TRUSCOTT BANK BANDITS CAPTURED

Roy Carter Defends Record Of Police Department

Faith

Pastors Talking Turkey—Why The Bonds Lost—Questions of Economy—The Road Called Straight.

WHY shouldn't a pastor discuss crime, law enforcement, the police commissioner or any other public official from the pulpit?

The Record News knows of no reason why such discussion is not proper, but there seems to be a considerable number of persons in Wichita Falls who believe to the contrary. They would keep the minister strictly to his text, whether or not conditions might justify and demand his leadership from the pulpit.

Dr. Paul Henry Packard's criticism of the administration of Police Commissioner Roy Carter, followed by the Rev. S. A. Barnes' statement Sunday, brought many calls to The Record News office, many approving the fight of the ministers. Likewise, many expressed belief that these two men were dabbling in affairs in which they had no concern.

Such an attitude, if widely supported by the public, would be a matter of concern, for it would reflect a public conscience dulled to the demands of good citizenship. The Record News rather believes that pastors should talk more about local affairs and local folk. In the case of Dr. Packard and the Rev. Barnes, it would certainly have been easier to have remained silent than to strike out against a condition of affairs believed wrong. There is no need for the "clerical collar" becoming a choker and a gag as long as the ministry boasts men courageous enough to stand up and wallop for what they believe to be right.

WILLIAM BALDRIDGE, president of the Wichita Falls Real Estate board and ever among those working for the upbuilding of Wichita Falls, writes The Record News to tell why the bonds were defeated. Mr. Baldridge's opinions will doubtless be widely reflected, especially in his statement that the new trend is toward a demand for greater efficiency in both city and county in the handling of taxpayers' money. His letter follows:

"The bond issue was decisively defeated. The first time in the history of our town, at least since it assumed the proportion of a city, have its citizens offered considerable opposition to any question that meant progress. The Wichita Falls way was to go forward always. What was the cause of the reversal of the sentiment in Saturday's election?

"Like Grapenuts, "there is a reason." Only a casual investigation will reveal the cause of the defeat. Lack of confidence in the efficiency and business management of those entrusted with the duty of expending the tax payers' money, together with the general feeling that our tax rate has reached the point under our system of rendition where it is really a burden. Then too, the estimated cost per mile by the proponents of the bond issue for building the different types of roads gave the opposition some argument that was used very effectively with the voters. It may be that $65,000 is not excessive for two miles of road, but they made it appear so.

"THERE is no question but that the time has come when the city and county must show business efficiency and economy in handling the tax payers' money, or we have reached a limit in voting bond issues, however meritorious may be the claims for the bond. In my opinion, that is all that is meant by the result of Saturday's election. It must not discourage the progressive and forward looking element of our citizens. They will seek means and remedy the condition and our community will continue to go forward at a pace in keeping with its resources and opportunities.

"WILLIAM BALDRIDGE."

THERE is a road called straight which young men should consider and follow. The men who walk in it are average citizens, but they do not violate the law and the rights of others, and they die like men when it is time to die.

Matthew Kimes as an Oklahoma youngster was given an excellent start in life. He became a bandit and a king of bandits. Now the law has him and the law will deal with him. He may die for his crimes.

The "dumbest" man in the world is the criminal or crook, for no criminal or crook in the long run ever escapes the consequences of his crimes.

Two Planes To Hop Off For Hawaii Early Today

By Universal Service.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 27.—Instructions were received early tonight from war department at Washington for Lieutenant Maitland and Hegenberger to hop off on their flight to Honolulu between 5 and 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. Immediately after this word was received, Ernest Smith, the civilian pilot, announced he would hop off between 3 and 5 o'clock in the morning.

THREE PLANES READY FOR PACIFIC TRIAL

OAKLAND, Cal., June 27. (AP)—Twd planes here and one in Honolulu were reported ready tonight to hopoff within the next few hours on non-stop flights over the Pacific between San Francisco and Honolulu.

The giant tri-motored army Fokker and its smaller silvery monoplane opponent here were expected to take the air from Oakland's municipal airport early tomorrow for flights westerward over the Pacific toward the Hawaiian islands.

Reports from Honolulu stated that the specially constructed runway on the "barking sands" near Manau, on the Island of Kauai was completed for the take-off of the third plane, piloted by Richard Grace, who plans to wing eastward toward the American continent at an early, undetermined hour.

Flight Authorized

Following an official inspection for the army by Major General Mason Patrick here today of the plane to be flown by Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hegenberger, assistant secretary Davison of the war department announced in Washington receipt of word from Crissy field, San Francisco, the army's air field, that the army plane was ready, and weather permitting, the start was planned to be made tomorrow morning.

The monoplane, to be piloted by Ernest L. Smith, with Charles H. Carter of Los Angeles, as naviga-

SHRIEKS FORCE MAN TO FLEE

Attempted Attacker Routed By Screams

MARSHALL, Texas, June 27. (AP) Police today were investigating a midnight attack by a white man on Mrs. J. L. Morey, bride of a few weeks in a bedroom at her home Saturday.

Shortly after she had retired, Mrs. Morey was dragged from her bed into a hallway near her room, but her screams and struggles attracted the attention of her mother, Mrs. J. D. Wood and after a hand to hand battle, the intruder was routed, fleeing through a back door, officers were told.

That the man entered the house while the women were absent on an automobile ride from which they returned shortly after 11 o'clock was one opinion expressed.

Llano County to Get Biggest Dam In U. S.

AUSTIN, June 27. (AP)—Llano count will boast of one of the largest dams in the United States and Llano and Burnet counties will be the site of a fine all-season game preserve and tourist resort when the Syndicate Power company completes construction of its first dam on the Colorado river four miles north of Kingsland, city manager Adam R. HOUSTON, June 27. (AP)—R. M. Gordon and company, cotton factors, estimate Texas cotton plantings this year at 16,131,192 acres, allowing for two per cent abandonment, a reduction from last year of 14 per cent. Condition is placed at 80 per cent as of June 20, forecasting a yield of 4,990,419 bales.

NEW PIPE LINE TO TOPFIELD AT MUENSTER

Cook County Gets Third Outlet For Growing Oil Production

FOUR INCH LINE

Drilling Activity To Show Increase With New Facilities

By TOM TRULY.

MUENSTER, June 27.—Ozark Pipe Line corporation, subsidiary of the Roxana Petroleum corporation, will start laying a four-inch pipe line from the Roxana loading rack here to Healdton, Okla., Tuesday or Wednesday, it was ascertained today from Wichita Falls officials who were in the Muenster field.

First unit of the line will be built from the Bulcher field, north of here, to this place and the line will then be carried to Healdton to connect with a six-inch line to Drumright, which in turn is hooked onto an eight-inch line to St. Louis and Chicago.

The line is to be composed of screw pipe and will be rushed to completion, the survey having been completed several days ago and a majority of the right of way having been secured.

The Ozark line will be the third to be laid in Cooke county. The Sinclair Crude Purchasing company has three crews at work on its Nocona-Bulcher-Muenster project and officials believe the first oil will be run by Friday night. The pumping plant here is being rushed to completion.

The Humble Pipe Line company which has served the Cooke county fields since they were opened up with a four-inch unit, is building additional storage here and greatly enlarging its pumping plant.

Cooke county production is now estimated at 5000 barrels daily, only a part of which is being transported through pipe lines. Completion, of the additional facilities, oil men believe, will greatly stimulate drilling activity.

Seven derricks have sprung up around Ed Ruwaldt's No. 1, three were started Monday and 10 other locations are reported to have been made.

Car Drags Oklahoma Man For Two Miles

CHICKASHA, Okla., June 27.(AP) Dragged nearly two miles by a motorcar, G. W. Kimbrell, 65, died last night shortly after his plight was discovered. The occupants of the car believed it was being impeded by tire trouble or high centers in the road. The accident occurred near Alex, Okla.

FLIGHT IS POSTPONED

OAKLAND, Cal., June 27. (AP)—Neither the army Fokker nor its civilian opponent will take off on the Honolulu flight before tomorrow, Lieutenant Lester J. Maitland and Edmund J. Moffett, of the rival camps, announced today.

Wichita Falls Invites National Air Tour Ships to Visit City On Trip

Wichita Falls will in all probability be included in the itinerary of the National Aid Tour of 14 planes which started from Detroit Monday, according to announcement from officials of the Wichita County Automobile club Monday night. Telegrams to L. J. Glasgow, head of the Detroit Automobile club, will secure a visit here of a few hours at least, it is believed. The local organization of the Automobile association of America received notice that the fleet of planes would consider stopping at cities with association membership as one of the planes is sponsored by the A. A. A. This plane, a tri-motored Ford monoplane, bears the A. A. A. emblem, James Boyle, secretary of the Wichita County club said.

The present schedule of the tour includes Dallas, Texas and Tulsa, Oklahoma, and it is believed Wichita Falls will be placed in line between these two cities. Transportation and entertainment for the entire pilot and passenger personnel of the planes will be arranged by the local club Mr. Boyle said.

This is the first national tour of this type ever made and is arousing much interest in all quarters. The fliers spent Monday night in Buffalo, with the following other cities on the present itinerary: Geneva, Schenectady, Boston, Hartford, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Dayton, Columbia, Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis, Pine Bluff, Dallas, Tulsa, Wichita, Moline, Hammond, Grand Rapids and others.

The Wichita Valley club was organized in October, 1926, and has at present about 500 members. Louis Bryan is president.

100 Bales Out of New Crop Ginned Lasara

RAYMONDVILLE, June 27. (AP) Lasara, a town seven miles west of Raymondville, was the outstanding town in the United States Monday from the standpoint of cotton ginning. Records showed the gins here had ginned more than 100 bales of the new crop, which was a greater amount than any other town in the Rio Grande valley where cotton matures earlier than in any other cotton growing section.

Wichita Falls Air Pilot Enters Plane in $25,000 Hongkong Test

Eugene W. Graham, young Wichita Falls air pilot, will make the Dallas-to-Hongkong flight sponsored by William Easterwood of Dallas if present plans materialize, it was definitely announced Monday when he paid the $50 entrance fee in the contest at Dallas. Notice of his entry was received here early Monday afternoon.

Though Mr. Graham had not returned from Dallas Monday night, he had previously told The Record News that he would make the flight if his order for the desired type of plane could be filled before Aug. 1, the date when the $25,000 contest opens. If possible, he will dare the Pacific in a Travelair plane equipped with Wright whirlwind motor, he said.

Mr. Graham has been consulting several Wichita Falls financiers for some time, and was confident of securing proper financial backing, he told The Record News. The local chamber of commerce is interested in the flight, and will aid Mr. Graham in any manner in keeping with the principles of the organization, Hubert M. Harrison, manager, said.

Mr. Graham will call his plane the "Wichita Falls," he announced several days ago, if the flight is made.

He is an experienced flier, having served as a test pilot during the war at the Hispano-Suiza factory in New Brunswick, N. J.

COUNCIL TOLD OF FIGHT ON LIQUOR TRADE

Pastors' Statements Breeds Disrepect of Law, He Charges

"PROMISES" DENIED

Police Head Reviews Work In Answer to Pulpit Criticisms

In a reply to charges made by Dr. Paul Henry Packard and Dr. S. A. Barnes against the Wichita Falls police department presented Monday night to the city council, Roy E. Carter, police and fire commissioner, declared that statements made by the two pastors were erroneous.

The presentation came at the close of the council session. Mr. Carter in a statement to Mayor R. L. Shepherd declared that "charges had been brought against the police department and himself to which he desired to make a reply."

Mayor Pleased

Mr. Carter then read the statement. At the conclusion no remarks were made by the councilmen. However, Mayor Sheherd said that as a result of the charges that had been made he was pleased that Mr. Carter had made a reply.

After reading his prepared statement, Mr. Carter presented the original to Mayor Shepherd for the city files and gave copies to newspaper representatives.

Mr. Carter's statement follows:

Statement In Full

"In view of the fact that on Sunday night, June 19, Dr. Paul Henry Packard, delivered an address from his pulpit in which he made various charges against our police department, and feeling that you gentlemen and the public at large are entitled to the true facts in regard to his accusations, I am giving you this report. Personally I have lived in Wichita Falls since before I was 21 years of age, have always paid my poll tax since I had my first opportunity and I personally am not concerned with what some individual preacher has to say against me personally, when that preacher could not even vote at our city election.

"I do feel however, that the other officers and personnel of our police department are working hard, most of them from 12 to 18 hours per day, in order to give the city the maximum protection and service they possibly can. When the budget was adopted for the fiscal year, our force in the police department was reduced from 42 to 37 men. I protested this at the time because I considered our force inadequate as it was, but the financial condition of the city was such that it had to be done and we have been trying our best to work a little harder because of this reduction and try to maintain the maximum efficiency in our department.

Denies Promise

"Regarding the specific accusations of Dr. Packard, will say:

"I never at any time promised anyone, preacher or otherwise, that I would remove from office every officer placed there by the former administration. No citizen of Wichita Falls can truthfully state that I ever told them that I did promise to re-organize the department and told them I would make such changes as I thought necessary, but always added that I thought there were some good men on the force during the previous administration and those men who were considered good, competent officers would be retained. It would not have been the sensible, logical, practical, just or Christian thing to have done to have dismissed every man in the department just because he had the misfortune of having worked for the previous administration. I am not a minister and likely never will be, but my conscience tells me that it is wrong to take from any

ATHLETIC AT 81

Aged Woman On Hike Cross Country To Make Visit

CHICAGO, June 27. (AP)—Mrs. Fanny Streator, 81 years old, whose desire to see her three youngest grandchildren, caused her to leave her home in Blackburg, Va., June 15, to walk to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wyde Keen, of Appelgate, Orc., reached Chicago today.

Peacefully puffing on an ancient looking corn cob pipe, she told reporters she had turned down a good many rides on her cross-country hike, "because just a-sittin' there is more tirin' than walkin'."

CITY COUNCIL ORDERS PAVING

Egg Inspector Approved at Meeting

Paving of sections of four streets was ordered Monday night by the city council.

The streets to be paved are: Mississippi from Elm to Jalonic; Jalonic, from Mississippi to Virginia; Virginia, from Jalonic to Henrietta road, and Giddings, from Avenue J to Avenue L.

