Readathon to aid hunt for Christie

By Lynn Hayes

The learning process for students at Kentwood Elementary during the next nine days will extend beyond their reading. In fact, they may learn a lesson in compassion during their reading time the rest of the month.

Reading will be the tool used by those students to help raise money for the Christie Proctor Search Fund.

Christie, the 11-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brooks of Big Spring, has been the focus of a search since she failed to return to her Dallas home Feb. 15, 1986. Big Spring Rotarians have adopted the search as a club project and have raised nearly $16,000 to finance Midland private investigator Steve Brown's efforts, local Rotary president Paul Shaffer said today.

Loyce Phillips, a first grade teacher at Kentwood Elementary since 1966, originated the idea for "Penny-a-Page" pledges. It is designed to enlist support from parents, grandparents, and other concerned citizens who are being asked to pledge money for pages read by the students at home from Feb. 21 to March 1.

The Proctor case has been assigned "priority" status by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, of-

Josh Parker, son of David and Donna Parker, and Anna Jones, daughter of Jack and Kenda Jones, read books in a fund-raising program, while teacher Mrs. Phillips officials in Washington, D.C., said this morning. A spokeswoman said that no such cases are listed as "number one," although abductions by strangers are considered priority cases.

The Rotary Club president is encouraged by the private investigator.

County

Juvenile detention grant on agenda

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission may provide funds for Howard County to pay for juvenile detention salaries once the courthouse annex opens late next month, County Judge Milton Kirby said this morning.

However, county commissioners need to approve Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Margy Thompson's $26,006 grant proposal when they meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the courthouse.

The regional planning commission stipulates the grant request receive commissioner court approval, Thompson said.

If the county receives funding from the commission, it would be used to pay for full-time supervision of four juvenile detention cells in the courthouse annex, Kirby said.

"We won't have to go to Abilene anymore," Kirby said in reference to the county's current policy of transferring juvenile offenders for detention pending a final hearing in juvenile court.

The county entered into a contractual agreement in December 1985 with Abilene's juvenile detention center to house juvenile offenders at $60 per day.

Commissioners approved the agreement to comply with a federal mandate that ordered juvenile offenders be detained in a facility that is out-of-sight and out-of-sound from adult offenders.

Juvenile offenders were previously housed in the former jurors' quarters on the fourth floor of the courthouse — near the county jail.

According to juvenile probation office records, Howard County paid the detention center for 149 holding days or $8,940 in 1986. County Judge Milton Kirby ordered 20 juvenile offenders be detained in Abilene during 1986.

The agreement with Abilene, however, posed problems for Howard County, Kirby said.

"The big problem was taking time to go down there and back," he said, concerning travel time and distance to Abilene.

"It made you reluctant to lock one up that needed to be locked up," Kirby added.

Commissioners will also be asked to approve county participation in the state highway's "Bridge Load Posting Program" and "Bridge Rehabilitation Program."

The state provides a portion of funding in both programs for posting of weight limit signs on county roads and funding for bridge maintenance, County Engineer Bill Mims said.

Consultant: oil prices to rise

By SCOTT ROTHCHILD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An economic consultant to kings, princes and state comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday that oil prices will steadily rise, but remain far below prices of the early 1980s that fueled a boom in the Texas economy.

In addition, the nominal crude oil price increases will be undercut by inflation and depreciation of the dollar, said Vahan Zanoian at a University of Texas economic conference.

Zanoian, director of Africa and Middle East services for Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates, also said he has mixed feelings on taxing imported oil in an effort to ignite United States production.

"In pure economic thinking in the abstract, it's very difficult to make a case for an import fee on anything," he said. Countries should take advantage of having inexpensive oil to buy, he said.

But in the short-term interests, he said, it could be argued that an import fee is needed for national security reasons to reduce dependence on foreign oil.

"Oil is not just a commodity, it is an economic resource. It can make or break an industrial economic base," he said. In a related matter on Thursday, the largest association of independent oil and gas producers, in a letter to Texas chambers of commerce, reiterated its call for an oil import tax because of growing consumption of foreign oil.

Shelby D. Pitts of Dallas, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association said the United States was depending "on volatile foreign governments to supply our energy needs at the price and under the conditions they dictate."

By 1991, Zanoian forecast the price of oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries at $23.70 a barrel.

Clements to discuss SSC with President

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements promised Thursday that bringing the Superconducting Super Collider (SSC) project to Texas will be a priority discussion item when he visits Reagan administration officials in Washington, D.C., next week.

Contrasting Tuesday press conference remarks relegating West Texas sites to secondary status because of a lack of a metropolitan center, he said his only preference is for the $6 billion atom smasher be located in Texas.

Clements was to leave for Washington today, and "the Super Collider project will be at the beginning of every conversation I have with President Reagan, with officials in the energy and defense departments and with members of Congress."

He noted that "any site within the borders of Texas is great with me. West Texas is great. Dallas or Houston is great. San Antonio is great. Any location in Texas is great."

Sites being touted by local groups include Garden City, Amarillo, and Beaumont.

Among the other possible sites are South Dallas (parts of Dallas, Ellis, Hill, Johnson and Navarro counties); North Houston (Grimes, Montgomery, San Jacinto and Walker counties); South Houston (Colorado, Jackson, Matagorda and Wharton counties); East Central Texas (Austin, Burleson, Fayette, Lee and Washington counties); West Central Texas (parts of Travis, Bastrop, Lee,

State seeks to cut rural doctor loans

From staff and wire reports

AUSTIN — A threat to the program that helped place a physician in Colorado City and other rural areas is being fought by the State Rural Medical Education Board.

The board is asking legislators not to phase out favorable loans to needy medical students who agree to work in rural areas of Texas for at least two years.

Colorado City is among the communities that have benefited from the program, with the placement of Dee A. Roach, M.D., who has a private practice as well as on the staff of the hospital in Mitchell County.

Board Chairman Dr. Sam Nixon of Houston said although new loans have been stopped, more than 200 medical students willing to work in rural areas remain on a waiting list.

Even today, he said, the state still has 19 rural counties of less than 30,000 population that do not have a physician, most of them in West Texas and the Panhandle.

And despite some problems with the program and loan contract defaults, he said, the board has placed more than 50 physicians in rural practice in Texas.

As a beneficiary of the program, Roach has a perspective on its importance.

He said rural residents would be the real losers if the program were closed. He said the program is well-founded, well-administered and serves a need for rural residents.

His two-year stint in Colorado City will end in August 1988, but he said he has no plans to move elsewhere. A Snyder native, Roach graduated in 1983 from Texas A&M Medical School.

Although he probably could have obtained funds for medical school elsewhere if the program didn't exist, other medical students would have been more severely compromised, he said.

Roach added, however, that "poor medical students are going to get help one way or another" from the many programs designed for that purpose.

Roach said he believes the suggestion to close the program is part of the government's attempts to further regulate medical practice.

Nixon's plea for reconsideration of the program came this week during a meeting of the House Higher Education Committee's budget panel.

Senate backs use of private prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill to authorize the use of private prisons.

A proposal by Sen. Ray Farabee would authorize the Texas Department of Corrections to contract with private companies, or counties, to build and operate prisons for up to 500 "minimum" or "medium-risk" inmates.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said Tennessee, Kentucky and Minnesota now have laws that provide for private prisons.

A prison contract in Texas could not be signed unless the state would save at least 10 percent on what it would cost to operate a similar state facility, Farabee said.

The bill allows for a three-year contract, with an option to renew for two years. Any private facility would have to meet court standards, as well as standards of the American Correctional Association.

Association.

Sens. Carlos Truan and Craig Washington said they had concerns about the measure, which was sent to the House on a 23-2 vote.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said, "I think it ought to be tried." Hobby said facilities for 500 could be available "in 60 to 90 days from the day the contract is signed."

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said he was "hesitant about placing prisoners in the hands of a private contractor. ... We are doing away with the tradition that ... we as citizens, as taxpayers, provide the necessary money for the prisons and jails."

"Where are you going to stop? Are the schools going to be next?" Truan asked. "We don't even enough money for our public prisons much less to contract for private prisons."

Farabee said the bill "spells out where we're going to stop, and that is unless you can save at least 10 percent, you're not going to use this method."

He suggested that the savings could be used for other state services such as better distribution of food stamps and nursing homes.

Washington, D-Houston, said some duties of the state should not be delegated and one is its police power. "This is closely akin to police power," he said.

In these "difficult economic times, we look for ways to ameliorate our problem, and perhaps we grab at straws we wouldn't have looked at 10 years ago," Washington said.

Williamson, Milam and Bell counties; and West Texas (Reeves and Pecos counties).

Earlier this week, Clements angered West Texans by saying that area of the state is out of the running because informal Department of Energy criteria require that it be near a major metropolitan center.

He added that an area bounded by Bryan-College Station, Austin and Houston is the state's leading candidate, while the Dallas-Fort Worth area also is in the running.

If Texas wins the project, he said at his weekly news conference, the site "probably will be located somewhere in that general triangle area between Austin, Bryan and Houston."

Where it's located in Texas,

Clements said Thursday, isn't important.

"The point is that the Super Collider project represents a tremendous potential economic boost for all of Texas. We need to focus our energy and commitment on bringing the project to Texas. We need a united front. If we do that, I believe we'll be in strong position to get the project to Texas," he said.

