Council to consider engineering costs for water treatment plant

City council members will look at revised engineering costs for work at the city's water treatment plant when they meet today at 6:30 p.m.

Last month, the council reviewed plans and costs for a filter-to-waste system at the plant to reduce turbidity spikes that occur when the plant is started each morning.

Council members balked at the price of $8,000 submitted by the engineering firm of Camp Dresser & McKee, and instructed City Engineer Beverly Coots to discuss the matter with the firm.

"They need to sharpen their pencil," said councilman Dayton Robertson, and suggested a price in the range of $6,000.

The revised quote reflects a cost of not more than $6,100.

The council will also look at new rates submitted by TCA Cable Partners.

Under Federal Communication Commission guidelines, the cable company is proposing to raise its basic service costs from $7.45 to $7.50, and the standard rate from $15.08 to $16.45.

The council will also make two appointments to the Colorado River Municipal Water District board as the terms of Russell Yorgesen and Rod Waller are expiring.

Yorgesen has been on the board since 1975, while Waller has been a member since 1987.

The terms for the members of the board are two years, with the appointees serving from June 1, 1999 through May 31, 2001.

In other business, the council will consider a special-use home occupation permit request by Tamela Bruns for a manicurist/nail clinic business at 3741 Sunset.

The council will also canvass votes from Saturday's city council election, consider appointments on the city's builder's board of appeals and meet in executive session for the yearly evaluation of City Manager John Gayle.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

It's hard to believe, but we received our second letter from Linda Tripp. The first, obviously a solicitation for funds, went directly into the trash.

The second was the same, but we decided to open and read it.

It began with "Dear Friend," and went on to say that she had been told we were a fair person.

Now that alone goes to prove that the polls are not accurate. Everybody knows that news guys are not fair.

There were several more pages that described Tripp's miserable situation.

"Bill Clinton's disciples have never been satisfied with just winning elections or political arguments. Their approach has always been to attack, discredit and destroy their opponents. Now they have me in their cross hairs and I feel like David up against Goliath."

Not only do we want to know who told that terrible thing about "fairness," but it'd be interesting to learn how we got on Tripp's mailing list.

We also noticed where the Baltimore Orioles went to Cuba to compete against the national team — the first professional baseball game played there in more some 30 years.

The Orioles won 3-2 in extra innings. A second diplomacy-driven game was held earlier this month and the Orioles lost, 12-6, despite a home-field advantage.

The Cuban Communist regime of Fidel Castrol has outlasted nine U.S. Presidents.

Ministerial Alliance to coordinate donations for tornado victims

The Scurry County Ministerial Alliance is coordinating relief efforts locally to help Oklahoma residents following the Monday tornadoes in that state.

Donations for brooms, rakes, dust pans, bottled water, non-perishable foods, bleach, hand can openers, blankets, sheets, towels, flashlights & batteries, diapers and personal hygiene items are being accepted at Wal-Mart and Lawrence IGA.

The local ministerial alliance is working to distribute the needed items through the Urban Ministries of Oklahoma City.

Contestants include: Nickolas Means, persuasive speaking, Katy Cooper, prose interpretation.

Trevor Kerr, Brett Gibson and Cara Best will compete as a team and individually in accounting.

Others include Trey Gorman, computer science, and Vanessa Jones, spelling.

Sponsors accompanying the students include Lynda McCormack, Phyllis Smith, Becky Johnson, Wynola Early and Lynda Patterson.

Lyndell Lee is a member of the speech honor crew and as such will help run the contest.

The Snyder group will also get to meet Gov. George W. Bush in his office around 10 a.m. Friday.

Oklahoma residents beginning to put their lives back together

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In her debris-littered front yard, 7-year-old Megan Varva leaped across chunks of concrete and wood like a gazelle on an obstacle course.

"My outfit is new," she said proudly, tugging at her pink-and-white striped shorts set. "My mom said I'm going to be getting about a new outfit a day."

Megan's new wardrobe isn't a luxury. Her old clothes, like much of her neighborhood, lay twisted in the dirt after Monday's deadly tornadoes in Oklahoma and Kansas.

"I don't want to go in there," the first-grader said of what little was left of her house. "It isn't nice."

Many in the twister-scarred southern Plains would agree. Their homes are now nothing more than a jagged nest of splintered wood, mangled furniture, shattered glass — and broken dreams.

The big orange "U" spray painted along a wall of 9-year-old Sara and 5-year-old Rebecca Johnson's home in Haysville, Kan., said it all: Uninhabitable.

More than 3 inches of rain have poured in through the roof. The house must be inspected for structural damage before Dave Johnson and his daughters can even think of returning.

"I'm just picking up the pieces," Johnson said Wednesday.

All around Oklahoma City, cars — some with smashed windows — lined up at police and National Guard checkpoints as families came to dig through the debris before an 8 p.m. curfew.

Sheryl and John Molsbee drove slowly past mounds of debris that obliterated neighborhood landmarks before finally pulling up to their brick-and-frame home. It no longer had a roof.

"It's worse than I thought," said John Molsbee.

Officials said 38 people died and more than 751 people were injured in the deadliest tornado to hit Oklahoma since 1947. The twisters killed five in Kansas and injured nearly 150 people.

More twisters swarmed across parts of Texas and Arkansas on Tuesday, killing one person. And late Wednesday, strong winds shut down the Nashville International Airport and were blamed for three deaths in Tennessee.

