said he did not receive a copy of the group's final report, which reportedly was mailed to all members last week. City personnel staffers said that was not intentional.

"I think they've really got very little input from the 'outsiders' on the committee," said Woodside, who was one of three non-city employees involved in panel discussions.

The group, made up mostly of city department heads, has suggested a slight cost-of-living increase for all city workers among its ideas.

"I didn't agree with that. I think merit raises are a better way and I want that known," Woodside said. "But I think that (cost-of-living raise) was what the department heads wanted, so that's what they asked for."

MC: Children eat 'dirt cake'

(From 1B)

While Brianna was pushed in a stroller, the most favored mode of transportation was the tricycle or wagon pulled by mom or dad.

"Nearly all of our parents are here and many had to take off of work," said Rita Stotts, MC child-care center director.

"All of our teachers are members of the West Texas affiliate of the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), so we do this every year," she said.

The child-care facility serves an enrollment of 72 — students' children, children of faculty and staff members, and youngsters from the community, Ms. Stotts said.

One youngster, sporting a name tag reading "Joshua," cried when it was time to leave his streamer-bedecked red wagon.

But he was later cheered by a demonstration of huge bubbles waved with a wand.

The bubbles served as a distraction while child-care secretary Gloria Kennedy set "dirt cake" and other refreshments on a table for the little ones and their guests.

Ms. Stotts, president of the West Texas Association for Education of the Young Child, said the organization and support organizations will host a children's fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Permian Mall in Odessa.

"We will have age-appropriate hands-on activities at 11 or 12 centers and displays," she said. "Midland College will also have an obstacle course at the fair."

She said the fair is intended for children ages 2 to 8.

GOP: Special session on school funding a possibility, Bivins says

ner Bill Clinton a weak candidate, Oberwetter warned against a split in the Republican party. He said votes for Pat Buchanan and support for H. Ross Perot will serve to boost the Democratic nominee.

"It's up to us to invite Republicans back into the fold and turn our guns where they need to be — on the Democrats," Oberwetter said. "Come and stay with us. We need your support and your help. We want to keep the White House in friendly hands — in the hands of George Bush."

He said even Republican challenger Buchanan has stopped directing his anger at Bush.

"He's turned his guns on the Congress. I believe that's where they should have been all along," Oberwetter said.

But, so-called protest votes have worked, he said.

"The president has heard the message and he understands."

He said Bush has reform proposals, including term limitations, a biennial budget requirement and a change in the fund-raising process, that are aimed at sweeping change.

Also, with the chance that 100 or more Congressional representatives could lose or give up their seats in the coming year, Oberwetter said the number of Republicans in the governmental body could substantially increase.

"If everything that could go right did go right, we could come close to taking the House of Representatives," he said.

Bivins, meanwhile, told the group a special legislative session is likely to be called on the school-financing issue.

A member of a special committee looking at the issue, Bivins detailed several theories that are being developed. They include consolidation of school districts, a value-added tax, property pools and a state property tax.

At last count, according to information from the senator's office, there were 19 different plans being discussed.

FUNDS: MISD expects to be short $1 million

(From 1B)

The estimated shortfall will be prorated among the state's 1,062 school districts, based on a formula set by the Texas Education Code. It compares with a shortfall of $168 million in 1990-'91 and $109 million in 1989-'90.

The Texas Education Agency had shortfall figures for each school district available Wednesday and will start mailing that information to the districts, a TEA spokesman said.

Meno told members of the Legislative Education Board, which oversees public schools between legislative sessions, that the shortfall is a result of a much higher increase in local property taxes than expected, which drove up the amount of matching state funds, and the failure of a bill that would have required cuts in school administration expenses.

DRUGS: Officers seize cocaine at auto body shop

(From 1B)

will be set this morning, jail officials said.

Another employee was charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Midland County narcotic's officers seized approximately $4,000 worth of cocaine, designer-drug "Ecstasy" and a small amount of marijuana. Two books believed to contain the records of drug sales also were seized from the business, which doubles as a home for Ms. Whitworth.

In addition, two guns, a switchblade, scales, $200 cash and assorted items of drug paraphernalia were seized. Most of the items were found in a single drawer in the house.

"This was brought about by Crime Stoppers tips that we've received for about three or four months regarding narcotic traffic at this location," Painter said. "As a result, we've had the place under surveillance for some time."

According to sheriff's deputy Terry Lowe, who also serves as the head of Crime Stoppers, an anonymous tip received Tuesday gave officers enough information to obtain a search warrant. Judge Al Walvoord issued the warrant Wednesday afternoon and officers executed it at 3:45 p.m., Painter said.

"I didn't know anything like that was going down here," said one employee of the business, who asked not to be identified. "It sure took me by surprise when they all came running up. My mind was racing with all kinds of thoughts, but drugs didn't really occur to me."

According to officials, seizure of the hallucinogenic drug, Ecstasy, is rare in the Permian Basin.

"It's a designer drug. It's a drug that was legal a few years ago, but dopers who were chemists changed the chemical structure. Now it's illegal," Painter said.

LEE-CO: Company lacks permit, testimony reveals a permit was necessary, Morgan said.

Baughn said he believes the metalizing, accomplished with welding-type equipment, falls into an exemption and does not require a permit.

Baughn also has taken measures to eliminate particulates and fumes from the process with the use of an exhaust system, Morgan said.

Baughn can resume operations when and if he is granted a permit. He has applied for a permit, which is under consideration, testimony indicated.

The TACB has been slow in taking action against Lee-Co and in processing the permit application, according to information revealed at the hearing.

If the permit is denied, Baughn can appeal the decision in a Travis district court.

A trial has been set for May 4 in the 238th District Court to resolve the lawsuit filed by the Attorney General's Office.

David Preister, an assistant attorney general, told concerned residents after the hearing that Baughn cannot legally sandblast if it causes a condition of air pollution detrimental to neighbors.

Preister said Lee-Co's operation warrants further investigation because some of the most dangerous pollutants are not visibly detectable.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Fatality

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 72-year-old man died after he ran a red light late Wednesday afternoon and struck another vehicle, causing his 1972 Ford pickup to roll over and partially pin him to the ground, police said.

Odessan Frank Galyon was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles.

Galyon was traveling north on Golder Street at 5:55 p.m. when he ran a red light at the intersection of Golder Street and 42nd Street, police said. His pickup struck a 1983 Oldsmobile driven by Russel Johnson, of Cloud Croft, N.M. Johnson received minor injuries and was treated and released from Medical Center Hospital.

After striking Johnson's car, Galyon's truck rolled once before resting on the driver's side. Galyon was partially ejected from the vehicle and pinned, police said.

Robbery

A 25-year-old pizza deliveryman was robbed at gunpoint as he tried to deliver a pizza in the 400 block of Alta Street Tuesday night, police said.

Paul Price was approached by two men shortly before 10:30 p.m. The men took the pizza and his wallet and fled on foot, police said. Police did not know at which pizza restaurant Price is employed.

Arson

BIG SPRING (AP) — A Howard County volunteer firefighter faces charges of arson in connection with three fires set in vacant houses last month.

John Paul Foster, 19, of Big Spring is scheduled to appear before a grand jury next month, said District Attorney Rick Hamby.

If convicted, Foster could receive a maximum 20-year prison sentence. Foster, who has no previous convictions, also would never be allowed to work as a firefighter or law-enforcement officer.

"John Paul Foster gave a written confession stating that he set the three homes on fire with gasoline," said Sheriff's Deputy Woody Howell. "(He) later assisted in putting out all three of the fires."

Foster has declined comment on the case, the Big Spring Herald reported in its Wednesday editions.

A total of $4,250 in damage was estimated. None of the homes were insured, Howell said, who contacted homeowners so restitution could be made.

Black wave of fashion's best styles hits Vogue's 100th anniversary party

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Whatever works for evening wear was worn to Vogue's 100th anniversary party last week. And the best was in black.

The glittering crowd wore everything from bell-bottoms to ball gowns. A few outfits were modest. Many were elegant. Others were daring. And more than one was a touch shocking.

The slinky black stretch jersey dress from Jean-Paul Gaultier worn by Jenny Capitain, a Vogue fashion director, was laced from the ankles to the top of the thigh. She wore it with ink-black sunglasses. She said she dieted for three days to get into the dress.

Donatella Versace, the sister of the Italian designer Gianni Versace, was bound into her black leather costume. The bodice was a crisscross of straps, while the petticoated leather skirt was caught up at one hip.

Karl Lagerfeld's assistant Victoire de Castellane burst in, bristling in yards of black tulle.

Liz Tilberis, editor of the rival magazine Harper's Bazaar, was sedate in a svelte silk Chanel dinner suit.

Georgette Mosbacher shone in black sequins.

There were a few glimmers, though, to indicate that black's envelopment might fade by next season.

The hostess, Anna Wintour, looked sharp and sophisticated in Geoffrey Beene's long white silk crepe gown with crystal beading. And it's possible that by next winter, the torrent of reds that were released at the recent Paris fall collections may have taken over.

N.Y. Times News Service

A designer to watch this season is Victor Alfaro, born in Chihuahua, Mexico, 28 years ago. He's being called an American Alaia, since most of his designs are close to the body.

"Most American designers are slouchy or couture-y," said Andrew Basile, former fashion director of Bergdorf Goodman, who handles Alfaro's public relations. "But Victor is sexy for day and night." Fake snake, lace chaps with panne velve bodysuits and maxi-coats with side zippers are styles to look for.

DEAR ABBY

Women ask man for more than he's supposed to deliver

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been out delivering concert tickets that were sold by telephone solicitations.

Van Buren

He has come home laughing the last two days, saying that he was propositioned by three women — young, and quite good-looking. He said, "It's a good thing I am not that kind of a guy."

Abby, what gets me is my husband will be 60 years old on his next birthday. He is just a typical, middle-aged, balding, short, not real handsome married man.

One young wife of a college student answered the door in her bathrobe that wasn't very well secured and sort of hanging open. She proceeded to tell my husband that her husband wouldn't be home for an hour or more.

Another woman asked him if he wanted to come in and have a drink — or something.

I might add that my husband and I have been married for 40 years, have four married daughters and six grandchildren, and we still enjoy sex.

With all the publicity about AIDS and other venereal diseases, we are just dumbfounded. What can those women be thinking? — DUMBFOUNDED

DEAR DUMBFOUNDED: They are either thinking it can't happen to them, or they're just not thinking.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me. My in-laws refuse to put poison (Raid, dog spray, Drano, etc.) up out of reach of our 2-year-old son. (We also have a little girl who will be crawling very soon.)

Abby, I realize that it is their home, but I don't think I'm asking too much of them.

My husband and I have both mentioned it to them several times. Recently, I put a note on the can of bug spray that said the kids could die if it was ingested. Well, my mother-in-law tore the note up and threw it away, and put the can back down under the kitchen sink! She said they never had to put anything out of reach of their other grandchildren. (The other grandchildren live 400 miles away, and our kids are there all the time.) She says, "Well, you will just have to watch them."

I must not be Supermom because I can't watch every single move they make. This whole situation is getting very depressing. — CONCERNED MOM IN PESOTUM, ILL.

