Mabee elected to head CAF

Changes renew Midland's hope of wooing headquarters

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland's campaign for headquarters of the Confederate Air Force (CAF) has renewed hope for a breakthrough following a recent referendum which strongly favored Midland as the CAF site.

"I feel very positive and feel that the Midland position is the most viable at this time," said CAF Colonel Joe Mabee, who recently was elected chief of the CAF's 11-member governing General Staff.

Mabee, a Midland rancher-oilman-philanthropist, said Monday upon his return from the CAF Winter Staff Conference in Mesa, Ariz., that 95 percent — 4,578 — of the 4,798 voting colonels authorized the General Staff to select the optimum of six airport sites for the CAF.

The vote reflects a preliminary count, which, Mabee said, is to be officially released by a Dallas accounting firm.

The CAF is an 8,000-member organization which is dedicated to keeping in flying conditions remnants of the 1939-45 World War II-era warbirds — trainers, fighters, bombers, transports and liaison aircraft.

The CAF, which has 143 "warbirds" from the Allied Forces and the Axis Powers in its Ghost Squadron, is running out of space at its current home base in Harlingen in South Texas. The squadron does not include privately-owned aircraft within the CAF ranks.

Midland business-civic leaders, in their bid to lure the CAF to West Texas, have engineered an $18-million offer to win the CAF to Midland.

The offer reflects a re-evaluation of Midland's initial bid of a $6-million package that included construction of the CAF Museum and headquarters at Midland International Airport, a 12-acre site, 175,000 square feet of hangar space, office space, and two 20-acre tracts adjacent to the proposed site for CAF expansion. The original offer did not include value of the land. Midland's offer is debt free.

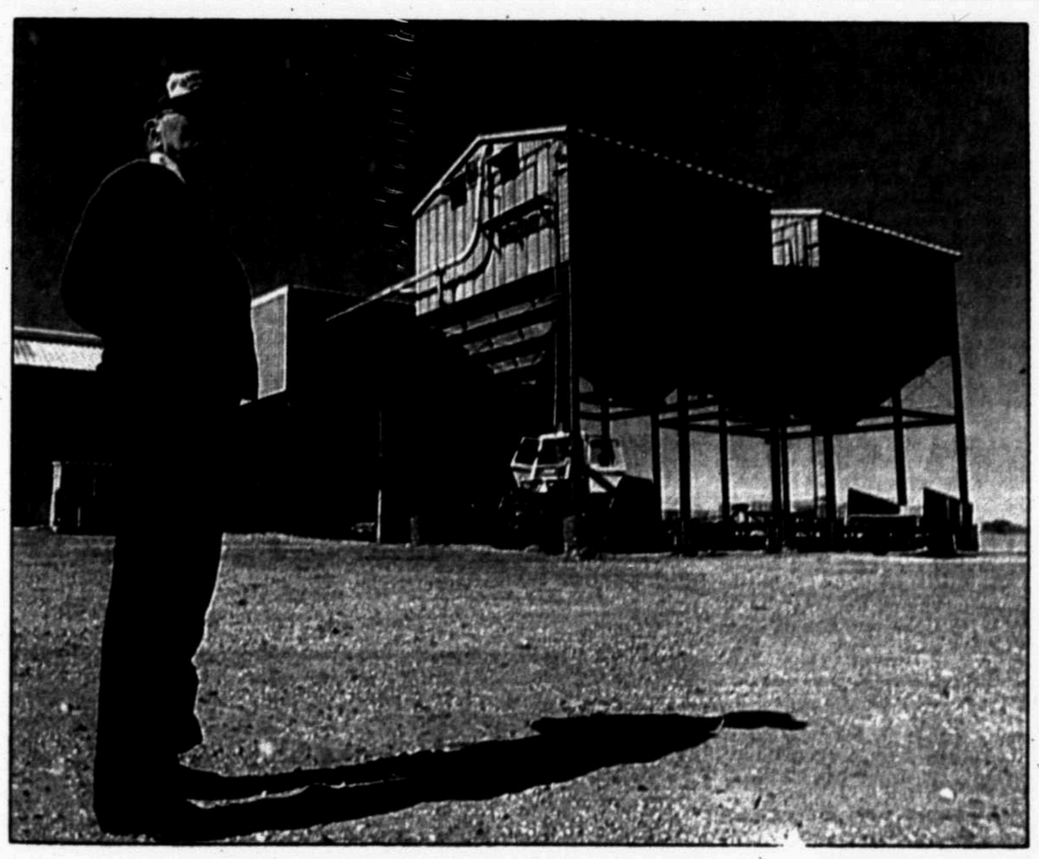

In the recent referendum, CAF members — colonels all — received ballots and cast their two-fold vote:

■ To authorize the CAF General Staff to negotiate the optimum site for the CAF. That measure was approved by 95 cent of the voting colonels: 4,578 to 220.

Land of cotton

Retired West Texas farmer Herman "Fritz" Lander of the Wolcott community has worked cotton in the field and in the Wolcott Cotton Gin.

Farming suits his fancy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

WOLCOTT — Herman "Fritz" Lander p[illegible] West Texas blowing sand over East Texas sticky blackland any[illegible]y.

Any.

He has had plenty of experience in both [illegible]7 years.

"I like farming best," Lander said of his v[illegible] background in toiling the land and working the soil. He has done about everything from digging postholes to working in a cotton gin.

"I drove a tractor many a time. Farming was my speciality."

Farming suits his fancy best. And his preference is in West Texas sandy loamy soil despite its propensity to "blow" and form dusty clouds in the sky.

"I wouldn't trade one acre of land out here for 100 acres down there" in the East Texas blackland, said Lander, a retired farmer who has worked the land with teams of mules and horses and with mechanized tractors.

Residents seeking probe on drinking water quality

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

Some Midland county residents concerned about the safety of their drinking water have asked the Texas Department of Health to test the water and investigate cancer rates in the area.

Lillian Smith, who lives on County Road 118 south of Interstate 20, said she contacted the Health Department almost two weeks ago about what she thought was a "high index of cancer" in the area between South Midkiff and Cotton Flat roads.

"I started asking my neighbors if there was anything wrong, and I found a high index of illness," Ms. Smith said. "That's when I got very concerned."

She said she is awaiting Health Department forms which she will use to formally survey the number of cancer deaths in the area.

Health Department Epidemiologist Dr. Carl Torres said today that his office will use results to determine if cancer rates in the area are unusually high.

"At this time we are waiting for the names of the people who have cancer in the area," Torres said. "Cancer clusters are very rare."

Lubbock becomes better barometer through polls

Associated Press

Lubbock's city fathers have taken their role as President Bush's national bellwether seriously. Since last March, when Bush told the nation that residents of the South Plains city strongly support his policies, the city has commissioned a monthly opinion survey.

The survey is sent — express mail — to the White House. Bush sometimes reads it on weekend retreats at Camp David, Md.

Lubbock already had a claim to fame as the birthplace of rock 'n' roll legend Buddy Holly. Now, as Bush's barometer, the city's 186,000 residents have gained fame anew.

The president may want to take a closer look at the next "Pulse of America" poll. The poll gauges the public's response to the 1991 federal budget that Bush sent to Congress Monday.

And, he will likely peruse the Lubbock data for reviews on the State of the Union address he is scheduled to deliver to a joint session of Congress on Wednesday.

The poll does back up Bush's assertion that Lubbock residents overwhelmingly approve of his policies of more than 90 percent.

The city's residents have thrown a few surprises, however. In a conservative city with 150 churches, Lubbock's citizens strongly opposed Bush's anti-abortion stance, with 63 percent of those polled saying the decision should be left entirely to a woman and her doctor.

"I've been somewhat startled because I assumed that Lubbock is so much more conservative than the rest of the country," said Ken Towery, an Austin political consultant and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who helps compile the survey. "But we've found that's just not so."

The poll brings the city some needed attention, Towery said.

"It's good to see a town like that get a little bit of recognition," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram from Washington. "It's just natural for people in this part of the world to put down people in that part of the world."

Lubbock's Board of City Development pays Towery and Lubbock pollsters Jane Anne Stinnett and Lisa Nowlin $1,000 a month to conduct the survey. The poll is based on random telephone calls throughout Lubbock County.

Former rancher Bob Blake initiated the idea for the monthly poll after the March 7 news conference during which Bush said Blake told him, "Things are going just great."

Hazelwood loses his bid for dismissal

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A judge again refused to dismiss charges against the fired Exxon captain charged with causing the nation's worst oil spill.

But the judge did not rule on whether to bar key evidence — results of a sobriety test that skipper Joseph Hazelwood had failed after the Exxon Valdez spilled more than 10 million gallons of crude oil.

Hazelwood sat in the courtroom Monday as Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone dealt with preliminary matters for about 90 minutes.

Darman's charms can't prevent clash

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House budget director Richard G. Darman clashed with congressional Democrats today over whether President Bush's $1.23 trillion 1991 budget is based on realistic economic forecasts.

Darman responded to criticism from Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee, who noted that Office of Management and Budget projections on economic growth, inflation and unemployment are considerably more optimistic than those of private forecasters.

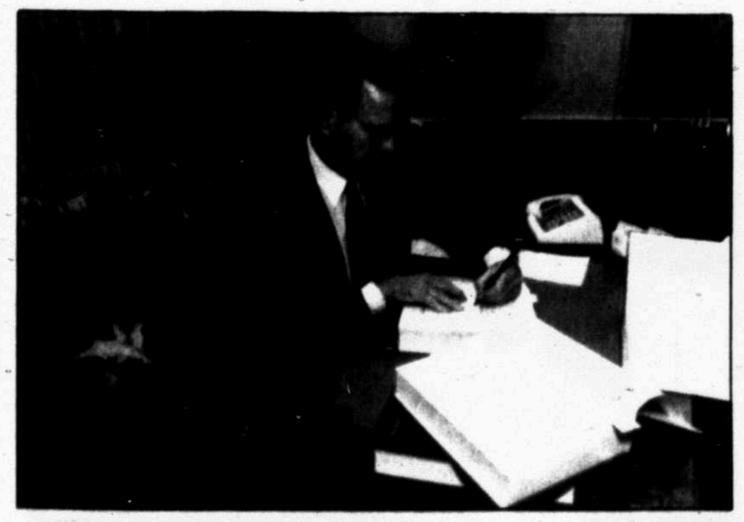

"You are not dealing with people who are totally out of bounds" in trying to project what direction the economy will take over the next several months, Darman told the House Budget Committee. He said OMB, which he heads, has been remarkably close to accurate in forecasts made last July.

Panetta said the administration's economic assumptions and use of such tactics as shifting payments from one year to another to make the deficit look smaller call into question whether the deficit is being taken seriously.

"Of course the president is serious. I am serious," Darman shot back. "I wish you had taken that on some faith."

Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, senior Republican on the committee, defended Bush's budget, which was made public Monday, as "a pretty good beginning."

Reaction mixed to base changes

Associated Press

Members of the Texas delegation and state officials had mixed reactions to President Bush's budget proposal, which includes a Defense Department cost-saving plan affecting several Texas bases and military programs.

Congressman Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, said the Bush administration's defense priorities may be in the wrong place.

"We continue to spend American tax dollars defending overseas allies while we devastate our own domestic defense and disrupt the local communities," Chapman said. "I think Congress needs to look very carefully at that."

Clear skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport are expecting clear skies tonight with the low in the lower 40s and winds from the southeast at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy and windy with the low in the lower 70s and winds out of the southwest at 20-30 mph and gusty.

Monday's high of 69 was nine degrees cooler than the record high of 78 set for that date in 1967. The overnight low of 21 was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of eight degrees set for this date in 1951.

STATE

A Pacific cold front stretching across Northwest Texas will bring partly cloudy skies and windy conditions to the entire state tonight and Wednesday.

The front isn't expected to produce much precipitation although there is a slight chance of rain in North Texas Wednesday afternoon and a chance of showers in Southeast Texas Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the lower 30s in the Panhandle to the 60s along the coast and in extreme South Texas.

Highs Wednesday will be in the mid 60s over most of the state except in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the coast where readings will be in the 70s.

Reagan ordered to surrender diary excerpts to Poindexter

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today ordered former President Reagan to turn over excerpts of his personal diaries to former national security adviser John M. Poindexter for use in his Iran-Contra case.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene ordered Reagan to produce entries from the ex-president's diaries for 29 different dates in 1985 and 1986.

Reagan was ordered to give Poindexter the diary entries by next Monday.

Greene gave the former president nearly a week to produce the material in case he decides to assert the doctrine of executive privilege in an attempt to avoid surrendering the diaries.

The judge said Poindexter is entitled to diary entries in which Reagan describes an effort to persuade the government of Honduras to release a seized arms shipment that had been destined for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Greene also said Poindexter must receive diary entries focusing on U.S. military-type assistance to an unidentified Central American country in support of the Contras.

WATER

Torres said if there is excess cancer in the area, the Health Department will try to determine its cause.

"Cancer is a very common disease," Torres said. "Most cancers are caused by different things, not one single source."

Torres said he would be "surprised" to see an unusually high cancer rate in the area.

But even if cancer rates are normal, Torres said, that doesn't mean the water isn't causing other types of health problems.

"In the past, 100 or 200 years ago, most of the diseases people had were water-related," Torres said.

Health Department water hygiene specialist Larry Mitchell said that unless cnacer rates proved unusually high, the Health Department would not take any action in the case.

"Right now, as far as the water goes, we are not doing anything," he said. "We do not regulate private wells. The Texas Water Commission is the agency that gets involved with this sort of thing."

A Texas Water Commission official confirmed today that the agency was aware of residents' concerns, but officials handling the complaint were not immediately available for comment.

Ms. Smith said she planned to meet with TWC representatives later in the week.

Midland environmentalist Midge Erskine said today that she has asked students from Midland College to conduct a separate survey of cancer rates in the area. She said about a dozen students began going door-to-door Monday.

"In order to get an agency involved, you need to have data first," Ms. Erskine said. "The people, when they go door-to-door...are also telling people that they need to have their water checked."

BASES

Of Bush, who claims Texas as his adopted home state, Chapman said, "You don't expect your homestate president to fire an arrow straight in your heart.

"It's also very curious that all of the impact is in Democratic districts. That's one of the things that will make the Congress a bit suspicious of whether or not our national strategic interest is at play or maybe there is a little touch of politics in this."

Gov. Bill Clements and Sen. Phil Gramm said they hope the return of troops from Europe will help offset the proposed cut of 12,000 troops from Ford Hood and the deactivation of its 2nd Armored Division.

The Fort Hood reduction was one of nine military reductions proposed Monday that would affect Texas under Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's belt-tightening plan.

Clements, who served as Deputy Defense Secretary from 1973 to 1977, said state and local officials must make a bipartisan effort to minimize the impact of the Defense Department cuts should they be implemented.

In addition to the reduction there, Cheney proposes to close the Army ammunition plant at Karnack, Chase Field Naval Air Station at Beeville, Bergstrom Air Force Base at Austin, and the Defense Contract Administration regional office in Dallas.

Reductions or realignments also were proposed for Fort Sam Houston and Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio and the Red River Army Depot near Texarkana.

Cheney also proposed a contract cut for the V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft being developed for the Marine Corps by Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth.

Gramm said that Texas' impact from the proposed closures and reductions would not have been different if former House Speaker Jim Wright, who resigned last year, had still been in office.

CAF

CAF bylaws require that at least 75 percent of the voting membership must sanction any major change considered by the General Staff. Last autumn, 70.5 percent of voting colonels had voiced Midland as their preference for the CAF headquarters. But the General Staff couldn't act unless the referendum reflected a 75 percent sanction.

■ To select preferences, based on six offers, for the CAF headquarters. In the six-place preferential vote, Midland garnered 2,284 votes or almost 50 percent of the vote; San Antonio, received 1,231 or 27 percent; Brownsville, 376 or 8.5 percent; San Marcos, 274 or 6 percent; Nashville, Tenn., 249 or 5.5 percent, and Longview, 114 or about 3 percent.

"The General Staff will negotiate the best deal for the Confederate Air Force," Mabee said, after the four-member CAF Site Selection Committee has toured the six sites within the next several weeks.

Mabee, who has been a colonel in the CAF since 1976, has campaigned to bring the CAF to Midland.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, who is a colonel in the CAF, today said he was "delighted" over the referendum that favored Midland as the CAF site.

"I'm delighted to hear the preliminary results indicating that the General Staff will be allowed to pick the new location for the Confederate Air Force," Thomas said.

"I'm also really excited that something like 50 percent of the voting members indicated that Midland would be their first choice. I look forward to those results being finalized and to a great future for both the Confederate Air Force and city of Midland working together."

On the CAF Site Selection Committee, said Mabee, are General Staff members Dennis Divine of Little Rock, Ark., and Jim Kaster of Austin; CAF Executive Director Ralph Royce of Harlingen, and John Kelly of Dallas.

The CAF leadership is seeking to move the CAF headquarters from the Texas Gulf Coast because of the boxed-in space at the CAF's "Rebel Field" at Valley International Airport in Harlingen and because of the corrosive forces of sea salt on the antique aircraft.

In West Texas, Mabee and CAF Colonel Ed Jones of Midland have noted, the dry climate, as opposed to the humid Gulf Coast, is ideal for aircraft preservation. In addition, Midland and West Texas are rich in aviation history, particularly in World War II training bases for pilots, bombardiers and air crews.

West Texas is aviation oriented, Mabee and Jones have observed.

Midland lost its first campaign to bring the CAF to West Texas by winning "only" 70.5 percent of the membership vote last year.

CAF bylaws require at least a 75-percent vote by CAF colonels before a major change in the CAF can be negotiated by the General Staff.

After last year's vote, Midland then was challenged by the five other offers from San Antonio, Longview, San Marcos, Brownsville, and Nashville.

In the latest referendum, the CAF membership by mail in January cast their preferences. And the preliminary count was released over the weekend at the CAF Winter Staff Conference, which, Mabee said, attracted the largest-ever conference gathering of CAF colonels. Eighty percent of the CAF wings and squadrons in the United States were represented in addition to the Douglas Bader Squadron in England.

At the conference, Mabee was elected chief of the General Staff. He succeeds Colonel Hal Fenner, a Hobbs, N.M., physician as chief.

The General Staff, which includes CAF co-founders Lefty Gardener and Lloyd Nolen, has advocated the move to Midland, and, said Mabee, will scrutinize the six potential sites before announcing the new site for the CAF headquarters and museum.

COTTON

"That sand doesn't bother me," he said. "I always said, 'If you don't want the sand to get in your eyes, shut your eyes.'"

Lander left the blacklands behind for good in 1940 when he ventured to West Texas and the Lamesa area between Klondike and Sparenberg for better pay for farm work. He drove a tractor and occasionally worked teams of mules. Mules served him well in the blackland and in the West Texas sand.

"There wasn't anything you could hook up to them (mules) that they couldn't move," Lander said. "I'll tell you that much" about the advantage of mules over the faster-moving work horses.

In moving west, Lander figured that $45 a month was a whole lot better than the $25 he made in East Texas. Due to his plowing skills, the $45 got up to $65 in those days when a nickel was valued and was worth something by itself.

"I was raised in it (blackland)," Lander said, "and I sure didn't like it. You walk around, and your shoes would get bogged up. Out here, you just shake the sand off."

Aside from farming, Lander in the mid-1950s worked the cotton gin stands in the Wolcott Cotton Gin before the gin was "modernized." But his ginning convinced him, a farmer by trade and upbringing, that "every farmer ought to gin his own cotton" just to see the ginning process and to see where all of the "waste goes."

Lander, who lives on the open-space country near the Wolcott farming community north of Stanton in Martin County, sauntered through the sand-laden gin, which was shut down last cotton season due to the drought and to a dearth of cotton to gin.

The new high-speed Lummus gin stands have many more "saws" for faster separation of lint from seeds than the older gin stands.

Even so, Lander doesn't plan to go back to that or to blackland farming.

"One of these (new gin stands) can gin more cotton than three of those (older stands in the 1950s)," he said. "Everything is automatic. When it gets loaded up and too full, it kicks itself out."

"I've never run one of these ("modernized" gin stands), and I don't intend to, either."

And there are just some things the retired farmer doesn't want to do, to do again, or to do much of.

"One thing I didn't do too much was hoe cotton," he said without a hint of regret.

"I'll tell you what," Lander said assuredly, "I was raised in the blacklands (of Coryell County), and you can't drag me back."

BUDGET

Bush said his fiscal blueprint keeps "an eye toward future growth," halving the federal deficit to $63.1 billion while building up government science, space, anti-drug and environment efforts.

But majority Democrats on Capitol Hill accused the president of being too kind to the Pentagon despite diminishing tensions with the Soviet Union, too stingy with domestic spending and overly dependent on phantom savings and unrealistic economic projections.

"At a time when we need bold leadership, what we have is another slide-by budget," Panetta said.

While praising the president's plan, many Republicans conceded fiscal 1991 — which begins Oct. 1 — poses so many difficult problems that budget work is likely to be time-consuming and thorny.

"I believe there is a real chance here of stalemate," lamented Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, the Senate budget panel's ranking Republican.

Bush proposed paring $36.5 billion from next year's projected budget gap, finding nearly half the savings by collecting $15.7 billion in additional tax revenues. Bush revived his push to cut the capital gains tax rate — which the Senate denied him last year — arguing it would raise $4.9 billion next year by encouraging property sales.

The new levies are partially offset by $1.8 billion in specific tax breaks, including a $1,000 credit to poor families for each child under 4 years old.

Other savings would come from slashing domestic programs by more than $14 billion below the rate they would otherwise grow — including $5.5 billion from Medicare — restraining growth in the military budget, collecting new and higher user fees and leasing federal property.

"We have taken pain to exclude gimmicks," Darman told reporters.

But Democrats pointed to unspecified "management" savings of $5 billion in the Pentagon and $2.5 billion at the Internal Revenue Service, among other items.

They also grumbled that it assumed a brighter economy this year than many congressional and private analysts expect, a factor that lets the government project higher revenue collections. Using the economic forecasts Democrats consider accurate, Bush's budget would produce a $100 billion shortfall, they said.

"In other words, there's no change in fiscal direction in this budget," griped Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn.

Bush presented his spending plan as one responsive to "the dramatic changes in the world political situation."

He limited Pentagon spending to $292.1 billion — higher than this year's $286.8 billion, but 2 percent less than the total needed to stay even with inflation. Bush sought increases for expensive weapons systems such as $900 million more for the Strategic Defense Initiative, but a cutback of 38,000 troops and the shutdown of dozens of military bases.

He also hiked spending for foreign aid and other international expenditures to $18.2 billion, a 12 percent boost that included $300 million for Eastern Europe.

But Democrats complained Bush should have carved more out of the military.

"You'd think Joe Stalin had come back and entrenched himself in the Kremlin," Sasser said.

Bush's proposals to raise domestic spending read like a menu of his past campaign promises. He sought a $1.2 billion hike — to $7.6 billion — in environmental programs, including an effort to plant 1 billion trees annually.

Federal anti-drug efforts would increase from $6.9 billion to $9.7 billion; the Head Start pre-school program for poor children would get a $500 million infusion to $1.9 billion, and NASA's budget would soar from $12 billion to $14.1 billion.

TRIAL

The judge then instructed lawyers to review standard questionnaires completed by about 90 prospective jurors.

A jury of 12 will be empaneled and Johnstone said three or four alternates probably will be selected for the trial.

Hazelwood faces a felony charge of criminal mischief and misdemeanor charges of reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and operating a vessel while intoxicated. The maximum penalty for conviction on all counts is seven years, three months in prison and $61,000 in fines.

Defense lawyer Dick Madson had told Johnstone the charges should be dismissed because federal law preempts state law in the case.

