Awarded

Appreciation dinner set Jan. 8

The annual Agricultural Appreciation Dinner will be Jan. 8. The dinner is sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

This dinner is free to all farmers and ranchers but tickets must be picked up at the chamber by Jan. 6.

For more information call the chamber at 263-7641.

Home subscription rates adjusted

Effective Friday, monthly home delivery rates for the Big Spring Herald will be adjusted to $8.35 monthly. The adjustment will be effective on all new subscriptions and renewals.

Circulation Manager Dale Ferguson said the adjustment of two cents per day is necessary because of an increase in the cost of newsprint and an increase in delivery cost. The Herald is printed on 100 percent recycled newsprint with soy ink.

The Herald offers a 10 percent discount to persons 55 years of age or older on three- or six-month subscriptions paid in advance at the newspaper.

For more information, contact the Herald Circulation Department at 263-7331.

Violence, suicide investigated by Sheriff's office

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Big Spring oilfield businessman David Hector, 56, died Sunday from a gunshot wound to the head, following an argument that sent his wife to the hospital.

Hector was pronounced dead in the garage of his residence, north of Big Spring off Gail Road, by Justice of the Peace China Long. Cause of death is thought to be a self-inflicted wound to the head from a .22 caliber pistol.

Prior to the apparent suicide, Hector had been agitated and unclear in his thinking, Howard County Sheriff's Deputy Barney Edens was told by relatives. An argument ensued between Hector and his wife, Rosaleen, and Hector reportedly assaulted his wife.

The woman was taken by relatives at the residence to Scenic Mountain Medical Center and treated for injuries to the head and body. She was released Monday afternoon, according to a hospital official.

After people at the home had left with Rosaleen Hector in route to the hospital, between 3:10 and 3:45 Sunday, the apparent suicide occurred, Edens said. "I think he just came to and realized what his condition had made him do... and was overcome."

"He took a pistol and went into the garage."

Circumstances relating to the apparent suicide began two years ago, according to investigators from the Howard County Sheriff's Department. Hector, who originated Dave's Tubing Testing and Dave's Hot Oil Service, was ex-

Marines move on to new objectives

The goal is security in Mogadishu

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOGADISHU, Somalia — With their primary military objectives secured, American and allied troops today began doing in earnest what they came to Somalia for — feeding the hungry and extending their authority.

U.S. Marine foot patrols were crossing the so-called Green Line that divides the fiefdoms of rival warlords in the field and moving for the first time into northern Mogadishu, a haven for the lawless.

And Marine helicopters were being used to hopscotch across minefields and deliver food to the starving in five villages within a 50-mile radius of Bardera, one of six vital inland aid distribution centers.

Marine Col. Fred Peck, a spokesman for the U.S.-led military coalition, said the Marines had begun twice-daily patrols into northern Mogadishu and would gradually strengthen their presence in the area.

"Our aim is to provide security in Mogadishu, and that means the whole city," Peck said.

The new emphasis on extending the military's authority and reach came as the last of eight supply distribution centers, the town of Belet Huen near the Ethiopian border in western Somalia, was secured Monday.

It was seized in an airborne operation mounted by 200 members of the 2nd Battalion of the U.S. Army's 87th Infantry Regiment and 40 Canadian troops.

The Canadians eventually will put 800 soldiers in Belet Huen and the Americans will be withdrawn for other tasks.

But even as that last objective was being taken, new violence erupted in Mogadishu and reports surfaced of clan atrocities elsewhere in the devastated, famine-plagued East African nation.

More than 100 prominent members of a rival clan were slain in door-to-door searches in the southern port of Kismayu in the days before the Marines landed in Mogadishu on Dec. 9, The New York Times reported today.

The killing was done by militiamen under the control of Col. Omar Jess, a warlord allied with Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the strongman who holds the southern half of Mogadishu.

The Times quoted U.S. envoy Robert Oakley as saying he told Jess that "we knew exactly what went on and we won't forget it." Oakley and Jess met on Dec. 19, the day before American and Belgian troops entered Kismayu.

Recycling Christmas

This Christmas tree recycling spot, at the intersection of Virginia and FM 700, is one of three in Big Spring helping to reduce the amount of organic material deposited into the landfill. The trees will be ground into mulch for local landscapes, and trees can be dropped off through Jan. 15. Other sites are corner of NE 7th and Runnels streets behind the Northside Community Center and the vacant lot at 18th and Gregg streets.

The victims were all from the Harti clan, native to the Kismayu region.

The newspaper said all the killings occurred in three nights of searches before the allied military takeover and were an attempt to eliminate educated Somalis who might support the American-led forces. It said the victims included religious and business leaders and a prominent doctor.

1992: Year of dramatic change in local education

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A look at the year for education showed some dramatic changes on local campuses including student protests and pay raises on Howard College campuses and Big Spring Independent School District's new teen center and skyrocketing employee health insurance.

A number of local and area administrators and school board members retired, resigned or relocated, changing the face of West Texas leaders in education.

An unresolved school finance issue loomed over local public schools, while BSISD benefited generously from the current County Education District system.

Highlights of the year included:

• Jan. 16 — Surrounding school superintendents argue that (1991-92) County Education Districts (CED), clusters of school districts pooling funds for redistribution, are consolidated districts collecting, in effect, a state income tax to fund education.

BSISD set its rate at $1.23 per $100 valuation, 79 cents going to the CED. They gained the most, 57 percent; Forsan and Glasscock schools gained the least at 13 percent each and Coahoma gained 15 percent of pooled funding.

• Jan. 31 — Big Spring High School band director Eddie Gellner stepped down amid controversy including criticism from parents of band members for his methods of teaching; Steven Hankins starts the 1992-93 year as the new director.

• Feb. 2 — BSISD, Borden, Coahoma, Forsan, Klondike and Sands schools climbed above the state averages for reading, writing and math in Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) testing.

Coahoma Independent School District had the most dramatic increases, in the 90 percentile slots for all three subjects while state averages hovered at 80 (reading), 61 (writing) and 84 (math) percentile points.

Glasscock, Grady, Stanton and Westbrook schools pinpointed some areas of weakness and targeted students for remediation.

• March 24 — Coahoma ISD school trustees accepted the resignation of Superintendent Gary Rotan, leaving to work for another school district; L.D. Monroe was hired to start the 1992-93 school year.

• April 9 — Howard College President Bob Riley requests the school board of directors lay off some faculty at HC and the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf (SWCID), to attribute for an anticipated 5 percent cut in 1993 state funding.

The up to 15 possible cuts included a drama instructor, associate professor of business, art instructor and a SWCID admissions counselor.

• April 15 — Riley sent a memorandum hinting at potential dismissal of tenured instructors for 1993.

• April 16 — About 60 SWCID

the year in review

and HC students start week-long marches and demonstrations, protesting potential personnel cuts on their campuses; days later former SWCID students were asked by SWCID administrators to leave the SWCID campus residence halls, prompting police escorts.

• April 22 — SWCID and HC escaped state budget cuts for 1993 but the Legislative Budget Board anticipated up to 10 percent cuts in coming years.

• April 28 — HC trustees unanimously approved Riley's request for cuts in personnel.

• Representatives from the Governor's office visit local college campuses to collect information regarding the conflict between SWCID and HC educators.

• May 2 — Adrian Randle was elected to HC board as a write-in candidate for precinct 2, replacing Curt Mullins.

• May 13 — Riley rescinded the memorandum, warning of tenured personnel cuts, because HC policy requires a year notice for changes in tenured personnel.

• July 26 — HC trustees discuss replacement of Riley, who accepted the presidency at a university in Marshall.

• Aug. 3 — Vice President Cheri Sparks is appointed Riley's successor for the HC presidency.

• Aug. 11 — BSISD Board President Ford Farris resigns for career reasons; later the board appoints Trustee Don Baker as the new president.

• Sept. 11 — BSISD trustees appoint Larry Hollar to fill vacancy left by resignation of Farris.

• Sept. 20 — Local and surrounding school districts fare well on TAAS testing.

• Oct. 14 — Drug Free Youth in Texas (D-FY-IT) in Big Spring land a place to gather with a teen club to be located in the Highland Mall.

• Nov. 13 — About 40 educators and support staff packed a BSISD school board meeting to protest dramatic increases in employee health insurance; for single employees, the rates more than doubled, and for employee and family, the rates were up about 40 percent.

• Nov. 29 — Forsan Principal George White begins working with resigned superintendent J.F. Poyner to take over the superintendent spot for the 1993-94 school year.

• Dec. 8 — BSISD trustees uphold the expulsion of three students accused of assaulting and physically threatening an assistant principal.

• Dec. 11 — BSISD trustees appoint Larry McLellan to fill the seat of John Arrick, who resigned in November to pursue career interests.

Members of two Somali marching bands, one from North Mogadishu, the other from South Mogadishu, greet each other in joy upon reuniting at a rally near the parliament building Monday. Tens of thousands from both sides of the green line gathered to voice their support for an end to Somali's civil war and the ongoing assistance of a U.S.-led task force in providing relief to this famine stricken nation.

Donna Ringorino, 41, sits on her bed outside of the Family Court Building in Houston. The Rosenberg woman began her fourth week of a hunger strike Monday.

Woman begins fourth week of protest outside court building

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A Rosenberg woman angered about what she calls a corrupt family court system today began her fourth week of a hunger strike outside the Harris County Family Law Center.

Donna Ringorino, 41, has not consumed anything other than juices since she chained herself to a pillar of the downtown courts building 21 days ago. Authorities cut the chain that day, but she has remained stationed outside the building.

About 30 supporters — including a few local ministers, representatives of women's groups and victims' rights groups and others who consider themselves victims of the family court system — staged a rally around Ms. Ringorino on Saturday.

Ms. Ringorino plans to continue her hunger strike until the state Judicial Ethics Commission schedules a public hearing to discuss problems at family court.

Her anger arose from her 1989 divorce, during which her attorney advised her that because she had no money, she relinquish custody of her three children, now 15, 20 and 21. She said she and her children have suffered, leading her at first to volunteer at support groups for victims. Since then, she has seen other abuses of the system.

Now she sleeps on a sleeping bag, wrapped in several blankets and has a radio and portable television to keep her company. She said she has not budged from her post except to enter the center to wash, brush her teeth and use the restroom. At least one supporter stays with her at all times.

One supporter, Mary Francis Parker whose own child custody battle was featured on a recent Home Box Office documentary about alleged Houston court abuses, said she has talked with aides of Gov. Ann Richards' office about Ms. Ringorino's situation.

"They were pretty gung ho about it at first, but now they're saying it's out of the governor's jurisdiction," Ms. Parker said.

Ms. Ringorino had chained herself to the Family Law Center once before, on Oct. 8. After a single night, she was arrested on misdemeanor charges of criminal trespass. The charges against her were dropped in November.

Harris County GOP Leader Hotze wants to restore America's 'Christian heritage'

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Dr. Steven Hotze's goal of rebuilding American government and society into a system strictly based on biblical law has drawn attention — and wrath — from more moderate GOP officers since he became a key Houston Republican leader.

His philosophy has some popular themes: limiting government, cutting taxes, getting tougher on crime. But it also contains elements that many find disturbing, especially a belief that strict penalties be enacted to discourage homosexual activity, adultery and abortion.

"I'm a restorationist," said Hotze, who has assumed leadership of a committee governing a substantial portion of the Harris County Republican Party. "I want to restore America to its Christian heritage."

He believes he knows why his ideas bother some. "They're scared to death," Hotze told The Houston Post, "that maybe we're going to turn this country around."