DEAR CONCERNED: According to the American Association of Poison Control Centers, an estimated 5 million children were victims of accidental poisonings in 1989, the last year for which figures were available. Sixty-two percent of those children were under the age of 5. It is adults who must bear the responsibility.

If your in-laws feel that rearranging their cupboards in order to keep dangerous chemicals out of the reach of the toddlers is too much trouble, ask if they would mind if you and your husband did the child-proofing. If that doesn't suit them, the children's visits with the grandparents should take place at YOUR house.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this letter to let people know that it is very rude to ask a woman who has a different hairstyle, "Is that a wig?"

I cannot believe how many people ask this question. I'm talking about supposedly smart people. I work for a law firm, and two attorneys and two secretaries asked me this question. I happen to have a hereditary disorder that I inherited from my mother, and I've lost a lot of hair. I managed to cover up this problem for several years, but recently I have had to face the facts, and now I am wearing a full wig.

I thought it looked very pretty and natural until one of the male attorneys asked loudly, "Is that a wig?" I was so embarrassed, I wanted the earth to swallow me.

One of the secretaries tried to rescue me (or him) by saying, "It looks so natural, no one can tell the difference."

Abby, please let people know that things are not always the way we want them to be, and a little support can go a long way. — FLIPPING MY WIG IN N.Y.

DEAR FLIPPING: Your letter has an important message: Even with the best of intentions, a compliment can backfire. I know.

On being introduced to a gentleman at a large gathering in a distant state, I complimented him on his "lush" head of hair. His "thank you" somehow lacked enthusiasm.

It never dawned on me, until I was told later in the evening, that the gentleman was wearing a full toupee.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Retailers fear return of '70s fashions, others wax nostalgic

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As the fashion of the 1970s makes a comeback, what's nostalgia to some is a bad memory to others.

Is your mood ring turning black?

"Platform shoes are back with a vengeance, maxi coats, long skirts, long straight '70s hair," says Valerie Steele, a professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology. "My hair stylist keeps trying to make me look like the mother on 'The Brady Bunch.'"

This latest revival, coming before the 1960s comebacks have ended, is not welcomed by those reluctant to slip a "Village People" album on the hi-fi, loosen their leisure suits and stroke their pet rocks.

"The '50s happened. The '60s happened. Now it's the '70s," says John Dellera, who works for the Perry Ellis apparel company. He points to a resurgence of Frye boots and sideburns, punk music and discos, which are reopening in New York.

At the Paris shows, the '70s was prominent. Its influence also will be seen in New York in the next two weeks as designers unveil their fall and winter fashions.

Alan G. Millstein, editor of the Fashion Network Report, would rather forget the decade altogether. A return to the styles of the Bee Gees generation, a world of polyester, pants on women and the Latin hustle, would be a "nightmare on Main Street for retailers," he said.

"The longer skirts and maxi lengths were totally rejected by women in this country," he said. "It was the first time American women totally rejected a fashion trend that was shoved down their throats by European designers."

He predicted "aging baby boomers totally will reject the look and start buying pants, which is what happened in the '70s."

Anthony Nuzzo, assistant professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology, said he notices the '70s look is becoming popular among the young.

"Everybody my age does not want to see another pair of platform shoes," he said. " ... But the kids here at school are intrigued by it. They really are, because it's completely different from anything they've experienced in their lifetimes."

The revival is returning to center stage some of the fashion vanguard of the '70s, including designer Diane Von Furstenberg, whose wraparound dress became a staple of many women's wardrobe.

Bud Konheim, chief executive of Nicole Miller apparel company, said the trend creates fashion confusion but also variety.

"They try to say one brush paints the whole picture," he said. "Now you have to have a whole palette. This picture is a confusing array of a lot of brush strokes but I find it interesting."

Even so, Konheim predicted the '70s look will be rejected by the public.

"It's like telling me we're going to bring back fins on the Chrysler," he said, adding, "So next year we'll bring back the '80s. By 1994 we're bringing back the '90s."

Home chores are full-time bore

By Erma Bombeck

It's been close to 10 years since the film "Mr. Mom" was flashed on the screen.

Bombeck

The movie, depicting a father who is left in charge of a home and his kids full-time, was regarded by men as a comedy. Women who saw it thought of it as documentary.

Therein lies the problem of shared child care. Although a number of men have risen to the challenge, statistics bear out that most men wander through domesticity and child raising like they are shot full of Novocain.

There have been feeble attempts to rectify this.

Take rest rooms. Please. Men complained that women had facilities like living rooms, and they had only cold, austere relief stations that you wanted to get in and out of in a hurry. So, a men's room in a restaurant near Des Moines, Iowa, added a "womanly" feature — a diaper-changing table. This takes away the excuse, "I'd change her diaper, Marilyn, but there's no place to put her."

A rash of how-to books for men on coping with household chores is on the market. Not just books on how to cook, but epistles on how to clean and how to iron. I even received a fun-for-the-college-set laundry game book where Dick and Jane could "get down" in a sorting-clothes orgy.

I think starting early is the secret to all of this. Why not a coloring book for children showing how lunch meat turns green when it is left out on the countertop all day, and how butter will turn into a yellow, disgusting beverage when not refrigerated?

How about a hoop over the clothes hamper so kids can practice their hook shots with dirty socks and underwear?

By connecting dots, pictures could be formed to show how toothpaste can be removed from a bowl or caps replaced on shampoo bottles.

Domestic chores are probably the most boring, unfulfilling things women do. As soon as we think we have done them, we turn our backs and there they are waiting to be done again. It is small wonder we have trouble trying to convince men that their lives are missing something unless they have experienced the euphoria of buying a detergent that really cuts grease.

As women push for more help from their husbands, expect more books on how to clean, cook, shop, flush, wipe, wash and iron. Women will see these books as autobiographical. Until something changes, men will regard them as fiction.

Not everyone who is charged with a crime needs to go to jail, but there are those who don't deserve probation.

As Assistant District Attorney for 7 years, Robin Sams has given young men and women an opportunity to work their way out of their drug and alcohol problems. It is through experience tempered with compassion that she has been able to recognize and help those who deserved a second chance.

On the other hand, her experience and knowledge have allowed her to fully prosecute those individuals whose conduct is responsible for corrupting our youth and undermining our society.

Clinton wades into factory's labor dispute; Tsongas mum on re-entry

Associated Press

Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton waded into a nasty labor dispute Wednesday, following up a fresh set of primary triumphs by trying to one-up President Bush's leadership style. Paul Tsongas weighed re-entering a race that party leaders said was all but settled.

Jerry Brown seemed the odd-man out again after his brief ascendancy fizzled with a third-place finish in New York's primary. Stiil, he vowed, "We're not going to go away quietly."

Clinton and Democratic party Chairman Ronald Brown both minimized the flipside of the Arkansas governor's victories in New York, Kansas and Wisconsin — polls showing persistent voter doubts about his character and integrity.

"There are serious problems for George Bush, too," the party chairman said on NBC's "Today" show. "He hasn't learned to roll up his sleeves and get his hands dirty" dealing with the nation's problems, he said.

Clinton's trip to a strike-idled Caterpillar factory in Peoria, Ill., seemed just that, and he said the Bush administration should become involved in attempting to mediate a settlement.

"Remember going back to the Kennedy years there was always an attempt by government ... to avoid prolonged strikes and keep peoople working to settle," he said after meeting separately with management and labor leaders, and shaking hands with pickets.

Asked earlier about the polls showing voters dissatisfaction, he said, "I'm not interested in whether they love me or not. I want them to respect me and want me to be their president."

Judge refuses mistrial motion after officer's blurted words

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A judge refused to declare a mistrial Wednesday after a witness blurted out that one of four police defendants in the Rodney King beating trial had a complaint lodged against him before the beating.

A short time later, the defense rested its case and the prosecution started calling rebuttal witnesses.

One, Sgt. Fred Nichols, a police training officer who has previously said the beating constituted excessive force, failed to show despite a prosecutor's subpoena. He is on leave from his job because of stress.

Deputy District Attorney Terry White noted that Nichols' stress leave started the day after he received his subpoena, and Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg said Nichols must appear today.

Theodore Briseno, who has testified against his co-defendants, was the subject of the comment that was blurted out in court by a colleague. Attorneys said Briseno was disciplined five years ago for kicking a handcuffed suspect. Such prior acts normally are inadmissible against a criminal defendant.

Briseno's lawyer, John Barnett, accused another defense lawyer, Michael Stone, of purposely eliciting the testimony to make Briseno look bad. Barnett moved for a mistrial based on attorney misconduct, but Stone said he had no idea what the witness would say.

Officer Glen King, during his second day on the stand, was being questioned by Stone when he said he remembered something new.

He said he recalled that after discussing Briseno's role in the beating, "I said something to the effect, 'With that prior complaint this isn't going to look good.'"

Noriega case jury deadlocks; judge sends panel back

MIAMI (AP) — A holdout juror deadlocked deliberations Wednesday in Manuel Noriega's drug smuggling trial, but the judge ordered the panel to try again.

The issue in the ousted Panamanian leader's 7-month-old trial became public when jury foreman Lester Spencer sent the judge his third note in four days of deliberations.

"We have a serious problem," the note said. "We are deadlocked. Apparently there is a juror who has testified two days ago that their mind was made up before we reached that room."

The note did not disclose the identity of the juror, how the jury was leaning in the case, or how many of the 10 drug and racketeering counts were at issue.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, who has called a hung jury his worst nightmare, pleaded with the jurors to obey the spirit of deliberations.

Nation in brief

■ White House opposes 'jobless' change

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration opposed congressional efforts to make permanent changes in the unemployment insurance system and urged instead prompt enactment of a third temporary extension of benefits to the long-term jobless.

Labor Secretary Lynn Martin called Wednesday for the extension, under which jobless workers could collect up to 59 weeks of benefits. She called for bipartisan efforts to move the legislation quickly and wrote congressional leaders, "I am prepared to work immediately with you and your colleagues in the Congress to develop and enact an extension."

But at the same time she declined to testify at a House hearing on the issue scheduled for Thursday.

■ Nobel Prize winner threatens to resign

WASHINGTON — Dr. James D. Watson, the co-discoverer of the structure of DNA, is threatening to resign this week as head of the government project to map the human genome or gene set, according to officials close to him.

Watson had intended to resign anway from the leadership of the gene program some time later this year, but has threatened to do so now after hearing that the National Institutes of Health was looking into possible conflicts of interest he might have, since he holds stock in several pharmaceutical and genetic engineering firms.

The threatened resignation, first reported in Science and Nature magazines, and the dispute between Watson and NIH leader Dr. Bernadine Healy, has caused some worry among scientists that the action could harm the prestige and funding of the project.

■ Report lists potential radioactive sites

WASHINGTON — As many as 45,000 sites nationwide might be polluted with radioactive materials, according to a draft report summarizing the first comprehensive survey of such sites undertaken by the federal government.

Although many of the sites might contain relatively little radioactive pollution, or even none at all, each made the list because some type of radioactive material at some time was used, stored or happened to end up there. The report concluded that the sheer number of such sites indicates need for a coordinated clean-up program involving the military, the energy industry, and a plethora of medical, manufacturing, research and other installations.