Although in 1985 the Department of Energy's informal criteria included the major metropolitan area provision, the governor said he is going to Washington "to find out exactly what the situation is."

"Quite possibly that unofficial criteria does not apply at all," Clements said.

Final criteria are scheduled to come out April 1.

When completed in 1996, the supercollider will be in a 52-mile circular underground tunnel about 10 feet in diameter. Using superconducting magnets, scientists would accelerate two beams of subatomic protons so that they collide head-on. The collision is expected produce new particles that are part of the basic structure of nature.

More than 24 states are actively competing for the project. Even Canada has expressed an interest in being involved in the federal project if it is placed near the U.S.-Canadian border.

On Thursday, the Texas Senate also passed a resolution urging the U.S. Congress to fund the project and locate it somewhere in Texas. The same resolution was passed by the House on Tuesday.

$1,500 drill stolen from local firm

A mechanical earth drill valued at $1,500 was stolen from Marquez Fence Co., 1507 W. Fourth St., between 7 p.m. Wednesday and 8:45 a.m. Thursday.

Clarissa Goodwin, 1106 E. 12th St. Apt. A, told police that someone she knows stole three rosewood jewelry boxes, valued at $200, a $200 gold and diamond ring, a $45 gold chain necklace and $35 of assorted costume jewelry. The items were taken at 7:45 a.m. Thursday.

A $100 spare tire cover was stolen from the residence of Melvin Perry McMillan, 4404 Vicky St., between 6 and 10:15 p.m. Thursday.

Luis Subia Porras, 28, 1209 Ridgeroad, was arrested at 1200 E. 18th St. early this morning on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Daniel Deleon, 24, 504 Bell St., was arrested Thursday on warrants for failure to appear in court and public intoxication.

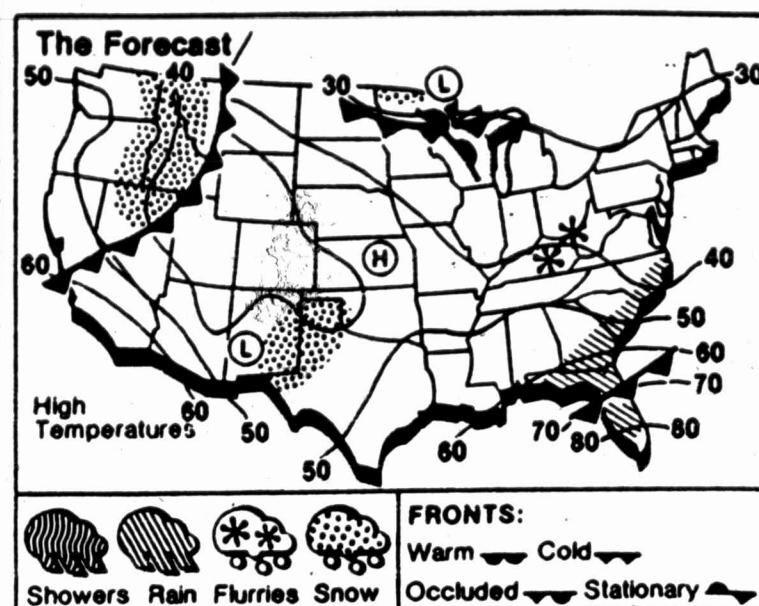

Gun safety workshop is planned

The Crime Prevention Unit of the Big Spring police department will sponsor a firearms safety workshop for women at 8 a.m. April 25, according to Sgt. D. Bavin.

The workshop will be conducted at the Big Spring Airpark during the morning and at the firing range during the afternoon.

Anyone interested may register by calling 263-8311, Ext. 434. The class will have space for 20 women. A reminder will be sent to those who register.

Weather

Forecast

West Texas - Winter storm warning for the Texas Panhandle and the South Plains through tonight. Travelers' advisory mountains of Southwest Texas for icy roads through tonight. Cloudy, cold with snow north and rain south through Saturday. Snow accumulations of an additional 2 to 4 inches tonight. Lows tonight 20s mountains and east to 30s far west and lower elevations of the southwest. Highs Saturday the 30s east and mountains to 40s far west and Big Bend.

State

Wet, heavy snow fell over the Texas Panhandle and South Plains as a powerful storm slogged east from New Mexico, prompting advisories throughout the area today warning that traveling is treacherous.

At least one traffic fatality was attributed to the storm that began dumping snow on the area early Thursday and is expected to continue its wintry work today, police said.

Amarillo got more than 3 inches, Lubbock 2 and up to 5 inches fell on communities such as Post south of Lubbock, the National Weather Service said.

As much as 5 more inches may fall before the storm moves out by Saturday, but the forecasters warn that another snow-carrying storm may be in the works for later this weekend.

Overnight temperatures dipped into the low 20s, and today's highs aren't expected to rise much over the middle 30s, the weather service said. The cold, combined with chilly winds, will keep roads glazed and dangerous.

One person died about 8:30 a.m. in a one-vehicle accident on U.S. 385 six miles north of Brownfield, the Department of Public Safety said. Lubbock police, meanwhile, reported two dozen minor accidents, none with serious injuries.

noting that parents, teachers and students think the project is a good idea.

"We have an enrollment of 137 students; hopefully everyone will participate," she said.

Phillips said that her students' enthusiasm has been enhanced by the positive reactions they've received from their parents.

"We already have pledges from grandparents, parents, and friends," said Clark.

The public may also participate in the funding effort, she said. In order to do so, anyone interested may call the school to pledge funds. Such pledges will then be assigned to a student at random, unless a particular child's name is specified, Clark said.

Phillips said that she is hopeful, through such a project, children will show more interest in reading and in contributing to a worthy cause.

"We also hope to raise our student's awareness of the importance of caution around strangers," she added.

The funds raised will be given to the Big Spring Rotary Club's Christie Proctor Fund.

Sheriff's log

Waymon surrenders to deputies

A 23-year-old Lawton, Okla. man surrendered himself voluntarily to Howard County sheriff's deputies Thursday afternoon and was then booked in county jail where he is awaiting transfer to the jurisdiction of the Texas Department of Corrections.

David Ray Waymon was sentenced to a three-year prison term by an 11th District Court jury on Jan. 20 for the involuntary manslaughter death of Joe Harold Roundtree in March 1986.

He testified that he drank three-to-four beers at The Best Little Beerhouse in Texas on West Highway 80 before traveling east on West Fourth Street and striking Roundtree at the East Fourth Street and Gregg Street intersection.

Waymon elected to have a jury assess his punishment and had filed a motion for a probation sentence.

Deaths

Rex Rogers

Rex Douglas Rogers, 47, of Santa Fe, formerly of Big Spring, died Thursday, Feb. 19, 1987, in Houston after a lengthy illness.

Condom ads to be run

CBS and NBC stations in three of the biggest television markets have decided to accept condom advertisements, and ABC will begin running 30-second public-service announcements on their use against the spread of AIDS, executives said.

However, the big three networks continue to decline network-wide condom ads.

CBS announced Thursday it will allow the four TV stations and 18 radio stations it owns to accept condom advertising based on the attitudes of the local viewing or listening community.

WCBS in New York, WCAU in Philadelphia and KCBS in Los Angeles all said they would accept such ads.

Witness admits lying

HACKENSACK, N.J. — A character witness for a surrogate mother seeking custody of her child has admitted forging a letter to a judge and giving false testimony about seeing court documents.

Susan Hergenhan said Thursday she had signed surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead's name to a May 18 letter to Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow.

She also admitted lying under oath about court documents sent to her home last spring.

An angry Sorkow told Ms. Hergenhan, "You know I have no alternative but to consult with the prosecutor on this."

Ms. Hergenhan's testimony came at the end of a grueling day of cross-examination in which Mrs. Whitehead said that one day she'll tell the child the surrogate agreement she made was a mistake.

Bodies of skiers found

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. — Searchers who found the bodies of three skiers killed when they were engulfed in a massive avalanche prepared to return to the mountain to search for a fourth victim.

Two bodies were found Thursday in the hard-packed snow on the 11,600-foot Peak 7 in the Rocky Mountains near the Breckenridge Ski Area, about 65 miles west of Denver.

One body had been found hours after Wednesday's avalanche, which left a swath of snow a half mile across and 40 feet deep.

More than 200 search and rescue team members and volunteers used dogs and long aluminum probes Thursday, digging each time a pole struck something hard in the snow.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, gestures toward the Friendship 7 space capsule during a ceremony at the Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum in Washington Thursday. Twenty-five years ago Glenn was the first American to orbit the earth.

Astronaut Glenn recalls orbiting the Earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-five years ago today, John Glenn set off on a voyage into the unknown. The first American to orbit the Earth reminisced today that he wasn't sure what would happen to his body after hours in the weightlessness of space or even if he would come back alive.

"Apprehensive would be the word," Glenn recalled of his feelings. "We were involved in something involving power and speed. You know when you're in orbit, you're traveling almost 5 miles a second, which is hard to comprehend — 17,500 miles an hour — dealing with speed and complexity and re-entry heat and things that were very much uncertain," Glenn said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Some doctors warned him that his eye might change shape during the flight. Others said the weightlessness of space would cause the fluids in his inner ear to float randomly, causing uncontrollable nausea. That would mean, he said, "that man's efforts in space were probably doomed to begin with."

But the predictions never came true, and Glenn's 4 hour and 55 minute trip instead signaled the possibilities of space travel.