Officials had received about 100 missing persons reports in Oklahoma, but they were uncertain how many were duplicates. A master list of the missing was expected to be released today.

John Long, chief of the public education office for the Oklahoma City Fire Department, said he didn't expect the fatality count to grow by much. Rescuers have made at least three searches of each damaged home.

The damage estimate has been placed at more than $225 million in Oklahoma and more than $140 million in Kansas, where 1,129 buildings were destroyed in Monday's storms.

A disaster housing program through the Federal Emergency Management Agency will provide rental assistance for up to 18 months, said Ben Frizzell of the Oklahoma Office of Civil Emergency Management.

Among those trying to get their lives together was Calvin Waters, a sheet metal worker in Haysville whose home was heavily damaged. He spent a second day trying to clear the debris, patch holes in the roof and mop up.

Waters called himself fortunate. He was shaken by the deaths of a woman and her month-old baby near his home — two people he didn't know.

"I always think a child should get a chance to grow up," he said. "If you have to take two people, don't take a baby child. Take me, I'm 44 years old."

President Clinton has authorized emergency disaster declarations for both Oklahoma and Kansas, paving the way for federal emergency funds for home and business owners.

Jim Anderson will likely need both forms of aid. Before a tornado destroyed his used motorcycle shop in Midwest City — just outside Oklahoma City — it stopped first in Moore, sucking up his home and leaving it a shattered pile of glass and metal.

"I don't know if it hasn't sunk in yet," he said. "Yesterday, I woke up and said it has to be a dream."

For hundreds of regional business owners, the nightmare has begun.

They must negotiate with insurance companies, hope for a fair and quick settlement, and eventually — if they can manage it — get back to business.

Bruce Silsby, an owner of a destroyed surplus store in Midwest City, tried to put a positive spin on things as he surveyed the wreckage.

SISD...

No school Friday

There will be no school for the Snyder Independent School District Friday as it is a designated "bad-weather day."

The district did not have to use the day during the school year for bad weather, so it will be a holiday for students and teachers.

The final day of classes for the local district is May 27. Graduation is Friday, May 28.

SISD board canvass votes

Snyder Independent School District board of trustees met briefly at noon Wednesday to canvass votes from the May 1 trustee election in which Glenn Clarady won another term on the board.

The board also adopted a resolution declaring Place 4 trustee Mark McCormick and Place 5 trustee Janet Stribling elected to office.

The two were unopposed in the election.

Due to an oversight, the portion of the election with the unopposed candidates was not cancelled.

Board president McCormick presided at the meeting and Clarady, Stribling, Richard Chambers and Bill Moss were in attendance.

Absent were Luann Burleson and Mike Levens.

Stalling of hate crimes bill being questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — A House Republican said Wednesday that his party is trying to stop a bill that would toughen the state's hate crimes law.

"I believe there has been pressure applied by the Republican Party to prevent people ... from voting their true convictions," Rep. Thomas Merritt, R-Longview, told a news conference.

"This is a very emotional issue for the Republican Party. I think they don't understand the legislative process and they don't understand what we're elected to do, to represent our districts. I represent everyone, and I think that's maybe something they've lost sight of," he added.

The James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Act was approved last week in the House and awaits a Senate committee hearing. Sen. John Whitmire pointed to the governor's office when asked about the delay in his chamber.

"I believe obviously there are political considerations... and the most noteworthy campaign going on in America today is presidential," said Whitmire, D-Houston.

On Wednesday, Republican Gov. George W. Bush, an early favorite for the GOP presidential nomination, was asked repeatedly about the measure named after the black man dragged to his death in East Texas last June.

The James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Act is HB938.

Rep. Wolens releases latest bill on electric deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Grandfathered power plants would be forced to reduce emissions by 2003 or close down under legislation to deregulate the state's multi-billion-dollar electric utility business.

The power plants would be directed to reduce nitrous oxide and sulfur dioxide emissions, according to Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas.

The plants potentially affected by the provision have been exempt from state environmental regulations since 1971. Under the bill, they would be forced to get a state permit.

Wolens' bill, released Wednesday, marks the latest compromise among electric utilities, residential and business customers and environmentalists.

"In addition to lowering the cost of electricity, the bill significantly reduces air pollution in Texas from grandfathered, dirty power plants, and preserves electric service reliability," Wolens said.

A bill by Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, to deregulate the market has already passed the Senate. Wolens chairs the House State Affairs Committee, which is now considering the bill. It wasn't clear when the panel would vote.

Environmentalists cheered the provision designed to reduce pollution from grandfathered facilities.

"It is provisions such as this that allow all of the citizens of Texas to benefit from electric competition legislation," said Mark MacLeod, director of state energy programs for Environmental Defense Fund. "This bill will help reduce unhealthy air pollution all over Texas."

Deregulation would allow most electric customers to shop around among utility companies. The monopolies held by utilities for decades would be broken as competitors began to fight for the same customers.

Wolens' bill is also designed to make sure that business and industrial customers aren't the only ones to benefit.

Retail electric providers providing a certain amount of electricity would have to serve a minimum number of residential customers under the bill. There has been a concern among some consumer groups that new utilities would ignore residential customers in lieu of business customers who could provide more profit.

"This bill assures that residential customers get guaranteed benefits from competition," Wolens said. "It will give customers the ability to choose an electricity provider and assures that retail providers will have to serve small customers."