The report, prepared for the Environmental Protection Agency by two consultants, assembles information that previously was available only from a daunting variety of published sources.

White House anti-perk patrol omits Air Force One

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is scouring its operations to stop unjustified "perks," but draws the line at any suggestion the president curtail political use of Air Force One, Budget Director Richard Darman said Wednesday.

"The public is rightly disturbed about some patterns it sees in Congress and the executive branch," Darman said at a hearing of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that oversees White House spending.

But he said Americans draw a distinction between Bush, who has a right to "the dignity of the office," and lesser officials "who are trying to act like presidents."

The subcommittee chairman, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., disputed a White House practice of requiring reimbursement of the equivalent of first-class air fare for political travel. The president's specially modified Boeing 747 costs $25,000 an hour to operate, he said.

"To me, there's something wrong," DeConcini said. "If the president uses this and mixes politics with official business, the politics has to pay the real cost."

Darman defended the policy, however. He said Bush, even when traveling for political purposes, cannot escape his duties as commander in chief and needs a coterie of personnel and equipment. He does not have the option of using commercial flights, Darman noted.

Charging the Bush re-election campaign, or other candidates on whose behalf the president travels, the full cost of Air Force One would be prohibitive and put the incumbent at a disadvantage to his Democratic opponents, Darman contended.

Then, in a dig at one Democratic contender, he said, "Does Jerry Brown have a regular job?"

Darman said he had asked all executive branch agencies to scrutinize their budgets for any employee benefit that might be deemed excessive or unnecessary.

Ryan exam

SEATTLE (AP) — Nolan Ryan, currently on the 15-day disabled list because of ailing legs, was examined Wednesday by an orthopedic specialist, who told him to go home to Alvin and work out in a swimming pool.

Dr. Lewis Yocum examined the 45-year-old Ryan at his Inglewood, Calif., office, the Rangers said. An MRI exam of his legs showed Ryan has acute tendinitis and an inflamed bursa sac of his right Achilles tendon. He also has a strained left calf.

The Rangers said Ryan, a fitness addict, will be restricted to working out in a swimming pool until he is re-evaluated again when the Rangers return home from their season-opening, seven-game road trip Monday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christian Laettner completed a sweep of college basketball's major awards on Wednesday when he was honored as winner of the 16th annual John R. Wooden Award.

Laettner appeared at a press conference at the Los Angeles Athletic Club to accept the award less than 48 hours after scoring 19 points to lead Duke to a 71-51 victory over Michigan in the NCAA championship game at the Metrodome.

1992 Masters begins today

New faces mix with tournament tradition

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — New faces moving to the top of the game and a new administration combine with nostalgia in golf's annual rites of spring in the tradition-rich Masters.

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson — the old champions who did so much to make this the most celebrated tournament in golf — again will be traipsing the the rolling hills of Augusta National.

■ First Round TV coverage, 3 p.m., USA Network (Cable Channel 24).

But it is the new breed — Fred Couples and Jose Maria Olazabal, Davis Love and John Daly — who will command attention Thursday when the first of an elite, international field of 83 begins play at 7:45 a.m. CDT.

Just as he has done in every tournament since his storybook triumph in the 1991 PGA Championship, Daly has exerted a Pied Piper effect on the galleries in practice sessions for his first Masters appearance.

They have swarmed to his side, displaying a very un-Masters-like lack of decorum, howling and yelling and romping and running, trying to coax even more distance from the biggest hitter golf has seen.

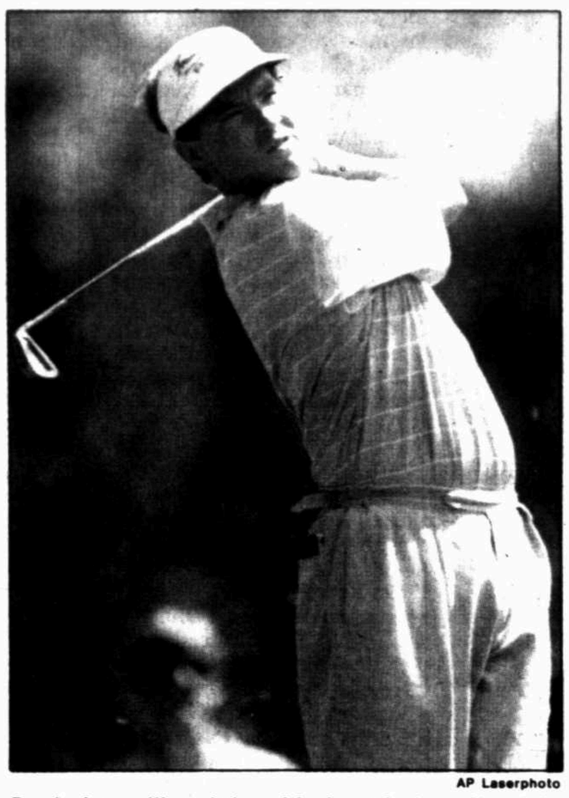

Daly, who says he "thrives on the gallery" responded with heroic enthusiasm, consistently reaching the par-5 holes with irons, frequently short irons.

The 25-year-old Daly, however, refuses to get caught up in the hysterical hopes that he may acquire the green jacket that goes to the winner.

"Not yet," Daly said. "I'm not going to win just yet. I think a place in the top 20 would be a realistic goal this year."

There are no such disclaimers from Couples, Love and Olazabal, none of whom have yet won one of golf's Big Four events, a lineup which also includes the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

All, however, are knocking on the door, are due or overdue for one of the titles that will confirm their stature in the game and elevate them to golf's highest level of stardom.

Davis Love III watches his tee shot on No. 4 in Wednesday's practice round at Augusta.

Couples has done almost everything else.

In the last 10 months Couples has soared to the top of the Sony world rankings, the first American to reach the No. 1 position in the six-year history of the rating system.

In that period, he has scored five victories, finished sixth or better in 19 of 25 worldwide starts and won $2,396,725.

"Fred has reached the level that he's the favorite in any tournament he enters," Love said.

Couples, dubbed "Boom Boom" by his fellow pros, is very, very long. And he hits the high, soft shot.

Love happy to be rid of 'longest hitter' title

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Davis Love III says thank heaven for John Daly.

Daly, who won the PGA Championship last August with booming 300-yard drives at Crooked Stick, has stolen Love's label as the longest hitter in golf.

Good riddance, says Love.

"I kept hearing all the time about being a long hitter," Love said. "John's success is making my life easier but I still get questions on how I feel about Daly. I think what he's doing is great. And I hope all the crowds follow him and leave me alone."

Love said he was never as long a hitter as Daly.

"I did hit it long," he said. "Daly is in another category. Something in another world."

Love almost was as long as Daly. He averaged 285.7 yards per drive in 1986. Daly averaged 288.9 last year, best since the PGA began keeping records.

Love's recent victory at The Players Championship showed he's more than just a long-hitter.

"I beat one of the best fields of the year and that's got to give me confidence," he said. "I watched the tape of it and I was surprised how calm I looked and how good I was swinging."

Love is making his third Masters appearance. He failed to survive the cut the two years ago but finished 42nd last year.

"The first time you play this course in a tournament you are shocked," he said of Augusta National. "It takes time to learn what's going on. Where to hit the ball."

Love made 19 birdies in 72 holes last year but still finished one-over because of mental mistakes.

"I didn't have patience and I didn't play smart," he said. "For example, on No. 15, I knew I could play safe and get a two-putt birdie by hitting a 5-iron to the back of the green. However, I tried to get close with a 6-iron and the ball landed and just sucked back into the water. It was a bad decision. I'm trying to learn from that."

Love said he has improved his patience by watching Fred Couples.

Disabled list packed with star players

Associated Press

Nolan Ryan and Roger Clemens are hurting. The St. Louis Cardinals have lost half their starting infield and the favorite to win the AL rookie of year broke a bone in his left wrist Wednesday.

Three days into the baseball season and the disabled list is overflowing already.

Those lost to the disabled list include Ryan, Andres Galarraga, Chris Sabo, Derek Bell and Lenny Dykstra.

The Rangers placed the 45-year-old Ryan on the 15-day disabled list because of a strained left calf muscle and an aggravated right Achilles tendon. Ryan was forced to leave the Rangers' 12-10 season-opening victory Monday over Seattle in the fifth inning because of his calf and was not involved in the decision. Ryan was bothered by his calf during spring training.

Ryan, in his 26th season, was on the disabled list twice last season — for 15 days in May and in July and August for

Gonzalez appears headed for stardom

■ Texas second-year outfielder Juan Gonzalez may be destined for an even bigger season than the one he had last year.

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez hopes his off-season conditioning means he won't have to stomach another slump like he had in September.

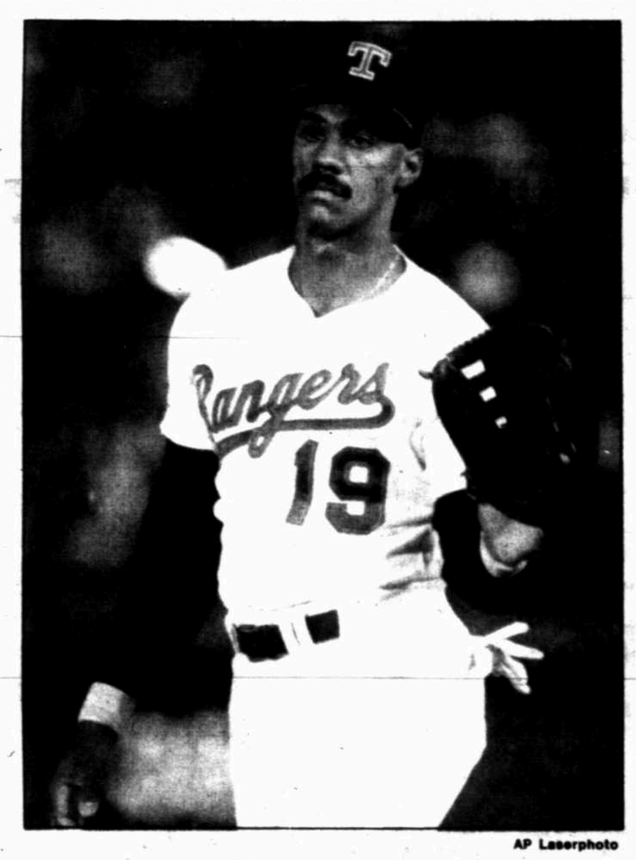

Gonzalez, who had 27 homers and 102 RBIs in his first full year in the major leagues last season, added nearly 20 pounds of upper-body bulk this winter and toned his abdomen to keep pressure off his ache-prone lower back.

"For his first full year in the majors, Juan put up some massive numbers, the kind of numbers superstars dream about," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "Just think of what he could have done if he had stayed healthy the whole season."

Gonzalez had just one homer and nine RBIs in the final 33 games last year when he was hampered by a stiff back and a zeal for statistics, which zapped his strength and style at the plate. Batting .300 on Aug. 25, Gonzalez hit just .152 to rest of the way to finish at .264.