The silver anniversary of the flight of Friendship 7 has sparked a surge of interest in the historic event. Glenn, now a Democratic senator from Ohio, has been flooded with interview requests.

"It seems very vivid to me," the former Marine fighter pilot said earlier this week of the flight. "I guess it was etched in my memory rather indelibly. I remember very vividly the anticipation before liftoff. I remember the apprehension I felt when there was an indication on the ground that the heat shield had come loose."

Glenn's Senate staff was planning to mark the event today with the showing of a 22-minute videotape of the flight. In addition, Glenn's wife, Annie, is to present him with leather-bound copies of the three Life magazines that featured her husband on the cover.

And tonight Glenn was to be reunited with his fellow Mercury astronauts at a dinner-dance at a Washington hotel. Expected for the gathering are Alan Shepard, Donald Slayton, Gordon Cooper, Scott Carpenter and Walter Schirra.

Next week Glenn is scheduled to recount his experience at the National Air and Space Museum as part of a lecture series.

The success of the Glenn's flight on Feb. 20, 1962, touched off an extraordinary national celebration. The Soviet Union already had succeeded in sending men into orbit, reinforcing their lead in the space race. But Glenn's three orbits around the Earth gave Americans hope the nation would catch up.

Soviets release Begun

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities today freed Jewish activist Josef Begun from Chistopol prison, where he was reunited with his wife and son, family members in Moscow said.

Yana Begun, wife of Begun's son Boris, said she received a call from Chistopol at about 5 p.m. (9 a.m. EST) announcing her father-in-law had been freed.

She said she was told by her husband and mother-in-law that the 55-year-old Begun was in "fair health."

Begun's wife, Inna, and Boris Begun went to the prison 500 miles east of Moscow for the release.

Yana Begun said her husband and his parents planned to return to Moscow on Sunday.

Begun was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in 1983 for alleged anti-Soviet activity.

He was pardoned Tuesday by a decree of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's nominal parliament.

Wall protestor expelled

BERLIN — A 69-year-old American known as the "Wall Walker" for his protests atop the Berlin Wall was expelled from East Germany and placed on a flight to the United States, a U.S. spokesman said today.

John Runnings of Seattle had been held by Communist East Germany for three months. He was convicted of violating border laws by an East German court on Thursday and sentenced to 18 months in prison. The sentence was suspended and he was ordered expelled.

Menzies said the expulsion arrangements were made by East Germany. There are no flights from East Berlin to the United States.

He was arrested by East German border guards Nov. 18 after scaling the Berlin Wall with a ladder on the Western side and pounding on the barrier with a hammer. He had climbed onto the wall twice before, but each time was quickly released by East Germany.

Cabinet minister resigns

OTTAWA — Minister of State Roch LaSalle has resigned following allegations that businessmen hoping to win government contracts paid $3,750 each for entry to a party he attended.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney accepted LaSalle's resignation Thursday.

In a resignation letter submitted Monday, LaSalle, a veteran standard-bearer for the ruling Conservative Party in Quebec province, condemned as "unfounded" and "vicious" allegations that he did anything wrong.

Buyers perceive U.S. as inferior

The American Business Conference recently surveyed its members and concluded that some foreign buyers believe that U.S. products have a quality problem. The perception that U.S. goods can't match the quality of foreign products is the biggest barrier to increasing U.S. exports, the organization said.

The survey didn't demonstrate that U.S. goods are inferior but only suggested that some buyers believe them to be inferior.

Increasing U.S. sales overseas is a job for both the private sector and the public sector. For its part, the government should concentrate on knocking down unfair trade barriers and letting U.S. goods compete fairly in the world market.

Congress should resist protectionist legislation, which tends to bring about retaliation and inhibit trade.

If it's true that some potential overseas buyers look down on American goods simply because they were made in America, exporters have a marketing problem. But this need not be fatal. Perceptions can be changed. That's what marketing strategies and advertising campaigns are for.

Urges donations to Justice family

To the editor:

As many in our community already know, Amanda Justice, daughter of Gwen and Dan Justice, died Monday, Feb. 9.

She was a precious baby with the heart of a fighter and she did indeed fight a hard battle.

Many who know and love Gwen and Dan, and who understand all they've gone through, want to offer financial help to the family. The financial in a situation like this are staggering.

Those who would like to help may make a deposit into the account at Security State Bank under the names Dan or Gwen Justice for Amanda.

I'd like to offer my sincere appreciation for those who have already contributed.

Racism prompts reader's letter

To the editor:

The recent publicity regarding the Life and Death of Marilyn Monroe, coupled with her after death fame saddens me. In 1965 the film industry lost not one but two illustrious actresses.

The second was Ms. Dorothy Dandridge whose death and life was closely aligned with Marilyn's. Both of these women had their share of failed marriages, personal problems and questionable deaths.

Also due to their beauty and provocative mannerism each found difficulty obtaining serious movie roles. Dorothy Dandridge won her claim to fame when she was nominated Best Actress for her role in the 1954 film "Carmen Jones" with Harry Belafonte as her co-star. Her last important American film was "Porgy and Bess" in 1959.

There is one major aspect of differences which separates Dorothy from Marilyn: Dorothy was considered as a "Negro" first and an actress second.

Citizen concerned about crime

To the editor:

I am writing this just as another concerned citizen over all the violent crimes going on in Big Spring.

When is it going to stop? If our city officials or jurors don't start getting tougher it's not going to stop. It used to be a safe and good place to live. But all you hear anymore is someone getting stabbed or shot.

Then, that person getting out on bond, just to cause someone else harm. When they do go to court our jurors aren't hard enough on them. If it was their family or close friend they would want that person punished to the full extent. Our kids are learning from us.

A lot of people are moving out of this town for crime and lack of work. Little by little our town is becoming a ghost town where someone can get more time for burglary than they can for killing someone. Since city officials and jurors don't do their jobs maybe citizens will have to do what they can.

Turkish soldiers guard Soviet border diligently

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The Soviet soldiers down in the valley at the Arpacay dam were so close that their facial features and their foggy breath in the nippy air could be made out through low-grade binoculars from the Turkish side of the border.

No magnification was needed to identify the face painted in red and white, nearly 14 feet high, on the side of the Soviet protocol building. It was Lenin, and when it appeared some years ago, the Turks responded by painting a portrait of equal size on their protocol building — of modern Turkey's founder, Kemal Ataturk.

Aside from the artistic competition, there was a deceptive feeling of tranquility when Dale Van Atta made a rarely permitted visit to this key position on the 378-mile Turkish-Soviet border. He interviewed Turkish soldiers put there to block what has been a traditional Russian invasion route over the centuries.

"Because it's the border, we're proud to serve here," said a 21-year-old soldier who had been on duty there for a year, one of 500 at the post overlooking the shared dam in the valley.

"There is a border fence — on the Soviet side. We have no concern that Turks will escape to the Soviet Union," an official explained with a smile. Once a month, the Soviets and Turks have a protocol meeting at one or the other of the border buildings. There is no camaraderie between the two opposing forces.

A 20-year-old Turk explained that his standing orders were to arrest anyone who crossed the border from Soviet Armenia. If the intruder opened fire, the Turk had orders to shoot back.

What if a full-scale Soviet attack came? "We will try our best or die in the attempt," said a 32-year-old tank commander calmly. Under questioning, he conceded that the Turkish border force wouldn't stand much of a chance.

Tactically, the best bet would be to fall back on the nearby town of Kars and the Arpacay dam, where NATO nuclear weapons are deployed. Retreat would be in order, use the Turks' weaponry is dictated by military standards. Their principal tank, the U.S.-made M-48, dates to the Korean War era.

No tank traps have been constructed, even though the Soviets have a contingent of some 5,000 modern T-64 and T-72 tanks ready to roll less than 30 miles away. And a chemical attack preceding a Soviet invasion "would wipe the Turks out," according to an American official. "They have hardly a gas mask among them," he explained.

But the Turks are not taken lightly by the Soviet high command. Their ferocity and determination in defense of their eastern border near Mount Ararat includes the do-or-die sacrifice of an entire Turkish division, which froze to death, legend has it, rather than retreat in the face of Russian invaders.

"We know that from the lowest-ranking private to the highest-ranking general, they will fight to the last man," said an American colonel in the capital city of Ankara. "They'll do it. They are exactly the kind of ally we need on that front." Then he added with some exasperation: "But we expect them to fight with slingshots and crossbows in this modern era."

The Turkish military is not so pessimistic. They understand that they would not fight alone — that America would be with them. They count on U.S. nuclear deterrence to keep the Soviets from invading. "If there were a war with Russia, it is going to be (in alliance) with the United States," a Turkish intelligence officer said.

The Turks know it would be no picnic, though. Standing in the office Florence Nightingale used in Istanbul's Selimiye Barracks during the Crimean War, the same officer was asked if the barracks would again house wounded in a future war. "We won't have time to think about it," the Turks said. "We won't have a chance to think about it."

Guest columnist A.G. office fights rate increases

By JIM MATTOX
Texas Attorney General
For the past year, the Attorney General's Office has increased efforts at representing the public interest before the State Board of Insurance.

Before that, the public did not have its own spokesman when the Board set insurance rates for everything from automobile insurance to general liability insurance for businesses.