The electric utility deregulation bill is SB7.

Whole new parsley world bloomed

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — In my long-ago youth, parsley to me was a mossy-looking green that garnished a dish. Then I took up gardening and a whole new parsley world bloomed.

The curled, garnish variety I encounter occasionally now only in restaurants. What I cultivate is the much tastier variety known as plainleaf or Italian parsley.

Whatever kind you like, this herb is easy to grow in North and South and enjoys a colorful history. Beloved of Greeks and Romans, the ancients believed it kept you from getting drunk. Supposedly, its pleasant smell absorbed the inebriating fumes of wine. It also kept your breath sweet after heavily seasoned meals.

The herb was used in festive garlands and for the victor's crown in some sports.

I grow plainleaf parsley the year around, in the garden in season and indoors under lights in winter.

The variety I get from Shepherd's Garden Seeds (30 Irene Street, Torrington, Conn. 06790-6658, telephone 860-482-3638, www. shepherdseeds.com) is marketed as "Gigante d'Italia" and it lives up to the name.

With a spread of up to two inches, the leaves are truly big, as herb leaves go. They are deep green and shiny and they mix easily with lettuce for a flavorful salad.

The leaves are large enough for me to debauch occasionally on a salad of parsley alone. Besides its attractive flavor, I'm thinking it's good for me. Parsley contains an astonishing assortment of vitamins and minerals.

The herb also is linked to medicinal uses. Because of its estrogen content, it is sometimes recommended for women in menopause. A good diuretic, it also is said to help out with gas and with coughs and asthma.

Besides its role in salads, plainleaf parsley is often added to the basil base of pesto to give this popular pasta condiment a slightly different tang. And parsley itself forms the main herb ingredient of salsa verde (green sauce), another much-used condiment.

Another parsley variety is Neapolitan, whose leaf stalks are eaten like celery. And there is Hamburg parsley with fine white roots that are cultivated like parsnips.

The plant in fact belongs to the celery family, which includes carrots, parsnips, caraway, dill, the wildflower Queen Anne's lace and the very poisonous water hemlock.

Parsley's lovely trident leaves and deep green color are easy on the eyes and play a role in a flower bed. And the curled variety can give a mossy effect.

Another plus for this herb is its seasonal longevity. Where basil expires at the slightest touch of frost, parsley thrives right into freezes of early winter in my southern New York climate.

The plant is actually a biennial that in the North can survive winter under a protective mulch and put out new leaves in early spring. In the South, a winter crop may be planted in early fall that keeps producing as long as the temperature stays above 20 degrees Fahrenheit.

I've found the best way to grow parsley is to start the tiny seeds indoors under lights. They take their time to germinate, as long as four weeks, making seed loss high if sowed outdoors where it's difficult to control conditions.

Once started, the plant is so adaptable that I've followed various courses. One way was to start the seeds indoors in September, transplant one or two plants into pots, and keep them producing on the shelf all winter. When spring came, I would transplant them into the garden, where they would keep going until early winter.

Another way was to start seeds indoors in March and move the seedlings into the garden in late April or early May after they acquired some girth. They'd produce all summer and then I would dig up a plant or two in October and move them indoors for the winter.

Downs stepping down

NEW YORK (AP) — Hugh Downs, ABC's longtime host of "20/20," says he's stepping down from the newsmagazine in September.

Downs, 78, who has been with the program since its second week in 1978, said Wednesday he wants to pursue opportunities in new media.

"This fast-moving cybernetic age holds such challenge and opportunity that I now find it irresistible," he said.

The Akron, Ohio, native began working at NBC after serving in the Army during World War II. The Guinness Book of Records certified him in 1985 as having logged the most hours on network commercial television.

A Greek gift from an Austr(al)ian

Tim Seres is one of the world's most gifted players. He was born in Vienna, Austria, in 1925 (a great year for bridge players) to Hungarian parents. They fled Europe before World War II, eventually arriving in Sydney, Australia, in 1947. Eleven months later, Seres won his first national championship.

Playing in his usual game at the Double Bay Bridge Centre, Seres was in four spades. However, given that West had the diamond ace-queen hovering over the king, he seemed destined to lose four tricks: two spades and two diamonds. Do you see any chance to mislead the opponents?

With the diamond king a debatable value, Seres' four-spade raise was optimistic, but they pay extra for making a game.

Declarer started with his club king, a club to dummy's ace, and a club ruff in hand. He continued with a heart to dummy's queen and the heart ace, both opponents following high-low to show an even number of cards. Trusting their plays, declarer deduced that West had begun with 2-2-6-3 shape. And he spotted a beautiful ruse: Seres called for the spade two, and when East played the seven, he covered with the eight!

After West won with the 10, he had to open up the diamonds, conceding a trick to declarer's king. Seres won three spades, three hearts, one diamond, two clubs and a heart ruff in the dummy.

Of course, it is easy to say that East should have played his king on the first round of trumps, or that West should have won with the ace, not the 10. But honestly now, would you have found either of those plays? I'm sure I wouldn't have.

In a large bowl, combine pie filling and cake mix. Beat on medium setting for 5 to 7 minutes. Spoon into pan.

Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.

Sprinkle a dish towel with confectioners' sugar. Invert cake onto towel. Peel away and discard wax paper. Neatly trim edges of cake roll. Starting from a short end, roll up cake in dish towel. Let cool on a cooling rack for 2 hours.