Hearing on the paving of Hollywood, from Hays to Garwood, scheduled for Monday night, was postponed for 90 days.

Colorado avenue, from Pecan to Oak, was ordered closed by the council. The city reserved the right to all easements, according to the council's order.

Bids for 3500 feet of fire hose were received and contracts for the supplying of the hose awarded to the Eureka Hose company, of North Carolina; the Hamilton Rubber company, of New York, and the Goodrich Rubber company, of Akron, Ohio. The hose was purchased by the city through the Bailey-Moline Hardware company and the Standard Supply company.

Contracts for the paving of sections of four streets were awarded to the Fuller Construction company. The streets are: Oak, Mississippi to Virginia; Sherman Road, York to Lexington, Bluff street, 13th to 14th; Bipole street, Holliday to Bridwell.

A. W. King, park and sanitary commissioner, was given permission by the council to employ an egg inspector, who will inspect eggs brought into Wichita Falls to be sold to residents in the city.

An ordinance regulating the placing of signs in the city was passed on its second reading. D. D. Albritter was given permission by the council to install a skating rink on Mississippi street, near the Wichita Falls Brick company works.

Allegations By Former Klan Wizard Refuted

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 27. (AP)—Allegations of D. C. Stephenson, life term prisoner, that he has been mistreated at the Michigan City state prison apparently are without foundation, the board of state charities will say in a report to Gov. Edward Jackson tomorrow. The board recently conducted an inquiry into the charges and questioned Stephenson at the prison where he is serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis.

Obregon Assails Rome As Enemy of Mexico

MEXICO CITY, June 27.(AP)—"Rome and Wall street" are held by General Obregon, who has announced his candidacy for president, to be the headquarters of the enemies of the Mexican government. He makes the charge in a statement outlining his platform on the various questions, both internal and external, with which the country must deal.

BANDIT PAIR ARRESTED BY KNOX SHERIFF

Robbers Offer No Fight When Overhauled By Officers

LOOT RECOVERED

Capture Made In Cedar Brakes East Of Truscott

By MACK BOSWELL,
Record News Staff Correspondent.

BENJAMIN, June 27.—Each of them armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a six-shooter, two men believed to be the bandit pair who robbed the First National bank at Truscott, 12 miles north of here, of $2700 at noon Monday, were captured late Monday in the rugged cedar brakes 14 miles east of Truscott by Sheriff Jim Melton of Knox county. The two armed men offered no resistance when Sheriff Melton discovered their hiding place in the valley of the North Wichita river not a great distance from a deep canyon on the Cottingham ranch where the bandits had abandoned their automobile with a broken steering wheel.

The loot which the two men took from the Truscott bank was discovered in their possession and turned over to Sheriff Melton as evidence to be used in the cases to be filed against them Tuesday morning at Benjamin, county seat of Knox county in which Truscott is also located.

Assisting Sheriff Melton in the capture of the two bandits, who have not yet been definitely identified, were more than 100 men composing a volunteer posse which had combed the brakes all afternoon for the bank raiders.

A check of the First National bank's records this afternoon revealed that the bandits' loot totalled $2760, one thousand dollars more than was first estimated. The loot carried off consisted of silver and currency.

According to B. L. Chessir, cashier of the bank, the two bandits entered by the front about 1 o'clock when he and John May, bookkeeper, were the only occupants.

"Do as we say and act quick about it," one of the bandits ordered the two officials.

While one of the bandits kept Chessir and May covered with a gun, the two officials were compelled to enter the vault and open the money safe, while the other bandit gathered up the money. One bag containing $500 was overlooked by the robbers when May succeeded in shoving it, unnoticed, behind a box. The robbers then locked the bankers in the vault and fled, but as they left the building they were spied by F. W. Powell and D. Brazil, who pursued them for 10 miles in a small car, finally losing the trail.

Later the bandit car was found abandoned a few miles further on. Powell stated that as the bandits started out from the bank they nearly overturned their car in making a quick getaway.

The car abandoned by the bandits was late Monday identified as having been registered at Dalhart in Dallam county.

Japan Not Eager To Sign Security Treaty

GENEVA, Switzerland, June 29. (AP)—As far as Japan is concerned there is no idea of proposing any security treaty, Viscount Ishii told the newspaper men tonight when asked if there was any truth in the reports that an English-Japanese-American pact was being projected.

Hambone's Meditation

Claim of Pola's Husband to Title Of Prince Disputed by Nobility

LOS ANGELES, June 27. (AP)—The Times says a sheet of paper which Prince Serge M'Divani, husband of Pola Negri, film star, declares is the key to other documents which prove he is a real prince, was sent by him to New York Saturday as the opening shot in a battle in which he expects to establish his lineage.

The newspaper quoted him as saying that within a week he would file suit in New York asking $100,000 for damages from a magazine which called him a "nobleman with questionable title."

The paper which M'Divani exhibited to reporters and which he says is but one of the many documents that prove him to be a real prince purports to show that the title "prince" first entered the M'Divani family in 1743, having been bestowed upon one Solomon M'Divani.

While the film star's husband began the attempt to prove his right to title former compatriots of both he and his father, openly took issue with the prince and declared that while the M'Divanis are of noble birth, they are not of royal blood and that the title was unheard of in their own country.

Carter Defends Police Activity

man his position by which he is earning his living and supporting his family without just cause. Sixteen men have left the service of the police department since I started my campaign, the force was reduced six men and we have ten new men on the force.

Defends Judge

"I never promised the boys of the Fort Worth and Denver railroad that I would do anything they asked me to if they would support me. This statement is absurd on its face and any thinking person will readily recognize it, and know that it is but the far-fetched imagination of some individual. Up to the present time, I do not know of any employe of that railroad who has ever asked me to remove the Mexican officer from the force. I certainly have never promised anyone that I would do so. I did promise that he would not be used to arrest white people and this promise has been kept. So far the only reason ever given me as to why this man should be dismissed is that he is a Mexican. If anyone can send us a capable, trustworthy, industrious interpreter, who is a white man and will take the place on our force, we will be glad indeed to look into his qualifications. This Mexican officer is a very valuable man in his place and we have used him also as jailer since our jailer was cut off in the budget reduction.

"The present city judge to my mind is a high grade young man, a fair judge, who will listen to the plea of anyone for clemency, but at the same time imposes the punishment as he thinks the individual case merits. I personally never knew the young man until after the election. I discussed his work with those of you gentlemen who were on the council prior to my election and you were all satisfied with his work and opposed to any change. Since I have been associated with Mr. Bass I am glad to say that I can endorse him wholeheartedly and feel that you gentlemen were perfectly right in advising against any change.

"Information Erratic"

"Since Dr. Packard has had no conversation with me for some weeks prior to his sermon or address, any statement he quotes me as having been made the week before must have come to him second-handed and doubtless came from the same source as a great deal of his other erratic information. I never stated to anyone that I had instructed the police not to make any liquor raids except on complaints of citizens, nor have I ever told the police anything of that nature. I have stated all the while that we cannot raid a place without a search warrant, which Dr. Packard seems to think can be done. For the information of the public, a search warrant cannot be issued except on the sworn complaint of two individuals and a decision handed down by the court of criminal appeals at Austin last week held that these affidavits must be based on facts and not on suppositions.

"As to sending a man to buy a bottle during the chamber of commerce convention, anyone acquainted with law enforcement will tell you that it is a much surer means of convicting a bootlegger to be in position to prove a sale on him than to merely raid the place and capture a few pints of evidence.

"Regarding the allegation that not a single liquor case has been filed by the city during my administration, will say that I am giving below a list of the different cases filed by the police department with other courts during my administration.

City Cases.

"Thes cases cover all arrests made which because of the nature of the violations cannot be handled in the city court.

Cases filed in fedral cour for liquor violations	15
Cases filed in state court for liquor violations	9
Cases filed in state court for burglary (This includes knob-knocking, safe blowing, etc.)	13
Cases filed in state court for theft (When a felony)	11
Cases filed in state court for automobile theft	8
Cases filed in state court for forgery	4
Cases filed in state court for embezzlement	2
Cases filed in state court for swindling	4
Cases filed in state court for rape	1
Cases filed in state court for murder	2
Cases filed in state court for driving a car while intoxicated	19
Cases filed in state court for hijacking	1
Cases filed in state court for receiving and concealing stolen property	1
Cases filed in federal court for narcitic violations. (This includes one of the largest captures of narcotic ever made in Wichita Falls)	5
Cases filed in federal court for altering government certificates. (Raising the denominations of bills	2
Cases filed in county court for petty theft	27
Cases filed in county court for misdemeanors. (Not checks under $50 takes this classification	73
Cases filed in juvenile court for theft	2
Total	133

"Besides the liquor violation cases listed above, the police department has participated in a large number of raids in company with some other member of the sheriff's force or the local Prohibition Enforcement officer. In such cases the record is handled by the state or federal man participating in some way for the reason that we have no authority to handle such cases. We have a fine sheriff and are only too glad to co-operate with him and his force in any possible way just as we have been doing. The federal men here have commented very favorably on the wonderful help they secured from our department.

"While I am not making it a part of this report due to its extreme length, I have a memorandum of each of the above mention cases, showing the name of each of the above mentioned cases, showing the name of the offender the date on which the arrest was made, the officer making the arrest and the court in which the case was filed.

"In addition to the above figures, we have handled in our own court during my administration the following cases:

Total number of arrests	1934
Arrested for investigation and released	211

"While our department has not done all that it would like to do, at the same time we feel that we have made a creditable showing in view of the fact that the administration is only a little over two months old.

"There are no figures shown to support the statement that there has been an increase in all kinds of crime, especially bootlegging and knob-knocking. This is a proposition that is easy to assume but hard to prove. Just at this time with the depression that exists generally all over the country and especially in all oil territories, conditions are more conductive to crime than in normal times and while we have had more or less violations, in view of existing circumstances I think we have been fortunate in not having more than we have had.

"As to the advance tip we had on the attempeted burglary of a drug store in which a man was shot, this is just one more case where Dr. Packard knew nothing of the facts. We had no tip whatever, but the two officers on this case had been watching there all night, just as they had for three weeks and just as other members of our force were doing at the same time in other parts of the city. As to whether or not the entire force has caught one burglar, my report and the records show we have jailed thirteen for this offense.

"With reference to the individual case which occured near Dr. Packard's sanctuary, this man was fined in the city court and appealed his case to the county. There is still no good reason why he cannot be convicted in the county court and our city attorney has volunteered his services to aid in the prosecution when the case comes up on the docket. We have done our duty and are ready to assist the county in any way we can when the case comes up for trial.

"Chalk Stick" Work.

"As to the "Chalk Stick Law Enforcing Body," will say that the marking of automobiles for overtime parking requires the services of two men a part of their time. This is an ordinance on our books and to do our duty, we must try to enforce it so long as it is there. The vast majority of our good citizens are glad to abide by this law and their co-operation is appreciated very much indeed.

"Toward the conclusion of Dr. Packard's speech, he states that we need brave mothers, brave young men and women, brave parents who would properly teach and rear their children. In this I heartily agree with him, but I am a little young both in years and in my term of office to assume the responsibility for the manner in which parents control their children, but if a law should be passed making it the duty of the police department to look after this, we will do our best to enforce it.

Breeds Disrespect of Law.

"In conclusion let me say that I covet the co-operation of all of our citizens, you gentlemen on the council, the ministers and everyone else whether engaged in public or private life and if we can get this, we believe we can give you a good administration, but without it, we could not accomplish the results we should with three times the force we have. I have no desire to prolong a controversy of this nature and this is my final statement in the matter, unless the facts should be misrepresented again in regard to my department, but if this be done again, I can but defend the men who are working so faithfully and so hard to protect the property and lives of our citizens. Constructive criticism is always welcome and if you, any of our ministers, or any other citizen has any to give us, we will always be glad to receive it. Dr. Packard never said one word to me about the sermon he was going to preach or the objections he had to my administration, he never went to anyone connected with the police department in an attempt to verify the statements he made, practically all of which were erroneous and in view of this fact, his criticism can hardly be called constructive. The accusations made by Dr. Packard and the statement made in their support by Dr. S. A. Barnes only yesterday can do more to cause disrespect for the law than any other one thing I know of.

"Assuring you that we will continue to do our very best to enforce all of our laws, regardless of whatever criticism or praise we may receive, and again seeking your sincere co-operation and help, I am, yours for a bigger and better Wichita Falls,

ROY E. CARTER.
Police and Fire Commissioner.

Pacific Planes Hop Off Today

tor, was given its final tests late this afternoon and were declared satisfactory. These tests over, there was nothing to hinder the plane from taking off as soon as the weather man pronounced the pathway clear of weather adversities. His forecast today said conditions were "exceptionally favorable" for fliers hopping off from the California coast but not so favorable for flight in the other direction.

Grace Is Delayed

It was deemed possible Grace might be delayed a few hours after the time the fliers here anticipated starting, for the arrival aboard the liner Maui of a new propeller. The ship is due to reach the islands tomorrow.

Provisions were stored aboard the army plane late today. An airplane from Crissy field arrived at the Oakland airport with filled water bags, packages of concentrated foods and cushions with which to make the long hours as comfortable as possible for the fliers.

The reports that General Patrick might accompany the army fliers were declared "without foundation" by the war department today.

ARMY HEADS OKEH PLANS FOR HOPOFF

WASHINGTON, June 27.(AP)—Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger plan to hop off tomorrow morning on a non-stop flight from the Pacific coast to Hawaii, Assistant Secretary Davison of the war department was advised today.

The two army fliers did not advise Mr. Davison, who is in charge of army aeronautics, at what hour they intended to make their getaway. The announcement from the secretary's office was the first definite word that Maitland and Hegenberger would attempt to be the first off for the flight across the Pacific.

Major General Patrick, chief of the army air corps, who is on the coast, telegraphed Mr. Davison that all tests of the army plane had been satisfactory and that "weather indications promise favorable conditions for the hop off tomorrow morning.

It was said at Davison's office that reports that Patrick also would make the flight were "without foundation."

Davison in a statement spoke highly of the ability of both Maitland and Hegenberger, said their plane had been shown by gruelling tests that it could be counted on to function satisfactorily, and predicted that the army pair would reach Hawaii.

