City secures land for possible park

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials completed a deal Monday for 60 acres of undeveloped property which may be converted into Midland's second-largest park.

The city acquired the land, located in the Fairgrounds Addition in southeast Midland, from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for $49,500.

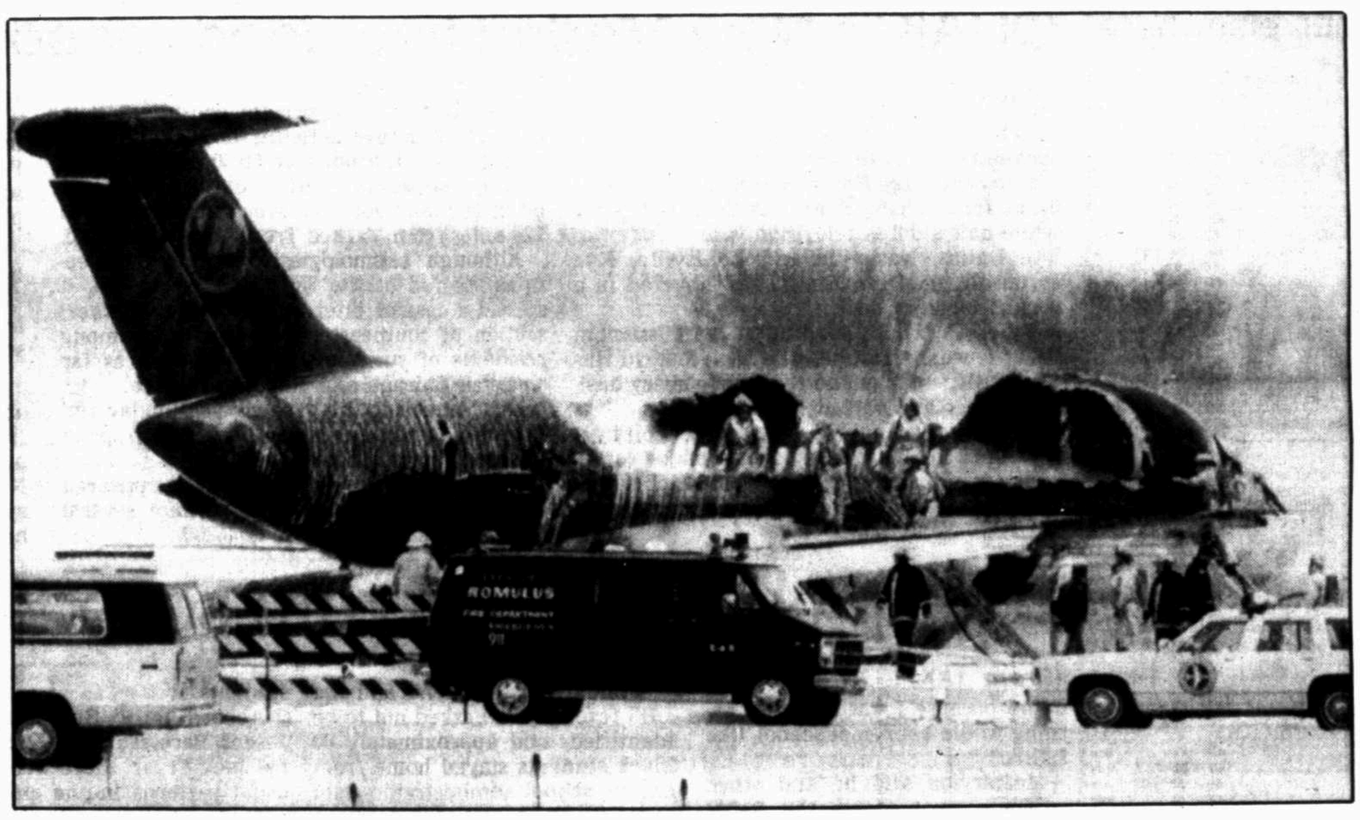

"Hey, we stole that land at $825 an acre," said George Logan, city community services director.

Although the City Council has the final say on how the property is used, Logan said he and his staff eagerly are drawing plans on how to develop the area into a community park.

Jetliners collide; 8 dead

A Northwest Airlines DC-9 burns on the runway at Detroit Metro Airport Monday afternoon after colliding in the fog with another Northwest jetliner. At least eight passengers were killed.

■ It was not immediately clear what caused the on-ground collision between a DC-9 and a Boeing 727 at the Detroit airport.

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — A jetliner clipped another while preparing to take off from the Detroit airport in heavy fog Monday, igniting a fire that left one plane in smoking ruins. Eight people were killed and at least 21 injured, officials said.

It was not immediately clear what caused the collision between a DC-9 and a Boeing 727-200, both operated by Northwest Airlines. A spokesman for air traffic controllers said the DC-9 appeared to have become lost on a slick, foggy taxiway and strayed into the 727's path.

For nearly an hour after the accident, smoke billowed out of the fuselage of the DC-9, where passengers apparently became trapped by the fast-moving fire. By the time the fire was extinguished, much of the plane's roof was open to the overcast sky.

Officials had initially said that 19 people were killed, but Northwest officials and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara later said that was wrong.

McNamara said the medical examiner had "swept through the wreckage twice" and found eight bodies.

Northwest spokesman Doug Miller said the airline had checked passenger lists and accounted for everyone except eight people, who were presumed to be the victims. He said 21 people remained in hospitals Monday evening.

The DC-9, Flight 1482 to Pittsburgh, was carrying 39 passengers and four crewmembers, according to the airline. The 727, Flight 299 to Memphis, was carrying 146 passengers.

Both flights had originated in Detroit, said Patrick McCann, a Northwest spokesman at its headquarters in Eagan,

Passengers: 'My God, we've hit another plane'

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — John Izzo's eyes had closed and he was drifting into sleep as Northwest Flight 1482 taxied toward the runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Izzo, a nuclear engineer, was on his way home to Pittsburgh.

The next thing he knew, "I heard a bang, felt a thud, and then all of a sudden, there was a blast."

Flight 1482 — a Northwest Airlines DC-9 — had been hit by the wing of another jet and was on fire. Izzo jumped from a window, over the left wing and onto the runway, slippery with slush.

"I just watched the fire spread across the plane and engulf the entire fuselage," he said.

Izzo was among the lucky ones Monday, one of those who escaped unhurt from the inferno that engulfed Flight 1482. Within an hour of his escape, a charred hulk was all that remained of the jet, its ceiling open to the sky.

It was not immediately clear how or why it happened, or how many people had died. This much appeared certain: Another Northwest jet, a Boeing 727 departing for Memphis, clipped the DC-9 on the taxiway, setting it on fire. The wing of the 727 was badly damaged, but the rest of the plane was intact and its 146 passengers were able to escape without serious injury.

Passengers on the Memphis-bound plane, Flight 299, said the collision felt like a heavy, dull thud.

"I thought the tire had blown out," said Robert Karp, 60, of Jackson, Miss. "The front end of the plane had begun to lift off. I don't think the back wheels were off the ground yet."

Some Lee students protest school flag by staying home

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

An undetermined number of Lee High School students staged a silent protest against the Confederate flag Monday by not attending school.

"I knew something was going on when I got on the bus and hardly anyone was on it," said Derina Dickens, an LHS sophomore, who takes the school bus which departs from Lee Freshman school.

Derina said that when she attended her second-period class and found out that some students were staying home in protest of Confederate symbols used at the high school, she left campus, too.

"I'm not going back to school until next Monday," she said. "More students will be staying home Tuesday."

Aaron McMaryion, an LHS sophomore, said that since the results of the student-body vote was announced, "things have been bad for all blacks." Aaron, who stayed home Monday, said he was upset to see white students wearing clothing made from fabric resembling the Confederate flag on Friday, the day of the vote. "The blacks were out-voted," he said. "There have been a lot of arguments, and I stayed Scattered high-level clouds lined portions of North Texas skies, and northerly winds gusted up to 30 mph. Afternoon temperatures reached the 40s and 50s in most areas.

Temperature readings at 3 p.m. ranged from 39 in Guadalupe Pass to 70 at Harlingen.

The forecast called for sunny days and cold nights through Wednesday morning. Tuesday's highs were expected in the 50s in West Texas, the 60s across North Texas and near 70 along the southern tip of the state.

Evening lows were expected to range from the 20s in the Big Bend and in parts of North Texas to the 40s in South Texas.

CITY: Park to be community play field

(From 1A)

even tennis, volleyball and basketball courts may be built there, Logan said.

"We definitely want to get a good plan for it soon, have the council approve it and move forward," he said. "The site lends itself very well to a community play-field park."

He said a plan likely would not go before the council for review until February 1991, with the development phase taking between 18 and 24 months to complete.

If the council approves converting the land into a park, Logan said the next hurdle to clear is securing the money to develop the property and the manpower to maintain it. The costs have not been estimated yet, he said.

He said park-starved east Midland residents deserve a large recreational facility.

"There's not a standard community-sized playground park anywhere in the area," he said. "It's going to be an important addition to the east side."

If approved, the park's size would be second to Hogan Park, which covers 120 acres in northeast Midland, not including the Hogan Park Golf Course. Other parks in east Midland do not even compare in size, such as the 19-acre Washington Park and 13-acre Hidalgo Park.

The new park would be located about half-mile north of U.S. Highway 80, with Fairgrounds Road as the west border and Scharbauer Draw as the east border.

Logan said the site also may become home for four Midland Junior Baseball Association baseball fields for teen-age players.

In early October, Jim Stanton, MJBA commissioner, presented councilmen with a proposal to build two baseball complexes, one for teen-agers and another for little-league players.

Stanton said his organization would finance the bleachers, lights, concrete, fences and other hardware if the city would provide the land.

On Monday, he said he was elated with the news that land in the proposed park may be set aside for a baseball complex.

The MJBA hopes to build at least two ball fields for teen-age players by the end of 1992, Stanton said. "We need two to solve our current problems and two to help us in the future," he said.

With existing playing fields becoming more crowded as more youngsters become involved in baseball leagues here, the organization needs the teen-age and Little League fields as soon as possible, he said.

The MJBA launched a fund-raising effort about six weeks ago, Stanton said. He estimated it would take about $600,000 in contributions from local businesses and foundations to build the complexes.

"We're optimistic," Stanton said of the drive. "We've made some contacts."

Logan said city officials still are working on acquiring property for a Little League complex.

A 1990 MJBA study shows that the number of players in the league has more than doubled since 1983, going from about 1,175 to about 2,900 this year. MJBA players range in age from 5 to 18.

The number of Little League players, who range in age from 8 to 12, has almost doubled, going from about 790 in 1983 to about 1,400 in 1990. The teen-age numbers have shown a slight increase, rising to about 400 this year from about 225 seven years ago.

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the council likely will be amenable to plans to turn the Fairgrounds Addition land into a community park and baseball complex.

"The idea in the beginning was to acquire it for a multi-use park," Faircloth said. "We're almost going to have a Hogan-type park there.

"It helps baseball. It helps the eastside residents. It's going to be a win-win situation."

JETLINERS: Visibility was poor, ground wet

(From 1A)

Minn.

"Apparently the right wing of the 727 hit the aft section, the engine, of the DC9, taking the engine off," said Alan Muncaster, another Northwest spokesman. "That resulted in the fire. That, at this point, is all we know."

At the time of the crash, visibility was poor and the ground was wet from a morning snow and sleet storm that delayed flights at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Muncaster said the airport had been closed to inbound traffic but that planes were being allowed to take off.

Tony Dresden, a spokesman for the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, a union representing air traffic controllers, said there was about a quarter-mile visibility in the air, but only about 800 feet on the ground.

"We've had some discussions with our people out there," Dresden said. "The DC-9 pilot became lost on the runways. The pilot gave the ground controller erroneous information about his position and turned right onto the runway where the 727 was taxiing.

"The DC-9 pilot discovered at the very last moment where he was, and so the ground controller told him to immediately get off that runway, but it was too late."

He stressed that his information was preliminary. The Federal Aviation Administration, which supervises air traffic controllers, did not immediately comment about Dresden's statement.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board were being dispatched to begin a probe aimed at determining the cause of the accident, a safety board spokesman said.

One survivor from the DC-9, 41-year-old John Izzo, said he was dozing when he "heard a bang, felt a thud and then all of a sudden, there was a blast."

"I saw the fire to the right rear. The whole top burned away, but something was definitely blown away because something flew over my head," said Izzo, a Westinghouse nuclear engineer who was returning to Pittsburgh from a business trip.

QUAKE: New Madrid has good reason to be nervous watch each other and some merely to buy souvenirs to prove they were here.

Many thronged Hap's Tavern as it opened at 6 a.m. for an all-day Shake, Rattle 'n' Roll party while half a dozen television vans from cities like Dallas, Nashville and Louisville, Ky., sprouting giant satellite dishes, hovered in a vacant lot next door.

Other TV trucks lined up at the Mississippi River levee, beside the little New Madrid Historical Museum, and dotted nearly every business street and vacant lot.

The reason, of course, was a projection by a New Mexico climatologist that a major earthquake was likely to occur Dec. 3, plus or minus 48 hours, along the New Madrid (pronounced MAD-rid) Fault Zone.

Iben Browning, a private consultant with credentials in several fields, though not in seismology, put the odds at 50-50 that such an earthquake would occur in that five-day period in the fault zone, an area stretching about 120 miles from Marked Tree, Ark. to Cairo, Ill.

Although seismologiests with few exceptions scoffed at the Browning projection, it spread a case of jitters through this Bootheel section of southeastern Missouri and among residents of surrounding states, even as far away as Chicago and Kansas City, Mo.

Most schools in this area closed Monday and Tuesday, and many residents decided to spend this week vacationing elsewhere.

But for every resident who left, it appeared that at least one visitor and perhaps several had arrived in this town of 3,200.

Besides news reporters and photographers, including one representing a newspaper in Prague, Czechoslovakia, they included Missouri's Gov. John Ashcroft, and Sen. Christopher Bond, both Republicans.

"If the earth even shivers here it will be the best-recorded event in Missouri history. And even if nothing happens, it's going to be the best-recorded non-event," said Virginia Carlson, the museum's director.

New Madrid has good reason to be nervous about earthquake talk. In 1811 and 1812 it was the epicenter of a series of earthquakes, some of which were the most severe to strike the North American continent in recorded history. Some were so severe that they rang church bells as far away as the East Coast.

STUDENTS: Open forum scheduled for Friday

(From 1A)

home because I was afraid something would happen at school, like fights."

McMaryion said he and other students want to see the Rebel flag, song "Dixie" and school club practice of "buying a slave for a day" banned.

One irate mother of an LHS student said, "I kept my daughter out of school because she has been threatened by other students, and I'm going to keep her out this week."

The mother said the Rebel flag conflict was never a conflict between students. "The adults started this," she said. "The kids were brought into it by being forced to vote on the school symbols. Now, things have escalated to the point where we are having racial problems, and the school board's open forum Friday will be nothing short of explosive."

Several students said that one young man attempted to "torch" a Rebel flag twice during the lunch hour Monday, but was unsuccessful in lighting the flag from a book of matches.

While parents, students and one LHS teacher, who asked not to be identified, said approximately 60 black students stayed home from school, school administrators said there was no significant decrease in attendance from Friday.

Larry Lusby, executive director of computer services, said that about 42 black students were absent one or more periods Monday.

"There were about 200 students absent at Lee High School Monday," Lusby said. "But many students may leave for one period and don't bring their excuse to the office when they return to school, so they are counted absent until it is cleared up the next day."

Lusby said he went to the LHS campus at 4:15 p.m. Monday to compile an attendance report at the superintendent's request. "Lee High School usually has about 93 to 94 percent attending on an average daily basis," he said. "So, if you use the average daily attendance for that purpose, then there were more absent than usual — about 90 percent attendance based on an enrollment of nearly 2,000 students."

According to Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. and LHS Principal Jack Fryar, there were no unusual patterns in the attendance record and no disturbances at the high school.

"We just want to resolve this issue," Fryar said. The principal said he wanted to "get on with the business" of operating a school. "The main issue here is that students have voted to get their symbols into compliance. We will have an open forum for the public on Friday," he said.

Fryar said although some students are upset at the outcome of the vote, "The basis of democracy is compromise. People have to realize that."

George Cooper, principal of Lee Freshman School, said, "There was no big jump in the number of students absent. About 10 percent were absent, which is not anything abnormal. We usually have about 5 or 10 percent students absent."

Cooper also said that no absences were reported as protests. "We had only illness and typical reasons reported," he said.

Some parents who called the Reporter-Telegram said they were holding their children out of school to disrupt the learning process because the Texas Education Agency said they wouldn't intervene unless the learning/teaching process was disrupted.

Julius Gordan, TEA spokesperson in Austin, said keeping students home from school could be viewed as disrupting the learning process. "That is just a general distinction, however," he said.

"The commission would have to make a determination as to whether it was a real disruption based on events that are happening. For example, what is going on on campus? Is there picketing? Is the school still a quiet place in which to learn? Or are classes being conducted in a normal manner?"

Gordan said the TEA would not step in until a complaint had been filed. "And it would be a long way down the road before the TEA would intervene," he said.

LOWS: High-pressure system moves through 20 degrees, set in 1934, the meteorologist said.

He said the season's lowest temperatures are compliments of a cold front coupled with a high-pressure area covering the western two-thirds of the United States.

Warmer temperatures are expected today.

The high pressure moved in behind a storm system that dumped more than a foot of snow on parts of the upper Midwest and Great Lakes region moved eastward Monday, while thunderstorms rumbled over the South.

In hard-hit Iowa, high winds and heavy snows brought much of the state to a standstill. Airports closed for part of the day in Dubuque, Ottumwa and Sioux City. A plastic bubble covering the University of Iowa's football workout field ripped open, but no injuries were reported.

Up to 14 inches of snow fell in central and southeast Iowa, with drifts 2 to 4 feet deep. Winds gusting up to 56 mph whipped the snow, leaving cars and trucks stranded along roadways.

Snowfalls of as much as 10 inches fell across south-central Wisconsin. Winds gusted up to 50 mph, leaving behind snow drifts up to 6 feet deep. Up to a foot of snow fell in southeastern Minnesota.

The storm continued moving eastward later Monday, with up to 6 inches of snow falling in western New York. Winter storm warnings were posted for today in northern Maine.

Locally, today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-50s and 5 to 15 mph southeast to south winds, according to the NWS in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be mostly clear with a low in the low 30s, NWS said. Wednesday's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-60s, NWS said.

Thunderstorms rumbled across the South Monday, extending from southeast Louisiana across southern Mississippi and southwest Alabama into the Florida Panhandle.

Tornadoes touched down in Alabama. Five persons were injured and mobile homes were destroyed in a tornado in northwest Harrison County.

Thunderstorm winds gusted to near 60 mph at Milton, Fla.

Elsewhere, rain fell in Maryland, New Jersey, southern Pennsylvania, Ohio, and southwestern lower Michigan, and freezing rain was scattered over northwest Pennsylvania and other parts of lower Michigan. Rain also dampened western Washington state, changing to snow in higher elevations.

The morning low in the Lower 48 states was 8 degrees below zero at Gunnison, Colo.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. CST ranged from 15 degrees at International Falls, Minn., to 88 degrees at El Cajon, Calif.

Carolina lawmakers sentenced

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A former state representative got a 6½-year prison term and an ex-state senator was given six months at a halfway house Monday, the first sentences handed out after a federal probe of bribery at the Statehouse.

The probe has led to bribery charges against nine lawmakers and drug charges against a 10th lawmaker and a lobbyist.

Former state Rep. Luther Taylor "brought great shame on elected officials and the citizens of this state, such that it would cause all of us to hang our heads in shame for letting it come into being," U.S. District Judge Falcon Hawkins said at a sentencing hearing.

Hawkins gave Taylor the maximum prison term allowed under federal sentencing guidelines.

Bush proclaims 'new era of hope' in South America

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Bush shrugged off a military revolt in Argentina and proclaimed "a new era of hope" in newly democratic South America as he opened a five-nation tour Monday. Bush vowed not to skip a visit to Buenos Aires.

The administration expressed confidence the uprising would be quelled quickly, but Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said: "If the situation became such that there was a real danger to his security, I'm sure we'd take another look at it."

The Argentine crisis threw a cloud over Bush's week-long mission, intended to celebrate the sweep of democracy throughout the hemisphere. It also obscured Bush's message that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was driving up oil prices and forcing poor countries to pay high fuel bills that they could ill afford.

Francisco Rezek, foreign minister of Brazil, called the revolt in Argentina "a step backward for democracy in Latin America."

The Bush administration took another view.

Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Monday evening that the situation in Buenos Aires "does appear to be improving" and that Argentine President Carlos Menem was in control.

"It is not a large-scale uprising," Fitzwater said. "My argument would be that fundamentally democracy in Argentina is working and when this is over it will demonstrate the roots of democracy in Argentina are fairly deep."

Bush said he would not abandon a planned stop Wednesday in Buenos Aires, where Menem declared a state of siege, suspending constitutional guarantees, after the fourth military uprising in four years.

Administration officials accompanying Bush talked throughout the day with U.S. Embassy officials in Buenos Aires. "We intend to carry out that portion of the trip," Eagleburger said.

The rebellious soldiers said they were not trying to overthrow the government but wanted to force changes in the way the military is run.

There also was violence in Chile, another stop on Bush's trip, as bombs exploded in a chapel and in the offices of two right-wing political parties. There were no injuries. An anonymous caller said the blasts were a protest of Bush's visit.

Bush arrived in Brasilia at dawn after an overnight flight from Washington, accompanied by a mostly junior staff. He was greeted by a 21-gun salute and military pageantry at the pillared Plantalto Palace, the workplace of President Fernando Collor de Mello.

The day ended with announcement of approval by Bush to license the sale of a high-performance computer sought by Brazil for more than two years. The step was taken to reward Brazil for agreeing, along with Argentina, to renounce any intention to proceed with nuclear programs with a military dimension.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III remained in Washington to testify before Congress on the Persian Gulf. The White House chief of staff, John Sununu, and the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, also found reasons to stay home.

While celebrating the rebirth of democracy in South America, Bush put a strong emphasis on the Persian Gulf crisis and Iraq's takeover of Kuwait.

Bush said Czechoslovakia, where he visited last month, is paying $1.5 billion in additional fuel costs because of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's refusal to retreat.

Bush raised the gulf crisis again during a speech to the Brazilian Congress. "I realize the sacrifices that Saddam's brutality has caused this nation and its people, has caused many nations around the world."

He mentioned the fuel estimates for Czechoslovakia and Brazil and said it was the direct result of "the brutality and the aggression of Saddam Hussein."

The military trouble in Argentina put a cloud over Bush's tribute to the sweep of democracy in the Western Hemisphere. Administration officials played down the problem. One official referred to it as "an inter-military squabble."

Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson said, "There's a small group in the military that has certain grievances and every once in a while something like this happens."

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the incident apparently was intended to embarrass Menem before Bush's visit. He said Bush would not alter his schedule.

Bush told the Brazilian Congress, "All of us have been galvanized by a new era of hope and opportunity throughout the Americas, especially here in Brazil."

He hailed the "extraordinary political and economic change that is transforming the face of this hemisphere" and described Brazil as a leader in this effort.