Betsy Lake, the chairwoman of the local GOP, said she tried to call attention to Hotze four years ago, only to be dismissed. She recently broke away from the traditional party structure because Hotze and his supporters had won a majority of its elected posts.

"He's been very consistent," Ms. Lake said. "I think a lot of people just hadn't realized what the significance of what he's saying really is."

Hotze believes America's founding fathers wanted the country to be run according to Christian laws and principles and that the nation's problems are linked to its path away from those values.

He advocates the eventual elimination of the welfare system, Internal Revenue Service and Federal Reserve. Each would be replaced with a biblically based system.

Hotze, who led a successful effort in Houston several years ago against a gay-rights measure, claims the Old Testament considers homosexual activity a capital offense.

"Should the civil government institute those kind of penalties? I don't know the answer to that," he said. "But I know it's a grave act and it's an act that the Bible says brings judgment against a nation."

"You look at Sodom and Gomorrah... I've heard it said — is it compassionate to tell people what they're doing is acceptable and have a whole society risk destruction?"

Ray Hill, a local gay activist, said Hotze and those who agree with him selectively read the Bible, ignoring many of the more obscure laws in the Old Testament. "We read our Bible like the want ads — a few lines at a time — and rarely put the whole thing in context," Hill said.

Hotze doesn't elaborate on what sort of penalties should apply to abortion or adultery, but warns of the biblical consequences for a society that allows such behavior.

"I do believe that God brings about sanctions in time and history for the actions of a nation," he said. "A nation that obeys God's laws, God blesses. A nation that disobeys God's laws, God punishes."

Many within the local Republican Party fear that as Hotze gains power, it will be tougher for non-Christians to participate in the party.

"I say we are being exclusive when we confine our values to the Christian faith," party member Marjorie Arshat told Hotze at a recent meeting of a local GOP club.

But Hotze said those fears are unfounded.

Morales sues nursing home after deaths

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has accused a Houston nursing home of neglect of residents resulting in two deaths.

Morales filed a lawsuit Monday in Harris County state district court against Convalescent Services Gulfbank Inc., doing business as Bayou Glen Northwest Nursing Center.

The lawsuit alleges that the nursing home knew that an Alzheimer's patient should be kept in a controlled area so he could not wander, but failed to take steps to stop him from leaving the home undetected.

The lawsuit alleges that the nursing home knew that an Alzheimer's patient should be kept in a controlled area so he could not wander, but failed to take steps to stop him from leaving the home undetected. The patient was found dead in a nearby creek three days after he was discovered missing from the facility.

Another patient was found dead with her head through the siderails of her bed. The lawsuit charges that the home failed to monitor the patient hourly as the doctor ordered or provide padded siderails for the bed, requested after a similar incident a week before her death.

Morales also alleges "numerous cases of neglect of patients resulting in serious and life-threatening pressure sores on some patients, while others were found to be soiled with urine and/or feces."

In addition, the attorney general charges, the nursing home failed to report and investigate numerous incidents in which a male resident allegedly physically and sexually abused female residents, aides and visitors, including children. The lawsuit says the home failed to control and treat the resident and protect others from him.

A Bayou Glen administrator did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press Monday night.

Morales is seeking civil penalties between $100 and $10,000 for each violation.

Teen killed, five injured in shooting

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Police were investigating Monday a drive-by shooting that left a 16-year-old girl dead and five people injured at a church parking lot.

Investigators said the shooting was not gang-related, but drugs might have been involved.

"It (the shooting) happened in an area that has a lot of drug involvement," Senior Sgt. Hector Reveles said. "The difficulty is people not wanting to come forward and get involved."

Tamara Ross was killed in the shooting, said an investigator with the Travis County medical examiner's office. She was pronounced dead at Brackenridge Hospital at 1:55 a.m. Sunday, said Robin Griffin, hospital spokeswoman.

A relative of the girl who was killed has called for a curfew to keep youths from congregating along the crime-ridden area where the shooting occurred.

"Even though my niece lost her life, everything happens for a reason. And if we can get a curfew up on Twelfth Street, maybe we can save somebody else's life," the girl's aunt, Ruby Jones, said.

The victim was a former A and B student who, her mother says, dropped out of school and "got caught up in the fast lane" once they moved to East Austin. She was the fifth person killed on or near East Twelfth Street this year.

City Council Member Charles Urdy says other residents also have approached him about limiting the hours underage youth could be out on the street.

MHMR agrees to investigate worker, employee backgrounds

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Background checks are in store for as many as 30,000 Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation workers as the result of a fatal injury to a patient at a state school.

Under pressure from state lawmakers and the public, MHMR officials have agreed to investigate the backgrounds of all workers and volunteers who have contact with the mentally ill and mentally retarded in state institutions or programs.

The agency will pay the Texas Department of Public Safety to run a criminal history check on workers and volunteers, officials said. However, the investigation will not begin until March 1 in order to give workers and volunteers notification.

The decision to investigate backgrounds came after publicity about Bobby Phillip Masters, charged with the first-degree felony of injury to an invalid in dividual. Masters worked at San Angelo State School despite having a criminal record.

Margarito Correa, 61, the man he is accused of wounding last fall, died Dec. 13 in a skilled nursing facility in San Antonio. Correa, who suffered a broken neck, was left a quadriplegic by the injury and had been on life support.

Masters "shouldn't have ever been employed," said Allen Williams, superintendent of San Angelo State School. The supervisor who hired Masters with knowledge of his prison record "is no longer with us. He kind of retired in November," Williams said.

Masters, whose case was passed on by a grand jury this month and may be presented to another, had a felony record when he was hired in 1987, records show. He had twice been convicted of burglary.

After being hired, Masters was convicted of a misdemeanor assault and misdemeanor possession of marijuana, records show.

Joy killing spree
leaves five dead

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTON, Ohio — Four robbers went on a three-day "joy killing" spree that left five people dead and four wounded, police said.

"Once they tasted blood they couldn't stop," Sgt. George Hamann said.

Two adults and two juveniles were charged Monday with aggravated murder and robbery. They faced additional murder charges in court today.

Prosecutor Mathias Heck said he would seek the death penalty against Marvellous Keene, 19, and Heather Matthews, 20. He said he would seek to try Demarcus Smith, 17, and Laura Taylor, 16, as adults. That would mean they could get up to 25 years in life in prison if convicted. All four are from Dayton.

Authorities believe robbery was the original motive, but "we think it turned into joy killing," Hamann said.

The spree began Thursday, when an 18-year-old woman was fatally shot at a pay phone. Later, a man was shot four times outside a house but not seriously wounded, police said.

On Friday, another man was shot to death while sitting in his car. Two other people were wounded Saturday, one critically, during the attempted robbery of a convenience store.

The four were riding in a stolen car when they were arrested early Saturday. The car's owner was found shot to death in his home.

The last two victims, Wendy Cottrill, 16, and Marvin Washington, 18, were found Sunday in a gravel dump on the city's west side.

Police Chief James Newby said those two knew their assailants and probably were shot shortly before the four were arrested because "they knew too much." He did not elaborate.

Details on the fourth wounding were not released.

Corruption trial of impeached president
beginning in Senate

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRASILIA, Brazil — President Fernando Collor de Mello resigned today as his corruption trial was beginning in the Senate. He had been suspended from office since Sept. 29 after being impeached.

The trial was to have decided whether to formally strip him of his powers and force him out of politics.

By resigning, Collor loses his presidential immunity and could be prosecuted on criminal charges carrying an eight-year sentence.

Collor is accused of profiting from a scheme to turn his government into a huge influence-peddling ring.

Collor's lawyer, Jose de Moura Rocha, announced the resignation in a statement read to the Senate. Collor was seen as having virtually no chance of surviving the trial.

Vice President Itamar Franco, now acting president, would serve the remaining two years of Collor's term.

It was not clear whether the trial would proceed. The Senate could still decide to ban Collor from politics until 2001.

The glamorous, 43-year-old Collor rose from obscurity as a state governor to take office in 1990 as Brazil's first directly elected president in three decades. But his administration came crashing down after an August congressional report charged him with corruption.

Collor is charged with receiving $6.5 million from a slush fund run by his former campaign treasurer.

The treasurer, Paulo Cesar Farias, is accused of extorting money from businessmen in exchange for government contracts and favors.

Witnesses expected to testify in Collor's favor at today's trial include former members of his government — Francisco Gros of the Central Bank, Romulo Tuma of the federal police and Luiz Fernando Wellich of the Brazilian tax agency.

According to press reports, the witnesses were expected to say that Collor did not interfere in the congressional investigations of the corruption allegations against him.

As the trial approached, newspapers applauded Brazil's affirmation of democracy after 21 years of military dictatorship that ended in 1985.

'Christmas compassion' dogs Bush for the remaining days of his term

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush said his Iran-Contra pardons were a simple act of Christmas compassion, but it is now clear his action will dog his remaining days in office and vex him in retirement.

The pardons changed the atmosphere in a capital that had been getting ready to celebrate a new president's installation.

The drama has not yet played out.

Bush may be called before grand juries and congressional committees, probably after he leaves office in three weeks. No chief executive, having lost his presidential mantle, could relish that prospect.

At the same time, Bush is being pushed by Senate Republican leader Bob Dole to remove Lawrence Walsh, the Iran-Contra prosecutor who tongue-lashed the president for issuing the pardons.

Removing Walsh likely would touch off an uproar akin to the one after Richard Nixon fired Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, Nixon's most painful self-inflicted wound short of taping his conversations.

If Bush is called to testify, he likely would be asked to justify his decision to pardon former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and five other former government officials. And he probably would be asked to give a public accounting of his own role in the Reagan administration's arms-for-hostages deal with Iran, about which he has said only that he knew little.

Weinberger, who opposed the sale, was to have gone on trial Jan. 5 on charges of lying to Congress and prosecutors about the matter.

The president, quail hunting in Texas this week, has been quiet about all this, but Walsh hasn't. Usually inaccessible, the prosecutor opened a television campaign to denounce the pardon as an interference with his own duties. He accused Bush of "misconduct" and of completing a "cover-up."

Walsh also said he now would turn his attention to Bush's own role in the affair and into why he kept quiet until a few weeks ago about the existence of his own typewritten notes, dictated at the time, while he was vice president. The White House calls the notes unflattering and says it is willing to make them public.

Walsh's deputy, San Francisco attorney James Brosnahan, who was to have prosecuted Weinberger, suggested that Bush, by issuing the pardons, may have acted to protect himself from having to testify at a Weinberger trial.

Bush has maintained throughout the investigations that he was "out of the loop" when the Iran deal was under discussion.

Beyond shadowing the president's last days in office, fallout from the pardons is likely to dominate events in Washington until Inauguration Day. Political repercussions already are evident:

•The Democrats are split. Responding to lobbying from Weinberger's lawyer, House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington and Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin, defense secretary designate in Bill Clinton's Cabinet, quietly let Bush know that they would not criticize a pardon. When the pardons were issued, Foley's chief deputy, House Democratic Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, denounced them.

•The battle over renewing the independent counsel law will become even more divisive.

The law, a Watergate-spawned reform, expired Dec. 15, but Walsh remained free to continue business. A filibuster by Republican senators killed a bill to extend the law.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said hearings by his Governmental Affairs subcommittee next year into the way the law has worked will provide an "appropriate and likely" forum for questioning Walsh, Weinberger — and Bush. Levin said the pardon had the effect of shielding Bush "from a court presentation, examination and cross-examination, under oath."