So, Gonzalez skipped winter ball and spent the off-season

Answering the critics of pure feeders

A critical decision on Midland's athletic future appears to be near.

The question at hand is whether we will have true feeder junior highs for our two high schools or continue to travel down the same road we had with three junior highs.

Williamson

The addition of a fourth junior high makes it possible to divide the student population equally for both high schools, insuring that a student can become a part of an overall program for one particular high school.

If Midland fails to take this step, it will be the only school district in District 4-5A that will not have pure feeders.

Here are some of the reasons I've heard opposing the feeder system and why I feel those reasons have little foundation.

Feeder systems put undue emphasis on athletics, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities.

A pure feeder system will not add one minute of workout time to athletics or other endeavors. All teams will try to win with whatever system is used, but what is added with a feeder system is program direction and coordination from the seventh grade level up.

Feeder systems work to split the community in half.

This probably comes from the same people, who a few years back, screamed at the possibility of bringing the entire city under one high school flag with the old Plan O proposal. Back then the community said it wanted two equal high schools. If you want two equal high schools, you better have the feeder systems where coaches and teachers can coordinate growth and programs.

Feeder systems work to increase the animosity between high schools.

As long as we have two or more high schools in town, there is going to be a rivalry. You can't possibly increase the competitiveness between the two schools. If you think that, you haven't seen Midland High and Midland Lee play in any sport.

We don't want what they have in Odessa.

Odessa Permian's football success gives slanted view to the Odessa situation. It is true that coaches who can develop a strong program through its feeders may rise to the top in certain sports. But what if you compete against these schools without having the same rules. You can bet that Odessa, too, doesn't want what Midland has now.

Feeder systems do not guarantee success.

This is a true statement. Any tool in athletics is only as good as the way it is used. Programs and coordination must be built on solid foundations. Also, all other cities in the district have, or will soon have, pure feeders. This is strictly a matter of being able to compete under an even set of rules. Without a feeder system, Midland will enter athletic competition with one arm tied behind the back. That doesn't mean you can't win, but it does mean you better have superior talent.

You can't guarantee that the two schools will be divided equally with athletic talent.

This is another true statement. All schools go through periods of ups and downs in raw talent. When the great talent is around, you can win regardless of what system is used. In lean times, however, it's the developed program that will keep you competitive and that can only come when a coach or teacher can develop that program from the seventh grade.

A feeder system really won't make a difference.

The Reporter-Telegram's Decade Points Championship for District 4-5A is already showing that we need overall improvement. San Angelo, Permian, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper all have more overall points (scored in all UIL, girls and boys, sports) than Lee and MHS. Only Odessa High has fewer points than the two local schools. In the first two years of the decade, Lee and MHS have a combined total of five championships. San Angelo alone, with pure feeders, has 10 titles. Midland schools had won just five of 32 possible titles.

You could never establish boundaries that would satisfy everyone.

Everyone isn't pleased with current boundaries. It will be a difficult task, but it can be done to satisfy ethnic, athletic and academic requirements. It's a job worth tackling. Make the hard decisions and then let's get on with the business at hand. At the very least, give our kids an equal chance in the world in which we live — and that world right now has pure feeders.

If we elect not to do this, let's not ever fire another coach for a win-loss record. After all, we would have already said that we want two high schools and we don't care if we win or lose.

Terry Williamson is sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Brewers win 9-5 on grand slam

Associated Press

AL

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff hit the first grand slam of the season, a two-out shot in the ninth inning off Minnesota relief ace Rick Aguilera to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 9-5 victory on Wednesday night.

The Twins also lost left fielder Shane Mack when he was hit in the head by a pitch from reliever Mike Fetters in the sixth, one inning after hitting a two-run homer.

Aguilera (0-1) gave up a one-out single to Kevin Seitzer and pinch-hitter Jim Gantner hit a pop fly into short left field that hit off the top of shortstop Greg Gagne's glove for an error.

Pinch-hitter Dante Bichette lined out to third, but Paul Molitor singled to tie the game at 5-5. After Aguilera walked Darryl Hamilton to load the bases, Surhoff hit Aguilera's 2-1 pitch over the right-field fence for his second career grand slam. The other came in 1989, also against Minnesota.

Reliever Bruce Ruffin (1-0) earned his first American League victory.

Blue Jays 10, Tigers 9

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder's two home runs and six RBIs weren't enough to overcome homers by Roberto Alomar and Pat Borders as the Toronto Blue Jays outlasted the Detroit Tigers.

Fielder, who hit 51 home runs in 1990 and 44 more last year, hit his second and third homers and matched his career-high with the six runs batted in.

Neither starter lasted long. Detroit's Frank Tanana (0-1) yielded five runs on four hits in two innings. Todd Stottlemyre gave up five runs on four hits and seven walks in 4 1-3 innings.

Indians 4, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Paul Sorrento hit the first homer at Baltimore's new ballpark, a three-run shot that helped the Cleveland Indians win the inaugural night game at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Dave Otto (1-0) allowed three hits in 6 1-3 innings to improve his lifetime record to 3-8. Only five of the 23 batters he faced reached base.

Rod Nichols worked 2 2-3 perfect innings, striking out three, for his second career save.

Mark Lewis hit his first big-league homer for the Indians, who ruined the Orioles' bid to become the first team since the 1973 Kansas City Royals to open their new stadium with two straight wins. Baltimore won the opener by beating Cleveland 2-0 on Monday.

Rangers 13, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Dean Palmer homered for the third straight game as the Texas Rangers unleashed a 17-hit barrage to take their third win of the four-game series, which ends tonight.

The Rangers also got a home run by John Cangelosi, a triple and five doubles to back starter Jose Guzman (1-0), who gave up just one run and three hits in six innings. Guzman retired 15 straight Mariners after Ken Griffey Jr.'s RBI double in the first inning, Griffey's first hit of the season.

Rafael Palmeiro, Ruben Sierra and Kevin Reimer each had three hits, Reimer scored three runs and Monty Fariss, Dickie Thon, Juan Gonzalez, Palmer and Sierra had two RBIs apiece for Texas, which outscored the Mariners 29-11.

The Rangers chased starter Russ Swan (0-1) in a six-run second inning that included Palmer's solo homer as they sent 11 men to the plate. Swan, Seattle's No. 3 starter, gave up seven earned runs on five hits, a walk and two hit batters in 1 1-3 innings.

Cangelosi, a defensive replacement for center fielder Gonzalez, had a two-run homer in the seventh.

The 3-0 start for the Rangers is their best since they opened 1983 with three straight wins. The Mariners lost their first six games last season but finished with the first winning record in franchise history.

White Sox 4, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Robin Ventura singled in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as the Chicago White Sox beat the error-prone California Angels.

Tim Raines led off the eighth with a single against Jim Abbott (0-1), and advanced on a sacrifice by Steve Sax, who scored two of Chicago's runs.

Ventura then lined a 1-1 pitch to center field, making a winner of starter Greg Hibbard (1-0). The left-hander surrendered three hits in each of the first two innings, then gave up just two more in the next 5 1-3. He struck out two and walked two.

Bobby Thigpen, the fourth Chicago pitcher, worked the ninth for his first save.

Smoltz 5-hits Astros in 3-1 win

Associated Press

NL

HOUSTON — John Smoltz kept his second-half success from last season going as he gave up one run and five hits in eight-plus innings Wednesday night in the Atlanta Braves' 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Smoltz carried a shutout into the ninth but Luis Gonzalez singled and scored on Jeff Bagwell's double. The run broke a streak of 17 consecutive scoreless innings by Braves pitching against Houston. Tom Glavine pitched a two-hitter to win the opener 2-0.

Alejandro Pena relieved Smoltz after Bagwell's hit and finished for the save. Pena was 11 for 11 in save opportunities after being acquired from the New York Mets last Aug. 29.

Padres 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Andy Benes pitched seven shutout innings, drove in a run with a squeeze bunt, and benefited from a controversial interference call that helped the San Diego Padres beat the Cincinnati Reds.

Benes picked up where he left off in 1991, when he went 11-1 in his last 15 starts. The right-hander scattered six hits, faced the minimum 15 batters over the first five innings, and pitched out of a bases-loaded threat in the sixth with the help of a disputed call by home plate umpire Greg Bonin.

Joe Oliver and Billy Hatcher singled to start the inning with Cincinnati trailing 1-0, and Benes hit Bip Roberts in the back to load the bases with one out. Dave Martinez then grounded sharply to first baseman Fred McGriff, who threw home for the force and the start of a potential double play.

Catcher Dann Bilardello's relay to McGriff at first deflected into the Reds' bullpen, letting Hatcher continue home with what appeared to be the tying run. But Bonin imediately called Martinez out for running inside the baseline and interfering with McGriff.

Reds manager Lou Piniella bolted out of the dugout to argue the inning-ending call, kicked dirt on first base eight times and was ejected.

Pirates 4, Expos 2

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds, replacing Bobby Bonilla as Pittsburgh's cleanup hitter, hit a two-run homer and Zane Smith continued to excel in Three Rivers Stadium as the Pirates beat the Montreal Expos.

Smith (1-0) won his sixth in a row at home and his seventh in his last eight decisions despite allowing Delino DeShields' inside-the-park homer to center in the second inning. Smith gave up two runs and five hits, struck out two and walked none in seven innings.

Smith is 12-3 in his last 20 starts in Three Rivers as a Pirate and is 18-5 there since the Pirates acquired him from the Expos in August 1990.

Phillies 11, Cubs 3

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie and former Midland Angel Ruben Amaro, filling in for the injured Lenny Dykstra, hit his first major league homer, had two doubles, scored three runs and drove in three as Philadelphia beat Chicago.

The crowd gave Amaro, a one-time Phillies bat boy, a standing ovation after his sixth-inning homer. Wes Chamberlain and Dave Hollins also hit homers in the a four-run sixth.

Dykstra is sidelined with a broken bone in his left forearm suffered when he was hit by a pitch in Tuesday's opener.

Amaro was acquired in the off-season along with Kyle Abbott, also a former Midland Angel, from California for Von Hayes. Amaro's father played for four major league teams, including the Phillies from 1960-65.

Cardinals 15, Mets 7

ST. LOUIS — Brian Jordan, baseball's latest two-sport star, had two hits and four RBIs in his major league debut as the St. Louis Cardinals routed the New York Mets.

The production of Jordan, who's the starting strong safety for the Atlanta Falcons and was a Pro Bowl alternate last year, helped make up for the fact the Cardinals were missing three injured starters.

Pedro Guerrero drove in three runs and Ozzie Smith, Todd Zeile and Tom Pagnozzi added two RBIs apiece for St. Louis, which has taken two of three from the revamped Mets. The Cardinals battered Bret Saberhagen 9-2 on Tuesday.

It was the most runs allowed by the Mets since losing 26-7 to Philadelphia on June 11, 1985.

Jordan, 25, was called up from Triple-A Louisville Tuesday after first baseman Andres Galarraga cracked a bone in his right wrist.

GONZALEZ: Ranger says his back will be strong late in season

(From 1C)

at home in Vega Baja, Puerto Rico, where he lifted weights and did tens of thousands of crunches and twists to fortify his midsection and keep pressure off his lower back.