In particular, Bush cited Collor's efforts at reducing the size of the state, privatizing enterprises, combating inflation and liberalizing trade.

These steps, he said, "are the keys to growth and prosperity in the global economy of the 21st century."

Argentine military puts down uprising

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The military crushed a daylong uprising Monday by hundreds of rebels demanding a shake-up in the army high command. At least 13 people were killed.

The right-wing insurrection occurred two days before President Bush, in Brasilia on the first leg of a South American trip, was to visit. U.S. officials who closely monitored the situation to the south said Bush will arrive as scheduled Wednesday.

The uprising was the fourth and bloodiest in less than four years in Argentina, where democracy was restored in 1983 after nearly eight years of harsh military rule.

The rebellion collapsed Monday night after tanks surrounded army headquarters, the one remaining rebel stronghold, and the last mutineers surrendered. Warplanes earlier bombed two columns of rebel tanks.

"The triumph of the armed forces was absolute," President Carlos Menem told a news conference. "The surrender was unconditional."

About 420 rebels — soldiers and civilians — surrendered, army officials said. Others were being sought. Rebel leader Col. Enrique Baraldini was among those arrested.

Monday's rebel leaders may face the death penalty. "The military code of justice contemplates that possibility," Menem said. "The full measure of law will be applied."

Before dawn, hundreds of mutineers and armed civilians took over army headquarters in downtown Buenos Aires, two blocks from Government House; the Palermo infantry base 5 miles to the north; the Boulogne tank factory 16 miles northwest; and at least two other installations.

In contrast to three previous insurrections dating to April 1987, during Raul Alfonsin's presidency, Menem — in his 16th month of power — refused to negotiate.

"This is an attempted coup d'etat and will be treated as such," he said after declaring a state of siege.

Firefights raged all day in and near this capital of 11 million residents, capped just before nightfall by air force planes bombing rebel tanks on public roads.

At least seven soldiers, one rebel and five civilians died before order was restored, the government news agency Telam reported. The civilians were in a bus hit by a tank.

Twenty people were injured in that crash, Telam reported. At least 11 soldiers and one rebel were shot and wounded, the army said, along with at least 10 civilians, local news agencies reported.

Menem said banks and foreign exchange houses would reopen Tuesday following the bank holiday declared Monday by the Economy Ministry.

Jorge Newbery metropolitan airport was reopened Monday night. The state of siege, suspending constitutional guarantees, will be lifted by week's end, Menem said.

The insurrection, broadcast live on television and radio, disrupted Buenos Aires.

Banks were ordered closed at 1:30 p.m. Federal employees sent home two hours later. The stock exchange closed early.

State gets 11 new federal judges under legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — When 11 new federal judges take their seats on the bench in Texas, they should be ready to don their robes and start hearing cases as the war on drugs overloads dockets around the state, the chief judge of the Western District said Monday.

President Bush signed legislation Saturday creating 85 federal judgeships nationwide, with Texas getting more new federal district judges than any other state.

Texas' federal courts are among the busiest in the nation, swamped by drug cases that are causing delays in some districts' civil dockets, officials said.

Asked if he had a message for the three new judges who will be assigned to the Western District, Chief Judge Lucius Bunton said: "Get your robes on and get to work. ... Come to the bench and be prepared to try a number of lawsuits, criminal and civil."

Bunton said more lawsuits per judge have been tried in his district over the past two fiscal years than anywhere else in the country.

The district, which runs from El Paso east to Austin and San Antonio, also led the country in 1989 in the number of drug cases filed per judge. The Southern District ranked third, according to figures from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, which uses a formula that ranks cases per judge based on their complexity.

Under that formula, the Western, Southern and Northern districts of Texas ranked third, fourth and fifth nationally in weighted filings per judge.

Under the plan signed into law by the president, the Southern District will get five new judges. Another two will be assigned to the Northern District, and the Eastern District gets one. The state now has 36 federal district judges.

"I'm glad that he signed the bill," Bunton said Monday. "We do need three additional judges and the quicker we can get them on board, the better. We'll still have caseloads above the national average with the three additional judges ... but we can handle it."

'I'm glad that he signed the bill. We do need three additional judges and the quicker we can get them on board, the better. We'll still have caseloads above the national average with the three additional judges ... but we can handle it.'

Judge Lucius Bunton, Western District of Texas

Bunton said he hoped the new judges could be on the bench, at the earliest, in June, and, at the latest, by this time next year. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, will recommend candidates for the judgeships to the president. The president's nominees are subject to Senate approval.

Gramm said he had already begun efforts to evaluate candidates for the 11 judgeships. Gramm said he will have appointed 64 percent of the federal district judges in Texas once the 11 are confirmed and two other judges in the process of being considered have their nominations finalized. In his first six years in the Senate, Gramm has seen 16 of his nominees finalized.

"It's a great opportunity to have a lasting impact on the federal judiciary," said Gramm, just re-elected to a second term.

According to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the Southern and Western Districts, which include 889 miles of U.S.-Mexico border, "are on the front line in the war against drugs." Judges in the two districts sentenced 23 percent of all defendants in the entire country in a recent 16-month period.

"The need for the 11 additional federal judges in Texas is clearly documented," Bentsen said. "Federal court dockets in Texas are seriously overloaded. It takes years to try civil cases because of the backlog of drug cases."

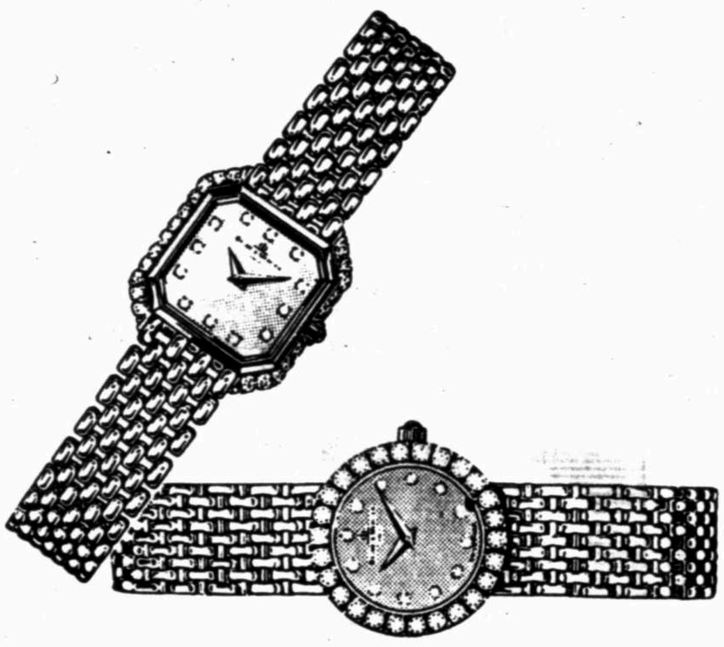

In a statement, President Bush said the additional judicial resources "will provide needed assistance in our fight against crime and drugs by enhancing our courts' ability to provide swift and fair justice."

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Sanctions won't work, Cheney says

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney Monday escalated the Bush administration's call for military action against Iraq, saying economic sanctions won't work and suggesting that now, rather than later, is the time to "to deal with" Saddam Hussein.

The top Pentagon official's remarks, the most clear-cut repudiation of economic sanctions by a senior Bush administration official, said the international economic blockade put into place after Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 cannot force an Iraqi withdrawal.

Army Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, buttressed the Pentagon chief's saber rattling by questioning the effectiveness of sanctions and outlining an all-out U.S. military campaign in the event of war.

The hard-line talk appeared to be an effort to keep up military pressure on Iraq as the administration fleshed out a last-minute diplomatic initiative for face-to-face talks with the Iraqi president designed to end the 4-month-old stalemate in the Persian Gulf.

The unusually forthright comments by Cheney and Powell before the Senate Armed Services Committee followed President Bush's announcement Friday that an 11th-hour peace offensive was being launched before the Jan. 15 deadline set forth in a United Nations Security Council resolution authorizing nations to take "all necessary means" to drive Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Bush Friday conceded he was unable to gauge the effect of the U.N. economic sanctions. "Clearly the sanctions are having some effect," the president said. "But I can't tell you that the sanctions alone will get the job done."

Diplomats from the United States and Iraq are discussing the scheduling of visits to Washington by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and a visit to Baghdad by Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the two nations had agreed to limit the teams to representatives of each nation in an apparent move to prevent Saddam from inviting participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization to broaden the agenda to the Arab-Israeli question.

The United States does not have "an indefinite period of time to wait for the sanctions to have their desired effect," Cheney told the Senate panel. American allies such as Turkey, Jordan, Poland and Czechoslovakia are suffering because of suspended Iraqi oil deliveries, Cheney said.

"There is no guarantee that sanctions will force him out of Kuwait," Cheney said. "Given the nature of the regime, given Saddam Hussein's brutality to his own people, his very tight control of that society, his ability to allocate resources for the military, their ability to produce their own food ... he can ride them out."

A hardship on the Iraqi population "does not necessarily translate into a changed attitude on Saddam Hussein's part," Cheney said.

Sanctions give Saddam "a long breathing space" and enable him to try to "work around the embargo, break up the alliance, enhance his military strength in Kuwait and move ahead on his nuclear weapons program," Cheney said.

"My personal view is that it is far better for us to deal with him now, while the coalition is in tact, while we have the United Nations behind us, while we have some 26 other nations assembled with military forces in the gulf, than it will be for us to deal with him five or 10 years from now when the members of the coalition have gone their disparate ways and when (Saddam) has become an even better armed and more threatening regional superpower than he is at present."

Powell, the nation's top uniformed officer and the military adviser to the president, echoed Cheney's assessment that sanctions alone cannot force Iraqi withdrawal. "No one knows if and when they will work," Powell said, adding that sanctions leave the timing of an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait "entirely in his hands."

Powell also derided what he called "nice, tidy, allegedly low-cost neat-work options" such as "surgical" bombing of Iraqi targets as a way to gradually step up pressure on Iraq.

"These strategies are not decisive. They're not success oriented," Powell said. If the U.S.-led coalition goes to war, Powell warned, it will be in a "combined, overwhelming air, land and sea campaign" leaving Saddam two choices regarding his military machine: "The question they will have to consider is do they move it or lose it."

Several Democrats on the panel urged restraint.

Cheney's impatience with sanctions prompted Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to inject, "If we have a war, we're never going to know whether (sanctions) would have worked, would we?"

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., suggested that the United States "be patient in applying military force" and that sanctions be given "an opportunity" to weaken Saddam "so that if it becomes necessary to use the option of military force, we will have perhaps saved some lives of American boys."

Texas women seeking hostages' freedom

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Three women from Texas, ignoring State Department warnings that they may be risking their lives, left Monday for Iraq determined to gain the release of their family members held hostage.

Amid farewell tears and hugs from friends and family, the women left the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport shortly before 1 p.m. CST.

Willie Carr of North Richland Hills and Jennifer Williams of Dallas, said the trip is necessary to end more than four months of worrying.

Mrs. Carr will try to obtain the release of her husband, Gary, an oilfield worker, and Ms. Williams will be seeking the release of her father, Stuart Williams.

"This is the only thing I feel I can do because I've been helpless ever since Aug. 2," said Ms. Williams, a 24-year-old student at Southern Methodist University. Ms. Williams' stepmother, Charlene Courte, has refused to leave Iraq until her husband is released.

"This is the only thing I can do besides watch TV and hope for some good news," Ms. Williams said.

Donnita Cole of Odessa, left in hopes of bringing back her husband, John, an oilfield worker who was captured at his home in Kuwait.

The three women, along with Kevin Hale, 17, of Spring, and Bharati Bhatt of League City, who departed from Houston, were among 17 people from across the United States scheduled to fly out of New York for Amman, Jordan, Monday night.

From there, they will fly to Baghdad on Tuesday night or Wednesday morning for reunions with their family members.

Kim Edwards of Carson City, Nev., and a hostage support group, Coming Home, in Champaign, Ill., helped organize the trip. A second group plans to leave for Iraq Dec. 19.

Mrs. Carr said she was frustrated with U.S. efforts at freeing the hostages, taken after Saddam Hussein's Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait.

"I've waited for our United States government to do something for four months," said Mrs. Carr. "They have not gone over to start talks. They have not gone over to negotiate with them.

"I told the State Department that I could not wait any longer."

Ms. Williams said protests from the State Department and her father couldn't stop her from making the trip.

"I told Dad I'm coming and he didn't have a choice," she said.

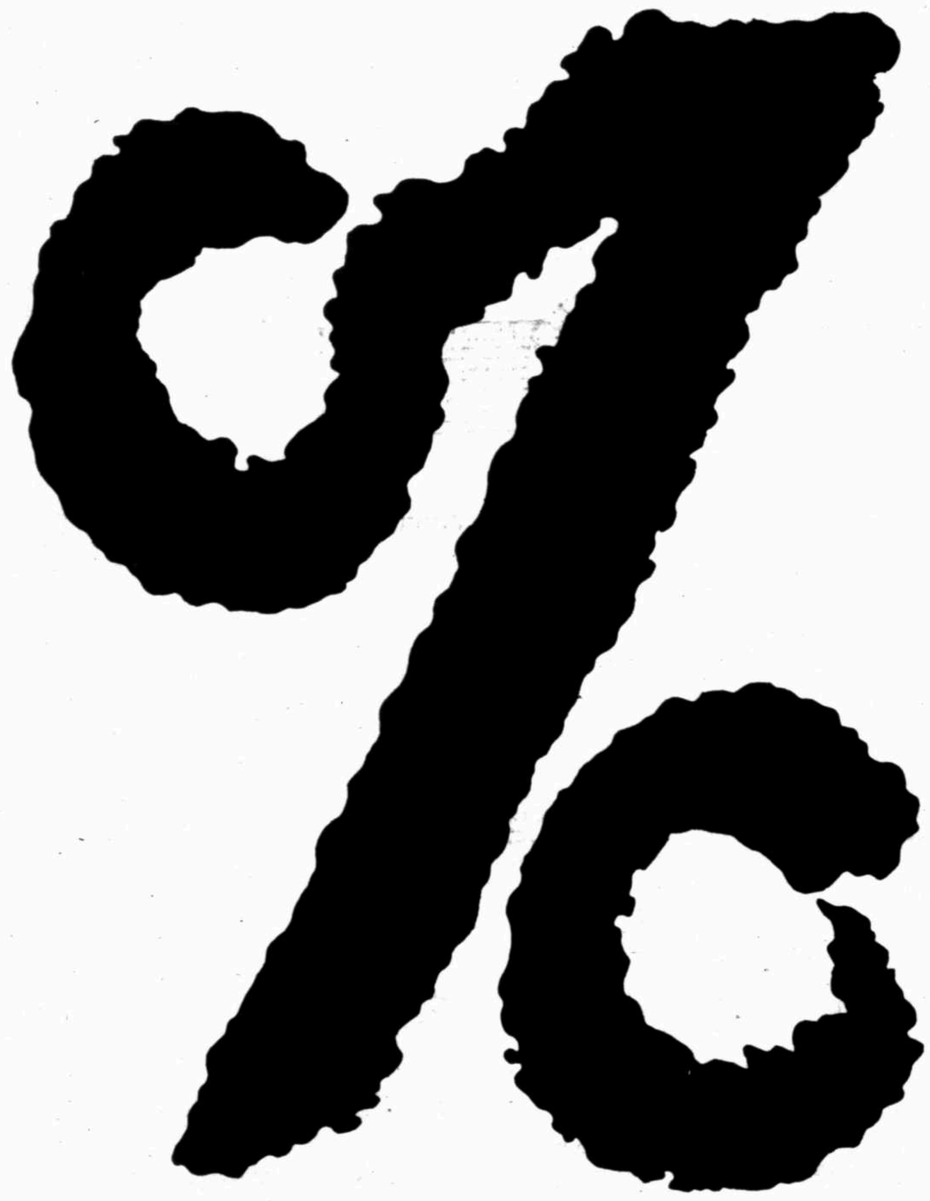

Many of the relatives who stayed behind Monday, wept as the women boarded the plane.

Heather LaFon, 21, spoke of her father Gary Carr, who has yet to meet her husband of one month. "I miss being hugged by him," she said.

Mrs. LaFon said the couple plan a wedding ceremony after her father's safe return.

German election sets new course

Germany's first free election in 58 years was held Sunday and the results were, although not surprising, at least hopeful for the future of the unified state. Chancellor Helmut Kohl's center-right coalition won sound approval.

Kohl rode to victory on the strength of his coalition of the Christian Democrats, its Bavarian sister party and the Free Democrats, winning 54.8 percent of the vote.

The German chancellor had a custom-made public-relations ploy in the removal of the Berlin Wall, East Germany's peaceful revolution that began in October 1989 and reunification of the two German states in a world atmosphere that stressed caution. Kohl was obviously elated with the Christian Democrats' victory.

"This is a day of great joy," he told well-wishers following the election. "This is a great success and something to be proud of."

In the wake of one Communist-led government after another being overturned in Eastern Europe during the past year, it didn't really come as a surprise that East Germany's former ruling Communist Party, now called the Party for Democratic Socialism, did not win. The Communists won 17 seats in the new parliament, but even that number did not equate with the support the party had experienced earlier this year.

That seems to indicate that taken as a whole, Germans will opt for Kohl's moderate leadership to direct their state in its first unified steps since Adolph Hitler took control in early 1933 and started Germany on a crash course with the world that culminated in World War II.

It's that legacy that engendered suspicion when the German state reunified.

Kohl's government has been viewed as friendly to the United States and the George Bush administration, and in that regard his election as chancellor should be viewed in a positive light.

Germany has a new future and its voters have chosen to start with stable, positive leadership. That has to be viewed as a step in the right direction.

Leasing workers may not curb costs

Your article Sunday, Nov. 18th, on workers' compensation insurance may inadvertently leave the impression that the use of leased employees will automatically reduce costs to the employer. That is not necessarily so.

David Searles, director of technical services for the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas, in a bulletin in March 1989, notes that leasing of employees is not new. There are many firms that provide this service, the established ones being members of National Staff Leasing Association. He emphasizes the necessity of good legal advice in negotiating an employee leasing contract, and also emphasizes that other insurance problems are created by this arrangement.

Searles says that: "Texas courts have no precedent on how to interpret the relationship between parties of an employee leasing arrangement. Such a case is needed, and lawyers across the state will be thankful to any employer willing to volunteer for the honor!"

In other words, be very cautious!

Your article is not clear as to what workers' compensation coverage is provided by ASM, the employee leasing company. Patrick J. Bonds, a Dallas insurance agent, writes in the January 1982 issue of the Texas Insuror, "... there is no alternative program which will give an employer the legal protection which is provided under the Workers' Compensation Act." If the benefits are in all respects the same as provided by the Texas Workers' Compensation system, it is unrealistic to expect ASM to do this for "33 to 50 percent" savings.

It is certain that the current workers' compensation system cannot be funded at reduced premiums. Whether the new law effective Jan. 1, 1991 will be any less expensive, only time will tell. It would be wise to get the best legal and insurance counsel before making major changes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 4, the 338th day of 1990. There are 27 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 4, 1783, Gen. George Washington bade farewell to his officers at Fraunces Tavern in New York. In a choked voice, the departing chief commander of the Continental Army said, "With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you."

On this date:

In 1816, James Monroe of Virginia was elected the fifth president of the United States, defeating Federalist Rufus King.

In 1839, the Whig Party opened a national convention in Harrisburg, Pa., during which delegates nominated William Henry Harrison for president.

In 1875, William Marcy Tweed, the "Boss" of New York City's Tammany Hall political organization, escaped from jail and fled the country.

In 1918, President Wilson set sail for France to attend the Versailles Peace Conference, becoming the first chief executive to travel outside the U.S. while in office.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the dismantling of the Works Progress Administration, which had been created in 1935 to provide work during the Depression.

In 1942, U.S. bombers struck the Italian mainland for the first time in World War II.

In 1945, the Senate approved U.S. participation in the United Nations.

In 1965, 25 years ago, the United States launched Gemini VII with Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Borman and Navy Cmdr. James A. Lovell aboard.

In 1977, Jean-Bedel Bokassa, ruler of the Central African Empire, crowned himself emperor in a ceremony believed to have cost more than $100 million. (Bokassa was deposed in 1979.)

In 1978, San Francisco got its first female mayor as City Supervisor Dianne Feinstein was named to replace the assassinated George Moscone.

Saudis accuse three countries of plot

WASHINGTON — Is the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait the first step in a larger plot by Iraq, Yemen and Jordan to carve up Saudi Arabia and its oil among themselves? Saudi Arabian leaders firmly believe it's true, and that is the compelling reason behind their secret pressure on President Bush to get into a war soon and get it over quickly.

Anderson

"The Plot," as the Saudis call it, is detailed in highly classified Central Intelligence Agency reports.

The Saudis believe the plan was for Iraq to take Kuwait and the northeastern oil fields of Saudi Arabia. Yemen would get a part of southern Saudi Arabia that the Yemenis have long claimed as their rightful land. Jordan would regain the western Hijaz region including the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. That region was ruled by the ancestors of Jordan's King Hussein until the House of Saud booted them out.

The invaders would let the Saudis keep the middle region of the Arabian Peninsula where there is little oil or anything else of value.

Like all conspiracy theories, there are elements of truth to this one. Until U.S. forces moved in, Yemen was perfectly capable of taking a chunk out of Saudi Arabia. The Saudi army is slightly larger than Yemen's, but the Saudi troops are preoccupied on their northern border with Iraq and Kuwait. Yemen, south of Saudi Arabia, could have expected a cakewalk if it invaded.

The Saudis have a superior air force compared to Yemen, but the CIA reports note that Iraq's Saddam Hussein sent a squadron of Iraqi MiG-13s to Yemen just before his invasion of Kuwait.

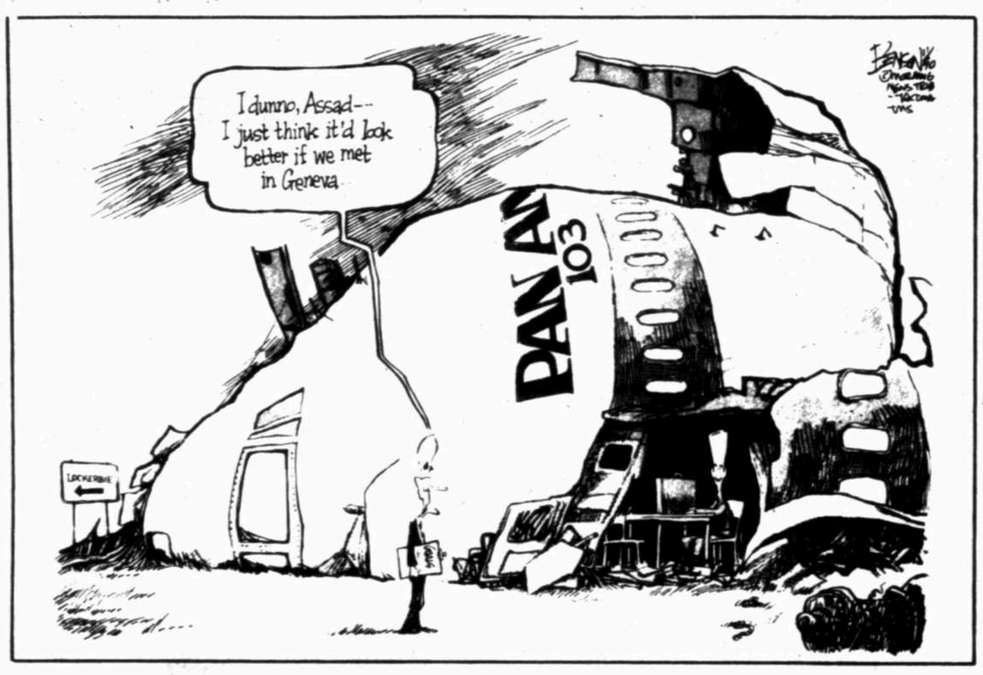

Since the invasion, Yemen and Jordan have leaned toward Saddam. Yemen abstained in U.N. Security Council resolutions condemning Iraq. Similar abstentions in Arab League meetings are interpreted by the Saudis not as neutrality, but as proof of The Plot.