•Clinton will find it hard to keep from being drawn into the furor. The president-elect has said the pardons might send a signal "that if you work for the government you're beyond the law."

Congressional Democrats will be waiting for a signal from Clinton on how vigorously to pursue the pardons issue. Clinton will want attention focused on his economic proposals, not the death throes of a little-understood 6-year-old scandal.

City asking to cut short Klan cross display

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The city has asked a federal appeals court for permission to cut short the Ku Klux Klan's cross display on a public square because of repeated attacks by vandals.

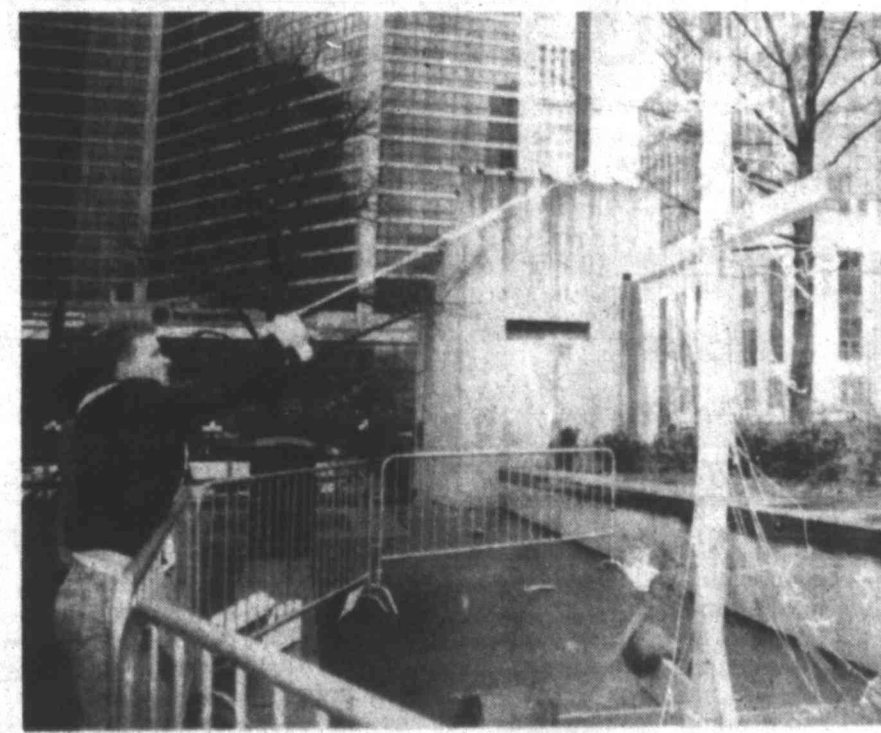

City Councilwoman Nell Surber said Monday the court should realize the city has "given it a good try" but can't stop the vandalism.

The city also asked the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for a quick decision on its appeal of a judge's Sept. 21 order that let a Jewish group put up a Hanukkah menorah on the square.

The court did not immediately rule.

Employing the same free-expression argument that had been used by the Jewish group, the KKK obtained a city permit to display a 10-foot wooden cross for 10 days.

The permit expires Wednesday.

Mike Hanovan, 20, of Cincinnati sprays a Ku Klux Klan cross with aerosol foam string substance on Fountain Square Monday. Hanovan was cited for littering by a Cincinnati police officer. City officials are asking a federal court to allow them to shorten the time of the display.

but the city asked to take the cross down early, saying it couldn't provide overnight security.

Ron Lee, vice president of the U.S. Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in Hamilton, complained that the city has not done enough to protect three wooden crosses successively erected and toppled on the square.

On Monday, a man sprayed the cross with a multicolored foam that left stringy material dangling from it. He was charged with littering. Later, a man was charged with disorderly conduct for tying a frozen chicken to the cross.

Is '93 forecast better for us?

Having written off 1992 as a year of economic discontent, most Americans are primed to do better in 1993. Arrows are pointing up; a new president is moving to the White House; consumer confidence is rising. The holiday shopping season was the best since 1988.

The economy seems to be on a roll, or at least on a stroll. Most forecasters are talking 3 percent growth in 1993. That's not spectacular — nothing like the 6.2 percent growth in 1984 — but it's double what we had as recently as six months ago.

It is tempting to proclaim that happy days are here again, but that would be foolish. This economy has so many distortions, so many rough edges and soft spots, that 1993 could turn out to be a disappointment. One case in point: A surge in exports kept the economy afloat during the recession, but the surge has slowed down. Europe is in a recession of its own, and the Japanese economy isn't all that vigorous, either.

The jobless rate, while lower than last spring, still exceeds 7 percent and is likely to stay in that range for much of 1993. Companies are making money, but many are doing it by downsizing, laying off workers, rather than by expanding. Job prospects for new graduates next summer will be slim again, surveys show.

Despite all the campaign rhetoric, there is little consensus in either party on how to untangle our convoluted health-care system. It costs too much, fails to set medical priorities and simply isn't available to millions of uninsured families and individuals. The good news is that Bill Clinton knows it's his No. 1 problem as president. The bad news is that it may take a year or more to figure out what to do and how to pay for it.

Good things will happen in 1993: Inflation and interest rates should stay low; home sales could have a banner year; a free trade agreement with Mexico and Canada may be approved; Clinton may be smart enough to go slow on new spending and make real (as opposed to phony) cuts in the federal budget deficit.

If you're expecting a boom, you're probably wrong. If you're expecting the new year to be modestly better than the old, you're likely to be much closer to the truth.

Lifting gay ban should concern every American

To the editor: This lifting the ban on homosexuals in the military should be a matter of concern to every American. A large number of homosexuals continue to risk death from AIDS and Hepatitis B. According to recent surveys high-risk sexual behaviors persist. Jewish War Veterans, in opposing Clinton's plan, noted that each military AIDS case costs the taxpayer $200,000, with $3 billion already spent. If the ban is lifted, AIDS costs will rise as well. Is this what we want?

Now, this guy is a classy moocher

The elderly man on the street corner was very businesslike in his approach.

"May I speak to you, please?" he said in a firm voice. Without waiting for an answer, he took out a wallet and displayed two identification cards.

They showed that his name was George Fallon and he lived at an address on N. Dearborn. One of the cards gave him membership in a senior citizens' club. The other showed that he is now 69 years old.

"I am a senior citizen," he said, returning the wallet to his pocket. "And it happens that only a few minutes ago, I was released by the police after posting a bond of $25."

He took out a (Chicago) police department bond receipt.

He didn't look capable of a criminal act. His eyes, behind steel-rimmed spectacles, were clear, his white hair neatly parted. He wore a clean white shirt open at the throat, a dark green knit sweater, and a brown gabardine overcoat.

He appeared to be a kindly old man.

I asked him what he had been arrested for.

"I was picked up in the Loop for panhandling," he said. "Just like I'm doing now."

He held out his hand and, in a pleasant voice, said: "Anything you would care to contribute?" No hard-luck story. No plea for a cup of coffee or a bowl of soup, or carfare to get to a job or to a welfare office.

It was the most direct panhandler I've ever been in. Also, the most dignified and tasteful. In fact, I wasn't sure, for a moment, that I was being mooched.

I handed him some loose change. "Thank you," he said lightly. "Incidentally, the police were very nice. Two of them contributed 65 cents."

Then he nodded good-bye and walked jauntily away, looking for another contributor. With his deft approach, he would probably earn more by nightfall than some of the people who give him money.

I was glad to see that another imaginative panhandler is working the streets. There aren't many really good ones, at least not in the same class as the legendary Greasy Chin Smith, who used to be seen in the Loop almost every day. He was known as Greasy Chin because he gnawed on a long, old bone to dramatize how poor he was.

One of the better ones currently at work is an elderly man who stopped me on State Street one day and, in an urgent voice, said: "I'm 67 years old and I must go to Minneapolis."

That's all he said. I don't have any idea what it was supposed to mean, but it sounded so important that I handed him a quarter. I watched him hustle four others before he left for Minneapolis, by way of Elfmans' Bar.

Then there is The Weeper, a kid about 12 who operates on the Near North Side and in the Wrigley Building area.

His tear ducts work like windshield washers. When he stops someone and starts blubbering, and the tears flow down his cheeks, it's difficult to figure out what his problem is, except that he needs money.

The Weeper is no two-bit moocher, either. He thinks big, howling that his mother and five little brothers and sisters are stuck at a railroad station and they need $4.90 to get home.

He cornered author Studs Terkel on the street one day and was sobbing so hard, Terkel handed him a dollar.

"That's not enough," the kid cried. Studs handed him another dollar.

"That's still not enough," he sobbed, holding both hands to his face. Another dollar.

"Mister, I need more, more," the kid said, tearing at his hair, so great was his grief. He kept it up until he got Terkel for five dollars.

"I knew he was a moocher," Terkel said, "but what a performance! It was worth twice that much. The kid cried better than June Allyson."

Then there is the kid who works the south half of the Loop. He carries an old charity card with holes in it for coins. He points at his ears to indicate deafness and wiggles his fingers in what is meant to be sign language. If you came up behind him and said, "Stickup," he'd start running, that's how deaf he is.

Some people get mad when they realize they've been taken in by a phony hard-luck story.

Not me. After listening to enough political fund-raising speeches, I find The Weeper almost refreshing.

This date in history

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 29, the 364th day of 1992. There are two days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Dec. 29, 1890, the Wounded Knee massacre took place in South Dakota. Some 300 Sioux Indians were killed by U.S. troops sent to disarm them. About 30 soldiers were slain.

On this date: In 1170, Archbishop Thomas Becket was murdered in Canterbury Cathedral in England.

In 1808, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, was born in Raleigh, N.C.

In 1813, the British burned Buffalo, N.Y., during the War of 1812.

In 1837, Canadian militiamen destroyed the Caroline, a U.S. steamboat docked at Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1845, Texas was admitted as the 28th state.

In 1851, the first American Young Men's Christian Association was organized, in Boston.

In 1913, the first movie serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," premiered in Chicago.

In 1934, Japan renounced the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 and the London Naval Treaty of 1930.

In 1940, during World War II, Germany began dropping incendiary bombs on London.

In 1957, singers Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme were married in Las Vegas, Nevada.

In 1975, a bomb exploded in the main terminal of New York's LaGuardia Airport, killing 11 people and injuring several dozen others.

In 1989, playwright Vaclav Havel was elected president of Czechoslovakia by the country's Federal Assembly, becoming the first non-Communist to attain the post in more than four decades.