STORM CONTINUES TO DELAY BYRD'S HOP

ROOSEVELT FIELD, NEW YORK, June 27. (AP)—The storm that set this flying field awash Sunday morning and prevented a take-off of the monoplane "America" was hanging off the Grand Banks tonight, an effective barrier against starting the flight to France before Wednesday.

Commander Richard E. Byrd and his three-man crew spent part of the day at the hangar and the runway where the tri-motored plane is poised for flight, but shook their heads in discouragement when they heard the weather man's report.

"There won't be any take-off tomorrow morning," Byrd said. "The way the winds are now they'd cost us 10 miles an hour all the way to Newfoundland and 15 miles an hour across the ocean. And the low pressure through that runs from Newfoundland south to the steamer lanes forms an effective barrier."

WEATHER MAN TAKES CRACK AT BYRD

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—According to the weather bureau, Commander Byrd may have a long wait, if he intends to postpone his trans-Atlantic flight until the weather conditions are perfect.

A weather bureau official said today:

"It is beyond the realm of possibility that there should be, at any given time, perfect weather for flying across the entire Atlantic."

METEOR QUITS COMET

WASHINGTON, June 27. (AP)—Astronomers at the naval observatory failed to discern anything unusual about the progress of the Pons-Winnecke comet as it approached within 3,500,000 miles of the earth early today. Only a faint meteor was observed to leave the comet.

Peaches

Can them!

LUSCIOUS, juicy peaches---how good they taste now as they come from the trees---and how good they will taste next winter when properly canned to retain their freshness and flavor! Of course you are going to can a good quantity of peaches---as well as other fruits---and vegetables. With gas to take care of the heating end of your canning, it's so much easier and cooler to can now than when wood or coal fires had to be built up and kept burning in hot weather. Gas is quick, clean, cool, cheap---it makes home canning a joy instead of a burden. You can depend on gas the year 'round---for canning and cooking in summer, for heating and cooking in winter, for hot water all of the time. Gas is the ideal fuel!

KIMES' AIDE BETRAYS HIM

Blackie Wilson Tells Off On Bandit Leader

OKMULGEE, Okla., June 27.(AP)—Information that brought about the capture of Mathew Kimes, notorious bandit, was obtained through Roy (Blackie) Wilson, his alleged accomplice, held under an Okmulgee county charge of participation in the Beggs bank robbery and slaying, it was reliably reported here today.

Wilson acted under a double impulse—revenge and hopes for leniency, it was said.

Angered because no move was made by the gangsters to liberate him, Wilson told where his accomplices would be and where capture could be effected, it was learned.

The information is understood to have been given Chief of Police Compton of Muskogee, enabling him to telegraph it to officers in Arizona and bring about the capture of Kimes.

Deal for Liberty

Attorneys for Wilson attempted to make a deal with County Attorney A. N. Boatman and Sheriff John Russell whereby their client would be given leniency, if not immunity, for the information that would bring about the round-up of the gang, Boatman said today.

"John Russell and I told them that we would not promise Roy Wilson leniency or immunity if it took us the rest of our lives to find Kimes," Mr. Boatman stated.

The county attorney and sheriff conversed further with the attorneys and drew out enough information to enable them "to put two and two together," and figure out about where the gang's meeting place was.

He and Russell had information that the gang had agreed to meet June 18, exactly a month after the Beggs bank robbery, at some point in Arizona, Boatman declared.

Meanwhile information reached Compton from some source, said to be Wilson, and the arrest was made.

Wilson Wanted Revenge

Wilson told Okmulgee officers he was highly angered at the gang's failure to help him out of his situation.

"I was in that little jail at Borger for five days. It was so puny I could have kicked it down myself, and yet they made no move to aid me. We all had held up our right arms and sworn that if any one got caught that the rest of us would get him out at once," the alleged bandit is said to have stated.

KIMES ON WAY TO OKLAHOMA BY AUTO.

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., June 27. (AP) Mathew Kimes, Oklahoma outlaw captured here last week, was spirited out of the Coconino county jail her today by Sheriff John Russell of Okmulgee, Okla., and started for the scenes of his alleged banditry in Oklahoma by automobile.

Roy Dooley, alias H. G. Kady, arrested with Kimes and believd to have been connected with the bank robber's activities, also was started east. The party, which included besides Kimes and the sheriff, J. B. Hill and M. L. Larimore, deputy sheriffs, left here about daybreak. The woman who, when arrested with the two men, said she was Mrs. "Kady," remains in jail here.

Surprise Move.

The surprise move was not known outside the jail until several hours later. The route to be taken by the automobile was not announced, but it was understood a stop would be made at Amarillo, Texas, to get additional deputies to safeguard the prisoners against possible attempts to liberate them.

Police Chief Compton of Muskogee, Okla., remained here to keep the woman under surveillance and attempt further indentification of her and Dooley. Reports reaching officers were that Dooley is a cousin of "Doc" Pardee, manager of the Prescott, Ariz., "Frontier Days," a rodeo celebration staged periodically there.

The officers did not reveal the significance, if any, to the relationship. Dooley is said also to have relatives at Globe, Ariz.

Dooley and the woman were arrested at the same time Kimes was captured under the "rim" by posses. They gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Kady and said they had picked Kimes up at Dodge City, Kans., and given him a "lift" west.

Woman Questioned.

Mrs. Dooley said she had known Pardee in Oklahoma and that her husband had introduced him as his cousin.

She said they intended to visit the rodeo manager during their stay in the Prescott celebration.

Chief Compton said he would go to Prescott and question Pardee, who is a well known rodeo promoter throughout the southwest.

Mrs. Dooley said at the time Kimes was picked up at Dodge Citk, Kans., she was asleep in the automobile, but that Dooley told her the man was merely being given a ride.

Kiwanians Plan Henrietta Trip

Discussion of the charter-presentation meeting of the recently organized Henrietta Kiwanis club occupied local Kiwanians at the Monday luncheon, with the announcement made that practically every member would attend the meeting, motoring over Thursday afternoon. The Wichita Falls Kiwanis club was "sponsor" to the organization of the Henrietta group.

Special music was practiced by the club at the luncheon, with Alva Willgus, song leader. "Kiwanis" and "Builders" will be the featured numbers rendered by the Wichitans at Henrietta Thursday.

W. H. Caldwell and W. S. Langford told of recent tours made in the East. Mr. Langford was in New York at the time of Col. Lindberg's arrival there and told Kiwanians of seeing the young hero.

Special music was furnished Monday by Alva Willgus, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Willgus.

EATING TO LIVE

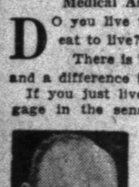

By DR. REED

A Better Method Than Living Just to Eat

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

DO you live to eat or do you eat to live?

There is both a distinction and a difference between the two. If you just live to eat, you engage in the sensual gratification of your function of taste. You simply eat things because they taste good and generally keep on eating them until they no longer appeal to your palate. If you eat after this fashion you belong to the class of people called gourmands. If, however, you are of a more refined sense of taste you may still eat to gratify that sense without stuffing yourself. In that event, you are what the French call a gourmet. But whether you are a gourmand or a gourmet, you are very likely to select your food simply because of its appeal to your palate and without reference to the physiological requirements of your system.

CHARLES A.L. REED, M.D.

There is certainly no harm in gratifying your taste for good things providing you do it with intelligence. There is, indeed, every good reason for cultivating a fondness for good things. The pleasure derived from the sense of taste helps to stimulate appetite. And there comes in the quotation from Shakespeare:

"Let good digestion wait on appetite
And health on both."

There was a famous Roman philosopher who was fond of good things but who ate them discriminatingly, although he fed them to his guests in great quantities. His name was Epicurus. He was a gourmet, although he made gourmands of his guests. The example of Epicurus has given us the word epicure, to designate one of refined taste in eating.

If you are an epicure, as I hope you are, I simply wish you to be an all-around epicure. By this I mean that I hope you will not cultivate a taste for just a few things that may not be good for you and fail to cultivate a taste for many other equally good things that would be good for you.

This is very important, for it leads to the development of what is called an unbalanced diet and an unbalanced diet leads to unbalanced functions of your body. The person who just likes this and never likes that and won't eat it is generally a person who is a crank to begin with and an invalid to end with.

There has been an unconscious recognition of and adaptation to the natural law underlying a balanced diet for human beings. This recognition is found in the evolution of the modern meal, or repast, of everyday people. It finds its highest recognition, perhaps, in the modern table-d'hote, in which the elements of a well-balanced diet are always represented from the opening appetizers to the concluding nuts. It does not follow, that, to secure a balanced diet, one must wade clear through one of the menus. But an intelligent selection of a soup, a fish, a joint, vegetables and a sweet, in ordinary helpings, will afford a balanced diet of about the right energy-giving value.

Although diet tables are given with both quantities and calory values of different foods, these are to be recognized as accurate, scientific determination, which are given as guides for only approximate observance. Fortunately, the physiological requirements of an ordinary health system admit of that degree of variation in diet that will gratify a reasonable indulgence in the matter of taste as well as in quantity.

It would be absurd, possibly disastrous, for a healthy person to take up the fad of eating in front of a pair of scales on which he would weigh the quantities of food that he ate and select that food with reference to its various constituents and its calory values. Such an individual comes to be what we doctors call a dietetic nut—just to use the slang of the shop. And a dietetic nut is a very hopeless sort of individual.

A YOUNG MAN SHE COULDN'T FORGET

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Why can he not as others do,
Just up and say, 'Dear, I love you!'"

THIS was the chirrup of the two birds in the bush who lent him their wings right up to the door of adventure. There they could do no more than continue to give him their immortal support in smothered cheers, whispered encouragement, inaudible but furious groans, and signaled advice by the yard!

But alack, he must have been a descendant of the JOHN ALDEN who could speak so eloquently for someone else than himself. For though he was a very real young man in every attractive sense—both this JOHN and THAT one—and though he had bestowed a many blithe kisses in his gallant young life with no harm done, when he met THE girl at last—a daring, twinkling, provocative young person—but whose follow-me-young-man bright eyes were the very daringest thing about her, why then his high assurance "went down right about here!" And he couldn't summon courage to say a word for himself.

BUT—Priscilla went to bed in a glow over a perfectly wonderful chap who gave her a perfectly wonderful time, and who both DIDN'T ask her for a kiss and was terribly in love with her!—if her bright eyes knew a young man in love. Here was the Prince Charming of her dreams.

And the next time, a very-soon time, she was so very amiable, so like an angel willing to leave her place in heaven for an earthly mate, that John told her the whole Old Story in a fine outburst and went home later with just the opposite to an inferiority complex!

And the two love-birds in the bushes turned somersaults in honor of the triumph of a bashful young man!

Taking Advantage of Obliging Children

By L. Lamar Matthews.

HIS name really is "George," and the old slang phrase, "Let George do it," was used in all seriousness by his classmates and teachers back in the days when he went to high school.

L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

If there was to be a Friday evening dance, it was George who carried the list from one boy to another, arranging the matter of escorts for the less popular girls.

If a school play was to be staged in the auditorium, George was unanimously elected property man.

It seemed so easy to delegate important assignments to George, because once he was assigned to a certain duty, nobody had to worry about it. The thing was as good as done.

By the time George was in his senior year, he had so many extra duties that he almost failed in his studies. He was class president; he was captain in the R. O. T. C. He was cheer leader for the athletic team. He was business manager of the school paper and general flunky for all the teachers who needed a strong right-hand man to help them.

Then George grew up and went to work in a store. Naturally the same state of affairs developed in the store that had existed at school. Also George's mother and brother and sisters continued to make demands upon his time and his good nature as they had always done.

Then one day, out of a clear sky, George revolted.

His mother called him up about noon, asking him to go by a certain real estate office and tell them so and so.

"You had better call them over the telephone or write them a letter, mother. I will not have time to go there," is what he said in his polite manner.

Sister was the next member of the family to call him. And would George please bring her four yards of narrow cerise ribbon when he came home? George assured her that she would have to purchase her own ribbons.

And brother's request for services met with the same sort of response.

When the family gathered around the fireside that evening everybody regarded George with curious glances. What had come over him? That is what they all wanted to know, and at last Sister put the question into words.

"I have been an errand boy all my life," he replied, "and now I am through. I will not be a detail man. Nobody can accomplish much and look after minor details for everybody else. Nobody can be a big man and a little one at the same time. And I propose to be a big one."

And the family knew that he spoke the truth.

Have you a little George in your home? Is there one child in the family whose willingness to help and whose reliable nature invites imposition from others?

You are taking a chance with your child's future success when you permit lazy members of the household to shift all the unpleasant tasks to his shoulders.

Is the Working Wife a National Menace?

By Lucy Lowell.

THE wife who goes outside her home to earn a salary is a menace to the home, the nation and the race.

This is what a woman who has made a success of the home-making job writes me.

Perhaps she has old-fashioned ideas, for she declares that she does not think woman's place—her real mission, that is—has been changed in the least by modern thought.

"If a woman," she says, "is not willing to take up the life of the home and become a good housekeeper, a good wife and companion to her husband and, above all, a good mother, she has no right to consider matrimony.

"I believe if every woman who goes to the altar took with her those high ideals and the determination to realize them, the divorce courts would go out of business.

"Furthermore, I believe every woman down in her heart feels the same way, for love of home-making is natural for women.

The writer of this letter knows several working wives. One, she tells me, has a five-year-old daughter who stays at her grandma's from the time school is out in the afternoon till the mother comes from the job. And when the mother does come she is so nervous, cross and weary that she can't be bothered much with mothering or being a good wife, either.

"Sometimes when they visit us," my friend goes on, "my heart aches for the baby and husband. They sit at our table with eyes bulging at sight of the home-made food, so eager for a taste of something well-cooked and not delicatessen-made that they forget all about being mannerly.

"In my opinion, the salary she makes is just that much theft from her daughter and her husband."

This is one woman's idea of the Working Wife.

What is YOUR idea?

Do You Know?

Rice forms the principal food of fully one-third of the inhabitants of the world.

About seventy pieces of wood go to the making of a violin.

When Manners Are Correct

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

At a Dance.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: Isn't it all right to dance with some one besides your escort?