Unroll cake and spread with whipped topping; re-roll. Freeze until whipped topping is firm, about 2 hours.

To serve, cut into 16 slices. Sprinkle with blueberries.

Bulldogs strengthen playoff possibilities

WESTBROOK — The Ira Bulldogs are control of their playoff destiny.

Jerek Brown struck out 13 Wildcats, and the Bulldogs pounded out eight hits to knock off Westbrook, 9-5. The victory gives Ira sole possession of second place in the standings, with two district games remaining.

"We can win out and be assured of a playoff spot," Ira coach Bubba Edwards said. "We know what we have to do, now we just have to go out and do it."

Against Westbrook, the Bulldogs found themselves trailing early on. The Wildcats scratched out a pair of runs in the opening frame to stake the first lead of the night.

But in the third, the Bulldogs answered back with five runs and never looked back.

With Richard Wilkins already on base, a single from Perry Jamison and a walk to Jase Olvera loaded the bases. A ground ball from Brown scored Wilkins, with Jamison coming home one batter later on a balk.

Next up, Drew Wall doubled to put runners at first and second. Seth Sterling delivered a single to drive in Brown and Wall. Sterling then scored on a Wildcat error.

Westbrook posted three runs in the bottom of the third, before Ira tallied one in the fourth and three in the fifth.

The Bulldogs will host Lorraine at 5 p.m. Friday, before wrapping up district play Tuesday at home against Aspermont.

Tigers continuing tradition

By Eric Drennan
Sports Editor

Regardless of the opponent's name, record or rank, when the Snyder Tiger baseball team takes the field, it always has one thing in its favor.

It started with the Tigers' first coach Speedy Moffett, and was carried on by his successor Albert Lewis, and now continues with Roland Herrera.

Snyder has a tradition and history unmatched by any other 4A team in the state, and it propels the Tigers to success virtually every spring.

In Class 4A, Snyder's seven state tournament appearances is topped only by South San Antonio's 11, and the Tigers' 922 victories is the most by any school.

Moffett garnered 498 wins during his 22-year stint in the Snyder dugout. Lewis notched 324 more during his 18 years. And now Herrera has reached the 100-win plateau in just his fifth season.

There are many reasons for Snyder's success on the diamond, but heading the list is the community's involvement, according to Lewis and Herrera.

"We always had some of the most cooperative groups of parents you could have," said Lewis, who skippered the Tigers from '77 to '94. "They taught the kids the fundamentals of the game. When the season ended if we were going to need, say a short stop for example, and we didn't have one ready in the program, we didn't have to worry. We knew that come that next year that short stop would be there. Someone was going to groom a short stop over the summer and we would get him the next year. We always got the best athletes the town had to offer."

Herrera also sings the praises of the summer program.

"The people that work the kids in the summer programs work extremely hard and do a terrific job," Herrera stated. "That contributes a lot to our success. Without them, it would be difficult for Snyder to be as successful."

And success is something the Tiger baseball squads are accustomed to. The tradition and history of Snyder baseball is something every Tiger player knows about.

"You can talk to the juniors and seniors on this year's team, and they can remember a lot about the '92 and '93 teams," Herrera remarked. "They were only elementary kids then, but they know about those guys and what they accomplished. Each group of kids that comes through, is aware of the tradition that was established before them."

As only the third baseball coach in the history of Snyder High School, Herrera also feels an obligation to lead the Tigers to success. Even with 100 career victories, Herrera isn't completely satisfied with his coaching tenure.

"I feel that we've had some success, but there are still goals that we haven't reached," Herrera said. "I want to take Snyder back to the state tournament, and until I do that, I won't be completely satisfied."

The drive to carry on the SHS tradition has allowed Herrera to mold successful student-athletes, both on and off the field.

"I don't think I've changed any from the first year I was head coach," he said. "I've learned a lot, but as far as my style and my emotions, those will probably never change. I just try to get the best out of our kids, whether I have to be hard on them or praise them.

"I don't know how my players see me. I've talked with some of our ex-players and they said that I was prety tough on them at times, but that I helped them learn how to be successful. And that's all I hope to do. With the help of the parents and of my three assistant coaches, who do a great job, hopefully I've taught the kids something they can use on the field, and take with them when they leave."

The Tigers will carry their rich history into the postseason once again, when they square off with Brownwood in a bi-district series, beginning Friday at 7 p.m. at Scott Field in Abilene. The series will continue at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Rangers start fast, roll past Boston, 8-3

Rapp was tagged for five runs in just one-third of an inning as the Texas Rangers rolled to a 8-3 victory over the Red Sox on Wednesday night.

Was it a fast start by Texas? Or was Rapp really that bad?

"I kept trying to find it, kept trying to find it and by then it was too late," Rapp said. "It was just a matter of throwing strikes, and I wasn't doing it."

Rapp (1-2) walked three and gave up four hits and five runs in the opening inning.

He walked leadoff hitter Tom Goodwin on four pitches, and Rusty Greer walked with one out. Juan Gonzalez and Rafael Palmeiro delivered RBI singles before Ivan Rodriguez hit a 2-1 pitch into the left-field screen. Todd Zeile singled and Lee Stevens walked before Rapp was pulled in favor of John Wasdin.

Rangers right-hander Rick Helling was the beneficiary of the quick start, allowing two runs in 6 1-3 innings and posting his third straight win.