In mid-September, Saudi Arabia ordered Yemeni business owners in Saudi Arabia to find Saudi partners for their businesses, or leave the country. Since then, more than a million Yemenis have sold their businesses and left Saudi Arabia.

The CIA reports say the Saudis believe that Yemen's reward for joining The Plot would have been the three southwestern provinces of Saudi Arabia that were part of Yemen until they were annexed by the Saudis in 1934.

One of those provinces, Najran, is rich in oil, which the impoverished Yemen desperately needs. The difference between the "haves" in Saudi Arabia and the "have nots" in Yemen is vast and has bred animosity between the two nations. The Saudi per capita income is more than 10 times that of Yemen. Saudi Arabia has a superior education system while as many as 90 percent of Yemenis are reportedly illiterate.

Whether or not Yemen cut a deal to slice up Saudi Arabia is now moot with the presence of U.S. troops in the region. Now Yemen is asking the United Nations for $1.6 billion in compensation for abiding by the sanctions against its old friend Iraq. As long as Saudi Arabia believes The Plot was real, Yemen cannot count on the continued foreign aid it was getting from the Saudis.

IT AIN'T OVER — Congressional Democratic leaders will try to force a new civil rights bill on President Bush next year. They have made a commitment to the Congressional Black Caucus. The Democrats are worried that unless Congress does something, the falling standard of living for minorities could rekindle class warfare. Already polls show anger among blacks toward their government. One-fourth of the blacks in New York City believe the government promotes the sale of debilitating drugs among blacks. And one-third believe that the government singles out black officials for investigation as part of a deliberate campaign to discredit them.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Saddam Hussein met with families of some of his hostage "guests" last week and told them that he wanted "peace." We fear Saddam's word lost something in the translation. What he wants is a piece — a piece of Kuwait, a piece of Saudi Arabia, a piece of whatever he can take before he is stopped.

CHARLEY REESE

Step out door and talk to some poor folks

The Heritage Foundation, usually called Washington's conservative think tank, is just another corporate front, and some of its mean-spirited studies reflect that.

One recent backgrounder entitled, "How 'Poor' Are America's Poor?" is a great example. This is one of those reports where statistical games are played to prove the poor are not so bad off, but what it proves is that its authors are about as wise as they are compassionate.

Reese

You don't need to play number games to recognize that you are better off being poor in the United States than being poor in Calcutta or Khartoum. Of course Heritage doesn't point out you are also better off being middle class in the United States than being rich in Calcutta or Khartoum. Once you get past the point of dying of malnutrition, poverty is relative.

But the report is full of statistical tidbits designed to shock folks. Some examples: 62 percent of the poor households own a car, nearly half have airconditioning, 31 percent have microwaves.

Wow! Big deal. It just so happens that in most cities in this country there is such a lack of public transportation that if you don't have a car, you can't work, you can't get to a grocery store, or visit a doctor. A secondhand car, in other words, is not a luxury for the poor. It's a necessity. I suppose the BMW crowd in Washington doesn't understand that, but I grew up in poor country where a lot of the poor had two cars — both on cement blocks and falling apart.

Air conditioners and microwaves are cheap and sold on credit, so what if some people defined by the government as poor have them? The implication is that the Heritage folks believe that the poor ought to suffer more. How dare someone put a cheap window unit in a tenement apartment or buy a microwave for their shabby room. Don't these people know they are supposed to squat around a wood fire in the back yard?

Ironically, for all their statistics piled on statistics, the Heritage proves the liberal case that welfare in this country is stingy. By their own figures, total welfare spending, both cash and in kind, in 1988 was $184.2 billion. Remember that's 184.2 billion out of a $1 trillion budget. It's less than we pay in interest on the public debt. Remember, too, the biggest hunk is Medicare and Medicaid.

The grand finale naturally is the argument that this welfare system is destroying public morals and the nuclear family not to mention the work ethic. There is a big graph showing the rise of illegitimate births among blacks.

Sure, it's harder to persuade people to work long hours in dead-end jobs with no benefits if there is an alternative to the job or starvation. Apparently Heritage would like to return to the good old days of Charles Dickens where, by God, if you didn't take those low-pay jobs, you could just die in the streets.

Some people on welfare may have loose morals, although I don't know on what basis you could compute that. There seems to be no moral standards whatsoever in this country. If you look at the product and behavior of very wealthy people in the entertainment business, not to mention politics and the savings and loan industry, I think you will find the poor on welfare can more than hold their own in the morality department. I'll take a welfare mother any day over a Michael Milken or a Barney Frank.

It's too bad when elitists want to write about poor folks they delve into government and university statistical reports rather than step out the damned door and talk to poor people.

If they would ever actually establish human contact with these people they might actually learn something — not only about poor folks but about this country and, above all, about themselves.

To paraphrase their own report, how smart are the smug? Not very.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

It's time to send old warhorses to pasture

'Oh, father, dear father, come home," the damp-eyed daughter in the 19th century ballad warbled to her soused parent. Whether or not Dad was a congressman, he manifestly acted like one. First he squandered money entrusted to his care; then he refused to go home.

Murchison

Tears and pleadings all too plainly don't work when it comes to prying drunks out of saloons and congressmen out of Washington. Sterner measures are in order.

A new report by the Cato Institute, a libertarian research group, sets forth, clearly and persuasively, the case for limiting congressional terms.

The case is shown to be not just respectable but popular. John H. Fund, the author, points to surveys showing that Americans agree two-to-one on the need for term limitation. "Blacks favor it even more than whites, women more than men," Fund writes. This fall, Oklahoma and California voters limited their legislators' terms, and Coloradans imposed a 12-years-and-out rule (untested in court yet) on their own Congress members.

What a radical notion, inviting our tribunes to come home and live under the laws they helped to write. You never know: It might make them more careful in writing those laws. Fund gleefully quotes former Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who, on buying a Connecticut hotel, lamented that in his long public career he'd never known "the problems of running a business."

Term limitation is no new theory. The Articles of Confederation, our first organic law, embodied it. Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, and Harry Truman all spoke well of it, but the need formerly was less profound. There didn't yet exist what Fund, an editorial writer for the Wall Street Journal, calls our culture of ruling."

Throughout the first half of the 19th century, members generally served only four years in the House and six in the Senate. Forty to 50 percent of congressmen left office every election. They went on to other responsibilities. Or even retired. Congressional service then was a responsibility, not a vocation.

I remember as a teenager frequently running into our district's former congressman, who had called it quits after 24 distinguished years in office — a long time, true, but characteristic of Southern Democrats in those days. He went to church and service club, paid his taxes, and walked the streets, just like mortal beings. He served us for a while, then relinquished to another the opportunity of service.

From 1982 to 1988, 90.9 percent of House incumbents ran for reelection; 87.7 percent of them achieved it. In 1988, 98 percent were reelected; the figure dropped off a bit this year — to 96 percent.

Term limitation aims at rotating power. I can conceive of no rational objection to the rotation of power. Have we forgotten Lord Acton: "Power tends to corrupt; absolute power corrupts absolutely"?

Sure we'd lose some good members if a term-ceiling were imposed. On the other hand we'd have, as Fund puts it, "a climate in which talented men and women from businesses and professions would want to run for Congress, since they would know they would reach a position of significant influence in a few short years ... "

Defenders of the present system have their work cut out for them. They have to show why the old warhorses who just raised our taxes $500 billion a year are to be cherished and preferred to mares and stallions all across the country, whinnying and snorting for their day in the sunlight.

Rebel leader in Chad suspends constitution

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The rebel leader who marched nearly unchallenged into the capital dissolved Chad's Parliament and suspended the constitution Monday while promising a multiparty democracy, Chad Radio reported.

Idriss Deby, called by some the "desert cowboy," did not immediately assume the presidency, but his Popular Salvation Movement was effectively in charge of the central African nation.

Deby drove into the capital of N'Djamena on Sunday in a black Mercedes after President Hissene Habre fled to neighboring Cameroon.

Deby was Habre's chief aide in a 1982 coup, but Deby broke away last year and formed a rebel movement. Habre and U.S. officials claim Libya funded Deby's rebellion, but the Libyans and Deby deny it.

Earlier Monday, Deby freed at least 450 Libyan prisoners of war.

Cameroon state radio reported Monday that Habre and eight of his ministers had taken refuge there. French government officials also said they had information Habre was alive. The official Libyan news agency, JANA, claimed Sunday that Habre had been killed.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said U.S. officials believe Libya supplied Deby's rebels. The French press also widely reported Libyan military aid to Deby.

Ms. Tutwiler said Ambassador Richard W. Bogosian plans to meet with Deby, 38.

Chad Radio denounced the "economic, moral and political chaos" of the previous regime and "the abuses of a delinquent dictator."

"Habre was an obstacle in the way of national reconciliation between Chadians and an obstacle to good neighborliness and the bonds of history and common suffering between Libyans and Chadians," JANA said.

According to the constitution, adopted Dec. 10, 1989, the National Assembly president becomes interim leader in Habre's absense. But with the constitution suspended by Deby, there was no president named and it was unclear how the post would be filled.

France, Chad's former colonial ruler, had recognized Assembly President Jean Alingue Bawayeu as the interim leader.

Before dissolving the body, Deby met with Alingue. Other coup leaders held talks with high-ranking officials of the deposed government.

"My worry is not to be president of the republic," said Deby after entering the capital. "This country must become democratic, pluralist. The moment has come to lay down our arms."

France, with nearly 1,800 troops in Chad, had backed Habre since he came to power, but remained neutral in the latest conflict, which started Nov. 10 in eastern Chad.

Habre's forces last month were defeated in a series of battles. On Friday, rebel troops entered the main eastern city of Abeche and marched around French troops, who took no action.

Libya's occupied northern Chad in 1983 and 1986, prompting France to send troops to back Habre. Libya was driven out in a series of lightning battles masterminded by Deby in 1987.

Libya has demanded freedom for its captured soldiers and still claims a mineral-rich strip of land in northern Chad. The POWs left for Libya Monday.

Rebels in all-terrain vehicles mounted with machine guns zoomed through the city Monday, spreading their control from key administrative buildings to working-class neighborhoods. French troops guarded the airport and other key facilities, such as telecommunications and electricity centers.

N'Djamena was calm following weekend looting. A curfew remained in effect.

Habre was elected to a new seven-year term in June.

Ireland's president inaugurated

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland's first woman president, Mary Robinson, was inaugurated Monday and extended a hand to both Protestants and Catholics in troubled, British-ruled Northern Ireland.

In her acceptance speech, delivered in English and Gaelic, the 46-year-old lawyer said she would represent a "new Ireland."

"I want to do this with no hidden agenda, no strings attached," said Mrs. Robinson, a Roman Catholic who married a Protestant. "As the person chosen by you to symbolize this republic ... I will seek to encourage mutual understanding and tolerance between all the different communities sharing this island."

A 21-gun salute echoed across the Irish capital as Mrs. Robinson was sworn in by Chief Justice Thomas Finlay following an interdenominational service at the medieval, turreted Dublin Castle.

About 500 government and church dignitaries and Dublin-based foreign diplomats looked on as Mrs. Robinson took the oath of office.

The ceremony was televised live in Britain and in the Irish Republic, where schools were closed for the day.

Mrs. Robinson extended an invitation to Irish descendants worldwide to visit the republic.

"There are over 70 million people living on this globe who claim Irish descent and I will be proud to represent them," Mrs. Robinson said. "And I would like to see ... my official residence to serve on something of an annual basis as a place where our immigrant communities could send representatives for a get-together of the extended Irish family abroad."

Mrs. Robinson said that in her seven-year term she would continue Ireland's tradition of promoting international human rights, particularly in Latin America and Africa.

She campaigned on a platform of change and a more involved presidency, winning the Nov. 9 election with 52.8 percent of the vote.

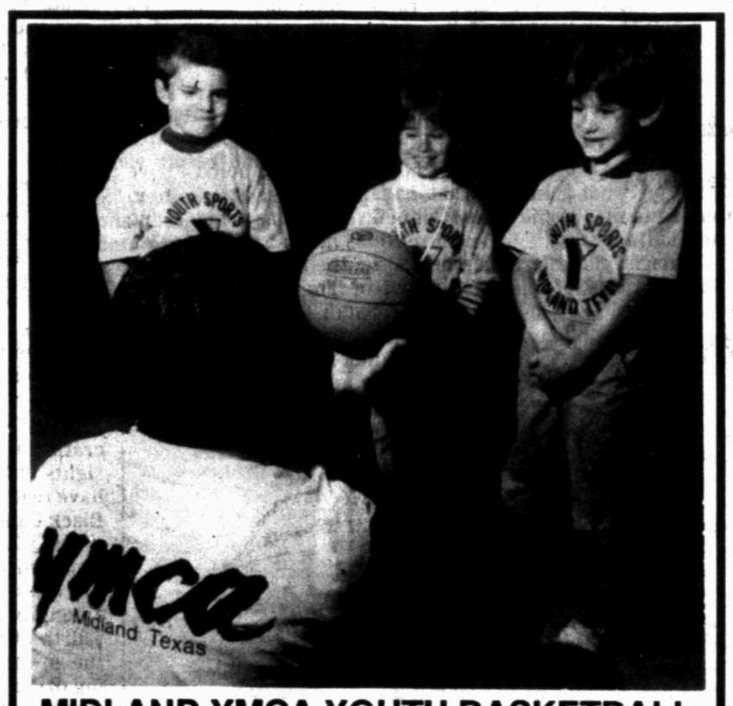

After her victory, Mrs. Robinson thanked the women of Ireland who voted for her and "instead of rocking the cradle, rocked the system."

In her acceptance speech, the president and mother of three addressed Irish women.

"As a woman I want women who have felt themselves outside history to be written back into history ... finding a voice where they have found a vision," she said.

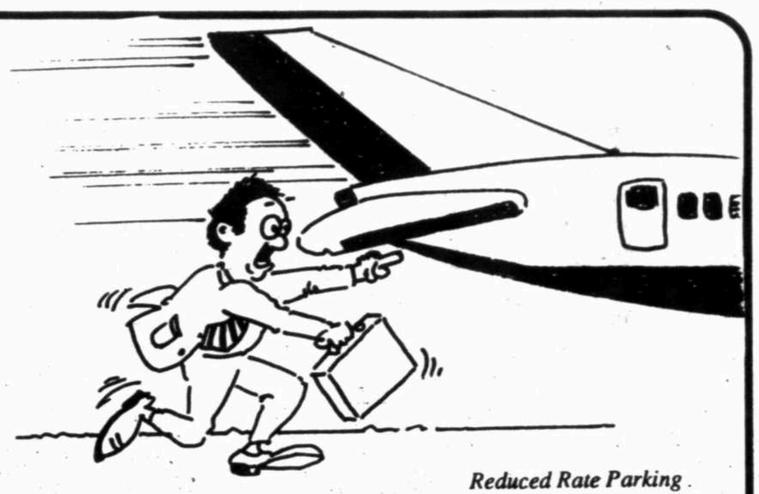

Britain sent troops to Northern Ireland in 1969 to end sectarian and political violence. Nearly 2,900 people have died in bombings and assassinations since.

The Irish Republican Army is fighting British rule in Northern Ireland and wants to unite the predominantly Protestant province with the 95 percent Catholic republic of Ireland under Socialist rule.

Generation of children losing their parents to AIDS

■ New York City is estimated to have 50,000 to 100,000 children who will lose or already have lost one parent to AIDS.

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The AIDS epidemic is creating a generation of children who are losing their parents to illness, disability and death.

A Bernal Heights, Calif., 10-year-old sits on her sick mother's bedside, telling stories and wiping her mother's brow with a damp washcloth.

An Oakland grandmother raises a baby and a 6-year-old. The 6-year-old is infected by the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS, and both children are soon to be orphaned by AIDS.

In Marin County, Calif., a girl cries because her father is developing dementia and she will be sent away to live with distant relatives.

One little girl clutched her mother's hand in her lap. "I'm scared that she's going to die," she said. Then her freckled face brightened. "She's going to get cremated, and I'm going to put her inside a teddy bear."

Like their children, parents fear the future.

"They're busy thinking: 'What can I do to keep the family together? How can I make ends meet? What going to happen to them when I'm gone?' The last thing they're thinking about is themselves," said Nisa Kali of Oakland's Center for AIDS Services.

The AIDS virus ripples through a family like a pebble tossed into a still pond. Although no one keeps statistics on children who have lost their parents to AIDS, the disease is rapidly rising as a cause of death among women in their peak childbearing years. Drug users and their partners are particularly hard hit.

New York City is estimated to have 50,000 to 100,000 children who will lose or already have lost one parent to AIDS, according to Gretchen Buchenholz, president of the nonprofit Association to Benefit Children in New York City. Left behind are children whose losses are compounded by the stigma, shame and guilt of an AIDS diagnosis.

"These children are in pain," said Kali.

San Francisco has a number of rooms for homeless single men with AIDS, but only two homes for families — and both have long waiting lists. The burgeoning number of affected families in Alameda County — where one of every 100 women giving birth is infected — has prompted the opening, next year of the nation's first major shelter for AIDS-infected parents and children.

Shanti Project volunteers, trained to care for the needs of sick gay men, also are beginning to care for the children. They organize picnics, go roller-skating and play games.

The Center for Attitudinal Healing in Tiburon, Calif., recently started a weekly emotional support group for children. The Bridge For Kids in San Francisco offers four hours of free child care a week for AIDS-affected families. And Oakland's Center for AIDS Services now offers child care. "We needed to give the needs of children some special attention," said director John Daw.

Said one mother: "It's an odd feeling, to have your kids caring for you. I get the feeling that they're constantly watching over me. I wake up in the middle of the night and they're standing there.

"I feel a lot of guilt," she added. "I know I'll be leaving before I should, and I feel bad about that."

For some children, AIDS is the family secret, something to be hidden. Some tell their friends that their mother has cancer, then listen to cruel jokes about AIDS.

Some children don't yet know that their parents are sick. An Oakland father, divorced from his wife, has hidden his illness because he fears he'll lose visiting privileges with his 7-year-old son.

A single mother, she is waiting for public housing and gets no help from her ex-husband, who is also sick with AIDS. "When I get more settled, get the baby potty-trained and in child care — then I'll tell them."

"By then," she said, "I hope there will be a cure."

One mother is making tape recordings to leave with her children, "so I can get as much information into them as I can. So I can pass on what I know, what happened to me. So they know what I was all about."

Another mother is creating a solid network of friends and family members to help her young daughter when she's gone. She teases her daughter, promising a fine inheritance of clothes, jewelry and shoes.

Her daughter laughs, telling a visitor that "Mom's going to the giant shoe store in the sky."

"The end result won't be funny," said the mother. "Sometimes we just sit together and cry.

"But I tell her to watch out, that I'll be there in the car on her first date, looking over her shoulder."

NATION

'It's an odd feeling, to have your kids caring for you. I get the feeling that they're constantly watching over me. I wake up in the middle of the night and they're standing there.'

Tobacco industry lobbies against report

Associated Press

For three years, the tobacco industry and its Congressional allies have lobbied the Environmental Protection Agency to soften or delay its three draft reports on second-hand cigarette smoke, documents show.

Industry representatives sent the EPA a mountain of technical information that dwarfs the EPA's reports and met repeatedly with agency officials to press their concerns, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act.

"They clearly were privy to stuff that was going on that we had no idea about," said Mark Pertschuk, executive director of Americans for Nonsmokers' Rights in Berkeley, Calif.

The EPA at the industry's request twice extended the time allowed for outside comment on draft reports.

"No one else was as active in conveying their concerns and interests," said Robert Axelrad, director of the EPA's indoor air division. He said the agency received "boxloads" of material from the industry.

The next step in the preparation of the reports occurs Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington. An advisory panel chosen by the agency will meet to consider the reports and hear testimony from interested parties, including a dozen tobacco industry representatives.

Two of the three reports will be considered: a report assessing the lung cancer risks associated with passive smoking, and a workplace policy guide on environmental tobacco smoke.

The risk assessment recommends that environmental tobacco smoke be declared a class A carcinogen — a known cause of human cancer.

A third EPA report, a compendium of related technical information on passive smoking, is undergoing revision.

Two Republicans from the tobacco state of Virginia — U.S. Rep. Thomas Bliley and Sen. John Warner — have written to the EPA expressing concerns shared by the industry. Bliley has repeatedly sought clarification of EPA procedures and protested the agency's reliance on certain scientists whose work has found large risks associated with passive smoking.

Brennan Dawson, a spokeswoman for the Tobacco Institute, said passive smoking is important to the industry and "we've let the EPA know."

"What we have tried to do is stay in the process and do it appropriately and through conversations with EPA staff," she said.

"There has been a lot of involvement by the anti-smoking community that we don't think should be there. If you're going to pursue science, it ought to be without advocacy. ...

"The outcome certainly has not been entirely to our satisfaction."

Most of the EPA's correspondence with industry representatives makes clear the industry's comments are welcome. In a June 30, 1989, letter, however, an assistant administrator of the EPA criticized the industry for its continued refusal to admit that smoking causes cancer and other diseases.

Pesticides, arsenic traces found in wells in 2 counties

■ Ten of the 20 wells contaminated with pesticides, were reportedly used for drinking water.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Arsenic traces were found in wells tested in Howard and Martin counties, as one-third of 60 wells tested in agricultural areas of North and West Texas showed pesticide contamination, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Monday.

Of the 20 wells contaminated with pesticides, 10 were used for drinking water, Hightower said. The two wells found to contain arsenic in Howard and Martin counties are used for irrigation, he said.

"Results of this study show that pesticides, especially prometon and atrazine, are affecting a substantial number of wells in the study areas," Hightower said in a news release.

Wells were sampled during September and October 1990 as a follow-up to 1987 and 1988 studies that also found pesticides in rural wells.

The Texas Department of Agriculture sampled 39 wells in Knox, six in Haskell, seven in Stonewall, six in Comanche and one each in Howard and Martin counties in the voluntary program, Hightower said.

"Each county is an area of significant agricultural production, shallow groundwater and pesticide use," he said.

Five different types of pesticides were found, with prometon the pesticide that showed up most frequently.

Of 14 wells contaminated with prometon, which is used to control broadleaf weeds and grasses in non-crop areas, 12 were in Knox County and two were in Stonewall County.