2. How should you accept or refuse a young man who asks for a dance?

3. Do you think a girl should dance with some one she has not been introduced to? Of course, I have reference to public dances. WORRIED.

YES.

2. You accept a dance by saying, for instance, "Thank you. I should love to dance." "Yes, indeed. I should love to dance," or just by rising and bowing your acceptance or saying "Thank you." If you are sitting with your partner, the new dance partner will say to your escort, "Do you mind?" and you will "excuse" yourself, as you leave.

It is a very serious proposition when a girl refuses to dance with a man. She does not refuse unless he is intoxicated or in some other manner objectionable, and if she refuses she must give the time-worn excuse of feeling "tired" or "going to sit out this dance." And then she really must go and stay throughout the dance in the dressing-room.

3. No, by no means. (Your sentence should read some one who has not been introduced to her," for a gentleman is introduced to a lady.)

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Our Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

TOMORROW will be shining, tomorrow will be bright, its hours will hold all lovely things that fashion heart's delight. No shadows there will linger, but, ever sweet and gay, tomorrow will be tinted with the dreams we dream today. For we are ever weaving the fabric of the years, we make it bright with laughter, we make it drab with tears. We flood it with the sunbeams of hope's celestial rays, we lend to it the glamour of youth's enchanted ways. And all fair thoughts we garner the while we journey on will be glad memories to grace tomorrow's golden dawn. We need not doubt nor dread it, the time that is to be; we need not fear to fathom its hidden mystery. For each shapes his tomorrow in pattern grave or gay with all the dreams and all the deeds he dreams and does today!

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Mac Sends Jill Away

"I SAID you were going to—belong to me," MacNeil Shannon told Jill.

His voice was not quite steady. The girl shook him, stirred him strangely and almost terribly. She was fragrant, delicious, heady. She had come to him of her own accord. She had given herself to his arms, responded to his kisses, answered his demand. He had no intention of letting her go.

ANN LISLE

The heir to the Shannon millions stood in his duplex suite of the new hotel Shannon and looked at the girl he had met at Beppo's earlier in the week—the girl who was Carmen of the cigarette tray then.

"Do you love me?" something impelled him to ask as she stood staring at him with parted lips and starry eyes.

"I told Folly you were just my friend," Jill said. "But you seem to be much more. Oh, so much more. You seem to be everything. Is it very warm in here? I'm so dizzy."

"You're faint with longing," MacNeil Shannon said, curtly.

Again the question in her eyes. He wished she wouldn't look like that. She was so lovely and he wanted her so terribly, but he couldn't take her while she made him think of a little woodland animal peering out at the world from a covert of leaves.

"Look here," he said abruptly. "Did you think you meant it when you pulled that stuff about—being married to the man you love?"

"I told my guardian you were old enough to be my father," Jill confessed honestly. "But I didn't understand then. And anyway I never seem to want Folly to know what's really going on in my heart. I thought it was so when I told her. You don't mind?"

"I don't mind anything as long as it doesn't rob me of you, you darling," he said grimly and with a sudden move to close her into his arms again.

"Do you love me so much?" she asked.

"Enough," he said grimly.

"The right way?" she urged shyly.

"What's the right way? I want you. I'm mad for you. I can hardly wait to hold you close—closer than you dream——"

"Folly old me never to let myself care for a man until I was sure he cared the right way."

He pulled himself up short. His lips were stern and the steel glint came back to eyes that had been lambent with something that did not hint of steel.

"What is the right way?" he demanded, and he spoke so sternly that Jill sounded like a frightened little girl as she told him:

"She said he must care the right way and want to make me his wife."

"Who said?" he cried in irritation that was mostly at himself for his scruples, for his temporizing.

"Folly! She's my guardian. She's the only one who stood by when my mother's family cast her off. I don't know who they are or who I really am."

"So you haven't even a name," he said, half under his breath. And something stirred in his heart and asked him how he could ever look himself in the face again if he harmed this nameless, motherless child. And at the same time something stirred in his mind and bade him beware and not get tangled up in his sympathies and his sentiment, since it certainly would not do for the heir to the Shannon interests to find himself too deeply interested in a little nobody.

Jill didn't know that snobbery and chivalry were fighting a battle for her. She only knew that MacNeil Shannon, of the iron-gray hair and the steel-gray eyes, was the most wonderful man in the world, and that love had come to her with his kiss.

And MacNeil Shannon was remembering how agitated Vivian Scarlett had been at sight of the lovely girl with the cigarette tray—the girl who looked so much like Mrs. Roy Scarlett herself. He scented mystery—scandal. He had a suspicion he didn't care to entertain. He realized that this wasn't the sort of thing the Shannon Hotel ought to be mixed up in. His lovely, dainty, exquisite mother out in California shouldn't be soiled by the sort of thing this might turn out to be if he let himself in too deep.

"So you haven't even a name," he repeated grimly.

"I'll have yours," she said—and smiled.

The smile twisted around his heart-strings. It made him want her so terribly that he was faint with longing. And he had only to reach out his arms and take her. She was his—his for the taking. He took her hands in his and looked at her very gently. But his voice rasped like rusty metal as he spoke.

"No, you wouldn't have my name, Little Jill. A man like me—doesn't marry a girl like you—even if he promises he will. I'd promise you anything tonight. But tomorrow I'd fail you. Tomorrow you would be the beggar at my gate—not the queen giving me her perfect gift. Run—Little Jill—run, while I have the decency to let you go."

"Why should I go," she whispered, "when we love each other so?"

"It isn't love," he said. "It's desire. You must learn the difference, Jill. We don't belong together. You are too young. You are too sweet. And our worlds and values are too many miles apart. Even marriage wouldn't be quite fair to you. And I have no intention of marrying you," he added brusquely.

He took her hand, he led her to the elevator, he rode down and got a cab for her and gave the taxi driver a dollar to take her safely wherever she might be going.

Jill was at the end of her journey before she realized that she had forgotten her tulle scarf.

HYACINTHS FOR THE SOUL

("If I had two pennies for bread, I would take one penny and buy hyacinths for my soul."—Oriental Philosophy.)

I went a-marketing today,
My pantry shelves to fill,
But I came home, I grieve to say,
With pots of daffodil.

I meant to spend my pennies there
For vegetables and meat—
But oh, the flower shops were so fair
And smelled so fresh and sweet!

I stood and weighed a posy's charms
Against a lettuce head;
And then I filled my hungry arms
With hyacinths instead.

My house is full of perfumed bloom,
But ah, I feel a sinner!
My family, in deepest gloom,
Ate bread and milk for dinner!

Employes of Bradford Supply Company Picinc

Employes of the Bradford Supply company enjoyed a picnic and swimming party at Cedar Park pool Sunday evening. Beef Prices On the Up Grade

TEXAS is one of the greatest of meat producing states. There is a vast amount of money invested in beef, or rather in the livestock industry. Now a bulletin issued by the United States department of agriculture carries the gratifying news to the cowmen that beef cattle are commanding the highest prices since 1920, and all other grades of cattle are participating in the general advance.

And the verdict of the federal experts of the department is, that the cattle industry in the United States is faced with very favorable conditions. Furthermore the trend in production, according to the bulletin, appears to be downward toward a more profitable basis, and the industry apparently is approaching that phase of production when the grower, "feeling confident of the future, begins to build up herds, retain stock for the full utilization of available pasture and range and hold young stock for further growth and finish."

It is said that the livestock industry of Texas represents an investment of $500,000,000 and it is known that in 1920 and 1921 those engaged in the industry were face to face with disaster. Hundreds weathered the storm; hundreds were pinched in the pocket as they had never been pinched before.

Texas cattlemen are not quitters. They tightened their belts. They faced the future with courageous hearts. They pocketed their losses. Now the fat years are coming if the agents of the federal department of agriculture know whereof they speak or issue bulletins dealing with the livestock industry the country over.

A Hoosier City Redeemed

INDIANAPOLIS is one of the rich and fast growing cities of the middle west. It is the capital of the Hoosier state. It has been ruled by the machine politicians of first one party and then the other for 50 years. Col. Tom Taggert was its ruler for ten years. Then the Taggert machine was broken. A Republican machine friendly to Jim Watson came in. Then the regular machine was broken and the Republican Ku Klux Klan machine captured the offices of a great city. It was a spoils machine from start to finish. Its leaders placed the offices where they would do the most good for the invisible empire politician.

Mr. Independent Citizen carried the load for three years, then he revolted. He organized. He clamored for the city manager form of government. Thousands rallied to the flag of Mr. Independent Citizen. They demanded their city should be taken out of the hands of political spoilsmen. They forced the issue. They brought about a referendum or election on the proposal. What happened? Well, the spoilsmen of Indianapolis were buried. It wasn't a slaughter. It was a massacre.

When the ballots had been counted advocates of the change in municipal government were victorious in the special referendum by a more than five to one ratio. Really the returns were electrifying to all friends of the city manager plan. There are 237 precincts in the city, and 236 of the 237 gave a total of 52,969 for the commission manager plan and 9789 against the plan.

One by one the municipal political bosses fall in American cities. One by one the champions of the spoils system are relegated to private life. Cincinnati has the city manager plan. Cleveland has the plan. Now Indianapolis has repudiated the spoils system and sent its advocates to the political graveyard.

There must be something really worth while in a system that captures the best minds of a city like Indianapolis, in the old Hoosier state.

Where the Pace Is Swift

OKLAHOMA lawmakers before adjournment gave the commonwealth a new speed law. Maximum of the old law was 35 miles an hour. Maximum of the new law is 45 miles an hour. This on the slate highways. Texas has a maximum of 35 miles. There are speeders who step on the gas and make a record of 60 miles an hour.

This is the flying age. There are people now on earth who regret that it is not the ox-cart age. They walk in the same old ruts where their grandfathers walked.

Primary Law Knocked Out

ILLINOIS has had a primary election law for a number of years. Lawmakers who drafted it must have provided the blow holes. It was given a test and failed to run the gauntlet of the supreme court of the state. That august body declared the law unconstitutional on the ground that equal and unhampered right of suffrage is denied to the people of the state of Abraham Lincoln and those who came after him.

The Illinois legislature is not in session. Len Small is governor.

He will be a candidate for re-election next year, that is if he wins the renomination. Why should he call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of drafting a new law?

Len is a politician. He knows the tricks of the trade. He has worked all along the line.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON ROSCOE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

NEW YORK, June 27. (EFS.)—When Lindbergh was signed up by the New York Times, before he left for Paris, to write the story of his flight, the Times offered him $5000 for his daily stories, an offer contingent, of course upon his reaching Europe safely; because if he disappeared like Nungesser and Coli there would be no story.

Lindbergh, then unused to large sums of money as he is now, was somewhat afraid that the offer was too generous and wanted to know if the Times would not get some of the money back. "There are ways of syndicating such articles, aren't there?" he asked, "so you may get some of the money back?"

There were; but there were few orders for the story from other newspapers until the word came in that Lindbergh had been seeen off the coast of Ireland. Then the Times was deluged with orders.

The Times has turned over to Lindbergh the profits on the series of articles. The profits to date amount to over $60,000.

* * *

F. P. A. and some of the other columnists of New York have doubted that Lindbergh wrote the articles about his flight and his reception abroad. They have suggested that it is physically impossible for a person whose days have been so crowded as Lindbergh's have, to find the time to write the articles. They have given it as their opinion that Lindbergh told what he wanted to say and that the latter did the actual writing.

Well, Lindbergh did the seemingly impossible once in flying from New York to Paris. He has done the seemingly impossible thing of writing all his distractions. Manuscripts of his articles are in the Times office, nearly every word of which is in his own handwriting. Some paragraphs he dictated to a stenographer.

* * *

Walter Winchell relates this story of a local Lucy Stone Leaguer, a Lucy Stone Leaguer being (if you have forgotten) a married woman who refuses to merge her identity with that of her husband by adopting his name and insists upon being called "Miss" and her maiden name:

Alison Smith, who is a member of the Lucy Stone league, is married to Russel Crouse, a writer. At a party recently she started to introduce her husband to a group She said: "Meet my husband, Mr.—er—Mr.—er.."

'Mr. Crouse,' interrupted her husband, handing her his card.

* * *

The puzzling point is that Alison Smith is not Russel Crouse's wifes maiden name. Her first husband was named Smith.

Ernest Boyd says that the Lucy Stone League was an organization of women who were fighting for the rights of married women to be mistaken for unmarried women.

Promenades of an impressionist: There is an illuminated globe on top of the Paramount theater building which glows with a white light, except that on every quarter of an hour it turns into a red four separate times. . . Then Prince Albert electric sign at Columbus circle burns all day most of the time because someone forgets to switch it off. . . Ever since Lindbergh said that New York had the finest police force he had ever seen, the New York cops have been spick and span and their chests are out a couple of inches beyond normal. . . The cops did handle that crowd pretty well, considering the fact that their clubs were taken away from them for the day by the police commissioner. . . Still, one reporter had to show his pass 10 times in one block to as many policemen. . . . The radio audience heard, but the newspapers did not report the chatter that went on between the speakers at the big dinner at the Commodore hotel for Lindbergh after Dr. Finley corrected Mayor Walker's mistake in grammar. Charles Evans Hughes and Al Smith began by admitting, when they got up, that their speeches were ungrammatical. . . A well-known English author-lecturer confides to me that out of his various lecture toures of the country, each successful as such things go, he has barely made expenses; but he has had a chance to see the country. . . The Dutch Treat club is so accustomed to having only the cream of entertainment and talkers speak at the clubs Tuesday luncheons that whenever a guest puts on a poor show, the club members refuse to be any too polite about it. And if you appear before the Dutch Treat club you must come prepared to take a kidding, if any of the members are inclined to do it.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Phillip Wynne Tracy IV had had a childish engagement with Natlee Jones. Then he becomes interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's and finds he is falling in love with her.

America enters the World war and Phillip Tracy and Rodney Maxwell are the first to enlist. They go to a training camp.

While in New York Phil meets Natlee and their love flaming anew, they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this.

Phil's regiment is sent to the front soon after arriving in France and Phil is detailed on an extremely dangerous mission. Returning with important information, he is wounded and Rod is killed trying to save his friend. Phil wakes in a hospital and receives the croix de guerre for bravery.