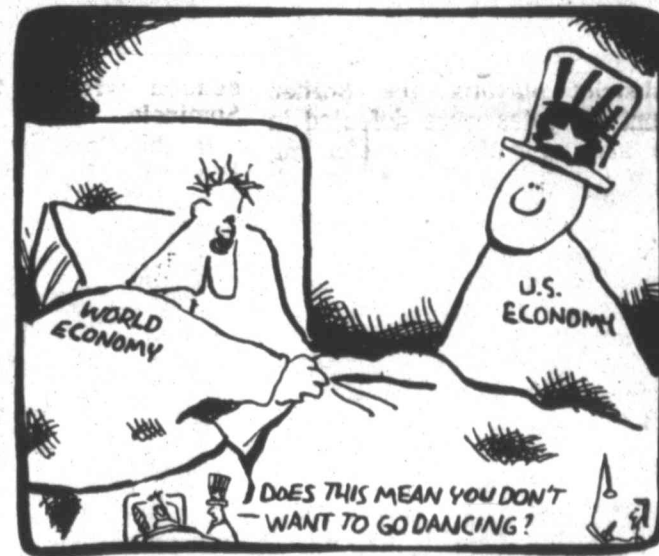

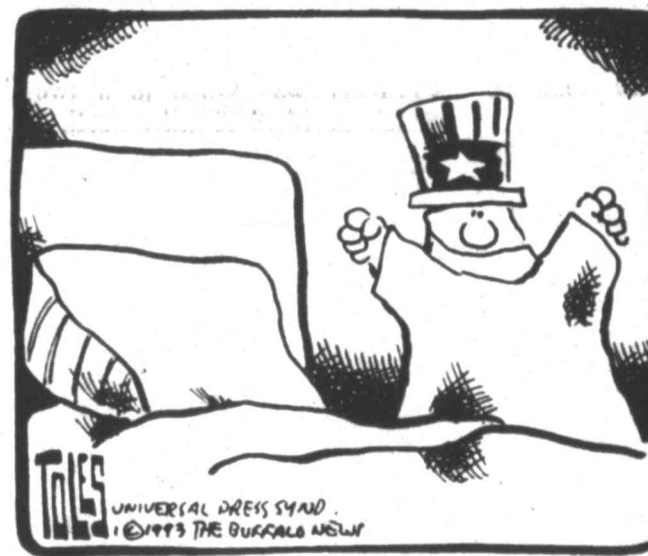

Ten years ago: Nevell Johnson Jr. died one day after he was shot by a police officer during an arrest at a Miami video arcade. The shooting of Johnson, who was black, sparked three days of racial disturbances.

Five years ago: NASA announced it was delaying the planned June launch of the space shuttle — the first since the Challenger disaster — because of the failure of a motor component during a test-firing of the shuttle's redesigned booster rocket.

One year ago: Russian President Boris Yeltsin announced that Russia would create its own army; in a separate year-end address, he also congratulated his countrymen for avoiding the kind of violence seen in Yugoslavia.

Nothing like a blank start

So I'm sitting here at year's end, looking at a blank computer monitor and wishing it would suddenly fill with well-chosen words, when this old-looking guy walks in. And not "old" like your grandfather or those Rudy Valee records in the attic. This guy looks old. Like a giant redwood tree. Or the Sphinx. Or that ham we had for Christmas dinner.

Serious old. "Don't do that!" the Old Guy exclaimed.

"Don't do what?" I asked, startled.

"That!" he said, pointing to the lone letter I had typed on the computer monitor.

I assumed my elderly guest was computer illiterate and thought I was working some kind of magic on the screen (fat chance, huh?). So I tried to explain it in basic terms: "It all started back in the 1400s with a man named Gutenberg — perhaps you knew him?"

"There's no need for condescension, young man," the Old Guy said testily. "I've been dealing with computers and word processors my whole life. Hey — I'm a child of the '90s."

Yeah, right, I thought. The 1890s — give or take a century or two.

"If you're so savvy," I asked him, "why were you trying to stop me from writing — unless, of course, you've read my stuff, in which case I understand..."

"I couldn't care less what you write," he said. "It's that screen I'm worried about."

I looked carefully at my monitor. "Is it going to explode or something?" I asked.

"Heavens no," he said. "It's just that it's so beautiful I didn't want you to ruin it."

"But it's blank," I said. "Yes, it is — and isn't that the most wonderful thing you've ever seen?"

Joseph Walker

This was getting pretty strange — even for me. So I asked him: "Who are you?"

"You don't recognize me, do you? Come on — take a good, close look."

I had to admit that there was something about him that seemed familiar, from the deep creases on his forehead to the mud caked on his slippers. I just couldn't place him.

"Here, let me help you," he said. "See these lines on my forehead? They're worry wrinkles. I got this one from worrying about starving people in Africa, this one from worrying about hurricane victims and this one from worrying about the world economy. These lines in my arms aren't wrinkles — they're scars. I got this one during the Los Angeles riots, this one in Bosnia and this one during a peace demonstration in Germany."

"And what about the bandage around your knee?" I wanted to know.

"Football injury. Cheap shot. Blasted artificial turf."

It all started to make sense — the "X" cap, the Dream Team T-shirt and those cute little "Beauty and the Beast" slippers he was wearing. I even recognized the thick mud on his slippers. After all, it hasn't been that long since Election Day, has it?

"You're 1992, aren't you?" "In the flesh," he said. "For now, anyway."

That explained his appearance.

But it didn't explain his obsession with my monitor.

"That does seem a little odd, doesn't it?" he acknowledged.

"It's just that empty screens remind me of the good old day — January 1, 1992. My whole life was ahead of me. I was an unwritten story, a blank page, an empty computer screen — pick your favorite metaphor. I was unknown and exciting and filled with potential."

"But now my story is written. It's over. Done. Finis. And I'm outta here. Not that I mind or anything — it goes with the territory. But whenever I see a blank screen I get a little crazy because I don't think people realize what a wonderful gift they receive every New Year's Day. It's another blank screen. Another empty page. Another unwritten story. Each January is a chance to begin again — only you get to try to do it better."

"But sooner or later we've got to start writing on that screen," I reminded him. "And eventually, we're all going to make some mistakes."

"I know," he said. "And that's OK as long as you learn from each mistake and take advantage of New Year's opportunity for growth through change and improvement. Otherwise, you'll just keep writing the same old story year after year. And if you ask me, that's a waste of good, clean paper."

He started to leave, but first he reached out and deleted the letter on my monitor.

"Or," he added before hurrying away, "good, blank computer screens."

Joe Montana makes splendid comeback

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Joe Montana came all the way back Monday night.

Playing in his first game in nearly two years, Montana led three fourth-quarter scoring drives, bringing the crowd to its feet with TD passes of 9 yards to Brent Jones and 8 yards to Amp Lee as the San Francisco 49ers beat the Detroit Lions 24-6.

Montana, sidelined since the start of last season because of a torn right elbow tendon, played the second half in relief of starter Steve Young. Both sides coped with a slippery field and rainy conditions during the game.

The 49ers, who led only 7-6 after three periods, pushed the margin to four when Mike Cofer kicked a 37-yard field goal with 13:18 to play.

The 49ers began to put the game away after Don Griffin's interception of Andre Ware's pass gave San Francisco the ball at the Detroit 26.

Montana, who finished with 15 completions in 21 attempts for 126 yards, scrambled 16 yards for a first down. Lee gained a yard and Montana threw two incompletions before finding Jones over the middle with 11:21 remaining.

Montana took the 49ers 76 yards in nine plays for the third score of the period. He found Lee open over the middle with 1:15 remaining.

Montana was greeted by a standing ovation and completed his first pass, a 4-yarder to Marc Logan. The completion put him over 35,000 passing yards for his career.

Montana was also greeted by an ovation an hour before the game, when he came out to warm up with Young and Steve Bono.

Montana's appearance could be his last in a game for the 49ers unless Young is injured in the playoffs.

He has said repeatedly that he would be unwilling to remain with San Francisco as a backup to Young, who has a solid hold on the job after finishing as the league's passing leader for a second straight year.

Young, named last week to start in the Pro Bowl, is the only quarterback to have an efficiency rating of 100 or better in two straight seasons since the current ranking system began in 1973.

The 49ers, down 6-0 after a pair of field goals by Jason Hanson, took a 7-6 halftime lead on Logan's 1-yard touchdown run with 3:14 left in the second quarter.

Editor's Note — This is the last of a three-part series reviewing highlights of the local sports year.

SEPTEMBER always starts with football season, and the Big Spring Steers started theirs with a 25-14 win on the road against Levelland. Big Spring had almost 400 yards total offense. A week later, the Steers lost their first game of the season, falling to eventual state-semifinalist Lubbock Estacado 25-6. In that game the Steers had six turnovers.

In volleyball play, the Big Spring Lady Steers defeated San Angelo Lake View in their district opener, 15-5, 1-15, 15-6.

In team tennis action, Big Spring lost its first district match, falling to Andrews 10-8.

In rodeo action, the Howard College cowboys finished third in the season's first rodeo at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales, N.M.

Back to football, the Forsan Buffaloes ended a 13-game losing streak, defeating O'Donnell 14-0 Sept. 25 at Forsan's homecoming.

OCTOBER The Steers football team started the district season with a 10-10 tie at Monahans. Big Spring had six turnovers the next week in a 17-7 loss to Andrews in Big Spring. The following week Big Spring was virtually eliminated from the playoff hunt, losing to Sweetwater on the road, 21-14.

The following week Big Spring won its first district game, whipping San Angelo Lake View 50-0 in front of a homecoming crowd. The Big Spring offense limited Lake View to one first down and minus 31 yards offense.

Both the Steers and Lady Steers cross country teams qualified for regional via their second place finishes behind Lake View at the district meet. Elisabeth Lopez won the girls race.

In NOVEMBER the Big Spring tennis team finished third at regional team tennis play in Wichita Falls. Big Spring was defeated by Wichita Falls 10-0. They earned third with a 10-8 win over Boswell.

In football action, the Steers concluded the season with a 5-4-1 record after beating Pecos 24-14 and Ft. Stockton 21-14. Six Steers made the all-district first team — tight end Oscar Cervantes, wide receiver Pat Martinez, offensive tackle T.L. Rogers, defensive end Richard Hain, linebacker Torbin Lancaster and cornerback Stacey Martin.

Howard College Hawks sophomore forward Mark Davis (42) goes up for a dunk in action earlier this season at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Davis and the Hawks are currently ranked No. 4 in the nation.

After defeating Klamath in the bi-district playoffs, the Borden County Coyotes were defeated in the area playoffs by defending state champion Fort Hancock 50-14. The Coyotes finished with a 10-2 record.

In basketball action, the Howard College Hawks won their season opener, defeating the McMurry JV 100-48. The Lady Hawks won their season opener defeating Panola 76-63.

The Big Spring Lady Steers just missed making the state volleyball playoffs. In an extra district game, Monahans defeated Big Spring 15-7, 15-8. The Lady Steers finished with a 14-14 record.

In cross country action, Lady Steers Evy Perez qualified for state via a seventh place finish at the regional meet. At the state meet Perez finished 43rd. Stanton's Jeremy Stallings finished second in the AA boys division.

In more basketball action, the Big Spring Lady Steers began their season with a 63-47 loss to Midland High and the Steers began their season with a 74-57 loss to Seminole.

In the Crossroads Classic, the Howard College women won all three of their games, beating Grayson, Blinn and Cisco. Guard Yumecca White was the tournament MVP and LeKisha Wiley and Annette Robinson made the all-tournament team.

The Lady Steers were defeated in the tournament's championship game by Killeen Ellison 51-38. Ellison's coach was former Coahoma mentor Truman Meissner. Making the all-tournament team for Big Spring were Amy Earnst and Casey Cook.

The No. 19 nationally-ranked Howard College Hawks lost their first game of the season, 97-94, to Eastfield College in Mesquite. A week later the Hawks made an impressive showing at the Hutchinson, Kan. Classic, winning the tournament with three victories. They defeated No. 4 Champlain, Vt., 77-61 and No. 12 Hutchinson 78-65 in the classic. Hawk forward Mark Davis was named tournament MVP.

The final basketball note of November was Howard post player Bernard Lloyd signing a basketball scholarship agreement with Texas Tech.

Early DECEMBER saw higher national rankings for the Howard basketball teams. The Hawks were elevated to No. 5 and the Lady Hawks were ranked 19th.