Atrazine, used to control broadleaf and grassy weeds in a variety of crops and on non-cropland, was found in three wells in Knox County and one in Stonewall County.

Propazine, used to control broadleaf and grass weeds in grain sorghum, was found in one well in Stonewall County.

Metolachlor, used to control weeds in a variety of crops, was found in a well in Comanche County.

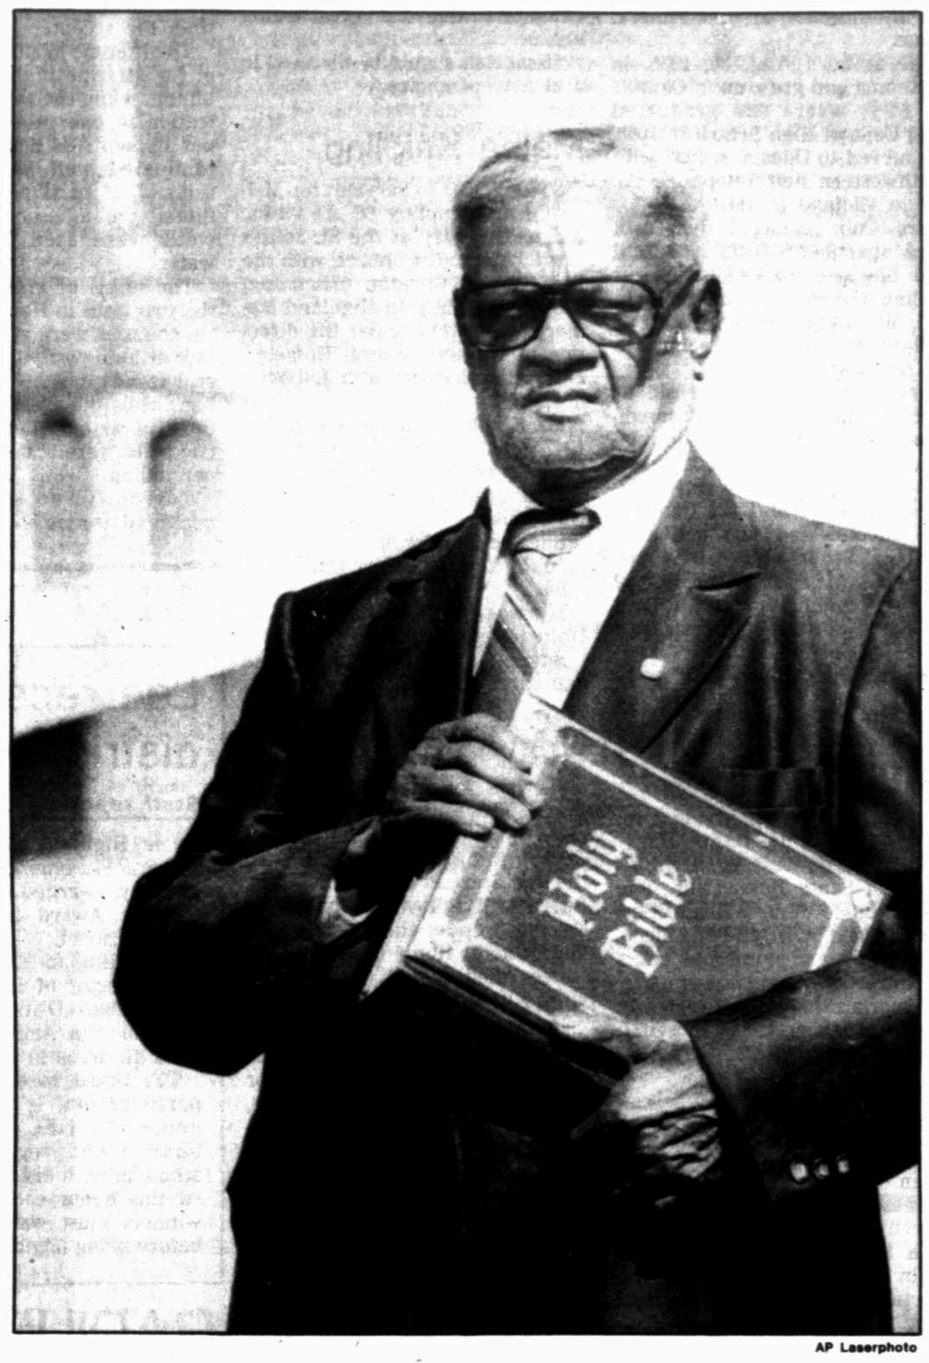

Dicamba, used to control broadleaf weeds in a variety of crops and to control weeds, brush and vines in pasture, rangeland and non-cropland, was found in a well in Haskell County.

Hightower noted that two wells contained both prometon and atrazine and one well contained both atrazine and propazine.

The majority of pesticide detections were at wells near Knox City. The emphasis on sampling in that area was based on detections of prometon and atrazine in 1987 and 1988 studies, he said.

In all but two wells, the pesticide concentrations were

The Rev. F.K. Williams poses outside the Mount Rose Baptist Church in Sweetwater. The 83-year-old preacher has been serving the same church for 50 years.

Preacher for 50 years says life still not easy

By Chip Brown

SWEETWATER (AP) — The Rev. F.K. Williams has been preaching to his mostly black congregation at tiny red-bricked Mt. Rose Baptist Church for a half century, helping them deal with post-slavery independence and racism, teen pregnancy and drug abuse.

"In all my years of preaching, life does not seem to have gotten any easier for folks," said Williams, who has been climbing into the pulpit of Mt. Rose's dark and dusty chapel since 1940.

"During my younger years it was the last forms of slavery. Now folks are dealing with drugs. I have always been here to let them know that God is looking out for them."

Mt. Rose, with about 150 members, is located in a crime-infested area just south of this oil and ranching town. The church is affiliated with the predominantly black National Baptist Convention, and officials said Williams may be the denomination's only pastor serving the same church for 50 years.

When Williams arrived at Mt. Rose, a group of about 250 people took turns squeezing into a 24-foot square building to hear his sermons.

Two church expansions later, only one member remains from that original congregation, Williams said.

"I outlived most of them," said Williams, at 83 older than the church he serves.

"A lot of the kids grow up and move on. But I have baptized, married or buried most everyone else."

Alma Rains, 88, has been attending Williams' services at Mt. Rose since his arrival.

She says Williams has been able to draw churchgoers over the years because he is a "good man who would do anything for you."

"He preaches right out of the Bible and tells it like it is," said Mrs. Rains, who is fighting poor health and has been unable to attend services recently.

"When my husband was in real bad health, Rev. Williams took care of my house and lawn without me even asking. He is about the nicest man I know," she said.

Williams' mother died during his birth, and after his father left home, the future minister was raised by his aunt and a white man she worked for.

The white man, Harry Robertson, treated Williams like a son and taught him three principles which he still preaches today.

"Don't beg, don't steal and never borrow more than you can pay back," Williams said. "Having been brought up by whites, I didn't face racism until later on in life. I didn't know I was black until I was 7.

Entrepreneurs meet director for projects

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Members of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs were introduced to the new Project Director at Monday's regular chamber meeting.

The new director is Ruth Bolding, who will help run the MBCE's Business Development Center, chamber office and fund-raising projects. She holds a bachelor's degree in English from Wiley College in Marshall.

"I'm looking forward to taking on whatever the chamber's needs are, helping with its projects and working with the members," Ms. Bolding said.

MBCE President Robbyne Fuller urged members to offer Ms. Bolding their help with the business center, chamber office and upcoming Alvin Ailey dance troupe performance.

Chamber members are also asked to help with the Northeast YMCA's "Santa's Coming" project, set for Dec. 15 at the YMCA. Members were asked to donate $5 for a needy child to get a visit and picture with Santa Claus.

James Fuller, vice president of the MBCE, told members the Northeast YMCA hopes to help between 100 and 200 children.

The Fullers announced at last month's meeting that the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble dance company would perform in Midland on February 22, 1991 at the Yucca Theater.

To promote the performance, there will be a Christmas Revelation at the Northeast YMCA gymnasium on Dec. 22 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Videos of the Alvin Ailey group will be shown,

Dangerous radiation levels found in nation's oil fields

■ Radium is a naturally occurring radioactive material found in every oil-producing region in the country.

N.Y. Times News Service

MORGAN CITY, La. — Radium from the Earth's crust has been brought to the surface in decades of oil drilling, causing widespread radioactive contamination of the nation's oil fields.

The problem is only now being examined by the oil industry and the federal government, which has no regulations to deal with oil field radiation.

A naturally occurring radioactive material, radium, has been found in every oil-producing region in the country, from Alaska to Florida, causing low levels of radiation in pumps, pipes and storage tanks. The radium leaches from mineral deposits into water that comes to the surface with oil.

But the contamination is worst along the Gulf Coast, where radium concentrations in the water are much higher than in other regions. Compounding the problem is that for years oil companies routinely poured billions of gallons of the water into thousands of unlined ponds before pumping it back into the ground or releasing it into wetlands.

"When I got here in 1988, this radium contamination in the oil fields was the only environmental problem that I had never heard about," said Dr. Paul Templet, the secretary of the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality. "At first I didn't believe it. But we investigated it, found out it was true and now it's our newest environmental problem."

The oil industry, he added, "can no longer use the environment as a free disposal system."

State officials do not know the extent of the health risk to oil workers who handle drilling equipment contaminated by radium or to people exposed to radium-contaminated water and soil. But they are worried that radium exposure raises the risks of cancer. The oil industry contends the risk is minimal.

GARY OTT

Changes in life too fast, not necessarily better

Ott

This is the time of the year when I become terribly depressed because I realize things are changing much too quickly and, as a result, will never go back to being the way they should be.

Some, quite naturally, are holiday-related, but not all.

The fact of the matter is, times are changing and I'm not. Everywhere I look I see a brand new world. In many cases, it has become more modern, more convenient.

But has it become better?

I think not.

Following are things that were better way back when:

■ Football games on Thanksgiving Day. We're talking Detroit, with a hungover Bobby Layne at quarterback, playing outdoors on real grass in weather so cold that you can actually see the players breathing. No more of this sissy indoor stuff. And speaking of football on Thanksgiving Day, whatever happened to those college classics such as A&M-Texas? They should return to Thanksgiving Day and to heck with the almighty TV dollar. Tradition should be worth something.

■ Christmas albums that feature singers like Bing Crosby and Andy Williams instead of country-western stars like Willie Nelson. It's really not all that difficult to figure out. Bing Crosby should sing about White Christmas and Santa Claus Coming to Town, and Willie Nelson should sing about pickup trucks and bad women who leave you so heartbroken that you look for the answers in the bottom of a bottle.

■ Politicians who are slightly overweight, smoke cigars and are losing their hair. I don't know why, but I don't trust young political figures who have a full head of hair and spend their spare time jogging. They are usually more concerned with how they look on TV than getting things done in a smoke-filled backroom. And the politicians can go back to having three martinis at lunch if they so choose, too. I really don't care. All I'm looking for is results, not goody-goody images.

■ Dancing movies that star Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the title roles. Somehow I can't picture that stylish duo appearing in anything as crude as "Dirty Dancing". OK, I never saw the movie, "Dirty Dancing", but it sounds so crude and I'm absolutely certain Fred and Ginger would have never starred in such a thing.

■ Walter Cronkite doing the nightly news. I have nothing against Dan Rather, Peter Jennings or Tom Brokaw, they're just not Walter Cronkite. And that's the way it is.

■ Putting up the tree on Christmas Eve and leaving it up until Jan. 1. Now, as we all know, the tree goes up the day after Thanksgiving and comes down on Christmas afternoon. That's not the way it is supposed to be.

■ Preachers who are more concerned with visiting the sick and helping children get over the death of a pet than raising big bucks on TV. If I want to watch a telethon, I'll tune in Jerry Lewis and Ed McMahon.

■ Making one last franic run at the stores on Christmas Eve instead of having all your shopping done by the middle of June. A person should not perspire when Christmas shopping. Panic yes; perspire no.

■ Vacations where everyone piles into the family car and heads to some famous place — the Grand Canyon, Disneyland or Yellowstone National Park — together. Of course, everyone hates each other by the time you finally get there, but that's part of the fun.

■ Nurses who wear those starched white uniforms and little hats. Somehow they make me feel like I am going to be well cared for even if I'm not. It also helps if the nurse is a rather large — and even stern — woman. There's a time for frilliness, but a hospital stay is not one of them.

So call me old-fashioned if you must, but there are times when "the good ol' days" just seem to fit.

And for some reason, the older you get, the better those "good ol' days" look.

WATER: Contamination found in wells

(From 1B)

In all but two wells, the pesticide concentrations were below the safe drinking water levels set by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Atrazine was detected in one well at a level higher than the acceptable level.

The lifetime health advisory level for atrazine is three parts per billion, while the average concentration in one well was 17 parts per billion. Another atrazine-contaminated well had concentrations of 2.5 parts per billion, just under the advisory level. Both wells were used for drinking water.

The levels of arsenic found in the two wells in Howard and Martin counties were at or below the safe drinking water level. The federal standard is 50 parts per billion, while the average concentrations of arsenic detected in the two wells were 50.0 and 42.5 parts per billion.

Currently, no standards or health advisories have been set at the state or national level to address the effects of two or more pesticides together in drinking water.

TDA has sampled groundwater in different areas of the state in recent years.

In 1983 and 1984, arsenic was found at levels exceeding the federal standard for safe drinking water in 34 of 101 wells tested in Howard and Martin counties. A follow-up study in 1988 showed 28 of 110 wells tested exceeded the safe drinking-water level.

Data indicated that arsenic-based pesticides and arsenic-contaminated gin trash may be linked with the contamination, Hightower said.

In 1987 and 1988, TDA expanded its monitoring program to test 1988 rural water wells for more than 200 pesticides. Nine pesticides were detected including prometon; atrazine; metolachlor; dicamba; 2,4,5-T; 2,4-DB; bromacil; picloram and triclopyr.

Hightower said the agency started the groundwater monitoring program to address the growing concerns of the state's farm and rural population about the effect of pesticide use on water quality.

Private rural wells are exempt from regulation and testing under the Safe Drinking Water Act, but Hightower noted they are the type of wells usually located in agricultural areas and most likely to be affected by farm chemicals.

"TDA has primary authority for regulating pesticides in Texas," he said. "If use of a pesticide is found to cause an unreasonable risk to the environment — including groundwater — TDA has the authority to restrict, limit or prohibit its use."

Data from the 1990 survey are being studied to determine whether the contaminations are the result of normal application of pesticides, he said.

Hightower also said the types of management measures that could prevent contamination are being examined. "TDA collected a great deal of data at each well to support regulatory actions or management decisions that may be required to correct or prevent groundwater contamination," he said.

Letters explaining the test results were sent to each well owner, regardless of whether contaminants were found or the purposes for which the water was used, he said.

Knox, Haskell and Stonewall counties, north of Abilene, primarily produce wheat, cotton and grain sorghum. Comanche County, northwest of Waco, is the heart of the state's peanut-growing region. Howard and Martin counties, north of Midland, mainly produce cotton, grain sorghum and wheat, he noted.

Resort was prison camp

During the winter of 1941-42, the Greenbrier resort in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., was used as an internment camp for German and Japanese diplomats and their families.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Lee receives district award

Staff reports

Lee High School's National Forensic League Chapter was recently awarded the Leading Chapter Award in the West Texas District.

According to Larry Knight, LHS director of forensics, the West Texas District includes Midland, San Angelo, El Paso, "and all areas in between."

The award, based on student participation, is the highest honor the NFL can bestow upon a chapter. Only one school in each district is awarded this honor each year, and winners must wait five years before being eligible to receive the award again.

LHS was one of 88 NFL member schools nationwide, out of 2300, to receive the award.

"NFL's motto is 'Training Youth for Leadership.' Your efforts at Lee High School have made that motto a reality," wrote James M. Copeland, national NFL secretary, in a letter to LHS drama teacher Larry Knight. "Your award reflects 473 members and degrees over six years," Copeland said.

Knight, who just started teaching at LHS this year, said receiving the award was "a great honor."

"It's super," Knight said. "The award is based on participating in tournaments and having the most new members in our district. Our school as a whole as well as the speech department is extremely honored and proud. The award reflects entire school as far as I'm concerned."

Fund established

The Jaclyn Bradley Benefit Fund has been established for the 8-year-old third grader at Burnett Elementary School.

Donations can be directed to the attention of Lyndia Benton, at Community National Bank, 601 E. Florida, 79701.

Toy kickoff planned

The "Permian Detachment — Marine Corps League" will be sponsoring a kickoff ceremony for the 1990 Toys for Tots campaign at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Midland Park Mall.

U.S. Sen Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner will be present for the kickoff ceremony.

Area residents are encouraged "to help make Christmas a bittle brighter" for the Permian Basin's needy children by "dropping a toy into one of the Toys for Tots barrels."

For those who can't be at the mall on Wednesday, there will be receiving barrels at all local fire stations.

Elementary school sets festival

Staff Report

Anson Jones Elementary School, 4919 Shadylane Dr., will host a holiday festival 6:30 p.m. tonight. The festival will open with the second grade presentation, followed by the fourth grade program at 7:45 p.m.

PREACHER: Williams fights

and just work hard."

Williams, who is described by church members as "lovable" and "heaven-sent," began preaching at age 19 in several churches in Fisher County, just north of Sweetwater.

Fighting deep-rooted racism lingering from the Civil War 66 years earlier, Williams once had to ask a white judge for a box to bury a dead member of his church.

The judge refused.

"I finally told (the judge) the body was about a block away from his office, and if he didn't want it to start smelling bad, he better give me a box," Williams said. "And sure enough he did."

Along with racism, blacks struggled in the early 1900s with newfound economic independence. Many spent all their earnings on alcohol and gambling.

"Back then it was liquor, and today it is drugs," Williams said. "Satan is always tempting us with something."

Despite a weakening heart, Williams still invites people seeking counseling over to the back porch of his small stucco house a couple of blocks from the church.

Williams recalled convincing a 20-year-old woman, who was addicted to drugs, not to commit suicide.

"She was tired of stealing and hurting others to sustain her habit. She just wanted to end it all," Williams said. "We prayed together and I tried to persuade her to stay away from the people who deal it. She promised me she would, and she has been in church every Sunday since."

When Williams reflects back on how he has survived for 50 years at Mt. Rose, he looks toward heaven.

"God had a plan for me," he said. "He blessed me. Even though there is violence and brutality around me, I can get along with the principles taught me by Mr. Robertson. I just tried to do what God laid out for me."

RADIUM: Contamination worse along Gulf Coast

(From 1B)

Tests of wells have found that the oil-water mixture pumped to the surface contains radiation levels 5 to 30 times higher than the government allows to be released from nuclear power plants.

Tests this year of four of Louisiana's oil pits found that three of them contained radium concentrations in the soil at least as high as those found at abandoned uranium mills in the West and old nuclear weapons plants in the Midwest and East.

The government is now spending billions of dollars to clean up these mills and weapons plants. If the government holds the oil industry to the same standards of safety, cleaning up oil field radiation also could cost billions of dollars.

Buck Steingraber, a geologist for Mobil Oil Corp. and chairman of a committee at the American Petroleum Institute that is studying the radium issue, said: "I do not believe the oil and gas industry is going to shirk their responsiblity for cleanup where it's necessary. The question of cost is going to be determined by the standards of safety that are set by regulators."

Louisiana officials do not know how many oil pits exist. Most are in the wetlands in the southern part of the state or in the pine forests of the north. Many have been abandoned by their owners and are seldom fenced off to prevent access by people or animals.

Officials say the greatest health threats from the pits come from airborne radium dust or from radon, a colorless, ordorless radioactive gas produced from the natural decay of radium.

They are concerned that if the pits are filled in and homes and businesses built over them, they could be contaminated by radon, which has been shown to be a cause of lung cancer.

The Environmental Protection Agency is conducting its own study of the contamination problem.

Although the oil industry acknowledges knowing for at least 50 years that radium is present in water pumped up with oil, uncontrolled contamination from radium was not an important health and environmental issue until April 1986, when an oil field worker found radioactive pipes in a well in Mississippi.

An investigation revealed contamination not only in the field but also in the yards where the pipes were cleaned and in nearly 30 schools around the state where old oil field pipes were used in playground equipment, railings and awning supports. The old pipes were also used to train welders in some of Mississippi's vocational-technical classes.

The API, an oil industry trade group, has began a study to look at the health risks to pipeyard workers and to the public.

One API study last year showed that 99 percent of all oil equipment tested across the country produced less than 2 millirem per hour of gamma radation, the level at which the Occupational Safety and Health Administration requires worker protection.

But Southern officials have found old pipes and equipment — some of it in public buildings — that emit radiation levels as high as 8 millirem per hour. If someone stood close to this pipe for four hours, they would receive as much radiation as one bone X-ray.

Wind is power source

Experts think wind power could eventually produce 10 percent of the U.S. energy supply, with another 10 percent coming from solar energy.

Migrant students face obstacles to education

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Children of migrant farm workers are a "minority within a minority" who continue to face a cruel assortment of social and bureaucratic obstacles at school, a national commission was told Monday.

A lack of coordination between school districts and health-care providers tends to hold back many migrant students, panelists told the National Commission on Migrant Education.

The estimated 680,000 migrant students in the United States frequently start school late in the year and leave early because their families travel to work picking and processing crops.

A two-day hearing that began Monday in McAllen is part of a series of meetings and hearings the commission is holding around the country. The commission, mandated by Congress in 1988, is gathering data for reports expected to influence legislation on migrant education.

Far southern Texas, where McAllen is located, has an estimated 69,000 migrant students, or more than half of the migrant children in Texas, according to the commission.

Migrants from Texas tend to travel to the north for work in April and return home about November.

The students often find themselves shifted from grade to grade as they move between states and school districts with differing sets of requirements, school counselors testified. Frustration too often motivates migrants to drop out, they said.

"The assignment of these students to different grades is chaos," said Carlos Cantu, a junior high school counselor in the McAllen Independent School District.

A report the commission must complete by next fall will make suggestions for improving the Migrant Student Record Transfer System. Part of that system's role is to make it easier for migrants to transfer credits.

"I don't have a whole lot of confidence in the data that I get from that system," said Jack Hall, federal programs coordinator with the San Benito Independent School District.

Hall, a former high school principal, suggested a coordinated curriculum for migrant students to be used nationwide.

But Roberto Zamora, superintendent of La Joya Independent School District, called for schools to bring migrants more into the mainstream.

Elderly woman ordered to clean up property

NEW HOME, Texas (AP) — For years, people have been throwing trash into a caliche pit on 77-year-old Melba Roper's farm against her will.

Tin cans, tires, furniture and even a junked air conditioner litter the area, 20 miles south of Lubbock.

The Texas Department of Health recently identified the pit as an unauthorized solid waste disposal site, and has ordered Ms. Roper to clean the pit by April 1, 1991, or face fines as high as $10,000 a day.

Ms. Roper agrees that the dumping is unauthorized, and wants it stopped.

But she contends the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation dug the pit about 40 years ago while building a farm road through New Home, and therefore the government should pay for the cleanup.

"I've lived in this same house on my farm since I was married 57 years ago, been a good citizen and left other people alone," Ms. Roper told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "I didn't create the problem. And I think the government is treating me pretty harsh. I don't deserve this."