The Attorney General is granted the statutory authority to represent the public interest in insurance matters in Article 1.09-1 of the Texas Insurance Code, which says: "In all rate hearings and policy form proceedings before the Board or the Commissioner of Insurance, the Attorney General may intervene in the public interest."

This last year, when I became aware of the huge sums of money being granted to insurance companies in Texas, I decided the time had come to exercise this statutory right.

Consider these facts: The aggregate amount of increase granted by the State Board of Insurance for workers compensation insurance companies in Texas in 1985 was 48.7 percent.

In December 1986, the State Board of Insurance announced an additional 17.7 percent increase, which means that workers' compensation rates in Texas have increased by 64.4 percent in a mere year.

Just considering the latest 17.7 percent increase, this means that Texas business owners will be required to pay more than $380 million more in workers' compensation rates.

I hope readers agree that this kind of increase deserves and demands attention. Regarding automobile insurance rates, the insurance industry has requested an additional 19.7 percent overall increase, which would translate to an additional $580 million that the citizens of this state would have to pay, if granted by the State Board of Insurance.

I also have intervened in that case to protect the public interest and have produced testimony that automobile insurance rates should be decreased instead of increased, particularly in light of the facts that more and more of our drivers are wearing their seatbelts and that DWI laws are stiffer than ever before.

The Journal of Commerce recently noted that the property and casualty insurance industry reported an after tax income of $3 billion for the third quarter of 1986, and that written premiums for the year to date were $130 billion — up 23 percent from the figure a year ago.

Personal life not company business

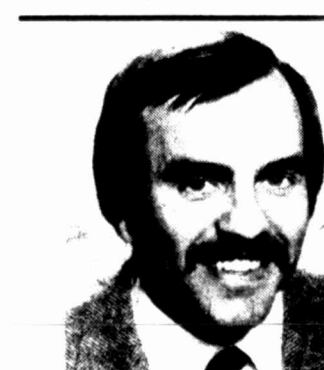

By STEPHEN CHAPMAN

The negative public reaction evoked by the decision of a Chicago-based manufacturer to forbid smoking by its employees, whether on or off the job, is both legitimate and wholly understandable. What many Americans rightly fear is the erosion of generally-accepted notions of personal privacy under the assault of a growing intolerance.

USG Acoustical Products, a producer of building products with nearly 2,000 workers in eight states, is one of the first employers to require employees to refrain from smoking or risk losing their jobs. But it isn't the first to intrude into regulating its workers' private conduct.

In the last few years, the rage among corporations has been testing the urine of applicants and employees for the use of illicit drugs. After a period in which the social and legal constraints on certain types of behavior were relaxed, there is an impulse in both corporations and government to impose conformity.

USG may be a special case. The company says it is trying to reduce the danger from smoking combined with the inhalation of various fibers produced in its factories. That may be a reasonable way to minimize its exposure to lawsuits by workers. But other employers, including several hospitals and municipal governments, have less of an excuse for anathemizing those who smoke.

In the private sector, this sort of surveillance is usually justified as an efficiency measure, intended to relieve the company of the economic burden imposed by drug-impaired workers.

Professional scare-mongers like to throw around frighteningly large estimates of the costs of drug abuse, but the estimates are generally phony, serving only to rationalize curbs on conduct the employer dislikes.

The real impulse is apparent in the sort of tests commonly chosen. They are not designed to measure impairment on the job, which is the true danger to productivity. They are not limited to employees who display symptoms of drug abuse.

They are not meant to detect the drug that undoubtedly causes more economic losses than any other, namely alcohol. What they are meant to do is to detect and deter the use of illegal drugs, anywhere, anytime, whether it affects job performance or not.

When executives get involved in policing their employees' lives, they generally do it clumsily and dangerously. One result of corporations' enthusiasm for drug testing is that a lot of corporations are getting fleeced. Some of the most widely used tests are highly inaccurate, and many of the technicians interpreting the results are careless or incompetent.

New York state regulators who checked the proficiency of drug testing labs found that errors were made by 66 percent of them — a rate triple that of labs that don't test for drugs. In most cases the labs failed to detect the presence of drugs, but in many instances labs also falsely incriminate the innocent.

Some admirers of these tests insist that the corporation and its stockholders shouldn't have to bear the cost of drug abuse. But when the tests yield unreliable results, they are a waste. And those tests that are accurate, and interpreted accurately, may be too expensive to justify their use.

But the real danger goes beyond the economic ones. Private firms are properly free to use whatever criteria they choose (aside from race, sex, religion and the like) in hiring and firing. But a tradition has long been established that what an employee does on her own time is her own business. If it affects one's work, the boss has a right to intervene; if not, he's obliged to butt out.

That is not a policy that ought to be enforced by the government, but it is a sound one nonetheless. One of the things Americans find unattractive about socialism and communism is that the employer wields too much control over affairs that have nothing to do with one's work.

That control will always be less in any capitalist enterprise, because workers can choose from other employers. But if most corporations start meddling in the personal affairs of their workers, they will surely be able to force many employees to do things against their will, for no good reason.

One of the nice things about living in this society is the widespread deference to the prerogatives of the individual, a deference marked not only by our legal and constitutional rules but by the informal customs of daily life.

It grows out of an admirable American conviction that people should make choices — particularly moral choices — according to their consciences, not according to the demands of the group. It would be a shame to lose it.

Wife grieves husband's cancer death

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter signed "Grieving in Gulfport, Miss." She spoke of her younger sister dying of cancer due to cigarettes.

I, too, have lost a loved one to cigarettes. My husband died of cancer two months ago. Over the years, each of our kids asked their father to quit smoking many times. I recall one saying, after seeing a film at school, "Dad, if you saw what we saw today, you'd never smoke again."

He didn't see his youngest daughter graduate from college. He will never have the privilege of walking her down the aisle on her wedding day. He will never fish with his friends again, or go to church with his family, or hold me close and say "I love you."

This family will never be the same again. We had a rich, full life together. But it ended too soon. And if writing this letter will make a few people throw away their cigarettes, it will be worth it.

DOROTHY MORD,
MINNETONKA, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend whose dog is sick and growing feeble, and will soon have to be put to sleep. He has had the dog for 13 years and is very attached to her. When his pet dies, what expression of my sympathy would be appropriate?

Dear Abby

This truly concerns me. I want to show my friend how much I care about his loss, but I don't want to come across as foolish or overreacting.

HIS FRIEND OF MANY YEARS

DEAR FRIEND: One who must put a beloved pet to sleep after 13 years of togetherness will grieve for that pet much as a parent would mourn the loss of a child. Not to diminish the depth of human relationships, but that's the feeling many pet owners have experienced. So do send flowers or a warm letter of condolence. It will be deeply appreciated, I assure you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 41 years died last summer, so in order to avoid receiving Christmas cards addressed to Edith Johnson, which I detest, I sent my Christmas cards out early and clearly wrote my return address as "Mrs. Horace A. Johnson."

Well, some insisted on addressing their Christmas cards to Edith Johnson. I was so angry that I drew a line through the "Edith" and above it wrote "Mrs. Horace A." and returned it to the senders, explaining that although I had lost my husband, his name was given — not loaned — to me.

A neighbor insists that a new etiquette has taken over, and a widow's mail should be addressed to her by her given name.

MRS. HORACE A. JOHNSON
DEAR MRS. JOHNSON: Your

neighbor is in error. It's the woman's choice. She may use her first name, the initial of her maiden name and her husband's last name — or, as you prefer, she can be addressed as Mrs. Horace A. Johnson. That name is yours until you change it by remarriage. And if you never remarry, you retain your husband's name forever.

DEAR ABBY: The pastor of our church (Oliver Baptist) said that you had been married three times. I see nothing wrong with divorce. I like your column, and his remarks will not stop me from reading it. I don't believe you've been married three times and would appreciate knowing the truth.

A FAN IN LAWTON, OKLA.

DEAR FAN: The truth is your pastor is mistaken. I am still married to my first husband.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

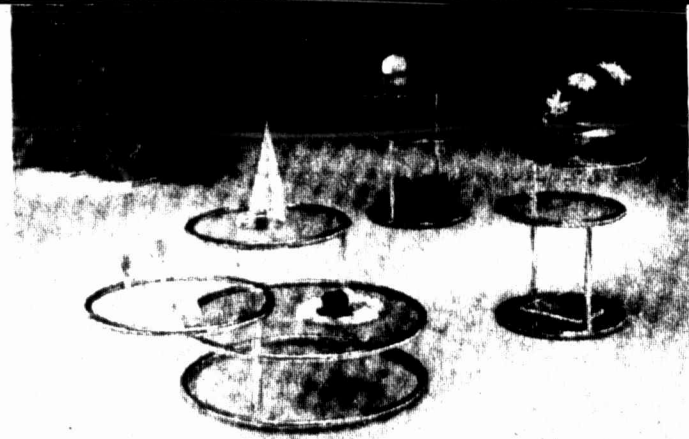

Scouts to honor director

Volunteers in the Scouting program in the Lone Star District will honor Steve Odom, retired council executive, March 1st.

Odom and his wife, Alta, will be honored guests at a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. at Dorothy Garrett Hall.

Odom retires this month after 17 years as executive director of the Buffalo Trail Council.

Clem Jones, district chairman, urges all adult volunteers who served during Odom's tenure to attend the reception.

Police chief speaks to Lions Club

The new police chief, Joe Cook, spoke to the Downtown Lions filling them in on his philosophies of law enforcement and listed pressing needs he saw in the department.