"I feel that this show should not go on, at least not here," Madson said. "Federal laws and regulations have covered this (commercial shipping) field for 200 years, and there's a good reason for it," Madson said. He said federal law prevails to guarantee consistent rules from port to port, regardless of the state involved.

But Johnstone denied Madson's motion, saying it lacked substance.

Still pending is a defense motion to prohibit as evidence the results of a blood-alcohol test that Hazelwood failed about 10 hours after his ship struck a reef on March 24.

The spill, which blackened shores and killed wildlife, triggered what Exxon calculated was a $2 billion cleanup. Some state officials and others say the work is not over and should continue this spring and summer.

Hazelwood is expected to be present throughout the trial, which is to last six weeks or more.

Johnstone told lawyers on both sides he expects jury selection to take less than the two weeks that lawyers predicted. The judge warned he does not want the process to be drawn out with extensive questions about the candidates' backgrounds.

Correction

Donald Allen Turner pleaded guilty Jan. 26 to three counts of indecency with a child in exchange for 10 years deferred probation. "Deferred" means the conviction will be part of his permanent record, but he will retain certain civil rights such as voting, according to Midland District Attorney Al Schorre.

Defense 'no longer sacred cow'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney must convincingly argue that his $292.1 billion military budget is the proper U.S. response to changes in the Soviet threat, members of Congress say, and even then lawmakers may be unwilling to go along.

Cheney

"The defense budget is no longer a sacred cow," Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., a senior member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Monday after Cheney spelled out his military spending plan for fiscal 1991.

The defense secretary, citing a diminished conventional threat from the Warsaw Pact nations and budget constraints at home, proposed an increase from this year's $286.8 billion in outlays to $292.1 billion — a 2 percent reduction after adjusting for anticipated inflation.

But at the same time, Cheney emphasized that the Soviet Union continues to modernize its strategic forces and the United States cannot abandon its own high-tech weapons such as the B-2 stealth bomber and the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"We are going to retain and require deterrent capability in terms of our strategic forces for the indefinite future. That will not change," Cheney told reporters at a Pentagon briefing on the budget.

Elaborating on that point on NBC's "Today" show this morning, Cheney said most of the changes seen so far in the Soviet military posture involve a winding down of conventional forces rather than reducing strategic weapons.

"I think the test now will be to see whether or not Congress makes the right kinds of difficult decisions, that is to say to cut overhead in some of those things that are important ... political considerations back home while we preserve the essence of our military capability," Cheney said of proposed base closings.

"At home, if we are going to reduce force structure ... then it's also important to reduce the base structure that supports those. You simply don't need as many bases if you're going to have a smaller Army," he said.

The defense secretary testifies on Capitol Hill later this week, and spelling out his strategy will be the key with lawmakers.

"In my view, Congress will be more likely to go along with these tough decisions if Secretary Cheney can give us a clear vision of where defense policies and programs are going over the next five years in light of the changes in the threat and our overall strategy," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"We can't let the dramatic changes in Europe completely turn upside down planning for the future," said Sen. John Warner of Virginia, ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services panel.

It would be "highly risky if Congress went in and made unilateral cuts," Warner said, considering the instability in the Soviet Union, the constant threat of terrorism and lack of changes in the Third World.

The Bush administration's plan calls for five B-2 bombers at a cost of $5.5 billion, numbers certain to draw fire on Capitol Hill where lawmakers have complained loudly about the radar-evading plane considered the most expensive in history at about $530 million a copy.

"The B-2 is the first victim of the Berlin Wall," Schroeder said.

The budget also includes $4.5 billion for SDI, popularly known as Star Wars. The total represents a $1 billion increase over last year when Congress adopted — and the administration accepted — the first reduction in spending for SDI since President Reagan introduced the anti-missile shield six years ago.

"I'm absolutely astounded by the amount asked for SDI," said Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., a senior member of the House Armed Services Committee. "Admiral (William J.) Crowe said $3 billion is a generous figure." Crowe retired last year as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The defense budget would continue financing of two land-based nuclear missiles, with $2.8 billion to fund rail-basing for the multiple-warhead MX missile and $202 million for the truck-based, single-warhead Midgetman.

The budget also calls for $1.2 billion to involve the U.S. military more deeply in Bush's anti-drug war and to give a 3.5 percent military pay raise.

The document envisions a smaller U.S. military force, paring 38,000 men and women from the 2 million in uniform, primarily from attrition in the Army and the Air Force. That step would bring the active duty force down to roughly equal its 1989 size.

The plan calls for doing away with some 20 small weapons systems, such as the Marine Corps' V-22 Osprey and the Army's M-1 tank, in an attempt to save $2.9 billion. Others cuts include the Navy's F-14D jet fighter, the Phoenix and Maverick missiles, the Apache helicopter, the Army Helicopter Improvement Program and the F-15E fighter.

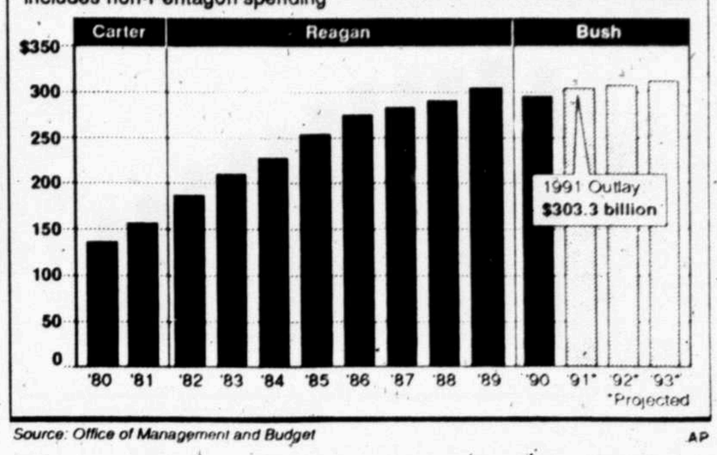

The Navy would lose two of its four battleships from the World War II era, the USS Iowa and USS New Jersey, for an estimated savings of $75 million.

The most controversial aspect of the budget is the proposal that at this time has no savings attached. It is a plan to close or scale back more than 72 domestic installations.

Peace dividend eaten by 'Cookie Monster' budget

An Analysis

By CHARLES J. LEWIS
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — At last, a federal budget for the video generation.

President Bush's first federal budget proposal, released Monday, was missing any "peace dividend" brought on by big cuts in defense spending.

But the 1,289-page document, rich in the vocabulary of government economics and bureaucracy, will likely go down in history as the first federal budget proposal to invoke video imagery. It may be known as the "Cookie Monster" budget or the "Pacman" budget.

Budget Director Richard G. Darman uncorked those down-home references in his introduction to the budget document.

Darman

Here's Darman on the Cookie Monster, one of the characters from education television's "Sesame Street" program: A monster who is "benign — indeed downright friendly.

"He has a few bad habits. He cannot resist gobbling up anything and everything that might be consumed — especially cookies. And he cannot quite control the way in which he spews forth crumbs. He is the quintessential consumer. Yet clearly, he means no harm."

Now, the moral of the fable: The federal budget is the Ultimate Cookie Monster because of its "excessive tendencies toward consumption."

But its motivation is clearly not malevolent. "What harm it may cause is largely unintended. Its massive presence might be understood as little more than a compilation of cookies received, cookies crumbled and crumbs spewed forth."

Pacman, a video game from the same family tree that produced the Nintendo craze, features omnivorous jaws that gobble up little dots on the video screen.

But Darman sees hidden future federal liabilities as Pacmen "waiting to spring forward and consume another line of resource dots in the budget maze."

Darman's top Pacmen: Medicare and other entitlement programs, Social Security retirement income for the baby boom generation, federal employee pensions and federal insurance programs such as those covering federally insured savings and loans and banks.

Given the size of the administration's proposed $1.23 trillion spending plan, Darman should have invoked another "Sesame Street" character, The Count. This fellow is made in the image of Count Dracula and can't stop counting. The educational benefit for the young television audience is obvious.

Congress this week begins months of hearings that will produce the federal budget for the 1991 fiscal year that starts Oct. 1. If history is any guide, the final budget will be a blend of Bush's recommendations and congressional initiatives.

The debate will focus on these ideas in Bush's budget proposal and elsewhere:

1) Capital gains: Back again, this proposal for lower tax rates on long-term investments passed the House last year but died in a filibuster in the Senate. It has a better chance this year.

2) Family Savings Accounts: New in 1990, Bush proposes exempting from federal income taxes the interest on savings accounts held for seven years.

3) Bush on IRAs: This investment vehicle, frequently a target for White House or congressional tinkering, makes a return appearance in that role. Bush would modify current rules to waive the 10 percent penalty for early withdrawals of up to $10,000 from individual retirement accounts for first-time home purchases.

4) More on IRAs: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has said he might resurrect his plan to expand IRAs. His plan, which was killed last year during the capital gains fight, would restore the deduction that taxpayers could take when they put money into their IRA plan. This feature was eliminated in 1986.

Money for reforestation, land purchases included in budget

Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Pursuing his wish to be "the environmental president," George Bush included a major reforestation initiative and renewed funding for federal land acquisitions in the fiscal 1991 federal budget he proposed Monday.

Under the rubric "America the Beautiful," the Bush initiatives stood in stark contrast to the Reagan administration's environmental legacy.

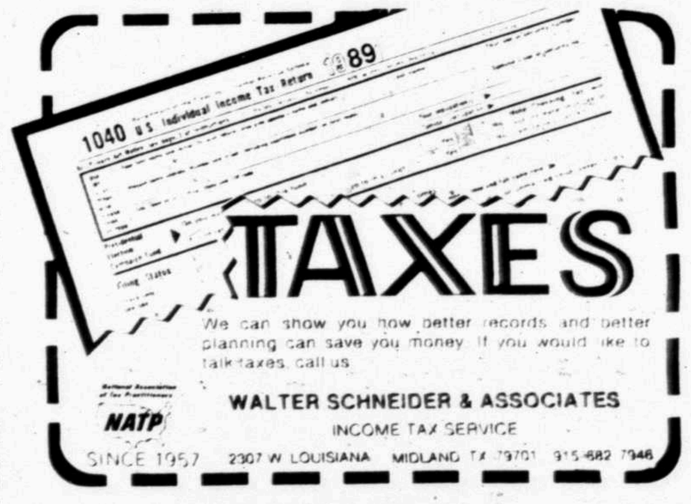

To kick off a multi-year effort aimed at planting more than a billion trees on private lands, Bush called for an outlay of $175 million in fiscal 1991. No such spending authority was sought for the current fiscal year.

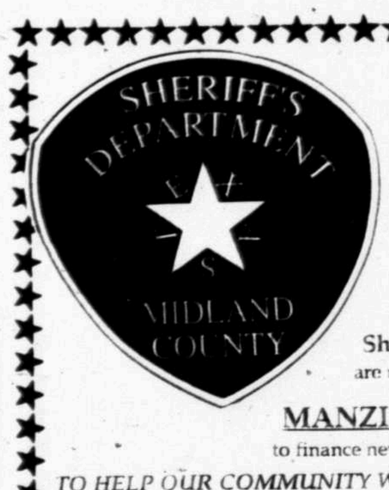

Reagan once asserted that trees pollute, prompting a spate of jokes about "killer trees." At least one study has suggested that trees emit insignificant amounts of gases that can contribute to the production of acid rain.

Bush's call for $250 million to buy more federal park, refuge, forest and range lands was $35 million more than the spending authority sought for such activity this year.

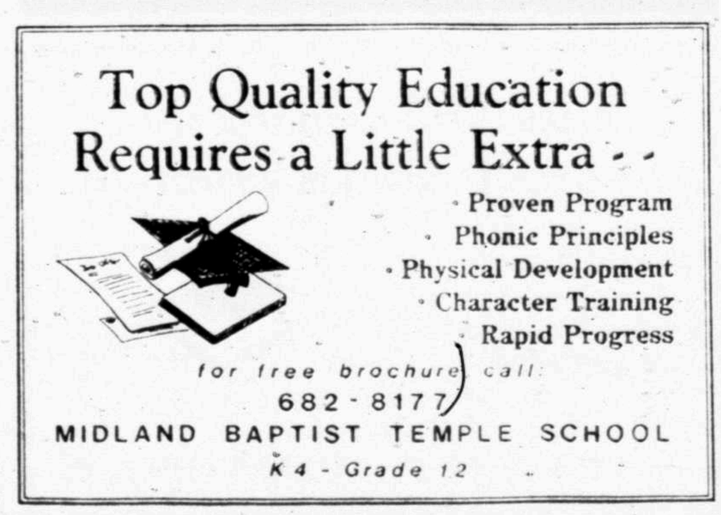

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, said he was glad Bush was adding funds for further park land acquisitions.

Noting that 10 years ago the country was spending $800 million annually to buy land, Udall said that such expenditures had been "whittled away" but that the cost of the "savings" has now become apparent with "the loss of vital wetlands and wildlife habitats."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An enthusiastic attitude will make a big difference when you apply for a new position. Although a small business continues to struggle, profits begin to rise. Do not expect too much too soon. Be willing to sit down with creditors to work out a reasonable repayment schedule. Romance will become more fulfilling as the year progresses. A November proposal is possible. A busy social calendar in December will introduce you to people who can help your career. Put your best foot forward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid those who cry the financial blues. Or remind them that you have your own family to look after. You still have great rapport with a former college roommate or romantic partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will probably be more productive if you work at home today. A call from a student boosts your spirits. You are very proud of the way this young person has matured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not begrudge someone's good fortune. Ask your mate or business partner questions. The answers could astound you. End a relationship that is unrewarding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You and your mate can do pretty much as you please today. Visit neighbors, but telephone first. Long trips are best postponed. Make needed purchases but avoid spending more than you can afford.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Grades rise once students find themselves. Extracurricular activities enjoy favorable influences. Get involved in a community project you feel strongly about. Romantic partner's words are revealing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make "caution" your watch word and play a waiting game. Someone has a secret angle or ulterior motive. Refuse to be rushed into signing agreements and contracts. Check and recheck facts and figures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone on a fixed income receives a cost-of-living increase. You will make new friends while entertaining for business purposes. Set aside more time to spend with your children. Romance makes you smile!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A positive mood should prevail this morning. Business gets a boost from distant events. If there is friction at home, compromise. Romance will flourish once you feel more settled.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A newscast could provide information that helps you close a business or financial deal. Money worries are relieved by a late-afternoon phone call. A great day for running errands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take advantage of a rare opportunity to increase your income from overseas sources. Focus on the future, not the past. A romantic commitment will bring you greater peace of mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone's behavior starts a chain of events that will help you. A missing item surfaces; put it in a safe place. A reunion with an old friend makes for a happy evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find people at the top easy to approach now. Avoid wasting their time. Do your homework in advance. The boss could surprise you. You and your romantic partner reach a new understanding.

We have extolled the skill of experts so often that it might seem they never err. Far from it. Declarer on this hand was a many-time national champion, although you might not think so from the play.

North's double of one heart was "negative"— a takeout for the unbid suits. With a guaranteed spade fit, South bid the full value of his holding.

West led the singleton club and declarer, trying to protect against a possible 4-1 trump split, won in dummy, came to hand with the queen of diamonds and led a club. West ruffed and shifted to a heart. Declarer took the ace, and cashing the ace of trumps now would have guaranteed the hand against all but the most bizarre distribution.

However, declarer, opted for first getting rid of the table's heart loser, so he cashed the remaining high diamonds and discarded dummy's last heart. East ruffed and reverted to clubs and declarer could still have sneaked home. West was marked for 10 cards in the red suits and surely had a spade honor for his overcall. So declarer could have discarded a diamond from hand and later picked up the trump queen via a finesse.

Totally stunned by these developments, declarer elected to ruff. West overruffed and led his remaining diamond and East was able to overruff dummy. So the contract was down one, because the defenders had managed to net four trump tricks!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York Mets star Darryl Strawberry was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon after allegedly threatening his wife with a pistol, police said.

Strawberry was arrested at his Encino home early Friday and spent a short time in jail, Sgt. Woody Baca said Monday.

Los Angeles Police Cmdr. William Booth said Strawberry posted $12,000 bail and is back with his wife, Lisa.

"It was very basic type stuff, a family dispute," Booth said.

Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz said late Monday the charges were dropped earlier in the day after the Strawberrys spoke with detectives. Baca, however, said he was not in a position to confirm the charges had been dropped.

Two days before his arrest, Strawberry was involved in a paternity case in Missouri, where blood tests established he was the father of a child born in 1988 to a woman in St. Louis. Strawberry did not contest the finding and a judge took under study the amount of child support the All-Star outfielder must pay.

Baca said police were called to the home after a report of domestic violence. Mrs. Strawberry, 25, said she and her husband had argued and that her 27-year-old husband slapped her in the face.

Mrs. Strawberry then grabbed a metal rod and hit her husband in the ribs and wrist, police said. Mrs. Strawberry told police Strawberry got a handgun and threatened her.

Police said Mrs. Strawberry showed no signs of injury but Strawberry had bruises on the rib cage and wrist.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Anatoly Karpov, ranked No. 2 in the world of chess, plans to give a championship computer program another shot to show machines are smarter than humans.

On Friday, Karpov will match his skills at Harvard University with Deep Thought, a computer program that world chess champ and fellow Soviet Garri Kasparov knocked off 2-0 in October.

"The computer is out for revenge now," Danny Edelman, president of the Harvard University Chess Club, said Monday.

The computer program has been improved since its New York match with Kasparov, and has defeated three grandmasters.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Aretha Franklin should pay more than $230,000 to a producer for breaking her promise to appear in the failed 1984 musical, "Sing Mahalia Sing," a magistrate has recommended.

At the time, Ms. Franklin said she did not attend rehearsals in New York because of her fear of flying. The producer, Ashton Springer, sued and a federal judge ruled last year that she must pay back his losses.

The recommendation on damages was made Monday by U.S. Magistrate Nina Gershon. Both parties may challenge the finding before the judge, Whitman Knapp, makes a final determination.

Franklin

Ms. Franklin was to star in the production, which was based on the life of gospel singer Mahalia Jackson. Springer charged that the show had been scheduled to open in Cleveland in July 1984, but never got off the ground because Ms. Franklin failed to appear at rehearsals.

A different production of the story, which starred Jennifer Holliday, toured successfully in 1985.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 27-year-old son of former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier was charged with knocking a 10-year-old boy off a bicycle and robbing him of $3 and the bike, police said.

Hector Frazier was charged Sunday night with robbery, theft, receiving stolen property and simple assault. The former junior welterweight boxer was being held Monday night pending arraignment, according to police.

About 30 minutes later, a police officer spotted Frazier riding the bicycle. He was caught about a block away, authorities said.

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Country music star Waylon Jennings said he erased a "blot on my record" when he received his high school equivalency diploma from Kentucky first lady Martha Wilkinson.

Instead of the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance," Monday's brief ceremony at the Capitol was preceded by a recording of some of Jennings' biggest hits, which include "Mama, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to be Cowboys" and the theme to "The Dukes of Hazzard" TV show.

Despite his fame and wealth, Jennings said the fact that he had dropped out of school during the 10th grade had always been a source of regret.

Earning his General Educational Development certificate also will give him more credibility when stressing education to his young son, said Jennings, who was accompanied by his wife, singer Jessi Colter.

• • •

Redgrave was host of a benefit performance Monday at Lincoln Center, which raised about $350,000 for the Spoleto Festival U.S.A., an annual 17-day celebration of the arts. Festival-related buildings and equipment in Charleston suffered an estimated $4 million in damage when Hurricane Hugo raged through the area in September.

Choreographer Jerome Robbins was on hand to introduce New York City Ballet dancers who performed a number from his ballet, "The Goldberg Variations"; two members of the Martha Graham Dance Company performed "Errand into the Maze"; and sopranos Renee Fleming and Young Ok Shin performed selections from Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro."

This year's festival runs from May 25 through June 10.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Sinatra will perform tonight at the grand opening of the $68 million Knickerbocker Arena, despite a report he may have been too distraught over the death of ex-wife Ava Gardner to go on.

"Mr. Sinatra is looking forward to being there and has been looking forward to the concert for some time," Sinatra's spokeswoman, Susan Reynolds, said Monday by telephone from Los Angeles.

Bush, Congress playing 'football'

President Bush's new federal budget proposal will soon become a political football in Congress.

The Democrats will toss much of it on the sidelines and try to score political points by trying to pass their own domestic and foreign policy agendas. Since this is an election year, one can assume their attack will be stronger than usual. No doubt the GOP in Congress will battle back politically by supporting the president.

This game of political one-upmanship has been going on for a decade. Gone are the days of bipartisan efforts to support what is best for the country. Today the goal is to do what is best for the party. In such an atmosphere, there will be only one loser — the American people.

The inevitable tug-of-war results in a congressional stalemate that delays much action on the budget until the waning weeks — even days and hours — when appropriations are made in a wild torrent of legislation that no member of Congress can possibly read or understand. The economic and social lives of millions of people are put on the line for the political good of the parties.

All types of accounting tricks are used by both parties — e.g., leaving out the multi-billion-dollar cost of rescuing savings and loan institutions and using Social Security payments to pay for defense, social and other programs — in a smokescreen attempt to show less budget-deficit spending.

Bush proposes spending $1.2 trillion starting in October with a deficit of $63.1 billion. Yet, with the defense industry slowing and corporate profits looking weaker than expected, overall federal tax receipts may plunge. Deficits would climb.

Passing the budget was once called a numbers game because of some of the financial gimmicks used. Now, regrettably, it is both a numbers and political game.

Another View:

East needs investment

Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., has come up with half a good idea. He wants to cut by 5 percent U.S. payments to the five largest recipients of our $7-billion foreign aid budget: Israel, Egypt, the Philippines, Turkey and Pakistan. Such a cut, Sen. Dole argues, would make $330 million available to help the economies of Eastern Europe make the difficult transition from communism to the free market.

Dole's motives are to be applauded. He wants to head off Democratic demands that taxes be raised to provide U.S. aid to Eastern Europe. But trade and investment, not foreign aid, are what Eastern Europe needs most.

Over the last three decades, the United States and other Western nations have contributed hundreds of billions of dollars in aid. Only a handful of nations — South Korea, Taiwan and Singapore — have moved from underdeveloped to developed. That prosperity, however, is mostly a result of their own policies and efforts.

Foreign aid confuses money with capital. The latter is not paper with ink spilled on it, but the enterprise, initiative and daring that exists within people's minds. Aid can sometimes help that process along, if conditions are right, but is no substitute for it.

Poland's new Solidarity-led government is standing back and letting free enterprise rip. That is the case where aid can perhaps be useful. Hungary seems to be doing the same, with the result that big companies like General Motors are rushing to invest. As for the other Eastern Europe countries, most still have Communist-dominated governments. Their future economic policies are not clear. Now would not be a good time to make them "aid junkies."

Israel and Egypt, good friends though they are, cannot subsist for eternity on a diet of U.S. largesse. It's not good for them or us. That aid should be cut back, but not to provide funds for Eastern Europe. Billions in U.S. aid hasn't done much for the Israeli or Egyptian economies, and there's no reason to think Eastern Europe would be much different.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1990. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 30, 1948, Indian political and spiritual leader Mahatma Gandhi, who had led his country to independence from British rule through his philosophy of non-violent confrontation, was murdered by a Hindu extremist.

On this date:

In 1649, England's King Charles I was beheaded.

In 1798, a brawl broke out in the House of Representatives in Philadelphia, as Matthew Lyon of Vermont spat in the face of Roger Griswold of Connecticut.

In 1882, the future 32nd president of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was born in Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1933, Adolf Hitler was named chancellor of Germany.

In 1933, the first episode of the "Lone Ranger" radio program was broadcast on station WXYZ in Detroit.

In 1962, two members of the "Flying Wallendas" high-wire act were killed when their seven-person pyramid collapsed during a performance in Detroit.

