Coahoma High plans 25th reunion

The Coahoma High School classes of 1966, 1967 and 1968 have scheduled a 25th reunion in Coahoma Saturday. A reception begins at 2:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria and will feature a special celebration for Spike Dykes as he commemorates his first coaching job, 25 years ago in Coahoma.

Activities include a special reunion of coaches and football players from the classes before the reception and a dinner for the classes and their families Saturday night.

For more information about the event, contact Diane Woods at 394-4434 or the Coahoma Elementary School at 394-4323.

College to offer corrections class

The County Corrections course will be offered at Odessa College during the second summer session, beginning July 16.

Bill Cooksey, chairman of the law enforcement/criminal justice department said the course has two advantages. The first is that the course is an approved elective for criminal justice majors.

Anyone completing the course is eligible to take the state examination to receive a license to become a county corrections officer. Job opportunities once the license are received include working in the county as a jailer, he said.

For more information, call Cooksey at 1-335-6455.

Special session postponed in secret meeting

AUSTIN (AP) — State leaders emerged from seclusion on Matagorda Island with a July 15 date for a special legislative session, and several reasons why their private meeting did not violate state open government laws.

Gov. Ann Richards said Thursday it was better for the state for her, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis to be able to meet privately.

In addition, the three state leaders said a public meeting was not required under the Texas Open Meetings Act because no decisions were made. She said the time spent on the island was devoted to briefings from staff.

And, Richards and Bullock advanced the theory that although a majority of the membership of the Legislative Budget Board attended the meeting, the LBB did not actually exist between sessions.

The LBB is chaired by Bullock and includes Lewis and other influential lawmakers on spending and tax issues.

Richards chastised reporters for raising the issue over whether the closed session was a violation of the law.

"You all, unfortunately, are playing games with the people of Texas that are unfair," Richards told reporters.

She said informal leadership meetings are common. "We try to meet at my new residence at least once or twice a week. No one has ever raised a question whether that's appropriate or not," Richards said.

"There is simply no way that you can conduct the business of this state without having an opportunity for your staffs to be able to give you briefings on what needs to be done. That's what we did, and it was totally appropriate, and I think that this is much ado about nothing," she said.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said the LBB is subject to

Citizens protest drinking policy

By PAT DRISCOLL
and DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writers

A group of local citizens picketed the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo Thursday, protesting what they called unequal treatment in the sale of alcoholic beverages at a city park.

About 20 protesters, with some carrying signs, walked in the area near the front entrance of the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl as crowds began to arrive at dusk Thursday.

The protesters said at issue is the legal sale of alcoholic beverages at the rodeo grounds, while sale or consumption is prohibited at the Comanche Trail Amphitheatre in Comanche Trail Park. A series of Tejano music concerts is taking place at the amphitheater throughout the summer.

"We don't want to disrupt the rodeo, we don't want to block it," said Arnold Uribe, who was carrying a sign that read, "Beer for the rodeo. Why not for the concerts?" He said the city council, which has taken no action toward allowing alcohol at the amphitheater, has a double standard.

"The city better wake up to the fact that there's a lot more intelligence in the minority community than they want to give them credit for," said city council member Pat DeAnda, carrying a

Many special events planned for Fourth Music and fireworks in Big Spring

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

A patriotic, moving Independence Day celebration is planned in Big Spring, supporters say.

Local businesses have pooled their resources to fund a fireworks display and musical event offered free to the public. The show, sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, takes place July 4 at the Comanche Trail Amphitheatre. Music entertainment will be provided by the Big Spring Symphony and Dixie Land Band.

Music will begin at 7:30 p.m., with fireworks starting at dark, discharged from South Mountain. There is no admission fee. Families are welcome to bring picnics, and food and drinks will be sold, but there are no alcoholic beverages allowed in the amphitheater.

Long-time chamber volunteer Eddie Cole became the driving force behind the fireworks project earlier this year when former sponsor J.B. Elmore's car dealership went out of business. Cole said he had no trouble recruiting support.

"Nobody I called said no," Cole said. "I got eight sponsors at $1,000 each with no trouble at all. A good number of others gave some amount. People really got behind this."

Chamber members sponsoring the show include: KBST Radio, Don Newsom's IGA, First National

Coahoma, C-City plan parades

Numerous Fourth of July activities are planned to take place in Colorado City and Coahoma, including parades.

The 29th Annual July 4th Fly In of World War II vintage aircraft will take place at the Colorado City Jet Strip Airport. A breakfast will be held from 7-10 a.m. at the City National Bank. Trophies will be awarded to pilots at 9:30 a.m.

Then at 11 a.m., a Salute to Veterans Parade will begin at the Roundtop Cafe and end at the Mitchell County Courthouse. After the parade, a July 4th Fest will begin at Ruddick Park. There will be food, games, fun and musical entertainment.

Also, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., the Heart of West Texas Museum will have its premiere opening. Visiting hours for the Heritage House, a restored historical home, will be from 2-5 p.m. As the sun goes down, a fireworks display will be staged by the Colorado City Fire Department.

A parade in Coahoma is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on Second Street on the south side of Interstate 20, said July 4 event coordinator Clara Justice. The parade will proceed down Second Street to Bulldog Stadium where an hour-long patriotic tribute will commence.

In the afternoon, Feaster Puppets shows will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the city park and continue throughout the day. Also at 12:30 p.m. in the park, a washer-tossing

Teller foils robbery at Citizen's credit union

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring Police are investigating an attempted robbery that occurred Thursday at Citizen's Federal Credit Union. No one was injured in the incident, and no money was stolen, reports said.

A man entered the financial institution about 2:50 p.m. and handed a teller a note demanding money, officials said. Citizen's President Jim Weaver said the man wanted the money put into an empty plastic bread bag.

The teller, who asked that her name not be used, refused to give money to the man, who then fled, Weaver said. Police reports confirmed the man showed no weapon. He is described as a white male, 25 to 35 years old. He is about 5-foot-7 with dark hair and eyes and a slender build, reports said.

Tellers saw the man leave the area on foot, Weaver said. Police said he was wearing a dark-blue sweatshirt and blue jeans when he fled the credit union, 701 East FM-700.

Weaver said the teller, who has worked at Citizen's for about five years, was back at work today. He said the institution's policy is that tellers will offer no resistance to

Carriker to explain waste laws

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Companies applying for hazardous waste permits in Texas face many new and tighter restrictions that were passed by the Legislature last month, said state Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Robey, who will outline the changes in a talk here Saturday night.

"It's (the bill) basically designed to give much more adequate information both to the public and to the regulatory agencies in the instance of hazardous waste applications," said Carriker, who sponsored the 70-page Senate Bill 1099.

Environmental groups across

Texas last year were upset when out-of-state companies began proposing numerous hazardous waste disposal facilities, including a half-dozen in West Texas cities such as Colorado City, Lubbock and Stanton.

As a result, Gov. Ann Richards in her state of the state address in February called for a moratorium on new permits that is in effect through September, when the new legislation takes effect. The legislative package, passed overwhelmingly the last day of the session, was put together by staff members from Richards' and Carriker's office.

Among the provisions are:

Stricter requirements for emergency management capabilities.

Greater disclosure of financial assets to make sure companies can deliver what they promise and can afford to clean up accidents.

Giving the Texas Water Commission or the Texas Air Control Board the right to deny a hazardous waste permit application based on previous violations of a company in Texas or other states.

Allowing private citizens to recoup research and legal costs when they uncover pertinent information on an applicant that the applicant did not provide

Woman expecting to get 17 dogs back

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who had 97 dogs and two rabbits seized by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals last week, will keep as many as 17 dogs, her attorney said.

Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, the attorney for Dianne Brooks, said Wednesday that he expected his client to receive "15, 16 or 17" of the 59 dogs confiscated in Harris County.

None of the 38 dogs and two rabbits seized in Fort Bend County will be returned to Ms. Brooks through a separate agreement between Haynes and the county's lawyers.

Authorities from Harris and Fort Bend counties found the animals living in unsanitary conditions on two properties owned by Ms. Brooks.

A spokeswoman for the SPCA said her organization supported the agreement between Ms. Brooks and Fort Bend County, but they were hoping that Harris County's penalty would be more severe.

Rising number of infant deaths noted

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Officials at Wichita General Hospital have asked the Texas Department of Health to investigate an alarming increase of infant and fetus deaths during the past two months at the facility.

Dr. Garland Dean, the hospital's medical director, said 19 deaths in May and June have brought this year's total to 29. He said there were only 17 such deaths in all of 1990 at the hospital.

"The numbers are going up," said Dr. John Montgomery, chairman of the hospital's department of obstetrics and gynecology. "We're getting alarmed. We want to get some people in here who know what to look for."

Area obstetricians and family practitioners met this week at the hospital to discuss the disturbing mortality rate, but were unable to find any common or underlying factors.

"It is strange. I haven't seen anything like this since I've been here for four years," Montgomery told the Wichita Falls Times Record News.

He said physicians have been unable to detect a trend and are anxious for the health department epidemiologist to begin investigating.

Morales says more prison beds needed

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales says lawmakers should approve expanding prison capacity by 37,000 beds to bolster efforts to escape federal court oversight of Texas prisons.

But San Francisco lawyer William Bennett Turner, representing inmates in the lawsuit against the prison system, said the only thing that building new lockups may do is strain prison managers.

"There's no such thing as eliminating overcrowding by building prisons. The iron law of corrections is that all space will be filled," Turner said Thursday.

Morales said an increase of 37,000 beds over four to five years is "at a minimum what the Legislature ought to recognize is going to be necessary."

Current state prison capacity is about 49,000, and will rise to approximately 64,000 when ongoing construction projects are completed.

The budget-writing House Appropriations Committee has voted to provide no new money for prison construction. But Morales said he doesn't believe that will be the final action by lawmakers meeting in July to write a state budget. It has been estimated that space for 37,000 new prison beds would cost about $1.6 billion.

"I am hopeful that ultimately we will see a level of commitment from state policy makers... that will allow us to put forth as strong an argument as we can in the federal district court," Morales said.

In the effort to free the state from federal court supervision, Morales filed a motion Thursday telling U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler about a new law providing a mechanism for the state to increase inmate population over 95 percent capacity.

The state is under a federal court order by Justice against prison crowding, leading to the capacity limit.

Morales first filed a motion in January asking Justice to end federal intervention. But that motion depended on adoption of state controls to ensure the prison system remains in compliance with the U.S. Constitution.

Morales said the new law provides such controls, creating a state administrative oversight board.

The law "gives us the means to ensure that as our prison system grows to accommodate more prisoners, the availability of medical, sanitary, recreational, academic and other inmate services and facilities will grow in concert," Morales said.

Turner said the new law doesn't help the state's case. He said inmates' rights are protected under the current federal court order.

Politicians want refunds

DALLAS (AP) — Several political candidates, including Gov. Ann Richards and former opponent Clayton Williams, are trying to recover some of the millions of campaign dollars they spent during a television ad blitz last fall.

Former Republican candidates Kent Hance and Rob Mosbacher also are trying to recoup some advertising dollars from the TV stations that broadcast their political commercials last year.

Attorneys in Atlanta representing some of the politicians estimate that candidates in Texas and 10 other states were overcharged by tens of millions. The lawyers said they expected to represent more Texas candidates.

"This is not based purely on greed," said Matt Towery, a lawyer in Atlanta who is representing Williams, Hance and Mosbacher. "This is money that was in fact taken from them that shouldn't have been in the first place."

The politicians are asking TV stations statewide to provide information on their advertising rates and practices in an attempt to determine if they were overcharged.

Audit selling like hot cakes

AUSTIN (AP) — The books are blue-and-white, paperback, titled "Breaking the Mold" and instant best sellers at the Capitol.

Copies of Comptroller John Sharp's 1,200-page audit, recommending billions of dollars in savings, topped the state government reading list when they went on sale Thursday.