"I dipped in September because my back hurt and because I was putting a lot of pressure on myself to get 100 RBIs," Gonzalez said. "But I feel better this year, and I'm going to stay aggressive all the time. My back will hold up."

"Juan is hitting the ball harder than I ever have," said Ruben Sierra. "Last year is another world compared to what he's capable of doing now."

Gonzalez has been working on his one perceived weakness: chasing off-speed pitches breaking out of the strike zone. A stronger body helps him to be more selective and also allows him to expand his power zone.

"My back is fine and I'm not going to get bogged down in statistics," Gonzalez said. "I'm ready this year to make pitchers pay for trying to fool me."

Selective and aggressive, brains and brawn, Gonzalez is mixing them all.

Rafael Palmeiro knows the benefits of a bulkier torso. He added 10 pounds last year and hit 26 homers, 12 more than in 1990.

"That's the same kind of turnaround that Juan's going to have, I guarantee you," Palmeiro said. "He was plenty strong last year. He was stronger than anybody on this team even before he got huge."

Palmeiro said even with AL batting champion Julio Franco out for the first seven games with a sore knee, the Rangers have the best lineup in baseball, and Gonzalez is a big reason why.

"With Julio out, we're not as strong as we will be, but we're still going to score a lot of runs," Palmeiro said. "Just look at Juan and you can't help but feel good about this team."

Now that Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds are separated, Sierra and Gonzalez could be the best one-two punch in baseball.

"They're real thoroughbreds," Valentine said. "They're both strong, run well. They've been playing since they were in diapers. ... They care for each other and they learn from each other. ... They're a lot alike."

Except in pay.

Sierra will make an arbitration record $5 million this year and can become a free agent after this season. He and the Rangers have been far apart on a multiyear deal. Sierra wants a five-year, $25 million guaranteed contract. The Rangers want him to take some of the money in deferred payments.

Gonzalez will make $280,000 — the best bargain in baseball.

One day, Gonzalez may command Sierra-type dollars. But he won't talk about money, just like he hates talking about Sierra's possible departure.

"He is my brother," Gonzalez said. "Ruben has always helped me and I've still got a lot to learn. I hope he stays."

Sierra said if he does leave Texas, he wants Gonzalez to fill his shoes.

"I want to help him become the best because when I leave here I want to make sure that he's going to be the leader on this team," Sierra said. "Not that I want to leave Texas. I'm going to make them change their minds with my performance."

And Gonzalez is going to help, Sierra said.

"We have our own competition between ourselves," Sierra explained. "It's nice to know he'll be pushing me at full strength."

Celtics make move for first

Associated Press

NBA

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics completed a three-game sweep of the Eastern Conference's best teams Wednesday night, holding off the New York Knicks for a 93-89 victory and tightening the Atlantic Division title race.

With their 23rd consecutive regular-season victory over the Knicks at Boston Garden since 1984, the Celtics moved within two games of the Knicks with five games remaining. Boston also won the season series 3-2, which would give the Celtics the division if the two teams finish in a tie.

The Celtics, who have won every season series against the Knicks since 1971, built a 13-point lead in the third period and then held on for their third consecutive victory without Larry Bird, sidelined with back muscle spasms. The three wins were against the top three teams in the Eastern Conference — Chicago, Cleveland and the Knicks.

Patrick Ewing scored 35 points, including 15 in the fourth period, and became the second-highest scorer in Knicks history with 12,219 points, passing Willis Reed, who had 12,183. Walt Frazier holds the club record with 14,617.

Boston led 86-77 with just over two minutes left, but the Knicks hung tough before going down to a third consecutive defeat. Ewing pulled New York to 92-89 with a 3-point shot in the closing seconds, but the Knicks' last hopes died with Dee Brown's free throw with one second left.

Kevin McHale and Reggie Lewis scored 15 points each and combined for 17 in the fourth period as Boston won for the 10th time in its last 11 games. The Celtics also have won 15 consecutive games at the Garden.

Robert Parish had 14 points and 11 rebounds and Kevin Gamble and John Bagley scored 13 points apiece for the Celtics.

Nets 109, Bullets 103

LANDOVER, Md. — Drazen Petrovic scored seven of his 25 points in the final 5½ minutes as the New Jersey Nets rallied to defeat the Washington Bullets.

The Nets, who have won three consecutive road games, moved into a tie for seventh place in the Eastern Conference. New Jersey and Atlanta, both 36-40, are 1½ games ahead of Miami in the race for two playoff berths in the East.

Petrovic's jumper with 5:26 left gave the Nets a 98-97 lead, and five more points by Petrovic put New Jersey on top 103-101 with 2:02 remaining.

Chris Dudley tipped in Rafael Addison's miss with 1:08 left to put the Nets on top by four before Ledell Eackles' basket closed the Bullets to 105-103. A free throw by Sam Bowie with 26 seconds made it a three-point margin.

The Bullets, looking to tie, turned the ball over with 22 seconds left when Harvey Grant, who led Washington with 22 points and 16 rebounds, fumbled away a pass from Michael Adams. One free throw by Addison and two by Bowie accounted for the final points.

Pistons 89, 76ers 71

PHILADELPHIA — Mark Aguirre came off a scoreless game to finish with 22 points and the Detroit Pistons beat Philadelphia 89-71, the lowest point total in 76ers franchise history.

Aguirre, who didn't score in the Pistons' victory over New York Tuesday night, hit nine of 14 shots, including two 3-pointers. He scored 15 points in the second period, when the Pistons outscored the 76ers 31-10 for a 47-32 halftime lead.

Hersey Hawkins scored 25 points and Charles Barkley 22 for Philadelphia, which lost its eighth game in 11 starts and fell three games behind New Jersey and Atlanta for an Eastern Conference playoff spot. The previous single-game low for the 76ers was 73 points at New York on Jan. 9, 1984.

Joe Dumars scored 16 points and Dennis Rodman had 13 points and 16 rebounds for Detroit, which won its third straight game and improved its road record to 22-17.

The 76ers led 22-16 after one quarter before Aguirre and Bill Laimbeer led the Pistons' second-quarter surge. Laimbeer had eight points and seven rebounds in the second period.

Pacers 122, Bucks 107

MILWAUKEE — Reggie Miller scored 24 points and Chuck Person 22 as the Indiana Pacers sent the lottery-bound and leg-weary Milwaukee Bucks to their 10th straight loss.

The Bucks' hopes to continue their string of 12 straight playoff appearances were ended earlier Wednesday night when New Jersey beat Washington. Milwaukee, a playoff team in 19 of its 24 years in the NBA, has never participated in the draft lottery.

The Bucks' loss Wednesday night before a small and listless crowd at the Bradley Center came in their first game since Del Harris, their head of basketball operations, stepped down Tuesday.

Warriors 110, Mavericks 91

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Mullin scored 29 points and the Golden State Warriors cruised past the Dallas Mavericks to snap a two-game losing streak.

After consecutive losses to the Western Conference-leading Portland Trail Blazers, the Warriors opened a one-game lead over the Phoenix Suns and the Utah Jazz in the race for the conferenece's second-best record. The Warriors play the Suns on Saturday night.

Golden State shot just 42.5 percent from the field, but made 33 of 43 free throws.

No end in sight for NHL strike

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NHL, faced with possible anarchy from its players and anger from its fans, prepared on Wednesday to cancel its season prematurely in a move that could have widespread repercussions.

The strike-bound league was a day away from calling off the remainder of its 1991-92 regular season and the Stanley Cup playoffs, which were scheduled to start Wednesday night.

The NHL is in a unique situation. None of the seven work stoppages in baseball and four in football ever wound up interfering with their sport's championship event. The only season in which the NHL did not decide a champion was 1919, when a flu epidemic terminated the Stanley Cup finals.

Ironically, the darkest moment in the history of the game has come in the midst of the NHL's diamond jubilee 75th anniversary season. With the players' strike in its eighth day, that diamond has turned into shattered glass.

More Sports, 8C

"I really don't see any chance at all" of saving the rest of the season, said Chicago Blackhawks player representative Steve Larmer, echoing the voices of many players.

There seemed little hope of owners and players coming together.

"There's no question in my mind at all (that the season is over)," Pittsburgh Penguins co-owner Howard Baldwin said. "The only reason we will wait until 3 p.m. Thursday is because we said we would.

"This is the most ridiculous thing I've ever been involved with and you're talking with someone who was involved in the WHA. We are bitterly disappointed."

The owners have given the players until 3 p.m. EDT on Thursday to accept their final take-it-or-leave-it offer. If not, they've said they'll cancel the rest of the season.

Lee's King moves into girls medalist tie

Staff Report

ABILENE — Ties are the name of the game as far as the District 4-5A girl's golf race is concerned after third round action Wednesday at Abilene Country Club.

Midland Lee junior Paula King moved into a tie with Abilene Cooper freshman April DeVries for medalist honors as the two vie for Region I individual berths. King, a Region I qualifier a year ago, shot a tournament best 79 Wednesday to tie DeVries at 246 for three rounds.

The girl's tour ends next Tuesday in San Angelo with King and DeVries holding a four-stroke lead over San Angelo's Tiffany Ashley and Kristin Kight of Odessa Permian. Ashley will be playing on her home course.

There is also a tie for the team lead with Cooper and Permian knotted at 1,071. Lee is a distant third with 1,111, owning little hope of gaining a Region I berth as a team. However, Lee does not have a senior on the squad with one junior and four sophomores.

Midland High stands in fifth place with a 1,186 total and trails San Angelo by 42 strokes for the fourth place slot. MHS must do well in San Angelo Tuesday to hold fifth place as Permian's No. 2 team is only five strokes back.

Trade officials narrow differences

■ Negotiators from U.S., Canada and Mexico report they have made progress in discussions on auto and energy industries.

N.Y. Times News Service

MONTREAL — The United States, Canada and Mexico have narrowed differences on issues ranging from autos to energy in negotiations on a North American free trade area, ministers of the three countries said after three days of meeting here. The Bush administration is hoping for a pact before November.

Despite reports from Washington that the administration is getting cold feet because an agreement might give capital to political opponents, the U.S. trade representative, Carla A. Hills, said Wednesday in a meeting with reporters that the president wanted to "complete negotiations as soon as possible."

"I think we could complete our negotiations and initial an agreement and subsequently sign it by November," she said.

With Mrs. Hills were Canada's international trade minister, Michael H. Wilson, and Mexico's trade minister, Jaime Serra Puche. All three spoke of progress in narrowing differences in technical areas.

While they took a generally optimistic tone, the negotiators declined to provide evidence of emerging accords on specific industries, emphasizing that nothing was final until everything was agreed.

One contentious issue relates to the way rules defining North American content are worked out for automobiles, computers, textiles and other products.

In autos, the United States wants Canada and Mexico to accept a 60 percent content rule — which means that at least 60 percent of the value of a car would have to be produced in North America for it to avoid tariffs.

In the existing U.S.-Canada free trade accord, 50 percent was been agreed on. Canada and Mexico both want the 50 percent maintained, arguing that at 60 percent the United States would take Asian investment away from them.

Washington is also seeking to open parts of Mexico's energy industry, which was nationalized in 1938 and is protected as part of the national patrimony in Mexico's Constitution.