At last he rejoints his outfit in the Argonne woods, but he looks so ill that he is sent to a motor school in the south of France, and while there armistic is declared.

Phil is sent, with orders, up to Coblenz, Germany. His mother, Anne Tracy, in the meantime has been at death's door with flu, and while convalecing, Major Aukland tries to persuade Anne to marry him. Anne will not give him an answer until she can hear from Phil, and to that end decides to go to France to hunt him.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XLI.

"Oh, Natlee, You Have Bobbed Your Beautiful Hair."

A Thrilled Moment.

That evening Mrs. Tracy sent a telegram to Natlee. "Am leaving the last of next week for Germany to see if I can find Phillip. Will you come over before I leave? He will want to know all about you.

Anne Tracy."

The next day she received the rather crytic answer: "I am not so sure that you are right about Phil's interest in me and my affairs, but I will come to see you, my dear Mrs. Tracy, on next Sunday.

"Natlee."

Phil's mother had not seen Natlee for any length of time since he had gone to the training camp, and she found that the Natlee Jones she had known and remembered since her childhood was very different from the young woman who was ushered into the sitting room of her suite at the hospital.

In the first place, she rather disapproved of the short skirt Natlee was wearing, especially as the girl seemed perfectly unaware that when she crossed her legs, which she did when Mrs. Tracy motioned her to a chair, she showed an inch or two of exquisitely lovely flesh and a dimple or two in her knees above her rolled-down stockings.

"Dear Mrs. Tracy, may I take off my hat?" she asked. "It is rather close-fitting and hot to keep on in the atmosphere of an invalid's room."

"Oh, Natlee, you have bobbed your beautiful hair,' exclaimed Anne in distress. "I am afraid Phil will be heart-broken, for he always loved your hair almost as much as he loved you."

Even while she was saying it, Phil's mother could not help but note how charming her shorn locks had made Natlee Jones' well-shaped head. When her hair was long, she had always worn it in distinctively plain bands.

Now, however, the soft gold curls which framed her face, and her short, tight skirt, made her look like a child of about 4. She was more beautiful than ever.

She had contrived to lose all the seriousness and grown-up airs that had always made her seem much older than fun-loving, irresponsible Phillip. Today she could be called one of those regular "flappers" of which the papers were writing so much.

Almost the first words she said to Anne Tracy were: "They tell me that this trip of yours to find Wynne is to bring your great happiness."

Anne froze, and then she thought Natlee could not possibly be referring to her friendship with Major Aukland.

"You know, Natlee,' she explained, "that will depend upon how I find him since I received a letter written at the hospital, just as he was going up to his outfit in the Argonne. When I think of how many things might have happened to him between that time and the hour the guns ceased firing—my heart stops."

"Even if you do find tragedy, when you hope to find joy, my dear Mrs. Tarcy, I think you would be very sensible to go as Major Aukland's wire. He would help you bear sorrow as well as make your happiness complete in either circumstance."

Anne Huntington Tracy sat up very straight on her chaise longue. No one had ever dared to pry into her affairs in this way.

"What shall I tell Phillip, Natlee?" she asked, abruptly, changing the subject.

"Whatever you please," answered Natlee, in a way that made Phil's mother understand that she, too, considered her personal affairs inviolate.

However, Mrs. Tracy would not be satisfied with that. She determined to take some message from Natlee to her boy. She asked bluntly: "Do you love Phil, Natlee?"

"I thought I did once," answered the girl honestly, "but now I do not know and I will not know until I see him again.

"This war, Mrs. Tracy, has made such changes not only in my life but in my outlook on life, I've got to see Wynee before I can plan for the future. You can tell him that, if you like."

Thus Phillip Wynee Tracy's mother and his sweetheart, Natlee Jones, sat close and looked into each other's eyes, but they were as far apart and as blind to each other's thoughts as though there were miles between them.

Jerome Kenyon came later to take Natlee to the train, and Mrs. Tracy could not help seeing with what possessive care he helped her on with her coat and how he held her hand a second or two longer than was necessary.

He had only eyes for her. He loved her and was already planning on making her his wife. Of Natlee's emotions Phil's mother was not so sure.

All the way across the ocean Anne Tracy had the feeling that she was pushing the boat. So acute was this impression that her arms grew very lame with the tension in which she held them.

"Mrs. Tracy," remarked the captain, who stopped beside her chair one morning so early that there was no one on deck but themselves, "you must have someone on the other side that you are very impatient to see. You give me the impression that you are trying always to will the ship to go faster than I can make it go under steam."

"I think perhaps that's true, Captain," she answered. "I'm going over to find my boy, from whom I have not heard since a week before the armistice.

"Well, you'll be in Paris tomorrow night, and it will be but a comparatively few hours when you see him," prophesied the captain comfortably.

"Perhaps," murmured Anne Tracy, just above her breath, and then she hated herself that she had allowed a doubt of his safety for a moment to creep in by using that fateful word, "perhaps."

The interminable hours at last passed and she was met in Paris by Major Aukland, who had already arranged for her rooms at the Ritz, where, after the usual delay, her baggage was sent...

"I want to go to the war office and get my passes for Coblenz immediately, John," were her first words to the man whose whole face was alight with joy at seeing her again, even after so brief a separation.

Arriving there, Anne found that the major had again made things easy for her, and after she had signed some papers, she was told that the passes would be ready for her in the morning.

"Now, impatient woman, I'll take you to the hotel," he said, "and after you have rested and we have dined, I'm going to prescribe for you rest and sleep, if possible."

Inside the Cafe de Paris, however, there seemed to be much gayety. Anne watched it almost with irritation.

"You have not eaten anything," said John Aukland, as she thirstily drank her coffee at the end of the dinner. "May I get —"

"Have you never realized, John," she interrupted, "that time cannot be measured by anything that is scientifically accurate?

"Hours shrink and expand in a most miraculous way for all of us. Tonight the minutes to me seem tiny obstacles that are holding the long hours back instead of pushing them ahead.

"I had hoped that you, at least, would be hungry enough to have lingered over this dinner, but my watch tells me now that we have been here less than an hour.

"I can't stand it any longer, John,' she whispered tensely. "I cannot stand the sight of these people laughing and eating gayly. Take me back to the hotel."

"Don't call a taxi. I'd much rather walk," she said, laying her hand on his sleeve. "I must be doing something. I could not sit in a taxi."

Still without speaking, the major pulled the quivering hand that rested on his coat, under his arm and held it there.

It seemed to Anne that all the young lovers who were still alive were telling themselves that they must make up for those endless years of waiting and carnage through which they had just passed.

At least they reached the Ritz. I'll come for you in the morning, about 10, and we will go for the pasases," said the major.

Anne bowed her head. She hardly sensed anything except that she would have to wait another day before starting for Germany.

When she was ready for bed, for the first time in her life she opened her personal medicine kit and found a pellet to make her sleep.

She awakened late the next morninng, for which she was truly grateful.

Leaving word for Major Aukland to meet her at the war office, she hurried there, found her passes and met him, just as she came through the door into the outer office. Almost gayly she railed him on looking ill.

"That's not important," he said, "beside the fact that you're looking better than I've seen you in months."

"It's because of these, John," she said, and she held before him her precious passes and reservations.

"At last I shall know, and I have found out that anything is preferable to uncertainty."

Unconsciously they turned into the Rue de Rivoli.

"I would like to see you when you first meet Phil, Anne."

She turned quickly to the man beside her. "Don't, John, don't tempt the Fates. I don't know how I've possibly been able to endure the anguish of Phil's absence, and now, John, I am afraid—afraid"—and then, as though she would not allow herself to doubt—"of the ecstacy of our reunion."

"Well, I'll be damned," an awed young voice clanged against her ears, and Anne Huntington Tracy looked up directly into her son's face.

(To Be Continued.)

How will Mrs. Tracy react to the change in Phil? And how will he take to Major Aukland? Find out tomorrow.

WAURIKA SOCIETY

Special to The Record News.

WAURIKA, Okla., June 26.—Mrs. Estill Lawless entertained four tables of players at a bridge luncheon at her home Wednesday at 1 o'clock, honoring a number of Lawton ladies who were house guests. Baskets of garden flowers were used to decorate the tables and various nooks. Favors of hand made handkerchiefs were laid at places. Mrs. True made high points and Mrs. Roten high honors for the out-of-town guests and Mrs. Cummins had high points and Mrs. Watkins high honors for the intown guests.

Those enjoying this beautifully appointed party were Mesdames True, Roten, Begley, Hankins, Dameron, Peterson, Powell, Fender, Gartrell and Powello of Lawton. Waurika guests were Mesdames Watkins, Landon, Cummins, Pittman, Dennis, Murphy, J. S. Cole and E. B. Patton the latter two being luncheon guests.

At her pleasant home profuse with flowers, Mrs. Gail Durham entertained with a beautifully appointed bridge party honoring Mrs. Ray Powell of Lawton who was house guest of her mother, Mrs. W. E. Alexander through the week.

In the games of bridge, Mrs. R. R. Pruett had high points and Mrs. D. M. Bridges, high honors, both were rewarded with lovely prizes as was the honor guest.

A delicious ice course was served at the close of the evening. Those invited were: Mesdames Kitchen, Alexander, Pittman, Dawson, Bridges, Murphy, Cummins, Jasper, Lawless, Landon, Dunn, Stuard, Johnston, Pruett, Heacock, Ellis and Mrs. Powell, the guest of honor.

At 10:30 a. m. Thursday a very beautiful wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Green, when their daughter, Mary Louise was given in marriage to Everett Neptune of Lawton.

A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in the decorations. The doorway between the living room and dining room was draped with ferns and daisies making a very pretty arch under which the vows were read.

Miss Rebecca Green was the bride's only attendant while Hubert Stuart of Lawton was best man. Rev. J. P. Neal, pastor of the Baptist church read the impressive service using the ring ceremony.

The bride was attired in white georgette with matching accessories while the bridesmaid wore a beautiful yellow afternoon gown.

After the ceremony the happy couple left for Kansas City to be gone two weeks, after their return they will be at home to their many friends at Lawton where the groom is manager of J. C. Penny store.

MEMPHS PERSONALS

MEMPHIS, June 28.—The Presbyterian missionary society met in regular session June 20 with Mrs. Joe Grundy. The meeting was opened with prayer by the president. After the business meeting, Mrs. Brewer, who leades for the day, read the scripture followed by prayer by Mrs. Arnold. Interesting talks on the Philippine Islands were given by Mrs. Sager, Mrs. Kittinger, Mrs. Brewer and Mrs. McNeely.

During the social hour at which time lovely ices were served, We enjoyed visiting with old friends and members who were our guests at this meeting.

The Christine Allen missionary society met at the home of Mrs. T. C. Delaney Monday, June 20, at 6 o'clock, with a luncheon served on the lawn. Mrs. John Lofland conducted the Bible lesson followed by a business meeting. Miss Bess Norwood of Arlington was the guest on this occasion. Those present were Misses Byrd Pressler, Frankie Allison, Verna Crump, Ira Hammond, Neville Wrenn, Ophelia Webb, Hazel Delaney and Mesdames John Lofland, Frank K. Fore, Mack Tarver, Duvol Grundy and T. C. Delaney.

On Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Will Kesterson the Ladies Aid society of the First Christian church, entertained the ladies of the church with a seated tea, honoring the girls who had returned home from school.

Mrs. Kesterson was assisted in receiving by Mrs. W. H. Wallace and Mrs. J. G. Gardner. The home was beautiful with ferns, roses and other summer flowers which made a very appropriate setting for the following program:

Valse de Concert—Cornelia McCanne and Mrs. R. C. Howerton.

Reading, "One, Two, Three," by Versa Odom.

Piano, "Dance of the Winds," by Bernice Bean.

Voice, "Night Divine" by Margaret Milam and Versa Odom.

WELL, WELL

The unusual in sports: Any guy who can sit atop a grandstand and call plays at first base more accurately than the umpire not more than five feet off the play.

• • •

NOW, NOW, NOW

J. Tucker, the voluble Waco linotyper, emits a cluster of loud squawks over decisions turned in by Umphs Christian during that last Spudder-Cub affair in Waco the other day. Yurbles the Wacoan in part, "After losing two straight games to the Cubs, Umpire Christian presented the Wichita Falls Spudders the third game on a silver platter."

• • •

GRAB HIM, QUICK!

You have to take your hat off to Doak Roberts, at last, for if Jinx' accusation of Christian be true, finally there has been discovered an umpire in the Texas league who is not a "homer," meaning an arbiter who doesn't give all the breaks to the home club out of fear of the home grandstand. For years we've sat back and watched Texas league indicators trim visiting clubs on close plays, invariably favoring the team at home. It has remained for Tucker to uncover the first umps who fearlessly gives the edge to the defenseless visiting club.

• • •

It is rumored, the Texas league is going to cut off two of its arbiting staff and sign Tucker instead, the Wacoan to work his games unaided, so efficient is he at calling the plays. Doak Roberts figures that if Tucker can decide plays at first and second bases from the Waco press coop, he surely will find no difficulty in making his decisions from hebind the plate or pitcher's box, thereby needing no second umpire to handle the bases. Tucker, of course, will be paid double salary.

• • •

The wailing Wacoan yammers Christian beat the Cubs out of a run in one stanza by calling a Waco player out when he was safe and gave Wichita Falls a run later by calling a Wichita Falls player safe when he in reality was out. Perhaps Tucker is correct. Perhaps Christian missed both plays, but Tucker, sitting in the Waco stand or on top in the press coop cannot know whether he did or did not. Tucker may THINK he knows, but Tucker's eyes are no better than anybody else's, and Tucker's eyes cannot see a play at 50 to 60 yards better than an umpire at five to eight feet.

• • •

Every umpire makes his mistakes. But it's foolish for a layman to sit up in the grandstand and try to call 'em better than the umphs. It just naturally cannot be done.

• • •

BANG!

Tucker is rather explicit in his demands. You may give him credit, if any, for that. Wurbs he, "It is the duty of Doak Roberts to hire and fire the Texas league umpires. After getting the facts of yesterday's miserable exhibition by Christian in the role of umpire, the president of the Texas league should oust the umpire or be ousted himself for tolerating such inefficiency, etc., etc., etc." Goodbye, Doak.