"When you're up 7-0, you want to get your players off the field as soon as possible," Helling said. "I think any pitcher will tell you they pitch differently when you're up 7-0."

Helling (3-3) allowed seven hits, walked two and struck out two.

Gonzalez added a solo homer and Palmeiro went 3-for-3 with three singles and two walks.

Texas increased its lead to 7-0 in the second on RBI singles by Greer and Rodriguez.

Rodriguez had just three RBIs in his last 16 games after setting the club record with nine against Seattle on April 13.

Nomar Garciaparra, who hit 35 home runs last year, hit his first homer this season for Boston. The star shortstop missed six games because of a bad hamstring.

Garciaparra's two-run homer off reliever Mike Venafro made it 7-3 in the seventh. Gonzalez hit his fifth home run in the ninth.

"It's nice if you don't let them score," Oates said of the fast start.

Ex-Cowboy Tuninei dead, causes unknown

PLANO (AP) — Mark Tuinei, a star offensive lineman for the Dallas Cowboys in the mid-1990s, died today at a hospital, an official said. Tuinei was 39.

Tuinei, a two-time Pro-Bowler at left tackle, arrived at Medical Center of Plano at 6:20 a.m. and later died.

"It's unknown causes pending the medical examiner's report," according to a statement from hospital spokeswoman Caroline Lemelin.

Tuinei played 15 years for the Cowboys before he was released in April 1998 in a cost-cutting move. Tuinei had played only six games in the 1997 season because of a sprained left knee and surgery to repair degenerating bone in his right knee. He had knee problems for years.

Tuinei spent Wednesday night with friends and was passed out when he arrived home so friends left him in his car, sources told Dallas TV station WFAA.

Will Morris, a friend who arrived at Tuinei's sprawling mansion this morning, said he last saw Tuinei about 6 p.m. Wednesday. Tuinei and his wife were planning to move back to Hawaii this week so Tuinei could be offensive line coach at his old high school, Punahou High School, Morris said.

"He never seemed healthier or happier about going home. He was happy as can be," said Morris, who also attended the private school and met Tuinei at a Texas reunion of Punahou alumni about five years ago.

Tuinei came to the Cowboys in 1983 as a free agent from Hawaii, caught the attention of then-coach Tom Landry and played 10 games on defense. He moved to offense in 1985 and became a full-time starter in 1987.

He played in the Pro Bowl after the 1994 and 1995 seasons.

Tuinei, 6-foot-5, played left tackle for more than a decade — a crucial position, keeping opposing defensive lineman from sacking Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman. He played on three Super Bowl championship teams.

Tuinei was a major cog in an offensive line generally considered the best in the NFL in the mid-'90s, during the Cowboys' most-recent Super Bowl years. The line was among the best in allowing fewest sacks, and it also opened holes for Pro Bowl running back Emmitt Smith.

Amy Fisher gets parole

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Amy Fisher, who at 16 became the tabloid headline "Long Island Lolita" after shooting her lover's wife in the head, was granted parole today after nearly seven years in prison.

Officials said she would be released within one week from the western New York prison where she is being held.

"She's been served (with the decision) this morning and granted release," state Parole Board spokesman Thomas Grant said.

The three-member parole panel, which interviewed Ms. Fisher on Tuesday, voted 2-1 to free her, according to Grant. He said the board has ordered her release by a week from today from Albion state prison.

She could be let out sooner, Grant said.

Ms. Fisher shot Mary Jo Buttafuoco, then 37, in the head at the front door of the Buttafuoco home on New York's Long Island in 1992. She had been having sex with Mrs. Buttafuoco's husband, Joey, a 38-year-old businessman who later served six months in jail for statutory rape for the affair.

The teen was sentenced to five to 15 years in prison for first-degree assault.

A judge last month agreed to give her a shorter prison sentence, making her eligible for release if the parole board agreed. Ms. Fisher had argued she was denied effective legal counsel when she initially pleaded guilty.

During a court appearance last month, Ms. Fisher took responsibility for the shooting and apologized to Mrs. Buttafuoco.

"What happened to you — it wasn't your husband's fault ... It wasn't my father's fault. It was my fault and I'm sorry," she said.

Mrs. Buttafuoco said her faith in God allowed her to forgive the woman who seriously wounded her. The two corresponded for several months.

The Buttafuocos now live in Los Angeles, where Buttafuoco has been a cable television talk show host. The case inspired several television movies.

In a statement, Ms. Fisher's mother, Rose Fisher, said she had "prayed and waited for this moment to arrive. Knowing my daughter is coming home is the best Mother's Day gift I could wish for.

"I am looking forward to holding her in my arms, telling her I love her, and getting started on the rest of our lives together," Mrs. Fisher added.

Salt is salt

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm confused about the benefits of sea salt or of iodized salt. What about garlic salt? Also, a doctor told me that ordinary black pepper goes through the intestine whole.

DEAR READER: Not if it is ground.

With respect to your first question, salt is salt: good old sodium chloride. Sea salt has other minerals, too, which — for many people — give it a more piquant flavor. Same with garlic salt. Iodized salt was originally developed for use in non-coastal areas of the country, where people rarely ate fish and often became iodine-deficient. Now, with modern refrigeration and the general availability of seafood, iodized salt is not necessary. For general flavoring in food, regular table salt is fine; the other types merely give variety.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My shoulders are chronically sore because I am top-heavy. Is breast reduction an option?