All 1,000 copies of the 170-page summary were snapped up in two hours, and the comptroller's office also sold all available copies of the full report — at $5 for one volume or $10 for a complete set.

"We were going to open our doors at 8 o'clock this morning. I got here at 7:30, and people were lined up," Pam Wagner of the comptroller's office said Thursday.

Ms. Wagner said the summary was distributed free of charge while the two larger volumes, detailing all 975 specific cost-cutting recommendations, sold for $5 per book.

"They went like hot cakes," she said. "The presses are running 24 hours now. We're doing our best to meet demand and will have more by Monday."

State agency officials and others were anxious for a close look at the audit and its proposals to save and raise $5.2 billion through spending cuts, agency mergers and about 1,000 layoffs.

State agency heads were given audits, and Ms. Wagner said many of the purchasers were rank-and-file workers.

Congressman stirs up pea fight

"This is the height of arrogance, it shows complete dispassion for the poor."

Carolyn Lanier
Food bank director

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lowly black-eyed pea has stirred up a hopping controversy between a Texas congressman who wants to feed the hungry and bureaucrats concerned about disrupting vegetable markets.

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, wants to let West Texas cotton farmers use their combines to harvest black-eyed peas from their idled land, as long as the crop is donated to charity.

But top Agriculture Department administrators say such a plan might rock the black-eyed pea market and open the door for donations of other vegetables, creating widespread commotion in the market.

"This is the height of arrogance, it shows complete dispassion for the poor," said Carolyn Lanier, executive director of the South Plains Food Bank in Lubbock.

"These people who are living in the fields in a car, the lady who's dying of cancer and weighs 65 pounds, the single mother who does maid work a couple of nights a week so her kids can eat — how much impact are they going to have on the black-eyed pea market?" Ms. Lanier said Thursday.

"I can show (a USDA administrator) faces and people who need this food, who will eat it, who are doing without. What about the study that talks about 5.5 million American children who are going to bed hungry — and he's worried about the pea market," she said.

Farmers cannot use their combines to harvest cover crops, like black-eyed peas, planted on land they are required to take out of production to qualify for price supports, said Combest.

Cover crops, however, can be picked by hand, Combest said, so for the past two years, inmates from the Lubbock County Jail have been used to harvest black-eyed peas for Ms. Lanier's food bank. It feeds an average of 16,000 people one meal a day in West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

"It'd help a lot more if we could get a combine in the field," Combest said. "We'd have more food to feed the needy."

The House Agriculture subcommittee on cotton voted Wednesday to allow cotton farmers to harvest black-eyed peas by combine on set-aside lands, as long as the crop is donated to a reputable charity.

Combest said the fight over his black-eyed pea amendment is not over yet, and the Agriculture Department may still attempt to derail his plan. "If they want to bow their backs and be hardnosed about it, that's their problem."

Bill allows tax payments by plastic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The days of paying federal taxes with a piece of plastic may be on the way.

A bill introduced by senior tax writers in Congress would authorize the Internal Revenue Service to accept credit cards for all tax payments. The law now requires checks or money orders.

The proposal was included among scores of changes that would fit under the broad umbrella of tax simplification. Most of the changes would affect only corporations and partnerships.

Several sections are designed to rid the tax law of outdated provisions, including the requirement for Treasury Department approval before a brewery can destroy spoiled beer.

"It's filled with lots of miscellany and some of them may be more rationalization than simplification," said one congressional aide. She included in that category a provision designed to relieve some handicapped drivers from the new luxury tax on expensive cars.

There is considerable doubt that any tax bill, including this one, will be passed this year. For one thing, Congress is operating under an agreement requiring that any tax cut be offset by a spending reduction or a tax increase. In addition, tax professionals are having trouble keeping up with the huge number of tax changes enacted over the past decade.

Food stamp users hit record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of food stamp recipients reached a record high this spring, according to Agriculture Department statistics that were finalized this week.

The count shows 23.1 million people receiving food stamps in April, compared with the previous record of 22.6 million in March 1983.

However, as a percentage of the overall population, 1983 was a worse year, with 9.71 percent of Americans getting food stamps compared with 9.19 percent this year.

George Braley, associate administrator of the department's Food and Nutrition Service, said the number may very well be down by now because summer usually brings a reduction in need for food stamps.

"There's more seasonal employment," he said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, which oversees the food stamp program, blamed the recession for the April figures.

"This is not a figure to be proud of," he said. "It shows the depth and breadth of the recession."

Braley couldn't confirm that, saying the increase could be a result of more knowledge about the program.

"Other social service programs, particularly the Medicaid program have been expanding and bringing more people into the social service network," he said.

Some states tell people about food stamps and other services when they get health care.

Congress has appropriated $19.577 billion for food stamps through Sept. 30. Braley said the amount is enough to serve all the recipients.

Lucci loses Emmy for 12th time

NEW YORK (AP) — Soap opera queen Susan Lucci's record Emmy-losing streak remained unbroken as daytime Emmy voters gave the best actress nod to Finola Hughes of ABC's "General Hospital."

Lucci, nominated a record 12 times for a daytime Emmy, lost again Thursday night in the 18th annual Daytime Emmy Awards ceremonies, broadcast by CBS in prime time for the first time.

Lucci, 42, plays the bad, tempered Erica Kane of ABC's "All My Children." Hughes didn't attend the ceremonies because she was in London on personal business.

Peter Bergman was near tears as he accepted his best-actor Emmy for his work in CBS' "The Young and the Restless." He praised his wife as "my conscience, my best friend."

Two established series also won Emmys. CBS' 35-year-old "As the World Turns" was named best soap opera. PBS' 22-year-old "Sesame Street" was named best children's series.

CBS won the most Emmys — five. Cable's only winner was the

Federal government declares cease-fire

LJUBJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — The federal army declared a cease-fire today in Slovenia, saying it had succeeded in securing all 27 border posts in the breakaway republic, the nation's official news agency reported.

However, the Defense Ministry said in a statement on the official news agency Tanjug that the army would return fire "if forced to do so."

Hours earlier, the federal air force attacked the airport in Slovenia with missiles, and Slovene militia forces battled federal soldiers at border posts. Scores of people were reported killed in two days of combat.

In an attempt to stop the fighting earlier today, European Community leaders froze aid to Yugoslavia and sent a mission to try to arrange peace talks between the government and Slovenia and Croatia, both of which declared independence on Tuesday.

A British official said the EC delegation would seek a three-month truce, during which Slovenia and Croatia would suspend their declarations and all troops would return to their barracks.

The ministry said its military units stopped fighting about 4:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. EDT).

The military assault to take the border posts began Wednesday with ground attacks on Slovenia's crossings with Italy, Hungary and Austria. It escalated today with the air attacks.

Slovenian officials had seized some crossings after the republic declared independence. Slovenia and Croatia acted after Belgrade rejected their proposal for a loose confederation of states, rather than one controlled by the federal government.

But the federal government said it would crush the independence movements and preserve the federation, long torn by ethnic hatreds. Its strategy was to isolate Slovenia from the outside world by recapturing border points and taking over key installations such as airports.

The federal army is much larger and better equipped than the Slovene militia, but Defense Ministry said its forces were subjected to intensive artillery and anti-aircraft fire during the two days of fighting.

"Army units at all times conducted the activities with maximum restraint. . . . They returned fire only in defense and as a last resort," the ministry statement said.

At Ljubljana, the Slovene capital, several air-to-ground missiles, fired by two twin-engine Orao fighter-bombers, exploded on the airport's tarmac in huge fireballs. One of them narrowly missed a group of Slovenian helicopters.

Every Pole to become shareholder

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In an ambitious experiment to speedily turn this former Communist nation into a capitalist one, the Warsaw government wants to effectively make every citizen a shareholder in Poland Inc.

The unprecedented program, which must be approved by Parliament, aims at restoring private ownership and replacing the 45-year Communist economic system.

The giveaway announced Thursday by the pro-private-enterprise government of Prime Minister Jaa Krzysztof Bielecki calls for majority shares in 400 enterprises — accounting for one-fourth of production — to be turned over by the state to private stock funds co-owned by the country's 27 million adult citizens.

Controlling shares in the state enterprises would be transferred by the start of 1992 to between five and 20 newly created funds, which would be structured in a way that resembles mutual funds.

Every adult would be awarded one share of each fund to guarantee fair distribution of national property.

Under the plan, funds would be managed for profit and growth by blue-chip Western investment houses.

Baby-selling outlawed in Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Crushing poverty in Romania, where the average monthly wage is about $50, has led some parents to give up their children for a better life, and induced others to sell them.

Now the Senate has approved strict controls over adoptions and made baby-selling a crime.

Under the amended Adoptions Law approved Thursday, only children abandoned for at least six months will be eligible for adoption, and the sale of babies will be punishable by up to five years in prison.

The new regulations, opposed by only one of the Senate's 119 members, make it impossible for Romanian biological parents to directly transfer guardianship to adoptive parents.

Since the December 1989 anti-Communist revolution, Westerners, including some 1,500 Americans, have adopted more than 5,000 Romanian children.

The prospective parents were attracted by reports of an estimated 100,000 children abandoned in orphanages. Most were born because of ousted dictator Nicolae Ceausescu's ban on abortion and birth control.

But many of those adopted in the past 18 months were taken directly from families.

South Africa will sign nuclear pact

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Hoping to hasten the end of its political isolation, South Africa says it will sign the international nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Thursday's decision ended years of South African resistance to joining the 1970 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, which so far has 141 signatories.

In announcing South Africa's decision to sign on, President F.W. de Klerk cited the end of the Cold War, the resolution of conflicts in neighboring states and South Africa's warming relations with foreign countries.

The treaty bans member nations from building or acquiring nuclear weapons and commits them to opening nuclear facilities to periodic inspection. In return, the three nations that have acknowledged production of nuclear weapons — the United States, Soviet Union, and Britain pledge to work toward disarmament and provide peaceful nuclear technology to other treaty members.

The statement did not say when South Africa would sign the treaty.

Thatcher will not seek re-election

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher announced today she will not seek re-election to the House of Commons, ending a 32-year career in elected office.

"I shall remain active in the House of Commons until the next election, and thereafter in the political life of the nation, albeit in a different capacity," she said.

Mrs. Thatcher, 65, was the longest-serving prime minister of this century. She resigned in November following a revolt within her Conservative Party.

She was elected as a member of Parliament from the north London district of Finchley in 1959. She served as secretary of education under Prime Minister Edward Heath from 1970 to 1974. The following year, with the Conservatives out of power, Mrs. Thatcher beat Heath in a race for party leader.

Pension funds need watching

Dreams of a fiscally sound retirement suddenly turned into a nightmare of uncertainty for thousands of workers when junk-bond laden Los Angeles-based Executive Life Insurance Co. was seized by state regulators earlier this year. It was the largest collapse of an insurer in American history. Those who stand to lose the most are workers whose only crime was to trust their employers to invest pension funds wisely.

Those workers and millions of other employees across the nation now realize that corporate fiscal wisdom isn't something that can be taken for granted. Fortunately, the U.S. Labor Department has moved in to shore up that bond of trust.

The department has sued two California companies — Maxxam Inc. and MagneTek — for allegedly improperly risking pension funds by investing them in annuities sold by Executive Life, which had an unprecedented 70 percent of its assets in junk bonds. The department also sent warnings to several other firms whose pension funds are invested in annuities sold by insurance companies that could collapse.

That first-ever action by the department should serve to get the attention of employers, seeking to invest more cautiously; and insurers, seeking to stay competitive.

Other steps likely will be needed if the public isn't to face an S&L-style bailout. Maxxam and MagneTek took advantage of a loophole in current law that allows companies to terminate pension programs if the plan appears to have assets sufficient to pay off future retirees. That makes fully funded pension plans a fiscal plum for corporate raiders.