In 1964, the United States launched Mariner 6, an unmanned spacecraft carrying television cameras that was to crash-land on the moon.

In 1968, Communist forces launched surprise attacks against South Vietnamese provincial capitals in what became known as the "Tet Offensive" — named for the Lunar New Year.

In 1972, 13 Roman Catholic civil rights marchers were shot to death by British soldiers in Northern Ireland on what became known as "Bloody Sunday."

In 1979, the civilian government of Iran announced it had decided to allow Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who'd been living in exile in France, to return.

Plastics industry tries to improve image

WASHINGTON — The plastics industry is gearing up for a multi-million dollar propaganda campaign to convince Americans that plastic containers are environmentally benign.

Jack Anderson

In late December, members of the trade group, The Society of the Plastics Industry, received a confidential memo from society president Larry Thomas spelling out the disastrous effect of a new wave of public concern about plastics. Everything plastic, from hamburger containers to disposable diapers, is being blamed by the public for fouling beaches and filling city dumps to capacity.

Thomas' memo warned the industry giants — oil and chemical companies and plastics manufacturers — that the image of plastic has "plummeted so far and so fast, in fact, that we are approaching a 'point of no return.'"

The memo reminded the plastics makers that 56 percent of Americans polled in 1988 thought that plastics were harmful to the environment, and that the number had jumped to 72 percent in 1989.

"At this rate we will soon reach a point from which it will be impossible to recover our credibility," Thomas wrote.

That's nothing that $150 million can't fix. Thomas said the industry needs a "major program of unprecedented proportions to reverse this fast-moving tidal wave of growing negative public perception." That translates into spending, by Thomas' estimate, $50 million a year for the next three years on a public information campaign to "demonstrate the critical importance of plastic products and their contributions to environmental progress," according to the confidential memo obtained by our reporter Greg Moore.

That $150 million could go a long way in researching alternatives to plastics or recycling, but that wouldn't be progress. "Business is being lost," Thomas wrote. "Product growth rates are being dampened. And stock analysts are beginning to take notice."

Thomas declined to talk to us about the memo. We understand his reticence to champion a losing cause. His worry, according to the memo, is that the image of plastics is "deteriorating at an alarmingly fast pace."

If only plastics would deteriorate that quickly.

Instead, they hang around in the environment long after their original purpose is served. The industry is a long way away from producing an effective biodegradable plastic.

Substantial strides have been made in recycling technology by some of the industry heavyweights, including Amoco and McDonald's, who are working on a joint project to turn plastic foam containers into other usable products. Dow Chemical is developing a plastics recycling company. Waste plastics are being rolled over into carpet fibers, insulation, plastic lumber and many other products.

The Food and Drug Administration discourages the use of recycled plastic for food containers, but the industry claims there are many other products that can be made from those recycled containers.

Environmental groups remain divided about the future of plastics. "In our view, there's no way they can clean up their product," said Bryan Bence, recycling campaign coordinator for Greenpeace. The use of oil-based plastics for food and beverage containers, he added, is a "frivolous use of dwindling resources."

MISUNDERSTANDING — The controversial plan by the Bush administration to station an aircraft carrier off the coast of Colombia would duplicate something the Coast Guard is already doing. Bush never planned a military action against drug dealers. The aircraft carrier was to be used as a base for Hawkeye radar planes doing air search missions off the coast of Colombia. The Coast Guard uses identical planes now for those missions, but those planes are based in Puerto Rico and must waste valuable surveillance time flying back and forth.

MINI-EDITORIAL — In preparation for his State of the Union message this week, President Bush and his advisers have sent up some trial balloons — all made of lead — to explain the state of the economy. Earlier this month, Bush assailed the Federal Reserve Board for keeping interest rates too high. The reality is that the Fed has the hopeless task of keeping the economy level in the face of a massive deficit. Bush was prompted to lash out at the Fed after hearing from his advisers that the economy, for the first time since 1983, may run out of gas.

CHARLEY REESE

Issue of environment polluted just like water

Concern for the environment should cut across the political and ideological spectrum. Earth is not only our nest, it's our only nest. We foul it and it's dinosaur destiny for everyone.

Charley Reese

Unfortunately, people pollute the issue of environmentalism the same way they do air and water. Money, ideology, and politics are injected into what ought to be an easy subject on which to form a consensus.

Too often, propaganda and polemics obscure the issues. One of Ralph Nader's spinoffs recently published what purports to be an assessment of the nuclear power industry. It's propaganda.

Here's an example. The claim is made that nuclear industry workers during a certain period received thousands of "measurable exposures" to radiation. That's really noninformation. Every time we fly a commercial jet, get an X-ray, visit Denver, or sit in a granite building, we get "measurable exposures" to radiation. The planet happens to be radioactive and it always has been. A measurable exposure to radiation is not necessarily harmful.

The radiation level in a Washington hearing room is higher than the radiation level in the control room at Three Mile Island reactor during the height of the accident. An engineer testifying about Three Mile Island whipped out a Geiger counter and proved it.

In the same release, the statement is made that nuclear power has proven more expensive than its proponents claimed. This is an example of propaganda by omission. The statement is true. What was not said is that nuclear power is made expensive by the obstructionist tactics of people like those who wrote the release.

Because of protests, litigation, and excessive regulation it takes nearly 10 years to get a nuclear plant built in the United States. Under these circumstances, the cost becomes excessive. In other countries, nuclear power remains one of the cheapest forms of power production.

Another propaganda tactic frequently used by environmental demagogues is cancer risk. You will hear claims that this or that will increase the incidence of cancer by 1 in every 1,000 or some other fraction. What they don't tell you is that the natural background rate of cancer is 20 percent. In other words, we all have a one out of five chance of developing cancer even if we lived in a purified wilderness.

As a general rule, any statement made about any scientific, technical or medical issue by a politician, an actor or actress, a public relations person, a lobbyist, a lawyer, a journalist, or a special interest outfit should be viewed with extreme skepticism. It would be hard to go broke underestimating the level of ignorance or the lack of intellectual honesty in these groups. Even statements made by university professors should be viewed with some skepticism as they are likewise often polluted by politics, ideology or ax-grinding, not to mention mediocre minds and sloppy-to-non-existent scholarship.

You should also remember that regulations are drafted by bureaucrats and lawyers, not scientists or engineers. Often they don't make any sense or have any relevance to public health or safety. A claim that some industry has violated government regulations does not necessarily mean it has done anything irresponsible, much less hazardous.

If you doubt this, read the tax code.

Many who claim to be in favor of the environment are in fact enemies of it. They obstruct rational solutions. Nuclear power, for example, is the only feasible alternative to fossil fuels for the foreseeable future. It is the cleanest, safest, and healthiest form of power generation available.

Disposal of nuclear wastes is a political, not a technical problem. It can be done safely. What's blocked the process has been political demagoguery and ignorant hysteria stirred up by anti-nuclear propagandists.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Vital political tenet: Retain power 1 more month

MOCKBA — My political philosophy will outlast communism, even outlast capitalism. I have come to believe in improvisationism, the politics of dealing dazzlingly with the present.

William Safire

The improvisationist's first tenet is "Stay in power one more month." Somehow I have to get through February.

I have now been denied my way in the last three Politburo sessions. On Dec. 9, Ryzhkov joined with Ligachev to protect the party's power to command the economy and to destroy perestroika. My economist, Abalkin, was humiliated.

Then twice this month, a Central Committee plenum was first suspended and then postponed, an unprecedented exhibition of internal dispute.

I pretended that the war between the Muslims and Christians in Azerbaijan was keeping me too busy, but I want to delay decisions until March elections strengthen my hand.

Actually, my civil war improvisation helped me avoid the consequences of my Baltic improvisation.

I did not go to Lithuania to talk the separatists out of independence. Of course they'll secede, Latvia and Estonia too, as soon as they can.

Why did I wag a finger at them with great fanfare against doing what I know they will do? To let me grudgingly concede the related point about ending the leading role of the party.

If I made that concession in Moscow to Yeltsin's radical crowd, the party would have reacted furiously and made its move in the Politburo to replace me with Ryzhkov.

But because I moved away from opposing a multiparty system in the context of trying to keep the Soviet Union intact, the reaction of the conservatives was confused.

My purpose is to switch power from their Communist Party to my Soviet government. Because they know that, the apparat has made it impossible for me to break the log-jams ruining the economy.

Fortunately the KGB has been rock solid behind me, as my late mentor promised.

That's why I have given Kryuchkov all he wants, including more border troops to cover less of our borders — that way we have a corps loyal to me while we encourage smuggling, a useful form of trade.

I even indulged the scheme of our Kinder, Gentler Bureaucracy to declare our double agent, "Top Hat," to be a bonafide U.S. spy that we caught and sentenced to death.

Kryuchkov thinks this will make the accommodationist half of the CIA triumphant, and dishearten the old Angleton hard-liners. All this amuses our older spies; personally, I wear a fedora.

What about the other power center, the red army? To avert Bonapartism, I threw out the marshals with brains (who preferred Romanov to me) and put in a pack of dolts from the Far East. My clearest signal to the West that I had no war in mind was to put Yazov in command.

But we have strengthened our arm while we have unclenched our fist. At great cost, I have modernized our forces. The army is now politically neutralized; if I have to improvise a crackdown, though, it may not follow anybody's orders.

My Grand Design this year is to retrench abroad and compromise perestroika at home until I take control from the party.

I know that Western intellectual hooligans, like the one who signs himself "Z," say that my inability to move all the way to a market economy and real political freedom dooms my halfway reform. But who can be cocksure? Improvisationism may find a way.

Nothing goes well at home; I could beat George Bush for president of the U.S., but he could beat me for president of the U.S.S.R. I can't get airplane fuel for the planes to fly to fields that need new equipment to drill oil for airplane fuel.

I am the first Soviet leader since Lenin whose foreign policy is driven by domestic crisis. The collapse of my economy forces me to pull out of Europe; I have taken credit for what I could not stop.

That means the Warsaw Pact is dead. But I may be able to induce the suicide of NATO at the same time, thereby creating a Balance of Impotence until Russia can rebuild.

To undermine NATO, I turn to Brezhnev's only triumph, the CSCE — the Helsinki pact, the 35-nation amalgam that lumps East and West in a mini-U.N. and vitiates North Atlantic influence. We'll soon have Helsinki II, a common European house, the Oder-Neisse line secured.

We'll charge a price for Germany's reunification — its active help in aiding our recovery. Then we'll charge the rest of Europe a price for countering the German economic superpower. By the millennium, the Soviet Federation will reassert its authority.

Meanwhile, I have to get through February.

Quayle gives upbeat report on Panama trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle, home from a three-nation trip, is proclaiming a bright future for Panama even as some nations in the region refuse to recognize its U.S.-installed government.

Quayle

Jamaica underscored its refusal Monday on the last stop of Quayle's three-day trip.

Quayle later said he gave President Bush a "very upbeat" report on his visit to Honduras, Panama and Jamaica during a telephone call on Monday, and planned to brief him in full today.

However, the vice president acknowledged that while the United States is pressing for other Central American countries to recognize the government of President Guillermo Endara, Jamaica and Venezuela are insisting that elections be held there to legitimize Endara first.

"As far as we're concerned he's legitimized now," Quayle told reporters flying home with him from Kingston. The election last May 7, which observers said Endara won but which was invalidated by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, "was a free and fair election," he added.

However, Quayle today raised the possibility that balloting on other offices and issues before Endara's term expires in 1994 could satisfy the demands of Latin American leaders for an election.

"There are approximately six to nine seats in the National Assembly that will not have a member because they couldn't certify who won, so they have to have have elections there," he said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

"Two, the constitution will have to be amended ... primarily because of the changes President Endara wants to do in the PDF (Panamanian Defense Force), and therefore there is a possibility that perhaps the amendments to the constitution could be offered as a plebiscite. That would constitute an election," Quayle added.

As he left Panama, Quayle praised Endara's plans to build a national police force in place of an army, to develop a free-market economy and to help crack down on laundering of drug money.

Quayle predicted other countries in the region would recognize Endara's government.

"I come away ... with a deep feeling of optimism about the future of Panama. I'm optimistic that democracy will be developed and will prevail," he said. "I'm optimistic that other Latin American countries will join in helping the Endara government."

Later Monday, Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley said Jamaica is not ready to recognize Endara's government.

"What we do about the Endara government will largely be determined by the speed with which normality is restored, and whether we feel some process is embarked upon that would ... demonstrate legitimacy by some sort of expression of the people's will in a vote," Manley said during a press conference with Quayle.

Manley also said he still objects to the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion of Panama, although he understood why Bush undertook it.

Quayle ran into similar sentiments in his talks with Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, whom he saw at the presidential inauguration Saturday in Honduras, and spoke with again by telephone from Air Force Two Monday.

Quayle's task was to smooth over the negative feelings aroused throughout the region when Bush sent invasion troops to Panama. Like Jamaica, most of the Latin nations felt the invasion was a violation of Panama's sovereignty.

Quayle acknowledged his visit had not reversed those sentiments. But he stressed the significance of his talks was that the other countries would look ahead, not backward.

"Yes, friends have a disagreement on the decision itself," he said. "But as friends we are committed to moving forward, and we're going to move the process forward. That's the most important thing."

Besides holding talks with Endara and Manley, Quayle met with the presidents of Guatemala, El Salvador, Belize, Costa Rica, Honduras and Venezuela when all attended the Honduran inauguration.

Concerns about potential cuts in U.S. economic assistance were a common theme.

Manley said his government believed it stood to lose $25 million in economic support funds.

Man reportedly will testify about Barry's cocaine use

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man who law enforcement sources said could corroborate the testimony of a convicted drug dealer that he sold crack cocaine to Mayor Marion Barry and smoked it with him pleaded guilty today to a drug-related charge.

James McWilliams, a longtime friend of the dealer, Charles Lewis, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of aiding and abetting drug possession before U.S. Magistrate Deborah A. Robinson. The crime carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $100,000 fine.

McWilliams and his attorney, Daniel Masur, declined to comment on the plea. They were immediately taken by deputy U.S. marshals to a grand jury meeting room.

Barry, who has denied using drugs, was arrested in an FBI sting operation on Jan. 18 on a misdemeanor cocaine possession charge for allegedly smoking crack in a Washington hotel room. He is in a private facility in Florida for what an aide says is primarily treatment of alcoholism.

McWilliams, a motor vehicles department employee, is expected to appear before a grand jury investigating Barry's ties to Lewis, according to a law enforcement source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

McWilliams has told prosecutors he saw Barry and Lewis enter the bathroom of Lewis' hotel room, where they allegedly smoked crack cocaine before emerging a short time later, said a law enforcement source.

Allegations that Barry used cocaine in the past were also supported by Carol Bland Jackson, a former business partner of the woman who lured Barry into the FBI sting. She said in interviews Monday that she and others used cocaine with Barry at a party in 1986.

Lewis pleaded guilty in the nation's capital to cocaine conspiracy charges last November and was convicted on cocaine distribution charges in the Virgin Islands last spring.

In meetings with prosecutors in the past week, McWilliams also said the mayor called him after Barry's ties to Lewis became public and told him he trusted him to keep quiet about what he had seen in the hotel room, two law enforcement sources said.

Barry has said he only called McWilliams to urge him to cooperate with authorities investigating the case.

Sources have said that in addition to McWilliams, members of Barry's police security detail are expected to appear before the grand jury investigating the mayor.

The police officers — who are assigned to the mayor on a round-the-clock basis — are expected to be asked whether they saw Barry use drugs during his visits to Lewis' hotel room or on other occasions.

R. Kenneth Mundy, Barry's attorney, said he was unaware of any deal McWilliams may have struck with prosecutors.

GARY D. DOUGLAS ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

As a lawyer and long-time resident of Midland who has a deep concern about the future of our city, I feel that the upcoming District Court election is extremely important. Over 80% of the cases in the 238th District Court are civil cases which demand a judge with a broad and diverse legal background.

Nick Taylor will bring to the Court the legal knowledge and temperament he has gained in 26 years of handling a wide variety of civil matters. It takes a fair-minded, knowledgeable and experienced lawyer to make a great judge. Nick Taylor is such a lawyer.

NATION IN BRIEF

Stars come out to help Republicans raise funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A parade of show business stars serenaded President Bush and 800 of the Republican party's biggest donors at a Kennedy Center gala that also featured the spectacle of GOP Chairman Lee Atwater trading guitar licks with blues legend B.B. King.

Bush advised his party chieftain afterwards, "Lee, I heard your music. Don't give up your daytime work."

The show, which also drew much of the Cabinet and GOP leaders of Congress, also evoked a stream of ringing endorsements for Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle, who came in mid-concert fresh from his return from a fence-mending mission to Latin America.

Chubby Checker, before twisting the night away with 15 teens from the Duke Ellington School for the Performing Arts, praised the president and added of Quayle: "He's such a good-looking guy. Don't sell this guy short."

The crowd responded with loud applause.

Tony Bennett sang his signature song, "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" and then, without benefit of a microphone, "Fly me to the Moon."

Roberta Flack dedicated her trademark song, "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," to the Quayles, and then followed with "Always" for the Bushes.

Noriega can play handball

MIAMI (AP) — Deposed dictator Manuel Noriega has been confined to a cell with only a bed, wash basin, toilet and writing table, but is being allowed to play handball during his daily hour of exercise in a 15-by-15-foot metal cage.

The former Panamanian leader, awaiting trial on 12 drug-trafficking counts, will spend the rest of his day in isolation in the 86-square-foot cell in the medium-security Metropolitan Correctional Center 25 miles south of Miami.

He was moved to the federal prison Sunday from the federal courthouse in Miami. He has .. television in his cell.

In the prison, where there are some maximum-security cells, Noriega is allowed to go into the 15-by-15-foot cage for one hour a day to exercise.

Prosecutor gets booby-trap

NEW YORK (AP) — A briefcase booby-trapped with a sawed-off rifle probably was sent as a warning to a federal prosecutor who has investigated major heroin traffickers, authorities said.

"It could have killed the person opening it," U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Maloney said Monday. "I think it's because of the kind of work this assistant may have been working on."

The briefcase had not been considered suspicious when it was delivered by mail Monday to the office of Assistant U.S. Attorney Catherine Palmer. It was delivered to the federal courthouse in Brooklyn despite increased security in the wake of the package bombs that killed an federal judge and civil rights lawyer in Alabama and Georgia.

The device was disarmed by federal agents working with Ms. Palmer on another case.

Skiers burned cold cash

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Two lost skiers decided they had money to burn, and the decision may have saved their lives.

Don Wing and Jack Joneson, both 29 and from Calgary, Alberta, strayed out of bounds at The Big Mountain ski resort Saturday afternoon and got lost, Flathead County Sheriff Chuck Rhodes said Monday.

More than 30 searchers set out in waist-deep snow shortly after dark to find them.

The skiers were found about 11:30 p.m., snug and warm beside the campfire they had started eight hours earlier — by burning dollar bills, Rhodes said.

Officials defend controllers' response to Flight 52

MELVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Federal officials defended regional air traffic controllers who never explicitly told local controllers that Avianca Flight 52 was short on fuel before it crashed, killing 73 of 159 people aboard.

The Colombian jetliner's cockpit crew told regional, high-altitude controllers about the fuel shortage 45 minutes before Thursday night's crash, but did not make clear the severity of the situation, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said Monday.

The pilot requested only "priority" clearance to land, and that word "has no particular meaning in air traffic control," Farrar said. "If there is an emergency, you use the word 'emergency.'"

The FAA, whose duties include overseeing the nation's air traffic controllers, released a partial transcript of taped conversations among the crew and controllers as the National Transportation Safety Board today neared the end of its on-site investigation.

The transcripts showed that in a telephone conversation, the regional controllers told counterparts responsible for landings at Kennedy International Airport that the Colombian jetliner couldn't remain in a holding pattern south of the airport for more than five minutes.

But the regional controllers did not explicitly mention the fuel shortage, the transcripts show.

The flight was cleared for landing at Kennedy 37 minutes later, but that attempt was aborted, apparently because of bad weather. Less than 10 minutes later, the Boeing 707 fell powerless into a wooded hillside in the secluded Long Island village of Cove Neck.

The cockpit crew were among those killed. More than 20 survivors remained hospitalized in critical condition.

FAA rules for flight emergencies spell out instructions for pilots, including those with foreign airlines, landing at U.S. airports.

"If, at any time, the remaining usable fuel supply suggests the need for traffic priority to ensure a safe landing, the pilot should declare an emergency and report fuel remaining in minutes," the instructions say.

Investigators are considering the possibility that the Colombian pilot interchanged the words "priority" and "emergency" by mistake. They also planned to talk with Avianca officials about what instructions are given to pilots when they have fuel problems.

The FAA and NTSB, as well as the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, stressed Monday that the plane's message was not urgent and did not use the word "emergency," which would have brought the plane to a quick landing at Kennedy.

The words "emergency" or "minimum fuel" "would have triggered an emergency response by controllers," said controllers association president R. Steve Bell. "Stating that you are low on fuel does not imply an immediate problem."

Another union official who listened to the tapes said that the pilot never sounded worried.

"He said, 'I'm running out of fuel,' just as calm as if he were sitting in his living room," said Barry Krasner, eastern regional representative of the controllers association.

About 8:45 p.m., as they were circling over New Jersey, the cockpit crew warned the regional control center that they were low on fuel.

"We think we may need priority," a crew member told the control center.

A regional controller replied, "How long can you hold before you have to go to your alternate (landing site)?"

"Wait a minute," the cockpit replied, pausing apparently to check. "We can hold five minutes." Shortly thereafter, the cockpit said the alternate landing site was Boston, and "I can't make it."

At that time, the FAA said, the regional controller phoned the local controllers, and said, "Avianca 52 just came out of Cameron (the name of the holding area) and can only do five more minutes of hold. Can you take him now?"

The local controller replied, "Slow him to 180 knots and I will take him."

After the phone call, the plane was released to Kennedy. It made a missed approach 37 minutes later through rain and fog, coming in too steeply, authorities said.

'Robin HUD' says she's ready for anything, including jail

BALTIMORE (AP) — The real estate agent dubbed "Robin HUD" pleaded guilty to stealing at least $4.75 million from the federal housing program and then said she is optimistic, even if her future includes prison.

Harrell

"I'm prepared to accept what comes my way. I have no fear," said Marilyn Louise Harrell, who entered her plea Monday in U.S. District Court. "A lot of my friends and former employees are ex-offenders, and they're fine people."

Harrell, 46, of the southern Maryland town of Waldorf, had said she gave much of the money she had stolen from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to charity.

"I really truthfully consider it an honor to give up years of my life to help some of the people I've helped," she said.

But U.S. Attorney Breckinridge Willcox said that by April 20, when Harrell is set to be sentenced, "my assertion that she has been her own biggest charity will be fact."

In addition to stealing government property, Harrell pleaded guilty to lying on her tax returns and to federal officials.

Harrell said she pleaded guilty because she did not want to spend taxpayers' money on a trial.

Prosecutors dropped two other tax counts, two counts of lying to HUD officials, and one count of lying to a bank on a loan application.

"I'm very pleased," Harrell said. "That was a very gracious move to offer me what they offered."

She could be sentenced to a maximum 13 years in prison and fined $500,000.

Prosecutors recommended a sentence ranging from 37 months to 46 months in prison. They also plan to recommend a fine, but no amount has been set.

Harrell confessed to government officials in December 1988, and became a symbol of mismanagement at HUD under the Reagan administration when scandal erupted there last summer.

Lawyer says defendant couldn't have shot victim

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A jury heard closing arguments today in the trial of Richard Ruth, the Garland man accused of gunning down a Midland man in August 1989 following a child custody feud.

Ruth is accused of trying to kill John Pace of Midland on Aug. 8, 1989. Pace was shot twice while in his apartment parking lot, but recovered.