The prime function of the department is to provide security, and this translates mostly into patrol, he declared.

Cook said he wanted an open-door policy, and if people have complaints about police, "I hope they will tell me, too."

Among the needs he sees are for more basic equipment such as standardized weaponry, spotlights, radios, and a workable computer.

These are being submitted along with needs of other departments in budget revisions now underway. The other need he pinpointed is for training.

Cook praised the intelligence and dedication of the force, seeing great potential as experience is earned. The department will seek cooperation with prosecutors, but it is not a judicial agency, he reminded.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company (TU Electric), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to obtain a Certificate of Convenience and Necessity for the proposed Falcon-Seaboard Cogeneration 345 kV Loop, as described below.

The proposed 345 kV transmission line will lie wholly within Howard County. The line will begin in TU Electric's existing Midland East-Morgan Creek 345 kV line at a point approximately 5.5 miles east of U.S. Highway 87 and approximately 5.25 miles south of Interstate Highway 20. The line will extend in a northerly direction approximately 5.5 miles to a point located approximately 0.4 mile north of Interstate Highway 20 and next to the east property line of the Cosden Refinery, then extend in a northwesterly direction approximately 1.5 miles, terminating at the Falcon-Seaboard Cogeneration Switching Station located on the Cosden Refinery property. The estimated cost of this project is $3,711,400.

Persons who wish to intervene in the proceeding or comment upon action sought, should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or call the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 for teletypewriter for the deaf within 15 days of this notice.

A complete copy of the application, including maps showing the location of the transmission line, is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas at Austin, Texas.

Lutherans celebrate 100 years

Members of St. Paul Lutheran Church are celebrating 100 years of Lutheranism in Howard County this year, according to the Rev. Carroll Kohl, who has served as pastor here since 1972.

"The first Lutherans in Howard County were German farmers who lived in the Luther Community," Kohl said.

Much of the early Lutheran history is recalled in the book Missouri in Texas, by the Rev. W.H. Bewie, who reports that Howard County's first visit from a Lutheran clergyman was in 1887.

The young preacher reported that "the great drought crippled the work of the missions. People began to move away. The fields were scorched earth. Cattle died in numbers. Drinking water sometimes had to be hauled long distances."

Early circuit riding ministers served all of West Texas, from Abilene to El Paso, according to Bewie's writings. The preaching stations included Cisco, Abilene, Baird and Big Spring. Ministers travelled the T&P railroad to reach the faithful, said Rev. Bewie.

Howard County did not receive a resident pastor until September 1906, when the Rev. C.M. Beyer was assigned to the 25-member Zion Lutheran Church in the Luther community.

In Big Spring, services were conducted in German and held in members' homes until 1929, when the struggling congregation purchased the former First Presbyterian Church, built in 1895. The small white church building was moved to 501 N. Gregg St., present location of the Kwike convenience store.

Big Spring's First Lutheran Church, shown here, was purchased in 1929. Built in 1895 as the First Presbyterian Church, it was dismantled in 1957 when the current St. Paul Lutheran Church was constructed. Howard County Lutherans are observing their 100th anniversary this year.

Charter members Evelyn Pachall Reinhold Weinkauff, George and Gus Heckler and their families are still active members of the church. Alma Foster, whose parents held services in their home, now lives at Mountain View Lodge.

During World War II, when Big Spring Bombardier School was active, Big Spring's northside was declared "off limits" to military personnel, preventing Lutheran military from attending the church on North Gregg.

Rather than attempt to change the off-limits rule, church members began a search for a new location. In 1944, the property at Ninth and Scurry Streets was purchased, and the little church, which had once before been moved from the southside to the northside, was again moved to the southside of town.

The Rev. O.H. Horn, then pastor, said that "Never will I forget the empty feeling when one Saturday night the Mrs. and I went out to see where we would find our church building. It was halfway to the Scurry Street location, and it looked a sight."

"The studs had been jarred from their supports and the walls had simply slipped over the flooring. All we could see was an empty shell of four walls with the floor about in the center," he recalled.

Despite Rev. Horn's despair, the building survived the move and served the congregation until the present church was built in 1957. Building committee members were Jack Watkins and Moran Oppgaard, still members of St. Paul, and the late Gilbert Pachall and Ray Cantrell.

Church membership doubled during the years when Webb Air Force Base was a pilot training base. The contributions of military families have always played a vital part in the growth of the local church. The church suffered a tremendous drop in membership when the base closed.

The church now has 352 members. Kohl conducts two Sunday morning services, at 8:30 a.m. and at 10:45 a.m. Sunday School, weekday school, an active choir, couples club, ladies and youth organizations serve the needs of the members.

Two years ago, members contributed the funds and most of the manpower to build a large, modern parish hall and kitchen, used frequently by the church and other organizations for meetings and banquets.

Kohl said members plan a special centennial celebration in the fall, as well as various events during the year that will remind everyone of the struggle and faithfulness of the early pioneers who brought their Christian faith to West Texas.

Conservatives accept Baptist Press director

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The newly elected director of the Baptist Press will be under close scrutiny by conservatives in the Southern Baptist Convention who think he has been unfair to them, says the convention's president.

"He'll be watched, since conservatives feel he hasn't been as sympathetic to their cause in the past," the Rev. Adrian Rogers, said Wednesday after Al Shackleford accepted his new job despite the opposition.

Rogers disputed Shackleford's contention that his election by the convention's executive committee by a 32-26 vote on Tuesday was divinely blessed.

"I told him I didn't know if it's God's will for him to take this job or not," Rogers said.

Shackleford, 54, of suburban Brentwood, said he decided to take the position after a night of thought and prayer.

Decision reflects traditional values

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II's decision to set aside a special year devoted to Mary reflects his desire to bring back such traditional customs as pilgrimages to sanctuaries and religious processions, Vatican officials say.

"The church has become extremely intellectual after the Second Vatican Council," said Monsignor Diarmuid Martin of the Pontifical Commission for Justice and Peace, "and the Holy Father wants to bring back some of the traditional warmth that has gone out of fashion."

This past New Year's Day, the pontiff announced that the Roman Catholic Church will celebrate a Marian year, honoring the Virgin Mary, beginning this coming June 7 and ending Aug. 15, 1988.

"Today, many people, especially the young, think that being a Catholic means to be part of an unending debate over church doctrines or the church's stand on global issues of peace and justice," said another Vatican official involved in planning Marian year activities.

The pope wants to change that by stressing the importance of what they describe as popular devotion, said the official, speaking only on the usual Vatican condition of anonymity.

"It means not only attending church services regularly, but also making pilgrimages to Marian sanctuaries, which is both penance and fun, and taking part in religious processions in villages and towns to observe major religious days or honor local patron saints," he added.

Religious processions and annual pilgrimages to sanctuaries have largely gone out of style, especially in the developed world, but are still popular in the pontiff's native Poland.

After the Second Vatican Council (1962-65) fashioned modernizing reforms, local church leaders have abandoned processions and pilgrimages because they were considered "primitive," the official said. "But with it, we also have lost the warmth and simplicity associated with traditional religious life."

It is the second time that the church has designated a year for special veneration of the Virgin Mary. The first was from December 1953 to December 1954 to mark the 100th anniversary of the proclamation of the dogma of the immaculate conception.

During the Marian year, each diocese would organize special pilgrimages to Marian shrines, conventions and study weeks as well as stepped up efforts for charity.

The Vatican said the Catholics could gain indulgence, or the pardon of temporal punishment of sin, by devoutly taking part in some of the Marian year activities.

Christ's mother is revered throughout the Catholic world. She has inspired thousands of painters and sculptors through the centuries. The church teaches that Mary conceived Christ through divine intervention and remained a virgin, and was assumed bodily into heaven.

Church briefs

Church sponsors youth all-nighter

First Church of God, 2009 Main, is sponsoring a West Texas District Youth All-Nighter on Feb. 27 beginning at 8 p.m.

Youth groups from Odessa, Abilene, Ira, and Clovis, N.M., will gather at the church for an hour of crowd-breaker activities.

The group will then eat at a local pizza restaurant, play indoor golf, and hear a concert by the musical group Messenger, from Mid-America Bible College.

After the concert, the teen-agers will spend the rest of the evening and early morning hours at the YMCA, swimming, playing basketball, and other activities.

An inspiring film for teen-agers will be shown with time for teens to talk with counselors. The event will conclude with donuts at dawn at the church.

Area youth, age 13 to 18 are invited to attend. Please contact Pastor Delmer Loy, at the church.

Pack No. 45 will share a potluck supper.

The banquet celebrates the 77th birthday of scouting and scout Den 2.

First Church of God cook-off set

First Church of God, 2009 Main, will have their second annual Chili Cook-off, on Sunday.

The evening will begin with an hour of praise and testimony in song and music followed by a supper of homemade chili, salad, or sandwiches in the Fellowship Hall. The public is invited.

Judges will select winners in such categories as the hottest chili, sweetest chili, the meatiest chili, and the "chiliest" chili among others.

Club shooter out on parole for theft

DALLAS — A Mesquite man who allegedly wounded two people in a crowded north Dallas country-western nightclub was on parole after serving prison terms for burglary and auto theft, according to Texas Department of Correction records.