Until the law is changed, there will always be someone eager to corrupt an employee's pension into a vehicle for quick profit. Warning employers that they will be held responsible is a good first step. But outlawing the practice may be the only way to ensure compliance.

Back-woods vocal minority ruining MTV for everyone else

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

In other news today, the newly formed United States Morals Corps has proclaimed that all Americans will dress in black coveralls and women will cover their face under pain of death. Standing up to self-righteous people who dictate morals is necessary to defend freedom, even when one agrees with what is being forced upon them.

There is a quick test that may help in deciding who should tell you what you can and cannot do.

Whenever someone stands on the highest ground (a mountain, a podium, the whitehouse lawn, council chamber or boardroom) and makes decisions that effect what you will be allowed to see, do, hear, read, etc., ask yourself: 1. Do I believe this person to have been sent by God with this message?

2. Can what this person is saying be logically proven and applied?

An example of an argument that can be logically applied is: 1. Do not fire guns in the city limits. 2. Because you may hurt someone. 3. Hurting someone is wrong. 4. Because society cannot survive if people are allowed to indiscriminately injure each other.

Mental floss

If the answer to both of the above questions is no, my opinion is that you should take a stand, either by word or by action, opposing the law, measure or action.

I say opinion because I am not serving as a messenger of God by writing this column. (I can forget a lot of things, but a direct conversation with the Almighty isn't one of them.)

Also, my argument cannot be logically proven, i.e. 1. You should take an opposing stand.

2. Because self-righteous people have caused great harm in the past such as the Spanish inquisition, the dark ages, the Vietnam war, the holocaust, etc. 3. I believe those wrongs could have been avoided if people had spoken up in the beginning, but I cannot prove it.

A current example of your lives being dictated by the self-righteous is a decision by TCA Cable TV Inc. of Tyler to strike MTV from Big Spring Cable subscribers.

Now I don't even like MTV. I don't like the music. It's too shallow and "bubble gummy" for the most part.

They are striking MTV from Big Spring because of complaints from the back-woods vocal minority that can't stand to let other people see a woman in her underwear or to hear about sex in a song.

Sex and nudity were bestowed on man by a force more universal than the Reverend Jerry "Jesus is livin' in my home" Falwell, or Senator Jesse "hate everyone that's not like me" Helms.

But nudity on MTV is a moot point because it's no worse than on the soap operas or in the underwear section of the Sears catalog.

In fact, soaps are probably worse because they show much more realistic people jumping in and out of bed, plotting murders with adulterous partners and

The writer's art On overpacking a portmanteau

James J. Kilpatrick

Columnist George Will, ordinarily among the most graceful of contemporary writers, got all wound up last year in a column advocating measures of gun control. He told the sad story of an 18-year-old dancer who had been killed by a sniper in New York:

"His father had planned to move the family to North Carolina this week to escape the urban mayhem that in recent months has claimed a 5-year-old hit in the head while sleeping by a stray bullet fired by his mother's former boyfriend, and a 10-year-old killed by stray bullets in a store when an argument between a customer and the owner erupted in gunfire."

Last November a writer for The Seattle Times had some welcome shipping news: "Danzas, which has purchased the former Northern Air Freight and made Bellevue its U.S. headquarters, Friday will be rushing a 600-ton shipment of just-released Beaujolais Nouveau, the barely fermented and highly marketed wine that makes a splash at trendy wine shops around the world to the United States."

A staff writer for the Savannah (Ga.) News-Press also had a note last year on alcoholic spirits. The story dealt with the 117-year-old Hamilton-Turner House, whose owners agreed to stop renting it out for parties: "The operators of the house were serving alcohol to guests and/or providing 'setups' at an in-house bar, which requires a city liquor license, which the house does not have and could not get one, according to revenue director Carlton West, because it is in a residential area and within 100 yards of a school, Notre Dame Academy."

This was from The Associated Press, datelined Spokane, Wash.: "A mailman was attacked by a pit bull that turned on one of its owners when she tried to pull the dog off, and the woman's husband was later arrested for attacking a television cameraman."

One more, this one from a sportswriter for The Seattle Times: "After twisting and screaming for 15 of his 22 points to break open a game distressingly tight after three quarters, Kemp could not nominate this as his ranking final period against the Heat, whom he starred in a club record 50-point Sonic outburst last year at home." Gracious! Mercy!

Enough! Those Horrid Examples should suffice to make the point. The point is that even the roomiest portmanteau has its limits. It truly is not necessary to pack every element of a story into a single sentence. This is not to say that long sentences invariably are bad sentences. Not at all. Macaulay often turned out sentences of 50 or 60 words, and they were as clear as the limpid waters of a coral lagoon.

In this regard I would urge you to ignore the fatuous counsel of people who write software programs intended to improve your writing. These pedants arbitrarily condemn any sentence longer than 22 words. The limit is hokum, but at the core of the hokum lies a kernel of sound advice.

Under spell of feminism

The new-for-the-'90s Webster's Collegiate Dictionary is out and — wouldn't you know it? — there are now different ways to spell certain words so as to accommodate the feminists.

There's even a new way to spell woman, according to the new dictionary. It may now be spelled "womyn," so there's no longer any need to use those awful three letters that spell m-a-n.

There's more. HStory. That's for guys. The new word is HER-story as in "Joan Rivers was the worst morning television show hostess in all of herstory."

The report I read concerning the new dictionary did not, however, tell of how certain other words, akin to the ones above, can be altered in order to rid them of any sexist connotations.

I did some guessing, though. Here's some examples of other changes:

• Herstereotomy: Whoever heard of a man going through that type of operation?

• Hermalayas: Womyn should have a mountain range of their very own.

• Hersterical: Wanda was hersterical when she found out Bob had taken Bernice on a trip to the Hermalayas.

• Herms: Womyn sing in church, too.

• Hersy: Bernice threw a hersy when she found out Wanda had found out about her trip to the Hermalayas with Bob.

You get my drift. But let us take this a step further. Even if you spell woman "womyn," it still sounds the same. What womyn need, in order to throw off the yoke of sexism when it comes to calling themselves something, is an entirely new word.

Female doesn't work for obvious reasons. Changing that to fe-MULE would only encourage too many sexists to make remarks about the stereotypical tendency of a womyn to be stubborn.

I even thought it might work to turn women around backwards. They would become "nemows" as in, "Boy, you should have seen the nemows in Ralph's last night."

But nemows still includes n-e-m, spelled backwards, a reminder of just how backward many of them still are despite all the efforts to teach them not to say, "You should have seen all the chicks in Ralph's last night."

I did some thinking on this matter as well and came upon a few ideas of something new to call womyn.

• Girl persons: Too juvenile? You're right.

• Ladies: Some men name their dogs Lady, and there's that awful sexist joke that goes: "Who was that lady I saw you with last night?"

"That was no lady. That was my wife."

• Forget ladies.

• Adnofenajs: (Pronounced ad-NOFEN-ajuh). That's Jane Fonda spelled backwards, but it's a little cumbersome to say "That adnofenaj should have been hanged for treason."

• Eeladnerbs: (Pronounced eel-LANDER-buh). That's Brenda Lee spelled backwards. I like Brenda Lee a lot more than Jane Fonda, but I guess most '90s womyn wouldn't.

• Chicks: Just kidding.

• Ralphettes: As in, "You shoulda seen the two Ralphettes we met last night at Ralph's."

Sorry I just can't seem to get untracked here.

• Plaintiffs: That's got some possibilities. Like the guy said, "I've been divorced so many times, I just refer to all my ex-wives as Plaintiff."

I think that is probably as far as I should go here. The feminists' hate mail will pour in for weeks as it is.

Oops! Did I say "mail"?

Girlfriend changes her platonic tune

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column since I was a pre-teen girl. I'm 21 and a college senior now. In my freshman year, I met a super guy, "Ray." We hit it off immediately and have been best friends ever since. Abby, Ray was my first love. There was a strong physical attraction between us (we even discussed it), but we didn't act on it for fear of jeopardizing our precious friendship.

Since we met four years ago, I've dated others, lived with someone else, and now Ray has a girlfriend. She is his first serious relationship. Now I am wondering if I should let him know that I am still in love with him. We still are very close friends, and I honestly believe that we could make it as a couple.

I don't expect him to drop his girlfriend for me. However, I cannot spend the rest of my life wondering what might have been had I been willing to risk telling him my feelings.

What do you say, Abby? — "WHAT IF?" IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR WHAT IF: Now that Ray is involved in his first serious relationship, were you to tell him that you are still in love with him, it would cause him no end of consternation. Please, give him a break and put your "true confessions" on hold until you know where Ray's present relationship is going. Should it not endure, and he is free to consider another love relationship, unleash your "confession." But not until.

DEAR ABBY: I am stumped as to what to do about something that happened at work. As a junior executive in a large firm, I submitted an idea to a vice president. He reacted with very little enthusiasm, so I assumed he didn't think much of my suggestion.

About a week later, he showed my idea to the president of the company as though he had originated it. The president thought it was brilliant.

I was furious when I heard what had happened and I wanted to tell my friend a thing or two. However, I took a co-worker's advice to just keep quiet, as any further action on my part could be harmful to my career.

I am still very resentful, seeing his career flourish and not my own. Any advice? — HAD IT WITH OFFICE POLITICS

DEAR HAD IT: I think you used good judgment in taking your co-worker's advice. Let it go — and learn from the experience. And the next time you get a "brilliant" idea, submit it to the president yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just returned from the beach — our first outing this season. It was a beautiful sunny day in Santa Monica, and the beaches were swarming with men, women and children. I had seen some ads of the new skimpy bikini bathing suits for women, but this is the first time I had seen them worn by real people.

Abby, from behind, some of those women appeared to be naked — with just a wee little string back there, barely visible, attached to a small patch of fabric in the front, no bigger than a Band-Aid.

I am not some crotchety old woman; I'm 35 years old, but I must admit, seeing so much flesh exposed, I didn't know whether to laugh or cry. (My husband laughed.) — EUGENIA

Court OKs life sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — State legislatures have a go-ahead from the Supreme Court to step up the war against drugs by enacting life prison terms without parole for some offenders.

The court, concluding its 1990-91 term Thursday, upheld a Michigan law that makes life in prison without possibility of parole the mandatory sentence — even for first-time offenders — for possessing more than 1½ pounds of cocaine.

The law, upheld by a 5-4 vote of the justices, could become the model for other states to follow.

The White House's drug control policy director, Bob Martinez, said the ruling "gives the American people a strong weapon in the war against drugs." He said it demonstrates the justice system "is capable of delivering certain and severe punishment to those who commit very serious drug crimes."

In another key criminal law decision, the Supreme Court ruled that juries weighing the death penalty for convicted murderers may hear evidence about the victim's character and the grief suffered by family members. The 6-3 decision reversed two recent important high court rulings.

Those developments, however, soon were overshadowed by the stunning announcement that Justice Thurgood Marshall is retiring at age 82. President Bush said he will move quickly to pick a replacement.

While the justices are off the bench until the first Monday in October, court officials were expected to issue orders in some pending cases today.

In the drug case, the court said the Michigan law — the stiffest in the nation — does not amount to "cruel and unusual punishment" banned by the Constitution's Eighth Amendment.

"Possession, use and distribution of illegal drugs represents one of the greatest problems affecting the health and welfare of our population," Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote in the court's main opinion.

He said the argument that drug trafficking is "non-violent and victimless" is "false to the point of absurdity."

"To the contrary, (the) crime threatens to cause grave harm to society," Kennedy said.

The decision upheld the life-without-parole prison sentence of Ronald Harmelin, 45, who had 672 grams of pure cocaine when arrested in the Detroit suburb of Oak Park, Mich., in 1986.

In Michigan, which has no death penalty, Harmelin could not have received any more severe sentence had he been a serial killer.

Thursday's ruling did not yield a majority opinion among the justices.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Antonin Scalia said the Constitution does not require a state's punishment for one crime to be proportional to its punishments for other crimes.