DEAR READER: Yes it is. Extremely heavy breasts can cause real health problems, as well as being cosmetically unacceptable to some people. Chronic shoulder pain can eventually result in serious back problems.

Breast reduction is a medically safe procedure that can be performed by most qualified plastic surgeons. Obviously, there is initial pain — as with all surgery — but the final result usually makes the discomfort a small price to pay. Although I cannot give you a price range for the operation, a plastic surgeon could. Ask your doctor for a referral.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've noticed that one breast is larger than the other. I have yet to see a doctor. Should I?

DEAR READER: You don't mention your age or your sex. Both make a difference. Men and women may experience breast-size discrepancy. Some asymmetry is normal, and perhaps you simply haven't been aware of this. However, I believe that you should check with a doctor because of the possibility that a growth or hormone deficiency could have caused one breast to enlarge. Especially in women, such a change should be addressed. If a glandular condition is to blame, therapy — with surgery or hormone treatment — may be in order.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many antacids contain aluminum. With regular use of these products, will the aluminum cause health problems?

DEAR READER: As far as I know, the aluminum in antacids is chemically bound, so it cannot be absorbed into the body. It acts only as an acid buffer, so for all practical purposes, it can be regarded as an inert substance.

Los Alamos case illustrates dilemma prosecutors face

WASHINGTON (AP) — An espionage scandal at the Los Alamos nuclear weapons lab is exposing an age-old quandary in spy catching — when to remove a suspect from a sensitive job to protect secrets, knowing it may tip him off and ruin any potential prosecution.

The director of the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico said Wednesday at a Senate hearing that a scientist suspected for nearly three years of having given secrets to China was kept at his job because of concern an FBI investigation might otherwise be compromised.

Lab officials also were dissuaded from even checking the scientist's office computer, although employees had been warned in a formal policy that their computers were subject to search "without notice" as a security precaution. Again, lab managers were told such a search might taint evidence and ruin a potential criminal case.

"This points out the dilemma of balancing the requirements of national security against the constraints guiding law enforcement efforts," John Browne, the Los Alamos director, told a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee hearing.

Paul Robinson, director of Sandia National Laboratory, also located in New Mexico, told senators that in the past he had "pulled a person's clearance" even when an FBI investigation was under way. He gave no further details.

The Los Alamos scientist, Wen Ho Lee, was fired March 8 and remains under investigation for possible espionage, dating back to the 1980s. He has not been charged with a crime and through a lawyer has denied spying or providing secrets to China. China also has denied it stole U.S. nuclear secrets.

But congressional critics voiced outrage at why Lee was not reassigned and instead was allowed continued access to some of America's most secret information about its nuclear warheads after he became a prime suspect in an espionage investigation in 1996.

Furthermore, said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., some warnings appeared as early as 1984 when Lee took a polygraph test and gave "deceptive" answers to at least seven questions. In the 1980s Lee also made several trips to China.

"The individual was suspected of being a spy with access to all of our warheads information ... and we did not get into his computer" or move him to a less sensitive job, said Rep. Don Nickles, R-Okla., "This is total incompetence."

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, the committee chairman, said he couldn't understand why Lee was not fired long ago "or at least stripped of his security clearances and move to an entirely unclassified section."

Browne, a 20-year employee at Los Alamos who became the research lab's director 18 months ago, said Lee would have been transferred out of the secure areas, if given the word from the FBI.

One person is booked into jail

One person was booked into the Scurry County jail on assault charges Wednesday afternoon.

The 28-year-old male was arrested at 12:51 p.m. on an outstanding warrant for misdemeanor assault causing bodily injury.

A case is also under investigation by officers concerning a 14-year-old female being assaulted. Officers filed an offense report for injury to a child in the incident which was reported at 6:38 p.m.

Deputies are investigating a report of a burglary of a building at 1968 N. Ave. O in which a band saw and a Skill saw were stolen. Joanne Cagle reported the offense at 9:38 p.m.

Officers took a 14-year-old female into custody at 10:28 p.m. in the 4400 block of Avenue U for violating juvenile probation rules. She was later released to her parents.

In other activity Wednesday, officers filed an offense report for criminal trespass at 11:10 a.m. in reference to a subject being in the area of 1912 Coleman without permission.

Officers were called to Wilson Motors at 4 p.m. as a tailgate had been stolen from a used pickup. An offense report for Class A theft was submitted.

Officers filed an offense report for assault by threat at 4:57 p.m. in reference to a person being called at her work place and being threatened.

At 12:42 this morning, officers were called to the 100 block of Elm Street in reference to a person being assaulted. An offense report was filed.

Senators weigh $4.3 billion in emergency help for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators anxious to help farmers through their financial crisis are weighing whether to add $4.3 billion in emergency aid to a supplemental package moving through Congress.

Lawmakers said after an hour-long meeting Wednesday that while there is consensus that action is needed to deal with the low prices plaguing the farm economy, there are concerns about putting additional money in a supplemental spending bill that has already been delayed for several months.

"Something has got to be done this year," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, one of 14 senators who met privately for more than an hour. "I think there is a consensus on that."

"The question is timing and how much," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. "The feeling is this could be bad timing unless this is the only train leaving the station."

Added Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., "This may be the only bite at the apple. There may only be one supplemental this year."

The money, if the group is successful, would be included with $152 million for farm loans already moving through Congress. That money is attached to an overall supplemental package, which also contains money for Central American disaster victims. Lawmakers have also indicated they will add about $9 billion for the confrontation in Kosovo to the package.