Steven Leroy Dietzman, 29, was in serious condition at Presbyterian Hospital where he was under guard after being ordered held in lieu of $100,000 bond on two charges of attempted capital murder. Dietzman is accused of opening fire Wednesday night at the Belle Starr Club after being ejected for using abusive language to a female bartender.

Dallas police reported that Dietzman had been sentenced to 20 years in prison in April 1978 on a burglary conviction. He was paroled in December 1984, according to Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee.

Aircraft bomber leaks fuel again

ABILENE — For the second time in about a month, about 4,000 gallons of jet fuel leaked from a $265 million B-1B bomber parked on the Dyess Air Force Base flightline, base officials say.

The same B-1B that leaked the last time did it again Wednesday, and a Dyess spokesman said the leaks have prompted the Air Force to order a "one-time inspection of all B-1Bs."

Wednesday's spill was from "the same aircraft and the same fuel line" involved in a Jan. 15 incident, according to Maj. Joseph "Doc"

Mills, 96th Bomb Wing public affairs officer.

He said the two spills have nothing to do with the bomber's well-publicized fuel leaks, which have caused the Air Force to ask Congress for $469 million in additional funds for modifications.

"We consider the fuel leak problem a separate issue," Mills said. "This is a freak or accidental occurrence that can be taken care of by maintenance as opposed to redevelopment or redesign of the aircraft's internal fuel system."

Senate disapproves TECAT II test

AUSTIN — A Senate committee has approved a bill removing the requirement that teachers be tested on how much they know about the subjects they teach.

June Karp, assistant to the president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the bill "removes the specter of TECAT II, and we appreciate it."

TECAT, or Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, was a literacy exam administered to teachers last year over the objection of most teacher organizations.

The bill abolishing the "subject-matter" test was sent to the full Senate on an 8-0 vote Thursday, after representatives of teacher organizations testified that getting rid of the test would boost teacher morale.

Sen. Carl Parker, Education Committee chairman and bill sponsor, offered two reasons for abolishing the test — it is costly and fails to insure quality education.

Administering the test would cost the state nearly $14.4 million in 1988-89, according to an estimate by the Legislative Budget Board.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, estimated the cost at $10 million to $20 million, and said, "We will not, in our time, have enough money to afford it."

El Paso bar tests patrons for AIDS

EL PASO (AP) — This West Texas city's isolation has helped keep low the number of AIDS victims but screening tests at a gay church and bar are attempts at halting the spread of the fatal disease, a health official said.

There have been 13 people confirmed as having AIDS in El Paso, and seven have died, said Tony Bengert, a disease-intervention specialist with the El Paso City-County Health District. That's few compared to other cities, such as San Francisco, where the number of AIDS victims is expected to reach 20,000 by 1992.

"El Paso has been described as a U-turn 600 miles from nowhere," because of its location in the West Texas desert, said Bengert. "In a sense that has worked to our advantage."

Bengert said the estimated gay population in El Paso, which has about a half-million residents, is 13,000 to 18,000. Research shows that within five years of being exposed to the AIDS virus, there's a 20 percent to 40 percent chance of developing the disease, he said.

Screening and counseling about AIDS was offered last November at a predominantly gay church in El Paso. Within the next six weeks, the same services will be offered at Old Plantation, the largest gay bar in the city, he said.

"The idea is to have it at a place where people feel more comfortable than going to a government health center," said Bengert.

The screening tests will be offered in private rooms at the Old Plantation bar during operation hours to gauge response to the idea, said Bengert.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is believed to be caused by a virus that attacks the body's ability to fight disease.

Those exposed to the incurable and deadly AIDS virus may not develop the disease but could still transmit it to others.

"There are closed areas in the building and dressing rooms, because we offer a professional show, and there's another bar apart from the main one" where the test and counseling will be offered, said Bob Bonaventure, manager of Old Plantation.

The tests to reveal the presence of antibodies cost $10 each but the fee is waived for those who can't pay.

Canyon too deep for Lady Steers

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — The Canyon Eagles conducted school Thursday night in Class 4-A bi-district basketball action at Coronado gym. Unfortunately the Big Spring Lady Steers were the class, as the Eagles gave Big Spring a lesson in all aspects of the game, while flying to a 67-42 win.

Canyon, ranked number three in the state, showed the Lady Steers why the Panhandle school is considered one of the strongest basketball programs in the state. Coach Joe Lombard's squad shot well and put on a defensive gem while completely baffling the Lady Steers, who were making their first playoff appearance ever.

The Eagles shot 54 percent from the floor and a perfect 11-of-11 from the line, while causing 20 Big Spring turnovers which resulted in easy scoring baskets. Meanwhile Big Spring didn't shoot that badly, 45 percent from the floor and 60 percent from the foul line, but the Lady Steers had to work for every shot.

The sticky Canyon man-to-man defense was so good, that it almost completely took Big Spring from its game plan. A good indication of Canyon's defensive prowess was that Big Spring's guards, Paige Clawson and Katrina Thompson, the second and third leading scorers on the team, managed to take only nine shots the entire game.

The only Lady Steer that had her usual strong game was senior forward Teresa Pruitt, who proved that she can play with the best. Pruitt sunk seven of 10 field goals and eight of 10 free throws, ending the game with a team-high 22 points and six rebounds.

While Pruitt was Big Spring's only scoring threat, the Eagles had lots of their own, particularly forwards Marsha Eskew and guard Tammy Weatherly, who scored 17 and 16 points respectively.

Canyon really won the game in the first half as "awesome" best describes the Eagles play.

Big Spring led 4-2 two minutes into the game, thanks to a basket and two free throws by Pruitt. From then on it was all Canyon. Weatherly found the going good against the Big Spring zone, hitting all four of her outside shots in the first quarter.

The Eagles hit eight of 12 field goals in the period while bolting to a 16-7 lead after one period of play. Big Spring managed only three field goal attempts in the quarter. Pruitt was two-of-two and Nikki Rodriguez's attempt was blocked by Eskew.

Eskew took over the scoring duties in the second quarter for Canyon. Her teammates constantly found her open inside against the Big Spring defense as she scored six straight baskets in the quarter. By halftime the game was out of reach with Canyon leading 37-15.

Pruitt was Big Spring's only weapon in the half, scoring 12 points. Amazing as it seems, Big Spring had taken only nine field goal attempts in the first half. Besides Pruitt and Rodriguez, Sheri Myrick, who came off the bench with 45 seconds left in the half, took one shot. Clawson and Thompson didn't take a shot.

"We played well in the first half and that was the difference in the game," said Lombard. "That first half was as good as we've played all year. We played well on both ends of the floor and our guards did a good job defensively. But you've got to give coach Carmichael and Big Spring credit. They've come a long way in a short time."

The Canyon barrage continued in the third quarter and Big Spring, who committed nine turnovers in the first half, turned the ball over six times in the first four minutes of play of the third quarter. With two minutes left in the quarter, Canyon led 49-21 and the game was over for all practical reasons.

Big Spring played well in the fourth quarter, outscoring Canyon 19-14. But Lombard had cleared his bench with six minutes left in the game.

"They played super defense and had some hot shooting," said Carmichael of Canyon's play. "I felt going into the game the only way we had a chance was for us to catch them on a poor shooting night, and we didn't. To me it seemed they never missed."

"I did think Teresa played a very good game. She handled herself well out there tonight."

"Canyon has a very good program. We came up here to see where we stood against the best in Texas. Now we have to go back and start closing the gap."

The Lady Steers end the season with a 25-5 record. Canyon, 29-2, will play the winner of the Stephenville-Burkburnett contest.

'Charity' dooms Hawks

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Though the Howard College Hawks scored 13 more points from the field than the visiting South Plains Texans, the Texans made 35 of 43 foul shots to win the game 101-91.

In addition to the inequality at the line, a cold stretch after the half contributed to the Hawks' demise. Leading 41-38 after the first half, the Hawks didn't get their first second half field goal until nearly five minutes had elapsed.

In the first 10 minutes of the second half, the Hawks scored just 11 points, as compared to 24 for the Texans. With 9:36 left in the game, South Plains led 63-52.

"They shot real good from the free throw line," said Hawks' coach Larry Brown. "But it's just kind of disappointing for us to outscore them by 13 from the field and still lose the game."

"In the first 10 minutes of the first half we only had 11 points, and that's the time period when they really put us away. Over the other 30 minutes, we won by two," Brown said.