Ruth's attorney Ted Kerr told jurors in 238th District Court that "the mild-mannered" defendant could not have committed the act.

Kerr said prosecution testimony proved Ruth was than 400 miles away from Midland a few hours before the shooting.

The attorney also questioned Pace's identification of Ruth, which testimony showed was done while he was heavily sedated.

Those charateristics Pace might have learned from his children who knew Ruth, the attorney reasoned.

But prosecutor Ralph Petty said the identification was only part of the overwhelming eivdence against Ruth, an employee of Scientific Communications of Garland.

"Did you shoot John Pace?" Kerr asked.

"No," Ruth said, raising his voice slightly.

"Had you been asked to shoot John Pace?"

"No," Ruth repeated.

Ruth told jurors that on Aug. 7, the night before the shooting, he left Belen, N.M., south of Albuquerque at about 11:30 p.m. He drove through Albuquerque, Amarillo, Wichita Falls and arrived at his mother's house in The Colony, a Dallas suburb, about noon.

On cross-examination, Ruth told Petty that at the time of the 5:30 a.m. shooting, he was driving alone near Amarillo.

But the prosecution contends Ruth drove from Belen to Midland, shot Pace, then drove to The Colony.

Pace and Beverly Hicks were divorced in May 1986, and she was given custody of the couple's two children. According to testimony, he was given visitation rights, but Ms. Hicks was held in contempt of court in 1986 for refusing to let him see the children.

A court ordered the residence of the children be established in Midland and prohibited either parent from removing the children, testimony showed.

In July 1989, Ms. Hicks moved to Belen to be with her boyfriend, Ruth. Pace found out, obtained a court order in New Mexico giving him custody and took the children. Pace's action caused Ms. Hicks to ask Ruth to shoot him, according to prosecutors.

Last week, Pace told jurors he was walking to his vehicle on the parking lot of the Treemont Apartments, 5216 Ave., at about 5:30 a.m. He noticed a vehicle next to his in the lot with a man inside, the engine running and window rolled down.

Pace and the man spoke, he started to get in his car, and was shot once in the neck, then in the back.

Pace later identified Ruth, and in court picked him out as the man who shot him.

Pace, who was wounded and bleeding heavily, also testified he dipped his fingers in blood and wrote "R R" on the side of his jeep. Although he did not recognize the man who shot him at the time, he believed Ruth was the only man with a motive to kill him, Petty said.

Woman writes book for young cancer victims

WACO (AP) — No child should have to go through a fight with cancer alone, says a Waco woman who believes she survived a bout with cancer with the support of family and friends.

Karen Kilgore was diagnosed with leukemia eight years ago this month. Today she is cured and looking forward to her Feb. 24 wedding.

She has written a children's book for cancer patients that she is trying to get published.

"Whenever you read a little book about divorce to a child whose parents are getting a divorce, sometimes it helps them," she said. "This is the same thing, but it's about cancer."

Ms. Kilgore was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia in 1982, when she was a 14-year-old freshman at Midway High.

She refused to give in to the cancer.

"I wanted to keep doing the things I was doing," she said. "I didn't want anyone to treat me different."

That meant days when she and her parents arose at 4 a.m. to travel to Houston for 8 a.m. appointments at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. Afterward, the family would hurry home for her afternoon ball practice.

She also kept up her cheerleading — even when she lost her hair.

Keeping active was important.

"From the very beginning when they diagnosed me, I kind of took it as a challenge," said Ms. Kilgore. "I do believe when people are sick, their attitude can affect things."

To illustrate this, Ms. Kilgore tells the story of her former softball coach, Dawn Vandenberg, who also had been diagnosed with leukemia. The woman was ill in the days when there were few cases cured. Doctors told her mother to start planning the funeral. Instead, the mother began planning Dawn's wedding.

Dawn lived to carry out the wedding plans — and now has two daughters, Ms. Kilgore said. She said her softball coach became her mentor, encouraging her through her own cancer ordeal.

"It helps to talk to someone else who knows the pain," she said. "It's so hard. So many people say 'I know it hurts,' but they really don't know what you're going through. It's neat when you do have someone to talk to and they know exactly what you're saying."

Years later, after the chemotherapy treatments had ended and she had gone on to study elementary education at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, she wanted to help.

So Ms. Kilgore began writing a book. The main character is a little boy named Brad. He tries to help the children get through the bone marrow treatment by getting their minds off the pain. He tells them "it's going to hurt, but it won't hurt for long."

For her next writing project, Ms. Kilgore plans to write her own story. She said she will end the book at her wedding, which is a happy new beginning.

Midland petty officer aware of what Soviet navy doing

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Byron R. Merrill of Midland inspects a device used to check the avionic systems on board S-3A Viking aircraft. Merrill is stationed with the Air Anti-submarine Squadron 38 in San Diego.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a news feature provided to the Reporter-Telegram from the Navy Public Affairs Center in San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — In the past few months monumental changes have taken place, and continue to take place, in the Eastern bloc countries predominantly controlled by the Soviet Union.

In an age of perestroika and glasnost, even the Soviet Union is being looked upon in a different light by some Americans. But, where there is change, there is turmoil and government officials warn that sometimes "the good can hide some of the truths about what is actually going on."

One man who is well aware of this is Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Byron R. Merrill of Midland. As an aviation electronics technician with Air Anti-submarine Squadron 38 in San Diego, Merrill is cognizant of just what the Soviet Navy is up to.

"The Soviets are continuing to build more sophisticated submarines," said the 27-year-old son of Tom and Essie Merrill of Midland. "Their technology is improving so their submarines are becoming bigger, faster, quieter and harder to detect."

In open publications, Soviet navy officials have written of developing attack submarines that will dive to 6,600 feet, attain submerged speeds of 100 knots and fire 300-knot torpedoes. The Soviet navy shipbuilding program continues and Soviet nuclear submarine production receives a consistently high level of funding, U.S. officials said.

To combat this ...e Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost has defined anti-submarine warfare as the Navy's numer one priority. The Navy is placing a heavy emphasis on being able to combat the Soviet submarine force with defensive measures, which includes being able to track where those submarines are, and what they are doing.

The Navy's aviation community plays a big part in this strategy. The community is one of the most technologically advanced areas of today's Navy. With new airplanes, surveillance equipment and other systems being developed, sailors have to be well-trained and highly capable to make anti-submarine warfare an effective defensive measure.

Air Anti-submarine Squadron 38 is playing a key role in this strategy. The squadron deploys the S-3A Viking aircraft, an effective platform in the constant "cat-and-mouse" game with Soviet submarines.

"The Viking is very effective," Merrill said. "It's one of the better aircraft performing the anti-submarine warfare mission."

Merrill is an aviation electronics technician for the squadron. He is responsible for testing, maintaining and repairing radio, radar and other electronic devices on the aircraft.

"I'm responsible for seeing all the support equipment and special tools are on hand and available to repair any system on the aircraft," said Merrill, a 1980 graduate of Greenwood High School. "The most rewarding part of my job is being able to troubleshoot the aircraft when it's broken down and getting it back into the air."

A couple of new programs are being researched to further enhance the anti-submarine warfare field. One is the Long Range Air Anti-submarine Warfare Capability Aircraft, which is the next generation of airborne ASW platform, and the second is the S-3B Viking, which will be the updated version of the current s-3A, with advanced capabilities.

Meanwhile, Merrill and his squadron will continue to keep a watchful eye on Soviet submarines and will continue to train in this historic period of perestroika and glasnost.

Williams calls for state-funded education mandates

By PEGGY FIKAC

AUSTIN (AP) — A plan to "boot the bureaucracy out of the classroom" was announced by GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams, who pledged if elected he'd prevent state education directives unless they carry state funding.

"As governor, I will veto any mandates from Austin that do not provide the necessary state funds and therefore make it necessary to raise taxes at the local level," Williams, a Midland businessman, said Monday.

The education plan would give local school districts control over spending, he said in a position paper. "The folks who are the closest to the problems should have the freedom and responsibility to structure their education system as they see fit."

Among other items, the plan also would experiment with allowing parents to choose the schools their children attend; reduce teacher paperwork; and give students whose annual family income is below $30,000 a chance at two years' free college tuition.

Also Monday, Republican gubernatorial contender Tom Luce released an environmental plan that calls for putting Texas prisoners to work in new, regional recycling centers.

"As governor, I want to be personally responsible in the war on pollution in Texas," said Luce, a Dallas lawyer. "The buck will stop with me, and so will the threats to our environment."

The prison recycling center program would put selected first offenders and nonviolent criminals to work sorting solid waste, Luce said. It would be funded with money set aside for regional alternative prisons.

Among other proposals in Luce's environmental plan:

- Reduce toxic air emissions and hazardous waste production.
- Arrest more illegal dumpers.
- Decrease dangerous materials in water.
- Create a council to coordinate efforts of all state environmental agencies.

Luce expressed little concern about a poll commissioned by the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News showing him running behind Williams and Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

"I think all the polls are going to show the same thing, and that is the race is volatile," he said.

Hance's campaign, meanwhile, said its pollster, Lance Tarrance, had conducted a survey also showing Hance second, but stronger than in the newspapers' poll.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican who said he won't make endorsements until after the March 13 primary elections, asserted, "I think everybody's got a chance ... There's a big bloc of undecided votes out there."

In other political developments Monday:

- The Texas State Teachers Association declined to endorse in the governor's race because members were split among several candidates. TSTA president Olivia "Ollie" Besteiro said a gubernatorial endorsement could come later.

Candidates backed by TSTA include State Comptroller Bob Bullock for lieutenant governor; Dan Morales for attorney general; Jim Hightower for agriculture commissioner; and Texas Supreme Court Justice Oscar Mauzy for chief justice. All are Democrats.

Mauzy said the question of election versus appointment of judges will be the central issue in his campaign, asserting, "I think the people of this state are entitled to have a chief justice who believes in the continued election of judges to our state courts."

- The Committee for Judicial Merit Election said a new poll of Texas Democrats shows strong support for that system, in which judges would be appointed by the governor from a list of recommended names, then stand unopposed for election on the next general election ballot.

The committee said 48 percent of 606 respondents in the poll commissioned by the Texas Medical Association favored merit election, 42 percent support the current, open election system and 10 percent didn't know.

- San Saba County Judge Tom Bowden, a Democratic candidate for state treasurer, said he opposes a state income tax.
- State Sen. Hugh Parmer, a Democrat from Fort Worth who is running for the U.S. Senate seat held by Republican Phil Gramm, said Gramm has co-sponsored constitutional amendments that would limit abortion.

Texans give Bush high marks after first year

Associated Press

Texans join the rest of the nation in giving President Bush high marks after his first year in office, a poll shows.

Seventy-eight percent of those polled said Bush is doing a good or excellent job; 19 percent said fair or poor; and 2 percent were unsure.

Bush is at "the absolute pinnacle of his popularity" and is cresting on public support of the U.S. invasion of Panama and the overthrow of the regime of Gen. Manuel Noriega, said University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray.

Murray directed the poll of 981 registered Texas voters for the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News through the UH Center for Public Policy.

The survey was conducted between Jan. 15 and Jan. 23, and has a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent.

The results on Bush, a Houstonian, mirror national polls showing widespread public approval of the president's job performance.

Texas' two senators also fared well in the poll. Democrat Lloyd Bentsen's job performance was ranked excellent or good by 64 percent of those polled, with 31 percent rating him fair or poor and 6 percent unsure. Republican Phil Gramm, who is up for re-election this year, also was rated excellent or good by 64 percent, fair or poor by 26 percent, and 10 percent were unsure.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements is still rated "moderately negative," Murray said. Fifty-seven percent rate him fair or poor, 38 percent excellent or good, and 5 percent unsure.

Program gives students insight into life in prison

By MARGARET TOAL

ORANGE (AP) — Jail did not subdue the giggles and energy of the teen-agers. They had laughed, yawned and daydreamed through most of the six-hour program.

Then came the tears and the shocked looks as they heard graphic stories of the results of a life of drugs and theft.

They flinched as Tracy Savant, wearing the dingy white coveralls of an Orange County Jail prisoner, told of the violence he had seen in one of his stays in a state prison. He related the details of two prisoners arguing over a $2 football game bet. The argument ended, as Savant watched, in the prison kitchen. One of the men nearly decapitated the other with a 3-inch paring knife.

"Remember me. Look at me because I'm miserable. I didn't listen," said Donald Williams, another prisoner.

The 18 students from Theresa Wernig's honors government class at West Orange-Stark High School were the first to go through the Orange County Sheriff's Department's new "Operation Insight."

The program is designed "to give teen-agers some insight into the consequences of juvenile crime in the hope that the experience will offer them an alternative to criminal behavior," said Maj. Ken Ray.

The day included talks on police work and how case involving juveniles are handled.

Speakers included County Court-at-Law Judge Michael Shuff, who serves as juvenile judge, and juvenile probation officer Tom Clark, who worked four years in a Texas Youth Commission detention center.

The students also spent about 90 minutes locked in jail cells, dealing with cramped quarters, eating bologna sandwiches and listening to other prisoners beat on the walls and yell four-letter words in an attempt to stop the kids' noise.

Ray said the program will be aimed for "at-risk" students, those teen-agers "who are leaning" to breaking laws. But the honor students found grades and brains don't exempt them from getting in trouble.

"The last group (I talked to) was not nearly as clean and shiny and intelligent looking as you are," Shuff said. "Which is not to say I haven't had any bright honor students in my court.

"Probably more than one of you has smoked on a joint or put something up your n' e," Shuff said.

The day's highlight came when the students were locked in a cell block. The sheriff's department moved convicted felons waiting transfer to state prison from their tiny, single-man cells to a holding cell.

The students, grouped in twos or threes, were locked up in those cells and warned not to touch any of the belongings in the cells. At first, they laughed, giggled, made jokes and sang. Finally, they were left alone for nearly 90 minutes, with no guards, teacher or observers as company. Most ended up sitting on the floor.

But Ryan Caruthers and his cellmate, Cyriac Roeding, a German exchange student, stood the whole time. "It's nasty," said Roeding. "After 30 minutes, you get the feeling you can't do anything."

"We were getting tired," said Kathleen Musser at the end of her stay. "The people (real prisoners) behind us kept beating the wall."

"I want to get out of here now," said Rebecca Johnson. "I think I'd rather be sitting in chemistry class."

One group of three girls politely declined their jail lunch of bologna sandwiches. So Ray locked them in the padded isolation cell. That cell didn't even have a stainless steel toilet. Just a hole in the floor for the prisoners.

Their short stay in jail made them pay attention to the talks from the two prisoners. Williams said the Orange County Jail is one of the cleanest and best-run jails he's been locked in.

"Thank God I'm in this jail. There's a lot of harmony here because a lot of people here are reaching out for God," he said.

Savant, who faces 35 years in prison, said prisoners wish every day they could be free. "I gave it all up for drugs and selfishness. Nothing in the world is worth your freedom," he said.

Williams and Savant said drugs led them into trouble. "Patience is the outcome of a good life," Williams said. "You think you're going to get that fast money. Sooner or later it's going to catch up with you."

Ray said the department will offer Operation Insight to high schools in the county and will present the program every other week.

Next year, the program might be offered to younger students, he said. "You can take this information to somebody your age," Ray told the students. "They will listen to you. They won't listen to me."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Light up someone's life by volunteering. You can make their day brighter. Here are just a few of the opportunities available through the Volunteer Center:

■ Enjoy meeting people, answering questions? Consider manning an information booth at the Midland International Airport. Both morning and afternoon four-hour shifts are available. Parking is provided.

■ Do you enjoy children or work well with groups? A local nonprofit agency promoting positive parenting has several opportunities available. Choose from helping organize and supervise activities for children or teaching a nurturing class. A three-hour commitment once a week is all it takes. Training will be provided.

■ Are sports and coaching your forte? Share your time and talent with special needs children by coaching and/or assisting in basketball. This is an evening/weekend opportunity for five weeks.

■ Do you enjoy house cleaning? If you are one of the few, share your special ability with someone who is not able to clean their home. A local, nonprofit agency needs assistance in cleaning homes of disabled persons. The hours are flexible.

■ Fire up those kilns. A senior group is looking for someone to help with greenware, painting and firing ceramics. Class is held on Friday's from 10 to 11 a.m. Supplies are provided.

■ Assist the coordinator of volunteer services for an agency that promotes positive mental health. This is a good opportunity to learn first hand the concepts of Volunteer Administration. Utilize your communication skills and provide technical support. Your assistance is needed on Mondays and Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

Woman stabs fiance because he switched TV to Super Bowl

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman was sentenced to 10 months in jail for stabbing her fiance in the neck with a barbecue fork after he switched channels on her to watch the Super Bowl.

"You were almost a football widow," Judge Ted Poe told Viola Delores Douglas, 37, after she pleaded guilty Monday to misdemeanor assault.

As Ms. Douglas explained it, she was watching a Disney movie Sunday when Eddie Harris, an asphalt firm worker, returned to the apartment they share and switched to the Super Bowl.

Ms. Douglas attacked Harris with a knife, but he disarmed her and escaped injury, prosecutor Don Rizzo said. Not long after, she told police, she returned to the room and discovered that Harris was ignoring the game.

An infuriated Ms. Douglas stabbed him, prosecutors said.

Harris required a few stitches to close the wound.

The unemployed nurse could be eligible for release after about five months.

They decided to wait until she graduated before marrying.

Frankie is scheduled to walk Ms. Kilgore halfway down the aisle at her wedding. Then, her father will escort her to the altar.

Aspens spring from tiny seeds

ATLANTA (AP) — What tree species has seeds so small that it takes well over 10 million to fill a five-pound sack?

The aspen tree, says Georgia-Pacific, a forest product company. It says aspens, often found in the Great Lakes' states, are used to produce furniture, boxes, paneling, toothpicks, matchsticks and pulp for paper.

El Paso measles cases increase

EL PASO (AP) — The number of measles cases has risen since last week prompting health officials Monday to order inoculations of nursing students and lowering the age that children can be vaccinated.

Forty-two red measles cases had been reported as of Monday, up from 27 reported from the beginning of January through last Friday, Dr. Laurance Nickey said.

Despite the rise in cases, Nickey said the city is not yet suffering an epidemic.

Five more cases were reported Monday at Coronado High School even though students at the school were vaccinated on Friday against the highly contagious illness. The high school banned all extracurricular activities for two weeks beginning last week after seven cases were reported, but the ban was to remain in effect until the outbreak subsided.

A mass immunization at another public school is possible, because the outbreak does not appear to be isolated at Coronado, Nickey told KDBC-TV.

In addition, health care workers who may be exposed to people carrying the disease are being inoculated. Student nurses who train at R.E. Thomason General Hospital and nursing students at Texas Tech Medical Center and El Paso Community College also are being vaccinated.

Nickey is now recommending that children as young as 6 months be vaccinated, instead of 12 months as previously suggested. He said he lowered the age because of the risky complications of red measles.

Red measles are highly contagious and can lead to serious cases of pneumonia or encephalitis, which can be deadly.

Texas drug ring cracked

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Two brothers were arrested here and 252 pounds of marijuana seized as agents cracked a Texas-based drug ring that shipped large amounts of marijuana to Canada, federal authorities said Monday.

Kenneth Dudley, 49, and his brother, Donald, 39, both from the El Paso area, were arrested Friday night at a Spokane Valley motel on charges of possession with intent to distribute marijuana, said Mark Lloyd of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Agents seized the Dudleys' pickup truck, which contained 252 pounds of marijuana in 12 compressed bales, Lloyd said.

"This was supposedly a sample, a small consignment of a major multiton load that was supposed to be negotiated for. The buyers were Canadians but I don't think they arrived," Lloyd said.

A small amount of cash and a gold watch were also confiscated.

The Dudleys made an initial appearance Monday in U.S. District Court, and Magistrate James Hovis set a detention hearing for Wednesday.

Lloyd said the men arrested in Spokane were part of a major El Paso-based drug ring that moved large amounts of Mexican marijuana through Spokane for distribution in Canada.

Rock shelters lecture topic

From Staff Reports

Virginia Wulfkuhle, curator of Sul Ross State University's Museum of the Big Bend in Alpine, will speak to the Midland Archaeological Society at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, located behind the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 West Missouri St.

Ms. Wulfkuhle will discuss the reexamination and re-analysis of one of Brewster County's Meriwether Rock Shelters, one of three excavated in 1933. The Alpine Chamber of Commerce and the West Texas Historical and Scientific Society's Big Bend Memorial Museum supported the original excavations.

Although excavators found many prehistoric stone tools and animal remains, the data never was fully analyzed and the report was not completed. In 1987-88, Ms. Wulfkuhle reanalyzed the project notes and artifacts from one of the rock shelters. She also interviewed Dr. J. Charles Kelly, the 1933 field director.

Ms. Wulfkuhle has a master's degree in anthropology from the University of Texas at Austin and has worked in the Office of the State Archeologist for nine years before moving to the Trans-Pecos region. She has worked on archaeological sites in the Big Bend area since 1979.

The public is invited to attend.

Houston steamship agents, truckers to negotiate

HOUSTON (AP) — Independent truckers who stalled activity at the Port of Houston with picket lines are returning to work today with the promise of negotiations with steamship agents later in the week.

Trucker and strike organizer Wade Richardson said nearly 200 independent truckers essentially shut down operations at the port Monday in protest of low wages, high fuel prices and increasing costs of truck maintenance and insurance and regulatory costs.

"We're not making enough money and the rates are cheap," said Rodney Ridioux, an independent trucker. "Fuel is high. We're making less than what we were making say 10 years ago. We're spending more money."

Richardson said truckers agreed to stop picketing the port entrances at 6 p.m. Monday, after several steamship agents said they would meet with the independents in a private session Thursday. The decision came about an hour after a state district judge ordered a temporary restraining order to force the group to stop the strike.

"We feel that national attention has been focused on our situation and the present conditions cannot continue with the airing that has come about today," Richardson said late Monday.

The independent truckers were joined by longshoremen who refused to cross the picket lines.

Port spokesman Lee Vela said once the longshoremen honored the lines, it halted work on seven ships and two barges. The port receives an average of 14 ships daily, he said.

"If the labor unions don't cross picket lines, then there's no one to work the ships," Vela said.

Yemil Zarzar, port manager for Gulf & Atlantic Maritime Service Inc., did not return telephone calls from The Associated Press late Monday. Similarly, officials from the International Longshoremen's Association local 20 in Galveston refused to comment on the strike.

Richardson said the strikers are fed up with the low hauling rates paid to truckers that do business with the port. He said he hoped the Thursday meeting would help truckers understand why their pay is so low.

Rising fuel costs have bumped diesel costs to $1.21 a gallon in Houston, the American Automobile Association said. It was as high as $2.44 a gallon in Maine recently.

"Nobody cares," Richardson said. "It's horrible."

Transportation consultant Paul Broussard said some truckers make as little as $20 a load for a 500-pound shipment, so they often are forced to take extra loads to make ends meet.

"You're not going to get wealthy in the load and carriage industry basically," Broussard said. "You've got a lot of middle men in this business. You've got brokers, you've got forwarders, you've got steamship lines. These people are negotiating on behalf of shipper with carriers and frequently the profit margins stop with those middlemen."

Todd Spencer, spokesman for the 10,600-member Owner-Operator Independent Driver's Association in Oak Grove, Mo., said his group did not participate in the strike, but sympathized with the problem.

Spencer said rumors of a wildcat strike have been circulating nationwide — especially from the Carolinas and Texas — for about three weeks.

He said Houston-area drivers have a legitimate concern "and the same thing could happen on both coasts and in Louisiana." He said it is not unusual for port truckers to be forced to line up for several hours to pick up shipping containers, which might turn out to be grossly overweight. But Spencer said many of the solutions to the situation must come from Congress.