Kennedy, writing for himself and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and David H. Souter, did not go that far. Instead, he said only "gross disproportionality" raises a constitutional problem.

Thursday's decision appeared to weaken dramatically a 1983 high court ruling on what is cruel and unusual punishment.

The 1983 ruling threw out the life-without-parole sentence given a man convicted of writing a phony $100 check. Convicted six times previously of minor, non-violent crimes, the man had been sentenced as a repeat offender.

Kennedy emphasized the vast differences between writing phony checks and possessing large quantities of drugs.

He noted that the pure cocaine Harmelin possessed "has a potential yield of between 32,500 and 65,000 doses."

FRESNO, Calif. — Two-year-old Kimberly Statham reaches for a toy at Rotary House in Fresno, Calif., recently. Rotary House is the first hospice in the nation offering care for chronically ill children to give their families a break from the burden of 24-hour care. Kimberly's parents Janice, left, and Robert use the hospice when they need a break from caring for the child, who was born with a severe metabolic disorder.

Parents of sick children get help

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — For more than a year, the days and nights of Robert and Janice Statham have been a round-the-clock blur of medicating and ministering to their desperately ill daughter.

Kimberly, a blond 2-year-old with pale blue eyes and a severe metabolic disorder, needs daily drugs — three doses of one, four of another, five of a third — milk feedings through a tube in her stomach every few hours, and constant comforting.

The Stathams never thought of taking a break — until the day Rotary House opened its doors and invited them in.

Billed as the nation's first hospice for chronically ill children, the facility allows families to leave their kids for up to a week, to take a much-needed respite from the burden of 24-hour care.

"You get to the point that you don't even know who you are, where you are or whether it's night or day," Statham said.

Rotary House was created to combat that kind of physical, mental and emotional exhaustion, and to relieve some of the stress that can cause some families to break up and others to abuse their sick child.

"We hope to be preventive; that's what we're all about," said Barbara Duffy, vice president of Valley Children's Hospital, where Rotary House is located. "If they can have a week every so often, or a couple of days, and become refreshed, then that child gets better care at home."

This is no hospital setting: The three-bedroom house is cheery and comfortable, with plants and clay animal figurines on the mantle and easy chairs in the living room.

Families can use Rotary House up to 30 times a year, leaving children for a minimum of eight hours and a maximum of seven days at a time. The cost is about $400 a day, which pays for two nurses at all times and other professional staff as needed. Payments are adjusted for families unable to afford that much.

"These parents desperately need a break," said Dr. Joseph Bush, a psychiatrist at Virginia Commonwealth University who specializes in children's adjustment to stressful medical procedures.

"The real benefit for the sick child will be that their parents are refreshed and will not resent them," he said. "It's pretty natural to — if not resent the child — then to resent the lack of free time."

Rotary House has cared for between 30 and 40 children since opening three months ago, director Cindy Guertin said, and Kimberly Statham was the first.

Relinquishing Kimberly's care to others was difficult for her parents, but once they were out the door, they realized it would be all right. "I got two days of nine hours sleep — and that's the most I've had in over a year," said Statham, who now is planning some weekend trips with his wife and four other children.

Caring for a chronically ill child at home can affect other family relationships. Sometimes the siblings of a chronically ill child develop behavioral problems to get attention.

"What we are finding is that this is not a luxury — it is an absolute necessity as part of raising a child with such profound disabilities," said Dr. Mary Serreno, psychologist at Franciscan Children's Hospital in Boston.

Foster mother Sue Allen agrees. She might not have taken on her latest charge, 14-month-old Scott, without the help of Rotary House. Allen, who has four children of her own, has cared for 27 foster children over the past 11 years, but Scott has the most medical problems.

Fourteen weeks premature, he weighed just 2 pounds at birth and suffers from fetal alcohol syndrome and chronic lung disease, which has sent him to the hospital 13 times since September.

"It's exhausting, which is why he needs Rotary House."

"It's amazing what one day even once or twice a month can do for you," Allen said. "You can just go at it with renewed spirit and feel invigorated and not feel so beaten down and exhausted mentally."

Cuba bans sarcastic film from theaters

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A new film titled "Alice in Wonderland," a sarcastic view of life in Fidel Castro's Cuba, has been banned from Cuban theaters after breaking box office records.

The movie was shut down "without notice and without official explanation," the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said last week in a dispatch from Havana that was monitored in Mexico City.

The film depicts aspects of everyday life in Cuba, Prensa Latina said. It said that near the end of the film, "Long Live Fidel!" is chanted several times, but in a sarcastic reference to the Marxist president who has held power since 1959.

Economic crisis and isolation after the fall of East European communism has forced Castro's government to allow more criticism of things like food shortages and increase its tolerance of religion.

However, it was unusual for such a film to be made in Cuba and reach commercial theaters.

The government would be expected to quickly halt films considered unacceptable, and Prensa Latina offered no explanation of how "Alice in Wonderland" made its way to the silver screen.

Some people waited in line for up to four hours to see "Alice in Wonderland" at eight major theaters in Havana, and the movie broke box office records, the news agency said.

It was shut down Sunday after four days, but Prensa Latina said moviegoers continue to show up at the box office, only to find the film replaced by "Aliens II."

The crowds were so large that the Cuban Communist Party sent out pollsters to survey people leaving the theaters, Prensa Latina said. The poll results have not been announced.

"The authorities have maintained a tomb-like silence about the movie," the dispatch said.

The Communist Party newspaper Granma, however, devoted nearly half a page to an article criticizing the movie.

Under the headline "A Feeding Frenzy for Cowards," the newspaper called it a "sarcastic conglomeration of calamities, a mishmash of adultery and arbitrariness."

But Prensa Latina said many Cubans believe director Daniel Diaz Torres "demonstrated some errors in Cuban society."

Cave bomb shelters abandoned, sealed off

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Thirty-two years ago, when the Cold War menaced, California leaders quietly planned to flee to a dozen underground caverns if the sky ever rained atomic bombs.

Today, the vast caves — abandoned and sealed off in 1969 by the limestone miners who carved them — are a virtually forgotten vestige of atomic angst.

"I wonder how they got the idea? They had to keep pumps running all the time to remove water. They'd have been pretty hard to use as bomb shelters," said Billy Marr, who has lived near the caves in Sonoma since 1948.

"The rooms are monstrous," he said in a telephone interview from his home about 75 miles from Sacramento. "When you could stand in there, you looked like an ant."

The notion of using the caverns as a refuge surfaced in 1959, state records show. That was when a legislative subcommittee decided leaders could weather Armageddon in the caves in the Sierra Nevada.

Although the Cold War threat has faded, state policy on nuclear war and natural disasters has led to creation of another hiding place in the mountains, this one for storage of vital records.

Microfilmed records from dozens of state agencies are stored in the climate-controlled vault operated under tight security by a private firm near Lake Tahoe.

Modern storage plans don't envision creating a place for politicians to ride out a nuclear storm, but it was no joke during the Cold War.

"There was a good deal of concern," said Bruce Sumner, a retired Orange County Superior Court judge.

"It's no bull we're rounding up the best deals around" or my name isn't A.C.

Dairy groups bring ice cream to Capitol

Herald Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON—Ice cream filled the minds and stomachs of the Capitol recently when three national dairy groups brought 2,500 gallons of the dairy treat to Washington for the world's largest ice cream party.

Congressional staffers and their bosses gorged themselves on the free ice cream, adding chocolate sauce, caramel and root beer to create devilish concoctions that brought smiles to many and tum-achies to a few.

"Do pigs love ice cream? I think I am becoming a pig," Sen. Harris Wofford said as he picked up a sugar cone for a second helping. The Pennsylvania Democrat had just finished a cone of caramel butter pecan.

Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., was stuck at the barber shop for the first hour of the party. Not wanting to wait, he had three bowls of ice cream delivered to him.

"This is really my only weakness," Tallon said while munching on his fourth helping. "It's not gambling, alcohol or women. It's ice cream."

While the congressmen were

feasting in the VIP tent, thousands of interns and Hill staffers were waiting in lines 30 people deep in the courtyard of the Russell Senate office building for free ice cream.

"Being from Wisconsin, we felt it was our moral obligation to support the dairy industry," said Judy Fordham, an intern for Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis.

"Because it's a moral obligation, there are no calories," added Rebecca Finley, also an intern in Kasten's office.

Both had just finished bowls of vanilla with ice cream and chocolate covered peanuts topped with chocolate sauce.

Some offices sent their interns on supply runs, arming them with boxes so they could bring back dessert for everyone.

Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, sent two interns for ice cream.

"We get the ice cream, coffee, donuts. We do it all," joked Lightfoot intern John Helberg, who was carrying a half dozen cups of ice cream.

"We are a hungry crew," added his co-worker James Kazmerzak, who was also carrying a half dozen dishes of ice cream.

The International Ice Cream Association, the Milk Industry Foundation and the National Cheese Institute sponsored the event, which is the precursor to National Ice Cream Month in July.

The party featured 2,500 gallons of ice cream and frozen yogurt, 250 gallons of toppings, 5,000 root beer floats and 96 members of Congress. The crowd, estimated at 10,000, listened to recorded jazz music as they ate. A special tent featuring two clowns, coloring books and face painting was set up for small children.

tent was Sean Nagel, the six year old son of Cathy Nagel office manager for Sen. Robert Graham, D-Fla.

Sean Nagel, having already finished one ice cream, was coloring an ice cream sundae picture under the tent. When asked if he was going to have another ice cream, he looked straight up at his mother, prompting her to laugh and say "It depends upon how mean mom is going to be today."

Mom wasn't mean.

"Look around. There probably are not too many events that draw this many people," said Andrew Dederich, sales director for Sanofi Bio Industries of Waukesha, Wis.

"People are even smiling," Marilyn Quayle attended, downing a cone of caramel butter pecan while talking to the dairy producers.

Rep. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., said the party is a pleasant break from the capital's brutal summers. Petri, who enjoyed a cone of caramel butter pecan, was the lone Wisconsin delegate at the party.

"If I had known that, I would have eaten their shares," Petri said.

NEW YORK — Jaleel White, 14, star of ABC-TV's "Family Matters," shows off the official Steve Urkell doll, his character on the program, at a New York news conference last week. The 17-inch soft-bodied, talking, look-alike, produced by Hasbro Toys, will make its debut in October.

Group claims it can get to Mars faster, cheaper

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small group of American scientists say they can put explorers on Mars cheaper, quicker and safer than envisioned in more grandiose government proposals.

Instead of $500 billion-plus, the cost would be $60 billion, said Bruce Lusignan, a professor of electrical engineering at Stanford University who chaired the study.

Rather than waiting until the year 2019, as proposed by President Bush, a team of three men and three women could step on Mars by 2012 and maybe sooner, to be followed quickly by a second team.

And rather than spend $10 billion to $15 billion to develop a rocket capable of carrying huge weights, the explorers and their supplies would be sent on their way aboard an existing Soviet Energia rocket.

The key to the scheme, Lusignan told a news conference Wednesday, is international cooperation.

"It is very feasible at a very reasonable budget to get manned exploration of Mars by the year 2012, Lusignan said. "The intent is to have over that year, two or three expeditions in tracked vehicles go to remote sites for experimentation."

The scheme would have the explorers make the nine-month trip to the red planet in a cone-shaped ship and descend to the surface in a lander much like the one used on the Apollo moon missions.

The travelers would carry along all their food, two or three tons of it, but they would recycle their water. Previous proposals all have envisioned growing food aboard the spacecraft.

Before humans would start on the journey, Energia rockets, which can lift a 220,000 pound payload to low Earth orbit, would deposit prefabricated "apartments" and a "garage" with two vehicles on the Martian surface.

Also awaiting the astronauts there would be the rocket to carry the explorer back to the mother ship orbiting Mars.

Lusignan said the idea had been forwarded to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the National Space Council.