While Mexico does not want to be seen giving away control of oil to the United States, its oil industry needs huge sums to modernize and increase output.

Negotiators are looking for ways to allow for foreign investment and other participation in the industry without touching off a domestic political storm.

Mrs. Hills said she thought the political consequences of an agreement could be positive. "Those voters who believe that it is good for the region to find ways to become more competitive globally will mark that as a plus," she said. "Those who are resigned to the belief that a free trade area is not in their best interest will mark it as a minus."

Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, has expressed support for North American free trade, but some political analysts say he could make any accord negotiated by the Bush administration an issue by promising to renegotiate to get a better deal.

Edmund G. Brown Jr., who is fighting Clinton for the nomination, has said he would delay a North American trade deal until he had a job protection strategy in place.

Some experts say the agreement will provide more jobs in the United States, but it could create some dislocation for a number of lower-skilled workers in sectors in which the United States competes with Mexico, like agriculture and apparel.

A recent study by the Institute for International Economics found that the free trade agreement would create 600,000 jobs in Mexico and 130,000 jobs in the United States. Canada would undergo a net loss of 4,000, according to the study.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices advanced Wednesday to new highs for the year as traders responded to shrinking U.S. supplies and more Middle Eeast tensions.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $20.62 per barrel, up 39 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. The previous high 1992 settlement price for spot-month crude, $20.45 a barrel, came Monday.

Local crude purchasers such as Marathon, Scurlock Permian, Texaco and Navajo raised their price 25 cents to $19.25. Phillips raised its posted price 35 cents to $19.85.

Prices went up following an American Petroleum Institute report, issued Tuesday evening, that showed U.S. stockpiles of oil and refined products fell sharply last week.

In addition, there were concerns that further tensions between Iran and Iraq could be brewing.

Crude's rally continues a buying spree that stretched through last week and has pushed up the spot price of oil by about $1.50 per barrel since late March.

Dr Pepper stock

DALLAS — Dr Pepper-Seven-Up Cos. on Wednesday announced plans to file a registration statement to make an initial public offering of its common stock.

The filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission is expected in the next two weeks.

Proceeds of the offering, along with bank borrowings, would be used to pay outstanding debts and retire preferred stock, the soft drink companies said in a statement.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most major currencies except the Japanese yen in busy trading Wednesday after a late technical rally made up the dollar's loss earlier in ths sesson.

The dollar got off to a weak start in world trading. In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 132.75 Japanese yen from 133.35 yen at Tuesday's close.

Sterling, meanwhile, continued to be weighed down by political concerns ahead of the upcoming British election. A pound fell in London to $1.7480 from $1.7490 late Tuesday.

Stocks plunge

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell sharply Wednesday for the second straight session.

Traders said the drop signaled that some investors are pulling their money out of the market after migrating there earlier this year due to low interest rates.

Agency chief seeks export control plan

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Commerce Secretary Barbara H. Franklin said Wednesday that in her first month on the job she had begun a push to ease American controls on exports and planned to lift controls on 11 types of products, including some computer chips.

Ms. Franklin, the management consultant and Republican fund-raiser tapped by President Bush in December, said the White House was in the final stages of reviewing her export control plan.

A final decision, which could eventually allow up to $3 billion a year in additional American exports to former Communist countries, may be reached by the end of this week, she said.

In recent years, the Commerce Department has lost much of its influence over trade policy to Carla A. Hills, the U.S. trade representative.

But Ms. Franklin said she had no plans to reorganize her sprawling department.

Ms. Franklin criticized the draft agreement reached last week with the European Community that would limit but not abolish government subsidies to commercial aircraft makers. She said it would reduce but not eliminate subsidies.

American plans 'more than simple fare action'

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — An American Airlines official confirmed Wednesday that the carrier would announce today "a fundamental shift in the way that we look at our business." He added that the carrier planned "more than a simple fare action."

The official, who insisted on not being named, would not elaborate on the announcement. But travel industry executives said that the airline would likely lower some unrestricted fares — the higher fares used mostly by business travelers — and increase some advance-purchase fares — the lower fares used mostly by leisure travelers.

Some travel agency officials expressed concern over speculation that American might try to lower commissions to travel agents, who last year wrote $47.9 billion worth of air tickets. But others in the industry said they did not think that likely.

"I would doubt that will happen, because it would have a lethal effect on the airline's distribution system," said Richard P. Friese, the president and publisher of Travel Agent magazine.

While most agents expressed similar sentiments, some said there was pressure on all airlines to control costs and that carriers periodically hint at lower commissions.

Travel agents write tickets for about 80 percent of all domestic traffic and more than 95 percent of international travel, industry executives say, a significant increase from an overall average of about 50 percent a decade ago.

Some travel industry executives said Wednesday that they did not expect other airlines to follow American in raising fares.

Firms increase bids for LTV businesses

NEW YORK (AP) — A large French military contractor and two formidable U.S. defense firms twice upped their offers for LTV Corp.'s missile and aircraft businesses Wednesday during a bankruptcy court auction.

But a high bid by French-owned Thomson CSF faced opposition from LTV's chief financial officer.

James Powers testified the company preferred that Thomson, a defense and electronics company, not buy the company because of concerns that foreign ownership would jeopardize its Pentagon contracts.

Thomson's $300 million offer for the missile business is linked to a $130 million bid for LTV's aircraft operation from Carlyle Group, a Washington investment firm.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Zero-coupons good for building college fund

By Bill Doyle

Q: I'm looking to establish a college education fund for two children, ages 9 and 12. I'm thinking of investing $25,000 for each in something comparatively safe. My broker recommends zero-coupon bonds. What is your opinion of his suggestion?

Doyle

A: It's quite good. Even though "zeroes," as they are nicknamed, are best used in tax-deferred retirement accounts, they can be applied successfully to building education nest eggs.

Unlike traditional "current interest" bonds, which pay out interest every six months, a zero-coupon bond pays no interest until its maturity date.

A zero is originally issued and sold at a big discount — way below its face value — and redeemed at face value when it matures. The difference between the issue price and the maturity value is interest, which has built up on the bond over its lifetime.

That interest buildup, which the Internal Revenue Service calls "accreted," can complicate things. Interest on most bonds — paid out or accreted — is subject to income tax. That forces investors in zeroes to pay tax on interest they have not yet received.

The major exception to this general rule involves municipal bonds, whose interest is free from federal income tax. Another exception can take place when other zero-coupon bonds, with normally taxable interest, are owned by people whose total income is so low they pay no income tax or very little income tax. That makes zeroes suitable investments for many children.

A big lure of zeroes is that the buyer knows exactly how much each bond will be worth on its maturity date, unless the issuer defaults.

That potential danger can be avoided by purchasing U.S. Treasury zeroes — called STRIPS, for Separate Trading of Registered Interest and Principal of Securities — or zeroes created out of Treasury securities by brokerage firms, with names such as TIGRs, LIONs and CATs.

Q: My uncle warned me off zero-coupon bonds by saying their market prices are much more volatile than those of other bonds. Is that true? If so, should I forget about putting zeroes in my individual retirement account?

A: Your uncle is correct. Studies have proved the market prices of zeroes swing much more widely than the prices of current-interest bonds of similar quality and equal maturity.

But that shouldn't deter you from tucking zeroes into your IRA. Just buy zeroes with maturities matching the years in which you will make withdrawals from the IRA.

Here's an example: Let's say you will reach age 70½ in 1995. As a result, you will be required to take your first IRA withdrawal by April 1, 1996. Let's also say your required withdrawal will amount to $3,000.

Your move would be to buy for your IRA zeroes due to mature on or shortly before April 1, 1996, with a $3,000 total maturity value. When those bonds come due, you take the $3,000 and you have met your IRA withdrawal obligation.