The Lady Hawks began conference play with a 90-70 win over Western Texas. The Hawks started conference play with a 89-74 win over Midland College, coached by former Howard coach Steve Green. The Hawks finished the first part of their season with a 15-1 record, ranked No. 4 in the nation.

The Lady Hawks won the East Bay Classic in Oakland. Howard won four games, defeating Ohlone College (Calif.) in the finals 93-47. Point guard Wiley was the MVP. Angel Spinks and Yumecca White were all-tournament selections. The Lady Hawks went into the holiday break with a 15-0 record, ranked No. 8 in the nation.

December was also a month of tragedy. On Dec. 13 Garden City all-state football player Derek Schraeder was killed in a two-vehicle accident 12 miles north of Garden City.

The Associated Press Sports Writers released its all-state football teams and several area players were chosen. From Garden City Schraeder, running back Jody Bradford and linebacker Matt Seidenberger made the team.

From Stanton, defensive lineman Odie Saldivar and running back Ricky Lucas made the team. Punter Bryan Sledge was a selection from Coahoma. From Big Spring, tight end Oscar Cervantes and cornerback Stacey Martin were named to the team.

The Big Spring Herald released its annual Crossroads Country Honor Roll football team and Klamath's Ed Wilson was named Coach of the Year. The Defensive Player of the Year was Borden County cornerback John Paul Harris and the Offensive Player of the Year was Garden City tailback Jody Bradford.

Broncos fire Reeves

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — "Life goes on," Denver Broncos coach Dan Reeves told a news conference. And the Broncos will go on without Reeves at the helm.

Reeves was fired Monday, ending a 12-year career in Denver that included three Super Bowl appearances and five AFC West Division titles. Reeves, 48, announced his own firing at a news conference at Broncos headquarters.

Reeves had said he wanted to negotiate one more contract with Denver and then retire at age 55. Reeves earned about $950,000 during the last year of his present contract, and with a 110-73-1 regular season record was the fourth-winningest active coach. Only Don Shula of Miami, Chuck Knox of the Los Angeles Rams and Washington's Joe Gibbs had better records.

Just last year, Reeves was named AFC Coach of the Year for guiding Denver to a 12-4 season, the AFC West title and a berth in the AFC title game.

Reeves has played or coached in a record eight Super Bowls, including five appearances as a player and coach for the Dallas Cowboys, where he was a walk-on free-agent running back from South Carolina.

Reeves led Denver to five first-place finishes and three second-place finishes in the AFC West Division. His Bronco teams also appeared in four AFC championship games and three Super Bowls, losing all three times.

Reeves admitted that he and owner Pat Bowlen differed over how the team should be run, with Reeves preferring to retain control and Bowlen wanting it to be shared.

Lady Steers win tourney opener

SLATON — After a ten-day layoff, the Big Spring Lady Steers were not on top of their game Monday at the West Texas Invitational basketball tournament in Slaton. But they managed to play through their rustiness and beat Morton 52-46 to reach today's quarterfinal against Floydada at 11 a.m.

The Lady Steers, now 11-3, went into the fourth quarter tied with Morton at 35-35 but won the final period 17-11.

"We were pretty ragged as we should have been with no workouts (over the holidays)," Lady Steer coach Ron Taylor said. "But we came out in the fourth quarter and played real good — took control of it and put it away."

Senior wing Leslie Fryar led Big Spring with 16 points, including five three pointers. The contest marked her second straight game with five three pointers.

"We're using this tournament to get ready for district, to get back in shape for Monahans (Jan. 2)" Taylor said.

Also scoring in double figures for the Lady Steers were Amy Earnst (14) and Bernie Valles (11).

If Big Spring gets past Floydada it plays in the tournament semifinal tonight at 8. A loss to Floydada would mean the Lady Steers play Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. Morton led 14-12 after one period in Monday's tournament opener. Big Spring came back to go up by one, 25-24, at the half. Taylor said Earnst had a good fourth quarter for Big Spring and also credited Casey Cook with a good effort. "It just took us three quarters to get to going," Taylor said.

Novacek, Smith first team All-Pro

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — What's the deepest position in the NFL? Try outside linebacker, where the best athletes play — and where just about every team has one.

The two best in 1992, as selected by a nationwide panel of media members, were Pat Swilling of the New Orleans Saints and Wilber Marshall of the Washington Redskins.

Swilling and Marshall each drew 34 out of 80 votes. They beat out such stars as Seth Joyner, Rickey Jackson, Derrick Thomas, Tim Harris, Bryan Cox and Simon Fletcher.

The inside linebackers are Junior Seau of San Diego and Al Smith of Houston.

Leading all defensive vote-getters was Seattle tackle Cortez Kennedy with 71 votes. That far outdistanced Seau, the runner-up in total votes with 58.

Also making the All-Pro team on defense were Eagles end Clyde Simmons; Vikings end Chris Doleman; Oilers tackle Ray Childress; Steelers cornerback Rod Woodson; Vikings cornerback Audray McMillian; Bills safety Henry Jones; Broncos safety Steve Atwater; and Cardinals punter Rich Camarillo.

Steve Young and Sterling Sharpe got the most votes for the team, announced Monday. Young, who replaced perennial All-Pro Joe Montana as quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers, received 78 votes. Sharpe, the ace receiver of the Green Bay Packers who set an NFL mark with 108 receptions this year.

Joining Sharpe at receiver was Jerry Rice, Young's pass-catch partner in San Francisco who made the team for the sixth time.

One other 49er, tackle Harris Barton, made the All-Pro squad.

Also on offense were Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith; Steelers running back Barry Foster; Cowboys tight end Jay Novacek; Oilers center Bruce Matthews; Vikings guard Randall McDaniel; Dolphins tackle Richmond Webb; Raiders guard Steve Wisniewski; Dolphins placekicker Pete Stoyanovich; and Falcons kick returner Deion Sanders.

Fourteen players from the NFC and 12 from the AFC made the squad. Only Wisniewski repeated from the 1991 offensive team. Defensive repeaters were Swilling, Simmons and Atwater.

Joining the 49ers with three players on the All-Pro team were Houston and Minnesota.

The second team offense featured a tie at quarterback between Buffalo's Jim Kelly and Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham, each with one vote. Joining them were running backs Thurman Thomas, Buffalo, and Barry Sanders, Detroit; receivers Michael Irvin, Dallas, and Andre Rison, Atlanta; tight end Keith Jackson, Miami; tackles Steve Wallace, San Francisco, and Paul Gruber, Tampa Bay; guards Guy McIntyre, San Francisco, and Mike Munchak, Houston; center Mark Stepnoski, Dallas; placekicker Morten Andersen, New Orleans; and kick returner Mel Gray, Detroit.

On defense, it was ends Reggie

Dallas Cowboys tight end Jay Novacek (84) was a first team All-Pro selection.

Interviews of JP candidates continue

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The Howard County Commissioner's Court will continue today to interview applicants for the position of Justice of the Peace Precinct 2.

The 22 people expressing interest in the position will be reviewed through today, and an announcement on the appointment to the position will be made by Jan. 4.

The interviews are being conducted in executive (closed) session. Commissioners are not allowed to appoint a person to the position before it has been vacated, said County Judge Ben Lockhart.

An appointment will be made following the self-imposed final day for current Precinct 2 Justice Willie Grant. Precinct 2 covers an area including Coahoma and Sand Springs.

The appointee will face election in 1994, following the remainder of Grant's term.

Also in executive session Monday, commissioners heard from Irene Dominguez of the county indigent health care regarding an appeal from a patient in the

At a glance

Topics addressed at the regular meeting of the Howard County Commissioner's Court include:

- Meet with Michael Kelsey, new assistant county extension agent.
- Renew lease from the City of Big Spring for the Howard County Senior Citizens Center at 47 Simlar Drive.
- Authorized some part-time help for the library.
- Filling the position of mobile truck-tire changer for the road and bridge crew was authorized.
- Approval of a bond for the county tax assessor/collector.
- Set county holidays for 1993.

system. No action was taken following this closed session, however.

In the regular meeting of the Commissioner's Court, authorization was given for the county to renew a lease for 47 Simlar Drive, a building housing the Howard County Senior Citizens Center. The county leases this building from the City of Big Spring for the benefit of the Senior Citizens Center.

A bid for seven pickup trucks for the road and bridge department was awarded Bob Brock Ford of Big Spring. Total cost for the vehicles is $56,256 with trade-in.

New Assistant County Extension Agent, Michael David Kelsey, was introduced to the Commissioner's Court at Monday's meeting.

Kelsey is a recent graduate of Oklahoma State University. He holds numerous honors and scholarships and carried a 3.8 grade point average overall. "He's got about as many honors as anybody we've ever had apply," said Don Richardson, Howard County Extension Service agent.

Some part-time help was authorized for the Howard County Library. Librarian Donna Jackson informed the court that a new children's librarian will need to be hired when the library is moved to its new building.

As the children's section will be on a separate floor, current staffing levels are insufficient for the job, especially since the library has been operating for the last year without one of its allotted staff.

Hector reportedly suffered severe lung damage and eventually had to have one lung removed. Also, he had progressively worsening problems with other organs, including the brain, relatives stated in the report.

Not able to move around without oxygen, Hector had been operating the business from his home since his exposure to the gas. "He ran the business and his boys did the work," Edens said.

Deputies Edens and Ed Covington are continuing the investigation.

Hector's body was taken to Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Holiday weight gain? Resolve to get fit

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

If the season has left you feeling as stuffed as a turkey, you're not alone.

Many holiday bingers will be jogging to the nearest fitness center next week to try and shave off extra pounds.

"This place is packed at the beginning of the year with people wanting to shape up for their New Year's resolution," said Linda Perez, the local YMCA program director.

Holiday bingers should adopt or fall back into healthy habits, said Marlenia Richardson, behavioral health educator of the Tech Risk Management (TRM) program at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Lubbock.

"Your going to have to cut fat calories and increase physical activity," Richardson said.

Because of the hustle and bustle of gift shopping, food preparation, tree and house decorating and holiday entertaining, some do not fit exercise into their routine in December, she added.

"Everybody breaks the healthy lifestyle," she said. "It's OK if it's a matter of breaking it once in a while versus breaking it for three months."

Sloughing off post-holiday

Walking off pounds

Experts said the best way to shed post-holiday pounds is eating low fat meals and increasing physical activity — especially walking. Use the following list to calculate the number of minutes walking needed to burn off a serving of some foods:

- Ice cream (1 cup), 255 calories — 51 minutes
- Hamburger (3 ounces), 375 calories — 75 minutes
- Broiled chicken (3 ounces), 115 calories — 23 minutes
- Broccoli (1 cup), 50 calories — 5 minutes
- French fries (10 pieces), 215 calories — 43 minutes
- Doughnuts (1), 165 calories — 33 minutes
- Pecan pie (1 slice), 430 calories — 86 minutes
- Liquor, 86 proof (1 jigger), 105 calories — 21 minutes
- Table wine (one glass), 85 calories — 17 minutes pounds is more difficult for those just starting healthy routines, Richardson said.

"Set small, obtainable goals. You shouldn't try to run a marathon to get the weight off, if you haven't even walked a mile," she said. "It's also a balance depending on if you gained a pound or two or 10 pounds. It's going to take some work to get a structured, healthy lifestyle going."

On Thursday, New Year's celebrating will tempt some partygoers to repeat their Christmas or Hanukkah gorging.

Revelers must hover about the fruit and vegetable plates if they want to shed pounds, Richardson said.

"It's going to take longer to manage your weight, if you are still taking in more fat," she said. "It doesn't have to mean starving if you fill up on fruits and vegetables."