"This is a credible group whose ideas we expect will be looked at closely," said a member of the space council staff. "It looks like just the sort of idea that could play a role in the search for ideas the vice president has asked us to undertake."

NASA has said a space station — costing $30 billion and up — is necessary for doing life sciences research necessary before sending astronauts on the nine-month journey to Mars.

Craftsman recreates toys of youth

By LISA WARREN
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph
TYLER (AP) — Sumpter Kelley picked up the wooden toy wagon and recalled buying his first wagon to "set out on his own."

The toy replica matched in every detail the wagon Kelley fondly remembered — same type cover and harness. The only difference is size.

Kelley, 90, isn't worried that his toys aren't in trendy toy stores, or any store at all. He makes them, he said, not to get rich, but because he enjoys it.

Kelley has made intricate toy wagons, windmills, dollhouses and rocking chairs from white pine for about eight years.

"I learned it on my own," he said, as he looked over his work. "That's the only way to learn anything."

Claiming to be a late riser, Kelley said he awakes about 7 a.m. to begin his day working with wood. With saws, drill, wood file and his long fingered hands, Kelley makes toys he dreamed of owning as a child.

The retired Tyler carpenter is not sure how long it takes to make one toy because he gets too tired to finish one at a sitting.

"I work until I get tired," Kelley says matter-of-factly. "Then I rest awhile."

A 5-inch wagon wheel, he said, takes about three hours.

Kelley said he tried to pass on his woodworking skills to his family's younger generation, but there was no interest. But he will keep on making toys until he is no longer able to use his hands.

"At my age, I don't know how long I can keep doing this. My hands are getting pretty shaky," he said, looking down at a 2-inch detailed chair he made in his earlier years.

Kelley, who will be 91 in November, refuses to give up toymaking this early in life. His next endeavor will be a dollhouse.

Kelley used to sell his wagons at a store in Louisiana until he noticed people did not want to pay what the items were worth.

"I've sold them for $60, but people don't want to pay that," he said. "They don't realize the amount of work I put into them."

Drive carefully.

War memorabilia looking for a home

By EVA MAZA
McAllen Monitor

MISSION (AP) — How did American soldiers in Vietnam tell the difference between the Viet Cong and the South Vietnamese? Half the answer hangs on the wall of a trailer cramped with memories of past and recent wars fought by American soldiers.

Among the souvenirs are poisoned-tipped bamboo arrows once shot from a Vietcong bow.

On the trailer's wall hangs a conical North Vietnamese hat pulled long ago from the torso of a Viet Cong.

And behind a file cabinet is a rare, U.S.-issued pocket guide to Vietnam that tells about exotic customs and landmarks.

These war mementoes are now part of a collection put together by former U.S. Navy officers Ron Hines and Herb Jeffries.

These delicate historical souvenirs are stuffed inside a trailer because neither Hines nor Jeffries have found a more permanent home for them.

Their need for a building is becoming more urgent, as they continue to receive Desert Storm collectibles.

"If we took all the things that everyone has given us and put it in here (trailer), we'd have to put the desks out on the lawn," Hines said.

On the trailer's paneled walls are brightly colored shoulder patches and pins — patriotic blue and sanguine red.

A World War II Japanese bullet pouch still has bullets inside, although it is falling apart.

Bayonets and a Belgian-made pistol used by the Germans in World War II are tucked away in a desk drawer.

And carefully stuffed inside a plastic bag is the journal of a World War I sailor.

"Peace without justice is a low estate, a coward cringing to an iron fate. But peace through justice is a great ideal — we'll pay the price of war to make it real!"

The words reflect the aura evident in the trailer crammed with American military memorabilia.

A river patrol boat, one of only four of its kind in the country, sits outside.

Armed with recreated twin .50-millimeter caliber guns, the 31-foot craft once slithered on the shallow coastline of Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

Jeffries and Hines bought the boat, PBR-81, at a military base in California two years ago for $500.

They then began restoring the vessel, which was full of bullet and shrapnel holes. The front end of the boat has been blown off.

"That thing was a mess when we first got it," Hines said.

They remodeled the gun tub and front deck with fiberglass, patched the shrapnel holes, but have not completed the complete restoration.

A 2,300-pound engine, to replace the original block that sank through the boat, was donated by a company in Houston.

Jeffries and Hines have traveled statewide, exhibiting the boat under the title Navy Vietnam Veterans Exhibit.

Since then, they've won many trophies for parade participations, including the Grand Marshall's Award in last year's Fourth of July parade in McAllen.

The pair has also received recognition from their peers and were awarded the Navy Recruiting District of San Antonio plaque of appreciation.

They take pride in having total control of their operation, shying away from government assistance that they could have easily qualified for as a non-profit organization.

Along their travels and 49 showings, they've collected souvenirs from appreciative veterans.

A large variety of photographs grace their homemade frames — faded snapshots of smiling soldiers taking time off the serious side of war.

A Weslaco woman donated her late husband's two uniforms, complete with neckerchief and 13-button slacks.

The strangest souvenir they've received is a World War II mine detector which was mysteriously left on the front of the boat's tugger.

Jeffries said that if the batteries needed for the sweeper were still made, it would probably be in working condition.

Still, the anonymous donation has left them bewildered.

Most of the large souvenirs, like the mine sweeper and a LAWS hand-held bazooka are stored in Jeffries' home.

So far they have gotten a formal soldier's uniform from Desert Storm and propaganda leaflets used by U.S. forces to induce Iraqi soldiers to surrender.

Medals, including a Purple Heart, adorn the trailer's walls along with a shredded blood-stained American flag — the only remnant from a sinking ship off the coast of Vietnam.

Marshall's retirement puts pressure on Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — The retirement of the Supreme Court's first and only black justice, Thurgood Marshall, puts pressure on President Bush to name a minority to the court, members of Congress and others say.

Whoever is selected, the court will certainly be more conservative.

Marshall, an undaunted civil rights advocate and the court's leading liberal, announced his retirement Thursday, citing his "advancing age and medical condition." He is 82.

Bush promised to "move very swiftly" to name a replacement, but gave no clue as to who might be considered other than "somebody who believes in the Constitution of the United States, somebody who will be able to serve for a while."

Black, Hispanic and female judges were expected to be given strong consideration.

Early speculation centered on Clarence Thomas, a conservative federal appeals court judge in Washington who once chaired the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; Amalya Kearse, a black federal appeals court judge in New York City; Ricardo Hinojosa, a federal trial judge in Texas; and Ferdinand Fernandez, a federal appeals court judge in Los Angeles.

Tracked down by reporters at his home, Marshall displayed some of his gruff wit. Asked what he would do in retirement, he said, "Mind my own business." Asked what is the court's most important task, he replied, "Get along without me."

Marshall's 50-year career brought him from the legal rough and tumble of the courtrooms of the segregated South — where he argued the cause of civil rights fervently — to the decorum of the nation's highest court.

Over his 24 years as a justice, Marshall championed individual rights and the abolition of the death penalty. He has been a staunch defender of the court's 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

Marshall had contended he never would retire. But earlier this year, he said he would leave when his wife or doctor told him it was time.

The time came five days before his 83rd birthday.

At the Justice Department, key officials involved in judicial selection assembled quickly Thursday to discuss prospective candidates.

"We've already done some homework on this," Bush said. The president's legal counsel, C. Boyden Gray, was heading up the effort to gather names.

Some Republicans on Capitol Hill urged Bush to choose someone from a racial or ethnic minority.

"I am not saying a black should be appointed," said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., "but there should be diversity on the court."

Belgian horses, 'gentle giants'

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

The first thing one notices about the Owens Country Hitch Belgian horse team is that they are big.

Real big.

The second thing one notices about the eight-horse team is that they move with a grace that belies their hefty bulk, giving truth to their nickname, "The Gentle Giants."

The horses, which are performing nightly at the 58th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo, can be intimidating to the uninitiated, considering they weigh about a ton apiece and are taller than the average man.

In reality, however, the Belgians are docile beasts that spend most of their time being pampered by a four-man crew when they aren't drawing oohs and aahs from spectators across the country.

The Owens Country Hitch began as "a hobby" of Owens Country

Sausage founder C.B. Owens, who purchased his first two Belgians back in 1961, according to team member Louis Rich.

Rich said there was no intent on Owens' part to copy the famed Budweiser Clydesdale team, despite the similarity in appearance.

"We just grew into it," Rich said. "(Owens) just liked Belgians... It's just people's preference," Budweiser likes Clydesdales."

Rich, Wendell Guidry, Dennis Denson and Randy Chadwick comprise the crew that travels with and cares for the massive horses.

Chadwick, the hitch's driver/shoer, is the one most visible to the public. He has been around draft horses — which includes Belgians — for 14 years and said the horses' heft is one of the attractions.

"Their size and the ideal of it being so unique (is an attraction),"

Chadwick said.

Chadwick also said there was a similarity between his team and the Budweiser Clydesdales, but added that it wasn't intentional.

"Basically, we're both commercial hitches that started relatively at the same time," he said. "You could consider Owens and Budweiser... comparable in the commercial division — we're pretty much the same thing."

The Owens hitch plays about 160 dates a year, so the crew spends a lot of time on the road — and that means long hours, Rich said.

On Wednesday, for example, the crew arrived at the Howard County Fair Barns, where the horses are stalled, at 7:30 a.m. and didn't leave until 10:30 p.m.

Caring for the animals can be very time consuming, Rich said. The horses have to be fed at least twice a day — each one eats about a half-bale of hay and 10 gallons of feed per day — exercised and groomed, which can take more than an hour per horse.

Louis Rich, a member of the Owens Country Hitch crew, examines the shoe on one of nine Belgian horses used in the team's performances. The horseshoes are individually fitted for the horses from 20-inch bars of 1-by-1½ inch steel.

Then there's the 1900-vintage wagon that the horses pull during the performance. It must be cleaned, with the horses' rigging shined after every performance.

It all makes for a full day, Rich said.

state officials.

"There are quite a few provisions. I'm only mentioning a few," Carriker said. "These are the most salient ones."

"I think it's a good bill. But it's not enough," said a member of Mitchell County Texans Against Pollution, the group sponsoring the meeting in which Carriker will discuss the bill.

"I think at this point there's going to have to be some more environmental legislation. I don't think there's enough environmental laws to protect the public," said Darlen Hines, secretary to the environmental group.

Proponents of a proposed hazardous waste landfill and incinerator facility in west Mitchell County have said that federal and state agencies and modern technology should ensure the safety of the facility. But opponents said the safety of incineration, even according to regulated standards, has not been proven and that leaks and accidents are inevitable.

Proposing the facility in Mitchell County is National Waste & Energy Development of Pittsburgh. The Mitchell County Commissioners Court last year signed a host agreement with the company in return for part of the fees to be collected by the facility, which would be located about 1 mile east of the Howard County line.

Also scheduled to be at Saturday's meeting, which will begin at 7 p.m. in the Colorado City Civic Center, are David Zwick, national chairman of Clean Water Action Committee, and representatives from the Texas land commission office, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's office and the office of state Sen. Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater.

the Open Meetings Act.

Morales said he was confident the leaders would abide by the law, but added he had no way of knowing whether a violation occurred. "It is far better to discuss matters that are arguably touching on public concerns, before the public."

Concerning the special session, Richards earlier had said she would call in the Legislature on July 8.

Protest

sign that read "Equality for all."

City Manager Hal Boyd said today the city has no jurisdiction over activities at the rodeo bowl, which is owned by a private rodeo association. Organizers must secure permits from the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission to sell alcohol at the event.

Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo Association board member Richard Atkins said the group supports the protesters.

In a prepared statement, Atkins said the association "respects the right of the citizens to demonstrate, and we appreciate the way this group chose to demonstrate in an orderly manner. We encourage people who saw them to think about the issue."

He said local citizens should contact city council representatives and urge them to make a decision about the alcohol issue.