• • •

Zero in sports: The great, big, handsome chunk of "masculinity" attending athletic event who devotes major portion of time familiarly lamping pretty gal across the way and sneaking smirks while fem's escort is engrossed in what be paid the entrance fee to see.

• • •

For every masher and breezy corner athlete there are 'steen hemales who can spank the pants off him at the first hint of provocation.

• • •

There is no tough guy so tough that if he keeps hunting around won't bump into another guy just a bit tougher.

• • •

Putting a twist to Ruby Robert's adage: The bigger they are the easier they are to hit.

• • •

Matty May Turn and Fight

Reminders of the Reynolds-Matsuda controversy. Reynolds, after going into San Angelo, nudging out a close victory over Jack Gorman and placarding the place, one of Matsuda's "home" towns, with defies and taunts, appears on the verge of forcing Matsuda into the ring again. The Indiana hurry-up grappler is making it hard for Matty to keep a straight face and earn money at the same time.

• • •

Dr. J. H. Fletcher, for years a close follower of the game, sees little opportunity for boxing to flourish in Wichita Falls. He declares the milk and ice fund program staged here Thursday warranted a $5,000 house. Instead, several of the boxers and promoters lost money on the venture. When you bring in boys of the class who appeared on the charity card and can't draw a profitable gate, you can't expect to do much with an ordinary card, Fletcher avers. The doc, however, says he would like to see another show here, if not as good, almost as good as the last one.

GET THE GLASSES

Alex Metzler hit four for four and two out of five in a doubleheader yesterday. Still wearing White Sox spangles. Wonder what's become of the sports writer who told his readers the Hosiery concern purchased Wilson from Waco to take Metzler's place?

JEEMS GETS SMITH

PITTSBURGH, Mass., June 27. (AP)—The Pittsfield club of the Eastern league has sent Marvin Smith, former Philadelphia American shortstop, to Beaumont of the Texas league. Pittsfield has signed "Brick" Wilder, catcher, who has been with Shreveport o fthe Texas league.

BUFFS KICK US OVER, 14 TO O

Houston Bats Do Overtime Drill On Two Boxmen

HOUSTON, June 27.—All the loop-leading Spudders had Monday was a grand "stall," and with Fred Frankhouse in excellent form the Buffaloes knocked their ears down, 14 to 0. After Manager Joe Mathis' men had clouted out five runs in the initial frame, the Spudders realized their only hope was the low-hanging threatening clouds, and they proceeded to employ dilatory tactics that would have put to shame the most consumate masters of filibustering in the United States senate. Twice the game had to be halted because of heavy showers and with each halt a groan went up from the big crowd that sounded like the roll of thunder. But finally the sun came out, showing there's justice in the vale of tears, after all, and the full game was played.

The proud league leaders were held to a total of four hits, LaFayette, Lamb, Jenkins and Tobin each getting one. Tobin's was a three-bagger that furnished the only real Wichita Falls threat of the afternoon.

Start Early.

Houston pounded Steengrafe met disaster in the first inning and before the rush was stemmed, five runs had been scored by Houston. Powell opened with a triple to center and scored on Hock's grounder to short that Benton fumbled, giving Hock a life. Orsatti forced Hock to second. Roettger singled to left, Orsatti making third. Taylor walked, loading the cushions. Henry doubled to center and all three runners scored. Henry stole third and scored when Warwick singled to center. Kane popped out to second and Kane forced Warwick at second.

Houston scored two more in the third inning, Taylor and Henry opening with singles. Warwick flied out to center and the runners each advanced a base after the catch. Kane beat out a bunt to the mound, scoring Taylor and sending Henry to third. Kane stole second. Frankhouse rolled to the pitcher and Henry was thrown out between third and home plate. Powell singled through the box. It was a bad-hop ball, scoring Kane. Hock retired with a hoist to Fitzgerald in center.

Back in Fourth and Fifth.

Houston came back for three more runs in the fourth inning doubles by Orsatti and Roettger knocking Steengrafe from the hill. Lefty Kallina took up the task, but fared no better. Taylor walked. Roettger stole third and Henry grounded out to short, Rottger scoring. Warwick fanned. Kane beat out an infield hit. Kane was caught off first, but Taylor scored.

Houston scored three times in the fifth, also. Frankhouse grounded out, but Powell doubled to left. Hock hit to Benton. Benton threw to third after Powell but Powell returned to second safely. Orsatti singled to right. Powell scored. Roettger doubled to left, scoring Roettger and Orsatti. Taylor and Henry retired by flying out to left.

Houston closed its scoring in the eighth inning when two bases on balls with a single by Henry and an infield forceout sent a run across.

The final game of the series is scheduled for Tuesday.

SHIPPERS 10, SPORTS 2.

BEANMONT, June 27. (AP)—The Exporters snapped out of their losing streak today, playing a bang up game both in the field and at bat to win the second game of the Sports series, 10 to 2. Lefty Darrough allowed two runs in the first inning but was not scored on thereafter. Galloway smashed out his fifteenth home run of the season, driving the first ball by Dick Robertson out of the park. Three sparkling double plays contributed to Shreveport's defeat while the visitors on the hand, played loose baseball. The score:

JUST NATURALLY ABHORS THIS HERE FILTHY LUCRE

BERKELEY, Cal., June 27. (AP)—Helen Wills would not turn professional for $500,000, her father, Dr. C. A. Wills, declared here today when told of the $40,000 contract awaiting his daughter's signature in England.

"Helen would not accept the offer," Dr. Willis said, "she turned down a $210,000 movie offer last year and she would do the same if offered $500,000."

Tilden Defeats French Net Star

WIMBLEDON, June 27. (AP)—One bright ray of sunshine for Americans amid rain and gloomy skies at the opening of the second week of Wimbledon's tennis tournament today was William T. Tildan's victory over Jacques Brugnon of France. Tilden won in four sets, and the last two were stiffly contested. The American by winning was the first among 128 entries in the men's singles to reach the semi-finals. The score was 6-3, 6-1, 3-6, 7-5.

The other Franco-American match between Henri Cochet and Francis T. Hunter, was postponed owing to the rain.

Helen Wills and Elizabeth Ryan, paired in the women's doubles, defeated Miss B. C. Covell and Gwendolin R. Sterry, 6-2, 6-3, thereby reaching the third round.

YANKEES TAKE MACKS IN TOW

Ruether, Aided by Pennock, Scores 6-2 Win

NEW YORK, June 27. (AP)—Dutch Ruether pitched the Yankees to a 6-2 victory over Philadelphia today in the fifth game of the series. Sharp fielding by the New York team enabled Ruether to hold the visitors scoreless until the ninth, but in that inning, two singles and a walk filled the bases, and Ruether forced in a run with another pass. Pennock took up the pitching burden and checked the rally.

Home runs beat Ehmke, who started on the mound for the Mackmen. Combs hit for the circuit in the first inning and Lazzeri duplicated the performance in the fourth with Meusel on base. The score:

SOX SPLIT WITH TRIBE.

CHICAGO, June 27. (AP)—Chicago and Cleveland divided a double header here today, the White Sox hammering out a 7 to 2 victory in the first game and the Indians turning the tables on them in the second encounter, 12 to 4. Lyons was master of the Indians in the first game, but Southpaw Bert Cole, and his relief pitcher, Charley Barnabe, were shelled for 19 hits by the Indians in the second game. The score:

Lives Up to The McDonalds

As a namesake of the famous Pat McDonald, Miss Rena McDonald is living up to the monogrammed traditions by heaving the weight in Pat's footsteps. She recently shoved the shot with a put of 28 feet and 8 inches, which is a new record in competition during the woman's track and field meet at Dorchester, Mass.

BIG GAME TODAY.

The Scotland Plumbers and Continental Oilers will go into action this afternoon in Katy park at five bells. The Plumbers have been given a bad start in the Twilight league, but they will be battling to renew their lost ground this afternoon and a great fight is expected.

Long Tom Hall, ace of the Plumber staff, will be on the hill. Gabe Harris will be pitted against him.

• • •

DALLAS TEAM INVADES.

Baseball fans who do not journey to Fort Forth July 4 to see Spudders and Panthers clash will be given the opportunity of witnessing a set of topnotch amateurs play at Spudder park. The fast Schepp's Bakers of Dallas, first half champs of the Merchants' league, battle the Continental and Texas Electrics in a double header Sunday and the Panhandle in a double header Monday. The Wichita Falls' teams will receive their first real tests of the season, for it is quite possible the Wichita Falls champion will have to meet the Bakers in play for the Texas amateur crown this summer.

• • •

HE'S TOO ROUGH.

Coyal Francis gave the boys a mark to shoot at Sunday in the Kilowatt-Muny Gassers game when he slammed six hits in six times at bat. Nobody else has connected that many times in a row so far the current scramble. Many more plays like that and Francis should be topping the league in batting.

• • •

Jud Waller, recent entry into the league, however, appears on the verge of giving 'em all a battle for hitting laurels.

• • •

WHOLESALE ROBBERY.

It's seldon, even in amateur games, one witnesses such a stunt as Fritz Taylor pulled in Sunday's Twilight game, stealing second, stealing third and then deliberately stealing home. Taylor isn't built like any reindeer, either. In fact, looks pretty pudgy around the waist line.

• • •

AT NOCONA.

The Panhandle Longhorns bumped into a mighty sweet little ball club in Nocona the past week-end. The best part of the Nocona team is little Shorty Radford on shortstop. Radford is a fast fielder and looked like a good hitter. He turned in several plays during the two-game series that bordered on the sensational.

• • •

One may not be superstitous about black cats and one thing or another but there is one superstition that panned out in Nocona Saturday. With the scores 7 to 1 in favor of the Panhandle and two Nocona men out, Snipe Connally started putting the bats in the bag. This is a sign of hard luck and it certainly happened when Stone hit one to right center and Johnny McMahan turned his ankle chasing the ball and had to be carried from the field.

• • •

The feature performance of the Panhandle games in Nocona was staged by Roy Cannon. The big fellow was right in the middle of things Saturday and his knuckle ball and fast ones were too puzzling for the Nonona nine. It looked like the same Cannon of old in there.

• • •

Another bit of nice pitching was brought out in that O'Dell McDuffy looked like his old self. Mac went into the game in the seventh to pitch two innings. They scored one run off him, but in an inning in which the Longhorns were charged with four errors. Mac also had a great time in a fielding way. He fielded his position in great style.

Kauffman Meets Brown Thursday

Mat Program Postponed Several Days

Clete Kauffman, Dallas, versus Pete Brown, Mexico City. Middleweights, two falls to a finish.

Young Fox, Dallas, versus Lee Johnson, Oklahoma City. Welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Dave Wade versus George Carpenter. Middleweights, one fall to a finish.

Black Dummy versus Tuffy Robinson. Negro boxers, six rounds.

Time: Thursday night.

Place: Ross stadium.

The wrestling gentry in weekly show will not perform Tuesday night at the Ross stadium as per usual, according to Matchmaker A. B. Ross, but will work next Thursday with Clete Kauffman, who long has sought a whack at Charley Grip, tackling Pete Brown, the Mexican jiu jitsu exponent, in finish match as the feature.

Two newcomers in Fox and Johnson appear on the card while Wade and Carpenter go to it in a return squabble.

The negroes, Black Dummy and Tuffy Robinson, are expected to put up a whirlwind fight.

Poloists Book Match Games

Wichita Falls poloists will invade Fort Reno for match games Sunday and Tuesday a week from next, it was announced yesterday. The Wichita Falls horses already are in Fort Reno.

Wichita Falls with only two local players in the line-up lost a hot 6-5 practice game to the army outfit at Fort Reno Sunday.

Dr. J. H. Fletcher and Horace Robbins were the only Wichita Falls players who participated.

BEARS 7, CATS 4.

SAN ANTONIO, June 27. (AP)—Exhibiting the punch that characterized their play last month the Bears turned the tables on the Fort Worth Cats Monday when they won, 7 to 4, with Harry Brown in the role of home run hitter. Walter Newman silenced the Panther siege gun.

The Cats threatened seriously in the ninth inning when Newman filled the bases on walks, forcing in Bischoff after the latter had singled, but he struck out Doc Smith, sent in as a pinch hitter, and Jakie Hurt, ending the game. The score:

WACO 8, DALLAS 5.

WACO, June 27. (AP)—The Cubs made it two in a row from the Dallas Steers here today by pounding Owens for an 8 to 5 victory. Shores weakened in the eighth when the Steers scored four runs, but retired the side in order in the ninth. Vigare and Pratt hit homers. Shores sent Woeber to the bench four times via the strike-out route. Miller hit but once. West continued his batting with two singles and a double, while Pratt's circuit smash came with two on. Woman Haters Not So Smart As They Would Wish Us To Believe Answering Four Attacks on the Feminine Sex Made By a Woman-Hater—How Can a Country Woman Keep City Relations From Grafting Free Vacations?

Dear Miss Dix—A father has been lecturing his son and the inclosed quotations are a part of what he had to say:

"First. You are young. Therefore a fool. Remember that every woman is a confederacy of danger in your household. When the married man locks his door he has not closed out from his house his deadliest foe.

"Second. All women think while they are young. There is need for that. They use their brains until they have caught a husband. After that their minds go to sleep. It is better so. Rather an unfaithful wife than a thinking wife. Such creatures give a man no rest. And in our homes we should have peace.

"Third. A man believes (until he is old enough to know better) that he is the pursuer and woman the pursued in nearly every case is the woman, and when a woman has fully made up her mind to get a man he may possibly save himself if he does not want her by disappearing at once into the tall timber and then keep going, for once she has decided she wants him it matters not whether he be married or not, for she will cast all scruples aside to get the man she desires.

"Fourth. Never tell a woman anything in confidence, for as surely as you do and afterward quarrel with her she will use what you have said to her to your disadvantage and possibly ruin you if she can. The most sacred confidence will mean nothing to her in her anger."

So said the father to his son. The indictment appears to me to be a severe one. How much of it is really true? L. M. S.

Answer—The man who makes these charges against women must have been singularly unfortunate in the women he knew, for they do not apply to one woman out of ten thousand.