MARK LEAVERTON ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

As an oil and gas lawyer, I know that it is important to our community to have a judge with the experience to effectively preside in cases affecting the oil and gas industry. I know Nick Taylor both as a person and as a lawyer. A judge should possess at least four uncompromised traits: fairness, integrity, the experience that allows a common sense approach to resolve disputes, and the intellect to comprehend and apply the law in a broad range of legal matters. Nick Taylor is such a man, and I am proud to endorse him to be our District Judge.

Men's skin care products flesh out

Males no longer have to blush at cosmetic counter

By ROBERT DVORCHAK

NEW YORK (AP) — Pssst. Yo, buddy.

You can stop sneaking into your wife's beauty cream. Stop slinking around cosmetics counters.

Hey, look, it's the '90s. Times have changed.

"Men have begun to come to grips with their masculinity in a less stereotyped way. They can say, 'I can use this treatment cream and I'm still a man.' But men have to be taught to use the product. They haven't used them since they were a teen-ager like women."

Gotta get with it, man.

Fourteen years ago, Estee Lauder's Clinique division sold the first dermatologically designed line of cosmetics made specifically for men.

Women's products aren't for men, the makeup makers say, because a man's skin is thicker, oilier and has larger pores. Men also have special shaving-related problems such as ingrown hairs.

Hey, no need to blush. You're not alone. Sales are growing about 15 percent a year. Seventy-five million bucks last year.

Now, nobody's calling that a boom, especially with women shelling out $2.5 billion a year, but ...

"There's a joke in the industry that men's cosmetics is an eplosion with the longest fuse." That's Donics again.

"There's still a stigma attached to some of these products." That's Allan G. Mottus. He's an industry consultant. "Men don't like products positioned as cosmetic or feminine."

No way, Jose.

But, if you tell a guy about fragrance-free, oil-free skin-clearing solutions made of crushed apricot pits to exfoliate dead skin cells, shaving gels with cationic polymers to shield skin from razors, non-comedogenic scrubs to ward off blackheads and ingrown hairs, dual action glycerin soaps to clean the face and soften the beard before shaving, translucent balms to relieve razor burns and anti-aging supplements with radical scavengers to reinforce skin — well, we're not exactly talking Chanel No. 5, are we?

Education, dude, education. Aramis has a traveling staff of 200 people to visit department stores around the country to talk one-on-one to you — about the benefits.

AP/Cynthia Greer

Another way to reduce feminine connotations is marketing. Clinique calls a facial cleanser for women clarifying lotion; for men, it's called scruffing lotion. Uh-huh. Men's products also come in manly gray packages. Nothing for geeks.

To promote it's Lab Series products, Aramis opened the only cosmetics counter of its kind in the country a year ago in the men's department of Bloomingdale's in New York. Radical, huh?

Two white-coated technicians are on hand to give a computer test to see if skin is oily or dry. In the privacy of a back room, customers can also sample treatments.

You know, these days three-quarters of men's cosmetics are bought by women for men.

Andrew Shore, an analyst for Shearson Lehman Hutton, figures he knows why.

"Men are intimidated. Men aren't educated about these products. How in the world are you going to get a man to cross a department store floor and stand at the cosmetics counter to ask for moisturizing cream. It's also a big-city phenomenon. You're hard pressed to see an auto mechanic in Albuquerque buying this stuff."

But wait. Gillette Co. itself plans to introduce tony toiletries next year. But nothing too fancy, says Michele Szynal, a company spokesman.

"I don't think we'll get into any thing like mud packs to firm up jowls or toning lotions or bronzers. There's a mindset here. I don't think men have progressed to the point where they're comfortable with makeup."

Hey, listen, Michele.

"Maybe in the beginning I didn't tell anyone I used them. But I don't feel funny about it. I don't think there's anything feminine about it. I want to maintain myself." That's Cary Pollock, 39, a salesman in New York. Says he likes the results he gets with the Aramis Lab Series.

"I'm doing it to impress me. When I'm 60, I'm going to look great."

John Stabenau, divisional merchandise manager for men's cosmetics at Marshall Field's department stores in Chicago, has seen high school guys, Chicago cops and investment bankers, even Texas cowboys at the men's cosmetics counters.

Texas cowboys?

"Society is changing," Stabenau says. "There's no social stigma today to using anything if you want to improve your appearance."

But Aramis shaving gel for $12? Glycerin soap for $10? And 1.7 ounces of moisturizing cream for $18.50?

Wait. For a fraction of the cost, drugstores carry beauty bars, astringents, moisturizers and fragranced rubbing alcohol for oily skin.

"You need to protect your skin beyond cleaning with soap and water. That's Zoe Draelos, a dermatologist in High Point, N.C. "You're no longer a sissy if you put things on your face."

Men now sit cheek by jowl with women in hair salons, and the greasy kid stuff has gone the way of the dry look of blowdried hair perhaps colored to hide the gray. Males of the baby boom are turning 40 and may want to slow down the aging process. Fitness is in. Neanderthals are history.

"Taking care of your skin is part of being healthy inside and out. It has nothing to do with vanity." That's Mariana Lucinda of Los Angeles, who has a skin care line of tinted moisturizers, aftershave toners and treatments.

Hey, think about it.

Salons offer extra services for clients' busy daily life

By VALLI HERMAN
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The swift pace of daily life has punched the clock at beauty salons here, creating new opportunities for enterprising salon owners and their clients.

Full-service salons have stretched their definition to the limit, adding non-beauty services to ease the burdens of busy clients.

Now, working men and women and stay-at-home mothers can exercise in a workout room, grab a lunch and send for the dry cleaning all while waiting for a color tint to take effect.

The beauty salon has become the latest entry in the field of time-saving conveniences. While the trend is not yet widespread, clients at these select salons say the idea is overdue.

A new salon, JADDS, in West Los Angeles, opened in December with the idea of catering to virtually every need of clients. Owner Shuji Kida installed an espresso bar, health food vending machines and a nerve-soothing $14,000 stereo system.

"I found we needed a more comfortable and high-fashion salon for Los Angeles," Kida said.

The hair salon offers the full, traditional range of services, including manicures, pedicures and facials, but plans to add a dash of the unorthodox.

"We may hire people to wash the car for them," he said. "We have several assistants who have the time to do it."

Kida has been negotiating with area dry cleaners to coordinate pickup and delivery service for salon clients. He is having similar discussions with shoe repair shops.

The services available at salons are not limited to concerns of the everyday. At Wolf European Hair Design at the Westin Bonaventure Hotel, downtown Los Angeles workers stop in for skin care or to have the future predicted.

Zarin Hadizadeh-Misko administers facials and applies make up as well as reads tarot cards, palms and candles.

As a palm reader, Hadizadeh-Misko uses the name "Ruby."

"That way, when people ask for me, they get the right kind of appointment," she said.

Ruby does not mix services. She will not read your palm and cleanse your face at once. She also practices in separate rooms.

Ruby's combination of talents was an added plus for salon owner Wolf Thaesler.

"We have only been open three months here," Thaesler said. "We've been getting quite a few businessmen who consult her before they do their business deals."

Wolf's salon also employs a woman trained in shiatsu massage, a pressure-point massage technique. Seven to eight clients a day pay $55 for an hour of massage.

While the small number of clients who have availed themselves of the new services hail them as an innovation, beauty-industry experts are more wary.

Some services border on gimmickry, said Robin Weir, a Washington, D.C., stylist for former first lady Nancy Reagan and a member of the business committee of the National Cosmetology Association.

"The winning edge in beauty will be service," said Weir from Washington. "The malls here are even putting in a concierge — they'll get you a hotel, your plane tickets."

Salons likely will have a willing market should they decide to extend their menu of services, said Jackie Summers, executive editor of Modern Salon, a trade publication based in Southern California.

"Salons are expanding their service into ... arenas such as clothing and catering," Summers said. "It's a service industry geared primarily to the working woman. Any kind of service they can dream up that helps the working woman, would be valuable."

Summers said salons have been responding to the demands of women short on time but long on personal care sophistication.

Temple woman's vintage clothing collection brings past to life

AP LaserPhoto

Linda Shobert, who collects vintage clothing and accessories, models a Japanese Kimono in front of a backdrop of antique Oriental wall hangings.

By CATHY YOUNG
Associated Press

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Some people read about history, filling shelf after shelf with books and papers.

Others study history by gathering memorabilia about specific events or people and displaying them.

Her closets are filled with Victorian gowns, silk dresses from the 1920s and 1930s, silk-lined day and evening coats, a 1920s negligee with crystal pleats and maribou feathers, and Japanese kimonos "from my oriental period," she said.

But she doesn't simply store the clothes, or bring them out occasionally for display or admiration. Ms. Shobert wears vintage clothing, either entire outfits or individual pieces, "for fun" and when she goes out in the evenings.

"It would be impractical to dress completely in vintage clothing," she admits, "so what I like to do is combine selected pieces with modern clothing."

For instance, she will combine a vintage jacket with jeans, or wear an embroidered silk coat over an evening dress, or wear antique jewelry with street clothes — "to make my wardrobe eclectic," she said.

However, Ms. Shobert admits that "in my kind of work, I can't wear vintage clothing every day." She is a customer service representative at TU Electric, specializing in marketing and electrical distribution engineering.

Ms. Shobert became interested in clothing and fabrics while studying home economics at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, and estimates that she began collecting vintage clothing and accessories in the mid-1970s.

"Someone gave me the first piece of antique clothing," she said, "and I've been collecting it ever since. The first antique piece I bought? it was probably a hat."

She now owns approximately 100 pieces of clothing, 50 hats, 200 pieces of jewelry, and 10 to 15 pairs of shoes, including a pair of satin evening pumps.

A desire to know more about some of her collected pieces led her to study fashion history, which in turn led to general historical studies. She can now explain which world events changed fashions and what people had the biggest effect on the popularity of certain styles.

For instance, Joan Crawford popularized the "big shoulder" look in dresses in the 1930s. Ms. Shobert has a black silk dress from that era, the heavily padded shoulders further accented with silver beading.

Napoleon Bonaparte, emperor of France, brought his wife Josephine a shawl woven with an interesting pattern from India. The shawls became popular in England and were eventually produced in Paisley, Scotland, gaining a name in the process.

Even Queen Victoria of England affected fashion styles. Small bonnets became popular as head gear, and Victoria's habit of always dressing in black inspired the creation of jewelry with jet stones.

Ms. Shobert's jewelry collection began with Victorian-era jet jewelry, but Bakelite (plastic) jewelry from the 20s and 30s now makes up the bulk of the collection.

Other accessories include hat pins, some with jet accents or cloisonne designs; small purses and chatelaines; a few pieces of vintage undergarments, including some silk tap pants from Neiman-Marcus; and a sporran, worn by Scotsmen as a substitute for pockets in dress kilts.

Antique clothing is becoming more difficult to find, Ms. Shobert said, because "anything from before the 1880s is either in a museum or up in someone's attic.'

"A lot of my clothes are from the Victorian era," she said. Several years ago, the Victorian-era white cotton dresses and blouses were popular, but "they have almost completely disappeared from the market."

In the 19th and early 20th centuries, wealthy women bought their clothes in France, she said. If they were unable to travel to Europe, women could see miniature versions of the fashions on dolls dressed by the French couturiers.

Clothing was not mass-produced until the 1920s, Ms. Shobert said. "Everyone seemed to have a dressmaker, or they sewed their own clothes until then," she said.

She owns several beaded dresses from the 1920s, but the thread is too fragile for the dresses to be worn, "and I don't have the patience to rebead the dresses," she said. Because of a brief spurt of popularity a few years ago, 1920s-era cloche hats are almost impossible to find.

Most vintage clothing on the market now dates from the 1930s and 1940s. Ms. Shobert likes the 1930s evening clothes, but owns only one piece of daywear: a housedress that she describes as "dowdy, but typical of the day."

She avoids clothes from the 1940s, saying that the shorter skirts and brightly-colored platform shoes remind her of the 1960s. But she does own several felt hats reminiscent of Ingrid Bergman in "Casablanca."

Ms. Shobert's collection does not include any clothing made since the 1940s, though 1950s clothes are considered vintage items by some collectors.

DEAR ABBY

Paddling students assaults their self-esteem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please speak out against corporal punishment in our schools. Paddling children with boards is child abuse. It also promotes child abuse in our communities by sending a message that it is OK for adults to hit children.

Paddling creates fear in children and lowers their self-esteem. This adds to the dropout rate and lowers the test scores as the students lose interest in education in a Nazi-like atmosphere. It also humiliates and angers children, increasing vandalism and violence in the schools.

Schools that forbid paddling are more peaceful and the students appreciate being treated with respect. They return this respect to their teachers and to the school.

Thankfully, 19 states have now abolished corporal punishment, with eight having done so last year! — JIMMY DUNNE, PRESIDENT, P.O.P.S. (PEOPLE OPPOSED TO PADDLING STUDENTS INC.), HOUSTON

DEAR JIMMY DUNNE: Your letter was indeed an eye-opener; I thought corporal punishment had gone out of fashion in our schools generations ago. I realize that in this age of one-parent households, latchkey children and increasing violence, many feel we are "losing control" of the younger generation. But children learn through example, and the message a child receives when he is struck, slapped or paddled is that might makes right.

Teachers and principals should not be expected to do the work of parents. And the job of parents is to prepare a child to appreciate an education, respect one's elders and to work cooperatively with others.

Those lessons come from the head and the heart — not the fist or the paddle.

DEAR ABBY: Please help. Our first baby is due in March. When I married Mr. Slaff, I kept my last name (Zurawski).

Now we cannot agree on what last name to use for our child. Our choices are: (1) Combine both our names into "Slaffski." (2) If the baby is a boy, give him his father's last name, Slaff. (3) If it's a girl, give her my last name, Zurawski. (4) Or should we use both names, hyphenated: "Zurawski-Slaff"?

I feel that the child's name should reflect both our names. My husband wants to follow tradition and have his name be the last name and use my last name for the middle name.

We have agreed to go by your decision. — BAFFLED IN BOULDER

DEAR BAFFLED: For the sake of uniformity, I suggest all your children should have the same last name, and it should be the hyphenated combination of both your names — Zurawski-Slaff.

DEAR ABBY: I followed with interest the letters about the woman who wrote complaining about her husband's poor grammar. (She didn't notice it before they were married.)

My husband has the same problem, though it hasn't kept us from having a wonderful life together.

When we first met, I was attracted to him because of his gentleness, warmth, sense of humor and common sense. I was also appalled by his language, which was littered with "aint's," "gonnas," "wit choos" (with you) and "dints" (didn't).

I kept wondering how could such a classy guy talk so poorly. Then we went home to meet his family, and his mother said, "Why dincha tell me youse was gunna git married?" — NO MORE QUESTIONS

Climb to physical fitness is long

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

When I told my husband I wanted to join a physical fitness club, he put his paper down. "What for?" he asked. "You stored the stationary bicycle in the garage; slipcovered the treadmill and made a planter out of the rowing exerciser."

"The club has a stair-climbing machine," I said.

He took off his glasses. "We moved out of a perfectly good house 10 years ago because you hated living in a two-story house with all those stairs."

"That was different."

"Your exact words were, 'If God had wanted me to ascend to the second floor, he would have awarded me frequent flier points'!"

"Don't you ever forget anything?"

"Remember how you used to stack laundry at the bottom of the stairs and make one trip a year?"

"Are you finished?"

"There were diapers in that pile the day the last kid graduated from high school."

I should never have brought it up for discussion. I knew he wouldn't understand. I was young then. When you're young you never think there's going to be a day when your derriere makes flapping noises on the back of your knees when you walk.

"Forget the benefits of muscle toning," I said. "A stair climber would accelerate my heart rate."

He said, "Why don't you just look at our American Express bill from Christmas? I know you. You won't stick with it. You have the interest span of a 2-year-old."

"Why would you say a thing like that?"

"Remember our trip to the Statue of Liberty? You climbed halfway up and wanted me to call you a cab. And what about our trip to Ireland to kiss the Blarney Stone? You took one look at all those steps and said, 'When you're married 30 years, who needs to kiss another stone?'"

He relented. I knew he would. I had him drop me off at the mall to buy a cute little stair-climbing outfit with matching headband. He parked a mile away, on purpose. He knows I hate curbs!

Lewellen Construction: 'Test drive' their products on your home

Have you been considering home improvements such as maintenance-free siding and trim, storm or replacement windows, but you aren't sure how they would look on your home? To see a "sneak preview" of the difference in your home's value and beauty, why not take a "test drive" of quality Lewellen Construction products.

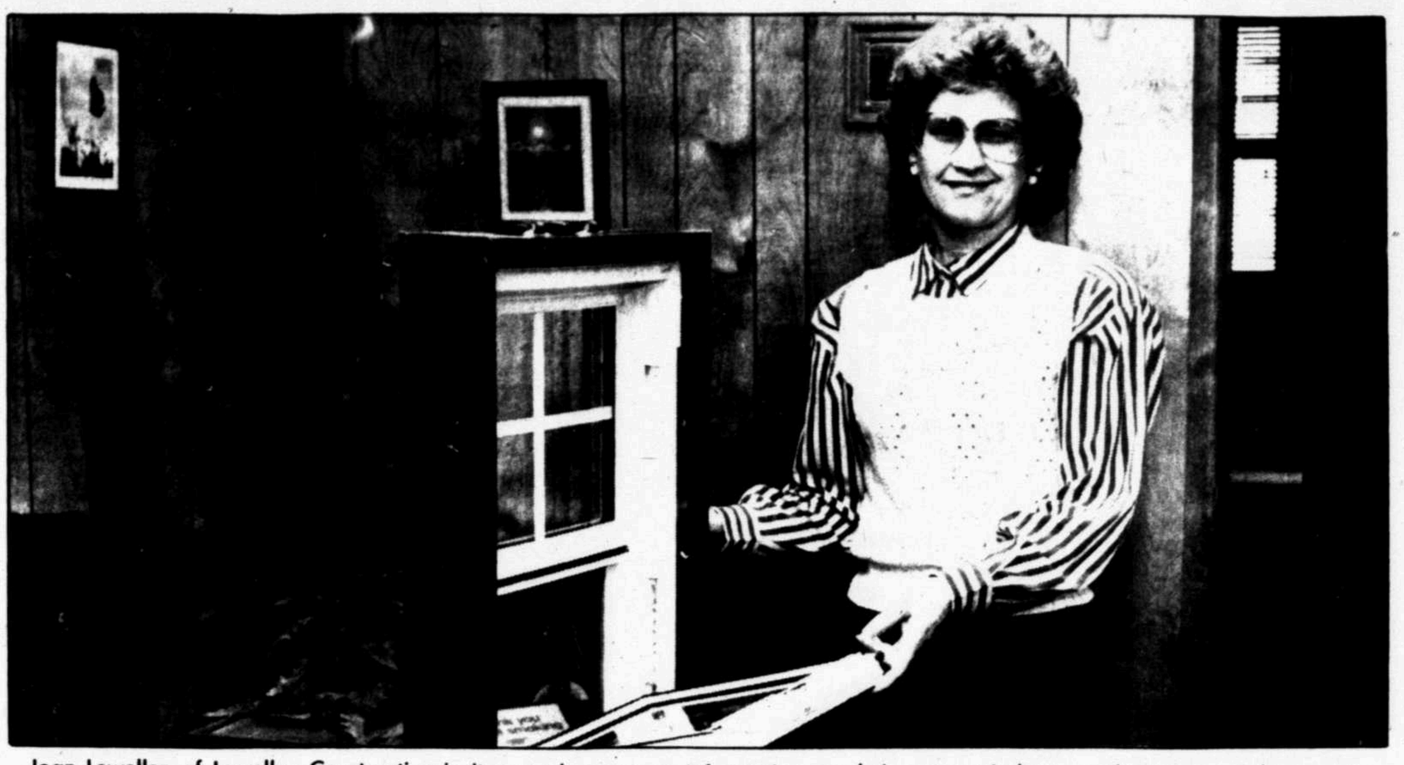

Lewellen Construction wants you to have "proof beyond a doubt" that their products will look good on your home. The professionals at Lewellen Construction will install a sample so you can see first hand the quality of their workmanship and materials.

If you're not convinced you want the improvement item on the entire house, you just pay for the small amount of product used.

Think about it this way. A house worth of improvements such as replacement and storm windows can be a large ticket item. You can look at a sample and read all about it, but it's not the same as a "test drive." Trying it out on your own home gives you a chance to thoroughly "test" the window before you invest a large sum of money.

For your own personal "test drive," call Lewellen Construction at 563-4520 or 686-8007.

Here's some special money-saving news: during January and February, Lewellen Construction is offering a 20 percent discount off list prices on siding and trim. In addition, windows are discounted 10 percent.

Joan Lewellen of Lewellen Construction invites you learn more information on their storm windows, replacement windows and maintenance-free siding products.

And still in stock is a special purchase of brown and beige soffit which is offered at an additional five percent discount.

Bill and Joan Lewellen would like to offer a note of caution. When you see an advertisement seeking a few homes for promotional purposes, it would seem that these homes qualify for a special discount. This is a standard ploy to get leads and it's doubtful that you'll get any better deal than anyone else gets.

The message here is don't be fooled. Lewellen Construction's prices might be higher than some of the competition, but remember, Lewellen Construction is a locally-owned family business. Its office and home are here and its employees live and shop in Midland.

Lewellen Construction also offers a full 10-year installation warranty as well as a lifetime warranty from the manufacturer on our siding products.

The upfront cost of maintenance-free siding and trim is more than the cost of a paint job — but you only invest in it once.

It's a capital investment (not like painting, which is an expense) so you can deduct it from the gain on the sale of your home. On secured loans to finance the home improvement, 100 percent of the interest you pay is deductible on your income tax return.

With all of this in mind — solid warranties, "test driving" of products, dollars and sense tax advantages and professionalism, give Lewellen Construction a call at 563-4520 or 686-8007. You'll be in good company with scores of Midlanders who have been satisfied Lewellen Construction customers.

Talent, skill, make Mane Attractions the trendsetter in hair fashion

An introduction is hardly necessary for the trendsetter in hair fashion, Mane Attractions. Mane Attractions is a full service men's and women's salon where people care about people. You get old fashioned treatment with new wave hair styles.

The quality care you will receive at Mane Attractions, 2302-A North Big Spring, is a result of teamwork which gives you the look which is just right for your fashions.

You will always get friendly service at Mane Attractions. Mane Attractions is a salon where the staff cares about you and the way you look. They and owner Sylvia Lozano are very experienced with different types of hair textures.

They make sure that your hairstyle fits your lifestyle. You'll find a full range of services at this salon, including all over haircolor, weaves (highlights) spiral perms, great hair cuts, manicures and pedicures.

The styles you want are available from an Intercoiffure-trained staff. This means that the hair styling methods available at this salon have been collected from artists around the world.

Most of the staff is composed of former Mr. Tom's employees, and you will see such familiar faces as Ruby Creswell, Sylvia Lozano, Carla Jackson, Paula Deboskie-Barber and Cissy Valencia.

Cissy, Paula and Sylvia have a special to offer for new clients only. Perms are $35 from Feb. 1 through March 31, 1990.

New talent in this shop includes Chris Walker and Barbara Silva. Manicurist Barbara offers a special on manicures to new clients only for $7.50. Pedicures are $20 for new clients only.

When you are ready for a new look, come get an overall makeover from Cissy Valencia. She has 10 years experience, and specializes in hair color, corrective color and weaves. Cissy applies perimetric hair cutting to your head and facial structure. She has completed extensive training in the chemistry of product knowledge and hair analysis.

Are you looking to update your looks with a new hair color? Carla Jackson is a color and chemical application technician and she has the experience and know how to pick just the right shade. She can provide a color system that is personalized to meet the needs of each individual client's desired look. Carla's color scheme application takes into consideration your eyes and skin to enhance your natural color. Give her a call.