The rodeo bowl and amphitheater are similar in that both are within the city limits, have large crowds at events and were constructed before the surrounding neighborhood, Atkins said. Beer at the rodeo is sold by a permit obtained by the American Business Club (AMBUCCS).

DeAnda said the protesters were not affiliated with any organization.

"This is a group of concerned citizens," she said. "We feel they have a right to the rodeo. We also feel they have a right to our form of entertainment. We feel the rodeo is great. We also feel that Tejano music is good for West Texas."

"All we want is our equal rights," said Sylvia Polanco. "We love the rodeo. We just want to prove our point."

Rodeo-goers had various opinions about the issue.

James Blackwell of Coahoma said, "I don't think there's any relationship between what they want and what they're picketing."

Big Spring resident John O'Neal said he supported the picketers' claim.

"I think we ought to let them sell it out there," he said. "It'll be good for the city of Big Spring. It'll get some tourism out there. I might not drink myself but anything to generate a little money."

Protester Libby Uribe said the group was not trying to create racial strife in the community.

"We are here just to make it a better place in Big Spring," she said. "We're not here for racial problems. We're here because right is right."

Bank, Westex Auto Parts, State National Bank, Chris Christopher, Citizen's Federal Credit Union and Comanche Trail Nursing Center.

Cole, chamber vice president for organizational affairs, said he joined the project because he's a child at heart.

"I knew people would want to have fireworks like we've had in the past," he said. "I felt very strongly about that. With the music we've got planned, it should be a very moving celebration."

Big Spring Conventions and Visitors Bureau Director Liz Trotter said the city has shown its strong spirit by supporting the event.

"People are just so willing to contribute, to get involved any way they can," she said. Trotter said she has spoken with some out-of-town people who said they may drive to Big Spring for the show.

Cole said the local fireworks display should be larger than any other area city, including Midland or Odessa. Supporters say the music makes the event unique.

"We've got more than $20,000 worth of entertainment for the city of Big Spring," Cole said. "I think one (aspect) is going to complement the other and it should be a great show."

With safety in mind, sponsors have arranged for fire department support from both Big Spring and Howard County. Those attending are urged not to park along South U.S. 87 but continue into the amphitheater area to watch the show for their own safety and that of other drivers, supporters said.

History seeking Russians restore czarist-era names

By STEVE RAYMER
National Geographic
For AP Newsfeatures

MOSCOW — Maps of the Soviet Union will never look the same again. On their way out are dozens of places named after communist bosses and Bolshevik revolutionaries. On their way back are names from pre-1917 czarist days of old Russia.

The most important change occurred June 12 in Leningrad, namesake of Vladimir I. Lenin, father of modern communism. A majority of voters in the Soviet Union's second-largest city chose to return it to its prerevolutionary name, St. Petersburg. Communist Party officials had opposed the switch.

But the changes stretch all across this vast land, encompassing not only towns and cities but streets, squares, public facilities, even naval ships. In the Russian Republic alone, more than two dozen cities are searching for their roots in Czarist-era names.

In Moscow, 29 streets and squares and 10 subway stations have been renamed in the past three months.

"These are bread crumbs compared to the 1,500 names violently taken from the city," says Vladimir

S. Dormidontov, chairman of a Moscow City Council commission on place names. "We must revive the historical face of the city — and of Russia."

"Our plan has been to start from the historic heart of the city," he told National Geographic. "We started with the most scandalous, odious names first."

While the statue of Felix Dzerzhinsky, founder of Lenin's secret police, or Cheka, still scowls over the square in front of KGB headquarters, the bustling traffic circle and adjoining street have a new name — Lubyanka.

At the Bolshoi Theater, workmen soon will remove signs marking Sverdlovsk Square, named after Jacob Sverdlov, who was partially responsible for the execution of Czar Nicholas II and his family in 1918.

Noting that Parisians can use the books of Victor Hugo and Honoré de Balzac as guides to the French capital, Dormidontov views the name-change campaign philosophically.

"We would like our children to read Pushkin, Tolstoy and Chekhov," he says, "without the aid of an index that explains the names of old Moscow streets."

The Russian Republic's reform-minded parliament, headed by Boris N. Yeltsin, recently gave back to Gorky, a huge industrial city on the Volga River, its historic name of Nizhny Novgorod. Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin had renamed it after Maxim Gorky, a writer turned enthusiastic communist.

Elsewhere on the Volga, the city honoring the late Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev has returned to its prerevolutionary name, Naberezhnye Chelny.

Kuybyshev, named after another party stalwart, has become Samara. Citizens of Togliatti, named for the founder of the Italian Communist Party, have petitioned to once again be Stavropol-on-the-Volga.

The upper Volga city of Andropov, named briefly for the late party boss and KGB secret police chairman Yuri Andropov, has been restored to Rybinsk. Ustinov, named for a former defense minister, is again Izhevsk.

Farther south, on the Sea of Azov, Zhdanov — named for Andrei Zhdanov, who masterminded Stalin's repression of artists, writers and Jews — has reverted to Mariupol.

Like Moscow, Leningrad has returned some of its street names

Cradle of the revolution, Leningrad remains Russia's most politically restive city, and reform-minded politicians would like to restore its pre-revolutionary name, St. Petersburg. (National Geographic Society/Steve Raymer)

to the days before the 1917 revolution. The immense Hay Market, immortalized by Fyodor Dostoevsky in "Crime and Punishment," is again the Hay Market after a long stint as Peace Square.

Even residents of Boris Yeltsin's hometown of Sverdlovsk want to return to the original name, Ekaterinburg, for Katherine the Great.

A couple of changes, packing a blunt political message, extend to aircraft carriers. The Kuznetsov, now on a shakedown cruise in the Black Sea, started as the Brezhnev, only to become the Tbilisi, after the capital of independence-minded Soviet Georgia. Now it's been renamed again, after a famous World War II admiral.

A sister ship, the Riga, named after the capital of the breakaway Baltic republic of Latvia, will be the Varyag when it goes to sea.

Western defense attaches in Moscow confirm the Kremlin wanted to serve notice that cities seeking independence would not be honored as namesakes of naval warships.

Flower show centerpiece for Columbus celebration

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When the country commemorates Christopher Columbus' arrival in the Americas 500 years ago, an international flower exhibition in this city named for the Italian explorer will be the celebration's centerpiece.

The $93 million AmeriFlora '92 is expected to draw 5 million horticulturists and flower lovers from around the world. It's the largest event endorsed by the U.S. Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Commission.

The show also is sanctioned by the Paris-based International Association of Horticulture Producers, which sets industry standards. The association will hold its annual indoor horticultural design competition at AmeriFlora.

"We pursued this... with a vengeance," said AmeriFlora spokeswoman Rebecca M. Lusk. "It is rare to get such sanctioning... because of such stiff competition among countries trying to get it."

Critics of the show, however, say it won't be a bed of roses. They worry about traffic congestion and the financial impact it will have on Columbus.

Franklin Park, an 88-acre spread near downtown, will become a "botanical theme park" when the exhibition begins next April, said Joy Salzman, the show's publicity coordinator.

The show will feature plants from 15 countries, including bonsai from Japan and fig trees from Monaco. There will be a rose garden and other gardens that will feature continuously changing annuals and perennials, including 160,000 tulips.

The remodeled Franklin Park Conservatory will house an "ecosystem" which is to take visitors through nine different climates.

The centerpiece will be the 4.2-acre Grand Mallway, which will feature "Navstar," a 30-foot stainless steel sculpture depicting three billowing sails heading west.

The sculpture, by Stephen Canetto of Columbus, represents the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria.

The show has its critics.

Residents of the park's economically depressed neighborhood are upset because their children can't play in the park, which already is closed for construction. And they complain that the show will cause traffic problems.

Lusk said organizers plan to build parking lots away from the area and transport visitors to the park on tour buses.

In April, 50 people picketed outside Franklin Park to protest what they said was AmeriFlora's failure to follow affirmative action guidelines in hiring staff and awarding construction projects.

Organizers maintain that 21 percent of the $38 million in contracts were awarded to minority contractors and that about 18 percent of AmeriFlora's 81 employees are minorities.

AmeriFlora follows in the shadow of a major financial flop. "Son of Heaven: Imperial Arts of China," an eight-month exhibit of Chinese art and artifacts Columbus hosted in 1989, lost nearly $1.7 million of public money.

A skeptical newspaper columnist speculated that AmeriFlora may ultimately be called "Grandson of Heaven."

But Lusk said AmeriFlora organizers learned from the earlier exhibition.

"We've taken a lot of safeguards to make sure 'Son of Heaven' doesn't happen again," she said. "Most of our funding is private, and it is guaranteed."

AmeriFlora expects to generate $38.1 million in ticket sales, concessions and fees. It has guarantees of $21.2 million from private sources. The $33.7 million in local, state and federal money is little more than a third of the show's budget, Lusk said.

Salzman said the tentative ticket price is $20, but many tickets will be discounted.

"We're gearing for the repeat visitor," she said. "We will have all kinds of entertainment, which will change regularly. And visitors will want to come back because we will have three growing seasons to see — spring, summer and fall."

Red Oak bull rider scores an 83

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Anthony Dickerson's dance partner decided to take him for a spin Thursday, but Dickerson proved more than equal to the task.

Dickerson, a bull rider from Red Oak, caught himself a wild ride during the Thursday night performance of the 58th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo, but he showed enough moxie to score 83 points and grab the lead in the event.

His bull, "Neutron Dance," bolted out of the gate, spun left and kept on spinning — and spinning and spinning. Dickerson, however, fought off the apparent G-forces for the mandatory eight seconds to grab the lead.

Not all of his bull-riding colleagues were as fortunate. Out of 16 rides Thursday, only six cowboys were able to tally a score and only two — Cody Lambert of Henrietta and Adam Brewster of Snyder — were able to score within 10 points of Dickerson. Lambert scored a 76 and Brewster posted a 74.

The Bad Company stock fought the cowboys to a draw for most of the evening, with the exception of the saddle bronc riding, which saw the closest competition of the night.

It took two top PRCA cowboys to do it. South Dakota cowboy Billy Etbauer showed good enough form on top of Good Vibration to post a score of 77, which made Lambert a runner-up again. Lambert rode Right Stuff for a score of 76. Etbauer is currently ranked fourth in PRCA saddle bronc riding and Lambert is ranked 16th.

Craig Latham was third in the event with a 73, while Wade Hebb and Les Mayo posted scores of 66 and 63, respectively.

The biggest blowout of the evening was in steer wrestling, where Del Rio cowboy Barry Simpton wrestled his steer to the ground in a fine time of 4.1 seconds, a second-and-a-half better than runner-up Kirby Kaul and almost three full seconds better than Albin Peters of Amarillo.

Jim C. Smith was fourth, a tenth of a second behind Peters, while hometown favorite Bobby Scott, Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo at the Big Spring Rodeo Bqwl. Little scored a 66 on the ride.

the rodeo instructor at Howard College, finished fifth with a penalty-added time of 18.2.

The bareback competition ended in a tie for first, as both Jim Jones of Rio Vista and Randy Bright of Monticello, Ark. posted scores of 74. There also was a tie for third, with Bill Hutto and Lee Tibbs both finishing with scores of 69.

Bubba Flores of Iraan grabbed the overall lead in the calf roping by posting a time of 11.7 seconds Thursday night. Three cowboys — Smith, Jason Beyer and Jay Pool — finished within two seconds of Flores' time.

In team roping, Jimmy Martinez of Pecos and Stormy Pruitt of Fort Davis turned in a time of 7.3 seconds to tie for the lead. Ricky Joe Lee and Keith Burris posted a time of 8.0 seconds, while Carey Foster of Sterling City and Ed Fernandez of Pecos were third with a time of 8.5.

Cotulla cowgirl Corley Cox won the barrel racing in a time of 17.53 seconds, a tenth of a second better than Martha Wright of Dublin. Sherry Johnson of Snyder, ranked eighth on the PRCA circuit, was third with a time of 18.06 seconds.