Richardson added holiday finger snackers can weigh the benefits of 100 calories of apples — a large apple — against 100 calories of chocolate — less than an ounce.

"You can fill up on the apples and not feel hungry, or you're getting a morsel of chocolate and not be filled," she said. "We need 35 servings of fruits and vegetables per week anyway (for better health), provided you don't butter-and-cheese-sauce them to death."

Holiday alcohol consumption contributes to substantial weight gain without any nutritional benefits, Richardson said.

"(Alcohol) is just empty calories," she said. "A 12 ounce serving of beer is about the same as a can of soda pop (144 calories)," she said.

A more potent drink in terms of weight-management is egg nog, she said. "Egg nog — for an eight ounce serving — is high in fat and

Welcome home

Roy McCandless of Odessa is shown at a Nov. 18 homecoming celebration at Midland International Airport.

He recently returned from Dallas' Zale Lipshy University Hospital where he was treated after being hit by a drunk driver May 2.

Recovery

McCandless tackles life at home

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ODESSA — There's no place like home.

Roy McCandless has learned that lesson. He spent more than half of the last year recovering in Dallas medical facilities after he was injured by a drunken driver.

As he was wheeled into Midland International Airport for a November homecoming, he found about 300 friends and family members waiting for him.

"I thought at first it was kind of a dream — I couldn't believe it. When I saw the sheriff of Ector County, I knew I was back in the real world," he said in an interview at his home.

"It's wonderful to be home. The transition has been most difficult because when you go from a staff of 50 people looking after your needs to one or two, it's different," the former mayoral candidate said. "What feels really good is to get home to your family."

The 61-year-old Odessan remains paralyzed from injuries sustained in May after a drunken driver struck his car the night he lost the election for mayor. Although his condition has greatly improved, "he's still a quadriplegic," his daughter, Denise Durell, said.

After election results were returned the day night of May 2, he and Ms. Durell were headed to the Ector County Courthouse Annex to congratulate incumbent Mayor Lorraine Perryman on her win. Their car broke down near Eighth and Meadow streets.

As McCandless worked under the hood of his car, a pickup collided with the rear of his vehicle and knocked him down. The driver, 25-year-old Ralph Padilla Banegas Jr., was issued a citation alleging he was driving while intoxicated, according to police reports. After he was hit, McCandless said he "never lost consciousness at the scene. My daughter witnessed it. I knew I was hurt, hurt bad." But he didn't panic because "my daughter had everything under control. I wasn't upset."

But he knew his injuries were serious. "I was saying good-bye to my daughter," he said. The day after the accident, his heart stopped beating. "But before

One hour set aside Thursday for prayer

By NANCY PATRICK
Special to the Herald

Once again, Thursday will be a day for prayer and meditation to bring greater harmony into the world.

A concerted effort to synchronize prayers world-wide culminates in an hour of concentration, noon-1 p.m. Greenwich Time (6-7 a.m. Texas time).

PATRICK

Begun in 1986, this concert of prayer reaches across all barriers to human cooperation. Peace advocates who have been participating from the beginning believe this time of prayer has made observable difference in situations where disharmony was prevalent. Some have not accepted this concept of connecting believers everywhere in prayer stating that it is too "New Age." Others have found that uniting with people of faith around the world has helped to open greater vistas of in-depth spirituality.

Some report a stronger sense of personnel peace which manifests in their outward circumstances.

Locally, Unity House of Prayer, 303 E. Fifth, will be open between 6 and 7 a.m. for anyone who would like to join with others for this special hour. Permian Church of Religious Science, 2311 Elizabeth, Midland, also has a service at this time, and the public is invited.

There will be gatherings around

Ways to observe

World Prayer Day

Special to the Herald

Many people will observe World Healing Day, or World Prayer Day, Thursday, in many different ways. Here are some ideas:

- Pray or meditate.
- Watch the sun rise.
- Take a walk outdoors.
- Read inspirational thoughts.
- Forgive things that stand between you and others.
- Listen to uplifting, healing music.
- Gather with others.

the earth during the specified hour and all during the day. However, many will spend the hour following solitary peaceful pursuits. There is no form or ritual to follow.

There is a World Healing Meditation which came as inspiration to John Randolph Price, the initiator or this prayer movement.

Participation each year in this time of quiet contemplation of a world at peace has led some into a lifestyle of visualizing such a world. They become peacemakers and understand that each day needs to be a World Healing Day. They choose to live peace everyday.

This special day with the coordinated specified hour helps to unify efforts to bring a better world for everyone.

Remember BSSH in volunteer plans for the new year

As the magic of Christmas subsides and the New Year is ringing in, the grounds of Big Spring State Hospital are quiet and lonely for those patients who remain. Some were fortunate enough to have a family to visit during the holidays, but many remain at what is home to them — the state hospital.

The last volunteer group has entertained Santa has returned to the North Pole, the gift they received from the volunteers has been opened — and the hospital is quiet.

As many of us are surrounded by the love and warmth of family and home, let us not forget those less fortunate. Remember us in the New Year.

The holidays evoke a compassion and willingness to do for others and we sometimes forget their needs once January rolls around. As your group is making plans for 1993, we hope you will include the state hospital, in some way.

Terri Johansen was determined that the new Activity Therapies Building was going to have Christmas trees in the atrium for the Thursday night party, and with the ability that only volunteers possess, two trees magically appeared at the last minute. Then, the faithful clubs began their annual night of Christmas celebration at BSSH. A band comprised of employees from the Activity Therapy Department and patients entertained and community club groups provided refreshments.

Groups from the community that assisted with the State Hospital Christmas parties were: Kiwanis Club, ABWA-Scenic & Cactus Chapters, Evening Lions Club, ABC Club, Rotary Club, Altrusa Club, Potpourri Club, East 4th Baptist Church, Rebekah Lodge #284 and Past Noble Grands, Downtown Lions Club, Women's Forum, Greater Big Spring Rotary, Wesley

Methodist Church, First Methodist Church, Baptist Young Women, Ackerly Circuit Riders, Retired Senior Volunteer Program, Alateens, Big Spring High School Home Economics Group, 14th & Main Church of Christ Bible Study Group, Willing Workers — Midway Baptist Church, Salem Baptist, 1948 Hyperion Club and First Baptist Church — Coahoma.

For many years family and friends from the Ackerly "Williams Clan" have entertained the patients on the North Psychiatric Unit at their Christmas party. This group includes Jim Burchett, Covie Williams and Van and Shirley Kontz.

Santa and Mrs. Claus, Mr. and Mrs. Mert Remley, visited all the parties and the shut-in patients who were unable to attend a party.

Mary Jane Phillips Weaver announced that the Fourth Annual ATD Arts and Crafts Sale was a huge success and thanks all who participated. This is one of the few times that there is such a concentrated amount of patient items on sale. These and greenhouse items made great Christmas gifts and helped patients at the same time.

Santa's suburban was filled every day last week with gifts as Santa's helpers, Bary Speaker and Danny Sizenbach, from plant management made deliveries. Approximately 300 gifts were delivered for patients to open Christmas morning.

Food Service employees provided refreshments, at the last minute, so that patients could have a party all day as they participated in activities on December 18.

After 30 years service, Ruth Graham, Chief Purchasing & Supply Officer, has retired. January 4, W.C. Earnest, former Chief of Operations for Community Services, will become the new Director of Purchasing and Supply.

Dr. Steven Shon, Deputy commissioner of Mental Health, addressed the staff at the hospital

December 22. His presentation concerned the vision and direction of TXMHMR for the next five years.

As 1992 draws to a close, the Community Relations Department and the entire BSSH staff would like to say thank you to the community volunteers, the Volunteer Services Council and the many individuals who contribute to enhancing the lives of the patients in the state hospital. Whatever part you might have played, be it large or small, it is important, and it is something that patients would not have, if it were not for volunteers.

We would like to thank our friends at the Big Spring Herald, who are so gracious to cover our activities, and especially Tim Appel, who makes many trips to the hospital and is careful to protect the confidentiality rights of patients. We wish for the community and for the people we serve a happy and healthy New Year.

Kathy Higgins, is director of Community Relations at BSSH, which includes the Volunteer and Public Information Department.

Efforts hoped to stop vandalism, preserve history

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMARILLO — A few years ago, Jim Couzzourt, a program specialist for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission and an avocational archaeologist, flew directly over a large prehistoric village site on the shores of Greenbelt Lake near Clarendon.

What he saw when he looked down disturbed him, he said.

"You could see the vandalism (to the site) from 8,000 feet," he said. "It was pretty extensive."

If limited to just one site, perhaps the vandalism wouldn't have bothered Couzzourt as much.

But it's not, he said.

"It's absolutely everywhere," he said. "Vandalism is rampant."

Recently, representatives of Frank Phillips College in Borger, Amarillo College, Clarendon College, West Texas State University and Texas A&M University, as well as businessmen and landowners, met in Clarendon to discuss archaeology in the Texas Panhandle.

One of the many topics they discussed during the meeting was how to preserve as much as possible of the many clues left behind in the Panhandle that provide insight into how humankind developed, Couzzourt said.

Wayne Bartholomew, curator of archaeology at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, also attended that meeting. He agreed stemming vandalism of historical sites is a key goal of the group.

"The site at Greenbelt Lake was one of the motivating factors in getting the group together," he said.

"It is a very important archaeological site discovered about 20 years ago. In the last 20 years, a large portion has been completely destroyed. That was one of the things the group looked at — how can we save it."

"We need to get across to the public the importance of these (historic) sites. It's important to make people aware of what they're doing and the loss they're creating."

Wayne Bartholomew, curator of archaeology at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Canyon

he said. Bartholomew and Couzzourt said "pothunters," those who scavenge sites for relics, cause the greatest damage.

"There's a great trafficking in the country in antiquities as a source of easy money. All they have to do is bulldoze a little."

Couzzourt said there are state and federal laws that make it a crime to remove relics from archaeological sites on state or federal land.

But those laws are difficult to enforce, Bartholomew said.

"It's hard to prove a collection (of antiquities) came from federal or state land," he said.

Both Couzzourt and Bartholomew said their concern about vandalized sites is that knowledge is lost about early humans that can never be regained.

"The data base is disappearing right before your eyes and sometimes you just want to throw up your hands," Bartholomew said. "Every site has a story to tell. Each site is a different chapter. If you rip out a chapter, you're missing part of the story. And it's a blank you can never fill in."

Couzzourt said, "Every time these pothunters dig, they destroy the features (of the site). Features are non-portable. They can be a house, or a fire pit, or a post hole. And every feature is unique. The way you learn how people really lived is by examining the features."

"When you combine artifacts with features, you get a broader picture of how people lived," he said. "They (pothunters) are destroying a minimum of 50 percent of the potential knowledge of a site."

There is no telling how much information has already been lost, Couzzourt said.

"We should have started 90 years ago preserving sites," he said. "There's absolutely no way to accurately estimate what we've lost."

Despite the amount of damage done, Couzzourt said there is reason for optimism.

"The amount of damage done by man and by nature makes you want to cry," he said. "But it's the rest that's still there that's the hope."

"Some knowledge is better than none."

Newcomers

Republics struggle for recognition, place

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Finally, after five months behind a dark door with no name on the seventh floor of an old downtown office building, the Embassy of the Republic of Kyrgyzstan is spelled out in gold plastic letters.

The embassy is four rooms and a staff of four. "This is perhaps the smallest embassy, but it's enough for us," says Ambassador Roza Otunbayeva, seated before her new country's red flag, whose golden center design symbolizes the Kyrgyz "window to the world."