Stylist Ruby Creswell creates strong, geometric styles with a soft, aereated look which works with your natural shape. If you are looking for the perfect silhouette, see Ruby. The haircut is the base of all creative end results. The soft, flowing hair that is so desirable can be recreated into a fun and exciting look by simply applying another means of finish work. To be chic, to wear fun looking hair, to create what is really you, look for that fashion with Ruby.

Winter time is pedicure/manicure time when nails need conditioning the most. Chris Walker, with 22 years of experience and dependable customer service recommends a weekly manicure. It will help your nails to grow.

After a visit with Chris, the care you give your nails when at home, work and play is very important. As a tip, Chris says after a pedicure, spray with "Pam" and cover nails in plastic and press. They dry fast and you are ready to put on your hose. For more tips and an appointment, call Chris.

Manicurist/pedicurist Barbara Silva applies nail extensions also. She is a specialist with the Lume system. Lume is a safe and effective way to protect your natural nails and enhance their natural beauty.

Since Lume Natural Nail Bonding does not use any glue or harsh chemicals, it does not damage or weaken your nails like other nail treatments. Let Barbara help your ragged, chipped, brittle or split-prone nails.

Talk to Paula about the new look that everyone's talking about — Galactic Sass hair cut of the 90's. This upper cut has a new silhouette designed to take you straight into the 21st century — "you'll have the look."

This style has a new twist since it is cut vertically on an angle and feathered at the same time. It gives the volume necessary for fullness and added softness to the face. Everyone with this cut is able to have a personal look that looks good on them. Paula describes it as sassy — sexy and innocent at the same time.

Conditioning plays a very important role in Mane Attractions work. The condition of the hair has a great deal to do with how manageable it is and gives the hair a natural sheen. Clients love the added care given when they receive a chemical service; the extra time reconditioning is well worth the wait.

If you have a passion for the newest, latest thing, try the sexy, soft and sensual C's. Ask for Sylvia, Mane Attractions' owner. Sylvia says she enjoys running the salon because of the tremendous teamwork. Everyone takes care of each other and their customers feel the results.

The staff invites you to call 683-4171 soon for an appointment at Mane Attractions. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Cola company suing bus manufacturer

EDINBURG (AP) — The soft drink company whose truck was involved in the worst school bus accident in Texas history is blaming the bus manufacturer for the deaths of 21 students.

McAllen-based Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Inc., which is defending itself against potentially millions of dollars in lawsuits from the Sept. 21 accident, alleges that the bus was "a defective and unreasonably dangerous product."

Valley Coca-Cola filed a lawsuit Monday against Blue Bird Body Co. of Fort Valley, Ga., contending that if the students had been able to escape the bus, they would have survived.

The bus was knocked into a water-filled pit in the South Texas town of Alton, after a Dr Pepper truck from Valley Coca-Cola failed to stop at a stop sign.

According to Valley Coca-Cola's lawsuit, the soft drink truck "was suddenly and unexpectedly struck by a school bus ... Many of the individuals who were riding inside the school bus, which was manufactured by Blue Bird, were unable to escape from the bus in sufficient time to escape serious injury or death."

Dana Kirk, an attorney representing Valley Coca-Cola, said specific defects in the bus include windows too small to provide escape and the lack of an emergency exit in the roof.

Valley Coca-Cola filed suit against the bus manufacturer Monday in 275th District Court in Edinburg. The soft drink company's suit names Blue Bird as a third-party defendant in the case, which would share liability.

A Blue Bird executive said his company was not worried about liability in the case involving one of its 83-passenger school buses.

Herman Light, quality assurance director with Blue Bird, said Monday in a telephone interview, "You're always concerned when people start naming you in lawsuits, but we don't feel we have any exposure in this case, from everything we've heard about it."

Forty-four personal injury cases representing more than 50 children have been filed against Valley Coca-Cola since the accident.

At a hearing Monday, state District Judge Juan Partida agreed to a Coca-Cola request to consolidate the cases' discovery portion, in which witnesses make depositions and evidence is introduced. The judge said he would consider later whether to consolidate the trials.

But still unresolved were a few cases in which competing lawyers claim to represent the same families.

"All of us are fighting each other like sharks in a feeding frenzy," said San Antonio attorney Ruben Sandoval, who is in a dispute with McAllen attorney Mark Cantu over which law firm is authorized to represent one of the families suing Valley Coca-Cola.

The judge denied a Coca-Cola effort to require affidavits that would have forced all law firms involved to prove the families wanted their services.

"I don't want to suggest unethical behavior on the part of any w-yers," Kirk said.

Clerk foils robbery by buying suspect's pistols

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When a Houston convenience store clerk found himself looking at the business end of a robber's two pistols last week, he got right down to business.

He bought them.

Clerk Wazir Jiwi was preoccupied with paper work when a man approached the counter Friday night with a can of beer.

"He turned away a little and then he pulled two pistols on me," Jiwi said. Hand over the money or face a bullet, the robber threatened.

"I said OK, I'll give it to you," Jiwi said. But, as Jiwi retrieved the money from the cash register, he asked the gunman if he would consider selling one of his pistols.

"I said, 'you don't need two, why don't you sell me one of them,'" Jiwi said.

The robber thought about it for a moment and named his price — $100.

As Jiwi placed the pistol under the counter, he pushed a button automatically locking the door of the store. Jiwi then said he began bargaining for the other gun.

"He didn't want to give it to me. But I figured he needed the money and I told him I would pay him for it," Jiwi said.

The robber grabbed the cash and placed the other pistol on the counter. When he couldn't get the door open "he turned to me and asked what was going on. I told him to bring the money back and I would let him go," Jiwi said.

"He brought the money back and I opened the door. It was pretty strange. When the police came and I told them, they said it was a miracle," Jiwi said.

STATE IN BRIEF

El Paso, Juarez mayors meet

EL PASO (AP) — Despite attempts to increase cooperation between El Paso and its sister city across the border, Mayor Suzie Azar acknowledged that her first obligation must be to her constituents.

But Ms. Azar said Monday that serving El Paso doesn't preclude the two cities from trying to understand one another's priorities on common problems.

Ms. Azar and Mayor Jesus Macias Delgado, of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, met for two hours for a public discussion of the problems in the neighboring cities divided by the Rio Grande.

The two mayors discussed their plans to address air pollution, dwindling water supplies, cultural exchanges and economic development.

Ms. Azar said her No. 1 priority for El Paso is economic development through the maquiladora industry, which she said is necessary to address the city's other problems.

"I think El Paso and Juarez have a real opportunity to become a global manufacturing center," she said.

But Macias said Juarez' most pressing problem is being able to provide the services and infrastructure needed to support the maquiladora industry. Maquiladoras are foreign-operated assembly plants that use cheap Mexican labor.

Ms. Azar said she also hoped the dialogues with Macias will help bring state and national attention to the border problems, which she said often are not understood at those levels.

Child support plan outlined

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Attorney General's office needs to restructure its role in child support enforcement, says Houston attorney John Odam.

Odam, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the post in the March 13 primary election, on Monday released a five-point plan reshaping the attorney general's role in child support enforcement.

A former executive assistant attorney general, Odam said the current system is "basically failing to meet the needs of the Texas families who must rely upon its services."

Odam said the Attorney General's Child Support Enforcement Division has too much responsibility for child support enforcement. Some of that responsibility must be shifted to local governments or the private sector, he said.

Under Odam's plan, county domestic relations offices would assume the responsibility of enforcing the child support laws, and the penalties for parents with outstanding child support payments would be toughened.

He proposed revoking the driver's licenses, hunting and fishing licenses, state loans or benefits from delinquent parents. Odam said he would also establish a committee to make recommendations about the enforcement process.

Liquor tax hike opposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A food and beverage industry group told Gov. Bill Clements that raising the liquor tax for public school education would throw thousands of people out of work and cause businesses to shut down.

Raising the 12 percent mixed beverage tax would result in there "not being any business in Texas anymore," Mike Griffin, president of the Food and Beverage Association of Texas, said Monday.

Griffin said the increase would also drive Texas businesses to neighboring states that have lower taxes. The loss of jobs would strain the state's unemployment compensation and welfare systems, he said.

Several officials, including state Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, who is running for the Democratic nomination for state attorney general, have proposed increasing liquor and tobacco taxes to help fund education.

Rigs to be used for reef

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission received its first offshore oil rig that will be used to create an artificial reef in the Gulf of Mexico, officials said.

Transco Exploration Parties Ltd. last week donated the first rig and platform — and checks totaling more than $35,000 — as a contribution, and for maintenance of navigational buoys over the site, officials said.

Officials say they expect hundreds of rigs to be donated since the expense of moving the non-producing rigs is extremely high.

"Creation of this artificial reefs systems has tremendous potential," said state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, who filed the bill establishing the system.

"These reefs along the Texas coast will give us some of the best fishing anywhere," he said.

New Mexico student dies in plane crash

EL PASO (AP) — A New Mexico State University graduate student was killed and the pilot of a vintage plane injured when the aircraft's engine stalled east of El Paso, authorities said.

John Collins, 45, of Las Cruces, N.M., died in the Sunday accident. The pilot, West Texas Airport owner Phil Barrett, was in stable condition Monday at R.E. Thomason General Hospital, said Pat Morales, hospital spokeswoman.

Barrett was airlifted from the crash scene by an Army helicopter and admitted to Thomason with a broken ankle, a broken arm, a dislocated hip and facial injuries.

Barrett's 1946 Aronca Champion went down on its belly at about 2:10 p.m. Sunday on one of the few level spots, in a gravel pit about a half-mile east of the airport in Horizon City, an El Paso suburb.

"He told me he was at about 400 feet when the engine quit," said Bill Johnson, who talked to Barrett as he was being cut from the wreckage. The craft's landing gear — apparently ripped off during impact — lay in the dust next to the plane.

Barrett made no distress calls before the crash, and people at the airport weren't sure that he had gone down until airport manager Hal Tucker took off in another plane to find him, mechanic Bill Whitney said.

"Old Phil did a pretty good job getting the plane down on the only level spot around," Whitney said.

Collins, a graduate student in physics and a research assistant at New Mexico State University, also was a pilot.

He was inducted into the El Paso Aviation Hall of Fame in 1987.

Confederate flag hanging in court raises controversy

The flag hangs in the 310th District Court of Judge Allen J. Daggett along with a longhorn steer head and five other flags that have flown over Texas.

"The connotation of the Confederate flag in 1990 in the United States is one of representing pro-segregation and pro-racism," said Bruce Griffiths, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in Houston.

"Judge Daggett certainly has the right to show his own belief on his own time," Griffiths said. "But a Confederate flag should not be shown in a courtroom as the official paraphernalia of the court."

Daggett, a Democrat up for re-election this year, refused to discuss the flag Monday, according to the Houston Chronicle.

"Anyone with clear eyesight can see it's all six flags. I'm not going to talk about that or anything else, sweetheart," Daggett told a Chronicle reporter.

The issue arose last week when an attorney representing New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield in a divorce hearing commented on the Confederate flag's presence in the courtroom.

Benjamin Piggot, president of the Houston Lawyers Association, a black group, said he will write Daggett a personal letter asking for an explanation and requesting the flag's removal.

The five other flags in the courtroom, all draped along a wall, are the Texas flag, the U.S. flag and those of France, Mexico and Spain. But their presence and the historical context in which the Confederate flag is likely included do not dilute the latter's significance, some said Monday.

"I think people would be more understanding of a flag that engenders unity rather than division," said Justice of the Peace Alexander Green, president of the Houston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Editor's Note: What would happen if the best Pittsburgh Steelers team of the 1970s played the best San Francisco 49ers team of the 1980s? XOR Corp. of Minneapolis, which produced the computerized NFL "Dream Season" televised last fall by ESPN, matched the 1978 Steelers and the current 49ers in a copyright computer-simulated game for The Associated Press.

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

The football rises, first a blur, then a bird above outstretched arms, ratcheting higher with every rotation, end over end over end. San Francisco's Mike Cofer unwinds his leg to find Pittsburgh's Mean Joe Greene has landed at his feet and the answer to the question — who was better, Steelers or 49ers — is at long last up in the air.

Joe Greene's tenure at defensive end for Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain defense enveloped one of the most incredible runs in any sport at any time — four Super Bowl championships in six seasons, twice (1975-76 and 1979-80) back-to-back. Until San Francisco beat Denver for their fourth Super Bowl title in nine years, no team had won as many.

"The team I played on is history, the 49ers are the team right now. They've still got history to make; ours is in the can. In that way, it reminds me of the comparisons people made between us and the great Packer teams. They were different eras, so you have to use different measures.

"But the first step, obviously, is whether you've won the games you have to just to be considered at that level. The next thing, and this you can measure over time, is to see how many guys ultimately end up in the Hall of Fame."

Roy Gerela lofts the opening kickoff toward the right side of the field, where John Taylor receives it at the 8-yard line, slants to the middle to pick up a wall of blockers, then cuts sharply back to the right sideline and down a corridor of daylight all the way to the Pittsburgh 40.

Joe Montana lines up behind center, then, backing up, sees that Rice, his primary target, has drawn double coverage to the right, and Taylor, slanting across the middle, has been dumped unceremoniously by linebacker Jack Lambert.

Slightly less than three seconds have elapsed and Montana can feel L.C. Greenwood pushing mightily a few steps to his left. He glides to right, finds a third receiver, running back Roger Craig, waiting in the flat, and zips the ball there.

Typical of the 49ers, but more revealing of his own work ethic, Montana spends countless hours in front of a video camera, perfecting the fake handoff. Now, this investment pays off as he completes two of three short passes to three different receivers, mixing in a Craig run of 4 yards, to bring the ball to the 14.

Bill Walsh devised the system that brought the 49ers roaring into the '80s, and taking full advantage of owner Eddie DeBartolo's limitless checkbook, thoughtfully stocked it with players matched to the time and task at hand.

Montana lasted until the third round of the 1979 draft because few besides Walsh would take a flyer on a string bean who moved like Fred Astaire and looked like he couldn't heave a football much farther. But Walsh knew the Notre Dame product could find time and a throwing lane among the bigger pass rushers, and he was willing to let the course of things prove him right. It did.

With center Jesse Sapolu pulling to lead the sweep — a new wrinkle to an old play — Craig picks his way 14 yards through a minefield for the game's first score and Cofer adds the extra point.

San Francisco 7, Pittsburgh 0.

Other than safety Ronnie Lott, the 49ers defense had no marquee name. It was ridiculed as a finesse unit that stumbled from crisis to crisis just in time to extinguish the small fires, the part that killed time between Montana's last play and his next.

But only the unschooled regarded them that way for long.

"They've got the superstars on offense to overhadow them," said Jim Everett, the promising young Los Angeles Rams quarterback. "But anyone underrating the 49ers defense would be, No. 1, stupid ... and I don't have a No. 2 or 3."

Terry Bradshaw came out of Louisiana Tech in 1970 as one of the most sought-after quarterbacks ever, but it was his missile-launching arm, and not the head guiding it, that scouts always praised.

He was not stupid, though by his own admission Bradshaw often was too nervous or scared — or both — to master what his coaches and opposing defenses threw at him.

"You had to test yourself constantly, you couldn't ever relax," Bradshaw said, "because every pat on your back you knew could just as quickly turn into a slap."

In the Dream Game, the 49ers' rotating zone is causing Bradshaw considerable trouble, so the Steelers play conservatively. But in the closing minute of the first quarter, following a punt to their own 30, Pittsburgh opens up.

Bradshaw to John Stallworth for 32. Franco Harris up the middle for 3, then around the left end for 6. Eight more on a quick-release to tight end Randy Grossman over the middle. Harris and Rocky Bleier pounding steadily for 4 and 5 yards at a clip. Stallworth again for 10.

Like Bradshaw, Swann became a Steeler because of a coin flip on draft day. Unlike Bradshaw, he was considered a gamble, tall and graceful enough, but slow. Worthy of their place in a shot-and-beer town, the Steelers rolled the dice with Swann and set the tone for a run of luck on draft day that has never been equaled.

Chaps win, but Franklin still vexed

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After Midland College's 97-85 win over Frank Phillips College Monday night at Chaparral Center, MC head coach Reggie Franklin came out, showed just a hint of a grin, and shrugged his shoulders.

It's not as though he wasn't thankful for a win. He was.

It's just that by all accounts — on paper, as they say — this one looked to be JUCO basketball's version of the 49ers-Broncos. But Super it wasn't.

The Chaps played sluggish throughout, and weren't able to put the game away until just over four minutes remained.

It's not that the Chaps were ever in any real danger of losing, it's just that MC didn't dominate like Franklin would've hoped.

"They weren't ready to play at all," Franklin said. "I was worried at (Sunday's) practice. Today I couldn't get their attention either. I guess they thought since they were playing a team from the bottom half of the conference they'd coast a little."

Frank Phillips fell to 9-12 overall and 2-6 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action; Midland improved to 14-8 and 4-3. It was the 19th consecutive win for the Chaps over FPC, a streak that dates back to February, 1981.

FPC 'first-year head coach Kelly Green was pleased with his team's play in the second half. The Plainsmen — who for the fourth consecutive game scored into the 80s — refused to quit, despite being down by 19 at the halfway point.

FPC went on a 6-0 run out of the second-half gate, followed with an 8-2 stretch and then outscored MC 11-5 midway through the second half to draw to within eight, 71-63. The Plainsmen hung tight until four minutes remained in the contest when they trailed 84-73.

MC guard Ron Johnson came alive at the end, hitting a pair of three pointers and two from the line to score eight of his 14 points within a

Bulldogs have chance to be alone in lead

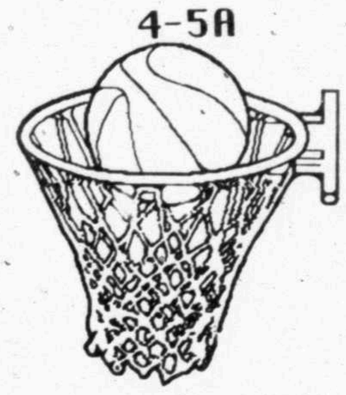

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

At first glance, tonight's District 4-5A boys basketball battle between co-leader Midland High and cellar-dweller Odessa Permian looks like a blowout waiting to happen.

But Midland High coach Jack Stephenson said the 8 p.m. game at the Chaparral Center may be closer than the record would indicate.

"I don't think you can place any emphasis on the records," Stephenson said. "Maybe if they weren't so big, you could, but they're just so awesome inside."

Midland High, 18-9 overall and 6-1 in district play, has a shot at regaining sole possession of first place in the red-hot 4-5A race with a win tonight, while Permian, 8-15 and 1-6, can only hope to pull into a tie for fifth with a Panther win.

A MHS win would put the Bulldogs into sole possession of first place, since co-leader Abilene High does 49ers now looking for 'three-peat'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Same time, next year, down the Gulf Coast, the San Francisco 49ers might have "three-peated" their way into the record book.

After a 55-10 demolition of the Denver Broncos in the Super Bowl, the 49ers were being compared to the greatest teams in NFL history, and deservedly so. They are 4-0 in Super Bowls and marched through the playoffs this year in unprecedented style.

"They are one of the best," 49ers coach George Seifert said Monday. "I felt the '84 team was great, as well. I believe we match up quite well with the Steelers (of the 1970s, who also won four). This happens to be our time."

That time doesn't appear close to ending. Nobody would be surprised to see the Niners at Tampa, Fla., next January, going for the "three-peat."

"I want to be in Tampa," Joe Montana said.

If he plays the way he did this year — having as a good a season as any quarterback ever did, and a better Super Bowl — the 49ers might be unstoppable again.

"The guys came back and took repeating as a challenge," Montana said. "People told us, 'You have the opportunity to do it, but you probably won't repeat because nobody repeats.' Our guys said no one can tell them what they can do."

"I can't help thinking of next year," linebacker Michael Walter said. "One of the sad things is that we might not all be together.

"But nobody has done it three straight times. That's what we're after."

Seifert, an assistant under Bill Walsh for the 1982, 1985 and 1989 Super victories, agreed there will be no status quo in San Francisco.

"There will be changes," he said. "Every year is different and an entity unto itself.

"We'll start making plans on the plane going back. Change is a natural process. The foundation for the next one is the desire within each player. This is a talented team with individuals who want to win. When that is in place, you've got an opportunity.

Those teams, including the Minnesota Vikings and Los Angeles Rams, each routed by San Francisco in the playoffs, must live with the realization that the 49ers are not an old team.

Montana, for instance, will be 34, but he's getting better every year and plans to pick apart defenses for at least another two seasons.

Ronnie Lott, the guts of the defense, has been banged up nearly every year, but still performs at an All-Pro level. He will be 31 next season and insists he isn't close to retirement.

Roger Craig will be 30 and definitely is not slowing down. He hasn't missed a game in seven years and played in all 25 this season.

Jerry Rice, the best receiver in the business, and John Taylor, who could be the second best, haven't reached their prime. Brent Jones is

Syracuse finishes road trip in style

NEW YORK (AP) — Syracuse's two-game losing streak seems like it was a long time ago.

The Orangemen, who held the No. 1 ranking for the first six regular-season polls, lost consecutive games to Connecticut and Providence on Jan. 15 and 20. Things sure have changed for Syracuse and the rest of the Big East.

The seventh-ranked Orangemen beat No. 18 St. John's 70-65 on Monday night for their third straight victory and a great cap to a tough two-game conference road trip.

Syracuse registered its first victory ever at the Capital Centre with a 95-76 triumph over then-No. 3 Georgetown on Saturday.

"We played as great a game Saturday as we could in just about every area," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "But I told them before the game, the thing about this league is that you can win by 15, 20 points and then lose to someone you should beat by 10. We had to play well these two games and the players brought their game up a level."

That level is more like the one people expected throughtout the season.

In other games Monday night, No. 10 Louisville beat Southern Mississippi 105-88 and Iowa defeated No. 11 Illinois 69-67.

After an easy early schedule, with the exception of the Big East-ACC Challenge victory over Duke, Syracuse lost its second conference game at home to Villanova after struggling to a two-point win at Pittsburgh.

There were victories over St. John's and Boston College and then the brief losing streak.

"Connecticut played well against us but we played well against Providence, losing the game at the free throw line," Boeheim said.

Boeheim inserted freshman point guard Michael Edwards into the starting lineup and the result has been three victories.

"Michael had been playing in games all season but the main reason I started him was because David Johnson wasn't playing well and that was dragging us a little bit," Boeheim said. "If Mike started, I felt we might get the break going faster. Against Georgetown we had 22 points in the first half on fast breaks and no one does that against Georgetown."

There weren't many fast-break points against St. John's because of its slow-tempo style, but the big night, Mike couldn't see over the trap so we did some things and Billy was able to get the ball inside."

Usually when the ball goes inside for Syracuse, it ends up in the hands of Derrick Coleman. But Coleman was in foul trouble against St. John's and finished with seven points, only one in the second half.

"I didn't shut down Derrick Coleman. He just had some foul trouble," said St. John's forward Jayson Williams, who led the Redmen with 22 points. "No one shuts down Derrick Coleman. He's the best power forward in the country."

St. John's got within 61-59 with 4:05 to play on one of two free throws by Malik Sealy, who finished with 16 points. The Redmen couldn't get even, despite several opportunities.

Owens has moved to the small forward spot with Edwards in the game and Boeheim said it has helped him.

"He feels more comfortable there and we need Billy to do all the things he can for us," Boeheim said. "To-

Tony Kimbro scored 17 points and sparked a first-half spurt that lifted Louisville at home. Kimbro had nine points during a 19-6 burst that put the Cardinals ahead 31-23 with 6:22 left in the half.

Louisville (15-3, 5-1 in the Metro Conference) shot 55 percent from the field. The Cardinals pressed Southern Miss into a season-high 30 turnovers, resulting in 36 points.