Bareback riding — Jim Jones, Rio Vista, and Randy Bright, Monticello, Ark., 74; Lee Tibbs, Mesquite, N.M., and Bill Hutto, Cleveland, Texas, 69; Todd Little, Hackberry, La., 66; Overall Leader — Randy Slaughter, Belen, N.M., 77.

London favorite gets aced out of tournament

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tenth-seeded Goran Ivanisevic blasted 25 aces as he defeated local favorite Andrew Castle in straight sets today under a dry sky at Wimbledon.

Women's seeds Amy Frazier and Katerina Maleeva also won on a day on which officials hope to make up a huge backlog of matches rained out during the tournament's first four days.

Ivanisevic, who lost in a semifinal thriller to Boris Becker last year at Wimbledon, completed a 7-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory over the London resident in a match that started Tuesday.

Maleeva, seeded eighth, defeated Julie Salmon 7-5, 6-3. Frazier, seeded 14th, beat Karin Kschwendt 7-6, 6-4.

On Thursday, Andre Agassi was a ghostly vision at his long-overdue Wimbledon coming-out party, wearing white denim shorts over white biking shorts, a white shirt and a white headband.

The fluorescent lime shirt was gone. The neon pink shorts were left at home. A dangling gold earring was the only hint of his unique sartorial style.

The player whose flashy wardrobe has infuriated the tennis establishment looked like Frosty the Snowman as he stepped on the grass courts for the first time since 1987.

And he played like Frosty for a half-hour against Grant Connell, serving poorly and moving as if his feet were stuck in slush as he lost the first set 6-4 to the Canadian.

Agassi rallied to win the second set 6-1 and was tied 1-1 in the third before getting washed off court by a thunderstorm as Wimbledon waded through its fourth straight wet day.

The rain that has tormented Wimbledon since Monday delayed the fifth seed's appearance at a tournament that insists on predominantly-white attire. Fashion buffs and teen-aged groupies had eagerly awaited the debut of Agassi's summer line.

Ian Hamilton, director of tennis marketing for the clothing company that makes the outfits, said Agassi chose the all-white look because "he didn't want to come here and start off on the wrong foot."

The tournament itself has gotten off to a miserable start, with only 52 first-round singles matches completed in the opening four days. The entire first and second rounds, a total of 192 matches, usually are completed by the opening Thursday.

The backlog of unplayed matches was causing the All England Club to consider playing this Sunday, a huge break with tradition. The first Sunday has always been a rest day since the tournament began in 1877.

Players such as Jimmy Connors and Aaron Krickstein were scheduled to play Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday — and never got on court in that time.

About 1.3 inches of rain has fallen on Wimbledon, and weather forecasters said this has been one of the wettest, coldest and darkest Junes in local history.

London bookies have slashed the odds against rain disrupting play every day of the tournament from 100-1 to 10-1.

Cold, drenched fans have bought 66,020 cups of tea and 26,848 cups of coffee, a 100 percent increase from last year. Wimbledon gift shops sold 1,350 umbrellas during the tournament's first three days.

Thursday was another day of frustration for players and fans as the tarpaulins went off and on, off and on.

Top seed Stefan Edberg finally completed a 73-hour victory over Marc Rosset on Thursday, but not before the rain mocked him by halting the match at the start of the final game.

Edberg won 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 in a match originally set to begin at 2 p.m. on Monday. Edberg wrapped up the victory at 2:44 p.m. Thursday — exactly 72 hours and 44 minutes after the scheduled start.

Joining Edberg in the second round were men's seeds Pete Sampras and Michael Stich, both of whom also won in straight sets.

Sampras, the eighth seed, completed a 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 defeat of Danilo Marcelino in a match that began Tuesday. Sixth seed Stich eliminated Dan Goldie 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 in another match that had started two days earlier.

WIMBLEDON, England — Canada's Grant Connell goes after a shot from the USA's Andre Agassi during their first round match at Wimbledon Thursday.

Rangers sweep A's at Oakland Coliseum

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

With its 9-6 victory, Texas became the first team in a year to sweep the Athletics at the Oakland Coliseum as Dean Palmer hit his first major league home run and Steve Buechele added a three-run homer.

The Rangers moved into third place in the AL West and dropped Oakland to fourth. Oakland lost for the 10th time in 13 games, even though Jose Canseco and Dave Henderson hit their 17th home runs of the season.

Brian Downing's pinch-hit single broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh and Buechele put the game away with his second three-run homer in as many games.

Reliever Wayne Rosenthal (1-0) earned his first big-league victory despite allowing two runs and three hits in 2 1/3 innings. Jeff Russell finished for his 15th save. Rick Honeycutt (0-1) was the loser.

Fenway Park was a nightmare for the New York Yankees last season. This week, it was paradise.

Yankees 8, red Sox 0

The Yankees lost all seven games in Boston last year, but completed a satisfying three-game sweep of this season's first visit Thursday night as rookie Wade Taylor allowed three hits in seven innings of an 8-0 victory.

Taylor had a two-run lead before he threw a pitch as Roberto Kelly tripled home a run and scored on Don Mattingly's sacrifice fly. The Yanks made it 7-0 in the third on Mel Hall's two-run homer and Bob Geren's three-run shot off Tom Bolton (7-5), and Kelly added a blast over the screen in left in the fourth.

In other American League games, it was Texas 9, Oakland 6; Toronto 1, Minnesota 0; Baltimore 7, Cleveland 2; Milwaukee 9, Detroit 3, and Chicago 5, Seattle 2.

Pirates score four in ninth to nip Cubs

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the Pittsburgh Pirates win the National League East title, they should really send the Chicago Cubs a thank you note.

The Pirates scored four runs in the ninth inning Thursday night to beat the Cubs 4-3 at Three Rivers Stadium. But that's only part of the story.

The come-from-behind victory was the Pirates' third in their final at-bat against the Cubs in Pittsburgh this season. That's right, THIS season.

The Pirates scored six runs in the 11th inning to beat the Cubs 13-12 on April 21, the greatest extra-inning comeback in major league history. Two nights before, Andre Dawson hit a grand slam in the top of the ninth, but Pittsburgh scored two in the bottom of the inning to win 5-4.

This time, Heath Slocumb's two-out wild pitch scored Barry Bonds with the winning run and completed Pittsburgh's ninth-inning rally.

The victory enabled the first-place Pirates to maintain their four-game lead over St. Louis in the East. The crumbling Cubs have lost 11 of 12, and finished a 13-game road trip 2-11.

Frank Castillo, a 22-year-old right-hander making his major league debut, limited Pittsburgh to three hits over eight innings and had retired nine straight batters entering the ninth, but quickly got into trouble.

Orlando Merced singled to end an 0-for-13 streak and Jay Bell singled, chasing Castillo and bringing on Paul Assenmacher (3-4). Andy Van Slyke singled in Merced and Bonilla hit a sacrifice fly to slice the lead to 3-2.

Bonds, 1-for-21 lifetime against Assenmacher, then coaxed a walk to load the bases and Lloyd McClendon, a former Cub, singled in Van Slyke to tie the score. Slocumb replaced Assenmacher and walked pinch-hitter Don Slaught to load the bases.

Slocumb struck out Jose Lind on a pitch in the dirt, but his first pitch to pinch-hitter Mitch Webster bounced away from catcher Rick Wilkins and scored Bonds standing up.

Cardinals 4, Phillies 2
Ken Hill pitched 7 1-3 innings of no-hit ball and St. Louis got consecutive homers in the second inning from Todd Zeile and Rich Gedman to complete a three-game sweep against Philadelphia at Busch Stadium.

Braves 3, Astros 0
Charlie Liebrandt (7-5) pitched a three-hitter and Terry Pendleton drove in runs with his fifth and sixth consecutive hits, leading Atlanta over Houston at the Astrodome. Liebrandt struck out three and walked two for his 16th career shutout.

Pendleton, who had four straight hits in Wednesday night's 3-2 victory, grounded out in the fifth inning, ending his streak.

Mark Portugal (6-4) had his string of 10 consecutive victories in the Astrodome snapped.

Reds 3, Padres 0
Barry Larkin had the first two-homer game of his career and drove in all the runs, leading Cincinnati over San Diego at Riverfront Stadium.

Mets 4, Expos 3
Pitcher David Cone went 3-for-3 and started a four-run rally in the fifth inning, leading New York to its first home sweep of the season. The Expos had won eight of 10 games before losing three straight at Shea Stadium.

to win for the seventh time in eight games and hand the Twins their second straight loss at the Metrodome.

With Kelly Gruber on first and two outs, Rance Mulliniks' liner went off Mack's hands for an error. Mack, considered the Twins' top defensive outfielder, then overthrew cutoff man Al Newman, allowing Gruber to score easily.

Juan Guzman (2-2) allowed three hits over 7 2-3 innings in a matchup of the American League's two division leaders. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 14th save as Minnesota lost consecutive games for the first time since dropping three straight from May 25-27.

Brewers 9, Tigers 3
Greg Vaughn drove in five runs with two homers as Milwaukee pounded Detroit at Tiger Stadium. The Brewers got homers from Paul Molitor and Vaughn off Bill Gullickson (9-4) in a five-run sixth inning and Vaughn added a three-run homer off Mark Leiter in a four-run ninth inning.

Chris Bosio (6-7) allowed three hits in eight innings and Dan Plesac pitched the ninth. Bosio had been 1-2 with a 6.43 ERA in his four previous starts in June.

Orioles 7, Indians 2
Randy Milligan drove in three runs with his second four-hit game of the week and Cal Ripken had three hits to increase his American League-leading average to .355 as Baltimore won at Cleveland.

Baltimore finished with 15 hits to win for the fifth time in six games. Cleveland has lost six of seven.

Bob Milacki (4-2) gave up 10 hits, walked one and struck out four in 8 2-3 innings before Gregg Olson got the last out for his 14th save. Cleveland rookie Jeff Mutis (0-3) lasted five-plus innings, giving up six runs and 12 hits.

White Sox 5, Mariners 2
Hot-hitting Dan Pasqua drove in three runs with a homer and two-run triple as Chicago beat Seattle at Comiskey Park for its sixth win in seven games.

Pasqua had a two-run triple in the third off Erik Hanson (4-3) and a solo homer, his third of the four-game series.

Texas educator works with worldwide network of Christian schools

By DUANE BIDWELL
LEWISVILLE (AP) — The Hopi Indians of the American desert consider Forrest Watson their brother.

He is an honorary citizen of Western Samoa and has written economic-recovery plans for Samoa, Tonga, Liberia and Belize.

Lawmakers in Austin have turned to him for advice on anything from school reform to school finance. During the past 13 years, he helped Hurst-Euless-Bedford schools rise to rank among the state's best.

Many consider him the elder statesman of public education in Texas.

But Forrest Watson, 55, is going private — with a worldwide network of more than 6,000 private Christian schools.

After 34 years in the Texas public school system, Watson retired last week as superintendent of H-E-B schools and announced that he will join Accelerated Christian Education as vice president of administration and governmental affairs. The private corporation, based in Lewisville and founded in 1971 by Donald Howard, provides a computerized, Bible-based curriculum to schools in 100 countries.

Watson's first official task: establishing pilot schools in Zambia, the Soviet Union and Lesotho, an independent kingdom surrounded by South Africa.

"What I'm doing here is not inconsistent with my personal beliefs nor my professional commitment," the longtime educator said in a recent interview. "I'm not trying to impose religious beliefs. But I'm trying to strengthen those values that help people from the inside out."

"What this represents to me is an opportunity to affect global education... and have an effect on the relationships of all the nations of the world through their education. I'm doing it for the challenge and the fact that I can bring to bear the knowledge and expertise I've accumulated over 40 years."

Colleagues note that Watson will no longer be hampered by state mandates — on class sizes, curriculums, salaries, funding — that often make it difficult for superintendents to manage Texas public schools.