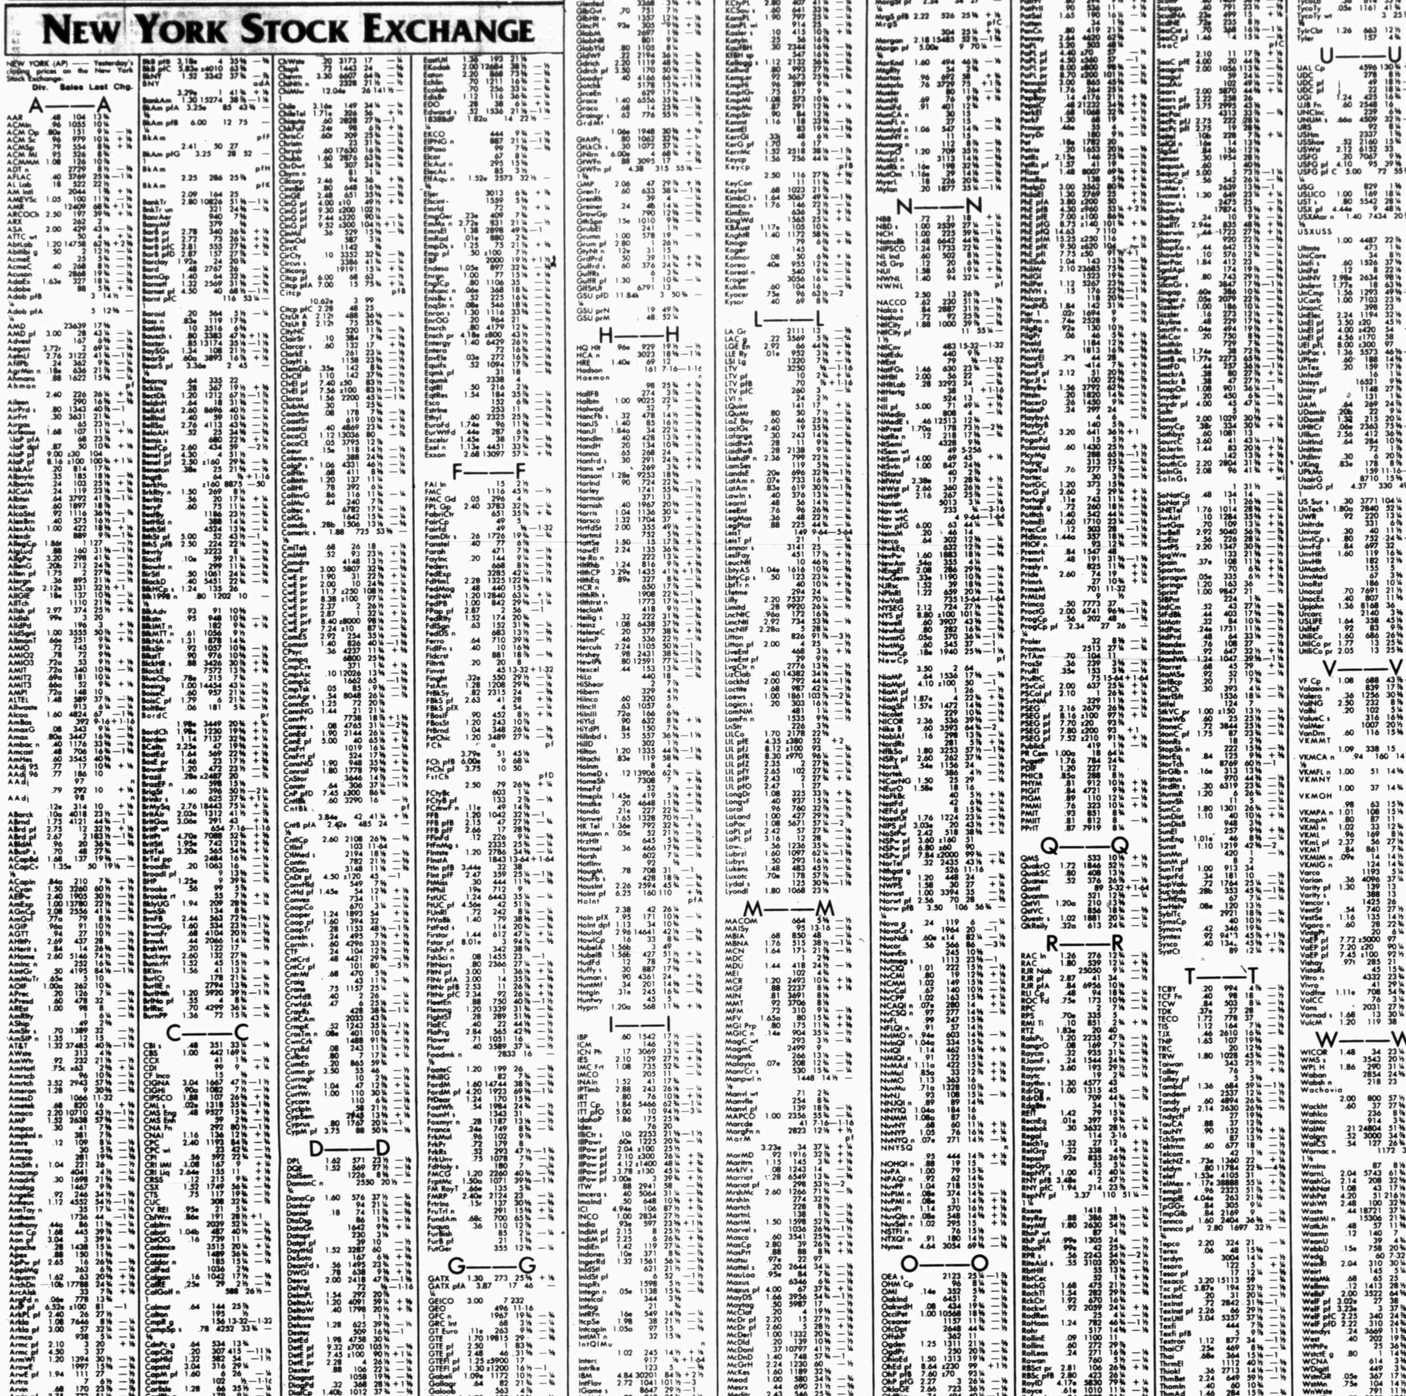

Q: I know commissions charged on stocks vary a bit from one brokerage firm to another. Does the same story apply to zero-coupon bonds?

A: It can when brokers act as agents for customers and levy commissions. However, most bond trading is done on a "principal" basis, meaning brokerage firms sell bonds to customers who buy, and purchase bonds from customers who sell. The difference between the two prices is the "spread" on which brokerages hope to turn a profit.

Alcohol may boost hormones, reduce heart disease risk

By Jean Carper

Attention, postmenopausal women. At least three alcoholic drinks but no more than six a week may reduce your risk of heart disease and osteoporosis, a bone disorder. How? By boosting your levels of estrogen.

Carper

That's the surprising conclusion from a new study by Judith Gavaler, Ph.D., associate research professor of medicine at the University of Pittsburgh.

In a study of 128 postmenopausal women, Dr. Gavaler found that moderate amounts of alcohol boosted natural estrogen levels by 10 to 20 percent of that expected from estrogen-replacement therapy. Still, she says, the alcohol seemed to equal estrogen replacement in reducing the odds of heart disease.

Interestingly, the estrogen boost does not come entirely from alcohol. When Dr. Gavaler fed bourbon concentrate without alcohol to rats, they too had estrogen increases. The same for beer; it contains at least two natural plant estrogens, she says, that can raise estrogen levels.

Caution: Dr. Gavaler stresses that more than six drinks a week does not further raise estrogen. Also, if you don't drink, do not start drinking just to replace estrogen, she says.

Poppy Seed Mischief

It's true. Eating poppy seeds before undergoing a urine test for illicit drugs could be a big mistake. Yes, those seemingly innocent black seeds common in bagels, cakes and muffins can make your urine test positive for opiates drugs derived from opium.

So cautions James Abelson, M.D., of the University of Michigan. He discovered that one young womans urine tested positive for opiates because she ate a lemon poppy-seed muffin five hours before her drug test.

As an experiment, Dr. Abelson also ate a single muffin loaded with poppy seeds. One hour later his urine tested positive for morphine. Four hours after eating another muffin, his urine was even more strongly incriminated.

Dr. Abelson fears that some people taking random drug tests might be wrongly accused because of the poppy-seed phenomenon.

Best advice: If it happens to you, speak up and if you know you are taking such a test, avoid poppy seeds beforehand. How long it takes for poppy seeds to clear the body depends on many factors, including how many you eat. Dr. Abelson estimates anywhere from two to 12 hours.

Surprising Stomach Soothers

Garlic and hot peppers? You've got to be kidding. No, new studies find that both these pungent foods may actually help protect rather than harm your stomach lining even against ulcers.

In one study, Korean scientists found that one garlic compound completely protected the stomach lining against damage from alcohol. The alcohol test is a common one for judging resistance to noxious agents associated with stomach-lining damage, including ulcers.

The protective compound also gives garlic its pungent taste. Thus, researchers suspect that garlic mildly irritates the stomach lining, arousing substances called prostaglandins to produce a protective barrier.

Capsaicin, the hot agent in chili peppers and cayenne pepper does essentially the same thing, say Japanese scientists. In their tests, capsaicin increased the stomach linings mucus flow, blocking 93 percent of the damage expected from alcohol.

Some experts say these hot foods may actually help heal ulcers. But others say, if they give you stomach discomfort, dont eat them.

Treat infant's feet problems early

NEW YORK — Any abnormalities in a baby's feet should be medically evaluated at the youngest age possible — when it is easiest to treat.

As children grow, their bones and muscles change dramatically in terms of the angle and rotation of the joints and the length of bones.

In some cases, abnormalities in a baby's feet occur while still in the mother's uterus, but most infants tend to outgrow them.

But if there are structural defects, the problem may get worse as the child gets older and may interfere with proper growth.

World in brief

■ Yeltsin reform program takes drubbing

MOSCOW — Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin's crash program of economic reform took a drubbing Wednesday from critics at the Congress of People's Deputies, with one delegate comparing the Yeltsin government to a Greek in the fourth century B.C. who burned down a temple to make his name immortal.

"Our government will go down in history all right, as the Herostratos who finally wrecked the economy of a great country," said Mikhail Chelnakov, one in a string of legislators who lined up to deliver their verdicts on the four-month-old program.

■ France suspends South Pacific testing

PARIS — France announced that it was suspending its 32-year-old program of nuclear weapons testing in the South Pacific until the end of this year and suggested that it would extend the moratorium in 1993 if other nuclear powers followed suit.

In his first address to Parliament since taking office last week, Prime Minister Pierre Beregovoy said Wednesday that President Francois Mitterrand had written to leaders of the other nuclear powers urging them to conclude their strategic disarmament negotiations and halt nuclear testing.

■ Najibullah loses control of border region

WASHINGTON — With the establishment over the last week of a second autonomous administration in northern Afghanistan, President Najibullah has lost control of the country's border with what was formerly Soviet Central Asia, administration officials and area experts said Wednesday.

According to experts, firm rebel control over nine provinces, about a third of Afghanistan, has further isolated Najibullah.

Britain goes to polls in close election

LONDON (NYT) — Britain's voters are going to the polls today in one of the closest general elections in decades that appears to be heading toward an end to the Conservatives' 13-year stranglehold on power.

If the opinion polls have it right, neither the Conservative nor the Labor Party will emerge with an outright majority in the House of Commons.

Most analysts, however, said that barring a late surge in support for the Conservatives, Labor will emerge with the most seats in the new parliament and has the best chance of forming the next government.

It would cap a remarkable return from the political wilderness for Labor, which relinquished the government to Margaret Thatcher and the Conservatives in 1979 and was dismissed as an electoral dinosaur just a couple years ago.

Britain is voting in the midst of the longest recession since the 1930s. Festering public resentment over the economy was an electoral handicap for the governing Conservatives throughout the campaign.

"If it were not for the difficulties and the bruises that have been caused by recession, I don't think there would be any doubt that there would be an increased majority for the Conservative Party," Prime Minister John Major told reporters at his final news conference of the campaign.

But Major maintained in a TV interview later that his party would be returned to power.

Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock said Labor's own information from crucial marginal constituencies indicated his party was on course toward overturning the Conservatives' 88-seat majority in the House of Commons.

Bosnia-Herzegovina declares state of emergency

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The leaders of this newly recognized nation declared a state of emergency Wednesday and said "war is imminent" with Serbs and federal army troops that have been moving into the republic.

President Alija Izetbegovic and the other Croats and Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina's collective leadership said they were assuming command of the territorial defense, normally under control of the federal army.

The ethnic Serb members of Bosnia's presidency have resigned because they oppose Bosnian independence, which the United States and European Community recognized this week.

Residents of Sarajevo kept their children home, shuttered their shops and switched off street lamps to frustrate snipers as gunfire and explosions enveloped the capital.

At least 13 people were killed Wednesday across the republic, and 10 were wounded by sniper fire despite the darkness, Radio Sarajevo said.

Serb militants holding the eastern and southern outskirts of town engaged in mortar and artillery duels with police and the Muslim "Green Berets" militia.

Muslims, Serbs and Croats who have lived together for centuries recoiled from the violence.

"We fear for our lives and what will happen tomorrow," said Dejan Petric, a Serb. "How are we going to look into each other's eyes when and if this madness passes?"

Report: Iraqis move missiles north of zone

LONDON (AP) — Iraq has moved anti-aircraft missiles into the Western-patrolled Kurdish zone of northern Iraq in violation of U.N. orders, Prime Minister John Major's office said Wednesday.

Sources in Washington said several allied aircraft were tracked by the missile batteries' radar last week. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said no missiles were "locked on" the planes in preparation for firing but that the U.S. government was very concerned about the situation.

Major met with Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, to discuss a possible response to the Iraqi missiles, but no decisions were announced.

Powell said the allies were "very familiar" with the positions of the missiles and would be "able to deal with any situation without exposing themselves to new hazards."

Two years on the road helps 'Little Texas'

Lisa L. Rollins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — If national fame in the music world has a down side, Arlington native Tim Rushlow, lead vocalist for hot country newcomers Little Texas, hasn't encountered it just yet. At least not directly, anyway.

His parents, however, are another story. And thanks to the recent Top 10 success of Little Texas' debut single and video, "Some Guys Have All The Love," the local Rushlow residence now has an unlisted telephone number.