All of the money would come out of this year's $111 billion surplus, which many lawmakers have pushed to save for Social Security.

The proposal being considered for farmers has $1.5 billion to make up for a shortfall in last year's disaster package and $2.8 billion in additional market transition payments to compensate for low prices.

"It's the quickest way of getting funds out there," Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said of the market transition payments. Farmers already get the payments each year as part of the 1996 farm law. The money being discussed by senators would amount to about a 50 percent increase in the annual payment to farmers.

Last year's emergency package also included $2.8 billion in market transition payments, as well as $2.3 billion in disaster aid.

The market payments were disbursed not long after the bill was passed last fall, but Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has complained about the burdensome process required to distribute the disaster payments. Because of the problems, the disaster payments are not expected to be delivered to farmers until June.

Adding to the problem, lawmakers said Wednesday USDA told them recently that an additional $1.5 billion is needed to accommodate the large numbers of eligible farmers who signed up for disaster aid. Sign-up was only completed last month.

"Those people are not going to get what they thought they were going to get, because there's not sufficient money," Conrad said.

The supplemental process has already been contentious and it is unclear whether House budgeters would be receptive to the Senate idea. The farm loan money has been on hold since March while lawmakers fought over offsets. Glickman has said that many state farm offices are already out of money to authorize loans for farmers.

Parents get their back up at news of teen's tattoo

DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old daughter is a freshman in college. One morning we received a call from her roommate's mother, who is a friend of ours, letting us know that her daughter visited a tattoo parlor near the college and had gotten a tattoo on her back.

Worried and shocked, we called our daughter and discovered that she had gone too, and also had one! We discussed it with her and explained that in our country, people with tattoos are usually individuals who have been or still are in prison, and that tattoos are not reflective of our cultural background.

We love our daughter and respect most of her decisions. She has been a role model for her younger sister and brother.

Our daughter agreed to go to a dermatologist and have the tattoo removed, but we are concerned that being away at school and having so much freedom she may make other decisions that are against our principles. Your opinion, please.

WORRIED PARENTS IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WORRIED PARENTS: Although I would never consider having a tattoo, many popular American music stars, actors and sports figures now do. However, in your daughter's case, getting a tattoo was done on an impulse, which is probably why she so quickly agreed to have it removed at your request. As a young adult, she will — and should — make decisions on her own. Although you, as her parents, may not agree with all of them, they are hers to make.

As for the tattoo fad, I predict that as middle age and the force of gravity converge, laser surgeons will do a booming business.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Royally Speaking," who stated that Henry VII and Henry VIII were not related to Kings Henry I through VI. This is not so!

All monarchs of England can trace their ancestry directly back to Egbert, who is considered the first king of all England and reigned from 802 to 839. Of course, not all monarchs have the same lineage.

Another interesting fact about the numbering of these monarchs before 1066 is that they were given names to tell them apart. Thus, there was Alfred the Great, Edward the Elder, Edgar the Peaceful, Ethelred the Unready and Edward the Confessor, to name a few.

William the Conqueror, in 1066, started the numbering process by being William I. He didn't like the title "The Conqueror" because he maintained he did not "conquer," but only took what was rightfully his. Since he was illegitimate, he was also known as William the Bastard. I'm sure he did not like that title either.

who claimed to be a direct descendant of Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector of England) wrote to tell me that "Royally Speaking" had his facts wrong. Thank you for straightening out the lineage of England's eight kings named Henry.

Lincoln takes over luxury sales crown from Cadillac

If sales numbers stand for the mark of excellence in the class, then Ford Motor Co. has finally dethroned General Motors and Cadillac's 48-year reign as luxury king.

After conducting a sales audit, GM said Wednesday that it overstated December car sales. The corrected figures for 1998 show that Lincoln outsold Cadillac 187,121 to 182,570 units.

GM apologized in writing to Ford's Lincoln unit for the mistake, and Lincoln spokesman Jim Trainor resisted the opportunity to gloat.

"Sure; it makes us feel a little better, but we've got other things we're focusing on," he said. "This action by Cadillac exemplifies the integrity we've always said is the basis for a luxury brand. It is another example of what makes this rivalry so great."

GM spokesman Jim Farmer said those responsible for the inflated figures have been disciplined — he didn't elaborate — for succumbing "to marketing stress to maintain a position."

Your Birthday

Although you might find yourself luckier in the year ahead than you've experienced in the past, this does not give you a ticket to taking uncalculated risks. Continue to use common sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Stick to managing your own personal interests today instead of attempting to do things you believe would please others. Your efforts could go unappreciated. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that'll govern you in the year ahead. Send the required refund form and for your Astro-Graph predictions by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of discussing what's bothering you with others today, find a peaceful corner and sort things out yourself. In quiet places, reason abounds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't depend on the same people who let you down in the past for support of one of your ideas today. These types are usually looking out for themselves. You don't need them anyway!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Conduct yourself in a manner so that what you say conveys the type of impression you're anxious to make today. Others are likely to be paying very close attention to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Too bad your judgment regarding health matters doesn't match your cleverness at making or saving money today. Don't let the urge to overindulgence usurp your common sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) To solve a problematical situation today, focus your mind on tunneling beneath the surface of things and you'll get to the core causes of the issue, bringing about a solution.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) When it comes to people your spouse dislikes, make your plans with them in ways where your mate doesn't have to get involved. It's not smart to foist them on your partner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just because you might come up with a way to make your job easier at work today, don't think things have eased up for your co-workers as well. Be cognizant of their burdens.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might discover today that after diligently toiling to achieve something you've been very anxious to accomplish, the victory wasn't worth the price you had to pay. Don't dwell on it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today might signal the end of a past involvement and the start of a new one. Shift all your attention to laying out a good blueprint for your new endeavor.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be so concerned as to how your counterpart will perform in a joint effort today that you'll fail to carry your share of the load. Concentrate only on your own job.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's true your judgment is very keen, but when it comes to friends or money, you'd be wise to be extra cautious today. Your common sense could desert you in either area.