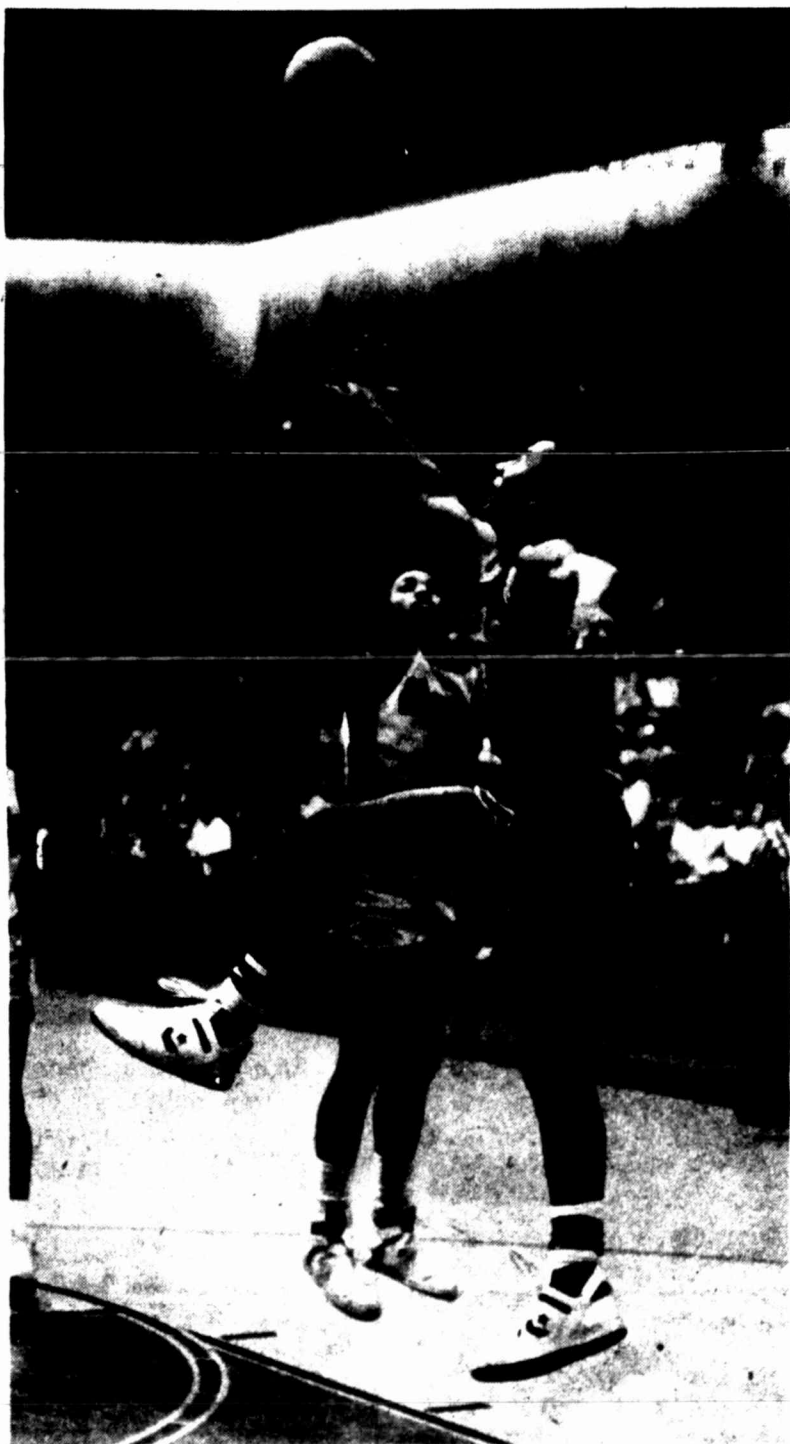

The loss dropped Howard to 14-13 overall and 7-7 in conference. Odessa, which defeated Clarendon 86-63, took over the all important fourth place slot in the conference, and is now a half-game ahead of the Hawks.

Odessa has games against Frank Phillips, Clarendon and New Mexico remaining, while Howard plays at Frank Phillips and South Plains next week.

"We have to beat Frank Phillips — for a winning season, and for everything else," Brown said.

The Hawks led by as many as six in the first half, but were hurt by foul trouble and an injury to Dennis Rhodes. Rhodes scored 10 of the Hawks' first 14 points, but he took a knee in the leg late in the half and sat until the second half.

Meanwhile, Mitchell Porter HAWKS page 2B

Playoffs look good for Queens

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

The Howard College Hawk-Queens just about wrapped up a playoff spot Thursday night, whipping the South Plains Lady Texans by a 61-54 count.

The win puts the Queens in a third place tie with South Plains, and the top four teams qualify for the tournament in Waco. Both teams are 6-4, and fifth place Clarendon, after a 95-73 loss to Odessa, dropped to 4-5.

Queens' coach Don Stevens couldn't have been happier with his team's play.

"It was a great win for us, and a critical win. I thought Gooch (Leslie) played an excellent floor game, and I was glad to see Carolyn Willandt come around for us."

"Except for some rough spots, I thought everybody played well. What I really liked best about it was our defense — we played our best man to man defense of the year," said a chipper Stevens.

As the coach said, the Queens' defense was exceptional. Often the South Plains shooters had to rush their shots to beat the time clock, as the scrapping Queens closed all the doors to the goal.

With 18:40 remaining in the game, Trena Jackson scored with her odd looking, but effective jumper. Jackson pushes the ball with two hands, and it's not the way 'they' teach it. It goes in, however, and Stevens has said he won't try and change her form. Her bucket gave the Queens a 33-26 lead, and they appeared in control.

South Plains rallied to within one at 37-36 with 14 minutes to go, but the resilient Queens beat them solidly from that point on. Willandt hit a turnaround jumper to move the Queens ahead 39-36.

When Jackson stripped the ball from a South Plains guard and scored on an easy layup with 9:10 left, the Queens led 52-40. Less than a minute later, Terri Powell swished a shot that would have been a three-pointer in any league, but a women's league, where there are no three pointers.

Willandt scored to give the Queens a 13-point lead with 3:57 to play, and though they didn't score again, they held on for the 61-54 final margin.

During the final stretch, the Queens played run and hide from the Lady Texans, and Gooch was the ring leader. In one dribbling exhibition, she ran circles around the red faced Lady Texans for nearly half a minute, until finally one of the three girls guarding her managed to slap the ball out of bounds. The crowd rained applause on the Globetrotter-like dribbling.

Jackson and Willandt led the Queens with 15 points apiece, and Powell followed with 11 points. Jackson also led the club in rebounds with 11.

Lady Coyotes facing possible rematch with district foe O'Donnell

ODESSA — The Borden County Lady Coyotes advanced to the third round of the state high school basketball playoffs by defeating Dell City 43-25 in Class A action at Odessa Sports Complex.

Coach Bill May's Lady Coyotes relied on a pressing defense and the inside scoring of Elana Himes and Lisha Sternadel to gain their 24th win of the season.

Led by guard Kelli Williams' nine steals, the Lady Coyotes collected 25 steals as a team. Meanwhile freshman forward Sternadel got inside to score 14 points. Sophomore post player Himes, coming off a 27 point performance against Sanderson Tuesday, scored 10 points.

"We had a definite height advantage and we tried to take advantage of it," said coach May. "I didn't expect our press to work that well against such a quick team. We got 25 steals and I know they had another 20 turnovers. It was the best defense we've played all season."

The Lady Coyotes will play the winner of the O'Donnell-Ft. Hancock game tonight in Kermit. The game will be played Monday.

SMU will learn gridiron program's fate soon

DALLAS (AP) — Despite some indications the NCAA will not impose the "death penalty" on the Southern Methodist University football program, it probably will be a week or more before the school learns its fate, SMU's faculty representative said.

When he and other school officials met last weekend with the NCAA infractions committee at San Diego, the NCAA enforcement staff stopped short of recommending the suspension of football at SMU, faculty representative Lonnie Kliever said Thursday.

The enforcement staff's proposal at the hearing was the same as SMU's, Kliever said.

"We went into the hearing with the staff and the institution agreeing on violations and proposed penalties. Neither the institution nor the enforcement staff went in asking for the death penalty," Kliever said.

Kliever would not say what penalties the school and the enforcement staff proposed.

'Mean Joe' coaching old team

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Hall of Fame defensive tackle Joe Greene says he hopes to impart some of his "strong competitive desire" as defensive line coach for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Greene's return to the Steelers on Thursday was part of a reorganization that took the troubled special teams out of the direct supervision of Coach Chuck Noll.

Greene, 40, considered by some to be the best defensive tackle to play pro football, will replace Jon Kolb, a former teammate who has been the Steelers' sole defensive coach since 1982.

Kolb and Assistant Coach Dennis Fitzgerald will relieve Noll as special teams coach, a responsibility he has held since he took over as head coach in 1969. The special teams were often a target of criticism during the Steelers' recent 6-10 season.

Greene, who turned down an offer to be athletic director at his alma mater, North Texas State, said he may be a rookie at coaching, but "being out for the past five years has given me maturity and insight."

"I have a strong competitive desire to be the best that I can be. ... I have a love for the game that would allow me to impart whatever information I'm going to relay to the troops," he said.

Noll said Greene "falls into that category of people you like to have in an organization." "When you have intelligent, good people who like to make things happen, I think that describes Joe Greene," he said.

Greene, who was elected into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Jan. 27 in his first year of eligibility, played for 13 seasons with the Steelers from 1969 to 1981 and was a cornerstone of the team's four Super Bowl victories.

Dubbed "Mean Joe" for his ferocious play, Greene made the Pro Bowl 10 times and was the NFL Defensive Player of the Year in 1972 and 1974.

"Joe Greene was our guy," Noll said in an interview upon Greene's election to the Hall of Fame. "I never ran into anyone who wanted to play more and be better than he did."

Noll also announced the team will use a modified computer system designed to edit and break down game videotapes as an aid in evaluating opponents. Kolb and Fitzgerald, the former inside linebacker coach, will oversee that operation.

Kolb also will become more involved in the Steelers' conditioning program, working with strength and conditioning coach Walt Evans, the team said.

Jed Hughes, the outside linebackers coach, will assume overall responsibility for the linebackers.

After his retirement in 1982, Greene worked as color commentator for CBS for one season. In 1983, he worked with the Steelers' defensive linemen as a volunteer, only to quit after one week because he felt he was infringing on Kolb and Noll.