Indisputably there are predatory women, gold-diggers who rob a man and when his pockets are empty fling him aside as carelessly as they would a soiled glove. There are treacherous women who kiss and betray, selfish women, cruel women, women with hearts of ice. But these do not make up the bulk of the sex. Most women are tender and loving and faithful and loyal—worthy of everything that any man can give them.

To doubt too much is worse folly than to believe too much, and the man who teaches his son to look with suspicion upon every woman is not pointing out to him the path of wisdom, but the broad road to folly.

For not every woman is the confederacy of danger in the household. Nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand the wife is the guardian angel of it.

She is not her husband's deadliest foe. She is the one friend in all the world whom he can count upon to stand by him through good and evil report and to whom he can turn, sure of finding a haven in her arms, when every other human being has turned against him.

Certainly, women think while they are young. They continue to do so after they are old if they have any brains.

A man must be medieval in his views who prefers a wife who is merely a female animal to a woman of intelligence and culture who is capable of being a real companion to him.

Perhaps most women do most of the courting. Perhaps a woman does pursue the man she wants for a husband, and she does it stealthily because our idiotic conventions prevent her from coming out openly and popping the question to man if she wants him for a husband.

But what of that? Hasn't a woman just as much right to try to get the man she loves? What is there more shameful in a woman being attracted to a man than a man being attracted to a woman?

As for woman casting all scruples aside in pursuit of the man she desires, that is a matter of the individual, and not of the sex. All is fair in love and war, says the old proverb, and there are no more women who are home-wreckers than there are men. We all get pretty primitive when the call of sex sounds in our ears. And some of us rise above it to heights of heroism.

The idea that a woman can not keep a secret, and that she has no sense of honor is so old as to be archaic. There are thousands of women who hold all sorts of confidential positions in which they are intrusted with secrets of the greatest importance, and there is scarcely a record of one betraying that confidence, either by selling her inside information or blabbing it in anger.

Indeed, a few years ago when there was a big lawsuit in which it was sought to obtain information from a woman private secretary the prosecuting attorney said, after grilling this woman mercilessly for days, that it was easier to make the Sphinx reveal its secret than it was to make a woman secretary betray a confidence.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I married into a large family and my husband's folks nearly work me to death and eat us out of house and home. Every Sunday eight or ten of them come to dinner and supper, and as soon as summer begins they overflow our house, as we live in the country. As soon as school is out they dump their children on us and they come themselves to pay visits of from one to three weeks. Now I have not had a vacation but twice in twenty-five years, and my girls and I would like to do a little visiting. We would be glad to have these people come to see us, visit for visit and meal for meal. Some of them live in towns and cities and we would like very much to go to see them in the winter, but they never ask us. What can we do?

TIRED OUT.

Answer—Well, if I were you, I would sit down and write each one of the relatives a nice letter, in which I would tell them that, while I liked them and enjoyed their society and was sure that they must enjoy mine, or else they would not come and visit me every summer, nevertheless I felt that there should be some reciprocity in these matters, and if they cared to come and spend two weeks with me in July I would come and spend two weeks with them in December.

Also, that if they cared to send their little Johnny and Susie to enjoy the salubrious country air I should expect them to give my little Tommy and Mamie the benefits of an equal length of time in the city. For I was sure that Tommy and Mamie would be quite as much interested in the marvelous tall buildings and the theaters as Johnny and Susie were in the dear little lambs and pigs.

If you will write these letters, at which no reasonable person could take offense, you will head off the stream of company, because if they have to pay for their summer vacation they will probably go somewhere else. What they are after is simply deadbeating their way.

There is nothing more contemptible than the way so many city people graft their vacations off their country relatives. All winter long they never think of Cousin Sally or Uncle John, but with the first warm days their hearts expand with affection and they begin to long to see the loved relatives who are good for free board and lodging.

So shameless and predatory these social deadbeats become that even to own a country place has become equivalent to running a free hotel and roadhouse.

They descend upon you in their automobiles like the wolf on the fold, and devour the poor little goats who are silly enough to let themselves be made sacrifices to those who are too stingy to pay their way at a hotel.

Don't do it, poor, tired-out lady. The very people who impose upon you will respect you more for having enough independence and backbone to stand up for your rights.

DOROTHY DIX.

Shippers Open Fight For Freight Slash

MODISH MITZI Yes, Mitzi Likes the Goofer By JAY V. JAY

Of course, Mitzi will be delighted to see the Goofer. It is a long time since they had a real talk. Mitzi will be glad to see him as soon as she can change from her two-toned negligee with the wide revers to something more formal.

Mitzi has had a lovely lunch with the Goofer at a new restaurant. One can always trust the Goofer to know the new places about town. Mitzi looks charming, not only to the Goofer, in a frock of printed chiffon with a small pattern and subdued colors.

The Goofer also knew a new place for tea. Such a quaint place. Mitzi is pleased to have tea there with him. Mitzi put on her newest afternoon frock—of plain and printed chiffon with the skirt and shoulder cape all pressed in narrow pleats.

There was a new roof restaurant, too, with a corking revue. Mitzi does love to dance and she had a frock that had to be introduced to society. An evening frock of printed chiffon with a shoulder scarf. Yes, the Goofer seems to be glad to see her!

Tomorrow—Mitzi Goes Frock Hunting.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY KEEP WELL

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is Proof

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight. I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. The condition I was in made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask "How is housekeeping?" and he says, "It is just like being in Heaven!"

Farmer Hauls Snake To Town In Wagon

BRYAN, June 27. (AP)—Sebe Keith, farmer near here brought a load of chickens and eggs to town today and a 53-inch chicken snake. The reptile apparently vexed by the heat, sought a cooler place in Keith's wagon.

After the reptile was killed by bystanders, Keith said had he known the snake was "riding with me all the way to town it could have driven the wagon alone."

POLICE PROBE SALE OF BABES

Baby Farms At New Orleans Under Investigatin

NEW ORLEANS, June 27. (AP)—As an outgrowth of the arrest of Mrs. T. P. Hodgins, midwife, for the alleged sale of a three weeks old baby for $75 the district attorney's office here today began a widespread investigation of all maternity hospitals.

The casual manner in which Mrs. Hodgins bickered over the details of the selling as well as certain confidential information given District Attorney Eugen Stanley following a year's investigation by the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, led to the belief that child sale is no uncommon occurance in New Orleans, Mr. Stanley said.

A newspaper advertisement in which babies were offered for adoption led to the arrest of Mrs. Hodgins.

A woman worker of the welfare society answered the advertisement and subsequently made an appointment with Mrs. Hodgins to see a baby girl. The welfare worker said she wanted the baby and the midwife is alleged to have said that adoption papers were not necessary. The worker was given the child after she paid $37.50, one half the sum agreed upon.

With a receipt signed by Mrs. Hodgins in her possession the worker called on Mr. Stanley. Further investigation to entrap other offenders was begun immediately, but when this became public the arrest of Mrs. Hodgins followed.

Owing to the absence in the Louisiana criminal code of any law prohibiting the sale of babies Mrs. Hodgins has been charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

LINDY'S OPINION AS TO THE RESULTS OF HIS FLIGHT

The sun is making its downward climb above the green hills of Ireland . It is several hours before sunset, but the fields are cool. Sheep huddle in quiet ease, and peasants are at work on the green and brown patches of the earth. What a magic sight for one who has flown over dreary wastes of water for hours, for one who has seen icebergs and flown through sleet and fog until even courage began to whisper:

"Perhaps we better turn back."

Lindbergh, leaning out of the cabin of his grey monoplane, after a nightmare of storm, must have felt like the Spanish conqueror who climbed the peak of Darien and saw the golden earth revealed beneath him.

A Beautiful Sight

"It was the most beautiful sight I ever saw," Lindy said in a moment of rare exultation. "It was great to see the hills of Ireland. I shall never forget them."

The fanciful land had stirred him with its beauty. But only for a few fleeting moments did the practical, courageous, determined mind of Lindbergh envisage this beauty. Lindy was thinking of other things.

The green hills of Ireland told him one thing clearly: He was getting through as he had planned!

There had been moments of doubt.

"There was a time during the crossing when I thought of turning back," Lindy confessed. "We were ploughing through sleet and fog. But I had gone through sleet and fog before and I would not turn back now. Besides by turning back I was not sure whether I could avoid the sleet and fog. My engine was working fine. My speed was being maintained. So I kept on."

Weather conditions were satisfactory at the beginning of the flight, Lindy said. But shortly after leaving Newfoundland, Lindbergh was surprised to see icebergs.

"Then I ran into a low fog and had to climb to a height of 10,000 feet. Then for a thousand miles we experienced almost continual storm, sleet and fog. The machine and the motor were standing the punishment wonderfully.

Sleet Covers Plane

"But it looked pretty doubtful for a time. The sleet clung to the plane and I was afraid the sleet would weigh down and change the rounded surface of the wings which keep the plane flying. As the sleet began to pile on I began to worry and thought of turning back. But I decided to stick, there was no assurance I would gain anything by turning back. For ten hours, almost, we passed through hard flying; sometimes flying at a height of 10,000 feet, sometimes as low as 100 feet.

"I would fly low to see how the whitecaps were breaking, trying to figure out the drift and speed of the wind.

"I was careful in coming down not to fly too close to the surface of the water, since it is difficult to tell how high a wave is from a plane and I did not want to ship any water. If I had shipped any water I am afraid I would not have gone through.

"I saw only the lights of one ship during the night and did not see another thing until I sighted some fishing vessels about 50 miles from Ireland.

"I flew over the fishing vessels, realizing I was near land.

"Then I saw the rocky coast of Ireland and then the green hills and the fields.

"I knew it was the Irish coast I was flying over, by the rather high hills. I had made a careful study of contour maps of Europe before I started the flight and I remember Ireland had high hills. England had lower hills and the section of France over which I had planned to fly I expected to be somewhat flat land

He's Sure of Self

"I was sure of myself now. It was a matter of a few hours to reach Paris.

"After crossing the English channel I sighted the Seine. I did not recognize Le Bourget at first, thinking the field was farther to the northeast.

"So I circled Paris, flew above the Eiffel tower, but did not dare to fly below two thousand feet.

"I did not know what the air regulations for Paris were and did not want to get into trouble flying lower than two thousand feet which is the standard regulation for American cities.

"I was a little puzzled by the Beacon lights and the other lights on Le Bourget field, but when I circled, I saw lights of many automobiles and felt sure I had arrived at my destination."

And Paris and the world went mad!

But what had Lindbergh accomplished, according to his own conception of the flight.

"We were able to prove one thing," Lindy said. "A good plane with a good motor is capable of making a sustained flight across the Atlantic, even under trying conditions.

"I hope the flight is a forerunner of regular trans-Atlantic service.

"But there are many problems yet to be solved before regular commercial and passenger service can be inaugurated.

"And I do not think regular service will come before another decade, at the least not before five years.

Need Scientific Data

"Much scientific data, considerable experimentation and study are needed before aeroplanes can fly between America and Europe with any degree of regularity and safety.

"In the first place, I do not see any advantage in repeating the flight. It would add nothing further to our knowledge of flying.

"Personally, I think only a multi-motored plane, with radio and a navigator, will be fit for passenger service. Several motors and a radio will increase safety without which passenger service could not exist.

"While I favor a monoplane for most long distance flying, I am not definitely decided that a monoplane is the future trans-Atlantic flyer. Many trials are needed to prove that. For some types of flying, the biplane is the ideal type.

"Here are a number of problems that have to be studied before ocean flying can become practical and regular:

"First, the best route must be decided on. It may be that it will be better to fly by way of the Azores instead of over the great circle from New Foundland to Ireland as I flew. Again, it may be some intermediary route will be selected.

"Second, a highly efficient study of meteorological conditions must be made before flying can reach the stage of scientific certainty. Although I expected good weather I ran unexpectedly into a long storm area.

"Third, the possibility of establishing air stations along the route. It may be that stations can be established at New Foundland and southern Ireland or the tip of England, or the coast of France or the Azores.

Floating Hangars

I have been seriously thinking, too—without having made more than a casual study—of the possibility of building floating islands that may be anchored in certain sections of the ocean and which would provide landing places and shelter for planes that might have to descend for fuel or because of some trouble.

This may seem impossible and far fetched now, but some scientist or inventor may be able to find the way to build these islands.

"Transa-Atlantic flying will be commercially feasible as soon as an organization appears willing to back such a venture with sufficient funds. Such commercial flying might begin within four or five years, provided the right companies determine to back the project. There must be no half-hearted job or any rushing.

"In America we can develop first our transconitnental flying, building up commercial flying on a sound basis and gradually study the problem of ocean flying.

"I do not think subsidies will help. Flying built on a basis of profit is more substantial than flying built on subsidies. When flying pays for itself, it will be successful."

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, June 27.(AP)—A more favorable view of weather conditions was reflected in moderate declines in the cotton market today. October contracts sold off to 16.81 and closed at 16.82, compared with 16.91 at the close Saturday, the general market closing steady at net declines of 9 to 14 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 2 to 6 points in response to lower Liverpool cables and reports of good weather in the south over Sunday.

Further liquidation of July contracts was readily absorbed by spot houses against sales of later months and after showing net declines of about 8 to 13 points, prices steadied up slightly on the outlook for renewed showers in parts of the eastern belt and a private report emphasizing the increased infestation of boll weevil in various sections of the south, particularly in parts of Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Except for covering, there appeared to be very little demand, however, and rallies of 4 or 5 points from the lowest were followed by renewed weakness in later trading.

July sold off to 16.46 and December to 17.05, or 11 to 14 points net lower. The close was at about the lowest prices of the day. Business was quiet during the entire day and with the more favorable weather news partially offset by the reiterated reports concerning boll weevil, traders seemed inclined to postpone fresh operations pending further developments or the effects of the first July notices expected tomorrow.

While no definite figures were mentioned as to the probable number of notices likely to be issued, the trade seemed to be preparing for comparatively large tenders. Most of the July liquidation was again in the form of switching into later months, and there was not much change in the differences between the various deliveries. At the close, July was 35 points under October, compared with a difference of 32 points at the close of Saturday.

Private cables reported liquidation of July in Liverpool with a poor off-take, but fair business in fancy cotton goods for home trade and continental account.