Jerome Harmon scored 20 points for Louisville. Clarence Weatherspoon had 22 for Southern Miss (11-7, 2-3).

Iowa 69, No. 11 Illinois 67

Iowa (10-8, 2-6 in the Big Ten) trailed 65-58 with 3:21 left. Wade Lookingbill's 3-point shot tied the game with 35 seconds remaining and, after Jepsen's basket, Lookingbill intercepted an Illinois inbounds pass.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Craig Sibley scored 17 points for Texas Christian University — 11 in the first half — to lead five players in double figures in a 88-69 victory over Northern Arizona in non-conference play Monday night.

The Frogs went on a 13-0 run over a four-minute stretch of the second half to secure the victory and up their season mark to 10-9 in the process.

After trailing by 17 with a score of 49-32 at the half, the Lumberjacks battled back to trail by just 12 with a 7-0 run between the 14:49 and 13:02 marks of the second half.

Tony Edmond finished with 14 for the Frogs, while reserve Rich Antee added 12, Reggie Smith bagged 11, and Michael Strickland totaled 10.

DALLAS — Hassan Duncombe scored 16 points, including the go-ahead basket with 4:02 to play, to lead Penmsylvania.

Substitute guard Troy Valentino led SMU (7-10) with 19 points. The Southwest Conference Mustangs suffered their fourth loss in five games and their sixth defeat of the season at home. The game drew 1,126 fans at Moody Coliseum.

Vernon Perdue, who had seven points, hit a jump shot to tie the game for the seventh and last time at 46 with 4:23 to play.

Penn scored the first 11 points of the second half for a 36-25 lead as Ken Graf sank two three-pointers. SMU rallied on three buckets by John Colborne and eventually tied the score at 40, 42 and 46.

The Quakers built a 13-7 when SMU went 4:46 without scoring. Valentino rallied the Mustangs with 13 points.

Timely Spurs topple another strong team

Associated Press

Two weeks after taking advantage of a Larry Bird injury to beat the Celtics at Boston Garden, the Spurs showed up at the Forum to play the Los Angeles Lakers.

Without flu-ridden All-Star guard Magic Johnson, the Lakers fared no better than the Celtics, dropping an 86-84 decision Monday night. San Antonio's Willie Anderson said the Lakers looked confused in the final seconds, when Johnson generally runs the show.

"We didn't call a timeout because we saw that they were confused on defense, and that's the best time to get a good shot," said Anderson, who had a crucial blocked shot and two decisive free throws in the final seconds.

"The Lakers are in another league," Brown said. "They're so good it's scary. So, to come in here and beat them is pretty significant for us."

The loss, only the second for the Lakers in 21 home games, broke a 12-game home winning streak. Los Angeles and Boston are a combined 34-9 at home.

NBA

The victory improved the Spurs' record to 28-13, the best in franchise history at the halfway point of a regular season.

With the score tied at 84 and 21 seconds left, Larry Drew of the Lakers rebounded a missed shot by Terry Cummings and drove the length of the court. Anderson blocked Drew's layup and got the ball into a teammate's hands with 16 seconds left.

Without calling a timeout, the Spurs pushed the ball into the forecourt, where Anderson was fouled by Orlando Woolridge on a drive to the basket with six seconds remaining. Anderson made the first free throw, but missed the second.

"I was surprised that Drew didn't pull the ball back out to play for the last shot," Anderson said of the block. "He exposed the ball, so I knew I'd have a chance to block it."

Drew said he recognized the situation before shooting.

"I knew I had a 1-on-1 chance," he said. "There was no second-guessing. He got a piece of the ball and he got a piece of me, too. But it was a call that could have gone either way."

The Lakers called a timeout with five seconds to play. But Michael Cooper's inbounds pass, intended for Byron Scott, was intercepted by the Spurs' Frank Brickowski.

He passed to Anderson, who was fouled by Vlade Divac with 1.1 second remaining. Anderson hit only one of the free throws, giving the Lakers a final opportunity to tie when they rebounded the second.

Bulls 121, Hawks 111

Chicago had a 20-point lead after one period, then cruised behind 20 points by Scottie Pippen and 16 by Michael Jordan.

The victory, to which John Paxson and Horace Grant contributed 16 points apiece, was the fifth in seven games for the Bulls, 18-2 at home this season. It also snapped a three-game winning streak by Atlanta, which got 19 points from Cliff Levingston.

Mavericks 108, Nets 88

Roy Tarpley, making his fourth appearance following a 33-game suspension, scored 23 points to lead Dallas to its sixth straight victory. New Jersey lost its fifth game in a row.

The victory also was the fifth straight at home for the Mavericks, who got 20 points from Derek Harper.

CHAPS

two-minute period to allow the Chaps to pull away. After Johnson was through with his gimme shots from the line, the Chaps had pulled ahead 94-79 with just 90 seconds remaining.

"We've been doing that all year," Green said, referring to his team's inability to pull ahead in a fairly tight contest. "We'll get down, then come back, and then we can't get over the hump.

"I guess you could say that we're all young. We've got a young coach, a young team.

Indeed, MC hit 14-of-15 free throws in the first half — including the first 14 in a row, the Chaps finished shooting 26-of-31 from the line, compared to 28-of-34 for the Plainsmen.

MC outrebounded FPC 42-32, including a 19-10 offensive board advantage, and from the field, the Chaps were able to get off 15 more shots than the Plainsmen.

Tim Owens led all scorers with 27 points as four of the five Chap starters finished in double figures. Robert Torrence led the Plainsmen with 18 points.

Franklin said the Chaps "sloughed off" in the second half and added that his team's lackadaisical performance was puzzling.

"It's nothing I can put my finger on. It's more attitude than anything. Not necessarily bad attitude. It just wasn't the positive mental attitude or the intensity I would want to have for a game."

Going into the next portion of the schedule, Franklin said the Chaps realize the need to get hyped for every game due to the importance of the remaining contests.

One of the hardest stretches of the season starts Thursday when the Chaps visit Western Texas. Following the Snyder contest, MC hosts Howard (Feb. 5), South Plains (Feb. 8) and then has consecutive road trips to New Mexico Miltary (Feb. 12) and New Mexico J.C. (Feb. 15). Following the jaunts to New Mexico, the Chaps return home for a game against Odessa College (Feb. 19). The only weak spot in the next three weeks is the trip to Roswell for NMMI.

CHAP NOTES: The Howard College-South Plains matchup Monday was postponed indefinitely after a backboard was shattered and a replacement not located. Mid-way through the second half, with South Plains up 73-70, SPC posts Jeff Stern and Charles Outlaw went up for a rebound, hung on the rim and shattered the glass. According to the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal late Monday night, officials from the two schools chose to postpone the game indefinitely ... In completed games Monday, Odessa College downed Clarendon, 82-70 and New Mexico JC defeated NMMI, 99-90; Western Texas was idle ...

The MC Boosters meet Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at Chap Center; the Boosters plan to charter a bus to Snyder for Thursday's Western Texas contest. Those wishing to attend the meeting or reserve a seat on the bus call the athletic office at 685-4575.

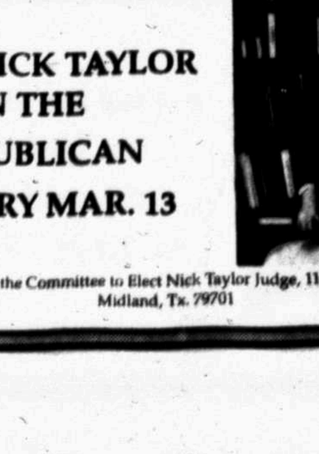

Next Monday's Howard-MC match-up at Chap Center is co-sponsored by the McDonalds of Midland and Big Spring. All proceeds of pre-game ticket sales go to the Ronald McDonald House of the Permian Basin. Pre-game tickets are on sale for $1 for students and $2 for adults and can be purchased beginning Wednesday at area McDonalds locations. Game day prices are $2 for students and $4 for adults.

WILLIAM B. BROWDER ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

My father was a lawyer and I grew up around the courthouse and judges. For these many years, I have been involved in trying numerous lawsuits before good judges, average judges and some judges who mistakenly held against me and my clients. I have known and worked with Nick Taylor for 16 years and I know that Nick possesses complete integrity, is industrious, and has a very strong sense of fairness. He can and will be a good judge. I endorse his candidacy and ask that you support him in the Republican Primary on Tuesday, March 13, 1990.

Red-hot Hogs face tough week

Arkansas is off to its first 8-0 start in the Southwest Conference since 1977, but Coach Nolan Richardson says that could end Wednesday night when the Razorbacks play at Rice.

"You can bet Rice will be pumped sky high for us," Richardson said Monday, shortly after his Razorbacks moved up to third in the national rankings. "You can throw the stats out. This will be unlike any other game of the season.

Texas climbed to 7-1 in the SWC with the victory and Rice dropped to 4-3. The Razorbacks play Texas at Austin on Saturday. Arkansas beat the Longhorns 109-100 last week at Fayetteville.

Arkansas was ranked sixth last week, but moved up when Georgetown, Louisville and UNLV lost.

"First of all, I'm into being ranked as high as we can go," Richardson said. "It's good for recruiting and our fans are very responsive to where we're ranked. Being a Top 10 team year in and year out was one of our goals when we first came here. For now, we're in that elite group.

"The ranking is like a semester break ... a grade report," he said. "Hopefully, we can have just as good a report in the second half of the season."

"We've got to get used to teams coming after us like that," he said. "It's a matter of being worried about where we're ranked or worried about the team we're playing."

Todd Day will soon become the most prolific sophomore scorer in Arkansas history. Day, who is averaging 20 points a game, has already scored 805 points in his career. Sidney Moncrief, the school's career scoring leader, scored 785 in his first two seasons. George Kok holds the record of 837 points after his sophomore year.

Arkansas beat Houston and Texas in Fayetteville last week, then went on the road to knock off Alabama-Birmingham.

"Now I'm telling them that if we win our next four games, we could be No. 1," Richardson said.

Top-ranked Missouri and No. 2 Kansas meet on Feb. 13, and both must still play No. 9 Oklahoma twice.

SWC scolds Longhorn coach

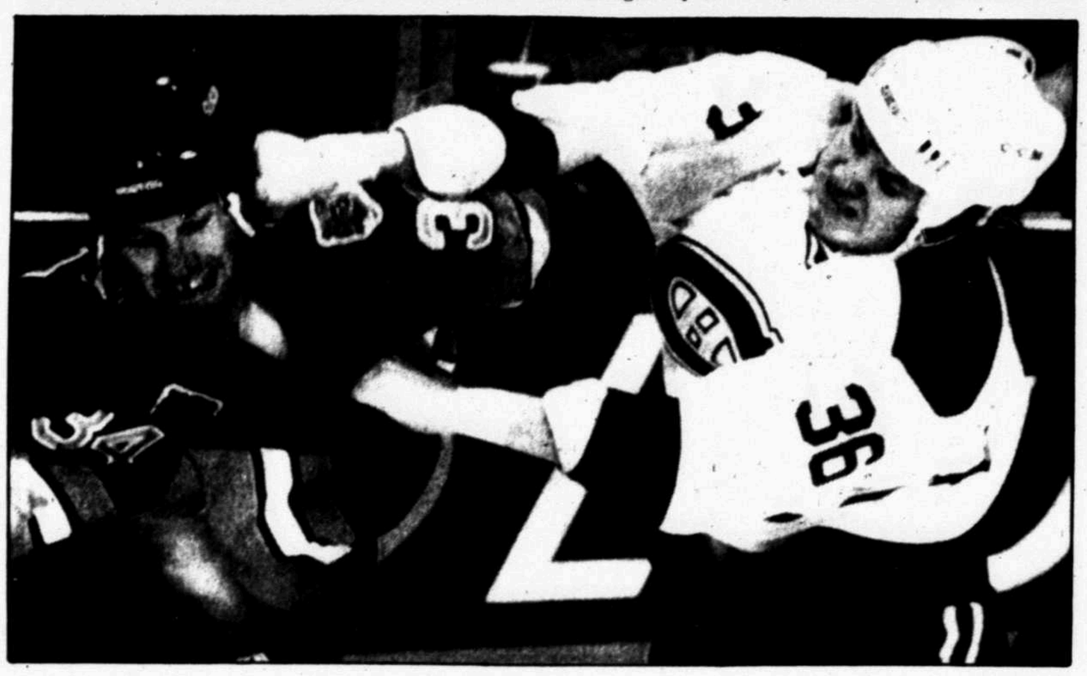

DALLAS (AP) — University of Texas basketball coach Tom Penders was given a public reprimand by the Southwest Conference Monday for criticising its referees.

Jacoby said the SWC Constitution and Bylaw Article XXI states, "Acts of unsportsmanlike conduct shall include but not be limited to the following, and shall be subject to private or public reprimand ...: (d) Any person who is unduly critical of any game official, Conference personnel, another member institution, or its personnel."

Jacoby said SWC officiating will be reviewed this spring.

not play tonight. With a Bulldog loss, third-place San Angelo could tie Abilene High for first place with a win over Abilene Cooper.

In the other 4-5A boys game tonight, Midland Lee travels to Odessa High. The Lee-OHS winner will have sole possession of fourth place if Permian loses.

In girls play, Lee hosts Odessa High; Midland High travels to Permian; and Abilene Cooper hosts undefeated San Angelo.

The Permian boys suffered yet another blow when leading scorer Devorik Alford was ruled academically ineligible for the rest of the season after scoring 17.7 points per game for the first half of district play. Alford's departure leaves post Devoron Carroll as the only Panther approaching double-figure scoring in district play, with a 9.7 average.

Stephenson said the Bulldogs will be hard-pressed to compete on the boards with the likes of Carroll and Tony Daniels, a sophomore built along the lines of Carroll.

"They're so much bigger than we are," Stephenson said. "They're not a very good shooting team, but I'm concerned about the big guys putting them in after they miss."

Despite nary a starter over six feet tall, the Bulldogs have used a fast-paced, pressure-oriented game plan to storm into contention.

Then there is the overlooked defense, which wasn't as flashy but was just as effective as the offense.

"Ever since I've been with the 49ers," said Walter, who has been in San Francisco for six seasons, "I thought we had a great defense. It's gotten better.

"If others don't perceive us that way, I don't know what to say."

Chet Brooks does.

"Our offense is the best in football," the safety said. "Maybe now you'll understand our defense is the best."

For the Broncos, things might appear to be at their worst with an 0-4 mark in the Super Bowl, tying Minnesota's record of futility. But three AFC titles in four years isn't bad and, despite what happened against the 49ers, this was the best of Denver's three AFC champions.

Mustangs ride to double victory

From Staff Reports

David Minihan scored 32 points to lead the Midland Christian Mustangs to an 87-82 win over the West Texas Children's Home in boys basketball action Monday.

Sammy Cox added 19 points for the Mustangs, 3-16, while Andy Bayley and Alan Weaver added 16 and 11 points, respectively.

In junior varsity action, Kyle Jackson made 11 of his 17 points from the free throw line to pace the young Mustangs past the WTCH jayvee, 42-37.

No Pro Bowl for quarterbacks

HONOLULU (AP) — Four Super Bowl players, including Denver quarterback John Elway and the 49ers' Joe Montana, have withdrawn from Sunday's Pro Bowl game because of injuries, NFL officials said Monday.

Also withdrawing were inside linebacker Karl Mecklenburg of the Broncos and wide receiver John Taylor of the 49ers.

In Denver, KOA radio reported that Elway had injured his right elbow in the Super Bowl, but said the injury was not serious enough to require surgery.

'Light age' computer introduced

New optical computer could revolutionize industry

By JOHN MARKOFF
N.Y. Times News Service

Scientists at Bell Laboratories introduced Monday an experimental machine that uses pulses of light rather than currents of electricity to do its calculations.

While the machine is extremely crude, more advanced versions could radically increase the power of computers.

Within several years, the new devices, known as optical computers, could reach speeds 1,000 times faster than the most powerful conventional machines.

Even more important, the researchers at Bell Laboratories said, such optical systems may handle information in ways impossible for today's machines, potentially allowing computers to perform millions of tasks simultaneously and to be easily reconfigured to attack new kinds of problems.

The search for significantly faster computers has become a Holy Grail for researchers. For example, far more powerful computers will be necessary to map the human genetic structure and to collect and analyze the vast amounts of data produced by a government-financed atom-smasher now being planned in Texas.

Optical computers are expected to be available commercially early in the next century. The device introduced Monday, which is based on a synthesis of new technologies developed over the last five years, is the first publicly demonstrated example of a processor that would be the heart of such computers. One of its chief architects likened it to the Wright brothers' plane.

Other researchers in the emerging field of optical computing called the advance at Bell Laboratories significant. They said the work, led by Alan Huang, is the world's most advanced effort.

Some computer scientists say the technology on which the optical processor is based could be as large a breakthrough as the transistor, which was invented four decades ago at Bell Labs, which is the research arm of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

But other computer scientists noted that the optical computer still faced tremendous obstacles.

Less than a foot high and about the size of a dining room tabletop, the device introduced Monday is unlike its counterpart in any other computer. There are no circuit boards or silicon chips; the machine consists of a network of lasers, lenses and mirrors.

Like the processors in conventional computers, optical processors are based on digital "switches" that perform computations. An array of laser beams is rapidly switched on and off and combined with other arrays to perform simple addition and subtraction. The lenses focus and direct the beams, and the mirrors pass them to other optical switches.

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In a sweeping ruling on Proposition 103, the state Supreme Court cleared the way for insurance companies to pull out of California without requiring them first to arrange for other insurers to take over their business and protect their policyholders.

As car insurance rate continue to soar nationwide and in California, the court ruling freed insurers to notify their policyholders that their insurance will not be renewed as soon as the company files an application of withdrawal from the insurance business. California now has the third highest auto insurance rates in the nation.

Approval by the state insurance commissioner is not required, the court said in a 4-to-3 decision on Monday.

The ruling was a major victory for insurance companies which are furious with restrictions imposed by Proposition 103 and insurance commissioner Roxani Gillespie's intepretation of them.

Gillespie ruled last year that under Proposition 103, insurers are required to find so-called "reinsurers" to take over their policies if the companies decide they no longer want to do business in the state.

The insurance companies filed suit challenging her ruling on the ground that it interfered with what they said was their fundamental right to go out of business. The insurers said it is virtually impossible to find any insurers to come in and take over their policies in the current anti-insurance climate in the state.

Consumer advocates blasted the court's ruling, saying it gives insurance companies too much leverage and violates Proposition 103, the insurance reform measure passed by voters in November 1988.

"My understanding is that the court said insurance companies can now dump their customers without mercy," said Harvey Rosenfield, who helped draft and led the effort to pass Proposition 103.

Consumer spending posts small increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending rose 7.3 percent in 1989, its slowest advance in three years, while incomes jumped 9 percent, the largest increase in five years, the government said Monday.

The Commerce Department said spending totaled $3.58 trillion last year, posting the smallest gain since a 6.4 percent advance in 1986.

Consumer spending is considered a barometer of economic health because it accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity. The department reported last Friday that spending posted a rare decline of 0.1 percent during the entire fourth quarter of 1989.

Americans' savings rate, savings as a percent of disposable income, rose to 5.5 percent from a 4.2 percent rate in 1988. It was the highest rate since the 6.1 percent posted in 1984.

On a monthly basis, spending rose 0.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.58 trillion in December, the smallest increase since a 1 percent advance last August.

Incomes, however, edged up just 0.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.57 trillion, the smallest increase since a 0.2 percent gain last September.

The unusually cold weather contributed to the December jump in spending. Expenditures for fuel oil, electricity and natural gas increased $15.1 billion following a $3.1 percent increase in November.

Japan, Mexico sign oil pact

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's state-run oil monopoly has signed an agreement to supply Japan with $4 billion worth of petroleum over the next five years, officials said.

Francisco Rojas, director of Petroleos Mexicanos, known as Pemex, signed the agreement Sunday in Tokyo with a representative of a consortium of 19 Japanese petroleum companies, a statement from Pemex said.

Japanese corporate representative Tokio Nagayama assured Pemex that Japan will buy 150,000 barrels of Mexican petroleum a day for the next five years, the statement said.

U.S., Panama agree on drug control

Hearst News Service

PANAMA CITY, Panama – The United States and the new government here agreed Monday to cooperate on drug control measures, which would include curbing the money laundering activities of Panamanian banks.

The agreement was announced in a joint news conference here by Vice President Dan Quayle and Panamanian President Guillermo Endara.

"We don't know yet what exact changes will take place in the (Panamanian bank) laws. We are working on that right now," Endara said.

But he suggested that the many of the banking regulations already in place – but never enforced by the military regime of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega -- would be strengthened.

Prior to the U.S. invasion of Panama on Dec. 20, the country was a dumping ground for South American drug money.

However, Quayle said Monday a "tremendous change" has taken place in Panama's willingness to cooperate in the drug war since Noriega was driven from power, although he emphasized that more still needs to be done.

A senior American official in Quayle's party said Endara had pledged as well to consider a new law that would force banks to report large cash deposits that would be modeled after U.S. regulations.

In addition, he said Panama and the Bush administration plan to negotiate a tax information exchange agreement that would be useful during investigations of individuals on drug-related matters.

The joint press conference wrapped up a three-day trip to Honduras and Panama by the vice president aimed at repairing damaged diplomatic relations with Latin American countries that have condemned the invasion.

Quayle declared his mission a success even though most nations in the region have not yet recognized the Endara government. He also suggested that the the United States would oppose a new presidential election to "legitimize" Endara, which some countries have called for.

"As far as we're concerned he's legitimized now," Quayle told reporters later aboard Air Force II enroute to Washington.

Before leaving for a brief stop in Jamaica, Quayle was told by Endara that he no longer regards Noreiga loyalists still in Panama as "a military threat" to his government.

One of the country's biggest problems now, he said, is a crime wave of robberies and murders carried out by common "thugs" and "outlaws."

He acknowledged once again that the Panamanian people still rely on the presence of U.S. forces to assist in patroling the streets and to help train a national police force.

In Jamaica, Quayle consulted with Prime Minister Michael Manley about the U.S. invasion. Although Manley said Noreiga had "raped democracy" in Panama, he reiterated his government's criticism of the U.S. action as a violation of Panama's sovereignty.

"We are great friends" (with the U.S.), he said, "but friends sometimes disagree."

One area of disagreement involves U.S. plans to cut foreign aid to Jamaica. The country was to receive about $25 million in economic assistance this year, but that amount will be reduced considerably.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices have retreated, giving back gains made in Monday's trading.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, March contracts for West Texas Intermediate were down 22 cents to $22.58 in mid-morning trading.

The contract extended its rally into a third straight session Monday after reaching a low of $21.60 a barrel during Thursday's trading. It closed at $22.80 per 42-gallon barrel, up 24 cents after rising 32 cents on Friday.

The contract for February delivery of No. 2 heating oil closed 1.51 cents higher at 61.11 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, rebounding from Friday's decline of 0.17 cent. The March and April contracts ended with similar increases.

Contracts for delivery of West Texas Intermediate during April through June rose by 30 cents to 34 cents a barrel.

Among other refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, February wholesale unleaded regular gasoline finished up 0.70 cent at 62.82 cents a gallon, adding to Friday's gain of 1.52 cents. Contracts for later delivery also advanced, but more moderately.

The strength in the crude oil trading pits partly reflected speculation about future refiner demand, said Andrew Lebow, a broker at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

Some of the buying was due to internal market dynamics, such as short covering, he said, noting that it was difficult to pinpoint specific reasons why energy prices were bid higher. Short covering involves buying back a previously sold commodity.

Dollar facing pressure overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other major currencies in calm European trading today. Gold prices were slightly lower in quiet European dealings.

Despite some upward movement in the dollar, dealers said there is pressure on the currency because of market perceptions of weak economic growth in the United States.