A former restaurateur in Texas, Greene also runs a venture that distributes frozen fruit bars.

Greene, who reports for duty March 2, becomes the fourth former Steeler to coach under Noll. The others are Kolb, defensive coordinator Tony Dungy and offensive backfield Coach Dick Hoak.

Celtics take advantage of Akeem's foul trouble

By The Associated Press

When the Houston Rockets need him, Akeem Olajuwon is usually there.

But he wasn't Thursday night, especially when the going got tough in the fourth quarter against the Boston Celtics.

The reason was foul trouble, and the result was a 99-92 victory for the Boston Celtics in a rematch of last year's NBA playoff finals.

"We made mistakes we normally don't make," said Olajuwon, who was hit with four fouls and a technical, all in the fourth period. "They are a very good team and they take advantage of your mistakes."

Olajuwon was actually outplayed by Boston's Robert Parish, who had 30 points and 12 rebounds. The Houston center had only 15 points and 11 rebounds.

The Celtics used a 10-2 spurt to take the lead for good midway in the third quarter, although the Rockets made a charge early in the fourth period. But Olajuwon picked up four quick fouls in the final period and the Celtics held on to beat back the Houston challenge.

Kevin McHale added 21 points for the Celtics and Larry Bird finished with 16 after suffering a cut near his right eye with 8:27 left in the game.

Steve Harris scored a career-high 22 points to lead the Rockets and Jim Petersen had 20 points, tying his season high.

Boston Coach K.C. Jones credited Parish with keeping the Celtics alive.

Pistons 117, Sonics 105

Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas scored 28 points apiece to lead Detroit over Seattle, handing the visiting SuperSonics their eighth consecutive loss.

The victory, Detroit's fourth in its last five games, gave the Pistons, 33-17, a one-game lead over idle Atlanta in the Central Division.

Dale Ellis led Seattle with 31 points, while Xavier McDaniel added 29.

Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said that a string of recent road games have contributed to the SuperSonics' woes.

Knicks 120, Cavaliers 105

Gerald Wilkins scored 29 points and rookie Kenny Walker added 20 to help New York snap a four-game losing streak. The Knicks, playing without regulars Gerald Henderson and Bill Cartwright, dealt Cleveland its 13th straight road loss.

Wilkins scored 10 of his points during a critical third-quarter stretch when New York broke the game open. Wilkins, scoring 20 or more points for the 21st time this season, keyed a 17-9 spurt to begin the third quarter and help the Knicks take a 79-69 advantage midway through the period. Wilkins added 13 assists in the game.

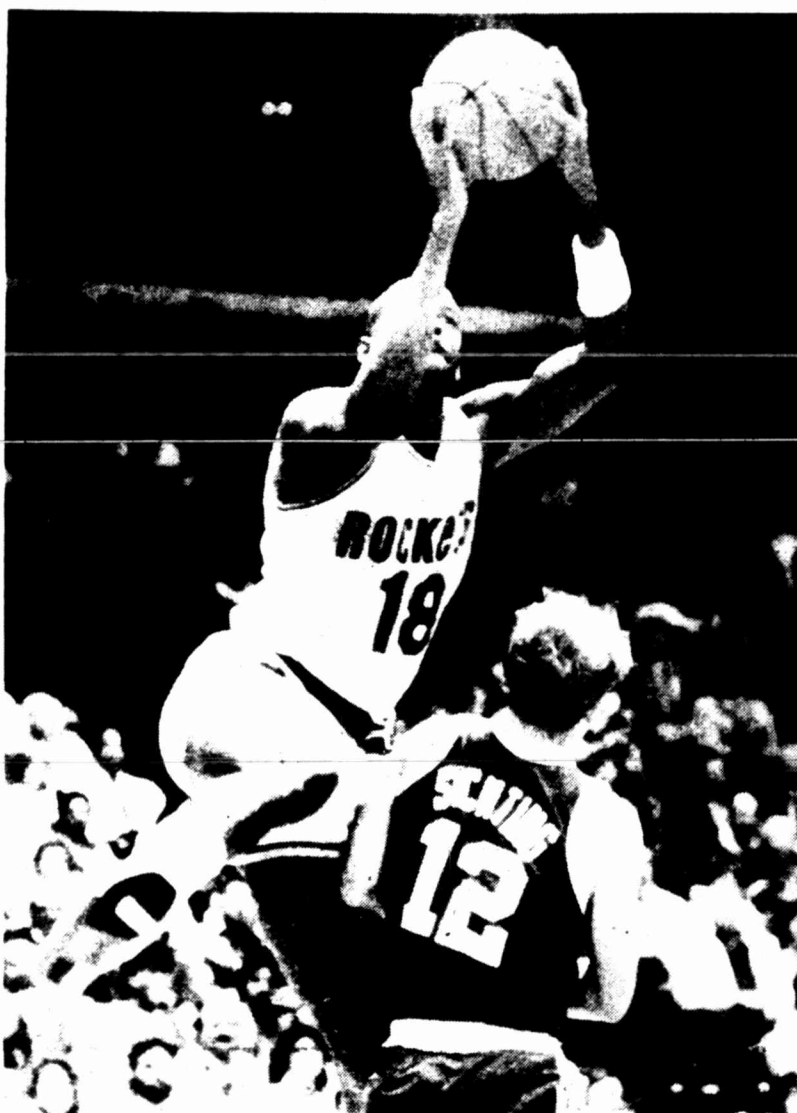

New York's defense held Cleveland to 30 per cent field goal shooting and forced the Cavaliers into committing 20 turnovers. And the Knicks, the league's worst rebounding club, did not get beaten off the boards, matching Cleveland's 50 rebounds.

"The key to tonight's game was defense," said New York Coach Bob Hill. "We got a lot of deflections and turned them into easy baskets. We tried to rebound tonight. Our effort was there. Our defense was our best offense."

Warriors 110, Nets 106

Joe Barry Carroll scored 22 points and Chris Mullin added 20 as Golden State defeated New Jersey to snap an eight-game road losing streak. The victory was only the fourth in 14 games for Golden State, while the Nets lost for the 17th time in 19 games.

The game was not as close as the score indicated. The Warriors opened an 11-point lead in the first quarter, stretched it to 14 at the half and led by as many as 19 in the third quarter before New Jersey outscored them 16-4 in the final 4:14 of that period to make it an 85-80 game.

But Carroll and Eric Floyd combined for 13 points in a 20-14 spurt at the start of the final quarter to give Golden State a 105-94 edge.

Hawks

was saddled with three quick fouls, after which he took a seat. With Porter and Rhodes out, the Hawks slowed the game down, but the Texans cut their lead to three by the half.

After the horrible ten minute stretch after the half, the Hawks rediscovered their shooting touch, but the Texans had rented the free throw line. Lavell Garror and Darryl Knight killed the Hawks with their charity shots.

Garror canned 14 of 14 from the line, and Knight made nine of 13. Garror's 14 were two more than the Hawks made.

With that kind of shooting, and that many chances to do it, there was little the Hawks could do. Three Hawks — Porter, Myron Wright and Walter Walker — fouled out.

With 3:58 remaining, Walker stole the ball at half court and passed to Rhodes, who was fouled making a layup. Rhodes hit the free throw, and the Hawks closed to 83-73, and there seemed a chance.

But the Texans hit a few more free throws, and sealed the win.

Texans coach Ron Mayberry said Garror is among the conference leaders in foul shooting, but he admitted his team didn't always shoot so well from the line.

"We were very fortunate. We had the right ones shooting them," he said.

Rhodes led the Hawks with 28 points, and also grabbed five rebounds. Walter Walker and Robert Barley each scored 14 points, and Myron Wright added 12. Wright and Bruce Mitchell led the team with six rebounds apiece.

Knight led the visitors with 30 points, and Greg Colbert scored 19. With two field goals, Garror finished with 18 points.

SUN COUNTRY'S TIPS TO SELLING A HOME IN A DOWN MARKET
Tip #2
A seller must realize that his home is in competition with many other homes and it is an agent's responsibility to help the seller understand that his or her home is literally in a race with other homes for that buyers attention, interest, desire and money. The seller and agent must also realize that the "competition" comes from those houses that are selling, not those that are still on the market.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, FEB. 21, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you need to take care of your health. Use much care on the highway and in other motion. Use your Saturday to catch up on errands and correspondence.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You want to get into new activities, but this is not the day for progress. Screen new partners wisely.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may feel that others are taking advantage of you, but this may not actually be the case.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) One who keeps harping on some point should be avoided. Save yourself some headache this way.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Your Saturday duties seem more difficult than usual. Don't argue with co-workers.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get into the recreational activities that you like, but make a little preparation first so they go well for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Nothing seems to work out as you please at home. Don't be forceful in trying to gain your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your friends may be too busy with their own affairs, so don't ask assistance for them at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are apt to act too hastily where a financial matter is concerned, so postpone and get results later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not rush after what you desire. Instead, make wise plans for the best possible results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get your time scheduled so that you can handle your duties wisely. Don't be forceful with your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are eager to be your gregarious self during the day, but be more discriminating for best results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep busy at personal activities and avoid outside meanderings that could bring you trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be apt to speak without much thought and get into trouble thusly, so teach this one the art of meditation. Early schooling is important here. Be sure to add foreign languages since much travel is possible. Make sure the diet is good.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