Port receipts today 6082. U. S. port stocks 1,323,122. Exports 8906, making 10,755,738 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.(AP)—Anxiety as to the amount of tenders to be circulated tomorrow in New York, the first notice day there for July cotton, caused an easier tone in otday's cotton market here. October after rallying to 16.84 eased off in the late trading and closed at 16.77, 10 points net down. The general market closed steady at net losses of five to 10 points.

The general belief here is that the entire New York certificated stock of 202-000 bales will be tendered tomorrow on contracts. Traders seemed disinclined to enter upon new commitments in advance of the notice day and trading here was quiet.

The opening was six to nine points down, mainly due to lower Liverpool advices. The market continued to ease off in the early trading until July had dropped to 16.37, October to 16.74 and December 16.95, 13 to 14 points below Saturday's close.

Prices rallied near midday on some uneasiness about the weather outlook and prices recovered 10 to 11 points. The fear of the heavy New York notices held on in the afternoon and as a result all months dropped to the low figures, March making a new low at 17.19, 10 points net down. The easier tone remained to the end and the market closed at the lows.

COTTON GOODS

NEW YORK, June 27. (AP)—Cotton goods were in moderate call today, gray goods prices holding steady and concessions being made on small lots of wash fabrics for clearance purposes. Yarns were in light demand with some mills ready to trade under current quotations. Burlaps were firmer in Calcutta and steady here. Cables from Yokohama stated that American and Japanese traders in raw silks have come to an agreement to put into force new rules by which transactions will be made under the system of conditioned weights. The markets were barely steady.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, June 27.(AP)—Cottonseed oil was active today after some early irregularity firmed up on covering and commission house buying, reflecting the combined strength of both lard and corn, which offset the decline in cotton. Prices at best showed net gains of 9 to 16 points, but there was a good deal of realizing toward the close and reactions followed with the market finally 2 to 10 points net higher. Trading was mostly in the form of evening up of July commitments. Sale 25,000 barrels. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow spot 9.10; July closed 9.11; September 9.66; October 9.87; December 9.98; January 10.03.

Bears Get Surprise On Stock Exchange As Loans Show Decline of $44,000,000

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 27.—The Bears received a surprise after the close today when the brokerage loan figures were published. Instead of a large increase in borrowings there was a drop of approximately $44,000,000. Professional selling of stocks during the day was based on the belief that loans would continue upward. Market observers look for heavy short covering this morning throughout the list.

Banks called approximately $30,000,000 in loans for the Huga July 1 interest and dividend payments. Money was advanced to 4 1-2 per cent. Commodities were quiet but higher. Spanish pesetas were the strong feature of the international money market.

Houston oil led the decline in the petroleum group although it is not regarded as an oil but a gas issue. Traders, however, appeared to have a grudge against this group and sold them, consistently. With overproduction continuing and the Seminole output at top figures, speculators believe they should sell lower. The fact that some of the recent bonds floated by two or three companies could not be disposed of because of the glue in securities has also contributed to the bearishness toward the stocks.

One stock which is being accumulated, however, is Little Transcontinental. The company operates in several fields. In Texas Transcontinental has brought in well 6A which is running satisfactory. This well is making approximately 28,000 barrels daily. This is the biggest well yet discovered in the Pecos county, Texas, field.

General Railway Signal, called to the attention of readers five points lower, was one of the few stocks to buck the downward trend. The company is understood to be in for considerably more railroad business in the way of signals and safety control devices. Baldwin came down seven points on heavy selling, but managed to keep its nose above water. At the close the stock was selling near the price before the liquidation started. The floating supply of this stock is so small that it is divjw18:8 get the market away from its sponsors.

Colorado Fuel & Iron was another strong stock. Earnings are running at a rate of $16 annually, which would justify at least a $6 dividend. People who are long of the stock are talking of a price of 125 for it on this move. The company has paid nothing on the common stock since 1921. It is the largest steel manufacturer west of the Mississippi river. It operates extensive steel works at Pueblo, Col., and has an annual capacity of 550,000 tons of finished steel products. As sources of material the company has three iron mines in Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico, and owns 25 coal mines, including the only anthracite coal fields west of Pennsylvania.

Railroad stocks remained quiet. Earnings for May of the different roads are decidedely mixed. The aggregate net earnings of 23 roads for May was lower despite an increase in gross. Earnings of the Pennsylvania showed an increase in net railway operating income for May and five months buying was reported on a scale down in Rock Island and Southern Pacific; also the Soo issues.

General Motors and Steel closed lower, but the buying in both stocks is understood to be for the account of strong interests. Wilmington was a buyer of steel. It is regarded as almost a certainty that one of the Du Ponts will go on the board of the steel corporation. Inland is another stock in which excellent buying is reported.

New York Dock led the specialties by rising nearly four points. No explanation was given for the advance. Coppers were freely sold. Here, the price situation accounts for liquidation of the Red Metal shares. Drug Syndicate held ground on its earnings for May, which were $130,000, compared with $240,000 for the first three months.

Buying was reported on a scale down in Gabriel Snubbers. Accumulation of this stock is reported to have been completed and the street looks for a new forward movement in the issue. Sponsors for the stock are predicting higher prices because of the steady growth of the company's business.

Ten thousand shares of executive and employes stock has been authorized but not issued. The preferred has no voting power except in event of the passing of four quarterly dividends when it has exclusive voting power.

Initial dividends at the 7 per cent annual rate were begun in 1924 and have been maintained regularly up to and including June 1, 1927. No dividends have been paid on the common. For the fiscal year ended January 31, 1927, net income was $1,054,778. This compared with $1,343,337 in the previous year and was at the rate of $27.18 on the preferred shares and $5.30 on each common share. The best earnings in the last eight years were recorded in the 1920 fiscal year.

Current assets January 31, 1927, totaled $8,521,162, current liabilities were $1,370,371 and net working capital $7,150,791. Cash and marketable securities were nearly twice current liabilities. Good will was carried at $2,500,000. Book value on the common amounted to $33.77 a share.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, June 27.(AP)—The stock market experienced another bad sinking spell today, but was pointing upward again at the close. Renewed liquidation of the oils and coppers, several of which collapsed to new low levels, caused heavy selling of other stocks, the pressure of offerings touching off a number of stop-loss orders. Extreme declines in scores of issues ran fro m 3to 12 points, but many of these were substantially reduced in the late rally. Trading showed a substantial increase in volume, the day's sales running over 2¼ million shares.

Credit conditions were again the chief subject of market comment. The fourth successive deficit in the weekly clearing house statement provided somewhat of a mystery and was believed to be partly responsible for the calling of about $30,000,000 in loans, which sent the call money rate from 4 to 4½ per cent. The federal reserve report of brokers' loans, issued after the close of the market, showed an unexpectedly large reduction of $44,006,000 in the week ended last Wednesday, bringing the total down to $3,115,870,000.

There was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement although the pronounced slackening of late in such basic industries as oil, steel, building, motor and copper naturally was stressed by market observers in searching for reasons for the selling movement, which, however, appeared to be based on conditions within rather than without the market. The difficulty experienced by operators for the rise in attracting an outside following undoubtedly led to the liquidation of large speculative holdings, some of which had been acquired on expectations that the market would respond to the July reinvestment demand which ordinarily makes its appearance at this time.

Establishment of a new high production record in the Seminole field provided another excuse for a selling attack on the oil shares. Marland, Phillips, Pan-American A, and B, Skelly, Royal Dutch, Standard Oil of New York, and General Asphalt common and preferred, all sagged to new low ground. Houston broke 9 points to 147 and rallied 3. Among th ecoppers, new low prices were reached by Anaconda, Calumet and Arizona, Cerro De Pasco, Chile and Seneca, with American Smelting falling back 4½ points and rallying one.

Praises A. A. A. Road Service In Letter

Appreciation of "A. A. A." road information was received in a message here from Mrs. F. A. Rinehart, wife of F. A. Rinehart, local Franklin dealer, who is motoring over several northern states. Mrs. Rinehart stated in a letter from St. Louis that it was remarkable how well the highways of the different states are marked, thanking the association for mapping out her route. "Anyone contemplating taking a tour should not overlook this service," the message stated.

Mrs. Rinehart will tour Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin before returning home.

Advertising Club To Hear Auto Dealers

Charles Nolen of the local Buick automobile agency will address the Advertising club on "Automobile Advertising" at the weekly luncheon of the club Tuesday at noon, according to announcement from Alva Willgus, program chairman.

A general discussion will follow the address.

YEGGS ESCAPE WITH LOOT

Knob Knockers Get $600 In Raid

Investigations of two robberies and one hold-up which occurred here over the past week-end were being made by police Monday with one or more arrests expected soon, according to officers. No arrests were made Monday.

More than $600 was taken from the safe of the Wichita Falls laundry between Saturday night and Monday morning by knob knockers, who broke into the establishment through the back door. Currency and papers were found missing Monday morning.

The safe of the First Baptist church was broken open and found empty Sunday night. Both safes were badly damaged.

The third robbery occurred shortly after midnight Sunday night when two unmasked men of about 25 years of age held up a Factory street car motorman, E. B. Bourland, on the last run of the car and took approximately $25 at the point of a gun. The "jackers" boarded the car at Avenue J and Kemp boulevard when a 10-year-old boy was the only passenger.

Too Busy Building Texas Good-Will

Today { At the Theaters

By Ruth Morrison

Majestic: Gloria Swanson in "The Love of Sunya," comedy and Pathe News.

Olympic: "Moulders of Men," with Conway Tearle, comedy and Fox News.

Mission: "Partners Again," with all-star cast. Pete Pate's Musical show on the stage.

Garden: Richard Dix in "The Quarterback," western picture and comedy.

Gem: Rod LaRocque in "Gigolo," and comedy.

Inasmuch as the third annual institution of laughter, known this year as "Partners Again — with Potash & perlmutter," comes to the Mission theater today, the management promises new convulsions of roars, giggles and howls.

Abe and Mawruss, the two explosive heroes, are again portrayed by George Sidney and Alexander Carr, whose arguments, predicaments and big-hearted foolishness are known to the host of "Potash" fans who have followed the Montague Glass stories for years in the Saturday Evening Post or in book form.

In "Partners Again—with Potash & Perlmutter" the famous "fifty-fifty" duo are seen as automobile distributors. They are initiated into it, they progress through it, and make a hasty exit from it. Family complications, stock promotion, engine trouble, heart trouble and operations, police, business worries, sensational chases and aeroplane thrills tumble over one another in rapid succession in "Partners Again," leaving the spectator wondering if the partners have ever been partners, ever came to be "partners again."

While this third "Potash & Perlmutter" production is for laughing purposes only, the element of hairraising thrills has been incorporated in a manner which presents new sensations in breathtaking escapades. Romance finds a prominent place also in "Partners Again—with Potash & Perlmutter" and the beauty of the feminine principles in the cast is only rivalled by the jolly complications of the two partners.

Henry King, who directed "Stella Dallas," "Tol'able David," and "23 1-2 Hours Leave," is responsible for the new elements of directoral genius displayed in the picture.

Esther Ralston, one of filmland's most popular and beautiful actress, will appear in her latest picture "Ten Modern Commandments," at the Majestic theater Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Wichita Falls Folks, Facts, Fancies

Ben H. Williams, manager of Southwestern Engraving company, left Monday for New York, where he will spend several weeks, later going to Washington, D. C., to attend the National Photogravers' convention.

Miss Lucille Campbell, secretary to the County Commissioners Court and deputy county clerk, returned Monday from a two-weeks vacation spent in Houston and other cities in South Texas.

Pleading guilty to a charge of aggravated assault in connection with an alleged knife attack on another man at a Wichita county dance, T. L. Greer was fined Monday $25 and the costs of trial by Judge C. M. McFarland in the county court at law. The case was prosecuted by John Humphrey, assistant county attorney.

Accused of burglarizing the home of M. C. Herrod on Walnut street, a complaint charging burglary was filed Monday against Thomas B. Stewart. It is alleged in the complaint filed in justice of the peace court that Stewart stole $3.80 from Herrod's home.

Canvass of Bond Vote Waits Complete Report

One discrepancy in the ballot returns of the Wichita county road bond election reported Saturday night was revealed Monday when Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk received 23 official returns from the election judges.

The Saturday night returns showed that 36 votes were cast at the Crockett school box in favor of the issuance of the bonds. The official returns received Monday by Miss Hall disclosed that 46 votes were cast in favor of the bonds.

Due to the fact that official returns from six election precincts have not yet been deposited with Miss Hall, an official canvass by the county commissioners court, scheduled for Monday, was postponed until all of the returns have been received by Miss Hall.

County To Spend $300 "Doctoring" Lawn Trees

Contract for the "doctoring" of trees on the courthouse lawn was awarded Monday by the county commissioners court to J. D. Johnson. The contract price was $300.

E. P. Walsh, county auditor, was instructed by the court to advertise for bids for the purchase of a road finishing machine for precinct No. 2 and for an automobile roadster, with delivery body for precinct No. 3.

Mr. Walsh was also instructed to advertise for bids for a county map, showing all municipal, county and private enterprises.

Due to the fact that the Fourth of July falls on Monday, the regular meeting day of the commissioners court, the next meeting will be held Tuesday, July 5.

15 QUARANTINES.

Fifteen contagious disease cases were quarantined during the past week in Wichita Falls, according to a report issued Monday by the city health department. Ten smallpox cases were quarantined; three, measles, one scarlet fever and one chicken pox. There were 10 deaths reported.

COURT SETTINGS.

Settings of felony trials in the 30th district court before Judge E. G. Thornton, for July are now being prepared by E. F. Fruechte and Sam Spence, assistant district attorneys. Compilation of the settings will be completed within the next few days.

The "Mechanics" of Bank Loans

When a business man is refused accommodation at his bank, he may sometimes think that the refusal is arbitrarily made. Such is not the case in well regulated banks.

A loan committee or board of directors, having due conception of a bank's proper function in the community, will carefully consider every application and decide according to well established principles.

This is the practice in this institution where every possible courtesy and consideration is given commercial customers. You are assured of sympathetic understanding of your financial problems and the full measure of assistance sanctioned by ethical banking practice.

In applying the "mechanics" of banking loans in this institution, every proposition stands on its individual merit and is assured of full consideration.