According to estimates Ms. Roper has received, the cleanup would cost thousands of dollars to contract a bulldozer to clear the trash.

Ms. Roper said her limited income would make it difficult for her to comply with the order.

"I think the government should pay for all of it," Ms. Roper said Monday. "I did not create it."

'I think the government should pay for all of it. I did not create it.'

— Melba Roper

In the 1950s, Ms. Roper and her late husband, Calvin, accepted about $500 from the highway department to allow the state to dig the pit, which is about 150 feet across and 10 feet deep.

The highway department used caliche from the pit to pave some roads in New Home, she said.

"They did pay us a little for the damage when they made the hole, but we were happy to put up with the hole to get the roads paved," she said. "It was no big thing."

Officials with the highway department and Lynn County Courthouse have been unable to find records of an agreement between the Ropers and the governmental agency. But a handshake alone commonly sealed such arrangements 40 years ago, officials said.

Linda Wyatt, regional engineer with the department of health, said Ms. Roper's case is nothing new.

"Hundreds of caliche pits were dug to build roads in West Texas," Ms. Wyatt said.

"It's a very unfortunate thing," Ms. Wyatt added. "A majority of these land holdings in West Texas belong to the elderly, and it's always a burden on them.

"We know that it's difficult, so we work with those people as much as we can under the law. But we are servants of the state and must obey the law."

Among the health department's concerns are trash decomposition, pesticides and industrial chemicals that could contaminate the soil and ground water.

Other than a plan to build a fence around the pit, Ms. Roper remains unsure about what to do next.

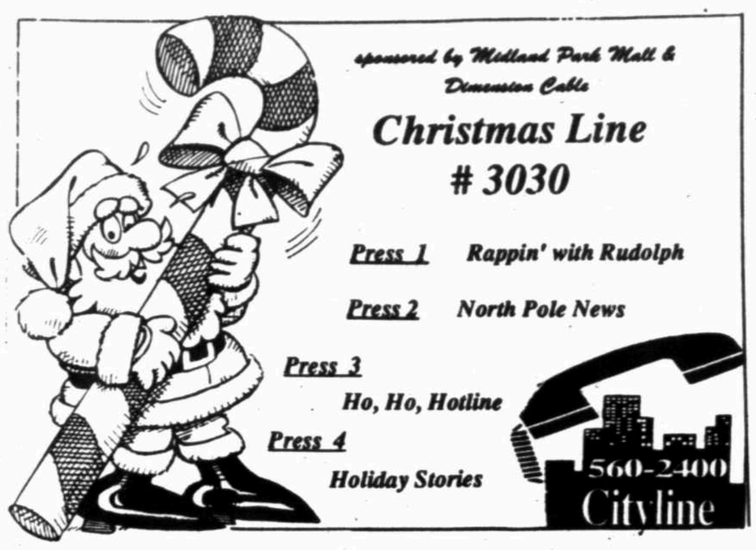

Ms. Roper has adhered to one of the department's orders by posting signs near the pit warning against trespassing and dumping. But she doubts they'll have any effect.

"It won't make any difference. The litter bugs won't stay out anyway," she said.

New Home resident Melba Roper stands near the state-dug pit that has become troublesome dump for everything from tin cans to tires. Because the pit is on her property, she has received warnings from the Texas Department of Health to clean it up or pay costly daily fines.

Waste paper being recycled

Staff Report

Some of TU Electric's waste paper is being recycled into energy payments for the needy, company officials announced Monday in a 1990 report on its Energy Aid program.

Energy Aid, which has provided essential energy services for people in need since 1983, has helped more than 57,000 families with more than $4.1 million since it began, officials said.

Almost one-half million dollars has been contributed this year alone by TU Electric customers who have kept the program successful by adding a dollar or more — specified for Energy Aid — to their monthly electric bills. Through October, more than 8,600 families had been assisted in 1990.

Almost $9,000 has been raised through the company's paper recycling program and donated to Energy Aid this year.

TU Electric is providing more information and Energy Aid contribution cards in December bills for customers who wish to become contributors. Participation is voluntary, and customers can specify any tax-deductible monthly contribution of one dollar or more.

The program generally provides one-time payments to qualifying applicants. Energy Aid funds can be used for any essential energy services and are not restricted to payments for electricity.

Craft Bazaar offers Christmas ideas from Permian Basin area crafters

Make this Christmas a memorable one and fill your family's stockings and packages with special, creative gifts from Craft Bazaar. Unique, one-of-a-kind hand made items are found under one roof at Midland's largest arts and crafts mall. Filled with great holiday ideas, Craft Bazaar is located at 3712 W. Wall, across from Denny's and Motel 6.

At Craft Bazaar, you can shop for just about anyone on your holiday list (teachers, too!) because the variety of items is practically endless.

Whimsical, decorative, practical and unique doesn't even begin to describe what is available at the Craft Bazaar booths.

Area crafters have limitless imaginations and their talents are evident at Craft Bazaar. For the holidays, you may custom order decorations to match your home. Or, make arrangements for party decorating. And if you like traditional, Southwestern, country or contemporary decorating, the booths of Craft Bazaar are loaded with Christmas ornaments and gifts.

For example, you'll find several kinds of Christmas angels, grapevine wreaths and bears, candles and sweatshirts all throughout the store. Straw wreaths, trees, wall hangings, door decorations, teddy bear wreaths, ceramic and cloth Santas, sleighs, felt centerpieces and lots of reindeer (great for centerpieces) are roaming about.

Other ideas are ceramic Nativity scenes, wisemen, angel dolls, yule logs with candles and silk flowers, Coca-Cola® sleighs, Santa mugs, aprons, placemats and fireplace screens, Christmas coyotes, lollypop yard signs, jewelry, stiffy bow baskets and toddlers Christmas sweat suits.

If you are headed for a holiday party, Craft Bazaar has a good selection of party clothes such as caftans and cocoons in many colors of lame.

Of course, there are lots and lots of children's toys and gifts, including rocking horses, hair bows and Santa rompers (adult sizes, too.)

As you wander at leisure throughout Craft Bazaar, notice the brightly painted T-shirts, jackets, sweatshirts, hairbows, rocking horses in many styles, ceramics, and oil paintings.

Take a look at the large variety in many booths of country style woodcraft, Southwestern decorating items, kitchen magnets, childrens' toys, shelves, dolls and reasonably priced quilts.

One booth is entirely devoted to school spirit and area schools are well represented in the form of festive sweatshirts, hairbows, corsages, mascot dolls and more. Don't overlook these reasonably priced items as teacher's gifts this Christmas, or at the end of the school year.

Just about all styles of artificial flowers are represented under one roof and seasonal wreaths and arrangements are in for seasonal and Christmas decorating needs.

Other gift ideas in many price ranges are Texas A&M gifts designed to give someone a chuckle, brightly and cleverly decorated tuxedo shirts, Southwestern lamps, stained glass, dolls that look and feel just like a real baby, porcelain dolls and porcelain paintings, Amish dolls, handmade stuffed rabbits, dogs, cows and pigs (to name a few), stretched fabric over canvas prints, Victorian items, beautiful crochet work, popular rompers, quilt racks, cookie jars, nursing home bibs for the elderly and even a Bart Simpson doll.

As you can see, in 99 booths, the variety goes on and on. You'll just have to come in and see for yourself this showcase of area talent.

Owners Don and Liz Merckle came up with the concept earlier this year of involving the crafters of the Permian Basin together in a shared retailing effort. The "mall" idea turned into a successful venture which, so far, has attracted the talents of 110 different crafters.

Interestingly, the majority of these people live in Midland. Mrs. Merckle is a talented crafter, and you can see her silk flower designs, grapevine animals and sewing, such as a baby doll blanket basket, on display throughout the store.

If you are a home crafter, you may want to consider leasing booth space at Craft Bazaar. A 4' x 4' space is $50 per month and many people lease multiple spaces. Each crafter works in the store one day per month or pays a $25 fee. Contact Don Merckle for details.

Layaways and special orders are welcome and gift wrapping is available. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays. Call 689-8852 for more information.

Don and Liz Merckle, owners of Craft Bazaar, invite you into their new arts and crafts mall, located at 3712 W. Wall. Pictured with a decorated holiday sweatsuit, matching hair bow and hand crafted rocking horse is Emily Ford. Shop now for Christmas from the many cleverly stocked booths at Craft Bazaar.

Southwest Floors setting new direction in style, customer service

Southwest Floors, located at 1113 Andrews Highway, is setting a new direction in style for Midlanders. Robert Burton, with 20 years of experience, and his wife Jane offer professional service from start to finish. In fact, they emphasize personal attention before, during and after the sale.

The bottom line is a solid philosophy of customer service. "We don't intend to be the biggest dealer in the city," Robert explained. "We want to give each customer the personal attention they deserve, because personal attention may be lacking in other places."

"We are not just interested in making money — we also want to make friends. We intend to be the best flooring place in town, with great pricing and quality installation."

Come in now during the grand opening celebration for very special prices on carpet, vinyl, ceramic tile and oak floors.

Southwest Floors offers major brands of indoor, outdoor and commercial carpet such as Columbus World and Salem. The store has a large selection of samples with new sample books arriving daily.

Something new for your home is found in Southwest Floors' display of Art Force carpet by Interloom. These beautiful and extremely durable Berber rugs have the luxurious look and feel like wool.

Jane and Robert Burton of Southwest Floors invite you into the store, located at 1113 Andrews Highway. Come in now for the very special prices being offered on carpet, vinyl, ceramic tile and oak floors.

They come in sizes such as 4' x 6', 6' x 9' and 9' x 12' or they can be fitted wall to wall. Special features include serge binding on the back, fringed ends, a lifetime stain protection warranty and a 10 year warranty.

If you are looking to replace some vinyl flooring, Southwest Floors carries what the Burtons feel is the very best brand on the market — Armstrong. Sit back and relax with your new no-wax floor. Southwest Floors can take care of the installation for you.

Now you can design your own floor with Armstrong's brand new Glazecraft Component Floor System. These 9' x 9' tiles are the very toughest of all of Armstrong's floors. Glazecraft has a ceramic tile look to it and is more affordable. The tiles come with a sanded edge detail for a better fit in the most precision vinyl floor tile on the market today.

Armstrong Glazecraft Components feature a Solarian® urethane no-wax wear layer. This durable wear layer requires no waxing, polishing or buffing to retain its like-new look far longer than ordinary vinyl floors.

Glazecraft components are made using a combination of printed patterns and a layer of quartz crystals. This combination ensures the tiles will resist surface wear as well as any solid vinyl tile and are more resistant to wear than any ordinary vinyl tile.

For a closer look, come in and see the impressive display in the store.

Enhance your home with Marazzi floor tiles in a variety of colors and textures. If you are looking for something different and unique for your bathroom, for example, Southwest Floors carries Laufen Incepa ceramic tiles.

Southwest Floors can help you create the perfect accent for your home with oak hardwood flooring by Bruce and Hartco, These two major manufacturers offer products which can make any room a showcase. Choose from either plank or parquet in many finishes, lengths and colors.

Robert and Jane invite everyone in to see the new store. After 20 years in the flooring business, Robert extends a warm welcome to all of his old friends and customers.

Enertech computer software works for oil, gas companies, investors

Enertech Information Systems is a locally owned and operated computer software developer specializing in oil and gas accounting. With over eight years experience and an installed base of 150 client accounting systems, Enertech offers products for oil and gas operators, investors and producers.

Available systems range in size from single user applications that run on single IBM and compatible computers through large multi-user systems. Entry level software is available that may be upgraded to the enhanced system with no loss of data and no conversion nightmare.

Users have the option of starting with the entry level system and upgrading at a later date with no loss of software investment. Enertech offers an upgrade policy that allows full credit of the entry level purchase price towards the purchase of the enhanced system.

The software has been designed to allow the user the ability to purchase the system on a modular basis. This allows the end user to select only the modules they need for their processing requirements. In following this modular approach, Enertech Information Systems has the ability to sell to many different participants in the oil and gas industry. The software is licensed to the end user on a site-license basis which allows the customer to install the software on more than a single machine at one location for no additional fees.

Multi-user clients have many options in utilizing the system. Enertech Information Systems is an IBM Business Partner specializing in AIX/Unix and Xenix application installations. In addition to the Unix options, the software will also operate in network environments including Novell, IBM Token Ring, OS/2 and other compatible network installations.

The software is developed in a database language and provides easy access to the information stored by the system. Users have the ability to access data, import information into spreadsheets or output information easily into other application software such as engineering or economic evaluation packages. The user interface provides a complete menu driven approach to performing all tasks associated with the daily operations of the system.

In combination, these features all add up to a software package that will work with you on a daily basis and help reduce the time and effort required by outdated software systems or reduce the fees paid to an outside service to complete the same tasks.

Many users have switched to the system from installed software and hardware installations that were not able to keep up with their growth. Other clients have switched to take advantage of the cost savings realized from not having to pay service bureau fees with no hope for payout on a system in sight.

And still other clients have made switch from manually keeping track of their information to let a computer take over some of the repetitive operations. For any or all reasons, many clients have successfully installed all or part of the system to help their businesses.

The following is a list of the standard products offerings currently available from Enertech Information Systems. Enertech also offers custom programming services for clients to modify these modules to meet their specific needs or to develop additional applications.

- General Ledger and Financial Reporting
- Property Ledger and Lease Comparative Reporting
- Accounts Payable

- Joint Interest Billing
- Revenue Distribution

You can really save on energy use with the Trane XL 90 gas furnace. It's a super efficient furnace...up to 95% efficient. So replacing your furnace with the XL 90 can make a big difference on the amount you spend for heating.
The Trane XL 90 gas furnace is loaded with quality features...a hot surface ignitor instead of an old fashioned pilot light, and a unique 2-speed inducer motor for quite operation.

Stores check out checks

■ During the busiest shopping period of the year, many stores are protecting themselves with check-guarantee or check authorization systems which manage the risk factor of accepting personal checks.

By Leonard Sloane
N.Y. Times News Service

These are the busiest shopping days of the year, and if you plan to pay for your purchases with a check at Sears, Nordstrom, J.C. Penney or any of hundreds of thousands of other retailers, you may not have to provide a credit card as identification. The reason? More and more stores are using check-guarantee or check-authorization companies to approve transactions.

The companies, which have no connection with the banks on which the checks are written, keep electronic records — data bases — of customers' names and information about them, like checking account and driver's license numbers.

And since about one-third of all personal checks are presented in stores, such approval has become an important factor in managing the risk that merchants face when they accept checks.

"If we are able to authorize a check, it is literally insured," said Noni Diamantopoulos, the vice president for operations of a major check-guarantee service, Credit Services of America of Wayne, N.J. "If it bounces, the merchant sends us the check, we pay the merchant, and we carry out a collection effort."

There are two basic types of check-approval services.

Check-guarantee companies reimburse a retailer if an approved check bounces, and they assume the task of collecting on it.

Check-authorization (or check-verification) companies and in-house verification operations give information to merchants who retain the financial liability for unpaid checks.

CHECK-GUARANTEE COMPANIES typically charge retailers a percentage of the check's face value, ranging from 0.50 percent to 2.5 percent; check-verification companies, whose services are primarily used in high-volume supermarkets, charge a fee per check, ranging from about a penny to 25 cents. The charge is determined in much the same way that credit-card companies assess charges, varying by the type of store, its location and the volume of business it does with the approval company.

"It is significantly more expensive in New York City than in Omaha, Neb," said Denis duNann, the chairman of Electronic Transaction Corp. in Seattle.

Larry Myatt, the vice president of marketing at Sears Payments Systems in Riverwoods, Ill., a unit of Sears, Roebuck & Co. that provides electronic processing services, said: "We're trying to reduce the level of merchants' risk. This can increase the emphasis that retailers are putting on checks."

That emphasis has certainly been increasing. With check-approval volume growing at the rate of 15 to 20 percent in recent years, about $39 billion in checks will be verified and $35 billion will be guaranteed in 1990.

Currently, guaranteed and verified checks constitute about 13 percent of the value of all the checks written at stores in the United States and 2 percent of all personal checks, according to The Nilson Report, a newsletter for the financial industry published in Los Angeles. By 2000, almost half of all consumer payments are expected to be made by check.

"It's amazing how checks refuse to die," said David Robertson, a vice president of Nilson. "And there's no indication whatsoever to indicate that check guarantees are anywhere near their peak."

One reason the check-approval industry is growing is that it is using electronics to improve convenience and efficiency.

It has piggybacked on the electronic systems developed for credit-card authorizations, and the overwhelming majority of electronic terminals at checkout counters can be used for both purposes.

There is even the Shared Check Authorization Network, or SCAN, a national cooperative that electronically collects, compiles and distributes information to its members.

UNDER THE FAIR CREDIT Reporting Act, when a customer's check is declined because of information received from a check-approval service, the customer must be given the name of the service and told how to reach it.

If a check is refused at a store because of an error by a guarantee or verification company, the customer should write to the company immediately. A special form is often available in the store.

Letters should also be sent to the head of the store, the bank, city and state consumer protection agencies and local Better Business Bureau. This will stengthen the checkwriter's case and can help resolve the problem in his or her favor.

Here's how the check-approval process often works: when a check exceeds a certain limit, which varies from store to store, the cashier punches in a number, often the digits of the customer's checking account, and the system searches the data base. Usually, people with no bad checks or other negative information in their files receive a verification number, and 98 percent of the checks presented to guarantee companies are approved, Nilson reports.

When a check is declined, the customer is asked to pay with cash or a credit card.

"If the merchant has a direct computer link through the cash register, the process takes 10 seconds," said Linden Fellerman, the president of Telecredit Service Corp. of Tampa, Fla., the largest company in the field.

Testers favor new chips

By Linda Anderson

Here it is — everything you always wanted to know about those tortilla chips with the green powdery-looking stuff on them, but were afraid to ask.

Anderson

El Galindo, makers of my favorite lime-and-chile-flavored chips (one of my co-workers calls them "margarita chips") has introduced two new flavors of tortilla chips — guacamole-flavored chips (see above) and tamale-flavored chips.

Newsroom types are naturally curious, so we tried both new flavors at work, checking them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. (Of course, most of the testers were just interested in the "taste" part.)

El Galindo tortilla chips of all flavors come in 15-ounce bags that cost $1.99 each.

Label advertising is pretty sparse — and pretty much the same on the different varieties. "Product cooked in no cholesterol oil and low in saturated fats" is one of the claims; "El Galindo: The finest in Mexican food products" is another. Oh, and the chips are said to be "good for snacks, nachos, dips." Can't forget that one.

The taste-test itself proved popular with the editorial staff, who are gearing up for all the holiday goodies of the season. Just a little head start, you understand.

We had already taste-tested the lime-and-chile kind, to widely mixed reviews. Nearly all the testers liked the chips — some even loved them — but one sports guy said they were the worst things he had ever tasted.

The taste-test started off with the guacamole-flavored chips. The idea of powdered guacamole was a little disturbing to some taste-testers, and the fact that the powdered guacamole looked a little like some kind of fungus bother others, but all bravely tasted the chips — and discovered that they are quite tasty. However, no one thought they tasted like guacamole, green color or no green color. One taste-tester thought they tasted like cheese-flavored chips; most just thought they tasted "pretty good." The skeptical sports guy thought they were wonderful.

The tamale-flavored chips were met with more skepticism. I mean, how can you make a tortilla chip taste like a tamale? Well, evidently not too well. The chips were tasty, and they do have a tamale-colored powder on them, and the testers did like them — but the tamale flavor was mostly just chili powder. Which, don't get me wrong, was delicious. But the tamale flavor, while good, was slight and most just thought they were a flavorful kind of tortilla chip, but if they were looking for tamale flavor, they'll go get tamales.

All in all, the taste-test was successful. In fact, several testers have already bought bags of El Galindo tortilla chips for themselves. I still say all three kinds would make wonderful nachos, with or without the jalapenos.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations mayvary.

Most people think personal stereo headphones are only good for listening.

But, if you find yourself short of a microphone for dubbing narration onto a videotape, they make good substitutes. Just plug the headphones into the recording unit's microphone jack. Be sure to talk into both speakers since the microphone jack is monophonic — not stereo — and only one speaker will be connected.

Readers submitted this and other creative solutions to everyday video troubles for the current issue of Video Magazine. Some of these solutions are:

Can a baby stroller be used effectively as a video accessory? It sure can, especially if parents want to take their camcorders along when they're out with the toddlers. Simply mount the camcorder on a tripod and secure the tripod to the stroller with elastic bungee cords. Now you've got a versatile rolling shooting platform.

Next, do you worry that a rewinding videotape will snap when it gets to the end? To put yourself at ease, reset the VCR's counter to zero after playing the tape for a few seconds. When you're done watching the tape, rewind it with the VCR's memory rewind or go-to-zero function. For older VCRs without these functions, you'll have to watch the counter and stop rewinding when it gets to zero. In all cases, rewinding will stop before the tape reaches the end.

Finally, think ahead to the editing sessions while you're shooting videotape. Let the tape run for a few seconds before and after each shot. The extra footage gives you room to choose just the right starting and ending frames.

DEAR ABBY

Interfering mother risks son's marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to Harry for six years. It's been a constant struggle to keep our marriage going, due to his drinking and my co-dependency. Harry has been sober for six months, and we are both seeing therapists at an alcohol treatment center.

Van Buren

Recently, we had such a severe crisis that we considered divorce. We both did a lot of crying and thinking. (We have four children.) During this time, Harry went to his parents for emotional support.

His mother decided that I am not a good wife because I don't cook big, elaborate meals, and I don't give Harry sex often enough, so divorce would be in his best interest. Then she cooked a pork roast and made sandwiches from the leftovers for him to take to work. She brought this lunch to the house while Harry wasn't home and said to me, "You don't like me doing this, do you?"

I replied, "No, I don't."

Then she shook her finger in my face and proceeded to tell me all the things she didn't like about me, so I took her hand in mine and held it at her waist while I attempted to correct her misconceptions. Then she sat down and waited for Harry to come home so she could tell him that I had picked a fight with her and twisted her arm! Can you believe this?

What do you think of this woman's behavior? She has been interfering in my marriage since day one, and I am totally exasperated! What is your advice? — END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: As I see it, the central problem in your marriage is your mother-in-law's interference. She must let go of her son so he can be a mature man instead of a mama's boy.

You say that both you and Harry are seeing therapists. That's good. What does your therapist think of Harry's complaining to his mother about his inadequate sex life? Unless your husband can outgrow his dependence on his mother, I see little hope for your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a wonderful 2-year-old daughter. I am also a college student who works three nights a week as a waitress. Abby, I can hardly express how sick it makes me feel when a woman who is obviously pregnant orders an alcoholic drink. I feel that I am a party to giving an unborn baby poison. I thank God that my precious child has been healthy since the day she was born, so I find it hard to struggle with this crisis of conscience.

Does the law requiring labels warning of alochol's danger to unborn babies compel me to verbally inform the customers, since they never see the bottle of wine? Can I refuse to serve these women without losing my job? What can I do to ease my conscience? — SCOTTSDALE WAITRESS

DEAR WAITRESS: I respect your sensitivity and integrity, but were you to refuse service to anyone for personal reasons, you would surely lose your job. (Aside from pregnant women, how do you feel about serving alcohol to customers who, in your opinion, have had enough to drink?)