"People kept calling my parents and going, 'Was that Tim I saw on TV?'" Rushlow said with a laugh during an interview from Birmingham, Ala. "That's nice, and I don't mind at all, but I think Mom and Dad just got their number changed 'cause it was getting tough answering the phone all the time."

Rushlow's parents are no doubt understanding of their son's love of music, though. After all, the 25-year-old singer-guitarist's father, Tom Rushlow, was lead vocalist for Moby Dick and The Whalers, a recording and touring group of the '60s.

Now touring in support of "First Time For Everything," the sextet's 10-song disc and title single, Little Texas had its inception in 1984, when Rushlow and acoustic guitarist Dwayne O'Brien met and began performing together in Arlington. In 1986, however, Rushlow headed to Nashville to sing and pick at the Opryland theme park while O'Brien opted to finish his bachelor's degree in chemistry at East Central State University in Ada, Okla.

The duo kept in touch, however, and two years later — with both residing in Music City — they hooked up with Longview natives Duane Propes, bass, and Porter Howell, electric guitar. The group was completed with the addition of Ohio natives Del Gray, drums, and keyboardist Brady Seals (nephew of famed country songsmith Troy Seals and cousin to label mate Dan Seals).

With all the pieces in place, Little Texas attracted the attention of manager-producer Kristy DiNapoli who, in turn, introduced Warner Bros.' Doug Grau to the act's music. Soon thereafter, the sextet scored a speculation deal with the label. But the real work had just begun.

"We hit the road and went coast to coast three times — in two-and-a half years," said Rushlow of the group's self-imposed do-or-die touring schedule. "We played every bar in between here and there. I mean, you name it, we played it. If they'd pay us, we were there, and sometimes they didn't pay.

"We'd come into Nashville and record our little demos every four or five months or so, and the only way to make money was to play on the road, so we'd do cover material mixed in with our own material," he said. "We'd do any kind of music we could just to pay the bills, and we tried to mix in a lot of originals between those."

Ironically, " 'Some Guys Have All The Love'" used to be one of those songs that, when we played it, that'd be when everybody'd go get a beer at the bar real quick," he said. "But when we played George Strait's 'You Look So Good in Love,' they'd pack the dance floor!"

Needless to say, the melodic "Some Guys" single wound up being the breakthrough that Little Texas craved. Yet the band's time on the road was well spent, they concede.

"We're like six brothers out on the road, and we have a great road manager — Rusty Wells, he's from Fort Worth — and he helps keep us in line," Rushlow said, noting that the band wrote all the songs on its debut disc. "But between the seven of us on the road, we've been very focused.

"You know, we put 'Some Guys Have All The Love' out there with minimal promotion, minimal video, just to see what happened and, kaboom! It took off, so it's just been unbelievable the success that has happened in a very short time," he said. "But rather than let it go to our head, we really have taken that and run with it and tried to excel, tried to become a better band. It makes you become a better group."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Learn all you can. Knowledge is power. New job opportunities will open up in midsummer. Your organizational skills will be in great demand by September. Business travel looks especially lucrative next November. Changing your lifestyle gives you an upsurge of energy as Christmas approaches. Let your ambitious side show in early 1993. Taking the initiative at work will lead to financial gains. Pursue romance with an open heart.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: golfer Seve Ballesteros, actor Jean-Paul Belmondo, Playboy founder Hugh Hefner, actress Michael Learned.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A problem related to your elders could arise. Business may have to take a back seat to family affairs. Give plenty of thought to the future. Patience and caution are advised.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Greater pressures exist in both business and your personal life. Talking to a professional gives you a more objective view. Loved one's unexpected actions create some delightful moments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day for dealing with publishers and other experts who can affect your career. An influential person's interest in your creative talents could mean additional income.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some forgotten funds will bring smiles. A married couple discovers a new depth to their relationship. Give a wide berth to someone who acts reckless.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your imagination and ingenuity shine brilliantly today. Handle personal matters away from your work environment. An inventive solution will produce lasting results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Routine assignments demand special attention now. Your co-workers could be argumentive. Unexpected good news or a fun social invitation offsets any disappointments you might receive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A hard-sell approach can be very effective now. Push harder to improve profits. Do not postpone a business trip! A change of routine brings many benefits. Do your best to minimize legal consequences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep a low profile if you are in the company of VIPs today. Be especially careful not to defy higher-ups. Reading gives you a new perspective. It is time to fly solo.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Taking strong measures is not recommended now. Protect yourself and your financial interests from big talkers. A hunch merits a follow-up. Remember someone who touched your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use some quiet time to sort out a tricky problem. A solution is easier to find than you dreamed possible. Bring sensitive issues out into the open. Let your spouse carry his or her share.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are going through a cycle of growth and rebirth. Be patient with higher-ups; they may have problems of which you are unaware. What you say weighs heavily; easy does it!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You would be wise to remain your usual quiet and mild-mannered self today. A private negotiating session will work to your advantage. Look into making a purchase you have long desired.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will have many casual friendships but few close pals. These Aries are so wrapped up in their own interests that they sometimes appear oblivious to other people's needs. These Aries like to take charge of things and will undoubtedly end up running their Little League team or Scout troop. Sports provide the perfect outlet for their boundless energy! Ambitious and hard-working, they are well-suited for the business world. Their superior negotiating skills are a tremendous asset.

Opening lead: King of ♣

The secret of successful falsecarding is to choose your situations carefully. If you become known as a player who falsecards at every trick, no one will trust any card you play, most of all partner. On this deal West chose the perfect moment for a simple, yet deadly, bit of guile.

South's opening bid was artificial and forcing, and North's first two responses were both negatives. Thereafter, the auction was natural and the final contract was just the jack of hearts away from being an acceptable slam.

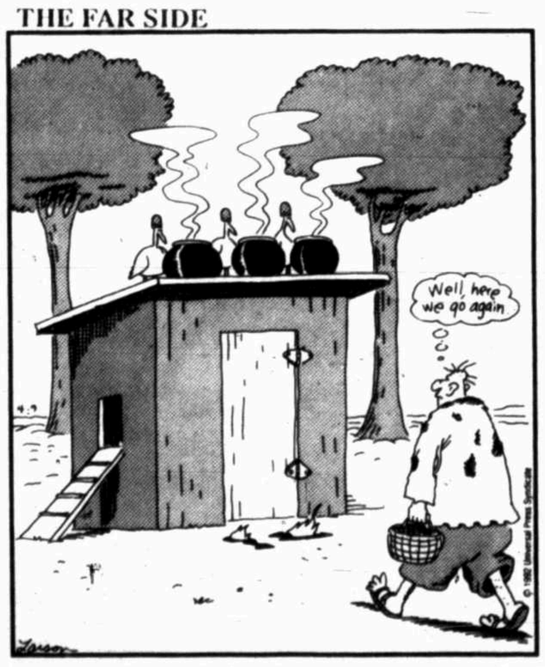

West led the king of clubs and continued the suit for declarer to ruff. South crossed to dummy's king of diamonds and successfully finessed the queen of hearts. Had West followed with the low trump, declarer would have had no option but to bang out the ace of hearts, with happy results for North-South. Unfortunately, for declarer, West came up with a brilliant falsecard—the jack of trumps!

If this card were honest, East had started with the king of hearts doubly guarded. A 3-1 split of the four missing cards was the more probable break, so declarer decided to get back to dummy to repeat the finesse. The only way to accomplish that was to cash the ace of diamonds and then ruff a diamond. Unfortunately, East overruffed with the king and another contract bit the dust.

Woody Allen would rather be Brando or Louis Armstrong

NEW YORK — Woody Allen once said his one regret in life is that he wasn't someone else. Now he suggests he was half kidding.

Given his druthers, he said, "I would rather be Marlon Brando or Louis Armstrong . . . a great pianist or something."

Allen

"I think that being funny is not anyone's first choice," the comic actor and director said in an interview in Monday's New York Newsday.

"If I could have come from a different background, I might have started off with deeper goals and maybe achieved some of them earlier in life and at this point in my life be doing a lot better than I'm doing — doing deeper work or better work," the 56-year-old Allen said.

His latest film is "Shadows and Fog."

NEW YOR — Stephen King, the master of horror, says he's nothing like the villains in his novels — but people expect him to be.

"One of the great disappointments, I think, if I do an autographing or do a personal appearance, I think they expect Dracula," King said in an interview taped for today's "Good Morning America" on ABC. "Of course, I'm just a guy from Maine — just a normal guy."

The 44-year-old author said he considers the 1986 horror film "Maximum Overdrive," which he wrote and directed, his biggest clunker. The film starred Marla Maples, Donald Trump's on-and-off fiancee.

"The one claim to fame I got out of that particular movie was when Marla and 'the Donald' started to have their hot romance, all the tabloid shows pulled their footage from 'Maximum Overdrive,'" he said.

Other films based on King's stories include "The Shining," "The Dead Zone" and "The Lawnmower Man."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — First lady Barbara Bush put in two cents Tuesday to push Sealey Elementary School past the 1 million mark in its penny collection drive.

In return, the school gave her an 1859 white gold Indian head penny.

Cheryl Cliett, chair of the penny project, told Mrs. Bush the school hoped the penny would be lucky for her. The coin is the oldest one collected in the drive and is worth $5.50.

In the Common Cents for Education project, the school collected one million pennies as pupils math, science and history lessons from the drive. The $10,000 collected in the project will be used for library books.

"This program is absolutely wonderful," Mrs. Bush said during her hour-long visit at the school. She said she had a favorite school in Houston that she will tell of the project.

"You've taken one small, excellent idea about a small copper coin and made it into hundreds of other excellent ideas for projects that help kids learn in hundreds of different ways," Mrs. Bush said.

JUPITER, Fla. — Palm Beach County commissioners are giving their seal of approval to Burt Reynolds' production studio west of here.

Reynolds

While the county's favorite son has used metal barns on his 160-acre ranch for years to produce commercials, movies and television shows, the show biz activity is technically out of line with zoning and land use laws.

On Monday, county commissioners took the first step toward clearing up the problem by agreeing to change the land-use label on the land.

Most who addressed commissioners supported the plan, saying Reynolds has been a good neighbor. They said the production studio could serve as a launching pad for an industry that would provide jobs.

A few complained it was out of character for the rural area.

"There goes the peace and quiet in the neighborhood," said Katherine Stambaugh.

PHILADELPHIA — Television talk show hostess Sally Jessy Raphael is selling her Bucks County bed and breakfast, and the family retreat next to where her daughter died in February.

The asking price is $1.8 million for the 155-year-old Isaac Stover House and the barn that was converted into a seven-bedroom retreat for her eight unmarried children.

Neither Raphael nor her manager-husband, Karl Soderlund, has visited the property since the Feb. 2 death of her 33-year-old daughter, Allison Vladimir. But her spokeswoman, Cindy Schneider, denied the death was the reason the property was for sale.

"Sally and Karl have just decided to spend some time traveling," she told the Philadelphia Daily News. "They'd been thinking about selling long before this happened."

A coroner's report said Vladimir, who suffered from back pain, died accidentally from the combined effects of several legally prescribed drugs and non-prescription drugs.