So far, according to the U.S. State Department's Office of Foreign Missions, about half of the 20 new nations have joined the ranks of the 160 accredited ambassadors or charges d'affaires.

The newcomer nations aren't prominently situated in stately town houses and spacious mansions along exclusive Embassy Row.

But for these independent, struggling countries, having even a tiny foothold in Washington — above all other world capitals — is a top priority for entering and becoming equal partners in the international community.

"Our independence is very fragile. To save and protect it, it is important to be in Washington," says Otunbayeva, who served as Kyrgyzstan's deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs before coming here. "The weight of independence is heavy because of our economic difficulties. We are a very sick organism. We have to perform surgery, change our heart."

"People don't know anything about my republic (the predominantly Moslem former Soviet Kirghizia). They don't know how to spell it. They don't know it exists in the world. I have to make our voice heard."

Ambassador Roza Otunbayeva Republic of Kyrgyzstan

Soviet Kirghizia). They don't know how to spell it. They don't know it exists in the world. I have to make our voice heard."

The fledgling embassies typically occupy small, sparsely furnished quarters in nondescript downtown buildings. Whether it is the former Yugoslav republic of Slovenia or the former Soviet republic of Belarus, they have few rooms, few staff members and few handmade mementos of their homeland. Their diplomats do double, even triple, duty.

Many embassies are temporarily camped out in these closet-size quarters until they can afford structures befitting their sovereign status. They have the prerequisite fax, computer and copy machine, but they also often have donated furniture and still-unpacked boxes of books and papers.

Croatia is an example of upward mobility. Early next year, its small staff plans to move from an office building into a brick house that belonged to the Austrian Embassy on Massachusetts Avenue's Embassy Row.

A Washington embassy is an incredible achievement for war-plagued, earthquake-ravaged Armenia, geographically the smallest of the former Soviet republics. The Armenian Embassy occupies five rooms at the end of a third-floor office corridor a couple of blocks from the U.S. Capitol. The door opens on a large national tricolor of red, blue and orange and a framed copy of Armenia's declaration of independence.

Because of the space shortage, the embassy's only reception so far — to celebrate one year of independence Sept. 21 — had to be held in another building.

The staff of five, all of Armenian heritage, is headed by Charge d'Affaires Alexander Arzumanyan, who also represents the country's 3.4 million people at the United Nations.

The embassy, which recently started issuing its own visas, takes calls about the new country's banking laws, copyright laws and procedures for starting a business.

"Some people want to explore the possibility of living there or retiring there," says Mary Ann Kibarian, assistant to Arzumanyan. "Some ask how to get in touch with our best computer scientists, how to adopt Armenian children, how to buy Armenian cognac."

"An embassy in Washington is the real locomotive, the engine for new diplomacy for new democratic Ukraine," Ambassador Oleh H. Bilorus tells National Geographic. "For us to be integrated in world structures, the United States is most important. We are here not just to shake hands, but to have intense political, financial and scientific cooperation and partnership."

Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk was on hand last May for the opening of the embassy, a carpeted suite of eight offices. A dozen oil paintings by a celebrated Ukrainian landscape artist decorate some walls.

All nine of the diplomatic staff are from the capital, Kiev. Among former Soviet republics, Ukraine's embassy is the second-largest, after the 250-member Russian Embassy.

he said.

Bartholomew and Couzzourt said "pothunters," those who scavenge sites for relics, cause the greatest damage.

"There's a great trafficking in the country in antiquities as a source of easy money. All they have to do is bulldoze a little."

Couzzourt said there are state and federal laws that make it a crime to remove relics from archaeological sites on state or federal land.

But those laws are difficult to enforce, Bartholomew said.

"It's hard to prove a collection (of antiquities) came from federal or state land," he said.

Both Couzzourt and Bartholomew said their concern about vandalized sites is that knowledge is lost about early humans that can never be regained.

"The data base is disappearing right before your eyes and sometimes you just want to throw up your hands," Bartholomew said. "Every site has a story to tell. Each site is a different chapter. If you rip out a chapter, you're missing part of the story. And it's a blank you can never fill in."

Couzzourt said, "Every time these pothunters dig, they destroy the features (of the site). Features are non-portable. They can be a house, or a fire pit, or a post hole. And every feature is unique. The way you learn how people really lived is by examining the features."

"When you combine artifacts with features, you get a broader picture of how people lived," he said. "They (pothunters) are destroying a minimum of 50 percent of the potential knowledge of a site."

There is no telling how much information has already been lost, Couzzourt said.

"We should have started 90 years ago preserving sites," he said. "There's absolutely no way to accurately estimate what we've lost."

Despite the amount of damage done, Couzzourt said there is reason for optimism.

"The amount of damage done by man and by nature makes you want to cry," he said. "But it's the rest that's still there that's the hope."

"Some knowledge is better than none."

Ambassador Rose Otunbayeva takes pride in the flag of the new nation of Kyrgyzstan which hangs in her embassy in Washington. The former Soviet republic's first Washington embassy is four rooms in a downtown office building.

has about 320 calories."

Weight watchers should not become discouraged if they feel the weight is not coming off right away, Richardson said.

"If you had a structured routine before the holidays, it will come off slowly but surely," she said. "If you didn't have those habits (eating low in fat and daily exercise), it's going to take more work."

Good health and positive weight management results will follow if a person remains motivated and consistent in eating habits and physical activity.

"You shouldn't feel discouraged.

You didn't put on extra weight in a day, so look for small changes as a start when you're trying to manage your weight," Richardson said.

"Eventually, you will see the long-term benefits — lower blood pressure and heart rate and lower risk of heart disease and certain cancers."

they could bring him back by artificial means, he came back on his own," Ms. Durell said. Shortly after that, McCandless developed pneumonia. Nonetheless, he continued his fight to survive.

Margaret McCandless said her husband never lost his sense of humor. "He asked the ambulance driver what his response time was."

"He came back and said it was three minutes and 20 seconds. I said, 'That's pretty good,'" Roy McCandless added.

While recovering in the hospital, he had several visitors — and a few surprises.

"Sheriff Brookshire came to Dallas when I was in the hospital and promoted me from lieutenant to captain (of the Sheriff's Reserves). When you've accepted the fact you are going to be a quadriplegic and you're still getting promotions, it's kind of confusing," McCandless said.

He eagerly awaits resuming his work with the reserves as training officer.

"I may be down, but I'm not out and I'll be back. ... It doesn't cost any more to have a good attitude," he said. "My immediate goal is to return to a normal life. You'll never make me believe I'll never walk again. I'll go back to work as soon as I'm physically able."

Couple's anniversary party benefits needy

DEAR ABBY: This letter is long overdue. George and I celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary last April and we used a suggestion we read in your column. We had a lovely party at the Chicago-Corinthian Yacht Club, and our invitations read:

"Your love and friendship is the only gift we need. However, if you wish to bring something, please make it an item of non-perishable food that will be donated to the needy."

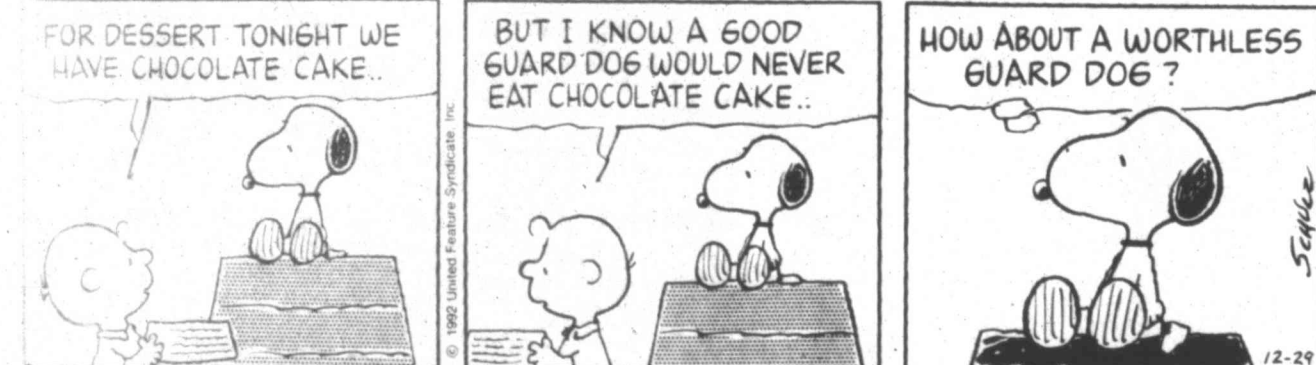

Abby, it worked! We had a heavy carload to deliver. The people at the party were amazed at the quantity of food we brought in. We thank you for publishing that suggestion and hope you will continue your wonderful column for a long time. -- JANE LEONARD, SKOKIE, ILL.

Dear Abby

DEAR JANE: I'm pleased that you used my idea for your 50th wedding anniversary celebration. May you and George enjoy many more anniversaries.

When all is said and done, all we really have in the end is the pleasure we receive from that which we give away.

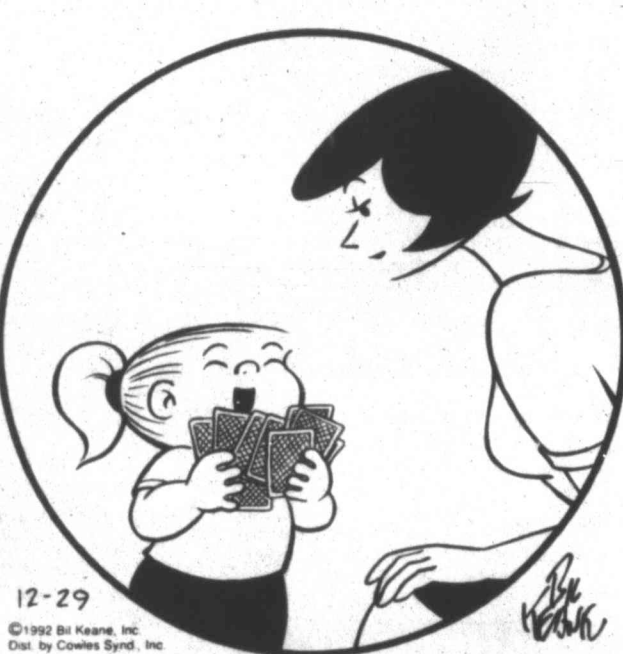

DEAR ABBY: During the holidays, blood banks around the country face the task of providing transfusions for the many hospital patients who depend on our community blood supply. The need is so great, and you have been such a stalwart friend, Abby, that we are asking you to remind your readers once again that the need for blood never takes a holiday.

Perhaps you can also remind your readers that giving blood is safe: You can't get AIDS or any other disease from GIVING blood. It's simple and usually takes 30 to 40 minutes from registration through post-donation juice and crackers. And, most important, giving blood saves lives!

Last year, more than 4 million Americans received blood transfusions. Sadly, only about 5 percent of those able to donate actually give blood. Here in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, we need more than 700 units of blood every day, including Christmas and New Year's!

Abby, Americans have so many blessings to celebrate. Why not celebrate the blessings of good health by sharing it? This holiday season, visit your local blood center and give the gift that lasts a lifetime: Give blood. -- WILLIAM F. HELLER, CARTER BLOOD CENTER; WILLIAM V. MILLER, M.D., WADLEY BLOOD CENTER; HAROLD KAPLAN, M.D., PARKLAND BLOOD CENTER

DEAR ABBY: At a recent party, a large bowl of dip was served with vegetables cut into small "sticks" -- carrots, cucumbers, etc. To my horror, I saw people proceed to dip half-eaten vegetable sticks back into the bowl of dip!