Since you feel that serving alcohol to a pregnant woman makes you guilty of giving "poison" to an unborn baby, ease your conscience by switching to a job that will not require you to serve alcohol at all. Good luck in your job search.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Computers advise women on hosiery

PARIS (AP) — French women have long held world renown for their fashion acumen, taste and style. Now their modish sophistication is being enhanced even further by interactive computers.

The computers, located in retail stores, provide hosiery shoppers with information on correct sizes, shades and styles to accommodate a variety of uses and occasions, notes Intermark Corp. of New York, designer-producer of these hosiery "advisers."

To assist shoppers find their way through the maze of products and sizes in the typical hosiery section, interactive computers are mounted on the shelves of the displays themselves. By touching an easy-to-use keypad, customers enter such details as their height, weight and reason for purchase.

The computer then makes recommendations on a liquid crystal screen on the most appropriate color, style and size to buy, and even provides a color-coded description of the package so that the customer can find it among the myriad products on display.

Woman named Railroad Commissioner

Lena Guerrero has been named by Gov.-elect Ann Richards as the first woman and hispanic to serve on the Texas Railroad Commission.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov.-elect Ann Richards announced Monday an Hispanic woman is her choice to sit on the Texas Railroad Commission, a three-member regulatory panel previously dominated by white males.

Nomination of Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin, should "send a message," said Richards, who promised on the campaign trail her appointments will refect the demographic makeup of the state.

Guerrero is the first woman and first Hispanic to sit on the railroad commission, whose primary function is regulating the state's oil industry.

At 33, she also is the third-youngest person to sit on the panel.

"I'm honored, I'm excited and I'm humbled," said Guerrero. "My job as commissioner is to enforce a social contract between the people of Texas, whom we serve, and the industries of Texas, which we regulate.

She said protection of the environment is one area where she plans to focus her efforts. "I say that without being critical of the job the agency has done in the past," she added.

Richards said Guerrero's committment to the environment is one attribute "too often missing from our regulatory boards.

Ted Collins, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said he was not familiar enough with her background and expertise to make an evaluation on her abilities to serve on the Commission.

The executive vice president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, Julian Martin, said industry executives look forward to working with Guerrero on "what we hope and believe will be a common objective.

He said that objective is "sound and reasonable regulation of Texas oil and gas production that will encourage the maximum development of our petroleum resources while appropriately protecting our environment.

Richards was unsure whether any other appointments, including one sought by her largest contributor, Port Arthur attorney Walter Umphrey, will be announced prior to her inauguration on Jan. 15.

"I want to make sure the appointments ... are the best that we can make," she said.

State campaign records indicate Umphrey contributed more than $350,000 to Richards and donated use of his plane during the last month of the campaign. He is seeking the chairmanship of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Richards over her four-year term will make close to 4,000 appointments, of which about 700 are considered major.

If approved by the Senate, Guerrero will fill a seat vacated by John Sharp, who won election as comptroller in November. Her annual state salary would rise from $7,200 to about $75,000, and she would stand for re-election in 1992.

Guerrero was a prime architect of Richard's strong stand on officeholder ethics. As the governor-elect's first major nominee, she said Guerrero "sets the standards" for future appointments.

In conjunction with Monday's announcement, Guerrero released her income tax returns for the past five years, a requirement of ethics legislation she that authored this past year but which failed to become law.

Guerrero indicated she likely would accept campaign contributions from companies and individuals connected with the oil and transportation industries that she will help regulate since she

Prices gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices see-sawed but finished slightly higher Monday as traders saw dimmed peace hopes in the Persian Gulf.

West Texas Intermediate settled at $29.15 per barrel, up 30 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange on contracts for January delivery.

"It was coming back from a bit of an overreaction on Friday," said Ed Kevelson, a trader with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Prices fell after the State Department said only U.S. and Iraqi officials would participate in the proposed talks later this month, which traders interpreted as a sign of progress toward peace.

But crude began rising again after Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said sanctions against Iraq might not be sufficient to get Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

Natural gas prices, which are not affected by the Mideast standoff since it does not threaten supplies, were higher Monday. Contracts for January delivery rose 3 cents to $2.475 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Stocks rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices posted modest gains Monday, as oil prices appeared to stabilize at lower levels and interest rates slipped.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 40.84 points on Friday, added another 5.94 points to close at 2,565.59.

Dollar soars

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar closed sharply higher Monday, spurred by reports that the big industrial nations will step in to halt the U.S. currency's recent slide.

Gold prices skidded, tumbling more than $6 a troy ounce in New York, in response to the dollar's advance.

The dollar surged against the British pound. Sterling fell to $1.9180 in New York from late Friday's $1.9430.

The U.S. currency also jumped against the Japanese yen. In New York, the dollar closed at 134.735 yen, up from 132.50 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.51395 German marks, up from 1.5020; 1.2935 Swiss francs, up from 1.2770; 5.1135 French francs, up from 5.0580; 1,138.00 Italian lire, up from 1,125.25; and 1.16625 Canadian dollars, up from 1.16475.

In New York, a troy ounce of gold closed at $376.60 on the Commodity Exchange, down $6.70.

Continental Airlines files for bankruptcy

■ For the second time in seven years Continental has filed for protection from creditors, blaming high fuel costs and debt.

Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines Holdings Inc., the remnants of Frank Lorenzo's Texas Air Corp. empire, filed Monday for protection from creditors, saying it was overwhelmed by its heavy debt load and surging fuel prices.

The company, parent of Continental Airlines Inc., filed its Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition in Wilmington, Del., where it is incorporated. The filing is the second time in seven years Continental has sought to reorganize.

In 1983, as Lorenzo was building Texas Air into the nation's largest airline holding company, Continental filed for bankruptcy protection amid a bitter labor dispute with the airline's union.

The filing allowed Continental to scrap union contracts and hire low-cost replacements for striking workers. It also led to a change in federal bankruptcy law to make such a move more difficult.

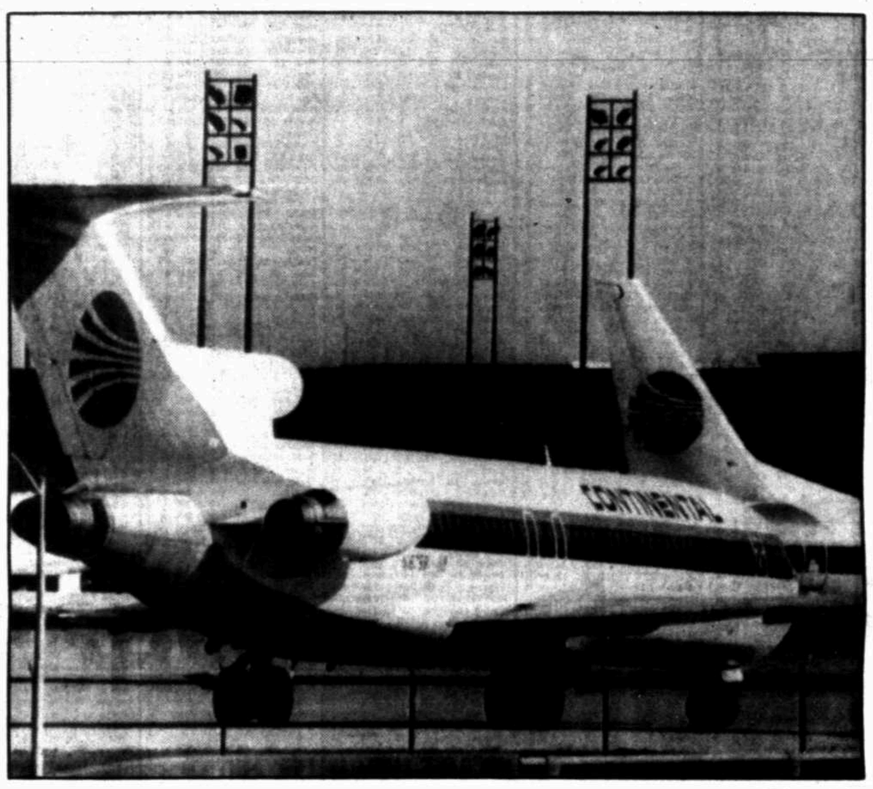

Texas Air eventually grew to include Eastern Airlines Inc., but lost that carrier when a bankruptcy court judge replaced Lorenzo with a trustee. Eastern too had filed for Chapter 11 after a labor dispute.

Monday's move by the nation's fifth largest airline underscores the financial beating taken by all airlines because of a weakening economy and sluggish demand in air travel.

"It became more difficult for us to raise money as we were trying to do before the fuel crisis hit us," Continental chief Hollis Harris said at a news conference in Wilmington. "Being highly leveraged ... we could not handle the debt and the fuel costs at the same time,"

As part of the filing, the Houston-based carrier said it has agreed to sell its Seattle-Tacoma to Tokyo route to Ameri-

Arco Alaska drilling cleared

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Production at a large Alaskan oilfield, discovered in 1989 two miles north of the vast reserves of Prudhoe Bay, is expected to begin within two years now that oil producers and the federal government say they have resolved an environmental dispute that had stalled the project.

The agreement was announced late Friday by the Army Corps of Engineers, ARCO, BP Exploration and Exxon.

It was the second time in a week that big oil companies said they planned to pump more oil from large fields where production was blocked by clashes over environmental worries. Chevron Corp. said Tuesday that it anticipated that a group of 18 oil companies it heads will produce as much as 20,000 barrels a day from the Point Arguello field, off the California coast near Santa Barbara, by next summer.

Negotiations in both cases were mediated by high-ranking officials at the Energy Department. The administration has sought to increase domestic oil output because 200,000 barrels a day in imported Kuwaiti oil were halted after the invasion by Iraq on Aug. 2.

Officials at the Army Corps of Engineers and at the Environmental Protection Agency held up production in the Point McIntyre field because they consid-

AT&T makes NCR bid

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Trying once again to make itself a powerful force in the computer business, American Telephone and Telegraph Co. offered Sunday to buy NCR Corp. for $6 billion.

That offer amounts to $90 a share, 60 percent more than the $56.75 NCR stock traded for on Friday.

AT&T has had numerous failures in attempts to become a giant in the computer industry, and some industry analysts estimate that it has lost more than $2 billion in these efforts.

It has long been interested in the computer business of NCR, which is the nation's fifth-largest computer company, and talk of discussions between the companies has arisen periodically on Wall Street in the last several years.

The considerable premium that AT&T is offering for NCR is a sign that it hopes to persuade stockholders to accept the offer after failing to sway NCR's board.

In a statement issued late Sunday, NCR's chairman and chief executive, Charles E. Exley Jr., reacted negatively, saying the AT&T offer of $90 a share was

Taxpayers may have to bail out pensions

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–How safe is your pension today? As part of the new budget law, Congress shored up the federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, which insures certain types of pensions. But the PBGC is still technically insolvent.

Quinn

Insured pensioners are safe. But if the PBGC's deficit isn't cured, it will eventually wind up in the taxpayers' laps.

As for the pensions that are not insured, your level of protection varies. Here's where you stand, depending on the type of plan you have.

(1) A "defined-benefit" plan. This is the classic, old-fashioned pension, which pays a fixed income based on your age and years of service. The vast majority of these plans are sound. But if yours fails, it is insured by the PBGC for up to $2,165.77 a month if you're single and age 65 (less if you're younger or if your pension includes your spouse). For plans that fail next year, the maximum benefit rises to $2,250.

Larger sums are uninsured. If your company went bankrupt, you would generally become a general creditor of the corporation for the excess amount (your prospect of collection: poor). Health, life insurance and other benefits are also not covered. Right now, the PBGC has 1,500 bankrupt plans under its wing.

The money for PBGC insurance comes from the firms whose plans are covered. Congress has just raised their premiums, which will cover the PBGC's current liabilities into the early years of the next century, says spokesperson Judith Bekelman.

But the program's deficit stands at more than $1 billion, and will rise as more failed plans come its way. A list of the top 50 plans with insufficient assets to pay pensioners was released by the PBGC last spring, based on 1988 data. As just one example, it showed troubled Pan American's pension plan as containing only 33 percent of the assets it should.

(2) A "defined-contribution" plan. These include profit-sharing plans, stock-bonus plans, Employee Stock Ownership Plans (ESOPs), and 401(k) savings plans. Instead of promising you a fixed pension at retirement, the company agrees only to contribute a certain amount to your pension account. Whether you accumulate enough money to live comfortably in your old age depends on how much is contributed and how well the investments do. You can't predict the adequacy of your pension in advance.

Defined-contribution plans are not insured by the PBGC. Each plan has a trustee whose job it is to see that the funds are handled properly. At large companies, so many people are looking over each other's shoulders that it's unlikely for these plans not to contain the contributions they should. When fraud occurs, it's more likely to be at a small company.

The trustee is usually bonded (backed by a form of insurance), although not for much: only 10 percent of the pension assets and no more than $500,000, says Washington attorney Michael Gordon. For missing sums over that amount, pensioners would have to sue. If pension funds aren't stolen but merely mismanaged, the bond may not even apply.

The greater danger in uninsured plans is that the investments won't do well. For an extreme example of what can go wrong, take the ESOP of the defunct brokerage house, Thomson McKinnon. Like most ESOPs, it was invested entirely in the company's stock, which is now worthless. The pensioners have nothing, although they're suing in hopes of a small recovery.

ESOPs are the very riskiest pensions. If you've reached age 55 and have been in the plan for at least 10 years, you're allowed to begin moving up to 25 percent of your money into other investments. Five years later, you can remove 50 percent (less any amounts removed earlier).

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some modest gains this afternoon.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 40.84 points on Friday, was up 9.66 points at 2,569.31 with two hours left in the session. It had been up by about 16 points near the opening, but later gave back nearly all the gains.

Advancing issues were ahead of decliners by a margin of 3 to 2, with 917 up, 580 down and 449 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market opened strongly in the wake of gains on overseas markets and in bond futures trading overnight.

The rise in the Dow Jones average was held in check by AT&T, which fell 2⅛ to 30 after offering to acquire NCR Corp. in a $6 billion stock swap.

A commercial fishery situated more than 100 miles west of the causeways relies on the Arctic char, broad whitefish, least cisco and Arctic cisco for its operations. The view of federal officials was that the causeways appeared to raise salt concentrations and the temperature of the water.

Trouble Among the Biggest

With Continental's filing today, two of the 10 biggest U.S. airlines have sought court protection from creditors. Both are units of what was until recently the Texas Air empire assembled by financier Frank Lorenzo in the early 1980s.

NCR: AT&T makes bid

only a 25 percent premium over the highest price NCR stock had reached in the last six months.

He said, "The NCR board will, in due course, review this most recent AT&T letter and advise its shareholders accordingly."

Dennis Block, a lawyer for NCR, said Sunday night, "A marriage of the companies makes no business sense."

AT&T disclosed Sunday that NCR's directors rejected an $85-a-share offer from AT&T on Friday, terming the bid "grossly inadequate." The offer was initially made Nov. 15.

NCR, based in Dayton, Ohio, was founded in 1884 as National Cash Register Co. NCR has been successful in selling a computer known as a "server" — which stores many documents and other information and delivers them to people using other computers linked on a network of cables or telephone lines.

NCR is also attractive to AT&T because it is committed to developing computers that use the Unix operating system software that was developed at AT&T's Bell Laboratories.

Unix is a difficult-to-master but powerful piece of software that enables computers to perform numerous tasks — like calculating numbers, drawing graphics and editing a report — simultaneously.

Unix has been growing in popularity because it does not require a specific brand of hardware to run it. Thus, it holds the promise of tying together business systems whose parts come from many different companies.

In addition, NCR has done very well with its automatic teller machines and scanning devic at supermarket ch counters.

Bad idea to put U.S. money in Canadian CDs

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am retired, living on Social Security benefits and an annuity. I also have about $65,000 in certificates of deposit. Now that interest rates on CDs in the United States are so poor, would it be a good idea to put $50,000 of my CD money into a Canadian bank CD that pays 11 percent?

A. For most U.S. citizens, that is a bad idea for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that not many Canadian banks now pay the 11 percent interest you mention.

Doyle

A survey by "100 Highest Yields" newsletter turned up only nine Canadian banks at which U.S. citizens can open accounts. Four pay 11 percent or slightly higher interest on large CDs denominated in Canadian currency. The same banks pay much lower interest on CDs opened with U.S. dollars.

Of course, you could exchange your U.S. dollars for Canadian dollars and open CDs with the Canadian currency. But that would cost you money when made the exchange. And there would be another cost when you eventually make another exchange, back into U.S. dollars, so you can spend the money in this country.

Deposit insurance is available at Canadian banks. But it is somewhat different from U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Coverage and varies based on type of account. Check that out carefully, if you go ahead with your plan.

The old demon tax would rear its ugly head, in the form of a 15 percent Canadian withholding levy on your interest. You then list that as either an itemized deduction or credit on your U.S. income tax return and pay the Internal Revenue Service tax on foreign interest.

If your foreign interest and dividends are $400 or more, you are required to file a separate IRS Form TD F by June 30 following the year in which the money is earned.

Unless you're dealing in large sums and getting much more interest than is available in the United States, all this is hardly worth the effort.

Q. My wife and I have always used our credit card when traveling and never had any problems, until we visited Prince Edward Island, Canada. I signed for the motel room with my credit card. On the credit card statement we received last week, there was a $453 charge for damage to the rug in the motel room.

I phoned the credit card people and was told the bill was paid from my account, even though I did not sign for the damaged rug. Is this permissible or is it a con game?

A. If you damaged that rug, the cost has rightfully been charged to your credit card account. But, if you left the rug and the rest of the room in the same condition you found it, you are the victim of an international holdup.

In the second case, notify the billing rights department of your credit card company immediately. You'll find the address on the back of your monthly statement. Don't write your complaint on that statement. Do it on a separate sheet of paper. For safety sake, send it registered mail, return receipt requested.

Under federal law, you are required to inform the credit card company of a disputed charge within 60 days after you receive the bill. That starts the ball rolling toward resolution of your problem. Good luck.

Q. My wife has two savings accounts, set up several years ago, so she would have money readily available in case of an emergency. She is losing her eyesight and will be completely blind in the near future. I propose that she close those accounts while she can still sign her name and put the money in a joint account with me, so I can handle it. We have had a joint checking account for 50 years.

What help can you give me on this problem?

A. You shouldn't need any help. The move you propose is very sensible and easy to accomplish. Take your wife to the bank and have the necessary papers signed. After a half century of marital and checking account harmony, I can't imagine she is balking at the idea.

can Airlines Inc. for $150 million, pending approval of the bankruptcy court. The route sale is expected to be concluded at the end of 1991, but $140 million of the sale price is expected to be advanced to Continental before the deal closes.

As part of the decision to sell the Seattle-Tokyo route, Continental withdrew its other international routes from the market. Last month, Continental put those routes up for sale instead of seeking bankruptcy protection.

Continental owes about $2.2 billion in outstanding debt, about $1.7 billion of which is secured. It also has nearly $4 billion in aircraft operating losses.

"Continental made these decisions reluctantly. We were making good progress. Revenues were up over 1989 and debt was being serviced until problems in the Middle East placed the world economy at risk," Harris said.

Continental lost $88.3 million in the third quarter of this year, compared to a loss of $158 million in 1989. for the first nine months, losses totaled $97 million, compared with a $522.8 million loss last year.

The airline filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws in after its board of directors, which still include Lorenzo, unanimously approved the filing. Under Chapter 11, a company gets a reprieve from debts while it works out a way to pay the bills and tries to re-emerge from court protection as a healthy business.

Since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2, Harris said fuel prices had more than doubled, from 57.5 cents per gallon July 15 to $1.28 per gallon by Oct. 15.

Government funds up construction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record government spending pumped up the value of new construction projects 1.3 percent in October, despite the smallest outflow for residential housing in 4½ years, the government said Monday.

"The (private) building side is still very weak and still declining," said economist Daryl Delano of Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass. "If not for government spending, we'd be talking about a very bleak picture."

The Commerce Department said overall residential, non-residential and government spending totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $434.4 billion, up from $428.9 billion in September. Construction spending was unchanged in August at $441.2 billion.

But 27 percent of the October total came from government funds, a 7.7 percent increase from September, to $117.8 billion. That broke a $115.8 billion record set last August.

Much of the increase was due to spending on sewer systems, up 15.5 percent; schools, up 5.7 percent, and streets and highways, up 5.5 percent.

Spending by the often-volatile government sector had fallen 5.5 percent in September after gaining 7.1 percent the previous month.

But private spending continued its recent weakness.

Residential construction dropped 0.9 percent to $179.5 billion, its seventh consecutive monthly decline and the lowest since spending totaled $177.4 billion in March 1986. Residential spending was off 2.5 percent in September.

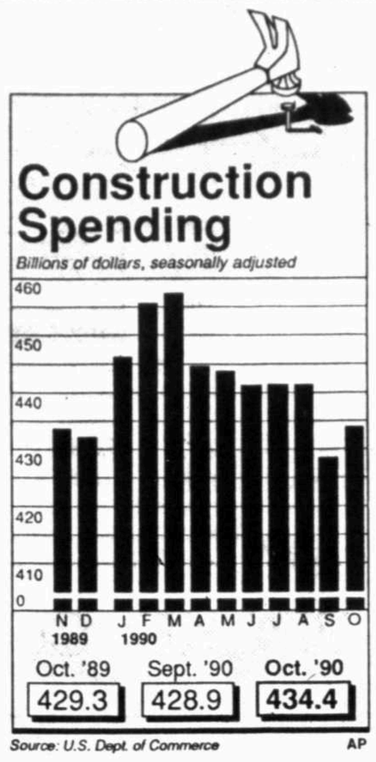

At the same time, spending on non-residential construction slid 0.8 percent to $102.0 billion, the smallest amount since $100.0 billion in new projects got under way last December.

Overall, spending in October was just 1.2 percent above the $429.3 billion posted last year.

Delano attributed much of the recent weakness in the private sector to the so-called "credit crunch" which both Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady have said is causing problems for many businesses.

The credit problem is particularly acute in the private, non-residential sector where there "is a lack of funding for projects, even those projects that make reasonably good business sense," Delano said.

Some critics contend government officials are being overzealous in interpreting banking regulations in the wake of the savings and loan debacle. Brady has asked regulators not to be "unrealistically negative" in evaluating loans and urged bankers "to keep lending to your good customers."

Home affordability up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical American family's ability to buy an existing home increased in October to its highest level in more than two years, a real estate trade group said Monday.

But despite falling home prices, lower mortgage interest rates and rising family incomes, existing home sales fell 4.7 percent in October, according the National Association of Realtors.

"The missing link is consumer confidence — the housing affordability index indicates that conditions are better than they've been in over two years," said Realtors president Harley E. Rouda.

The Realtors group said its housing affordability index rose to 113.4 in October from 110.8 the previous month. That meant a family with a median income of $35,353 had 113.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for conventional financing to buy a median-priced home costing $92,800.

The median is the point at which half of the families earned more and half earned less, and half of the homes cost more and half less. The median income rose $114 in October while the median price fell $1,600. The monthly mortgage payment for the median-priced home decreased $14 to $649.