Apache crashes won't hinder plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Apache helicopter crashes during training flights over Albania won't delay or hinder NATO plans to use the low-flying U.S. gunships for combat in Yugoslavia, U.S. military officials said.

"The pilots are up and ready to roll," Army Capt. Jeff Settle, a spokesman for Task Force Hawk, based in Tirana, Albania, said today.

The latest crash Wednesday, in mountainous terrain near the border with Yugoslavia and Macedonia, killed the two-man U.S. crew and marked the 50th serious crash for the helicopter since the Army began using it in 1985.

Including the two latest victims, 14 people have died in Apache crashes, according to Army safety figures.

The military chief of Task Force Hawk halted training flights for a day to "honor the deceased" and give commanders time to talk to the pilots "so everybody could get their head back in the game," Settle said in a telephone interview from Albania. "A pause took place" on Wednesday, he said.

Settle said there was no Apache "stand down" or grounding because maintenance flights and other operations continued and the pause involved only combat-like training.

Also today, Gen. John Abrams, commander of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, told reporters in Washington it likely would take "a few more weeks to get to the bottom" of what caused the latest crash.

At the Pentagon, Maj. Gen. Charles Wald said the $14.5 million helicopter is sound, and the two latest crashes appear unrelated. Wald would not confirm whether investigators were focusing on power lines or other low wires as the cause of the latest crash, which occurred at night.

"It could be materiel, it could be the terrain, it could be a number of things. It could have flown into a bird, it could have flown into a wire," Wald said. The two aircraft, part of a U.S. fleet of 24 awaiting action in Yugoslavia, will be replaced, the Pentagon said.

Prior to Wednesday's crash, half the major Apache crashes were caused by pilots flying into wires.

The two accidents nine days apart in the Balkans came before the Apaches saw any combat there. The Pentagon blames coincidence, rough terrain and difficult training missions for the two crashes coming so close together.

"They're training hard in terrain that they are not used to flying in. ... They're flying under conditions they would think they would be flying under in combat," Wald told reporters.

The crewmen ejected safely from the other Apache that went down during a training flight over Albania on April 26. A replacement helicopter was en route to a makeshift base in Tirana, Albania, to replace that aircraft, and Wald said he expected a replacement for the second one as well.

"This doesn't alter any plans that were made previously," Wald said.

The Apache is the Army's primary attack helicopter. It is equipped with night sights and other sensors that permit its two-man crew to navigate and attack in darkness and in poor weather.

Steele's lawyers rest case

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — In a surprise move, Julie Hiatt Steele's lawyers rested their case today without calling any witnesses, saying prosecutors failed to prove that she had hindered Kenneth Starr's investigation of President Clinton.

Ms. Steele is charged with lying to investigators to undercut former White House employee Kathleen Willey's allegation that Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance.

Defense lawyers asked U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton to dismiss all four charges of obstructing Starr's investigation and making a false statement to the FBI.

When Hilton said the case would continue, Steele lawyer Nancy Luque told him, "Your honor, the defense rests."

In opening statements, the defense team had told jurors that Ms. Steele would take the witness stand in her own behalf.

Ms. Steele testified before two grand juries that her onetime close friend, Mrs. Willey, didn't take her into her confidence about the 1993 encounter. Ms. Steele says she first heard about the alleged incident in 1997, when Mrs. Willey asked her to lie to a Newsweek reporter to corroborate the story.

The contradiction between the two women's stories was one factor that prevented Starr from including the Willey matter in his impeachment referral to the House in the Monica Lewinsky investigation.

Ms. Steele is the only person indicted by the independent counsel's office in the Lewinsky investigation.

Out of the presence of jurors, Steele lawyer Andrew Hurst had argued that even if Ms. Steele had told lies to investigators, Starr's prosecutors failed to show the statements were material to either the independent counsel's investigation or Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against Clinton.

Pilot's case gets closer to jury

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A Marine pilot charged with obstruction of justice said he regrets helping destroy a videotape of the training flight that caused 20 deaths at an Italian ski resort.

"I wish we would have left the tape there," said Capt. Richard Ashby, 32, of Mission Viejo, Calif. "If we had taken the tape, we should have turned it over to somebody to watch. ...

"I wanted to get out of the aircraft. I was shaking. I wanted out."

A rebuttal prosecution witness, Bernard Coogan, an aircraft accident expert, testified today that the videotape would have given investigators images to compare with flight recorder data.

Closing arguments were scheduled for this afternoon before the case goes to the seven-man military jury.

The defense rested Wednesday after Ashby testified for more than two hours at his obstruction of justice and conspiracy trial.

Ashby faces 10 years in prison or dismissal from the service if convicted.