This struck me as being very unsanitary. Am I too fussy, or not? -- REPULSED IN VERMONT

DEAR REPULSED: You are not too fussy -- you're sensible. When serving a dip, a spoon should be provided in order to allow the guests to spoon out the dip onto small cocktail plates.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1992

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reach into your imagination for some creative ideas for work and home. Watch a tendency to go overboard. A partner stands behind you in a money matter. Think carefully before negotiating. Tonight: Early to bed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Gather friends together and make plans for an upcoming event that involves all of you. You hear news that excites you and opens your imagination to new vistas. You can count on that special person in your life. Tonight: Start the New Year celebrations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are definitely in the limelight today. Grab hold of your responsibilities and move with the moment. Check out an offer that may touch you, but may also involve traveling. Use caution with spending. Tonight: Be a force to be dealt with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check out a rumor with care. Do not jump at the first solution that presents itself. Seek out expert counsel when you do not have the answers. Extremes punctuate the day. A partner offers you support. Tonight: Make time for a loving encounter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are far livelier than you have been in a long time. You glow because of the additional attention you are getting from your special partner in life. Others are drawn to you. Another is coming from. Tonight: Indulge a playmate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get acknowledged for a job well done. Another may slip and reveal true feelings. Emphasis is on choices. Tonight: Play the night away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You push to accomplish necessary tasks. Permit your more-nurturing side to come out. A loved one or potential partner appreciates your caring. Be sensitive as to where another is coming from. Tonight: Indulge a playmate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You experience a real sense of solidity when it comes to your emotional and financial security. A loving gesture toward a family member or roommate means a lot. Let your lighter side out. Tonight: Pretend it's your first date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Prioritize family and home matters today. You need to pay extra attention to your financial security, if it is tied to property or an investment. Open up to a new understanding. Tonight: Get together with a loved one and talk about your New Year's resolutions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop and buy a gift or a card for a loved one. Clear and open communications are highlighted. Open up to change and a more-positive day-to-day interaction. Return messages and clear out paperwork. Tonight: Hang out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Realize how far your affable ways can take you. An optimistic and positive approach helps your financial situation and allows you to look at other alternatives. Do consider a boss's suggestion. Tonight: Pretend it's Friday night.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You might have to stum about present good news. Be aware of how buoyant your personality is and how much of an impression you make on others. A friend starts up and helps you look at other possibilities. Tonight: Use your imagination.

Pitt Panthers cage UCLA Bruins, 91-79

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Big East isn't supposed to be so big this season. Don't send that theory UCLA's way.

The 11th-ranked Bruins dropped to 7-2 Monday night when they lost to Pittsburgh 91-79. Both of UCLA's defeats have been to Big East teams — Seton Hall downed the Bruins in the semifinals of the preseason NIT.

"Beating a team of UCLA's caliber really helps us going into Big East," said Chris McNeal, the Panthers' top returning scorer who broke out of a shooting slump with 26 points. Pitt is 7-1, with the only loss to conference foe Georgetown. Jerry McCullough added 19 points for Pitt, while Tyus Edney had 20 points for UCLA.

It was a busy night among the Top 25, including a matchup of No. 6 Michigan and No. 20 Nebraska at the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. The Wolverines won 88-73.

Also at the Rainbow Classic, No. 5 North Carolina ripped Southwestern Louisiana 80-59. No. 3 Kentucky beat Rutgers 89-67 in the first round of the Holiday Festival in New York. Fourth-ranked Indiana won the Hoosier Classic 85-65 over Colorado at Indianapolis. No. 8 Iowa downed Texas Southern 91-70. Arkansas, ranked ninth, defeated Coastal Carolina 93-74, and No. 10 Georgetown slipped past Hawaii Pacific 78-65 in the opening round of the Freedom Bowl Classic at Irvine, Calif.

No. 6 Michigan 88, Nebraska 73. Eric Riley, who lost his starting job when the Fab Five arrived last year, came up with his biggest game of the season. The 7-foot senior helped the Wolverines dominate the boards and finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds. Chris Webber finished with 20 points and 12 rebounds. Jimmy King had 19 points, one off his career-high.

The Wolverines face North Carolina in the semifinals. No. 5 North Carolina 80, SW Louisiana 59. The Tar Heels led just 50-46 with 10:36 to play. Then 7-foot Eric Montross returned from the bench and sparked North Carolina. Montross and George Lynch each had 17 points in North Carolina's fourth appearance in the Rainbow Classic; it has won the title each previous time — in 1972, 1977 and 1982.

No. 3 Kentucky 89, Rutgers 67. Jamal Mashburn, who grew up in Harlem and played high school ball in the Bronx, had 22 points, five rebounds and five steals in his first college game in Madison Square Garden. Rodrick Rhodes, a freshman from Jersey City, N.J., added 15 points in just 24 minutes. Coach Rick Pitino got a victory in his first game at the Garden since he left as coach of the New York Knicks after the 1988-89 season.

Kentucky plays St. John's in the Festival final.

No. 4 Indiana 65, Colorado 65. In winning the Hoosier Classic, Indiana got 20 points from Calbert Cheaney, 19 by Alan Henderson and 17 from tournament MVP Damon Bailey. Henderson also had 12 rebounds and blocked three shots. The Hoosiers held the Buffaloes to 38 percent shooting from the field.

No. 8 Iowa 91, Texas Southern 70. Acie Earl set an Iowa record with nine steals and scored 15 points. The Hawkeyes (9-0) also had Val Barnes score 15 points and James Winters and Chris Street add 13 apiece, with Street getting 16 rebounds.

No. 9 Arkansas 93, Coastal Carolina 74.

The Razorbacks improved to 8-0 by forcing 32 turnovers. Robert Shepherd had 15 points and seven steals, while Tony Dunkin led the Chanticleers with 23 points.

No. 10 Georgetown 78, Hawaii Pacific 65.

Freshman Othella Harrington scored 26 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Joey Brown and Robert Churchwell added 16 points each for the Hoyas (6-0), who face host UC Irvine in the final.

Georgetown had a 40-22 rebounding advantage over a tired Hawaii Pacific team playing its fifth game in eight days. The Sea Warriors, of the NAIA, traveled to Southern California after beating Illinois Wesleyan on Sunday.

No. 13 Purdue 67, Florida 63. Glen Robinson had 18 points, making five of seven free throws in the final 2:21. Purdue (7-0), which had a 30-5 run in the game, advanced to the championship game against Texas-El Paso (7-2).

No. 18 Florida State 109, Maryland-Baltimore County 80.

Sam Cassell scored 31 points in coach Pat Kennedy's 250th career win. The Seminoles played without their second-leading scorer, Doug Edwards, who dislocated a finger blocking a shot in pre-game warm-ups and could be out for up to two weeks.

No. 22 Arizona 92, Delaware State 52.

Chris Mills hit six 3-pointers before halftime. Arizona held Delaware State scoreless for more than six minutes of a second-half, 20-9 charge. Arizona forced 32 turnovers.

The Wildcats face West Virginia in the final.

No. 23 Connecticut 91, Hartford 66. Scott Burrell scored 28 points, matching his career high, before 18

NBA scouts representing 16 teams. They also came to see Hartford's Vin Baker, who scored 19 points, had nine rebounds, four steals and two blocked shots.

Connecticut meets Towson State in the final.

No. 24 Vanderbilt 95, Air Force 50. Billy McCaffrey scored 21 points in the Commodores' eighth straight victory, which set up a match with Bowling Green in the final. After not playing for nine days, the Commodores looked rusty in the first half, shooting only 39 percent (13 of 33) from the field. But they woke up to subdue the Falcons and advance to meet Bowling Green's Falcons.

Oregon 76, No. 25 Brigham Young 70.

Antoine Stoudamire scored 22 points and Clyde Jordan scored two crucial late baskets for the Ducks, who took advantage of a 5-minute, 58-second BYU scoring drought late in the second half to advance to the championship game against Ohio State.

Brigham Young was outscored 24-8 at the free-throw line. Oregon had 36 free throws, compared to nine for the Cougars.

Warriors hand Spurs first loss under Lucas

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Golden State won at San Antonio, handing coach John Lucas his first loss in four games as Chris Mullin scored 42 points, including a go-ahead jumper with 8.2 seconds remaining to give Golden State a 106-105 win over San Antonio.

Mullin hit a career-high 19 field goals in 31 attempts for the Warriors, who snapped the Spurs' four-game winning streak since Jerry Tarkanian was fired on Dec. 18, including three wins with Lucas as coach.

The Spurs trailed 81-66 late in the third period, but they took a 98-95 lead with 4:55 left in the game with a 32-14 spurt.

David Robinson, who finished with 32 points and 12 rebounds, accounted for 19 during the rally. Dale Ellis, who scored 20 points with four 3-pointers, and Sean Elliott scored five points each in the run.

With Golden State ahead 104-102, Ellis surprised the Warriors with a 3-pointer with 18 seconds left. Mullin then made his game-winning jumper from the baseline. Heat 107, Lakers 96.

Harold Miner was a high school senior living a short distance away from the Cal. Western Forum in Inglewood, Calif., when the Miami Heat joined the NBA in 1988.

Four years later, the Heat were still waiting for their first victory over the Lakers when Miner stepped forward.

Miner scored 12 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter, and Miami overcame an early 18-point deficit to earn its first win in 11 games over the Lakers, 107-96 Monday night.

Jazz 114, Timberwolves 95. Utah won its seventh straight game at home following a 1-4 start, beating Minnesota with 15-0 and 13-0 spurts.

Karl Malone scored 21 points and John Stockton had 13 points, 20 assists and seven steals for the Jazz, who handed the Timberwolves their seventh consecutive loss.

The Jazz scored 15 straight points in the final 3:48 of the third period to extend a 75-66 lead to 90-66, sealing the Timberwolves' 11th loss in 12 games. Minnesota has yet to win in nine games at Salt Lake City.

Michael Williams led Minnesota with 19 points.

Bullets 97, Hawks 96. Visiting Atlanta tied the score with 25 seconds left on a four-point play by Paul Graham, but Washington snapped a nine-game losing streak when Pervis Ellison connected on 1 of 2 free throws with 5.7 seconds remaining.

The Bullets led 92-79 with six minutes to go, but Duane Ferrell pulled the Hawks to 94-92 with 43 seconds to play. Ellison then sank a pair of foul shots with 31 seconds left for a four-point lead before Graham shocked the Bullets with a 3-point and free throw.

After he was fouled by Jon Koncak, Ellison missed the first of two foul shots before sinking the second to break the tie.

Cavaliers 98, Pistons 89. Mark Price had six points and three assists during a 12-0 run at the start of the fourth quarter, lifting Cleveland over Detroit.

The win was the eighth in nine games for the Cavaliers, while the visiting Pistons lost for only the third time in their last 14 outings.

Price had 28 points and 12 assists and Larry Nance 27 points and 11 rebounds for Cleveland.

Nets 104, Hornets 103.

Chris Morris scored 26 points and Kenny Anderson had 13 points, 11 rebounds and 11 assists in New Jersey's victory at home over Charlotte.

The Nets used a 16-5 spurt in the second half to turn a 73-69 deficit into an 85-78 advantage.

Magic 110, Bucks 94.

At Orlando, Shaquille O'Neal had 21 points, 14 rebounds and five blocked shots as the Magic out-muscled Milwaukee inside.