The index was at its highest point since it reached 113.5 in September 1988.

Buying conditions varied according to region, said John A. Tuccillo, the Realtors' chief economist. In the Northeast and the West, for instance, the typical family lacked the income necessary to buy the median-priced home.

In the Northeast, a family earning the median income of $41,376 had 90.1 percent of the income needed to buy a median-priced home costing $136,200.

Chevron, Soviet deal closer

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON -- Chevron Corp. hopes to seal a deal with the Soviets in January – one it has been nursing for more than three years – to jointly develop and market crude oil from a large, untapped field called Tengiz northeast of the Caspian Sea.

If the deal goes through, oil should start flowing late next year.

The Soviets and their prospective American partner still are trying to work out details on how to split the oil spoils between Chevron, the central government and the Kazakh Soviet Republic, where the field is located, said Edward B. Scott, vice president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum.

Chevron is obligated to split down the middle the development costs with the Soviets, who claim they have spent the equivalent of about $2 billion on discovery, initial drilling and processing facilities.

Part of Chevron's cash contribution can be paid in oil dollars when crude starts flowing from the project, Scott said.

Chevron would be the second U.S. oil company to pair up with the Soviets to develop and produce energy reserves. The Tengiz project would be the largest, however.

Anglo-Suisse of Houston formed a joint venture with Phibro Energy of Greenwich, Conn., called White Nights, to develop oil in existing fields in Western Siberia. Anglo-Suisse struck a 50-50 venture with Varyegan Oil and Gas Association, a Soviet state oil company, to drill 550 horizontal wells and recomplete more than 100 shut-in wells in the Tagrinsk and West Varyegan fields.

The $100 million White Nights project is expected to add as much as 150,000 barrels a day of extra production, said Jay Gallagher of Petroconsultants in Houston, an exploration and production consulting firm that tracks new projects worldwide.

The Soviets have been drilling in the upper reaches of the Tengiz field and probably will have about 60 wells completed within six months, Chevron's Scott said. At least 40 wells already have been completed as deep as 17,000 feet.

The Tengiz was discovered by the Soviets in 1979, Gallagher said, but it has been difficult to develop because the oil is deep, it's under high pressure and it's packed with poisonous sulfurous gas. The oil is incredibly sour, with a sulfur content of about 25 percent, Gallagher said.

The 8,900-square-mile oil field contains roughly the same amount of oil reserves as the entire United States.

Petroconsultants estimates the field also holds about 39 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, about half of which is recoverable, Gallagher said.

The Soviets are well into the project, Scott said, but Chevron can provide several things the Soviets are short on, including management and marketing expertise and cold cash.

One of three processing plants needed to remove the sulfurous gas is nearly complete, but the Soviets need hard currency to finish it, Scott said. Because the oil is so sour and laden with poison gas, production cannot start until at least one of the plants is complete.

Chevron will finish that plant, as well as build two others at a cost of nearly $500 million each, Scott said.

Marketing to a wide slate of international customers is not the Soviets' strong suit, and Chevron will help them market both crude and refined products abroad through its foreign marketing.

Some People Will Believe Anything.

Fortunately, most of us don't assume a story is true just because someone printed it. So why should you believe what you're reading right now? The answer is simple. Unlike a lot of stories, ours has the facts to back it up.

You may have heard the stories that no banks are lending money to Texas business. But the fact is, there's one Texas bank with $3 billion to lend this year. That bank is NCNB.

Right now we have billions of dollars in loans working for major Texas companies. Like Pride Refining, Inc., in Abilene, Eljer Industries in Plano and New London, Inc., in San Antonio. We're also involved in small community projects like Hill Top Homes, a housing improvement project in Arlington.

So if you've heard no banks are lending to Texas business, come on in. We'll give you the real story.

Continental employees calm in wake of news

HOUSTON (AP) — Employees were low-key and passengers for the most part unconcerned in the wake of Monday's announcement that Continental Airlines was filing for protection under federal bankruptcy laws for the second time in seven years.

"I'm not worried as long as I can get home today," Gwendolyn Currie, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said.

Her flight to New Orleans was detoured to Houston because of bad weather and she was among the crowd of people waiting for Continental flights at Houston Intercontinental Airport's Terminal C, the Houston-based airline's main hub.

"I just hope to get out of here today," she said.

"I hope I still have a way to get back," said Frank Dow, who was heading to Lafayette, La., from Houston.

Neither passenger was aware of the bankruptcy filing.

Some Continental employees were handed a printed message about the filing when they reported to work Monday morning and a text of the announcement was made available to others on computer monitors at passenger check-in gates.

Passenger reaction to the announcement was minimal, gate attendants said, probably because so few people knew of it.

"The impact is zero," said one flight officer, who declined to be identified, saying employees are told to not speak with reporters. "It's business as usual.

"Look around," he said, pointing to aircraft taxiing and passengers boarding. "I don't have any anxiety."

cannot afford to finance a campaign on her own.

Richards interjected a hope that lawmakers would approve the strong ethics legislation she supports, which she said would make such questions unnecessary.

Guerrero, asked if she would attend meetings of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, as did outgoing Commissioner Kent Hance, joked, "Do I have to wear a veil?" and added she probably would not.

Otherwise, she said she holds many of the same priorities as past railroad commissioners. She pledged to work for development of a national energy policy and expanded use of the state's natural gas resources.

She said increased energy and transportation links with Mexico "could be crucial to the future of both countries" and proposed Texas as the location "where those networks should come together.

Raised in Mission in the Rio Grande Valley, Guerrero originally came to Austin to attend the Universtiy of Texas.

A House member since 1985, she rose to become one of Speaker Gib Lewis' key lieutenants, serving as vice-chairman of the powerful House State Affairs Committee, which handles legislation on a wide range of regulatory matters.

During the last regular legislative session, she negotiated a compromise to keep the state agriculture commissioner as an elected position after the present commissioner, Jim Hightower, came under attack from Republicans and rural Democrats.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Long-overdue recognition will finally be yours in the months just ahead. A legacy or unexpected windfall will alleviate financial strains in early 1991. A change of lifestyle will increase your creature comforts and peace of mind. Next September finds you renewing an old relationship. A second marriage could be part of the picture!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Jeff Bridges, essayist Thomas Carlyle, tennis coach Marty Riessen, actress Deanna Durbin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check an impulse to spend more money than is wise or necessary. You will be better off sticking to your previous plans. Others are depending on your leadership; do not let them down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your mind on your work! Romance must take a temporary backseat to your career. Welcome an opportunity to make important decisions. Good luck stems from behind-the-scenes activities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The lines of communication may become tangled today. Postpone financial negotiations with someone who lives at a distance. You can rekindle a romance if that is really what you want to do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make a special effort to get along with your co-workers now. Avoid acting impatient with those who lack your experience. You need to dig deeper to come up with the real answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stimulating news from afar brightens your day. Partnerships and travel enjoy favorable influences. Social diversions could interfere with business progress. Stay home this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Act conservatively where your finances are concerned. If buying furniture, select pieces for their durability as well as their looks. Re-establish contact with someone who lives at a distance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A financial condition improves. Your first impression of someone may not be valid. Choose your words carefully in a difficult situation. A sensitive friend is quick to take offense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An unusual financial scheme could work in your favor. Contact an influential person for best results. An old friend is able to give you special assistance. Use any inside information wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Choose your clothes with extra care today. Romance plays a major role in your plans. You could learn the truth about a special relationship. Accept a last-minute social invitation tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Favorable financial agreements can be negotiated. Give credit where it is due. A loved one may be unusually sensitive. Employ extra tact. Write an overdue letter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Any major moves involving joint funds should be discussed with your partner. Be more considerate and your relations with other family members will show dramatic improvement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There could be a lack of candor in certain relationships now. The less said, the better. Your income will rise when you put more energy into your work. Share confidences with your mate.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will strongly resist being told what to do. An early inclination to buck authority can get these Sagittarians into hot water with their teachers. Giving these youngsters special responsibilities in the classroom often turns them into lambs. A love of history and writing could lead to a career in journalism or politics.

Once in a while you can take advantage of the bidding to do something extraordinary that, if circumstances are right, could produce a sensational result. For example, study this diagram and see if you can discover how declarer came to only nine tricks at his four-spade contract when it would seem that, with the ace of hearts onside and trumps breaking, 11 tricks were there for the taking.

South tried to make the stronger hand declarer by first using Stayman to see if North by any chance held four spades. When North denied a four-card major, South made a game-forcing jump in spades and North, with three-card support, raised.

West reasoned that, since North was the no-trump opener, the king of hearts was more likely to be in dummy than with declarer, so that defender made the deceptive opening lead of the queen of hearts! With the ten in hand, declarer made the normal play of ducking in dummy, then playing low again when West continued with the four. East was surprised that his jack won the trick, but not enough to fail to play a third round of the suit. West's ace completed the defensive book, and the 13th heart was now led. Declarer discarded a club from the table, East ruffed with the ten and declarer overruffed with the king.

Declarer was one of those thoughtful types. South came to the conclusion that the only reason West had defended so peculiarly was in the hope of promoting a trump honor. So declarer cashed the ace of trumps and then finessed the board's eight. Thus East scored a trick with each major-suit jack, and declarer's 11 tricks had shrunk to nine.

We'll let you in on a secret. Given such inspired defense, we'd probably have played the hand the same way!

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Actor Paul Newman will provide the initial funding for a British summer camp for children with cancer, a charity official said Monday.

Newman

Bob Woodward, chairman of the Cancer and Leukaemia in Childhood Trust, said the project would cost up to $15.5 million.

Newman would provide a large undisclosed cash sum through his gourmet food company, Newman's Own Foods, which gives all profits to charity, said Woodward. The balance of the money needed would be raised through a national appeal.

In the United States, Newman has established a similar camp at Ashford, Conn. The camp is called the Hole-in-the-Wall Gang, named after a gang of outlaws from the film "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," in which Newman starred with Robert Redford.

It provides short holidays for 600 youngsters a year, offering a range of activities, including canoeing, fishing, horse riding and dancing.

Woodward said Newman was planning similar camps in Texas and in Florida.

Nichole was diagnosed with heart problems as an infant and had undergone corrective surgery and had two pacemakers before the August operation.

About 300 people attended the benefit Sunday night at the Broken Spoke nightclub, where Nelson began his climb to international stardom in the late 1960s and early '70s. Nelson was not present at the country dancehall.

"He's done a lot of things for a lot of people. I think it's great that people want to help him," said Will Light, a Nelson fan.

But while the event was expected to raise a tidy sum, with those attending paying $10 apiece for admission, it will not cut too deeply into Nelson's enormous tax bill. Internal Revenue Service officials say Nelson owes them $16.7 million.

LOS ALAMITOS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster remained hospitalized Monday for a stroke and his agent said he was in good spirits.

The 77-year-old film star was in serious condition at Los Alamitos Medical Center, said agent Ben Benjamin. Lancaster has some weakness on his right side and some slight difficulty speaking.

"But he's a fighter, as his daughter (Joanna Mari) says, and the family has every good hope that he's going to recover," Benjamin said.

Doctors were expected to submit a full report on Lancaster's condition on Tuesday or Wednesday, said Benjamin.

Lancaster starred in more than 70 motion pictures and won an Academy Award in 1960 for his portrayal of an evangelist in "Elmer Gantry." More recently he appeared in the film "Field of Dreams."

Kerr-McGee sells drilling fleet to Noble

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. signaled the completion of its withdrawal from the domestic offshore contract drilling business today by agreeing to sell its fleet to Noble Drilling Corp. of Houston.

The agreement signed today is for the sale of 12 rigs located in the Gulf of Mexico plus buildings and real estate in Louisiana, Kerr-McGee said.

Closing is expected in the first quarter of 1991, the company said.

Transworld Drilling Co., a Kerr-McGee subsidiary, had operated the domestic offshore contract drilling fleet.

Kerr-McGee said Noble Drilling would offer employment to active Transworld offshore employees plus the onshore employees at New Orleans, Lafayette, La., and Houston.

Arco wants insurers to pay cleanup costs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Atlantic Richfield Co. sued more than 70 insurance carriers for reimbursement of the huge costs of restoring 50 hazardous waste sites polluted over six decades, company officials said Monday.

Experts said the case will help set precedents for insurers and companies nationwide. It stems from a California Supreme Court ruling two weeks ago that the cost of cleaning up toxic pollution is part of the damages to be paid by insurers under standard comprehensive general liability policies.

Arco, the big Los Angeles-based oil company, also is asking to have the duties and liabilities of both companies and insurers clarified under the state Supreme Court ruling.

"Arco believes that this action will bring the questions of insurance coverage and compensation before a single forum for orderly and efficient resolution and administration," Arco said in a statement.

Supreme courts in Massachusetts, Minnesota, Washington and North Carolina have made similar rulings in recent months.

The case decided Nov. 15 said insurance companies that provide property coverage must pay their policyholders' costs of cleaning up toxic waste at government order. The case was brought against AIU Insurance Co. and other insurers after FMC, A Chicago-based chemical and weapons company, was sued by federal and local agencies for allegedly polluting land and water at 79 sites in a number of states.

The unanimous state Supreme Court ruling was broad but not all-inclusive. Carriers have legal defenses that include gross negligence or willful misconduct by the insured. Many recent policies also exclude all but "sudden and accidental" instances of pollution.

Companies affected by Superfund legislation all over the nation are checking old policies to see if they can escape liability for increasingly expensive toxic cleanup work, said Joel Moskowitz, a partner specializing in environmental law with the Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher firm in Los Angeles.

Steve Wasdick, a spokesman for Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. of America, said suits over toxic waste liability have frequently wound up in court, and often turn on the language of the policy. By the early 1970s, many carriers included "pollution exclusion" clauses to avoid liability except when an incident was sudden and accidental.

Among the carriers named as defendants in Arco's lawsuit are Aetna, Fireman's Fund Insurance, Travelers Insurance, Lloyd's of London and more than 20 other foreign companies.

Niner defenders produce win

■ Defense ruled in the San Francisco 49ers' 7-3 win over the New York Giants in a battle of NFL elite.

Pro Football

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Like most Super Bowls, the NFL's most-awaited game in years turned out to have little worth waiting for.

But don't tell that to the largest crowd in San Francisco 49ers' history. It chanted "Defense!" on Monday night to a team that usually depends on offensive heroes after a 7-3 win over the New York Giants.

With Charles Haley, Ronnie Lott and Darryl Pollard making big plays it was the defense that gave the 49ers this showdown between the teams that for most of the season have been considered the NFL's best.

The only touchdown came with 1:30 left in the first half, a 23-yard pass to John Taylor from Joe Montana, who was just 12-for-29 for 152 yards. That was 1 minute, 56 seconds after Matt Bahr's 20-yard field goal had given the Giants a 3-0 lead in front of a crowd of 66,413.

Then Montana, thwarted by a defense led by Greg Jackson and Mark Collins, turned it over to Haley and company as the 49ers bounced back from last week's loss to the Rams to go 11-1. The loss was the second straight for the Giants, dropped them to 10-2 and prevented them from clinching the NFC East title that's almost inevitable.

Lott and Pollard were the heroes of a stand made by the 49ers after New York had reached their 9-yard-line with 4:30 left, helped by a 19-yard run by Ottis Anderson after picking up a fumble by Phil Simms on a bounce.

Simms, who finished 14-for-31 for 153 yards, then threw three incomplete passes — Lott hitting Mark Bavaro to break up one play and Pollard deflecting a fourth-down pass intended for Lionel Manuel.

Going for it on fourth down was pivotal — had Bahr kicked a field goal he might have had another shot at one and a possible victory when the Giants reached the San Francisco 26 with 3 seconds left. Instead, Simms looked in vain for a receiver and was sacked by Kevin Fagan, San Francisco's fourth of the game.

Wyatt earns twin honors

By Bill Price

Senior football player Matt Wyatt hauled in two awards Monday night, as Midland High honored its 1990 football, volleyball and cross country participants at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Wyatt first was named recipient of the Theresa Klapproth Award, given annually to the football player with the highest grade point average. Wyatt, whose GPA is approximately 4.7, started both ways for a 1990 Bulldog unit that finished 5-4 for the season.

Wyatt, a tight end-defensive end who caught the game-winning touchdown pass in the 'Dogs' 7-3 season-opening win over Lubbock Monterey, was then named the 1990 team's Most Valuable Player.

Other football awards went to Joe Phillips, Mike Farris and Major Williams, all seniors.

Phillips, a 225-pound offensive guard who has been widely recruited by college teams, was selected at the Bulldogs' outstanding lineman. He also played in the defensive line in the first half of the season.

Farris won the Audrey Gill Fighting Bulldog Award, indicative of the player who uses his potential to the fullest. Williams was picked as the special teams player of the year and was a starter in the defensive backfield.

'Dogs cheer up injured coach

By Terry Williamson

After last week, the last thing Midland High head basketball coach Jack Stephenson wanted to do was smile, but he had a hard time keeping from it after his Bulldogs coasted to a century busting 100-61 victory over the Pecos Eagles Monday night at the MHS gym.

The Bulldogs entered the week with a two-game losing streak and Stephenson was run over by a local policeman early Friday morning in a wreck that required Stephenson to have 20 stitches in his head and a couple of more in his tongue. Just hours later, Stephenson took his Bulldogs to Lubbock and lost to Coronado.

In other words, it wasn't the best of weeks for Stephenson.

"I wanted to smile after that one, but my mouth hurt too much," said Stephenson, "but it's fun to win anytime.

For the second straight meeting, the New Mexico Military Institute Broncos tried to pull off the upset. Tried to turn the NMMI-Midland College match-up into the New Mexico Military Incident. For the second time, the Broncos came up just short at Chaparral Center Monday.

Had NMMI had another couple of minutes, and had MC's defense fallen apart once again, well, no telling what might have happened.

MC outscored NMMI 10-2 in the final three minutes to escape with an 80-73 win. The Chaps, now 8-5 overall, 1-0 in conference play, trailed by one point before going on the decisive run; the Broncos' only sin was needing more time on the clock.

In other scores around the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, Western Texas College defeated Odessa College 97-86 in a minor upset; South Plains downed Frank Phillips 102-78, and Howard defeated Clarendon 94-63.

MC head coach Reggie Franklin said his team's failure to effectively execute the 1-3-1 defense led to the closeness of the contest in the final three minutes.

MC went up 70-62 while its 1-3-1 was working. When it fell apart, NMMI came back to take a 71-70 lead, its final lead of the evening.

"When we stopped using the 1-3-1 the right way," Franklin noted, "(NMMI) started scoring. We went back to the 1-3-1 and stopped them from scoring again."

After NMMI had regained the lead for that final brief moment, MC patched things back together with Tom Brown scoring four of his six points down the final stretch, and Carroll Boudreaux and Eugene Witherspoon trading buckets at the low spot. Eric Walker's slam at 1:07 put MC up 80-71.

In the second half alone, the two teams changed leads 12 times — including four times in the final 10 minutes. The Chaps didn't own their first

Heisman takes back seat to emergency

It was well back in the innocence of my youth that I first became aware of the celebrated Heisman Trophy.

Wyatt

Our clan was gathered at Grandfather's for a holiday feast. It was 1971, and more importantly it was late November in Northern Ohio, which pretty much dictated that the kids should remain warmly indoors with the elders as they settled down for their weekly helping of college football.

And this would be a full-course meal for the elders; Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan had just been named the best player in the land, and he was about to lead the Tigers into battle against the hated Crimson Tide of Alabama.

I'm quite certain that I'd never turned my full attention to college football before this particular game. To watch football meant you were either too old or too lazy to play it. I hated wasting my Saturdays in front of a TV. Just being indoors was bad enough.

But something happened to me as this game progressed. Here was the country's very best college football player, and Alabama was knocking him every which way but loose from the Heisman. It was Sullivan's day to show the country his stuff, and he performed miserably. And the more he floundered in the limelight, the more unpredictable and intriguing the game became for me.

For whatever reason, I've been an avid fan of the sport ever since that day — wasting the better part of innumerable Saturdays indoors by my TV — and I always think of Auburn's annual meeting with Alabama when I think of the Heisman Trophy.

Such a recollection was automatic this last Saturday because the Tide was playing Auburn, and the Heisman Trophy winner was to be announced after the game.

I had to be at work following the presentation of the award, but I'd been unable to pry myself from the game long enough to get ready. So just after the final gun, I dove into the shower for a run at the world speed bathing record. If I washed fast I wouldn't miss the Heisman ceremony, and I'd still make it to work on time.

My five-year-old daughter Jenny, who had been enjoying the innocence of her youth outdoors most of the afternoon with neighborhood friends and her older brother, was holding the telephone when I dripped toward the TV to catch the announcement. Saying not a word, she handed me the phone.

"Hello," said I.

"Hello," said a woman. "This is 911. Do you have an emergency?"

I stammered something, and the woman continued, "Jenny just told me that someone is trying to take her stuffed animal away from her."

I assured the woman that this was a problem that I could handle all by myself, thanked her and hung up.

I then assured Jenny that we only use 911 when a life is in danger, and that hers would indeed be in danger if she dared touch my phone once more.

The announcement of the Heisman Trophy winner had spurred me on to the speediest shower I can remember. And that abbreviated bath had saved me from the possibility of being greeted at my shower curtain by various law enforcement officials, who I cared not to meet just then.

I forgot about the televised announcemt, opting instead to discuss emergencies with my daughter.

When next year's Heisman announcement rolls around, I'm not likely to be thinking about Auburn or Alabama.

McGee, other free agents find homes

Baseball

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Willie McGee, Terry Pendleton and Kevin Gross fueled a flurry of free agents finding new places to play Monday as baseball's winter meetings again backed up all that talk with a lot of action.

McGee, who won a weird National League batting title and wound up the season in Oakland, agreed with the San Francisco Giants on a four-year, $13 million deal.

Pendleton, McGee's longtime teammate in St. Louis, also struck it rich — a four-year, $9.8 million contract with Atlanta. The Cardinals recently lost reliever Ken Dayley to free agency and figure to soon get hit hard again if Vince Coleman leaves for the New York Mets.

Gross did not get as much money as the others, but he made out well. He got a three-year contract for about $7 million to pitch in Los Angeles, a pitcher's paradise. Montreal was not that interested in re-signing Gross; the Expos took care of their big business earlier in the day when they gave ace Dennis Martinez a new, three-year contract for more than $9.25 million.

In the only trade of the day, the New York Yankees sent rookie outfielder Oscar Azocar to San Diego for a minor leaguer to be named later. In the hottest talk of the day, the Chicago Cubs set up a meeting with free agent George Bell.

The announcements about McGee, Pendleton and Gross came within 90 minutes of each other in the early evening, following a morning and afternoon dotted with discussions, but not much else. The frenzy followed Sunday's activity in which Toronto and California made a six-player trade that included Devon White and Junior Felix.

McGee's signing was by far the biggest move of the meetings, and capped an awfully strange year for him.

McGee, 32, batted .335 for St. Louis before being traded to Oakland on Aug. 29 for Felix Jose and two minor leaguers. The Athletics got him mainly for insurance in case center fielder Dave Henderson's knee did not recover, which it did. Meanwhile, McGee won his second batting title when his average stayed frozen as Lenny Dykstra's dipped.