"I do know some people, superintendents, that have done that moved to private schools in the past. I think they want a little relief," said Lee Meyer, executive director of the Texas Academic Decathlon. "With what we're doing to the public schools, you could probably have more success if you're in private schools."

In up-coming weeks, Watson will negotiate overseas to buy land for a school in Lesotho and will work with the Soviet government to establish private, Christian schools in Moscow and Kiev. Such experience is not unusual for Watson, who has traveled extensively for economic development projects and helped establish schools for the Hopi tribe.

"I believe in education," Watson said. "And I'm a strong believer that parents should have a choice in the education of their children. I have always believed that we have been severely hampered in providing a complete education when we have to take the Bible and prayer out of the classroom entirely."

Watson started his career as a teacher in 1957. At age 26 he became the youngest superintendent in Texas when he took charge of Italy schools in 1961. He also served as superintendent of schools in the Hamilton, Ennis, Pasadena and Alamo Heights districts and for a short time headed the department of educational administration at the University of Houston at Clear Lake City. Watson was an educational adviser to former Governors Dolph Briscoe and Bill Clements.

At H-E-B, he was known for his financial abilities, an innovative technology program and an alternative-education program that became a state model. His successor, Ron Caloss, has praised Watson for giving H-E-B a "tremendous reputation nationally and statewide."

"He left the district in excellent shape. The two things that have impressed me the most are the attitude of the staff — they're proud to be a part of the H-E-B system — and the financial situation," said Caloss, who started at H-E-B last week.

Having a renowned public educator turn his talents to private schools has caught some observers off guard, but the move did not surprise people who know Watson well.

"He was a very private person," said Pat May, a retired educator who served as Watson's assistant superintendent for elementary education. "He read a lot; he studied. I don't know that a lot of people got close to him.... They had a mutual feeling of fearfulness and respect."

The respect may have grown from Watson's ability to devote himself to a project. Friends say he never wavers in his pursuit of something and can divorce himself from emotion to concentrate on the facts.

"He's essentially rather shy and doesn't come across as being warm because he's so intent on being correct in his judgment," said Judi Faurot, who served on the H-E-B school board from 1980 to 1989. "He's incredibly disciplined."

Family members know another Watson — one who can relax. He is a practical joker and licensed pilot who once flew one of his children to Waco just to buy a Coke. And he is enthralled by everything he does.

"There is still that thing in him — that boyish thing," said daughter Robin Carrington, public-relations director at Bedford Meadows hospital. "He's not jaded. He's seen it all and done it all, but it's still new to him. He takes in everything, evaluates it, weighs it against his value system and makes decisions that way."

The chance to mesh his professional and personal beliefs by working at ACE was so compelling that Watson recently turned down an opportunity to teach at the University of North Texas at Denton.

He is a co-founder of the conservative Restoration Church and a former director of the Tarrant County Religious Roundtable. Public scrutiny of his religious beliefs surfaced in 1981, when the American Civil Liberties Union criticized him for showing staff members a film that purported to show dangers in secular humanism.

Watson said he built his life on the Bible, which he sums up with a simple aphorism: "You reap what you sow."

"That was the major revelation that came to me when I was 23 years old," Watson said. "I decided I was just going to live my life according to what I believed, and they his values became convictions and not preferences in my life."

"After I made that decision, I didn't have to reconsider all the time. I've always felt comfortable moving into the next stage. I've been able to have the feeling that that's where God wants me to be, so I've sort of operated without fear of reprisal from school boards or anyone else."

"We address the external things too much in leadership. Real leaders have an inner strength. It has to come from the inside out."

Former Big Springer elected president

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Marj Carpenter, manager of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) news services and formerly a longtime Texas newswoman, was elected president of the National Federation of Press Women at its annual conference here.

Bishop becomes pastor

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Former United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong, who once rocked U.S. Protestantism by quitting a top ecumenical post because of marital problems, is becoming a Florida pastor.

Armstrong's appointment to lead the First Congregational Church of Winter Park, Fla., a congregation of the United Church of Christ, was announced at the United Methodist Rocky Mountain annual conference here.

Armstrong, who for seven years has been a professor at the United Methodist-related Iliff School of Theology in Denver, said, "It will be marvelous to return to pastoral ministry, though in a sense I've never left. I will be doing what I love most, and probably do best."

Armstrong, 66, resigned in 1983 both as a United Methodist bishop and as president of the National Council of Churches, saying he had "failed my wife and my family."

In 1988, his 45-year marriage ended in divorce and he married another woman.

No religion in media?

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Religion has been demoted to a "back seat" in the nation's media, particularly on television, says Robert B. Beusse, a communication consultant.

Beusse, who for 10 years was national communications director for U.S. Roman Catholicism, said at the University of Dayton, where he received his religious communications award:

"Current studies show that most people in the media tend not to have a religion. They've shied away from religion and its values."

Smoking banned

SPRING GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — The Rabbinical Council of

America, representing Orthodox rabbis, has banned smoking from all its public functions and meetings. The RCA's annual convention urged members to set an example for people "by not smoking."

Withdrawal seen as rejection of history

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The general secretary of the American Baptist Churches says Southern Baptist withdrawal from a joint Baptist religious liberty lobby is a "rejection of centuries of Baptist history and tradition."

The Rev. Daniel Weiss referred to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention in ending any funding of the Washington-based Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, which for 50 years has represented eight Baptist bodies on church-state issues.

The Southern Baptists in 1990 cut its yearly allocation to the committee from $400,000 to $50,000, and the remainder also was terminated at a Southern Baptist convention this month in Atlanta. Controlling fundamentalists have criticized the committee for opposing school prayers, among other things.

Weiss said the committee has been "an eloquent and courageous mouthpiece for religious liberty" and that its positions "have been well within the mainstream of Baptist thought and practice."

Christian lesbians launch movement

JAMAICA PLAIN, Mass. (AP) — Protestant clergymen who are lesbians have led in launching a movement called Christian Lesbians Out Together, or CLOUT, to "empower our lesbian sisters and ourselves to challenge the churches."

A group of 113 clergymen and lay women from 14 denominations signed an organizing statement of commitment, declaring that "we are committed especially to the empowerment of ordained lesbians and those who are being rejected for ordination because they are lesbian."

A CLOUT convention is planned in November, organizers said. The Rev. Carter Heyward, an Episcopal priest and professor at Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass., said: "For the churches to coerce either celibacy or silence is morally unacceptable for us."

A wet celebration

MANILA, Philippines — Children throw water at people passing by while celebrating the feast of St. John the Baptist in the Manila suburb of San Juan Monday. St John was responsible for baptizing Jesus Christ in a river and the Roman Catholics in the Philippines have adopted it by pouring water on residents to celebrate.

Major study of religious freedom

NEW YORK — The historical "wall of separation" between government and religion in America has been dangerously breached by rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court over the last dozen years, according to a new book, Lowering the Wall: Religion and the Supreme Court in the 1980s, by Gregg Ivers.

A major study of religious freedom and the separation of church and state, the work is published by the Anti-Defamation League and was released today during ADL's 78th annual National Commission meeting at the Marriott Marquis Hotel here (June 12-15).

In releasing the report, Melvin Salberg, ADL's national chairman, noted that ADL had issued a report in 1984 on legislative and judicial developments in church-state relations which revealed that the traditional "wall of separation" was, if not crumbling, becoming "transparent."

"The accuracy of that observation has unfortunately been confirmed and this book," Salberg added, "presents the reader with an informative and insightful analysis of church-state litigation over the past decade."

Dr. Ivers, assistant professor of government at American University's School of Public Affairs, concludes that under the present Supreme Court — particularly since the arrival of Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist — "the libertarian principles for which the First Amendment religion clauses stand, those which bar the government from preferring one religion over another, assisting or inhibiting the mission of organized religion or intervening in the free exercise of individual religious beliefs, took a decided turn for the worse."

The book documents the erosion of the principles underlying both of the Amendment's religion clauses. With respect to the "establishment" clause, it discusses the increased interaction between government and religion — and even government "sponsorship" of religion: among many other examples, the Court's approval of tax relief for parents of parochial school students, its upholding of state-sponsored Christmas and Chanukah displays on both public and private property, its ruling that student religious clubs can meet in public schools.

The book details numerous examples of incursions upon the "free exercise" clause as well, from the Court's denial of the right of an Orthodox Jewish U.S. Air Force officer to wear a yarmulke while on duty to its holding that two Native Americans dismissed from their jobs as drug counselors because of their sacramental ingestion of peyote during a church ceremony were not entitled to unemployment compensation.

The latter, a 1990 Supreme Court decision (Oregon v. Smith) effectively demolishes the constitutional protection that, for the better part of four decades, had shielded unorthodox religious conduct from the legislative will of intolerant majorities, Dr. Ivers says.

Lowering the Wall documents the conclusion that religious freedom, once "regarded as sacrosanct among the fundamental freedoms given judicial protection against majoritarian rule," has entered the 1990s "relegated to the unaccustomed and unforeseen position of second-class stature in our constellation of Constitutional values."

In a preface to the book, Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union, describes Lowering the Wall as "required reading for all those concerned with religious liberty in America."

The soft-cover book which is priced at $14.95 plus $2.50 shipping and handling, is available from Department JW, Anti-Defamation League, 823 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017.

A woman seeks some inner peace

By Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have had four abortions, and I have always been pretty vocal in demanding the right of a woman to be in charge of her own body. But recently I have begun to have secret doubts, and even feelings of guilt. I would never admit this to my friends, but I know down inside that my life would have been a lot happier if it had been more stable, and now the doctor tells me I probably can never have any children. Maybe you can explain what is happening to me. — L.M.

DEAR L.M.: I appreciate your honesty — and my prayer is that your honesty will help lead you to what you are really seeking.

And what are you seeking? I don't know how you would answer that — but I suspect what you are really seeking is inner peace. You know there is more to living than you have experienced so far, and you have also begun to realize that you have been on a dead-end road. The Bible solemnly warns, "There is a way that seems right to a man, but in the end it leads to death" (Proverbs 14:12).

How can you find inner peace? The key is to realize that God made us so we could have a personal relationship with Him. But when we leave Him out of our lives, there is an empty space left in our hearts. We try to fill that empty space in all kinds of ways: sex, drugs, alcohol, pleasure, personal relationships, money — the list is endless. But it will never be filled by anything or anyone except God.

There is something else that is important to realize — and that is that God loves you. You have not loved Him; in fact, you have turned your back on Him and the way He wanted you to live. But He still loves you.

Billy Graham

Judd and Justine on location

BOSTON (AP) — Actors Judd Nelson and Justine Bateman turned heads at Boston's South Shore this week as they went on location to film a movie about the gubernatorial campaign of John Lakian.

Nelson and Bateman used Boston's South Shore as a film backdrop Wednesday before moving over to the Statehouse on Thursday.

The movie, "Primary Motives," is based on Lakian's failed 1982 campaign.

Lakian lost a three-way Republican primary by 34,000 votes after several statements in his political resume were challenged, including descriptions of his educational background and military record.

Do you we these people?

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — George and Shirley Schoeder had heard of all those celebrities in California. But seeing Ronald Reagan, Kirk Douglas, Chevy Chase and Sally Field at their daughter's wedding was still startling.

The Schoeders met some of the biggest names in Hollywood — and politics — June 15 when their daughter, Lisa, married Douglas' son, Peter, in a ceremony in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Priscilla owns Elvis

CINCINNATI (AP) — All rights to Elvis Presley memorabilia remain in the hands of a corporation headed by the singer's former wife, Priscilla Presley, a federal appeals court has ruled.

The decision, issued Thursday by a three-judge panel of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, rejected a legal challenge by London businessman Sid Shaw.

The court ruled that Elvis Presley Enterprises Inc., headed by Mrs. Presley, "has exclusive rights to commercially exploit the name, likeness and image of Elvis Presley."