- 1.4880 Swiss francs
- 5.6990 French francs

- 1.1905 Canadian dollars

Experts also were disappointed by the latest budget proposal by the Bush administration, which they said does little to pare the fiscal deficit.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.03 yen to a closing 143.25 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 143.87 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $418.40 a troy ounce, down from $418.50 bid late Monday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $417.80.

Stocks slip in volatile trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled broadly lower in volatile trading Monday, pressured by interest rate worries and concern about financing of corporate takeovers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.85 points to 2,553.38.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 961 issues down, 541 up and 450 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 150.77 million shares, down from 198.19 million in the previous session.

Stock traders said the market tried to rally several times throughout the session, starting at the opening bell, but failed to muster enthusiasm as many institutional investors remained on the sidelines. Program trading kept the market fluctuating wildly.

Junk bond market woes spilled over into the stock market, pressuring takeover-related issues and helping drive the market lower, said Brad Weeks, head of equity trading for Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. Many large corporate buyouts in recent years were financed with junk bonds.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Consumers test driving Chryslers get $50

DETROIT (AP) — Consumers who test drive a Chrysler Corp. product against any comparable car or truck will get $50 cash, even if they buy the competing vehicle, Chrysler said.

The new offer, outlined Monday, could be costly to the nation's No. 3 automaker, which is seeking to cut $1 billion in costs from its $26 billion annual budget by 1991. If all of Chrysler's December car-buyers had test driven another company's model, Chrysler would have doled out $3.2 million.

Bank of New England selling credit card unit

BOSTON (AP) — Cash-strapped Bank of New England Corp. says it would sell its credit card business to Citicorp for $828 million.

The announcement Monday follows Bank of New England's disclosure earlier this month it was trying to sell $6 billion worth of assets. The bank has said it expects a loss of more than $1 billion in 1989 because of bad real estate loans.

Employers see hike in medical insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medical insurance costs for employers rose 20.4 percent in 1989, driven by increasing use of expensive medical technology and escalating costs of outpatient and substance abuse services, according to a new survey.

The survey of 1,943 employers, conducted by employee benefits consultant A. Foster Higgins & Co. Inc. and released Monday, found the average cost of medical plans rose to $2,600 per employee last year from $2,160 in 1988.

Government bans some uses of Red No. 3 dye

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government banned some uses of the color additive Red No. 3, and the result may be that "red" may not be as "red" in lipstick, cake frostings, cough drops and some processed fruits and juices.

The Food and Drug Administration announcement on Monday said some uses of the dye are being halted because Red No. 3 in high doses has been shown to cause cancer in rats.

T-bill rate highest since October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to their highest level since October.

The Treasury Department sold $7.7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.77 percent, up from 7.66 percent last week. Another $7.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.73 percent, up from 7.58 percent last week.

The rates were the highest since three-month bills sold for 7.78 percent on Oct. 30, 1989, and six-month bills averaged 7.92 percent on Oct. 2, 1989. Three-month bills also sold for 7.77 percent on Dec. 26, 1989.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 8.04 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,803.60 and 8.16 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,609.20.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, rose to 8.01 percent last week from 7.97 percent the previous week.

LIGHT — ECONOMY

Optical computers show promise because of the unique properties of light. The limits on existing computers are largely established by the bottlenecks that restrict the amount of data that can be processed at one time.

Optical computers will use not electrons but beams of laser light made up of streams of photons. Unlike conventional electronic wires, light beams can intersect with no loss of data. Optical computers will thus be far more interconnected than their electronic counterparts, making it easier to solve problems with large amounts of data.

In short, using light instead of electricity to perform calculations and to handle data is the computer equivalent of eliminating New York City's traffic jams by permitting cars and taxis to pass right through one another at intersections, rather than collide.

A computer based on light would be ideal for routing telephone calls, which are increasingly transmitted as beams of light traveling through fiber-optic cables.

Such a computer would be more efficient because it would eliminate the need to convert optical impulses that carry voice into electronic ones in the central-office switch and then back again, as must now be done.

Optical computers might also be used for tasks that require "parallel computing," in which the processor simultaneously addresses millions of tasks.

Among such tasks are image recognition — for example, discerning human faces in a security system, or acting as the "eyes" for a robot assembling a product on a factory floor — and computing more easily the most difficult problems for which today's supercomputers are used.

The Pentagon has invested in optical computing to attempt to meet the immense processing requirements imposed by a "Star Wars" anti-missile system.

Moreover, optical computers will be far more flexible than their electronic counterparts, the researchers said. Because their circuitry will be made up of beams of laser light rather than wires etched in silicon, as in today's computers, optical computers will be easily reconfigured to solve new types of problems.

These new machines will also have a stunning capacity to carry information. Future optical processors will be able to handle data equivalent to all the world's telephone conversations simultaneously. And an optical computer would be able to retrieve that data far more quickly than today's computers.

"It's the difference between going to a library and being able to read information from a single book versus being able to read from all the books in the library at once," said Huang, a leading optical computing researcher who heads the Bell Laboratories group in Holmdel, N.J., that is pursuing the new technology.

Huang, who for a decade has been a passionate crusader for optical computers in the face of some skepticism, said the prototype machine, called a digital optical processor, is only an initial step toward much more powerful computers.

Purchases of durable goods — big-ticket items expected to last more than three years — rose $6.7 billion after declining $2.8 billion the previous month. Non-durable purchases gained $6.2 billion after a $3.4 billion November increase. Spending on services increased $24.1 billion following a $9.6 billion advance the previous month.

"The December increase was boosted by a return to work following strikes in the aircraft and telephone industries and was reduced by decreases in retroactive Social Security benefit payments and in subsidy payments to farm proprietors," the Commerce Department said.

Excluding the special factors, income increased $23.6 billion or 0.5 percent in December.

The key component of the income category — wages and salaries — increased $16.9 billion in December, reflecting in part the end of the Boeing Co. aircraft strike. Wages and salaries rose $2 billion in November.

Payrolls at manufacturing companies increased $2.3 billion after dropping $5.9 billion in November.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. How, where, and when can I buy U.S. Treasury bills?

A. There are two basic ways to purchase Treasury bills — from the U.S. Treasury Department or through brokerage firms and banks.

Doyle

The Treasury Department auctions off new issues of T bills with 13-week and 26-week maturities every Monday — the previous Friday or the following Tuesday if Monday is a bank holiday. Sales of 52-week T bills are held every fourth Thursday.

You could make a trip to a Federal Reserve Bank or branch and arrange to buy in person. But it's far more convenient to use a system called "Treasury Direct."

Going the Treasury Direct route, you mail a filled-out "tender" form and payment for the face amount of the T bill you want to purchase. They come in $10,000 minimum amounts and multiples of $5,000 above that minimum. You can pay by bank check, teller's check, certified personal check, endorsed Treasury check or Treasury securities due to mature on or before the issue date of the T bill you intend to buy.

You can obtain the tender from the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area. Your local bank can give you the address. Mail the filled-out tender and your payment to that Fed bank or branch. The envelope must be postmarked at least one day prior to the auction date.

You have a choice of submitting either a competitive tender or a non-competitive tender.

With a competitive tender, you specify the yield you want. If the yield you name is too high, you won't get a T bill, since the Treasury can accept or reject competitive tenders. If the yield you name is too low, you'll be stuck with an unfavorable rate.

Most individual investors use non-competitive tenders, thereby receiving the average yield on the T bill issue. All non-competitive tenders up to $1 million are accepted.

After you have made the purchase, you will receive a Treasury Direct statement of account. No certificate is issued. T bills come only in "book-entry" form, recorded on computers. The "discount" — the difference between the T bill's face amount and the lower price at which you bought it — will be deposited, by electronic funds transfer, in your bank account. The T bill's face amount will also be sent there when your T bill matures, unless you roll it over to buy another T bill.

While only new issues are available through Treasury Direct, you can purchase either a new issue or previously issued T bills when you buy through brokerage firms or local banks — and pay a fee. You duck that cost by using Treasury Direct.

Q. A news item about the weekly T bill auction mentioned a 13-week $10,000 bill selling for $9,807.10. Does this mean, if I had submitted a non-competitive tender at that auction, I would have paid $10,000 and received $192.90 change?

A. Yes, with one slight change in terminology. What you call "change" technically is a "discount."

When you submit a tender to a T bill auction, you must put up the bill's face amount — $10,000, in this example. The Treasury Department then sells the T bill to you at a price below face value — $9,807.10 in this example. The $192.90 difference between the two numbers is the discount, which is refunded to you.

Q. When do I collect the interest on my T bill?

A. When the T bill matures. You buy at a discounted price and receive the T bill's face amount at maturity. That face amount includes the discounted price you paid and the interest that has accumulated on the T bill. This is similar to the way interest builds up on Series E and EE, U.S. Savings Bonds.

Petrochemical outlook not as gloomy as profits

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Petrochemical profits came crashing down last month, but producers say the outlook for this year isn't as dismal as their fourth-quarter results suggest.

Nearly every U.S. chemical manufacturer is reporting lower profits for that period, but experts say Mother Nature, not a free-falling market, was the culprit.

Along the Gulf Coast, where most of the country's plastics and industrial chemicals are made, dozens of plants were shut down and damaged by the Christmas freeze, cutting into sales. Even before the freeze closed producers down, it forced up oil prices, increasing the cost of raw materials and cutting profit margins.

This year won't be nearly as good as 1988, which was a record year for the industry. But then, no one thought late 1988 price levels were sustainable, said Bob Gower, president of Lyondell Petrochemical Co., a large Channelview, Texas, producer.

But it appears there still is plenty of money to be made in chemicals — enough to justify the cost of building more plants. That's exactly what the industry has been doing for more than two years, and the new plants have pulled down prices for some chemicals by as much as one-third from a year ago.

However, the industry is starting to hit the brakes on construction in hopes of heading off the same glut that nearly killed it in the early 1980s.

Amoco and more recently Oxy Petrochemicals have shelved in definitely huge ethylene projects until the market firms again.

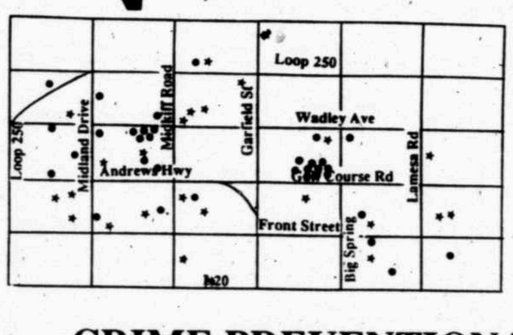

Dow Chemical has put off a big styrene project at Freeport, Texas. And Formosa Plastics two weeks ago dropped a smaller styrene plant at its proposed $1.4 billion Point Comfort complex near Corpus Christi, Texas, mainly because it couldn't line up the feedstock to supply it economically, a plant official said.

The yearlong price squeeze on commodity chemicals such as ethylene, propylene, polyethylene and polypropylene was due more to changing market psychology than reality, said Earl Armstrong, a chemical consultant with Houston-based DeWitt & Co.

The broadcasting chief resigned as chief spokesman of the governing National Salvation Front following charges that it was using the media to control the opposition.

Also today, the front published the draft of a law outlining the framework of a democratic system, including political pluralism, the separation of legislative, executive and judicial powers and the election by the people of the country's president.

The bill was debated in a weekend meeting of leaders from Romania's more than 20 political parties, some new and some revamped since the December revolution toppled the 24-year dictatorship of Nicolae Ceausescu. Radio Bucharest said that similar consultations will take place weekly.

A series of demonstrations has taken place since the front, which took over as an interim government following the popular revolution that toppled dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December, announced it would take part in elections in May.

On Monday, about 15,000 supporters of the revolutionary government rallied in the capital, breaking into the headquarters of the Liberal Party and forcing the leader of the National Peasants' Party to flee his party's offices in an armored personnel carrier.

Constantin Teodorescu, a Liberal leader, accused the front of trying to destroy the opposition parties and planning to install a new Communist dictatorship if it wins power in the elections.

Monday's well-organized demonstrations — many participants were workers who arrived in the city center in government-owned trucks and buses — showed that the people who took charge when Ceausescu was overthrown last month are capable of mobilizing considerable support.

Drug traffickers surrender dynamite, claim abduction

WORLD

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Drug traffickers surrendered 2,200 pounds of dynamite, saying they wanted to show they are sincere in seeking peace with the government, and claimed to be preparing to free a kidnapped Colombian diplomat.

The cocaine barons said Roberto Garcia-Pena, the country's former consul in Miami, would be freed with a peace mess[illegible] for President Virgilio Barco, who [illegible]clared war on the traffickers five months ago.

Colombia has since been terrorized by attacks blamed on drug gangs that have claimed at least 209 lives.

The dynamite, packed in a bus, was found in Medellin, the northwestern city that is a hub of the drug trade. The traffickers telephoned reporters to offer the reasons they were giving up the explosives.

Their statement on the kidnapping, delivered to the RCN radio network, said Garcia-Pena was abducted Friday in Bogota and would be freed today with the message for Barco.

The statement was signed by the Extraditables, the name adopted by the cocaine barons, who are trying to force the government to abandon extradition of Colombians wanted on drug trafficking charges in the United States.

A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said privately that Garcia-Pena, Colombia's consul in Miami for 18 years until 1988, disappeared Friday but the ministry had not heard from kidnappers.

Since Barco declared war on the cocaine gangs Aug. 18 after the assassination of a leading presidential candidate, drug bosses have been blamed for 262 bombings and other terrorist attacks.

All 107 passengers aboard a Colombian airliner died in a November crash blamed on the traffickers.

Medellin police said in a news release the dynamite found in the bus was not connected to detonators.

Also in the bus was a statement saying the traffickers would continue giving up explosives. It, too, was signed by the Extraditables.

The statement accused the national anti-narcotics police of torture and murder and claimed, without giving details, the police had murdered 10 men arrested on suspicion of being hired killers.

A man saying he spoke for the Extraditables called the RCN station in Medellin on Monday and said the traffickers "do not have any missiles and don't want to attack the United States."

He appeared to be responding to reports in the United States that the U.S. Secret Service had learned the traffickers had shoulder-fired missiles and might try to attack President Bush when he visits Colombia next month.

Bush is to meet with some Latin American presidents Feb. 15 in Cartagena, on Colombia's north coast, for a discussion of what to do about drug trafficking.

Matamoros strike postponed; Talks resume

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — After an averted strike that could have idled as many as 60,000 Matamoros workers, union and management officials of the maquiladora industry are set to resume talks today in Mexico City.

For the fifth time this month, union leaders postponed a strike and extended the deadline until Sunday afternoon, said Agapito Gonzalez Cavazos, leader of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM) in Matamoros.

The CTM is demanding a 25 percent wage hike, but the Matamoros Maquiladora Association, representing management, contends a 17 percent raise already granted is as much as they can afford.

A 25 percent raise would bring the average wage and benefits package to about $2.50 an hour for maquiladora workers.

Forty-five of the primarily U.S.-owned assembly plants are negotiating two-year contract and wage packages that expired at the end of the year, and another 25 plants are negotiating only wages.

"Neither they nor we want a strike," Gonzalez said. "The problem is to resolve the economic question for the workers because, in reality, the cost of living is very high in Matamoros."

Gonzalez said workers did not want to postpone the strike again, and have rejected the companies' offer of 10 percent more, as well as a 20 percent raise recommended by national CTM leader Fidel Velazquez.

Gonzalez said eight companies already had agreed to the 25 percent raise in the border city across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

But Joe Lacambra, president of management's Matamoros Maquiladora Association said he knew of only five accepting the union's terms, including two that already were on strike.

Ruling Communists open key congress in Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Communist chief Petar Mladenov today said Bulgaria's economy was falling apart and that ousted hard-line ruler Todor Zhivkov was brutal, selfish and stupid.

Mladenov told Communist Party congress that their party faced extinction unless it agreed to reforms to promote democracy or stabilize an economy "in tatters."

He also hinted he would step down and reiterated a plan for an interim government that included emerging pro-democracy groups.

Mladenov said only such a coalition government is "capable of leading the country out of the crisis."

But he gave no specifics on what share of power the Communists would retain in such an administration.

Opposition leaders and some reform Communists doubted the leadership, which threw out Zhivkov on Nov. 10 after 35 years of uncontested rule, was sincere about genuine change.

"They want to change anything but their chairs — the name of the party, even their ideals," said Lyubomir Pavlov, a senior member of the independent trade union Podkrepa, before the congress.

The leadership has promised multiparty democracy with the first free parliamentary elections in more than 40 years in May, although the opposition has wanted it delayed until November to give it more time to organize.

Many of the 2,790 delegates cheered when Mladenov rejected the opposition calls, insisting they be held "not later than May."

Mladenov appeared to try to exploit divisions within the still weak opposition by reiterating calls for a new "government of national concord" before the May elections.

Some opposition leaders reject this idea outright, arguing that they do not want to be responsible for the chaos caused by four decades of Communist rule, while others have suggested they might participate in such an interim cabinet.

Mladenov was at his most forthright in criticizing the rule of Zhivkov, who has been arrested on charges of misappropriation of state property, inciting ethnic hostility and grave abuse of power.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Emergency state could be lifted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A pro-government newspaper today said President F.W. de Klerk plans to ease the 43-month-old state of emergency and lift restrictions on the media.

The Citizen newspaper said de Klerk will announce the changes Friday at an address before Parliament but he is not expected to release jailed black leader Nelson Mandela until mid-February at the earliest.

There has been an surge in political unrest recently, and the government is concerned that freeing Mandela could set off violence among the disenfranchised black majority.

The Citizen, which has good contacts within the government, said the immediate release of Mandela also would distract attention from de Klerk's speech to Parliament, when he is expected to outline his plans for reform.

The newspaper said the president is likely to remove press restrictions that are part of the wide-ranging emergency measures in effect since June 1986. The media curbs, which have not been widely enforced, prohibit reporting on unrest and some forms of protest.

However, de Klerk will maintain some of the emergency security measures to quell unrest, the newspaper said.

Reunification discussed

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The embattled Communist leadership made a desperate pitch to win voter support today by endorsing for the first time the idea of eventual reunification with West Germany.

The Communist-dominated government, meanwhile, suffered a setback in its bid to jail its former standard-bearer when a judge rejected a request to keep ousted leader Erich Honecker behind bars until his treason trial in March.

Honecker, who was arrested and jailed earlier Monday, would have to be freed later today if the lower court's ruling is upheld, said Dieter Plath of the prosecutor's office.

The reasons for the East Berlin court's refusal to issue the necessary warrants to keep Honecker in jail were unclear.

It also will overhaul the current interim Cabinet to include opposition members.

Gorbachev urges caution

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said today that the question of Germany unification has a place in discussions of Europe's future, but urged that it not be decided "on the streets."

The Soviet leader made the comment as he welcomed Communist Premier Hans Modrow of East Germany to the Kremlin for a meeting that included Soviet Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The official Tass news agency said Gorbachev was asked by reporters as he met Modrow about his attitude toward Germany reunification.

Gorbachev responded that no one doubts the issue has a place on Europe's agenda.

"However, the development of events in the world, in East Germany, in the Soviet Union demand deep consideration and an analytical approach to deciding this problem," he said.

"Time itself is acting on this process, giving it dynamism," the Soviet leader said. "We have to act responsibly, and not decide this important question on the streets."

Police break up protest

BLOEMFONTEIN, South Africa (AP) — Police fired rubber bullets and tear gas today to prevent more than 1,000 blacks from protesting against a boycott-busting English cricket team, witnesses said.

Obed Nkosi, an organizer for the anti-apartheid National Sports Council, claimed 30 people were hurt and some 200 arrested in the black township of Mangaung outside the central city of Bloemfontein.

However, witnesses said they saw no serious injuries or mass arrests. Police confirmed the incident but declined to provide details.

The demonstrators sought to march from Mangaung to the sports stadium in Bloemfontein, where the British squad was facing South African university players.

But police roadblocks prevented the activists from leaving the township, and some of the youths began throwing stones at authorities and setting up barricades of burning tires, witnesses said.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC SALE OF COLLATERAL

Pursuant to orders of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, San Angelo Division in Cause No. 687-60167 (Chapter 7) in a cause styled "In Re: Giraffe Communications, Inc," the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, San Angelo Division, has lifted the automatic stay to allow KPET Radio, Inc. to foreclose its security interests on certain collateral of the Debtor, Giraffe Communications, Inc. The Court has authorized secured creditor, KPET Radio, Inc. to exercise all of its rights under the Uniform Commercial Code and the security and to sell the collateral at public sale.

Notice is given that pursuant to the security agreement and the orders of the Bankruptcy Court, the certain items of collateral described on the orders lifting stay on file in the cause will be sold at a public sale on January 30, 1990, at 10:00 a.m., at radio station KIOI, No. 6 Desta Drive, Suite 6700, Midland, Texas 79705.

The sale will include only the tangible personal property more fully described in the orders lifting stay on file in the cause of the estate. The sale specifically shall not include the broadcast license of the station or any other intangible asset of Giraffe Communications, Inc.

A complete list of the equipment in the sale may be obtained from Dana A. Ehrlich, Smith, Carter, Rose, Finley & Hofmann, P.O. Box 2540, San Angelo, Texas 76902-2540, 915/653-6721.

The property shall be sold to the highest bidder, for cash, as a single unit, AS IS, WHERE IS, with no warranties, either express or implied, of any kind. The items of equipment will not be sold individually, but as a unit. All announcements on the sale date will supersede all prior announcements. Any party wishing to bid on said property may inspect such property prior to the sale date upon reasonable request to the person described above.

KPET Radio, Inc.,
Secured Creditor
January 26-31, 1990

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
PROJECT NO. 288/1142

Sealed proposals addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas for re-roofing of the Fleet Service Garage Building, 1500 Orchard Lane, per all attached drawings and specifications will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 21st day of February, 1990 and publicly opened and read aloud at that time.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Fleet Service Garage Building Re-roof, Project No. 288-1142".

Complete copies, specifications and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the Office of the City Engineer, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine, Midland, Texas.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract, the guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accepted or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

Attention of bidders is particularly called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract.

STATE OF TEXAS

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: GREETINGS:

"You have been sued. You may employ an attorney. If you or your attorney do not file a written answer with the clerk who issued this citation by 10:00 a.m. on the Monday next following the expiration of 20 days after you were served this citation and petition, a default judgment may be taken against you. Petition of Otis Keith Alexander and Janice Ruth Alexander, Petitioners, was filed in the Court of Midland County, Texas, on the 11th day of January, 1990, against Kristi Tyre Alexander, Respondent and other unknown parties, numbered DR-22,298, and entitled 'In the interest of Brandon Trey Alexander, a child. The suit requests to terminate the parent-child relationship and provide for the adoption of the child by Petitioners'. Said child was born the 12th day of July, 1986, in Dallas, Dallas County, Texas."

The court has authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child's interest which will be binding upon you, including the termination of the parent-child relationship, the determination of paternity and the appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption."

"Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Midland, Texas, this the 25th day of January, 1990."

SR-15 _____ believed inoperable and VA will not repair.

WE NEED YOUR HELP: VA welcomes comments concerning the condition of our properties. Any improprieties should be reported to the VA Regional Office at 817-757-6869.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 9.5 percent (APR 9.6 percent).*

Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Miller and Davis PC. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.

Prior approval will be required by VA for the transfer of a property secured by a vendee loan if the loan is not paid in full as part of the transfer. Public Law 100-689 also permits VA to charge a one-half of 1 percent funding fee for the transfer as well as a fee for processing the approval of the transfer.

VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The Earnest Money Agreement (Exhibit "H") must be signed by the purchaser(s) and submitted along with the VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on all offers. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to Miller and Davis PC upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the earnest money deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property prior to submission of an offer to purchase. VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