"Willie is the kind of player who wants to come to the ballpark every day knowing he will play," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "I couldn't promise that."

McGee hit .274 for Oakland, but Henderson started most of the games in the World Series. The Athletics did not show great interest in signing him, and will get a top draft pick as compensation.

McGee is a three-time Gold Glove winner, was the NL's MVP in 1985 and is a .297 hitter with 277 stolen bases in nine seasons. He was born and raised in the Bay Area and wanted to play at home, and the Giants were glad to accomodate him.

Brett Butler has been the Giants' center fielder for three seasons, but stands to become an instant free agent this week if baseball owners, as expected, ratify a collusion settlement. Butler is seeking a four-year, $15 million deal, the same terms teammates Kevin Mitchell and Will Clark got.

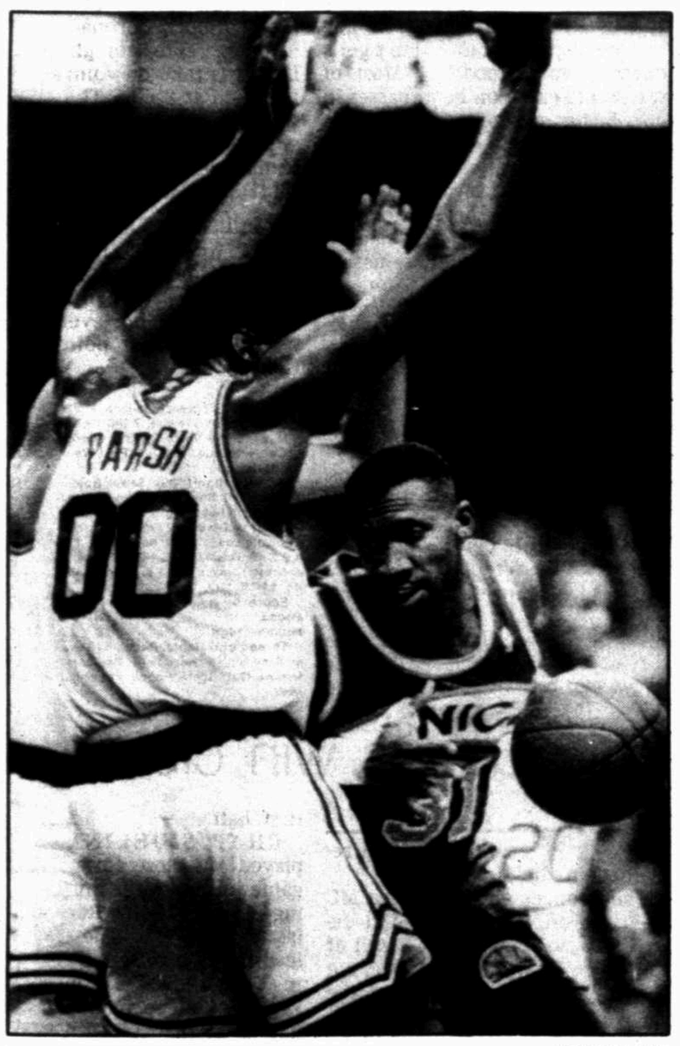

"Butler's price is too high," Giants general manager Al Rosen said. "I didn't want to leave here without a center fielder."

Butler has two years left on his contract and the Mets, among others, might go after him.

Pendleton, 30, batted .259 in seven years and has won two Gold Gloves at third base. He hit just .230 last season, but new Atlanta general manager John Schuerholz said he is not worried.

"He plays a position we felt it was very important to strengthen ourselves at," Schuerholz said. "He brings a complete package."

Gross, 29, was 9-12 with a 4.57 earned run average for Montreal. He had been a starter for most his career with Philadelphia and the Expos, but was sent briefly to the bullpen, where he was effective.

Seattle's Derrick McKey tries to get around Boston's Robert Parish and Kevin McHale during Monday's game.

Parish leads Celts

Associated Press

NBA

Robert Parish scored 22 points in a balanced scoring blitz Monday night as the Boston Celtics rode a 28-10 third-period advantage to a 135-102 victory over Seattle, the SuperSonics' fifth consecutive loss.

Parish was joined in double figures by seven teammates as the Celtics breezed to their ninth victory in 10 games and boosted their record to 13-3.

Boston opened a 13-point lead in the first period and was ahead by as much as 12 in the second quarter, but Seattle battled back to 58-54 at halftime.

Then, after the SuperSonics' Shawn Kemp scored on a dunk at the start of the third quarter, the Celtics took total command.

With an 11-2 run, Boston went ahead 69-58. Then, after two Seattle baskets, Boston went on runs of 13-0 and 24-6 to carry an 86-64 advantage into the final period.

Seattle, which has won only once in 10 games, was 5-for-28 from the field in the third-period blowout.

Parish retired early in the fourth quarter and was joined by other Boston regulars as the bench was cleared and everyone got into the scoring act.

Kevin McHale had 18 points, Reggie Lewis 16, Brian Shaw 14, Kevin Gamble 12, Larry Bird 11, and Dee Brown and Joe Kleine 10 each for the Celtics.

Sedale Threatt led Seattle with 20 points, while Kemp had 19 and Derrick McKey 17. Xavier McDaniel, among the NBA's leading scorers with a 23.8 average, managed just two points, retiring to the bench for good with seven minutes left in the third period.

Jazz 135, Bullets 101

Karl Malone scored 17 of his 38 points in the first quarter as Utah jumped out to a 23-point lead after 12 minutes.

Malone also grabbed 15 rebounds. Jeff Malone, traded from the Bullets to the Jazz last summer, scored a season-high 28 points in his first game against Washington, which has lost seven straight meetings with Utah.

Bernard King had 18 of the Bullets' 26 points in the second quarter. He finished with 24.

Tech wipes out Pan American

Associated Press

SWC Hoops

LUBBOCK — Steve Miles scored 24 points without missing a shot and Allen Austin grabbed 13 rebounds as Texas Tech whipped Texas-Pan American 82-54 Monday night.

Texas Tech (2-3) of the Southwest Conference dropped Texas-Pan American, a member of the American South Conference, to 1-3.

Cold shooting by Texas-Pan American combined with the inside play of Miles and Austin were the difference as the Red Raiders won their first home game since defeating Northwestern Louisiana 79-67 on Dec. 30, 1989.

The Broncs could not stop Miles, who finished a perfect 9-of-9 from the field and 6-of-6 from the foul line with nine rebounds.

After Derex Butts scored Tech's first basket of the game, Miles scored 12 consecutive points for the Raiders.

Stacy Bailey had 14 points and Barron Brown added 13 for Tech.

The Broncs, who connected on only 18 of 70 shots from the field (25 percent), were led by Gabriel Valdez with 16 points and Chris Jones, who grabbed 15 rebounds.

Leading 23-19 with 7:53 left in the first half, Tech went on a 17-4 run, which gave the Red Raiders a 40-23 lead at intermission. The Raiders never looked back.

The Broncs suffered a five-minute scoring drought before Francisco Siller hit two free throws with just over a minute to play in the half.

The margin of victory was Tech's biggest since a 94-58 win over Portland Dec. 1, 1989.

Baylor 93, Brooklyn Col. 48

Baylor scored 29 straight points, holding Brooklyn College scoreless for 9:47 in the second half, behind the outside shooting of guard Melvin Hunt.

Baylor (4-0) of the Southwest Conference led 36-22 at the half on Hunt's 5-of-8 shooting, including three 3-pointers.

Brooklyn (2-2) closed to within seven at 38-31 after 3:24 of the second half, but the Bears responded with the 29-0 run that opened up a 67-31 advantage.

Guard David Wesley and forward Willie Sublett each scored 14 to lead the Bears while Hunt added 13 and center Kelvin Chalmers pulled down nine rebounds.

Guard Dexter Gordon led Brooklyn with 14 points.

Logue rides Khadafy for bareback victory

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Chuck Logue rode Khadafy, the 1990 horse of the year, to an impressive victory Monday night in the fourth round of the bareback riding competition at the National Finals Rodeo.

Logue received a score of 83 for his ride, one point better than Clint Corey and Bruce Ford, the five-time champion who was making his 17th consecutive NFR appearance. The $10,220 first-prize money allowed Logue to put some distance between himself and Colin Murnion, who failed to cash. Logue now leads by nearly $11,000 in the race for the gold belt buckle.

World All-Around champion Ty Murray, formally of Odessa, added to his record bankroll when he tied Tuff Hedeman in the fourth round of the bull riding. Murray and Hedeman had a score of 83, one point in front of former champion Ted Nuce. Neither Jim Sharp, the leader, nor Clint Branger, his nearest competitor cashed, but they remained 1-2 in the standings.

Mike Smith became the first competitor to earn back-to-back victories when he needed just 3.2 seconds to take the steer wrestling event. The time was just two-tenths of a second off the NFR and Thomas and Mack Arena records and moved Smith, who was 13th entering the competition, into second place. He's still about $9,000 behind pacesetter Ote Berry, who was second in 4.0. Mark Roy (4.2) and Brad Gleason (4.5) took third and fourth places, respectively.

Fourth-round saddle bronc riding honors were shard by Derek Clark and Dan Etbauer with scores of 80. Duane Daines and Rod Hay were one point back. The victory jumped Clark from fifth to third place in the standings, $8,344 behind leader Robert Etbauer, who, for the first time in the Finals, failed to cash. Tom Reeves, also shut out, is second in earnings.

Jerry Jetton, who won the opening round of the calf roping competition, repeated Monday, snagging his calf in 9.1 seconds, a tick faster than Chris Lybbert, who was second. None of the three leaders — Mike Johnson, Joe Lucas nor Troy Pruitt — earned a check, tightening up the competition. Jetton now is fourth, $9,324 behind Johnson.

Bret Boatright and Monty Joe Petska moved into second place in the team roping with a fourth-round victory in 4.5 seconds.

Stith fights off ankle; Cavs win

Associated Press

Virginia's Bryant Stith was wrong — dead wrong — but the Cavaliers couldn't be happier.

"I really thought I was out for the game because I really rolled it over bad," Stith said of his right ankle which he sprained to force him out of the first half of Monday's ACC-Big East Challenge contest against No. 11 Pittsburgh.

Instead, Stith came back for the second half and scored 20 of his 28 points to rally No. 21 Virginia to an 84-80 victory.

"Basically, it's the Bryant Stith we all know and love," Virginia coach Jeff Jones said of the 6-foot-6 junior forward, who was a member of last summer's U.S. national team.

Virginia (4-2) took the lead to stay on a spinning 12-foot jumper by Stith that made it 73-71 with 4:10 left. His 3-pointer at the 2:30 mark gave the Cavaliers a 76-72 lead, and Pittsburgh (4-1) never got closer.

"He can take anybody in the country one-on-one," Jones said of Stith, who also had 12 rebounds and five steals, both game highs.

"Stith is too quick for any of our big kids," Pittsburgh coach Paul Evans said.

The Cavaliers, who were playing their sixth game in 11 days, also got 18 points from John Crotty, 15 from Kenny Turner and 14 from Anthony Oliver.

Jason Matthews led the Panthers with 24 points. Sean Miller added 11.

Stith's work inside helped Virginia to a 35-28 rebounding edge. The Cavaliers had 22 defensive rebounds.

"I couldn't believe it was the same Virginia team that got beat 2-to-1 on the boards last Friday night," Evans said, referring to Virginia's poor performance in a 60-55 loss to New Orleans.

Virginia built its lead over Pittsburgh as high as six points early and was up 22-18 with 8:31 left in the opening half when Stith, the Cavaliers' top scoring threat, went down while battling several players for a rebound. Stith, who already had eight points, needed to be assisted from the floor and went to Virginia's dressing room, where the ankle was tightly taped.

With Stith out for the rest of the half, Pittsburgh quickly took control en route to a 44-40 halftime lead.

Stith, showing no sign of injury, started the second half and scored eight consecutive points at one stretch to rally the Cavaliers from a 52-44 deficit.

No. 15 Southern Miss. 105 Hawaii Loa 71

Clarence Weatherspoon scored 16 points and had 11 rebounds for Southern Mississippi.

Southern Mississippi (2-0) led 25-18 with 7:55 left in the first half then went on a 22-6 run over the next six minutes and the Golden Eagles led 53-28 at halftime.

Weatherspoon and Daron Jenkins each had four of Southern Mississippi's 11 dunks in the Golden Eagles' home opener. Southern Mississippi has won 12 of its last 13 home games.

Hawaii Loa (4-2) fought back midway in the second half with a 13-9 run to pull within 74-54.

The Southern Mississippi reserves, though, took over down the stretch and the Golden Eagles outscored the Mongoose 31-14 over the last 9:35. Every Golden Eagle but one scored.

Red Devils skip contact in practice

RANKIN — Figuring that his Rankin Red Devils have had enough injuries this season, head coach Troy Kennedy will continue to put the Red Devils through non-contact drills in preparation for Saturday's Class A state quarterfinal game with top-ranked Munday.

The Rankin-Munday game will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Colorado City.

Garden City will face Valley Mills in another Class A quarterfinal at 8 p.m. Friday in Coleman. Garden City was ranked fifth in the last Associated Press Class A poll, while Valley Mills finished eighth.

Kennedy put a stop to full-contact practices at the end of a regular season in which the Red Devils finished 7-2 despite numerous injuries. Since then, Rankin has beaten Plains and Farwell in playoff action to set up the quarterfinal matchup with Munday, which blasted Fort Davis 48-2 in its Region I semifinal.

"All we've done the last two weeks is polish assignments," Kennedy said. "We're not doing any hitting right now."

The veteran mentor admits that some coaches would beg to differ with his reasoning.

"Some coaches want to keep their hitting as sharp as possible, but we feel like ours will be more hungry on Friday and Saturday (after a week of non-contact practices)," Kennedy said.

"We're not going to hurt anybody now, unless somebody gets a helmet dropped on his foot."

Injuries may have played a role in Rankin's 17-13 win over Farwell last Friday. Farwell tailback Shawn Stewart aggravated a hamstring injury in the first quarter, while a key Steer defender was hurt later in the game.

Rankin, on the other hand, is finally injury-free. Fullback-linebacker Arnaldo Ramos will return to action Saturday after missing several weeks, though he will play only defense against Munday.

Kennedy isn't conceding anything to Munday, even though the Moguls boast major college prospects Terry and Perry Collier at running back.

Fans, Slocum mad at CBS

SWC Football

AUSTIN (AP) — Some football fans complained that the CBS broadcast of the Texas-Texas A&M game may have tipped off Texas on a crucial play that cost the Aggies the game.

Officials at both schools said Monday the telecast had nothing to do with the outcome of Saturday's 28-27 victory by Texas, but A&M's head football coach R.C. Slocum said CBS was "out of line."

"I disapprove of CBS. I think they are out of line to position themselves to gather information that could influence the outcome of the game," he said. "In the future, we will be more mindful of where their cameramen are."

Robin Brendle, a spokeswoman for CBS Sports, said broadcasting the play was inadvertent, but added, "A big part of our telecast is trying to get in the huddle and capture the essence of the game."

Late in the fourth quarter, A&M halfback Darren Lewis was stopped well short of the goal line on a 2-point conversion attempt that would have given the Aggies a 1-point lead.

Instead, Texas took the kickoff and ran out the clock to preserve its victory and snap a six-game losing streak to their Southwest Conference arch-rivals.

Before the conversion play, the CBS national viewing audience heard A&M plan and call the play on the sideline.

If the Texas coaches had heard that information, they could have adjusted their defense, according to several callers to radio talk shows.

Slocum said his criticism of CBS should not take away from Texas.

U.S. headed for brain drain, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American brain drain is in the making because of a poor atmosphere for creative technology and an aggressive engineer recruiting program by foreign companies, a NASA advisory committee was told Monday.

"Our members are asking themselves what future is there for the American aerospace worker," Leonard Ricks testified. "Unfortunately, many of our colleagues are concluding that there is no future and are leaving."

He spoke at the sixth and last hearing of the Advisory Committee on the Future of the U.S. Space Program, which is preparing to issue a final report on Dec. 17. The committee was set up in July by NASA administrator Richard Truly.

Ricks, executive director for the Council of Engineers and Scientists Organizations, said American engineering journals now contain ads "by foreign countries who will steal American technology by importing its creator."

He said public policy has focused on the management of the nation's space program but not the creators of technology and said focus on NASA's problems has created a witchhunt atmosphere.

"Today there is a feeding frenzy over many of the technical difficulties that naturally occur in any complex scientific endeavor," he said. "Both the print and electronic media have appeared jubilant over flaws in the Hubble (Space Telescope) mirror, fuel leaks and other technical problems."

That, in turn, has produced an enormous morale problem in the aerospace workforce, said Ricks, whose organization represents more than 100,000 engineers.

"We are increasingly made to feel embarrassed by public policy makers who see our programs as wasting money that could be spent in meeting social needs. We are humiliated by the media's presentation of our products as inferior and flawed."

America's space program, he said, is best characterized by the word instability and cannot be otherwise without long-term commitment.

Spectators crowd around the skating rink at New York's Rockefeller Plaza as the Christmas tree is switched on Monday night.

20,000 lights adorn tree at Rockefeller Center

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's best-known harbinger of Christmas, the tree at Rockefeller Center, was set aglow Monday to the oohs and ahs of thousands of spectators who were undeterred by cold and rainy weather.

The 20,000 multicolored lights adorning the 75-foot Norway spruce that towers over the skating rink were turned on about 5:30 p.m.

The half-hour ceremony accompanying the tree lighting featured singer-actress Liza Minnelli as host, with appearances by skating champions Judy Blumberg, Michael Siebert and Olympic gold medalist Robin Cousins; Minnelli's sister, singer Lorna Luft; and a segment from the Radio City Musical Hall Christmas Spectacular.

Clara "Mother" Hale, founder of Hale House, a home for infants born to drug-addicted mothers, delivered a Christmas message.

The tree, selected from a private home in West Norwalk, Conn., arrived at Rockefeller Center on Nov. 16. For the past two weeks, workers have been readying the tree, stringing more than 5 miles of lights.

Inouye defends 'Keating Five;' FBI reportedly enters case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Senate colleague defended the integrity of the Keating Five senators before the Ethics Committee on Monday, while away from the hearing law enforcement sources said the FBI was examining the lawmakers' conduct as well.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, told the ethics panel that the five senators whose conduct is the subject of the hearings appeared to be providing typical service to a constituent when they intervened with savings and loan regulators on behalf of S&L owner Charles H. Keating Jr.

Inouye specifically endorsed the conduct of Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who was described in prior testimony by regulators as a negotiator for Keating in two 1987 meetings.

Keating donated or raised $1.3 million for the five senators' campaigns and causes.

"I do not believe Sen. DeConcini crossed the line" between proper and improper action, Inouye said, referring to DeConcini's request that regulators waive a thrift regulation that was harming Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan. "If it was improper, all of us at one time or another have done that."

Inouye said he appeared as a defense witness, over the objections of his staff, because "I believe what is on trial here is not the five colleagues of mine but the U.S. Senate, and for that matter the Congress of the United States."

Meanwhile, law enforcement sources speaking only on condition of anonymity, said the FBI is looking into the senators' conduct as part of a wide-ranging investigation being coordinated with federal prosecutors in Los Angeles and Phoenix.

Examination of the senators' dealings with Keating is one aspect of the broad federal criminal inquiry into allegations of financial wrongdoing at Lincoln Savings and its parent American Continental Corp.

Justice Department officials declined to comment on a report in Monday's Washington Times that the FBI is focusing on allegations of vote trading and bribery against two of the senators, Democrats Alan Cranston of California and DeConcini.

The other members being investigated by the Senate Ethics Committee are John Glenn, D-Ohio, Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich. and John McCain, R-Ariz.

DeConcini denounced the newspaper report, saying he had not been questioned as part of a criminal investigation. "I think I'm being terrorized by such an article appearing," he said.

DeConcini spokesman Robert Maynes said that last spring, the senator gave to the FBI all the documents he submitted to the Ethics Committee.

"This was in connection with the investigation of Keating," Maynes said. "We turned it over in response to an FBI request."

Cranston's attorney, William Taylor, said Cranston was not "the target of a criminal investigation," but had provided information requested by the Justice Department as part of its investigation into Keating.

At the ethics hearings, in their 10th day, Inouye was followed by Cranston's former chief fund-raiser, who testified that "in retrospect I believe" Keating linked his contributions to Cranston's help for Lincoln.

Joy Jacobson was asked by Cranston's attorney, "Did Sen. Cranston ever say to you, when the contributions were made, whether it was expected he would act in any way for Keating or American Continental?"

"No," she responded.

Ms. Jacobson said she, not Cranston, was "controlling the timing" of solicitations of Keating, adding she was unaware that Cranston was contacting regulators for Keating at the same times.

Earlier, Inouye told the Ethics Committee's six senators that constituents who are also campaign contributors often ask for help when they believe they are treated unfairly by federal agencies.

He called the five senators "men of unimpeachable character" and added, "If everything turned out well, if we did not have this S&L crisis, if Mr. Keating was once again able to revive (Lincoln Savings and Loan) these men would be heroes to their constituents; they were able to save jobs."

"Today they are damned because the endeavor failed, so I think we are on trial here, the U.S. Senate."

Volcanoes active on Venus, Magellan photos indicate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pictures taken by the Magellan spacecraft suggest that volcanoes still spew Australia-sized lava floods on Venus, and the planet didn't abruptly shut down after a global-sized eruption 400 million years ago.

"Venus is not dead," Southern Methodist University scientist Roger Phillips said Monday during the American Geophysical Union's fall meeting.

Magellan hasn't yet found direct proof that volcanoes are erupting today on the planet, but "it seems likely Venus is still (volcanically) active today," said Steve Saunders, Magellan's chief scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

The spacecraft's latest radar pictures of cloud-covered Venus show there are absolutely no meteorite impact craters in an Australia-sized portion of the planet's Sappho region, just north of the Venusian equator, Phillips said.

That means the huge area is covered by lava that was deposited in a massive flood-like eruption sometime within the last tens of millions of years — very young in geological terms, Phillips said.

"It raises the likelihood Venus is still active," the Dallas researcher added.

Venus "has to be volcanically active, but demonstrating it is going to be hard," said Brown University geologist Jim Head, a member of the Magellan science team.

To show conclusively that volcanoes now erupt on Venus, Magellan must fly over the same parts of the planet twice and look for differences caused by active lava flows. That won't happen until next spring.

Saunders said last month that most of the meteorite impact craters on Venus appeared relatively young and fresh. He said that suggested older impact craters were obliterated by gargantuan floods of lava.

At the time, Saunders said that either lava gushed from numerous cracks in the surface to flood 60 percent of Venus during a single catastrophe about 400 million years ago, or that a series of somewhat smaller but still giant lava floods inundate various regions of Venus during different times.

The evidence Phillips presented Monday supports the second theory.

If a single global lava flood created most of Venus' lowland plains 400 million years ago, meteorite impact craters should appear across much of the planet's landscape. But the pictures showing the uncratered region of Sappho suggest that huge, but not global, lava floods occur on different parts of the planet at different times, Phillips said.

That, in turn, indicates massive volcanic flooding is an ongoing process of Venus, the second planet from the sun.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- •ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- •MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- •COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- •YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- •SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
